Bosporus, 215, the territory on both sides of the strait between the Euxine Sea and the Maeotic Lake (Sea of Azov), and including the modern Crimea. The strait (p. 207) bears the same name.

534

PROPER NAMES

Briareus, 479, a monster of mythology, having a hundred arms and fifty heads, called by men Aegaeon (Iliad, {. 403 f.).
Brundisium, 183 f., 279, 285, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural point of departure from Italy to the East, and was the chief naval station of the Romans in the Adriatic.
Brutus, 129, 153, 155, Marcus Junius B., father of the conspirator, tribune of the people in 83, and, in 77 B.O., general under Lepidus.
C

Caenum, 213, the fortress mentioned without name in the preceding chapter. It wasin Pontus, on the river Lycus, S.E. of Amisus.
Caepio, 239, Servilius C., a suprter of Caesar against his colleague Bibulus in 59 B.o. (Suetonius, Div. Jul. 21). Cf. the Caesar, xiv. 4.

Calauria, 175, a small island off the S.E. coast of Argolis in Peloponnesus. Its temple was the final refuge of Demosthenes.
Callicratidas, 343, the Spartan admiral who succeeded Lysander in 406 B.c., and lost his life in the battle of Arginusae. Cf. the Lysander, chapters v.—vii.

Callipides, 59, cf. the Alcibiades, xxxil. 2
Callisthenes, 97, 381, of Olynthus, a philosopher and historian, who accompanied Alexander the Great on his expedition in the East until put to death by him in 328 B.O. Besides an account of Alexander's expedition, he wrote a history of Greece from 387 to 357 B.C.
Calvinus, 295, see Domitius (3).

Canusium, 457, 507, an ancient city of Apulia, about fifteen miles from the sea.
Capitolinus, 439, Caius Scantilius C., colleague of Marcellus in the aedileship about 226 B.O.
DICTIONARY OF

Carbo, 127-131, 137 f., Gnaeus Papirius C., a leader of the Marian party, consular colleague of inna in 85 and 84 B.o., put to death by Pompey in 82 B.0o.
Carinas (or Carrinas), 129, Caius C., was defeated by Sulla in the following year (82 B.Cc.), captured and put to death.
Catana, 521, an ancient city on the eastern coast of Sicily, about mid-way between Syracuse and Tau-romenium, directly at the foot of Mt. Aetna.
Catulus, 153, 157, 179, 181, 193, 197, Quintus Lutatius C., a leading aristocrat of the nobler sort, consul in 78 B.O., censor in 65, a supporter of Cicero against Cati-line in 63, died in 60 B.o.
Caucasus Mountains, 209, the great mountain system lying between the Euxine and Caspian Seas.

Cenchreae, 399, the eastern harbour-town of Corinth.
Chabrias, 105, a successful Athenian general, prominent from 392 till is gallant death at the siege of Chios in 357 B.o.
Chaeroneia, 47, a small town at the entrance from Phocis into Boeotia, commanding an extensive lain on which many battles were ought in ancient times (cf. the Marcellus, xxi. 2). Here Philip of Macedon defeated the allied Greeks in 338 B.O. It was Plutarch's native city.
Chares, 345, a famous Athenian general, prominent from 367 to 334 B.0. He was able, but untrustworthy and rapacious.
Cinna, 123-127, Lucius Cornellus

C., leader of the pepuar party and consul during the years of Sulla's absence in the East (87-—

84 B.C.).

Claros, 175, a place in Ionian Asia Minor, near Colophon, where there was a temple of Apollo, and an oracle of great antiquity.
Cleon, of Halicarnassus, 55, a rhetorician who flourished at the close of the fifth and the beginning of the fourth century B.o.
Cloelius, 129, an error for Coelius Caius Coellus Caldus, tribune of
PROPER NAMES

the peop in 107 B.c., consul in 94, a staunch supporter of the Marian party.

Cnidus, 47, a city at the S.W. extremity of Caria, in Asia Minor.
Colchis, 203, 207, a district of Western Asia, lying north of armenia and east of the Euxine ea.
Commagene, 231, a district of Syria, lying between Cilicia and the Euphrates.

Conon, 47, 63, a distinguished Athenian general. He escaped from Aegospotami in 405 B.o. (see the Lysander, xi. 5), and with aid from the Great King and Pharnabazus defeated the Spartan fleet off Cnidus in 394 B.o. and restored the Long Walls of Athens in 393 B.c.
Cornelius, 447, 453, Gnaeus Cornelius Scipio Calvus, consul with Marcellus in 222 B.o., afterwards (218 B.c.) legate of his brother Publius in Spain, where the two carried on war against the Carthaginians for eight years, and where both finally fell.
Coroneia, 41, 47, a town in N.W. Boeotia, the scene of many battles. Here reference is made to the victory of Agesilaiis over the Thebans and their allies in 394 B.C. (Agesilaiis, xvili.).
Cratippus, 311 f. of Mitylene, a Peripatetic philosopher highly regarded by Cicero, and by Cicero’s son, whose teacher he was. Brutus attended his lectures at Athens (Brutus, xxiv. 1).
Crispinus, 517, 519, Titus Quinctius Pennus Capitolinus C., a trusted commander under Marcellus in Sicily, 214-212 B.c., and now (208) his colleague in the consul-ship. After the skirmish here described he was carried to Rome, where he died at the close of the year.

Culleo, 243, Quintus Terentius C., tribune of the people in 58 B.c., a friend of Cicero, whose banishment he tried to prevent, and whose recall he laboured to ob ‘

Curio, 269 f., Caius Scribonius C., an able orator, but reckless and : He was tribune of Deore ee and sold his the Pompeians there, a was to the heads o 4 ae cre 87, a large d directly of Laconia in Peloponnesus. Cyzicus, 401, a Greek city on the Propontis, in Mysia.

D

Damip peed dead 483, a Spartan at the of Hieronymus, king of Syracuse. He tried to persuade the king not to abandon alliance with Rome. Marcellus gave him his liberty.

Deiotarus, 309, tetearch of Galatia in Asia ‘Minor, and an old man in 54 B.O. (cf. the Crassus, xvii. 1 f.). He was a faithful friend of the Romans in their Asiatic wars, ang was rewarded by the senate, in 63 B.0., with the title of King. Caesar could never be brought to poo wheal him for siding with emaratva the Corinthian, 39, a

est-friend of Philip of Macedon pit i 176. in the teriitory. y of e ry o

Miletus, the site of a famous temple of A pollo.
Dionysius, 429, Phe Elder, tyrant of Syracuse from 405 to 367 B.O.
Dioscorides, 99, a pupil of Isocrates, author of a treatise on the Spartan polity, writing in the latter part of the fourt century B.O.
(cf. the Lycurgus, xi. 4).
Domitius (1) 137 141, Gnaeus
Domitius Ahenobarbus, son-in-law of Cinna, and a partisan of Marius. When Sulla obtained the supreme power in 82 B.©., 536

PROPER NAMES

poate eee ence: where he died in 81 B
Domitius (2), “351, 291, 295, 335, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbas.
Domitius (3), 257, 295, Gnaeus
Domitius ’ Calvinus "(wrongly called Lucius Calvinus, p. 295), consul in 53 B.c. He was a sup-of Bibulus against Caesar 59 B.O., but after 49 B.c. an active supporter of Caesar.
Pharsalus he was Caesar’s lieutenant in Asia.
Duris, 7 “ Samos, a pupil of Theo-Pp historian and, for a time, peter of Samos, lived Bang 350-280 B.C.
ymé, 187, the most westerly of the Peat cities of Achaia in Pelo-nnesus. It had been destroyed
y the Romans in 146 B.o.

Dyrrachium, 279, 309, a city on the coast of Llyricum, known in Greek history as Epidamnus. It was a free state, and sided with the Romans consistently.

E

Ecbatana, 39, 417, an ancient city of Media, the residence of the Great King during the summer months.
Eleusis, 69, 375, the sacred city of the Athenian mysteries, some twelve miles west of Athens.
Engyium, 489 f., a city in the interior of Sicily, the exact site of which is unknown.
Enna, 489, an ancient fortress-city nearly in the centre of Sicily.
Ephesus, 17, 23, 493, one of the twelve Ionian cities in Lydia of Asia Minor, near the mouth of the river Caystrus.
Ephorus, 381, of Cymé, pupil of Isocrates, author of a highly rhetorical history of Greece from the *‘ Dorian Invasion ’’ down to 340 B.o., in which year he died.

Epidaurus, 175, a city on the east coast of ‘Argolis in Peloponnesus famous for its shrine and cult o Aesculapius.
Erasistratus, 41, otherwise unknown.
Eudoxus, 471, of Cnidus, a pupil of Archytas, most famous as a mathematician and astronomer, flourished about 360 B.c. He taught philosophy at Athens.
Eurypontidae, 329, one of the two royal families at Sparta; the other was that of the Agidae.
F

309, 335
Marcus F., called the ‘“‘ Ape of Cato,” edile in 52 and praetor in 49 B.o. He joined Pompey in Flaminius, 443, 447, Caius F. consul in 223 B.O., a violent opponent of senate and aristocrats. The Circus Flaminius and the Via Flaminia were constructed during his aedileship Soa BO). Cf. the Marcellus, xxvii. 3.
Fregellae, 517 f., 531, a city in S.E. Latium, on the river Liris. It was severely punished by Hannibal in 211 B.c. for its fidelity to Rome.

Fulvius (1), 503, Gnaeus Fulvius Flaccus, was praetor in 212 B.o., and received Apulia as his province, where, in 210 B.0., he was badly defeated (but not slain, as Plutarch says) by Hannibal. He had played the coward, and went into voluntary exile.
Fulvius (2), 505, Quintus Fulvius Flaccus, brother of Gnaeus, consul in 237, 224, 212, and 209 B.o. In 212 he captured Capua, which had gone over to Hannibal, and wreaked a dreadful vengeance upon the city.
PROPER NAMES

G

Gabinius, 177, 183, 241, Aulus G., tribune of the people in 66, praetor in 61, consul with Piso in 58 B.C., the year during which Cicero was exiled. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking bribes, and exiled. He died in 48 B.O.

Geraestus, 15, a town and promontory at the south-western extremity of Euboea.
Gordyene, 209, a rather indefinite district of Asia, lying south of Armenia and west of the river Tigris.
H

Hecatombaeon, 79, the first month of the Attic year, comprising parts of our June and July.
Herennius, 159, Caius H., tribune of the people in 80 B.o. After the death of Sulla he joined Sertorius in Spain (76-72 B.0O.).
Hermagoras, 225, of Tenedos, a distinguished rhetorician in the times of Pompey and Cicero. He was a mere formalist.
Hermione, 175, an ancient town at the south-eastern extremity of Argolis in Peloponnesus.
Hexapyla, 483, 485, probably a section of the wall fortifying Epipolae, the triangular plateau to the west of Syracuse.
Hiempsal, 145, king of Numidia after the Jugurthine war (111-106 8B.0O.), expelled from his throne by Gnaeus Domitius and restored to it by Pompey. |
Hiero, 457, 471 f., Hiero IT., king of Syracuse 270-216 B.c., for nearly half a century a faithful friend and ally of Rome.
Hieronymus (1), 37, of Rhodes, a disciple of Aristotle, flourishing about 300 B.0O., frequently mentioned by Cicero.
Hieronymus (2), king of Syracuse 216-215 B.O., successor to Hiero II., whose policy of friendship with Rome he forsook for alliance with Carthage.

537

DICTIONARY OF

Himera, 139, a Greek city on the northern coast of Sicily.
Hippocrates, 469, 483, a Syracusan

y birth, but educated at Carthage. He served under Hannibal in Spain and Italy. He persuaded Hieronymus, the young king of Syracuse, to abandon the Roman cause (216 B.0.).
Hydrieus the Carian, 37, otherwise unknown.
Hypsaeus, 263, Publius.Plautius H., tribune of the people in 54 B.O., and candidate for the consulship. He was accused of corrupt ractices, tried, and convicted.

ompey, whom he had devotedly served, forsook him in the hour of need.
Hyrcania, 207 f., a district of Asia lying south of the Caspian (Hyrcanian) Sea.
I

Iarbas (or Hiarbas), 143, a king of Numidia, set on the throne by Gnaeus Domitius, instead of Hiempsal.
Iphicrates, 61, 343, a famous Athenian general, who increased the effectiveness of light-armed troops and defeated a Spartan division of heavy-armed men at Corinth in 392 B.o. He was prominent until about 348 B.o.
Isthmus, 175, the Isthmus of Corinth Ithome, 399, see Messene.

J

Jason, 411, tyrant of Pherae in Thessaly, and active in Greek affairs from 377 to 370, the year of his death. He was succeeded by Alexander of Pherae.
Juba, 315, 525, Juba II., king of Mauritania. He lived from 50 B.O. to about 20 A.D., was educated at Rome, and became a learned and voluminous writer. Among his works was a History of Rome.
538

PROPER NAMES

L

Labienus, 293, Titus L., tribune of the ple in 63 B.o., and devoted to Caesar's interests. He was an able and trusted legate of Caesar through most of the Gallic wars, but became jealous of his leader and deserted him for Pompey in 49 B.o. After Pharsalus he fled to Africa, and after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.0.) to Spain, where he was the immediate cause of the defeat of the Pompeians at Munda and was slain (45 B.o.).
Lacinium, 175, a promontory on the east coast of Bruttium, in Italy, some six miles south of Crotona.
Larissa, 43 f., 307, 405, an important town in N.E. Thessaly, on the river Peneius.
Lauron, 159, a small town in the S.E. part of Spain, south of Valentia, near the sea.
Lentulus (1), 273, 325, Lucius

Cornelius . Crus, consul in 49 B.O. with Claudius Marcellus, and a bitter opponent of Caesar (cf. the Caesar, xxx. 3). He joined Pompey in the East, fled with him from Pharsalus, and was put to death in Egypt.
Lentulus (2), 307, see Spinther.

Leontini, 469, a city of Sicily
between Syracuse and Catana.
Lepidus, 151 ff., 197, 327, Marcus

emilius L , father of the triumvir, praetor in Sicily in 81, consul
in 78 B.O.
Leucas, 175, an island in the Ionian Sea, lying close to the coast of Acarnania.
Leuctra, 79, 391, and often, a village in Boeotia, south-west of Thebes, between Thespiae and Plataea,
for ever memorable as the scene of the utter defeat of the Spartans by the Thebans in 371 B.O.
Lindus, 521, an ancient and Sa a tant town on the east coast of the island of Rhodes.
Locri Epizephyrii, 515, a celebrated Greek city on the eastern coast of Bruttium, in Itaiy. said to have been founded in 760 B.c.
DICTIONARY OF

Luca (or Lucca), 249, a city of

, N.B. o a frontier-town of Caesar’s province in good communication with Rome.

M

Macaria, 391, daughter of Heracles and Deianeira. She slew herself in order to give the Athenians victory over Eurystheus.

Minoolic Sea, 207, the modern Sea of zOvV.

Magnesia, 421, 431, a district on the eastern coast of Thessaly.
Mantinea, 85, 93 f., 99, 349, a powerful city in the eastern part of central Arcadia, in Peloponnesus.
Marcellinus, 249 f., Gnaeus Cornelius Lentulus M., consul in 56B.¢., a friend and advocate of Cicero, and persistently opposed to Pompey, who was driven by his hostility into alliance with Caesar.
Marcellus, 269 f., Caius Claudius M., consul in 50 B.c., a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Caesar. But after the outbreak of the civil war he remained quickly and timidly in Italy, and was finally pardoned by Caesar. He is not to be confounded with an uncle, Marcus Claudius Marcellus, consul in 51, or with a cousin, Caius Claudius Marcellus, 49 B.O.

Marcius, 445, Caius M. Figulus, consul in 162 B.O., and again in 156 B.O.
Maximus, 521, Valerius M., compiler of a large collection of historical anecdotes, in the time of Augustus.
Megara, 483, 489, a Greek city on the eastern coast of Sicily, between Syracuse and Catana, It was colonized from Megara in Greece Proper.
Meliboea, 413, an ancient town on the sea-coast of Thessaly.

Memmius, 141, Caius M., after this,
Pompey’s quaestor in Spain,
where he was killed in a battle with Sertorius (Sertoriue, xxi.).
consul in

PROPER NAMES

Mendes, 107 f., a prominent city in the north of Egypt.
Menecrates, 59, a oy eousen gavel clan at the court of Philip of Macedon 3859-336 B.o. According to Aelian (Var. Hist. xii. 51), it was from Philip that he got this answer.
Menoeceus, 391, son of Creon the mythical king of Thebes. He sacrificed himself in order to give his city victory over the seven Argive chieftains.
Meriones, 489, a Cretan hero of the Trojan war, the companion and friend of Idomeneus.
Messala, 257, Marcus Valerius M., secured his election to the consul-ship in 53 B.o. by bribery, but still had Cicero’s support. In the civil war he sided actively with Caesar.
Messenia, Messene, 95, 99, 101, 331, 417 f., the south-western district in Peloponnesus, in earliest times conquered by the Spartans. Its stronghold, Ithome, was included in the capital city built by Epaminondas in 369 B.o. and named Messene. The names Messenia and Messene are sometimes interchanged.
Metellus (1), 121, (?) 187 f., Quintus Caecilius M. Creticus, consul in 69 B.O., and from 68 to 66 B.o. engaged in subduing Crete. On his return to Rome the partisans of Pompey prevented him from celebrating a triumph, for which he waited patiently outside of the city until 62 B.O.

Metellus (2), 277 f., 333, Lucius Caecilius M. Creticus, a nephew of the preceding Metellus, is little known apart from the incident here narrated.
Metellus (3), 133, 157 ff. 197, Quintus Metellus Pius, consul with Sulla in 80 B.C., and one of his most successful generals. After - Sulla's death in 78 B.o., Metellus was sent as proconsul into Spain, to prosecute the war against Sertorius. He died about 63 B.o.
Minucius, 447, Marcus M. Rufus, consul in 221 B.o., and in 217 Master of Horse to the dictator
539

DICTIONARY OF

Fabius Maximus (Fab. Maz. iv.—xili.). It is not known in what year Minucius was dictator.
Mithras, 175, a Persian sun-deity, whose worship su uently spread over the whole man mpire.

Mitylene, 225, 309 f., the chief city of the island of Lesbos.
Mucia, 225 f., Pompey's third wife (cf. the Pompey, ix.), and the mother by him of Gnaeus and Sextus Pompey.
Mutina, 155, an important city of Cisalpine Gaul, south of the Po, the modern Modena.
N

Nabataeans, 293, a people occupying the northern pete of the Arabian peninsula, between the Euphrates and the Arabian Gulf.

Neapolis (1), an ancient oy of en aT the modern Naples. Neapol 2), a rtion of what

(
Plutarch calls the ‘‘ outer city” . of Syracuse, lying between Epi- polae and Achyadina.
Pens, 521, 525, Cornelius N., a man biographer and historian contemporary and _ friend of Cicero.

Nola, 459, 463 f., an important city of Campania, about twenty miles 8.E. of Capua.
O

Oppius, 139, Caius O., an intimate end of Caesar (cf. the Caesar, xvii.), author (probably) of Lives of Marius, Pompey, and Caesar.
Orchomenus, 47 f., 377, 381 f., 523, a city in northern Boeotia, near the Copaic Lake.
Oricum, 285, a town on the coast of Epirus, north of Apollonia.
P
Paeonia, 221, a district in Thrace, north of Macedonia.
Paulus, 269, Lucius Aemilius P., 540

PROPER NAMES

consul in 50 B.o. with Claudius Marcellus. He had been a violent opponent of Caesar.
Pelusium, 317, a strong frontier- oan on the eastern branch of the e.

Perpenna, 137, 159, 163 f., Marcus

P. Vento, a leading partisan of Marius. On the death of Sulla (78 B.0o.) he joined Lepidus in his attempt to win the supreme power, and, failing here, retired to Spain, where he served under Sertorius.
Petelia, 515, an ancient city of Bruttium, north of Crotona.
Petra, 221, the capital city of the Nabataeans, about half way between the Dead Sea and the Arabian Gulf.
Pharnabazus, 21, 29, 33 f., 47, 63, satrap of the Persian provinces about the Hellespont from 412 to 393 B.O.
Pharsalus, Pharsalia, 45, 293, 301, 335, 409, 423, a city and plain in southern Thessaly.
Pherae, 403, 407 f., 419, 433, a city in south-eastern Thessaly.
Pherecydes, 391, possibly Pherecydes of Syros is meant, a semi-mythical philosopher of the sixth century B.0., about whose death many fantastic tales were told.
Philippus, 119, 157, Lucius Marcius P., consul in 91 B.0., and a distinguished orator, & cha gs of the popular party. e died before Pompey’s return from rem (71 B.O.).

Philistus, 429, the Syracusan, an eye-witness of the events of the Athenian siege of ap Seas pa (415-—413 B.0.), which he described thirty years later in a history of Sicily.

-Phlius, Phliasians, 67, a city in N.E. Peloponnesus, south of Sicyon.
Phthiotis, 419, 431, a districtin S.K. Thessaly.

Picenum, 443, a district in N.E. Italy.

Piso (1), Caius Calpurnius P., consul in 67 B.O., a violent crat, afterwards proconsul for the province of Gallia Narbonensis which he plundered. He must DICTIONARY OF have died before the outbreak of civil war.

Piso (2), Lucius Calpurnius P. Caesorinus, consul in 58 B.O., through Caesar's influence, recalled from his province of Macedonia 55 because of extortions, consul again in 50 B.O. at Caesar's request, and after Caesar's death a supporter of Antony.
Plancus, 263, Titus Minutius P. Bursa, accused of fomenting the disorders following the death of Clodius (52 B.o.), found guilty and exiled. Pompey, whose ardent supporter he was, deserted him in the hour of need. Caesar restored him to civic rights soon after 49 B.O.
Plataea, 377, 401, an ancient and celebrated city in S.W. Boeotia, near the confines of Attica, where the Persians under Mardonius were defeated by the allied Greeks in 489 B.O.
Pollio, 305, Caius Asinius P., a famous orator, poet, and historian, 76 B.0.-4 A.D. He was an intimate friend of Caesar (cf. the Caesar, xxxii. 5), fought under him in Spain and Africa, and after Caesar's death supported Octavian. After 29 B.o. he devoted himself entirely to literature, and was a patron of Vergil and Horace. None of his works have come Polybius, 381 f Megal iis, in olybius, , 0 egalopolis, Arcadia, the Greek Shistorian of the Punic Wars, born about 204 B.O., long resident in Rome, and an intimate friend of the younger Scipio, with whom he was present at the destruction of Cart in 146 B.o.

Poseidonius, 225, 437, 459, 491, 521, of Apameia, in bry a Stoic philosopher, a pupil of Panaetius at Athens, contemporary with Cicero, who often speaks of him and occasionally corresponded with him.

Potheinus, 317, one of the guardians of the young Ptolemy. He plotted against Caesar when he came to Alexandreia, and was put to death by him (cf. the Caesar, xlviii. f.).
PROPER NAMES

Ptolemy, 405 f., assassinated King Alexander II. of Macedon in 367 B.O., held the supreme power for three years, and was then himself assassinated by the young king, Perdiccas IIT.
Publius, 261, 311, Publius Licinius Crassus Dives, son of Marcus Crassus the triumvir. He was Caesar's legate in Gaul 58—55 B.c., followed father to the East in 54, and was killed by the Parthians near Carrhae (cf. the Crassus, XXV.).
R

Roscius, 181, Lucius R. Otho. As one of the tribunes of the ople in 67 B.o., he introduced the un-po ular law which gave the ghts special seats in the theatre.

Rullus, 149, Quintus Fabius Maxi-mus R., five times consul, the last time in 295 B.o., when he was victorious over Gauls, Etruscans, Samnites and Umbrians in the great battle of Sentinum.
Rutilius, 213, Publius R. Rufus consul in 105 B.0., unjustly exiled in 92 B.O., retired to Smyrna, where he wrote a history of his own times.
8

Samothrace, 175, 521, a large island in the northern Aegean Sea, some twenty miles off the coast of Thrace, celebrated for its mysteries (cf. the Alexander, ii. 1).
Sardis, 25, the capital va ad the ancient kingdom of 1 , and,
later, the residence of the Persian satraps of Asia Minor.
Sat , 205, a festival of Saturn, held at this time on the nineteenth of December. See the Sulla, xviii. 5.
Scipio (1), 149, 315, Publius Corne-us §. Africanus oe ha the conqueror of Hannibal. His con-541

DICTIONARY OF

go of Spain occupied the years
10-202 B.c.
Scipio (2), Lucius Cornelius 8. siaticus, belonged to the Marian party in the civil wars, and was consul in 83 B.0., the year when Sulla returned from the East.
Cf. the Sulla, xxviii. 1-3. He was proscribed in 82, and fled to Massilia, where he died.

Scipio (3), 261, 279, 289, 295, 327, ublius Cornelius 8. Nasica adopted by Metellus Pius and therefore called Quintus Caecilius Metellus Pius 8., or Metellus Scipio, was made Pompey 6 colleague in the consuls pete in the year 52 B.O., and became a determined foe of Caesar. He was proconsul in Syria, joined Pompey in 48 B.0., commanded his centre at Pharsalus, fied to Africa, and killed himself after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.c.). zou a Scipio by birth, a Metellus by adoption, and a son-in-law of Pompey, he was rapacious and profligate.
Scipio (4), 445, Publius Cornelius cipio 'Nasica Corculum, celebrated as jurist and _ orator, consul in 162 B.c. (when he abdicated on account of faulty auspices), and again in 155 B.c.
Scirophorion, 79, a month of the Attic year comprising portions of our May and June.
Scotussa, 293, 413. a town in central Thessaly, N.E. of Pharsalus.
Scythia, 221, a general term for the Moone regions north of the Euxine ea.
Seleucia, 317, probeny the Seleucia in Syria on the river Orontes.
Sertorius, 155-167, 197, Quintus S., was born in a small Sabine village, began his military career in 105 B.O., was a consistent opponent of the aristocracy, retired to Spain in 82, where for ten years and until his death he was the last hope of the Marian party.
8ee Plutarch’s Sertorius.

Servilius, 151, Publius Servilius Vatia Isauricus, peo the consul of 79 B.0., who obtained a triumph over Cilicia in 74, and 542 died in 44 B.c. His son, of the same name, was consul with Caesar in 48 B.0O., though a member of the aristocratic party.

Simonides, 3, of Ceos, the greatest lyric poet of Greece, 556—467 B.o.
Sinope, 223, an important Greek city on the southern coast of the Euxine Sea, west of Amisus.
Sinora (or Sinoria), a fortress-city on the frontier between Greater and Lesser Armenia.
Soli, 187, an important town on the coast of Cilicia, not to be confounded with the Soli on the island of Cyprus. See Xenorhon Anab., i. 2, 24.
Sophene, 203, a district of western Armenia enia.
Spartacus, 197, a Thracian gladiator, leader of the servile insurrecbert a 1B.0.). Cf. the Crassus, Spinther, 245, 201, 307, Publius Cornelius Lentulus 8., consul in 57 B.C., took part against Caesar in 49, was captured by him at Corfinium, but released. He then joined Pompey, and after Pharsalus fied with him to Egypt.
Strabo, 117, 123, Gnaeus Pompeius Sextus S., consul in 89 B.0o., in which year he celebrated a triumph for his capture of Asculum. He tried to be neutral in the civil wars of Sulla and Marius. In 87 B.0. he was killed by lightning.

Sucro, 159, a river in S.E. Spain, between Valentia and Lauron.
Susa, 39, 417, an ancient city of Persia, residence of the Great King during the spring months.
Sybaris, 341, a famous Greek city of Italy, on the west shore of the gulf of Tarentum, founded in 720 B.c., noted for its wealth and luxury.
T

Tachos, 101-107, king of Egypt for ashort time during the latter part of the reign of Artaxerxes II. of Persia (405-362 B.0.). Deserted by his subjects and mercenaries, he took refuge at the court of Artaxerxes ITI., where he died.

Taenarum, 175, a promontory at the southern extremity of Laconia, in Peloponnesus.
Tanagra, 377, a town in eastern Boeotia, between Thebes and Attica.
Tarentum, 493, 507, a Greek city in S.E. Italy. It surrendered to the Romans in 272 B.0O., was betrayed into the hands of Hannibal in 212, and recovered by Fabius Maximus in 209.
Taurus, 185, a range of mountains in Asia Minor, running eastward from Lycia to Cilicia.
Taygetus, 417, a lofty mountain range between Laconia and Messenia, in Peloponnesus.
Tegea, 95, an ancient and powerful city in 8.E. Arcadia, in Peloponnesus.

Tegyra, 77, 377 ff., 387, 525, a village in northern Boeotia, near Orchomenus.

Tempe, Vale of, 307, the gorge between Mounts Olympus and Ossa in N.E. Thessaly, through which the river Peneius makes its way to the sea.
Theodotus of Chios (or Samos), 317 825, brought to Caesar the head and signet-ring of hue 9 Theophanes, 213, 225, 247, 315, 319, of Mitylene in Lesbos, a learned Greek who made Pomy's acquaintance during the ithridatic war, and became his intimate friend and adviser. He wrote a eulogistic history of Pompey's campaigns. After Pompey's death he was pardoned by Caesar, and upon his own death (after 44 B.O.) received divine honours from the Lesbians.

Theophrastus, 5, 103, the most famous pupil of Aristotle, and his successor as head of the Peripatetic school of philosophy at Athens. He was born at Eresos in Lesbos, and died at Athens in rae B.O., at the age of eightyve.

Theopompus, 27, 87, 91, of Chios, a fellow-pupli of Isocrates with Ephorus, wrote anti-Athenian histories of Greece from 411 to 394 B.O. and of Philip of Macedon from 360 to 336 B.O.
Thermodon, 209, a river of Pontus in Northern Asia Minor, emptying into the Euxine Sea. _
Thesmophoria, 353, a festival in honour of Demeter as goddess of marriage, celebrated at Athens for three days in the middle of the month Pyanepsion (Oct.—Nov.).

Thespiae, 67 f., 97, 373 ff,, an ancient city in S3.W. Boeotia, north of Plataea. ; Thetis, 423, a sea-nymph, wife of Peleus and mother of Achilles.
Thriasian plain, 69, 357, a part of the plain about Eleusis, in S.W. Attica.
Timagenes, 245, a Greek historian, of the time of Augustus, originally a ares slave. The bitterness of his judgments brought him into disfavour.
Timagoras, 419, an ambassador from Athens to the Persian court in 387 B.o. He spent four years there, and took part with Pelopidas rather than with his own colleague, Leon. He revealed state secrets for pay, and it was this which cost him his life.
Timotheus (1), 345, son of Conon the great Athenian admiral. He was made general in 378 B.0., and about 360 was at the height of his popularity and glory.
Timotheus (2), 39, of Miletus, a famous musician and poet, 446—357 3B.O. His exuberant and florid style conquered its way to great popularity.
Tisaphernes, 21 f., 27, Persian satrap of lower Asia Minor from 414 B.0., and also, after the death of Cyrus the Younger in 401, of maritime Asia Minor, till his death in 359 B.o.
Tithraustes, 27. After succeeding Tisaphernes in his satrapy, Tithraustes tried in vain to induce Agesilaiis to return to Greece, and then stirred up a war in Greece ainst Sparta, in consequence of which Agesilaiis was recalled.

Trallians, 43, no tribe of this name is now known to have lived in 543

DICTIONARY OF

Thrace, nor are they mentioned in Herodotus (vii. 110).
Trebonius, 251, Caius T., tribune of the people in 55 B.O., and an instrument of the triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul, and loaded with favours by him, but was one of the conspirators against his life.
us, 275, Lucius Volcatius T., consul in 66 B.0., a moderate, who took no part in the civil war.
Tyche, 485, a portion of what Plutarch calls © e * out Ny ”” of yracuse D ween Epipolae and Achradina.
Vv

Valentia, 159, an important town in S.E. Spain, south of Saguntum.
PROPER NAMES

Valerius, 147, Marcus V. Maximus, dictator in 494 B.0., defeated and triumphed over the Sabines.
Vatinius, 251, Publius V., had been tribune of the people in 59 B.c., and was a paid creature of Caesar. He was one of Caesar’s legates in the civil war, and, after Pharsalus, was entrusted by him with high command in the East.
Venusia, 515, a prosperous city of Apulia, a stopp lace for travellers on the App Way from Rome to Brundisium. It was the birthplace of the poet Horace.

Vibullius, 285, Lucius V. Rufus, a senator, captured by Caesar at Corfinium, at the outbreak of the war, and again in Spain, but pardoned both times.
PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY RB. CLAY AND SONS, LTD., BRUNSWICK STREET, STAMFORD STREET, S.E. I, AND BUNGAY, SUFFOLK.

Pt all

PLUTARCH'S
~ LIVES WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
VI
DION AND BRUTUS
TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS PAULUS
Bo sad ao :

s - * _w
:
> 4 ‘

LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN
NEW YORK : G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
MCMXVIII
PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agreement between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of the one to the other, and any departure from both, have been indicated in the brief critical notes. An abridged account of the manuscripts and editions of Plutarch's Lives may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. None of the Lives presented in this volume is contained in either of the two oldest and _ best manuscripts. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader must still be referred to the major edition of the Lives by Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846, 4 voll., 8vo). The reading which follows the colon in the critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

Vv

PREFATORY NOTE

Some use has been made of the Siefert-Blass edition of the Zimoleon (Leipzig, Teubner, 1879), and also of Holden’s edition of the same Life (Cambridge, Pitt Press Series, 1889).
All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared and utilized, including that of the Brutus by Professor Long.
B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.
December, 1917.
vi

CONTENTS

PREFATORY NOTE .... .

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION

TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES .

DION e e e ° s e e e ° e e

BRUTUS' .....-+ +e «

COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

TIMOLEON peg) rete wa. ets He

AEMILIUS PAULUS .... .

COMPARISON OF TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS PAULUS

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

459

+ 5 |

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS KDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.
VouuME I. VouLuME VI.
(1) Theseus and Romulus. _ (22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison. Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa. : (7) Timoleon and Aemilius Comparison. Paulus.
(3) Solon and Publicola. Comparison.
Comparison. VoLumeE VII.
; (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
VouLumeE II. Comparison.
(4) Themistocles and (17) Alexander and Julius Camillus.
Caesar.

VotumeE VIII.

(9) Aristides and Cato the
7 (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Ider.

13 nel eons ll Comparison.
ne Compan a (18) Phocion and Cato the P Younger.
VouumeE III. ae Nate ee
(5) Pericles and Fabius Max- Coe imus. (21) Coe and Antony.
| omparison.
(14) i salary | (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
Comparison. | a
| VoLuME X.
VotumE IV. (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and
(6) Alcibiades and Coriola- Tiberius and Caius
nus. Gracchus.
Comparison. Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla. (10) Philopoemen and Flam-Comparison. ininus.
Comparison.
Vo.uMmE V. | Votume XL.
(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey. (23) Aratus.
Comparison. (24) Artaxerxes.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus. fe Galba.

Comparison. , (26) Otho.
viii

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilatis and Pompey.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Cains Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Aratus.
(24) Artaxerxes.

(25) Galba.

(26) Otho.

DION

VOL. VB.

ATON

I. "Apa ye, Worep 0 Stpwvid civ, @ _Parts
; pays le ape ead i $79 > Edition, Locare DYevexiwy, tots KopevOiors ov pnview To 1624, y
” ’ , \ A : A ” 958
IMuov émiotpatevoace peta tov “Axatov, Ste xaxeivots ot tept TAXadxov é& apyns KopivOcos yeyovores cuvendyouv Tpodvpws, odTwS EiKds TH
> , , e / , ¢/ b
Anadnpetg pare Peopatous penre EdAqvas eyKaety loov hepouévous ex THS ypadys tavTns, 7) tov te Bpovrou reptéxyer Biov kai tov Aiwvos, dy
e A 9 A 4 4 € a ,
o pev avt@ TAdtwv wrAnotdaas, o 5é Tots Aorots évtpadels tois Iddtwvos, domep ex pias Opuncay aporepor taraiotpas él tovs peyiotous
b A \ N \ oe \ \ 3 \ adyavas. Kai TO peéey Spota TOAAA Kal adedda mpatayras paptupjoat TO KaOnyenove THS ape-THs Ott det hpovnce nat dexatocvyn Svvamy eri
N > \ \ 4 ry A , e
TO avTO Kal TUynv cuVedOeiv, iva KadXdOS apa
kal péyeOos ai rodttixai mpdkers AdBwour, ov Oavpactov éotiv. ws yap ‘Immopayos o andei-MTNS EAEYE TOUS Yeyupvacpevous Tap avT@ Kal
xpéas €& ayopas idwy dépovtas émiyvavat Troppw-Oev, otrw TOV AOyov éoTiv Eixos THY TeTratdevpévay opoiws &rrecOar tais mpdkeow, éupéererav twa Kal puOuov enidépovta peta tov mpérovtos.
2

“BION

I. Ir it be true, then, 0 ’Socius Senecio,! as Simonides says,? that Ilium*‘is- not wroth with the Corinthians’’ for coming up-against her with the Achaeans, because the Trojans. -also had Glaucus, who sprang from Corinth, as a zealous ally, so it is likely that neither Romans nor Greeks' will quarrel with the Academy, since they fare' alixe in this treatise containing the lives of Dion' and. Brutus, for Dion was an immediate disciple of. Plato, while Brutus was nourished on the doctrines of Plato. Both therefore set out from one training-school, as it were, to engage in the greatest struggles. And we need not wonder that, in the performance of actions that were often kindred and alike, they bore witness to the doctrine of their teacher in virtue, that wisdom and justice must be united with power and good fortune if public careers are to take on beauty as well as grandeur. For as Hippomachus the trainer used to delare that he could recognize his pupils from afar even though they were but carrying meat from the market-place, so it is natural that the principles of those who have been trained alike should permeate their actions, inducing in these a similar rhythm and harmony along with their propriety.

1 One of the many friends whom Plutarch made during his residence at Rome. See on Theseus, i. 1.

2 Fragment 50; Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, iii.* p. 412.

II. Ac 8é _TUXat, Tois CULTTOUAG Haddov 4 Tais Tpoaipererty ovoat at avrat, guvayouct TOY avdpav TOUS Bious els oporaryta. 7 poavnpe-Onoav yap apdorepot Tob -Térovs, els 0 mpovdevto Tas mpagers ex TONG: KL _ beyahov ay@veov catabéc bat pa Suv déozes. 0 6€ mavrwv Bav-paci@tatov, STL Kak * To Sa1povioy auporépors UTEedH Awa € THY TEREUTIpD, Opoiws éxaTépep pacpa-TOS ets Oxruy OUK euplevods Taparyevouevov. KatTot oryos Ths eos, TOY avaipovvTwy Ta ToLavTa, pndevt av-voty eyovtTe tmpootecety pavTacpa Saipovos. june" eldwArov, GANA Traddpia Kal yv-vaia Kas . Tapaopous 8.' aoévevav avOparrous éy tige-.wrdve wWuyis 7 SvoKpacia TOMATOS yevopesisous d0€as apadeecBau KEVAS Kal adXoKo-TOUS 5+ above Tmovnpov év avrois thv Serordat-poviap } éXovTas. et b¢ Alwy Kal Bpodros, dvdpes éuBpibets Kai prrocogor Kab ™ pos ovdev ax poadarels ovd’ ed AwrTot wabos, oUTWS vo do patos dueténoav wote nal dpdaoat pos erépous, OvK 0lda wi) TOY Tavu TaXaALo@Y TOV drondTatov avaycacdapev mpoadexer Bat NOxvor, ws TA patha Satmovia cal Bacxava, TpoagOovobvta Tots ayaois avdpdat cat tais mpateow eva Tdpeva, TapaXas Kal poBous emdyet, oelovTa Kal opan-NOvTA THY apeTny, @S 11) Srapetvavres an TOTES

év TO Kan cal aKcépa.cot Bertlovos éxeiveav poipas perd THY TEAEVTHY TUXWOLD. adr TavTa pmeVv
els GAAov dvaxeiaOw Aovyov. ev tovT@ Sé, dwSe-

1 thy 8e:o:8aiuovlay Coraés and Bekker, instead of the elva: Seco8aiuovlay of the MSS.: Sea Samuovlar.

II. Moreover, the fortunes of the two men, which were the same in what befell them rather than in what they elected to do, make their lives alike. For both were cut off untimely, without being able to achieve the objects to which they had determined to devote the fruits of their many and great struggles. But the most wonderful thing of all was that Heaven gave to both an intimation of their approaching death, by the visible appearance to each alike of an ill-boding spectre. And yet there are those who deny such things and say that no man in his right mind was ever visited by a spectre or an apparition from Heaven, but that little children and foolish women and men deranged by sickness, in some aber- ration of spirit or distemper of body, have indulged in empty and strange imaginings, because they had the evil genius of superstition in themselves. But if Dion and Brutus, men of solid understanding and philosophic training and not easily cast down or over- powered by anything that happened to them, were so affected by a spectre that they actually told others about it, I do not know but we shall be compelled to accept that most extraordinary doctrine of the oldest times, that mean and malignant spirits, in envy of good men and opposition to their noble deeds, try to confound and terrify them, causing their virtue to rock and totter, in order that they may not continue erect and inviolate in the path of honour and so attain a better portion after death than the spirits themselves. But this subject must be reserved for discussion elsewhere, and in this, the twelfth book}

1 The Pericles was part of the tenth “ book ” (chapter ii. 3), the Demosthenes part of the fifth (chapter iii. 1). The ordinary arrangement of the Lives is purely arbitrary.

KaT@ TOV TAparrAnhov éyvt. Biwy, Tov Tov TpeEo Butépou Tpoeaaydyw ev.

III. Atovuctos 0 mpea BuTepos eis THY apy
Kataotas evOvs éynpe THY ‘Eppoxpatous Tou Lupakovatou Buyarépa. TAUTNY, obTrw THs Tupav-vidos iSpupevns BeBatws, arog TavTes ot _2upa-Kovatot devas Kal TAapavapLous UBpecs els TO TOpa KabvBpioav, ep als T ponKaTo Tov Biov éxougiws.
Atovictos bé THY apyny avaraBov Kal Kpatuva-pevos avdes a ayerat dvo yuvaicas dpa, THY per éK Aoxpév dvopa Awpisa, Thy 5é em tx @ptov "AptoToMayny, Ouyatépa ‘Inrapivov, TPWTEVTAVTOS
avdpos upaxovoiov Kal Actovuci suvapEavtos bre Tpit ov avToKpaTwp émi Tov TONE HOV npéeOn oTpPATHYOS. éyerat & juépa pev auporépas ayaryés Bat pod kal pndevi yevérOar avepos av-Oparoy o OTrOTEpa TpoTEpa cvverdor, TOV be a ov xpovov icov vévwv éavTov dtarenely éxaTépa, KOw? peev ela péveov deutrvety per’ avrov, 10. par
vuxta O€ év pépet oc uvavaTravopevmr. Kaitou TOV Lupaxovatoy éBovrero TO THs (Thy eyyevt}
7 NOV exeey Ths Levys: anna exeivy mporépg UmHPXE Texovon TOV mpeo Bevovta tis Avovuaiou
yeveas viov auth BonBeiv 7 pos TO yévos. n Oe “AptoTouaxn TONY Ypovoy amass TUVeKEL TO Atovuaiep kaitep orrovodtovre mepl THY éx TAUTNS TEKVOoLY, 6s ye kal Thy pntépa Tis Aoxpidos aiTacduevos KatapappaKkevery thy “Aptotopa-Ynv awéxTeELve.
IV. Tavrns aderpos @v 0 ior év “Pxe prev
elye Tiyuny amo Ths aderdijs, VaoTepov Oé Tod
6

959

DION

of my Parallel Lives, I shall begin with that of the elder man.

III. Dionysius the Elder, after assuming the reins of government,! at once married the daughter of Hermocrates the Syracusan. But she, since the tyranny was not yet securely established, was ter- ribly and outrageously abused in her person by the seditious Syracusans, and in consequence put an end to her own life. Then Dionysius, after resuming the power and making himself strong again, married two wives at once, one from Locri, whose name was Doris, the other a native of the city, Aristomache, daughter of Hipparinus, who was a leading man in Syracuse, and had been a colleague of Dionysius when he was first chosen general with full powers for the war. It is said that he married both wives on one day, and that no man ever knew with which of the two he first consorted, but that ever after he con- tinued to devote himself alike to each; it was their custom to sup with him together, and they shared his bed at night by turns. And yet the people of Syracuse wished that their countrywoman should be honoured above the stranger; but Doris had the good fortune to become a mother first, and by pre- senting Dionysius with his eldest son she atoned for her foreign birth. Aristomache, on the contrary, was for a long time a barren wife, although Dionysius was desirous to have children by her; at any rate, he accused the mother of his Locrian wife of giving Aristomache drugs to prevent conception, and put her to death.

IV. Now, Dion was a brother of Aristomache, and at first was honoured because of his sister; after-

1 In 405 B.c.

A A A ¥ » @ \ > a
dpovety dudovs metpav, 75n Kal' éavtov nyanato Tapa T@ Tupavyvm. Kal mpos Atract Tois aAXoLS
wv "a / 4 x A , 4
elpnto Tots Tamiars 6 Te av aitn Aiwv Sidovar, \ n Sovtas 5€ mpos avTov avOnyuepov ppdlev. wv &é
\ , e Xo A 40 \ Xo
Kai mpoTepov yn os TH 70er Kal peya odpwv
> > nA "A
kal avdpm@dns, rt padXov érédwxe pos Taira Geia twi tuyn TAdtwvos eis Yuxediav tapaBa-Aovtos, Kat' ovdéva AOytopov avOpw@Tivoy: ara
J
Saipwr Tis, ws Eorxe, ToppwOev apyny éedevOepias BadrXopevos Xupaxovaios, cal rupavvidos Kata-
,
Avow pNKYavopevos, exopicey €F "ITaXias eis
4 Suvpaxoveas [[Adtwva cai Aiwva avvyyayev eis
A 4 \ A
NOYous avTO@, véov pev dvTa Koutdy, TOD Se evpae 4 A 4 U Oéstatov atavtwy tov I[katove avyyeyovorwv kal o€vtaTov btraKxotaa pos aper ay, @S avTos ryeypade TAdreov, Kal Ta Tpaypara papTupel.
Tpaets yap ev HOeow vTro TUpdvyw Tamevots, cat Biov péev avicov kal xatadpofov, Oepatreias
5€ veomAovTov Kal Tpudfis areipoxdrov Kal Staitns év ndovais Kai trEoveEiats TiOemévns TO cadov eas Kal peotos yevouevos, ws TpaOTov éyevoato Aoyou Kal dirocodias HryEewovtrts pds

? / > 4 \ \ 4 a \
apeTny, aveprexXOn tiv yuxnv TAaXU, Kal TH TreEpt avtov evTecia THY KaX@Y akdKws Tavu Kal
A \ aA a
VEWTEPLK@S MpocdoKyaas viro THY avTaY AOYoV Suora welcecBar Aroviatov, éotrovdace Kal Suempatato Tomoapevos aXoAny avTov évtuyelv Tlvdteve cat axovoat.
wv

DION

wards, however, he gave proof of his wisdom, and was presently beloved by the tyrant for his own sake. In addition to all] his other favours, Dionysius ordered his treasurers to give Dion whatever he asked, although they were to tell Dionysius on the same day what they had given. But though Dion was even before of a lofty character, magnanimous, and manly, he advanced still more in these high qualities when, by some divine good fortune, Plato came to Sicily. This was not of man's devising, but some heavenly power, as it would seem, laying far in advance of the time a foundation for the liberty of Syracuse, and devising a subversion of tyranny, brought Plato from Italy to Syracuse and made Dion his disciple. Dion was then quite young, but of all the companions of Plato he was by far the quickest to learn and the readiest to answer the call of virtue, as Plato himself has written,? and as events testify. For though he had been reared in habits of submission under a tyrant, and though he was fully accustomed to a life that was subservient and timorous, as well as to ostentatious service at court and vulgar luxury and a regimen that counts pleasures and excesses as the highest good, nevertheless, as soon as he got a taste of a rational philosophy which led the way to virtue, his soul was speedily on fire ; and since he very artlessly and impulsively expected, from his own ready obedience to the call of higher things, that the same arguments would have a like persuasive force with Dionysius, he earnestly set to work and at last brought it to pass that the tyrant, in a leisure hour, should meet Plato and hear him discourse.

1 About 388 B.0., if this first visit be not a myth.
2 Epvet. vii. p. 327.
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

V. Tevouevns dé Tis guvovaias avTois TO ev
Sov sept avdpos aperis, mrcla roo dé Tepl avdpetas SiarropnBevrwr, @s TavTas)! wadXov oO Adtov y TOUS Tupdvvous. amépawvev avépetous, éx O€ TovTou Tparrouevos Tept Sixatoauyns édt-Sac Kev @S paKdptos pev) TOV dixaiwv, Ors bé
Oo TOV adixwy Bios, ovte Tovs Adyous epepev 0 TUpavvos womep éFeheyXomevos, iXGero Te Tos mapovat Javpactas aTrobexXouevors Tov avdpa Kal KOU MEVOLS UTO TOV Aeyouevan. TéhOS b¢ Oupw-Beis Kal mapoEuvbeis jparnoev aurov 6 te on Bovropevos eis YuxedAlav wapayévoito. Tod bé dycavtos ayabov avdpa Cnteiv, vmoha Bev ExEC-vos, “AAG v7 TOUS Geovs,” ele, ‘ “at paivy panto TOLOUTOV eUpnKes.” ot pev odv Trept TOV Aiwva TOUTO TéAOS MOVTO TIS opyiis yeyovevar, kat tov Iddtwva omevdovra ouvebémrepumov ent TpLNpoUs, i) TloAAwy éxometer Els THY "EAAdSa Tov

Lrraprearyy: o 6¢ Atoviatos Kpuda, TOU TT oAALos €TOLnTaTO Senow padiota pev aTOKTElVaL TOV avipa Kata wrody, et d€ xn, TWavTws atrodocbat: PraByoecBar yap over, arr’ evdatwovnc ety opoiws, Sixatov dvta, Kav SovA0s yévntar. S10
Kat Aéyeras TloAXs ets Alyway pépov arrobocGas
I]ddrwva, TONE HOU pos "AOnvatous 6 OVTOS avrois Kal yudic patos Strws 0 ANPOels “AOnvaiwr év Aiyivg Tim pacKnTat.
Ov pay 6 ye Aiev éXaTTov eixe Tapa TO Atovuct TUuLHS 7 Tio TEDS, adna, mpea Betas TE Tas peylatas Sikes Kal Teptropevos mpos Kap-1 xdyras Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: wav7a.

) Ge)

960

DION

V. At this meeting the general subject was human virtue, and most of the discussion turned upon manliness. And when Plato set forth that tyrants least of all men had this quality, and then, treating of justice, maintained that the life of the just was blessed, while that of the unjust was wretched, the tyrant, as if convicted by his arguments, would not listen to them, and was vexed with the audience because they admired the speaker and were charmed by his utterances. At last he got exceedingly angry and asked the philosopher why he had come to Sicily. And when Plato said that he was come to seek a virtuous man, the tyrant answered and said : “Well, by the gods, it appears that you have not yet found such an one.”” Dion thought that this was the end of his anger, and as Plato was eager for it, sent him away upon a trireme, which was conveying Pollis the Spartan to Greece. But Dionysius privily requested Pollis to kill Plato on the voyage, if it were in any way possible, but if not, at all events to sell him into slavery; for he would take no harm, but would be quite as happy, being a just man, even if he should become a slave. Pollis, therefore, as we are told, carried Plato to Aegina and there sold him; for the Aeginetans were at war with the Athenians and had made a decree that any Athenian taken on the island should be put up for sale.

In spite of all this, Dion stood in no less honour and credit with Dionysius than before, but had the management of the most important embassies, as, for instance, when he was sent to Carthage and won

Il

Sovious €Bavpacbn § L 17;
xnoovious eCavpacly OLradEepovTws Kai THY Trap-pnoiav épepev avtov povouv axedov adeas AéyovTos
TO TaptaTapevoy, ws Kal THY Tept Térwvos éni-
4 e ” A /
mrAnew. yrevalopevns yap, ws éotxe, tTHS Té-AwVOS apYs, avTov Te TOV T'éXwva tov Atovuciou p 7 4 / VA

, a e \
yéXwTa THs YKerlas yeyovévar dyoavtos, of ev
GAOL TO TKOppa TpoceTraovvTo Oavyalerv, o Sé Aiwv ducyepavas, “Kal pry,” bn, “od tupavveis Sta TéXwva miotevbeis: 56a oé b€ ovdels Erepos miotevOnoetar. TH yap sytTt daiverat
, \ a >] , ,
carrxoTov pev Vérowv ériderEdpevos Oéaua povap-Youpevny rod, alaxiotov 5é Atoviacos.
VI. "Ovrwv &€ Avovucio traiswv tpidy pev éx

a 5 4 de bd "A , A THS Aoxpt as, TeTTapwv oe €€ proTouayns, dv
dv0 joav Ouyarépes, Zapporvvy Kat ‘Apern, Lodpocvvyn pev Atovuci T® Vid ouvexneer,
’Apérn S€ @eapidn T@ adeAPO. TEAEUTHTAVTOS 5é rod adergod Weapidou Aiwv éraBe tiv’ Apérnv adergibqv odaav. émret 6€ voowy edo€ev o Arovvatos aBiatws eye, erexeipnoey avT@ diaréyeoOat tepl Tav ex THS "Aptorouayns Téxvwv oO Aiwv, ot & tarpot T@ médAXOvTE THY apynv SiadéyecOat yapilopevor Katpov ov trapéaxov: ws dé Tipatos dnot, cal dappakov brvwtixoy aitoovtt Sovtes adeirovto tHv alcOnow avdtod, Bavaro cuvarpaytes Tov Urrvov.
Ov phy adda avAACYOU TpwTOU TaY dirwv yevoueévou rapa Tov véov Aoviciov ovtw SienéxOn Tepi TaV oupdEepovTwY Tpos TOY KaLpOV 6 12
DION

great admiration. The tyrant also bore with his freedom of speech, and Dion was almost the only one who spoke his mind fearlessly, as, for example, when he rebuked Dionysius for what he said about Gelon. The tyrant was ridiculing the government of Gelon,! and when he said that Gelon himself, true to his name, became the Jlaughing-stock (“ gelos’’) of Sicily, the rest of his hearers pretended to admire the joke, but Dion was disgusted and said : “ Indeed, thou art now tyrant because men trusted thee for Gelon’s sake; but no man hereafter will be trusted for thy sake.’’ For, as a matter of fact, Gelon seems to have made a city under absolute rule a very fair thing to look upon, but Dionysius a very shameful thing. |

VI. Dionysius had three children by his Locrian wife, and four by Aristomache, two of whom were daughters, Sophrosyne and Arete. Sophrosyne be- came the wife of his son Dionysius,? and Arete of his brother Thearides, but after the death of The- arides, Arete became the wife of Dion, her uncle. Now, when Dionysius was sick and seemed likely to die, Dion tried to confer with him in the interests of his children by Aristomache, but the physicians, who wished to ingratiate themselves with the heir apparent, would not permit it; moreover, according to Timaeus, when the sick man asked for a sleeping potion, they gave him one that robbed him of his senses and made death follow sleep.®

However, in the first conference held between the young Dionysius and his friends, Dion discoursed upon the needs of the situation in such a manner

1 Gelon had been tyrant of Syracuse circa 485-478 B.c.
2 Cf. chapter iii. 3. 3 In 367 B.c.

Aiwv ore Tovs dddous ATAVTAS TH ev ppovycer Tatoas arroveifat, TH dé mappnoig dovXous THS Tupavridos d aryEVvVOS Kal mepipoBes Ta TOANA 1 pos Xapev T petpaxio cupBovrevovtas. pardiora b¢ avTous eLerdnfe TOV aro Kapyndovos xivduvov eT LK pe pa wEvOV TH apxn Sedotxotas, & Drrog Xopuevos, ei pev eLpnvns tovto Atoviotos, Trevoas evs els AiBinv as aptota SiabiccecOa Tov TONE LO, et O€ rroNepety mpodvpoiro, Operpecy aUuTOS idtous TéXeot Kal mapebev ets TOV mohepov avT@ TEVTNKOVTA TpLnpeLs €v WAcoveas.}

VII. ‘O per ou Avovictos Umeppues THY peyadowuxiav Oavpace Kal tH mpoOupiay nyatnoey® ot dé édeyxecOat TH Aaparporyre Kat ramevovcOa mH Suvaper tov Aiwvos ovopevot, TavTNv eddus apyny AaBortes, ovdemsas epetdovro povins i) TO perpaxcov eFarypiaive EweNXOY TpOS avrov, as DTrEpyopevov dua TIS Gararrns Tupavvida Kal Teptome@vTa Tais vavot Tijv Svvapuy ets TOUS ‘Aptotopdyns maidas, aderprdovs évTas

ave. paveporarat dé Kal beyrras TOY Ets POdvov Kat picos QiTL@OV UTA pov 7 Tob Biou dtapopa Kal TO THS Siairns a GpLKTov. Ol ev yap, evOvs €& apxiis véov Tupdvvou Kal TeOpappeévov pathos Omtriav Kal ouvndevay noovais Kal KoXa-Kelas caTahapBavovtes, aei TiVvas épwras Kal
SiatpiBas Eun Xavavro pepBaders Tepl TOTOUS «al yuvaixas, ral mradias é érépas aoxynuovas, vd’ ov 7 Tupawvis, domep atdnpos, paracropern, Tois pev apxopevors épavn giravopwros, xal TO Mav amdvOpwrov vTavijcev, ovK émreckeia Tint
1 ef wAeovoas van Herwerden : wAeovcas.

14

961

DION

that his wisdom made all the rest appear children, and his boldness of speech made them seem mere slaves of tyranny, who were wont to give their counsels timorously and ignobly to gratify the young man. But what most amazed them in their fear of the peril that threatened the realm from Carthage, was Dion’s promise that, if Dionysius wanted peace, he would sail at once to Africa and put a stop to the war on the best terms possible; but if war was the king’s desire, he himself would furnish him with fifty swift triremes for the war, and maintain them at his own costs.

VII. Dionysius, then, was greatly astonished at his magnanimity and delighted with his ardour; but the other courtiers, thinking themselves put out of countenance by{Dion’s generosity and humbled by his power, began hostilities forthwith, and said every- thing they could to embitter the young king against him, accusing him of stealing into the position of tyrant by means of his power on the sea, and of using his ships to divert the power into the hands of the children of Aristomache, who were his nephews and nieces. But the strongest and most apparent grounds for their envy and hatred of him lay in the difference between his way of life and theirs, and in his refusal to mingle with others. For from the very outset they obtained converse and intimacy with a tyrant who was young and had been badly reared by means of pleasures and flatteries, and were ever contriving for him sundry amours, idle amusements with wine and women, and other unseemly pastimes. In this way the tyranny, being softened, like iron in the fire, appeared to its subjects to be kindly, and gradually remitted its excessive

T5

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Aa A A 4
padXov H pabvyuia tod KpatodvTos auBdvvopEern.
o A \ éx 5¢ rovtou mpoiodea Kal vepopévn KaTa pLKpOV
la
wept TO pelpdKiov aveots Todvs AdapavTivous Sexpovs éxetvous, ols 0 mwperButepos Atovvatos
"4 J > , \ lA b>] , épn Sedepéevnv atroreitew Thy povapyiav, éEérnge / e 4 4 e b 4
kat drepOecpev. Huépas yap, ws paciv, évern-
a \ \ KOVTA TUVEXaS Erivey apEdpevos, Kal THY avAnVY
év TO Kpovw TOUT@ aTroVdaiols avdpdat Kai NOYoUS
/ ,
aBatov nal aveicodov ovoav péOat Kai cKop-\ ? 4 \ 4
pata cal Wadpol Kai opynoes cat Bwporoytar KATELYOV.
VIII. "Hv ody, as eixos, 0 Aiwy érayOns eis
b e \ \ \ > \ e , N
ovdey OU Kal vewrepixoy évdsdods éauvTov. 610 kal wiava Kxaxi@v tpocpnyata Tais apetais émipépovtes avtod SéBaddrov, vrepoiay thy oe“voTnta Kal THY Tappyoiay avOddeav atroxa-Nobvtes' Kal vovOeTav Katrnyopeiv édoKxet Kai pr) cuveEapaptaveyv Katadpoveiyv. apérer dé cal puaer Twa TO 00s SyKov elyev avTOD Kal TpaYvtnta dSvatpoaodov évTevEes Kal duaEvpBorov. ov
yap povov avopt véw nat dsrateOpuppévo Ta Ta Koraxelats ayapis hv ovyyevéo Oar Kal mpocdvrns, qodAol 5€ Kal TOV Wavy Ypwpévwv avT@ kal THY dmXoTnTa Kal TO yevvaioy ayaTwvTwy Tod TpOd-
A e / Tou KaTEpéu“povTo THS o-tAlas, WS aypoLKOTEpoY kat Bapvtepoy TodTiKaY xKpEeL@v Tots Seopévors
U4 ‘\ 2 \ /, 4
cuvadAacoovTa. mept wv Kal Ilhkatwv vorepor

@ tJ 4 "4 \ > \ >
@otep atrolecTritwy eypayre mpos avtov é£ev-16
DION

cruelty, though its edge was blunted not so much by any clemency in the sovereign as by his love of ease. Asa consequence, the laxity of the young king gained ground little by little, until at last those " adamantine bonds" with which the elder Dionysius said he had left the monarchy fastened, were melted and destroyed. For it is said that the young king once kept up a drinking bout for ninety consecutive days from its beginning, and that during this time his court gave no access or admission to men or matters of consequence, but drunkenness and raillery and music and dancing and buffoonery held full sway. VIII. Dion, then, as was natural, was obnoxious to these men, since he indulged in no pleasure or youthful folly. And so they tried to calumniate him by actually giving to his virtues plausible names of vices; for instance, they called his dignity haughti- ness, and his boldness of speech self-will. Even when he admonished, he was thought to denounce, and when he would not share men's sins, to despise. And in very truth his character had naturally a certain majesty, together with a harshness that re- pelled intercourse and was hard to deal with. For not only to a man who was young and whose ears had been corrupted by flattery was he an unpleasant and irksome associate, but many also who were in- timate with him and who loved the simplicity and nobility of his disposition, were apt to find fault with the manner of his intercourse with men, on the ground that he dealt with those who sought his aid more rudely and harshly than was needful in public life. On this head Plato also afterwards wrote to him, in a tone almost prophetic, that he should

1 Epist. iv. ad fin.
1]
VOL. VI. Cc

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

AaBeioOat thy avOaderav ws épnuia cuvotxovcap.
ov nv GdAB TOTE THreiatou Soxwy akios wrdpyew Sta Ta Tpaypata Kal povos } padtora THY tupavviba Tadevovaay avopbobv Kat Siapurdr-TEL, EYLYWaKEY OV TpOs XapL, anh QKOVTOS UTrO YpEeLas TOD TUPdYVOY TPMTOS Ov Kal péyLoTos.
IX. Aitiav 5€ trovrov tiv aradevaiar eivat vopitwy éuBareiy avtov eis StatpsBas érevOeptous édirotipetro Kal yedoat Noywv Kai pabnud-Tov nOoTroLaY, ws apeTny Te Tavaatto SediMs Kai
-Tots Kanrois yaipev Oicbein. pice yap ov yeyoves TOV pavAoTdtwy Tupavywy o Aroviatos, GX' o traTHp, Sedotxas 7 Ppoynuatos peTtada-Baov Kal ovyyevouevos vobv Eyovow avOpatras ériBovrevoctey avT@ Kal TapéXoLTO THY apyny, éd povpet KaTaxdetoTtov otxoL, St épnutav optrias évépas Kal atretpia Tpaypdtav, Os pact, auakia kal rvyvias nab Sidpous Evrivous Kal tpamétas TEKTALVOMEVOY. OUTW Yap NY aTrLOTOS Kal TpOS

dmavras avOpwrovs bronrros Kai mpoBeBAnpEévos 51a hoBov o mperBvtepos Atovicios wate pnde Ths Keparys Tas Tpixas adedety! Kovptxais payaipats, AANA TOV TAACTaY TIS EmipolrT@v avOpaxt THv KOmnv qeptéxatev. eioner dé mpos avrov eis TO Swpatiov ovte abeAPos OO vids ws eruyev nuhtecpevos, GAN Eder mpl eicedOeiy aim bivra Thv éavtod oToAny Exactov érépav avaraBeiv, opabévta yupvov bro TaV hudaTTOV-
tov. émet dé Aemtivns o abeXdos avT@ corte
1 apedcivy Bekker, after Coraés, has apaipeiy.

DION

be on his guard against self-will, which was a “ companion of solitude.’’! However, at this time, though circumsiances led men to think him of more value than any one else, and the only or the chief supporter and guardian of the storm-tossed tyranny, he knew that it was not out of goodwill, but against the wishes of the tyrant and owing to his needs, that he was first and greatest.

IX. Considering, then, that a reason for this lay in the tyrant’s want of education, he sought to engage him in liberal studies, and to give him a taste of such literature and science as formed the character, in order that he might cease to be afraid of virtue, and become accustomed to take delight in what was high and noble. For by nature Dionysius did not belong to the worst class of tyrants, but his father, fearing that if he should get wisdom and associate with men of sense, he would plot against him and rob him of his power, used to keep him closely shut up at home, where, through lack of as- sociation with others and in ignorance of affairs, as we are told, he made little waggons and lampstands and wooden chairs and tables. For the elder Diony- sius was so distrustful and suspicious towards every body, and his fear led him to be so much on his guard, that he would not even have his hair cut with barbers’ scissors, but a hairdresser would come 2nd singe his locks with a live coal. Neither his brother nor his son could visit him in his apartment wearing any clothes they pleased, but every one had to take off his own apparel before entering and put on an- other, after the guards had seen him stripped. And once, when his brother Leptines was describing to 1 Cf. the Coriolanus, xv. 4.

ywpiov duaow éEnyoupevos KaBov AoYXNY Tapa Tivos Tav Sopudopev Uréypayre Tov TOTOD, éxelv@ peév ioxupas éyarémnve, tov 5é Sovta Thy AOYXNV améxtewev. édeye 5é Tors dhirovs PvratrecBat
voov éyovras eidws xat Bovropévous paddov Tupavveiy) TupavveicBat. nal Mapovav Sé twa Ta@V Tponypévov UT avtov Kal TeTaypévwv ep
nyeuovias davette Sokavta Kata Tovs Omvous opatreyv avrov, a am' évvoias peOnpepivis Kat Siaroyropod THs Swews TavTyns eis Tov Drvov aUT@ Trapayevouevns. o pev dn TTdatov Oupo-Deis Ott wy TWavTwyv avTov avOpwrov avdpeoTaTov dvTa amédpynvev, ovTw TepihoBov Kal tocovTwy vo Setdias KaKOVY peaTHy elye THY Woyny.
X. Tov & vidv abtod, cabdrep cipntar, diare-AwWBnuevov amrabevoia Kal ouvTeTpippevovy TO 7005 0 Aiwv op@v tmapexdder mpds ratdeay tpatrécOat Kai SenOfvat tod mpwrov TaV Piroao-gov tacav Sénow édeiv eis Bieediav €AOovTt
5¢ rapacyely avtov, twas Svaxocpndeis 7d O05 eis apeThs AOyov, Kal mpos TO Oerdtatoy dpopow-Oels mapdderypa TOY dvTwv Kal KaANTOV, S TO Trav nyouuévw meOopevoy é& dxoopias Koo pos dati, TONATY pev Eevdatpoviay EaVTO "NYavynoeTat, movAny dé Trois moditats, dca viv év abvpia Stovxovot Tpos dvayKny THS apyis, Tadta cwhpoauvn cal Sixatoovvn pet' Eevpevetas Tatpovopov-peva TapacxXwv Kal yevouevos Bactrevs x TUpayvou. Tous yap ddapavrivous Seapovs ovy, waTEp 6 20
96

DION

him the nature of a place, and drew the plan of it on the ground with a spear which he took from one of his body-guards, he was extremely angry with him, and had the man who gave him the spear put to death. He used to say, too, that he was on his guard against his friends who were men of sense, because he knew that they would rather be tyrants than subjects of a tyrant. And he slew Marsyas, one of those whom he had advanced to positions of high command, for having dreamed that he killed him, declaring that this vision must have visited his sleep because in his waking hours he had purposed and planned such a deed. Yes, the man who was angry with Plato because he would not pronounce him the most valiant man alive, had a spirit as timorous as this, and so full of all the evils induced by cowardice.

X. This tyrant's son, as I have said, Dion saw to be dwarfed and deformed in character from his lack of education, and therefore exhorted him to apply himself to study, and to use every entreaty with the first of philosophers to come to Sicily, and, when he came, to become his disciple, in order that his character might be regulated by the principles of virtue, and that he might be conformed to that divinest and most beautiful model of all being, in obedience to whose direction the universe issues from disorder into order; in this way he would pro- cure great happiness for himself, and great happiness for his people, and that obedience which they now rendered dejectedly and under the compulsion of his authority, this his moderation and justice would base upon goodwill and a filial spirit, and he would become a king instead of a tyrant. For the “ada- mantine bonds” of sovereignty were not, as _ his

watnp édeyev avrod, doBov xal Biav Kal veov TAOS elvat Kat BapBdpov pupiavépov puracny, evvotay dé cal mpodupiav nal yapw eyyevopevgy
on aperis Kat Sixavocwrns, a, Kainep évTa pahaKarepa TOY OUVTOVOV wal oKAnpay éxetvov, loxuporepa 7 pos Stapovny Wryepovias vrrdpyxew.
Xo pis b€ TovTwY ap iAor tov elvat xat aenhov TOV apxovra, TO HEV o TopATL TEPLTTOS dumexo-pevoy Kal TH rept THY olxnot aBpornte Kal KaTACKEVT} AapeTrpuvopevor, Opsrta be Kat Noy pndev évTa Tob T poo TUX OVTOS TEMVOTEPOV, pNde TAS uyis TO Baciretov afwodvra Kexoo unwévov éyew Bacihixas Kat T PETOVT WS.
XI. Tatra TONAAKLS Tov Aicvos TapatvouvTos, Kal TOV Aoyeov TOU TAdtwvos € EOTIV OVOTLVAS brrooTeipovTos, eaxev épes tov Acovvatov dvs Kal TEPLLavTys TOV TE Aoyov Kal THS avVOValas Tob TThatwvos. evOvs ovv "AOijvale ToAAG per époira ypaupata Ta.pa tov Atovuciov, rodXal §
emiaxnypers qapa Tov Aiwvos, ddAa 8 é€ "IraXias Tapa TOV Tv@aryopixav, Sraxehevopevov Tapa-yevéoOat Kal véas puxs é£oucia peyarn Kat Suvdpet Teptpepoperns ériraBécOar kab xata-axe éuBpilearépois Noyia pois. TlAdtov pev ov, as pnow autos, éavTov aiaxuvdels paduota, Hm d0fere Noryos elvat povov, Epyou 8 exe ovdevos
ay axpac Gan, cal mpoodoxnaas 8 évds avdpos Oomep mye poveKod pépous exxabapBévros SAnv latpevoewv Luxerlav vocovaav, vmnKxovoev.
Oi & rH Aiwve TroheLouvTes poBovpevor THY tod Avovyciov petaBorjy Ereicay abtov amd rhs father used to say, fear and force and a multitude of ships and numberless barbarian body-guards, but goodwill and ardour and favour engendered by virtue and justice; these, though they were more flexible than the bonds of severity and harshness, were stronger to maintain a lasting leadership. And be- sides all this, it was mean and spiritless in a ruler, while his body was magnificently clothed and his habitation resplendent with luxurious furnishings, to be no more majestic in his intercourse and con- versation than an ordinary man, and not to insist that the royal palace of his soul should be adorned in meet and royal fashion.

XI. Since Dion frequently gave him such advice, and artfully mingled with it some of Plato's doc- trines, Dionysius was seized with a keen and even frenzied passion for the teachings and companionship of Plato. At once, then, many letters began to come to Athens from Dionysius, and many injunctions from Dion, as well as others from the Pythagorean philosophers of Italy, all of whom urged Plato to come and get control of a youthful soul now tossed about on a sea of great authority and power, and steady it by his weighty reasonings. Plato, accord- ingly, as he tells us himself,[1] out of shame more than any thing else, lest men should think him nothing but theory and unwilling to take any action; and further, because he expected that by the purification of one man, who was, as it were, a controlling factor, he would cure all Sicily of her distempers, yielded to these requests.

But the enemies of Dion, afraid of the alteration in Dionysius, persuaded him to recall from exile

1 Dpist. vii. p. 328.

ghuyns petaréurecOar Ditiotov, dvdpa cal qematsevpéevov tmept AOyous Kal TupavuiKav nOdV éuTeipoTatov, @s avtTitayya mpos IlAdrwva cai dirocodiav éexetvov EEovtes. 0 yap 57 Pidsotos €E apyis Te TH Tupavvids Kabiorapévn Tpodvpo-Tatov éavTov TAPETXE, Kal tTHy axpav Sepvrake
ppoupapxav él trodvy xpovov. hy 5€é Adyos ws Kal TH pyTpt wAnoLalos Tov mpecBuTépov Acovu-aiov, Tov TUupdvvou pi) TavTdtractw aryvoourTos.
éret 5€ Aemtivns, é« yuvatxds tv Siadpbeipas
étép@ ouvoixovaay eaye yevouévwy avT@ Sveiv Ouyatépwv, thv évépav Edwxe Piricoto pndée dpa-aas mpos Atovictov, opytcbels éxeivos thy péev yuvaixa tov Aemtivov dnoas év rédats Kabeip£e, tov 5¢ Diriorov éEnrace UxKertas, hvyovtra Tapa Eévous tivas eis tov 'Adpiav, Srrov nat Soxet ta mAclota cuvOcivar Tis LaTopias axordlwv. ov
yap emavnrie TOU mpea Butépou Cavros, adhe HETA THY EXELVOU TEAEUTHV, WOTEP ELpNTal, KATI-

yaryev avtov 0 tpds Aiwva Tav ddXwv POovos, ws avTots Te wAAXov. eritTHdeLov GvTA Kal TH TUpavvids BeBarotepov.
XII. Odbros pév odv evOvs cateOav Srerrehucet Ths Ttupavvidos: Te 5é Aiwm xal tap ddAdXd.ov érvyxavoy ovoat S:aBorai Kal Katnyopiar mpos TOV TUpavvon, Os Sretheypevep TEpt KATAAVTEWS
Ths apxns mpos te @eodornv nat mpos “Hpa-Krelonv. nrmile pev ydp, ws éorxe, d1a TXadtwvos wapayevopévou TO SeomoTiKoy Kal Mav aKpatov adedov THs Tupavuldos éupeXr Teva Kal voptpov apxovta tov A.ovvatov Katacthoey: et dé ayti-24

963

DION

Philistus, a man versed in letters and acquainted with the ways of tyrants, that they might have in him a counterpoise to Plato and philosophy. For Philistus at the outset had most zealously assisted in establishing the tyranny, and for a long time was commander of the garrison that guarded the citadel. There was a story, too, that he was very intimate with the mother of the elder Dionysius, and that the tyrant was not wholly ignorant of the fact. But when Leptines, who had two daughters by a woman whom he had corrupted when she was living with. another man and then taken to wife, gave one of them to Philistus without so much as telling Diony- sius, the tyrant was wroth, put the wife of Leptines into fetters and prison, and banished Philistus from Sicily. Philistus took refuge with some friends in Adria, and there, it would seem, in his leisure, com- posed the greater part of his history. For he did not return to Syracuse while the elder Dionysius was alive, but after his death, as I have said, the envy which the other courtiers felt towards Dion brought about his recall; they thought him a more suitable man for their purposes, and a stauncher friend of the tyranny.

XII. Philistus, then, as soon as he had returned, was in close touch with the tyranny ; and there were others also who brought slanders and accusations against Dion to the tyrant, alleging that he had been in conference with Theodotes and Heracleides concerning a subversion of the government. For Dion had hopes, as it seems likely, that by means of the visit of Plato he could mitigate the arrogance and excessive severity of the tyranny, and con- vert Dionysius into a fit and lawful ruler; but if

25

f

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Baivot kal py padrdoooto, catadvaas éxeivov éyvaxes THY TodeTelay amodidovar Suvpaxovatoss,

ovk émrawvay pév Snwoxpatiav, mdvras 8& Bertin Tupavvidos tyyovpevos Tois Siapaptdvovaw vytavovons apiaToKpatias.
XIII. “Ev rovavty 8¢ eatactdce tev mpayydtov dvtwy IAdrwv els Luxediav ddixdpevos Tept pev Tas mpdTas dravtyces Oavpactis eTvyYaveE prroppoovrns xat tiphs. Kal yap adpyua tov Baciktkdy avT@ twapéotn Kxexoo unpévov Siam pe-
TOS aToBdavTt THS Tpipovs, Kai Ovalav LOvcer 6 TUPAVVOS WS EUTUYATOS MEydroU TH apYXn Tpoayeyovotos. aidws S& ouutrociwy Kal oYnNLA-TLo Los aVAHS Kal mpadTns av’Tod Tod TUpaVVOU Tepl Exacta THY YpnuaTtilouévwy Oavpactas évédwxev éedmridas pyetaBorHs tols morta. popa 6€ Tis Hv emi Adyous Kai dirocodiav amr dvrwy, Kal TO TUpavveiov, &s Paci, Kovoptos bd TAH-Govs TaY yewpeTpovvTMY KaTelyer. nuepav &é
Odiywr Stayevouévwv Ovaia per Rv TATpLOS €v TOIS
Tupavveiois: Tod b€ KijpuKos, Saomep clwOet, KaTev-Eauevov Svapéverv thy tupavvida doddevtov ToX-Aovs xpovous, 6 Arovdatos réyerat TAPETTOS, “OU raven,” davat, “Katapdpevos hpiv;” rod-
To Kouidp Tovs mepl tov Ditiotov edrvmrncer, dpayov twa tod IXatwvos sFyoupevous &cecOar Xpovy Kai cuvnPeia tiv Siva, ef viv ex cvvovaias orlyns HAXOiwKEY otTW Ka) etaBeBrAnxKe THY yvouny To werpdKtoy.
26

DION

Dionysius should oppose his efforts and refuse to be softened, he had determined to depose him and restore the civil power to the Syracusan people; not that he approved of a democracy, but he thought it altogether better than a tyranny in lack of a sound and healthy aristocracy.

XIII. Such was the condition of affairs when Plato came to Sicily,! and in the first instances he met with astonishing friendliness and honour. For a royal chariot, magnificently adorned, awaited him as he left his trireme, and the tyrant offered a sacri- fice of thanksgiving for the great blessing that had been bestowed upon his government. Moreover, the modesty that characterized his banquets, the deco- rum of the courtiers, and the mildness of the tyrant himself in all his dealings with the public, inspired the citizens with marvellous hopes of his reforma- tion. There was also something like a general rush for letters and philosophy, and the palace was filled with dust, as they say, owing to the multitude of geometricians there.? After a few days had passed, there was one of the customary sacrifices of the country in the palace grounds; and when the herald, as was the custom, prayed that the tyranny might abide unshaken for many generations, it is said that Dionysius, who was standing near, cried: “Stop cursing us!” This quite vexed Philistus and _ his party, who thought that time and familiarity would render Plato’s influence almost irresistible, if now, after a brief intimacy, he had so altered and trans- formed the sentiments of the youthful prince.

1 Soon after 368 B.c.
2 (;eometrical figures were traced in loose sand strewn upon the floor.

XIV. Ovxér’ odv Kal’ &a Kal AaOpaiws, ara mavTes avahavdov érXorddpouv tov Aiwva, AéyovTes as ov hednDe KateTradwv Kal KaTapapyaaawy TO TTAdtevos oye Avoviarov, Smras adévros ExXOU- obs avrov Kal tpocpévou THY apxXnv vroda Bev els TOUS “Apiaromayns TEPLATHON Tmatdas, ov Oeios eat. Evie O€ TpoceToLobvTo dvaxepai- Vel, €6 TWPOTEpov pey "AOnvaior vavTixais Kat meSixais vvapect peydrats Seipo TEvoaVTES amT@XoVTO Kal StepOapnoav mpotepov 7) NaBeiv Lupaxovoas, vuvi dé 2° évas cogiatob KaTadvovat THY Atovuciou Tupavvida, cuptreioavtTes avTov ex TOV pupiov Sopupopwr arroépavTa, kal KaTani- TOvTa Tas TeTpaxoatas IT pinpers Kal TOUS pupious immets Kal TOUS TONNAKIS TOTOVTOUS omdiras, éy Axadnpeta TO o Lem Levov ayabov enreiv Kat bua yewper plas evdaipova yevécOat, THY év apyn Kal xp jpact kal tpudais edSarpoviav Aiwve kab Tois Aiwvos adedprdois T poe MEVOV.
"Ex TOUTwY vrowias TP@TOV, eita Kal pavepw- Tépas opyijs Kat Siapopas yevoperns, exopiaOn Tes eTLTTONN Kpupa mpos Acovictov, tv eyeypader Atcv POS TOUS Kapyndoviey erripednTas KedEvOOD, érav Atovuci Tept THS ecpnuns Siadéeyovra, V7) wpis avTov mounoadbat THY évrevEw, @S TavTa Preston ApETaT TOT OS 52’ avtov. TavTHY avaryvous Atovictos @Diriote Kal per’ exelvou Bovrevodpevos, o> dnote Tipacos, vrjrve TOV Alwva memdacpévais Svadvoect: Kal petpta oun yd pevos SiahrAdrrea Gai TE pycas, fLovov TE aTayayov vo Thy axpoToALy pos THY Oddrac- 964

XIV. They therefore no longer abused Dion one by one and secretly, but all together and openly, saying that he was manifestly enchanting and bewitching Dionysius with Plato’s doctrines, in order that the tyrant might of his own accord relinquish and give up the power, which Dion would then assume and devolve upon the children of Aristomache, whose uncle he was. And some pretended to be indignant that the Athenians, who in former times had sailed to Sicily with large land and sea forces, but had perished utterly without taking Syracuse, should now, by means of one sophist, overthrow the tyranny of Dionysius, by persuading him to dismiss his ten thousand body-guards, and abandon his four hundred triremes and his ten thousand horsemen and his many times that number of men-at-arms, in order to seek in Academic philosophy for a mysterious good, and make geometry his guide to happiness, surrendering the happiness that was based on dominion and wealth and luxury to Dion and Dion’s nephews and nieces.

As a consequence of all this, Dionysius became at first suspicious, and afterwards more openly angry and hostile, and just then a certain letter was secretly brought to him, which Dion had written to the Carthaginian officials, urging them, whenever they should treat with Dionysius for peace, not to hold their interview without including him, since he would help them to arrange everything securely. This letter Dionysius read to Philistus, and after consulting with him, according to Timaeus, he beguiled Dion by a feigned reconciliation. That is, after moderate protestations and a declaration that their quarrel was at an end, he led him off alone beneath the

¥ \ b] A \ 4 e
cav, éevEe THY émicToAnY Kal KaTNYyOpnoEY ws guuctapévouv peta Kapynooviwy én’ avrov.
atronoyetaOat S&é Bovrouévov tod Aliwvos ov«
’ , ’ 9 »Q/ e ? ? , 3
avacXoEvos, GNX EvOUs, ws elyev, evOEmEVOS Ets axatiov tpoaérake Tois vavTats KopiCovTas avTov éxOeivat trpos THY Itaniav.

XV. Tevopevou &€ tovtov nal davévros wpod
Tots avOpwrrots, THY wév OlKiay TOU TUpavVoU Trév-Bos eye 81a Tas yuvaixas, 9 Se wos TOY Yupa-KOVolwY eTpTo Tpaypyata vewTepa Kal petaRorAny mpoodexXouevn Tayelay éx Tod wept Aiwva Oopv-Bov kat ths mpos Tov TUpavvoy dmioTtias TOV
wv a A aA e , \ , adrwv. & 67 svvopav o Atoviavos kal Sedorxas, Tous pev hirous TapepvOetto Kal Tas yuvaixas ws
b) A > > 9 , A a A ov puyis, AAX atrodnuias TO Aiwve yeyevnuevns, @S LN TL XElpov OpyhH mpos THv avOdberay avTod Tapovtos apapte Biacbein: Svo dé vais trapa-So0vs tots Aiwvos otxelots éxéXevoev évOemévots boa BovAowTo Tay éxeivou xpynuata Kai BepdrovtTas
’ , N > A r) ’ >
aTaye mpos avtov eis IeXotovvncov. hv 8
ovaia peyadn TO Aiwm cai oxedov te TUpavytKy Tommy Kal KatacKevn tept thy Siastav, Hv oi dito. cvAraBovtes éxoutlov. adrra 8 érréptreto TOAAG Tapa TOV yuvatkov Kal ToY éTaipwr, @aorTe Ypnuatwv Evexa Kai TWOVTOV NapTpoY év tois "EdAnow eivar cal Scapavivas tH Tod guya-
/ a / ,

Sos evtropia thy THs Tupavvidos Suvamuv.

XVI. TAdtwva $€ Atoviatos ev0vs pev es thy dxpotrokw petéotncev, VTLMOV alT@ oYNUATL 30

DION

acropolis down to the sea, and then showed him the letter and accused him of conspiring with the Carthaginians against him. And when Dion wished to defend himself, he would not suffer it, but at once placed him, just as he was, on board a small boat, and commanded the sailors in it to set him ashore in Italy.

XV. At this proceeding, which seemed to men a cruel one, the women in the household of the tyrant put on mourning, but the citizens of Syracuse were cheered by the expectation of a revolution and a speedy change in the government, since Dion’s treatment caused such a commotion and the rest of the courtiers distrusted the tyrant. Dionysius saw this and was afraid, and sought to console the friends of Dion and the women by saying that he had not sent Dion into exile, but upon a journey, in order that his wrath at the man's self-will when at home might not drive him to do him some worse wrong. He also handed over two ships to the kinsmen of Dion and bade them to put on board whatever property and servants of Dion's they pleased and convey them to him in Peloponnesus. Now, Dion had great riches and an almost princely splendour of appointment in his way of living, and this his friends got together and conveyed to him. Besides, many other things were sent to him from the women of the court and from his adherents, so that, as far as wealth and riches went, he was a brilliant figure among the Greeks, to whom the affluence of the exile gave some idea of the wer of the tyrant.

XVI. As for Plato, Dionysius at once removed him to the acropolis, where he contrived to give 7 3!

fevias ptravO poxrov ppovpav pnxavne dpevos, @S pt cup h€éor Aiwvs padptus dv ndixnto. Xpove 6é nai owvdiarticet, xabdmep yavew av porrou Onpiov, EO. Oels Urromévery tTHy Te} omsdiay avrod Kal Tov _Aoyor, npadaOn tupavyexov épwra, povos akiav wo TTAaravos avrepia Gat Kal Oaupa- becBar partora Tavroy, ETOLMOS dy emeT peTreLy Ta, Tpaypara Kal THY Tupavvida Hn) TPOTLMGYTE THY 7 pos Aiwva prriay THiS 7 pos aud. Hv ovv TO Trareve cuppopa To mwalos avTou TovTO, paivopevov cabdmep ot Sucépwtes vO Endorv- mias, Kal mjoAAas pepy opyas éy odiy@ xpove, TOANAS bé dsadrayas Kal denoess ToLoUpevou 7 pos aurov, axpoda bas 5é Tay hoyov Kal KoLVMVElY TAS Tmepl pirocodiav Tpayyarelas aTrovddtovTos pep UTeppuas, aidoupévou dé Tovs dmoTpérovTas OS Sia pOapnoopevov.
"Ep TOUT@ d€ TOAgMoU TLVOS cumeaovTos arro-

TETEL TOV ‘Tldtova, ouvOépevos | els Gpav ETOUS petaméuyacbat Aiwva. Kati rodro pev ev us eevoato, Tas 5é Tpoaabous TOV KTNMATOY amé-TEM TEV auTo, afiav TAadtrova ouyyvevat Te pt Tob Xpovou ms Tov TONE MOV" elpivns yap yevopévns TaxyloTa petarréppes Bas Tov Aiwva, Kal akvovv avtov nouxiav a aryery kat pndev vewre pile pndé Bracdnpety kat’ avtod ™ pos TOUS "EdAnvas.
XVII. Tatra eTrespaTo moe IIAdtwr, Kal Atwva TpeWas eri prrocogiav év ‘Axadnpeia ouvelxen. @KEL pev ouy év dares mapa Kan-ALTT/~ Tl TOY yYwpipwv, aypov be dtaywys
1 Swouevery thy re Schenk] : brouévew re Thy.

him a guard of honour under pretence of hospitable kindness, in order that he might not accompany Dion and bear witness to his wrongs. But after time and intercourse had accustomed Dionysius to tolerate his society and discourse, just as a wild beast learns to have dealings with men, he conceived a passion for him that was worthy of a tyrant, de- manding that he alone should have his love returned by Plato and be admired beyond all others, and he was ready to entrust Plato with the administration of the tyranny if only he would not set his friend- ship for Dion above that which he had for him. Now, this passion of his was a calamity for Plato, for the tyrant was mad with jealousy, as desperate lovers are, and in a short space of time would often be angry with him and as often beg to be reconciled; for he was extravagantly eager to hear his doctrines and share in his philosophical pursuits, but he dreaded the censure of those who tried to divert him from this course as likely to corrupt him.

At this juncture, however, a war broke out, and he sent Plato away, promising him that in the summer
he would summon Dion home. This promise, indeed, he immediately broke, but he kept sending to Dion the revenues from his property, and asked Plato to pardon his postponement of the time of Dion’s recall, because of the war; as soon as peace was made he would summon Dion home, and he asked him to be quiet, and to attempt no revolution, and to say no evil of him to the Greeks.
XVII. This Plato tried to effect, and kept Dion with him in the Academy, where he turned his at- tention to philosophy. Dion dwelt in the upper city of Athens! with Callippus, one of his acquaint-

1 The ‘‘ upper city,” as distinguished from the Piraeus.

yap éxticato, Kal TodTOV baTepoy eis YKediav wréov Yrevoirme Swpedy Ewxev, © pduoTa trav AOnvnat hiro éxypito Kai suvdintato, Bov-Aopévov Tod TAadtwvos opsdia Yap éxovon Kal TaLolas eéupedovs KaTA KaLpoY ATrTOMévN KEpavYU-pevov apndvverGat tod Aiwvos 76 400s. Totovtos dé Tis 0 Lrevourros Hv 7 Kal cKx@ Wat dyabov avtrov év tois LiArouws Oo Tipwv mpoonyopevoev.
abr@ b€ Adtran xopnyobyts waidwv xop@ Tov Té Yopov jaoxnoev o Aiwy nal To Sarravnpa Trav
éréXece Tap EavTov, cvyxwpovvTos Tov IINatwvos THY ToLAavTnY dirotiuiay mWpos Tovs *AOnvaious, @s éxelvp pardov ebvoray 7 SoEav ait@ pépovcar.
’"Exregoita 5é nal rais ddXats ToAcow o Aiwp, Kal cvveryorate xal ouverravnyvpite Trois apiatots Kal ToALTiKwWTaTOLS avdpdow, Ovdéy ev TH Staitn aoXoLkov émidecxvipevos ovdé TupavyiKov ovdé ériteOpuppévov, GAAA Gwhpoovvyy Kal ape-Thv kal dvdpeiav Kai mepi Adyous Kai Tept dido-aodiav evoxnpovas SiatpiBds. éf’ ols evvora mapa tmavrov éyivero Kal Cros avT@ Tipal TE Snucctat Kal wWndicuata Tapa tToV TodEwr.
AaneBatpoviot 8€ Kat Yraptidtyny avtoy émoin-aavro, ths Avovuciou xatadpovncarres opyijs, Kalwep avTots ToTe TpoOUpws eri Tors OnBaiovs
ouppayodvtTos. Aéyerar Sé rote Tov Aiwva Tov Meyapéws Irorodépou Sedpevov él tiv otxiav
eXOety: Fv Sé, ws Eotxe, TOV TWrovaoiwy Tis Kal Suvatav o Itotddwpos: bydov ody emi Ouvpats idov o Aiwy nat wAnOos aoxodav Kal dvoév-TevKTov avrov Kal Svompocodov, amid@v mpos tous dirous dvaxepaivovtas nal ayavaxrobvtas, 34

965

ances, but for diversion he bought a country-place, and afterwards, when he sailed to Sicily, he gave this to Speusippus, who was his most intimate friend at Athens. For Plato desired that Dion’s disposition should be tempered and sweetened by association with men of charming presence who indulged seasonably in graceful pleasantries. And such a man was Speusippus; wherefore Timon, in his ‘ Silli,’’ spoke of him as “ good at a jest.” And when Plato him- self was called upon to furnish a chorus of boys, Dion had the chorus trained and defrayed all the expense of its maintenance, and Plato encouraged in him such an ambition to please the Athenians, on the ground that it would procure goodwill for Dion rather than fame for himself.

Dion used to visit the other cities also, where he shared the leisure and festal enjoyments of the noblest and most statesmanlike men, manifesting in his conduct with them nothing that was rude or arrogant or effeminate, but rather great modera- tion, virtue, and manliness, and a becoming devotion to letters and philosophy. This procured him the emulous goodwill of all men, and decrees of public honours from the cities. The Lacedaemonians even made him a citizen of Sparta, without any regard for the anger of Dionysius, although at that time the tyrant was their zealous ally against the Thebans. And it is related that Dion once went to pay a visit to Ptoeodorus the Megarian, upon his invitation. Now Ptoeodorus, it would seem, was one of the wealthy and influential men of the city; and when, therefore, Dion saw a crowd of people at his door, and a press of business, which made him difficult of access and hard to come at, he turned to his friends, who were

35
p 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“Ti robvrov,” ébn, ‘ weuhoueda; Kal yap adrot TavTws év Lupaxovaass Gora TovToLs errotovpev.
XVIII. Xpovov 8 wrpoiovros o Atoviatos EndotuTa@v Kai Sedoxas tod Alwvos tHv Tapa Tois
"EXAnow evvotay, érravaato Tas Tpoaddous atrootéhiwv Kal thy ovciay Tapédaxey idious émuTpo-mous. Bovrdopevos 5é cal THv eis Tovs didoaogous da TAdtova xaxodokiay advapdxyerbat, rodXovs auvnye Tav trenatdedvcbar SoxovvTwv. didott-povpevos S¢ TO SiaréyecOat Tepicivar wavTwv, nvaycateto Tots UXdrwvos trapaxovopact KaKas yphoOa. Kxal mdduw éxetvov éobe, Kai KaTerivooKEev AUTOS AUTOD Un YpNadpeEvos TrapovTt pwnde Staxovoas 60a Karas elyev. ola 8& Tvpavvos éumdrnntos ael tals émiOupiats Kal mpos tmacapv
o£vppotros atrovdny, evOus @punaev emt tov IIda-Twva, Kab Tacav pnyavny aipwy, cvvérrece TOUS wept Apxvtay Iv0ayopicobs Tv oporoyoupevav avaddxous yevouévous xarely TIXatwva: 8: éxetvou yap avtois éyeyoves diria wal Eevia To TpPa-
tov. ot & émrepryav “Apyédnuov map’ avtov éreurpe 5& nal Atovicvos tpinpn Kal didrous denoopévous Tov Id drwvos: auras TE capes Kab Scappydnv eryparpev @s ovdey av yévorto TaV pet piov Aiwve pn mecobévtos Idarwvos éNOeiy eis Quxertav, weioOévros S€ mdvta. Toddrdgai & adixovro mpos Aiwva mapa tis aderdys xal yuvaikos emiokn es, SetaOat TIAdtwvos itraxodgat Atovyciw Kai wy mpopaciy Tapac ye. odTw 36

DION

vexed and indignant at it, and said: “ Why should we blame this man? For we ourselves used to do just so in Syracuse.”
XVIII. But as time went on, Dionysius became jealous of Dion and afraid of his popularity among the Greeks. He therefore stopped sending him his revenues, and handed his estate over to his own private stewards. However, with a desire to make head against the bad repute which he had also won among the philosophers on Plato’s account, he as- sembled at his court many men with a reputation for learning. But he was ambitious to surpass them all in discussion, and was therefore driven to use inaptly what he had imperfectly learned from Plato. So he yearned once more for that philosopher, and reproached himself for not having utilized his pres- ence to learn all that he should have learned. And since, like a tyrant, he was always extravagant in his desires and headstrong in all that he undertook, he set out at once to secure Plato, and, leaving no stone unturned, persuaded Archytas and his fellow Pytha- goreans to become sureties for his agreements, and to summon Plato; for it was through Plato, in the first place, that he had entered into friendly rela- tions with these philosophers. So they sent Arche- demus to Plato, and Dionysius also sent a trireme for him, and friends to entreat his return. He also wrote to him himself in clear and express terms, saying that no mercy should be shown to Dion unless Plato were persuaded to come to Sicily; but if he were persuaded, every mercy. Dion also received many injunctions from his wife and sister, that he should beg Plato to listen to Dionysius and not afford him an excuse for further severity. Thus it

37

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pev 89 dynorv o TAatwv édOety to Tpitov eis Tov mopO mov Tov trept {KvAXay,} Shp Ett THY OAONY avapeTpnacte XapuPbuv.

XIX. ’EdOov &é peyarns pev avrov éverrAnoe
yapas, weyadns 5€é waduy €rmidos Yexediav, cvvev-Youéevny cal ovudirorimoupevny UWdatwva pev Diriorov mepiyevécOar, pirocodiav 8 tupav-
, @ \ \ \ aA A \ vidos. my b€ Todd) wey TOV YuVAaLK@V oTroUd) wept autov, éEaipetos b€ mapa te Atovucio
, 9 A ¥ tf bd 4 b) A miotls, hy ovdels aNXOS Elyev, AdtepevYNTOY avT@

mrAnoratew. Swpeas 5€ yYpnuaTwy ToAAwY Kat
U a \ , “A \ \ /
TodANaKts Tov pev SedovTos, Tov bé yun Sexouévou, \ 9 ‘ e hd a > a“ ”
wapwv Apiotimmos o Kupnvatos acharas édn peyarowvyov elvat Acovictov: adrois pév yap puxpa Stdovat tmrevovwov Seopévois, Wratwu b¢é TOAAG pndev Aap Bavovte.
Mera &€ ras mpwtas diroppocvvas, apEapévou
TlAdtwvos évtvyxydvew mept Aiwvos, trepbécers
TO Tpa@Toy Haay, eita peers Kat Scadopal rav-Pavovaat tous éxtos, émixpuTrropevov Atovuctiou
\ a v A , 4 A
kat tais addNats tov IIXadrwva Oepareias Kat Tipais Tetpwuévou Tapayey amo THs Aiwvos evvoias, ov’ avtov év ye TOls TPWTOLS YpovoLs a7rO-KAAUTTTOVTA THY aTLaTIAV avTOD Kal Yrevdoroyiar, GX’ éyxaptepodyta Kal oxnpatilopevov. otTw
dé Staketpevwy mpdos addAndovs Kxal rAavOaverv 1 SxvAAay as in Plato, Epist. vii. p. 346; Coraés retains the XixeAlay of the MSS.
38

966

DION

was, then, that Plato, as he himself says, “came for the third time to the straits of Scylla,
That he might once more measure back his way to fell Charybdis.””!
XIX. His arrival filled Dionysius with great joy, and the Sicilians again with great hope; they all prayed and laboured zealously that Plato might triumph over Philistus, and philosophy over tyranny.
The women also were very earnest in his behalf,
and Dionysius gave him a special token of his trust, which no one else had, in the privilege of coming into his presence without being searched. The tyrant offered him, too, presents of money, much money
and many times, but Plato would not accept them.
Whereupon Aristippus of Cyrene, who was present on one of these occasions, said that Dionysius was safely munificent; for he offered little to men like him, who wanted more, but much to Plato, who would take nothing.

After the first acts of kindness, however, Plato introduced the subject of Dion, and then there were postponements at first on the part of Dionysius, and afterwards faultfindings and disagreements. These were unnoticed by outsiders, since Dionysius tried to conceal them, and sought by the rest of his kind attentions and honourable treatment to draw Plato away from his goodwill towards Dion. And even Plato himself did not at first reveal the tyrant's perfidy and falsehood, but bore with it and dis- sembled his resentment. But while matters stood thus between them, and no one knew of it, as they

1 Odyssey, xii. 428, with slight adaptation from the first person.

mavrTas oiopevwv, 'EXixov o Kuoixnvos els TOV TAdrwvos ournbov nartou ™ poetrrev Exhempuy: Kal YEVOMEVNS WS TrPOELTrE, Javpac Geis t vO TOU Tupdy- vou Swpeav édraBev dpyupiov TaXNavrov. *Apt- oTumrmos O€ mailov T pos ° TOUS GAXOUS piroodgous épn TL Kal aUTOS EXELY TOV mapadocov mpoevreiy. éxelvov dé ppacar Seopevov, - Tporeyo Toivuy," eltrev, " dAlyou Xpovov TAdteva Kal Atovuatov ex O pous YEVNT OpMEVOUS. " réXos 6€ THY Bev ovatap tov Aiwvos o Atovictos em@hee Kal Ta Xphwara KaTeixe, TAdteva é év ® Tepl THY olxiay Kym SvarT@pevov els TOUS pula Jopopous peTéatnae Ta- Nal ploovvTas avTov Kal nrobyTas UvEeNEV WS mweiBovta Atovicroy adeivas thy tupavvida cal Ch adopupopyrov.

XX. 'Ev ToLouTp dé Kivduvep ryevopevov TOU TIAdtwvos ot mepl "Apxurav mudopevor TAXD TE pL- Touat mpeaBeiay Kal TplaxovTopov, amartobvtes TOV avSpa, mapa Atovuciov cal eyoures @S av- TOUS AaBov avadoxous TIS aa paneias m7 NEVoELEV els Lupaxoveas. aroneyouevou dé tov Arovw- ctou THY Ey pay eoTiaaeat Kal prhoppocvvars mepl THY TpoTOMT HY, ev b€é tt TmpoaxDévros ™ pos QUTOV TOLOUTOV etmeiy: '°H qrov, Trae, TONNa kal Seva KaTnyopnaers 7 OV 'pos TOUS oupptro- copobvras'" UTopel Lda as EKELVOS amexpivato: i" My TOCAUTH oye év "Axadnpeta yévouto on a- vs @OTE Gov TWA prnpovetcat. TOLAUT AY pev THY amoaToAny TOU TAdtwvos yevérOar Neyoua ww: ov pevtot Ta [IAadtwvos avTod madvu TovTOLs ouD- ade.

supposed, Helicon of Cyzicus, one of Plato's inti- mates, predicted an eclipse of the sun. This took place as he had predicted, in consequence of which he was admired by the tyrant and presented with a talent of silver. Thereupon Aristippus, jesting with the rest of the philosophers, said that he himself also could predict something strange. And when they besought him to tell what it was, " Well, then," said he, "I predict that ere long Plato and Dionysius will become enemies." At last Dionysius sold the estate of Dion and appropriated the money, and removing Plato from his lodging in the palace garden, put him in charge of his mercenaries, who -had long hated the philosopher and sought to kill him, on the ground that he was trying to persuade Dionysius to renounce the tyranny and live without a body-guard.

XX. Now when Archytas and his fellow Pytha- goreans learned that Plato was in such peril, they quickly sent a galley with an embassy, demanding him from Dionysius and declaring that Plato had taken them for sureties of his safety when he sailed to Syracuse. Dionysius sought to disprove his enmity to Plato by giving banquets in his honour and making kind provisions for his journey, and went so far as to say something like this to him: "I suppose, Plato, thou wilt bring many dire accusations against me to the ears of your fellow philosophers." To this Plato answered with a smile: ' Heaven forbid that there should be such a dearth of topics for discussion in the Academy that any one mention thee." Such, vhey say, was the dismissal of Plato; Plato's own words)! however, do not entirely agree with this account.

1 Epist. vii. p. 349 f.

XXI. Atwy 8€ cal rovtos éyaréraive, cal per'
b 4 4 b] 7 4 ,
OAdiryov ypovoy e€eTToNEUoOn TravTatrace TUO opMEVOS
TO TWEpt THY yuvaiKa, Tept ov Kal IIXdtwv yviEato ypadwv mpos Arovicrov. Hv dé toodTov. peta tiv éxBoArAnv tov Aiwvos aroréurov Wrdtova Atovictos éxéXevoev avtod b: arroppytwv true-cbat, pH TL K@AVOL THY YyUAaiKa TpPds yapov éETép~@
a a 2 4 vy > 3 \ ¥ Sobjvar: Kal yap Rv Aoyxos, eit' aANONS elrEe ouDe \ A / 4 e > e reels bro Tov Aiwva picovvTwr, ws ov Kal 780-ynv o yapmos ein Aiwve yeyovms ovd' evappootos 7
a /
mpos THY yuvaixa oupBiwots. Ws oY KEV O

TAatov "Adnvate cal tO Aiwve wept wavTov évétuxe, ypapet impos Tov TUpavvoy érLcTOANnY TA pev AAA sagas Tacw, avdTo 6€ TodTO povw yvo-b] , v4 td 5 ra) / , ptpov exeivm dpdlovaay, ws orarexein Atwm
A / A 9
meépl TOU WpayuaTos exelvou Kal cpodpa O7Xos ein yaretraivwov, ef todto Atovictos éFepyaoatro.
4 \ 4 a ? / b A \
kal Tote pev ets ToAN@Y EATriOwY OVTwY Tpds
Tas Stadvoes ovdev erpake tepi thy adeAdny
\ A vewTEpOV, GAN ela pévely AUTHVY META TOV TaLdiov
tov Aiwvos oixotcav. éret Sé mavtaracu aoupBatas eiye cal UAdtwv adOis Mov arre/ \ b 4 ef \ > /
méuhOn mpos améyOecav, ottw thy *Apérnv
wv e AQ “ 4 , , b)
dxovoay évi Trav dirtwv Tipoxpater didwatv, ov
piunodpevos THY KaTa ye TovUTO TOD TaTpOS CT LELKELaV.
"Eyeyoves ydp, ws éouxe, kaxeivp LorvEevos o
A > \ ” > a“ , , 9
Thy GdEXhHY Exwv avTov O€orny ToAréuLOS. atro-42

DION

XXI. But Dion was vexed by all this, and shortly afterwards became altogether hostile when he learned how his wife had been treated, on which matter Plato also spoke covertly in a letter to Dionysius. The case was as follows. After the expulsion of Dion, and when Dionysius was sending Plato back,} he bade him learn from Dion confidentially whether he would oppose his wife’s marrying another man ; for there was a report, whether true or concocted by Dion’s enemies, that his marriage had not proved agreeable to him, and that he did not live harmo- niously with his wife. Accordingly, after Plato came to Athens and had conferred with Dion about every- thing, he wrote a letter to the tyrant which spoke of other matters in a way that was clear to anybody, but of this particular matter in language that could be understood by Dionysius alone, saying that he had talked with Dion about that business, and that Dion would evidently be exceedingly angry if Dio- nysius should carry it through.? Now, as long as there were many hopes of a reconciliation, the tyrant took no violent measures with his sister, but suffered her to continue living with Dion’s young son; when, however, the estrangement was complete, and Plato, who had come to Sicily a second time, had been sent away in enmity, then he gave Arete in marriage, against her will, to Timocrates, one of his friends. And in this action, at least, he did not imitate the reasonableness of his father.

For the elder tyrant also, as it would appear, had a sister, Theste, whose husband, Polyxenus, had become his enemy. When, therefore, Polyxenus was 1 For the first time; cf. chapter xvi. 3.

3 Cf. Hpist, xiii. p. 362 ad jin.
43

fo

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Spavros ovv avtov Sa poBov Kal puyovTos éx Sucedlas peTaT EU apEvos NTaTO TH adergny,
Ort cuverdvia THY guy Tov avopos ov KQTELTTE
Tpos avuTov. i & avextrAYKtws Kal vn AC apo-Bas: "Ee obra cou Soka, Atovvcte, pavrn yun yeyovevat Kab dvav6pos OTE mpoyvovca THV
guyny Tob avdpos ouK av ouvert redo at Kal pera oxely HS auriis TUYNS; GAN ov T poeyveov: émret KANBS ELVE pot paddov TloAvE€evou yuvaixa pev-yovTos 7) cov TupavvouvTos aderd nv Neyer Gas."
TavTa THs Gears Tappnoiacapevns Oavpdoat
Neyougs TOV TUpavvov. eGavpacav bé Kal ot Lupaxovavoe THY aperny THS yuvarkos, Bore Kal
pera THY KaTaAVOLY THS Tupavidos éxelyyn TULny Kat Oeparetav Bacidseny v uma pxeu, dmoBavovens
d€ Snpocia 7 pos THD Tapny emaxoovOjoat TOUS ToNTas. TavTAa pev OUY OVK AXpNoTOV exEL THY ma,pexBacw.
XXII. 'O dé Air évrevbev On TpeTreT aut 7 pos
TOANELOY, AUTOU pev TAdtavos éxrrodav i toTapevov be aide THs 7 pos Avovictov Eevias Kal yipas, Lmevoimov 5€ ral TOV adrAov ératpov 7@ Atwve oVANa Bavovrov Kat _ TapaKehevopevov éXevbe-pouv Siverlav Helpas opéyoucav auT@ kal mpodu-pws vob, i aa éTe yap év Lupaxovoais Ilharov dueTpiBev, oi trept_ Lrevorm mor, @S éoune, pGdXov EVALLYVU EVOL Tots avd amos KaTepay-Oavov thy didvotay aut av. Kal TO pev ™pOTOv epoBobvro THY mappnotav as Sidrerpav ovcay bro Tov TUpavvou, Xpovep 8 émictevoav. 0 yap
avTOS Hv Tapa TavTwVY AOYOS Seopévev Kat Tapa-Kerevonevov eAOciy Aiwva pn vais éxovta pnd
44

96

moved by fear to run away and go into exile from Sicily, the tyrant sent for his sister and upbraided her because she had been privy to her husband's flight and had not told her brother about it. But she, without consternation, and, indeed, without fear, replied: “ Dost thou think me, Dionysius, such a mean and cowardly wife that, had I known beforehand of my husband’s flight, I would not have sailed off with him and shared his fortunes? Indeed, I did not know about it; since it would have been well for me to be called the wife of Polyxenus the exile, rather than the sister of Dionysius the tyrant.”’ The tyrant is said to have admired Theste for this bold speech. And the Syracusans also admired the virtue of the woman, so that even after the dissolution of the tyranny she retained the honours and services paid to royalty, and when she died, the citizens, by public consent, attended her funeral. This is a digression, it is true, but not a useless one.

XXII. From this time on Dion turned his thoughts to war. With this Plato himself would have nothing to do, out of respect for his tie of hospitality with Dionysius, and because of his age. But Speusippus and the rest of his companions co-operated with Dion and besought him to free Sicily, which stretched out her arms to him and eagerly awaited his coming. For when Plato was tarrying in Syracuse, Speusippus, as it would appear, mingled more with its people and learned to know their sentiments; and though at first they were afraid of his boldness of speech, thinking it a trap set for them by the tyrant, yet in time they came to trust him. For all now spoke in the same strain, begging and exhorting Dion to omdiras pnd tarmous, GAN’ avTov els UarnpeTLKov euBdvra Xpijoae TO oda Kal Tovvoua uKehue-Tats emt tov Atoviciov. tadta rev mept Lrev-ovo aryyehdovT@v erippad dels eLevonroryer kpvda Kat di érépwv em LK PUTTTOMEVOS thv did-volay. cuvéT patron | b€ Kal TOY TONTLKOY TodXol Kal TOV pirocopwr, 6 0 TE Krptos Evénuos, els Ov ‘Apia roréhns amobavovta tov mept yuxiis Sea-Aovyov évroinae, Kal Tepavidnys o) Acvnab«os. ouv-éoTnoav de Kal MiaArav auT@ TOV @eccanor,

ee peavrev Kal peTETXnKOTA THS €v ’Axadnpeta SiatptBijs. TOV & uo Tov Tupdvvou meg uyadev-Hévav, ov peiov q Kerdiwv évTwv, Tévte Kal eiKooe Hover THS oTpaTelas éxowwvycar, ot 5 aAdoe mpovsocay arrodetaa artes. opynTnpLov So hy
y) ZaxvvOiov vIjTOS, els fy of oTpaTi@TaL ouvenéynoav oxTaKootov ehdrrous ryevopevot, yreppot
dé TaVres EX TONAQY Kal peyadov OTPATELBY, Kat Tots Tamar Hho Knwevor Siadeportas, éurrerpig dé
Kal TONM TOAU TaVTOY KpartatoL, Kal Suvdpevor
TAIGOS 6 Saov nAmcev EEeww ev ZuKehig Aiov trex-Kavoas Kal ouvefoppijoas ™ pos adacrjy.
XXIII. Odo TO ev TpaTov axovaavres ert Atovictov Kal LeKediav aiper Bas TOV oToNop, eferrddynoav Kal KATEYVOTAY, @S opyis TLVOS Tapappoowy Kal pavia TOU Aiwvos 1 Xeno rev
éenmrideoy d admopig pimrotvtos éauTov els ameyvod-pévas mpatets Kal Tots éavT@y nryewoot Kal pieogiee apyilovro a TpoetTovaw evOus é& pxyns tov movenov. érrel dé Aiwy ro hoy 70,
me a ris tupavvidos émekioy ediSacxev, as ov 46

DION

come without ships, men-at-arms, or horses; he was simply to come himself in a small boat, and lend the Sicilians his person and his name against Dionysius. Encouraged by this information from Speusippus, Dion collected mercenaries secretly and by the agency of others, concealing his purpose. He was assisted also by many statesmen and philosophers, such as Eudemus the Cyprian, on whose death Aristotle wrote his dialogue “On the Soul,’ and Timonides the Leucadian Furthermore, they en- listed on his side Miltas the Thessalian also, who wasaseer and had studied in the Academy. But of those who had been banished by the tyrant, and there were not less than a thousand of them, only twenty-five took part in the expedition; the rest played the coward and abandoned it. The rendez- vous was the island of Zacynthus, and here the soldiers were assembled. They numbered fewer than eight hundred, but they were all well known in con- sequence of many great campaigns, their bodies were exceptionally well trained, while in experience and daring they had no equals in the world, and were cap- able of inciting and inflaming to share their prowess all the host which Dion expected to have in Sicily. XXIII. At first, indeed, when these men heard that their expedition was directed against Dionysius and Sicily, they were full of consternation and de- nounced the enterprise, declaring that Dion, in a mad frenzy of anger, or in despair, was plunging into desperate undertakings ; they were also enraged at their own leaders and recruiting officers for not having told them at the very outset about the war. But when Dion addressed them, setting forth in detail the unsound condition of the tyranny, and

47

OTPATLWTAS, AAA MAAAOV HyE“ovas AUTOS KOpLL-
Co. Yupaxovoiwy Kal tov GAdNwY LixedtoTov Ta\at Wpos amoctacw étoiwwv UTapyovtwr, peta bé€ tov Aiwva S:arexGévtos avtois "Ad«e-pévous, 65 mpatos av “Ayatwv Sofn Kal yévet ouverTpatevev, eretcOnaav.
"Hy pev ovy Oépous axpun Kal xatetyov étynaiat 7d Tédayos, 7 Se cernvn Styounviay Hye. TH 5
"AmoAAovt Ouciav peyarorperr) TapacKevdaas o Aiwy éroumevce peTa TOV OTPATLWT@Y KEeKOT LNpévoy Tais TavoTrAials Wpos TO tepov' Kal peta
tnv Ouvaiay év Ta oTadio Tav ZaxvvOiwv xata-KrLOévtas avtovs elotia, Javydlovras apyupav
Kal Xpvoav éxTwpatwv Kai tpatefav uTepBar-Noveay idiwTixov WAOVTOY AapTpoTNTa, Kal RoytCouévous Ste Tapnkpaxas avnp On Kal Tocav-TNS EvTOpias KUpLOS OUK Ay eTrLVELpOin TapaBoXOLs 968
mpayuact ywpis édmidos BeBaiov Kal dirov évoudovtav éxetOev avtT@ Tas TAEioTas Kal peryi-aTas ahopydas.
XXIV. Mera 5é tas crrovdas Kal Tas vevopucpévas Katevydas efédiTrey 7 oeArnVYN. Kal Tots pev rept tov Aiwva Oavpactoy ovdev Hv roxtlo-pévors Tas exNeLTTixas Treptodous Kal THY yLVOpévny Tov oKxidopatos amtavtnow mpdos THY cernyny kal THs yhs Thy avtippakw mpos tov mrsov. émrel dé Tois otpatiwrais SiatapayGetow Sez Teves tapnyopias, Midtas o paris év péow catactas exédeve Oappeiy avrovs cal mpoadoxay 48

DION :

declaring that he was taking them, not as soldiers,
but as commanders of the Syracusans and the rest of the Sicilians, who had long been ready for a revolt; and when, after Dion, Alcimenes, who was an Achaean of the highest birth and reputation and a member of the expedition, had argued with them, they were persuaded.
It was now midsummer,! the Etesian winds? pre- vailed at sea, and the moon was at the full. Dion had prepared a magnificent sacrifice to Apollo, and marched in solemn procession to the temple with his soldiers, who were arrayed in full armour. After the sacrifice, he gave them a banquet in the stadium of the Zacynthians, where, as they reclined on their couches, they wondered at the splendour of the gold and silver beakers, and of the tables, for it passed the limits set by a private man's fortune; they reasoned, too, that a man who was already past his prime and was master of such great affluence, would not engage in hazardous enterprises unless he had solid hopes of success, and friends over there who offered him unbounded resources.

XXIV. But after the libations and the customary prayers, the moon was eclipsed. Now, to Dion this was nothing astonishing, for he knew that eclipses recurred at regular intervals, and that the shadow projected on the moon was caused by the interposi- tion of the earth between her and the sun. But since the soldiers, who were greatly disturbed, needed some encouragement, Miltas the seer stood up amongst them and bade them be of good cheer,

1 357 B.C.
2 Winds blowing steadily from the North during the summer.

Ta KpdtioTa* onpaivery yap To Satpovov exreuiv Tivos tav viv éripavev: émipavéctepov dé pndéev elvat ths Asovuciov rupavvidos, Hs To Aaptrpov atrocBécew éxetvous evOvs arrapévous Lexedias. TovtTo pev ovv o Midras eis pécov éEéOnxe Tact To Sé TeV pedtoowy, at mepl Ta mrota Tov Aiwvos apOncay écpov AapBavovaat Kata wpvpvay, idia mpos avtov Kal Tovs dirous Eppate Sedsévae pn xaral pev at mpd&es avtod yevovtal, xpovov & dArAiyov avOnoacat papavOacr.
Aéyerar 5é€ kal TH Atovpycip srodAdAa TEepaTw@dy
mapa tov Satpoviov yevéoOar onpucia. aeros pev yap aptrdcas Sopdtiov twos tav Sopuddpav apdpevos tov cal dépwy adjxev eis tov BvOov-» 6€ mpookrvbovca mpos THY axpoTrodv Oa-Aacoa piav nuépav TO Ddwp yAvKY Kal To-TOV TrApécYEV, WaTE yEevoapévols Tact KaTa-SnXov elvat. xoipor & éréyOnoay avte Tov pév GAXwv ovdevos évdeeis poptwv, ata & ovK ExovTes.
atepaivovto & of pavrTess TovTO pev atooTa-wews Kal aTreOeias elvat anpetov, WS OUKETL TOV TOALT@Y aKkovcouéevwv THS Tupavvidos, tHv Sé yAukuTynTa THS Oardoons petaBorAnv Katpav aviapOm Kal Trovnpay eis mpdyyata yYXpnoTa dépery Yupaxovaiots. deros b€ Oepadrwv Atos, hoyyn O€ mapdonpov apyns Kal Suvacteias:

apavicpov ovv Kal KkatddAvaw TH Tupavvidse Bov-Aevery TOV Tov Oe@y péyiorov. TadTa pev ovv @cearoptros toropnke.
XXV. Tovs 5€ orpatiatas tovs Aiwvos é&edé-Eavto aotpoyyvAat dvo vads, tTpitov &€ mXotov ov péya kat dvo TptaxdvtTopot mapnKorovdouv. Sida 590

DION

and expect the best results; for the divine powers indicated an eclipse of something that was now resplendent; but nothing was more resplendent than the tyranny of Dionysius, and it was the radiance of this which they would extinguish as soon as they reached Sicily. This interpretation, then, Miltas made public for all to know; but that of the bees, which were seen settling in swarms upon the sterns of Dion's transports, he told privately to him and his friends, expressing a fear that his undertakings would thrive at the outset, but after a short season of flowering would wither away. It is said that Dionysius also had many portentous signs from Heaven. An eagle snatched a lance from one of his body-guards, carried it aloft, and then let it drop into the sea. Furthermore, the water of the sea which washed the base of the acropolis was sweet and potable for a whole day, as all who tasted it could see. Again, pigs were littered for him which were perfect in their other parts, but had no ears. This the seers declared to be a sign of disobedience and rebellion, since, as they said, the citizens would no longer listen to the commands of the tyrant; the sweetness of the sea-water indicated for the Syra- cusans a change from grievous and oppressive times to comfortable circumstances; an eagle, moreover, was servant of Zeus, and a spear, an emblem of authority and power, wherefore this prodigy showed that the greatest of the gods desired the utter dis- solution of the tyranny. Such, at all events, is the account which Theopompus has given.

XXV. The soldiers of Dion filled two merchant- ships, and a third transport of small size, together with two thirty-oared galleys, accompanied these.

51

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 N A e a 4 \
5€, ywpis dy elyov of ctpati@tat, Stoytdias pev éxopitey aomidas, Bérn 5é nal Sdpata odd, Kal wANOos epodioy adOovov, Stas émiriry
pndév avtovs trovtoTropovrtas, ate 57 TO cUptray él mvevpact. kal Oardoon Teroinpévous Tov
A \ N A a aA A 4
wrovv dia TO THY yhv PoBeicbar cal ruvOdver Bat
Dittotoyv év larvyla vavroyodvta tapadpurdr-
Tew. apat@ bé Kal paraKe Wrevpate TAEVTAVTES
nuépas Swdexa, TH Tpirxadexatyn Kata Idyuvoy
2 Ld a / A a e

oav, axpay THs Lixedias. Kat Ipatos pév o xuBepyntns Kata Taxos éxéXevoev atroBaivey, @s, av atootacbact Tis ys Kal thy axpav
e + 3 a e A , 9 n
ExOVTES APMGL, TOANAS Huépas Kal vUKTAaS év TO medayer TeLBnoouévous, Opa Oépous vorov Trepipe-vovtas. Aiwv S€ rhv éyyus TOV ToNeuiwv aTro-Baow Sdedias Kal TOY Tpdcw pardov aacba
f , 4 4 3 \
BovAcpevos mapémAevce tov Ildyuvov. éx 6é TOUTOU TpAaXVS MeV aTrapKTiAaS éTLTETwWV HrQAUVE lo 4 AN fe) b] \ A 4 TOAA@ KAVOwWYL TAS vais aTO Ths YKedias, bd \ \ \ ? 4
dotpatrat dé xat Bpovtal davévtos *Apxtovpou cupTecovoat todvy €& ovpavod Yetava Kal paydaiov ouSpov ée&éyeav' © TOY vavToY cuP-TtapaxJevTwy Kat mrdvns yevouéyvns Kadopdow aidvidiov bd Tod KUpaTos W@Oovpévas Tas vais émt tiv mpos AtBun Képxivav, } padtota Kpnpvodns amnvTa Kal tTpaxeia mpoodhepopéevors av-Tots 4) vHooS. puxpov ody Senoavtes éxpipfvat
Kal cuvTpiBhvar tepi Tas Tétpas éBialovto mpos KOVTOY Tapadepopevot mors, ws Oo Yetuwy éw-
§2

DION Moreover, besides the arms which his soldiers had, Dion carried two thousand shields, missiles and spears in great numbers, and a boundless store of provisions, that they might suffer no lack as they traversed the high sea. For they put themselves entirely at the mercy of winds and sea during their voyage, because they were afraid of the coast, and learned that Philistus was watching for them with a fleet at Iapygia. After sailing with a light and gentle breeze for twelve days, on the thirteenth they reached Pachynus, a headland of Sicily. Here Protus their pilot urged them to disembark with all speed, since, if they should be forced away from the shore, and should relinquish the headland which they had gained, they would be tossed about on the high sea for many days and nights, awaiting a south wind in the summer season. But Dion, fearing to dis- embark near the enemy, and wishing to land farther along the coast, sailed past Pachynus. Thereupon a boisterous wind from the north rushed down upon them, raised a great sea, and drove the ships away from Sicily, while flashes of lightning and peals of thunder, now that Arcturus was just rising, con- spired to pour down from the heavens a great storm of furious rain. The sailors were confounded by this and driven from their course, until on a sudden they saw that their ships were driving with the sea upon Cercina, off the coast of Africa, at a point where the island presented the roughest and most preci- pitous shore for their approach. Accordingly, after a narrow escape from being cast ashore and dashed to pieces on the rocks, they plied their punting-poles and forced their way along with great difficulty, until

gnoe cal wrolp cuvtvyovtes &yvwcay eri Tails kadoupévais Keparais tis peyddns Lvprews évtes. aOupovat 8 avtois mpos THY yadnvny cat Stadepopévots avpav tia xaréoretpev 1
YOpa votiov, ov Tavu mpocdexopuevors votov ovdé Ticrevoval TH peTaBorH. KaTa pLxpoy Se pwrpupévou Tov Tvevpatos Kal peyeOos AapSavovTos éxteivavtes Scov hv (aotiwv, Kal mpocevEduevot tots Beots, meddylot Tpos THY YuKEediav Edevyov
amo THs AtBuns: Kat Oéovres EXadppas Teprraior
kata Mivwav a@ppicavto, twodopdtioy év TH
Lexedia THs Kapyndoviwy émixpateias. étuyxe 5¢ tapwyv o Kapyndovos adpxwv Yvvaros év TO yopio, Eévos dv kal hiros Alwvos. dyvoav Sé
Tv Tapovoiay avTod Kal Tov oTOAOY, érElpaTo KwAvew Tovs oTpatiwtas amoBaivovtas. oi Sé peta Tov STrAwy éxdpapovTes amréxTewav pev ovdeva, drrepyKet “yap 0 Atwoy &a rHv ovcoav
avuT@ podiav ™ pos TOV Kapyndowov, petryover dé TUVELT TET OVTES aipodor TO Xepiov. ds S amrjy-THoaV GAANAOLS Ob HyEewoves Kal NoTdcayTo, Aiwy peév drédoxe thy ody YvvdrA@, ovdev
adixnoas, Lwvaros 5é rovs otpatiwtras ée&évite Kal cuptrapecxevatev av Aiwy édetro.
XXVI. Mauota & avtovs eOdppuve To oup-
BeBnxos avtopatws mept tiv arodnulay tov Avovuciouv' vewotl yap éxmemevems ériyxavev oysonxovta vavaly eis THY ITadiav. 810 Kal Tod Alwvos trapaxaXodbvtos évtadda Tovs atpatiotas
54

*

969

the storm abated, when they learned from a vessel which they spoke that they were at what were called the Heads of the Great Syrtis. And now they were disheartened by the calm in which they found themselves, and were drifting up and down, when a gentle southerly breeze was wafted to them from the land, although they were by no means expecting a south wind and could not believe in the change. Little by little, however, the wind freshened and grew strong, so that they spread all the sail they had, and praying to the gods, fled over the sea from Africa towards Sicily. For five days they ran swiftly on, and came to anchor at Minoa, a little town in that part of Sicily which the Carthaginians con- trolled. Now, it chanced that Synalus, the Cartha- ginian commander, was in the place, and he was a guest-friend of Dion's. But not knowing of Dion's presence or of his expedition, he tried to prevent his soldiers from landing. These, however, rushed on shore with their arms, and although they killed no one, since Dion had forbidden it because of his friendship with the Carthaginian, they put their opponents to flight, dashed into the place with the fugitives, and captured it. But as soon as the two commanders had met and greeted one another, Dion restored the city to Synalus, without doing it any harm, and Synalus entertained the soldiers and sup- plied Dion with what he wanted.

XXVI. But what most of all encouraged them was the accidental absence of Dionysius from Syra- cuse; for it chanced that he had recently sailed with eighty ships to Italy. Therefore, even though Dion urged his soldiers to recruit themselves here

dvahapBavew Toy Ovov év Th Jaracon KeKAK@MLEVOUS, our Dare pea avtol omevdoves apmacas TOV Karpor, ¢ aXr éx€hevov tpyeto Ca TOV Aiwva ™pos TAS Lupaxovoas. arog Kevacd-pevos oby Ta TepLovra Tov dtAwY Kal TOV op-TLOV éxel, Kat Tov Zuvddov Senbeis, dSrav a KaLpOS, ATrOTTELAAL mpos avrov, éBadiber éml ras Lupakovaas. TOpPEVvOperep & avrg mp@rov prev
"Ax payavTivay T Poa eK@pnoav immels Siaxoctor TOY Tept TO" Exvopov oixovvTav, weTta b€ ToVTOUS Dedoou.
Tax dé rhs pyuns Siadpapovens eis Lupa-
Kovcas Trpoxparns, 0 Oo TH | Alwvos yuvack TUVOLKED, Atovuaiov & aderdgy, Tay GTTONENEL[L LEVY év 7) Toner ior TPOETTAS, eK TEMTEL Kage TAXOS
diy'yehov T@ Avovuci Ypappara KopivovTa Teol Tihs Aicvos api~ens. autos 6Oé Tois Kata THY
Tony T poo eixe GoptBors | Kal KUT Lao, émnp-pévaov pev TavTov, d1a & amiotiay étt Kal poBov novxatovTav. TO € meppdevre ypaupatopop@ TUXN TH TUMTITTEL Tapanoryos. StaTrrAEvcas yap els THV 'Tradtay Kat THY 'Pyyivepy dieOav, érretyopevos els Kavrwviav mrpos Atovictoy amnp-
To€ TWe TOV ouvn bor tepeiov vework TeOumevov
Kopitovrs Kal NaBov Tap QuTov potpay TOY Kpeay EVO PEt omoudj. THS Oé VUKTOS HE pos
odevaas Kal px pov arrodapOeiv Ure KOTTOU

BiacBels, as eixe, Tapa THY obov év oAn Twi KaTéxALvey éavTop. mpos oé THY dopnv NUKOS
ere Dav, Kal AaBopevos TOV Kpeay dvadedepévery éx THS ™7pas, @XETO pepo dua ouv aurois THY wHpav, €v 4 Tas émiaToNas Oo avOpwros eiyev.
56

DION

after their long hardships on the sea, they would not consent to it, so eager were they of themselves to seize their opportunity, but urged him to lead them towards Syracuse. Accordingly, he deposited his superfluous arms and baggage there, asked Synalus to send them to him as opportunity offered, and marched against Syracuse. As he was on his way thither, first he was joined by two hundred horsemen belonging to the Agrigentines who dwelt about Ecnomum, and then by men of Gela.

But the report of his doings quickly flew to Syra- cuse, where Timocrates, who had married Dion's wife, the sister of Dionysius, and who stood at the head of the tyrant's friends now left in the city, speedily sent off a messenger to Dionysius with letters announcing the arrival of Dion. He himself, moreover, took steps to prevent any disturbances or tumults in the city, where all were greatly excited, but as yet kept quiet owing to their distrust and fear. But a strange misfortune befell the man who had been sent with the letters. After he had crossed to Italy and passed through the territory of Rhegium, and as he was hastening on to Dionysius at Caulonia, he met one of his acquaintances who was carrying an animal that had been recently sacrificed, and after accepting from him a portion of the flesh, went on his way with all speed. But after travelling part of the night, he was compelled by weariness to take a little sleep, and lay down, just as he was, in a wood by the side of the road. Then a wolf came to the spot, attracted by the scent, and seizing the flesh which had been fastened to the wallet in which the man had his letters, went off with it and the wallet

57

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

as 5é SieyepOeis nobero xal Todra pdrnv TraYn-Geis xal Sumtas ody cdpev, &yvw py Tropever Oat Sixa TOY ypaypydTwYv pos Tov TUpavvov, aN arrodpas éxrrodwv yevérOa.
XXVIII. Acovictos péev ody oe nal rap' érépov éuerre truvOaverOat Tov év UKedia TOAELOD, Aiwve 5€ rropevopévm Kapapivaiot te mpoaébevto kal Tov KaT aypovs Yvpaxovoiwyv davictapévwv éméppes AROS ovK orLyov. ot 5€ peta Tipo-

Kpatous Tas ‘Emimortas puddooovtes Acovtivor kat Kaptravoi, \oyov yrevdy wpootépartos eis
avtous tov Aiwvos as éml tas models Tp@ToOV
TpEToLTO Tas ExelvwY, ATrONLTTOVTES @YOVTO TOV Tioxpatnv tots oixetots BonOnaovtes. ws 8
annyyérn TavTa mpos Tov Aiwva tept Tas “Axpas oTpatoresevovta, vuxTos éT’ TOUS oTpaTLWTAS avacTnoas TT pos tov “Avatrov ToTapov Kev, améyovta Ths Todews Séxa otadiouvs. évTavda 5é tTHv Topeiay éemiatncas éadayidlero tmpos Tov WoTapov, avaTéXrAovTe TH NALwW TpocevEdpeEVos:
dpa 8 of pavreas Tapa Tov Oewv vinny éEppatov avT@. Kai Oeacdpevor tov Aiwva &1a thy Ovciav éoTepavapéevoy Of TapOVTES ATO pias OpuAs éoTe-davotvtTo mavres. joav be TEVTAKLT YX tALOOD ovK EXATTOUS TpoayeyovoTes KATA THY OddV: wWrALCpévoe 5€ havrAws éx TOD MpocTvyXOYTOS avEeTAN-pow TH mpoOupia THY Ths TapacKevis évdevay, @oTe Kwnoavtos tov Aiwvos Spou@ Ywpetv peta xapas Kai Bojs GANjAOUS Tapakadovytas emt Thy edevlepiav.
58

too. When the man awoke and perceived what had happened, he wandered about a long time in search of what he had lost, but could not find it, and therefore determined not to go to the tyrant without the letters, but to run away and disappear.

XXVII. Dionysius, therefore, was destined to learn of the war in Sicily late and from other sources; but meanwhile, as Dion proceeded on his march, he was joined by the Camarinaeans, and no small multitude of the rural Syracusans revolted and swelled his ranks. Moreover, the Leontines and Campanians who were guarding Epipolae! with Timocrates, in consequence of a false report which Dion sent to them that he would attack their cities first, deserted Timocrates and went off to assist their own peoples. When news of this was brought to Dion as he lay encamped near Acrae, he roused up his soldiers while it was still night and came to the river Ana- pus, which is ten furlongs distant from the city. There he halted and sacrificed by the river, ad- dressing his prayers to the rising sun, and on the instant the soothsayers declared that the gods promised him victory. When, too, the audience beheld Dion with a wreath on his head for the sacrifice, with one impulse they all crowned them- selves with wreaths. No fewer than five thousand men had joined him on the march, and though they were wretchedly armed with such weapons as came to hand, their enthusiasm made up for their lack of equipment, so that when Dion gave the word they advanced on the run, exhorting one another with joyful shouts to win their liberty.

1 The plateau west of the city of Syracuse. See the note on Nicias, xvii. 1, 59

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXVIII. Tév & év 1H more Yupaxovaiwy of pev yvopiyuor Kal yapievtes eoOfjta Kabapav Eyovtes amnvrav emi tas mwvdNas, of 5é TodXOl Tois tupavvov giro érretiPevto Kal cuvypta- Cov Tovs KaXovupévous Tpocaywyibas, avOpaTrous avocious Kat Oeois éyOpovs, ot teptevoarouy év Ti TONEL KATApEMLyuEeVvoL TOs RUpaKovatols TroAv- mpaypovoovtes Kal duayyédXovTes TH TUPavv@ TAs te Stavoias Kal tas havas éxdotwv. ovToL pév ovv mpatoe dixny édidocay bd THY TpocTuUY- Navovtwy amotuptravilopevor' Tipoxpatns o€é cuppitas Tois Ppovpodar THv axpoTrodLy py Suvn- Geis tarrov AaBaov Siekérrece THs TorEwWS Kal mavta pevywv evérrnoe GoBov Kal Tapayts, emt petlov aipwv Ta Tov Aiwvos, as py Soxoin péTpLov tt deicas atroBeBAnkévar THY TodLY. ev TOUT@ 5é cal Aiwy mpocepxyopevos 75n xatadavyns Hy, TpP@TOS AUTOS wTALTLEVOS AauTPas, Kal ap' avrov évOev pev 0 adeXdos Meyakdrjs, evOev dé Kaanurrros 0 '"A@nvaios, éotrehavwpévor. tev dé Eévwv éxatov pev eitrovto gdudaKes Trept Tov Aiwva, trois & adXous Fyov ot Aoxayol S:a- Kexoo unpévous, Oewpévwv tov Lvpakovaiwv Kat Seyopévwy woTep tepdyv twa Kal Oeorpenh rop- mv édevbepias kal Snuoxpatias 80 étrav oKTM Kal TeTTapaKkovTa KaTLOvaNs Els THY TOALD.
XXIX. 'Esret 6€ cio iOev o Aiwy Kara ras Teyevitidas mvdas, TH oddNriyys KaTatTravaas Tov OopuBov, éxnpuvkev Gre Aiwy nal MeyarrAs HKovres éml Kxatadvcet THS Tupavvidos édev- Depotar Xvpaxovaiovs nal tovs adXovs Tixerdt0- Tas amo Tov Tupavvov. Bovropevos S€ Kal Se 60

DION

XXVIII. As for the Syracusans in the city, the men of note and cultivation, in fresh apparel, went to meet them at the gates, while the multitude set upon the tyrant's friends and seized those called tale-bearers, wicked men whom the gods hated, who went up and down in the city busily mingling with the Syracusans and reporting to the tyrant the sen- timents and utterances of every one. These, then, were the first to suffer retribution, being beaten to death by those who came upon them; but Timo- crates, unable to join the garrison of the acropolis, took horse and dashed out of the city, and as he fled, filled everything with fear and confusion, ex- aggerating the strength of Dion, that he might not be thought to have abandoned the city through fear of any trivial danger. Meanwhile Dion drew near the city and was presently seen, leading the way himself in brilliant armour, with his brother Megacles on one side of him, and on the other, Callippus the Athenian, both crowned with garlands. A hundred of his mercenaries followed Dion as a body-guard, and his officers led the rest in good order, the Syracusans looking on and welcoming as it were a sacred religious procession for the return of liberty and democracy into the city, after an absence of forty-eight years.

XXIX. After Dion had entered the city by the Temenitid gate, he stopped the noise of the people by a blast of the trumpet, and made proclamation that Dion and Megacles, who were come to over- throw the tyranny, declared the Syracusans and the rest of the Sicilians free from the tyrant. Then, éautod mpocayopedaar TOUS avO parrous avne did THS "Axpasdiris, éxatépabev Tapa, THY oooy TOV Lupaxovolwp iepeta Kal TpaTecas Kal KpaTnpas iotdvrwv, kat Kal ods yevorTo MpoxvTais TE Baddortov Kal T poor peTroMeveov OOTED Geov Karevyais. jy & vmo ray ax pooh Kal Ta TevTaTUNG, Atovuciou KaTacKevdoavros, nLo- TpOmvov KaTapaves Kal tyndov. er TOUTO 7 po- Bas ednunyopyce Kar Tapwpunce TOUS Troritas avréyer Ian Tis érevOepias. ot 5é Xatpovres Kal piroppovovpevor KaTET THO AY apport épous avto- xpdropas oTpATyyoUS, Kal TpoaetAovTo, Bovdo- péveov Kal Seomeveny exeivorr, avrois cuvapxovTas eixoow, Ov apices haav é éx TOV pera, Aiwvos amo Ths puyis TUYKATEPXOMEVOY. tois 8é pdvreow avdts édoxe TO pev vmod Todas AaBety Tov Aiwva Snunyopodvra THY prdoripiay Kal TO dvd Ona Tov Tupdvvou am pov elvat onpetov: sre & ALOT POTTLOV lg é' ov BeBnxas npen oTpATHYOS, appadovy 7) TpoT ny Twa THs ToXNS at mpdkeas Taxelav AdBwow. éx TouTou Tas pev "EnriroAas éehov TOUS xa erpypevous TOV TWONTOV éduge, Thy O€ ax porrodty amrereiXicev. éSdoun & nuépa

Atovictos Kxatémdevcev eis TH ax poTroALy, rar
Aiov ™poanyov duafar twavoriias as Luvdd
KaTéALTrE. TAUTAS Sréverpe Tots Toritars, TOY
S drwy éxacTos éauTov, ws SuvaToyv Hy, exo pet Kal Tapelyev omAiT Hy 7 poOvpov.
XXX. Atovuctos dé 7 p@Tov idia mpos Aiwva mpéa Reus & Emr eutrev GTrOT Lp LEvos* ‘Greta Kerev-cavros éxeivou Staréyer Oar xown Lvpaxovaioss 62

971

DION

wishing to harangue the people himself, he went up through the Achradina,! while on either side of the street the Syracusans set out tables and sacri- ficial meats and mixing-bowls, and all, as he came to them, pelted him with flowers, and addressed him with vows and prayers as if he were a god. Now, there stood below the acropolis and the Pentapyla a tal] and conspicuous sun-dial, which Dionysius had set up. Mounted upon this, Dion harangued the citizens and exhorted them to assert their liberty. And they, in their joy and affection, made Dion and Megacles generals with absolute powers, and besides, at their wish and entreaty, chose twenty colleagues to hold office with them, half of whom were of those who had come back from exile with Dion. To the soothsayers, moreover, it seemed a most happy omen, that Dion, when he harangued the people, had put under his feet the ambitious monument of the tyrant ; but because it was a sun-dial upon which he stood when he was elected general, they feared that his enterprise might undergo some speedy change of fortune. After this, Dion captured Epipolae and set free the citizens who were imprisoned there ; then he walled off the acropolis. On the seventh day Diony- sius put in with his fleet and entered the acropolis, and waggons brought Dion the armour and weapons which he had left with Synalus. These he distri- buted among the citizens as far as they would go, and all the rest equipped themselves as best they could and zealously offered their services as men-at-arms. XXX. At first, Dionysius sent envoys privately to Dion and tried to make terms with him; then, when Dion bade him confer publicly with the Syracusans,

1 An extension of the city, covering the eastern part of the plateau of Fpipolae. Fe
3
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

@s édevOepors odour, éyevoro Aoyor Sta TeV
m pea Bewv Tapa Tod TUpavvou prravpwror, po-pov Umurxvoupevoy petpiornTa Kal paot@yny TTPATELO”, av ay avtol oopynpor yevovTac.
Taira, éexevalov ot Zupaxovarot. Aioy 5 ame-Kpivaro Tots mpecBeoe py diaréyec Oat T pos avrovs Avovic.ov, «& pn THY a xn adinaw:
agévre dé cupm pagerv adevav autos, Kay ado TL

TOV petpiov Suvntat, penyNMEvos TAS oixeLorntos.
TaiTa Atovicros emnvel, Kat may Emre e Tpéo-
Bets xerXevov Hucewy | Teas els THD ax pomroduy TOV
Lupaxovoiwy, ols Ta pev meiOwv, Ta Oe met opevos:
draréberar TEept TAY KOLWT TumpepovTav. éméu-pOnoav ov avd pes ™ pos auTov ods Aiov éboxtpace. Kal AOyos TONUS €x THS akpas els TOUS Lupaxove tous katne. Atoviciov adnoew 7H
Tupawviba kal padXov éavtod tmoinoecOar! yapiv } Aiwvos.
"Hp 8 Soros 1) mpoamoinats airy tov Tupdyvou Kal oxevwpia Kata TOV Lupaxouaiov. TOUS pev yap éMovras ™ pos auTOV éK Tis TOEWS ouyKreloas elxe, TOUS dé praBopopovs 7 pos dp-Opov éurrAncas axpdrov pou@ Tpos TO TeEpLTel-Yio pa TOY Lupaxovaiwy epiie: yevouerns O€ THs
7 poo Borns dvedrria Tou Kal TOV BapBapov Opaoel TOANG kat GopvBo cadatpovvtwy To Statet-Xeo we Kal Tots Lupaxovatos emupepopever, ovdels eTOALG péveov apuverOat, mrqv TOV Eévwv Tov Aiwvos, of mpwtov aia Bopevor TOV JopuBov
éEeBonOncav. ovd ovtor dé tis BonOeias tov

' wothoeo@a: a correction by Sintenis of the MSS. wohoa- o@a:, which Coraés omits and Bekker brackets.

on the ground that they were a free people, the envoys brought generous propositions from the tyrant, who promised such moderate taxes and easy military service as the people themselves should agree to by vote. These offers were derided by the Syracusans, and Dion made answer to the envoys that Dionysius was not to confer with them unless he renounced his sovereignty ; but on his renouncing this, Dion would himself procure immunity for him, and any other reasonable privilege that was in his power, mindful of the close relationship between them. These conditions Dionysius approved, and again sent envoys, bidding some of the Syracusans to come to the acropolis, where, both parties making concessions, he would confer with them concerning the common good. Accordingly, men were sent to him whom

Dion approved. And frequent reports came to the Syracusans from the citadel that Dionysius would renounce the tyranny, and would do this to please himself rather than Dion.

But this was a treacherous pretence on the part of the tyrant, and a piece of knavery directed against the Syracusans. For he kept in close custody the depu- tation that came to him from the city, and towards morning plied his mercenaries with strong wine and sent them on a dash against the siege-wall about the acropolis. The attack was unexpected, and the Bar- barians, with great boldness and loud tumult, began to tear down the cross-wall and attack the Syracusans, so that no one dared to stand on the defensive, except the mercenaries of Dion, who first noticed the dis- turbance and came to the rescue. And even these

TpoTrov auveppovovy ovd eianKovov vie Kpavyiis Kal Tras Tov pevyovtov Lupakovotwv ava- mepuppevey auTois Kal StexDeovtar, piv ye én Atop, érel Néyovtos ovdels KaTHKOVEY, Epy@ TO 1 pAaKTéov _ Upnynoacbat Bovdopevos euBarrev T p@Tos eis TOUS BapBapovs. kab yiverat mepl auTov Feira Kal dew payn, Lan tal ovx HTTOv v vo TOV Todepiov 7 TOV pi deov" Gpynoav yap &ua raves éuBonaarres. O e Hv mev HON Baptrepos 6b raxtay y KaTa TOLOUTOUS ayévas, anrKn Sé Kal dune TOUS * wpoo pepopevous bio rd- pevos Kal GVAKOTTTO@V TET P@OKETAL Aoyxn THY xetpa, T pos dé a addXra Bern Kal tas éx Xeupos TANYAS MoOALs Oo Oapak ipkece dua THs aomibos Sopact ToAAols Kal Aoyxaus TUTFTOMEVOS" ov kataxrac bevtov KATETETEY O Aiwy. eiTa avap- macdels ur Tov TTPATLOTODY éxeivors per nye pova Tupaovidny eméea THT eD, autos 6€ THY oN intr@ Teptehavvev Tous TE upaxovatous émave puyis, Kab TOV Eevov TOUS pudarrovras THY "Axpaderny avactncas érfye tois BapBapos aknTas éxTreTovnpevols Kal ™ poOupous arrav0@- ol 78m Tpos TH Teipav. edrrioavres yap apa TH 7 porn peen THY Tow atracay é£ Fs Se nadezew, elTa Tapa Sofav € evTuyxavovres avdpact TAK TALS Kad paytpols aver TEXovTo mpos THY GK pOTTONLY. ers &é padrov, ws évédwxay, em iKes- pévary Ttav EXXAjver T parr ojLevor KatexreloOnoay els TO TeLXOs, éBSounxovta per Kat _Técoapas amoxteivavtes Tov peta Aiwvos, éavtav 6é qjoAXous aToBanovTes.

1 rovs the article is suggested by Sintenis.

66

DION

knew not how to render aid, nor could they hear what was said to them, owing to the shouts and wild movements of the fugitive Syracusans, who mingled confusedly with them and broke through their ranks. But at last Dion, since no one could hear his orders, wishing to show by his example what should be done, charged foremost into the Barbarians. Then there arose about him a fierce and dreadful battle, since he was recognized by the enemy as well as by his friends, and all rushed towards him at the same time with loud shouts. He was now, by reason of his age, too unwieldy for such struggles, but he with- stood and cut down his assailants with vigour and courage until he was wounded in the hand with a lance ; besides, his breastplate hardly sufficed to resist the other missiles and hand-to-hand thrusts, and he was smitten through his shield by many spears and lances, and when these were broken off he fell to ‘the ground. Then, after he had been snatched away by his soldiers, he put Timonides in command of these, while he himself, mounting a horse, rode about the city rallying the flying Syracusans, and bringing up a detachment of his mercenaries who were guard- ing Achradina, led them against the Barbarians,— fresh and eager reserves against a worn-out foe, and one that already despaired of his cause. For they had expected at their first onset to overrun and occupy the whole city, and now that they had un- expectedly encountered men who could smite and fight, they retired towards the acropolis. But as they gave ground, the Greeks pressed all the harder upon them, so that they turned their backs and were driven into the shelter of the citadel ; they had slain seventy-four of Dion’s men, and had lost many of their own number.
és

F 2 a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXI. Tevopevns dé amr pas THS viens ot

pev LupaKxovarot TOUS Févous éxaTOV pais éoTe-pdvecay, ot &é Eevor Aiwva Xpua@ oTepave.
KIpUKES dé Tapa, tod Acovuciov xaréBasvov emlo TONGS 7 pos Aiwva Tapa TOY oixelov yuvat-K@V KopitovTes. bia o ny éEwOev emeyeypap-pévn, “TO Tatpi, map’ ‘Inrmapivou:” tovto yap si dvopa 7@ Aiwvos vip. KabToL onal Tipacos €Taioy avrov amo Tis pT pos “Aperns Kaneli a Tepavidy dé paAXov, ws olomat, mept ye TOUT@Y Ta TEVTEOY, avdpi pir xal TVTTPATLATH Alwvos. ai péev ovv adXat toils Lupaxovaioes aveyvacOnaav émicToNal TroAAas ixeatas car
Senoets € éxougat mapa TOV yuvarKaw, Thy 5é Tapa

Tov Tatoos elvat Soxovoay ovK éwvTwY iy 8 mapa
AvVOHvat Bracdpevos o Aiwy éduoev. é mapa
Too Atovuciou, tois pev- ray pos TOV, Aiwva, tots 5é mpaypace ™pos Tovs Yu axovatous Siareyopévou, ox ipa pev éxouea denoews xal Sixaroroyias, oTUryKerpern b¢ ™pos draBorny TOU
Aiwvos. vmouvnoes TE yap Hoa av umép THS Tupavvidos em pate Tpodupes, Kai Kara TOV
gidtatov amrevhas TWMATOY, aderdis ral TEKVOU Kal yuvarros, emuony pers TE dewal pet' odogpup pov, Kal TO padrAtoTa KLWHoAaY avToOD, aftovvros pn Kabatpeiy, adr maparapBavery THY TUpaD-vida, pnd €AevGepody praobvras avOparrous Kal pynotKaKovvTas, Grd aurov apxev, wapéxovtTa tots pirous Kal oiKxetors THY dopdndeav.
XXXII. "Avayivec kopevory dé rovTwy ovx, Smrep Hv Sixacov, ELonet TOUS Lupaxovaious éKmAnrrecOas Thy amdberav Kal Thy peyarowuyxiav 68

972

DION

XXXI. The victory was a brilliant one, and the Syracusans rewarded Dion's mercenaries with a hun- dred minas, while the mercenaries honoured Dion with a wreath of gold. And now heralds came down from Dionysius bringing letters to Dion from the women of his family. There was also one addressed outside, "To his father, from Hipparinus"' ; for this was the name of Dion's son. Timaeus, it is true, says he was called Aretaeus, from his mother Arete ; but on this point at least, in my opinion, Timonides is rather to be trusted, who was a friend and fellow- soldier of Dion's. Well, then, the rest of the letters were read aloud to the Syracusans, and contained many supplications and entreaties from the women ; but that which purported to be from Dion's son, the people would not allow to be opened in public. Dion, however, insisted upon it, and opened the letter. It was from Dionysius, who nominally ad- dressed himself to Dion, but really to the Syracu- sans; and it had the form of entreaty and justification, but was calculated to bring odium on Dion. For there were reminders of his zealous services in behalf of the tyranny, and threats against the persons of his dearest ones, his sister, children, and wife; there were also dire injunctions coupled with lamenta- tions, and, what affected him most of all, a demand that he should not abolish, but assume, the tyranny ; that he should not give liberty to men who hated him and would never forget their wrongs, but take the power himself, and thereby assure his friends and kindred of their safety.

XXXII. When all this had been read aloud, it did not occur to the Syracusans, as it should have done, to be astonished at the firmness and magnanimity of tod Aiwvos tirép tev Kadov Kal Sixatwy ani-aoxyupilopéevov mpos TotavTas oiKeoTnTas, ANN Umowias Kal PoBou NaBovtes apyy, os peyarns ovans avayKns éxeivm peldccOar Tod Tupdavvou, mpos éTépous On mpootatas améBXerrov: Kal pddtota tuvOavopevoe Katatrely “Hpaxretdnv avertonOncav. Hv dé rav duydbeav ‘Hpaxnreidns, oTpaTnyixos pev avOpwios Kal yvepipos ad’

69

nyewovias iv éoxe Tapa Tois Tupavvols, ovK apapws 5é THY yvauNv, GAXA Tpos TavTa Kovdos, necota ¢ BéBatos ev Kowwvia mpayudrav apynv
éyovtav cal So—av. ovtos év IleXorovynaw mpos Aiwva otactacas éyvw xa’ avrov idStoaroXos Thelv él TOV TUPaVVoY, Els TE TUPaKoVaas adiKopevos ETA Tpinpere Kal TpLot Trotots Arovictov
pev avOus edpe TrepiTeTerytopevor, érnpyévous Se Tous upakovoiovs. evOvs obv vmedvero THY TOV TOAAY Kap, Exwy péev Te Kal dvoet m-Oavov Kat xuvntixoyv 6yXow Oepatreved Oat Cntoiv-Tos, uToAapBavey O€ Kal peTaywv pdov adtous, of TO aeuvov Tov Aiwvos ws Bapv Kai dvam7oXi-TEVTOV aTreaTpephovTo Sia THY yeyevnuevny ex Tov Kpatei dveow Kat Opacvrnta, mpo tov Simos elvay TO OnuaywyeicBat Oérovtes.
XXXIII. Kai wparov pév eis exxrAnoiav ad’ avuT@v auvdpapovres ethovto tov ‘Hpakndetdnv vavapyov. eémel b€ Aiwy mapedOov nriato THY éxeive Sidopmévny apyny apaipecw elvar tHS TWpo-Tepov avT@ Sedopévys, ovKéTe yap avToxpatwp
7°

DION

Dion, who was resisting in behalf of honour and justice such strong claims of relationship, but they found occasion for suspecting and fearing him, on the ground that he was under a strong necessity of sparing Dionysius, and at once turned their eyes towards other leaders. And particularly, when they learned that Heracleides was putting in to the har- bour, they were all excitement. Now, Heracleides was one of the exiles, a man of military capacity and well known for the commands which he had held under the tyrants, but irresolute, fickle, and least to be relied upon as partner in an enterprise involving power and glory. He had quarrelled with Dion in Peloponnesus, and had resolved to sail on his own account and with his own fleet against the tyrant; but when he reached Syracuse, with seven triremes and three transports, he found Dionysius once more beleaguered, and the Syracusans elated with victory. At once, then, he sought to win the favour of the multitude, having a certain natural gift of persuading and moving a populace that seeks to be courted, and - winning them over to his following all the more easily because they were repelled by the gravity of Dion. This they resented as severe and out of place in a public man, because their power had given them license and boldness, and they wished to be flattered by popular leaders before they were really a people.

XXXIIJI. So,to begin with, they held an assembly of their own calling, and chose Heracleides admiral. But Dion came forward and protested that in giving this office to Heracleides, they had done away with that which they had before given to him, for he would no longer be general with absolute powers peveryv, Av aAXos nynras TaV Kata Odracca), dxovres oi LvpaKxovarot wad areyndpicavto TOV "Hpaxretdnv. yevomeveny dé TOUTM@Y peTameprpdpevos avrov o Aliwy oixade, Kal piKpa peprpapevos, @S OU Karors ovee TuppepovTas & uTrEp do&ns oractavovtTa Tpos avrov épy KaLp@ pomijs ohiryns Seouév mpos amra@neav, adits éxxhnotay avros cuvayaryav pavapxov amébeuEe Tov "Hpa-Kretdny, Kar Tob TWMATOS éreioe puranny Sobvat TOUS modiTas, damep auros elyev. o 6 TO wey

hoy Kat T@ oXpaTe Tov Aiwva Oeparrevov Kat Xapuw omodory av eve mapnorovber TANTELVOS, UTNPET@Y TO KENEVOMEVOY, Kpupa b¢ TOUS TroANovS
cal VE@TEpLaT AS dtapbeipwv Kal broxwoyv, Gopu-Boas tov Aiwva mepréBadnev, els Atracav droplay cabtordpevov. elre yap aceevar xerevor AtovvoLov Umdarrovbov ex THS axpas, dca Born elxe peiderbar Kab meprow lew exelvov, elre AUTELY fA1) Bovdopevos emt TiS modopKias noux dor, dva-Tnpely édoxer TOY TOAEHOY, @S paAXov apyot Kat KATATAHTTOLTO TOUS ToNiTas.

XXXIV. *Hyv € tes Yous, avOpwiros ex trovnpias Kal Opacutntos evdoxt pan wane TOUS 2upa-Kovaiols, meptovoiay Tyyoupévous é evdepias TO péxpt ToLovtay avetcBar TH Tmappyoiay. ovTos émtBovrevov Aiwr mparov fev éxxrnolas ovans dvaaras ToAAa TOUS Zupaxovatous éXordopnaey, eb 7) TUVLATLY ws ema nKTOU ral pedvovens amrnddary pévor tupavyidos éypnyopota Kat yynpovra deatroTny eihngactv: érretTa pavepov TOU Aiwvos

éy0 pov avadelEas ¢ éavTov TOTE pev €x TIS dyopas aTirbe, TH 8 votepaia yumvos WhO Sid Tips 72

973

DION

if another should have command of the navy. Then the Syracusans reluctantly revoked the appointment of Heracleides. When this had been done, Dion summoned Heracleides to his house and gently reproached him, on the ground that he was not acting well or wisely in quarrelling. with him for honours at a crisis where a slight impulse might ruin their cause. Then he himself called a fresh assembly and appointed Heracleides admiral, and persuaded the citizens to give him a body-guard, like his own. In word and mien, now, Heracleides paid court to Dion, acknowledged his thanks to him, and attended submissively upon him, performing his commands; but in secret he perverted and stirred up the multitude and the revolutionaries, and encompassed Dion with disturbances which reduced him to utter perplexity. For if he advised to let Dionysius leave the citadel under a truce, he would be charged with sparing and preserving him ; and if, wishing to give no offence, he simply continued the siege, it would be said that he was protracting the war, in order that he might the longer be in command and overawe the citizens.

XXXIV. Now, there was a certain Sosis, a man whose baseness and impudence gave him renown in Syracuse, where it was thought that abundance of liberty could only be shown by such license of speech as his. This man, with hostile designs upon Dion, first rose in an assembly and roundly abused the Syracusans for not comprehending that they had merely exchanged a stupid and drunken tyrant for a watchful and sober master; and having thus declared himself an open enemy of Dion, he left the assembly. Next, on the following day he was seen running

73

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TONEWS Oéwr avaTrA€ws aiparos THY Keparnv Kal
TO 7 powrroy, as 57 Tivas pevywv Ov@KovTas.
éuBarov 5é TovevTos eis THY ayopapy édeyer vo

trav Eévwv Tov Aiwvos émiBeBovrciabat, cal Thy Keparny emedelxvue TeTpwperny Kab ToAous
eixe TOUS cuvayavaxTovyTas Kal TUVLTTAPEVOUS
Kara TOU Aiwvos, as Seuva Kal TUpAavYLKa TpaT-TovTos, é& povors kal Kwdbvors TOV TOMT OY apaipetras Ty jTappnotayv. ov pay anAd, Kaimep axpitou Kat Tapaxwcous exxAnotas yevomerns, mapeav o Alwy amedoyeiTo Kat TOV Loo
an epaive TOV Avovuciou Sopupopwy é évos adedgov évTa Kal ov éxeivou TETELT LEVOY TTATIdgaL Kal cuvrapagar THY TOMY, ovdewas Atovucip cwrn-pias ovons, 7 IY THS exelvorv amiatias Kab dta-ghopas ™pos avrous. dua & of pev tarpol Tov wardos TO Tpadpua xatapavOdvovres eipioxov ef ememonis paddov n Katapopas yeryevnpevov.
at pev yap vo Eigpous mArnyat padora TO péaov
vo Bdpous mélovat, TO dé Tob Xwa dos hemrov nv Storou Kal TONNAS elyev apyas, @S etKos, UT' arynoovos a ayievTos, elta avOts émrayovTos. Tyicov dé Tives TOV yopipav Evpov xopuiCovtes els. THY éxxAnotay, Kal Sunyoupevor Badifovow avrois xal" odov aTaVThG at Tov {wou n pay Wevov Kat AéyovTa ghevyey tovs Aiwvos Eevous @S apTtias
Ur éxelvywy TETPwMLEVOS evdvs ovv SiwKovres
dvO pwrrov | Mev ovdeva AaPeiv, Ud tTétpav dé
KotAny kel wevov idetv Evpov, dev éxetvos adbOn
T POG EPYOMEVOS.
XXXV. "Hv pev ovv i6n poyOnpa ta wept Tov

through the city almost naked, his head and face covered with blood, as though he were trying to escape pursuit. In this condition he dashed into the assembly and told the people there that he had been set upon by Dion's mercenaries, and showed them his head with its wounds. He found many to share his resentment and take sides with him against Dion, who, they said, was committing dire acts of tyranny, if by murder and peril of life he sought to rob the citizens of their free speech. However, although the assembly had become confused and tumultuous, Dion came forward and showed in his own defence that Sosis was a brother of one of the body-guards of Dionysius, and had been induced by him to raise confusion and faction among the citizens, since there was no safety for Dionysius except in their mutual distrust and dissension. At the same time, too, the physicians examined the wound of Sosis and discovered that it had been made by razure rather than by a downright blow. For the blows of a sword, by reason of its weight, make wounds that are deepest in the middle, but that of Sosis was shallow all along, and intermittent, as would be natural if he stopped his work on account of pain, and then began it again.

Besides, certain well known persons brought a razor to the assembly, and stated that as they were walking along the street, Sosis met them, all bloody, and declaring that he was running away from Dion’s mercenaries, by whom he had just been wounded; at once, then, they ran after them, and found no one, but saw a razor lying under a hollow rock in the quarter from which Sosis had been seen to come.

XXXV. Well, then, the case of Sosis was already

Ldow* mpooyevouévwy 5é rovtois Tois éXéyyxors olKeTOV KATAaLapTUpOUVTOY ws ett VUKTOS EFENOOL
povos éywv To Eupoy, of Te KaTnyopodyTes TOU Aiwvos drexapnoay & Te Sijpos Katayndicapevos Odvatov Tov Ywotdos SinrAAdooeto TO Aiwrt.
Tovs 5€ ptaPodhapovs oddév Hrrov év vrroviats
elyov, cal padtoTa TOV TAELOTwWY aywVwY pds Tov TUpavvoy On ywopévwvy Kata OdraTTAaD, érret0n Didsotos Heev €& “lamuyias éywv moddas
tpinpets Arovucia BonOnowv, xal rav Eévwv OVTOY OTALTOY OVSEmiay ere xpHovw évopulov etvar
pos Tov TToAEMOV, GANA KaKeivous é EéauUTOIS écecOar vavBatais ovo. Kal TO Kpdtos éx TaY veov KkTwpévols. ett 58 padrXov avtovs éemjpev evTUXia TIS yevouévn Kata Odraccay, ev 7 VUKN-cavtes Tov Didtorov wpas cai BapBapixas ait@ mpoanvey naar. "Edopos pev ody dnow as aNoKopErns THS vews éavTov avérot, Topwmvidns 5é mpatropévats €€ apyns tais mpdkeot Tavras
peta Aiwvos waparyevomevos Kal ypadwy mpos Lwevoirmrov Tov dirocodov toroped Covta XAn-HOFvat THs Tpinpous Eis THY yhv éxtrecovans TOV
Didtotov: Kal mpatov péev amodvaavtas avrod Tov Owpaxa Tovs Lvpaxovaious Kal yupvov émidec-Eapévovs TO o@pa mpoTnrakilew dytTos bn yépovTos: erecta THY Kepadny atroTEpEty Kal Tois Tat Trapacodvat TO cua, KeXeVoavTas Ede
dua THs "Axpabiwis cat cataBanrety eis Tas Aato-pias. re dé parXov épuBpilwv o Tipasos éx Tod aKxéXous dyat Tov YwAov Ta Tratddpia TOY vEKpOoV éhayrdpueva ToD Didictov avpew 5a THS Toews, xrevalopevoy ITO TAY Zupaxovaiwv mdvTwv, desperate ; but when, in addition to these proofs, his servants testified that while it was still night he had left the house alone and carrying the razor, Dion's accusers withdrew, and the people, after condemning Sosis to death, were reconciled with Dion.

However, they were none the less suspicious of his mercenaries, and especially so, now that most of the struggles against the tyrant were carried on at sea, since Philistus had come from lapygia with a large number of triremes to help Dionysius; and since the mercenaries were men-at-arms, they thought them of no further use for the war, nay, they felt that even these troops were dependent for protection upon the citizens themselves, who were seamen, and derived their power from their fleet. And they were still more elated by a successful engagement at sea, in which they defeated Philistus, and then treated him in a barbarous and savage fashion. Ephorus, it is true, says that when his ship was captured, Philistus slew himself; but Timonides, who was engaged with Dion in all the events of this war from the very first, in writing to Speusippus the philosopher, relates that Philistus was taken alive after his trireme had run aground, and that the Syracusans, to begin with, stripped off his breast-plate and exposed his body, almost naked, to insult and abuse, although he was now an old man; then, that they cut off his head, and gave his body to the boys of the city, with orders to drag it through Achradina and throw it into the stone quarries. And Timaeus, enlarging upon these indignities, says that the boys tied a rope to the lame leg of the dead Philistus and dragged his body through the city, while all the Syracusans mocked and jeered as they saw drawn about by the opavray Tov oKxédous EA KOMEVOY Tov eimovta my) beiv € ex Tupavvibos pevryery Atovictov imm@ Taye XpPwpevor, adda ToD oKéhous EXKOMEVOY. KaLToL TOUTO Pirvoros, as up’ étépov rAExOév, ovy vd

avtov, mpos Atovictoy eEnyyedxer.
XXXVI. "AANA Tipacos ovK aodixov AaBav

mw popacty THY vreép THS Tupavvidos TOU Diriarou oTovdny Kat mioTly cumimdara TOV Kar auTov Pracghnmay, ¢ @ TOUS poe aducnBevras TOTE oVYywarov éotw icws axpt THs eis avaicOnrov opyiis Narerous yevéa Ga, TOUS 5° Sarepov ouy-ypdpovtas Ta Tem paryweva Kal TO pev Bip yn Avandevras avrob, 7@ dé ASO Kpwpevous, 7) ddEa Taparretrat pn eO BBpews Bn ne peTa Bopodo-

Las overdivery TAS cvppopas, @y ovoev amréxet Kal Tov dpiorov avd piv ex TUXNS pEeTATXELY.
ov pny ovd "KE idopos tyratver Tov Diriarov é eyKo-pualov, & és, Katrrep av SevvoTaros adixors mparypact Kal movnpois Oeow evox povas aitias meptBaneiv Kat ovyous éxovTas koa pov é€eupeiy, autos auTov ov Swvatat madvra pnXavaevos éFeréo bau TIS ypadis, ws ov piroTupavvoTatos avOpwrrwy yévouTo Kat paduoTa TAVT@Y del
Syracas Kal Oaupdcas Tpupny Kal dSvvapiv Kat TAOUTOUS Kat ya wous TOUS TOV TUpavvav. andra
yap Diriorov fev o entre tas mpakes érrawaov pnre TAS TUYAaS ovELdiCoy eMpeheaTaros.
XXXVII. Mera b¢ THY Prriorov TEAEUTHY
Atoviaros é Tre WIE ™ pos Aiwva THY pep dx porrohty éxeivo mapadidovs Kal Ta Orda Kal ToS puLcOo-dépous Kal qévTe pnvav evTenT} TovTois picbor, avtos 8 a&tav uToatrovecs eis “Itadiav amedOeiv 78
e
DION

leg the man who had said to Dionysius that he must not run away from his tyranny on a swift horse, but wait until he was dragged from it by the leg. And yet Philistus has stated explicitly that this was said to Dionysius by another, and not by himself.

XXXVI. But Timaeus, finding a fair excuse for his animosity in the zeal and fidelity which Philistus showed in behalf of the tyranny, gluts himself with the slanders against him. Now, those who were wronged by Philistus while he lived may perhaps be pardoned for carrying their resentment to the length of maltreating his unconscious body; but those who in later times write histories of that period, and who were not harmed by his life, but avail themselves of his writings, owe it to his reputation not to reproach him, in insolent and scurrilous language, for calamities in which fortune may involve even the best of men. However, Ephorus also is unsound in heaping praises upon Philistus; for, although he is most skilful in furnishing unjust deeds and base natures with specious motives, and in discovering decorous names for them, still, even he, with all his artifice, cannot extricate himself from the charge of having been the greatest lover of tyrants alive, and more than any one else always an emulous admirer of luxury, power, wealth, and marriage alliances of tyrants. Verily, he who neither praises the conduct of Philistus, nor gloats insultingly over his misfor- tunes, takes the fittest course.

XXXVII. After the death of Philistus, Dionysius sent to Dion offering to surrender to him the acro- polis, his munitions of war, and his mercenaries, with five months’ full pay for these, and demanding for himself the privilege of retiring unmolested into

79

KAKEL KATOLK@V xaprrova Gas THS Zupacoucias TOV
Kahovpevov Tvapra, TONY wal arya ny xwpay avynKovoay aro Gararrns eis THY weToyeLoV. Ov mpoadeEapévou dé Tov Aiwvos, anrra SeicOar tay Lvpaxovaiwv KEAEUTAYTOS, ot pep LupaKovaror Cavra Amer Oa TOV Acovicrov éexmicavres ann Nacav TOUS m pea Bers, éxetvos 5é THY joey axpay “AtrohoK patel, | TO mpeaButépp Trav maidor, mapédwxer, avT05 8 mveipa THpHTAS émipopov Kal Ta TLYWMOTATA TOV TOMaTOV Kal TOV xpnea-tov évOéuevos ets Tas vads AaBwv Tov vavapyov ‘Hpakdeidqv e€emdevoev.
‘O 6é Kanes axovwv Kai OopvBovpevos UTrd TOV TONTOD * ‘Inreva Twa TeV “SnwaryeoySy Kcadinar mpoxanreia ar TOV Ofjwov emt vhs ava ac wov, @S érevOepias a apynv obcay THYv iaornta, SovAcias 5é TV meviay Tois AKTHMLOCL. cuVnyopay dé TOUT® Kal Tov Aiwva xatactacidloy evavTLovpevov émeloe TOUS Lupaxovatous TavTa angicacbas Kal TOY Bevery TOV proBov arroarepel Kat oTpa-THYOVS érépous éheaBar, THS éxetvov Bapurntos amradaryevras. ao 8, domep ex paxpas appa oTias THS Tupavyidos ed00s émexetpodvTes eEavioracbat, Kal 1 parrey Ta TOV avTOvopLoUpevary Tapa Katpor, éopaddovto fev avtol Tats ™pafeow, éuicovy dé tov Aiwva Bovdopevov WoTEp laTpov év axprBet kal awhpovovan diaitn Kxata-oxetv THY TONY.
XXXVIII. "Exednorafovar 8 avrots él véats
apyais, Oépous pecobytos, éaictor Bpovrai cai Stornpias movnpat auveBawov ed’ jpépas dexamwévTe TUVEYaS, avioTacat Tov SHpyov vie daot-
So

Italy, and of enjoying during his residence there the revenues of Gyarta, a large and rich tract in the territory of Syracuse, extending from the sea to the interior of the island. Dion, however, would not accept these terms, but bade him apply to the Syra- cusans, and these, hoping to take Dionysius alive, drove away his ambassadors. Upon this, the tyrant handed over the citadel to Apollocrates, his eldest son, while he himself, after watching for a favourable wind and putting on board his ships the persons and property that he held most dear, eluded the vigilance of Heracleides the admiral, and sailed off.

Heracleides was now stormily denounced by the citizens, whereupon he induced Hippo, one of their leaders, to make proposals to the people for a distribution of land, urging that liberty was based on equality, and slavery on the poverty of those who had naught. Supporting Hippo, and heading a faction which overwhelmed the opposition of Dion, Heracleides persuaded the Syracusans to vote this measure, to deprive the mercenaries of their pay, and to elect other generals, thus ridding themselves of the severities of Dion. So the people, attempting, as it were, to stand at once upon their feet after their long sickness of tyranny, and to act the part of independence out of season, stumbled in their undertakings, and yet hated Dion, who, like a physician, wished to subject the city to a strict and temperate regimen.

XXXVIIT. As they met in assembly to assign new commands, the time being midsummer, extraordinary peals of thunder and evil portents from the heavens occurred for fifteen days together, and dispersed the

{

, A
Saipovias KwAVOpEvoy Etépous aTrodei~at oTpaTn-
2 yous. émel b€ durdEavtes evdiay atabepav oi Snuaywyot auveténovy Tas apyatpecias, Bois apakevs ovx anOns ovd amevpos GxAwY, dAXrws Sé
, A AY 3 , \ A ‘ TWS TOTE TpOS TOV éXavvovTa Bupwlels Kai Puyov
amo ToD Cuyot, Spdu@ mpos TO Oéatpoy wpunce Kai Tov pev Shuov evOvs avéotnce kal Suecké-
9 \ , 4 “A 9 M”
Sacev ovdevi Kooum gevyovta, ths 8 adAns jonews émédpaue oxiptav Kal Trapdttwy dcov
¢ e 4 4 9 \ 9

Yotepov of trodéutoe KaTéoxYov. ov pny adda
taita yaipev édcavtes ot Yupaxovator tévte kal elxoot oTpatnyovs éxetporovncav, av els Hv
e , \ \ VA e 4
3 ‘Hpaxredns: Kat tovs Eévous viroméutrovtes
xpvda tov Aiwvos adiotacav Kal petexadovy Wpos AUTOUS, éTayyeNAOMEVOL Kal THS TroNLTELAS
igomotpiav. ot b€ Tadta pev ov mpocedé~avTo, tov 5€ Aiwva mictas Kal TpoOimws peTa Tov
¢ >] , A lA € “~ >
étAwY avaraBfovTes Kal cupdpakavtes vIrnyov éx
“ , 10 A \ yO€ A
THS TWOAEWS, AdLKOUVTES peV OVOEVa, TOAAA
TOUS évTUyXavovTas eis ayaploTtiay Kal poxOn-
4 piay overdiCovtes. ot S€ THS OALYOTNTOS auUTaY Kal Tov un mpoeTLYyElpety KaTadpovncavTes, Kal yevomevolr TOAD TAEious exeLvMY, EpwpuncaY ws padiws émixpatnoovtes év TH Tore. Kal mdvtas QAUTOUS KATAKTEVOUVTES.)
XXXIX. Ev rovt@ Sé yeyovms avayens Kat
, e 4 a , a V4 A \
Tuyns o Aiwy 7 payecOat Tots Totals H peta
Tav Eévov aroQaveiv, Toda pev ixéTevev opéywor
Tas xEelpas Tois Yupakovaeiows Kai THY aKpoTroALY 82

DION

people, whose superstitious fears prevented them from appointing other generals. And when, after waiting for settled fair weather, the popular leaders were proceeding to hold the elections, a draught-ox, who was quite accustomed to crowds, but now for some reason or other got angry at his driver and broke away from the yoke, made a dash for the theatre, and at once dispersed and scattered the people in disorderly flight ; then he ran, plunging and throwing everything into confusion, over as much of the rest of the city as the enemy afterwards occupied. However, the Syracusans paid no heed to al] this, but elected twenty-five generals, one of whom was Hera- cleides; they also sent secretly and without his knowledge to Dion’s mercenaries, and tried to get them to leave his service and come over to their side, promising them even an equality of civic rights. They, however, would not listen to these proposals, but showing fidelity and zeal, took their weapons in their hands, put Dion in their midst, encompassed him about, and tried to conduct him out of the city, doing violence to no one, but roundly reviling those whom they encountered for their base ingratitude. Then the citizens, seeing that the mercenaries were few in number and did not offer to attack, despised them, and having become far more numerous than they, set upon them, thinking to overpower them easily before they got out of the city, and slay them all.

XXXIX. And now Dion, seeing that fortune com- pelled him either to fight against his fellow citizens or perish with his mercenaries, fervently besought the Syracusans, stretching out his hands to them,

mepitrewv Todepiwy ovaay Urrephaivopévov Ta Teiyn Kal Ta yevoueva xa0opwvtwy émideKvepevos’ os 8 hy atrapairntos 7 TaY TWOAAw@Y Popa kal Katetyev @omep ev TeNayer TO TOV Snpayoyou mvetpa Thy Todt, éuBorjns pev atroryéoOau tois Eévots mpocétakev, Scov 8 émridpapovTav
peta Bons nai tots SrAots Tivakapevwv ovdels Guerve TOV Lupakouciwv, adr’ wyovto hevyorTes ava Tas ayuias, ovdevos emidt@xovTOs: EevOdsS yap aréotpevev o Aiwy tovs Eévous xal mponyer eis Aecovtivous.
Oi & dpyovtes Tov Yupaxovoiwy KatayéXacToL
yeyovoTes uTO TOY yuvatKav, Kal THY aioyuVyY avaraBeiv ('ntobytes, avOus omdloavtes Tovs qoXitas édiwxov Tov Aiwva. kal xatéXaBov pev
ért SiaBaoces Tivos ToTapod Kal wpocimmevoay
ayyiuayobvres: ws 8 édpwv ovxétt mpdws ovdé
TATPLKOS UTOpéevovTa TAS apapTias aVTaY, GANA Oued Tovs Eévous émiatpépovta Kal mapatarropevov, aicyiova duyny ths mpotépas puryovtes bmex@pynoav els THY ToALV, OV TOAA@Y aTrobaL-OvTmD.
XL, Aiwva S¢ Acovrivos Aaumpais edéyovTo
Tipais, Kal Tos Eévous avedauBavov picBois Kal TonTeLas’ mpos 5é€ Tovs Yupaxovaious émpeéoBevov akodvtes Ta dixata Tois Eévous trosety. ot
dé mpéoBes Ememav Kxatnyopnocovtas Aiwvos TOV gs cuppaywy amrdytwy eis Aeovtivouvs a0 paoOévtwy Kat yevonevwy Noywv ev avtois, éoEav abduxely of Lupaxovaror: tots b€ KptOeiow vo TOV TULpLdxwV ovK éevéyEetvay TpUparTes HON Kal 84

and pointing out to them the acropolis, which was full of enemies peering over the walls and watching what was going on below; but since no entreaties could stay the onset of the multitudes, and the city, like a ship at sea, was at the mercy of the blasts of its demagogues, he ordered his mercenaries not to make a charge, but simply to run towards their assailants with loud cries and brandishing of weapons; which being done, not a Syracusan stood his ground, but all promptly took to flight along the streets, where none pursued them. For Dion immediately ordered his men to wheel about, and led them forth to Leontini.

But the leaders of the Syracusans, now that they were become a laughing-stock for the women, sought to redeem their disgrace, armed the citizens again, and pursued after Dion. They came upon him as he was crossing a river, and their horsemen rode up for a skirmish ; but when they saw that he no longer bore with their faults in a mild and paternal spirit, but was angrily wheeling his mercenaries about and putting them in battle array, they broke into a more disgraceful flight than before, and retired into the city, with the loss of a few men.

XL. The Leontines received Dion with splendid honours, took his mercenaries into their service, and gave them civic rights; they also sent an embassy to the Syracusans with a demand that they should do the mercenaries fustice. The Syracusans, how- ever, sent envoys to denounce Dion. But when all the confederates had assembled at Leontini and dis- cussed the matter, it was decided that the Syracusans were in the wrong. By this decision of their con- federates, however, the Syracusans would not abide, peyaroppovouvtes éml To undevos axovew, AXA xpjoOat Sovrevover cai poBovpévors tov SHpmov oTparnyois.

XII. "Ex rovrou xaTam Move ly ets THY mode mapa Aovuciou T penpers Ninpiov dryoucat Tov Neamonirn», citov Kat Xpnwara Kouitovra Tois TOALOPKOULEVOLS. ryevowerns dé vaupayias evixwv pev of Zupaxovator Kal Téeccapas TOY TUpayViKaY ve@y édafov, UBpicavtes bé TH vixn, Kal oe dvapxiav TO Yaipov els TOTOUS wal ouvovotas pavikas Tpépavres, obTe TOV Ypnoibav nuéedXn- cay OTE THY axporroduy é éXelv seeoiores Abn non Kat TH TONY mpocameBanov. 0 yap Nv 40s opay ovdev vyvaivov éy T] Tone HEpos, adda TOV pep dxdov avAnpact Kal péOats els VUKTA Babeiay ag' Hmepas KATEXOMEVO?, TOUS dé oTpaTyyous

ETLTEPTOMEVOUS TE TOUT® TO Tavyyupic wp wal T poo aryewy avaryKny pevovow avo pwross OKVOUD- TAS, ApioTa TO KaLp@ Xenaapevos émexyeipnoe TO

Tetyiopate Kal KpaTnaas Kat Lad puyras epire
TOUS BapPapous, KerXevoas yxpjabat Tots ™poo-TUYXavovaty @S Bovrovrat Kal duvavTat. TaYéws fev OV ol Lupaxovotot TO KaKov ia Oovto, Bpaée-ws 5€ Kal Karem ers auveBonBouv EKTETAAY EVOL.
mopOnow yap tv Ta yivopeva, THS TONEWS, TOV
pev avdpav povevouEeroy, TOY dé TELXOV KATA TKATTOMEVOD, yuvarcav bé Kat maida aryomeveov
an THY |axpoTrohy per olparyis, ATEYYOKOTOV be mpaypara TOV oTparnyav at xphoGat Th) Supa Tots TOA(TALs TpOSs TOUS Tone pious avarrepuppevous Kal ouppemiypévous avTois Tmavrayolev.
86

being now insolent and full of pride because they were subject to no one, but had generals who were in slavish fear of the people.

XLI. After this, there put in at the city triremes from Dionysius, under the command of Nypsius the Neapolitan, who brought food and money for the beleaguered garrison of the acropolis. In a naval battle that ensued the Syracusans were indeed vic- torious, and captured four of the tyrant’s ships, but they were made wanton by their victory, and in their utter lack of discipline turned their rejoicing into drinking-bouts and mad carousals, and were so neglectful of their real interests that, when they thought themselves already in possession of the acropolis, they actually lost both it and their city besides. For Nypsius, seeing no saving remnant in the city, but the multitude given over to music and revelry from dawn till midnight, and their generals delighted with this festivity and reluctant to use compulsion with men in their cups, made the best use of his opportunity and attacked their siege--~ works, and having mastered these and broken them down, he let his Barbarians loose upon the city, bidding them treat those whom they encountered as they could and would. Quickly, then, were the Syracusans aware of the mischief, but slowly and — with difficulty did they rally to oppose it, so utterly distracted were they. For it was a sack of the city that was now going on, its men being slain, its walls torn down, and its women and children dragged shrieking to the acropolis, while its generals gave up all for lost and were unable to employ the citizens against the enemy, who were everywhere inextric- ably mingled with them.

XLII. Oitw S¢ trav Kata THY TOW éyovToY
Kal Tov xwvduvov mpos THY "Axpadiwrhy mrANoOtG-Lovtos, eis Sy povoy Hv Kal Rowrrov arepeicacOau

‘N , 4 \ b Ul 9 ,
THY €dmriba TavTes pev eppovouy, ereye 5é ovdeis,
A

aioxuvopevot THY aXaploTiay Kal THY aBovdiay Tnv mpos Alwva. wAnv ye 57 THs avdyKns éxBiatopévns Tapa TOY cuppaxwv Kal TOY iT-Téwy yiverat dwovn care Aiwva nal perarép-meaGat Trovs IleNorrovynctous éx Acovtivwv. ws
5¢ mpa@tov nxovabn Kal aretorunOn rodTo, Kpavy? Kal yapa xal Sdxpva rovs Yupaxovaious
KaTetyev eUXouevous éripavnvat tov avipa Kat
TmoOouvtas THYV Gui avToD Kai peuvnuévous Tis Tapa Ta Seva pwns Kal wrpoOvupias, ws od povov
AUTOS HW aveXTANKTOS, GAA KaxeEivoUS TrapElye Oappobvras nal adews Tots Trodepiors oupdepopévous. evOvs ovv éxméumovot mpos avTov amo
A 4, b ld ,
pev TOV cUpa ov Apxavidny nal Tereoidny, 9 \ A A e lA \ e 4
amo 6€ Tay Lirméwy TévtTe TOUS Tept EXAdyEKOV.
@€ n~

ovtor SueXaoavres THY Oddy irmoLs ATO PUTHpOS
Aov eis Acovtivous ths nyépas 76n cael gay Hévns. atromndncartres Sé¢ tav immov Kal TO Aiwv mpete mpoomecovtes Sedaxpupévor tas a fal »Y , wv “Py de \ ouppopas TaY Lupaxovaiwy Eppalov. dn 5é Kal
A , A
tov Acovtivwy tives amnvtTwv Kal rev TeXozrov-4 9 , N \ lA , A ynciwy nOpoilovro apes tov Aiwva moAdXol, TH
omovon Kal TH Senoes THY avdpav UovoobyTES elvat tt Kawvotepov. evOus odv ayeitTo Tpdos THY éxxAnoiav avtois, Kal cvvdpapovtwv mpoOvpws oi N > \ N e , >
mwept tov Apxwvidny cal tov ‘EXXdvixoy eiced-Oovres éEnyyettay re Bpayéws 7d péyeOos Tav
Kak@v, Kal qapexddouv tors Eévous érapivar 88

—

DION

XLII. While the city was in this plight and the Achradina in imminent peril, all knew who was the only man left upon whom they could fasten their hopes, but no one spoke his name, because they were ashamed of their ingratitude and folly towards Dion. However, now that necessity constrained them, some of the allies and horsemen cried out that Dion and his Peloponnesians should be summoned from Leontin. As soon as this venture was made and the name heard, the Syracusans fell to shouting and weeping for joy; they prayed that Dion might appear upon the scene, and yearned for the sight of him, and called to mind his ardour and vigour in the presence of danger, remembering that he was not only undaunted himself, but made them also bold and fearless in engaging their enemies. Im- mediately, therefore, they sent a delegation to him, Archonides and Telesides from the allies, and Hel- lanicus with four others from the horsemen. These, sending their horses over the road at full gallop, came to Leontini just as the sun was setting. Then, leaping from their horses and throwing themselves at the feet of Dion first of all, with streaming eyes they told him the calamities of the Syracusans. Presently, too, some of the Leontines came up and many of the Peloponnesians gathered about Dion, conjectur- ing from the haste and suppliant address of the men that something quite extraordinary was the matter. At once, then, Dion led his visitors to the place of assembly, the people eagerly gathered there, Ar- chonides and Hellanicus with their companions came before them, reported to them briefly the great disaster, and called upon the mercenaries to put away their feelings of resentment and come to the

Tols Lupaxovatos, TO pynotcaxeiy adévtas, ws
/ OL Py § / > A a a A e peifova dixcnyv dedwxotwy avTav 7 NaBPelv av ot Kaxas merovOdres n&iwaoay.
XLITI. Tavoapévor 5é rovtwyv otyh pev elye
\ \ , ’ , \ a ,
wovAn TO Oéatpoy: avacrdvtTos Sé tod Aiwvos Kat réyerv apEapévou ToAAG Tov Saxpvav éxTi-mrovra THY Pavny eméayev’ ot O€ Eévor Trapexadovuv Oappety Kal ouvnxovTo. puxpov ovv dvaraBov éx Tov WaBous éavtov o Aiwv, “”Avdpes,” én, “TleXorrovyjoto. Kal cvppayot, BovrAevaopevous Upas evtav0a Trepi Yua@Y avTaV auvYnyayov. épol 5é mepl éuavtod BovreverOar nares ovn exer
s a " , 9 9 9 a \ Lupaxovawy atrohAvpévwv, aXXN Eb TwCAaL py
Suvaipny, amet TH wupt Kal TO TWropate TIS 9 Ld € a , Ul
matpioos évtadynaopevos. vpeis dé, Bovromevor pev ere cal viv BonOeiv rots aBovArotdtots Hpiv nat SvotuxecTarots, UpeTEepov Epyov ovcay dp-Oodte tHv Yvpaxovaoiwy wrod: et Sé pephopevor

Lupaxovaias Vrepowede, Tis ye TpoTEpoy apEeTis Kat mpoOuuias wept éuée yapw akiav xopilorbe a“ ” 4 , e WwW? ¢ A mapa TaV Oedy, peuvnpévor Atwvos, os oO" tpuas adixoupévous mpotepov ov’ barepoy Tous troditas Svotuyobvtas eyxaTadiTovTos..
"Ete 5 avtod XN€yorros o« pev Eévor peta xpavys avernonoay ayew cai Bonbeiy xara tdyos KedevovTes, ot O€ mpéa Bes THY Lupaxovaiwy rept-Barovres notacayto TokAd peéev exelv@, ToAAa
N “~ , 9 \ “ “ % ,
dé rois Ecvoss aya0a rapa tav Sew evyopevot.
go
9

7

DION

aid of the Syracusans, since those who had wronged them had suffered a heavier punishment than those who had been wronged would have thought it right to exact.

XLII. When the messengers had made an end of speaking, there was a profound silence in the theatre; then Dion rose and began to speak, but copious tears checked his utterance ; his mercenaries, however, sympathized with him and bade him take heart. Accordingly, after he had recovered a little from his grief, he said: “ Men of Peloponnesus and allies, I have brought you together here to deliberate upon your own course of action. As for me, it is not meet that I should consult my own interests now that Syracuse is perishing, but if I cannot save her, I shall return to seek a grave amid the blazing ruins of my native city. But you, if you are willing even now, after all that has passed, to come to our help, who are the most foolish and the most unfortunate of men, pray restore the city of Syracuse and the work of your own hands.! If, however, in your displeasure at the Syracusans, you shall leave them to their fate, at least for your former bravery and zeal in my behalf may you obtain a worthy reward from the gods, and may you think of Dion as one who abandoned neither you when you were wronged, nor, afterwards, his fellow citizens when they were in distress.”

While he was still speaking, the mercenaries sprang to their feet with shouts and bade him lead them speedily to the city’s relief, while the Syracusan envoys embraced them passionately, invoking many blessings from the gods upon Dion, and many upon

1 Syracuse was colonized from Corinth, in Peloponnesus.

g!I

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

KatactavTos 5é Tov OopuBou rrapyyyerev o Aiwy
evOus amovtas TapacKkevdleaOar cai detrvnoar-Tas KEL META TOY STAM ELS AUTOV ExEivOY TOV
ToTrov, éyvwxas d1a vuxros Bonbeiv.
XLIV. ’Ev &€ rais Supaxovcats Trav Acovuciou OTPATHYOV, AXpe pev Hv Huépa, TWOAAA KAKA THY TOA épyacapévav, yevouevns S5¢ vuKTos avaywpnoavrev els THY axpoToN Kai Twas e& éEavTov GAiyous atroBarovtwr, avabappnoavtes ot Snpa-ywyol TOY Yupaxovciwv, xal Tovs moNemtous éXrricavres atpeunoey ert trois S:avrempaypevors, mapexdXouv TOvs ToNitas avOis dav Aiwva, nav
mpocin peta tav Eévov, yn SéyerOar nde wapa-Ywpely THS apeTAs éxeivois @S KpELTTOTIV, AAA catew Thy Tok Kal THhv édevOepiay avTovs de éautav. mddw ovv éréutrovto mpos tov Aiwva, Tapa ev TOV oTpAaTHYaV aTroTpeéTTOVTES, Tapa 5é
Tav immévv Kal TOV yvwopipwy TodToV émiomTeEd-Sovtes THv Tropeiav. Kal dia TodTo Bpabéws dua
Kal KaTa oTrovdny Topevopmevos Tpoone. THs dé
VUKTOS TpOENGOVENS Of ev putcodvTes Tov Aiwva
KaTEtYoOY Tas TUAAS WS aTroKNELaOVTES AUTOY, Oo 5é Nuwuos, é« Ths axpas avOus rodArX@ TpoOvporteépous yeyovotas xal mAciovas édiels Tovs prabodopous, TO wey TpoTeixiopa Tay EevOrs KaTécKaT TE, Thy dé wodw KaTétpexe nal Sunptratev. av Se
dovos pev ovKéTt povov avdpav, adda Kal yvvat-Kav kat waidwv, adprayal & Grjiyat, POopos Sé WAVTWV TOAUS. aTEyvwWKOTOS yap HON TA Tpay-para Tob Atovuciou ral TOUS Lupakovatous devas HELLONKOTOS, WoTEP EevTadiacat THY TUpavvida
Th wove Timtovoay éBovAcTo. Kal tod Aiwvos 92

DION

his mercenaries. And when the tumult was allayed, Dion ordered his men to go to their quarters and make themselves ready, and, after taking supper, to come with their arms to that very place, for he was determined to go to the rescue by night.

XLIV. But the soldiers of Dionysius at Syracuse, as long as it was day, did much mischief to the city; when night came, however, they retired to the acropolis, having lost some tew of their number. Upon this, the popular leaders of the Syracusans plucked up courage, and in the hope that the enemy would rest content with what they had done, ex- horted the citizens once more to ignore Dion, and if he should come up with his mercenaries, not to admit them, nor yield precedence to them as superior in point of bravery, but to save their city and their liberty by their own efforts. Accordingly, fresh mes- sengers were sent to Dion, some from the generals forbidding his advance, but others from the horsemen and more reputable citizens urging him to hasten it. For this reason he came marching on now slowly, and now at top speed. As the night advanced the enemies of Dion took possession of the gates in order to shut him out, but Nypsius, sending his mercenaries once more from the citadel in greater numbers and with more impetuosity than before, tore down at once the entire siege-wall, and overran and sacked the city. And now there was a slaughter not only of men, but also of women and children; there was little haling away of prisoners, but a great destruction of all alike. For since Dionysius now despaired of his cause and fiercely hated the Syra- cusans, he wished to make their city as it were a tomb for his falling tyranny. So his soldiers, fore-mpoxatahapBavovres thv BonOecay én tov ofv-TaTOV dua TUpOS mavT@v dreO por Kal apavig mov exopnoar, ra pep eyyus aro Xetpav Saat Kal Aawrdow Uromiyumpaytes, eis 5€ TA T poo diaoT elpovTEs aro Tobov mupoBonous. pevryovtay dé TaY Zvpaxovaiwy oi wev év tais odois épovevovto KaTarauBavopevot, TO bé els Tas olxias KaTadvd-pevov avis vd Tob mupos é€Férimre, TOANOY HON dreyouevwy cal xatagepopévar eri tovs diaé-ovTas.

XLV. Totto rd mdafos pdduota tip TOMY dvéwte Aiwve TavTov cundwrnadyray. éruye pev yap OUKETL OITOVOH TropEVOp"EVoS, as HKOVOEV els THY ax poTroney kararennelabas TOUS Tone-pious. Tpoiovans be THS Huéepas T parrov imarets annvrngay avT@ Thy Sevtépav Katadypey amrary-yédovtes: éretta Kal TOV UmEevayTLoupEvon EVvLOL
Tapio av _ereiryer Oat Seopevot. TUYTELVOVTOS dé Tov Kaxov padrXov 'Hpaxreidns TOV adedpov e€é-Temper, elta @eodorny TOV Ociov, ixerevwy a.p-yeu, @S pndevos aVvTEXOVTOS TOUS ToAEpiors, auto dé reTpwpévou, Tis 5€ TONEWS pLKPOV amexovans avaterpagpOas Kat catanen piaBar. Tovov-Tov ayyedpatov to Aiwve T pooTred ovT@y €Te wev éEjxovta atadious Tav TUADY amretye: ppacas dé TOV xivduvov tots Eévous Kal TApAKeneva dpEvos OuKETE Bdény HyEV, adhe, Spop TO oTpaTevpa pos THY TOA, GAXov er adro1s avtialovTwv

Kal Seomevenv emeiyer Oat. Xpnodpevos 5é Oav-pact@ Taxer Kar mpodupia Ttav Eevwv cicéBare bid Toy TUAGY eis Thy ‘Exatépmedov Aeyouevny: Kat Tous pev EXadpous evOus adjxev édOeiv mrpos
94

978

DION

stalling the succour which Dion was bringing, re- sorted to the speediest destruction and annihilation of everything by burning, setting fire to what was near them with the brands and torches in their hands, and scattering fiery arrows from their bows among the remoter parts. As the Syracusans fled, some were overtaken and slain in the streets, and those who sought cover in their houses were driven out again by the fire, many buildings being now a- blaze and falling upon those who were running about.

XLV. Owing to this disaster more than to any thing else, the city was thrown open to Dion by unanimous consent. For he was no longer marching in haste, since he had heard that the enemy had shut themselves up in the acropolis. But as the day advanced, first, horsemen met him with tidings of the second capture of the city; next, even some of his opponents came with entreaties that he would hasten his march. Moreover, as the mischief grew worse, Heracleides sent out his brother, and then Theodotes his uncle, begging Dion to help them, since no one now resisted the enemy, he himself was wounded, and the city was almost demolished and consumed by fire. When these amazing messages reached Dion, he was still sixty furlongs distant from the city gates; but after telling his merce- naries of the city’s peril and exhorting them, he led his army towards the city, no longer in marching step, but on the run, while one messenger after another met him and begged him to hasten. His mercenaries advancing with astonishing speed and ardour, he burst through the gates into what was called the Hecatompedon, and at once sent his light- armed troops to charge upon the enemy, in order

95

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOUS rohepious, @S ioice Oapatoas Tobs upa-Kovatols éyyévorto, TOUS o omhiTas avros ouve-TATTE cal TOY TodTaY TOUS éippéovTas Kal
TUYLTTAPEVOUS, épBious NOVXOUS TOLaY Kal Statpav Tas myevovias, dws tmodAayodey dua mpoadepotto poBepwrepov.
XLVI. ‘Emel 5€ rabra TapacKevac dpHevos Kal
Tois Beois T poo evEdpevos apOn bia Ths TONES
drycov éml Tous Toheuious, Kpauyn Kal xapa kal TOAUS drahary 110s evyais onod kal TapaKdoece
He LLry LEvOS éyivero Tapa TOV Lvpaxovcioy, TOV
pev Aiwva cwrhpa Kal Jeov atroxadXovvtwv, Tous

dé Eévous adehpous Kal tjoXtTas. ovdels be pirautos oUTws" Hv Kat perowpuyos mapa TOV TOTE “Keaupov bs ov paiddov vmrép povou Aiwvos 7) TOY aw aTravTwv aryovidy épaivero, TPOTOU T pos TOV xivdvvov Topevopévov be aiparos Kal sTrupos Kat vexpov TOAD KELLEVODY éy tais WwAaTetass.
"Hy peev obv kal Ta mapa TOV TOAELiOV poBepa mavTamacw aTrnyptmpevarv Kal Taparerary Levey Tapa TO TEeLY Lo pa Xaremny é éXov Kal SucexBiaoTov Thv wpocodov: o & éx Tob T Upos Kivuvos
érdparre padrov TOUS Févous wal dvcepyov € érroiet THY Topeiav. KK yap vo Tis Proyos Tépt-EXGTOVTO TAS oixias Teptvewouerns” kat d:amvposs émtBaivovtes eperTrions Kal KaTapepopevots aroppnywact peydrous UOT PEXOVTES emurparas, Kal ToNUy opod KATTY@ Starropevopevor KovLopToY, émetp@vTo ouvex ew Kal pn Stacrav thv taku.
é mpocéuEav Tots rodepios, ev yepol pev

4 neds o}tws Coraés, after Reiske (oftws gidavros Bekker): pfAaures.
96

|
|
|
DION

| that the Syracusans might take courage at the sight ;

Y

he also marshalled his men-at-arms in person, together with those of the citizens who kept running up and forming with them, dividing his commands and forming companies in column, that he might make a more formidable attack from many points at once.
XLVI. When he had made these preparations and had prayed to the gods, and was seen leading his forces through the city against the enemy, shouts of joy and loud battle-cries mingled with prayers and supplications were raised by the Syracusans, who called Dion their saviour and god, and his mercenaries their brethren and fellow citizens. And no one was so fond of self or fond of life in that emergency as not to show himself more anxious about Dion alone than about all the rest, as he marched at their head to meet the danger, through blood and fire and the mass of dead bodies lying in the streets.

It was true, indeed, that the enemy presented a formidable appearance, for they had become alto- gether savage, and had drawn themselves up along the demolished siege-wall, which made the approach to them difficult and hard to force; but the peril from the fire disturbed the mercenaries of Dion more, and made their progress arduous. For they were surrounded on all sides by glowing flames which were spreading among the houses; they trod upon blazing ruins and ran at the risk of their lives under falling fragments of great size; they made their way through clouds of dust and smoke; and yet they tried to keep together and not break their ranks. Moreover, when they joined battle with the 7 \ ~~ / > 2 4 \ ‘ ,

OALYWY IPOS OArjLyOUS éyiveTO wayn ta THY OTEVO-
\ A 9 , A a A \
TnTa Kal THY avopadiay Tod ToToV, Kpavyn é
lo) ,
kat wpobupia trav Yvpaxovoiwy émippwoavtwv
é
9 , @ e \ \ N a \ ‘ AQ
éBidcOnoav ot wept tov Nuyuov. al to pe TAELTTOY AUTWY ELS THY AKpOTTOALY eyyUs ovcaY avadetyov éowteto* tovs 5 arrorerdbévtas é&w cat Staorvapévtas avypouvy ot Eévor SiwxKovres.
amoAavow 6€ THs viens év T@ Tapautixa Kal Xapav Kal TreptBoras é Epy@ THAMKOUT @ mpeTrovaas
ov TrapéaxeV O Kaupos, éml tas olxias Tpamrowevery Tov Yupaxovatwv Kal 7d wip pods év TH vuKti xatao Bec avrwv.

XLVII. ‘Hpépa & ws Av, trav pév GAXrwv ovdeis
Uméuerve Snpaywyav, GANA KaTayvovtes éavToOV
,
Epuyov, “Hpaxretdns S€ cai @eodorns avrol xo-picavtes éavtovs te Aiwm trapédwxav, adsxeiy
A , ,
opmoroyoovres Kal Seouevor Berriovos exeivou tv-Yeiv H yeyovaci avtoi epi éxeivov' mpémew 5é Aiow thy aAAnv adracay apetny aavyxpitov
éyovTe kal mpos opyny KpeitTove davivat tay

NYVOLOVNKOTWY, OL TEpL OU TpPOTEpOY eaTAaCiacaY
mpos avuTov viv Heovow nrtacBat ths aperis e “A “ . A \ \ e v4 omoroyourTes. TavTa THY Trept Tov HpaxrEidny Seopévwv ot pev piros mapexerevovto tH Alwve un peidecOar xaxov cat Backaverv avbporor,
b \ “a 4 , \ e
adXa Kal Tois oTpaTIWTaLs YapicacOat Tov ‘Hpa-Krelonv Kal tov wodsTedpatos é&edXeiv Sypuoxo-miay, émipaves voonua, Tupavvidos ovx éXaTTOV.
0 6¢ Aliwy rapapvOovpevos adtovs EXeyev WS Tots enemy, only a few on each side could fight at close quarters, so narrow and uneven was the place; but the Syracusans encouraged them with eager shouts, and Nypsius and his men were overpowered. Most of them fled back into the acropolis, which was near, and so saved themselves; but those who were left outside and scattered hither and thither, were pur- sued and slain by the mercenaries. No immediate enjoyment of their victory, however, and none of the glad congratulations befitting so great an achievement were possible for the Syracusans in that emer- gency; they turned their attention to their burning houses, and only by toiling all night did they succeed in putting out the fire.

XLVII. When it was day, not one of the other popular leaders would remain in the city, but passed judgement on themselves by taking to flight; Hera- cleides and Theodotes, however, came of their own accord and surrendered themselves to Dion, acknow- ledging that they had done wrong, and begging him to treat them better than they had treated him; it was meet, they said, that Dion, who was their superior in every other virtue, should also show himself a better master of his anger than his ungrateful foes, who were now come confessing that in the very quality to which they had formerly disputed his claim, namely, virtue, they were his inferiors. Though Heracleides and Theodotes thus besought Dion, his friends exhorted him not to spare such base and envious men, but to give Heracleides over to the mercy of his soldiers, and to rid the commonwealth of the hunt for mob-favour, which, no less than tyranny, was a raging distemper. But Dion tried to soften their resentment, saying that while other

pev GAXOLS otparnyots Tpos oma ral TONELOV a Tretorn Ths acKknoews éeotiv, avT@ bé aodvy Xpovov ev ‘Axadnpeta pepeheTnras Oupod TEpt-elvat Kal POovou Kal prdoverxias TaoNS' Ov é émibetkis €OTW OX a 7 pos pirous Kal Xpna Tous
peTplorns, Grr’ et Tes adixovpevos eUTrapaitytos

ein Ka pos Tots duaptavovet BotreaBat S “Hpaxreidou Th) Toa oUTOY Suvdpet cal dpovyce
KpaT av doo Xpnorornte Kal dicacocuvy pavivac:
TO yap adrnbas BérXrLov év TovTois: ai dé Tod
TONE LOU catopOacers, et Kal avOperrav pndeva,
TI YE TUXNY SiappiaByntobcav Eyovotwv. et 6 ‘Hpaxreions amiatos Kal Kaos dia pOovor, ov
ToL Kal Aiwva Seiv Oupo diapBeipac THDV aperny:
TO yap ayritiwmpeta Oat Tov mpoadinety vow dixatoTepov apicdar, pucer yevomevov amo pas do Gevetas. av 6 pwrrov 5é Kaxian, eb Kal Kader ov eoTLy, ovxX obTws ayptov elvat TavTamace Kat dvcKonov 6 WOTE py peraBardey NapeTe vixnOetoav vid TOV TOANAKLS ED TOLOUVTWY.
XLVIII. Tovovrous XPNT apevos Noyta pots o Aiwy adie TOUS mepl Tov ‘Hpaxretdny. TpaTo-pevos 8& mpos TO ha Mee Tov pév Zupa-Kovatwv Exac tov exédevoer € éva KowarTa oTraupov
eyyus caTaBarneu, tous b€ Eévous émiaticas 51a VUKTOS, avaT avopevov TOV Lupaxovaiwy, éhabev
arog Taupwcas THY ak poTony, wate pel’ Tpepav
TO TAXOS Kal THY épyaciay Jeacapevous OpLolws Javpalew TOUS jToNitas Kal TOUS ToNemious. Od-ras b€ Tovs reuncortas TOV Lupaxoue tev ral Avaupevos TOVs éarwxoTas, SioxXthiwy ovK éAUdT-Too

generals trained themselves mostly for arms and war, he himself had studied fer 4 Jong time in the Academy how to conquer anger, énvy, and all contentious- ness; and it was no manifestation of such self-mastery, he said, when one was kind to friends and benefactors, but when one who had been’ wronged was merciful and mild towards the erring ; besides, he wished men to see that he was superior to Heracleides, not so much in power and wisdom, as ‘n.-goodness and justice; for therein lay real superiority; whereas successes in war, even though they had. to ‘be shared with no man, must at least be shared with fortune. Moreover, if envy led Heracleides to be faithless and base, surely anger must not drive Dion to sutlv his virtue ; for although taking vengeance for a wreng was in the eyes of the Jaw more just than the duizg of the wrong unprovoked, by nature it sprang from -.

one and the same weakness. Furthermore, baseness- in a man, even though it be a grievous thing, was”

eo.
.
not so altogether savage and obstinate that it could — not be conquered by frequent benefactions and altered by a sense of gratitude.

XLVIII. After using such arguments as _ these, Dion set Heracleides and Theodotes free. Then turning his attention to the siege-wall, he bade each one of the Syracusans to cut a stake and lay it down near the works, and setting his mercenaries to the task all night, while the Syracusans were resting, he succeeded in fencing off the acropolis, so that when day came the citizens and the enemy alike were amazed to see with what speed the work had been accomplished. He also buried the dead Syra- cusans, ransomed those who had been taken prisoners, although they were fully two thousand in number,

»

tovas GvTas, éxkAnoiay cuynyaye. Kai Tape Owv “Hpaxretdns eionynocato. yuwpnvy avtoxpdtopa otpatnyov érecbas Aigya-xata yhv Kal Odracgav. atrodeEapévwr, 5¢ ‘TeV dpictwy Kal yeLpo-Tovely KedXevovtwy <OgpuByoev o vauTixos dys
kat Bavavoos, ay Paleevos éxmimtovTs THS vavap-yias TO ‘Hpanrésdr, cal vouitwy adrov, ei xal Tarra pnbdevos akties ott, Snwotexwtepoy ye tav-Tws elvat TOO imvos kat padXov Ure yelpa Tois aA Ave a A Ian a
3 qoAXois. .°6, 06 Aimy TovTO pev epfxerv adtois Kat
Thy Kata Oaratray apxynv amedoxe t@ ‘Hpa-Kreldn, arpos Sé THS ys Kal TOV olKL@V TOV ava-Sacyoy eppnpévors évavtiwbeis Kal Ta mpoTepov wybrrfévta mept tovtwv axupwaas édAuTNCEDV.
Ofer evOds érépay apxynv AaBov o ‘Hpaxrgeidns “TQUS TuvEexTTAEVTAVTAS ET aAUTOD oOTpaTLMTAS
.+, ab vavtas ev Meconvn xaOnpevos ednpayeryer \"xal mapwEuve kata tod Aiwvos ws Tupavvety pér- “.. Novtos: autos dé wpos Atovictoy éroveito cuvOn-

4 xas xptda Sia Ddpaxos tod Yraptidrov. Kai

TOUTO TOV YyYwpLLwTaTeY Yvpakovaiwy wirovon-TaVTWY, OTAOLS HY ev TO oTpaToTéde Kal bv avTny
amopia Kal omdavis év tals Yupaxovaoas, wate Tavrataciw apnyaveiy tov Aiwva kal xaxds

dxovey vTo Tav ditwv ottw Sdvapetayeipirtov avOpwrov kai dvepOappévov v7r0 POovov cal Tovn-pias avEnoarvta Kal’ avrod rov Hpaxrcidnv.
XLIX. Bdpaxos $€ wpos Néa wore ris ’Axpayavrivns oatparomedevovtos, éEayaywyv tous Lupaxovatous EBovrAETo peév ev éErépw Katp@ SiaryovicacOat mpos avrov, ‘Hpaxreidou 5€ kai tov 102 and then held an assembly. Here Heracleides came forward with a motion that Dion should be chosen general with absolute powers by land and sea. The aristocracy approved of this motion and urged the appointment; but the mob of sailors and day-labourers tumultuously opposed it, being vexed that Heracleides should lose his office of admiral, and considering him, even though good for nothing in other ways, at least altogether more a man of the people than Dion and more under the control of the multitude. This point Dion yielded to them, and restored the command by sea to Heracleides; but when they insisted upon the redistribution of land and houses, he opposed them and repealed their former decrees on this head, thereby winning their displeasure. Wherefore Heracleides at once renewed his machinations, and, when he was stationed at Messana, artfully tried to exasperate against Dion the soldiers and sailors who had sailed thither with him, declaring that Dion intended to make himself tyrant; but he himself was all the while making secret compacts with Dionysius through the agency of Pharax the Spartan. When this was suspected by the better class of Syracusans, there was dissension in the army, and therefore perplexity and want of provisions in Syracuse, so that Dion was altogether at a loss what to do, and was blamed by his friends for having strengthened against himself a man so perverse and so corrupted by envy and baseness as Heracleides was. .

XLIX. Now, Pharax was encamped at Neapolis, in the territory of Agrigentum, and thither Dion led forth the Syracusans. Dion wished to settle the issue between them at a later opportunity, but

wv“ 4 e 9 4 4, aA
vavtov KataBowrvtTwr ws ov BovrAeTat waxy Kpivat
N 4 / 9 > 9 / ¥
tov troXenov Aiwy, arr ael évovTos APYELY,
b) / \ / / \
avayxacbels avvéBare nal nrtnOn. yevopévns 5é
THS TpoThs ov Bapelas, AANA padrdOoV bd éavTav Kal Tov otacidley rapayOévtarv, adOis 6 Aiwv mapecxevatero payecOar xal ovvétatte mreiOwv kal wapaBappyvwv. Ths 86 vuKTos apyopéevns
2 s \ > A € , ” \
ayyednNeTat moos autov “Hpaxreidnv adpavta tov GTONOY qWAcly er Yupaxoveay, eyywKoTa THY TONY KaTanaPely KaKEtvoY aToK\Eioat pEeTaA TOU
, 9 A 2 3 N \
oTpatevpatos. ev0vs ody dvaraBSav Ttovs duva-TwTaTous Kal mpoOupotatous immacato Sta THs
, ed a vuxTos' Kal wept TpiTnv @pay THs nuépas mpos Tals TUAALS HV, oTAdLOUS KATHVUKOS ErTakoctous.
“Hpaxrelins 5€ tals vavoiv, os dputdropevos toTépnoev, atroTAevaoas Kal TAaVa@peEVvos ev Tais
4 a apatesw acKxorws émituyyaver TactrAm Te
4 / A 92? e 4
Xmaptiatn, pdoKxovts rely ep Hyepovia Lxe-Meotav é€« Aaxedaipovos, ws MpoTEpov TroTeE Tvriros. aaopevos otv avaraBwv rovtToy Tov
” 4 4 b ,
dvépa Kal meptayrapevos wotep are~ipdppaxov
tov Atwvos émedeixvuto Tots ouppdyos: Kal KipuKa wéuTov eis TAS Yupaxovaas éxéreve Sé-
4 v yecOar Tov Braptidtny apxovta Tovs oAiTas.
“A ,
atroxpiwwapevov 5€ Tov Aiwvos ws elo apyortes
ixavol Tots Yuvpaxovaiots, et 5é€ mavtws Séor Kat Lmaptidrov Tols mpdypaci, avtos odtos elvat,
\
KATA Toinow yeyovws YrapTvaTns, THY wer apynv
e , > / 4 N ‘ \ 4

6 Taiavros amréyva, twrevcas S5é mpos tov Aiwva 104

980

DION

Heracleides and his sailors kept crying out against him, saying that his wish was not to decide the war by a battle, but to have it last forever, that he might remain in power. He was therefore forced into an engagement, and was worsted. Since, however, the defeat of his men was not severe, but due more to their own seditious disorders than to the enemy, Dion again prepared for battle and drew up his forces, persuading and encouraging them. But in the evening word was brought to him that Hera- cleides with his fleet was sailing for Syracuse, deter- mined to occupy the city and shut Dion and his army out of it. Immediately, therefore, he took with him his most influential and zealous supporters and rode all night, and about nine o'clock next day was at the gates of the city, having covered seven hun- dred furlongs. But Heracleides, who, in spite of all his efforts, arrived too late with his ships, put out to sea again, and being without definite plans, fell in with Gaesylus the Spartan, who insisted that he was sailing from Sparta to take command of the Sicilians, as Gylippus had formerly done.! Hera- cleides, accordingly, gladly took up this man, at- tached him to himself like an amulet, as it were, against the influence of Dion, and showed him to his confederates ; then, secretly sending a herald to Syracuse, he ordered the citizens to receive their Spartan commander. Dion, however, made answer that the Syracusans had commanders enough, and that if their situation absolutely required a Spartan also, he himself was the man, since he had been made a citizen of Sparta. Thereupon Gaesylus gave up his pretensions to the command, and sailing to 1 See the Nictas, chapters xix. ff. .

105
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dip rrake Tov 'Hpaxnretdyy ¢ GpKous dovta Kal Tic-TELS Tas peyloras, als avros o T'aicvros doce tipwpos évecOar Aiwve cat xoraorTHs "Hpaxreidou gigs alec dal
. "Ex TOUTOU KaTehvoay pep ot Lvpaxovevor
TO ae ovdev yap Av épryov avrob, peydrae
bé daravat toils Théovat, Kal atdcews apoppai TOS apXover. thy b€ a dixpay émoNLopKouv é£ouxo-SopnoavtTes TO TrEeptTeyiopa. pnberds dé Tois
TONLOPKOULEVOLS BonOobvros, emiALtrov TOs dé ai-Tov, TOY 6e peabopopov yivopevoy Tovnpar, aTroyvous O vios Tou Atovuciou Ta mpdypara Kab TTELTAMEVOS pos TOV Aiwva tiv pev dxpay é éxeivep
META TOV éTrh@v Kal THS adds KaTACKEUTS 1a pe-Swxep, avTOS dé Tv pnrépa Kal Tas aerpas avaraBav Kal TevTe TANpwD awevos Tpuypets efe-

met Mpos Tov Tatépa, TOU Aiwvos aoparas ev éxmeUTrovTos, ovdevos be Tov év upacovears arrohelTovTOs éxeiyny THY Gy, Gr Kal TOUS BY mapovTas érreBowpevov, ort Thy npepav TaUTHY Kal TOV ipvov éNevO pais avis XovTa tas _Zupa-KOVTAaLS OUK epopaory. Strov yap étt vov Tav
Leyouevoy | Kata THS TUXNS TapaderypaTov eu aveoTaTov éott Kal peyLaTov " Atovuciou guy, tiva Xpn SoKxeiv adtav éxeivov THY TOTE Xapav
yever Gat Kal wnrixov dpovncas Tovs THY wEeyioT HV TOY TeTOTE Tupavyidwy KabEdOVTAS ENAXioTALS
adoppats;
LI. "ExTevoavtos dé Tov "AmroAAoKpatous,
Kal rod Aiwvos eis THY dix poTroALy Badifovtos, ovK éxaptépnaay ai yuvaixes ovd avéepweway eioedOeiv 106

DION

Dion, effected a reconciliation between him and Heracleides, who took oaths and made the most solemn pledges, in support of which Gaesylus himself swore that he would avenge Dion and punish Heracleides if he worked any more mischief.
L. After this the Syracusans discharged their fleet, since it was of no use, while it involved great outlays for the crews, and caused dissension among their com- manders ; they also laid siege to the citadel after they had finished building the wall that enclosed it. No one came to the help of the besieged, provisions failed them, and the mercenaries became mutinous, so that the son of Dionysius gave up his cause for lost and made terms with Dion. The citadel he handed over to him together with the arms and other equip- ment there, while he himself, taking his mother and sisters and manning five triremes, sailed away to his father. Dion allowed him to depart in safety, and no one who was then in Syracuse missed that sight, nay, they called upon the absent ones also, pitying them because they could not behold this day and the rising of the sun upon a free Syracuse. For since, among the illustrations men give of the mutations of fortune, the expulsion of Dionysius is still to this day the strongest and plainest, what joy must we suppose those men themselves then felt, and how great a pride, who, with the fewest resources, over- threw the greatest tyranny that ever was!

LI. After Apollocrates had sailed away, and when Dion was on his way to the acropolis, the women could not restrain themselves nor await his entrance,

107

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avtov, GAN emi tas Ouvpas éFéSpapov, 4 pev

"Aptotouayn Tov viev ayovca tod Aiwvos, 7 &
"A pérn KATOTLY elmero Saxpuouca, Kal d:arropovoa 7H doTdonTat kal mpoceimn TOV dvdpa Kotvwvias auth mpos ETepov yeyevnuévns. ac-Tacapévov & avtovd mpatov THY abeAdnr, elta
TO Taloiov, 4 ‘AptoTouayn Tpocayayotoa THY
"Apérny, ““Hruyodpev, & Aiwv,” épn, “cov devyovtos: hKwv dé Kal vixav adnpynKas hua atapv-TOY TAS KATHELAS, TARY LovNsS TAUTNS, Hv emeidov
n Svotvyns eyo ood CavtTos érépm auvedOeiv BiacOcioav. Ste ody oé Kvptovy Huav H TY MeTOLNnKe, TWS AUTH Staitas exeivnv THy avayKny; motepov ws Oeiov 7} Kal ws avdpa oe aomacetat ;”
Totavta THS Aptotouayns Neyovons o Aiwy éxda-Kpucas mpoonydryero pidoaTopyws THY yuvaina:
Kal TrApado’S AUTH TOV VLOV ExEXNEVoEV ELS THV
oixiav tTHv avTod Badifew, Sov Kal av’tos bun-TaTO, THY AKpav él Tois YvpaKxovators trounoapevos.
LII. Oitw 6é tev Tpayydtwr avT® mpoKeyopnKoT@v ovdev aronabeas 7 POT Epov nEtoce Tis mapovans evTUXLas 7) TO Kal pirous Xaprtas Kab cuppayos Swpeds, partota Sé Trois év doe ouvnbect nat Eévors arrovetpai Tiva piravOpwrias Kal Tins mepida, TH peyaropuxyia thy Svvauw imepBarrAopevos. éavTov 5é TAS Kal cwhpovas éx tav tuxovrav SidKet, Oavpafopuevos Ott, 1) povov BKertas Te Kal Kapynddvos, adAa nal THs
"EAXdb0s GANS aToBAEerrova ns pos avTov evnpe-pouvta, Kal pndevy ottTw péya TeV ToTE vomlov-108

981

DION

but ran out to the gates, Aristomache leading Dion’s son, while Arete followed after them in tears, and at a loss how to greet and address her husband now that she had lived with another man. After Dion had greeted his sister first, and then his little son, Aristomache led Arete to him, and said: “ We were unhappy, Dion, while thou wast in exile; but now that thou art come and art victorious, thou hast taken away our sorrow from all of us, except from this woman alone, whom I was so unfortunate as to see forced to wed another while thou wast still alive. Since, then, fortune has made thee our lord and master, how wilt thou judge of the compulsion laid upon her? Is it as her uncle or as her husband that she is to greet thee?’’ So spake Aristomache, and Dion, bursting into tears, embraced his wife fondly, gave her his son, and bade her go to his own house ; and there he himself also dwelt, after he had put the citadel in charge of the Syracusans.

LII. And now that his enterprise had been so successful, he thought it not right to enjoy his present good fortune before distributing thanks to his friends, rewards to his allies, and particularly to his Athenian associates and to his mercenaries some mark of kindness and honour, his generosity leading him beyond his resources. But as for himself, he lived with simplicity and moderation on what he had, and men wondered at him because, while his successes drew upon him the eyes not only of Sicily and Carthage, but also of all Hellas, and while he was regarded by the people of that time as the

Twv, pnd énidaveortépas mept aAXov Hryepova ToApns Kal TUyYns yeyovévat SoKovons, ovTw mapeixev éauTov ecOhre Kal Ocparreia Kal rpaTrébn pétpiov, Bomep év "Axadnpeta ovooita@v peta TIAdtavos, ov« év Eevayots xat probodopas diat-
T@pevos, ols ai Kal" éExdotny Hyépav TANT oval
Kal atroXavces Tapauv0ia Tov Tovey Kal TOV
xkwodvvev eiciv. arr éxeiv@ pev IAdtwv éypadev @> Wwpos éva viv THS oiKovpévns TOUTOY aTavTES aroPnérrouvaw, autos S€é éxeivos, ws Eorxev, abewpa mpos &v ywpiov pias Todews, THY "Axadnpesar, Kat Tovs avToOe nal Oeatas Kal Suxactas éyivw-oKkev ovTe mpakw ovtTe TOAMaV oOvTE VviKnY TLV Oavpatovras, GANA povov et Koopiws Kal cwdpo-YWS TH TUYN XpHTat Kal wapéyer pétptov éavTov évy Tpayywact peydAos aGtooKoTrobvtTas. Tov mév-TOL Trepl TAS OmLALAS GyKoU Kal TOU Tpos TOV Shpov arevous epidoveiKer pander Upedeiv pnde xardoat, KaiToL TOY mpary nara are Xaperos évdewy ov-tov, kat TIAdtwvos éeritipaevtos, @S EelpnKaper, Kal ypapovros ott 7 avOddera epnpia ovvotKos
dot. GAAG hvoes Te haiverar Wpos To TiOavov SvoKxepdot@ Keypnuevos, avtiomray Te Tovs Yupa-Kovalous ayayv avepévous Kal SiateOpuppéevous
7 poOvpovpevos.
LIII. 'O yap 'Hpaxrretdns adOes érréxerto: Kat @pQ@Tov pev eis auvedploy Tapaxarovpevos ovK éBovreto Badilew: idsi@rns yap Ov peta Tov.
dAXwv exxrnotdlew wodkTa@y. Emetta KaTnyoper 11oO

DION

greatest of living men, and was thought to be blessed with courage and good fortune beyond any other commander, he was nevertheless so modest in his dress, his attendance, and his table, just as though he were messing with Plato in the Academy, and not living among captains of mercenaries and paid soldiers, who find in their daily feastings, and other enjoyments, a solace for their toils and perils. Plato, indeed, wrote to him! that the eyes of all the world were now fixed upon him alone, but Dion himself, as it would seem, kept his eyes fixed upon one spot in one city, namely, the Academy, and considered that his spectators and judges there admired neither great exploits nor boldness nor victories, but watched to see only whether he made a discreet and decorous use of his good fortune, and showed himself modest in his high estate. Nevertheless, he made it a point not to remit or relax at all the gravity of his manners or his haughtiness in dealing with the people, al- though his situation called for a gracious demeanour, and although Plato, as I have said,? wrote and warned him that self-will was “a companion of solitude.’ But he seems to have been of a temper naturally averse to graciousness, and, besides, he was ambitious to curb the Syracusans, who were given to excessive license and luxury.

LITT. For Heracleides once more set himself in opposition to him. To begin with, when he was invited by Dion to attend the council, he refused to come, saying that as a man in private station he would meet in assembly with the other citizens.
' EHpiat. iv. p. 320: Sore rovs ef axdons rhs oixouménrs eis eva témov amoBAdmrey, Kal év ToUT@ wdAtota mpds o€.

2 In chapter viii. 3
Il
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a 4 4 \ ¥ ? , \ A
tov Aiwvos 6Tt THY akpav ov KaTécKae Kal TO Sym tov Acovuciov tapov wpynpévm AdoaL Kal
a 4
Tov vexpov éxBarely ovK eTétpe re, peTAaTEeWT ETAL dé é« KopivOov cupBovrous xal ocuvdpyortas,
la) / A ?
amaki@v Tovs ToNiTas. TOO dyTe peTEeTEeUTETO \ , ig / > a / tous Kopwiovs o Aiwv, iv émevoet rodteiav padov éAmifoy Kxatacthcew exeivwy Traparyevopévov. érrevoet O€ THY ev Akpatoyv Snuoxpatiay, e b 4 b \ v4 @
@S OU TOALTELAV, ANAA TAaVTOTWXLOV OVTAY TOX-

A \ \ 4 4 \
te@v, kata Tov IlAdtwva, kwrvev, Aakwyixov
dé te cal Kpntixoy oxjpa prEdpevos éx Sypou

kat Bacirelas, apistoxpatiay éxov THY émioTa-
a \ ,
tovcav Kat BpaBevovoav Ta péyiota, Kabtotavat
A e lal \ la! ,
Kal Koopeiv, op@v Kal Tods KopivGiouvs odyap-
/ \ \ \ a NX LK TEPOV TE TWONLTEVQMLEVOUS KAL LN TONKA THY Kowav év TO Snww@ TpaTTovTas.
\ A \ € ‘Os ody padtota Tpos TadTa Tov Hpaxreidny
? A / @ ,
évavtimcer Oar Tpocedoxa, Kal TaANA Tapaxywodns
N\
Kal evpetaberos Kal otaciactixos hy, ods drat
\ a Bovropévous avroy éx@Avey avedely, TovTos érré-Tpewe tote? Kal mapedOovtes es THY oiKiav \ 4 amoKtivyvovaly auTov. édAvTNGE dé ahodpa Tovs
Lupaxovatious atobavav. suws bé tod Aiwvos Tapas Te AapTpAas TapacKevdcavTos Kal peta
le) 4
Tov OTpaTevpaTos ETopévou MpoTéuavTos TOV
a / vexpov, elta diarexGévtos avtois, cuveyvwoay ws
ov Suvatov Hv tapaccopevny Tmravoacdat tHv
/
mow ‘Hpaxdrctdov nat Aiwvos dua mrodTevo-
; :

pévav.

II2

DION

Next, he publicly denounced Dion for not demolish- ing the citadel, and for checking the people when they set out to open the tomb of Dionysius and cast out his dead body, and for sending to Corinth for counsellors and colleagues in the government, there- by showing contempt for his fellow citizens. And in fact Dion did send for assistance to the Corinthians, hoping the more easily to establish the civil polity which he had in mind if they were at his side. And he had it in mind to put a curb upon unmixed de- mocracy in Syracuse, regarding it as not a civil polity, but rather, in the words of Plato,! a “ bazaar of polities’’; also to establish and set in order a mixture of democracy and royalty, somewhat after the Spartan and Cretan fashion, wherein an aristo- cracy should preside, and administer the most im- portant affairs; for he saw that the Corinthians had a polity which leaned towards oligarchy, and that they transacted little public business in their assembly of the people.

Accordingly, since he expected that these measures would find their chief opponent in Heracleides, and since the man was in every way turbulent, fickle, and seditious, he now yielded to those who had long wished to kill him, but whom he had hitherto re- strained ; so they made their way into the house of Heracleides and slew him. His death was keenly resented by the Syracusans; but nevertheless, when Dion gave him a splendid funeral, followed the body to its grave with his army, and then discoursed to them upon the matter, they came to see that it was impossible for the city to be free from tumults while Heracleides and Dion together conducted its affairs.

1 Republic, viii. p. 557 d.

LIV. "Hv &é tis éraipos tod Aiwvos é& 'AQn-vov, Kdddurros, dy dnow o Tharov OUK ato Tmatoeias, arr' x puotayoyiav Kal THs TéptTpeyovons eraspelas yV@ ptyov avT@ yever Bar Kat cuvnon, petacyav bé THs otparelas Kal TLue-PEVOS, WOTE Kal aouvercenGeiv els TAS Lupaxovoas
Tp@Tos TOV éralpwv am dvrov, ea repavepevos Kab
Aap pos ev Tois ayaot Kal Sidonpos. émrel 8é, TOV 7 parov Kal Bedtio Tey dirwv tod Aiwvos
dyno weveov bro Tov TONELOD, Kal teOvnKotos
'Hpaxneldov, TOV Te Ofjpov € éwpa TOV Lupaxovaioy Epnwov HVE WOVOS évTa, Kab TOUS oTpaTLOTAS TOUS
peta Aiwvos T poaéXovTas aurT@ padiota, prapa-TATOS avOpwrrav yevouevos Kal TavTaTracw éMrioas ZineMav aOrov éew THs Eevoxrovias, ws bé pac é évtol, Kal TddavTa TpoorhaBav elxoot Tob
dovov pa Dov Tapa TOV Tohepior, | dtéfOerpe xat
qmapec xrevalé TLvas TOY Eeveov ert TOV Aiwva, caxonBeartarny apxny Kal mavoupyoTatny Town-gapevos. ael yap TLvas dwvas TOV TT PAT LOT EY mMpos exelvoy H NEdEyHLEevas adrANOas avadépwr +) meTrag mevas vd' abrod, TovavTaY efovoiav éha Be dua THY lor OoT évTuyy dvew Kpuga Kat dtaeye Gar pera. mappycias ols Bovroro Kata Tob Aiwvos, avTov KedEvovTOS, I iva bse els AavOavn
TOV UMTOVAWS KAL dua pevaas eXovTwv. éx S€ Tov-TOV cuveBawe TOUS pev TOVNPOUS Kal vooourtas eUpio Kev TaXy rat cuviatdvat TOV Kaanurmoy, él O€ TLS AT wT aMeVvos TOUS Aoyous aurob Kal THY

meipav é€eimrot pos Tov Aiwva, wy TapdTTecOat 114

982

DION

LIV. Now, there was a certain comrade of Dion’s named Callippus, an Athenian, who, as Plato says,} had become intimately acquainted with him, not as a fellow pupil in philosophy, but in consequence of initiation into the mysteries and the recurrent comradeship which this brought. He took part in Dion’s expedition and was held in honour by him, so that he even entered Syracuse with him at the head of all his comrades, with a garland on his head, after winning glorious distinction in battle. But now that the chief and noblest friends of Dion had been consumed away by the war, and Heracleides was dead, he saw that the people of Syracuse were without a leader, and that he him- self was very much in favour with Dion’s soldiers. Therefore, showing himself the vilest of men, and altogether expecting that he would have Sicily as a reward for murdering his friend,’ and, as some say, having received twenty talents from the enemy to pay him for doing the murder, he bribed some of Dion’s mercenaries into a conspiracy against him, beginning his work in a most malicious and rascally manner. For he was always reporting to Dion various speeches of his soldiers against him, either actually uttered or fabricated by himself, and in this way won his confidence, and was authorized to meet secretly with whom he would and talk freely with them against Dion, in order that no lurking malcontents might remain undiscovered. By this means Callippus succeeded in quickly discovering and banding together the evil-minded and discon- tented citizens, and, whenever any one who had repulsed his overtures told Dion about them, Dion

1 Hpist. vi. p. 333.
115
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pnde Xareraiverv éxeivov, @S & WoocétaTTE TOU Kadritrrrov mepaivovtos.
LV. Luc Tapers bé THs émtBoudijs pac pa yiverat Tp Aiwve peya Kat TepaT does. éTuyxave
pev yap ope THS nLepas cabelopevos év TacTace THS olKias povos aly 7 pos cavT@ TV Sudvouay:
éLaipyns dé yopou yevopevov 1 pos Garép Tépatt Tis aTodas, arroBréypas ert @TOS dytos elde yuvaixa peyarny, OTOAR pev Kal Tporom@ pndev
"Eptvvvos TPAyLKAS mapahuTrovaay, caipovoay bé KAaAAUYT PY Tit THV oixiay. ex haryels dé dewvds Kal TrepipoBos YEVOMEVOS peTeTreuparo TOUS pirous Kat Sinyetro THY yw avrois Kal Tapapevery édeiTo Kat TUVYUKTEPEVELY, TavTa-mag EKO TATIKOS EXeov Kal dedorKas pay TaALy eis oyu auT@ povebévre TO Tépas adinntas.
TOUTO pev ov ai6us OU GUVETEGE. pel Hype pas Cy

ddLyas o vids autod oxebov dyrimans OV, EK TLVOS AuINS Kal OpyAs picpav Kal TaudiKny apxny
AaBovens, epptrpev éavtTov amo TOU TéyouS ET THY Kepadny Kal dtepOapn.
LVI. ’Ep TovovTots b€ Tov Aiwvos dvtos, o
KaaAdemos ere paddov elyeTO THIS émtBourips,
Kal oyov eis TOUS Lupaxovatous efédmxev @s 0
Aiwyv, amas yeyovas, eyvoxe tov Atovuciou Kanety ‘AmoAdoKparny Kal mo.eto Oat Siddoxor, aderpidobv pev 6vTa THS éavToU yuvaikes, Ouya-Tpidoby dé THs aberoijs. 700 dé xal TOV Aiwva
Kal Tas yuvaixas Urrovota TAY TPATTOMEVOD | lye,
Kab envicers éyiyvorTo TAavTa oGev. GNX Oo pev Aiwv, os eouKen, emt Tols KAT TOV ‘Hpaxneidny axOopmevos, kai tov dovov éxeivov, ws Tiva TOD 116

was not disturbed nor vexed, but assumed that Callippus was merely carrying out his injunctions.
LV. As the plot was ripening, Dion saw an ap- parition of great size and portentous aspect. He was sitting late in the day in the vestibule of his house, alone and lost in thought, when suddenly a noise was heard at the other end of the colonnade, and turning his gaze in that direction he saw (for it was not yet dark) a woman of lofty stature, in garb and countenance exactly like a tragic Fury, sweeping the house with a sort of broom. He was terribly shocked, and, becoming apprehensive, summoned his friends, told them what he had seen, and begged them to remain and spend the night with him, being altogether beside himself, and fearing that if he were left alone the portent would appear to him again. This, indeed, did not occur a second time. But a few days afterwards his son, who was hardly a boy any more, in a fit of angry displeasure caused by some trivial and childish grievance, threw himself headlong from the roof and was killed.

LVI. While Dion was thus heavily afflicted, Cal- lippus was all the more intent upon his plot, and spread a report among the Syracusans that Dion, being now childless, had made up his mind to send for Apollocrates, the son of Dionysius, and make him his successor, since he was his wife’s nephew and his sister's grandson. And presently both Dion and his wife and sister began to suspect what was going on, and information of the plot came to them from every quarter. But Dion, as it would seem, being in distress at the fate of Heracleides, and suffering continual vexation and depression at thought of the man’s

117

A aA A /
Biou nal Trav wpdkewv adt@ Knrida Trepixerpéevny, dSucxepaivwy det Kat Bapuvopevos, elev Grt

4 # 4 a , 9 \ 4
TodAaKls 75n OvncKey Erotwos éote Kal mrapéyewv
“ B ne , 4 au , 9 oF » 4 ‘
T@ BovAropevw odatre autov, ev Cnv dence: mn 4 > , povov Tous é€xyOpovs, GAXA Kal Tovs pirous du-
J NATTOMEVOD.
Tas 5€ yuvaixcas opwv o Kandnduros é€eta-
Covcas axpiBas To Tpaypa, Kai PoBnOeis, 7rGE
Mpos avTas apvoupevos Kal Saxpvwv Kal TiatL
iy Bovrovrar dudovae Bovrcpevos. ati & n&iovv
\ “
avtTov ouocat Tov pwéyay Spxov. jv S€ ToLodTOS:
N 5) \ a 4 / € \
xkataBas eis TO TOV Oecpodopwv Téuevos o bid0vs THY TOT, LEeP@V TIWwY YyEevomevwY, TreptBadAETAL
oY / a a \ \ a
THY moppuptoa THS Beod, Kai daBov 6g6a KaLo-PevnY aTrojvUcl. TAaUTa TOlnoaS oO Ka@\XAuraros mavTa, Kal TOV OpKOV ATrOLOGAaS, OUTW KaTEyéAAcE
Tav Oedy Bote TrEepimeivas THY EopTHY Ss BpmoceE
Oeod, Spa tov dhovov év trois Kopeiots, ovdev tows
TO TEpt THY Hwépay THs Oeod mrotnodpeEvos, ws
9 / iA b A b | v /
aoceBoupévns Twavrws, e Kal KaT GOV yYpovoy Eohatte Tov pUoTHY AUTIS 0 pucTAaywyos.
LVII. “Ovtwy 5é mrecovwr €v TH Kowwvia Ts

4 4 4 9 > 4 ,
mpatews, KaGeCopevov Atwvos ev otxnpate KrLVaS Tivas €yovTs peta Tov dirwv, ot pev Ew THY oixiay meptéctncay, oi Sé mpdos Tais Ovpats Tod
¥ “A / a +] »] e

oixov Kal Tais Oupiow joayv. avtol & ot mpoo-
a) A fo!
héperv Tas Xelpas péeAAovTEes ZaxvvO.o. tTapHrGov

murder, which he regarded as a stain upon his life and actions, declared that he was ready now to die many deaths and to suffer any one who wished to slay him, if it was going to be necessary for him to live on his guard, not only against his enemies, but also against his friends.

But Callippus, seeing that the women were investigating the matter carefully, and taking alarm, came to them with denials and in tears and offering to give them whatever pledge of fidelity they desired. So they required him to swear the great oath. This was done in the following manner. The one who gives this pledge goes down into the sanctuary of Demeter and Persephone, where, after certain sacred rites have been performed, he puts on the purple vestment of the goddess, takes a blazing torch in his hand, and recites the oath. All this Callippus did, and recited the oath; but he made such a mockery of the gods as to wait for the festival of the goddess by whom he had sworn, the Coreia, and then to do the murder.! And yet it is possible that he took no account of the day, since he knew that the goddess would have been utterly outraged even if at another time her mystic were slain by his mystagogue.?

LVII. Many had conspired to do the deed, and as Dion was sitting with his friends in an apartment containing couches for entertainment, some of the conspirators invested the house outside, while others stood at the doors and windows of the apartment. The actual assassins, who were Zacynthians, came in

1 353 B.C.

_ 2 Implying that Callippus had himself initiated Dion into the mysteries of Demeter.

dvev Erhav ev tois yiT@OLW. aya 8 of pev éEw tas Oupas émiaTacduevor KaTeixov, oa dé TO Aiov T poo WET OVTES KaTayyew éTepavtTo Kai ovvT piBer avtov. as 0 ook yp émépatwvov, 7 Tov Eios: ovdels & éroApa TAS Oupas avoitat. ou-vol yap ho av évdov ot peTa ToD Aiwvos, ov EKaTTOS olopevos, dv éxeivov mpontat, Stacwoerv éauTon, OUK eTOA MG BonGety. drat puis bé Ye-

vopwevns AvKwv o Lupaxovatos opéyet TWh TOV ZaxvyOvev bia THS Gupidos eyELpLoLov, @ Kabamep tepetov tov Aiwva KpaToupevov mda Kal BeSierteiou aneopatav. evs dé xal TH
GdeApny pEeTAa TIS yuvarros eryKULOVOS ovans ets
THD elpkT HY evéBarov. Kat ouveBn TH yuvakt TANpoVvEerTaTa hoxevdeion Texety év T@ SOecpo-Tnpi@ matSdprov dppev" omrep Kat Operas padrov_ mapeBarovto TET ATAL TOUS puraxas, 70n TOU KaadAinovu OopuBoupévou Tobs Tpdypaciy.
LVIII. Ev api bev yap amoxreivas Tov Atwva ham pos jv Kal Kateixe TAS LupaKxoveas:
Kab TTpos THY "AOnvatov eypahe Tow, iv pa-
NOTA [ETA TOUS Jeovs apetrev aidetoOat Kat Sedsévat THALKOUVTOU pvoous dypawevos. XX' gotxev adnbas reyes ae TO THY TOLD éxetvny péperv dvdpas apeTh TE TOUS ayabouvs apio Tous Kal KaKia TOUS pavrous TOVNPOTATOUS, cadarrep
aura Kal n X@pa KaNALoTOV pen Kat Ke@oveLov
QV LOPWTATOV avabidacty. ov pV TOU » Xpovov
O Kaddumros eyKAn pa THS TUXNS kat Tav Oeav
TEpLHD, @S TEpLOpOVvT OV ef aceBnuatos dvO pwrrov THMLKOUTOV KT@MEVOV TYE LOvias Kal mpdypata:
taxu © akiav dinny edwxev. opunoas pev yap
I20

unarmed and without their cloaks. Then at -the same time those outside closed the doors and held them fast, while those inside fell upon Dion and tried to strangle and crush him. They made no headway, however, and called for a sword; but no one ventured to open the door. For Dion's com- panions inside were many in number; but each of them thought that by abandoning Dion to his fate he would save his own life, and so no one ventured to help him. After some delay, Lycon the Syracusan handed through the window to one of the Zacyn- thians a shortsword, and with this they cut Dion's throat as if he had been a victim at the altar; he had long since been overpowered and. was quivering before the stroke. At once, too, they cast his sister into prison, together with his wife, who was big with child. His wife had a most wretched confinement, and gave birth in the prison to a male child, which the women ventured to rear, with the consent of their guards, and all the more because Callippus was already involved in great trouble.

LVIII. At the outset, indeed, after he had killed Dion, Callippus was a glorious personage, and had Syracuse in his power. He actually wrote a letter to the city of Athens, which, next to the gods, he ought to have held in awe and fear after setting his hands to so great a pollution. But it appears to be truly said of that city that the good men whom she breeds are of the highest excellence, and the bad men of the most despicable baseness, just as her soil produces sweetest honey and deadliest hemlock. However, Callippus did not long remain a scandal to fortune and the gods, as though they had no eyes for a man who won leadership and power by so great impiety, but speedily paid a fitting penalty. For on setting out to take 12!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Karavny raBeiv, evOds améBanre TAs Lupaxotoas:
STE Kat hac avtov ciety Ste TOALY ATrOAWAEKS
TUpOKYNaTLY einen. émBemevos bé Meoonvious
Kal TOUS TAELOTOUS TTpPaTLWTAS aTrOAéCas, év als Hoav ot Aiwva KaTaxteivavtes, ovdepmtas 5é TWoews avTov év Zenedia TpoaSexoperns, anXra
pcouv Top amavTov Kab “mpoRarropever, "Pryyov Katéayev. eéxei 5€ AUTIPAS TpaTTwY Kal KaKaS
Statpepov Tous puaBodopous, vo Aerrivou Kal TloAvmépxovtos avnpeOn, Xpnoapevov Eudidi—p Kata tuxnvy © Kai Aiwva wAnyivat pac.

eyvaoOn oe T@ peryeOer (Bpayd yap mp, domep Ta, Aaxwvixd) Kal TH KaTaoKeyh THS TEXVIS elpyac pévov yAadupos cal mepiTTas. TotauTny pev ovv tiow KdddTros edwnce.
Ty & “Aptotopaxny kal TH "Apérny, as
apetOnoar EK THS ELpKTHS, avahaBov ‘Teérns | 0
Lu aKOUCLOS, els trav Aiwvos pidov yeyovas, édoxet TLOTOS Kab KaA@S Teplétrery. Elta cup-mea Gels UTO TOV Aiwvos EXO pav Kal wapa-aKevaoas TAolov auTais, @s Els TleAomovyna ov atTooTaAncomevals, eKENEVTE KATA THOVY aToO-addatavras éxBarelv eis tHv Oardaccav. oi Oé fwoas éTt KatatrovtTicOjvat Aéyovar, Kal TO Taoiov per’ avTay. mepiidOe b€ Kal ToUTOV afia Town TOV TETOAPNMEVOOY, avTos TE yap v7 Tipodéovtos arovs amr eOave, Kal Ouyartépas 5v0 TPOTATEKTELVAY avtob Aiwu TLpcopobvTes ot
Lupaxovarot, wept av év rH Ttmodéovros Bip Kal’ Exacta yéypaT Tas.
122

DION

Catana, he at once lost Syracuse; at which time, as they say, he remarked that he had lost a city and got a cheese-grater.1 Then he attacked Messana and lost most of his soldiers, among whom were the murderers of Dion; and since no city in Sicily would receive him, but all hated and spurned him, he took possession of Rhegium. But there, being in straitened circumstances and unable to support his mercenaries properly, he was put to death by Leptines and Polyperchon, who, as fortune would have it, used the shortsword with which Dion also was said to have been smitten. And it was known by its size, which was short, after the Spartan fashion, and by the style of its workmanship, being delicately and cunningly wrought. Such, then, was the penalty which Callippus paid.

As for Andromache and Arete, when they were released from prison, they were taken up by Hicetas the Syracusan, who had been one of Dion's friends, and who was thought to be faithfully and honourably disposed towards them. Afterwards, having been persuaded by the enemies of Dion, he got a ship ready for them, pretending that they were to be sent into Peloponnesus, and ordered the sailors, during the voyage, to cut their throats and cast them into the sea. Others, however, say that they were thrown overboard alive, and the little boy with them. But Hicetas also met with a punishment worthy of his crimes. For he himself was captured by Timoleon and put to death, and the Syracusans, to avenge Dion, slew his two daughters also; of which things I have written at length in my Life of Timoleon.?

1 Apparently the meaning, in Sicilian Greek, of the word

Catana. Callippus maintained himself in Syracuse only thirteen months. 2 Chapters xxxii. and xxxiii.

BRUTUS

BPOYTOZ

I. Mdpxov && Bpovtov mpdyovos fv “lovvos 984 Bpodtos, bv avéotnaav év Kamitadio yadxoiv of mdadat ‘Pwpaio pécov Ttav Baciréwv, éotraopévov Eidos, ws BeBaorata Kxatadvoavra Tapkuvious. GAN éxeivos wév, WoTTEP TA ruxXpHraTA tov Eupav, oxAnpoy éx hicews Kal ov padaxov éyav UTro Adyou TO HOo0s aypt Tratdogovias é&wKetle TO Oup@ TH KaTa TAY TUpadvvwY, ovTOGL 5’, brép o8 ypadetae tadta, madeia Kal Noy@ dia dirocodias katapitas 76 700s, Kal thy dvow éuBp04 Kal mpaciay otcav émeyeipas Tais tpaxkTuKais oppais, éuperéotata doxet xpadjvar mpos TO KaXov, WoTE Kal TOvS aTrexXOavopévous aUT@ dia thy éml Kaicapa ovvwpociav, et pév Tt yevvaiov % mpakis iweyxe, Bpovt@ mpocamtey,

Ta Suaxepéotepa Sé TaY yeyovdTwY TpéTrELY Ets Kaocuov, oixetov pév dvta Bpovtou nal didov, amdobv S€ TO TpoT@ Kal Kafapdv ovy opoiws.
LepBiria S€ 7 pntynp avédepe To yévos eis ‘Addav!
LepBirsov, 5 Maidiov Xopiov tupavvida xataoxevalouévou Kal TapdtTovros Tov Onpov éyyet-pldtov AaBwv bro pddrns wpondOev eis ayopav Kai Tapactas T@ avdpt TANcIOY, ws évTUyyaveLy
1 *AdaAay Cobet : “AAav,

I. Marcus Brutus was a descendant of that Junius Brutus whose bronze statue, with a drawn sword in its hand, was erected by the ancient Romans on the Capitol among those of their kings, in token that he was most resolute in dethroning the Tarquins. But that Brutus, like the tempered steel of swords, had a disposition which was hard by nature and not softened by letters, so that his wrath against the tyrants drove him upon the dreadful act of slaying his sons;! whereas this Brutus, of whom I now write, modified his disposition by means of the training and culture which philosophy gives, and stimulated a nature which was sedate and mild by active enterprises, and thus seems to have been most harmoniously attempered for the practice of virtue. As a consequence, even those who hated him on account of his conspiracy against Caesar ascribed whatever was noble in the undertaking to Brutus, but laid the more distressing features of what was done to the charge of Cassius, who was a kinsman of Brutus, indeed, and his friend, but not so simple and sincere in his character. Servilia, the mother of Brutus, traced her lineage back to Servilius Ahala, who, when Spurius Maelius was seditiously plotting to usurp absolute power, took a dagger under his arm, went into the forum, drew nigh the man, as if

1 See the Publicola, chapter vi.

TL péAXwMY Kal SiaréyecOat, mpocvevoavtTa Ta-tdktas dméxtewve.
Todo pep ovy opororyoupevov éoTe' TO O€
Tat p@ov yévos of Ova Tov Kaioapos povov &yOpav
TWa Kat Suc péverav aTroSELKvupevor T pos Bpotrov ov daowy els TOV éx BaXovra Tapeuviovs anew ovdev yap éxelv@ AepOivac ryeévos avehovre TOUS vious, ara Snworqy TOUTOV, oixovopou viov évta Bpovrov, apte Kat ™panv els dpxovra mpoedOeiv. Tlocesdavios 8 o prrocogos TOUS peep evn ALKOUS poly amore Oat Tou Bpourou maidas WS toropntas, TpiTov Oé AecPOfivar yyqeov, ab’ ob TO ‘yéVvos apphabac: Kal tov ye Kal’ avrov éx TAS oixias yeyovor@v emrupavav avdpav dvapépew évious 7 pos TOV avdpidvra Tob Bpovrov

THY opoloTnTa THS t6€as. Tepl pev odv TOUTwWY Toc avTa.
II. YepBidias dé Tis Bpourov pntpos adehpoas
Hy Katov 6 prrocogos, Ov padiora ‘Popatov eb rwoer oUTOS Oeiov ovra Kai mevOepor b Da Tepov yevopevov. TOV dé “EdAnuicdy: ptroa ode ov-Sevds pév, WS amTAGS EiTEtY, aYNKOOS 4 ovde aGAXoTpios, Stadhepovrws 8 é€omovddKer pos TOVS avo IIAdtwvos. Kal thy véav Kal peony deyopévnv Axadsjpetay ov mravu tpoctépevos é&nptnTo
THIS maracas, kat Srerérer Javpalov prev “Avti-oxov TOV ‘Aokadovirny, pidov bé Kai cupBrotny TOV adder ov avTOD TeTounmévos "A piorop, av dpa, TH pep év Aoyors &Feu TOANOY pirocopwy Aevtro-pevoy, evratig dé Kal TpQoTnTe TOLS MpwToLs évaptdrov. o 8 "Eputrunros ob nal adtos év tais intending to confer privately with him, and when he inclined his head to listen, stabbed him to death.!

This, at all events, is generally admitted; but as to the lineage of Brutus by his father’s side, those who display great hatred and malevolence towards him because of the murder of Caesar deny that it goes back to that Brutus who expelled the Tarquins, since no offspring was left to him when he had slain his sons. The ancestor of Brutus, they say, was a plebeian, son of a steward by the name of Brutus, and had only recently risen to office. Poseidonius the philosopher, however, says that the two sons of Brutus who were of age perished according to the story, but that a third son was left, an intant, from whom the family descended. He says, moreover, that there were certainly illustrious men of this house in ‘his own day, some of whom called attention to their likeness in form and features to the statue of Brutus. Thus much, then, on this head.

II. Servilia, the mother of Brutus, was a sister of Cato the philosopher, and Brutus had a higher esteem for him than for any other Roman, Cato being his uncle and afterwards becoming his father-in-law. There was practically no Greek philosopher with whom Brutus was unacquainted or unfamiliar, but he devoted himself particularly to the disciples of Plato. To the New and Middle Academy, as they are called, he was not very partial, but clung to the Old. He was therefore always an admirer of Antiochus of Ascalon, whose brother Aristus he had made his friend and housemate, a man who in learning was inferior to many philosophers, but who in good sense and gentleness vied with the foremost. Empylus also, who is often mentioned by Brutus himself in

1 In 439 B.c. Cf. Livy, iv. 13 f.

émigtonais Kai ot pidrot pemynvTaL TONAGKLS WS cup Brobvtos au7@, pHnTwp ayy Kal KaTané)oure pix pov per, av paidov dé cuyypappa Tept THS Kaicapos dvarpérens, y Bpodrtos é emuyeypaT Tat.
‘Popaiort Mev ovv hoKnTo mpos Tas SteEodous Kal TOUS ayavas ikavas o Bpoiros, ‘EXdquiatl
dé THY an opOeyparixiy kat AMaxwvixny emirn-Sevav Bpaxvdoyiav ev Tais émioToNais evtaxod
TAPaonpos € €oTtv. otov dn KaderTnKas eis TOV
TOAE LOV rypadet Hepyapnvois- ‘ ‘Axovo unas AodoPerrg dcdwnxévat XpnwaTa: a et jev EKOVTES
édore, Sporoyeire adscety? eb 5€ axovTes, atrodeiEare T@ épol éxovtTes Oobvat.” madLv Laptors:
“Al Bovrai | pe OAtrywpor, al viroupytat Bpa-Setar. Th TOUTOY TEAOS evvoeiabe;” Kal éTépav ‘ EidvOvo THY euny evepyeoiav UrrepioovTes Tagov amovoias eoxnKace THY marpiba; Ilarapets dé miaTevaavTes EauTovs éemol ovdev . édAElTrOoVGL StotxovvTes Ta Kal’ Exacta Tis édrevOepias. éEov ovy Kal Upiv Hy THY Tlarapéwp Kpiow i) THY RavO icv TUXNY érécbar.” TO pev ovv TOY Tapa-
TH Lov yevos ema TOAL@Y ToLooTov EOTLV.
Ill. "Ere 6é peipaxcov av Katou Te Dei
cuvaTredijunoev els Kumpov € eri Irorepaiov a amo-OTANEVTL. IIroAcpatou dé Siabeipavtos € EQUTOV 0 Kdtov avTos ev ‘Pode SiatpiBny € EYOV dvaryeatay eTUXE peev non TLV TOV pirov Kavidiov émi tay TOV Xpnarov hvvAakny amrectadKkws, deicas © EXELVOY WS OUK adel opevov KdoTrhs, éyparpe TO Bpout@ hey THV Taxiorny els Kurrpop é ex Ilappudias: exe yap éavTov dvahapBdver EX TLVOS aaOeveias Sufyev. 0 S€ Kal para dxwv errevae, 130

his letters, and also by his friends, as a housemate of his, was a rhetorician, and has left a brief but excellent account of the assassination of Caesar, entitled “ Brutus.”

In Latin, now, Brutus was sufficiently trained for narrative or pleading; but in Greek he affected the brevity of the apophthegm and the Spartan, of which he sometimes gives a striking example in his letters. For instance, when he had already embarked upon the war, he wrote to the Pergamenians: “I hear that ye have given money to Dolabella; if ye gave it willingly confess that ye have wronged me; if unwillingly, prove it by giving willingly to me." Again, to the Samians: " Your counsels are paltry, your subsidies slow ; what, think ye, will be the end of this?'' And in another letter: "The Xanthians ignored my benefactions, and have made their country a grave for their madness; but the Patareans en- trusted themselves to me, and now enjoy their freedom in all its fulness. It is in your power also to choose the decision of the Patareans or the fate of the Xanthians.'' Such, then, is the style of his remarkable letters.

III. While he was still a youth, he made a journey to Cyprus with his uncle Cato, who was sent out against Ptolemy.! And when Ptolemy made away with himself, Cato, who was himself obliged to tarry a while in Rhodes, had already dispatched one of his friends, Canidius, to take charge of the king's treasures; but fearing that he would not refrain from theft, he wrote to Brutus bidding him sail with all speed to Cyprus from Pamphylia, where he was recruiting his health after a severe sickness. Brutus set sail, but very much against his will, both because

1 Cf. Cato the Younger, chapters xxxiv., xxxvi. 131

tov Te Kavidsov aidsovpevos ws atipws atreppip-
"évov vio TOU Katwvos, Kal dAws THY TOLAUTNY
émtipérerav nat Svoixnoww, ate 69 véos Kal cyo-AacTHS, OVK EAevOEpiov OVS EéavTOU TroLOUpeEVOS.
ov piv adda Kal tepl Tai'ta ouvteivas éavTov uTo To Kdtwvos érnvéOn, nal Tis ovoias éEap-yuptoBeions avahaBav Ta TAElo TA TOY YpNudTwV eis 'Pan érdevoer.
IV. 'Ezei 5€ ta tpdypata Séatn Toprniov
kat Kaicapos éfeveyxapévav ta Grrrda Kal Tis Hyepovias TapayOelons, émidoEos péev Hv aipnoecAat ta Kagioapos: 0 yap matip avtobd dia Tov Tloumniov éreOvnxes mpotepov: akiov bé¢ Ta Kowa Tov idiwy émimpocbev troveicOar Kal tHv Tlopaniov vouitwv vrobecty BeXtiova Tpds TOV TO)eEpov elvat THs ToD Kaicapos! éxeivm mpocéderto.
KaiTol TpoTepov atravtnaas ovdé TpoceEime TOV
Iloumniov, adyos mryoupevos péya tatpos dovel SiaréyecOar: tote & ws apxovtTe THS tratpidos wrotdéas éautov eis Kedcxiav émdevce mpecBev-TNS meTa Ynotiov TOD AaYOVTOS THY eTapyiay.
ws 8 éxet wpatrtew ovdév Rv péya Kal cvvnecay
eis TAUTO HON Llopmnios cai Katoap aywrifopevor
Tep Ta ddAwy, HKev eis Maxedoviay eOedXovtis
Tov Kivdvvov pebéEwv: Ste Kai dace Topmniov
Hodevta kai Oavpadcavra mpoctovtos avtod Kabe-Coperoy cEavacthvar Kal meptBarelv ws KpeiTTova

mavtov opwevtwv. ev de TH oTpaTela THS Hpépas 1 rhs rov Kaloapos Lentz: rot Kaloapos.

he had regard for Canidius, whom he thought to have been ignominiously discarded by Cato, and because on general grounds he considered such painstaking attention to administrative affairs to be illiberal and unworthy of himself as a young man addicted to letters. However, he applied himself to this task also, and won Cato's praise, and after converting the king's property into money, took most of the treasure and set sail for Rome.

IV. Here, when the state was rent by factions, Pompey and Caesar appealing to arms and the su- preme power being confounded, Brutus was expected to choose the side of Caesar, since his father had been put to death a while before at the instiga- tion of Pompey;! but thinking it his duty to put the public good above his own, and holding that Pompey's grounds for going to war were better than Caesar's, he attached himself to Pompey. And yet before this he would not even speak to Pompey when he met him, considering it a great abomination to converse with the murderer of his father; now, how- ever, looking upon him as his country's ruler, he put himself under his orders, and set sail for Cilicia as legate with Sestius, to whom the province had been allotted. But since there was nothing of importance for him to do there, and since Pompey and Caesar were now about to meet in a supreme struggle, he came of his own accord into Macedonia to share the danger. It was then, they say, that Pompey was so filled with delight and admiration that he rose from his seat as Brutus approached, and in the sight of all embraced him as a superior. During the cam- paign, for whatever part of the day he was not with Sce the Pompey, chapter xvi.

oh a“ f
daa pwn Loprnio cuviv mept Aoyous Kai BiBrALa
4 b / \ ¥ ‘ ‘ ? \ \ diérpeBev, ov wovov Tov adXOV yYpovoy, GAG Kal
a , Tpo THS peydAns paxns. Hv pev axpn Oépous Kat
n N , Kava TONY TPOS EAWLETL Ympiots EgTPATOTTEdEL-
a / KoTwv, T@® 6€ Bpovtw ov Tayéws HKeov ot THY oKnvny Koptfovtes. éxtrovnbels 5é tmept tadza, peonpBptas ports areupdpevos cal daywv omya,

a \ Tov adddwv 1) KaGevdovTwy 1 mpos émivota Kal
aA 9 \ “A
dpovrTids Tod pédAXOVTOS GYTwWY, AUTOS aypL THIS
e , 4 , 3 \ ,
eatrepas éypape ouvrattay enitounv IloAvBiov.
V. Aéyetat 5€ nai Kaioap ovx« dpereiv tod
b) y ? \ \ a a e > e \ e dvOpos, AANA Kal TpoElTrEeity Tots UP EavToOV iyE-poow év TH paxn pe) KTEtvey Bpovtov, adda
, ,
heider Oa, nai mapacyovta pev Exovaiws aye,
? \ 3? 4 \ \ , aA \ \
El O€ GTOMAXOLTO TPOS THY TUAAHYWIV, EGY Kal [1
BiafecOar Kai tadta Tovety 7H NnTpl Tod Bpov-/ 4 b) UY , e ”
Tov .pRiria yapilopevos. eyvwxer yap, WS Core, veavias Oy éte THY YepBrrLav émripavetcay avt@, \ 9 A / / e oo” 9 4
Kat Kad’ ovs padiota Ypovous o Epws éeTédAcye yevopevov Tov Bpovtoy éméteroto twos é& éavTod yeyovévar. évyetat dé TAY wept KatiAlvay mpay-
, ny
HATOV MEYANOY EMLTETTWKOTWD ELS THY TUYKANTOY,
\
& puxpov edénoev avatpévrar Thy TodL, éoravat
e a ,
pev opod Katwva nal Kaicapa dradepopévous Tept yvopuns, ev TouT@ dé ypaypatidiov puxpod

ampoadobévros éEwhev Katoapt, Tov péev dvaywooxev atwmn, Katwva b€ Boav ws dewd mtoret Kaicap évrev&es nai ypdupata Tapa TeV Tode-plwv mpocdexopevos. OopuByodvtwv 5é woddA@v, 134

IX

BRUTUS

Pompey, he busied himself with books and literature, not only the rest of the time, but even before the great battle! It was the height of summer, the heat was great (since they had encamped in marshy regions), and they that carried the tent of Brutus were slow in coming. But though he was thus all worn out, and though it was almost noon before he anointed himself and took a little food, nevertheless, while the rest were either sleeping or occupied with anxious thoughts about the future, he himself was busy until evening in making and writing out a compend of Polybius.

V. It is said, moreover, that Caesar also was con- cerned for his safety, and ordered his officers not to kill Brutus in the battle, but to spare him, and take him prisoner if he gave himself up voluntarily, and if he persisted in fighting against capture, to let him alone and do him no violence; and that Caesar did this out of regard for Servilia, the mother of Brutus. For while he was still a young man, as it seems, Caesar had been intimate with Servilia, who was madly in love with him, and he had some grounds for believing that Brutus, who was born at about the time when her passion was in full blaze, was his own son. It is said also that when the great conspiracy of Catiline, which came near overthrowing the city, had come to the ears of the senate, Cato and Caesar, who were of different opinions about the matter, were standing side by side, and just then a little note was handed to Caesar from outside, which he read quietly. But Cato cried out that Caesar was outrageously receiving letters of instruction from the enemy. At this, a great tumult arose, and Caesar

1 At Pharsalus in Thessaly, in August of 48 b.c.

kal tov Katoapos TO GeATdpiov, ws elxe, TP Katou mpoaSovTos, avayvovTa LepSirias THS
dbenpijs aKoNac TOV emia TOhov éxelvo pev piyrac 7 pos Tov Kaicapa Kat eimreiy " Kparet, péOuae, apos b€ THV yepuny Kal Tov Aoyov atts be apxis tpatréa Oat. oUTw pev mv Oo mpos Kaicapa Xep-Btrtas Eps mepySonros.

VI. Devopevns dé Tis kata Pdpoarov Arrns cat Tloumrniov peév emi Oddracoay dtextrecovTos, ToALopKkoupéevou 5€ Tov Yapaxos, EXaVev o Bpodtos
Kara TvAaS TpPOS TOTTOV EAWSN Kal pea Tov vodrav
Kat Kaddpov pepovoas é€eXOav xai dia vuKros
arog wOeis eis Aapiscav. éxeibev b€ yparpavTos
auTou Kaicap AoOn Te cwlopeve, Kal Kehevoas T pos aurov ed Gel ov povov adie THS aitias, andra Kat TLpL@LEvOV év Tois wadsoTa mepl avrov
elev. oudevos © dan pevyor Tloparnios eltreiy EXOVTOS, aX' arropias avons, odov Tiva ouv T®
Bpovre Badifov pLovos a7reTreLpaTo TIS ywopuns.
Kat dofavtos éx Tivwy S:aroyio paw apiora wept
THS Topaniov Texpaiper Oar guys, aeis Tava
THY én Alyum Tou cuvérewvev. Jarra Toprniov pV, OaTep eixace Bpovrtos, Aiyirre 7 poo Ba-hovra, TO TET pwpEVOV édéEato, Kaicapa bé Kal TOs Kaocwov érpaive Bpodros. Kal 57 Kal TO TOV AiBuwv Bactret 7 ponyopev ev NTTATO TOU

peyélous TOV Kearmyopian, Seopevos dé Kal mapat-TOUMEVOS mept TovTou} TORY auT@ Suécwore THS
apyis. Réyerar 6€ Kaioap, te mpatov jxovcev 1 wep) rovrouv transposed by Bekker, after Vogelin, to the following sentence, between avrov and Aédyoryros (as soon as he heard him speaking in his behalf), gave the missive, just as it was, to Cato. Cato found, when he read it, that it was a wanton bit of writing from his sister Servilia, and throwing it to Caesar with the words " Take it, thou sot," turned again to the business under discussion.!_ So notorious was Servilia's passion for Caesar.

VI. After the defeat at Pharsalus, when Pompey had made his escape to the sea and his camp was besieged, Brutus went out unnoticed by a gate lead- ing to a place that was marshy and full of water and reeds, and made his way safely by night to Larissa. From thence he wrote to Caesar, who was delighted at his safe escape, and bade him come to him, and not only pardoned him, but actually made him a highly honoured companion. Now, since no one could tell whither Pompey was fleeing, and all were . In great perplexity, Caesar took a long walk with Brutus alone, and sounded him on the subject. Certain considerations advanced by Brutus made his opinion concerning Pompey's flight seem the best, and Caesar therefore renounced all other courses and hastened towards Egypt. But as for Pompey, he put in at Egypt, as Brutus conjectured, and there met his doom; as for Caesar, however, Brutus tried to soften him towards Cassius also. He also served as advocate for the king of Africa,? and though he lost the case, owing to the magnitude of the accu- sations against his client, still, by supplications and entreaties in his behalf he saved much of his king- dom for him. And it is said that Caesar, when he

1 Cf. Cato the Younger, xxiv. 1 f.

2 Probably an error, either of Plutarch's, or of the MSS. In 47 3B.c. Brutus pleaded unsuccessfully before Caesar the cause of Deiotarus, king of Galatia. Coraés would read Padarav for A:Buwy.

auTou AEyoVTOS, etmeiy pos TOUS pidous: I Odros
0 veavias ouK olda peév 5 Bovrera, wav © 6 Boo-AeTae ood a Bovrerat." TO yap eu Bpbes avuTov kal pn) padias pn de TAVTOS v Um jKOov TOU Seoueévou

T pos Xapw, GAr ék Novyeo pov Kal TpoaLlpeg ews
TOV KANOV T AKTIKOY, OTOL Tpérpecev, taxupais eXpATO Tais oppais Kal Teheatoupyois. T pos be TAS abixous denoers AKONAKEVTOS my, Kal THY UTrO
TOY AVALTXVYTWS AcTrapouvTov TTAV, WV EevLol
dvawmeta Fat KaXovotp, aiaxiotny avdpt peyaro ToLovupevos et@Oer Reyer @S ol pndev dpveiabar Suvduevoe Soxodow av'T@ pn Karas THY Bpav diateDeiaGat.
MaéAArwv Sé dcaBatverv eis AtBunv Kaioap én
Kadteva cai Yenriwva Bpovto THY évTos "AX Teov Parariav émeTpewrev EVTUXLA TIL THS erapxias: Tas yap adrras UBper Kal m)eovetia TOV TET LO - TEUpevOY Oomep aixwarorous Siapopotvre, € exetvous Kal Tov tmpocbev aTUxXNpaTov mavha Kal mapapvdia Bpotros mV. Kal THY yap els Kaicapa TaVvToV aviyarey, OS auT@ peTa THY émdvooov TepliovTt THY "ItaXiay dtoro Oéapa Tas vTo BpovtT@ TONES yevéo Pan, Kal Bpodrov
avrov, avfovra Thy éxelvou Tysny Kal auvovTa KeXapiopeévas.
VIL. "Errel 5é AELovey oTPAaTnyLav OVo@V THY
pérytoTov éexovoay dfiwpa, Kkaroupevny bé ToNt-TUE NDs emidotos 7 WV 1 Bpottos_ &Eew 7 Kdootos, ol pev avTous A€yovaw é& airy T pore pov HovUX} Sradepopevous é ere paddov Umep TovTov Siactactdaat, Kaitep oixelous dvtas: "louvia yap, aberdgh .
138

087

BRUTUS

first heard Brutus speak in public, said to his friends: "1 know not what this young man wants, but all that he wants he wants very much."! For the weight of his character, and the fact that no one found it easy to make him listen to appeals for favour, but that he accomplished his ends by reasoning and the adoption of noble principles, made his efforts, whither- soever directed, powerful and efficacious. No flattery could induce him to grant an unjust petition, and that inability to withstand shameless importunity, which some call timidity, he regarded as most dis- graceful in a great man, and he was wont to say that those who were unable to refuse anything, in his opinion, must have been corrupted in their youth.

When Caesar was about to cross over into Africa against Cato and Scipio, he put Brutus in charge of Cisalpine Gaul, to the great good-fortune of the province ; for while the other provinces, owing to the insolence and rapacity of their governors, were plun- dered as though they had been conquered in war, to the people of his province Brutus meant relief and consolation even for their former misfortunes. And he attached the gratitude of all to Caesar, so that, after Caesar's return, and as he traversed Italy, he found the cities under Brutus a most pleasing sight, as well as Brutus himself, who enhanced his honour and was a delightful companion.

VII. Now that there were several praetorships to be had, it was expected that the one of greatest dignity, that is, the praetorship of the city, would fall either to Brutus or to Cassius ; and some say that the two men, who were already slightly at variance for other reasons, were still more estranged by this circumstance, although they were relatives, since

1 Cf. Cicero ad Att. xiv. 1, 2. 139

2 Bpovrou, cuvexet Kdooios: ot 6€ Kaicapos épyov
yeverOar THv diroverxiav TavTny, Exatépw Kpioa 9 3 / b / e / " e /
d2 édzridwy évdcdovtos Eavtov, aypt ob mpoayOév-Tes ovTw Kal wapokuvOévtes ets ayava Katé-
/ a , a atnaav. nywvitero dé Bpotros evxreta nal apetn
ce) /
mpos ToAAa TOD Kacciov Kal Aautpa ta Ilap-3 Ona veavievpata. Kaicap & axovcas xal Bov-
a / Nevopevos ev Tois Pirous elmer? ''ArKatorepa pev
/ , 4 \ \ , 4 29
réyee Kadoaowos, Bpovtw 5é tHv mpwrny Soréov.
amredelyOn 5¢ Kdaocios éf étépa otpatnyds, ov x 4 2 A PS ae areas
"A > / 4 » 3 a
tocovrov evvoias éywv Se' hv éhaBev Goov dpyijs Oy ATETUXE.
4 Bpovros dé eat tadra petetye THs Kaicapos
/ id > , / \ e a Suvdpews oaoVv eBoudero. Bovhopevp yap virnpxyev elvar TOV pirov m pate kai dvvacbar mrei-otTov' avr elAKev avrov " mept Kdoovov étatpeia Kal améaotpedev, aUT@ pev ovTW Kacoiw dinr-Naypevoy €& exeivns THS PidroTipias, axovovta bé tov dirwyv dtaxerXevopévwy pt) Tepropay avrov trod Kaicapos padaccdpevov Kat Knrovpevon,
\
GANA hevye TAs TUPAYVIKAS peroppoovvas Kal
\

KaprTas, als ov TILOYT a THY apeTijv, AXN’ cere yovTa Tnv aheny Kal tov Oupov wrrepetrovta xpiobat pos avrov.
VIII. Ov py o05é Katcap avirrortos hv wap-mav ovd ddidBAnTOsS Wpos avTOV, GAAA TO peV
y \ N bJ ¢ \ \ 4 9 , dpovnua kai ro aktwpa Kai todvs pirous edediet Tov avdpos, émiateve 5€ TH 0E. Kal mpwTOV pev
4
"Avtwviov cal AoroBédXa Acyopévov vewTepilerv 140

BRUTUS

Cassius was the husband of Junia, a sister of Brutus. But others say that this rivalry was the work of Caesar, who secretly favoured the hopes of each until, thus induced and incited, they entered into competition with one another. Brutus, however, made the contest supported only by his fair fame and his virtue, as against many brilliant and spirited exploits of Cassius in the Parthian war.! But Caesar, after hearing the claims of each, said, in council with his friends: ‘Cassius makes the juster plea, but Brutus must have the first praetorship.” So Cassius was appointed to another praetorship, but he was not so grateful for what he got as he was angry over what he had lost.

And in all other ways, too, Brutus had as large a share in Caesar’s power as he wished. Indeed, had he wished it, he might have been first among Caesar's friends and exercised the greatest power; but the party of Cassius drew him away from such a course. Not that he was reconciled to Cassius himself as yet, after their struggle for honours, but he gave ear to the friends of Cassius, who urged him not to suffer himself to be charmed and softened by Caesar, but rather to flee the tyrant’s kindnesses and favours, tor these were shown to him, not to reward his virtue, but to root out his vigour and his haughty spirit.

VIII. However, even Caesar was not wholly with- out suspicion, nor free from the effects of accusations against Brutus, but, while he feared his high spirit, his great repute, and his friends, he had faith in his character. Once, when he was told that Antony and Dolabella were plotting revolution, he said it

1 See the Crassus, xviii. ff.

I4I

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ouK ébn TOUS mayels Kal KOMITAS Evoyep, andra
TOUS aX pous Kal Laxvous éxetvous: Bpodrov Néyou
Kal Kaeotor éretta tov Bpovtov tTuvav dra Ban-
AovTw@y Kal purarrecOau TAPAKEhEvouevov TH Xetpl TOU TWLATOS AT TO MEVvOS elie: "Te bé; OUK av Dpiy doxet Bpodros dvapeivat TouvTlt TO cap
xiov;" ws ovdevt T™ pooijKov arArX@ pee éauTov 4 Bpovrp Svvac Gat TooovTOV. Kal pévToL doKet
T PWTOS ay év TH monet yeveo Oar BeBaiws, OAryoV \Vpovov dvacxXopevos Kaicape Sevtepetoas Kal
Tapaxpacat THY OUVapLY avTov Kat papavOhvat
Thy ert TOS Katop0wpacty édaas dofav. adra Kdaotos, avnp Oupoedys Kal parrov idia pc oxaloap KOWH ptooTupavvos, éféxavae Kal Katnmerte. Réyetar dé Bpodtos (bev THY apxny BapivecPar, Kaaatos O€ TOV apxovTa pcely,
GXNA TE KAT aUTOU TroLoupevos eyKAr pata Kat NEOVT WY dai pecty, ods Kaaouos pev aryopavopety péddeov Taper Keviaaro, Kaicap dé xatadndpbév-TAS €v Meydpous, 60 7 TOALS HAW Oa Kadnvov, KATETXE. Tavta ta Onpia oT umpopav héyeTau peyadny yeverOar Meyapedowv. of péev yap non THS TodEws KaTaAapBavopevns StéoTracay Ta KretO pa Kal Tovs dSecpous avikay, @s eurob@y ein Ta Onpia Tots emipepopevors, Ta © Gpovoev eis avTous éxelvous Kal dad éovras avOTTAOUS Hpmatey, MOTE Kal TOLS TOAEMLOLS THY OLY OLKTpaY yevéo Oat.

IX, To 8 ov Kacocip TAUTNV padora pac aitiav imdpEa THS emtBovrns oun opOas Aéyov-142

BRUTUS

was not the fat and long-haired fellows that troubled him, but those pale and lean ones ;/ meaning Brutus and Cassius. And again, when certain ones were accusing Brutus to him, and urging him to be on his guard against him, he laid his hand upon his breast and said: "What? Think ye not that Brutus can wait for this poor flesh?" implying that no one besides Brutus was fit to succeed him in such great power. And verily it appears that Brutus might have been first in the city with none to dispute him, could he have endured for a little while to be second to Caesar, suffering his power to wane and the fame of his successes to wither. But Cassius, a man of violent temper, and rather a hater of Caesar on his own private account than a hater of tyranny on public grounds, fired him up and urged him on. Brutus, it is said, objected to the rule, but Cassius hated the ruler, and among other charges which he brought against him was that of taking away some lions which Cassius had provided when he was about to be aedile; the beasts had been left at Megara, and when the city was taken by Calenus,? Caesar appropriated them. And the beasts are said to have brought great calamity upon the Megarians. For these, just as their city was captured, drew back the bolts and loosened the fetters that confined the animals, in order that they might obstruct the on- coming foe, but they rushed among the unarmed citizens themselves and preyed upon them as they ran hither and thither, so that even to the enemy the sight was a pitiful one.

IX. In the case of Cassius, then, they say this was the chief reason for his plotting against Caesar ;

1 Cf. Cuesar, Ixii. 5. 2 Cf. Caesar, xiii. 1.

Tes. €& apxns yap Hv TH pucet Tov Kacctov
duapéverd Tes Kat Narerorns ™ pos TO ‘yévos TOV TUpavvor, as édnAwaoey Ete Tats Ov Badifwv eis TAUTO 7@ Tob yvAAa mrasol Pavoto bidacKaneiov.
) pev yap éy Tois ratal peryadnyopav THY TOU TAT POS err nvel povapxiav’ 0 5é Kdoouos érrava-oTas xov8vdous éveTpiBev auT®. Bovropever dé
TOY émLTpOTMY TOD PavoTou Kal oiKeiwy érreELevar Kal bicaberBar Topanios é€x@AvaeE, Kal cuvaya-you els TAYTO TOUS Traioas auporepous avex pve Tmept TOU mpdyparos. évda 87) héyerae TOV Kao-oLov elmrety" «Arve 62), @ Pavote, TOAMNO OV évav-TLOVv TOUTOU peyEacar TOV Aovyov éxetvov ep @ mapwkvvOny, iva gov Tad éyo avvtTpifyw TO oTOua.
Totodtos pev O iets Bpovrov dé moAXot per Aovyor Tapa Tov avvnbor, mohnais oe pypars Kab ypdupaciy eLexadodvro Kal TApop wav ert
THY mpakiw ot mortar. TO pev yap avdpiayre TOU TpoTaTopos: Bpovrou TOU KATANYGAVTOS THY TOV Bactdeéwv apxny érréypadou: “ Hide vov 785
Bpotre” Kat “"Odere Civ Bpodtos.” 70 8 av-Tob Bpovrou Bijpa otpatnyobytos evpioxeto wel juépay advan hewy YPap pdr ov TotovTwy: “ Bpodre, Kabevoets;” Kat “Ov« et Bpovdtos adnOas.” aitiot

5é TOUVTwWY OF Kaicapos Koraxes ddXas TE TLULAS
emipOovous aveuptoKkovTes avT@ Kal Stadijpara TOUS avdpidae vixtop emitibévtes, os TOUS TOAdovs brakopevor Bacthéa mpocertrety avri Sucta-Topos. ToUvvVaYTLOV 6 aTHVTNTEV, WS ev TOIS TeEpt Kaicapos axpiBos Yeypam ras.
X. Kacoiw 6€ wecpavte tos dirovs émi Kai-144

988

BRUTUS

but it is not so. For from the outset there was in the nature of Cassius great hostility and bitterness towards the whole race of tyrants, as he showed when he was still a boy and went to the same school with Faustus the son of Sulla. For when Faustus blustered among the boys and bragged about his father's absolute power, Cassius sprang up and gave him a thrashing. The guardians and relatives of Faustus wished to carry the matter into court, but Pompey forbade it, and after bringing the two boys together, questioned them both about the matter. Then, as the story goes, Cassius said: "Come now, Faustus, have the courage to utter in this man's presence that speech which angered me, and I will smash your face again."

Such was Cassius; but Brutus was exhorted and incited to the undertaking by many arguments from his comrades, and by many utterances and writings from his fellow citizens. For instance, on the statue of his ancestor, the Brutus who overthrew the power of the kings, there was written: "O that we had thee now, Brutus!"' and "O that Brutus were alive!" Besides, the praetorial tribunal of Brutus himself was daily found covered with such writings as these: " Brutus, art thou asleep?" and " Thou art not really Brutus." These things were brought about by the flatterers of Caesar, who, among other invidious honours which they invented for him, actually put crowns upon his statues by night, hoping to induce the multitude to address him as king instead of dictator. But the contrary came to pass, as I have written fully in my Life of Caesar.1

X. Moreover, when Cassius sought to induce his

1 Chapter lxi.

145
VOL, VI. L

Tapa TavTes WmLoAOYOUY, et Bpodros Hryotro: Set-abat yap ov yetpw@v ovdé TOALNS THY TPaELW, ANA d0Ens avdpos olos ovTOs eotiv, WoTEp KaTApyopévov kat BeBatodvtos avT@ TH Tapetvar 76
dixatov: et 5é py, Kal dpwvtas abuporépous éceaBat kat Spdocavtas btromtotépous’ ws ovK at éxeivou TO Epyov, et Kkadnv aitiay elyev, aTeTra-pévov. Taita cuudpovncas évétuxye Bpovtw mporepos éx THs Stahopas éexeivns, Kal peta Tas diadvaoeis Kal dirodpocvvas npwTynaev Ef TH vov-pnvia tod Maptiou pnvos éyvwxev eis ovyKANTOV Tapeivar muvOdavecOat yap ws Aoyov UIrép Bactrelas Kaicapos oi didou tote kaOnooey. dyoavtos 8¢ Tov Bpovrou un maprévat, “Ti ovv,” elzrev
o Kaoatos, “ av xada@ow pas; “’Epov épyov,” épn 0 Bpodtos, “dn To wy TLwTay, AAN’ apovetv TH Tatpios! nal mpoatroOvncKey THs édevOepias.” kat o Kaocatos érap$eis, “Tis &,” etme, “‘Pw-paiwy davéFerat cov mpoatroOvicKkovtos; apa ayvoeis, @ Bpovte, ceavrov; 7 To Biya aov doxels KaTaypadely tous Upavtas Kal TOUS KaTrous, ovxXl Tos TpwToUs Kal KpaTtiotToUs TavTa Totety, Tapa pev TOV AArNWY oTpAaTHYaV éertdoceELs kal Oéas kai povoudxous, Tapa aod b€ ws d>Anua TATpLKOY THY KaTaAVOW THS TUpavvidos amat-TouvTas, avTOVS © UITép Tov TdvTA Td XELV TpO-
Ovpous dvtas, olov aftodo. Kai mpoadéyovtar 1 Quvvew TH warpl’: Lentz, comparing Appian, B.C. ii. 113:

dmuvery.

friends to conspire against Caesar, they all agreed to do so if Brutus took the lead, arguing that the undertaking demanded, not violence nor daring, but the reputation of a man like him, who should consecrate the victim, as it were, and ensure by the mere fact of his participation the justice of the sacrifice ; otherwise they would be more timid in doing the deed and more suspected after they had done it, since men would say that Brutus would not have declined the task if the purpose of it had been honourable. After reflecting on this, Cassius made Brutus his first visit since the quarrel above mentioned,! and when they were again on a friendly footing, asked him whether he had made up his mind to attend the meeting of the senate on the Calends of March; for it had come to his ears, he said, that Caesar’s friends would then move to have him made king. When Brutus answered that he should not attend, ‘“ What, then,” said Cassius, “if we should be summoned?” “It would at once be my duty,” said Brutus, “not to hold my peace, but to defend my country and die in behalf of liberty.” Then Cassius, elated, said: “ But what Roman will consent to have thee die in such defence? Dost thou not know thyself, Brutus? Or dost thou think that thy tribunal was covered with inscriptions by weavers and hucksters, and not by the foremost and most influential citizens? From their other praetors they demand gifts and spectacles and gladi- atorial combats; but from thee, as a debt thou owest to thy lineage, the abolition of the tyranny; and they are ready and willing to suffer anything in thy behalf, if thou showest thyself to be what they ex-

1 Chapter vii. 1-3.

havevtos;' é€ tovtrov Tepi8arwv tov Bpodtov naomacero, kat dtadvOévtes oUTWS eTpéTrOVTO TT pOs Tous plArous.
XI. "Hy b¢ TLS: Tdios Avyaptos TOV Tlopaniou
hirwv, ov ent TOUT Kxatyyopndevta Kaicap amré-AvoEV. obTOs, ovyx 15 apetOn dixns yapw exwr, anyr.a be Hy evans apxnv Bapuvopevos,
expos nv Katcap, tov bé Tmepl Bpovtov ev
TOUS padiora cuviOns. Wpos TOUTOV ao Qevoivra Bpobros elcehOwv, “rd Acydpte,” elrrev, “ €y 0l@ Kapp vooeis.” KaKELvOS evOvs eis ayxava diavaoT as Kal haBopevos aUTOU THIS beEvas, «7 AXN’ el TL, pryoiv, ‘@ Bpovte, ceavrod dpovets aEcov, Dyeaive.”
XII. ’Ex TovTOU SraTrerpwpevor Kpuda Tay yopipewv ols é émiaTevoy avexowvovvtTo Kal T poo eda p-Bavov, ov povov TOV cuviav ToLoupevor THY aipeot, GND 6cous nTiaTavTO TOALNTAS dvTas
dyaBous Kat Javarov Katappovntas. 616 Kal Kixépova, TodTO pev TLoTEDS, TouTo 6€ evvolas évera 7 pevTov dvTa Tap avrois, damexpuyavTo, pa 7@ pucer TOAMNS evdens elvat Tpocedndars
vIro xpavou yepoVvTLKny evrAdBetav, ela mavra Kal’ exacTov avayov Tots horyea mois eis Axpav ao parear, apBrUvn THY apn avTav TAS 1 po-Oupias TaNOUS copevnv. érel Kal TOV addeov éTaipwv) Bpovros LrarrAov Te mapéhiTre TOV
’Eruxovpevoy ral Pawviov epagTny Kadtwvos, 6te
mroppwOev auTols TOLAUTNY Tova. KUKA@ TeptBa-NovTos ev TO SiareyerOar Kai cupdpirocopedv 148

pect and demand." After this, he embraced Brutus and kissed him, and thus reconciled they betook themselves to their friends.

XI. There was a certain Caius Ligarius[1] among the friends of Pompey, who had been denounced as such, but pardoned by Caesar. This man, cherishing uo gratitude for his pardon, but rather offended by the power which had put his life in jeopardy, was an enemy of Caesar, and one of the most familiar friends of Brutus. Once; when this man was sick, Brutus came to see him, and said: "O Ligarius, what a time this is to be sick!" Ligarius at once raised himself on his elbow, clasped Brutus by the hand, and said: "Nay, Brutus, if thou hast a purpose worthy of thyself, I am well."

XII. After this, they secretly tested the sentiments of well known men in whom they had confidence, selecting not only from their intimates, but all whom they knew to be bold, brave, and contemptuous of death. For this reason, too, they kept their plans a secret from Cicero, although he was foremost among them, not only for the confidence, but also for the good will which he inspired. They feared that the caution which time and old age had brought him, combined with his natural timidity, and further, his habit of calculating all the details of every enterprise so as to ensure the utmost safety, would blunt the edge of their ardour at a crisis which demanded speed. Besides, Brutus also passed by, among his other friends, Statilius the Epicurean and Favonius the devoted follower of Cato. The reason was that some time before he had put them to a very similar test by the round-about method of a philosophical

1 He is called Quintus Ligarius in the Cicero, xxxix. 5.

a , al
méetpav, o pev Dawyios atrexpivato Yeipov eivar 4 povapxias mapavouov modepov éudvrAcov, o 5é
f " A A \ A 4 \ ,
Stratinuos py TH cOPO Kai vodv Exovts dia hav-
Nous Kal avorntous Kivduvevetv Kal TapaTTecBa
\ / A \ \ > aA J
py KaOncev. trapwy 6¢ AaBewy avteitev audo-
. fo) ,

Tépots. Kalo Bpovdros tote pev ws exovtos Te Tov Aoyou YareTTOv Kal SUaKpLTOV aTrEecLMOTNGEY, Lod \ a) aA \ 4
datepov b6€ AaBewve Kotvodta. To Sovrevpa.
\ ce) SeFapuévov 5€ mpofvpws, tov Erepov Bpodrov, émixrnaw ArXPivov, dAXws pEev OVK 6VTA PéxTNY 9Q\ / > A \ , ,
ovdé Oapparéor, eppwpévov dé rrANPEL povopayov
A > \ 4 e , wv \ \ ,
ods émi Oéa ‘Pwpaiwy Erpede, cal wapa Kaicapr muaTevopevoyv, edoxet mpocdyecOat. Kaaciov dé \ a > aA & / 9O\ bd / cat AaBedvos avT@ Orareyopévwr ovdev azrexpi-B i 8 > AN ? \ FOL \ \
vato, Bpovtm & avtos évtuyav idia Kai pabedv
a , ,
éte THS Wpakews Hyepav éotiw, wmorACynCE cUL-4 a \ aA v7 de ‘\ ,
mpatew mpodvpws. Kal TOV AAXwWV O€ TOUS TAEiotous Kal apiatous 7 S0£a Tod Bpovtou tpoanyero. kal pn? SpKov avvoudcarvtes pnte Tiatw Kal’ iepav NaBovtes H Sovtes, oUTWS atravTeEs Exyov ev éautois Kal KaTeclwmnoay Kai cuvdunveyKay WaTE pavreiats Kal daopace Kal tepois Ud TOV Beav mpodetxvupevny amiaton yevéc Oat Thy paki.
e Le) \ ~ fa) XIII. ‘O 5€ Bpotdros, ate 6) Ta wpaTa Tis
e Powpns ppoviyata nal yevn Kai apetas éEnptnpévos éavTOv Kal TEpLVOwY TdvTa TOV KiVvduvoD, é&w pev emeipato xatéyew Tap éavT@ Kal Kata-
A ‘ Koopetv THY Stdvotay, oixot S€ Kal VUKTWP OVK HV
e be id > a N \ v “ a b] \ e
O AUTOS, GAAG TA LEV AKOVTA TWY UITVwWY aUTOY 7 150

BRUTUS

discussion, when Favonius had answered that civil war was worse than illegal monarchy; and Statilius had declared that it did not become a wise and sensible man to be thrown into turmoil and peril for the sake of feeble and foolish folk. Labeo, however, who was present, argued against them both. At that time, on the ground that the question was rather difficult and hard to decide, Brutus held his peace, but afterwards imparted his purpose to Labeo, who readily concurred in it. Then it was decided to bring over to their cause the other Brutus, surnamed Albi- nus ;? in other ways he was not an enterprising nor even a courageous man, but the large number of gladiators whom he was maintaining for the Roman spectacles made him powerful, and he had Caesar's confidence. When Cassius and Labeo discussed the matter with him, he would make no answer; but he had a private interview by himself with Brutus, and on learning that he was leader of the enterprise, readily agreed to co-operate. The most and best of the rest also were won over by the reputation in which Brutus stood. And although they exchanged neither oaths nor sacred pledges, they all kept the | undertaking so much to themselves and were so secret in carrying it out together that, although it was foretold by the gods in prophecies and oracles and sacrificial omens,? no one would believe in it. XIII. Now Brutus, since he had made the foremost men of Rome for dignity, family, and virtue, depen- dent on himself, and since he understood all the danger involved, in public tried to keep his thoughts to himself and under control ; but at home, and at night, he was not the same man. Sometimes, in spite

1 Cf. Caesur, chapter Ixiv. 2? Cf. Caesar, chapter Ixiii.

dpovtis ebedepe, ta 6é€ pardov evduopevos 7
Roya U@ Kal Star piBov év tats arropiats ovK éravOave THV yuvaixa Tuvavamavoperny, ore pe-5705 core Tapaxis anOous Kal KUKAEL TL Tap
éauT@ dvapopov BovrAeupa cal Sucekehuxrov.
‘H 8é Hlopxia Ouyarnp pév, wWaTreEp elpnrat, Karwvos 7 WV, eye & avTny o Bpodros averios wv
ovx éx wapOevias, dAXAA TOU TWpoTépou TEAEUTH-TavTos avdpos éraRe Kopny ovcay ETL Kal Tavovov éxovoap €& éxeivou pix por, @ BuPnos nv évopa:
Kat TL BiBri6cov px pov ATOPY) MOVED LAT WY Bpovrov Vey pappevov ut avtoo Siacalerar.
pidoaTopryos ar) Topxia Kal piravdpos ovoa Kat peoTn ppovnparos voov EXOVTOS, ou ™ porepov
émexelpnoey | avepéaOau TOV avdpa, Tept TOV
atroppntwv » NaPetv éauijs TovauT ny Otdrretpay.
AaBovca payaipiov @ Tovs dvuxXas ot KoUpeEls
adatpotat, Kat méoas éFehdcaca tov Jadrdapou Tas érradous, TOMNY evéBanre TO UNP@ Babeiar, Bare pvow aipatos TONAAY yeverOar Kat pera puxpov odvvas TE veavixas Kai dPptxwsers TrupETOUS émehaBeiv eK Tob TpAavuaTOS. d-ywviayT os dé Tou Bpovtou Kal dvapopodvros ép axpq THS aryndovos ovca Sede On 7 pos avTov od Tas: “Eye, Bpotre, Kataves ovaa Ouyarnp eis Tov oov eS00nv vixov ovy Gamep au TANAAKEVOLEVAL,

KOLTNS ucbefovca Kear Tpamecns povor, ara
KOLV@oVvOs pev aryabav elvat, KoLvovos dé aviapa.
Ta pev ov oa mavTa mepl Tov ya pov duepm ra:
tay 6€ Tap epob tis atrobetkts 7 xaprs, EL pLnTE cot maQos amroppntov cuvdtoiaw pte ppovrida miaTews Oeouévnv; oS Ott yuvaineia vats 152

BRUTUS

of himself, his anxious thoughts would rouse him out of sleep, and sometimes, when he was more than ever immersed in calculation and beset with perplexities, his wife, who slept by his side, perceived that he was full of unwonted trouble, and was revolving in his mind some difficult and complicated plan.

Porcia, as has been said, was a daughter of Cato, and when Brutus, who was her cousin, took her to wife, she was not a virgin; she was, however, still very young, and had by her deceased husband! a little son whose name was Bibulus. A small book containing memoirs of Brutus was written by him, and is still extant. Porcia, being of an affectionate nature, fond of her husband, and full of sensible pride, did not try to question her husband about his secrets until she had put herself to the following test. She took a little knife, such as barbers use to cut the finger nails, and after banishing all her at- tendants from her chamber, made a deep gash in her thigh, so that there was a copious flow of blood, and after a little while violent pains and chills and fever followed from the wound. Seeing that Brutus was disturbed and greatly distressed, in the height of her anguish she spoke to him thus: “ Brutus, I am Cato’s daughter, and I was brought into thy house, not, like a mere concubine, to share thy bed and board merely, but to be a partner in thy joys, and a partner in thy troubles. Thou, indeed, art faultless as a husband ; but how can I show thee any grateful service if I am to share neither thy secret suf- fering nor the anxiety which craves a loyal confidant? I know that woman’s nature is thought too weak to

1 Marcus Calpurnius Bibulus, colleague of Caesar in the consulship of 59 B.c. 153
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

aabevns Soxel oyov éveyxety arroppyTov: Gr’
éoTt TUS, @ Bpoire, Kal Tpopis ayabis Kal omtrtas Xpnorijs eis W005 ¢ ba xus" éwot dé Kal TO Kdrevos elvat Ouyatépa Kal 76 Bpovrou yuvaina ™ poorer TL ols TPOTEpoy jev HTTOV émrerrotGewy, viv 8 EMAUTHY éyvona kal mpos movov anTT]TOV elvan. TAUT elroboa, deixvuaty avT@ TO Tpabpa Kal Sunyetrau THY metpay. 0 6 demaryels Kat
avateivas Tas Yelpas éemevEato Sodvat Tous Deovs auT@ KatopOovvtt THY mpaki avdpi Tlopxias akin gavivar. xal tote pev averapBRave THV yuvaixa.

XIV. IIpoypadetons be BovAjs, ets iy émido€os HV api€er Bart Kaicap, eyvocay emuxetpeiv Kai yap ab poo per adAnrdov dvuTonTas éver Oat TOTE, Kal wavtTas ebewv opod TOUS apiaTous Kat
mpwtouvs avopas, & Epyou peyddou mpaxOévros ev-Aus avrihapBavopevous Tis édevGeplas. edoxer dé Kal 70 Tob TOTOU Oeiov elvau Kal mpos avTav'
TO yap iy pia TOV TEpl TO Jéatpov, eFedpav éxouca év 7) Toprniov TLS elK@Y elaTHKel, THS TOAEWS oTNTALENS Ste Tais aToais Kal TO Jedrpy TOV TOTTOY éKxEtVvoV exoounoen. éls TAUTNY ow 7 a UYKANTOS éxandeito ToD Maprtiov Banvos padora [LETOUVTOS (etdovs Maprias THY Nuépav ‘Popaior Karovowv), @oTe Kal Oaimeov tes edoxet TOV ee Th Tlopmrntov sien mpoa afew.
Enrdovons dé TIS TipEpas Bpovtos pev vTrotw-OLMEVOS éyxerpi6vov pons ouverduias THIS yuvaLKOS
mponrbev, ou S adddot ™ pos Kadooctov a6 pora Bevres Tov viov avTov TO Kaovpevov avdpeiov i iuadtov avarapuRavovta KaTiyov eis ayopav. éxeiOerv Sé 154

endure a secret; but good rearing and excellent companionship go far towards strengthening the character, and it is my happy lot to be both the daughter of Cato and the wife of Brutus. Before this I put less confidence in these advantages, but now I know that I am superior even to pain."" Thus having spoken, she showed him her wound and explained her test; whereupon Brutus, amazed, and lifting his hands to heaven, prayed that he might succeed in his under- taking and thus show himself a worthy husband of Porcia. Then he sought to restore his wife.

XIV. A meeting of the senate having been called, to which it was expected that Caesar would come, they determined to make their attempt there; for they could then gather together in numbers without exciting suspicion, and would have all the best and fore- most men in one place, who, once the great deed was done, would straightway espouse the cause of liberty. It was thought, too, that the place of meeting was providentially in their favour; for it was one of the porticoes about the theatre, containing a session- room in which stood a statue of Pompey. This statue the city had erected in his honour when he adorned that place with the porticoes and the theatre.!} Hither, then, the senate was summoned about the middle of March? (the Romans call the day the Ides of March), so that some heavenly power seemed to be conducting Caesar to Pompey’s vengeance.

When the day came, Brutus girt on a dagger, to the knowledge of his wife alone, and went forth, while the rest assembled at the house of Cassius and conducted his son, who was about to assume what was called the “ toga virilis,” down to the forum. Thence

1 Cf. Pompey, xl. 5. * March 15, 44 B.o.

4 9 \ of,
mavtes ets THY Lopirniov oroav éuBarovtes b1ée > , 4 J / \
TpliBov, ws autixa Kaicapos adiEopévouv mpos
4 a a
Thy avyxAntov. évOa 6 padtota TOV avdpav
\ 9» Ae \ \ \ PS \ a] A 29 ,
To aTralés Kal Tapa ta Seva KabeotynKkds eOav-
” IQN \ “4 4 A N \
pacey av Tis ELd@sS TO MEAAODY, OTL TOAAOLS OLA TO Lal b , otTpatnyel avayxalouevor ypnuativew ov povov
/ ? “ fa)
TPAWS NKPOWVTO TOY evyTUyXavovTwv Kat d:adeEpo-
,
pévwv WoTrep TXOAaLOVTES, GANA Kal Tas KpioeEs
exdoTols axpiBeis Kal peta yvopns édidocar, ETLUEAWS TPOTexoVTES. émreL SE TLS pm BovAO-pevos Oixnv viocyxeiv émexadeito Kaicapa Kat
\ 9 a \ / 3 , e
modus nV Bowy Kal wapTupopevos, aTroBAéYras oO a BJ a > Bpodros eis tovs mapovtas, “’EKué Kaicap,’ elirev, ““oUTE KWAVEL TTOLELY TA KATA TOUS VOLOUS oUTe KMAVCEL.”
XV. Kaitot moda OopvBodn Kata rvynv avtois mpocétece: TPOToOv péev Kal parALoTA TO
, a Bpadvvery tov Katcapa tis juépas mponxovons
Kal Svotepovvra KatéxeaOas péev VITO THS yuvatKos oixot, kwrvecOar Sé mpoedOety WTO THY pavTEwV.
Sevtepov 5€ Kaoxa tev ouvedotwv évi mpoced-Owv tis Kal AaBomevos THs SeEtas, “Xv peév,” 2 62 / \ SMA ° ,
elev, “‘amrexpuirw To atroppyTov, wo Kaoxa,

mpos nuas, Bpodtos b€ pot wavta pepnvuxerv.”
éxtrayevtos 6€ tov Kdoxa yeraoas éxeivos, v6 , ”» »¥ ce / ” 2 , llodev,” én, “‘tayéws ovTws, ® paxkaple, Te-
4 @ 9 3 > 4 b) 4 ”
TrovTnKAaS WaT Els ayopavopiav atrodvecIat;
lo) e mapa TocovToy pev o Kdoxas Abe odarels
9 4 , \ b , 9) 2N \
apgpiBorta mpoécGar tO atoppntov' avtov de 156

they all hastened to the portico of Pompey and waited there, expecting that Caesar would straight- way come to the meeting of the senate. There any one who knew what was about to happen would have been above all things astonished at the indiffer- ence and composure of the:men on the brink of this terrible crisis. Many of them were praetors and therefore obliged to perform the duties of their office, wherein they not only listened calmly to those who had petitions to offer or quarrels to com- pose, as if they had ample time, but also took pains to give their verdicts in every case with accu- racy and judgment. And when a certain man who was unwilling to submit to the verdict of Brutus appealed to Caesar with loud cries and attestations, Brutus turned his gaze upon the bystanders and said: ‘Caesar does not prevent me from acting according to the laws, nor will he prevent me.” XV. And yet many things occurred to surprise and disturb them. First and foremost, though the day was advancing, Caesar delayed his coming, being detained at home by his wife because his omens were unpropitious,! and prevented from going forth by the soothsayers. In the second place, some one came up to Casca, one of the conspirators, took him by the hand, and said: “You hid the secret from us, Casca, but Brutus has told me everything.’”” And when Casca was dumb with amazement, the man burst out laughing and said: “ How did you get so rich on a sudden, my good fellow, as to stand for the aedileship ?’’ So near did Casca come, in the mistake caused by the man’s ambiguity, to disclosing the

1 Cf. Cuesar, \xiii. 5.

157

Bpobrov kat Kdoovov avnp BovreuvTiKos Hlominuos Aaivas ATT ATALEVOS mpoOvporepov Kat piOupi-cas npeua, Luvevxouar,” pnaiv, ‘ ‘piv éxredeiv
a Kata voov eyeTe Kat TapaKehevouat pn Bpadv-pew" ov yap ClwWTAaTAL TO Tpary ya. "Kal Ta0r ELT @V am@éoTn TovkAny UToviay éuBarwv tod memva Gat Thy mwpaktv.
"Ey tovtT@ 6é TUS oixodev &Oet mpos Tov ee dryyeXMov avT@ THY yuvaika OvnoKery. 7) yap Tlopxta T™ pos TO pédDov exradns ovoa Kal TO peyeBos Ma pepouca, THis ppovrisos EAUTHVY TE ports oixor Kareixe, Kal mpos mdvta OopvBov Kat Bony, OoTEp ai KaTaaxXeTor Tots Baxxcois mddecw, eEdrtovea TOV bev elo Lov Tw an aryopas ExaoTov avex pivev 6 Tt mpaTroL Bpodiros, éTépous 6€ cuvex as eferrepumre. TEAS dé Tob xpo-vOU pTjKos AapBdvovtos ouxér avreixev TOU

TWMATOS Suvames, GaNn' eEedvOn | Kal KaTepapai-veTO THS ux7s advovens bia THY aTropiav' Kal maperOety pev els TO Sw@pdtiov ouK EpOn, TEpL-ictato 8 avrnp, domep eTUy Xaver, év péow «abe-Comerny AiroOupia Kat OapBos apryavoy, i Te
"pou peta Borny edd puBave Kal tHv povny éme-oXNTO Tavranacw. at dé Geparrawas ™ pos THY Ory dvwororvear, Kal TOV YELTOV@Y cuVdpapov-TOV emt Oupas Tax T pone pnun Kar 61e600n
orvyos @s TeOvnkvias auras. ov pay aX exeluny pep avarhdppacav ev Bpayet Kat wap éavt7
yevouevny at yuvaixes éGepamrevov" o 6€ Bpodtos vmo TOU Aoyou TpooTETOvTOS avT@ cuverapax On HEV, wS elKos, ov pny ye kaTeédutre TO KOLVOY OVS Eppun pos TO oiKEtoy Udo TOU TaBous.
158

991

BRUTUS

secret. Moreover, Brutus and Cassius were greeted more warmly than usual by Popilius Laenas, a senator, who then whispered quietly to them: " I join you in praying for the accomplishment of what you have in mind, and exhort you not to delay, for the matter is on men's tongues." Having said this, he went away, leaving them full of suspicion that their undertaking had become known.

At this juncture, too, a messenger from his house came running to Brutus with the tidings that his wife was dead. For Porcia, being distressed about what was impending and unable to bear the weight of her anxiety, could with difficulty keep herself at home, and at every noise or cry, like women in the Bacchic frenzy, she would rush forth and ask every messenger who came in from the forum how Brutus was faring, and kept sending out others continually. Finally, as the time grew long, her bodily powers could no longer endure the strain, but were relaxed and enfeebled as her perplexities threatened to drive her mad. She had not time to go to her chamber, -but just as she was, sitting in the midst of her servants, she was overwhelmed with faintness and helpless stupor, her colour fled, and her speech was utterly stayed. Her maids shrieked at the sight, and since the neighbours came running in a crowd to the door, a report speedily went forth and a story was spread abroad that she was dead. However, she revived in a short time, came to herself, and was eared for by her women; but Brutus, though he was confounded,' naturally, by the startling tale, nevertheless did not abandon his public duty, nor was he driven by his affliction to dwell on his private concerns.

159

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XVI. "H6y b€ Kaicap amrny VENETO T™ poate
év popetep Kcoprlosevos. eyvares yap emt ois tepots abupev pydev émexupovv tote Tav perto-yov, aXr' uTepBarreo Bar ounapevos aoa Géverav.
exBavTt é auT@ TOU popetou m poa puels Tloridtos Aaivas, exeivos o puxp@ mpoo dev evEapevos Tots WeEpt Bpotrov € emiTuyy avew Kab xatopobr, Ouene-
YETO TELM Xe povov epiotapevep Kal Tpooeyovte
TOV voov. é owveporas (Aeyer Peo yap ovTws)
THS pev davis ouK émaiovres avToU, TEK MAL PO MeVOL
o ag' wy Umevoouv pavuo elvat THS emtBouhiis THY KoLWoNoylay, avéTecov TE Tals yvw@pats, Kal
7 pos addyrous éBrevay avboporoyoupevor d:a TOV TPOTHT WY WS xpH LN TEpLwevely TuAANYpw, GNX evd us amobviaKety &0 avtav. Kacciov & 760 KQL TLUWY a doov TAS yeElpas emt BeBdnKoTov tais AaBais bro Ta ipatia Kal oT LEVOV Ta eyxetpioua, Bpovros eyKaT oop T@ Tob Aaiva oXNpaTe deouévou omoudny Kal ouxi KaTnyopouvros, epOeyEato pev ovdey dia TO ToddoUS
adAot pious avapeuty Gar, gaidp@ dé TO Tpoorwnp TOUS rept Kacotov eJappuve. Kal peta px pov
0 Aaivas THY defvav Tou Katcapos KaTapirjoas amTéoTN, pavepos YEVOMEVOS WS Umep éavTov Kal Tov avT@ Tivos StahepovtTwy emoteito THY évtevEv.
XVII. Tis dé Bovis els THY eédpav 7 poeraen-Bovans ol pev adAor Tov Oippov Tod Kaicapos TeplerTna av as evTUYyXavely TL HEV TES AUTO.
Kal Kdoouov pev éeyeTat TpéTovTa TO 7 poo wm ov els THY eixova Tov Iloumniov tapaxarciv BoTeEP 160

BRUTUS

XVI. And now word was brought that Caesar was coming, borne on a litter. For in consequence of the dejection caused by his omens, he had determined not to sanction any important business at that time, but to postpone it, under pretext of indisposition. As he descended from his litter, Popilius Laenas, who, a little while before, had wished Brutus success in his enterprise, hurried up to him and conversed with him for some time, and Caesar stood and listened to him. The conspirators (for so they shall be called) could not hear what he said, but judging from their suspicions that what he told Caesar was a revelation of their plot, they were disconcerted in their plans, and mutually agreed by looks which passed between them that they must not await arrest, but at once dispatch themselves. Cassius and some others, indeed, had already grasped the handles of the daggers be- neath their robes and were about to draw them, when Brutus observed from the mien of Laenas that he was asking eagerly for something and not denouncing anyone. Brutus said nothing, because many were about him who were not in the plot, but by the cheerfulness of his countenance gave courage to Cassius and his friends. And after a little while Laenas kissed Caesar's hand and withdrew. He had made it clear that it was in his own behalf and on something which closely concerned himself that he had consulted Caesar.

XVII. When the senate had preceded Caesar into the session-room, the rest of the conspirators stationed themselves about Caesar's chair, as if they intended to have some conference with him, and Cassius is said to have turned his face towards the statue of Pompey and to have invoked it, as if it had understanding ;

aicOavopevov, TpeBovios dé mept tas Ouvpas
"Avroviov émicmacdapevos Kal mpocopirav ew katéoxe. Kaicaps 5é eiovovte pev) obyxAnTOS treEavéstyn, xabeCopevov & evOds éxeivor rept-éxyov aOpoa, Tidrov KiuBpov é& éavtay apo-Bddrovtes Urrép aderpod guyddos Seopevor
Kal cuvedéovto Tavres, aTTOMEvol TE YeLPwV Kal
4 \ '\ / ' /
OTEPVA Kai KEeharnY KaTepirouv. arroTptBopevou 5é tas Senoes TO wpartor, 610', ws ovK avierar, éEaviatapévov Bia, Tirdrsos pév audortépass ais yepoly ék TOV Ouwv KatéoTvace TO tpdrion, Kdoxas 6€ mpatos (eiatnxer yap dmicbev)
9 UA ' / 4 b) bd 4
dvaonmdcas To Eidos Suekavver, ovK eis BaBos, \ \ J b , \ A a Tapa Tov @pov. avTtnauBavopévou bé ths AaBAs
tov Kaicapos xai péya 'Popaioti advaxpayéovtos,
"*Avoote Kaoxa, ti trovets;" éxeivos "EXXnuoTI
' b] \ 4 > + a

Tov ddeXpov mpocayopevaas éxédevoe BonOeiv.
ay) de 4 e \ a \ 4
On O€ TALOMEVOS UTO TONNWY KAL KUKA® TreEpt-Brérwv «al SswcacPar Bovropmevos, ws Elbe Bpodrov éXxopevov Eidos én’ adrov, rHv YXeEipa tov Kdoxa xpatov adie, cal T@ iatio thy Keharny éycadupapevos tapédwxe TO cpa Tais

TAnyais. of & adedas avareTreypévot TrONXOLS

qept TO capa Ypwpevor Tots Eihectvy GAAHAOUS

éritpwoxov, wate xal Bpovroy ets thy yeipa TAnyny AaBeiv Tov povov cuvedamropevor, Tip-mwracOat 5é TOU aiatos arraytas.
XVIII. Oita 8 arroPavovros avtot Bpottos \ % lA \ bd 4 / \
bev eis pécoy mpocedkOwmv éBovreTo Réyerv Kat 162

992

BRUTUS

but Trebonius drew Antony into conversation at the door and kept him outside.! As Caesar entered, the senate rose in his honour, but as soon as he was seated the conspirators surrounded him in a body, putting forward Tullius Cimber of their number with a plea in behalf of his brother, who was in exile. The others al] joined in his plea, and clasping Caesar’s hands, kissed his breast and his head. At first, Caesar merely rejected their pleas, and then, when they would not desist, tried to free himself from them by force. At this, Tullius tore Caesar’s robe from his shoulders with both hands, and Casca, who stood behind him, drew his dagger and gave him the first stab, not a deep one, near the shoulder. Caesar caught the handle of the dagger and cried out loudly in Latin: “Im- pious Casca, what doest thou?’’ Then Casca, ad- dressing his brother in Greek, bade him come to his aid. And now Caesar had received many blows and was looking about and seeking to force his way through his assailants, when he saw Brutus setting upon him with drawn dagger. At this, he dropped the hand of Casca which he had seized, covered his head with his robe, and resigned himself to the dagger-strokes. The conspirators, crowding eagerly about the body, and plying their many daggers, wounded one another, so that Brutus also got a wound in the hand as he sought to take part in — the murder, and all were covered with blood. XVIII. Caesar thus slain, Brutus went out into the middle of the session-room and tried to speak, and

1 In Caesar, lxvi. 3, Brutus Albinus is incorrectly said to have detained Antony in conversation. Cf. Appian, B.C. ii. 117, and Cicero’s letter to Trebonius (Hist. x. 28).

163
M 2

Kareixe Jappiver THY ouyKAnTov’ % © ume déous Epevryev aTaKTwsS, Kal repl Tas Ovpas wOtapos
qv Kal tadpaxos, ovdevos Su@xovtTos ovde Kare-TeiryovTOs. toxupas yap ebé5ox70 pndéva KTelveLy
Erepov, adda TavTas emt Thy édevOepian | dvaKa-
AetcAar. Kal TOUS pev drdows Tao, omnvixa StecxotrovvTo thy mpake, Hpec kev "AvTa@viov emsoparrew Kaicapt, povapyLKoy avdpa Kat
UBprariy, t loxuv TE Tem oLn WEVOV optria Kab oun Geia mpos TO OTPATLOTLKOY, Kal padrod Sr TO pices coBap Kal peyadompaypove mpocerrnper TO THS Umatetas afiopa TOTE Kaicape cuvapxYov. ara Bpodros € éveoTn mpos 7o Bovdevpa, 7 pwTov bev to upilomevos TO Sixaio, SevTepov S Uro-Tels EXTrOA TIS petaBonrijs. ov yap ameyive-oKeV ebpua kal dtrorLpov dvdpa kal 8d0€&ns
épacrny tov ‘Avraviov, éxTrodov Kaicapos ryevo-Levon, cwveparves Far TH mar plot Tis erevdepias, emamaabevra T@ tik@ mpos TO KaNov bm’
avTav. oUTw pe "Avraviov Bpodros Teper oincev' ev 5€ Te TOTe POR petaBarov écOFjTa Snpotixny eduryev.
Oi dé meph Bpodrov els 70 Kametaduov exw
pour, nuaypevot Tas Xelpas, Kal Ta Ein yupve SecxvuvTes emt THY édevepiay mapexdouv TOUS modiTas. TO per ovv WpaToy hoay Grararypol, Kal Sradpopat 7 mabee Kara TUX NY erry vopevae
mAelova Tov BopuBov émoinoay: ws 8 obte dovos addros ol’ dprayn TLVOS éyiveto TOV KELUEVOY, Jappodvres avéBawwov ot TE Bovreural Kal TOV Snu“oT@v oAXol pos Tovs avdpas ets TO Kare-164

would have detained the senators there with en- couraging words; but they fled in terror and con- fusion, and there was a tumultuous crowding at the door, although no one pressed upon them in pursuit. For it had been firmly decided not to kill any one else, but to summon all to the enjoyment of liberty. All the rest of the conspirators, indeed, when they were discussing their enterprise, had been minded to kill Antony as well as Caesar, since he was a lawless man and in favour of a monarchy, and had acquired strength by familiar association with the soldiery; and particularly because to his natural arrogance and ambition he had added the dignity of the consulship, and was at that time a colleague of Caesar. But Brutus opposed the plan, insisting in the first place on a just course, and besides, holding out a hope of a change of heart in Antony. For he would not give up the belief that Antony, who was a man of good parts, ambitious, and a lover of fame, if once Caesar were out of the way, would assist his country in attaining her liberty, when their example had induced him to follow emulously the nobler course. Thus Antony's life was saved by Brutus; but in the fear which then reigned, he put on a plebeian dress and took to flight.

And now Brutus and his associates went up to the Capitol, their hands smeared with blood, and displaying their naked daggers they exhorted the citizens to assert their liberty. At first, then, there were cries of terror, and the tumult was increased by wild hurryings to and fro which succeeded the disaster ; but since there were no further murders and no plundering of property, the senators and many of the common people took heart and went up to wo

5

T@ALOV. GOpacbévtos. dé Tod wdnOous SuvedéxOn
Bpovros éraywya tov Syyou Kal mrpérovta Tois
TeTpayywevots. €mratvovvTwy Se Kal KaTiévat Bowvrwy Oappodrtes xaréBawvov eis ayopdy, ot pev addAor cuverromevoe pet' adAA@V, Bpodtov
dé qodAol tay emipavav mepiémortes ev pow jwavu NauTpPOS KaTiyov amd THs axpas Kat
Katéotnaay emi trav éuBorwv. mpos Se TH
Oe of TOdKOL, Kaltrep piyddes dvTes Kal Tape-oxevacjévoe OopuBelv, Sérpecav nai 7d pérXXOv éSéyovtTo Koop@ Kal oLwTy. mpoedOovTos 8
avtov TavtTes naovxiay TE Ady Tapécyxov: srt
5 ov maa mpds jSovnv éyeyover 16 epyov, ébnr\wgav apkapévov réyew Kivva nal xatnyopeiv Kaicapos avappnyvipevo. pos opyiy Kal Kaxds tov Kivvay déyovtes, Gore madw tovs advdpas eis TO Kazretodov amedbeciv. Oa 8 Sedi0s modopxiay 6 Bpodtos améreume Tovs apictous Tov suvvavaBavtwy, od akiav THs aitias py HETEXOVTAS AUTOVs GUVUTTOSvEDOat Tov KivduVoV.
XIX. Ov pnv adre 7H Lotepaia ths Bours auveiOovons eis to THs Tis fepov, "Avtwviou dé kal [INdyxou nai Kixépwvos efrrovtwy rept auvnoTias Kal opuovoias, G0fe un povov adcav elvat Tols avopdo.v, adda Kal yvounv trép Tipav mpoletvar Tous Umdtous. Kal tadt' émupndicd-pevot OveAVOnaav. “Avtwviov S€ Tov vidv eis TO Kamerwdtov opnpevoovta méuavtos KxatHdOov ot wept Bpotrov, domacpot te nat Sekiwoets 166

the men on the Capitol. When the multitude was assembled there, Brutus made a speech calculated to win the people and befitting the occasion. The audience applauding his words and crying out to him to come down from the Capitol, the conspirators took heart and went down into the forum. The rest of them followed along in one another's company, but Brutus was surrounded by many eminent citizens, escorted with great honour down from the citadel, and placed on the rostra, At sight of him the multitude, although it was a mixed rabble and prepared to raise a disturbance, was struck with awe, and awaited the issue in decorous silence. Also when he came forward to speak, all paid quiet attention to his words; but that all were not pleased with what had been done was made manifest when Cinna began to speak and to denounce Caesar. The multitude broke into a rage and reviled Cinna so bitterly that the conspirators withdrew again to the Capitol. There Brutus, who feared that they would be besieged, sent away the most eminent of those who had come up with them, not deeming it right that they should incur the danger too, since they had no share in the uilt.

° XIX. However, on the following day the senate met in the temple of Tellus, and Antony, Plancus, and Cicero spoke in favour of amnesty and concord. It was then voted not only that the conspirators should have immunity, but also that the consuls should lay before the people a measure to pay them honours. After passing these votes, the senate broke up. Then, when Antony had sent his son to the Capitol as a hostage, Brutus and his associates came down, and there were salutations and greetings for 167

-

éyévovto TwavTwyv avamxGévtwv. nal Kdoouov pev ’Avtovios eiotia traparaBov, Bpodrov &é Aémibos, Tovs & dAXovs, Ss Tes elye pos ExacTov
h auvnbcias 4 dirofppocivns. dua § jyépa manu cuvedOovtes of Bovrevral mpatov ev
"Avrovip tiypas Eocay ws KaTaTravoavtt TONE-pov éupvrAioy apynv: éreta tov wept Bpodrov
Hoav &rraivot TOY TrapovTwy, Kal Tédos éTapyYLOV Stavouat. Bpovre pév yap éyndicavto Kpyrny, Kaacio 5é AiBunv, TpeBovio 8 ’Aciav Kai
KinBpe Biduviav, Te 8 évrépp Bpovr@ tv rept
tov. Hptéavov Tanariav.
XX. Mera dé tadta mept trav Kaicapos b1a-Onxav cat tadjs avdrod AOyov éuTecovTwr, Kal
Tov mept tov ‘Avt@vov akiovytwv tas te Sa-Pjxas avayvwcOnvar Kal tod cwpatos éxpopav
yevérOar 7 Kexpuunpevny pnd aTimov, a pn Kal TovTo Tapokuvy Tov Sjpov, Kaootos péev ioyupas avténeyev, elfe 5 Bpotros nal cuveya@pnoe, dev-Tepov apaptety TovTo Sokas. Kal yap ‘Avrawviou decodpevos aitiay éoxyey éemiterxyloar TH svvwpocia Bapvuv Kal dvopaxov TONEMLOV, KAL TA TeEpt Thv tapyy by o ‘Avtwvios nkiov tpdmov éadoas yevérOat TOU TavTos ohadhvat. MpOTov pev yap év tais dsabnKais Sedouévev Kat’ dvdpa ‘Pwopaios
mwact Spaxpav éBdounxovra révte nal TO Snup TOV Tépay TOD TrOTAaLOD KHTaY ATrOAEAELLpLEVOD, ov vov éote Tuyns iepov, evtvora Oavpaoty Kat wo0os avTod tovs moAditas elrXev’ Eretta Tov cawparos eis THY ayopay KoyicbévtTos "AvTa@vios ératvov, womep 005 éoti, SieEeXOwv, Kal ta
TAHOn Kwovpeva Tpos TOV AOryov Opar, els olxToV 168
993

all without discrimination. Cassius was taken home and entertained by Antony, Brutus by Lepidus, and the rest by their several comrades or friends. Early next morning the senate assembled again. In the first place, they gave a vote of thanks to Antony for having stopped an incipient civil war; next, they passed a vote of commendation for the followers of Brutus who were present ; and finally, they distributed the provinces. It was voted that Brutus should have Crete, Cassius Africa, Trebonius Asia, Cimber Bi- thynia, and the other Brutus Cisalpine Gaul.

XX. After this, the subjects of Caesar’s will and of his burial came up for discussion. Antony de- manded that the will should be read publicly, and that the body should be carried forth to burial, not secretly, nor without honours, lest this also should exasperate the people. Cassius, indeed, vehemently opposed these measures, but Brutus yielded and agreed to them, thus making a second mistake, as it was thought. For by sparing Antony’s life as he had done he incurred the charge of raising up against the conspirators a bitter and formidable foe; and now, in allowing Caesar's funeral rites to be con- ducted as Antony demanded, he committed a fatal error. For, in the first place, when it was found that the will of Caesar gave to every single Roman seventy-five drachmas, and left to the people his gardens beyond the Tiber, where now stands a temple of Fortune, an astonishing kindliness and yearning for Caesar seized the citizens; and in the second place, after Caesar’s body had been brought to the forum, Antony pronounced the customary eulogy, and when he saw that the multitude were moved by his words, changed his tone to one of com-

a ‘
peréBare, Kai tHv écOjTa AaBav THY Kaicapos nuaywevnvy avemrutev, émiderxvipevos tas d1a-Komas Kal T@VY TpavpaTwY TO TAHOOS. Hv ovv
b] n QA ” ‘ / > b e N isetv oddev Ere Kooum ytvopevov' GAN ot pév
5 U \ b , 9 “A e 9 C4
éBowv tovs avdpodpovous avaipely, oi &, watrep
/ A A A
ért Krwdiov tod Snpaywyod mpotepov, amo TAV épyaoctnpiav ta Babpa nal ras tpatélas ava-TTaVTES Kal GUyKOpivovTeEs Eis TAUTO Trappeyedn
Tupav évncayv: Kal Tov vexpoy émiOévtes ev péow TOAA@Y pev lepav, TOAK@Y & aavrAwy Kal aBe-/ 4 , e \ N “A 9g sf Bnrov torwv Kabnylov. ws dé To TUp éFéXap-
rev, AANaKOOEV Aros Tpochepopevor Kal Sarovs
> A e UL v4 > \ > ?-
avactra@vrTes nuipréxtous b1é0eov ert tas oixtas
A e TOV AVNPHNKOTWV AUTOV WS éuTpHaOVTES.
? > » a \ 2 4 ,
AAXN exeivor pev ev Trehpaypyevot mpoTeEpov atexpovoavtTo Tov Kivdvvoyv. nv Sé€ tus Kivvas,

TOLNTLKOS aYHP, OvdEY THS aitias peTéXoV, GANG
kat hiros Kaicapos yeyoves. otros dvap @erto Karovpevos vTo Kaicapos éi Seimvoy apvetabat,
Tov 6€ Atrapety Kai BidlecOar, téros 8 ayew AaRopevov THs Yetpos els aYavy Torov Kal cKoTetvov, avtov 8 dxovta kal reBayPnuévov Erecbat.
TavTny LoovTe THY dp a'T@ ouvéBy Tupéerren
dua vuxtos: Suws 8 Ewlev éxxopusttopévov tod
cw@patos aidovpevos p47 wapeivar mponrOev eis
Tov dyAov On Stayprawopevov. opOeis Se Kal
| }
S0Eas ovxy Somrep jv Kivvas eivat, adr' éxeivos 6
Kaicapa mpos tiv éxxdrnaotav évayyos AowWopyaas, dseomraa On,
170

BRUTUS

passion, and taking the robe of Caesar, all bloody as it was, unfolded it to view, pointing out the many places in which it had been pierced and Caesar wounded. All further orderly procedure was at an end, of course; some cried out to kill the murderers, and others, as formerly in the case of Clodius the demagogue,! dragged from the shops the benches and tables, piled them upon one another, and thus erected a huge pyre; on this they placed Caesar's body, and in the midst of many sanctuaries, asylums, and holy places, burned it. Moreover, when the fire blazed up, people rushed up from all sides, snatched up half-burnt brands, and ran round to the houses of Caesar's slayers to set them on fire.

These men, indeed, having previously barricaded themselves well, repelled the danger ; but there was a certain Cinna, a poet, who had no share in the crime, but was actually a friend of Caesar's. This man dreamed that he was invited to supper by Caesar and declined to go, but that Caesar besought and constrained him, and finally took him by the hand and led him into a yawning and darksome place, whither he followed unwilling and _ bewildered. After having this vision, he fell into a fever which lasted all night; but in the morning, nevertheless, when the funeral rites were held over Caesar's body, he was ashamed not to be present, and went out into the crowd when it was already becoming savage. He was seen, however, and being thought to be, not the Cinna that he really was, but the one who had re- cently reviled Caesar before the assembled people, he was torn in pieces.

1 Clodius was killed in a street-brawl with Milo, 52 B.c.
Cf. Cicero, xxv. 1.
171

fr

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXI. Todrto +o waOos padtota peta ye THY 9 , A a e AY a Avtwviou petaBorny Seicavtes of mept Bpotrov dveyopnoav é€x THS ToAews’ Kal SiérptBov ev
"Avtim TO MpaTov ws, Stay Tapaxudon Kat
papavOy To THs opyns, adOes eis ‘Paynyv xati-
, e ’ ” Ul 3 /
ovtes. § padiws EcecOar mpocedoxwy év wANnOECL
dhopas actabuntous kal taxeias hepopevors, Kal THY avyKAnTOY evvouv eyovTes, 7) Tovs Kivvay Stactracapévous yaipe édacaca Tovs éml Tas > » ‘ bY 4 bd 4
olxias Tas éxelvov éredOovtas avetnre Kal
4 a \ \ e A > 4

2 suverauBavev. 70n Sé nal o Shyos ayOopevos,
"Avtwviou oyedov eis povapyiay Kaltotapévon,
Bpodrov érodew Kal mpocedoxato tas Oéas akew Tapwv avtos, as where oTpaTnyav Tapacyeiv.
9 , N \ “A e \ li aig@opevos Sé mTodXdOvs TAY Ure Kaicapos
éotpateupevov Kal yhv cal modes Tap éxeivou NaBovrwy émiBovrAevovtas avT@ nal Kat’ odLyous
Tapetopeovras éis THY ToAW ovK eOdppnaev ér-Geiv, GAN’ o Siuos €Ocato pu Trapovtos éxeivou
Tas Géas, ahedas mdvu yopnyoupévas Kal crepit-ToS. Onpia te yap wdprroAdXa ouvEewvnpmévos éxéXevoe ndev arrodocbat und vroduteiv, AAXNa mao kataypioacba., Kal tay Tepl Tov Arovucov TexviTav autos eis Néav rrodw xataBas évéruvye mretatos: tmept b€ Kavovtiou tivos evnuepotytos
év tois Oedtpois &ypade mpos Tovs didous drrws meloavtTes avTov eicaydywou “EAXnvev yap ovdéeva BracOjvar mpoonxev. éypade 5é cal Kixépou, tavtws mapatuyxety tais Oéass Sedpevos.
172

994

BRUTUS

XXI. This incident more than anything else, ex- cept, perhaps, Antony’s change of heart, frightened Brutus and his adherents, and they withdrew from the city. At first they spent some time in Antium, with the idea of returning to Rome when the people’s wrath had passed its climax and subsided. This they thought would readily come to pass, since multitudes are fickle and impetuous, and, besides, they had the senate in their favour, which let those who tore Cinna to pieces go unpunished, and yet tried to seek out and arrest those who had assaulted the houses of the conspirators. Already, too, the people were disturbed because Antony was assuming almost absolute power, and they longed for Brutus; it was also expected that he would be present in person and conduct the spectacles which it was his duty as praetor to furnish. But Brutus learned that many of the veteran soldiers of Caesar who had received land and cities from their commander, were now plotting against his life and in small bands streaming into the city. He therefore had not the courage to come. The people, however, had their spectacles, in spite of his absence, and these were very lavishly and magnificently appointed. For Brutus had purchased a great number of wild beasts, and now gave orders that not one should be sold or left behind, but that all should be used ; and he himself went down to Naples and conferred with a very large number of actors; and regarding Ca- nutius, an actor who enjoyed great fame, he wrote to his friends that they should persuade him to go to Rome; for no Greek could properly be compelled to go. He wrote also to Cicero, begging him by all means to attend the spectacles.

XXII. 'Ev toravtn 5¢ xataotdce: tov Tpayudtov évtwv érépa yiverar petaBorr Tov véov Kaicapos éredOovros. obtos Hv peév é& aberdidas Kaicapos, ypdppate 5€ mais vm avrov xai xANpovopos amroAedetppéevos. ev & 'AzroAdwvia SuétpiBev Ste Kaicap dvnpébn, oxordlwv epi NOyous KaKelvov ért TlapOovs édavvew evOvs éyyaxoTa mpoopéevov. aya b€ TO TvOécOas 7d mados HAO eis 'Pounv: nal Snuaywyias dpyny
tovvoua Kaicapos Oéuevos éavt@ Kal diavéuov
TO KaTarehbev apyvptov Tots TodtTats AvT@voy
Te xatectaciale cal xpnpata dradidovs cuviorn Kal cuviyye TroAAovs THY LTO Kaicapos éorpatevpévov. éret 66 Kixépwy te mpdos 'Avtwroyv pioes TA Kaioapos érpatte, rovT@ pev o Bpodtos errém ANT TEV loxupars, ypadwv ws ov Seororny Bapivorto Kixépwv, adda pucovvta Seorortny oPotro, cal troduTevorTo Sovreias aiperww dirav-Opwrov ypadwv Kal Aéyov wS YXpNoTOS éeoTL Kaicap. "Oi 8é mpoyovol," dyatv, "ipav ovde mpaous Seomotas Uméuevov." avT@ & els TovTO Katpod pte trodeuety BeBaiws SedoxPar pte
novydtev, adr &y povov elvar BeBovrcvpévor,
To pn Sovrevew Oavydtew dé Kexépwvos, ei mwoNeov pev éudurtov kai Kwdvvedy Sédorxer, aiaypav 5é nal adokov elpyvnv ov poBeitat, tod

8 “Avrovov éxBareiy HS Tupavvidos psobov aitet ro Kaicapa xatacthoat tTUpavvon.
XXIII. Ev pév ody tais mpwrais éructonais TotovTos o Bpovros: 76 dé Tay pev ws Kaicapa, tav & ws Avt@vioy stictapéevar, @viwv & TaV \ dorpareupévwy as in xxi. 2: orparevouévwr.

XXII. Matters were at such a pass when a fresh turn was given to them by the arrival of the young Caesar. He was a son of Caesar’s niece, but had been formally adopted by him, and left his heir. He was pursuing his studies at Apollonia when Caesar was killed, and had been awaiting him there after his determination to march at once against the Par- thians. As soon as he learned of Caesar’s fate, he came to Rome, and as a first step towards winning the favour of the people, assumed the name of Caesar and distributed to the citizens the money which had been left them by his will. Thus he deposed Antony from popular favour, and by a lavish use of money assembled and got together many of Caesar's veteran soldiers. When Cicero was led by his hatred of An- tony to take the side of Octavius Caesar, Brutus rebuked him severely, writing that Cicero did not object to a despot as such, but only feared a despot who hated him, and that when he declared in his letters and speeches that Octavius was a worthy man, his policy meant the choice of a kindly slavery. «Our ancestors, however,’ said he, “ could not endure even gentle despots.” As for himself, he had not as yet definitely decided, he said, either for war or for peace, but on one thing only was he determined, and that was not to be a slave; and he was amazed, he said, that Cicero dreaded a civil war with all its perils, but was not afraid of a shameful and inglorious peace, and that, as a reward for driving Antony from the tyranny, he asked the privilege of making Octavius tyrant.

XXIII. Thus, then, did Brutus express himself in his first letters to Cicero. But already one faction was forming about Octavius, and another about

oTpatoTédwv w@oTrep UTO KnpUKL TpoaTOELEevwY
TO HEOv didovre, Tavtdmact KaTayvous TOY
TpayLaTov eyo cataditrety ‘Itadiav, nal weoq dca Aevkavias éls "EXéav emt Oahaccay wen.
2 60ev 4 Ilopxia pédrovea maALy eis “Pa&unv arotpaTéa Oat Nav dverv pev émretpGTo mepiTrabars éxouca, ypagn 5é THs aurny mpovdaxe TaN
y ovaav. ny yap éx TOV “EdAnuicav cixgegitee. ; T POTTELTOMEVOS "Extwp vTr0 ‘Avdpopua-xs Kouslomerns Tap avtov To masoiov, € éxeiv@ Oé
3 mpooBrerovens. Taira Gewpevny THV Topxiav

» Tov wdaOous eixoY eerngev els daxpva: Kal
TONAGKLS portaca TNS TpEpas éxdaev. "AxtAtov
5€ Twos TOV Bpotrov ditwyv Ta mpos “Exropa rns Avdpopaxyns érn dveXOovtos, “Extop, aTap ov po éool matip Kal moTMa paitnp

noe Kaciyyyntos, av 5é wor Oarepos epee
4 perdsdcas 0 Bpodtos, “’AXX’ ovw enol y’,” ele, ‘se \ , ” s a A Ay
mpos Ilopxiav érerot havar ta Tov “Extopos, istov AaKkaTny Te Kal duditrodoel KéXEVE'

TwWUATOS yap dmoneimerat puoe Tav towy av6pa-yaOnparov, youn & umeép THs maTpioos, ao Tep jpels, apiorevel. TavTa pév o THS Llopkias vids iotopnxe BuBXos.
XXIV. ’AvayOeis 8 o Bpoitos éxeiBev er AOnvov EAE. beFapevou d€ Tov SHpov mpodvpws aurov evpnpiacs Kat nic pace Sintaro bev
mapa fév@ tiv, Seopyjarov 8 GK pod Wevos Tov Axaébnptaxod nai Kparinmov rod Mepirarntixod

Antony, and the soldiers, as though for sale at auction, flocked to the highest bidder. Altogether despairing, therefore, of the state, Brutus determined to abandon Italy, and came by land through Lucania to Elea by the sea. As Porcia was about to return thence to Rome, she tried to conceal her distress, but a certain painting betrayed her, in spite of her noble spirit hitherto. Its subject was Greek, — Andromache bidding farewell to Hector; she was taking from his arms their little son, while her eyes were fixed upon her husband. When Porcia saw this, the image of her own sorrow presented by it caused her to burst into tears, and she would visit it many times a day and weep before it. And when Acilius, one of the friends of Brutus, recited the verses containing Andromache’s words to Hector,

«“ But, Hector, thou to me art father and honoured mother
And brother; my tender husband, too, art thou,” Brutus smiled and said: “ But I, certainly, have no mind to address Porcia in the words of Hector, ‘Ply loom and distaff and give orders to thy maids,’ !

for though her body is not strong enough to perform such heroic tasks as men do, still, in spirit she is valiant in defence of her country, just as we are.” This story is told by Porcia’s son, Bibulus.?

XXIV. From thence Brutus put to sea and sailed for Athens. Here the people welcomed him eagerly and extolled him in public decrees. He dwelt with a certain guest-friend, attended the lectures of Theomnestus the Academic and Cratippus the Peripatetic,

1 Iliad, vi. 429 f.; 491. 2 Cf. chapter xiii. 2.
177
Mo

VOL. VI. N

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

kal cupdirocodav édoxer mayvtdtaciw apyeiv Kal
ayordtev. émpatte S€ Ta Wpos Tov WorEwov 995
avuToTT@s. Kal yap ets Makedoviay émepuev
'Hpootparoy otxerovpevos tovs émi tav éxei atpatotréwy, Kal Tovs cyoAdlovras amo 'Pons éy dares véovs avedduBave Kal cuveiyev. cov hv cat Kixépwvos vids, dv éraivet Stadepovtas, Kai gyno, eit éypyyopev eit' évuTmdletat, Oavpa-Ceev ob Tw yevvaiov dvta Kal prcoTupavvov.
"ApEdpevos 5€ THY Tpayudtwv avadhavddv
anrecbat, cal tru@opevos wAota 'Pwopaixd peora xpnuatwv €& "Acias mpocpépecOar xal otparnyov émuimdeivy avdpa yapievta Kal yvopipor, aTnvrnoev auT@ wept Kapvorov: évtruxyeov oé cat
meicas Kal mapaxaBwy Ta rola AauTpoTéepay UTodoyny eroeiro. Kal yap hv nuépa Kal" Av éyeyoves mpa@tov o Bpodros. ws odv é€XOovtes eis
TO Tive ériyvoes errolodvTo vinns te Bpovrou kat '"Pwpaiwy édevOepias, ere padAdAov avtovs
pacar Bovrcpmevos ynTnoe twoTHpiov peifov' xal AaBav, am' ovdeusads mpopdcews dvepwvnce Tov oTiYoy TOUTOV'
ard pe potp' 6Aon Kal Anrods Extavev vids.

¥ \ \ XN 4 @ " eo \

ére 5é Kal mpos TovTos iotopova.v, Ste Thy / bd , 4 %% 1 ,
Tereuvtaliay év Dirimmos paxovuevos Ene pdxnv, auvOnua map avtod Tois oTpati@tais

? A

"AmoAAwva So0jvar. 610 Kal THs cupdopas

TiOevrat onpetov exeivny TV avadwrvnotv.

discussed philosophy with them, and was thought to be wholly given up to literary pursuits. But without any one's suspecting it, he was getting ready for war. For he sent Herostratus into Macedonia, desiring to win over the commanders of the armies there, and he united in his service all the young Romans who were studying at Athens. One of these was Cicero's son, on whom he bestows high praise, declaring that whether awake or asleep and dreaming, he was amazed to find him of such a noble spirit and such a hater of tyranny.

Afterwards he began to act openly, and having learned that Roman transports full of treasure were approaching from Asia, and that an accomplished and well-known man was in command of them, he went to meet him at Carystus. After conferring with him and persuading him to hand over the transports, he prepared an entertainment of unusual splendour; for it was Brutus's birthday. Accordingly, when they were come to their wine, and were pledging " Victory to Brutus," and " Liberty to the Romans,' wishing to animate them still more, Brutus called for a larger beaker, and then, when he had received it, without any ostensible reason, recited this verse :—

" But I am slain by baleful Fate and Leto's son." !

And still further, in addition to this, historians tell us that when he was going out to figlt his last battle at Philippi, the watchword which he gave out to his soldiers was "Apollo."'1 Therefore they conclude that when he recited that verse, it also was a presage © of his calamity.

1 Patroclus to Hector, Iltad, xvi. 849. Leto's son was Apollo, and the name was thought to mean Destroyer.

9 v4 / N b A ?
XXV.) Ex ToUTOU MevTHKOVTA pev AUTH pupLd-Sas 'Avtiatios db wv Hye Kab autos eis 'Itadiav
A 4 Cd . , w
xpnuatwv Sidworv, door Sé wept OecoaNriay ért THs loumntov orparias éAXAav@vrTo auvéppeov dopevws mpos autov: immeis 5€ mevtaxocious ddeiheto Kivva mpos AoroBéAXav ayovtos eis 9 / ? U4 a f A
Aciayv. émimdevoas te TH Anunrptdas:, ToAX@Y
Cd > 4 \ 9 , a ,
OTAw@Y eEayopevwy mpos Avtwyioyv, & Katcapos
A S , > N \ '\
Tov mpotépov Kedevoavtos émi tov TlapOixov
? 4 U > 4 € J, \ A érroinOn modepov, éexpatnoev. "'Optnaiov &é tov
aoTpaTnyou mapadovtos av't@ Makedoviay, nai Tov év KuKA@m Bacirtéwy nai Suvact@v auvota-
4 4 > 4 Ia e
péevov nal mpootiOepéevarv, ayyéAXetat Vaios, o
"Avrwviov aderdos, €& "Itadias dsaBeBnxas Ba-Sifeww evOuvs éml tas Suvdpes as év 'Emiddpve cal 'AmroAXwvia Batinos cuvetye. RBovrAopevos otv POdcat nai wporaBeiv o Bpodtos éEaidyns dvacTnaas TOUs cuv avT@ Sa Ywpiov yareTaov
vipopevos émopeveto' Kal modu mponAGe Tovs Kouivovtas To aptotov. éyyvs ovv 'Emdduvov
, \ ' a) ,
yevopevos S1a Komrov Kal wWiyos éBovrApiace.
cupmnimres Sé partota To Wabos yLovos ovans movovot Kai KTYvEect Kal avOpwrots, elite Tod Geppod Sia rrepiipvkiy cai wvxvwoty, Stav évTos bod A ' ' , ' J
dmav xaberpyOn, THY Tpopiy aApows avadriaKovtos, elte Spipeta nal Aewt) Tis ytovos dtadvopévns lovaa wvo1 Tépver TO cpa Kat dScapOeipe 70 Oeppov é& avtod Oupale Staore:popevov. tas yap épidpwaes mapéxew Soxet to Oepyov dmav-180

BRUTUS

XXV. After this, Antistius! gave him five hundred thousand drachmas from the moneys which he was personally taking to Italy, and all Pompey's soldiers who were still wandering about Thessaly gladly flocked to his standard. He also took from Cinna five hundred horsemen that he was conducting to Dolabella in Asia. Then sailing to Demetrias, whence great quantities of arms, which the elder Caesar had ° ordered to be made for his Parthian war, were being conducted to Antony, he took possession of them. After Hortensius the praetor had delivered up Ma- cedonia to him, and while all the surrounding kings and potentates were uniting on his side, word was brought that Caius, the brother of Antony, had crossed over from Italy and was marching directly to join the forces under Vatinius in Epidamnus and Apollonia. Wishing, therefore, to anticipate his ar- rival and capture these forces, Brutus suddenly set out with the forces under him and marched through regions difficult of passage, in snow storms, and far in advance of his provision-train. Accordingly, when he had nearly reached Epidamnus, fatigue and cold gave him the distemper called "boulimia." This attacks more especially men and beasts toiling through snow ;? whether it is that the vital heat, being wholly shut up within the body by the cold that surrounds and thickens it, consumes its nourishment complete] Y> or that a keen and subtle vapour arising from the melting snow pierces the body and destroys its heat as it issues forth. For the sweat of the body seems to be produced by its heat, and this is extinguished

'A mistake for Appuleius (Cicero, Philippics, x. ll; Appian, B.C. iii. 63), who was quaestor in Asia.

* As it did the "Ten Thousand " in Armenia (Xenophon, Anab. iv. 5, 7 f.).

TOVTL T@ Wuxpe@ mept TV emipaveray oa Bevvvpevov. vmrep wy év érépors paddov HTOpnTar.
XXVI. AtroOupobytos dé tod Bpovrouv xat pnodevos & EXOVTOS év T® aTpaToTEOe pander é00-Siuov, nvayKxda Onoayv ol Tept avrov emt Tous Trohe-pLous Katapuyeiy' Kal Tais TUNALS m™ poa eA Oovtes
dptov TOUY TOUS | pudakas. ot dé Sraxovaartes
TO CUmTTO "A TOU Bpovrou maphoav avrol Kal
outta Kal morta Kopitovtes. avl' wv o Bpodtos, @S THY TToAW TapédaBev, ov povoy TovTaSs, adda Kal waar dta Tovtovs dtr\avOpmoTas eXpITAaTO.
Ddios 8 "AvTovtos "AtroANwvia poo Bahov
€KEL TOUS eyyus évTas EKANEL oTpaTLMOTas. érret
S ovToi Te mMpos Bpodrov @yovtTo Kal Tovs
'Atrohhoadtas na Gero Ta Bpovrou ppovowvras, EXALTIOV THY TOALY ELS BovOpwror eBabyte. Kat
™ p@Tov pev am odvar Tpeis omeipas: Kal odor v0 Bpourou KatakoTeiaas' éreita TOUS TEpt THY

BvaArida TOTTOUS Tpoxatarnplertas emrexerpav exBralerOar Kal paxyny cuvdrpas Kinépwv vina-Tat. TOUT yap o Bpobros EX PHTO ilar MRK
Kat Torna 60 avrod Kcatap0woe. RAaBwv &é tov
Paiov év ywpiots éXwdect paxpav dieotrac pévov OUK Elacev éuBanreiv, ada r€ ulamevae, eideaOat KEAEVOY, WS META pLKPOV 18/ wy écopéevov, §
Kab ovveBn. mapédocav yap EavTous Kal Tov
TTPATHYOV, DATE peyarny HON mrepl TOV Bpodrov
Suvapmuy elvat. povov pev ouv Toy év TUMH tov I‘diov Hye Kal Ta Tapaonpa THS apxhs ovK adnpet, caitrep, OS Paci, dX\NwY TE TOANOV Kal 182

996

BRUTUS

by the cold which meets it at the surface. But I have discussed this matter more at length elsewhere.!

XXVI. Now, since Brutus was faint, and since not one of his soldiers had anything in the shape of food, his attendants were obliged to have recourse to their enemies, and going down to the gate of the city they asked the sentinels for bread. These, when they heard of the mishap of Brutus, came to him themselves, bringing food and drink. Wherefore Brutus, when the city had surrendered to him, treated not only these men humanely, but also all the other citizens for their sake.

When Caius Antonius drew near Apollonia, he summoned the soldiers who were in the vicinity. These, however, went to Brutus, and Caius perceived also that the people of Apollonia favoured the cause of Brutus. He therefore left the city behind and set out for Buthrotum. To begin with, he lost three _cohorts on the march, which were cut to pieces by Brutus; next, when he tried to force the positions near Byllis which his opponents had earlier occupied, and joined battle, he was defeated by Cicero. For Brutus employed this young man as general, and won many successes through him. When, however, he came upon Caius in marshy regions and with his forces widely scattered, Brutus would not permit his men to attack them, but rode about giving orders to spare them, in the belief that they would soon be his own. And this actually came to pass. For they surrendered themselves and their general, so that now Brutus had a large force about him. For a long time, then, he held Caius in honour, and would not deprive him of the insignia of his command, although, as we are

1 Cf., for example, Morals, pp. 691 f.
183
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kixépevos amo ‘Papns ypapovrey Kab Keevov-TwWY avatpeiy ap&dpevov dé xpida Tots ayepwooe braréyeo Oar Kal ToujoavTa vewtrepiapov évOépevos els vavy epvrarte. TOV b¢ er ml
OT pATLOT aD els "ATroAoviay arog TavTwy Kal KaNOvvT@V éxet TOV Bpodrov, ovK edn TOUTO maT pov elvat ‘Pwpaios, dA éxeivous Tpos Tov dpxovra Xphvas Badifovras avTous mapatteiaOar thy él Tots 7] papTnmevors opynv. edBovar de cad Seopévors cvyyvopnv ewxe.
XXVII. Méddovts 8 atte Sia Baiver eis THY
*Aciav Hcev. aryyedia mepl THs év ‘Payn peTa-Borys. 0 yap véos Kaicap nv&nOn pev UTro TIS Bovrns ér ’Avrwvov, éxBarov Sé THs “Itanias éxetvov avros 78m poBepos WY, bratetav TE pyo-pevos Tapa vopov, Kal TTPATEUMAT A Tpépov peydna, TIS Toews ovdev Seoperns. ope 6e Kal
taita thy BovAny Bapuvopevny Kat ™ pos TOV
Bpovroyv adopacav ew Kal udilopevny éxeive Kal BeBarotaay Tas érrapyxias, éderce. Kal Tov pev "AvT@vioy TEM OY ELS piriav mpovKaneiro, Tas 6é Suvd pets Th TONE TEPLaTHI AS brateiav éraBev, ovr mavu petpaxiov @V, AAN elxoo TOV dywv Tos, WS AUTOS eV TOIS Uropynuacww elpnxev.
evOus dé Sixas aaah Kata TOY rept TOV Bpobrov
ela tyryev, WS ay pa ™ p@tov év apxais tals peryt-TTALS GYNPNKOT@Y AKpLTOV’ Kal KaTIYopoY éTe-oTNTe Bpovtov pev Aevxtov Kopuegixcov, Kaogiou dé Mdpxov "Aypiravp. apricKkavov ou
tas Oixas epijpas dvaryKatopevav Pépety Wiipov Ttav dixcactav. Réyetar 5é Tov KnpuKos, @aoTrEp 184

BRUTUS

told, Cicero and many others besides wrote to him from Rome and urged him to put the man to death. However, when Caius began to hold secret commu- nications with the officers of Brutus, and incited a revolt, Brutus put him on board a ship and kept him under guard. And when the soldiers who had been corrupted by Caius withdrew to Apollonia and in- vited Brutus to come to them there, he told them this was not a Roman custom, but that they must come themselves to their commander and seek to avert his wrath at their transgressions. And when they came and asked his pardon, he granted it. XXVII. But as he was about to cross into Asia, tidings came to him of the change that had taken place at Rome. For Octavius Caesar had been strengthened by the senate against Antony, and after ejecting his rival from Italy, was himself now an object of fear, soliciting the consulship illegally, and maintaining large armies, of which the city had no need. But when he saw that even the senate was displeased at this and turned their eyes abroad to Brutus, confirming him in command of his pro- vinces by their vote, he became afraid. So he sent and invited Antony to become his friend, and then, stationing his forces about the city, secured the con- sulship, although he was still a mere youth, being in his twentieth year, as he himself has stated in his Commentaries. Straightway, then, he brought in- dictments for murder against Brutus and his associ- ates, accusing them of having slain the first magistrate of the city without a trial. He appointed Lucius Cornificius to be prosecutor of Brutus, and Marcus Agrippa of Cassius. Accordingly, their cases went by default, the jurors voting under compulsion. And

7 3 \ A vA \ A x NAN A elwOev, airo tov Bnpatos tov Bpodroy émt rnp
, A \ \ A p] J LA
Stxnv xarodvtos, TO pev WAHOOS er1d7jAWS TTEVA-
/ a
Eat, rovs 8 apiorous Kinpavtas eis ynv novxlay
4 A
ayetv, Tlomdsov 5é 2erixcov 6pOhvar Saxpvaoavta, Kai Sia THY altiavy tavTnY Orlyov Botepoy &va
TOV Tpoypahévtwy ent Oavatw yevécOar. era
A 4 e A A 9 ,
Tavta dtarrayévtes of Tpets, Kaicap, Avrwvos, Aémdos, Sieveiwavto tas émapyias odhayds te kat mpoypagas davdpav Ss:axociwy éroincay, év ols kai Kixépwv amébave.
XXVIII. Tovtwy obv eis Maxedoviay azray-yerOevrwv éxBiac Beis 0 Bpodros &ypaypev 'Optn-a mS b aim Krewar Vaiov Avtrwvorv, ws 6) Bpovty te \ 4 A A \ bg J A \
wat Kixépwve timwpav, TO pév dvtTe hiro, Ta 5é Kal Kata yévos mpoonkovTt. d1a tadO" botepov
e A
"Avtavios "Optnctov év Pirdimmos AaRov TO n le) , A pvnpatt tov adeXpod mpocécdhake. Bpodros dé Ths Kixépwvos terevths TH aitia dynow aicyv-
A A A 4 A > "a verOat padrov 7) TO wader cuvaryetv, éyxaretv N la) > \e¢ , / 4 \ e "A dé trois emi "Popns dirors: dovAeverv yap avTav aitia wadrov h Tov TUpavvovYTwY, Kal KapTepeiv

op@vrTas Kal mapovtas & pnd axkovew avTois GVEKTOV HV.
Ileparwcas &€ tov otpatoy eis ’Aciav Hdn
5) \ 4
Naptrpov ova, vavtixov pev EEnpTveTO aTOAOV év Biduvia cai epi Kufixov, wefq 8 adbtos émrimy
xabiatato Tas TOES Kat TOis SuvdoTals éypT-
\
partite, Kat rpos Kaootov éreprev eis Yupiav an’
AlyimTov peTaxadav’ ov yap apxnv Ktwpuévous gg7

it is said that when the herald on the rostra_ pro- nounced the customary summons for Brutus to appear, the multitude groaned audibly, while the better classes bowed their heads in silence; and that Publius Silicius was seen to burst into tears, and was for this reason’ soon afterwards put on the list of the proscribed. After this, the three men, Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, were reconciled with one another, distributed the provinces among themselves, and sentenced to death by proscription two hundred men, Among those put to death was Cicero.

XXVIII. Accordingly, when tidings of these events were brought to Macedonia, Brutus felt compelled to write to Hortensius commanding him to kill Caius Antonius, on the plea that he was thus avenging Cicero and Brutus Albinus, one of whom was his friend, and the other his kinsman. For this reason, at a later time, when Antony had captured Hortensius at the battle of Philippi, he slew him on the tomb of his brother. Brutus, however, says that he felt more shame at the cause of Cicero’s death than grief at the event itself, and threw the blame upon his friends at Rome. He said their servitude was due to themselves rather than to their tyrants, and that they consented to be eyewitnesses of things of which they ought not even to hear.

He now crossed into Asia with his army, which was already a splendid one, and equipped a fleet in Bithynia and at Cyzicus, while he himself, proceeding by land, settled the affairs of the cities and gave audiences to the potentates of the country. He also sent to Cassius in Syria, recalling him from his expedition to Egypt; for it was not to win empire

1 About the middle of 43 B.o.

avrous, GAN édevOepodvtas THY Tatpiba Thy Svva-pu, 7 KaTadvoouct TOUS Tupdvvous, cuvayovtas
mravac Ga: Seip ovv pepynévous Kal purdrrov-Tas TH brobeow wn paxpav annpriabas THS
"Iradias, Gd’ éxeioe orrevdev xa Bonbeiv trois

ToAtTals.
‘Trraxovaoavtos 8 tod Kaaaiov nai xataBat-VOVTOS annvTa* Kal Tmepl Lpupvav adANAOLS
éveTbyXavov ap’ ov 7 pa@rov év Tleepacet yoopt-abévres @ Opynoav O pep eis Lupiav, o o 66 els Maxe-Soviav. ay ou m00v7) Te peyarn kat Odpaos avrois éx Tis mwapovons ExaTepep Suva pews.
oppnaavtes yap én THIS ‘Itadias Gpota puyddev tous ATtMOTATOLS aX pnwaTor Kal dvor hot, iT) vaiy évnpn, fe) OT PATLOTHY éva, un Tod éyovTes, ov Toho mau xpovev Sraryevopevou ovvndbov eis TavTo Kal vavol cai met@ Kal lrrrous Kal xen pact aE ropaxor diaywvicacbat rept THs “Popaiwv Tye movias OvTeES.
XXIX. "EBovXero fev ovv looy ee TLS kar Tapexew) Kaoovos, EpOave 5 Bpodros as TA TONG porray mpos avtov runs TE Tpovxovra Kal ToOpare Tovey opoiws Bn duvapévep Hpeomevor. Av Oe Sofa Kdootov pev elvas deivov éy Tos srohepsxois, opyn be Tpax vv Kal poBy paddov dpxovra, apos S€ Tous cuvnbes t byporepov
T@ yehot@ kat prhorkwn Ty Bpodrov 5€é A€youae be’ aperny pireio Gas pev vuTo TeV TOAD, épac bat S vro trav pido, JavpateaBas 8 wo TOV dpiatay, _pseiaBau dé und wtr0 TOV ToXEpiwv, Ste mpados o avnp Stadepovtws Kai peya-188

for themselves, he said, but to give liberty to their country, that they were wandering about and collecting forces with which to overthrow the tyrants ; they must therefore keep their purpose carefully in mind and not get far removed from Italy, but rather hasten thither and give aid to their countrymen.

Cassius obeyed, and as he was returning, Brutus went to meet him. Their interview at Smyrna was the first they had had since they parted at Piraeus and set out, the one for Syria, the other for Macedonia. They therefore derived great pleasure and courage from the forces which each now had. For they had set out from Italy like the most wretched of exiles, without money, without arms, having not a ship equipped with oars, not a single soldier, not a city; but before very long they had met, having a fleet, an army of foot and horse, and money, which made them worthy antagonists in the struggle for supremacy at Rome.

XXIX. Now, Cassius was desirous that Brutus and he should have equal honour, but Brutus forestalled this by coming to him generally, since he was an older man and unable to endure the same amount of hardship. Cassius had the reputation of being an able soldier, but harsh in his anger, and with an authority based largely on fear, although with his familiars he was rather prone to laughter and fond of banter. But the virtues of Brutus, as we are told, made him beloved by the multitude, adored by his friends, admired by the nobility, and not hated even by his enemies. For he was remarkably gentle and

, N a b \ \ e \ \

Addpwv nal mpos wacav opynv Kat Hdovny Kal / b a ow \ A , \ mreoveEiav amrans, dpOrov dé THY yvounv Kal
dxapTrov éotacav UTép TOU Kadov Kal Sixatov StapvAdtrov. Kal péytotov UTrnpxev avT@ pos evotay Kal dokav Ths mpoapécews TioTts.
ww ' a e Ine 9 a,
ovTE yap éxeivos Oo péyas Iloutnios, ef Kaicapa kabeirev, nrmileto BeBaiws mponcecOat ois 4 \ 4 bd > ov A \ 4 /
vomots THY SUvapLV, AAN ael Ta Tpaypata Kalé-Fev, btrateias ovopate nal duxtatopias 4 TLVOS
adANS paraxwTépas apxXhs wapapvOovpevos Tov
Sjpov' Kdoatoy 6 rovtov, apodpov dvdpa xat Ovpoedh cal woAdAayod mpds TO Kepdaréov éx-pepopevov tod Sixaiov, mavtTos paddAov @ovTo ToNenely Kal mravacBar Kal xivduvevey avTo
tiva Suvacteiav KatacKevalopevov, ovK édev-Oepiav trois woXitas. Ta pev yap étt TovTwY mpeoButepa, Kivvat nal Mapio nal KapBoves,
@ ? / \ , / A /
abnov év péow xal relay mpoGéuevor THY TraTpica, povovovy!l pntas wmép tupavvidos émrodéunoay.
Bpovt@ 6é Aéyovat pndé rovs éxOpovs mpoacBar-4 VA > b > ,

Ney TolavTny petaBRorAnv, aXXN Avtrwviov ye
Kal mToAXoUS axovaat AéyoVTOS WS MOVOY oioLTO
A b VA ¢ / A
Bpotrov émBea Gat Katcape mpoayGévra TH Aap-

A aA A /

MpOTHTL KAL TO Hawwouevm Karw THS pakews, Tovs & aAXous et Tov dvdpa cvaThvat picobvtTas \ [fe (4 A by A 4
kal POovodvtas. OBev Bpodtos ov rH duvdmer ToaovTov baov TH apeTH SHAOS eat EF wv ypdder
4 4 ‘ b \ 4 A
meTrodws. ypaper dé mpos ’Attixov dn TO
, , ? A / %, an ‘
Kwwovvm mrnoidlwv ev TO KAaANOTH THS TUXNS 190

large-minded, free from all anger, pleasurable indul- gence, and greed, and kept his purpose erect and unbending in defence of what was honourable and just. And the strongest reason for the favour and fame which he achieved was the confidence felt in his principles. For no one had expected that Pompey the Great, if he overthrew Caesar, would insist on dismissing his forces in obedience to the laws, but all thought that he would continue to retain his power, appeasing the people by using the name of consul- ship or dictatorship or some other less obnoxious form of government. And now it was thought that Cassius, vehement and passionate man that he was, and often swept from the path of justice by his passion for gain, was incurring the perils of wars and wanderings principally to establish some great power for himself, and not liberty for his country- men. For the men of a still earlier time than Pompey and Cassius, men like Cinna and Marius and Carbo, made their country the booty or prize round which they fought, and they all but confessed that they waged war to establish a tyranny. But Brutus, we are told, was not accused even by his enemies of such a departure from his principles; nay, Antony at least, in the hearing of many, declared that in his opinion Brutus was the only conspirator against Caesar who was impelled by the splendour and by what seemed to him the nobility of the enterprise, whereas the rest banded together against the man because they envied and hated him. Wherefore Brutus relied not so much on his armies as on his virtuous cause, as is clear from his letters. When he was already nearing the perilous crisis, he wrote to Atticus that his cause had the fairest outlook that fortune could bestow,

Ig!

elvat TA KAO avTov: 7 yap vixnoas édXevOEepwoev
N e / A a , 9 \ ?
tov ‘Pwpaiwv Shpov 7 SovAcias atroPaveyv atrad-AaynoecOau cal ToV arAXAwWY acharas avTois \ , b 4 A wv J , kat BeBaiws éxovtav év adnrov elvat, moTEpov
, > 3 / A / 4
Biweoovrar pet édrevOepias 7 TEAvHnEOVTar. Map-

> 9 , > g/ \ A 9 , /
xov 8 ’Avtrwviov akiav dot ris dvoias ddovat Sixny, 65 év Bpovtos nal Kaooios cal Katwou auvapiOueicOar Svvdpevos mpocOnnny éavtov
"OxtaBio Sémxe Kav pr viv ATTNOn pet’ exeivou
; ph viv ar7nOh pw bd 4 a) le) puxpov Dortepov éxeive payxeitar. TavTa mév ody amoleaticat KAA@S TpOsS TO wEAXOV EoLKeED.
A 4 fe)
XXX. ’Ev S€ rH Ypvpvyn tore Tov ypnuaTon,
4 a
& moda cuvethoxes Kdootos, nEiov petadraBetv:
Ta yap dvTa KaTavnrAwKéval vavTrnyoUpEvos a7T0-
le) ? A A
Nov TocovTOY @ Tacav vd EéavTois EEovot tHv
b \ , 9 ” \ a A \ ,
évtos OdXacaav. ovK elwy pév odtv tov Kacatoy e , 4 e ? J A ‘ of piroe didovat, NEyorTes ws ov Sikatov, a aU
, 4 , 4
hedouevos Stadurdrres Kxal POovm auvayecs, éxeitvov ANaBovra Synuaywyety cal yapifecBar Tots aTpatiotais: ov pay adr wey avT@ tplTov pépos atavrwy. Kal mddw Stacrdvtes emi Tas mpoonkovoas éxatépp mpakes, Kaccvos pev ehov ‘Podov ovK émEetKas EXpTTO Tos Tpaypacl, Kal tavTa wept THY Eloodov Tols mpoaaryopevovow 9 \ 4) 4 > 4, 6e Ww
avrov Bacidéa kal Kvptov atroxpivapevos: “ Oite \ wv 4 A / \ 4
Baatnrevs ote Kvptos, TOD bé Kupiov cal Baairéws
‘ \ 4.99 a \ 4 v
dovevs kal koractns.” Bpodtos dé Avxious ret
,
xpnuata Kal aotpatov. éel 5é Nauxpatns o
4 Snpaywyos avéresos Tas ToAEs udiotacbat Kal 192

998

BRUTUS

for he would either conquer and give liberty to the Roman people, or die and be freed from slavery ;

and that amid the general security and safety of their lot one thing only was uncertain, namely, whether they were to live as freemen or die. He says also that Mark Antony was paying a fitting.
penalty for his folly, since, when it was in his power to be numbered with such men as Brutus and Cassius and Cato, he had given himself to Octavius as a mere appendage; and that if he should not now be defeated with him, in a little while he would be fighting him. Herein, then, he seems to have been an excellent prophet.

XXX. At the time when they were in Smyrna, Brutus asked Cassius to give him a part of the large treasure which he had collected, since he had ex- pended what he had himself in building a fleet large enough to give them control of all the Mediter- ranean. ‘The friends of Cassius, then, tried to dis- suade him from giving anything to Brutus, arguing that it was not right that what he was keeping by his frugality and getting together at the price of men’s hatred should be taken by Brutus for the winning of popular favour and the gratification of his soldiers. Hlowever, Cassius gave him a third of the whole amount. Then they parted again for their respective undertakings. Cassius took Rhodes, but managed matters there with undue rigour, and that too though he had replied to those who hailed him, when he entered the city, as their lord and king, “ Neither lord nor king, but chastiser and slayer of your lord and king.” Brutus, on his part, demanded money and soldiers from the Lycians. But Naucrates, the popular leader, persuaded the cities to revolt, and

AOdovs Tivas ws elpEovtes trapodouv Tov Bpodtov KaTerXaBovTo, Tp@Tov péevy aptaToTroLoupévols av-nn ae, e na ¢49 @ e , , Tois émétreprev immeis, up wv éEaxoato drepOapnoar, éreta Ta yYwpia Kal TroAiyvas AapBdavwv
UA
améXvey dvev AUTPWY ATavTas ws TpoTakomEVos
> id \ yw € >] ® > , & \
evoia To EOvos. of 8 Hoav avOddes, & pév 9 4 N > \ / na bd) bd éBramrrovtTo mpos opyny TiOémevor, TAS 5 émeetketas Kat diravOpwrias Kxatadpovodvtes, axXpt ov auveddaas els RavOov avtav tots payiporta-Tous émoALopKet. Tov O€ TrOTALOD Tapa THY TONY qapappéovTos vTrovnxopevor OredidpacKov. ri-axovto 6é€ duxtiwv Sia mopov Kateuévor eis Buv@ov, dv Ta axkpa Kwdwor TpoonpTnmévors St¢E-onpatvev evOds Tov eva xeDévta. pnyavais &é tice Tov Havliwv vuxtwp émridpapovtwy kal rip

9 / e > / > , nA
éuBarovtwv, ws atrexretaOnaay aicbopévwy TaY ‘Pwpyaiwy mpos To Teiyos Kal mvedpa AaprTpov
9 ij > \ \ b>] i“ \ , fa)
aveppimeilev emt tas émantes tHv droya TeV éyyvs oixtav avtiAapBavopeyny, Seicas o Bpovros
an /
umép THS ToNEwWS exéXevoe KaTacBevvivar Kat BonGeiv.
XXXII. Tovs 8& Avxious Sen tis eEaidyns
e Mpos aovotay opun Kal AGyoU Kpeicawy KaTéaxev, Nv dv Tis Epwrt Cavdtov paddtotTa Tpocet-
/ A Kacelev* of ye peTa Traidwv Kal yuvatkav éreEv-Gepot te Kal Sod Kal Taca HrLKia Tovs pev
/ \ ‘ , “ ? \ A TodEmtous mpos THY proya BonOodvtas aio Tov retyav EBadXov, avtoi Sé Kadapov Kat EvAa Kai
A 4
Tay uTéxKavpa Mpoahéepovres Hryov ert T7y WoW 194

the inhabitants occupied certain commanding hills in order to prevent the passage of Brutus. Brutus, therefore, in the first place, sent horsemen against them while they were at breakfast, and these slew six hundred of them; next, he took their strong- holds and villages, but dismissed all his captives without ransom, in order that he might win the people over by kindness. They were obstinate, however, feeding their anger upon their injuries, and despising his clemency and kindness, until he drove the most warlike of them into Xanthus and laid siege to the city. They tried to escape by swimming under the surface of the river which flowed past the city. But they were caught in nets which were let down deep across the channel ; the tops of these had bells attached to them which in- dicated at once when any one was entangled. Then the Xanthians made a sally by night and set fire to some of the siege-engines, but they were perceived by the Romans and driven back to their walls; and when a brisk wind fanned the flames back towards the battlements and some of the adjoining houses took fire, Brutus, fearing for the safety of the city, ordered his men to assist in putting out the fire. XXXI. But the Lycians were suddenly possessed by a dreadful and indescribable impulse to madness, which can be likened best to a passion for death. At any rate, all ages of them, freemen and slaves with their wives and children, shot missiles from the walls at the enemy who were helping them to combat the flames, and with their own hands brought up reeds and wood and all manner of combustibles, and so spread the fire over the city, feeding it with

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TO Tp, GpéyovTes avT@ Tacav DrAnv Kal mavtTa tpotrov é&epebilovtes xal auvextpépovtes. ws 8 7 POE pueica cal Sialwoaca wavtayobev THY mod OstéAapre tTrodAdy, tepiradav él Tots ywwopevots 0 Bpodtos éEwOev rapimmeve mpobvpovpevos Bonbeiv, cal tas yeipas opéywv ois Flavio édeito deidecOat nai owtery thy rod,
OVSEVOS AUTO TpoaexXovTos, CAAA TaVTA TpoITTOY
éavTovs amodduYT@Y, OV povoy avdpav te Kat yuvatk@v, ada Kal Ta Tratdia TA piKpa peETa Kpavyns kal dAadkaypod Ta pev eis TO Tip HAXeTO, TA 8 Aavwbev aro trav Teyav éferpaxrSev aura, ta 8é€ Tois Eiheot TOY TaTépwv uméBadr€ Tas ohayas yupvovvta Kal KedevovTa
matev. wpOn d€ THs Tordews SvadOapeions yuvr Kpeuapevn pev é€& ayyovns, tadiov &8 vexpov
éEnptnuévn TOD Tpaxnrov, Aaptad: Sé Katopéevy THY oixiav Updttovaa. Kat Tov Oedpatos Tpay-xov pavévtos ioety péev ovy biréuervev 0 Bpodtos, édaxpvoe 5€ axovaas' Kat yépas éxnpuke tov otpatiwtay dotis ay SuvnOn Avecoy avépa treptcacat. gaol dé povous éxaTov TevTHKoYTA yevea0at tovs pn Siadhvyovtas T6 cwOjva. Favdcoe pev ovv ba TOAA@Y YpoveY BorrEep eipappyéevny awepiosov SsabOopas amrodidovtes THY TOV TTpo-yovwv avevewoavTo TH TOALN TUYNY Kal yap cxeivot THY TOY opoiws emt tev Tlepocav Kataxavoavtes éavtous dépOerpav.
XXXII. Bpodtos 5€ tHv Matapéwv rod opav dara xyupiComevny Wpos avrov, @Kver pev erriyerpely xal Suntropetro, THv avTny Sediws arrovolay, EXav 196

999

BRUTUS

all sorts of material and increasing its strength and fury in every way. When the flames had darted forth and -encircled the city on all sides, and blazed out mightily, Brutus, distressed at what was going on, rode round outside the city in his eagerness to help, and with outstretched hands begged the Xanthians to spare and save their city. No one heeded him, however, but all sought in every way to destroy themselves, men and women alike; nay, even the little children with shouts and shrieks either leaped into the fire, or threw them- selves headlong from the walls, or cast themselves beneath their fathers' swords, baring their throats and begging to be smitten. After the city had been thus destroyed, a woman was seen dangling in a noose; she had a dead child fastened to her neck, and with a blazing torch was trying to set fire to her dwelling. So tragic was the spectacle that Brutus could not bear to see it, and burst into tears on hearing of it; he also proclaimed a prize for any soldier who should succeed in saving the life of a Lycian. But there were only a hundred and fifty, we are told, who did not escape such preservation. So then the Xanthians, after long lapse of time, as though fulfilling a period set by fate for their de- struction, had the boldness to renew the calamity of their ancestors; for these too, in the time of the Persian wars, had likewise burned down their city and destroyed themselves.1

XXXII. When Brutus saw that the city of Patara was holding out strongly against him, he hesitated to attack it, and was in perplexity, fearing that it would be afflicted with the same madness; but as

1 Cf. Herodotus, i. 176.

dé yuvaixas auto aiypwarworous adicev divev AUTpwY. aid avipav Te Kal TATEPOV emipavery ovaat Supryouperar Tov Bpovtov, ws avnp etn owdpovérTaros Kab Sixaroraros, émetoav elEau Kal mapadsovvat TH modu. éx 6€ TovTou Kal
TAVTES ot hourrol Tpocexwopnoav emit pepavres EAUTOUS exeive, TUXOVTES é xpyatob Kat map edmridas EVYVOLOVOS, és ye, Kagatov 'Podious t vo TOV auTov Xpovov avayKda avros iota pev Ov exEKRTNVTO ypucoVv Kal dpyupov eiceveryneiv aTrav-Tas (€€ ov TWX n Tepl oKTaKLa Xia TahavTa), Snpoota bé THv ™ ONLY ad ous TEVTAKOGLOLS Cnptw-TAVTOS, AUTOS éxaToV Kal TeVTHKOVTAa TddaVTA Avxious mpakduevos, addXo S€ ovdev adsxnoas, avétevEev érr 'Tovias.
XXXII. Wovra pep ovv aka punyens epya xal TYwais atredseiEato Kat Kohacect TOV ator" @ auTos TE ion pddota Kal "Pwpaiwy oi Kpa-TIOTOL, TOUTO Sunyjcopar, Toumniov Mayvou
7 poo Bahovros Aiyorr@ Kata IInAovator, omTNvita THY peyarny apxny aTroBarwv t vo Kaicapos Eduryev, of Tov Bactréws é Ere Tasos GvTosS émiTpo-qmevovTes ev BovAg meta TaV dirwv Hoay, ov Kara TavTa Tais yo pars hepopmevor. Tois pev yap édonxer déyeo Gan, tots & amwbeiv Aiyorrrou TOY
avopa. @eodoros b€é Tis Xios, eri pio @ pnropt-

KOV hoyor: d:dacKaXros TO Bacurel cUvan, n£iwpévos 5€ Tote Tov cuvedpiov 5.’ épnuiay avdpav BertLover, dup orépous SvapapTavovras am épave, Kal TOUS avahaReiv Kal TOUS ageivat xerevovtas Tov Iloumrniov: év yap elvat cupdépov 198

BRUTUS

he held some of its women prisoners of war, he released them without ransom. They were the wives and daughters of prominent men, and by rehearsing the praises of Brutus, calling him a man of the greatest moderation and justice, they persuaded them to yield and surrender their city. Consequently all the rest of the Lycians came and entrusted themselves to him, and found that his goodness and kindness exceeded their hopes. For whereas Cassius, about the same time, compelled the Rhodians individually to pay in to him all the gold and silver they possessed (thus accumulating about eight hundred talents), and fined the city as a whole five hundred talents more, Brutus exacted only a hundred and fifty talents from the Lycians, and, without doing them any other injury, set out with his army for Ionia.

XXXII. Many were his memorable achievements in meting out rewards or punishments to those who deserved them, but I shall here describe only that in which both he himself and the chief men of Rome took especial pleasure. When Pompey the Great, after he had been stripped of his great power by Caesar, put in as a fugitive at Pelusium in Egypt, the guardians of the boy king were holding a council with their friends, at which opinions differed. Some thought they should receive Pompey, others that they should repulse him from Egypt. But a certain Theodotus, of Chios, who was attached to the king as a paid teacher of rhetoric, and was at this time deemed worthy of a place in the council for lack of better men, declared that both were wrong, both those who would admit and those who would reject Pompey ; for there was but one advantageous course

199

a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

> “A / / 6 A

éx TOY TapovtTwy, SeEapmévous amoxteivar. Kat

MpoceTeimEe TOU AOYOU TravopmEvos, BTL VEKpoS Ov
Sdxvet. mpoabepévou 5€ TH yvopn TOD auvedpiov Tapadeypa Tov aTioTwY Kal aTpocdoKnTwY
” Seo / A / e , éxetto Iloumnios Ma-yvos, ts Qeodotou pyropeias cat Servotntos Epyov, as avTos 0 codiaTns édeye 4 3 , xo > 4

peyaravyovpevos. ordlyw 8 botepov émeNOovTos
Kaicapos, ot pév Sixas twvvovtes am@dXvyTO Kakol Kax@s, Beodoros dé mapa THS TUXNS KpovoY > ww \ Ww N 4 , >
eis adoEov Kat adtropov Kal wrAavnta Biov émt-Saverodpevos tOTe Bpovtov émiovta thy ‘Aciav
ovK édabev, Grr’ dvaydels Kal Koracbeis dvoma
“A 4 / ” a a 4
tov Oavdtov whéov Exyev 7} TOV Biov.
XXXIV. Kdoowov && Bpodros ets Ddpdes €xdnret, Kal TpvotovTs peta TOV ditov aTHYTHCeE kal was 0 oTpaTos w@TALcpévos av’ToKpaTopas apudotépous mpoonyopevoev. ola & év mpaypact
peydrous Kat Pirots TroAAOLS Kal HryEen“oow aLTL@V
9 a A 9 4 b / \ A QAUTOLS WPOS AAANAOUS Ey YEVOMEVWV KAL dtaBorov, ap repov te tro.etv, evOUs éx topeias Kal” av-Tous é€v oixnuaTe yevouevor KEKAELTMévOV TOV
Oupav Kxal pndevos tapovtos, éypavTo péureot mp@rtov, elt édéyxors Kal Katnyopia. éx dé TouTou mpos Saxpva Kal tappnciay peta mdbous 2 / € , \ , éxdepouévwv, Oavyalovtes of piroe tTHv Tpaxv-TnTa THS Opyns Kal Tov Tovoy, Eercav pH TL ex
, 4 A 9 , 4

Toutou yévntac: MpocenOeiy 5é atreipnto. Madpxos
\ 4 > \ A 4 > /
5¢ Dawvios, épactns yeyovws Katwvos, ov Aoy@ 200

BRUTUS

in view of the circumstances, and that was to receive him and put him to death. And he added, as he closed his speech, “A dead man does not bite.” The council adopted his opinion, and Pompey the Great lay dead, an example of the unexpected and incredible in human life, and it was the work of Theodotus and his clever rhetoric, as that sophist himself was wont to say with boasting.! A little while afterwards, however, when Caesar came, the other wretches paid the penalty for their crime and perished wretchedly; as for Theodotus, after borrowing from Fortune enough time for a wandering, destitute, and inglorious life, he did not escape the notice of Brutus, who at this time traversed Asia, but was brought to him and punished, and won more fame for his death than for his life.

XXXIV. Brutus now summoned Cassius to Sardis,? and as he drew near, went to meet him with his friends; and the whole army, in full array, saluted them both as Imperators. But, as is wont to be the case in great undertakings where there are many friends and commanders, mutual charges and accusa- tions had passed between them, and therefore, imme- diately after their march and before they did anything else, they met in a room by themselves. The doors were locked, and, with no one by, they indulged in fault-finding first, then in rebukes and denunciations. After this, they were swept along into passionate speeches and tears, and their friends, amazed at the harshness and intensity of their anger, feared some untoward result; they were, however, forbidden to approach. But Marcus Favonius, who had become a devotee of Cato, and was more impetuous and frenzied

1 Cf. Pompey, chapters Ixxvii.-lxxx-

3 In the early part of 42 B.c,

PaAXov H Hopa tive nai ADE pavixe pirocoper,
> 4 wv \ > \ lA e \ "a éBdadslev elaw mpos avTovs KwAVOMEVOS VITO TAY oixeT@V. GAN Epryov ny émiraBécGat Pawviov Tpos OTLOUY OpovaavTos: aHodpos yap hy ev Tact
Kal mpoxerpos. émel To ye BovreuTHY elvat
¢€ , e N > \ Mv e A A \
Pwpaiwy éavrov ovdevds aEtov nyeito, TO 8é KUVLK@® THS Tappnoias TodAdKis adyper THY YanreroTnTa, kal TO dkatpov avTod peta Trarbias Seyouevov. Bia bn tToTe Tov TapovTwy diwod-
\ , > Aa \ , A
pevos Tas OUpas eioHAOe, peta TWAdT MATOS hwvijs
émn tepaivey ols tov Néoropa ypwpevov " Ounpos WET OLNKEV'
adrrAa TIOecO: audw 5é vewrépw éotov épeio, kal ra éEnS. ed ols o pev Kdaoouos éyéXacer, 0
Y a Ig / > \ e / \ ,
5é Bpodros é€éBarev avtov amXoxvva nal yrevdo-Kuva Tpocayopevwyv. ov unv GAA TOTE TOTO
A \ b 4 A 4 4
THS Tpos GAAHAOUS Stahopas Toinodpevor Tépas
> \ 4 A , a ,
evOus SseAvOncav. Kai Kaociou deirvov rapéyovtos éxdder Tovs girovs Bpodvtos. dn 8é KataKkepevovy Pawvios Ke AeAovpévos' paptupopévou 5€ Bpovtov un KexrAnpevov avTov Trew

\ A Kal KeXEVOVTOS aTrayelv emt THY GYWTATw KL, 4 \ > \ 4 ,
Bia rapedOov ets thv péonv KxatexrALOn: xal
. \ e ’ ” > ” »Q> » / madtav Oo TOTOS EaxEeV OVK ayapW ovd adirooopov.
XXXV. Ty & vorepaia Bpodtos dvdpa ‘Po-patoy éotpatnynxota Kai memictevpévoy vir’ 202

1000

BRUTUS

than reasonable in his pursuit of philosophy, tried to go in to them, and was prevented by their servants. It was no easy matter, however, to stop Favonius when he sprang to do anything, for he was always vehement and rash. The fact that he was a Roman senator was of no importance in his eyes, and by the “cynical”’ boldness of his speech he often took away its offensiveness, and therefore men put up with his impertinence as a joke. And so at this time he forced his way through the bystanders and entered the room, reciting in an affected voice the verses wherein Homer? represents Nestor as saying :—

«But do ye harken to me, for ye both are younger than I am,”

and so forth. At this Cassius burst out laughing ; but Brutus drove Favonius out of the room, calling him a mere dog, and a counterfeit Cynic.2, However, at the time, this incident put an end to their quarrel, and they separated at once. Furthermore, Cassius gave a supper, to which Brutus invited his friends. And as the guests were already taking their places at the feast, Favonius came, fresh from his bath. Brutus protested that he had come without an invitation, and ordered the servants to conduct him to the uppermost couch; but Favonius forced his way past them and reclined upon the central one. And over the wine mirth and jest abounded, seasoned with wit and philosophy.

XXXV. But on the following day Lucius Pella, a Roman who had been praetor and had enjoyed

1 Iliad, i. 259. |

2 A follower of Antisthenes was called a ‘‘ Cynic,” or doglike, probably from the coarse and brutal manners affected by the school.

203

Po

ie
4
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avrob, Aevecov TlédAav, Zapdtavav Karnyopovv-TOY éml xkrXoTTals Snpoota KATAYVOUS HTipoce Kal
70 mparypa Kdoovov OU PET PLS eumrnaey. auros
yap odyaus ne pals eum poo dev émt tois avtois édeyxOévtas adixypace dvo dirous idia vouleTn-cas pavepas aphKe kal duetérer Xp@pEvos. 60 ev
NTLaTO TOV Bpotrov ws dyav évTa vomLuov Ka
Sixavov év Kaup@ TmodTelas Seomevep Kat prdav-Opwmias. o 6é TOY elev TOV Maptioy éxéXevev
aurov punpovevery éxelvanr, ey als Kaicapa EXTELVAY, OUK auTov dryovTa Kal pépovra WaVTAasS
avO paxrrous, GND éTépov Stvapw évTa TavTa TpaccovTwv @s, eb Tis éoTte Tpopacts Kant)
pe” Fs aperetrar TO Sixacor, Gpervoy qv TOUS Katoapos gidous Dmropévety i) TOUS eQuT oY Teptopav adixodvtas. “ "Exeivous pev yap avavdpias, abixias 6é d0fa pera xevdbvev nut Kat Tovey TpoceaTt. ToLavTn wey 4 ToD Bpovtou mpoai-pecs Hv.
XXXVI. ’Enei de draBaivew éf ‘Acias euendor, AeyeTae T@ Bpourp peya onpeiov ryever Gat.
pices pep yap iy emeypryyopos 6 avip kal TOV Umvoy eis ddryou Xpovov poptov aTKHOEL Kab cwppoovvy ouvTyey, Ti mepas pev ovdérore Kotpe)- HEVOS, vuctwp d€ TocovTOV Saov OUTE TL TPaTTELW ovre To SiadeyerOaL, mavTwv avaTavopéver, Tmapeiye. tore 6é Tob TONE HOV TUVETTMTOS Vv
xepaiy Exeov TAS Umép TOV Odeov m pafecs, Kal TETAPEVOS Th ppovrids Tos TO péddov, omnvixa
7 p@Tov ad éomépas emipvardgere TOUS curious,
On TO NOLTOV EXPTTO Th vuxtl Tos Ta KaTemeiyovTa Tay Tpayydtwv. et dé cuvédol Kal KaTol-204

the confidence of Brutus, being denounced by the Sardians as an embezzler of the public moneys, was condemned by Brutus and disgraced ; and the matter vexed Cassius beyond measure. For a few days before, when two friends of his had been convicted of the same misdeeds, he had privately admonished them but publicly acquitted them, and continued to employ them. He therefore found fault with Brutus on the ground that he was too observant of law and justice at a time which demanded a policy of kindness. But Brutus bade him remember the Ides of March, on which they had slain Caesar, not because he was himself plundering everybody, but because he enabled others to do this; since, if there is any good excuse for neglecting justice, it had been better for us to endure the friends of Caesar than to suffer our own to do wrong. ‘‘For in the one case,” said he, “ we should have had the reputation of cowardice merely ; but now, in addition to our toils and perils, we are deemed unjust.’ Such were the principles of Brutus.

XXXVI. When they were about to cross over from Asia, Brutus is said to have had a great sign. He was naturally wakeful, and by practice and self- restraint had reduced his hours of sleep to few, never lying down by day, and by night only when he could transact no business nor converse with any one, since all had gone to rest. At this time, how- ever, when the war was begun and he had in his hands the conduct of a life and death struggle, and was anxiously forecasting the future, he would first doze a little in the evening after eating, and then would spend the rest of the night on urgent business. But whenever he had fully met the demands of such

Kovounaere THY Tept TavTa xpeiav, aveyivac ke RiBrtov péx pe TpiTNS pudranis, Kad” app etabecay ExaTOvTapyor Kab XeALapxoe portav pos avrov. @S ovy Ewer dev ef Agias &:aBiBalew to oT pa- Teupa, yuk yey Hv Babvurarn, pas S elyev ov wavy Aapmpov r oKNVY, Tay d5é€ TO oTpatomesov Lom Kareixer. 6 dé ovrAroyiCopevos Tt at

TKOTTRY pos éauvTov ébokev aiabéc Gar TLVOS etal OVTOS. amroPhéwas dé 7 pos THY eloodov ope deuvnyv Kal adXXoKoTOV Oypuy éxpurhov CWUATOS Kal goBepov, ciwr7 Taper TTOS AUTO. TOApHO aS dé epér Gan, “Tis wor ov, eltrev, “dvOparor 4 q
Jeav, 7 Ti | BovAopevos 7 HKELS WS meas; ‘Trop eyyetas 8 auto To daopa: “‘O aos, ® Bpoire, Saipar KaKos" Owe O€ pe mept Diriwrous.” Kat
0 Bpovros ov Statapa Deis, “ “Onpopat,” elarev.
XXXVIT. ‘Agana evTOS 8 avtov TOUS maitas éxaner* pyre & axodoai Twa peony par iOety op pacKxovtn, TOTE pev emnypuTvnoev’ aya © npepa TPATrOMEVvos T pos Kaoouov eppace THY Oyu. 0 é ToIS "Erexoupou Novos XPwpLEvos Kal
mept TovTwy eos EXeov diapépecbat mpos TOV Bpowrov, as ‘Hyérepos ovTos, elTrev, “@ Bpotre, oyos, @S oU mayTa Tao Xouev arnOas ove
opapev, arr’ _ bypov, pév Th Xphpwa Kat amarnhov
” aiaOnors, € éte Oo ofurépa ” didvova KLVELY AUTO
kat petaBdadrAew ar’ ovdevos umapxovTos emt Wacav idéav. KNP@ per yap éotxey! 7 TUTMOIS, puxh S avOpanou, TO mhaTTomevoy Kal TO whar-Tov éyovon TO AUTO, paoTa TroLKiANeW avTHy

1 Eoxev Bekker adopts the early anonymous correction to %EwOev (on wax the impression 18 outside, but the soul, etc.).

business in shorter time, he would read a book until the third watch, at which hour the centurions and tribunes usually came to him. Once, accordingly, when he was about to take his army across from Asia, it was very late at night, his tent was dimly lighted, and all the camp was wrapped in silence.
Then, as he was meditating and reflecting, he thought he heard some one coming into the tent. He turned his eyes towards the entrance and beheld a strange and dreadful apparition, a monstrous and fearful shape standing silently by his side. Plucking up courage to question it, “Who art thou,” said he,
“of gods or men, and what is thine errand with me?’’ Then the phantom answered: “I am thy evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi.’” And Brutus, undisturbed, said: “I shall see thee.” !

XXXVII. When the shape had disappeared, Brutus called his servants; but they declared that they had neither heard any words nor seen any apparition, and so he watched the night out. As soon as it was day, however, he sought out Cassius and told him of the apparition. Cassius, who belonged to the school of Epicurus, and was in the habit of taking issue on such topics with Brutus, said: ‘“‘ This is our doctrine, Brutus, that we do not really feel or see everything, but perception by the senses is a pliant and deceitful thing, and besides, the intelligence is very keen to change and transform the thing perceived into any and every shape from one which has no real exist- ence. An impression on the senses is like wax, and the soul of man, in which the plastic material and the plastic power alike exist, can very easily shape

1 Cf. Caesar, lxix. 5-7.

Kal oynpativey bs éautis vrdpye. Sndrovar dé ai xata tovs brvouvs tpotal Tay dveipwr, as TpémeTa. TO havtactixoy é€ apyns Bpayelas mavrobaTa kat mwa0n Kal cidwra ytvopevor. kiveiabat & aet mépune: xivnots 8 adt@ dartacia Tis vonow. cot S& Kal TO oapa TadaiTwpovpevoy diac THY Sidvotav aiwpel kal mapatpemet. Saipovas & ovr’ eivas tiOavov ovt’ évtas avOpwrrwy exe eidos) povnyv 7 Svvayw eis Huds Sinxovoay: ws éywy av éRovropmny, iva pn povoy StrAoLs Kal immols Kal vavol TocaUTass, adAa Kal Oe@y apwyais émePappodpev, ooLlwTaTOY | Epryov Kal Karhdiotov Hye waves évTes.” TotovTos pev o Kdootos émpaive dédyots top Bpovrovp.

"EuBawovrwv bé tav otpatiwtav él tas TpwTas onuaias aetot dvo ovyKatackn artes ood auvdsexopivovto, nal mapnKxodovOouv sro TOV TT PATLOT AY TpEpopevor expe Dirimrev. > a @€ Le] “A éxel) | nwEpA pid mpo Ths paxns wxorTo ATOTTA{LEVOL.

XXXVIII. Ta pév ody wreicta Tay év Tociv eOvav éruyyavev 0 Bpodtos trijKoa memotnpévos. ev O€ Tes 4 OAS 7 SuVdoTNS Tapelto, TOTE TavTas Wpotayouevos pexpt THS Kata Odaov Oardoons mponrOov. éxet 5€ tav tept NopBavov év trois Xtevois Aeyopévors Kal tept To LvpBorov atpatomedevovtwy, mepterOovres av-Tous nvayKacay atoothvat Kal mpoécOar Ta Ywpia. pixpod b€é Kal THY duvvamw avTov AaBeiv édénoav, UToXerTopévov 51a vooov Kaicapos, et pn mpoceBonOncev “Avtwmmos ofTnTt Oavpacth 208

BRUTUS

and embellish it at pleasure. This is clear from the transformations which occur in dreams, where slight initial material is transformed by the imagination into all sorts of emotions and shapes. The imagina- tion is by nature in perpetual motion, and this motion which it has is fancy, or thought. In thy case, too, the body is worn with hardships and this condition naturally excites and perverts the intelligence. As for genii, it is incredible either that they exist, or, if they do exist, that they have the appearance or the speech of men, or a power that extends to us. For my part, I could wish it were so, in order that not only our men-at-arms, and horses, and ships, which are so numerous, but also the assistance of the gods might give us courage, conducting as we do the fairest and holiest enterprises.” With such discourse did Cassius seek to calm Brutus.

Furthermore, as the soldiers were embarking, two eagles perched upon the foremost standards and were borne along with them, and they kept the army company, being fed by the soldiers, as far as Philippi. There, only one day before the battle, they flew away.

XXXVIIL Most of the peoples encountered on the march Brutus had already brought into subjec- tion ; and now, whatever city or potentate had been omitted, they won them all over, and advanced as far as the Thasian sea. There Norbanus and his army were encamped, at what were called The Narrows, and near Symbolum ; but they surrounded him and com- pelled him to withdraw and abandon his positions. They almost captured his forces, too, since Octavius was delayed by sickness; and they would have done so had not Antony come to his aid with such

209
VOL. V1. P
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

YX pNnodevos, dor aria reiv tous tmept Bpodrov.
mrOe dé Kaicap dorepov 7) ME pas déxa, kal Kateotpatomédevaev évavtiov Bpovrov, Kaaciou &é
"AvT@vLOS.
Ta & év péow Tov otpatoTédwrv Tredia ‘Pwpyaior
KG [TOUS @Pirimmovs KaXovot Kat peytoras TOTE ‘Popaior Suvapets aXA7 aus cuvepEepovTo. To}- Get bev ovv ov Tap OAityov édEitTroVTO TOV TeEpl Kaicapa, KOC Lo é Stroy Kal AapmpoTyte JavpacTov éBepary To Bpovrov oTpareupa. Xpuass

yap hv avrois Ta TAEtoTAa TOV Gm A@v Kat apryupos apedas catraxopnynbeis, Kaitrep eis TaANA TOU
Bpov UTOU ca@ppove diaitn xal Kexonao uévy xpjobat
TOUS myewovas ifovros. TOV 5 . Xépor rar
Tepl TO capa TAOVTOV WETO TL Kal PpoviuaTos
Tapexe Tois iptdorrporépors, Tous Oé prroxepoeis
Kal PAXLLwWTEpovs Toleiv, WoTEp KTHUATwWVY TOV Sm Nwv TEPLEXOMEVOUS.
XXXIX. Of pév ovv Tept Kaicapa cabappov
ev TH Xdpat TOLNG apEvor, pLKpov TL giTov Kal Spaxmas Kat' avdpa TEVTE dtéverpav ELS Ouciar, of dé mept Bpobrov xatayvortes avTav Ths amopias
7 pxporoyias, mpwTov bev év UTraiOp@ Tov oT pa-TOD, domep GOos éotiv, éxdOnpay, émend lepelony
TANON KaTa hoxous Kal Spay was exdoT@ TEVT-KovTa diadovtes, evvoig Kal mpodupia Tis Suva-pews TA€oV elyov. ov nv adNAA onpetov év T@ cadappy@ pox Onpov édo0ke Kaccip yevér Bau. TOV yap arépavov avT@ KAT EDT pO ppLevoV) paBdob os ™ poonveryKe. Déyerau dé kal ™pOTepov év bea Twi Kal roumh xpvoqy Kacaiov Nixnv d:adepo-210 astonishing swiftness that Brutus could not believe in it. Octavius came, however, ten days later, and encamped over against Brutus, while Antony faced Cassius.

The plains between the armies the Romans call Campi Philippi, and Roman forces of such size had never before encountered one another. In numbers the army of Brutus was much inferior to that of Octavius, but in the splendid decoration of its arms it presented a wonderful sight. For most of their armour was covered with gold and silver, with which Brutus had lavishly supplied them, although in other matters he accustomed his officers to adopt a temperate and restricted regimen. But he thought that the wealth which they held in their hands and wore upon their persons gave additional spirit to the more ambitious, and made the covetous even more warlike, since they clung to their armour as so much treasure.

XXXIX. Octavius and Antony now made a lustra- tion! of their armies in their camps, and then distributed a little meal and five drachmas to every man for a sacrifice; but Brutus and Cassius, despising their enemies' poverty or parsimony, first made lus- tration of their armies in the open field, as the custom is, and then distributed great numbers of cattle for sacrifice among their cohorts, and fifty drachmas to every soldier, and thus, in the goodwill and zeal of their forces, they were at an advantage. However, it was thought that Cassius had a baleful sign during the lustration ; for the lictor brought him his wreath turned upside down. And it is said that before this, also, in a procession at some festival, a golden Victory belonging to Cassius, which was being borne along,

1 A solemn review, with ceremonies of purification. oe

p 2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 pevny meceiv, oAtcOovTOS TOU épovTos. ére 8
OpVvEed TE capkopaya TONG Kad nyépav érredai-VETO TP oTpaToTresy, Kat peooav _OPOncav éo pol cUvLaTdpevor mepl TOTrOV TLVa TOU Xapacos évtos, Ov ebexheroav ot pavers aoc tovpevot THY SevorSatpoviay aTpépa kat tov Kaaovov aurov Dmopépovoay éx TOV '"Emrixovpov Aoyav, tors Sé oTpaTlLwTas TavTaTract SeSovrAwpergy.
7 O6ev ovd hy mpodumos dua payns év 7 mapovrt yevec Bar THY Kpiow, anrra TpiBewy n&iou xpove Tov TONEMOD, eppwpevous Xpnpace, SarAwv
dé Kal THAT OV wrAnOEL AevTropévous. Bpodros 5é xal mporepov eo mevde TO Taxiore TOV KiD-Suvev Sraxpibels Ho TH warpios THY édevOepiav
avanaBeiv 7 mwavras avi purrous evox oupévous Samdvats Kal otpateias Kal \TpooTaypacey amrarhd£at KaKay, Kal TOTe TOUS mepl avrov immeis ope év Tots Tpodywot Kal rais arpipaxiats eUnpepovrTas Kal KpatovvTas éFipro TO ppovnpa Kat TLVES auToporat YEVOPEVaL POS TOUS Toe-piovs Kal diaBorai nal érépev Kal Drovorat moAAovs tav Kacciov dirov peTéaT no av év TO ouvedpi ™ pos Bpotrov. els 5é@ Tay Bpovrov
dirwv "ArtidrLos jvavTLovto, TOV YE Xetpava meptpeivar KeNEVOV. épopevou bé Tob Srovrov TiVE Berriov écecOat vowiter per eveavTor, rs Ei pndev," eltrev, GdXo, WrEiw Brdcopas _Xpovov." ™pos TobTo Kdootos hla Kat TOIs GANOLS TpogEKpouaev Ov pETpLWS O "Atiddos. édéd50xeT0

én payer Gas TH baTepaia.
XL. Kal Bpotros pev év édmict xadais nal

212

BRUTUS

fell to the ground, its bearer having slipped. And besides, many carrion birds hovered over the camp daily, and swarms of bees were seen clustering at a certain place inside the camp; this place the sooth- sayers shut off from the rest of the camp, in order to avert by their rites the superstitious fears which were gradually carrying even Cassius himself away from his Epicurean doctrines, and which had alto- gether subjugated his soldiers.

For these reasons Cassius was not eager to have the issue decided by battle at present, but thought it best to protract the war, since they were strong financially, although inferior in the number of their arms and men. Brutus, however, even before this had been anxious to have the issue decided by the speediest of hazards, that he might either restore freedom to his country, or relieve mankind of cala- mitous expenditures and requisitions for military service. At this time, too, he saw that his horse- men were successful and victorious in the preliminary skirmishes, and was therefore lifted up in spirit. Besides, sundry desertions to the enemy, and sus- picions and assertions that others would follow, brought many of the friends of Cassius in the council over to the side of Brutus. But one of the friends of Brutus, Atillius, opposed his wishes, and urged delay till winter at least was past. And when Brutus asked him how he thought he would be better off another year, “If in no other way,” said Atillius, “1 shall have lived longer.” At this answer Cassius was vexed, and the rest also were not a little annoyed by Atillius. So it was presently decided to give battle on the next day.

XL. Brutus was full of hopefulness at supper, and 213

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

hoyia pois prrocogots yevouevos Tapa TO Setrvov aveTraveTo- Kdoovov 6é Meoodras gaol detrveiv te Kal” éavTov oduyous Tav cuvndwv mapaha-Bovra, Kat ovvvouD opac bat kal oLeomnror, ov puaet ToLovToY OvTa: Mave apevov 5é Tod Selarvou Aa Bopevov THS Nelipos avtTov apodpa, TOC OUTOV elrety, MoTrep ELw@let pirogpovovpevos, ‘EdAnviKeh povi Maprupopat oe, Meooadna, tava Tlop-mip Mayvy macxe, avaryKalopevos Sia sas paxns avappivrat TOV mepl TAS. maT pibos xuBov.
ayabny PEVTOL spuxny é EX @ Lev eis THY TUXNY ago-povres, nh, Kav Bovrevowpeba KAKOS, ATTLOTELY OU Sixasov.” TavTa elrovTa dnow o Mecadras

TedeuTaia pos aurov aonacacbat TOV Kdoovor elvau 6 KeKnLevos els THv voTtepaiay emt Seimvov vm avrTov ryeveOAvov ovcay.
"Apa & juéog mpovKetto pev tH Bpovrov Xapaxe Kal 7? Kagoiou ovpBorov aryavos powwe-Koos yuTwD, avrol dé auvirOov ELS TO perov TOV
oTparoT ebwv Kal revert Kadoovos: “Ein Hey, 1) Bpoire, vice Kat ouveivat TOV mavra Xpovov adrnhows ev mpatavras: étrel b€ Ta péytota TOV
avO pwrriver adnhorara., Kal Tis payns Tapa yepny Kpileians ov padsov adfis ddA ous ielv,
Th yevad Kets mepl guyhs cat TEAEUTIS § kal 0
Bpodtos drrexpivaro ‘* Néos dy é eyo, Kaoote, xa
T pay WaT ov arreupos, ouK old Srras évy dirocodgia Aoyou apiica péyar. yTtacdpnv Kédrova &aqc Gao éauTov, @S ovyx Sa tov oud avdpos pyov vToxwpeiy TO Saipovt kat un SéyecOat To cuuTinroy adeas, GAN atrodidpaorety. puri és 214

BRUTUS

after engaging in philosophical discussion, went to rest; but Cassius, as Messala tells us, supped in private with a few of his intimates, and was seen to be silent and pensive, contrary to his usual nature. When supper was over, he grasped Messala’s hand warmly, and, speaking in Greek, as was his custom when he would show affection, said: “I call thee to witness, Messala, that I am in the same plight as Pompey the Great, in that I am forced to hazard the fate of my country on the issue of a single battle. With good courage, however, let us fix our waiting eyes on Fortune, of whom, even though our counsels be infirm, it is not right that we should be distrustful.” With these last words to him, Messala says, Cassius embraced him; and he had already invited him to supper on the following day, which was his birthday.

As soon as it was day, a scarlet tunic, the signal for battle, was displayed before the camps of Brutus and Cassius, and they themselves came together into the space between their armies. Here Cassius said: “ May we be victorious, Brutus, and ever after- wards share a mutual prosperity ; but since the most important of human affairs are most uncertain, and since, if the battle goes contrary to our wishes, we shall not easily see one another again, what is thy feeling about flight and death?” And Brutus made answer: “ When I was a young man, Cassius, and without experience of the world, I was led, I know not how, to speak too rashly for a philosopher. I blamed Cato for making away with himself, on the ground that it was impious and unmanly to yield to one’s evil genius, not accepting fearlessly whatever befalls, but running away. In my present fortunes,

215

/

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

adXoios ev tais TUXaLS yivouat Kal Deod Karas
Ta Tapovta pr BpaBevoavtos ov Séopat wad
Gras éAmridas éEereyyew xal mapacKevds, adr’ aTadrdfouat thy tuynv émawav Maptias}
etOois Sovs TH watpidc Tov éuavtod Biov arXov &inoa bv éxeivny édevOepov cal évdokov.” émi tovtois Kdoatos éperdiace cal tov Bpodtov aotraadpevos, ““Tadra, ébn, “ ppovoovtes iwpev ert TOUS TOAEMLOUS. 1) YAP VIKHTOMEY 7) VIK@VTAS Ov poBnOnaopea.”
Mera tadta wept rafews avtois AOyos éyéveTo TaV dirwv Tapovtwy. Kal Bpodros yreiro Kdogov autos nyeloOar rod Se€iod Képaros, 5 Sv éuretpiay Kal nAiKiay padXov wovto Kaaccio Tpoonkel. ov pnv GAAA Kal TodTo Kacotos
rborne, Kal TOV TAYUaTWY TO HaXLLwTaToY éxovTA MeoaodaAayp éxédXevoev emt Tod SeEtod KatactTHvat.
kai Bpodros evObs éEnye tovs immels Kexooun-pévous StatrpeTras, Kal +o tmefov ov aoxoraiTepov mapeveBarnrev.
XLI. "Ervyov 8 of wept “Avr@mov amo tav
EX@v, ols trepteatpatotrédevov, éuBddXovres Tagdpovs eis TO Trediov Kal Tas eri Oaracaayv obovs tod Kaociouv tepixomrovtes. epndpeve 6€ Kai-cap, ov tapwy avtos bt aobéverav, arr 4 dvva-pis, ov wavy payeicbat mpoocdoxa@ca Tovs ToXepious, aAAG povoy éxdpopais yphobat mpos Ta épya xal BédXeow édAadpois kai OopvBots tovs opvacovTas emiTapaa cel al Tots ayrireTaypévots ov mpocéeyovTes EOavpaloy THv Tepi Tas
1 éxaway: Maprias Corats and Bekker have éwaiwaw 87% (because) Maprias xrA., after Reiske.
216

1003

however, I am become of a different mind; and if God does not decide the present issue in our favour, I do not ask once more to put fresh hopes and pre- parations to the test, but I will go hence with words of praise for Fortune; on the Ides of March I gave my own life to my country, and since then, for her sake, I have lived another life of liberty and glory." At these words Cassius smiled, and after embracing Brutus, said: "Thus minded, let us go against the enemy ; for either we shall be victorious, or we shall not fear the victors."'.

After this, they conferred together about the order of battle in the presence of their friends. And Brutus asked Cassius that he might have command of the right wing himself, although his years and experience made this post seem more appropriate for Cassius. However, Cassius not only granted him this favour, but also ordered Messala with the most warlike of the legions to take position on the right. Brutus at once led out his horsemen magnificently equipped, and with no less promptness put his infantry also in array.

XL. The soldiers of Antony were engaged in running trenches from the marshes, at which they were encamped, into the plain, thus cutting off Cas- sius from access to the sea. Octavius was quietly watching the course of events,—not being present in person, owing to sickness, but his forces for him ; they had no expectation at all that their enemies would give battle, but thought they would merely sally out against the works and with light missiles and cla- morous cries try to disturb the workers in the trenches. So paying no attention to their oppo- nents, they were amazed at the loud and confused

Tadpous Kpavyny donpov ovoav Kab TOAAHy mpoopepoperny. év TOUT® YPappareov TE Tapa Bpovrov ois TYE POOL porravraor, év ols 7 Hy 70 ovwOnpa YEYPALMEVOD, avTov Té mapeErovTos i iar Tw TA Taypara kal Tapadappivortos, ddiryor pev épOacay axodoat TO cuvO nwa TApEyyUaEvov, ob dé wreioToL LN mpoo peivavres opua pea Kat ana- AayHO mpoaepépovTo TOUS Troheptos. ryevopevns dé ou arafiav TAUTHY dvepanrias Kal Siarmac pod TOV Tay paTOV TO Meoodna 7 POTOV, elta Ta ouvelevypeva TapnhrartTe To Kaicapos dpiare- pov: Kal Bpaxéa TOV cox atov Ouyovres Kab xataBadovres ov TOONS, arr' Umrepkepdcavres, cumimtovow els TO oTpatomedo, Ka Kaicap pen, @S autos éy Tots UTOMYH Wag LY _taropel, TOV

pirov TLVOS "Aptwpiou Mdpxou Kalo Darvov idovTos Oye KeXevovoay exo THVat Kaicapa Kal peTer-Oeiy éx TOU Yapaxos, ébdace put pov Umexxopia Deis edoké Te TeOvavat. TO yap popeior Kevov aKxovriou Kal taocots Badrovtes Sujracay. ny 6é hovos év
TO otpaTom ese TOV dds Kopevery, Kab Siarxidtot Aaxedatpovioy 7 HKOVTES ETrixoUpoL VewaT! GUyKAaT-EXOTINT AD.
XLII. Ov b¢ V7) KuKhwo dpevol tous Kaicapos, andra oupmesovTes, padios pev amerpéyavro TeTQ-parywévous, Kat SrépBerpay év _Xepaw? fe Tayuara, Kat ouvera erred ov Els TO OT PATOTE ov Tots pevyova w bro poyns Tov KpaTety cuvevexGevtes, pe? EAUTOV fs TOV Bpodrov ") 6 ou ouveidov
OL eK@VTES EdELKVYUE TOLS NTTHWEVOLS O KaLpoOS. eis
1 yepoly conjectured by Sintenis and Bekker : yxepoi».

outcries which came to them from the trenches. At this point, while tickets with the watchword written upon them were being carried to his officers from Brutus, and while Brutus himself was riding along past the legions and encouraging them, few of his men succeeded in hearing the watchword as it was passed along, but most of them, without waiting for it, with one impulse and with one war-cry, rushed upon the enemy. This disorder threw the legions out of line and touch with one another, and first that of Messala, then those that had been drawn up with it, went beyond the left wing of Octavius; they had only a brief contact with its outermost lines, and slew only a few men, but outflanked it and burst into their camp. And Octavius, as he himself tells us in his Commentaries, in consequence of a vision which visited one of his friends, Marcus Artorius, and ordered that Octavius should rise up from his bed and depart from the camp, barely succeeded in having himself carried forth, and was thought to have been slain. For his litter, when empty, was pierced by the javelins and spears of his enemies. Those who were taken prisoners in the camp were slaughtered, and two thousand Lacedaemonians who had recently come as auxiliaries were cut to pieces along with them.

XLII. The legions of Brutus which had not out- flanked the forces of Octavius, but engaged them in battle, easily routed them in their confusion and cut to pieces three legions at close quarters; then they dashed into their camp with the fugitives, borne on by the impetus of their victory and carrying Brutus with them. But here the vanquished saw an oppor- tunity of which the victors were not aware; for they

yap Ta yupya Kal Trapappnyvupeva Tis évavrias

parayyos, 7) TO beFcov aneomdaOn pos Thy dio-Eu, do dpevot TO pev pécov OUK éféwoay, arr’ ayauve peyarp VVELXOVTO, 70 S " EU@VU{LOV atatia Kal ayvoia TOY Yevopeveov érpépavto kal Kata-di@Eavtes eis TOV Xa paca, Ste opBovv ouderépou TOY avToKparopav TapovTos. ‘AvT@veds TE yap,
OS pact, exkdivas éy apyn thy épodov eis 70
EXos avexdpnoe, Kat Kaicap ovda pod pavepos nv én TET OV Tov xdpaxos, adda Bpovro TWvES @S aunpnkortes avTov émedelevuov 7) Tpaypéva Ta Ein, ppatovres idéav iv elye xal nriciav. non 86 TO péoov éFewxet pov TONN@ TOUS aVTUTET ary MEVOUS, Kal Travted@s eddxet Kpatety o Bpodros, & domep o Kdootos xpateiaOan, Kal TOUTO povov avTov dep erpe Ta mpdypata, TOU [EV WS viK@vTe Kao-oip Th) Bon NoavTos, Tob bé Bpobrov os aTrohw-NoTa Ly TeplpelvavTos: émel THS ye viens pov o Mecoddas tiferar To tpeis derous kal Toda onpeta raBeiv TOV TONE MLOV, éxeivous be pndev. 1004
"Avayopav 8 o Bpodros Hn Stare opOnpeveov
TOY Kaicapos eOavpace to Kacoiov oT paryyLov ovy opay uyynror, OoTrEp elwder, Tepupaivopevon, ovdeé TaN Kara, xwpay épnpimrro yap evdus 7a
WrEeloTa Kat KaTéoTAgTo TOV TOAELLOY éprrec ov-TOD. aXX ob Soxobvtes dfuTepov Brérew TOY
éraipay éeppalov auT® TONG Hév opav Kpavn AdurrovTa, jmodAous 3 apyupous Oupeous év TO xapare TOU Kagciou Stadepopevous: obxoup S0-Kev avtois ovT’ ape pov ove omia pov elvat TOY
ATrONENELMpEVOY PYAGKMY: OV pHY OvdE TAROOS 220

BRUTUS

charged upon the broken and exposed parts of their opponents’ line, from which the right wing had been drawn away in pursuit. The centre did not yield to them, but fought them vigorously; the left wing, however, owing to their disorder and ignorance of what had happened, they routed and pursued into their camp, which they sacked. Neither of the generals was with his men; for Antony, we are told, turned aside from the attack at the outset and withdrew into the marsh, and Octavius was nowhere to be seen after he had forsaken his camp; indeed, sundry soldiers declared that they had slain him, showing Brutus their bloody swords and describing his youthful appearance. But presently the centre drove back their opponents with great slaughter, and it appeared that Brutus was completely victorious, as Cassius was completely defeated. And one thing alone brought ruin to their cause, namely, that Brutus thought Cassius victorious and did not go to his aid, while Cassius thought Brutus dead and did not wait for his aid ; since Messala considers it a certain proof of the victory that he captured three eagles and many standards from the enemy, while they took nothing. As Brutus was returning from his victory, the camp of Caesar having been already destroyed, he was amazed not to see the tent of Cassius towering above the others, as usual, nor the other tents in their wonted place ; for most of them had been demolished at once when the enemy burst in. But the sharper sighted among his companions told him they could see many helmets gleaming, and many silver breast- plates moving about in the camp of Cassius; they did not think that either the number or the armour was that of the garrison left behind ; however, they émréxewva, paiverBar pexp@v Soov eleos yp vevixn-pevev Kara KPGTOS TaypaTOV TOTOUTWY. TAUTA

™p@Tov evvouay KaTETTHOE TO Bpovte TOU TUpL-TTOMATOS' Kal KATA TOV $ poupav €v 7) oTpa-ToTEO@ TOV Tronepion dvexaXeito Tovs StmxovTas kal ouviyyev ws Kaccio BonO nowv.
XLIT. "Emérpaxto '8 otto Ta Kar' aurov.
ouTe THY mpworny exdpounv Tov wept Bpobrov
mdéws eldev dvev cuvOnparos Kat TpoaTayparos Pade ila ov?" bte6 Kparoovres evOus G3 Gppnoav ef' apraryny Kat Mpereray, TOU smeptiévar Kat KuKdovcba TOUS TrONELLOUS dpehnoavres, 7) npec kev auT@ Ta WpaTTopeva. pedAnoe Sé TLve Kai Siar pei parddov 7) mpodupia Kal Noylou@ orpaTnyav bao TOU befvob TOV Tonepioov meptehauBdvero- wal TOV imméov evs aTropparyevTov puyi T pos THY Odraccav opav Kat Tovs Trefovs evdibovras € €7r€Lparo KaTEX ELV Kal wapakanrev. évos dé aonpetopopov pevyovtos apapracas TO onpetov émrn£€e ™po T&Y TOOmY, pndé Trav trepi TO cpa TeTaA-ypéevov avTou mpodupes é ert TUMPEVOY TOY. 00TH
én Bracdels dvex@ oe peT odio emt Aopov €YovTa Wpos TO TTedtov oKoTas. GXN' avTos pev ovdev xaTetoey 7 pores Tov xXupaKa Tmop0oupevor, iy yap da Bevns Thy drpiyv, ot b€ rept aurov immets Ewpeov TOANOUS TpogehavvovTas, obs o Bpodtos
éreurpev. elkace 6 0 Kadootos rorepious elvar kal Sioxew ém' avrov. Spuws ¢ Tov TApovT@v &va Teriveo amréaTELre KaTONPopEvon. OUTOS ovK éxabe tous imméas Tpooay, arr', ws eldSov avdpa dirov cal Kaccig Tua TOV, drardEavres ud 700-said, there were not so many dead bodies visible there as might have been expected if so many legions had been overwhelmed. This was what first made Brutus aware of the calamity; and leaving a guard in the captured camp of the enemy, he called his men back from the pursuit and united his forces with the purpose of assisting Cassius.

XLII. With Cassius matters had gone as follows. He had been disturbed to see the first sally of the troops of Brutus, which was made without watch- word or command, and when, being victorious, they rushed at once after booty and spoil, with no thought for the envelopment of the enemy, he was vexed at the way things were going. Besides, exercising his command with hesitation and delay rather than with readiness and decision, he was enveloped by the enemy's right wing. His horsemen at once broke away in flight towards the sea, and seeing his in- fantry also giving ground, he tried to rally them. He snatched the standard from a standard-bearer who was in flight, and planted it in the ground before him, although not even his body-guard were inclined to hold together any more. Thus, then, under compulsion, he withdrew with a few followers to a hill overlooking the plain. But he himself could see nothing, or next to nothing, of the sacking of his camp, for his vision was weak ; the horsemen about him, however, saw a great troop riding up which Brutus had sent. But.Cassius conjectured that they were enemies, and in pursuit of him. Never- theless, he sent out one of those who were with him, Titinius, to reconnoitre. The horsemen spied this man as he came towards them, and when they saw that he was a trusted friend of Cassius, his in-

a e \ a 9 , , 9 A vis ob pev ouvyiOers nowalovto re xai éde-tobvTo KatanrnoovTes amo Tav tmmav, ot 8 adrXot rept
auTov év KUKX@ TepteAavvoYTES dua Tralave Kal TATAY® bia Napas auetpiav TO péytaTov atretpya-TAVYTO KAKOD.
"Edoke yap o Kdoatos adnOas bd Trav Trodeplov éyecOat Tov Titivoy, cat todto 5) dyoas, “ Dirouyodvtes dvepcivayev advdpa dirov ap-TaCopevoyv VITO TAY TOAELiOV idEly, aTEXwpPNaEV els teva oKxnviy Epnuov, éva TaV artredevOépwov éperxvodpevos, Iivdapov, dv éx tav Kata Kpdo-cov atuxynudtoy él ravtnv elye THY avayKny ud’ avTov TapecKevacpevov. adda IIdpOous pév duépuye, Tore 5é tas yAapvdas él thy Keparjy avayayeov Kal yupvecas Tov Tpaxnrov atrokowat Tapéoyev. evpeOn yap % Keparn Siva Tod oaw-patos. tov dé Ilivéapov ovdels eidev avOparrwv peta Tov hovoy, €£ ob Kai wapécyxev éviows SoFay dverely Tov avopa pn Kercvabeis. or(Lyo 8 tortepov of O immeis éyévovto havepol, cal Titivios éotepavapévos bm' avTav avnes mpos Kdo-atov. ws 5€ xravOu@ xal Bon tTav dirov odupopévar nal dvadopovytwy éyvw To waOos Tod aoTpaTnyou Kal THY ayvorav, éotdcato TO Eidos ay TOAAA Kakiaas THS BpaduTATos éauTov anéaogake.

XLIV. Bpodros 8 tH pev Array eyvoxas Tod
Kaaciouv mpocnrauve, tov 5é Odvatov éyyus 7dn
ToD ydpaxos HKovce. Kal TO pev THA Trept-KAavoas, Kal Wpocayopevaas éoyatov avdpa
'Pwpaiwy tov Kdoowov, a> ovK tt TH ToAEL TnrALKovTOU hpovnpatos éyyevécOar Suvapévon, 224

timates, shouting for joy, leaped from their horses and embraced him warmly, while the rest rode round him with shouts and clashing of arms, thus, in their boundless joy, working the greatest mischief.

For Cassius thought that Titinius was actually taken by the enemy, and with the words " My love of life has brought me to the pass of seeing a friend seized by the enemy," he withdrew into an empty tent, forcing along with him one of his freedmen, Pindarus, whom, after the disaster which befell Crassus,! he used to keep in readiness for this emergency. From the Parthians, indeed, he had made his escape; but now, drawing his robes up over his face and laying bare his neck, he offered it to the sword. For his head was found severed from his body. Pindarus, however, no man saw after the bloody deed, and therefore some have thought that he slew his master unbidden. A little later it became evident who the horsemen were, and Titinius, whom they had crowned with garlands, came up to report to Cassius. But when the lamentable cries of his distressed and weeping friends made known to him the grievous fate of his general and his error, he drew his sword, reproached himself bitterly for his slowness, and slew himself.
XLIV. When Brutus learned of the defeat of Cassius, he rode towards him, but heard of his death when he was already near his camp. He mourned over the body, and called Cassius “the last of the Romans,’ implying that such an exalted spirit could no longer arise in the city. Then he decked the 1 Cassius had been quaestor for Crassus on the disastrous Parthian expedition in 53 B.o, (Crassus, xviii. 5).

TE plea TELE Kat am emeunpev eis @daov, ws py, ov 1Xvow adroit Tapdayo. Kndevopevov. avTos dé Tous TTPATLOTAS cuvayayov mapenvOnaaro:
Kat TaVTOV Opa adres TEpN LEVOUS TOV dvaryKatov
Umea XETO kat avdpa dioxyirias Spax pas avTl TOV aTrOhWAOT OD. ot O¢€ _TpOs TE TOUS doyous
aveBappna ay avroi Kal TIS dwpeds Catpacay
TO peyeos: Kat peta Bons mpouTeurpav amLovTa, peyadtvortes @S povoyv GNTTNTOV ev TH pax TOY Teco apwv avTOKpATopa@D yeyernpevor. éwaptuper be TO épyov Ste Th paxn mepréerea as Karas émiarever" odiryous yap Tay WA LY dmravras er pé-aro TOUS dytiatavras. el 5€ Taow expngato
™ pos TH paxny | Kal [Ty maperOovres ou melo ToL
TOUS TohepuLous éml Ta TOY Tone uLeov Gpynoay, ovdev dv édoKet pépos avT@v amoNsTEty anT-"-TNTOV.
XLV. “Ezrecov 6é TOUT@Y pev oxTaKic iAvoe auv Tots oT pATEVOMEVoLS oiKerats, ods Bouyas) Bpodros avouate: TeV & évavtiwv Mecoddas dnoiv olecbar TAéious 0) SuTAacious. 5:0 Kal pad ov nO vpour éxeivos mplv 7) Kagatou Oepdrray évopa Anurrptos aixero mpos Avt@vioyv éorrépas, evOus a amo Tob vexpod Tas XAapvdas Aa Bov Kal TO Eidos. Ov Koma OévT ay ovTwS eOdppnoav
Gare du hpépa ™ podryety omc wevny emi pax
THY Suvapwy. Bpovte dé Trav oTpaToTEedwy € éxa-Tépov TANEVOVTOS emia paras (TO péev yap avrod KaTaTreTAno pevov aixparoroy édeiro pudachs axptBois, TO 6€ Kaociov tv petaBornv tov dpyovtos ov padimws Edepev, GANA Kal POdvov 226

body for burial and sent it to Thasos, in order that the funeral rites might not disturb the camp. He himself, however, assembled the soldiers of Cassius and comforted them; and seeing that they were deprived of all the necessaries of life, he promised them two thousand drachmas the man, to make good what they had lost. They were encouraged by his words and amazed at the largeness of his gift; and they sent him on his way with shouts, exalting him as the only one of the four commanders who had not been defeated in the battle. And the results bore witness that his confidence in a victory in the battle was well grounded ; for with a few legions he routed all those opposed to him. And if he had employed them all in fighting, and if the most of them had not passed by the enemy and set upon the enemy's possessions, it would seem that his victory must have been complete.

XLV. There fell on his side eight thousand men, including the camp servants whom Brutus called Briges ;1 but the enemy, in the opinion of Messala, lost more than twice as many. They were therefore the more dejected of the two, until an attendant of Cassius, named Demetrius, came to Antony in the evening, bringing the robes and the sword which he had taken at once from the dead body. This en- couraged them so much that at break of day they led their forces out arrayed for battle. But both the camps over which Brutus had command were in dan- gerous straits. His own was filled with prisoners of war and required a heavy guard; while that of Cassius was dissatisfied with the change of commanders, and besides, as vanquished men, they were full of hatred

1 The name of a Thracian tribe (Herodotus, vii. 73).

Te Kal pious HTT MEVOLS évnv avTois 7 POs TO VEVLKTK OS), om Aig at pev edoke TO oTpdteupa, paxns & amréaXETO. Tov © aly pwaharov TO pev SovrktKov WAHGos evetdovpevov UTOTTOS Tots O7r- Aas éxéhevoev avatpeDjvat, TOV 5 ehevbépov TOUS pev amédvE pacKov UTO TOV mroneuion paddov BAwKEevat avrous } Kal map exetvots IX MAN@TOUS eivat Kal SovAous, wap avT@ & éhevdepous . Kat moras" ws 6é TOUS dirous é éwpa Kab TOUS Wyyepovas adtaAAaKTwS EXOVTAS, aTro-

KpuTT@V kal TUVEKTELT OV eowbev.
"Hp 6é tes Bodovprios pipos cal LaxovAtwv ye-NWTOTIOLOS MAWKOTES, obs év ovdevi AOYo TOepevou
TOU Bpovtou T poo dyovtes ot pirou KaT ny Opouv
as ovdé vov TOU éyerv wal TKMT TEV Tpos UBpw
auto dex opevous. émrel 5€ Bpodtos pév évirya ™ pOs éTépais @y ppovtict, Meoodaras dé KopBivos édtxatou TANYals Konaa Gevtas éml aKNVTS yupvous amrobo0 hvac Tois aTpaTnyois TMV TOAEMiOV, omrws el0@auv olwv déovrat oT PATEVOMEVOL \oUL-TOT@Y Kal cuv7Oov, évion ev TOY Tapovrey éyéracav, Llomdtos dé Kdoxas, o mpa@tos Kai-capa natagas, Ov Karas, épn, “ teOvnxore Kacoip matlovres Kal yehwtomotovvTes evaryitopev" av 06,” elev, a) Bpotre, Seikers 6 OTWS sexers HVNUNS Tpos Tov oTpaTHnyov 7 Koddoas nh pv-
Adfas | TOUS xXAevacopuevous rat KaKas épouvras avTov.” T pos \TobTO Bpodros ev pada duaxe-pavas, Ts obv,” elev, § ‘émoo wuvO avea Ge, Kdoxa, Kat ov TpatTeTe To So€av tyiv;” tavtny éxeivor
ThY amroKpiow ovyKxaTabeow Troinoduevor Kata
1 gitovs bracketed by Sintenis®.

and jealousy towards those who had been victorious Brutus therefore decided to put his army in array, but to refrain from battle. Moreover, the multitude of slaves among his captives were found suspiciously moving about among the men-at-arms, and he ordered them to be put to death; of the freemen, however, he released some, declaring that they had more truly been captured by his enemies, in whose hands they were prisoners and slaves, while with him they were freemen and citizens ; and when he saw that his friends and officers were implacably hostile to them, he saved their lives by hiding them and helping them to escape.

Among the prisoners there was a certain Volum- nius, an actor, and Saculio, a buffoon, to whom Brutus paid no attention; but the friends of Brutus brought them forward and denounced them for not refraining even now from insolent and mocking speeches to them. Brutus had nothing to say, being concerned about other matters, but Messala Corvinus gave his opinion that they should be publicly flogged and then sent back naked to the enemy’s generals, in order to let these know what sort of boon companions they required on their campaigns. At this some of the bystanders burst out laughing, but Publius Casca, the one who first smote Caesar, said: “It is not meet for us to celebrate the funeral rites of Cassius with jests and mirth; and thou, Brutus, wilt show what esteem thou hast for the memory of that general according as thou punishest or shieldest those who will abuse and revile him." To this Brutus, in high dudgeon, said: " Why, then, do ye enquire of me, Casca, instead of doing what seems best to you?" This answer was taken to be a condemnation of the

229

to

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

TOV AO Meov avOporrayv, dépOetpay avtovs amrayaryov Tes.
XLVI. "Ex TOUTOU THY Swpedy aT ESWKE Tots TTpAaTLOTaLs, Kal pixpa peprpapevos éri T@ TO ovvenpa pn «=AaBovtras avev TaparyyéAparos ATAKTOTEPOV évarecOat TOUS ToAepiors, bréa Xero KANOS ayovicapEevors dv0 woAes eis aptayny
kat cpéedevay dvncety, Geccarovixny Kat Aaxe-Saipova. TovTO T@ Bpovrov Bio povov ever Tt
TOV éyKAnLaToOV avaTrohoyntov, €& Kat qroXv
ToUTwY SELVOTEPAa VIKNTNPLA TOS OTPaTEvoLEVotS
"Avr@vios Kat Kaioap eféricay, odiyou dety 1Waons "Iradias TOUS TaraLovs olxnTopas éfena-CAVTES, iva Xepar €xetvot Kai mohets: Tas [) Tpoonkovaas AdBworv. adda TovToLs pev apyew
Kal Kparety UméKetTo Tov TONE LOU Téhos, Bpourep
dé dua dofav aperis ouTE vind OUTE caterOar
guvexwpeiro Tapa TMV TOAKOD 77 4 peTa TOU Kadod Kal dtxaiouv, Kal TavTa Kaociov TeOvnKoTOs, ds aitiay elye Kal Bpoirov evaryeLy els Evia TOV Bracotépav. GXX @omep ev TAP andantou
cuvtptBevros € érepa Evra Tpoondovy | Kat Tpocap-POTTEL emexerpovary, ovK ev pen, avayKaia é, paxopevor 7 pos THY Xpetay, ovTw Bpovtos év Suvdpet TOC AUTH Kal pETE@pols TpayLaclv ovK
éYov icopporrobyta oTpATNyoV jvarynatero \ pT}
a0a. ois mapovat Kal ToANa Tpadooce wal Aéyerv TaY éxeivols SoxovvTwv. éSoxee & boa tous Kaociov otpatiotas ovo Bexzious Tapé-Ee duo petayxeipia tot yap joav, év pev TP
oTpaTon ed bc dvapxiav Opacvvopevot, Tpos Tous TroAepious Oia THY HrTav aTrodetbavres.
230

poor wretches, and they were led off and put to death.
XLVI. After this, he gave the soldiers their pro- mised rewards, and after gently chiding them for not getting the watchword and for rushing upon the enemy without command and in great disorder, he promised that if they now fought well, he would turn over to them two cities for plunder and booty, Thessalonica and Lacedaemon. This is the only accu- sation in the life of Brutus against which no defence can be made, even though Antony and Octavius practised far greater cruelty than this in rewarding their soldiers, and drove her ancient inhabitants out of almost the whole of Italy, in order that their followers might get land and cities to which they had no right. But in their minds conquest and do- minion were the end and object of the war; whereas Brutus had such a reputation for virtue with the multitude that he was not permitted either to conquer or to gain safety except with honour and justice, especially now that Cassius was dead, who was ac- cused of leading Brutus with him into some acts of violence. But just as sailors, when their rudder has been shattered, try to fit and fasten other timbers in its place, striving to meet their needs, not well, indeed, but as best they can, so Brutus, not having in his great army and dangerous plight a general who was equal to the emergency, was forced to employ such as he had, and to do and say many things which they approved. And so he decided to do whatever they thought would make the soldiers of Cassius better men. For these were very intract- able ; their lack of a leader made them bold in camp, while their defeat made them afraid to face the enemy.

y 231
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XLVII. Ovdéy 5¢ Bérriov elye TA mpdypata tois mept Kaicapa xat ‘Avtr@vov, ayopa Te Xpwmevors avayxaia Kal 6a KotrOTnTa Tod oTparoTésov yeava poxOnpov mpoodoxaauy.
etKovpevor yap mpos Edeot Kal peta THY payny ouBpov PO.voTrwpivay émiyevouévwv mndroD Kat-eTipm@avtTo TAS oOKNVasS Kal BdaTos Tapaxphpa
anyvupevou ba Yriyos. év tovT@ 8 ovow avtois Kev ayyeria tTept THs Kata OdraTTav yevouéevns
atuxias wept thy aotpatiav. €& “Itadlas yap TOAANY Kopulopevnv tapa Kaicapos ai Bpovtov pies é€rrimecotoat SébGerpav, @v OAlyou Trayta-Tact TOUS ToNEpLOUs StaduyovTes UTO ALOU TAY
istiwy Kal tov oxowiwv éoOiovtes SteyévovTo.
TavT axovoavtes Eomrevdoy dia paxns KpiOFvat mpiv aicdécbar TOV Bpotrov Scop aQUT@ yeyovev evTuxias. Kal yap Huépa pa cvvéBn Tov Te KaTa yiv apa kal tov Kata OddattTav ayava KpiOjvat.

Tux 5é Tive WaAXOY Hh Kaxia TOV év Tals vavoly HryeLovav nyvonce TO KaTopOwpa Bpovdtos 7mepav elxoot Siayevonevwv. od yap av els Sevtépay
paxnv mponrde, Ta peey dvaryKaia Th oTparig Taperxevacuevos els TOAUY Xpdvov, év Kah@ S¢
THs K@pas iSpupévos, @ote Kal yetm@vos amrabes Kal mpos Tovs TroAeuious SvoexBiacrov éyew Td
otpatorredoy, TO 5é xpateivy BeBaiws THs Oararrns
kad verixnkévas mela TO Kal' avrov én' édrrridwv peydrov Kal dpovnpatos yeyovws.
"A\Aa TOV TMpayyuaTwyv, @s Eotxev, OvKETL
modAois GvTwyv Kabextav, GAA povapyias Se0-pévav, 0 Oeos, eEdyer Kal petacticat TOV Lovo éutroow@y évta T@ xpateiy Suvapévp Bovdopevos, 232
BRUTUS

XLVII. But Octavius and Antony were no better off; they were scantily provisioned, and the low site of their camp made them expect a grievous winter. For they were huddled together on the edge of marshes, and the autumn rains which fell after the battle kept filling their tents with mud and water that froze at once, so cold was the weather. More- over, while they were in this plight, word came to them of the disaster which had befallen them at sea. For a large force which was being brought from Italy by command of Octavius was attacked by the ships of Brutus and destroyed, and the small remnant of them that escaped their enemies were driven by hunger to subsist upon the sails and tackle of their ships. On hearing of this, they were eager to have the issue decided by battle before Brutus learned what great good fortune had come to him. For it happened that the conflicts on sea and land were decided on one and the same day. But by some chance, rather than by the fault of his naval com- manders, Brutus was ignorant of their success until twenty days afterwards. Otherwise he would not have proceeded to a second battle, since his army was supplied with provisions for a long time, and he was posted in an advantageous position, so that his camp did not suffer from wintry weather, and on the side towards the enemy was almost impregnable, while his secure mastery of the sea and the victory of the land forces under his own command had put him in high hopes and spirits.

But since, as it would seem, the government of Rome could no longer be a democracy, and a monarchy was necessary, Heaven, wishing to remove from the scene the only man who stood in the way 233

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

atréxowe THY TUXNY exElynY, KaiTrEp éyyUTAaTW TOU
un Aabetvy tov Bpodrov adixopeévny, pérXovtos
yap avrod payer Bas Mpo pias nuépas ore Kro-S105 TLs €x TOV ToAELioY AVTOMOADS KEV, ayyér-

Awy Ste StepOappevovy yoOnpévor Tov aTOAoV oi wept Kaicapa orevoovat Siaywvicacbat. Tavita éywr 6 avOpwros ovK elye Tiativ ovd eis dy nr0e to Bpovt@, catradpovnbels mravtdtacw as pndev aknxows vyiés TA rvevdh mpos yadpuv amayyeArwv.
XLVIII. "Ev éxeivn 8¢ 7H vuetl maddy daclv
eis Oyu ed\Ociy to dacpa T@ Bpovte, Kal tH
avrnv émuidecEduevoy dririv ovdéy eimeiv, adn
olyerOat. ldmdsos 5é Bodovpvtos, avnp ptdocopos kal cuveotpatevpévos an' apxns Bpovre, TOUTO MeV OU AEyel TO oONpEloV, peticoayv 5é dnote TOV Wp@Tov aeTov avaTrEwy yevérOat Kal TaV rakiapywv Twos am avtouatou Tov Bpaxiova pvpov pocevov eEavOeiv, cal moAddxis éEadeighovtas Kal aropatrovras pndev Tepaive. Kal mpo THs paxns avtis derovs duo cuprecovtas adANAOLS
évy petarypio taY otpatotrébwv paxecOa, Kal ouyny antotov éxety TO TEdLov Dewpéevwnv aTrdvTor, elfac 5é nai gduyetvy tov xata Bpodrov. o &é AlGiow mepiBontos yéyovey o THs wUANS dvolyOcions amavrncas TH pépovTt Tov deTov Kal KatTakoTels Tais payaipais vTrd TOV OTPATLWTaY olwvic apevev.
XLIX. Tpoayayav S€ tiv darayya cal xataaoTncas évavtiay Tols Todepiots erretye troAUY xpovov' vTowiat yap auT@® Kal pynvices Kata 234

1007

BRUTUS

of him who was able to be sole master, cut oft from Brutus the knowledge of that good fortune, although it very nearly reached him in time; for only one day before the battle which he was about to fight, late in the day, a certain Clodius deserted from the enemy, and brought word that Octavius had learned of the destruction of his fleet and was therefore eager for a decisive struggle. The man found no credence for his story, nor did he even come into the presence of Brutus, but was altogether despised; it was thought that either he had heard an idle tale, or was bringing false tidings in order to win favour.

XLVITI. On that night, they say, the phantom visited Brutus again,! manifesting the same appear- ance as before, but went away without a word. Publius Volumnius, however, a philosopher, and a companion of Brutus in all his campaigns, makes no mention of this omen, but says that the fore- most standard was covered with bees; and that of its own accord the arm of one of the officers sweated oil of roses, and though they often rubbed and wiped it off, it was of no avail. He says also that just before the battle itself two eagles fought a pitched battle with one another in the space between the camps, and as all were gazing at them, while an incredible silence reigned over the plain, the eagle towards Brutus gave up the fight and fled. And the story of the Ethiopian is well known, who, as the gate of the camp was thrown open, met the standard- bearer, and was cut to pieces by the soldiers, who thought his appearance ominous.

XLIX. After Brutus had led out his forces in battle array and stationed them over against the enemy, he waited a long time; for as he was reviewing his

1 See chapter xxxvi. 235

TIVO mpooemimTov €TLoKOTOUVTL TO oTpaTevpa:
Kal Tous imméas wpa haxns apxew ov mavu mpobupous 6 dvras, GAN del ™ poo pévovTas TO TOV meta épyov. elt éEaidyns avip moAemxos Kal TeTiunmévos én' dvdpeia StampeTa@s Tapa Tov Bpodtov avrov éfimmacdpevos petaRadrerat mMpos Tovs wodeutous: Kapoudrdtos dé éxanelro.
TovToy id@v 0 Bpovros nAynoev loyupas: Kal Ta
pev bm' opyns, Ta b€ hoBw peiLovos petaBorjAs Kal mpodocias evOus emt Tovs évavtious rev, eis @pav évdtnyv Tov hAlov Katadepomévov. Kal TO pev Kal abtov éexpadtnoe péper Kal mpondbev UTOYWPODYTL T@ aploTEepm TOV TrorEpLioV éyKel-pevos' Kxal ouveTéppwoav ot immeis Gua Tois meCois éuBadovtes teTapaypmévors: TO & Erepov KEpAS, WS py) KUKAWOEiN, TOY Hyewovwy avTitrape€- ayovtov, wANnOer Sé Aecrropévav, Sueamwato pécov Kat yiyvopevov acbeves ovK avteixve Tots evayTiors, GAN' épuye mpwtov. ot dé tTovTo diaxovravrTes
evOUs exuxAXovvTo TOV Bpodrov, avrov pév boa Kai OTpaTHnyiKhs Kal oTpaTiwTiKhs apeTHs Epya Kal yeipt Kal yvoun Tapa Ta Seva mpos TO viKay amroderkvupevov, @ Sé mwréov Exxe TH TpoTépa peayn, TouTp BramTopevov. TeV yey yap TrONeE-piwv tro vinnOev evOds amoAwWAEL TOTE TaV bé Kacociov tparévtwy orjiyou duehOapnoav, oi Sé aowlopevoe TH MpontTiaOat mepidecis vres avé-TAncav aOupias Kal tapayfis TO WAEloTOY TOU oTpatevpatos. evtav0a xai Mdpxos o Katwvos 236

troops he became suspicious of some of them, and heard them accused of treachery ; he saw, too, that his horsemen were not very eager to begin the battle, but always waited to see what the infantry did. Then, of a sudden, a man who was a good soldier and had been conspicuously honoured for his bravery by Brutus, rode out of the ranks and went over to the enemy; his name was Camulatus. The sight of this gave Brutus great distress; and partly from anger, partly because he was afraid of greater treachery and desertion, he led at once against the enemy, at about three o'clock in the afternoon. With the part under his own immediate command he was victorious, and advanced, pressing hard upon the retreating left wing of the enemy; his cavalry, too, dashed forward along with the infantry and fell upon a disordered foe; the other wing, however, which was extended by its commanders to prevent their being surrounded by the enemy, to whom they were inferior in num- bers, was thus weakened in the centre and could not hold out against their opponents, but fled first. After cutting their way through this wing, the enemy at once enveloped Brutus. He himself displayed all the valour possible in a soldier and commander, con- tending with judgment and personal prowess for victory in the terrible crisis; but that which was an advantage for him in the former battle was a detri- ment to him now. For in the former battle the conquered wing of the enemy had been at once de- stroyed, but when the soldiers of Cassius were routed, only few of them were slain, and those who then escaped, rendered fearful now by their former defeat, filled the greater part of his army with dejection and confusion. Here Marcus the son of Cato also, fighting

vids év Tois dpic Tots Kal yevvarotatous TOV véewy PAX OpMEvos Kat KATATOVOULEVOS ovK epuyev ove’ eifev, aXe pepevos TE TH Xeupl Kal ppatov
Gotis ely, Kal maT pov dvopmdtoov, éqrecev emt
TodAois vexpols TaV Tonepion. ériumtov 6é Kal
TOV GAXwY ot KpatictoL Tov Bpovrov mpoxw-Suvevortes.
L. "Hy &€ Ts Aoukidnr«0s, dvnp ayabos, é év Tots éraipots. ovTos opay BapBdpous TLVAS imméas év TH dwwker TOY ey adrAwY ovdéeva Trotoupévous Aoyov, éXavvovtas 5é pudnv él TOV Bpodrov, evo Tapaxivouvevaas éumrodwy avTots yeveo Ga,
Kab mLKpov vronepbels autos édn Bpot'ros elvas:
Kal mtBavos Hv 7 pos “Avraéviov Seopevos aye éauTop, as Kaicapa Sedorxars, ¢ éxelvp dé Dappav.
ot & aomacdpevot TO eUpnpya Kat TUX) tuvi Gavpacth Kexphobar vouilovres Hyov Tov avopa, GKOTOUS On, TpoTréuarres é& aut av TIVaS dryryéXous mapa Tov “AvT@vLOD. AUTOS Te oy noOeis amnvrTa toils ayovcw, Kal TOY aA ot TruvOavopevor tovra Bpovrov Kopilerbar TUvETpO-xator, ol pev eA eervov HYOULEVOL THS TU ns, ot &¢

THS b0&ns avafcov, dypav BapBdpwv vTrO puro-puxias ryevopevon. érret eyyus tide Oo pmev “AvT@vios t UTéaTH, OLatropay Srrws Xp7 befacar Tov Bpodrov, o Se Aouxiddzos mpocax els pana teOappnKkas “ Mapxov pév,” elzrev, ‘ ‘Avravee, Bpovrov ovdels 7 mpnKev oud” dv €or ‘TONE LOS" pn TOO OUTOV 7 TUXN KpaTnaoele THS aperis. arr’ éxeivos eupeOnoerat Gav 7 Tou wal YEK POS akios Keipevos EauTod. eyw 5é Tos cols GTpaTiwTas 238

1008

BRUTUS

among the bravest and noblest young men, was over- powered, but would not yield nor fly, but plying his sword, and declaring that he was Marcus Cato and Marcus Cato’s son, fell dead upon the many enemies whom he had slain.! The bravest of the rest fell also, risking their lives in defence of Brutus.

L. Now, there was a certain Lucilius, a brave man, among the comrades of Brutus.2 This man, seeing some barbarian horsemen ignoring all others in their pursuit and riding impetuously after Brutus, determined at the risk of his life to stop them. So falling behind a little, he told them that he was Brutus. The Barbarians believed him because he asked them to conduct him to Antony, pretending to be afraid of Octavius but to have no fear of Antony. They were delighted with their unexpected prize, and thinking themselves amazingly fortunate, led Lucilius along in the darkness which had now fallen, after sending ahead some messengers to Antony. Antony himself was pleased, of course, and set out to meet the escort, and all the rest also who learned that Brutus was being brought in alive flocked together, some thinking him to be pitied for his misfortune, others that he was unworthy of his fame in thus allowing his love of life to make him a prey of Barbarians. When they were near, however, Antony paused, at a loss to know how he ought to receive Brutus; but Lucilius, as he was brought forward, said with great boldness: ‘“ Marcus Brutus, O Antony, no foe has taken or can take; may fortune not so far prevail over virtue! Nay, he will be found living, or possibly even lying dead as becomes him. It is by cheating

1 Cf. Cato the Younger, Ixxiii. 3.
3 Cf. Antony, lxix. 1.
239

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TMapaxpovodpevos xe, mabeiy oudey emt TOUT
TOY dynKéo Tov TApalTOUpeEros. TAUT eiTTOVTOS TOU Aoveiddiov Kal TAVTOV ExT AQYEVTOV "AvTovios Tpos TOUS KopicavTas avrov arroBreyas, “*Harov Naremds,” elrrev, “@ CVSTPATLOTAL, pépere TH apaptia eptvsptoba Soxobres. adn’

ev lore KpeiTTOVA TIS Enroupérns a dypas: npnnores.
TOE WLOV yap Snrobytes Hicere pidov Hpi Kopi-Covtes’ _@s eyo Bpovrp pev ovx olda pa TOUS Oeovs 6 te av expnodpnv COVTE, Totovrwy & avdpav pikov TUYXdvorue padXov u) Trodeuiov.”
TavT el Toy Kal Tov AouxtdALov doTracduevos
TOTE pev evi TOY dirov TUvET TH ED, datepov Se Npwpevos eis TavTa TLoT@ Kal BeBaiw SueTédece.
LI. Bpodros dé d:aBas Tt peiO pov vAwoes Kal
TapdaKpnuvov 78n OKOTOUS ovTos ov TORU T porpr-Mev, adr’ ev TOT Koih@ Kal méTpav exovte
peyadny ™ poxerpevny xabicas, odiyov Tept avrov WyeHovery Kal pirwv 6vTMD, Tpara pev aTroBne‘ras eis Tov oupavor daTépeov évta peo Tov avehbéyEato Svo otixous, av Tov Erepov Borovpros avéyparye:
Zev, uw) NAOor ae THVS Ss altLos KaKav

tov 6 érépou gnaoiv emradecGar. pera dé put pov tay év TH paxn Tpd avTod TecovTwy éTalpwv Exac Tov ovoualwy padiota TH PraBiou pvieD Kal TH AaBedvos émeorévaker. wv 8
auTov mpeaBevriys 0 AaBeay, o 6e PrdBros
émrapxos TOV TEXVITEY. év TOUT b¢ TUS autos te Supnoas kal tov Bpodrov copay opoiws Eyovta, 240

BRUTUS

these soldiers of thine that I am come, and I am ready to suffer for it any fatal penalty.” When Lucilius had thus spoken and all were in amazement, Antony turned to his conductors and said: “T suppose, my fellow soldiers, you are vexed at your mistake and think that you have been flouted;
but be assured that you have taken a better prey than that you sought. For you sought an enemy, but you come bringing me a friend. Since, by the gods, I know not how I could have treated Brutus, had he come into my hands alive; but such men as this I would have my friends rather than my enemies.”” With these words he embraced Lucilius, and for the time being put him in charge of one of his friends, but ever afterwards found in him a sure and trusty helper.

LI. But Brutus, after crossing a brook which ran among trees and had precipitous banks, would go no further, since it was already dark, but sat down in a hollow place with a great rock in front of it, having a few officers and friends about him. First, he turned his eyes to the heavens, which were studded with stars, and recited two verses, one of which Volumnius has recorded :—
O Zeus, do not forget the author of these ills!’’!

the other Volumnius says he has forgotten. Then, after a little, he called the name of each of his comrades who had fallen in the battle to defend him, groaning most heavily at the mention of Flavius and Labeo. Labeo was his legate,? and Flavius his chief of engineers. At this point, someone who was thirsty himself and saw that Brutus was thirsty too, took a 1 Euripides, Medeia, 334 (Kirchhoff).
2 Cf. chapter xii. 3 ff.

AaBov xKpavos emi Tov TOTa,Mov Karédpape.

3 xrohou b€ xaTa Oarepa 1 pog TET OVTOS Bodov-HLVLOS 7 pomjrde KaTowopevos, Kal avy avT@ AdpSavos o o UnaoTiaTHS. émavedOovtes 5é pera.
ee npwTna av mept Tod TpaTos. nO iKds dé agodpa pedidoas o Bpodros ™ pos Tov Bodov-peveov "Extrérorat,” elev, ‘ GNX’ érepov vupipv KoucOnoerat. meu eis 5 0 avros éxuvduvevoev
UTO TOV TTrodEeuimy adrA@vat Kal porus éawOn
4 TETPwpEVOS. eixatovts. 5€ avT@ By moAAous év
Th pax TeOvdvar DTATVAALOS UTETTN bud TOV
ToNELLwy ex Tata dHeVos (dAAws yap ovK 7) katower Gat TO aTpatoresor, Kat Tupoov apas avrrep ebpn TaKel glo peva, TaN ap iter Oat ™ pos avrov. o pev ovv Tupaos npOn Tov Lratva-Alou TmapehOovros eis TO oTparorecon, as 8 ove éTravnet xpovep TOAA@ Bpodtos elev: «Av op Srarvrnos, apiferat.” ouvéBn 5° avrov éravep-Nouevov eumeceiy els TovS troAEulous Kal diad0apivat.
LIT. I poiovens dé Ths VUKTOS amroKhivas, @S

ETUye Kabelopevos, 1 pos oixeTny éautov Kyeltroy EAarEl. TLOT@VTOS dé rob Kreirou Kat Sax pu-ovtTos, avlts emia TATaUEVvos TOV bracniaThy Adpéavov iSta TLVAS auT@ Tpoaépepe oyous.
TérXos 6é Tov Bodovpvoy avrov “EAAnueth Trav
hoyou Kal THs ATKHTEWS Drepipyna Ke: kal Tape-KadEeL TH xerpt cwedayac Gat Tov Eihous avT@
2 Kal ouverrepeioas HV TANYIV. Tob dé Bohovpviov Suwoapevou ral TOV ado 6 Omolws ex over, eltruvtos 6& Tivos ws Set pun péverv, AANA hevyery, 242

helmet and ran down to the river. Then a noise fell upon their ears from the opposite direction, and Volumnius went forth to reconnoitre, and with him Dardanus his shield-bearer. After a little while, however, they returned, and asked about the water to drink. Whereupon, with a very expressive smile, Brutus said to Volumnius: “It is drunk up; but another draught shall be fetched for you.” Then the same man who had brought the first was sent for more, but he ran the risk of being captured by the enemy, was wounded, and with difficulty came off safe. Now, since Brutus conjectured that not many of his men had been killed in the battle, Statyllius! promised him that after cutting his way through the enemy (there was no other way), he would recon- noitre the camp, raise a blazing torch if he found things there in safety, and then come back to him. Accordingly, the blazing torch was raised, since Statyllius succeeded in reaching the camp; but after a long time had passed and he did not return, Brutus said: “If Statyllius is alive, he will come back.”’ But it so happened that he fell in with the enemy on his way back, and was slain.

LII. As the night advanced, Brutus turned, just as he sat, towards his servant Cleitus, and talked with him. And when Cleitus wept and made no answer, Brutus next drew Dardanus his shield-bearer aside and had some private conversation with him. Finally, he spoke to Volumnius himself in Greek, reminding him of their student life, and begged him to grasp his sword with him and help him drive home the blow. And when Volumnius refused, and the rest likewise, and some one said they must not tarry

3 Cf. Cato the Younger, Ixv. 4 f.; Ixxiii. 4.

éEavactas, “Tlavu pév obdv,” edn, “ pevetéor ANN ov Sia THY TOdaY, Adda bia TOY YeELpaV.” éuBarov bé thv dSeEiav éExdotm para dardpos Ly 4 \ 4 4 e \ a“ A / noecOae pev Eby peyddrynv joovnv Sti tav dirov
> A 9 N b , A , 9 > a avtoy ovdels éyrevoato, TH TUXYn 8 éyKanrely

Umép Tihs matpidos: éavrov b€ TOY vEertKnKOTOY paKkapi@orepov vopiferv, ovx éxOés ovde mpwnv f > \ N a b 4 ? a povov, AANA Kal voy, dtodciTovta So-ay aperis, vf? ¥ / b / e
nv ov’ SrAoLs OUTE YenpacW aToOAEipovaLY ot Kexpatnxotes, @s py Soxeiy Stt Sixaiovs avdpas adixot Kal Kaxol ypnoTous atroNecavTes ov TpocnKovtws apxyovot. SenOels S€ Kal rapaxarécas awlew éavTovs avexapnoey aTwrépw peta duety
A a bd a “4 , ¢ 9 AN '
Tptov, ev ols nv Kal Yrpdtwyv o ato Aoywv PHNTOpPLKaY Yyeyovwms avT@ auvnOns. Kal rodTov éyyiota mapactnodpevos éavt@ Kat 10 Eidos
\ a a a yupvov el tis AaBAS Tals yYepoly dudotépacs
épeioas Kal Tepimeown eredevTncev. of S€ hac
OUK AUTOV, GAAA TOV YrpdTwva, TOAAA Trdvu TOD Bpovrov SenOévtos, aroctpéyavta thy dpe vUTo-
a \ / ? a es ,
atnoat To Eidos: éxeivoy Sé pun mpooBarovra
, a
To otépvoy Kab SiwcavTa cvvTopws aTobareiv.
LIII. Todrov &¢ rov Ltparwva Meoaodras éraipos @v Bpovtm Kaicapt diaddayels emt oyoris mote mpoonyaye, Kat Saxpvaoas elmev “Odtos 3 A a e 9 7 e aA A , \ éotw, w Katcap, o avnp, 0 T@ éu@ Bpovt@ tiv
e 4 4, 99 9 4
TeXeuTaiay vmoupynoas xapiv. atrodeEapevos
ovv 6 Kaicap éoxyev avtoy év Te Tois tovos Kal 244
1009

BRUTUS

but fly, Brutus rose and said : “ By all means must we fly ; not with our feet, however, but with our hands.” Then, after clasping each by the hand, with a very cheerful countenance he said he rejoiced with ex- ceeding joy that not one of his friends had proved false to him, and as for Fortune, he blamed her only for his country’s sake; himself he regarded as more to be envied than his conquerors, not yesterday and the day before merely, but even now, since he was leaving behind him a reputation for virtue, which those who surpassed in arms or wealth would not do; since the world would believe that base and unjust men who put to death the good and just were unfit to rule. Then, after earnestly entreating them to save themselves, he withdrew a little way in the company of two or three friends, among whom was Strato, who had been his intimate since they studied rhetoric together. This man he placed nearest to himself, and then, grasping with both hands the hilt of his naked sword, he fell upon it and died. Some, however, say that it was not Brutus himself, but Strato, who at his very urgent request, and with averted eyes, held the sword in front of him, upon which he fell with such force that it passed quite through his breast and brought him instant death.!

LIII. As for this Strato, Messala, the comrade of Brutus, after a reconciliation with Octavius, once found occasion to introduce him to his new master, and said, with a burst of tears: “This is the man, O Caesar, who did the last kind office for my dear Brutus.’’ Accordingly, Strato was kindly received by Octavius, who, in his subsequent labours, and

1 The battles at Philippi occurred in 42 B.c., ard Rrutus was forty-three years of age when he died.

év Tois Tepit “Axtiov ayaow Eva tov Trept auTov
9 a) a € 4 > A \ ‘ ayabav yevopévev “EXAnvev. avtov 6 Tov Mec-odXav Aéyouvotw watepov éerratvovpevov bd Kai-
capos Ot, Kaitep ey Dirivrocs | TONE MLGTATOS
avtots yevopevos da Bpovrtov, év "Antiw mpobvpotaroy éauToy mrapéo yer, “Eye rot,” davas, “o@ Kaioap, dei tis BeXtiovos xat Stxatorépas TiAs
Kai peptoos éyevouny.”
Tov 5€ Bpotdtov o ‘Avtwvios avevpwv reOvnxota
TO Pe OHA TH TWOAVTEAETTATH TAY EavTOU dolpixidwoy meptBareiv éexér\evcev, Botepovy Sé rHv gowixida xexreppevny ataOopevos amréxtewe Tov Upedopevov. Ta 5é AEetava mpos THY uNTépa TOU
Bpovtov LYepRiriav arémepwe. Tlopxiay Sé ryv Bpovrou yuvaixa Nixoraos 0 ptrocodos iatopet kat Ovarépios Maék:pos Bovropévny arrobaveiv, ws ovdeis eméeTpeTre TOV hirwv, GAA TpoTéeKELVTO Kai TapepvAattoy, €x Tov wupos avapracacav
avOpaxas KaTaTety Kal TO oTOMa TvyKNELCACAaD Kai pvoacay ovTw SiagOapivat. xaitor héperat
tis €mtatoAn Bpovtouv apos tovs dirous éyxa-AowYTOS AUTOS KaL ONOhUpOpEevOU TrEept THs Ilop-
Kias, @ apedrnOeions UT’ adlTav Kal mpoedopevns
Sua vooov KxaTaXtreivy tov Biov. €éoixev ovv 6 NixoAaos nyvonxévat tov xpovov, émel tO ye waQos Kat Tov Epwra THs yuvatKos Kai TOV Tpo-Tov THS TENEUTHS vrrovonaat Sidwot Kal TO émoTeOXLOD, EiTEp Apa TOY ywnoiwy éoTiv.

especially at the battle of Actium, found him, as well as other Greeks, a brave partisan. And it is said that Messala himself was once praised by Octavius because, though at Philippi he had been most hostile to him and Antony for the sake of Brutus, at Actium he had been a most zealous adherent of his; whereupon Messala said: " Indeed, O Caesar, I have ever been on the better and juster side."

When Antony found Brutus lying dead, he ordered the body to be wrapped in the most costly of his own robes, and afterwards, on hearing that the robe had been stolen, put the thief to death. The ashes of Brutus he sent home to his mother Servilia.!. As for Porcia, the wife of Brutus, Nicolaiis the philosopher, as well as Valerius Maximus," relates that she now desired to die, but was opposed by all her friends, who kept strict watch upon her; wherefore she snatched up live coals from the fire, swallowed them, kept her mouth fast closed, and thus made away with herself. And yet there is extant a letter of Brutus to his friends in which he chides them with regard to Porcia and laments her fate, because she was neglected by them and therefore driven by illness to prefer death to life. It would seem, then, that Nicolaiis was mistaken in the time of her death, since her distemper, her love for Brutus, and the manner of her death, are also indicated in the letter, if, indeed, it is a genuine one.

1 Suetonius (Divus Augustus, 13) says that the head of Brutus was sent to Rome to be thrown at the feet of Caesar's statue. 3 De factis mem. iv. 6, 5.

AINNOS KAI BPOYTOY SYTKPISIS

I. TloAA@y roivuy tois avdpdcw vraptdavtwv Karav, ev Tois mpwros 5é€ Tod peyictous éAaxtara adoppais yevécOat, rovTO T@ Aiwyt KadXuoTov é€otw. ov yap elye Tov audioBntodrTa, cadarep 6 Bpodtos Kdoowov, dvdpa mpos pév apetny Kal So€av ovx opotws aksomtoTor, eis 5é TOV TOAELOV OVK eXaTTOVaS TOALN Kal SeLVOTHTE Kat pate. cupBoras mapacyopuevov, S ye nat TOD TaVTOs épyou Wpoco.odery Evioe THY apYny, Hryenova THS emt Kaicapa yvwuns tovtov atpepovvTt Bpovte@ yevéoOat rA€yortes. Alov 8 dorep dda Kal wrola Kal orpatiotixny Svvamy, odtw Kal dirous Kal cuvepyovs emt tHv mpakwv adros éavt@ aiverar Ktnodpevos. ov pay ovd as Bpodros éx Tav Tpayudtwy avTav Kal Tod ToXépov wAovTOY écyxe Kal Svvamw, cttw Kal Atop, GANA TO Torépw WpoeranveyKev avVTOS TOV éauToOU

WrOVTOY, UTED THS TOV ToArALTaV ENEVOEpias ToOIS
THs puyns éepodiows wpoxataypnodpevos. ert dé Bpovros pév cal Kadoatos, ovx dv acdhades jovyiav dyew éxtrecovat THS ‘Pwpuns, AAXN wPAHKoct Sixnv Oavdtov Kai Stwxopévors, dvayxaiws eis Tov
ToAEmov KaTépuyov' Kal Ta cwopaTta Tos SToOLS Tmapaxatabéuevor Stexrvduvevoay tiTép avtav To mwréov 7) Tov TodtTaV, Aiwy 8 adeéatepoy ev TH guyn tod puyadevoavtos Tupavvou Kai Hd.ov dia-you avéppipev éExwv xivduvvoy tocovTov éml te coca, LiKEediav.
248

1010

COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

I. WE see, therefore, that both men had many noble traits, and especially that they rose to the greatest heights from the most inconsiderable be- ginnings; but this is most to the credit of Dion. For he had no one to dispute his eminence, as Brutus had in Cassius, a man whose virtue and fame did not inspire confidence in like degree, but who, by reason of his boldness, ability, and efficiency, con- tributed no less than Brutus did to the war; indeed, some attribute to him the origin of the whole enter- prise, declaring that he took the lead in the plot against Caesar when Brutus was passive. Dion, how- ever, appears to have acquired by his own efforts, not only arms and vessels and a military force, but also friends and co-workers for his enterprise. How- ever, Dion did not, like Brutus, win wealth and power from the course of the war itself, nay, he contributed his own wealth for the war, expending in behalf of the liberty of his countrymen those resources which supported him in his exile. And further, it was not safe for Brutus and Cassius to keep quiet after their banishment from Rome, but since they were condemned to death and pursued, it was of necessity that they resorted to war; and in commit- ting their persons to the protection of their arms they incurred danger in their own behalf rather than in behalf of their countrymen ; whereas Dion was living with greater confidence and pleasure in his banish- ment than the tyrant who banished him, and yet of his own accord he hazarded a peril so great in order to save Sicily.

249

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

II. Kai pay ovx Guwotov Acovuciou Lupaxouaiors
n Katcapos aradraynvar ‘Popators. O pev yap ovd } npvetTo TUpavvos elvat KaK@V TE puptov euTeTANKEL Lexediar 4 Oe Kaicapos apxn curt oTapéevn pev ovK GALlya Tois évavTLoUpEevots Trpay-para Tapéaxe, deFapévors dé Kal cpatnbeiow évopa Ka Soxnats épavn povon, Epyou 8 am’ avris ovdev @pmov ovde TUPAVVLKOY umnptev, anna Kal Seopevors édoke Tois Tpdyuace povapxias ™paqo-TATOS WOTE tar pos on avrov Tov Saipoves

ded0a 0a. 3 Kaicapa pev evOus éroOncev 0 ‘Popaiov Sijpos, dare Xarer os ryever Oat Kal amrapaitnros Tous aTEKTOVOCL, Aiwva 5 v) Atovuaiou Tapes éx Lupaxove oy ral TO BN Kara, oKayra TOU TpoTépou Tupdvvov TOV Tapov émrai-TLov padiota Tpos TOUS TodiTas évroinoev.
III. "Ey autais Toivuy Tas TohemlKats ™pa-feo 6 wey Aiwv dweuTrTos yéyove oT paTnyos,
ws? | bev auros éBovnevero Tots Tpaywacty apiora
XPwmevos, a S emraicOn 82’ ETEPOUS dvarapov
Kat peTadtTnoas emt TO Beédriov- o be Bpodros TOV
Eo YaTov dry diva, vmrép TOV OAwY ovO’ UTooThvas
doxet ppovipws ouTE opareis émavopOwarv evpeiv, GQXX’ atette xal Tm poeiTo Tas eAmibas, ovd Ocov
Tlopanios €TLTOALNTAS TH TUYN Kal TavTa TON
ANS pev avrToOt Aevtropevys edridos éy tois oaros, Tails 6€ vavol Kpatov mdons BeBaiws ths Oaracons.
“O 8 péytordv dot dy éyxadotar Boovty, 70
owbévta 77 Kaicapos yapit: cal cooavta tav
1 903’ Bekker corrects to od7’.
3 és with Coraés and Bekker: a».
250

COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

II. And verily it was not a like thing for Syracuse to be rid of Dionysius and Rome of Caesar. For Dionysius was even an avowed tyrant, and filled Sicily with countless ills; whereas the rule of Caesar, although during its establishment it gave no little trouble to its opponents, still, after they had been overpowered and had accepted it, they saw that it was a tyranny only in name and appearance, and no cruel or tyrannical act was authorized by it; nay, it was plain that the ills of the state required a monarchy, and that Caesar, like a most gentle physician, had been assigned to them by Heaven itself. Therefore the Roman people felt at once a yearning for Caesar, and in consequence became harsh and implacable towards his murderers; whereas Dion, for letting Dionysius escape from Syracuse, and for not demolishing the tomb of the former tyrant, was held most culpable by his countrymen.

III. Next, as regards their actual military achieve- ments, Dion was a consummate general; where he himself made the plans, he achieved the best results, and where failure was due to others, he restored and bettered the situation. Brutus, on the other hand, as it seems, was unwise in entering upon the last supreme struggle, and when he was defeated, could not find a way to restore his cause, but gave up and abandoned his hopes, not even facing adverse fortune with as much resolution as Pompey, and that too although on land he had much ground for confidence left in his troops, and with his fleet was secure inaster of all the sea.

Moreover, the gravest charge which is brought against Brutus, namely, that although his life was spared by the kindness of Caesar, together with the auveadwKotwv daoous éBovreTO Kal dirov voutopevoy Kal mpotiunOévta ToAX@Y avTOXELpa TOU cwaavtos yevérOat, TovT' ovK av TIS elrroL KaTA Ni@vos. adda Tovvaytion, oixeios pev Ov Arovu-

}
aio Kat diros w@pOou Ta mpaypata Kal cuvdstedv-NaTTev, extrecwy 5é€ THS Tatpidos Kal adiKnOels mepl THY yuvaika Kal THY ovciay aTodecas ex mpopavous eis ToAc"ov KaTéoTN voutpov Kal d-Katov. i TOUT avTioTpehee mpaTov; & yap Es émaivov wmapye. Tois avdpdot péytorov, %) mWpos TOUS Tupavvous aTéyOera Kal pcororvnpia, TOOT' ikuxpivés €ott T@ Bpovt@ Kai xaBapor, idia ya eb ALKp e povT@ apov, Lorg yap \ bf A " a ,
ovdey éyxarav Kaicape ris Kowvys mpoexivduvevev
, e b) bd \ "a " b) , > éXevOepiass o & et py Kaxas Errabev adtos, ovK dy érotéunoe. Kal tovto dndovTa tais TIddTo-
Aa A ,
vos ériatoAais, €€ av SHrOS eoTLv ws ATrOBANOEls THs TUpavVvibos, OVK aTroo Tas, KaTéAvae Atovuctov.
A \
ért Bpodrov pev xal Topurnio dirov éroincer, éyOpov ovta, Kal trodeguov Kaicapt, To Kowh
4 e 4 a \ , e 4
cvupepor, ws ExOpas Spw nal dedrias évd ypdpevov
Aa / 4 A \ 4 wv \
To Sixaiw: Aiwy && mpos xadpty wp0ov mrodAXa
Atovictov, 67 Hv BéBatos avT@, Kal pos opynv
Pd \ > . / XN 4 9 O9 e

amvatnOels errodéunce. 816 TovT@ pev ovd’ oi diroe tavtes erictevoay, ws petactHiaas Atovu-
\ A atov ovx av BeBatwoatto tHv apynv adte,
/
mpaoTépw Tupavvidos dvoyatt Tapayayav Tous
s \ A , aA b A moditas, wept d€ tod Bpovrouv trav éyOpav He
4 a axovey Stt povos Ta éri Kaicapa ovvapapévov 252
COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

lives of all the fellow captives for whom he wished to intercede, and although Caesar held him a friend and honoured him above many, he struck down his preserver with his own hand,—this charge no one can bring against Dion. On the contrary, while he was a courtier and friend of Dionysius, he tried to set the state in order and help in preserving it; but when he had been banished from his country, wronged as a husband, and deprived of his property, he openly resorted to a war that was lawful and just. Or does this argument reverse itself at once? For that which redounds to the praise of both men is their hostility to tyrants and hatred of their baseness, and this is disinterested and sincere in the case of Brutus, since without any private grievance against Caesar he risked his life for the common liberty; whereas, had not Dion himself been mistreated, he would not have gone to war. And this is made manifest by the letters of Plato, from which it is clear that Dion did not revolt, but was cast out from the tyranny, and there- fore overthrew Dionysius. Still further, it was the public good that made Brutus a friend even to Pompey, who was his foe, and an enemy to Caesar, since he determined both hatred and friendship by justice alone; Dion, on the other hand, gave Dionysius much support in order to win his favour, when he was secure in his confidence, and when he was dis- credited by him, it was to gratify anger that he went to war. Therefore Dion was not trusted even by all his friends, who felt that after removing Dionysius he might secure the government for himself, enticing his countrymen along by some milder name than that of tyranny; but the enemies of Brutus were wont to say that of all the conspirators against Caesar he 253

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

éva, mpovOeto oxomoyv aT apxijs ax pe TéXous THY TaTpLov anodotvar ‘Pepators modTelay.
IV. “Avev rye pay TOUT@Y 0 ™mpos Atovuctop ayov our, Guotos HY Symov TO T™ pos Kaicapa.
Avovvaiou pev yp avdels 6 boTts ovK dv xateppo-ynoe TOV oun bor évy pedas Kal xvBots Kal yuvarkt tas mAEloTas oLtovpévou StarpeBds:
to 5€ tTHv Kaicapos xatddvotw eis vodv ép-BaréoGat Kal a pohnOivat THY Servornta Kal
Suvauy Kal TuxnV, ob Kal Tobvopa tous Ilap-

6vaiwy Kal "Ivdav Baowreis ouK ela xabevdery, Ureppuois WV puns Kal mpos pnOev UpierIat
o8@ Tov ppovnuaros Suvapévns. 616 TO pev opOevre povov év Leeda pupiddes OvK OdjLyaL
cuvéortng av én Avovicvov n 6é Kaicapos bofa Kat TET OVvTOS @pGov TOUS pirovs, Kal TOUOMa TOV
xpnodpevov Typev €K Tatoos aunydavouv T p@Tov
evdus elvat ‘Popalwrv, ws arefipdpparov Todo
mpos Tv ‘Aytwviov Tepiarduevoy éxOpav Kal Suvapuy.
Ei 8 gpycer tis Ste peyadous ev dydow o
Aiwy eFeBanre TOV TUpavvoY, Kaicapa dé Bpovtos
EXTELVE syupvov Kal apiraxror, auTo TovTo Sevo-THTOS axpas Kal otpatnyias Hy Epyov, avdpa TOTaUTHY meptBeBAnpévov Svvapwy advhaxtov haBeiv Kat yupvor. ov yap eLaipyns ovee HLovos ov dALyous emimeg@y avetrAEv, ANN €x TOANOU
cuvbels | TO Bovvevpa Kal pera Toho ém0é-
pEvOs, av ovdels eyevoar’ aurov. 7 yap evOus
EXPLVE TOUS dpiaTtous i Tpoxpivat TOUS Lo TEev-Gévras ayabous éroinge. Aiov be cite Kpivas Kax@s émiarevoev EauToY Trovnpois elTEe yYpw@peEvos 254

1011

COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

alone had one aim from first to last, namely the restoration to the Romans of their ancient form of government.

IV. However, apart from these considerations, the struggle against Dionysius was surely unlike that against Caesar. For Dionysius must have been de- spised by every one of his associates, devoted as he was to wine, dice, and women; but to plan the over- throw of Caesar, and not to fear the ability, power, and good fortune of the man whose very name robbed the kings of Parthia and India of their sleep, be-tokened an extraordinary spirit, and one which fear could never induce to remit its lofty purposes. Therefore Dion had only to be seen in Sicily, and many thousands joined him in attacking Dionysius ; whereas the fame of Caesar, even after he had fallen, supported his friends, and his name raised the help-less boy who adopted it to be at once the foremost Roman, and he wore it as a charm against the power and hatred of Antony.

But should it be objected that Dion cast out the tyrant only after great struggles, while Brutus slew Caesar unarmed and unguarded, this very circum- stance was a result of the highest ability and gene- ralship, namely, that a man enveloped in such great power should be taken unarmed and unguarded. For not on a sudden, nor alone, or with a few helpers only, did he fall upon him and slay him, nay, his plan was long in forming, and his attack was made with many helpers, not one of whom proved false to him. For either he chose out at once the best men, or his choice of them before others, and his confi- dence in them, made them good. But Dion either chose unwisely and entrusted himself to bad men,

255

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

érroinoey éx Xpna Trav Tovnpovs, ovdéTepov Tabeiv
avdpi ppovipe Tpoancev. emiTemd dé Kal ITda-TWY AVT@ TowovTOUS EXopévw.pirous, Ud Ov amrw-NETO.
V. Kal Aiwvos pév TLpcopos ovbels épavn Te-covTos* GANG Bpotrov Kal TOV TONEuio "AvTO-
vlog pep | Barpev évdokus, Kaicap 6é xal Tas
Tiuas éTHpHaEV. EaTHKE dé xarnoos avdpids ev Mediodav THS évTos "AMTewy Tararias. ToUTOV voTepov idw@v o 6 Kaicap eLKOVUKOV évTa Kal Xaprev-TWS elpyac pévov maphrOev elt' émlaTas pera pax pov aK powpéevoy TOO TOUS dpxovras éxanet, pdcKkwv éxamovov aura THY mohty ein pevar TONE Lov éxoucav Tap aur. TO péev OvV TPO-TOV, OS ELKOS, 7} npvowvTo, Kal Tiva reyou Scatropovv-
TES eis adAAOUS anéBrerrav. as & ema tpéyas
O Kaicap ™ pos TOV avdpidvta kal guvaryaryav TO T poo wtov, ANN ov ovTOS, eon, ' TONEMLLOS
Gy néetepos evtavda & EO THKED 5 " €rb adhov KaTa-TaryEVTEs éovamnoay. o 6é petdidoas emnveré
Te TOUS Tardras @S TOUS pirous kal Tapa Tas
TUXAS BeBaious dvTas, Kal Tov avdpidvTa Kata Yopav weve éxéNevce.
256

COMPARISON OF DION AND BRUTUS

or else treated the men of his choice so as to turn them from good to bad, neither of which mistakes a prudent man ought to make. And in fact Plato censures him for choosing such friends as proved his ruin.

V. Further, no one arose to avenge Dion's death ; but in the case of Brutus, Antony, an enemy, gave him illustrious burial, and Octavius, an enemy, actu- ally took care to preserve his honours. For a bronze statue of him stood in Mediolanum in Cisalpine Gaul. This statue, at a later time, Octavius noticed as he passed by, for it was a good likeness and an artistic piece of work; then stopping, after a little, in the hearing of many he summoned the magistrates and declared that he had caught their city violating its treaty and harbouring an enemy of his. At first, then, as was natural, they denied it, and looked at one another in perplexity, not knowing what he meant. Then Octavius, turning to the statue and knitting his brows, said : “Well, is not this an enemy of mine who stands here?” At this, the magistrates were still more dumbfounded and held their peace. But Octavius, with a smile, praised the Gauls because they were true to their friends even in adversity, and gave orders that the statue should remain where it was.

257
VOL. VI. s
TIMOLEON

TIMOAEQON

"Euol! Hs trav Biwy awWwacbar pev ypadfs 235
auvéBn St’ éErépous, émipévery 5é xal didroxwpeiv 989 nal &v éuaurov, Oaomrep év EooTTpy TH (aropia TELPWMLEVOY ALAS YE TwS KOTMELY Kal adopotoby
mpos Tas éxelywy apetras Tov Biov. ovdév yap
’ x 4 , ? \ ,
GXN’ 4h ouvdtaitnoe Kal cupBi@cer TO yivopevoy Eotxev, OTav watTrep émi~evovpevov ExacTov avTaV év péper 51a THs (otopias UTrodexopevoe Kal Trapa-

, ’ a of ¥ , ”
AauBavovres avabewpapev “Gacos Env olos Te,
Ta Kuplwtata Kal KdAXNCTAa Tpos VYOaLY aTrO Tav mpukewy AapBavovtes.
Ped, hed: Ti rovTov yappa peilov av AABass,

\gQ N 3 , b] A 9 Ld 4
xal® apos €travophwaotv nOav évepyotepov; Anpo-Kpitos pev yap evyecOai dyot Seiv Grws evrAOY-90 7 4 \ \ , \
xov cdodwv Tuyxdvepev cal Ta cvpdura Kal Ta NpnoTa padrrov huiv éx Tod meptéyovtos 7 Ta
A \ \ \ A 4 wv” 9
gavra Kal Ta oKala cupdepntat, Noyov ovUT
> a \ \ 9 4 2 4
a0 Kal mpos atepavtous éxpépovta Sercrdat-povias eis ptdocopiay xataBaddov: npeis 8€ TH
mept thy iatoptay dratpiByn Kal TAS ypadjs TH 1 éuol with Bekker, after Stephanus and Reiske: éuol pév. 2 «al supplied by Sintenis, after Schaefer; Bekker supplies 4.

260
TIMOLEON

I pecan the writing of my “Lives”’ for the sake of others, but I find that I am continuing the work and delighting in it now for my own sake also, using history as a mirror and endeavouring in a manner to fashion and adorn my life in conformity with the virtues therein depicted. For the result is like nothing else than daily living and associating together, when I receive and welcome each subject of my history in turn as my guest, so to speak, and observe carefully “how large he was and of what mien,” ! and select from his career what is most important and most beautiful to know.
«And oh! what greater joy than this canst thou obtain,” ?
and more efficacious for moral improvement? De- mocritus says we ought to pray that we may be visited by phantoms which are propitious, and that from out the cireumambient air such only may en- counter us as are agreeable to our natures and good, rather than those which are perverse and bad, there- by intruding into philosophy a doctrine which is not true, and which leads astray into boundless supersti- tions. But in my own case, the study of history and the familiarity with it which my writing produces, 1 As Priam admired Achilles, Iliad, xxiv. 630.

2 An iambic trimeter from the Tympanistac of Sophocles (Nauck, Tray Graec. Frag.?, p. 270).

ouvnbeia TapacKevdalopev éEavtovs, Tas TaV apiotwv Kat Soxtpwrdtoyv prvypas vtodeyopévous del rais ~uyais, et Te padrov H eaxonOes ayev-ves ai TOV cuvorvTwy €F dvdyens Omtdiat mpoc-BarXoverv, éxxpovery Kai S:wGeicbat, wpos Ta Kdd\MoTa TOY Tapaderypwatwv tew Kal mpaciav atrootpépovtes Tv Stavoray. av ev T@ Trapovte mpoxexetpta weOd aoe Tov Tioréovtos Tov Kopu-Giov Kai rov Aipetrdiouv Ilavdou Biov, avdpav ov Hovov Tais aipécecty, ddd cal tais TUYaLs aya-Pais opotws xeypnuévwv él ta mpdypata, Kat
SiappiaBytnow wapetovtwy motepov evrrotpia PGaAXOY 7) povynce Ta péytoTa TOY TeTpAayLEevwY KaT@powoar.
I. Ta pev Yvpaxovoiwy mpdypata mpo ris
Tiporéovtos eis uxedtav atroaton is obTws elyer.
éret Atwy peév é€eXdoas Avovictoy tov tépavvor

evOvs avnpéOn dorm nal Svéotnaav of atv Aiwv Supaxovaious érevOepwoartes, 4 Sé modus &AXOV €& adXou petaBddrAXovea ouveyas TUpavvoy ib wAnOouvs KaK@v ptxpov arrédevtrev Epnwos eEwvas, THs 8 adANS BKedias 7 ev avadatatos Kal aroNs
mavtdracw Hon Sta Tovs Todeuous UrApyey, ai 5é mreiotar woAEs Ud BapBdpwv peyddwv Kab oTpAaTLWTaY apcOwy KaTeixovTo, padiws Tpoatepévwv tas petaBoras trav Suracter@v, Asovictos eres Sexatw Eévouvs suvayaywv Kal Tov TOTE KpatobvTa TaVv Xvpaxovciwy Nucaiov éferacas, 262

enables me, since I always cherish in my soul the records of the noblest and most estimable characters, to repel and put far from me whatever base, malicious, or ignoble suggestion my enforced associations may intrude upon me, calmly and dispassionately turning my thoughts away from them to the fairest of my examples. Among these were Timoleon the Corin- thian and Aemilius Paulus, whose Lives I have now undertaken to lay before my readers; the men were alike not only in the good principles which they adopted, but also in the good fortune which they enjoyed in their conduct of affairs, and they wili make it hard for my readers to decide whether the greatest of their successful achievements were due to their good fortune or their wisdom.!

I. The state of affairs in Syracuse, before the ex- pedition of Timoleon into Sicily, was as follows. After Dion had driven out Dionysius the tyrant, he was at once treacherously slain,? and those who had helped him to free Syracuse were divided among themselves. The city, therefore, was continually ex- changing one tyrant for another, and owing to a multitude of ills was almost abandoned, while as for the rest of Sicily, part of it was ruined and already wholly without inhabitants by reason of the wars, -and most of the cities were occupied by Barbarians of mixed races and soldiers out of employment, who readily consented to the successive changes in the despotic power. At last Dionysius, in the tenth year of his exile,’ collected mercenaries, drove out Nisaeus, who was at that time master of Syracuse,

1 In the MSS. this Introduction stands as the first chapter of the Aemilius Paulus.
2 See the Dion, chapter lvii. This was in 354 B.o.

3 346 B.C.

avéhaBe Ta Tpaypara Tad Kal cadearyKel
TUPAVVOS eE apxis, TAparoyos pev vIr0 pexpas Suvdpews THv peylo Tay TOV WWITOTE tupavvidey amonrecas, Tapahoywr pov 8 abOis é« puydébos Kal Tametvou TOV éxBadovtov KUpLOS YEVOMEVOS.
ot pev ovv Urropeivavres év TH TOEl TOV upa-Kovoloy édovhevov ovr' addws emveel Tupdvywp Kal TOTE TavTaTacly v0 cuppopav aTrny ple - pév@ THY puxiy, ot de Beédriorot Kal yvopipo-Tato. wpos 'lKnérnv TPATrevTEs TOV duvacrevovra TOV Acovtivey emeTpeyrav aurous exeivep Kal oT paTnyov etXovTo Tov TonEpOU, Berrie pev ov-Sevos évTa TOY OMONO'VOULEVWS TUpayVOV, éTépav
5" ovK eXovTes amoatpopny, Kal TLaTEvaavTes Lupaxoua ip TO yévos évTe Kal KexTnpév@ Stvapey ak.ouaxov Tpos TOV TUpavvov.
Il. "Ev tovr@ be Kapynéoviwy TTOAM peyddwp
Taparyevopevary els Yexedtav Kal Tols mpayyacwy ET ALWPOUHEVOY poPnbevtes ot LiKeorar TpeoBetav €BovrAovtTo Twéutrely els THY 'Ed dba Kal
mapa Kopw tw BonBevav aiTeiv, ov povov bia THY ouyyeverap ove' ad' @y HOn TorNaKIS EvEpye-THVTO TLaTEVOVTES €xeivolts, aAda Kal xaodov
T™Y money opa@vres prrehevepov Kai pug oTUpavvoy ovcav adel, Kat TOV Toheueoy TOUS rela TOUS Kat peyiarous TeTroNepNKViaY OUx brép Mryeuovias Kal Treovetias, arr vmep THS TOV 'EAM vev édev-Depias.) 5° 'Inétns, ate 8 THs aTpaTnyias
vrobeowv Thy Tupawioa TETrOLNLEVOS, ov THY Lupaxovaiwv édevOepiav, Kpvpa pev dn Tm pos tous Kapynéoviovs dicikexto, havepas 8 tovs 264

TIMOLEON

recovered the power again, and established himself as tyrant anew; he had been unaccountably de- prived by a small force of the greatest tyranny that ever was, and now more unaccountably still he had become, from a lowly exile, master of those who drove him forth. Accordingly, those of the Syra- cusans who remained in the city were the slaves of a tyrant who at all times was unreasonable, and whose spirit at this time was rendered altogether savage by misfortunes, but the best and most dis- tinguished of them had recourse to Hicetas the ruler of Leontini, put themselves under his protection, and chose him their general for the war; not that he was better than any acknowledged tyrant, but because they had no other refuge, and felt confidence in one who was a Syracusan by birth and possessed a force that was able to cope with that of Dionysius. II. Meanwhile the Carthaginians came with a large armament to Sicily and were watching their oppor- tunity, and the Sicilian Greeks, in their fright, wished to send an embassy to Greece and ask for assistance from the Corinthians, not only because they trusted them on account of their kinship! and in conse- quence of the many benefits they had already re- ceived from them, but also in general because they saw that the city was always a lover of freedom and a hater of tyrants, and had waged the most and greatest of her wars, not for supremacy and aggran- dizement, but for the liberty of the Greeks. Hicetas, however, since he had made a tyranny for himself, and not the freedom of Syracuse, his sole object in taking the field, had already held secret conferences with the Carthaginians; yet openly he commended the plan of 1 Syracuse was founded by Corinthians in 735 B.c.

> , b] , \ A , J
Upakovotous émnver Kal Tous perches evs IleXo-
' / b) , a
qmovynoov ouvetérepev, ov Bovropevos édAOeiv
, >] "a ed bd 97 24 > AX @ e cuppaytay éxeiev, adr éav, Strep eixos HY, OF KopivOcoe 1a tas "EXAnviKas tapaxas Kal acyold ? 4 N 4 VA ean b] ' Nias ameitwot THv BonOeav, édrritwv padov emi tous Kapyndoviovs ta mpdypata perakev Kai xpnoccOat cuppayols Kai cuvaywuioTais éxeivols émt tovs Supaxovalovs 7) Kata tod Tupdvvov.
TavdTa pev ovv oAiyov UaTtepoy éEnréyxOn.
III. Tav b¢ mpéoBewv trapayevopévwr, oi Ko-

4 1 2 AN a 9 4 ,
pivOrot, endecOar pev ael THY aTroLKidwy TOAEwV
kal padoTa THs Yuvpaxovoiwv eiwOdres, ovdevos
8 adtovs TéTe THY EXAnviKay Kata TUX NY Tapev-
A 9 > » > / \ Aa s
OXAODYTOS, GAN ev Eipnvn Kal aYOAH Siayovrtes, éyndicavto mpodupws BonOetv. Enrovpévov Sé oTpaTnyou Kal TAY apYovTwy ypapovtwy Kat Tpo-BadrXopévwv Tovs evdoxtpety ev TH TONE OTTOL-Satovras, els éx THY TOAA@Y avacTas wVvOpaTeE
Tiporéovta tov Tipodnpov, pnre mpocvovta Tois Kowwois éTt pnt €Aridos ToLavTns yevopuevov 7) mMpoatpéwews, AXA Oeod Tivos, ws EotKey, cis vodV éuBarovros te avOpwar@ toca'Tn Kal Twepl THY bf \ ¥ 4 9 VA Y a aipeow evOus Edape TUXNS evpévera Kat Tais

v 4 b , 4 b
adrAats mpaterw emnxorovbnoe ydpis émixocpovoa THY apEeTHnY Tod avdpos.
"Hy peév ovv yovéwy émipavav év TH trode, Tepodnpov cal Anpapiorns, diromarpis 5é Kal mpdaos Suapepovtws doa un ohddpa picoTvpavvos eivat Kal pucotrovnpos. év dé Tols ToNEuOLS OUTW 266
237

TIMOLEON

the Syracusans and joined them in sending the embassy to Peloponnesus, not because he wished that an allied force should come from there, but because he hoped that if, as was likely, the Corinthians should refuse their assistance because the disturbed condition of Greece kept them busy at home, he might more easily turn the control of affairs into the hands of the Carthaginians and use these invaders as allies and helpers in a struggle against the Syracusans or against Dionysius. This, then, was fully proved a little later.

III. But when the embassy arrived, the Corinthians, since they were wont to be ever solicitous for their colonial cities and for Syracuse in particular, and since by good fortune there was nothing in Greece at that time to disturb them, but they were enjoying peace and leisure, voted readily to give the assistance desired. And while they were seeking for a commander, and the magistrates were writing down the names of those in the city who were eager for the honour and proposing them for election, one of the common people rose to his feet and nominated Timoleon the son of Timodemus, although he no longer took part in public business, and had no expectation or purpose of doing so; but some god, as it would seem, put it into the man’s mind to nominate him, such was the kindliness of Fortune that shone forth at once upon his election, and such the grace that attended his subsequent actions and adorned his virtues.

He was born of parents who were illustrious in the city, Timodemus and Demariste, and he was a lover of his country and exceedingly gentle, except as he was a hater of tyrants and of base men. As

KANOS Kab Opares exeKpaTo THY Pol WOTE TrON-AV pe € év vév cuvectv, ovK éXaTTW SE ynp@VTOS avdpetay éemepaiver Oar Tais mpoakeov. aded pov é Bs Tepo avny, Tm pea Butepov, ovdev avT@ ™poa-OpoLoy, jaXr eum AnKTOV Kal Step Oappevov € EpwTe
povapxias bro thoy pavhov Kat Eévwv otpa-TLOTLK OY ael mrept aurov évT@V, every Tt Soxouvta parySaiov év Tais oTparelass Kal prdoxivduvov.
@ Kat TOUS TOALTAS T poo aryOLEVOS Qs avip ToAeE-piKos Kat Spactnptos ep’ TYE WOVL@Y érdrtero.
Kat 7 pos TAUTA Teporéav auT@ TUVNpYet, Ta pev apapTnpara TavTamacww aTroKpUTTT@Y n Mikpa
paiver Oar TOL, a 8 7 duos e&éhepev acteia KATAKOG MOV Kal cuvautwv.
IV. "Ey &€ 77 TOs ’Apyetous Kat Krewvaious waxy TOV KopivBiav) pev Tiporéwv éTUXED év Tots om ras TeTaypevos, Tov Oé Tipopavny TOV immeéwv MYyOUpEvov kaTahapBavet Kivduvos ofus.
o yap tarmros avTov dmecelcaro TANYD TepiTEer@v €is TOUS TroAEpious, Kal TOY éra @V ob pev evOvs éoxopriaOncay poknfevtes, ot § Tapapeivarres oALryou ™ pos TONAOUS paxopevor Xaretros avrei-Xov. @S OU O Tiporear Kateive TO cupBeBnkos, Spon mpoaBonOnaas Kal TH doniba tov Tipopavous KetLevou mpobépevos, Kat TONG pev axovtia pata, Toddas Se wAnyas éx XeLpos avade-Edpevos eis TO oo pa Kal Ta Orda, pods ewoaro
TOUS TONELLOUS kal dtéowoe TOV adedpov.
"Erret 5 of Ko ivOtot dediores pn wadoev ola
Kal mporepor UTO TOV TUMpaX ov atroBarovtes Thy Tod, eyrnpicavto tpépeav Eévous reTpa-

a soldier his nature was so well and evenly attempered that great sagacity was manifested in the exploits of his youth, and no less bravery in those of his old age. He had a brother Timophanes, older than he, and not at all like him, but headstrong and filled with a ruinous passion for absolute power by worth- less friends and foreign military adventurers who were ever about him, and having the reputation of being rather impetuous and fond of danger in mili- tary service. Therefore he won followers among the citizens and as an efficient warrior was given posts of high command. And Timoleon aided him in obtain- ing these, trying to conceal his mistakes altogether or to make them seem trifling, and embellishing and enhancing his good natural qualities.

IV. In the battle fought by the Corinthians against the Argives and Cleonaeans,! Timoleon was stationed among the men-at-arms, and Timophanes, who commanded the cavalry, was overtaken by extreme peril. For his horse was wounded and threw him in among the enemy, and of his comrades, some scattered in panic flight, while the few who remained fought against great numbers and were with difficulty holding their ground. Accordingly, when Timoleon saw what had happened, he came running to the help of Timophanes and held his shield over him as he lay on the ground, and after receiving many javelins and many hand to hand blows upon his person and his armour, at last succeeded in repulsing the enemy and saving his brother.

After this, the Corinthians, fearing lest they should suffer a second loss of their city through the treachery of their allies,2 voted to maintain four hundred mer-

1 Perhaps between 368 and 366 B.c.

* As they had at the hands of the Argives in 393 B.c.

, , wv U 4
Koclous Kai ToVTwY apyovta Tipopavny Katéotn-cav, 0 6€ Tav KaXav Kal Stxaiwy vreptdav evOds 3 a, 3 e y \ 4s id : e ~
émépaivey €& Ov TroinoeTat THY TOMY Ud avTO, Kal TUXVOUS GvEXw@Y AKpiTOUS TOY TPWTwWY TOAL-nn" 9 v4 9 AN e \ 14 , 4
trav avéderEev a'tos Eavtov Tupavvoy, Bapéws pé-pov o Tiporéwv, Kal cupdpopay Trorovpevos EavTod Thy éxeivou Kaxiay, émexeipnoe pev avT@ diané-yeoOa: xai tapaxadeiy adévta thy paviay cal Suotvyiay THs émiOupias éxeivns Cnreiy Twa TOV nHeaptTnuevwy éerravopOwolv mpos Tovs moALTas, atnwoapévov & éxeivou xal xatappovycartos, ef '\ n~ ' >] a > a ovTw twapadkaBov tav pev oixetwy Aioxvarop,

adedpov ovta ris Tiuoddvous yuvainds, trav Sé
\
ditwy tov pavtiw bv Ldrvpov pév Bedrropstros,
v4
"Eqopos 6€ cat Tiparos ’OpOayopay ovopafovor,
\ 5 ‘N e , 9 , Vv 9 a ‘N

Kat Otadttr@v nyepas odiyas avdis avéBn Tpos

9 a “

tov adeAghov’ Kal wepiotdvtTes avtTov ot TpEls

9 nA “A

xaOixérevoy adda viv ye ypnodpevoy Aoyion@

a A .y 4 “ Q

petaBarécBar. tod 5€ Tepoddvouvs mpwtov peév

auT@V KaTAayEA@YTOS, ETerta 5é TMpos Gpyny exdepopévou Kal YaXeTratvovtos, o pév Tipodéwv atro-

‘N n

Yopncas puxpovy auTov Kal ouvyKxadrudpevos

eiatixet Saxpvov, éxeivor O¢ ta Eipy orracdpevor taxv StadpOeipovaty avrov.
V. Tis 5€ mpdkEews di:aBonBeions oi pév xpc-

A ,
tTisto. TOY KopivOiwy émnvouy thy picotovnpiay ld aA AY
kal peyadopuytay tov Tiporéovtos, Ste YpnaTos
jy Kat pidotxetos Guws thy Tatpida Tis oiKias Kat TO Kadov nal Sixatov mpoetipnoe Tov cup-270

cenaries, and put Timophanes in command of them; but he, without regard for honour and justice, at once took measures to bring the city under his own power, and after putting to death without a trial great numbers of the leading citizens, declared himself tyrant. At this, Timoleon was greatly distressed, and considering his brother's baseness to be his own mis- fortune, he attempted to reason with him and exhort him to renounce that unfortunate and mad ambition of his and seek to make some amends for his transgres- sions against his fellow citizens. But when his brother rejected his appeals with scorn, he took his kinsman Aeschylus, who was a brother of the wife of Timo- .phanes, and his friend the seer whose name, accord- ing to Theopompus, was Satyrus, but according to Ephorus and Timaeus, Orthagoras, and after waiting a few days went up again to his brother; and the three, surrounding him, besought him even now to listen to reason and change his mind. But Timo- phanes first mocked them, and then lost his temper and was violent, whereupon Timoleon withdrew a little space from him and stood weeping with muffled head, while the other two, drawing their swords, speedily despatched him.!

V. The deed having been noised abroad, the most influential Corinthians applauded Timoleon for his hatred of baseness and greatness of soul, in that, although a kindly man and fond of his family, he had nevertheless set his country before his family, and honour and justice before expediency ; for when

1 Diodorus (xvi. 65, 4) says that Timoleon slew his brother with his own hand in the market place; Nepos (7%imoleon, i. 4) supports Plutarch's account, though with differing details.

éporTos, apo tevovta pev vmrép THs Tatpidos Stacéaas tov adeAdor, émriBovrcvoavta bé avTh kal xatadovAwadpevoy amoxteivas. ot S€ py Suvdpevor Chv év tH Snuokpatia Kai mpos Tovs
Suvdotas aroBAérev ciwOotes TO pev Oavatw
Tov Tupavvou TpoceTroLovYTO Yaipety, Tov dé Tipmo-
A€ovta AoLdopodvyTes ws aveBes é€erpyacpévoy Kal
pua @oes Epyov eis GOupiav Tepieaotnocav. érret Sé Kal thv pntépa Suvadopety tuOopevos Kal dovas te Seas Kat Katapas er avtov apacbat dpike-Sets €Babile trapapvOnoopevos, 8 wpoatdeiv ovy vuméuewe THY Ow, adda THY olKiav arré-Kreltoe, TOTE 67 TavTdtacet TEpiduTrOS yevopevos
kat ovvtapayOels thy Stavoray Bpunoe pev ws SitabOepav éavtov améyecOar tpodins, tav dé ditwy ov tepiddvtTwy, adda Tracay dénow Kal macav dvdryxqy T poceveyKapevoy eyve Cav xa" éavtov, éx pécou yevouevos: Kal TrodtTELvay pev
anmacay adjce, tovs dé mpwrovs ypovous ovde KATUSY els TrOALY, GAA' adnuovev Kai TAAVe@pEvos

év Tols épnuotatos TAY dypav SvétpuBev.
VI. Odtws ai xpices, dv pn BeBatornta nat pounv éx Aoyou Kal dirocodias mpocrAdBwouv emt tas mpdkes, oelovtar Kxal mrapadpépovtrar pasios bro TeV TUXOVTMY érraivey Kal Yoyor, éxkpovopevat TOY OLKElwy AoYytopav. Sei yap ov povov, @s éoLxe, THY mpakiw Karnv elvar Kal dixaiav, GdXAa nal thy Sokay, ad' hs mpdttetat, povepov Kal dpetatTwtor, iva mpattwpey Soxt-pdoavres, und @owep ob ALyvot TA TANT LLA TOV éSecudtwy ofutaty SimKxovtes émiOupia taxXLoTa
a

his brother was fighting valiantly for his country, Timoleon had saved his life, but after he had plotted against her and enslaved her, Timoleon had slain him. However, those who were unable to live in a democracy and were accustomed to pay court to men in power, while they pretended to rejoice at the death of the tyrant, still, by their abuse of Ti- moleon as the perpetrator of an impious and abomin- able deed, they drove him into despondency. And now he learned that his mother was angry with him and uttered dreadful reproaches and fearful impreca- tions against him, and went to plead his cause with her; but she could not endure to see his face, and closed her house against him. Then indeed he became altogether a prey to grief and disordered in mind, and determined to starve himself to death; but his friends would not suffer this, and brought all manner of entreaty and constraint to bear upon him, so that he made up his mind to live by himself, apart from the world. So he gave up all public life, and for a long while did not even return to the city, but spent his time wandering in great distress of mind among the most desolate parts of the country.

VI. So true is it that the purposes of men, unless they acquire firmness and strength from reason and philosophy for the activities of life, are unsettled and easily carried away by casual praise and blame, being forced out of their native reckonings. For it would seem that not only our action must be noble and just, but the conviction also from which our action springs must be abiding and unchangeable, in order that we may be satisfied with what we are about to do, and that mere weakness may not make us dejected over actions which have once been accomplished, when ducxepaivovew éeumrnobévtes, ows tyets em)

tais mpakeot cuvtedcoOciaas dOupapev Ov acbévera atropapatvopevns THS TOU KaXOD haytacias.
aiaypov yap % peTdvora trotet Kal TO KaNOS TE-

Tpayyevov, 7 & €& ériatnuns @punuern Kat do-ytopod mpoaipects ovd adv mraicwow ai mpakes petaBarr€cTat. S10 Pwxiwr pév o ’AOnvaios trois tard Aewa bévous mparropévors éevavtiwbels, ered) xatopOobv éxetvos éddxet xal Ovovtas éwpa Kai peyaravxoupévous TH vixn Tous "AOnvaious, eltrev
as éBovreto dv ait@ taita pev tmpaxOjvat, BeBovrciacbat & éexeiva: apodpoteporv & ’Apioret-dns 0 Aoxpos, els dy tav TTAdtwvos étaipwr, aitouvtos yey avrov yuvaixa Atovuciov tot mpeoButépou play tov Ovyatépwr, jocov av pn vexpav iSeiy THY KOpHY } TUPavY@ auVOLKOvCAD, arOKTEl-vavtos S€ tovs traidas avTod pet’ odLyor ypovoy tov Atovuciov cai muOouévou apos Bp et tHVv
auTny ere yuopunv Exou wept THs éexdocews TaV
Ouyatépwy, amrexpivato toils péev yeyevnpévots AvTreiaOa, Tois & etpnuevors pn perapérco Oar.
TavTa péev ovv icws peiCovos Kal TedeLoTépas
apETHS ETL, |
VII. To 5 Tieporéortos ert tots mempaypévots aabos, elt olxTos mv Tov TEOYNKOTOS ElTE TIS “pntpos aides, odtw xatéxdace Kal ovvétpiper avtov tv Stavoray wot elxoot axedov érav Siayevomévor pndé pias émripavods unde trordetTixhs dwacbar mpdkews. dvayopevOévtos ody avtoi, 274

TIMOLEON

the fair vision of the Good fades away; just as gluttons who devour cloying viands with the keenest appetite are very soon sated and then disgusted with them. For repentance makes even the noble action base; whereas the choice which springs from a wise and un- derstanding calculation does not change, even though its results are unsuccessful. For this reason Phocion the Athenian,! after having opposed the activities of Leosthenes, when Leosthenes was thought to be successful and the Athenians were seen sacrificing and exulting over the victory,? said he could have wished that the achievement were his own, but was glad that he counselled as he did. And with more force Aristides the Locrian, one of Plato’s com- panions, when Dionysius the Elder asked him for one of his daughters in marriage, said he would be more pleased to see the maid dead than living with a tyrant ; and when, after a little while, Dionysius put his children to death and then asked him insultingly whether he was still of the same mind about giving his daughters in marriage, answered that he was afflicted by what had been done, but did not repent him of what had been said. Such utterances as these, then, betoken perhaps a larger and more consummate virtue. |

VII. But the grief of Timoleon over what had been done, whether it was due to pity for his dead brother or to reverence for his mother, so shattered ‘ and confounded his mental powers that almost twenty years passed without his setting his hand to a single conspicuous or public enterprise. Accordingly, when

1 See the Phocion, xxiii. 4.

2 Won by the allied Greeks under Leosthenes over Antipater of Macedonia, in 323 B.c. The victory was soon followed by the defeat of the Greeks at Crannon.

Kat TOU Sypou Tm poOvpas defapevov Kal XeLpo-Tov}aavTos, avacTas Trexr<tdns © TOTE Kal
Suvdapes Kal bofn ™pw Tevov €y TH TodEl, TWape-Kdnret Tov Tiodeorra. mept Tas mpaters aryabov dvdpa elvau cal yevvaiov. " "Ap pév yap, Edn, ANOS aryavian, Tupavvoy avnpynxévas So€oper, ay &€ davrws, abedpov."
Tapackevafopévou S€ tov Tiporéovtos tov éxm houv Kat TTpATLOTAS oupayovTos, exopia On ypappara Tpos TOUS Kopw ious Tap 'Ixétou pnviovta HV petaBohny avTov Kat m podoaiav.
@s yap taxora, Tous mpéa Bets eerreupe, Tois Kapyndoviors m poo Dépevos avapavooy 1 pate per éxeivav Srrws Atoviatov éxBadav Lupaxovcay autos éoTas TUpavvos. wat Sedorxms 17) 1 pOTEpov edovens x KopivOov Suvdpews cal oTpaT you Siapywoey ai mpdakets avtov, emrepyer émistohny ois KoprvGiors ppdtoveay os ovdev déov mpdry pata, Kat Samavas EYely avTous mréovTas els Licedav Kat «evdvvevortas, aAws Te Kal Kapyndovicv dTraryopevorT wv Kat Tapa-purarropevov vavat Todas Tov oTOAOP, obs autos avaryxacbeis éxeivov Bpadvrevtav row gaLtTo ouppdxous él Tov TUpavvoy. TOUT@P dé TOY Ypapmarov avayvocbevTav, et Kat TLS nT beos elye 7 poTepov TOY KopwOiev Tm pos ™HY oTpateiay, TOTE TaVvTas 7) T pos rov 'IKérny 6 opyn TapaEuvev, BoE svyXopnyiaat mpobvps T@ Tiporéovte xal cupTapackevdcat Tov ex ouv.
VIII. Tevopever d€ TaV veav égTot wy, xal Tots oTpATLWT ALS ov eder opt Bevtwy, ai perv i léperar
tis Kopns dvap édofav idety tas Deas pos 276

he had been nominated general, and the people had readily approved of it and given him their votes, Telecleides, who was at that time the foremost man in the city for reputation and influence, rose up and exhorted Timoleon to be a noble and brave man in his enterprises. ‘ For if,’ said he, “thou contendest successfully, we shall think of thee as a tyrannicide ; but if poorly, as a fratricide.” |

But while Timoleon was getting ready for his voyage and collecting soldiers, a letter was brought to the Corinthians from Hicetas which disclosed his treacherous change of sides. For as soon as he had sent out the embassy, he openly attached himself to the Carthaginians and acted with them in order to expel Dionysius from Syracuse and become its tyrant himself. And fearing lest his opportunities for action should escape him if a general and an army came from Corinth in advance, he sent a letter to the Corinthians telling them that there was no need of their putting themselves to the trouble and expense of a voyage to Sicily with all its perils, especially since the Carthaginians, with whom their delay had forced him to make an alliance against the tyrant, forbade their expedition and were on the watch for it with a large fleet. When this letter had been read publicly, if any of the Corinthians had before been lukewarm towards the expedition, their wrath against Hicetas now incited them all, so that they eagerly joined in supplying Timoleon and helping him get ready for his voyage.

VIII. When the fleet was ready, and the soldiers provided with what they needed, the priestesses of Persephone fancied they saw in their dreams that gocdess and her mother making ready for a journey,

aTroénpiay tivd oTeddopevas Kal Aeyovoas ws Teporéovre péAXovaL cuprheiy els Zexedav. 610 kal tpenpn KATAG KEUGTAVTES lepay ot Kopivécor
taiv Ocaivy émavopacay. autos 5° éxeivos ets Acrpous mopevbels é0uce TC Gee, kal KxaTa-Baivoyros els TO pavTetoy avToD yiverat onpeiov.
ex yap Tov Kpepapevev avabnuarav rawwia TU
danoppueioa Kal pepopern, arepavous éxoua Kal Nixas épmrerrorkiApevas, TEepLeTETE Th Kepary TOU Teporéovtos, as Soxety avrov vid tod Beod oTehavovpevoy emt Tas mpafers mporéumea Ban.
Nads dé Kopw0ias bev Exwv érrda, Kepxupaias
dé duo, Kal TH dexarny Aevaadtov T™pooTrapa-TYOVTMV, avnxOn. Kal vuKTOS éuBarov els TO TEAAYOS Kal TvEevpare KaX@ Xp@pevos édotev aidvidicas payévta Tov oupavov umrép THIS vEeos

exXeae ToAv Kal Tepipaves mip. éx dé TOUTOV Aaptras aplcioa tais pvotixais eupepiys Kat cupmapabéovea Tov auTov Spopov, 7 pddtoTa HS "IraMas émeixov ot xuBepvijrat, KaTecnnyper. ot 5€ puivress TO pdopa tots dveipace TOV (épeLray paptupeiy arrepaivovto, wal tas Deas auvepamrrovas THs oTpatelas mpopaive é& ovpavod rd aéhas elvat yap tepav TIS Kopns Thy BtKeNay, €rret Kal Ta Tept THY aptayny avrobe pudoroyotor yevér Bat Kal THY vhoov év Tois yapmols dvaxadvrrnptov aura of hvac.
IX. Ta pev ovy rapa TOV Jewy ovTe TOV OTO-
Nov eOdppuve' Kal omevdovres, as} To TréAaryos StatrAéovtes, éxopiCovro mapa tHy "Iradiav. ta

1 After this word, Sintenis and Bekker assume a lacuna in the text, in which other motives for haste were given.

and heard them say that they were going to sail with Timoleon to Sicily. Therefore the Corinthians equipped a sacred trireme besides, and named it after the two goddesses. Furthermore, Timoleon himself journeyed to Delphi and sacrificed to the god, and as he descended into the place of the oracle, he received the following sign. From the votive offer- ings suspended there a fillet which had crowns and figures of Victory embroidered upon it slipped away and fell directly upon the head of Timoleon, so that it appeared as if he were being crowned by the god and thus sent forth upon his undertaking.

And now, with seven Corinthian ships, and two from Corcyra, and a tenth which the Leucadians furnished, he set sail.! And at night, after he had entered the open sea and was enjoying a favouring wind, the heavens seemed to burst open on a sudden above his ship, and to-pour forth an abundant and conspicuous fire. From this a torch lifted itself on high, like those which the mystics bear, and running along with them on their course, darted down upon precisely that part of Italy towards which the pilots were steering. The soothsayers declared that the apparition bore witness to the dreams of the priest- esses, and that the goddesses were taking part in the expedition and showing forth the light from heaven; for Sicily, they said, was sacred to Per- sephone, since mythology makes it the scene of her rape; and the island was given to her as a wedding present.

IX. Such, then, were the signs from Heaven which encouraged the expedition ; and making haste, since they were crossing the open sea, they skirted the

1 In 344 Bo,
279
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

o aro HS YiKedias arpyehdopeva wodAqy a7r0-piav T? Tepodéovre Kal dv08 oOupiay Tots oTpa-TUOTAS Taperyev. 0 yap 'Teérns pa. VEVLRNKOS
Avovictov Kat Ta mhetoTa pépy TOV UpaKxoUT oy
KATELANPOS éxeivyov pev ets THY axpoTrohsy eat THY Kadoupevny Nijcov TUVETTAApEVOY aUuTOS
ouveTTONopKel xat ouprrepteretxite, Kapyndovious
de ppovrivery éxéXevey OWS OvK émtByo otro Tiporecv LixeMas, arr' anrwa Berra éxeivov auTot Kal' ouxtay StavepoivTat pos aXA1dous THY vijcov. oi dé méwrrova ty €LxOoL T pen pers CK,
'Prytov, ed' ov érémXeov mpea Bevtal map auTov
T pos Teporéovra Kopilovres Aoyous Tow ™partopeEvoLs opoious. Tapayeryat yap evmperets xal mpopaaets ioav ent pox Onpois BovAevpaou, aftovvroy avrov MED, et Bovrouro, Tiporéovra,
ovpBovrov Tce | map 'Teérqv Kat KOLY@VOV ev
Same parypeveov amravroy, Tas 5é vais xat TOUS oTPATIOTAS dmroa Téhnety eis KoptvOov, as rob TONE LOU pK pov amonelmovTos ownpiaGat, Kap-xndoviev dé Kohvewv THY 6iaBacw Kal paxeo Bat
T pos Bialopévous eTOtpeoV bvTw@y. @S ovY KaTa-TNEVTAVTES ELS To 'Pryyeov ot Kopiv@tor Tois TE mpeoBevpact TovTOLS evéTUXoOV Kal TOUS Poivias ov mpoaw vavroxobvTas xateisor, Ix8ovr0 pev UPpispevor, Kal TapioTato Tao Opyn Tpos Tov
'Teérqy kat S€os uirép LuxediwTav, obs capas éwpwv GOa AevtTropévous Kat piobdy 'Ikéty pev
mpodocias, Kapyndoviors 5é tupavvidos, edoxet
3 apnyavov bmrepBareaOat cat ras avutobs TaD BapBdpwv vads dumdacias éhoppovoas xal THY éxel pe? 'Inérov Suvayv, § otpatnynoortes TOLEV.
280

240

coast of Italy. But the tidings from Sicily much perplexed Timoleon and disheartened his soldiers. For Hicetas, after defeating Dionysius in battle and occupying most of the outlying portions of Syracuse, had shut the tyrant up in the acropolis and what was called The Island, where he was himself helping to besiege and wall him in, while he ordered the Cartha- ginians to see to it that Timoleon should not land in Sicily, but that he and his forces should be repulsed, and that they themselves, at their leisure, should divide the island with one another. So the Cartha- ginians sent twenty triremes to Rhegium, on board of which were envoys from Hicetas to Timoleon carry- ing proposals which conformed to his proceedings. For they were specious and misleading suggestions covering base designs, the envoys demanding that Timoleon himself, if he wished, should come to Hicetas as counsellor and partner in all his successes, but that he should send his ships and his soldiers back to Corinth, since, as they claimed, the war was almost finished, and the Carthaginians were ready to prevent their passage and to fight them if they tried to force one. When, therefore, the Corinthians, after putting in at Rhegium, met these envoys, and saw the Carthaginians riding at anchor not far off, they were indignant at the insult put upon them, and were all of them filled with rage at Hicetas and fear for the Sicilian Greeks, who, as they clearly saw, were left to be a prize and reward, to Hicetas on the one hand for his treachery, and to the Carthaginians on the other for making him tyrant. Moreover, it seemed impossible to overcome both the ships of the Barbarians confronting them there with twice their numbers, and the force under Hicetas in Syracuse, where they had come to take command. 281

X. O¥ ppv add o Tipor€wr trois mpecBevtais nal tois apxovo. tav Kapynooviev évrvyov érietxas Eby weiPeaBar pev ols KeNevovar (Ti yap dv xal mepaivey drreOav), eOérew 5é tadta modrews 'EXAnvib0s Kal dirns cows THs 'Pyyiver €vavtiov dxovoas Kal eimov atraddatTeEcOat:
nal yap avT@ tovto mpos aoddrcav Siadéperv, Kdeivous épevely BeBarorepov ols émaryyehdovrat
mept Yupaxovetwy Sip paptupt Tas oporoyias TrapaxaTabepévovs. tavta & wiérewev avrois anatny émi tH SsaBaoe teyvalwv, nal ouvvetéxvatoy of tav '"Pyyivev orpatnyol, mdvres erOupovvres ev KopiwOiors ta wpdypata tev LixeAtwToav yevéoOar, kat doBovpevor tHv TaY BapBdpov yetviacry. 66 cuvipyov éxxdyoiav al Tas mUAas aréxdELoV, WS pn TpOS AAO TL tpémecOat Tovs mroditas, Kai mapedrOovtes els TO TAGs éxpavTo pnet Noywr, Erepos ETEPH Trapa-
S:d00¢ THY auTiny broOectv mpds ovdév Tédos, GANA Sidyovtes GAXwWS TOV ypovory, éws avayxOdow ai tov Kopiwbiwv rpinpers, cai Kapyndovious emi THs éxxAnoias KaTéyovtes avuTroTTTas, ATE

Kat tov Tiporéorvtos tapovros Kai mapéyovros Soxnow GScov ov'mw pos TOY OYyor avicracBaL
cai Snunyopety. ws & amrnyyeré tis adt@ xpvda Tas pev GddraS Tpinpers avnxPar, play Oé THY éxeivou mepiuévery UtroAcdeupevny, Srexdvs Tov byXov, dua tov tept tO Bhywa 'Phyivev ovvertxpuntovtwy, Kai xataBdas énl thy Oddarrapv 282

X. However, after Timoleon had met the envoys of Hicetas and the commanders of the Carthaginians, he calmly said that he would obey their commands (for what would he accomplish by refusing ?), but he wished that, before he went away, their proposals and his reply should be made in the presence of the people of Rhegium, a Greek city and a friend of both parties; for this would conduce to his own safety, and they, on their part, would abide more firmly by their promises regarding the Syracusans if they made a people witness to the agreements into which they entered. In making this overture to them he was contriving a deceit which should secure his safe passage across the strait, and the leaders of the Rhegians helped him contrive it, since they were all desirous that the affairs of the Sicilian Greeks should be in the hands of the Corinthians, and feared to have the Barbarians as neighbours. Therefore they convened an assembly and closed the gates, in order that the citizens might not engage in any other business; then they came forward and addressed the multitude in lengthy speeches, one handing over to another the same topic and coming to no conclusion, but protracting the time to no apparent purpose, until the Corinthian triremes should have put to sea, and keeping the Carthaginians in the assembly free from all suspicion, since Timoleon also was there and led them to think that he was on the point of rising to address the people. But when some one secretly brought him word that the other triremes had put to sea, and that one only, his own, had been left behind and was waiting for him, he slipped through the crowd unnoticed, with the connivance of the Rhegians about the bema, went down to the sea,

283

4 éEérdevce Sid Tayéwr. Kai KatnxOnoay eis Tavpopéviov THs Wkedlas, Urodeyouévov ral xadodvtos avtovs étt mddat TpoOvuws 'Avdpopdxou Tob THY TOMY éxovtos Kal Suva revovtos.
odTos HY TatTIp Timaiov Tov toToptKod, Kal TOAD KpaTLaTos Tov TOTE duvac revovtwy ev LeKerla
yevouevos TMV TE EAUTOU TOALTOY HYELTO VOULLwS
kat Sixaiws, cal mpos Tovs Tupavvous havepos Hv
5 aet Staxeipevos atrexOas nal adrXotpiws. 816 Kal
Teporéovte tote THY TOALY OppNTHpLoY Taper xe, Kal Tovs moditas érece acuvaywvilerOar rots KoptvOiows rat cvverevOepody ty Yuxediav.

XI. Oi 8 ev to ‘Pnyio Kapyndomot rod Tipo-Novos avnyyévou Kat THS éexxAnatas Starvbeians yYanrerras pépovtes, ev TH KatTectpatrnynoGar dia-rpiBny trois Pnytvots mapetyov, et Poivixes dvtes ovK apéoxowtTo Tois dt atatns MTpaTtopéevots.
2 mwéutrovot © ovv cis TO Tavpopévov mpeoBevtny mt Tpunpous, 0s ToAAd SvareyOels trpos Tov Avdpd-paxov, éerax as cal BapBapicds dvarewdpevos el py THY TayioTny éexBdrXrE Tovs KopiGiovs, TéXos UTTiay Thy yxelpa SeiEas, elt’ adOus xaTa-TTPEWAS NTELANTE TOLAVTNY OVTAaY AVTO THY TOALY
TovavTnyv wornocev. yedacas 8 o ‘Avdpopaxos ado pev ovdev atrexpivaro, THY Sé yelpa viv pev UmTiav, WS éxeivos, vov Sé TpNV TpoTeivas éxé-Nevoev atroTrAEly aUTOY, EL un BovrAoLTO THY VadY avtt roravrns yevérOar ToravTny.
3 ‘O & ‘Inérns ruOopevos tiv tod Tipor€ovtos diaBacw Kal goRnOeis peteréurpato toAdds tov Kapynooviey tpinpes. Ste xal wavtdmact 24) 284

TIMOLEON

and sailed off with all speed. And they put in at Tauromenium in Sicily, whither they had been earnestly invited some time ago, and where they were now kindly received by Andromachus, the master and ruler of the city. Andromachus was father of Timaeus the historian, and after making himself by far the most powerful of the rulers in Sicily at that time, not only led his own citizens in the ways of law and justice, but was also known to be always averse and hostile to tyrants. Therefore at this time also he allowed Timoleon to make the city a base of operations, and persuaded his citizens to join the Corinthians in their struggle to set Sicily free. XI. But the Carthaginians in Rhegium, after Ti- moleon had put to sea and the assembly had been dissolved, were indignant, and in their discomfiture afforded amusement to the Rhegians, seeing that, though Phoenicians, they were not pleased with what was effected by deceit. Nevertheless, they sent an envoy aboard a trireme to Tauromenium, who, after a long conversation with Andromachus, in which he menaced him in insolent barbaric fashion if he did not expel the Corinthians as soon as pos- sible, finally showed him his hand with the palm up, and then turning it down, threatened that he would turn his city as completely upside down. Andro- machus, however, with a laugh, made no further reply than to stretch out his hand, as the Barbarian - had done, now palm up, and now palm down, and then order him to sail off, if he did not wish his ship to be turned upside down in the same fashion. But Hicetas was afraid when he learned that Ti- moleon had crossed the strait, and sent for great numbers of the Carthaginian triremes. And now it

285

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

auvéBn tovs Lupaxovaious atroyvavar THY cw-Tnpiav, 6pavras Tov pev Mpévos altav Kapyn-ovlous xpatodrras, thy dé Trodw Ixérny éxovta, Ths & axpas xuptevovta Atovictov, Tiporéovta
5é dotep ex Kpacrédov Tivds AeTTTOD THs Taupo-PEVLTOY TOALYUNS TH ZiKedia wpoonprnpuévov én' érridos! aabevods xai Bpayelas Suvdpews: xurI-wv yap auto TTpaTLOT av rar Tpopis TovTots dvayKaias wréov ovdéy vIrfpyev. ovd émiatevor ai moAes StamAeat KaKav ovcat Kai mpos amav-Tas aTnyptwpévat TOUS Nyoupévous aTpaToTrédwy, paduota Ota THY KadXirirov cal Pdpaxos amioti-av, @v o pev 'AOnvaios adv, o 5é Aaxedatpovios, apporepor 5é gddoxovtes wrép Tis éAevOepias qeewv Kal Katadvely Tovs povapyous, ypuaov arrédetkav? 7H Yuxedia Tas ev TH TUpavvids cup-gopas cat pakapiwrépovs Soxeiv éroinaay tods KaTaoTpeyravras év tH Sovrcia tev émidovtwy THY avTovopuiay.
XIT. Ovden ody éxcivwv Bertiova tov KopivOcov écecOar tpoadoxawyres, AANA TAUTA Wary Hee
mpos avuTous godicpata xai SeXedopata, pet éATridwy Ypnotav Kai diravOpwrrwy vrroc yécewv eis petaBornv Seamotou Kxawvov tiWacevopéevous, imw@mrevoy kat Siexpovorvto tas tav KopwOiwv mpoxAnoes wAnv 'Adpavetav, of moAW pLxpav peév, iepav 8 ovacav 'Adpavod, Oeod tiv0s Tipepévou diadhepovtws ev 6An LKedia, KatotKodvres éotaciacay mpos aNAXOUs, of pev 'Ixérny apocayopevor kat Kapyndovious, ot 5é mpos Tipor€ovta 1 én' édxl3os Bekker has aw' éAxlSos, after Coraés. 2 anéSeitav Blass, after Hemsterhuis: @8e:tay.

was that the Syracusans altogether despaired of their deliverance, seeing their harbour in the power of the Carthaginians, their city in the hands of Hicetas, and their citadel in the possession of Dionysius; while Timoleon had but a hold as it were on the fringe of Sicily in the little city of Tauromenium, with a feeble hope and a small force to support him; for apart from a thousand soldiers and provi- sions barely sufficient for them, he had nothing. Nor did the cities feel confidence in him, over full of ills as they were and embittered against all leaders of armies, particularly by reason of the per- fidy of Callippus! and Pharax,? one of whom was an Athenian, and the other a Lacedaemonian ; but both of them, while declaring that they came to secure the freedom of Sicily and wished to overthrow its tyrants, made the calamities of Sicily under her tyrants seem as gold in comparison, and brought her people to think those more to be envied who _ had perished in slavery than those who had lived to see her independence.

XII. Expecting, therefore, that the Corinthian leader would be no whit better than those who had preceded him, but that the same sophistries and lures were come to them again, and that with fair hopes and kind promises they were to be made docile enough to receive a new master in place of an old one, they all suspected and repulsed the appeals of the Corinthians except the people of Adranum. These dwelt in a city that was small, but sacred to Adranus, a god highly honoured throughout all Sicily, and being at variance with one another, one party invited in Hicetas and the Carthaginians, while the

1 The false friend of Dion (Dion, chapters liv-lvii.).

2 Cf. the Dion, xlviii. 3: xlix. 1 f.

Svatrewmropevor. Kai ws an' avtouatouv cuveTuxXe omevoovtwy auotépwr eis Eva Karpov audorépots yevéoOat Thy tTapovciav. AadN 'IKérns pev Hee WeVTAKLaXLALOUS oTpaTLMTas exw, TiporéovrTe 5é ol ovpTraYTEs Roay Ov TWrELoUS ytAiwv Staxociwr' obs dvadaBov ex tod Taupopeviov, cradimv mpos 70 'Adpavov évtwy tettapdxovta Kal Tpiaxociwv, Th Mev TPOTH THY HuEp@v ov TOA pépos THIS od0d mpoéhaBe xal xatnudicato, TH 8 borepaia
guvTovws odevcas Kal yarena ywpia SedOov
Hon THs Nuepas Katadhepopéevns Hxovoey apte
Tpoopiyvuvar Tov 'IKétny T@ ToALXVi Kal KaTa-OTpATOTEdEVELY. OF Lev OV AOXaYyol Kal TaEiapyXot
Tous Mpwrous émégTHCAY ws éupayodat cai Seava-Tavoapévors xXpncopevot mpoOuporépors, 0 5é Tiporéwy éemitropevopevos édeito tradta 1) rovety, GXN' ayew Kata Taxos Kal auvdTTey Tols Tro-Nemlols ATuYTaKTOLS OVELY, WS ELKOS ApTL Travo-pévous odottropias nal mept aoxnvas Kal Seimvor adoxorovs dvtas. Kal rNéywv Gua TadTa, THY aoTriéa AaBwv Hyeito mpatos @atrep emt vieny mpodnrov. oi 8' ettrovto TeOappnKotes, EXATTOV 7) TptaxovTa aotadious ETL TV TrONEMiwY ATrEXOVTES.
@s 6€ Kal tovtous SindOov, emimimtovew avtois TMPATTOMEVOLS Kal pevyovow OS MPaToV noGorro mpoctovtas, O0ev avnpeéOncoay pev ov TOAA@ mXélovs Tplaxociwy, éddwoav bé dis tTocodraL
" > 4 \ \ c e > 9 aA
Cavres, €djpOn dé 7d oTpatomedov. ot & 'Adpavi-Tat Tas muAas avoi~avtes mpocéevto TO 'Ttpo-

NEovTL, META Hpixns cat Oavparos aTayyéAXovTEs ay éviotaperns Tis payns of pev (epol TOD vew 288

other sent an invitation to Timoleon. And by some freak of fortune, both generals hastening to answer the summons, both arrived at one and the same time. But Hicetas came with five thousand soldiers, while Timoleon had no more than twelve hundred all told. Taking these with him from Tauromenium, he set out for Adranum, which was three hundred and forty furlongs off. The first day he advanced only a small part of the journey and bivouacked for the night ; but on the second day he quickened his pace, and after traversing difficult regions, when day was already declining he heard that Hicetas was just arriving at the little city and pitching his camp. Accordingly, his captains and taxiarchs halted the van-guard, in order to give the men food and rest and so make them more ready to fight; but when Timoleon came up, he begged them not to do this, but to lead on with speed and engage the enemy while they were in disorder, as they were likely to be when just at the end of their march and busy with their tents and supper. And as he thus spoke, he took his shield, put himself at the head, and led the soldiers on as if to certain victory. And they followed, em- boldened by his example, being now distant from the enemy less than thirty furlongs. And when they had traversed these too, they fell upon the enemy, who were confounded and took to flight as soon as they perceived them coming up; wherefore not many more than three hundred of them were slain, while twice as many were taken alive, and their camp was captured. Moreover, the people of Adra- num threw open their gates and joined Timoleon, reporting to him with terror and amazement that at the beginning of the battle the sacred portals of 289

fr

muraves avTopator StavorxyOeciev, opBein Sé Tod Oeod To pev Sopu cetopevoy Ex THS alypns axpas, 76 88 mpoawrroy iSp@Te TONAP pedpevov.
XIII. Tadtra &, &s goucev, ov Thy TOTE viKny conpaiwe povov, addrAa Kal tas peta taita
mpakes, als éxeivos 0 ayov apyiy evTvXh Tapecxe. Kal yap odes evOvs émempeo Bevopevat mpocetiOevto TH Ttpworéortt, Kat Mapepxos 6 Kardyns tupavvos, jTodeuotys avnp Kal xpnpact éppwpévos, wey abTov els cuppayxiar.
7d Sé péytotov, autos Atoviatos arreipnKkas 75
Tais éArriot Kal plxpov atrodEelT@V exTroNopKel-
aOa. tod peéev ‘Ixétov Kateppovnoev atoxpas

Arrnpévov, Tov dé Teporcovta Oavpdlwv ereprypev éxelvp xai Kopivbiow mapadidovs avtrov Kal thy axpétoduv. SeEdpuevos 8 6 Teporéwy tHv avérre-otov evTuxlav, atroaTéAXe Tovs Tmept Evedeldnv
cai Tnrépaxov, avdpas KopiGiovs, eis thy axpomod, Kal oTpaTLlwtTas TeTpakociovs, ovXY opod ardvtas ovde davepas, advvatov yap Hv epoppouv-Twy TodEuiwy, GAXA Kpi'ha Kal Kat' OdLyOUS
mapeloTecovTas. of mev ov oTpaTLOTAL Trape-NaPov Thy axpoTroAly Kal Ta TUpavvela PETA TIS TapacKeuis Kal TOY XpNaipwwv pos TOV TOdELOV
immo: Te yap evijoay ovK oAlyoL Kal Taca pnyarndtav idéa cai Bedkdv TriO0s, STAwWY 8
dméxewto pupiades Eta teOncavpicpévov ex madatov, otpatiatat S€ deayidtor TH Acovvain maphoav, ods éxeivos, @ TAANA, TH TepodrcovTe mapédwxev, autos Sé€ xpnuata AaBov Kal Tov
girwv ov Toddods Grade éxTrevoas tov 'Inérny.
kal Kopscbels eis TO TOD Trpodéovtos _otpaTo-290

their temple flew open of their own accord, and the spear of the god was seen to be trembling to the tip of its point, while copious sweat ran down his face.

XIII. These prodigies, as it would seem, were a sign not only of the victory which was then won, but also of the achievements succeeding them, to which that struggle afforded a propitious beginning. For cities at once sent envoys to Timoleon and espoused his cause, and particularly Mamercus, the tyrant of Catana, a warlike and wealthy man, pre- sented himself as an ally. And what was most im- portant, Dionysius himself, now grown desperate and almost forced to surrender, despised Hicetas for his shameful defeat, and in admiration of Timoleon sent to him and his Corinthians offering to surrender him- self and the citadel to them. Timoleon accepted this unexpected good fortune, and sent Eucleides and Telemachus, men of Corinth, into the acropolis, and with them four hundred soldiers, not all at once, nor openly, for this was impossible when an enemy was blockading the harbour; but they made their way in secretly and in small companies. These soldiers, then, took over the acropolis and the castle of the tyrant, together with his equipment and stores for the war; for there were many horses there, all sorts of engines of war, and a great quan- tity of missiles, and armour for seventy thousand men had been stored up there for a long time. Diony- sius also had with him two thousand soldiers; these, as well as the supplies, he turned over to Timo- leon, while he himself, with his treasure and a few of his friends, sailed off without the knowledge of Hicetas. And after he had been conveyed to the

medov, TOTE TPATov LoLwrTns Kal TameLvos opOeis, ml pds vews Kal ypnudtwv oriywv ets KopevOov ameotadn, yevvnbets pev Kal Tpadels ev rupavvids
Th Wace émiupavertatyn Kal peyiotn, KaTacXo@v Sé tavtny érn Séxa, Swdexa 8 AdAra peta THY Aiwvos otpateiay év ayaou Kal Trodépots d1ahopnbecis, & 8 Exrpake tupavvav ols Erafey viep-5 Badopevos. Kal yap viv évnrixwv Oavatovs Kat Ouvyatépwv Katatropvevces trapOévwy érreide, Kal THY auTHy aderAdny kal yuvaixa Caoav pév eis TO capa tais acenyeotdtas Td TeV ToNEmioV
ndovais tmapavounbeicav, Bia 8 amodavovcay
ueTa TOV TEXVWV, KaTaTOVTLAMEicaY eis TO Tré-Aayos. Tadta peév odv év Tois Tept Aiwvos axpuBas yéypaTrrat.
XIV. Tod &€ Acovyciou xatamAevoavTos ets
Kopi ov, ovdels Hv “EXAjvav b5 ovyl Oedoacbar Kal mpocettreiy erd0naev avtov. aAX ot TE xai-povtes él tais auppopais Sia picos aopevor auvirOov oloy éppimpévov wre THS TUYNS TaT?- GOVTES, Ol TE Mpos THY peTAaBOATY TpETTOMEVOL Kat cuptraboivtes €Oe@vtTo ToAAnY év acbevéos Tots avOpwrivors Kal mpodijdous THY TOY adnrwWY ai-
2 trav Kal Ociwy Suvapiv. ovdév yap ovTE piaews
6 TOTE KaLposS ovTE TéxVns Goov éxeivo TUXNS
Epyov émedetEato, Tov YuKeAlas OALyov éumpoaHev tupavvov év KopivO@ ScatpiBovra trept rnv ovo-mor f KaOnpevov év pupoTrMdAe, Tivovta Kexpa-

1 There is nothing in the Dion to justify this statement. The cruelties described were committed by the revolting people of Locri, to whom Dionysius had made himself odious camp of Timoleon, where for the first time he was seen as a private person and in humble garb, he was sent off to Corinth with a single ship and a small treasure, having been born and reared in a tyranny which was the greatest and most illustrious of all tyrannies, and having held this for ten years, and then for twelve other years, after the expedition of Dion, having been involved in harassing struggles and wars, and having surpassed in his sufferings all his acts of tyranny. For he lived to see the violent deaths of his grown-up sons and the violation of his maiden daughters, and the shameful abuse of the person of his wife, who was at the same time his sister, and who, while living, was subjected to the most wanton pleasures of his enemies, and after being murdered, together with her children, was cast into the sea. These things, then, have been fully described in my Life of Dion.!

XIV. But as for Dionysius, after his arrival at Corinth there was no Greek who did not long to behold and speak to him. But those who rejoiced in his misfortunes were lead by their hatred to come together gladly that they might trample, as it were, upon one who had been cast down by Fortune; while those who regarded rather the reversal of his fortune and sympathised with him, saw strong proof, amid the weakness of things that are human and seen, of the power of causes that are unseen and divine. For that age showed no work either of nature or of art that was comparable to this work of Fortune, namely, the recent tyrant of Sicily in Corinth, whiling his time away at a fishmonger's or sitting in a perfumer's during his residence there from 366 to 346 B.o. Cf. Athenaeus.

p. 541 c e.
293

Mévov aro THY KaTnAciwy Kal SraTrANKTLCOMEVOY
éy péom Tois ag' wpas épyatouévors yvvaios, tas 8€ povcoupyovs ev tats @bais SddoxKovta, kal wept Ocatpixav aopatwv épilew omovddlorra
mpos éxelvas Kal Tept péXous appovias. tadta
S of pév GAXwS AdVovtTa Kal dvoe Padupov dvtTa kat dirtakoXacTov @ovto trotety Tov Avovictor, ot & umép tov Katadpovetabar Kai yun hoBepov
elvat tots KoptvOious, und' drromtov ws Bapuvo-Mevov THV peTaBoAny tod Biov Kal mpayyudtwv édiéuevov, éemutndevery Kat wtrroxpiverOat Tapa guow, ToAAnY aBerrEpiav éredeckvipevov év TO oxvonralev.
XV. Ov pny adda Kal Noyor TIWes avdTOD
pvnpovevovtar, de av édoxer cupdéperOar ois Tapovotvy ovK ayervas. TOUTO pev yap eis
Aevedda xataxOeis, twodmY arr@Kicpevny bd Kopw0iwv domep thy Lupaxovoiwy, ravTov edn merov0évar Tois év aGpapTnpace yevouevors TOV veavickov? WS yap éxetvot Tois pév adEeddois itapas avvdiatpiBovar, Tods Sé matépas aicyuvopevoe evyovow, ovTwS avTos aidovperos THY MnTtpotroAuy déws ay avToOe wet éxelvwy KaTot-xeiv. tovuto 8 év KopivOm Eévouv tivos aypotxo-Tepor els Tas peta THY pirocopwy SiatpiBas, als TUpavvav EeXalpe, Xrevalovros auTov, Kal TEhos épwtavTos tt 6 THs TdAatwvos aroNaucete

codias, “ Ovdév,” pn, “ cot Soxodpev tro ITdatavos wperroba, TUYNS peTaBoAnY odTw dé-povtes;” mpos S€ Tov povotKov "Aptorokevov Kat Tivas GANouS TruvOavopévous oTTOFEY ALTO Kai Tis 2y4

243

~ TIMOLEON

shop, drinking diluted wine from the taverns and skirmishing in public with common prostitutes, or trying to teach music-girls in their singing, and earnestly contending with them about songs for the stage and melody in hymns. Some thought that Dionysius did these things as an aimless loiterer, and because he was naturally easy-going and fond of license ; but others thought that it was in order to be held in contempt and not in fear by the Corin- thians, nor under suspicion of being oppressed by the change in his life and of striving after power, that he engaged in these practices and played an un- natural part, making a display of great silliness in the way he amused himself.

XV. However, certain sayings of his are preserved, from which it would appear that he accommodated himself to his present circumstances not ignobly. Once, namely, when he landed at Leucadia,’ a city which had been colonized by Corinthians, just like Syracuse, he said he had the same feelings as young men who have been guilty of misdemeanours; for just as these pass their time merrily with their brothers, but shun their fathers from a feeling of shame, so he was ashamed to live in their common mother-city, and would gladly dwell there with them. And again, in Corinth, when a stranger somewhat rudely derided him about his associations with phi- losophers, in which he used to take delight when he was a tyrant, and finally asked him what good Plato’s wisdom did him now, “ Dost thou think, said he, ‘that I have had no help from Plato, when I bear my change of fortune as I do?” Further, when Aristoxenus the musician and certain others inquired

1 On his voyage from Syracuse to Corinth.

295

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 9 wpos Ilkatwva yévoiro péuryris, ToAAaY Edy
KaK@V THY TUpavyida peoTny ovaay ovdev ExeLV TNALKOUTOY HALKOV TO pNdéva TOV Reyouévor ditwyv peta trappnoias SiadéyerOar' Kai yap autos Um éxeivor atrootepnOjvar tHS TIAdtwvos evvoias. émel 5& tav Bovropévoy tis evpuar elvat cx@mtwv Tov Arovuctov éFécere TO ipatiov elol@v pos avTov, ws 67) pos TUpavVOY, avTIaxamtTov éxeivos éxéXeve TOTO Tovey STav étin
Tap avtov, wh te Tov évdov éywv arérOn.

4 Dirtamov b¢ tod Maxedovos mapa rotov twa
Aoryov peta eipwveias EuBarovtos wept TOV MEXrOV
Kal TOV Tpaywdtav as o mpecButepos Arovictos KaTéaume, Kal mpoamotoupévou Starropel év tive “pov TavTa Troveiv éxeivos eayoraler, ov davws amyvrnoev 6 Atovictos eirav: “’Ev & ob Kayo Kal mdvtes of paxdptoe Soxovvtes elvat trepl KoOwva Stat piBopev.
5)\drov pev odv ov« éretdev ev KopivO@ Arovv-giov, GAN éEtvyev 76n TEeOvnKws, o S€ Xvwr7redvs Avoyévns atravrncas avt@ mpatov, “Os avakiws,” &py, ‘ Atoviote, Ens.” émsatavtos 8 éxei-vou Kal elmrovtos: “ Ev rovets, @ Atoyeves, cuva-VOopuevos nuiv ntuvxyncoct, “Ti ydp;” elev 6 Atoyévns, “oles pé aor cuvadyeiv, ov Siayavaxtely Ste TovovTOv avdpatrodov wy, Kai Tots TUpavpelos, waoTEep O TaTIp, émtiTHdelos éyynpdoas aTolavety, évtav0a railwv Kal tpupav Suayes

what his complaint against Plato was and what its origin, he told them that of the many ills with which tyranny abourded there was none so great as this, that not one of those reputed to be friends speaks frankly with the tyrant; for indeed it was by such friends that he himself had been deprived of Plato’s good will. Again, when one of those who wish to be witty, in mockery of Dionysius shook out his robe on coming into his presence,! as if into the presence of a tyrant, Dionysius turned the jest upon him by bidding him do so when he went out from his presence, that he might not take anything in the house away with him. And when Philip of Macedon, at a banquet, began to talk in banter about the lyric poems and tragedies which Dionysius the Elder had left behind him, and pretended to wonder when that monarch found time for these compositions, Dionysius not inaptly replied by saying: ‘“ When thou and I and all those whom men call happy are busy at the bowl.”

Now, Plato did not live to see Dionysius when he was in Corinth, but he was already dead ;* Diogenes of Sinope, however, on meeting him for the first time, said: “ How little thou deservest, Dionysius, thus to live!” Upon this, Dionysius stopped and said: “ It is good of thee, O Diogenes, to sympathize with me in my misfortunes.’ “ How is that?” said Diogenes; “ Dost thou suppose that I am sympathizing with thee? Nay, I am indignant that such a slave as thou, and one so worthy to have grown old and died in the tyrant’s estate, just as thy father did, should be

1 To show that no weapon was concealed there.
2 Plato died in 348 B.c.; Dionysius came to Corinth in 343 B.O.

6 pel” Hpav;” Bote wor TapaBddXovTe TOUTOLS TAS
Dirictov dwvds, as adinor wept tov Aemrivov
Ouyatépwv GAopupopevos, ws EK peyarwoy ayabav TaY THS TUpavvidos eis TaTreyny adiypévwr bia:tav, gpaivesOat Opnvovs yuvaixds adaBdotous Kal troppupas Kal ypvaia todovens.
Taira pev odv ovx adddTpLa THS TOV Biwv advaypadis ovdé axypnota Sokew oidpeOa 1) omevdovat unoé aoyoroupévols axpoatais.
XVI. Tijs 5¢ Atovuciov ductuxias mapadoyou ghavetons ovx TTov 1) Tipodéovtos evtuxia To Oavpactov éoxev. émtBds yap Yexerias év mHpepas TevTnKoVTa THY T axkpoTOALY T@Y YupaKovcav tapédXafe xat Arovicrov eis Tedorovvnoov eEdrreurev. SOev éemippwobévres ot KopivOca méumovow avtT@ Suoxtdlovs omditas Kal dia-
2 xoalovs times, of KopicBévtes axpt Bouvpiwv Thy éxeiOev Trepaiwow bo Kapynooviwy aodXais vavol Kateyouevns THS OaXadrTns atropov opavTes, @> hv avayKn Kalpov TEeptwévovTas aTpEpety avTO-01, mpos KadNAO TOV Epyov aTrEeXpHaavTO TH TXOAN.
Bovpiwy yap émi Bpettiovs otpatevovtwy rv
jody maparaBovtes wWomrep tatpida Kxabapas Kal miatas Siepvra£tay.
3 ‘O88 ‘Teérns thy pév axpotodw tov Yupaxov-Gav émodLopKer Kal citov éexwXrvev EloTAELY TOS KopwvOloes, Tiporéovts bé S00 Eévous tapacKevdgas Sorohovncovras avrov vrrémeuev ets ’Adpavov, ote GAAWS TWEPL TO THA ouYTETayperynDY

living here with us in mirth and luxury." Wherefore, when I compare with these words the mournful utterances of Philistus about the daughters of Leptines, how from the great blessings of the tyranny they fell to a lowly life, they seem the lamentations of a woman who pines for her alabaster caskets and purple gowns and golden trinkets.

These details, then, will not seem foreign to my biography, I think, nor without usefulness, to readers who are not in haste, and are not occupied with other matters.

XVI. But though the misfortune of Dionysius seemed extraordinary, none the less did the good fortune of Timoleon have something marvellous about it. For within fifty days after his landing in Sicily the acropolis of Syracuse was surrendered to him and Dionysius was sent off to Peloponnesus. Stimulated by this success, the Corinthians sent him two thousand men-at-arms and two hundred horse- men. These got as far as Thurii, but seeing that their passage thence was impracticable, since the sea was beset with many Carthaginian ships, they were compelled to remain there quietly and await their opportunity, and therefore turned their leisure to advantage in a most noble action. When the Thu- rians, namely, went on an expedition against the Bruttians, the Corinthians received their city in charge, and guarded it honestly and faithfully to the end, as though it were their own.

But Hicetas kept the acropolis of Syracuse under siege and prevented the importation of food for the Corinthians there; he also sent to Adranum two foreigners whom he had engaged to assassinate Timoleon ; for Timoleon at no time kept a guard in array

v / 4 4 \ \
éyovTt gdudaxnv, kal ToTe Taytdtact bia Tov Oedv averpévws kai avuTromTas cyovdlovtTe peta
A b] A e \ / 4 4
tov "Adpautav. ot b¢ meudOevtes xaTa TUyny
, , 4 > 4 @ > N
muGopevot péAAovTa Ovety avTov, HKov eis TO lepov U1rd Tots imation éyyerpidia Kopilovtes, Kal Tots Twepteatao. TOY Bwpov avamyGértes, éyyu-TEpW KATA puKpov eTexeipovy. Kal Boov ovTw
, ? I > + 4
TApaKeXevopevav AAANAOLS EvapxyedOar TraieL TLS avTay Tov Etepov Kata THS Kehadrfs Eider, cat mecovtos ov0' o traicas Euevev od o peta TOU
, C4 ' » 9 a /, °e \

TANYEVTOS HKWV, GAN ExeElvos pév, WoTeEp Ele TO
4 4 4 / e \ 9 ,
Eidos, hevywv mpos Tia TéetTpav UWnrHY avetn-
¢ ‘ A a ‘4 bf
dnaev, Atepos 5€ tov Bwpod AaBopevos aderav nretro Tapa Tov Tipmoréovtos éml TO TavTa pyvi-
\ > 4 ’ e A \
gat. Kal A\aBeov éunvuce xa’ avtod Kal Kata Tov TeOvnkotos ws trewhOeciev exeivoy atroKTterobvtes. ev Toute S€ Kal Tov did THS TEeTpAS KATI-
“A \ bd A 9 > » /
yov €tepor, Bowvra pndev adixety, aX ayynpynKévat Sixaiws tov avOpwrov trép tatpos teOvnxoTos, dv éxeivos amrextovynxot mpotepov év Aeovtivors.
Kal paptupobytas elyey éviovs TaV TapdovTmwD,
a 4 \
Oavydlovtas dua THs TUYNS THY EvpNyYaviar, ws
8: érépwv erepa Kwodea Kal cuvdyovca Tavra moppwOev Kal ovyxatamdéKovea Tois TrEloToV Stadéperv Soxovar cai pndev Exery mpos adAnda Kolvov Gel Tots GAAHAWY ypATaL Kal TédreoL Kal apyais.
Tov pev otv advOpwrov éatepavwaay ot Kopiv-300

about his person, and at this time in particular, owing to his trust in their god, he was altogether without anxiety or suspicion in his diversions with the people of Adranum. The men who had thus been sent learned, as chance would have it, that he was about to offer a sacrifice, and therefore came into the sacred precinct with daggers under their robes, mingled with those who stood around the altar, and gradually drew nearer their intended victim. And as they were just on the point of exhorting one another to begin their work, somebody smote one of them on the head with a sword and laid him low, whereupon neither he who had struck the blow nor the companion of him who had received it kept his place; but the one, with his sword still in his hand, fled to a lofty rock and sprang upon it, while the other laid hold of the altar and begged immunity from Timoleon on the condition of his revealing everything. And when he had obtained his request, he testified against himself and against his dead comrade that they had been sent to kill Timoleon. Meanwhile others brought down the man who had fled to the rock, who kept crying out that he had done no wrong, but had justly slain the man on behalf of his dead father, who had been murdered by him some time ago in Leontini. Some of the bystanders bore witness also to the truth of his words, and wondered, too, at the dexterity of Fortune, seeing how she makes some things lead up to others, brings all things together from afar, weaves together incidents which seem to be most divergent and to have nothing in common with one another, and so makes use of their reciprocal beginnings and endings.

To this man, then, the Corinthians gave a reward

S n eo " , , N
Gror Séxa pais, te TO HvAdttovTe Saipove Tov
, 4 wv , \ \ 9
Tiporéovra mabos éypnoe Sixacov Kai tov éx
ToAAOU Tapovta Oupov aVT@ TpoTeEpov ov KaTav-
, 9 \ b] > 27 20/ \ A 5] ,
UNwWoEV, ANNA PET aiTias Ldtas TWpos THY éKEtvoU 4 cwTnpiay amo TUxns SeeTHpnaev. 1 5 eis Tov TapovTa Katpoy evTvyia Kal Tpos Ta péAXOVTA
tails éXmriowy émnpeyv op@vtas ws tepov avdpa xat
A A \ Cd an , \ 4
ovv Oe@ Tipwpov HKovta TH LeKxedia Tov Tiponre-4 \ , ovta oéBecOas kai pudarrery.
XVII. 'Os 68 taurns Sufpapte tis meipas 6
'Txérns nal mpos Tiporéovta troAXovs édpa ourt-oTapmévous, meurrdpevos avTos éavTov ott TyrL-
4 , n
KavTns Tapovons THiS Kapynéovioy duvapyews
@OTEP ALTXVVOMEVOS AUTH KATA piKpa ypHTaL
Kat XdOpa, KrAétrTwv Kal Tapelodywv THv cuppa-yiav, weteTréwTreTO Maywva tov otparnyov avTav
A la) , , e A 9 , '\ peTa TID GTOAOU TravTOS. O dé ciaéTAEL HoBepos vavol TevtnKovta Kal éxaTov KaTaXa"Bavwv Tov ALpEeva, meCav Oé pupiddas EE aroBiBaltwv Kai KaTaoTpatoTesevay év TH TOAEL TOY Luvpaxovaiwy, wore TaVTas olecOar THY TadArAaL Neyouéevny Kai Tpocbokwpevny exBapBapworv Kew ert tHv
4 9 / \ / e a)
LuxeAiayv. ovdémote yap Kapynéooviors tarijp&e
4

MpoTepov pupiovs TovEuioAacL TONEMOUS ev LtKe-Ma NaBety Tas LupaKxovaeas, AANA TOTE deFapévou
tov 'Inétov nai tapadovtos fv opav thy modw

‘ 4, = e \ \ b] ,
otpatotredov BapBapwr otcav. ot S€ THY axporay 4 / ? Le) A tow Tov Kopwiiwy catéyovtes érisharas cal 302

TIMOLEON

of ten minas, because he had put his just resentment at the service of the deity who was guarding Timoleon, and had not at an earlier time expended the wrath which had long’ been in his heart, but with a personal motive had reserved it, under Fortune’s guidance, for the preservation of that general. Moreover, their good fortune in the present crisis raised their hopes for the future also, and they anticipated that men would revere and protect Timoleon, looking upon him as a sacred personage, and one who had come under divine guidance to avenge the wrongs of Sicily.!

XVII. But when Hicetas had failed in this attempt and saw that many were now thronging to the support of Timoleon, he found fault with himself because, when so large a force of the Carthaginians was at hand, he was using it in small detachments and secretly, as though he were ashamed of it, bringing in his allied troops like a thief and by stealth; he therefore called in Mago their general together with his whole armament. Thus Mago, with a formidable fleet of a hundred and fifty ships, sailed in and oc- cupied the harbour, disembarking also sixty thousand of his infantry and encamping them in the city of Syracuse, so that all men thought that the barbariza- tion of Sicily, long talked of and expected, had come upon her. For never before in all their countless wars in Sicily had the Carthaginians succeeded in taking Syracuse; but now Hicetas admitted them and handed over to them the city, and men saw that it was a barbarian camp. But those of the Corinthians who held the acropolis were beset with difficulty

1 The Greek of this sentence is obscure, and has thus far defied emendation.
393

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Xarerrars amrnANaATTOV, Tpopys ev ixavijs OvK TL TApovons, arr’ _ evdeopevor dia TO Ppovpetabar TOUS Aipévas, | det dé év ayaoe Kal paxass mept T TeLXN kal wpos way enXavnpa Kal pos Tacay idéav modtopKias pepiSovtes avTOUS.

XVIII. Ov pny arr o Temorévwv mapeBonOer ovTov éx Kardvys pixpats adtact Kal AeETTots axartious ATOTTENNWY, & padiotTa Yewave Tapeto -

ETLTTE bia TeV SapBaptxaov Tpinpay UmoTropevopreva, pos TOV KN\vOwva Kal TOV odov exelvov Stiotapevav. & bn cUvopavTEs ol Teph tov Ma-yova Kal tov ‘IKérny éBovXovro THY Kardynv édeip, é& His elect! Ta émiTnoera Tots mohtop-KOUpEvoLs® Kat ha.Bovres THS Suvdpews THY payxepeor arny ébérevoav ex Tov Lupaxovady. o 6e KopivOsos Néwv (od70s yap hy apxwv TOY TOALOp-KOUpEVoV) KATLOW@VY ATO THS axpas TOUS UTrO\Eetppevous TOV Tohepiov apyas Kal dpedras purarrovras eEaiduns érrémee Svea Trappévors avTois: Kal TOUS pev averav, Tous O€ Tpeypdpevos, expaTnge Kal KATETXE THY Aeyouevny “AxXpadwny,
5 KpateaTov édoxet wal ab pavatotatov brrdpxew
THS s Lupaxovatwy pépos Toews, TpoTov TIWa Guy-KELLevNS Kal oc UY Np LOG MEVNS éx TELOVOY TONEWD, evmopnaas dé Kal gitov Kab Nparov ovK ab fice TOV TOTOV, OVS aveywpnoe Tad ert THY axpav, ddnra ppatdpuevos TOV mreptBonov Tihs "Axpadcvijs Kal ouvaryas Tots épupace T pos THD ax pooh
Stepvharre. tous dé mrept Tov Mayova Kab TOV ‘Txérny éyyus 7dn TIS Kardyns dvTas immens eK
Yupaxoveay KatadaBov amnyyere thy adwow
1 eloéwAe: Holden’s conjecture: &rre, and danger ; for they no longer had sufficient food,

but suffered lack because the harbours were blockaded ; and they were forever dividing up their forces in skirmishes and battles around the walls, and in repelling all sorts of engines and every species of siege warfare.

XVIII. However, Timoleon came to their aid by sending them grain from Catana in small fishing boats and light skiffs; these would make their way in, especially in stormy weather, by stealing along through the barbarian triremes, which lay at wide intervals from one another because of the roughness of the sea. This soon came to the notice of Mago and Hicetas, who. therefore determined to take Ca- tana, from which provisions came in by sea to the besieged; so taking with them the best of their fighting men, they sailed forth from Syracuse. But Neon the Corinthian (for he it was who commanded the besieged), observing from the citadel that the enemy who had been left behind were keeping an easy and careless watch, fell suddenly upon them as they were scattered apart; some he slew, others he put to flight, and then mastered and took possession of the quarter called Aotuadipa. This seems to have been the strongest and least vulnerable part of the city of Syracuse, which was, in a manner, an assem- blage and union of several cities. Having thus sup- plied himself with grain and money, he did not give up the place, nor did he go back again to the citadel, but fenced in the circumference of Achradina, united it by his fortifications with the acropolis, and guarded both. Mago and Hicetas were already near Catana, when a horseman from Syracuse overtook them and

Tis Axpadivis. nal cvvrapaybértes aveyopnoay 51a rayéwv, ote AaBovtes ed' fw eFHAOOv obte puratavtes iv elyov.
XIX. Tatra pév ody Ere tH wWpovoia Kal apeTh Sidwot Tia mpos THY TUXNY anda RyTHoLW TOS éml TOVTOLS yEevouEvoy TaYTaTracty éoLKe TULA HVAL
Kar evtvyiav. ot yap év tots @oupios Scatpi-Bovres orpatiatar Tov KopivOiwv apa peév Seb00-tes Tas Kapyndoviwv tpinpes, at mapepvratTov avTous peta "Avywvos, &ua 8 éd' 7pépas ToANaS
éEnyptwpévns bro mvevpartos THs Oadatrns, wel
S:a Bpettiwy ®punoav wopevecOar' Kai Ta pev meiOovres, Ta S€ Bralopevor tors BapBadpous eis
"Pyytov xatéBatvov Ett todvy Yet"ava TOD Tredayous éxovtos. o b¢ tav Kapyndoviwy vavapyos,
@s ov Tpocedoxa Tovs KopivOiovs cal udtnv veto Kabncbat, Tretcas avTos éavTov vevonKevat TL TOV copav Kal Tavovpywy mpos atatny, oTepava-cacOat Tovs vattas KedXevoas Kal KoopHnoas TAS Tpinpets daomiow "EXAnuixais Kat dgoirexiow, émdet Tpos TAS Yupaxovoas. Kai Tapa THY aKpo-Tow Ypwpevos poliw pera KpoTov Kal yédXwTos éBoa tovs KopivOiovs Frew veriene@s Kal xKe-yetpwpéevos, ev TH Oardttn NaBov dtatdéortas, ws 6 twa dvcOupiay Tots TrodtopKoupévors Trapé-Ewv. éxeivov 5¢ radta Anpobvtos Kal pevaxiflovros
éx Tov Bpettiwy xataBeBnxotes oi KopivOsor ets To 'Pyytov, @s ovdels trapepvAaTte Kal To TVEtLA cates Beopévoy Tapahoyws axvpova Tov Topov 306

told them of the capture of Achradina. They were confounded by the tidings and went back in haste, having neither taken the city against which they went forth, nor kept the one they had.

XIX. In these successes, then, foresight and valour might still dispute the claims of Fortune; but that which followed them would seem to have been wholly due to good fortune. The Corinthian soldiers, namely, who were tarrying at Thurii,. partly because they feared the Carthaginian triremes which were lying in wait for them under Hanno, and partly because a storm of many days' duration had made the sea very rough and savage, set out to travel by land through Bruttium ; and partly by persuading, partly by compelling the Barbarians, they made their way down to Rhegium while a great storm was still raging at sea. But the Carthaginian admiral, since he did not expect that the Corinthians would venture forth and thought his remaining there inactive an idle thing, after convincing himself that he had devised something clever and mischievous in the way of deceit, ordered his sailors to crown their heads with garlands, decorated his triremes with purple battle- flags and Greek shields, and sailed for Syracuse. And as he passed the acropolis at a dashing speed amid clapping of hands and laughter, he shouted that he was come from conquering and capturing the Corin- thians, whom he had caught at sea as they were trying to cross the strait ; supposing, indeed, that he would thus greatly dishearten the besieged. While he was thus babbling and playing the trickster, the Corinthians who had come down from Bruttium to Rhegium, since no one was lying in wait for them and the unexpected cessation of the storm had made

deity Kai Nelov Trapetye, TayY TWANpwCcaYTES Ta jopOueta Kal Tas aruddas Tas TWapovaas avyyovTo cat drexopiCovto mpos THY YKEray, OVTWS agpa-Aas Kal d:a ToTaUTNS yadHvns waTE TOUS tous Tapa Ta TWrOLA TapaynYopmevous Ex PUT pwv épédxeoOat.

XX. Tleparwbévtwy &€ wdvrev o Teporéwr Se-Edpevos avtous thy te Meaanyny evOrs eye, Kal cuvtatapevos éBadifev él tas Yupaxoveas, ols evtuyes wal xatwpJov padrdrov 7 TH Suvdper
meToldws' ov yap oav of avy avT@ mrEéious TETPAKLTYIMaV. ayyeAXopevns 5é THs Epodou TO Mayovi BopuBovpevos nal Sedornas ett paddov els UTroviay HAOev ex ToLavTNns Tpopdcews. ev Tots Tepl THY TOALY TEVaYyEoL, TONY peEy Ex KPNVOV
motipov vowp, Tmodv & é€& éX@v Kal ToTapLav KatTappeovtwv eis THY OdratTay Sexopévots, TAA-Bos éyxéNewv véeuetat, kal Sawirera THs aypas tois BovAopévois adel Mdpectt. TavTas ot Tap aupotépwv pic0od otpatevopevot aYOATS OVENS

Kal dvox av auveOnpevovy. ola & “EAXAnves dytes Kal wpos aAAHAOVS OvK ExorTes LOiwy amreyOerav mpopaciw, ev pev tails payas Stexevdvvevov ev-pwaTws, év 5€ Tais avoyais mpocpotT@vTEes ANX1-Dots SueAéyovto. Kal TOTE KOLVOY TrEpl THY aNLEiaY
Exovtes Epyov év Aoyors Hoav, Gavydlovres Tis Gardoons Ti evviav Kai TAY ywpiwy THY KaTaoKkevny. Kai Tis ele THY Tapa Tots KopwwOiots otpatevopevoy' ‘“ Tooavtny pévtot trodw? To péyeOos Kal Tocovtas éEnoxnpéevny xarois bpeis “EAAnves dvtes éxBapBapwioat tpofupetcbe, Tovs
1 wéAw Blass, after Coraés: rhy wdacy.

the strait smooth and calm to look upon, speedily manned the ferry-boats and fishing craft which they found at hand, put off, and made their way across to Sicily, with such safety and in so great a calm that their horses also swam along by the side of the boats and were towed by the reins.

XX. When they had all crossed over, Timoleon took them and at once occupied Messana, then, uniting them with his other forces, marched against Syracuse, relying on the good fortune and success that attended his efforts rather than on the strength of his army; for his followers were not more than four thousand in number. But when Mago got tidings of his approach, disturbed and fearful as he was, he was made still more suspicious for the following reason. In the shoals about the city, which receive much fresh water from springs, and much from marshes and rivers emptying into the sea, great numbers of eels live, and there is always an abundance of this catch for anybody. These eels the mercenary soldiers on both sides, when they had leisure or a truce was on, used to hunt together. And since they were Greeks and had no reason for private hatred of one another, while in their battles they risked their lives bravely, in their times of truce they would visit and converse with one another. And so now, as they were busy together with their fishing, they conversed, express- ing their admiration of the richness of the sea and the character of the adjacent lands. And one of those who were serving on the Corinthian side said : «Can it really be that you, who are Greeks, are eager to barbarize a city of such great size and furnished with such great advantages, thus settling Cartha-

KaxtoTovs Kai hovxetatous Kapynoovious éyyuao , e a“ A a w Tépw xatoxilovTes numYy, Tmpos ovs Ede. Todas

etyecOas Xixedias mpoxeiobas THs “EAXAdbos: 7 Soxeite ToUTOUS OTpaToY ayeipavTas ATO oTNADY
“Hpaxrcioy xai THs ’ATAavTiais Heerv Oaratrns Sevpo xevduvevoortas UTrép THS ‘IKérou duvacteias;
a > ‘ 9 e , bd by 4
Os ef Aoytopov elyev rryepovos, ovx av €FéBadre Tous Tatépas ovd émipye TH Watpids TOUS TrOdepious, GAAa wai Tins Kai Suvapews eTUyYavev
o 4 , \ , , 33
cons tpeTret, KopsvOtous xat Tipor€ovtra treicas.
as ‘ v e 4 a 9
TovToUS TOUS AGyouS ot pscOodopat SteOponaay ev
T@ OTpATOTEd@, KaL Tapécyov UToYiay TO Mayor wpodidocbat, ypnlovTs marat tmpodpacews.
520 Kat Seopévov tov ‘Ixétou twapapevery cai deda-
” , 4 > A 4 ”
axovtos dam BeXTLOVes ELot TOV TOELIWY, LAAXOV
7 ’ a \ , , , a
OLOpMEVOS APETH Kal TUYN NetTrETOaL TiporéovTos 7
mwAnder Suvduews uirepBddreLv, Apas evOus aneé-mrevoev eis AtBunv, aioypas Kat ovdéva Aoytcpov avOpwruivoy x Tav yetpav adels Ytxeriav.
XXI. Ty 8 torepaia trapny o Tiporéwv emt paxynv cuvtTetaypevos. ws dé tHv huyny éruvdd-VOVTO Kal THY épnuiay Ewpwv TOV vewpiwv, yedav autos émne THY avavdpiav tov Maywvos, xa Teptiovtes éxnpuTToy ev TH TodeL nVvUTpA TO dpacavtt Tov Kapyndoviwr ororov Srry ofas atrodéSpaxev. ov pny adda Tod ‘Ikérou Piropayorv-Tos éTt Kab THY AaABNY Ov TpoieLéevou THs TOAEWS, ana eumrepuxotos ols KaTetxe mépett KapteEpois 310

ginians, who are the basest and bloodiest of men, nearer to us, when you ought to pray for many Sicilies to lie as a barrier between Greece and them? Ordo you suppose that they have collected an army and are come hither from the pillars of Heracles and the Atlantic sea in order to risk their lives in behalf of the dynasty of Hicetas? He, if he reasoned like a true leader, would not be casting out his kindred people, nor would he be leading against his country her natural enemies, but would be enjoying a befitting amount of honour and power, with the consent of Timoleon and the Corinthians." Such speeches as these the mercenaries disseminated in their camp, and made Mago suspicious of treachery, though he had long wanted a pretext for going away. Therefore when Hicetas begged him to remain and tried to show him how much superior they were to their enemies, he thought rather that they were more inferior to Timoleon in bravery and good fortune than they surpassed him in the number of their forces, and weighing anchor at once, sailed off to Libya, thus letting Sicily slip out of his hands disgracefully and for no reason that man could suggest.

XXI. On the day after his departure, Timoleon came up with his forces: arrayed for battle. But when they learned of Mago's flight and saw the docks empty of vessels, they could not help laugh- ing at his cowardice, and went about the city pro- claiming a reward for any one who told them whither the Carthaginian fleet had fled away from them. However, since Hicetas was still eager for battle and would not let go his hold upon .the city, but clung to the parts of it in his possession, which were ovat Kal dvompocpdyos, Siekov o Tiporéov tHv Suva avTos pev 7 Bracoratov Hy mapa TO pet- Ooov tod "Avatrov tmpocéBadrev, adrous 8 éx TIS "Aypadivis éxédevev emiyetpeiv, dv Iaias Hryetto 6 KoptvOtos. rovs 5& tpitous émriryov émt tas 'Earurronas Acivapyos cat Anuapertos, of thy baré- pav dyaryovres éx KopivOou BojOeav. dua dé cat mavrayoley tis Epodou yevopevns Kal TeV Tept Tov 'Inétny avatpareévtwv kal devyovtwy, To pev GNO@vat THY TOW KaT axpas Kal yevécOat Ta- yews Dmoxel pov exTET OV TOY TOV TONE uO bt- Katov avabeivar TH TOV paxXoLévwy avdpayabia Kal TH SevoTnts Tov aTpaTnyod, TO 5é yu) atro- Oavety twa pndé tpwOhvar tav KopivOiwv idssov Epyov auras 4 Tipodréovtos émedetEato tvyn, caarep Stautdrwpevn mpos THY apeTnv Tod av- Spos, iva TOV émratvoupévwy adTod Ta paxaptlo- eva pardXAov of truvOavopevot Oavpdlwow. ov yap povov XtxerAlav wacav ovs "Itadiav evOvds 7

gnun Kxatéoyev, GAN juepov orjtryov 7 “EAAas inyer TO péyeOos TOU KaTopOa@patos, WoTE THY Tav KopiwOiwv ror amiorobdcay ei StaTrémNevKev
0 OTOAOS, O"OU Kal Gecwopévous Kal VvEviKNKOTAS
axovety Tovs avdpas. ovTwS Evponaay ai mpa-Eers, Kal TOTOUTO TH KaANEL THY Epywy TO TAXOS
n TUXN TpoaéeOnxey.
XXII. Tevopevos d€ rhs dxpas KupLos ovK eTTrabe
Aiwvt tavTo 1d0os, ovS épetoato tod Tomov ba
TO KGNNOS Kal THY TrOAUTEAELAY THS KATACKEUIS, andra THy éxetvov SiaBaXdovdcar, eit’ ato\écacay iTowiay duraFduevos éxijpute Tov Lupaxovolwy 312

TIMOLEON

strong and dangerous to attack, Timoleon divided his forces, he himself attacking along the river Anapus where the struggle was likely to be hottest, and ordering others, under the lead of Isias the Corinthian, to make their attempt from Achradina. The third division was led against Epipolae by Deinarchus and Demaretus, who had brought the second reinforcement from Corinth. The attack was made in all three places at once, and the troops of Hicetas were overwhelmed and took to flight. That the city was taken by storm and fell quickly into their hands after the enemy had been driven out, it is right to ascribe to the bravery of the soldiers and the ability of their general; but that not one of the Corinthians was killed or even wounded, this the good fortune of Timoleon showed to be her own work, vying emulously, as it were, with his valour, in order that those who hear his story may wonder at his happy successes more than at his laudable efforts. For his fame not only filled at once all Sicily and Italy, but within a few days Greece echoed with his great success, SO that the city of Corinth, which was in doubt whether his armament had got across the sea, heard at one and the same time that it had safely crossed, and that it was victorious. So pros- perous was the course of his enterprises, and such was the speed with which Fortune crowned the beauty of his achievements.

XXII. When he had become master of the citadel, he did not repeat the experience of Dion, nor did he spare the place on account of the beauty and great cost of its architecture, but guarding against the suspicions which had brought calumny and then destruction upon his predecessor, he made proclama-

1 See the Dion, chapter liii. 1. 313
3
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tov BovXoLevoy Trapeivar peTa otdnpou Kai cuved-antesBat KatacKkarTopévwoy TOY TUpAaPYLKaY
épupatav. ws d5€ mdvtes avéBnoav, apyny édev-aos jomnjodpevoe BeBatotatny To Knpvypa Kal THY Hyuepav exeivay, ov povov THV axpay, andra, Kal Tas oixkias Kal Ta pynpata TOY TUpavvwD

avétpevray nal xatéoxawav. evOvs dé Tov TorTov auvopaduvas éev@xodounoe Ta Sixactypia, yapt-Copevos Tois ToAiTats Kal THs Tupavvidos UTeEp-Tépav ToLa@v THY SnpoKpatiay.
"Eret 5€ tHv mod éEXo@v oOvK Elye TroXiTAS, GANA TOV pev ev TOS TOOLS Kal Tais OTaCECE StadOapévtwy, Tav 5é Tas Tupavvidas hevyorTor,
) pev év Yupaxovaais ayopa Sv épynpuiay ovTws ToAAny kal Babeiay éképucey DANY woTE TOUS imrqous €v avTn Katavéeuer Oat, TOY iTTroKOpLwD év
TH XAon xaTaxerpévav, ai 5é araL TONELS TAY TAVTEADS OALywov éX\adwv éyévorvto pectal Kal ava aypiov, év 5é tois mpoactetots Kal repli Ta TELYN TOAAAKLS OL DXOATY ayorTes ExuvNyeTour, umnKxove & ovdels TaY ev Tois épvuace kal ppovplows KAaTOLKOUYT@Y, OVE KaTEBAaLVOD Eis THY TOLD, arrAa hpixn Kai picos elye wavtas ayopas Kai monTeias Kal Bnuatos, €& av avéducav avtois Gl WAEloTOL TOY TUpavvaY, Edoke TH Tipor€ovTe
kal tots Svpaxovaiors yparyat mpos tovs Kopiv-Giovs Strws wéurwotw oixnTopas eis Tas Yupaxovaas €x Ths ‘EXAdbos. 7 TE yap Yopa axYONd-Cecv Ewedre, kal arodvy Trodeyov éx AtBuns mporedéxovtTo, TuvOavoyevor tovs Kapyndovious
Tod pev Maywvos éavtov avedovtTos dvectaupo-Kévat TO copa Sia THY oTpaTnyiay opyiaBévTas, 314

47

TIMOLEON

tion that all Syracusans who wished should come with implements of iron’and help in the demolition of the tyrants’ bulwarks. And when they had all come up, considering that day with its proclamation to be a most secure beginning of freedom, they overthrew and demolished, not only the citadel, but also the palaces and the tombs of the tyrants. Then, as soon as he had levelled off the place, Timoleon built the courts of justice there, thus gratifying the citizens by making their democracy triumphant over tyranny. i
But the city which he had taken had not citizens enough, since some had perished in their wars and seditions, while others had gone into exile from ty- rannical governments. Indeed, for lack of population the market place of Syracuse had produced such a quantity of dense herbage that horses were pastured in it, while their grooms lay down in the grass; and the other cities, with almost no exceptions, were full of deer and wild swine, while in their suburbs and around their walls those who had leisure for it went hunting, and not one of those who were estab- lished in fortresses and strongholds would hearken to any summons, or come down into the city, but fear and hatred kept all away from market place and civic life and public speaking, which had produced the most of their tyrants. Therefore Timoleon and the Syracusans decided to write to the Corinthians urging them to send settlers to Syracuse from Greece. For otherwise the land was likely to lie uncultivated, and they expected a great war from Africa, since they learned that the Carthaginians, after Mago's guicide, had impaled his dead body, in their rage at his conduct of the expedition, and that they were avrous 5é€ cuvaye peyddny Sivayw ws Erous apa SiaBnoopévous eis YeKediav.

XXIII. Tay 8¢ ypappdtwv rovtwyv rapa tod
Teporéovtos xoutcbévtwv, Kal mpécfewov aya
Tapovtwv Lupaxovoliwv Kal Seouevwv émipern-Ojvat TIS ToAEwS Kal yevécDat TdrW €€ dTrapyis
OixicTas, ovY Hptacay ot KopivO.or thy wreove-Eiav, o05é mpoceTroincay avTois THY TOALY, GANA
Tp@Tov pev emLovTes TovsS iepovs ayavas ev TH
Ul A

"EAAdOL! Kal tas peyiotas Tov Tavnyvpewy
dvnyopevoy ume Kxnpixov Ste KopivOtor xata-AeAUKOTES THY év LYupaxovaais tupavvida, cal
Tov TUpavvoy é€eXnAaKOTES, KaXOVGL Yupaxovatous Kal TOV GANwVY YKedtwTav Tov Bovdropevov
oixety tHy Word édrEVOépovs Kal avTovopous, ér ico Kal Sixaiows thy yopav dtadayovras:
Ereita Statréumovtes ayyéAous els thy Aciav Kal Tas vyoous, trou TAELaTOUS érrUvOdVOYTO TOV
guyddwv Steatappévovs Katoixeiv, Ttwapexddouv
tévat mravtas eis KopivOov, ws KopivOiwv aodarj TouTHy Kal wrota Kal otpatnyovs TrapetovTwv idiots tédeow eis Yupaxovcas. Kynpvacopéevwv
d€ TOVT@Y 7) ev TOALS TOV SixaLoTAaTOV Kal KarL-oTov ameAXduBavey érrawov xat bnrov, édevGe-povoa pev ato TaY TUpavyverv, cwlovaa 8 amd tav BapBdpwv, amodidotca Sé -ots ToXiTats THY YwOpav.
Oi 5é€ cuvedOovtes eis KopivOov ovx dvtes

ixavol To AROS edenOnoav é« KopivOov Kat THs GAAS “EAAdOos traparaBelvy cvvoixovs: Kal
YEVOMEVOL pUPLwY OUK éXdTTOUS KaTéTAEVCAY eis
1 éy rp ‘EAAGS: with Coraés, Bekker, and Blass: ‘EAAd&:.

316

TIMOLEON

assembling a great force with the intention of crossing into Sicily in the summer.
XXIII. When these letters from Timoleon had been delivered, and were accompanied by Syracusan envoys who begged them to take thought for their city and to become anew its founders, the Corinthians did not seize the opportunity for their own aggran- dizement, nor did they appropriate the city for themselves, but, in the first place, they visited the sacred games in Greece and the greatest festival assemblages, and proclaimed by heralds that the Corinthians had overthrown the tyranny in Syracuse, and driven out the tyrant, and now invited Syracusans, and any other Sicilian Greeks who wished, to people the city with free and independent citizens, allotting the land among them on equal and just terms. In the second place, they sent messengers to Asia and the islands, where they learned that most of the scattered exiles were residing, and invited them all to come to Corinth, assuring them that the Corinthians, at their own expense, would furnish them with leaders and trans- ports and a safe convoy to Syracuse. By these pro- clamations the city of Corinth earned the justest praise and the fairest glory; she was freeing the land from its tyrants, saving it from the Barbarians, and restoring it to its rightful citizens.

When these had assembled at Corinth, being too few in number, they begged that they might receive fellow colonists from Corinth and the rest of Greece ;

and after their numbers had risen to as a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 Lupaxovcas. dn b€ nal tov é€& ‘Iradias Kal
ZiKedias mohhol 7@ Teporéovre cuvednrvieoar:
Kat ryevopevors aurois éEaxtapupiors TO TriOos,
@S “Adans elonke, THY meV Xepav dreverpe, Tas
5é olxias atédoto XerAbov TahavTo, dua pev DrrohesTromevos Tots dpxaion Lupakovators eEwveta Iau Tas avTa@v, dua oe Xpnparov €vmopiay To Sno pnXavepevos oUTWS TEVOLEV®
cal 1 pos ‘Tada Kal Mpos TOV TOAELOV wate Kal
5 TOUS avdprdvras arroboa bau, andou Srapepoperns Umép Exdaorou Kal ywopmevns KaTnyopias, domep
avO porary evOuvas Sidovtwv: Ste 57 pace tov TéXevos dvdpidvra Tov Tadao tupdvvov da-THPHS aL TOUS Yupaxovaious, KATAXELpOTOVOU-

péveov TOV adndor, arya, pevous Kal TLu@VvTas Tov avdpa TAS viens fv mpos ‘Iuépa Kapyn-Sovious évixnaer.
XXIV. Otro & Tihs Toews avalon upovans kal _TANpoupErnys, em LppeovT wv mavTaxober els
aurny TOV TOMLTOV, Bovdopevos O Tiporéwy Kal Tas dAXNas TONES éXevOepwaa Kal mayTanacww
éxxoyat Tihs LuKedias Tas Tupavuioas, émi Tas Xepas avrav otpatevov ‘IKétny peév jvaryKnacey avTooTavTa Kapyndoviar omoroyia au Tas a dx pom o-dees KatacKdypew Kat Biorevoev idatTny € év Aeov-2 Tivos, Aerrivov dé Tod TupavvodvTos "AtroAAw- 248
vias Kat TUXvaV GAXwY TOALYVioD, as exuvduveve Kata Kparos anova, mapadovros aurov peroa-pevos els Kopw8ov aTrET TELE, KaXov HryoupEvos év Th pNT omoXeL TOUS THS Bxedias Tupdvvous bo Tav EdAnvav arolewpeicBar ghuyadixads 318

TIMOLEON ‘

thousand, they sailed to Syracuse. But by this time many also from Italy and Sicily had flocked to Timoleon ; and when their numbers had risen to sixty thousand, as Athanis states, Timoleon divided the land among them, and sold the houses of the city for a thousand talents, thus at once reserving for the original Syracusans the power to purchase their own houses, and devising an abundance of money for the community ; this had so little, both for other pur- poses, and especially for the war, that it actually sold its public statues at auction, a regular vote of con- demnation being passed against each, as though they were men submitting their accounts. It was at this time, they say, that the statue of Gelon, their ancient tyrant, was preserved by the Syracusans, though they condemned the rest, because they admired and honoured him for the victory which he had won over the Carthaginians at Himera.!

XXIV. Seeing the city thus beginning to revive and fill itself with people, since its citizens were streaming into it from all sides, Timoleon determined to set the other cities also free, and utterly to root out all tyrannies from Sicily. He therefore made an expedition into their territories and compelled Hicetas to forsake the cause of Carthage, and to agree to demolish his citadels and live as a private person in Leontini. And as for Leptines, who lorded it over Apollonia and numerous other strongholds, when he was in danger of being taken by main force, he surrendered himself; and Timoleon spared his life and sent him off to Corinth, considering it a fine thing to have the tyrants of Sicily in the mother city where the Greeks could observe them living .

1 In 480 B.c., on the same day, it is said, as the victory at Salamis. Cf. Herodotus, vii. 166 319
fr

}

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 nal tamevas Covtas. Ttovs Sé pucbohopous
, > a , bd a LY A BovAdpevos ex tHS ToAEpias w@peretcOar Kal by oxordte, autos péev eis Tas Yupaxovoas érrav-iAGe TH KaTagTadcEL THS TOALTELas TrpocéEwY Kat
tois jKovow éx KopivOov vopobéras Kedar kal Atovucio ta Kuptwatata Kal KdAN_oTA ouUD-Siabnawy, tovs dé wept Aeivapyov cal Anudperov eis THY TOV Kapynbovioy éEémeppev emixparesar, ot mOAELs TOAAaS adioTayTes THY BapRdpwy ov
,) \ fo) PJ 9 , 2 \ , povov avtot Sijyov év ddOovors, GAdra Kal ypn-pata tapeoxevatoy eis Tov ToAE“oy amo TOV ato Kopévov.
XXV. ’Ev rovt@ 5é Kapyndomo xatamrréovary
bd \ 4 ¥ e \ 4 “
eis TO AtAvBasov ayovres Erta puptdbas oTparod kat tpinpers Staxocias Kai TA0Ia yiAta KopilovTa pnyavas nat réOpimrma Kai citov adBovoy Kai
Thy GAANVY TapacKeuNny, WS OvK ETL TrOLNTOMEVOL
\ 4 ‘N ; ? > ¢ “a ,
KaTa sépos TOV TOAEMOV, GAN oOpov Tracns LX-Kkedlas é€eXacovtes Tovs "EAAnvas: Fv yap 1
Svvamus éEapxovoa Kai py voocotvtas pnde d:e-POappévous it’ adAnjrA@v svAAaBEcIa LiKediwtas. muOopevos 5€ tropOcicAas thy émixpatetav
autav, evOus opyn wpos tous KopivOiouvs éywpour
"AcdpouBa te kai 'Apidxa otpatnyourray. Tis 8 ayyedias oféws eis Lupaxovoas ddixopévns ovUTw KaTeTAaynoav of Yupaxovato. wpos TO péyeOos Tis Suvapews Mate podus TH Tiporcovte
(4 > ‘N a, c e
Tpicxyidiouvs ato TocovTey wupiadwy dma Aa-320
TIMOLEON

the lowly life of exiles. Moreover, he wished that his mercenaries might get booty from the enemy’s country and not remain idle. Accordingly, while he himself returned to Syracuse in order to apply himself to the establishment of the civil polity and to assist the lawgivers who had come from Corinth, Cephalus and Dionysius, in arranging its most im- portant details in the most attractive way, he sent forth the troops under Deinarchus and Demaretus } into that part of the island which the Carthaginians controlled, where they brought many cities to revolt from the Barbarians, and not only lived in plenty themselves, but actually raised moneys for the war from the spoils they made.

XXV. Meanwhile the Carthaginians put in at Lily- baeum with an army of seventy thousand men, two hundred triremes, and a thousand transports carrying engines of war, four-horse chariots, grain in abundance, and other requisite equipment. Their purposé was, not to carry on the war by piece-meal any more, but at one time to drive the invading Greeks out of all Sicily ; for their force would have been sufficient to capture the native Greeks, even though they had not been politically weak and utterly ruined by one another. And on learning that the territory which they controlled was being ravaged by the Corinthians, they were furious, and straightway marched against them under the command of Hasdrubal and Hamilcar. Tidings of this coming quickly to Syracuse, the Syracusans were so terrified at the magnitude of the enemy’s forces that only three thousand out of so many tens of thousands could with difficulty be brought to pluck up courage, take their arms, and go

1 Cf. chapter xxii. 3.

*~ n yd
3 Bovtas toApfnoar cuveEeNOeiv. ot 5é€ prcPopopor
TETpAaKiaXiALoL TO TAOS Hoay Kai TovTwY
avOts Goov yidiot Kal’ odoy amodedtacartes AVEXY@PNTAY, WS OVY UyLtaivovTos TOU Teor€ortos,
b , 9 e , A e
GA\Ad paswouévov trap Atciay Kal mpos entra
peuptddas wodepioy pera twevraxioyirioy meCav
, e y , A ”~ kal xtdtov immévwy Badifovtos, kai Stapt@vtos obey nuepa@v OxT@ Tv Svvapty amo TOY Lupa-Kkovaav, Bev ote cwORvat Tois hevyovoty oUTE
4 Tadjvat toils Trecovow avtToy UTdpte. TOUTOUS pev ovv Tiporéwv Képdos nryetto mpo TAS payns havepovs yeyovotas, Tous Sé€ GAXOvS Emippwaas KaTa TaXos Wye pos tov Kpiynoov motapmor, Strov Kal tos Kapyndovious jxovce cuvat re.
XXVI. ’AvaBaivovte 5¢ a’t@ mpos Aodov, Sy UrrepBadovres uedrov caroperbar TO oTpaTeupa
\ 4 a , 9 ,
kat thy Sivapty tav trodepiwv, éuBadXovow Hutovot wéALva Kopilovtes’ Kal Tots oTpaTL@TALS
elon Ae trovnpov elvat TO onmetoy, OTL TA pYnpaTA TOY vexpav ei@bapev erverKas oTEpavody aErAivots*
kal Tapotmia tis éx TOUTOU yéyove, TOY émiapa-

2 A@s vocodvTa Setcbat cerivov. Bovdopevos odv
> A 9 4 fe) A X
avrous amadAdéar ths Sevotdaipovias nad rHv
, b A e , 9 v4
dvceAmictetav adedreiy o Timodéwv, emaotynoas THY Topelay GANa TE WpéTOYTA TO Katp@ Sie-
, A , > “a 54 A fo AéyOn, Kal Tov atépavov auvtois edn mpo Tis vixns Kxoptlouevov avToudtws eis Tas yeipas jKev, @ KopivOtoe otepavodct tovs “IcOua vu-K@VTAS, (epov Kal TaTpLov TO OTé“LA TOU GEAlvoU
322

forth with Timoleon. Furthermore, the mercenaries were only four thousand in number ; and of these, again, about a thousand played the coward on the march and went back to Syracuse, declaring that Timoleon was not in his right mind, but was more crazy than his years would lead one to expect, and was marching against seventy thousand of the enemy with five thousand foot and a thousand horse, and was taking his force a march of eight days away from Syracuse, so that those of them who fled from the field would find no safety, and those who fell upon it would have no burial. As for these men, then, Timoleon counted it gain that they had shown what they were before the battle; the rest he encouraged and led them with all speed to the river Crimesus, where he heard that the Carthaginians also were concentrating.

XXVI1. As he was marching up a hill, from the crest of which they expected to look down upon the camp and the forces of the enemy, there met them by chance some mules laden with parsley ; and it occurred to the soldiers that the sign was a bad one, because we are generally accustomed to wreath the tombs of the dead with parsley; and this has given rise to a proverb, namely, that one who is dangerously sick “ needs only parsley.’ Accordingly, wishing to free them from their superstitious fears -and take away their despondency, Timoleon halted them on their march, and after discoursing other- wise as befitted the occasion, said also that the wreath for their victory had come into their hands in advance and of its own accord, the wreath with which Corinthians crown the victors at the Isthmian games, considering the garland of parsley to be tra-

323
y 2
~*~

vouitovres. ets yap Tore TOV ‘IcOpuiwy, woTep viv trav Nepciwv, To aédwwov Hv otépavos, ov mdrat dé % iTS yéyovev. évtTuyav ovv o Timo-Av, OomrEp eipynrat, Tois oTpaTL@Tats Kal AaBov TOV GeAlvor KaTEeaTéeaTO TP@TOS avUTOS, Elta of mept avTov Hyepoves Kal TO WAHOOS. of dé wavTes Katibovtes aetous S00 mpoadepopévous, OV O Lev
Spdxovta tois dvukw epepe Statrerrappévor, o bé imtato KexAayos peya nal Oapparéov, éredet-Kvvoy Tols oTpaTiMTats, Kal Mpos evYas Dewy Kal avakrnoels éTpatroyTo WaVTES.
XXVII. To pév odv Eros iatapévov Oépous
elyevy @pav, Kal AnyorTs unvi Oapyndave mpos
Tas Tpowas On cuvire TOV KaLpov? opiyrAnv Sé Tov ToTau“OU TOAAnY avad:doyTos mpaToy pev amrexpumteto Cope TO Twediov, Kal ovvoTrTov ovdév
HY GTO TOV TOAELLWY, TANY HY TLS aKpPLTOS Kal
TULLLYNS Ava Wwpos TOV NOmoy Exwper TrpdcwHev
AVLOTAPLEVNS oTparias TtocavuTns. ws 5 avaBavres éml rov Nogov éatncay of KopivOror nai Oéuevoe
tas aomidas Staverravovto, Tov HdLov Teptpepopévouv Kal petewpilovtos THv avabupiac.y, o pév Borepds anp aOportopevos mpos Ta btYynra Kal
TuvicTapevos KaTevehwoe TAS aKpwpeias, TOY Sé U7 1ddas TOTwY avaxaBatpopévor 6 Te Kpiunoos
éEehavn Kai StaBaivovtes avtov @dOncav ai TOAELLOL, TPWTOLS eV TOIS TEOPiTrIrots eKTANKTI-
Kas Tpos ayGva KaTerKevacuevors, KaTOTLD dé ToUT@Y Luplots omAiTals NEVKdOTLCL. TOUTOUS érexpatpovto Kapynéovious elvas tH AaptrpoTyTe Ths oKxeuns kal tH BpaduTire Kal rake THs 324

249

ditionally sacred in their country. For at that time parsley was still used for wreaths at the Isthmian, as it is now at the Nemean games, and it was not long ago that the pine came into use instead. Ac- cordingly, when Timoleon had addressed his soldiers, as I have said, he took of the parsley and crowned himself with it first, and then the captains and the common soldiers about him did the same. Moreover, the soothsayers, observing two eagles coming up on the wing, one of which bore a serpent pierced with its talons, while the other flew with a loud and in- spiring cry, pointed them out to the soldiers, and all betook themselves to invoking the gods with prayers.

XXVII. Now, the season of the year was early summer, the month of Thargelion was drawing to a close, and the summer solstice was near;! the river exhaled a thick mist which at first hid the plain in darkness, and nothing could be seen in the enemy's camp, only an inarticulate and confused noise made its way up to the hill, showing that the vast host was moving forward. But after the Corinthians had ascended the hill, where they stopped, laid down their shields, and rested themselves, the sun was passing the meridian and drawing the vapours on high, the thick haze moved in masses towards the heights and hung in clouds about the mountain summits, while the regions below cleared up, the Crimesus came into view, and the enemy were seen crossing it, in the van their four-horse chariots for- midably arrayed for battle, and behind these ten thousand men-at-arms with white shields. These the Corinthians conjectured to be Carthaginians, from the splendour of their armour and the slowness

1 It was early in June, 339 Buc.

mopeias. peta S€ TovTovs Tav AoLTaOY Over émippecvtwy Kai tiv SudBaow pet @Oiopod Kat Tapayis Tovovpevwy, svvid@v o Tiporéov tov WOTaPLOV AUTOIS TasuEevovTa TOV mANJoUS Tov
modeuiwy atrodaBeiy Sooty OéXovev avTol paye-aoOat, xai tovs otpatiwmtas xabopay xedevoas Thy parayya te peiOpm Siaredvpévny nai rods pev 78n SsaBeBnxoras, Tovs dé péXAovtTas, Tpocérake Anpapér@ AaBovre Ttovs imrets éwBareiy els tous Kapynédovious xal ovvtapdéa tov &:a-KOO LOV AUT@Y THS Tapatd&ews ovTrH KabecTwOoNS.
avros 6€ xataBads els TO tediov Ta pev Képata Tois GAdos LuKedksoTats arédwxev, avapitas exatépp tav Eévwy ov troddovs, ev péow S€ zrepi
aitov XaBav Tovs Lupaxovaious Kal Td payipwo-Tatov TaV pcOopopwv Bpaydy pev xpovov éméaye
TO TOV immréwy aTrolewpay Epyor, ws 5é éxeivous eldev tro TOY appatev po THs Takews SiabedvTwv eis yeipas ENOeiv Tois Kapyndovioss od Svvapévous, aX Gres pn cuvrapayxOeiev avayxalopdvous
éFerittey cuvexa@s xal muxvas é& émotpodis qovctabat Tas émeNaceEls, dvadaBov tHv acrida wat Bonoas ErecOat cai Oappeiv rots melois éokev vrreppvet povy nai peilove xeypnobat THs
cuvnfous, eitre TO TdaGEL Tapa TOY ayava Kai TOV

évOovatac pov otTw Statevdpevos, cite Satpoviov TLVOS, @S TOLS Tronnois TOTE mapéorn,, OUvETtpb cyEapévov. TAXD dé THY kpavyiy avtaTrodov-Tov, Kal Tapeyyv@vtwy aye xal py pédrewv, 326

TIMOLEON

and good order of their fharch. After these the other nations streamed on and were making the crossing in tumultuous confusion. Then Timoleon, noticing that the river was putting it in their power to cut off and engage with whatever numbers of the enemy they themselves desired, and bidding his soldiers observe that the phalanx of the enemy was sundered by the river, since some of them had already crossed, while others were about to do so, ordered Demaretus to take the horsemen and fall upon the Carthaginians and throw their ranks into confusion before their array was yet formed. Then he himself, descending into the plain, assigned the wings to the other Sicilian Greeks, uniting a few of his mercenaries with each wing, while he took the Syracusans and the best fighters among his mercen- aries under his own command in the centre. Then he waited a little while, watching what his horsemen would do, and when he saw that they were unable to come to close quarters with the Carthaginians on account of the chariots which coursed up and down in front of their lines, but were forced to wheel about continually that their ranks might not be broken, and to make their charges in quick succession after facing about again, he took up his shield and shouted to his infantrymen to follow and be of good courage ; and his voice seemed stronger than usual and more than human, whether it was from emotion that he made it so loud, in view of the struggle and the enthusiasm which it inspired, or whether, as most felt at the time, some deity joined in his utterance. Then, his men re-echoing his shout, and begging him to lead them on without delay, he signalled to

327

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tots pev imrotats €onpavey EEw rapa thy taki
T@Y appatwv TapeNdoat Kal KaTa& Képas Trpoc-pépecOat tots todepuiows, avtos S€ Tovs mpopaXoUs WuKv@cas T@ ovvacwicp@, Kat THY aadtvyya Kerevoas emipbéyEacIa, mpooéBare tois Kapynédoviors.
XXVIII. Ot S&é thy pév rpw@rny émidpoprny UurésTnoay éppwpévas, Kai TO KaTaTreppayOat Ta capata atdnpois Owpaks nal yadxois xpdveow
aoridas Te peyddas mpoPeSrnoOa: StexpovoytTo Tov Sopatiopov. eérrel 5é eis Eibn cuvndOev o ayav Kal Téyyns ovxX NTTOY H pwpns eyeyover TO Epyov, éEaipyns ato tay opa@v Bpovtat te poBepat
KaTeppyyvuvto Kal wupwdes aotparai ouveké-WLNTOV. ETA O TWEplt TOS AOoUS Kal Tas axpw-

petas Cohos ent thy paxyny xatiav, 6uBpm Kar mvevpate Kal yardln cuppemeypévos, Tois pev
"ErAnow é£oricbev xal Kata vwrov teptexetro, tov 5¢ BapRdpev éErumte TA TpdcwTa Kal KaTN-atpamte Tas dyes, Gua Daidatros bypas xal froyos auvexois ex TaV vedav Pepopuévyns. ev
ols T1roANG ev HV Ta AUVTTODVTA, Kal pddtoTaA TOUS
atreipovs, ovx HKiota S€ Bradyar doxodow ai Bpovral nal tov Grrdwy 6 Tatayos KoTTOMEVwY
@ 4 4 4 9 V4
cf paySaim cat yaraln, kwdXvwv axoverOa Ta mpootaypata Tov nye“ovwv. ois S& Kapyn-Soviows ovK ovow evlovots TOY oTALCpLOY, adn, ®omep elpntat, Katatreppaypévors, 6 TE mWNHAOS hinébine hy ol te KoATTOL TWANPOvMEVOL TeV xitovev bdatos, oF abrois mev eis TOV ayava
xpijc Gat Bapels Raoav Kat Svaepyot, padsoe 8é Tois
"EdAnaoe tepitpémec Oat, Kal wecovtTes aunyavor 328

his horsemen to ride along outside and past the line of chariots and attack the enemy on the flank, while he himself made his vanguard lock their shields in close array, ordered the trumpet to sound the charge, and fell upon the Carthaginians.

XXVIII. But these withstood his first onset sturdily, and owing to the iron breastplates and bronze helmets with which their persons were pro- tected, and the great shields which they held in front of them, repelled the spear thrusts. But when the struggle came to swords and the work required skill no less than strength, suddenly, from the hills, fearful peals of thunder crashed down, and vivid flashes of lightning darted forth with them. Then the darkness hovering over the hills and mountain summits came down to the field of battle, mingled with rain, wind, and hail. It enveloped the Greeks from behind and smote their backs, but it smote the Barbarians in the face and dazzled their eyes, a tempest of rain and continuous flames dashing from the clouds. In all this there was much that gave distress, and most of all to the in- experienced ; and particularly, as it would seem, the peals of thunder worked harm, and the clatter of the armour smitten by the dashing rain and hail, which made it impossible to hear the commands of the leaders. Besides, since the Carthaginians were not lightly equipped, but, as I have said, encased in armour, both the mud and the bosoms of their tunics filled with water impeded them, so that they were unwieldy and ineffective in their fighting, and easily upset by the Greeks, and when they had once fallen it was impossible for them to rise again from

4 mdduy éx mmo peTa Tay Orhey aGyacTiva. «kai yap o 0 Kpipnoos imo tay SiaPatvovtev exhuoOn
péeyas 76 Tots Su Bposs nvEnpévos, wal TO qwedtov TO Wepi QUTOV UTO ToAAAS ouvaryKeias Kat papayyas Urroxel pevov ériprhato pevidtev ov Kata qropov pepopeveor, ols ot amLcreibarn xadsvooupevot Xarers amr NATTOV. téros Sé Tov xetpe@ovos ET LKELLEVOU, Kal TOV ‘EXAjvev THY TP@THy Tage aura, avdpas TeTpaxocious, xataBadov-5 Tw, eTpaTry To WANOOs Eis puyyy. Kai ToAXot pev ev TP Trediep xatahapBavopevor biepGeipovro, TrONAoUS 5€ 0 Totapos ois Ere Te aLoupevots cULTiMTOVTAS éuBarrdov cal Tapadepaov aT on-Ave, Telia TOUS dé Tay Aopeov éptepevous ems-Oéovres ot yorot KaTeLpyacavTo. Aéyovrat your év pupiots vex pos Tpurxirsot KapynSovicv ryeve-6 cBa, peya TH Tone mevOos. ouTE yap yéveow obre Tovrors ovre Sokats Erepot Bedrioves hoav éxeivwv, ovT amroBavovtas ToTe fuUa ayn Wpo-TEpov é& avrav Kapyndoviey ToTOUTOUS pVNpovevovory, ara AiBvot Ta TONGA car “I Bnpot
xat Nopdot ypwopevor 7 pos TAS payas aAdNNoTpLaLs BraBats avedéXovTo Tas HTTas.
XXIX. "Eqvac@y dé ois “EAAnow n Oofa
TOY TETOVT@Y ATO THY Aapupwv. eAd YLT TOS
yap hy Xoreav Kat odnpav Tois oKUAEVOUCL
oryos” oUTWS add Govos bev tv apyupos, ag Bovos dé Xpucos. Kal yap To oTparorTresoy pera TOY vmrotuylov dscaBavres EXaBov. TOV é alxpanw-TY Ol pev mwoXXol _Stexdarrnoay UTO TOV oTpa-TiaT@y, els Oe KOLWOV amredeixOnoay TEVTAKL Xi - Auoe TO TAHOOS? Aw Sé wal dwtaxdota tov 330°

the mud with their weapons. For the Crimesus, having been already greatly swollen by the rains, was forced over its banks by those who were cross- ing it, and the adjacent plain, into which many glens and ravines opened from the hills, was filled with streams that hurried along no fixed channels, and in these the Carthaginians wallowed about and were hard beset. Finally, the storm still assailing them, and the Greeks having overthrown their first rank of four hundred men, the main body was put to flight. Many were overtaken in the plain and . cut to pieces, and many the river dashed upon and carried away to destruction as they encountered those who were still trying to cross, but most of them the light-armed Greeks ran upon and des- patched as they were making for the hills. At any rate, it is said that among ten thousand dead bodies, three thousand were those of Carthaginians—a great affliction for the city. For no others were superior to these in birth or wealth or reputation, nor is it recorded that so many native Carthaginians ever perished in a single battle before, but they used - Libyans for the most part and Iberians and Numid- ians for their battles, and thus sustained their de- feats at the cost of other nations.

XXIX. The rank of those who had fallen was made known to the Greeks from the spoils. For those who stripped the bodies made very little account of bronze and iron; so abundant was silver, so abundant gold. For they crossed the river and seized the camp with its baggage-trains. As for the prisoners, most of them were stolen away and hidden by the soldiers, but as many as five thousand were delivered into the public stock; there were also

2 tOpinmwv. KxadrrAJornv Sé Kxal peyaXompereaorarny aiiv % Teporéovros éredetxvuto oxnvy meptowpevOeioa tTavtodatrois Aadupots, év ols xidvo. pev Owpaxes epyacia Kal KddrAW Siadépovtes, puptat S€ aomides tmpoeTéOnoav. drJLyot 5é moAXovs oxvrevovTes Kal peydrats éevtuyydvovtes wperciars tpitn moms Hepa peTa THY payny éornocay TpoTratov.
“Apa S¢ tH Syn tis viens o Trporéwov eis pa Se TH din Tis vien yo KopwOov ereuye se KdAMOTA THY aixparorTov
dirdwv, Bovropevos avrov tHy a i Tact
3 avOpatros Enrwrtny elvat, Oewpévors ev exetvy povn tay “EXAnuiKnay morewv tovs émibaveota-Tous vaovs ovx “EAXnviKois Kexoounpévous dAa-hipots ovd amd ouyyevav dovov Kal ouopvrav
avaOnpatov pynpas areprreis éyovras, adda BapBapixa oxira xadXiorats emtypagais 8y-NovVTA pEeTa THS avdpelas TAV vEevLKNKOTwY THY Sixacoouvny, Ste KopivOtoc cal Teworéwv 0 otpa-Tyyos édevOepwoavtes TOvS BKediay oixobvTas
"EXAnvas amo Kapyndovioy yapiotnpia Geois.
aveOnnay.
XXX. "Ex tovtov xatadirev ev Th Todepia
Tous ptaGopdpous ayovtras Kal dépovtas tHy TeV
Kapynooviwyériucpateav, avtos xev eis Yupa-

Kovaas' Kal Tovs xtALlovs puaOoddpous éxelvous,
td’ oy éyxaterelhOn mpo ths paxns, eEexrpute THs BeuKeXtas, Kat mpl 4 Sivas tov HALov nvdy-
2 xacev €x Yvpaxovoav awedOeiv. ovdtoL pev ovv Stamrrevoavtes ets ‘Iradlav amedovto Tapa-amovonbévtes Uo Bpetriwv, cal Sixny tavtny
To Satpomoy avtois THiS mMpodocias érébnxe.
332

captured two hundred of the four-horse chariots. But the most glorious and magnificent sight was _presented by the tent of Timoleon, which was heaped about with all sorts of spoils, among which a thousand breast-plates of superior workmanship and beauty and ten thousand shields were exposed to view. And as there were but few to strip many, and the booty they came upon was great, it was the third day after the battle before they could erect their trophy.

Along with the report of his victory Timoleon sent to Corinth the most beautiful of the captured armour, wishing that his own native city should be envied of all men, when in her alone of Greek cities they saw the most conspicuous temples, not adorned with Greek spoils, nor possessed of joyless memorials in the shape of votive offerings from the slaughter of kinsmen and fellow citizens, but decked with barbarian spoils which set forth in fairest inscriptions the justice as well as the valour of the victors, declaring that Corinthians and Timoleon their general set the Greeks dwelling in Sicily free from Carthaginians, and thus dedicated thank-offerings to the gods.

XXX. After this, he left his mercenaries in the enemy’s territory plundering the dominion of the Carthaginians, and went himself to Syracuse; there he ordered out of Sicily the thousand mercenaries by whom he had been deserted before the battle, and compelled them to depart from Syracuse before the sun went down. These, then, after crossing into Italy, were perfidiously slain by the Bruttians, thus receiving from the divine power a penalty for

333

Tar 5é wept ror Mdpepxoy, tov Karayns tvpay- 251
vov, kat ‘Ixérny, ere PO0ve tav KxatopOovpévwy uma Tiporéovros, elite oPovpérwy autov ws amtoTov kai dotrovdov Mpos TOUS TUpaVVOUS, TULLpaxiay Tomncapévev mpos tovs Kapyndovious Kal KeXevoavroy réurey Suva «al orparnyov, et un wayvtdtrace Bovdovtas YeKeMas éxteceiv, Errevoe Técxwv vais pev Exov EBdopunxovta, pscOodopouvs Sé¢ wpocrda8eav “EAAnvas, ovmw mpotepoy “EXXAnot ypnoapévav Kapyn-Soviwy, adA\d ToTe Oavypacaytwv ws avuTo0-oTdTous Kal paxtpwrdrovs avOp@rav anrdvTev.
ovotavres 5¢ xowwn pet addAnAwv Arravtes ev TH
Meconvia tetpaxocious tav mapa Tipor€ovtos
Eévwv émixovpovs weupOévtas améxrewav, év
8¢ 19 Kapyndoviwy émixpateia tepi tas xadoupevas “letas evedpevoavtes tovs pet Evdvpou tov Aevxabdiou pucboddpous S:épOetpav. &€& ov
kat partota thy Tiporéovtos evtuyiay avvéBn yevérOat Siwvupov. Hoav pev yap ovTa Tav peta Diropynrov tod Poxéws xal ‘Ovoudpyov
Aeros catadaBovtov cal peracxovtov éxeivoss THS lepoovAias. pucovvtayv 5é€ TavTev autos cal duratropéevoy érrapdrovs yeyovortas, TAavepevot wept tHv IleXorovvncoyv bd Tiporéovtos ErnpOnoay érépwv oTpatiwtav ovK evTropovyTos.
adixopevo. Se eis YueNayv Goas pev exeivo suynywvicayvto pdyas mdoas évixwy, tov Sé Trelotwv Kal peylotwy aywverv tédos éxyovTav 334

TIMOLEON

their treachery. Mamercus, however, the tyrant of Catana, and Hicetas, whether through envy of the successes won by Timoleon, or because they feared him as one who distrusted tyrants and would make no peace with them, formed an alliance with the Carthaginians and urged them to send a general with an army if they did not wish to be cast out of Sicily altogether. Accordingly, Gisco set sail! with a fleet of seventy ships, and added Greek mercenaries to his forces, although the Carthaginians had never before employed Greek soldiers; they did so at this time, however, because they had come to admire them as the best and most irresistible fighters in the world. After they had all united their forces in the territory of Messana, they slew four hundred of Timoleon’s mercenaries who had been sent thither as auxiliaries, and in that part of the island belong- ing to the Carthaginians, near the place called Ietae, they set an ambush for the mercenaries under Euthymus the Leucadian and cut them to pieces. Herein even most of all did the good for- tune of Timoleon become famous. For these were some of the men who, with Philomelus the Phocian and Onomarchus, had seized Delphi and shared in their spoliation of the sanctuary.2 Then, since all mankind hated them and shunned them as men who had put themselves under a curse, they wandered about Peloponnesus, where they were enlisted in his service by Timoleon, in the dearth of other soldiers. And after coming into Sicily, they were victorious in all the battles which they fought under his leadership, but when the most and greatest of his 1 In the spring of 338 B.c.

2 This was at the beginning of the second so-called Sacred War, 356 B.0.

€xTreuMomevot Wpos ETépas vm avtov PBonOeias ar@XovTo Kab Katavarwbnoar, ovy ouod TayTes, GAA KaTa pépos, TAS Aixns avtois amoNoyou-péevns tH Tiporéovtos evtuxia émritiOenevns 1
Orrws pnoeuia toils ayabois amo THS TOY KaKO@V
Kordcews BAdBn yéevntat. THY pev oY mTpdS Tiporéovra trav Seay evpévetay ovx Hrtov év als mpooéxpovoe mpaterw 7 mepl as xatwp0ou OavpdtecOat avvéRaivev.
XXXI. Of & woddol trav Yupaxovaiwv éxaré-
Ta.vov UT TAY TUPdvYwY TpoTNAaAKLCOMEVOL. Kal
yap 0 Mapeptos emi T@ Trotnuata ypadew Kai Tpaywdias péya dpovav éxopumale vinnoas rovs ptcboddpors, Kal tas aomidas dvabeis trois Oeois édeyetov URpiotexov eTréypawe:
TacS ootpeoypadets xai XpucehehavTnrEKTpous
daomidas adomidiou ethopev evTEnéoe.
yevowévev dé tovTwy nal rod Tiporgéovtos ets Kadavupiav otpatevcavtos, 6 'Ixérns éuBadrov
eis THY Yupaxouciay Aciav Te cuYrny EXaBeE Kal ToNAa AvuNvapevos Kal KaOvBpicas amnddGr-Teto wrap avtny thy Kadavpiav, xatadpovev tov Tiporéovtos odtyous oTpatiwtas ExoVToS.
éxeivos 5¢ mpodaBeiv édoas édiwxev tmmets Exwv Kat Yirovs. aicBdpmevos 5 o 'Inérns tov Aapv-piav d:aBeBnxas tréotn mapa Tov ToTAapoOY os apuvovpevos: Kal yap avt@ Oapoos 4 Te TOD
mopou XaderroTns Kal TO Kpnuraces THs éExaTépw-Oev Gy Ons mapetxe. Tois 5€ weTa TOD Tiponréovros

l ris Allens... éxiriOenévns Sintenis, with the MSS. The corrupt passage is variously emended by different editors.

struggles were over, they were sent out by him to the assistance of others, and then perished utterly, not all at one time, but little by little. And Justice thus punished them, while at the same time she sustained the good fortune of Timoleon, in order that no harm might come to the good from the chastisement of the wicked. So, then, the good will of the gods towards Timoleon was no less to be admired in his reverses than in his successes.

XXXI. But the people of Syracuse were vexed at the insults heaped upon them by the tyrants. For Mamercus, who valued himself highly as a writer of poems and tragedies, boasted of his victory over the mercenaries, and in dedicating their shields to the gods wrote the following insolent couplet :—

“These bucklers, purple-painted, decked with ivory, gold, and amber,
We captured with our simple little shields.”

And after this, when Timoleon was on an expedition to Calauria, Hicetas burst into the territory of Syracuse, took much booty, wrought much wanton havoc, and was marching off past Calauria itself, despising Timoleon, who had but few soldiers. But Timoleon suffered him to pass on, and then pursued him with cavalry and light-armed troops. When Hicctas was aware of this, he crossed the river Damurias, and halted on the farther bank to defend himself; for the difficulty of the passage, and the steepness of the banks on either side, gave him courage. ‘Then indpyais épis éumecodca Oavpaorn Kxal dirdoverxia SiatpiByny érroiee THs payns. ovdels yap qv o Bovropevos éerépou diaBaiverw dortepos emt

TOUS ToNEmious, GAN avTos Exactos nkiov Tpw-Tayovoreiy, Kal Koopov ovK elyev 4 SiaBacis éEwOovvtwy xal Tapatpeyovtwy ddAnAOUs. Bov-NOLEVOS OV Oo Tepor€wy KANP@aAL TOS HrEe“ovas ékaBe wap éxdotov Saxtidov. éuBarav sé mavtas eis THY EavToU yAapvda Kal pitas Eerke TOV MP@ToV KaTa TUYNY yAUd HY ExovTa TAS oppa-yidos Tpomatov. ws dé TovToY elSov ol vEeavicKol, peta yapas avaxpayovres ovK étt Tov GAAoV
Uméuervay KAHpov, GAN’ ws Exaotos Taxus elye Tov trotapov SucEeXdoavtes ev yepoly Hoav ToL modeuiots. of 5é ov édéEavto THy Biav avon, GANA hevyorTes THY pev OTAWY ATravTeEs Oouaras

éatepnOnaay, Xedious d€¢ amréBanXov wrecovtas.
XXXII, Ov worr@ b€ Sotepov eis tHv Acov-tivev otpatevoas o Tiportéwy RAapBaver Tov ‘Inérny Cavra cal tov viov Evrodenov nal tov immapyny KiOupoy, vrd tev oTpatiwtav acuvee-Oévras Kal nomscOévtas mpdos avTov. o pev ov» ‘Ikérns nat TO peupadxiov ws TUpavvot Kal mpoddtas xkoracbévres améOyvnoxov, o & EvOupos, avyp dyaos dy mpos. tovs ayavas Kal TOApy Stadépwr, oux étuxev oixtov Sia Praodnpuiav tiva mpos tous KopuvOious xatnyopnOeitcay avtod. Réyerat yap Ott tav Kopw6iwy éxotpatevoapévev én’ avtovs Snunyopav év tois Acovtivots ovdev py yeyovévae poBepoy ovbe Sewov, et Kopiv@tae yuvaixes €EAXOov Sopwv.

338

252

among Timoleon’s cavalry officers an astonishing strife and contention arose which delayed the battle. For not one of them was willing to cross the river against the enemy after another, but each demanded to begin the onset himself, and their crossing was likely to be without order if they crowded and tried to run past one another. Timoleon, therefore, wish- ing to decide their order by lot, took a seal-ring from each of the leaders, and after casting all the rings into his own cloak and mixing them up, he. showed the first that came out, and it had by chance as the device of its seal a trophy of victory. When the young men saw it, they cried aloud for joy and would no longer wait for the rest of the lot, but all dashed through the river as fast as they could and closed with the enemy. These could not withstand the violence of their onset, but fled, all alike losing their arms, and a thousand being left dead on the field. XXXII. Not long afterwards Timoleon made an expedition into the territory of Leontini and cap- tured Hicetas alive, together with his son Eupolemus and his master of horse Euthymus, who were bound and brought to Timoleon by his soldiers. Hicetas, then, and his young son, were punished as tyrants and traitors and put to death, and Euthymus, though a brave man in action and of surpassing boldness, found no pity because of a certain insult to the Corinthians which was alleged against him. It is said, namely, that when the Corinthians had taken the field against them, Kuthymus told the men of Leontini in a public harangue that it was nothing fearful or dreadful if “ Corinthian women came forth from their homes.” ! An adaptation of Euripides, Medeia, 215 (Kirchhoff), where Medea speaks to the chorus in the first person. 339

z2

ovUTws Ure Aoyev padrov n mpafewy Trovnpa@y

dndobat mepiKac Ot WoOAXoL’ _Xarerr@repov yap bBpuw 7 n BraBnv pépovar. Kal TO pev apeveoBar 80 epyov @S avaryKaiov bédorat Tots Trohepovow, ai d¢ Bracdnpias treptovala picovs
h xaktas yivecOat Soxovauy.
X XXIII. "Exraven Oovros dé Tod Tiporeovros
ot Xupaxoveros TAS yuvaikas Tov Téept TOV Teérqy Kab Tas Ouyatépas év exxdnoig KATAOTHGAYTES eis Kpiow arrexTelvay. Kal oxet TOUTO TOY Tiporcovros Epywv aXapiaToTaTov yevéo Oars pr
yap av éxeivov KwAvovTos obtws Tas avOpdrous amoQaveiv. Soxet d€ avtas umepideiv Kal m™poéaOau T@ Oup@ tav TodTeVv Sin AapBavovtwy
bmp Atewvos TOU Atovictoy éxBadovtos. ‘Teérns
yap éoTw oO THY yuvaixa Tob Atwvos ~Aperny Kat Thy adergny’ "Apia ropayny kal Tov viov ére maida Katatrovticas twvtas, wept av év To Aiwvos yeypamras Bio.
XXXIV. Mera 6€ tadra oTparevoas én Mdyeptoy eis Karavnv Kal Tmepl TO peda THY
"ABoXov éx maparafews uTooTavTa viKnoas Kal
Tpe\dpevos vrép durytrLous aveiney, ov pé pos
OUK OdLyoD 7; OAV Ob ep Gevtes t uo T'éoxwvos é émt-Koupot Poiveres. éx O€ TOUTOV Kapyndovior pev elpnyny émoujoavro Tpos aUTOV denOevtes, WO TE Thv €VvTOS. TOU Avkov Xopav exely, Kat Tots Bovdopevors ? €€ avtis peToxely 7 pos Zupaxov-atovs xpnuara Kal yeveas amodibovtes, Kal tots 1 rots BovAouévots Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker, after Reiske (with AC): robs BovAoudvovs. Corats and Bekker bracket the preceding «al.
340

TIMOLEON

So natural is it for most men to be more galled by bitter words than hostile acts; since insolence is harder for them to bear than injury. Besides, defensive acts are tolerated in an enemy as a necessary right, but insults are thought to spring from an excess of hatred or baseness.
XXXIII. After Timoleon had returned, the Syracusans brought the wives and daughters of Hicetas and his friends to public trial, and then put them to death. And this would seem to have been the most displeasing thing in Timoleon's career; for if he had opposed it, the women would not have been thus put to death. But apparently he neglected them and abandoned them to the wrath of the citizens, who were bent on taking vengeance in behalf of Dion, who drove out Dionysius. For Hicetas was the man who took Arete the wife of Dion, and Aristomache his sister, and his son, who was still a boy, and threw them into the sea alive, concerning which things I have written in my Life of Dion.}

XXXIV. After this, Timoleon made an expedition against Mamercus to Catana, conquered and routed him in a pitched battle near the stream of the Abolus, and slew above two thousand of his soldiers, a large part of whom were the Carthaginians sent him as auxiliaries by Gisco. Thereupon the Cartha- ginians made a peace with him which they sought themselves; the terms were that they should keep the territory within the river Lycus, restoring their families and property to all who wished to change their homes from there to Syracuse, and renouncing

1 Chapter lviii. 4.

~~

2 Tupavvols aTrevTrapevor THY Guppaxiav. Mapepxos S¢ Suc Oupav tais édXricow err pev eis Itadiav as Aevxavors érakwv Tyoréovts xal Lupaxovaio, émel S€ amoorpéwaytes of cdY a'T@ Tds Tpinpets Kal wrevoavtes eis Lixediavy TH Tipo0- Novre tay Karayvnv rapédoxav, avayxacbels Kal avros eis Meoonvnv Kxatépuye mpos "lrmeova

3 TOY TUpavvovYTa Ths Toews. érEeADoVTOS Se TOD Tcporéovtos avtois Kal wodLopKxodvtos Ex TE YAS kat Oaratrns, o wey "Inmwy atrodiépacnayv éri vews HAW, Kal TrapahaPovTes avTov ot Mecaonnor, kal tovs taidas é« tov didacKxareiwy ws eri Géapa nddNoTov THY TOU TUpdvvoU Tipwpiav dyayovtes eis Oéatpov, nxicavto Kal drépOerpar: o 5¢ Madpepxos éavtoy Tiporéovte mrapédwxev érit te dixny brea yeiv éy Yupaxovaios py

4 xatnyopobvtos Tiporéovtos. axOels 5é eis Tas Lupaxoveas, TapehOwy eis Tov SHuov emreyeiper pév Twa cuyKelpevov x Tadatov AOdyov UT avtov SueEvévas, OopvBos Sé mepitintwv Kal rhv

éxx\noiav opav amapaitntov ee pivras To iuatiov dia pécov Tov Geatpov, cal mpos te Tov Bdabpwv Spopm hepopevos cvvéppnte thv nehadnv ws amroGavovpevos. ov pny ETuXe ye TaUTNS THs TedeuTHS, GAN' Ere Cav atrayGels Fvirep of AnaoTal dixny axe.
XXXV. Tas pév ody tupavvidas o Tiporéov
TovTov Tov TpoTroy éFéxoWe Kal TOvS ToXELOUS
éxuce' THY O€ GANv vio cEnyptopevny bro KaKaV kal Stayemonuévny Ure TaV oiknTopwy tapa-AaBov obtas eEnuépwoe Kal roOewny éroince
Taotvy MOTE TAEW OlKHoOYTAaS ETépoUS BOeVv of 253
342

TIMOLEON

their alliance with the tyrants. Then Mamercus, despairing of success, took ship for Italy with the purpose of bringing the Lucanians against Timoleon and Syracuse; but his companions on the voyage turned their triremes back, sailed to Sicily, and handed Catana over to Timoleon, whereupon Mamer-cus himself also was compelled to seek refuge in Messana with Hippo the tyrant of that city. But Timoleon came up against them and besieged them
'by land and sea, and Hippo was caught as he was trying to steal away on board a ship. Then the Messanians took him into the theatre, brought their children thither from their schools to behold, as a glorious spectacle, the tyrant's punishment, and put him. to torment and death. As for Mamercus, he gave himself up to Timoleon on condition that he should undergo trial at Syracuse, and that Timoleon should not denounce him. So he was brought to Syracuse, and when he came before the people, attempted to rehearse a speech composed by him a long time before; but being received with noise and clamour, and seeing that the assembly was inexorable, he flung away his mantle, ran right across the theatre, and dashed head foremost against one of the stone steps, hoping to kill himself. However, he was not so fortunate as to die in this way, but was taken away, still living, and crucified like a robber.
XXXV. In this manner, then, did Timoleon ex- tirpate the tyrannies and put a stop to their wars. He found the whole island reduced to a savage state by its troubles and hated by its inhabitants, but he made it so civilized and so desirable in the eyes of all men that others came by sea to dwell in the 343

f~

rl

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 qwoNiTas T™poTepov amedibpackov. Kal yap "AxpdyavTa Kal Ténap, TOAELS peydras pera TOV
"Arrexoy TONE MOV urd KapynSoviev dvaoTatous
yeryernpevas, TOTE KATOKLOQY, THY bev ol mepl MéyeAArov xat Dépiorov é£ "Enéas, THD be ob mept Topyov € éx Kéw TrEvTAaVTES kal cuvayayorTes TOUS apxatous ° moniTas" ols ov povoy dopareray € éx Tohewou TogouTov Kal yaArHnvny iSpvopévots trapacXOV, ANAA Kal Taha, TapacKevacas Kab TUp-3 mpoOuundels OaomTreEp olKLaTNS nyaT aro. Kat TeV adov bé Sraxetpevov opoiws dmrdvtov mpos
avrov, ou Tohépou TUs AVaLS, OU VOLLov Géats, ov
xapas KATOLKLG 10S, ov ToNLTELAS Sidrakis edoner KANOS EXELY, As éxeivos pa) mW poadyyatto pn dé
KATAKOTLNOELEV, WOTED Epye CUVTENOUPEVO
Snucoupyes émOeis tia yap Oeodiry xat mpeTovaav.
XXXVI. Torr dy yoov Kat' auTov 'EX qvev
peryddoov ryevomeveo" eal peyara KaTepyacapevo, @y Kal Tipodeos Hy Kat "Aynatiaos cat Iledomioas Kal o padora onrwbels ure Teporcovros
"Erapewoveas, at bev éxeivwv mpakes Bia Tut
Kal Tov TO Naum pov eLevnvoyace He [try LevOV, WOTE KAL peprpey € evials 5 emeyiver Oar Kal peTavoay,
TOY dé Tiporéortos Epyor, é&w Aoyou Bepévous
THY mepl Tov adehpov avayKny, ovdev éotiy © un Ta Tod Yodhorr€ous, ws hyot Tipacos, émupwvely &7r peTrev"
@ Oeoi, tis Apa Kumpis 7 ris ipepos tovde Evynrpato;
344

TIMOLEON

places from which their own citizens used to run away before. Agrigentum and Gela, for instance, great cities which had been ruined and depopulated by the Carthaginians after the Attic war, were re- peopled at this time, one by Megellus and Pheristus from Velia, the other by Gorgus, who sailed from Ceos and brought with his company the old citizens. To these settlers Timoleon not only afforded safety and calm after so long a storm of war, but also supplied their further needs and zealously assisted them, so that he was revered by them as a founder. All the other inhabitants also cherished like feelings towards him, and no conclusion of war, no institution of laws, no settlement of territory, no arrangement of civil polity seemed satisfactory, unless he gave the finishing touches to it, like a master builder adding to a work that is drawing to completion some grace which pleases gods and men.

XXXVI. At any rate, though in his time Greece produced many men who were great and wrought great things, such as Timotheus, Agesilaiis, Pelopidas, and Epaminondas (whom Timoleon most emulated), still, the lustre of their achievements was tarnished by a certain degree of violence and laborious effort, so that some of them were followed by censure and repentance; whereas in the career of Timoleon, setting aside his necessary treatment of his brother, there is nothing to which it were not meet, as Timaeus says, to apply the words of Sophocles :—

“Ye Gods, pray tell what Cypris or what winning love
Was partner in this work? ’’}

3 Nauck, J’rag. Graec. Frag.? p. 316.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

2 xaarrep yap 9 pev "Avtiupayou moinots nai Ta Atovuciou Swypadpjpata, Tov Korodpoviar, ioyov éyovra xal rovov éxBeBiacpévots Kal Katatrovots éorxe, Tats 5é Nexopayou ypadais xai rots ‘Opnpou oTixots peta THs GAAns Suvdpews Kal XaptTos mpoceote To Soxely evyepas Kal padiws arreipyac0a, odTws jTapa thy Enapervovoou otpatnyiav cal tHhv ‘Aynotddou, ToAvTrOVoUs yevopévas kat duvcdywvas, 7 Timoréovtos avrefetalopern, xal peta TOD KaXOV TOAD TO padiov ExovCa, daiveTat Tois ev Kal dixaiws Aoyilopévors ov TUYNS 3 Epyov, GAN apeThs evTUXOVONS. KaiTOL TaYTa y éxejvos els THY TUXNY avATTE TA KaTopOovpeva: Kat yap ypaduv Tots olkot pirors kal dnpnyopav ™ pos TOUS Luparouatous TodaKLs Epy 7? ep xapw éxew Sr Bovrcpevos cdaat LeKehiav émre-ypaaro thy abtod mpoonyopiav. éml S€ Tis oixias iepov iSpvadpevos Avtopuatias Over, avtny 4 5€ tHy otxiay tep@ Saiwovr xaOtépwoev. anet dé

oixiay fy éEeiXov a’t@ otpatnyias aptoreiov oi Lupaxovetot, kal Tov aypav Tov HotoTOV Kal
xaddoTov. év @ Kal TO TAEloTOV TOU \YpovOU Katecyonale, petatreuapevos olxofev thy yuvaika Kai Tous maidas. ov yap érravnder eis KopiOov, ovde xatéuike trois “EXAnuiKois Oopi-Bots éavrov ovdé TH TOALTIK@ POdv Trapéduxer, eis Sy ob WELT TOL TOV OTPATHYaV aTANTTIiA TLULOV Kal duvapews éEoxédXovow, GAN’ exe xaréwetve
tois up éavTov peunxavnpévots ayabois ypopevos’ OV péytoTOV HY TO TONES TOTaUTAS Kal
puptabas avOpwrrwy de’ éavtov épopay evdarpo-4 vovoas.
346

TIMOLEON

For just as the poetry of Antimachus and the pic- tures of Dionysius, both Colophonians, for all their strength and vigour, seem forced and _ laboured, while the paintings of Nicomachus and the verses of Homer not only have power and grace besides, but also give the impression of having been exe- cuted readily and easily; so, if we compare the generalship of Epaminondas and Agesilaiis, which in both cases was full of toil and bitter struggles, with that of Timoleon, which was exercised with much ease as well as glory, it appears to men of just and careful reasoning a product, not of fortune, but of fortunate valour. And yet all his successes were ascribed by him to fortune; for in his letters to his friends at home and in his public addresses to the Syracusans he often said he was thankful to God, who, desiring to save Sicily, gave him the name and title of its saviour. Moreover, in-his house he built a shrine for sacrifice to Automatia, or Chance, and the house itself he consecrated to man’s sacred genius. And the house in which he dwelt was picked out for him by the Syracusans as a prize for his achievements in the field; they also gave him the pleasantest and most beautiful of their country estates, and at this he used to spend the greater part of his leisure time, after he had sent home for his wife and children. For he did not return to Corinth, nor did he take part in the disturbances of Greece or expose himself to the jealousy of his fellow citizens, the rock on which most generals, in their insatiable greed for honours and power, make shipwreck; but he remained in Sicily, en- joying the blessings of his own creation, the greatest of which was the sight of so many cities and myriads of people whose happiness was due to him. 349

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXVII. ’Ezred 5é yptv, as eovxev, od povov
Taot Kopvoarrols NOgov eyyiyverOat, Kata Yu-
, b] A , 4 4
povidny, adda Kal racn Snwoxpatia ovnopavtny, érreyeipnoay kat Tinordovts dv0 Trav Snuaywyar, Aagvorios cai Anpaivetos. dv Aadvotiou peéev

avTov mpos twa Sixnv Kateyyua@vtos ovK ela OopuBeiv ovdé KwAVELY TOvS TrOAITAsS* ExwV yap avTos UTropetvat TocOUTOUS TovoUs Kal KiVdivOUS UTép TOU Tots vopols yphaAat tov BovrAdpeEvov
/ A \ 4
Yupaxovaiwyv: tov 5é Anpaiwérov woANa KatTnyopnoavtos év éxxAnaia THs oTpatnylas, pos éxeivov péev ovdev dvtetre, tois Sé Oeois pn ydptv 9 4 wv 4 9 aA ry
opeirerv, ols evEaTO Yupaxovoiovs émideiv ris
Tappnatas Kupious yevopévous.
Méyora 8’ otv cal KddNoTa TOV Kal’ abTov ‘EAAnVaY oporoyoupévws Stampakdpevos épya, N ld 2,9 A e \ A fa) 4 “
Kat povos, €p as ot cogiotai dra TeV Adywv TaV Tavnyuptcay ael trapexddouv Tpakeus TOs ° EXAN-vas, €v TavTals apiotevoas, Kal TOV pev adToOe
A a A b) l4 ig 4 V4 e NX
Kakov, & Thy apxatiav ‘“EAd\dba Kxatéoxev, bd Ths TUXNS TpoEeKKomoOeEls avaiwaxtos Kab Kaba-
, > , \ , \ > J
pos, émuderEdpevos d¢ Secvotnta pév Kal dvdpeiav tots BapBapos Kai Trois tupavvots, Sixacocvvny Sé cal mpaorynta tois “EXAnot Kat Tots pirots, TA 5é€ mieloTa TpoTAaLa THY aywvwy adaxpuTa Kar
amevOy Tots Twodltals Kataotnaas, KaBapav Se Thv LwKeAtlav ev ovd Grots ETECLY OKTH Aidiwv Kat 348

204

TIMOLEON

XXXVII. But since, as it would seem, not only all larks must grow a crest, as Simonides says, but also every democracy a false accuser, even Timoleon was attacked by two of the popular leaders at Syracuse, Laphystius and Demaenetus. Of these, Laphystius once tried to make him give surety that he would appear at a certain trial, and Timoleon would not suffer the citizens to stop the man by their turbulent disapproval ; for he himself, he said, had of his own accord endured all his toils and dangers in order that any Syracusan who wished might avail himself of the laws. And when the other, Demaenetus, brought many denunciations in open assembly against his conduct in the field, to him, indeed, Timoleon made no answer, but said he owed thanks to the gods, for he had prayed them that he might live to see the Syracusans gain the right of free speech.

So, then, having by general confession performed the greatest and most glorious deeds of any Greek of his time, and having been the only one to succeed in those achievements to which the rhetoricians, in their speeches at the national assemblies, were ever exhorting the Greeks; having been removed be- times by a happy fortune, pure and unstained with blood, from the evils which were rife in the mother country, and having displayed ability and valour in his dealings with Barbarians and tyrants, as well as justice and gentleness in his dealings with the Greeks and his friends; having set up most of the trophies of his contests without causing his fellow citizens either tears or mourning, and having in even less than eight years! handed over to her inhabitants a

1 346-338 B.0.
| 349
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

GuVvoiKaVY KaKaY Kal voonudtwv Trapadovs Tots KaTotKovclv, 76n wpexBuTepos ov amrnuBrALVON Thy ow, eita TEAewsS eNnpwOn peET' OdivyoV, OUTE autos éauT@ Tpodaci TapacXov ovUTE Tapoln- Gels bo THS TUXNS, GANA GUYyEVLKIS TLVOS, WS Eouxev, aitias Kal xataBoAns Gua TH ypove ouv- emrifenévns: AéyovTat yap OvK OrLyou TOV KaTAa yévos AUT@ TpocnKovTwy opoiws atroBanew THY Oyu bro ynpws atopapavilcioav. o 5é "Abas és cuveat@tos Tov pos "Immwva Torepou Kal Mapepxov, év Murais ert otparorédou dyoiv atoyAavxw0 vat THY Ow avTov, Kal Tact pave- pav yevéoOar tHv mHpwoL, od pny atooTivar bua TOUTO THS ToALOpKias, GAN' éupeivavTa TO TONE- pm AaBeivy Tovs Tupdvvous: ws 5é érravnrOev eis vpaxovoas, evOvs amo0éc Bas THY povapyiav Kai mapattetcOar Tovs ToditTas, TOY TpaypyaTwy eis TO KAGANOTOV HKOVTWY TEXOS.

XXXVIII. *Exeivov pév obv adrov btropeivayra Thy cuugopayv arvTras HrTov av Tis Bavyacete: tav 5é Yupaxovoiwy aktov ayaocOar thy pos TOV avopa tiunny Kal xapw hv émedetEavto tremnpw- péve, pouravtes él Ovpas adroit cal trav Eévwv TOUS TapemionuovvTas Ayovres els THY OlKiav Kal

TO Xwpiov, Oras Oedoawro Tov evepyéeTny adTar, ayahdopevor kal péeya ppovoovtes Stt wap’ avtois efrAeto xatabnoa tov Biov, oftw AapTpas érravo-Sov THs ets THY ‘EXAdba TapecKevacpévns avT@
dua Tay evtUXnadTwWY KaTappovncas. TrOANOV 5é kal peyddXwv els THY exeivou Tiny ypahopévor cal mpattopévwy ovdevos HTTov Hv TO Wnpicacbat Tov Tav Lupaxovotwy Sipov, oadxis ouptrécor 35°

TIMOLEON

Sicily purged of her perpetual intestine miseries and complaints; at last, being now advanced in years, he began to lose his sight, and then, after a little, became completely blind. He had done nothing himself to occasion this, nor was he therein the sport and mockery of Fortune, but suffered from some congenital disease, as it would seem, which came upon him with his years; for it is said that not a few of his kindred lost their sight in a similar way, when it was enfeebled by old age. But Athanis says that while the war against Hippo and Mamercus was still in progress, in his camp at Mylae, his vision was obscured by a cataract in the eye, and it was plain to all that he was getting blind; he did not, however, desist from the siege on this account, but persisted in the war and captured the tyrants; yet after his return to Syracuse, he at once laid aside the sole command and begged the citizens to excuse him from it, now that matters had reached the happiest conclusion.

XXXVIII. Well, then, that he himself should bear his misfortune without repining is less a matter for wonder; but the gratitude and honour which the Syracusans showed him in his blindness are worthy of admiration. They often went to visit him in person, and brought strangers who were sojourning in the city to his house and to his country seat to see their benefactor, exulting and proud that he chose to end his days among them and thus made light of the brilliant return to Greece which had been prepared for him by reason of his successes. And of the many great things decreed and done in his honour, nothing surpassed the vote passed by the people of Syracuse that whenever they went to war against alien peoples, 35!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOAELOS AUTOIS pos aAXOHVAOUS, Kopivbiw yphcOat otpatnye. Karnyv 8 Kal TO wept Tas éx-KAnolas yivopevov Oy ets TLV avTOD TrapElxe’
Ta yap adda Ot’ avTa@v Kpivortes emi Tas peiCovas Stackéwers exeivov éexddouv. o dé Koplopevos be ayopas émi Cevyous mpos TO Béatpoy étropeveto: Kal Ths amnyns, oaTrEp éTUyyave KAOnmEVOS, Eica-youevns, o pev Shpwos nomaleto uta pwvn mpocayopevov autor, 0 & advtactacdpevos Kal ypovov
tia Sovs tals evpnpias Kal tots éraivors, eita

Siaxovoas To Sntovpevov, atrepaiveto yvopnv.
émixerporovnbeions Sé TavTns of pev UanpéTat wad annyov da tov Oeatpou 76 Ledyos, oi Se qmonvita. Bon Kal xpotm mpotréuwavtes éxetvov On Ta roLTA TaV Snuociwv Kal’ abtovs éxpn-pariCov.
XX XIX. ’Ev rowadry 5€ ynpotpopovpevos timy pet’ evolas, WOTED TATIP KOLVOS, EK pLKPaS Tpopdcews TH XpOvm cuvedhapapévns érEeNeUTHGEDV.
jpepav dé SoPeroay trois wév Yupaxovaiors eis TO TapacKevdoat Ta TEpt THY TadHy, TOS dé TeEptoi-cots nal Eévois eis TO cuvedOeciv, Td Tt’ GAX@ Napmpas yopnyias Ervye, Kai TO AéxXOS OF Whdw TaVv veavioxwy mrpoxpiOévtes Epepov Kexoounpévov dia tav Avovvoiov Ttupavyeimy TOTE KaTETKAppévov.
mpoutreptrov S¢ toddal puprddes avdpa@v Kab yu-vaixav, Ov Oris péev Hv éoptH wWpéTrovea, mavTwv datepavwpévar kai nabapas écOjtas popovvrwr, gwval bé nal Sdxpva cuvyxexpapéva TO paxa-352

~~

TIMOLEON

they would employ a Corinthian as their general. Moreover, the proceedings in their assemblies afforded a noble spectacle in his honour, since, while they decided other matters by themselves, for the more important deliberations they summoned him. Then he would proceed to the theatre carried through the market place on a mule-car; and when the vehicle in which he sat was brought in, the people would greet him with one voice and call him by name, and he, after returning their greetings and allowing some time for their felicitations and praises, would then listen carefully to the matter under debate and pro- nounce opinion. And when this opinion had been adopted, his retainers would conduct his car back again through the theatre, and the citizens, after sending him on his way with shouts of applause, would proceed at once to transact the rest of the public business by themselves.

XXXIX. Cherished in old age amid such honour and good will, like a common father, a slight cause co-operated with his great age to bring him to his end. A number of days having been allowed in which the Syracusans might prepare for his funeral, while the country folk and strangers came together, the whole ceremony was conducted with great mag- nificence, and besides, young men selected by lot carried his bier with all its decorations through the precinct where the palace of Dionysius had stood before Timoleon destroyed it. The bier was escorted, too, by many thousands of men and women, whose appearance was one that became a festival, since all were crowned with garlands and wore white raiment; while cries and tears, mingled with benedictions

* In 337 or 336 B.c.

piop@ Tov TeOvnKdTOs ov Tins apocitwow ovde

Aetroupyiay éx mpoBovrAEevpatos, GAA ToOov bi-

Kalov émredeixvuvTo Kal ydapiy aAnOwWhs evvoias.
, \ a / > \ \ \ ,
tédos bé THS KAlvnsS éml THY TUpay TeBEions An-

LIT pLOS, Os HY peyadopwvdratos TOY TOTE KNPU-

KWV, yeypappévoy aveitre KnpUyya ToLovTOVY'

““Q Sipos 6 Yupaxovaiwy Tiporéortra Tt-podypou KopivOc:oyv tovde Oamre pev dtaxociwy pvav, étiunoe & eis TOY ATavTa Ypovov
ay@ou povotxois, immixots, yupvicois, Ott
Tous Tupavvous KaTadvcas Kal tos BapBRa-pous KaTaTroAeunoas Kal Tas peyiotas TOV avacTatwyv ToNwWY oiKicas aTrédwKE TOUS vopous Tots YiKedewTas.”
"Exrotnoavto 5é thy tap tod cwpatos év
ayopa, Kal atoas otepoy weptBadovtes nal ta-Aalotpas évotxodopnoavtes yupvaotov Tois véors
avixav kal TimoreovTerov mpoonyopevoay. avtot 5é ypwpevot troduteia Kal vopors ods éxeivos KaTéaotnaev, ert troAvY ypovoy evdatpovodvTes SieTe-AETay.

upon the dead, betokened, not a formal tribute of respect, nor a service performed in obedience to public decree, but a just sorrow and a thankfulness arising from genuine good will. And finally, when the bier had been placed upon the funeral pyre, Demetrius, who had the loudest voice of any herald of the time, read from manuscript the following decree :—

«By the people of Syracuse, Timoleon, son of Timodemus, from Corinth, is here buried at a public cost of two hundred minas, and is honoured for all time with annual contests,

musical, equestrian, and gymnastic, because he overthrew the tyrants, subdued the Barbarians,
re-peopled the largest of the devastated cities,
and then restored their laws to the Greeks of Sicily."'

Furthermore, they buried his ashes in the market place, and afterwards, when they had surrounded it with porticoes and built palaestras in it, they set it apart as a gymnasium for their young men, and named it Timoleonteum. And they themselves, using the civil polity and the laws which he had ordained, enjoyed a long course of unbroken prosperity and happiness.
355
AA?
Digitized by Google

AEMILIUS PAULUS

AIMIAIO2 TAYAOZ

II. Tov Aiuirtwv oixov év 'Paun trav evrarpt-Sav yeyovévat nal Tadal@y of mrEloTOL oVYy-ypagets oporoyovow. Ott & oO TpwTOS avTaV 256 Kal TO yévet THY emwvUpiay aToALT@V MadpepKos
iv, IlvOayopov mais tot codov, S¢ aipudtay Aoyou Kal ydpw Aipidtos mpocayopevOeis, eipn-cao évior tov Ilv0ayopa thv Nowa tod Bact-2 Néws Traidevow avabévtwv. of péev ov TrElaTOL tov eis 80£av amo THS oixias TavTns mpoeNMovTwv
dz' apetny, Hv eCnrwoar, evtuynoav, Aeveiou dé Ilavaov 70 rept Kavvas atuynua thy te ppovnot
dua cai thy avopeiav &ekev. ws yap ovK éreice TOV cuvapxovta keohveov payecQar, Tod pep
ay@vos akwv petécyev avT@, THs bé puyis ove €XOLVOVNTEV, GAAA TOV cUVdavTos TOV KivduvOY EYKATANTOVTOS AUTOS ETTWS Kal paxoLEVOS TOOLS ToAEplols ETENEVTICE.
3 Tovtov Ouydtnp pév Aipwirdia Xcynriwv. To peydrA@ cuvexnoev, vids b€ Ilaidos Aiplrsos, mepl ov Tdde ypaderat, yeyoves év nrccia Kara, Katpov avOodvra Sofas Kal aperais éripaverta-Tov avdpav Kai peyiotov, déedapev, ov Tata

1 The first chapter has been transposed to serve as Intro- duction to both the 7tmoleon and the Aemilius Paulus,

II.! That the Aemilii were one of the ancient and patrician houses at Rome, most writers agree. And that the first of them, and the one who gave his surname to the family, was Mamercus, a son of Pythagoras the philosopher, who received the surname of Aemilius for the grace? and charm of his discourse, is the statement of some of those writers who hold that Pythagoras was the educator of Numa the king.2 Now, most of this family who rose to dis- tinction by their cultivation of virtue, were blessed with good fortune ; and in the case of Lucius Paulus, his misfortune at Cannae gave testimony alike to his wisdom and valour. For when he could not dissuade his colleague from giving battle, he took part with him in the struggle, though reluctantly, but would not be a partner in his flight; nay, though the one who had brought on the peril left him in the lurch, he himself kept his post and died fighting the enemy.‘

This Paulus had a daughter, Aemilia, who was the wife of Scipio the Great, and a son, Aemilius Paulus, whose Life I now write. He came of age at a time which abounded in men of the greatest reputation and most illustrious virtue, and yet he was a con-

3 Plutarch suggests the identity of the Latin Aemilius with the Greek aiuvacos (winning). Cf. Odyssey, i. 56.

3 See the Numa, i. 2 f
* See the Fabius Maximus, chapters xiv. and xvi.
359

TOis EvdoKLMOvEL TOTE VvéoLS érriTHOEKpaTA Lnro-gas, ovde thy abtiy oddv am apxis wopevbeis.
ovUTe yap NOYyor HoKe. rept dixas, doTracpovs TE Kal deEvooes Kat Prrofpocvvas, als itrotpéxovtes oi TodAol Tov SHpwov éexta@vto Oeparevtixol Kal oTrovdaion yevouevot, TavTdracw é&édLTre, pds
ovdérepov aduas éxwv, as 8 éxatépou Kpeitrova
THY am avodpelas kal Sixatocvvns Kal Tictews
SoEav avit@ mepiTrovovpevos, ols evOds Srédepe TeV Kab” nrLKiav.
III. [Ipwrnv yoov trav émupavav apyav ayopa-vopiay peTeOwv ampoexpiOn Sexadvoiv avdpav cuvaTroypavrapévay, ods botepov amavtas vra-TevoaL A€yovot. ‘yevopevos & tepevs Tav Ad-youpwy mpocayopevopevwr, ods TAS aT’ opvidwy kai Stoonuerav amrodexviovar ‘Pwpaios pavtixiis émicxoTrous Kal dvdaxas, o0Tw mpocécye Tois matpwos eect Kal KaTevonce THY TOV TradaLOv mept To Oeiov evAdBerav wate TLHy tiva doKod-cav elvat kal Cnroupévny GrAXws vena b0Ens tTHv lepwovunv TOY axpoTaTav play aTrodivat TeXvay, kal paptupncat tos diroaodos, Soot TH evaéfeav wpicavto Oepareias Seay émotnunv elvat. wavTa yap édpato pet éeurepias wr’

avtod Kal omovdys, cxoANY TOV A\XNOV ayoVTOS Ste yiyvotto mpos TovT@, Kal mapareiTovtos ovderv ode KaLVOTOLODYTOS, GNAG Kal TOls cUNLE-360

spicuous figure, although he did not pursue the same studies as the young nobles of the time, nor set out on his career by the same path. For he did not practise pleading private cases in the courts, and refrained altogether from the salutations and greet- ings and friendly attentions to which most men cunningly resorted when they tried to win the favour of the people by becoming their zealous servants ; not that he was naturally incapable of either, but he sought to acquire for himself what was better than both, namely, a reputation arising from valour, justice, and trustworthiness. In these virtues he at once surpassed his contemporaries.

III. At all events, when he sued for the first of the high offices in the state, the aedileship, he was elected over twelve competitors,! all of whom, we are told, afterwards became consuls. Moreover, when he was made one of the priests called Augurs, whom the Romans appoint as guardians and overseers of the art of divination from the flight of birds and from omens in the sky, he so carefully studied the ancestral customs of the city, and so thoroughly understood the religious ceremonial of the ancient Romans, that his priestly function, which men had thought to be a kind of honour, sought merely on account of the reputation which it gave, was made to appear one of the higher arts, and testified in favour of those philosophers who define religion as the science of the worship of the gods. For all the duties of this office were performed by him with skill and care, and he laid aside all other concerns when he was engaged in these, omitting nothing and adding nothing new, but ever contending even

’ In 192 5.0.
361

pedo. del kal mepi Trav pixpav Stahepopuevor, Kai
S:ddoxovtos ws ef TO Belov evKxorov TLS HryetTaL Kat

dpephes elvat TOY apedeL@v, GNAA TH ye Todt yarerov } wept Tadta cuyyv@pun Kal trapopacis:
oveels yap €& dpyjs evOus peyad@ Tapavopnpate Kwet modtTelav, GAAA Kal THY TaV perlover ppoupav xatadvovotv oi mpoiguevor thy év Tots puxpots axpiBerav.
“Onoov 6é cal Tov otpatioTtixav Oar Te Kal matpiov e€etaoctHy Kal PvAaKa Tapelyev EavTor, ov Snuaywyav év te oTpaTnyetv, ovd, waTED ot wAeiaTos TOTe, Sevtépas apyas Tails mpwrTais
pvopevos Sia Tod yapiterOar Kal mpaos eivat Tois apKopevols, GAN worep lepers aAXwy opyiov
Secvav, TOV Tepl Tas aTpateias EOav éEnyovpevos
Exacta, kal poBepos @v Tois ameOovdor Kal
TapaBaivovesy, wp0ov thy tatpiba, pxpod Seiv TUpPEPYOV HrYOUMLEVOS TO VLKaY TOUS TroAELLoUS TOD matdevely TOUS TOMTAS.
IV. Yvaortavtos dé tov wrpos "Avtioyov Tov péyav monreuov TOS Pwpaiows, Kal TOV HryEemoviKwTAaTODY avdp@v TEeTpaypéevwy pos Eexeivoy, AAXos atro TIS éoTrépas avéotn Trodenos, ev “I 8npia Kwnudrov peyadov yevopévav. €mi TodTov o Aipinsos é€e-TéppOn otpatrnyos, ovx €& éywv Tredéxels, Ecous éyovow of aotparnyobvtTes, aXXA TpocrtaBav érépous TocovTOVS, WaTE THS apXis vratixov
yeveoOat 76 akiwpa. pdyn mev ovv dis éx raparakews évixnae tous BapBapovs, trepi tps pupious 362

257

AEMILIUS PAULUS

with his colleagues about the small details of ceremony, and explaining to them that, although the Deity was held to be good-natured and slow to censure acts of negligence, still, for the city at least it was a grievous thing to overlook and condone them ; for no man begins at once with a great deed of lawlessness to disturb the civil polity, but those who remit their strictness in small matters break down also the guard that has been set over greater matters.
Furthermore, he showed a like severity in scrutinising and preserving his country’s military customs and traditions also, not courting popular favour when he was in command, nor yet, as most men did at this time, courting a second command during his first by gratifying his soldiers and treating them with mildness ; but, like a priest of other dread rites, he explained thoroughly all the details of military custom and was a terror to disobedient transgressors, and so restored his country to her former greatness, considering the conquest of his enemies hardly more than an accessory to the training of his fellow-citizens.

IV. After the Romans had gone to war with Antiochus the Great, and while their most experi- enced commanders were employed against him, another war arose in the West, and there were great commotions in Spain. For this war Aemilius was sent out as praetor,! not with the six lictors which praetors usually have, but adding other six to that number, so that his office had a consular dignity. Well, then, he defeated the Barbarians in two pitched battles, and slew about thirty thousand of them ;

1 In 191 B.o.

avedov, cat doxei TO KaTop0wpa THS oTpatyyias
TEPLPAVOS yever Oar, Xoptov evpulg cal Torawob TLVOS SiaBadcer pgotavny mapacXovTos avTov mpos Td vixnua Tois TT PATLOT ats" moves Oe TeVvTNKOVTA Kal Siaxoctas eXElp@aaTo defapevas avrov Exovaiws. i mn dé Kal Tia Tel cvynppo-oMéevny aTOMTOV THV emapxiav els 'Pouny € érraviprOev, aude Spaxun pug yeyovas oo amo Tis oTpatetas. fv 88 Kab rept TaAXa parLaThs apyorepos, evdaTravos dé xal apeadye éx TOV Drapxovra, ov TONG 5 ay, ara Kal pepvijs aperdoperns TH yuvarki pera tov Odvatov avTou) Yio x pws éEijpwecey.

V. "Eynue dé Tameptay, avdpos & UrariKob Ma-TWVOS Ouyarépa, Kal Xpovov ouvoikijaas oN adijxe Tov yapov, xaitrep cE auras KaddiTexvora-Tos syevopevos® avTn yap Wy TOV KAELYOTATOV anre Lentriova texodoa kal Mdfipov Ao aitia dé yeypappwevy THS Siactdcews OUK 7} els T1Mas, ann' couxey arnOns Tes elvat NOYOS repl yapov Avo EWS YEvouevos, ws avnp 'Pwpaios atre-TEWTETO yuvaixa, Tov b¢ pidwv vouvderouvT@v

avrov, “ Oui cappov; OvK ebpopoos ; ouxi Tm O-Sorrocas 5” mpoteivas TO UTOOnpA (4ddre0v avo “Pepaior Kanrovow) elrrev “Our eum peT ns ovTos ;
ov veoupyns; adn’ ouK av etdein TS Dua ead’ 6 TL Prieras pépos obmos Tous. Te yap dvTL peydNat pev auaprias Kal dvarenTapevat yuvai-kas avdpav adXas amr7nAdakap, 7A, 5 && Tivos
anotas Kal Sucappootias nOav pica kal TuKva Tpogxpovopata, ANavOdvoyta tTovs dAXOUS, aT-364

and it would seem that his success was conspicuously due to his generalship, since by choosing favourable ground and by crossing a certain river he made victory easy for his soldiers; moreover, he made himself master of two hundred and fifty cities, which yielded to him of their own accord. He left the province in peace and bound by pledges of fidelity, and came back to Rome, nor was he richer by a single drachma from his expedition. And, indeed, in all other ways he was a rather indifferent money-maker, and spent generously and without stint of his substance. But this was not large; indeed, after his death it barely sufficed to meet the dowry due to his wife. |

V. He married Papiria, a daughter of Maso, who was a man of consular dignity, and after he had lived with her a long time he divorced her, although she had made him father of most glorious sons ; for she it was who bore him that most illustrious Scipio, and Fabius Maximus, No documentary grounds for the divorce have come down to us, but there would seem to be some truth in a story told about divorce, which runs as follows. A Roman once divorced his wife, and when his friends admonished him, saying: “Is she not discreet? is she not beautiful ? is she not fruitful?” he held out his shoe (the Romans call it “calceus’’), saying: “ Is this not handsome? is it not new? but no one of you can tell me where it pinches my foot?” For, as a matter of fact, it is great and notorious faults that separate many wives from their husbands; but the slight and frequent frictions arising from some un- pleasantness or incongruity of characters, unnoticed as they may be by everybody else, also produce

365

epyaterar Tas avnkéotous év Tais cupBiwcecw adXoTpLoTNTAs.
‘O & oby Alpirtos atraddayels tH Tasspias

évépav nryayeto: Kal dvo Traidas adppevas Texovans TouTous ev ert THs oixtas elye, Tovs S€ mpotépous eloeTrOing ey OlKOLS TOs peyiaToLs Kal yévect TOLS émipaveo taro, Tov ev mpecButepov To Matki-pov PaBiov tov Tevtaxis UTatevoavtos, tov bé vewtepov "Adpixavod Yxyntiwvos vids dveyriov dvta Oéuevos XKnTiwra mpoonyopevoe. Tav bé Ouyatépwv trav Aiptrjiou tHv pev 0 Kdtavos vids éynue, THY 8 AldAtos TovBépwr, avip apirtos Kal peyaNorpetréctata Pwpaiwv trevia ypnodpevos.
joav yap éxxaidexa ovyyevets, Aldtoe mayvtes:
oixidtoy Sé mavu puxpov hv avtots, Kat ywpidiov
év Hpxet Wacol, pilav éotiay véwovat peTa TAaLowv
To\A@yv Kal yuvarxav. év als wal % Aipmrlov Tovde Ouyutnp iv Sis vratevaavtos Kal Sis OptapBevoavtos, ovK aicxuvou“éevn THv Treviav Tov avépos, addA\a Oavydlovca thy apetiv bv iv
mévns hv. ob dé viv adedpol Kal auyyeveis, dv py KAipact Kal motapots Kai Statexiopaci opi-
gwolt TA KOLVa Kal TOANHY Evpvywpiay év péow AdBwow at’ adrHrwD, ov Travovtat SiahEepopevos.
Tadra pev ody 4) iatopia NoyifecOar Kai twapemeoxotrety didwot Tois cwlerAar BovrAopévots.
VI. ‘O & Alpintos trates arodeyOels eotpda-
Tevoev él Tovs tapaAdtious Aiyvas, ods eo Kat
Auyvativous ovopafovet, paxtpov Kal Oupoedés 366

AEMILIUS PAULUS

incurable alienations in those whose lives are linked together. .

So then Aemilius, having divorced Papiria, took another wife; and when she had borne him two sons he kept these at home, but the sons of his former wife he introduced into the greatest houses and the most illustrious families, the elder into that of Fabius Maximus, who was five times consul, while the younger was adopted by the son of Scipio Africanus, his cousin-german, who gave him the name of Scipio. Of the daughters of Aemilius, one became the wife of the son of Cato, and the other of Aelius Tubero, a man of the greatest excellence, and one who, more than any other Roman, combined the greatest dignity with poverty. For there were sixteen members of the family, all Aelii; and they had a very little house, and one little farm sufficed for all, where they maintained one home together with many wives and children. Among these wives lived also the daughter of that Aemilius who had twice been consul and twice had celebrated a triumph, and she was not ashamed of her husband's poverty, but admired the virtue that kept him poor. Brethren and kinsmen of the present day, however, unless zones and rivers and walls divide their inheritances and wide tracts of land separate them from one another, are continually quarrelling. These, then, are considerations and examples which history presents to those who are willing to profit by them.

VI. Aemilius, then, having been appointed con- sul,! made an expedition against the Ligurians along the Alps, whom some call also Ligustines, a warlike

4 In 182 B.o.

GOvos, éurtreipws dé trodeueiv SidacKopevoy wre Peopaier bia THY yerTviacw. Ta 12p_ éoyara Tis 'Iradtas Kat KatadmyovTa T pos tas "Adres av- TOV TE TOV "Adee Ta crvlopeva T@ Tuppnvix@ merayer Kal 7 pos THY AiBonv avtaipovta ye- povrat, PE pty LEVOL Taddrais Kal Tots mapantoss npwv. tote 5¢ xal ths Oaratrns aypdpevot oKxapert TELPAaTLKOLS adnpodvro Kat TEpleKOT TOV Tas éurropias, ax pe ornhav 'Hpaxdelov ava- THEOVTES. emrvovTos ovv tod Aipsdtov TeTpaxtc- puproe YEVOMEVOL TO TOs UméoTnoay" o 6ée TOUS ovpmavTas SKtaxiaxtdious éYov jevtaT\a- atols ovoL avrots ovveGane, ral Tperpdwevos xat KaTaxheloas els Ta Tel dé5coxe oyor hirAdv- Operov Kab cupBarecor: ov yap WV Bovropévors Tots 'Pwpators TavTamacty éxxovrat TO Avybov éOvos, @ @omrep Epxos 7) mpoBodov eumrobay xelwevov TOUS DPararixots Kvn wac emampoupevors ael meph THhV 'Tradiav. Tig TEVTAYTES ouv TO Aipidte Tas Te vadS Kal Tas TrOAELS EVE eipicay. o 66 Tas yey rorets ovdéev adinynoas: ue povoy Ta TelXn Tepiehav aTrédwxe, Tas b€ vads amacas adetrero, Kat 7 hotov ovdey avtois TpirKxddwov petCov arré-

AeTre? ToUs 8 NAwKOTAS UT avT@Y KaTa YVv 7
kata OdNatTav averdoato ToAXoUs Kal Eévous Kal ‘Pwpatous etpeDévras. éxeiyn ev obv 7)
vrateia Tas eipnévas mpdgers émupaveis é do xev.
“Torepov 5é moAddxus ToUoas dhavepov avTov avis v vratetoat Bovdopevoy xai Tote Kal Taparyyetras, os améTuxe xal mapwpbn, To Nowrrov houxlav elye, TOY (epwy eripedoupEvos Kal TOUS 368

and spirited folk, and one whose proximity to the Romans was teaching it skill in war. For they occupy the extremities of Italy that are bounded by the Alps, and those parts of the Alps themselves that are washed by the Tuscan sea and face Africa, and they are mingled with Gauls and the Iberians of the coast. At that time they had also laid hold of the sea with piratical craft, and were robbing and destroying merchandise, sailing out as far as the pillars of Hercules. Accordingly, when Aemilius came against them, they withstood him with a force of forty thousand men; but he, with eight thousand men all told, engaged their fivefold numbers, and after routing them and shutting them up in their walled towns, gave them humane and conciliatory terms; for it was not the wish of the Romans to extirpate altogether the Ligurian nation, since it lay like a barrier or bulwark against the movements of the Gauls, who were always threatening to descend upon Italy. Accordingly, putting faith in Aemilius, they delivered their ships and cities into his hands. Their cities he restored to them, either doing them no harm at all, or simply razing their walls; but he took away all their ships, and left them no boat that carried more than three oars; he also restored to safety those whom they had taken captive by land or sea, and these were found to be many, both Romans and foreigners. Such, then, were the conspicuous achievements of this first consulship. Afterwards he often made it clear that he was desirous of a second consulship, and once actually announced his candidacy, but when he was passed by and not elected, he made no further efforts to obtain the office, giving his attention to his duties

maidas aoKx@v tH pev éemexy@plov Traoeiav Kat

4 C4 oN v \ » ¢ \
WaTpioy WamEp autos HaoKynTo, Thy & “EXAnvixny hiAOTLLOTEpOY. OU yap povoy ypaupartiKol Kat cogiotal cal pyropes, GANA Kal wWAdoTAaL Kal
, \ , \ lA 9 4
Cwypador Kal meAwv Kal oxvrAdKoy éTicTaTat
cat Siddonarot Onpas "EXAnves Hoav wepl rovs

veavloxous. o 5¢ Tatnp, ef wy Te Snpocioy éutro-Sov ein, waphv det pererao. cai yupvalopévas, iroTexvotatos ‘Pwpaiwy yevopuevos.
VII. Tav 8 Snpociwy mpdkewy xatpos Fv éxelvos tote nal? bv Ilepoet 7H Maxedovov Bactnrel rrovenoovtes ev aitiats Tos atpatnyous elyov, ws 60 ateipiay al atoApiav alicxypas Kal KaTayerdoTws TOs Tpaypact Ypwpévous Kal ma-GYOVTAS KAK@S MAadXAOV 7 ToLobyTaS. apTL peév
yap ’Avrioyov tov émixAnOévra péyav eiEavra THs GAAns “Acias vmép tov Tadpov é«Badovtes kal xataxdeicavtes eis Yupiav, éml pupios Kat
WevTAaKLoXLNOLS TAaVYTOLS ayaTncaYTAa TAS Starvces, odiyo de mpocbev dv @cccaria ourtTpivvavtes Diderrrov kat tovs “EAXnvas aod Maxedovwy edevfepwoavtes, 6 Te Bactrevs ovdels mapaBAntos eis Todkpav 7 Sivayw, *AvviBay KATATONEMNCAVTES, OUK avExTOY HyovvTO Ilepaet
Kkadamep avtitdde tis “Pepys icov epopevor
A \ ” 4 9 N a“
cupTeTrAcK Oat, TroAvy 45n Ypovoyv a7ro TeV Net-Wdvev THY Tatp@as HrTns TroNewodvTL Tpods
> 4 > Le] 4 “~ \ 4

autos, ayvootvtes Ste TOAAM THY Makedovwy

37°

AEMILIUS PAULUS

as augur, and training his sons, not only in the native and ancestral discipline in which he himself had been trained, but also, and with greater ardour, in that of the Greeks. For not only the grammarians and philosophers and rhetoricians, but also the modellers and painters, the overseers of horses and dogs, and the teachers of the art of hunting, by whom the young men were surrounded, were Greeks. And the father, unless some public business prevented, would always be present at their studies and exercises, for he was now become the fondest parent in Rome.

VII. As to public affairs, that was the period when the Romans were at war with Perseus,! the king of Macedonia, and were taking their generals to task because their inexperience and cowardice led them to conduct their campaigns ridiculously and disgrace- fully, and to suffer more harm than they inflicted. For the people which had just forced Antiochus, surnamed the Great, to retire from the rest of Asia, driven him over the Taurus mountains, and shut him up in Syria, where he had been content to buy terms with a payment of fifteen thousand talents; which had a little while before set the Greeks free from Macedonia by crushing Philip in Thessaly ; and which had utterly subdued Hannibal, to whom no king was comparable for power or boldness; this people thought it unendurable that they should be compelled to contend with Perseus as though he were an even match for Rome, when for a long time already he had carried on his war against them with | the poor remains of his father's routed army ; for they were not aware that after his defeat Philip had

171-168 b.c.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

, € \ /) , \
Suvapw ATtnOets Didirmos eppwpevertépay Kat paxylwwrtépay eroinge. ep ay Stems Bpaxews avwlev apEdpevos.
a 9

VIII. 'Avriryovos péytotov Suvnbeis tav AXe-Eavipouv Siadoywv kal otpatnyav, KTHTApEVvoS éavT@ kal yévet THY TOD Bactréws Tpoonyopiay, eN "4 4 e ra) > la e
viov éoxe Anyurntptov, ob mais 'Avtiryovos hv o Tovatads érovouacbeis: tovtov 5 Anunrptos, bs b] U 4 a b 4 es
autos Te BaotNevoas ypovoy ov Woduvy, viov TE Taida THY HALKiay arroktT@Vv Dirsrov éTedev-noe. Seicavtes 5é€ THY avapyiav of mpwror Maxedovev 'Avtiyovoy érayovtat tov teOvnKoTos dvetov éyta, Kal cuvotxicavtes avT@ THY wnTépa tov Dirimov, wp@tov pev enitpotroyv Kal orpa-THYOV, €lTa TEetpwpevot weTpiov Kal KoLYwhEXOdS
, 4 > , /
Baocikéa mpoonyopevoav. érrexrOn 5é Awcov
@s émaryyeATixos, OU TEAEoLOUpyos 8 TeV Ur0-
, \ A , e '4
cxXEeTEwV. peTa TOUTOY Bactrevoas o DirsTrTos
7 > " / a , "
nvOncey e€v Tois padtota tov Baciriéwy Ett
petpaxioy wv, Kal dSoFav Eoxyev ws dvactncwy Maxedoviay eis To TwaXatov akimpa xal povos éri
mavras On THY 'Popaiwy Sivauty aipopévny
4 e \ \ , 4 \ 4
xabéEwv. nrTneis Sé peydrn waxy Tepl Yxo-

e N lj 4 4 Mv tovoav vo Titov Prapwvivov tote pev entnke \ U » e \ > / e /

cal wavta Ta Kal’ éavtov émétpeve ‘Pwpaiois, 4
Kal Tuxe@v émitiunoews petpias nydtynoev. tore-\ 4 / \ 4 ,
pov S¢ Bapéws dépwr, kal ro Bacirevew yapitt ‘Pwpaiwy jyovpevos atyparwrou tpudny ayarav-

made the Macedonian armies far more vigorous and warlike than before. This situation I will briefly explain from the beginning.

‘VIII. Antigonus, who was the most powerful of Alexander's generals and successors, and acquired for himself and his line the title of King, had a son Demetrius, and his son was Antigonus sur- named Gonatas. His son in turn was Demetrius, who, after reigning himself for a short time, died, leaving a son Philip still in his boyhood. The lead- ing Macedonians, fearing the anarchy which might result, called in Antigonus, a cousin of the dead king, and married him to Philip’s mother, calling him first regent and general, and then, finding his rule moderate and conducive to the general good, giving him the title of King. He received the surname of Doson, which implied that he was given to promising but did not perform his engagements. After him Philip succeeded to the throne, and, though still a youth, flowered out in the qualities which most distinguish kings, and led men to believe that he would restore Macedonia to her ancient dignity, and that he, and he alone, would check the power of Rome, which already extended over all the world. But after he was defeated in a great battle at Scotussa by Titus Flamininus,! for a time he took a humble posture, entrusted all his interests to the Romans, and was content to come off with a moderate fine. Afterwards, however, his condition oppressed him, and thinking that to reign by favour of the Romans was more the part of a captive

1 In 197 3.c. The battle is usually named from a range of hills near Scotussa called Cynoscephalae. See the Flaini- ninus, chapters iii. and iv.

Tos elvat parXov H hpovnua Kai Oupov éxovTos 259
avdpos, éretye TO Wore THY yvounv Kal ouve-TaTTeTO AAO pa Kai Tavovpyws. TeV yap ToAEwY
Tas évodious Kal mrapalaXattious aabeveis yevo-pévas meptopav Kai vrepnuous, ws KaTadpovet-cOat, TOAAnY dvw cuvirye Suva, Kal Ta pEo-yea xYwpia Kal dpovpia cal models OTAWY Kal

ypnudtwov woddA@v Kal cwpatwv dxpalovtwy
ELTETANKWS ETMpdoKer TOV TOAEBOV Kal OUVELYEV @omrep éyxexpuppevoy adnrws. SirAwv pey yap apyouvtwy amréxewto Tpels pupidoes, OxTaKoctat Sé citou pedipvoy hoav eyxatwxcdounmévou Tots tetyeot, Ypnudtov Sé TAROos dooy HpKer picOodhopous érn Séxa pupicus Tpépery TpoToAEpLovvTas THS Yopas.
"AAN' exeivos pev ovK EfOn TadTa KWHoaL Kal mpoayayeiv eis Epyov, vro NUTNsS Kal Svabupias mpoémevos Tov Biov: éyvw yap adixws Tov ETepov
tav viav Anuyrptov éx dtaBorFs TOD yelpovos aynpyncas: 08 arorerTropmevos vios avtov Hepoevs
dpa tH Bacireiq StedéEato tHv mpos "Pwpaious ExOpav, ovK av exéeyyuvos eveyxeiy Sia pxpoTyta
cal poxOnpiav nOous, év @ Tabay Te TavToObaT eV Kal voonpaTwy évovTwy éempwrevev 4 pidapyupia.
NeyeTae 5é pndé yryotos Pivat, AaBeiv 8 avdtov
4 ouvoixodoa Te Piriam@ veoyvoy axeotpias Tivos "Apryorsxns Cvabaiviov trobvoya texovons, cal Nabety vroBaropévn. 8 6 Kal pdrota 374

satisfied with meat and drink than of a man pos- sessed of courage and spirit, he turned his thoughts to war, and made his arrangements for it in secrecy and with cunning. Thus, those of his cities which lay on the highroads and the seashore he suffered to become weak and rather desolate, so as to awaken contempt, while in the interior he was collecting a large force ; he also filled the fortresses, strongholds, and cities of the interior with an abundance of arms, money, and men fit for service, in this way prepar- ing himself for the war, and yet keeping it hidden away, as it were, and concealed. Thus, he had arms to equip thirty thousand men laid up in reserve, eight million bushels of grain had been immured in his strongholds, and a sum of money sufficient to maintain for ten years ten thousand mercenaries fighting in defence of the country.

But Philip, before he could put these plans and preparations into effect, died of grief and anguish of mind!; for he came to know that he had unjustly put to death one of his sons, Demetrius, on false charges made by the other, who was his inferior. The son, however, whom he left, Perseus, along with his father's kingdom, inherited his hatred of the Romans, but was not equal to the burden because of the littleness and baseness of his character, in which, among all sorts of passions and distempers, avarice was the chief trait. And it is said that he was not even a true-born son, but that Philip's wife took him at his birth from his mother, a certain semp- stress, an Argive woman named Gnathaenion, and passed him off as her own. And this was the chief reason, as it would seem, why he feared Demetrius

4 In 179 BO.

Soxei TOV Anpjtptov hoBnbeis atroxreivat, eH yijavov EXeov o olxos dsdd0xov atroxaduyrn thy éxeivou vobeiay.
IX. Ov pany ana, Kaimep ov aryevv7ys Kai
TATELVOS, UTO _payns TOV TparywaTov avadepo-HeVvOS T pos TOV TONE LOV éorn Kat Sinpeioaro
ToD Vpovov, Hyemovas TE ‘Popator t ratios Kab OT PATEV LATO, Kal TTOAOUS peyddous arrorptpapevos, evioy be Kat KPATHTAS. IlovrAsov te yap Aceivvrov éuBarovta Tp@TOv eis Maxe6doviay TpeWrdevos immopmayia Sioxedious MTEVTAKOTLOUS avipas ayabouvs drréxreve Kat Cavras adXous éEaxoaious éXaBe, Tov TE vavaTaO wou Twept ‘Qpeor oppoivTos amr poa SoKnTov éemitmdouv Oéwevos eixoot pey avropoptous orAKddas exetp@aaro, tas & adXNas aiTou _Yepoveas KaTéducer" expaTnoe 5¢ Kal TEVTNPLKA Tégoapa. Kab Haxny € emorcunoe
TO devrepor, éy Tov vTraTiKOV Ooridtov amre-Kpovaato KkataBialopevov! Kata tas "EAtulas: AdOpa be 61a @ecoarias éuBarovra mpoKanou-pevos eis paxny epoBnae. md pepryov dé Tod ToNepou oTpaTelav emt Aapoaveis Oepevos, as 57
TOUS ‘Pwpaious t UTEpOpaY Kal Txoralwn, Hupious
TOV BapBapov Katéexowe Kal Aetav nacato
TONA MD. Drexiver de Kal Tadatas tovs wept Tov “Totpov pen pevous, ot Baorépvar’ KandovrTat, oTparov immorny kal MAX. HOV, TrAuptous Te Ola TevOiov tod Bactdéws trapexare cvvepawacbar
1 xaraBia(duevoy Coraés and Sintenis, after Bryan, for the kal BiaCéuevoy of the MSS., where Bekker brackets xai. 2 of Baorépya: Coraés "and Bekker, after Stephanus :

Baorépvat,

and compassed his death, lest the royal house
having a true-born heir to the throne, should uncover his own spurious birth.
IX. However, although he was ignoble and mean, the strength of his position led him to undertake the war, and he kept up the struggle for a long time, repulsing Roman commanders of consular rank with great armies and fleets, and actually conquer- ing some of them. Publius Licinius, for example, who was the first that invaded Macedonia, he routed in a cavalry battle, slew twenty-five hundred good men, and took six hundred prisoners besides; then he made an unexpected attack upon the Roman fleet which was lying at anchor near Oreus, seized twenty ships of burden with their cargoes, and sank the rest together with the grain that filled them; he also made himself master of four quinqueremes. He fought a second battle, too, in which he repulsed the consul Hostilius as he was trying to force his way into Macedonia at Elimiae; and after Hostilius had broken into the country undetected by way of Thes- saly, he gave him a challenge to battle which he was afraid to accept. Furthermore, as a side issue of the war, he made an expedition against the Dardanians, implying that he ignored the Romans and that time hung heavy on his hands; he cut to pieces ten thousand of the Barbarians and drove off much booty. He also secretly stirred up the Gauls settled along the Danube, who are called Bisternae, an equestrian host and warlike; and he invited the IIlyrians, through Genthius their king, to take part with him

Tov ToNeuov. Kal Aoyas Kater yer Os tav Bap-Bapov pode TETTELT WEVODY tr avtov Sa THiS Kato Tadatias mapa tov 'Adpiay éuBareiv eis tny "Itariav.
X. Tadta tots 'Peopators muvOavopevors édoxee
Tas TOV oTpATHYL@VvT OV Naperas Kal Taparyyedias
edoavras avTous Kaneiv érl THY Hryepoviav avdpa vouv éxovra Kal mpdryyace xphoGat peryarors emtaT apevov. obTos Vy IlavAos Aéutros, Klas pev HON ™porw Kal wept éEnxovta yeyovas ern, poun dé Td LATOS axpalov, Ted parypevos dé xnde-oTais Kal matal veavials Kal pirwv mr Ger Kal ovyyevav péeya Suvapyévwv, ot mravtes avtov vrra-Kodoat Kadovdvrt TO One 7 pos THY mateiav
emetBov. o 6¢ KaT apxKas pev eOpimreto 7 pos
TOUS TOAAOUS Kal biéxdive TV prroripiav avTo@V
Kal omovony, Os BN Sedpevos Tov apxev, porraiy-TOV be Kal neépav él _Supas Kal 7 poKahoupeveov avuTop els dryopav Kab cataBowyTov erecta On:
kal paveis evdus év Tols petLovar THY vratetay
édo£ev ouK apyny Anpopevos, GANA vinnv Kal
KpaTos TOAEMLOU Kopilov kal d:d0us Tots TOTALS
Kata Batve els TO Tediov' peta TOTaUTNS éXmri-50s Kxal mpoOuvpias ébéEavro wavtes avtov Kai KatéoTnoay omaroy to Sevtepov, ovn edoavtes
KXApov | ryever Bau, xaddre eiw0e, tmept tov
émapxyi@v, GAN evOus exelve Wndicapevot TOU
Make OVLKOU TOANELOU THY Wyepoviay. Néyerar

auTov, Os avnyopevOn Kara tov Mepoéws oTparn-yos, UTrO TOU Sj pou TAVTOS oixade TpoTrenpOevra, Aap pas evpety TO Ouyatprov thv Teptiav beda-378

60

AEMILIUS PAULUS

in the war. And a report prevailed that the Barbarians had been hired by him to pass through lower Gaul, along the coast of the Adriatic, and make an incursion into Italy.

X. When the Romans learned of these things, they decided that they would bid good-bye to the favours and promises of those who wanted to be generals, and themselves summon to the leadership a man of wisdom who understood how to manage great affairs. This man was Paulus Aemilius, now advanced in life and about sixty years of age, but in the prime of bodily vigour, and hedged about with youthful sons and sons-in-law, and with a host of friends and kinsmen of great influence, all of whom urged him to give ear to the people when it sum- moned him to the consulship. At first he was for declining the appeals of the multitude, and tried to avert their eager importunities, saying that he did not want office ; but when they came daily to his house and called him forth into the forum and pressed him with their clamours, he yielded; and when he presented himself at once among the candi- dates for the consulship, he did not appear to come into the Canipus in order to get office, but as one who brought victory and might in war and offered them to the citizens. With such eager hopes did all receive him, and they made him consul for the second time,! and did not permit a lot to be cast for the provinces, as was the custom, but at once voted him the conduct of the Macedonian war. And it is said that when he had been appointed general against Perseus, and had been escorted home in splendid fashion by the whole people, he found there his daughter Tertia, who was still a little child,

1 In 168 B.o. 379

-

é

i
4
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 Kpupevny ere matBiov ovcay: aomra Louevov ou autny épwrav ép STw NEAUTINTAL’ THY dé Tept-Badovcav ral karagidodoay, “Ov yap olc 8a,” elvreiv, “@ TATED, 5Tt Huty o Tlepaevs TéOvnke ;”
Aéyoucay | Kupvid.ov oUvT popov oUTH m™ pooaryopevopevov' Kal Tov Aiwidsov ° "Aya TUXD, pavat,

“@ Ouyatep, Kat déxopas TOV ol@vor. TavTa pev ovv Kixépwv o pitwp év tots mrept pavtixis iaTopyKey.
XI. Eiworwv &€ trav umatelav NaBovtTwv olov avOoporoyeia Bat Twa xXapw Kal T poo aryopevety prop pores tov Siov a amo Tob Brparos, Aipirsos els exkdnoiay cuvaryaryeov TOUS ToMTas THY pev T poTepay Umateiay petedOetv épn avros apxis Seopevos, tHv Se SevTépav éxelvov oTpaTnyou
2 Seopéveor- bc 8 pndeuiay auTois ydapuy EXEL, arn’, et vopitovar bu évépou BEd Lov eFew Ta
KAT TOV TORE MOV, efioracGae THS myepovias, él
5¢ murtevovot auT@, BY mapaatparnyetv pnde
Aovorrocety, arr’ Umoupyely oLwT Ta OéovTa
1 pos TOV ToNELOV, OSs éay a apXovros dpxetv ont a-ou, ere HadAov h viv KATAYENATTOUS év Tais
3 oTparetars Evopevous. amo TOUTMD TOV hoyeov
TOMMY pev aid@ mpos avTov éverroing€ ToUs TONLTALS, peyadny dé mpoa Soxiav Tov pméAAOvTOS, nOopeven a aTaVTwOY OTL TOUS KohaxevovTas Tapenr-Oovres elAovTo Tappnaiav éxovra Kal dpovnua
TT PATHYOV. | obras em _7@ Kpareiy Kal péytotos
elvat TOY GAXwY apeTAs Kal TOU Karov Soros Hv Oo ‘Pepaiov SLs.
XII. Aduirsrov &€ Tatndov, ds éEwpynoev émi

ae,

in tears. He took her in his arms, therefore, and asked her why she grieved. And she, embracing and kissing him, said: “ Pray dost thou not know, lather, that our Perseus is dead ?” meaning a little pet dog of that name. And Aemilius cried : ‘Good fortune ! my daughter, I accept the omen.” Such, then, is the story which Cicero the orator relates in his work “On Divination.” } XI. It was the custom for those who obtained the consulship to return thanks, as it were, for the great favour in a friendly speech to the people from the rostra ; but Aemilius, having gathered an assembly of the citizens, said he had sued for his first consul-

ship because he himself wanted office, but for his second because they wanted a general ; wherefore he was under no obligation to them ; on the contrary, if they thought the war would be carried on better by another, he resigned the conduct of it; but if they had confidence in him they must not make themselves his colleagues in command, nor indulge in rhetoric about the war, but quietly furnish the necessary supplies for it, since, if they sought to command their commander, their campaigns would be still more ridiculous than they were already. By these words he inspired the citizens with great reverence for himself, and with great expectations of the future, and all were glad that they had passed by the flatterers and chosen a general who had resolution and frankness of speech. Thus was the Roman people, to the end that it might prevail and be greatest in the world, a servant of virtue and honour.

XII. Now, that Aemilius Paulus, after setting out

1 Cicero, De divinatione, 46.

oTpareiay, wrod pev evTUXiG Kal partavn Xerr cacbas _Tropelas Kara Saipova riOnps, ovv by Kal per' aahanreias els TO otparorebov Kouta

TQ" Tob dé TONE LOU Kat TAS oTparhyias avTov TO pev TONUNS ofuTnTL, TO be Bovrcdpace xPn- aTois, TO 6é hirwy éexOvpors iTnpeciats, TO 5€ TO Tapa Ta Sawa, Oappeiv cal xphaAas Novyea pois dpapooww opav S:ameT parypevoy, oux éyw TH Leyouern Tov avdpos evTUXia AapT poy atrodobvas Kal Sudaonpov epyov olov éTépwy TTPATHYOV. eb Be Tis apa THY Tlepoéws pirapyupiav Aipirip TUXnY ayaOny jwéepl Ta Tpdypata. yever Gar pnaiv, i) apm pa Kal peydha WpOs TOV TONELOV apévra Tals eAmrioe Ta Maxeddvarv avétpeve Kal Karé- Bare, T pos apyvptov am odeihdaavros. AKov pep yap avt@ SenPévts Bactépvat, puptoe pep trtreis, puptor 83 mapaBdrat, pea bogopor mares, avdpes

ov ‘yewopryely eldores, ov wheiv, OvK a7r6 TOLL Ch VEMLOVTES, GAN ep Epyyov Kat play TEXYY pedeT@vTeEs ael baxerbar Kal Kparély TOV avTe-TATTOLEDOY. as 6é mepl THY Macdiany Kara aTpatom devo aves EmELLYVUVTO Tois Tapa Tov Bactréws dvdpes vypnrol pev Ta Tap"ara, Javpacrol dé Tas pehéras, peydravyoe dé tal Nap-Tm pol Tais KaTa TOV TrOAELioV amethais, Jdpaos
TapeaTyo ay Tois Maxedoor Kal bofav @S TOV ‘Pepaiwy ovx UTOMEVOUVTOY, aD’ éxTNayngopéveov Thy ow auTny Kal THY Kiyno ww Expu)ov ovcav xal SuoTpocom Tov. obTw diabels Tovs avOp@trous o Tlepaevs Kal TOLOUTOY: euT ANT as érrridwy, aitovpevos Kal’ Exactov nyepova xLAi-382

26]

AEMILIUS PAULUS

upon his campaign, had a fortunate voyage and an easy passage and came speedily and safely to the Roman camp, I attribute to the favour of Heaven ; but when I see that the war under his command was brought to an end partly by his fierce courage, partly by his excellent plans, partly by the eager assistance of his friends, and partly by his resolute adoption of fitting conclusions in times of danger, I cannot assign his remarkable and brilliant success to his celebrated good fortune, as I can in the case of other generals. Unless, indeed, it be said that the avaricious conduct of Perseus was good fortune for Aemilius, since it utterly subverted the great and brilliant prospects of the Macedonians for the war (wherein their hopes ran high), because Perseus played the coward with his money. For there came to him from the Bisternae, at his request, ten thousand horsemen with ten thousand men to run at their sides, all professional soldiers, men who knew not how to plough or to sail the seas, who did not follow the life of herdsmen, but who were ever practising one business and one art, that of fighting and conquering their antagonists. And when these had encamped in Maedica and mingled with the soldiers of the king,—men of lofty stature, admirable in their discipline, great boasters, and loud in their threats against their enemies,—they inspired the Macedonians with courage and a belief that the Romans could not withstand them, but would be utterly terrified by their looks and movements, which were strange and repulsive. But after Perseus had disposed the feelings of his men in this way and filled them with so great hopes, upon being asked to pay each captain of the mercenaries a

383

-'
i
‘

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ous, Mpos TO yuyvopevoy Tov ypvaiov mrHBos idtyyidoas Kal tapadpovyncas vmro puKporoyias amelrTato Kal TponkaTo THv cuu“paxXiav, Bote
a a ; \ oixovopav, ov TrodcLa@DV ‘Pwpaiots, Kat Noyto pov aTrodwowv axpiBhn thas eis Tov ToAELOv Samravys J / , cA ¢ J ,

ols érrodéuer? Kaitoe SidacKdAous elyev éxeivous, ols dvev THS GAANS TapacKeuns oTpatiwtav Sexa pupiddes Hoav nOpovcpévar Kal TapecTa@cat Tais ypetass. 0 ¢ mpds Sivapw dvtaipwr THuKAdTHY Kal ToNELov OY TOTODTOY HY TO TrapaTpEedopeEvor, Sueuérper kal trapernpaiveto To ypuaioy, dyvacbau Sedi@s Botep aAdotpiwv. Kal tadtT émparttev ov Avdav tis 005é Powixwy yeyovas, GAAA THs
"AreEdvdpou nal Piditmou Kata ovyyéverav ape-
THS peTaTroLovmEvOS, Of TH TA TpaypaTa TOV NENMATWOV WYNTA, fi) TA XPHLATA TOY TpayLaTov
yyetcOat Tavtwy éxputnoav. éppéOn yoov Ste Tas odes aiper tTav “EXAnvav ov PDiduTTo-s, GANA TO Dirimov ypuvaiov. *“AréEavdpos &é tijs én’ “Ivdovs otpateias dmropevos, kat Bapuv opav kal Svaoyxov 76n Tov Ilepotxdv édbedxopévous wrovTov Tovs Maxedovas, mpwtas vrémpnoe TAS
\ e 4 9 ‘ ¥ 4 > \
Bactntxas apa€as, eita Tous adXouS Erretce TAUTO
TomnoavTas édadpous avaledEat mpos Tov aoNe-Cd 4 ‘ \ \ \
pov watrep AeAvpEVvous. Tlepaevs 5é Tov ypucdv avTos avTov Kai téxvwv Kal Bacireias Kxata-
4 > b] , > 9? / a
Neapevos oux nOédAnoe bu OrALywV GwOFvaL Ypn-PaTwv, GAG peTa TAAX@Y KOmLTOels 6 TOVELOS 384

AEMILIUS PAULUS

thousand pieces, he was bewildered and crazed at the amount of gold required, and out of parsimony renounced and abandoned the alliance, as if he were a steward, rather than a foe, of the Romans, and was to give an exact account of his expenditures for the war to those against whom he waged it; and yet he had his foes to give him lessons, for, apart from their other preparations, they had a hundred thousand men assembled and ready for their needs. But he, though contending against so large a force, and in a war where such large reserves were maintained, measured out his gold and sealed it up in bags, as afraid to touch it as if it had belonged to others. And this he did although he was no Lydian or Phoenician born, but laid claim to a share in the virtues of Alexander and Philip, whose descendant he was,—men who mastered the world through their belief that empire was to be bought with money, not money with empire. At all events, it was a common saying that the cities of Greece were taken, not by Philip, but by Philip's money. And Alexander, when . he was starting on his expedition to India, and saw that his Macedonians were dragging along after them their Persian wealth, which was already burdensome and heavy, set fire to the royal baggage-waggons first, and then persuaded his followers to do the same with theirs, and to set out for the war in light marching order, like men released from bondage. But Perseus would not consent to pour out his gold upon himself, his children, and his kingdom, and thus purchase salvation with a small part of his treasures, but chose to be carried with many treasures as the wealthy captive, and to show the aiypdrwros émideiEacOat 'Pwpaiow boa heod-pLevos ETNPNOEV AUTOLS.

XIII. Ov yap povoyv améreu we tovs Tadrdtas Wrevodpevos, adAA Kal TévOov érrdpas tov "TAAv-ptov émt tptaxociots tadrdytTos ocuveddwacba TOU TWoAéuov TA ev Xpypata Tols wap avTod weupbeios mpoovOnxeyv npiOunuéva xal Kata-onunvacba: trapécyev' ws b€ mecbels Exew &
nrnoev o L'évOvos Epyov aaeBes nal dewdv eSpace (mpéoBets yap éMovtas "Pwpaiwy mpos avTov aouvéraBe Kat Katédnoev), hryovpevos o Ilepaevs ovdev ére SeiaOar Tov YpnuadTov THY éxTrodé"wwow, ddvta Tov TevOiov mpodedmxdtos eyOpas evéxupa kal Sca tyALKaUTNs abixias éuBeBANKOTOS EavTOV
eis TOV TOAELOY, aTEcTépNaE TOV KaAKOdSaipova TOV Tplakociwy TaddvT@v, Kai Tepietdev orALY@ pov@ peTa TEXVMV Kal yUPALKOS WS ATO VvEoTTLAS
apBévta tis Baoihelas bd Acuxiov *Avixiov oTpaTnyou meupbévros er avrov peta Suvdpews.
Em) totobrov avtimandov édOav o Aipirzos avrov pev xatedppover, tTHv 8 vm avT@ Tapa-" oxeuny xal Sivaptv COavpatev. oav yap ines
pev teTpaxtaxirsot, relol & eis dddayya TeTpa-Kia pupiwy ov moAdXois atrodéovTes. (Opupevos 5é mpo tis Oardttns Tapa thy ''Odvpreenv iTa@peav él ywpiwy obdayddev mpocaywynv éyovtav xal tavrolev bm' avdtod SiaTredpaypevov épvpact Kal Tpoterxicpact EvAivots TOAAHY
adeay yev, amotpvcew xXpovm Kal xpnudrov Saravyn tov Aipirsov ayovpevos. 0 8 TH youn bev hv évepyos emt wav BotrAevpa Kal twacav

Tpemopevos Twelpav, Um adeias Sé THs mpdaber 386
AEMILIUS PAULUS

Romans how much he had saved and watched for them.
XIII. For he not only sent away the Gauls after playing them false, but also, after inducing Genthius the Illyrian, on payment of three hundred talents, to assist him in the war, he showed to the king's messengers the money all counted out, and suffered them to put their seals upon the bags; then, when Genthius, convinced that he had the price he had asked, committed a dreadful and impious deed, arresting and imprisoning a Roman embassy that had been sent to him, Perseus, thinking that the money was no longer needed to make Genthius an enemy of Rome, since before getting it he had given a lasting earnest of his hatred and had involved himself in the war by the great wrong which he had done, deprived the poor wretch of the three hundred talents, and suffered him in a little while to be taken from his kingdom with his wife and children, as birds from their nest, by Lucius Anicius, a general sent against him with an army.

Aemilius, coming against such an adversary, scorned him indeed, but admired his preparations and his army. For Perseus had four thousand horsemen, and not much fewer than forty thousand heavy-armed footmen. And planting himself with the sea behind him, along the foot-hills of Mount Olympus, on ground which nowhere afforded an approach, and which had been fortified on all sides
by him with bulwarks and outworks of wood, he lay in great security, thinking that by delay and expense he would wear out Aemilius. But Aemilius was a man who clung to his purpose, and tested every plan and method of attack; seeing, however, that his 337

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tov otpatov opav dvaavacyxetovvTa Kal AOy@
Toa SiactpaTnyouvTa TaY amTpaKTwp, éTreTipn-Gey aUTols, Kal TapHyyEeLre pNdey TroduTrpayyjwovely
\ 4 bd > A \ a \ e A \ pndé ppovrivew, drAX 7 TO c@pa TO éavTod xal
THY TavoTAiay Exaotov STws évepyov tapéfe
Kat xpnoetat 'Pwpaixas TH payaipa, Tov KaLpov jwapadovtos Tov otpaTnyod. Tas dé vuKTeptvas éxéNevoe uraxds avev AOYYNS PvAdtTEW, ws
PaAXov mpocéEovtas Kal diapayoupévous pos
Tov Umvov, av apvvac0at Tovs Trodepious p7

SvvwvtTat Tpocovtas.
XIV. ‘Evoydoupévay b€ tev dvOperev pd-Mota TEpl THY TOU TrOTOU Ypeiav (Kal yap OrLyov
/
kal trovnpov émidve Kal cuvedeiBeto Tap avTny Q , Coa e > + , \ tTHv OdraTTav), opav o Aipircos péya Kal Kan: \ dé 8 ” \ “O ’ ,
pepes dSévdpecty dpos tov "Odvutrov érixetpevor,
, A a an
Kal TEXpalpopevos TH YAwpoTHTL THS Ans vapa-
54 > a 10 e 4
tov éxyew apyas ba Babous srrodepopévor,
> \ b a \ 4 \ \
dvamvoas autos Kal dpéata Toda Tapa TH e , v a 5 9 \ > / € UTwMpeLAY WPUTTE. T evOus émripmdato peupatov Kabapov, émrovydidovt@v odKn Kal dopa Tov OrArBopévou mpdos TO Kevovpevov.
4 \ v e 4 e
Kairos tives ov dacw vddrov étoluov Kexpup-
\ > a a pévoy mnyas evatroxeioBar Tots tomo é& ov
>] 9 ‘@a
péovowv, ovd atroxdduiw ovdée py—w elvar rip
éxBoXnv avTa@v, GAAA yéverw Kal avaoTacw 9 A lo) a b 4 > 4
évtaida ths Orns eEvypawoperns: éEvypaiverBar
‘ ,
Sé muKxvoTnte Kal WuxpoTnte THY voTEepay ava-388
262

AEMILIUS PAULUS

army, by reason of their former license, was impatient of delay, and inclined to dictate to their general many impracticable things, he rebuked them, and instructed them to take no thought or concern for anything, except how each man might keep himself and his armour in readiness for action, and ply his sword in Roman fashion, when their general gave them the opportunity. Furthermore, he ordered the night watchmen to keep watch without their spears, with the idea that they would be more on the alert and would struggle more successfully against sleep, if they were unable to defend themselves against their enemies when they approached. .

XIV. But his men were annoyed especially by the lack of drinking water, since only a little of it issued forth and collected in pools at the very edge of the sea, and that was bad. Aemilius, therefore, seeing that the lofty and wooded mountain of Olympus lay near, and judging from the greenness of its trees that there were veins of water coursing under ground, dug a number of vents and wells for them along the foot of the mountain. These were at once filled with streams of pure water, which, under the weight and impulse of the pressure that was upon them, discharged themselves into the vacuum afforded.

And yet some deny that stores of réady water lie hidden away beneath the places from which springs flow, and that they merely come to light or force a passage when they issue forth; they hold rather that the water is generated and comes into existence then and there through the liquefaction of matter, and that moist vapour is liquefied by density and cold,

a

/

t
d

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ouptaciy, Grav év Baber xatabdXBeioa pevotixy
3 yevntat. KxabaTep yap ot pactol Tay yuvaiKay ovY Wotrep ayyela MArHpes eioly emLppéovTos éroiuov yadaKxtos, adda petraBdrAXovTes TV
A b] e “ 9 4 lA \ “A Tpopny ev avrots épyafovras yara Kai dinOodour, oUT@S of Tepixruxto Kal midaxwbets TOTOL TIS yjs dap péev ovK Exovot KaduTrropevov, ovdé KOATrOUsS pevpata Kat Baby ToTapawv TocovTwY é& érotmns Kat UTroxetpévns adiévtas apyis, TO 5é mvedpa Kal Tov aépa Te mélew Kal Katatv-
A > / 9 ee / A
4 xvodv atroOAiBovtes eis DSwp tpérrovet. Ta yoov OpuTTOopeva TAY YoOpiov paddrov avamidver Kat
, \ A 4 , C4

Siavaes mpos THY ToLtavTnY Wnrddnowv, woTreEp
oi pactol Tav yuvatK@v mpos Tov Ondracpor, dvuypaivovta Kal panattrovta THY avadupiacw
daa § apya ths ys cuptréppaxtat, tupPAa pos
yéveow vdaTwv éoTiv, ovK Exovta Thy épyatopévny 6 TO Uypov Kivnow. ot 5€ Tabta réyovTes émtyetpeiy Sedwxact Tois atropytiois, ws ovdé TO alpa tots Cwows Eveotiv, GAXa yevvatat TpPOS TA TPAVMATA TVEVLATOS TLVOS 7 GapKaY petaBoAn, pvow aTrepyacapévn cat cuvtntw. édMéyxovrae
5¢ rois pds Tovs Hrovopous Kal Tas peTadreias anavT@cw eis Baby trotapois, ov Kat' OXéiyov
4 C4 > / > / 9
ouAAeyouévols, WoTrEp ElKOS eoTLVY Ef yevertW eK
"a "A , A n~
Tov TAapaYpHUa KivoupEerNs THS YAS NauBdvovewp, / el GAN' dO poois dvaxeopevots. opav S€ Kal rétpas
a @ 4 > 10 iA , C4
TANYH payelons eEeT@ nonce peda AXaBpov Vdaros, elta éréduTre. Tata pey tept ToUTwY.
39°

AEMILIUS PAULUS

whenever, that is, it is compressed in the depths of earth and becomes fluid. For, they argue, just as the breasts of women are not, like vessels, full of ready milk which flows out, but by converting the nourishment that is in them produce milk and strain it out ; so those places in the ground which are chilly and full of springs do not have hidden, water, nor reser- voirs which send forth the currents and deep waters of all our rivers from a source that is ready at hand, but by forcibly compressing and condensing vapour and air, they convert them into water. At all events, those places which are dug open gush and flow more freely in response to such manipulation, just as the breasts of women do in response to suck- ing, because they moisten and soften the vapours ; whereas all places in the ground which are packed tight and unworked, are incapable of generating water, since they have not been subjected to the agitation which produces moisture. But those who hold this doctrine give the sceptical occasion to object that, on this reasoning, there is no blood in living creatures, but it is generated in response to wounds by a transformation of some vapour or flesh, which causes its liquefaction and flow. Moreover, they are refuted by the experience of men who dig mines, either for sieges or for metals, and in the depths encounter rivers of water, which are not gradually collected, as must naturally be the case if they come into existence at the instant that the earth is agitated, but pour fourth in a great mass. And again, when a mountain or rock is smitten asunder, a fierce torrent of water often gushes forth, and then ceases entirely. So much on this head.

39!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XV. ‘O & Alpirsos juépas pév tivas npéuet, Kat pact pnToTEe THALKOUTWY OTpaTOTEbUD eyyUS
ovTw acuveNOovtwy jaovytav yevérOat TooavTnv.
érrel b€ Kiva@v Atravta Kal Tretp@pevos éruvOaveto / ? ‘ v , wv > ,
puav etcoBornv Ett povov appovpov atronreitrec Oat,
\
thy d1a IleppasBias mapa ro v@cov cat thv
a \ Ilérpav, t@ wn puratrecOar Tov ToTrov éATicas padrrov 7 be’ hy ovK épuratreto Svaywpiay Kat tpaxvrnta deiaas éBovreveTo. mpwtos b€ TaY wapovtwy o Naatkads émixadXovpevos Yenriwv, N b Le) , ev \ /
yapBpos ’Adpixavod Yxntiwvos, dotepov dé pé-ylotov év TH auyKAnt@ duvnbeis, bedéEaTO Tis
, e ‘ V4 , \ ,
KUKAwTEWS HYE“oV yevér Bat. SevTEpos 5é PaBros
Ma€tpos, o mpeoButatos tov AtwAtou traidwr,
,
ETL pELpaKLOY WY, aveaTN TpOOUpOvpEVOS. Nobels ovv o Aipinsos Sidwov adtois ovy Baovs Todv¥ b] > o& b] \ e le) n~
Bios elipneev, XN daous autos o Naotxas AaBeiv \ \ ~ / 4 dyot, yeypadws wept tav mpakewy tovTwv ém-
a ,
aTOALOY Tpos TLVa TOV Bactréwy, of pev éxTOS
4 a takews "Itadixol Tpucyidvor TO TAOS Hoav, TO
,
5’ ev@vupov Képas els TevTaKiaytALOUS. TOUTOLS mpocrAaBwv o Naotxas imeis éxatov elxooe rat tov tap Aptrdd@ @paxav cai Kpnrov davapem/ ry \ ypuevov Staxocious, eEwpynoe TH pos OddXaccav
a \ 060, kal kateoTpatoTédevae Tapa To ‘Hpaxdeuov, € ' \ a \ UA b ry \ ws 67 Tais vavol péedX\AwWY ExTEpLTTAELY KA KU-an f a / xKNovaOat TO oTpAaTOTESOV TV TrOAEKioV. éret &
lo ,
éSeimvnoay ol otpati@tat Kal oKoTos éyéveTo,

a € , Ul \ ? \ e A \

Tois HyeHoot Ppdoas TO adyOes ye dea vuKTOS

392

263

AEMILIUS PAULUS

XV. Aemilius kept still for several days, and they say that never was there such quiet when armies of such size had come so close together. But when, as he was trying and considering everything, he learned that there was one passage and one only that still remained unguarded, namely, the one through Per- rhaebia past the Pythium and Petra, he conceived more hope from the fact that the place was left unguarded than fear from the roughness and diffi- culty of it which caused it to be so left, and held a council of war upon the matter. Among those present at the council, Scipio, surnamed Nasica, a son-in-law of Scipio Africanus, and afterwards of the greatest influence in the senate, was first to offer himself as leader of the enveloping force. And second, Fabius Maximus, the eldest of the sons of Aemilius, though he was still a young man, eagerly volunteered. Aemilius, accordingly, delighted, gave them, not as many men as Polybius states,! but as many as Nasica himself says they took, in a short letter which he wrote concerning these exploits to one of the kings, that is, three thousand of his Italians who were not Romans, and his left wing numbering five thousand. In additiom to these, Nasica took a hundred and twenty horsemen, besides two hundred of the mixed Thracians and Cretans with Harpalus, set out on the road towards the sea, and encamped by the Heracleum, as though he intended to sail round by sea and envelope the camp of the enemy. But when his soldiers had taken supper and darkness had come, he told his chief officers his real design, and then led his forces by night in the opposite direction, away from the sea,

1 In a lost portion of Book XXIX.

393

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

THv éevavtiay ato GOaXraTTNS, Kal KaTadXUaas avémave THY oTpatiay UTrO TO TlvOtov. évtavOa tod 9 4 \ eo > 4 , a , , Odrvprou 70 iyfpos avateiver TEOV 7 Séxa oTAdlous' onpairetar 5€ émriypdppate TOD peTpHacavTos oUTwS'
OvAvprov Kxopudiys Ere Wvdiov 'AmoAXNwvOS
iepov Dros Exet, Tpos Kaeo 5é pérpov,} TAN ev Sexcba oTadloy pia, abtap ém' avTa mwrEOpov TeTpaTréd@ AetTropevoy peyeber.
Evpnrou 6€ pu vids €Onxato pétpa KedevOov Reaves av 8, dvak, yaipe nat écOrX4
;

idov.
KalToe A€yovaty ol yewpeTpLKOL NTE Gpous Dros
pnte Babos Oaracons tvrepBarrew Soca oTa-Sious. o pévtor levayopas ov tapépyws, adda meOodm xa 8 dpydvev eirndévar Soxet rHv péeTpyouv.
XVI. ‘O pev odv Nacixds évtad0a Sevunte-pevoe’ TH Se Ilepoet tov Aipidsov atpepovvta KaTa K@pav opavte Kal pn NoyLlouév@ TO yLVOpevov atrodpas ex THS 0b600 Kpns avtroporos te unviev thy wepiodov TaV ‘Pwpaiwy. o dé cuv-tapaxOcis TO pev aotpatomedov ovK éxivyce, Hupious 5é€ puaGodopous Eévous cal Stoytriovs
Makedovas Midrovt trapasdovs éEaréotetXe, trapa-Kehevodpevos Taxbvat ral catadaBeiv tas bTreEp-Bodrads. tovtots o péev TlorvBeds dnow ert Kotpw-pévors erimeceiv Tovs ‘Pwpatous, o 5¢ Nacuxas 1 xpos... uétpoy a correction suggested by Sintenis (and adopted by Bekker) of the unmetrical xpds thy xdOerov 8 duetphOn of the MSS.

and halted below the Pythium, where he gave his army a rest. From this point Olympus rises to a height of more than ten furlongs, as is signified in an inscription by the man who measured it :—
“The sacred peak of Olympus, at Apollo's Pythium, has a_height, in perpendicular measurement, of ten full furlongs, and besides, a hundred feet lacking only four. It was the son of Eumelus who measured the distance, Xenagoras; so fare thee well, O King, and be propitious in thy gifts.”
And yet the geometricians say that no mountain has a height, and no sea a depth, of more than ten furlongs. It would seem, however, that Xenagoras took his measurement, not carelessly, but according to rule and with instruments. _
XVI. Here, then, Nasica passed the night; but to Perseus, who did not infer what was going on because he saw Aemilius remaining quietly in his position, there came a Cretan deserter who had run away on the march, bringing him news of the circuit which the Romans had taken. Though Perseus was confounded at this, he did not move his camp, but sent out ten thousand foreign mercenaries and two thousand Macedonians under Milo, with orders to make haste and occupy the passes. These men, according to Polybius,! were still asleep when the Romans fell upon them; but Nasica says that a

1 In a lost portion of Book X XIX.

9 ‘ 9 “ \ an wv 4 , ofvy ayava trept Tols aKxpots yeveoOar Kal Kiv-
fo) / a Suvov, avtos 5€ Opaxa pcOodopov eis yeipas
, A A a / 4
cuvdpapovta Te Evot@ 61a TOD otHOouvs Tatdeas
A , \ A ,
xataBanrelv, éxBracbéevtwr 5€ TaV TOAELioV, Kal fe) 4 an
tov Midwvos aicyista evyovtos avev Tov OTAWY povoxYiTwVos, aoparws akorovUeElv, dua xataBiBalwv eis THY Ywpav TO oTpdaTevpA.
Tovtwy dé t@ Ilepocet mpoomecovtwy Kata
, 5) Y @ > / \
Taxos avalevEas hyev oTicw, TepipoBos yeyovas kal auyKxeyupevos tais éXtriow. avtod 8 bpuws
a 4 a
apo ths Ilvévns bropévovta tretpacOar payns avayKaiov nv, h Te oTpaT@ cKedacbévtt Trept \ / / N , 3 , ed
tas ToAEls SéyecOar Tov TOAELOY, ereiTEep aTAaF
fo , “
éuBéBnxe TH yopa, Siva trorArd dovov Kat
a a) ‘N ;
vexpov éextreceiy yn Suvdyevov. wAnOer pev ovv
? A > / a 4 \ \
avopov avTobev trepteivar, trpoOuptav Sé troAAHVY Umdpyew auvvopévors wept Téxvav Kal yuvatxar, épopavrTos Exacta tod Bacihéws wal mpoxivdv-
4 b] 4 9 4 ¢€ 4 \
vevovTos. €K ToUTwY eBapavvov ot piror Tov Ilep-

U
céa: xal Badopevos otpatotedov auvetatreto
\ 4 va)
Tpos paxny, Kal TA Ywpia KatTecKoTeEiTo, Kal
PS , \ e 4 e > \ b] > 4 a LnpeL TAS Hryepwovias, ws EvVOLs €F édodou Tots € , ’ / eer 2 \ , e
Pwpatos atravtnowv. 0 O€ TOTOs Kal Tediov hy
A , 4 2 4 \ , e A
Th parayy Bacews émiTédov Kat ywpiwv ovarav
4 a LA a
Seouévy, Kat Noho auveyxets adrAos EF AAXov Tots
an > yupvntevoval Kai Widois avaduyas nal trepidpo\ v 5 \ 4 de \ es 7 pas Eyovtes. Sia wécou de Totapol péovtes Alowv
fo! A ,
cat AedKos ov para Babeis tote (Oépous yap Hv

sharp and perilous conflict took place for possession of the heights, and that he himself slew a Thracian mercenary, who engaged him, by striking him through the breast with his javelin, and that after the enemy had been driven away, and while Milo was flying most disgracefully without his armour or his cloak, he followed after them without danger, and brought his army with him down into the plain.

After this disaster, Perseus hastily broke camp and retired ; he had become exceedingly fearful, and his hopes were shattered. But nevertheless he was under the necessity of standing his ground there in front of Pydna and risking a battle, or else of scattering his army about among the cities and so awaiting the issue of the war, which, now that it had once made its way into his country, could not be driven out without much bloodshed and slaughter. In the number of his men, then, he was superior where he was, and they would fight with great ardour in defence of their wives and children, and with their king beholding all their actions and risk- ing life in their behalf. With such arguments his friends encouraged Perseus. So he pitched a camp and arranged his forces for battle, examining the field and distributing his commands, purposing to confront the Romans as soon as they came up. The place afforded a plain for his phalanx, which required firm standing and smooth ground, and there were hills succeeding one another con- tinuously, which gave his skirmishers and_light- armed troops opportunity for retreat and flank attack. Moreover, through the middle of it ran the rivers Aeson and Leucus, which were not very deep at that time (for it was the latter end of summer), apa pOivovros) édoxouy tivad ducepyiay Guws Tots ‘Pwpaiors mapefetv.

XVII. ‘O & Alpintos, as eds TauToV ouvewite
tT Naouka, catéBatve TUYTETAYMEVOS emt TOUS Tone pious. as 8 cide THY naparatw avTav ral
TO THOS, Oavpacas éréaTnoe THY Topelay, autos Te mpos éautov avrdroyilopuevos. oi 8° iHryepovixol veavioKot 7 poOupovpevor payer Oar Tape-AavvovTes édéov To BN pédrewp, Kal padiora may-TOV O Naowxds 7H Tepl tov “Odvuroy evtuxia TeOappnKas. 0 = Aipintos, beldudaas, “Ei ye THY anv, eltrev, “ AtKiaY elxov" ai € Trodnat pe vixat dubdoxovoat Ta TOV NT TO LEVOV cpLapty)- para, K KwAVOVOLY ef od00 paxnv TiOecOat 7 pos pdrayya ouvTEeTayMernY non Kal cuverToaav.
éx TovTOU Ta pev TpaTa Kal catahavh impos Tovs Tohepious éxéXevoev Els omeipas xabiarapeva Tovely ox nwa mapatatews, tous 8 an’ ovpas
otpadévtas év X%pa xapaxa Bareobat Kal oTpa-TOTrEOEVELD. oUTM ¢ TOV cTUvEX av TOUS Tehev-taiow Kal’ brayoyny eFedcT Topeveny Exade tiv maparativ dvahuaas Kat KatactHaas abopvBas els TOV dpaka mavTas.
"Evel Be yok ryeryover Kal peta Seitrvov érpd-TOVTO ™pos Darvov Kat avdravow, aipvidcov y cedqvy mANPNS ovca kal HETEWPOS epehaivero Kal ToD gwrds amroNLTOVTOS auThy Xpeas dpeinpaca mavrobamas npavicOn. Tav 6é Popatan, OoTep éotl vevopiic peor, Xarxod TE Tardyou avaxa-Aoupeveor TO pas QUuTHS Kal mupa TONG dadoils
Kal dgolv avexovT@v T™pos TOY ovpavor, ovdér Spovoy Erpattov of Maxedoves, adrAa dpixn cal 398

but were likely, nevertheless, to give the Romans
considerable trouble.
XVII. Aemilius, after effecting a junction with Nasica, came down in. battle array against the enemy. But when he saw how they were drawn up, and in what numbers, he was amazed, and came to a halt, considering with himself. His young officers, however, who were eager for battle, rode up and begged him not to delay, especially Nasica, who was emboldened by his success at Mount Olympus. But Aemilius, with a smile, said to him:

«Yes, if I had thy youth ; but many victories teach me the mistakes of the vanquished, and forbid me to join battle, immediately after a march, with a phalanx which is already drawn up and completely formed.” After this, he ordered his foremost troops, who were in sight of the enemy, to form into cohorts and give the appearance of a battle line, while the others, wheeling to the rear, dug trenches and marked out a camp. And in this way, the troops next to the last wheeling off in due succession, before the enemy knew it he had broken up his battle line and brought all his men without confusion into their intrenchments. ;
Now, when night had come, and the soldiers, after supper, were betaking themselves to rest and sleep, on a sudden the moon, which was full and high in the heavens, grew dark, lost its light, took on all sorts of colours in succession, and finally disappeared. The Romans, according to their custom, tried to call her light back by the clashing of bronze utensils and by holding up many blazing fire-brands and torches towards the heavens; the Macedonians, however, did nothing of this sort, but amazement

a 4 “
OapBos To otpatotesov KaTteiyve Kal NOYOS NAOVYT
Sia TroAA@y éywpet, Bacii€ws TO Pdopa onpat-
b
ve éxrenfiv. o © Aipirsos ove Hy ev avnKoos
ovd aTeipos TavTdtact TMV EKNELTTLK@VY AVO-Hara, al thy cEernvnv epipepoméevyny Eis TO oxiacna ThHS yns éuBadAovar TeTaypévats Trept-odors Kal diroxpUTtovaw, dypt ov tapeNovca THY émiaKoTOUpLeVnY YOpay Tad éTiAdprn POs
1. ’ \ ’ \ a , + J / ‘ TOV HALOY" OV LV GAAA T@ Geiw TOV VvEe“wY Kal
dirodurns ay kat pavtixes, ws elde MpaTov THY cernvyny atroxaGatpopéevnv, Evdexa poaxous avTh cateOvoev. dua S nuépa to ‘Hpaxdret Bovduta
- dpa 8’ juépg 7O “Hpax ovduT@y
v A \ ovK éxadAtéper péexpts eixnoot TO 56 TpwT@ Kal
a a \ a

ELKOOTO TAphy Ta onpcta Kal vixny apuvopéevols
v 9 / > \ a e \ N
eppalev. evEauevos obv cata Bowy éxatov xal ayavos tepod TH Oe@, mpocetake Siaxocpely Tots 4 \ nyeu“oot TOY oTpaToy eis paxynv’ avdtos bé THY
\
amroxdtow Kal wepipopay avapévov tod dwros,
STS LL] KATA TpoTwToU payouevats avTots Ewlev
- 0 HrALoS avTiNduTroL, Taphrye Tov Ypovov év TH
axnvn KabeCouevos avatreTTtapévyn Tpos TO Tediov Kal THY OTpaToTrEdclay TMV TrOAELiOV.
XVIII. Ilepi 5é detAnv ot ev avtod hac tod
Aipuriou texvalovtos éx tev Trodeuiov yevécbat Thy émeyelpnow, axddwoy inmmov éFeXdocavtas éuBareiy avtots tovs ‘Pwpaiouvs, xal todrov apyny paxns Stwxopevov wapacyxeiv' ot de “Pwoo A 4
paixav wtrolvyiwy Yoptacpata TapaxomlovTwy
uf a ° ’ / ¢€ a \ adwtecOar @paxas, av “Arétavépos nyeito, mpods 400

AEMILIUS PAULUS

and terror possessed their camp, and a rumour quietly spread among many of them that the portent signified an eclipse of a king. Now, Aemilius was not altogether without knowledge and experience of the irregularities of eclipses, which, at fixed periods, carry the moon in her course into the shadow of the earth and conceal her from sight, until she passes beyond the region of shadow and reflects again the light of the sun; however, since he was very devout and given to sacrifices and divination, as soon as he saw the moon beginning to emerge from the shadow, he sacrificed eleven heifers to her. And as soon as it was day, he sacrificed as many as twenty oxen to Hercules without getting favourable omens; but with the twenty-first victim the propitious signs appeared and indicated victory if they stood on the defensive. Accordingly, having vowed to the god a hecatomb and solemn games, he ordered his officers to put the army in array for battle; but he himself, waiting for the sun to pass to the west and decline, in order that its morning light might not shine in the faces of his men as they fought, passed the time sitting in his tent, which was open towards the plain and the enemy's encampment.

XVIII. Towards evening, Aemilius himself, as some say, devised a scheme for making the enemy begin the attack, and the Romans, pursuing a horse which they had driven forth without a bridle, came into collision with them, and the pursuit of this horse brought on a battle ; others say that Thracians, under the command of Alexander, set upon Roman beasts of burden that were bringing in forage, and

5é rovrous éxdpopny dfeiav érraxoctoy Aiyiov yevéo Oat trapaBonfovvtwr 5é mrevovwy Exarépors ovTw cuvaTrTedOat THY waXnVv aupoTépwrv. Oo pev ovv Aiutrsos Ootep KUBEpynTHS TO WapovtTe caro kal Kivnuats Tov oTpaToTrédwY TEexpatpopeEvos TO péyeOos Tod pédXNovTOS aydvos, ex THS TKNVTS mponiOe kal Ta Taypata TeV oTALTOV éTL@V
TmapeOdppuver, o dé Naowxds éEurrmacdpevos mpos
Tous axpoBorLlouévous opad wdvras bcov ovTw
TOUS ToNeutous ev yepoly dvTas.
IIpara 8 of @paxes eywpouv, Ov pddtoTd dnow éxtrayjvar thy byw, avdpes bWnrol ra cMpaTa, NEvUK@ Kal meptrdutrovTe Oupewy cat mepixvnpio@y omA\tou@ pérAavas Urevdedupévor xitavas, opOas €é poudaias Bapvotdnpovs dro trav SeEvav wpov éemicciovtes. tmapa S€ Tovs Opdaxas oi ptoPodopor trapevéBardov, ov cxevat
Te tavrooatal, Kal peutypévor Ilaioves aoa
émt 8& rovTots aynpa Tpitov of Aoyddes, avTaY Maxedovwy dpeth xal jrLKia 76 KaBapwtarov, doTpamtovtTes émtxpvaols Sidoas Kal veoupyois
dhowixiow. ols nabiorapévors eis taki at Tov Xarcacridwy émavatédXovaear hararyyes €x TOU
Xapaxos eve noav anys avdpov Kal NaptTN-Sovos yarxod 76 Trediov, xpavyfhs bé cai OopvBou wapakeNevopevoy THV opevyiy. ovTw 5é Opacéws Kal peTa TAXOUS eTHETAaY WaoTE TOVS TPwWTOUS
vexpovs amo duely atadiwv tod 'Pwpatcod yapa-KOS KaTATET ELD.
XIX. Teyvopuevns Sé tis ébddou traphv o Aiui-
Atos, Kal KaTeAdpBavey Hn Tovs év Tos aynpact

Maxeddévas dxpas Tas capicas TpocepnpeKxotas 402

265

AEMILIUS PAULUS

that against these a sharp sally was made by seven hundred Ligurians, whereupon reinforcements were sent to either party, and thus the engagement became general. So then Aemilius, like a pilot, judging from the surging commotion in the armies the greatness of the coming storm, came forth from his tent and went along in front of his legionary troops encouraging them, and Nasica, after riding out to the skirmishers, saw that the whole force of the enemy was all but at close quarters.

First the Thracians advanced, whose appearance, Nasica says, was most terrible,—men of lofty stature, clad in tunics which showed black beneath the white and gleaming armour of their shields and greaves, and tossing high on their right shoulders battle-axes with heavy iron heads. Next to the Thracians, the mercenaries advanced to the attack ; their equipment was of every variety, and Paeonians were mingled with them. Next to these came a third division, picked men, the flower of the Macedonians them- selves for youthful strength and valour, gleaming with gilded armour and fresh scarlet coats. As these took their places in the line, they were illumined by the phalanx-lines of the Bronze-shields which issued from the camp behind them and filled the plain with the gleam of iron and the glitter of bronze, the hills, too, with the tumultuous shouts of their cheering. And with such boldness and swiftness did they advance that the first to be slain fell only two fur- longs from the Roman camp.

XIX. As the attack began, Aemilius came up and found that the Macedonian battalions had already planted the tips of their long spears in the shields

403
Dp 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

tots Oupeois Tav “Pwpyaiwy cal pity mpoctepévous eis épuxtov a’Tav Tas paxaipas. érel é Kal TOY ad\iwy Maxedovev tas te wéAtas é€ wou Trept-onacavtwy Kal tais capicats ad’ évos cuvOnpatos KXLOGcicas UmoctavtTwy Tots Bupeopopous
elde THY TE PONY TOD GvvacTLG LOD Kal THY TpAayuTHnTA THS mWpoPorNs, éxmrrAn kts QuTov Eye Kab déos, @S ovdev idovta maTore Géapa poBepwrepoy:
v4 “A 9
Kal TOoAAGKLS BoTEpov éuéuvynto Tov mdaOous exet-

vou Kal Ths Oypews. Torte Sé Tpos TOUS payxopuévous > tf 6 \ A e A ov , émriderxvopevos thew nal hadpov éauvtov avev Kpavous Kal Oopaxos itm wapynArauvev. o 5é Tov C4 nn
Maxeddvav Bacireds, &s dynat TloAvBios, tijs
payns apxnv AauBavovans atrodeididcas eis 1d-hu adimmdoaato, oxnyrdapuevos “Hpaxret Over,
a“ ¢ \ ? b) A
Seika trapa Sevrav iepa py Sexouévp pnd evdyas aOepitous émetedobvvtTt. Oepitoy yap ovK éoTw ote Tov pn BddXOVTA KaTEVoTOYXELY OUTE TOV 141) pévovta Kpatety ov8 SXws TOY ATpaKToOV evTpalo) v7 N \ > A b (a) > yelty oUTE TOV Kaxoy evdatpovely. adda Tais Al-ptdiou mapiv evyais o Beas evyeTo yap KpaTos Todkéuou Kal vicny Sdpv xpatav, Kat payomevos mapexdre cvppayov Tov Deov.
Ov pnv adda Tlocevdortds tis év éxeivois Tots ypovors Kal Talis mpdkeot yeyovévar Néywr, (oTo-
, \ \ 4 b la
piay 6é yeypadas arepi Ilepoéws ev mreioor Bi-, \ > N b) e N , > N N
Brio, gdnoly avtov ody tro Sevrdias ovdé tHv
Ouciav tommodpevov aitiay amedOeiv, adda TH
, “A A
MpoTépa THs paxns Tuyely NeXaKTIcpévoy Ld 404

AEMILIUS PAULUS

of the Romans, who were thus prevented from reach- ing them with their swords. And when he saw that the rest of the Macedonian troops also were drawing their targets from their shoulders round in front of them, and with long spears set at one level were withstanding his shield-bearing troops, and saw too the strength of their interlocked shields and the fierceness of their onset, amazement and fear took possession of him, and he felt that he had never seen a sight more fearful ; often in after times he used to speak of his emotions at that time and of what he saw. But then, showing to his soldiers a glad and cheerful countenance, he rode past them without helmet or breastplate. The king of the Macedonians, on the other hand, according to Polybius, as soon as the battle began, played the coward and rode back to the city, under pretence of sacrificing to Heracles, a god who does not accept cowardly sacrifices from cowards, nor accomplish their unnatural prayers. For it is not in the nature of things that he who makes no shot should hit the mark exactly, or that he who does not hold his ground should win the day, or, in a word, that he who does nothing should be successful in what he does, or that a wicked man should be prosperous. But the god listened to the prayers of Aemilius, who kept wielding his spear as he prayed for might and victory, and fought as he invited the god to fight with him.

However, a certain Poseidonius, who says he lived in those times and took part in those actions, and who has written a history of Perseus in several books, says it was not out of cowardice, nor with the excuse of the sacrifice, that the king went away, but because on the day before the battle a horse had

¢/ A 4 3 n , , v
immou TO oxédros év bé TH waxy, Kaitrep EyovTa
, , e N A re
Svaypnotws Kal Kwdvopevov bro Tov diror, irmrov auT@ KedevoaL TAY Hhopéwy 1 poo ayaryetv cal wepiBavra cuppitar tots él TAS Paddaryyos GOwpaxiatrov' pepopévwy Sé travtodatav éxareé-
A QN 9 A e , 9 A poder BeXov, raXrTov éutrecety oNoa ton pov auT,
A A A a
Kal TH pev axun py Ovyetv, AAA WAGyLOV Tapa
THY aploTEepay TAEUPaV Tapadpapely, pon Se THS mapodov Tov Te xiT@Va Staxdwat Kal thy odpKa gowvi~at TuUPAP poOArAwWTL, TodLY Xpdvoyv Siadu-AdEavte Tov TUTOV. TadTa ev OdV oO TlocedSwvL0S vrép Tov Llepoéws aroNoyelTat.
XX. Tov b¢ 'Popaiwv, as avréotncav Th pa-
Aayyt, wn Suvvapevwov BidlecOat, Udrovios 6 TOV TleAvyvav syyovpevos aprdoas To onpeiov tav Ud' / wv ry
aurov els Tovs TrodEepious Eppirpe. tav Sé Ilenu-
A > , 3 3 nw N #+Q? e yvoav (ov yap éotw 'Itadois Oeuttov ovd dotov eyxaTaXttrely onuetov) éTidpapLovtTwv pos éxetvov Tov ToTrov épya Seva Kal waOn Tap' audhotépwv ATHVTA SULTETOVTMV. Ol wey yap exKpovew Te tois Eipeot Tas capicas érretpOvTo Kal meéCew Tots Oupeois Kai Tals Yepoly avtais avtiNayBavo-pevor Trapadépery, ot 5€ THY mpoRoAnVv KpaTtuVapevot St aphotépwy xal tovs mpoomimrovras avtots oT7TAaLs SteXavvorrtes, OUTE Oupeod atéyovtos
\ , A ,
ovre Owpaxos THhv Biav THs capions, aveppirrouv
e \ \ \ 4 A A
imép xeharny ta oopata tov Tledyvav cat
a" b] fol

Mappovewov, nat ovdéva Noytopov, ada dup@
Onpiodet, pos evavtTias WAnyas Kal 7 povTrrov 406

AEMILIUS PAULUS

kicked him on the leg. He says further that in the battle, although he was in a wretched plight, and although his friends tried to deter him, the king ordered a pack-horse to be brought to him, mounted it, and joined his troops in the phalanx without a breastplate ; and that among the missiles of every sort which were flying on all sides, a javelin made entirely of iron smote him, not touching him with its point, indeed, but coursing along his left side with an oblique stroke, and the force of its passage was such that it tore his tunic and made a dark red bruise upon his flesh, the mark of which remained for a long time. This, then, is what Poseidonius says in defence of Perseus.

XX. The Romans, when they attacked the Mace- donian phalanx, were unable to force a passage, and Salvius, the commander of the Pelignians, snatched the standard of his company and hurled it in among the enemy. Then the Pelignians, since among the Italians it is an unnatural and flagrant thing to abandon a standard, rushed on towards the place where it was, and dreadful losses were inflicted and suffered on both sides. For the Romans tried to thrust aside the long spears of their enemies with their swords, or to crowd them back with their shields, or to seize and put them by with their very hands; while the Macedonians, holding them firmly advanced with both hands, and piercing those who fell upon them, armour and all, since neither shield nor breastplate could resist the force of the Mace- donian long spear, hurled headlong back the Pelig- nians and Marrucinians, who, with no consideration but with animal fury rushed upon the strokes that

407

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 wloupévav Oavarov. obo dé Tap Tpopdy wv
SiapOapevtov dvexomna ay ot KaTOT Ly avTay em
TET Ary MEVOL* wal guy bev ovK Hp, dvaxopnots bé
™ pos 6pos TO Kahovpevov "OroK pov, Bate Kat TOV 266
Aiutdov lovra, dnoty o Tlocedavios KaTappy-
Ear bar TOV Xurava, TOUT@V eV évdidovTor, TOV & dv\Xov 'Popatov Stat peTopeveov Ty pddayya mpoa Bodny OUK éXoucay, adn' domep Xapaxepate TO TuKVOpaTt TOY captaay UTravtTiafovaav mavtobev amrpoapaxov.
4 'Emel 6€ Tay Te Xo plov dvoparav évTov, Kad bia TO pijKos THs wapatafews ov purarrovens
dpapota TOV TUVATT LG LOD, KaTEloe THY parayya tov Maxedovev Kroes TE Todas Kai OtaoTa- .
o pata AapRavovear, @s elKds ev peyddors oT pa-Tois Kal Troiinats oppais TOV pbaXopevov, Tois

pev excOdBopevny fépect, ToL bE TpoTimTovaay, eTrL@y o€éws Kal Srarpav TAS omelpas éxéXevev ets
Ta Sraretppata Kal Kevopata Tis TOV Tone pleoy TazEws TapEenTinTovTas Kat TupTreKopevous hn pay T pos aravras, GANA ToANAS Kal peperypeévas
5 Kata Hépos Tas paxas TidecOa. Tabra TOU pev
Aipidtou Tous 1yewovas, TOV S AYEMOveOY TOUS
TTPATLOTAS SidacKovter, @S TP@TOV im@édvcav
Kat Sua xov elow TOV OTAWD, Tots [ev eK wAayiou KATA yupva mpoapepopevot, TOUS 6¢ tais mept6popais dmorapBdvortes, 1) a) pev laxvs Kab 7) KOLVOD épyov evdus ATONWAEL TAS parayyos avappn-yuperns, év d€ tails Ka? &va nal Kar orjékyous cva Taser ot Makedoves mtxpois pev eyxerproiors aTepeous Kal tmodnpers Oupeovs vUaoovTes, éda-408

met them, and a certain death. When the first line had thus been cut to pieces, those arrayed behind them were beaten back; and though there was no flight, still they retired towards the mountain called Olocrus, so that even Aemilius, as Poseidonius tells us, when he saw it, rent his garments. For this part of his army was retreating, and the rest of the Romans were turning aside trom the phalanx, which gave them no access to it, but confronted them as it were with a dense barricade of long spears, and was everywhere unassailable.

But the ground was uneven, and the line of battle so long that shields could not be kept continuously locked together, and Aemilius therefore saw that the Macedonian phalanx was getting many clefts and intervals in it, as is natural when armies are large and the efforts of the combatants are diversified ; portions of it were hard pressed, and other portions were dashing forward. Thereupon he came up swiftly, and dividing up his cohorts, ordered them to plunge quickly into the interstices and empty spaces in the enemy's line and thus come to close quarters, not fighting a single battle against them all, but many separate and successive battles. These instructions being given by Aemilius to his officers, and by his officers to the soldiers, as soon as they got between the ranks of the enemy and separated them, they attacked some of them in the flank where their armour did not shield them, and cut off others by falling upon their rear, and the strength and general efficiency of the phalanx was lost when it was thus broken up; and now that the Macedonians engaged man to man or in small detachments, they could only hack with their small daggers against the firm and

409

dpois S€ meATapiois mpos Tas éxetvwy payaipas € \ , \ al \ N 4 uma Bdpovs nat xatadopas 8a mavtos Sidov yopovaas er) TA TWpLaTa, KAKS aYTEYOVTES éTpd-WOVTO.
XXI. Kara rovrous 5é péyas Hv ayov. &0a
5% xat Mdpxos 0 Kdtwvos vids, Aiptriou 8é yap-Bpos, tacav arn émidecxvipevos améBare TO Eidos. ola 5é veavias évteOpappévos Wreiotors
Tatdevpact Kal peydd@ matpl peyadns aperis 9 4 ? lé > N @e 4 9
amrobeitets opeiAwy, ov Biwtov ynodpevos elvar mpoeév@m okidAov auto Cavtos rots mrodepiots 9 , : \ , ” / I. Q , emréSpape THV UAYXNV, el TLVd TOU irov Kai cvvyOn xatioot, ppdlwv To cvpTrecov avT@ Kal Sedmevos
A e \ \ N ? \ , A
BonOeiv. ot d€ wWoAXOl Kat ayabol yevouevor Kat
A A A 4
Siacyovtes op pid Tovs AdXovs, rept avdtov
ipnyovpevoy EuSdrXover Tots évavriow. peydro@
S ayau xal hove ToAA@ Kal Tpavpacw woavTes éx yopas Kal TOTOV épnuoyv Kal yupvov Kataaxovres erl Enrnow érpdtovto Tod Eigous. as Q 9 “ e \ , A
dé pods év TWoAXois GTrAOLS Kal TT@pAacL vEexpav Kexpuppevoy avevpéOn, Trepryapels yevopevor Kal
4 Aa
TavavioavTes ETL NapT POTEpOV EvexElvTO TOLS GUD-EOT@OLW ETL TOV TovEiov. Kal TéXOS Of TPLCyidvoe Noyddes ev Taker pévovtes Kal payopevor KaTexonnoay atravtess Tav & adAXwv hevyovTwv
A @ e UU C4 N \ bc \ A Totus WV O hovos, woTEe TO pev Tedioy Kal THY imwpecay KataTeTARCOa vexpav, Tod Sé Aeviou moTramov TO pedpa Tos ‘Pwpatous TH meta THY paxynv nuépa SrenOeivy ere peptypévov aipare.
410

long shields of the Romans, and oppose light wicker targets to their swords, which, such was their weight and momentum, penetrated through all their armour to their bodies. They therefore made a poor resistance and at last were routed. | XXI. But the struggle between them was fierce. Here, too, Marcus, the son of Cato and the son-in- law of Aemilius, while displaying all possible prowess, lost his sword. Since he was a young man of the most generous education and owed to a great father proofs of great valour, he thought life not worth the living if he abandoned such spoil of his own person to the enemy, and ran along the ranks telling every friend and companion whom he saw of his mishap and begging them for aid. These made a goodly number of brave men, and making their way with one impulse through the rest, they put themselves under his lead and fell upon the enemy. With a great struggle, much slaughter, and many wounds, they drove them from the ground, and when they had won a free and empty place, they set themselves to looking for the sword. And when at last it was found hidden among great heaps of armour and fallen bodies, they were filled with exceeding joy, and raising songs of triumph fell yet more impetuously upon those of the enemy who still held together. Finally, the three thousand picked men of the Mace- donians, who remained in order and kept on fighting, were all cut to pieces; and of the rest, who took to flight, the slaughter was great, so that the plain and the lower slopes of the hills were covered with dead bodies, and the waters of the river Leucus were still mingled with blood when the Romans crossed it on

, Q e A , ,
Aéyovtas yap Urép Siopupious mevraktayiALous
aroQavety. tav dé ‘Pwpaiwy éEmecov, ws pev Tloved@uos dno, éxatov, ws 5¢ Nacixas, oydo-HKOVTA.
XXII. Kat xpiow pev o€utdtnv péyiotos ayov
: 4
ovTos Exxev’ éevadtns yap @pas apEapevor paxe-obat wpo Sexarns évixnoav: TO O€ NELTOMEVO TIS neepas Xpnoapevos pos THhv Siwkw Kai péxps otadiwy éxatov Kai eixoot SiwEavtes éomépas
wv a, > Ul \ \ \ wv 70n Badetas atretpatrovto. Kat Tous pev addouS of Oepdtrovtes UTO AapTTadwY aTravT@VTES peTA
yapas Kat Bons amipyov emt tas oxnvas dott AapTropevas Kal KEexoopnpevas KiTTOV Kai dadyns otTepavols: avTov 5€ Tov aTpaTnyov peya TévOos elye. Suety yap viav avtov otpatevopévav o 4 3 “ \ 3 a ae ee a vewTepos ovdapod havepos Hv, bv edirer TE pa-MoTa Kal THELoTOY Eis apeTHnY huTEL TpovYoVTA
a 9 “ e7 ” ‘ \ s
TOV adeApav Epa. Oupoerdy Sé Kai PiAoTipoy
bd A 4 ” 3 > 4 -e A e , ovta THY vpuyny, ert 8 avtimaia tH HrLKIay,

4 > / , e > »
TavTanacw amodwrévat xaredo-aler, br’ azret-pias dvameyPevta tois Todepiots payopevors.
atropoupévou 6€ avtov Kal repirabovvtos 7,00eTo jmav TO oTpdtevpa, Kal petaku Sertrvobvtes ave-amnoov cat SéGeov peta AapmTddwy, ToAXKOL pev
ért Thy axnvny tov Aiptriou, TrodAoi Sé mpo tov Vapaxos ev Tos TpwToLs vexpots CnToVTES. KaTHdeca 5€ TO otTpatotedov Kal Kpavyn TO Tediov
Karelyev dvaKaXrovupéevwy Tov Lentiova, TaoLyap
5 ® Le Be 9 le \
ayaatos hv evOus €& apxis, mpos nyepoviay Kal 412
267

the day after the battle. For it is said that over twenty-five thousand of their enemies were slain ; while of the Romans there fell, according to Poseido- nius, a hundred, according to Nasica, eighty.

XXII. And this greatest of all struggles was most speedily decided ; for the Romans began fighting at three o'clock in the afternoon, and were victorious within an hour; the rest of the day they spent in the pursuit, which they kept up for as many asa hundred and twenty furlongs, so that it was already late in the evening when they returned. All the rest were met by their servants with torches and conducted with joyful shouts to their tents, which were ablaze with light and adorned with wreaths of ivy and laurel; but Aemilius their general was a prey to great sorrow. For of the two sons who were serving under him, the younger was nowhere to be found, and Aemilius loved him especially, and saw that he was by nature more prone to excellence than any of his brothers. But he was of a passionate and ambitious spirit, and was still hardly more than a boy in years, and his father concluded that he had certainly perished, when, for lack of experience, he had become entangled among the enemy as they fought. The whole army learned of the distress and anguish of their general, and springing up from their suppers, ran about with torches, many to the tent of Aemilius, and many in front of the ramparts, searching among the numerous dead bodies. De- jection reigned in the camp, and the plain was filled with the cries of men calling out the name of Scipio. For from the very outset he had been admired by everybody, since, beyond any other one of his family, mohirelav @> addXos ovdels TOV aUYyevav Kexpapevos TO 700s.

413

"Owe 8 ody 780 oxebov aT eyvos LeVvos ex THS
didFews Tm poo jet peta vo i] T play éTalpwy, aipatos Kat povov ToNeuLeov avaTTrews, aomep

oKvrak yevvaios, - vp’ ndovijs aK paTas Th. vinn auvefevex eis. odTos éoTt Lanriwv o) Tois ixvoupevous x povors } Kapxndova Kal N opayriay Kataoxdypas Kal TOAU 7 p@TOS apeTh Tav TOTe ‘Pw-paiwy YEVOpEVOS Kai duvndels péytorov. Aipirin pep ouy THY Tov KaTop GATOS pepe ets Erepov
a) TOxN Kawpov imepBaddopevy TOTE TAVTEAH THY HOOVHY ATEOLOOU THs viKns.
XXIII. Tlepoevs bé guyh pev éx Ivduns ets
TleAAav a amrexapel, TOV lITrTéewY ETLELKwS TAYTOY
QTro THS paxns Stacerwopevov. émel dé Kxata-AapBdvovres ot mefol Tous immets os avavdpous Kat Tm podedw@xoras NoLdopowvtTes ard TOV (army @0ovv xal mAnyas édidocay, Seioas TOV OopuBov éx THS 0600 7a éxXwve TOV immoy, xal THV mroppupar, as en bidonwos ein, Teptomrdaas éGero TpoaGev avrov, Kal ro diddnua bia Xerpav elyev.
a; 6€ Kal mpocd:aréyorTo tots éTalpots apa
Baditon, cataBas épetdxero tov immov. tay dé
O pev TLS brodnpa ts Oa TOLovMEvOS Aehupevov ouvatrrety, o Sé imtrov apdety, 6 o 6¢ moTov xpngerv, UToherTropevor KaTA pete pov arredi8packov, ovx
oUTw TOUS TroAELLOUS, as THY éxeivou XarerornTa Sedorxores. KeYyapaypévos yap bo TOY KaKav
1 xpévois supplied by Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske.

he had a nature adapted for leadership in war and public service.

Well, then, when it was already late and he was almost despaired of, he came in from the pursuit with two or three comrades, covered with the blood of the enemies he had slain, having been, like a young hound of noble breed, carried away by the uncon- trollable pleasure of the victory. This was that Scipio who, in after times,! destroyed Carthage and Numantia, and became by far the most noble and influential Roman of his day. Thus Fortune, post- poning to another season her jealous displeasure at the great success of Aemilius, restored to him then in all completeness his pleasure in his victory.”

XXIII. But Perseus was away in flight from Pydna to Pella, since practically all his horsemen came safely off from the battle. But when his footmen overtook his horsemen, and, abusing them as cowards and traitors, tried to push them from their horses and fell to beating them, the king, afraid of the tumult, turned his horse out of the road, drew his purple robe round and held it in front of him, that he might not be conspicuous, and carried his diadem in his hands. And in order that he might also con- verse with his companions as he walked, he dis- mounted from his horse and led him along. But of these companions, one pretended that he must fasten a shoe that had become loose, another that he must water his horse, another that he himself wanted water to drink, and so they gradually lagged behind and ran away, because they had more fear of his cruelty than of the enemy. For he was lacerated

1 In 146 and 133 B.c.
3 The battle of Pydna is described by Livy in xliv. 36-41.
415

PLUTARCR'S LIVES

9 , 9 4 s + 9 @e nn A b) 4
eis wavtas eCrjre. tTpéwety ad avTov THY aitiay
THS HTTHS. eet S€ vuxTos eis IléAXav eiloerOav Eixrov nai Evdaov, trovs émi rod vopicpatos, aTavTnoavTas avuT@ nal Ta yeev éyxadodvtas
A é \ wept TaV yeyovorwy, Ta Sé mappnotalopévous
dxalpws kal aupBovrevortas opytobels dréxtet-3 N "A dt , > 4 9 LY
vev, autos TO Erdhidio maiwy audotépous, ovdeis mapépevev avt@ mapeE Evdvdpov te tod Kpnros \ 9? U A ? "A \ ray "
kat "Apyedapou Tov Aitwrov Kai tov Bowrtod Néwvos. trav &€ otpatiwtav émrnxoXovbnoav oi Kpijres, od Se evvotay, adda Tolls yYpnpacw,

w@aomep Knplos péNLTTAL, TMpoTALTApOUYTES. Tap-> 4 N bd b] > A
TONAa yap éemnyeTo, Kat Tpovenxev €E avTav
Staprdca: toils Kpynolv éxmopata kal cpatipas
Kal THY GAY év apyvp@ Kal Xpyc@ KatacKevyny els TEVTNKOVTA TANAdVTwWY AOYoV. 'yevomevos & év
"Apdimoret mparon, elt' éxetOev ev Tarn wd, xar tov poBov puxpov UravévTos, eis TO Tuyyeves Kal mpecBvTatov avTod Ta VOONMETWY, THY [LK pO-
, a e \ > 4 \ A
Aoylav, avis waeveyPeis wdvpeto apos Tovs didous as TOV "AreEavdpou tot peydAou Ypvcwpareov éua tots Kpnot Sseppipws vr' ayvoias,
\ a Kal Tapexdre Tovs éxovtas advTtBorav nai da\ ta xpvov dpelrpacOat mpos vopiopa. Tods meV OdV emicTapévous ak plBas autov ovx édabe Kpyntivov
A e \ \
ampos Kpiras, ot dé meaGévtes Kat amodovres
\ ,

ameatepnOnaav. ov yap aT@rédwxe TapyUpLoV, dNAQ Tptdxovta Tddavta Kepddvas amo TaV didwv, & pexpov Botepov Ewerdrov ot Torémioe Ar WerOat, 416

AEMILIUS PAULUS

by his misfortunes, and sought to turn the responsi- bility for his defeat away from himself and upon everybody else. He entered Pella during the night, and when Euctus and Eulaeus, his treasurers, came to meet him, and, what with their censure for what had happened and their unseasonably bold speeches and counsels, enraged him, he slew them, smiting both of them himself with his small-sword. After this no one remained with him except Evander the Cretan, Archedamus the Aetolian, and Neon the Boeotian. Of his soldiers, only the Cretans followed after him, not through good will, but because they were as devoted to his riches as bees to their honey- combs. For he was carrying along vast treasures, and had handed out from them for distribution among the Cretans drinking cups and mixing bowls and other furniture of gold and silver to a value of fifty talents. He arrived at Amphipolis first, and then from there at Galepsus, and now that his fear had abated a little, he relapsed into that congenital and oldest disease of his, namely, parsimony, and lamented to his friends that through ignorance he had suffered some of the gold plate of Alexander the Great to fall into the hands of the Cretans, and with tearful supplications he besought those who had it to exchange it for money. Now those that understood him accurately did not fail to see that he was playing the Cretan against Cretans; but those who listened to him, and gave back the plate, were cheated. For he did not pay them the money he had promised, but after craftily getting thirty talents from his friends, which his enemies were to get soon afterwards, he sailed across with them to

417
VOL. V2 E £
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pet avtav Siérrevocev eis LapoPpaxny nai dagevywv emi tovs Atooxovpous ixétevep.
XXIV. Aci prev ovv Aéyovtar hidoBacirean
Maxedoves, tore 8 as épeiopat: Kxexdacpéve
Tavrev aya ocupmecovray éyyepilovres avTous
TO Aipirio S00 juépats SANS KUptov avToy KaTéotnoay Maxedovias. xat doxei Todt paptupeiy Tois evtvyiga tii tas mpakas éexeivas yeyovévat ddcxovow. Ett 5é nai To wept Thy Ovaiay ovp-4 A > > ‘ tA “
Trwpa Satwovoy wv év “Apditrores Ovovros Tov
Aipiriov xal taV iepav evnpypévwy KEepauvos
> / bd ‘ ‘ 9 /
évoxnas ets Tov Bwpov érepreEe xai ovyxa-Onyice THY tepoupyiav. wTepBadrre 5 Oeornts mavTws Kal TUYn Ta THS Huns. jv péev yap npépa teTapTyn vevixnuév@ Llepoet arepi Ivdvav, év 5¢ 1H ‘Pop tod Sypov Gewpoivtos immxous ayavas ékaidyns évérece Aoryos Eis TO Tpw@TOV

tov Oedtpov pépos ws Aimidtos peyddy ayn vent-xnxas Ilepoéa xatactpéporto ovptacayv Maxe-Soviav. éx &€ tovrov tayd THs Pyuns avaxeopévns eis TO WARDS eEéNaprve yapa peTa xpoTtov kal Bons tHv nuépav éexeiyny Kxatacyovoa Hp TOMY. ELTA, WS O AOYOS OvK ElyeV Eis apynY
? a , 3 > 9 aA e , 5) Ul
averOeiy BeBatov, aXX €v Tac opoiws epaiveto mTraAVa@pLEVvOS, TOTE pev eoxeddaOn Kai Steppin Ta
A 4 bd / + @ @ A 4
Tis dnuns, ordLyas 8 batepov Huépars mud opevor
capas Cavpafov tiv mpodpayodoav ayyeniap, e 3 le! 4 N 3 9
ws év T@ wevder TO adnOés ceive.
418

Samothrace, where he took refuge as a suppliant in the temple of the Dioscuri.

XXIV. Now, the Macedonians are always said to have been lovers of their kings, but at this time, feeling that their prop was shattered and all had fallen with it, they put themselves into the hands of Aemilius, and in two days made him master of all Macedonia. And this would seem to bear witness in favour of those who declare that these achieve- ments of his were due to a rare good fortune. And still further, that which befell him at his sacrifice was a token of divine favour. When, namely, Aemilius was sacrificing in Amphipolis, and the sacred rites were begun, a thunderbolt darted down upon the altar, set it on fire, and consumed the sacrifice with it. But an altogether more signal instance of divine favour and good fortune is seen in the way the rumour of his victory spread. For it was only the fourth day after Perseus had been defeated at Pydna, and at Rome the people were watching equestrian contests, when suddenly a report sprang up at the entrance of the theatre that Aemilius had conquered Perseus in a great battle and reduced all Macedonia. After this the rumour spread quickly among the multitude, and joy burst forth, accompanied by shouts and clapping of hands, and prevailed in the city all that day. Then, since the story could not be traced to any sure source, but seemed to be current everywhere alike, for the time being the rumour vanished into thin air ; but when, a few days afterwards, they were clearly informed of the matter, they were astonished at the tidings which had reached them first, seeing that in the fiction there was truth.

XXV. Aéyeras 5€ Kal ris él Zaypa trorape@

lA b “ > \ J , payns “Itadiwtav avOnpepov év Tedorovynce Novo yevéoOar, xal TIhatasaot tis év Muxarn N / é \, ¢ nw , N
apos Mydous. fv 5é ‘Pwpaior Tapxuvious peta Aativoy émictpatevoarras évixnaay, avtayyerot dpalovres whOncayv aio tod otpaTod puKpov tatepov avdopes dv0 Kado Kal peyadot. TovToUs 2 elxacay elvat Atocxovpous. o 8 évtuy@v mpaTos avtois Kat’ ayopay mpo THS KPNVYNS, avarvyouvar Tous immous LOp@Tt TOAAM Tepippeopuevous, eOav-
\ ‘ A , , 9° e \
pale Tov mept THS viKns Noyov. E€10 oF pev ért-Waitcat Néyovta: THs vanvns avTod Tolv yepoiv atpéua pediavress 7 8 edOds éx pedaivns Tptyos els Tuppav petaBadovoa TO pév NOY TioTLV, TO & avipl wapacyeiy érixrnow tov ’AnvoBapBor, Step éott YadxoTwywva. aot S€ tovToLs TO 3 Kal’ Huds yevopevoy miatiw Tapécyev. STE yap
? , > A A \ A ‘
Avrevios atréotn Aopetiavov Kal TroXvs TroAELosS
amd Teppavias mpocedoxato, THs “Pans tapat-Tomevns advw Kat adtoudtws o Sijpos é& attod
dnunv avédwxe vixns, kal tHv “Poyny érédpape ANOyos avTov Te TOV ’AvT@VLOY avnpncBat Kat TOD ovY aUT@ oTpaTevpatos HTTHMEvou pndev pépos
a 4 A 7 4 e”
NerelPOat. TocavtTyny Sé AaumpoTnta Kal prynv
4H TloTls éoxev Bate Kal Odcat tov év téres
4 moAAous. Cntoupévou Sé Tod mpwtou dpacarTos,
1 A battle between the Locrians and Crotoniats, at some time in the sixth century B.o.
420

AEMILIUS PAULUS

XXV. It is said also that a report of the battle fought by the Italian Greeks at the river Sagra! reached Peloponnesus on the same day, and so did that of the battle with the Medes at Mycale come on the same day to Plataea.?, And when the Romans conquered the Tarquins, who had taken the field against them with the Latins, two tall and beautiful men were seen at Rome a little while after, who brought direct tidings from the army. These were conjectured to be the Dioscuri. The first man who met them in front of the spring in the forum, where they were cooling their horses, which were reeking with sweat, was amazed at their report of the victory. Then, we are told, they touched his beard with their hands, quietly smiling the while, and the hair of it was changed at once from black to red, a circumstance which gave credence to their story, and fixed upon the man the surname of Ahenobarbus, that is to say, Bronze-beard. And all this is made credible by that which has happened in our time. When, namely, Antonius was in revolt from Domitian,‘ and a great war was expected from Germany, and Rome was in commotion, suddenly and spontaneously the people of their own accord spread abroad a report of a victory, and a story coursed through Rome that Antonius himself had been slain, and that of his defeated army not a portion was left alive. Belief in the story became so strong and distinct that many of the magistrates actually offered sacrifices. When, however, the author of the story was sought, none

2 It was when the Greeks at Mycale were about to attack the Persians that a rumour came to them of the victory of the Greeks at Plataea over Mardonius (Herodotus, ix. 100). 3 See the Coriolanus, iii. 4. * In 9] a.v.

ws ovdels jv, GAN o Aoryos els AANOov EF AANOV Stwxopevos avépevye, xal tédXos Katabvs Wore pe ¥ p 9 li ? NX ‘ ” w b] 4 els TéNayOS axaves TOV ATreLpov OYrOV Eedhavn
, 3 ‘ 4 , (4 \ e 4
pndeuiav apxnyv éyov BeBaiov, aitn pév 7 hynun
Tayv THs odkews eLeppvn, topevopevm dé TH
Aopetiav® peta dvvapews emi roy toXeLov Hon
9 @QN 9 , \ , , \
xa’ odov ayyeMa kai ypdppata dpavorta tiv
vicny anmnvtncev. 7 8 avtod! tod KatopOwparos nuépa Kal THs nuns eyivero, ert mréov 7 Siopv-plous otadiovs TOY TOTwY StecTHTwY. TadTa pev ovdels ayvoet Tay Kal? Huas.

XXVI. Tvaios 5€ "OxtdBios 6 vavapyay AimiArt@ mpocoppicdpevos tH LapoOpaxn tHv pev acvriay wrapetye TH Ilepcet da Tovs Deovs, éxtrAou 5€ Kal guys eipyev. ov py adda Rar-Gave. tas 6 Ilepceds "Opodvdnv twa Kpira
NéuBov éxovta cuptreicas peta Ypnudtwv ava-NaBeiy avrov. o S€ KpnTicLe XpNnodpevos Ta pev Xpnpata viKTwp avédaBev, éxeivoy Sé Tis érépas vuxtos few Kedevoas él Tov mpos TO Anpntpip Apéva peta TOV Téxvwv Kal OepaTreias
P / IA\ 229 © , > © 8
avaykaias, evOus ad' éorrépas atrémrevcev. 6 Se Ilepvevs ointpda pev rracye S1a otevis Oupisdos mapa TO Telyos éxunpvopevos avTov Kal tadia cal yuvaixa Tovey Kal mans aTreEipous, olKTpO-tatoyv d¢ otevaypov adjxev, Os TIS aUT@ Trayopevm wapa Tov aiytadov On TeAdytov Tov
1 abrot Bekker adopts Reiske's correction to avrh.
422
269

AEMILIUS PAULUS

could be found, but it eluded all pursuit from one man to another, and finally disappeared in the limit- less throng, as in a yawning sea, and was seen to have no sure source. This rumour, then, quickly melted away in the city ; but when Domitian was setting out with an army for the war and was already on the march, messages and letters announcing the victory came to meet him.! And the success itself was gained on the day when the rumour of it came to Rome, although the distance between the places was more than twenty thousand furlongs. These facts are known to every one of our time.

XXVI. But to resume, Gnaeus Octavius, the admiral of Aemilius, came to anchor off Samothrace, and while he allowed Perseus to enjoy asylum, out of respect to the gods, he took means to prevent him from escaping by sea. However, Perseus some- how succeeded in persuading a certain Cretan named Oroandes, the owner of a small skiff, to take him on board with his treasures. So Oroandes, true Cretan that he was, took the treasures aboard by night, and after bidding Perseus to come during the following night to the harbour adjoining the Demetrium, with his children and necessary atten- dants, as soon as evening fell sailed off. Now, Perseus suffered pitifully in letting himself down through a narrow window in the fortress, together with his wife and little children, who were un- acquainted with wandering and hardships; but, most pitiful of all was the groan he gave when some one told him, as he wandered along the shore, that he had seen Oroandes already out at sea and under full

1 Antonius did not get the help he expected from German auxiliaries, and was defeated by Appius Norbanus.

3 'Opodavinv Béovta xatidov Eppacevy, vTréNapTeE yap npuépa, cal maans édrridos Epnuos Urexw@per huyh mpos To tTetyos, ov AaOwy pév, UTOPOacas dé tovs 'Pwpaious, peta THS yuvatkos. Ta Sé maidia avdd\aBov avtois "Iwy éveyeipicev, 5s
mdvat pev épwopevos jv tod Ilepcéws, tore b€ MpoOOTNS YEvouevos aitiay Tapéaxe THY padtorTa cuvavayxacacay tov avOpwrov, as Onpiov ars-cKopmévwv TOV TéxvwV, els yelpas EAOciY Kal mapabovval TO c@pa TOS ExeivwY KpaTovaL. - 4 'Enioteve pév ody pddtota TO Naotnd, xaxeivov éxadeu' pu) Trapovtos b¢ KataxNavaas THV TUynY Kal THY avdayKny Tepioxelrdpevos ESwxev avtoyv btroxelprov TO Tvaim, ToTe pddtora trowncas pavepov ote THS pirapyupias Hy ev avT@ ti Kakov ayevvertepov 7 dirowuyta, du' hv, 6 povov
) TUXN TOV eTTALKOTWY ovK AdhalpeEiTat, TOV
5 éNeov, aTeaTtépnoev éavTov. Senfeis yap axyOjvar mpos Tov Aipiriov, 6 wey ws avdpl peyddo TeTTH-KOTL TT@pA veyeontov Kal dvaTuxes eEavactas imnvTa peta Ttav didrcwv Sedaxpupévos: o 8, aicyictov Oéapya, rpoBarwv avtov éml ctopa Kal
yovatayv Spakdpevos aveBddXeTO havas ayevrvets
6 kat Senoets, as ovN vréperver ovd Hrovoev 6
Aiptdtos, dAAa TpoaBré Was avdtov adryobvTt Kal AeAuTnLErP TH Mpocwor@, "Ti THs TvYNS," elrrev, '@ Taraitwpe, TO péyrotov adatpels TeV éyxAnpdtwv, tadta mpdttwv ad' ov Soke ov nap atiav atuyxelv, ovdé Tod viv, AAA TOU drat sail. For day was beginning to dawn, and so, bereft of every hope, he fled back to the fortress with his wife, before the Romans could prevent him, though they saw him. His children were seized and delivered to the Romans by lon, who of old had been a favourite of Perseus, but now became his betrayer, and furnished the most compelling reason for his coming, as a wild beast will do when its young have been captured, and surrendering himself to those who had them in their power.

Accordingly, having most confidence in Nasica, he called for him; but since Nasica was not there, after bewailing his misfortune and carefully weighing the necessity under which he lay, he gave himself into the power of Gnaeus, thus making it most abund- antly clear that his avarice was a less ignoble evil than the love of life that was in him, and that led him to deprive himself of the only thing which Fortune cannot take away from the fallen, namely, pity. For when at his request he was brought to Aemilius, Aemilius saw in him a great man whose fall was due to the resentment of the gods and his own evil fortune, and rose up and came to meet him, accompanied by his friends, and with tears in his eyes; but Perseus, a most shameful sight, after throwing himself prone before him and then clasping his knees, broke out into ignoble cries and supplications. These Aemilius could not abide and would not hear; but looking upon him with a distressed and sorrowful countenance, said : ‘‘ Why, wretched man, dost thou free Fortune from thy strongest indictment against her, by conduct which will make men think that thy misfortunes are not undeserved, and that thy former prosperity,

Saiuovos avakios yeyovévar; ti dé pov Kata-Barras tHv vinny, cal To KatopOwpa roteis puxpov, ETrLOELKVUBEVOS €avTov ov yevvaiov ovdé
m peTovTa ‘Pepatov avTayover Thy ; a eT) TOL dvatuxodar eyaanu ever potpay ai ods Kat
Tapa Tmoheptots, Sethia | é ‘Pwpaiows, cay eviro-
TUN, TWAVTNH aTiwoTaTov.”
XXVII. Od pay adda TOdTOV pev dvacTnoas Kal beFraa duevos TovBépwve Trapedwxen, avTos be TOUS maibas kal tovs yapBpous cal TOV adXNov TYE HOULKD padiora TOUS vewrépous érw THs oKNVTS emia Tag dpevos TONY Xpovov ay 7 pos aut clo] Kadjpevos, DOTE Oavpdtew a admavTas.
opunaas 58 Tept THS TOXNS Kal TOV avOpwrriver braréyerOar Tpayywaroy, ‘ ‘"Apa ye ” elarev, “ aEtov eum paryias Tapovons avOpwroy a ovTa OpaciverBar kal péya ppoveiv EO vos) ToAwW 7 Bactretav KaTarTpeapevov, h THY petaBodny TavTny Tijs ruxns, 1 mapddeaypa TO TodepoovTe KOWhs ao Oeveias mpoGeica maidever pndey ws povipov kal BéBatov Scavoeicban; Totos yap avOpw@rots Tov Oappeiv Katpos, Gray TO Kpareiv érépav pddora dedorxévar THY toxny avaryKatn, Kat TO xaipovre duc Gupiay émaryn TOTAUTHY O) THS Teptpepopmerns Kal T™pocta Tapevns GAXor adrXots elwappuerns Loyes Hos; n thv “AreEavdpouv d:a-SoxnY, bs emt TeloTov npOn Suvdpews kal

peéytoTov éaxe KpaTos, @pas pas Hopi mecovaay
ume Todas Oéuevot, Kai TOS apTL puplace TEelOV
1 +s tuxns, } so Sintenis!, Coraés, and Bekker, with the MSS.: 4 rdx7n.
426

rather than thy present lot, was beyond thy deserts ?
And why dost thou depreciate my victory, and make my success a meagre one, by showing thyself no noble or even fitting antagonist for Romans? Valour in the unfortunate obtains great reverence even among their enemies, but cowardice, in Roman eyes, even though it meet with success, is in every way a most dishonourable thing."

XXVII. Notwithstanding his displeasure, he raised Perseus up, gave him his hand, and put him in charge of Tubero, while he himself drew his sons, his sons- in-law, and of the other officers especially the younger men, into his tent, where for a long time he sat in silent communion with himself, so that all wondered. Then he began to discourse of Fortune and of human affairs, saying: "Is it, then, fitting that one who is mortal should be emboldened when success comes to him, and have high thoughts because he has subdued a nation, or a city, or a kingdom ? or should his thoughts dwell rather on this reversal of fortune, which sets before the warrior an illustration of the weakness that is common to all men, and teaches him to regard nothing as stable or safe? For what occasion have men to be confident, when their con- quest of others gives them most cogent reason to be in fear of Fortune, and when one who exults in' success is thrown, as I am, into great dejection by reflecting upon the allotments of Fate, which take a circling course, and fall now upon some and now upon others? Or, when the succession of Alex- ander, who attained the highest pinnacle of power and won the greatest might, has fallen in the space of a single hour and has been put beneath your feet, or when you see kings who but just now

427

kad yididow irméwy TocavTats oTAOpopoupmevous Bactrels opaytes ex TOV TroAELioY yeLpav édn-Hepa oitia xal toTd NapBadvovtas, olecBe T
Kal" pas eye Twa BeBaotnta tuyns SvapKA
Mpos TOV Xpovov; ov KaTtaBaXrovTes pets ot véot
TO Kevoyv Ppvaypya TovTO Kal yaupiapa THs vicns raTrewol catamrTnEeTe Tmpos TO péAXOV, Gel Kapa-Soxobvres eis 6 TL KaTaTKN WEL TéXOS EXATTH THV
THs Tapovons evrrpayias o Saipov véweorw;" ToavTad pact moAda SiarexOévta tov Aipidsov atroTréuyyat TOUS véouvs ev pada TO KaUYn pa, kat

thy UBpw, wowep YadLve, TO AY KoTTOVTL KeKONAG LEVOUS.
XXVIII. "Ex rovtov rnv pev orpariay mpos dvatravowv, autov 5é mpos Oéav tis “EXXdbos érpewe xal Staywynv évdofov dua nal giravOpo-Tov. émiwy yap averauBave tors Sdypous Kal Ta TodtTevpata Kabiatato, Kal Swpeds édidou, tats pev attov éx tod BaciWsxod, tais § éXatov.
TocoUTov yap evpeOfvai hacw arroKeipevoy Marte
Tous NapBavovtas ab Seouévous emedeTretv apo-Tepov 7 KatavadwOjvat To TAHOOS TaY ebpeHév-tov. év 6é Aerdois idav nlova péyay TeTpdyovov
éx NiOwv NevKOV TUT PHOG MEVOY, éf’ ov Tlepoéws euedre Ypucovs dvdptas tiPecOat, rpocétake tov
avrov TeOHvat: Tovs yap NTTHMEéVOUS TOIs VIK@COLW
eEiatacbat ywopas mpoonkeav. ev § ‘Odvpuria todTo 67 TO ToAvOpvAnTOY éxeivoy avadbéyea-cOai hac, ws Tov ‘Ounjpov Ala PDedSias arro-mracatto. tav & Séka tmpéoRewv éx ‘Pouns adpixouévwv Maxedoor pev arédwxe thy yopav 428

were surrounded by so many myriads of infantry and thousands of cavalry, receiving from their enemy’s hands the food and drink requisite for the day, can you suppose that we ourselves have any guarantee from Fortune that will avail against the attacks of time? Abandon, then, young men, this empty insolence and pride of victory, and take a humble posture as you confront the future, always expectant of the time when the Deity shall at last launch against each one of you his jealous displeasure at your present prosperity.” Many such words were uttered by Aemilius, we are told, and he sent the young men away with their vainglorious insolence and pride well curbed by his trenchant speech, as by a bridle.

XXVIII. After this, he gave his army a chance to rest, while he himself went about to see Greece, occupying himself in ways alike honourable and humane. For in his progress he restored the popular governments and established their civil polities ; he also gave gifts to the cities, to some grain from the royal stores, to others oil. For it is said that so great stores. were found laid up that petitioners and receivers failed before the abundance discovered was exhausted. At Delphi, he saw a tall square pillar composed of white marble stones, on which a golden statue of Perseus was intended to stand, and gave orders that his own statue should be set there, for it was meet that the conquered should make room for their conquerors. And at Olympia, as they say, he made that utterance which is now in every mouth, that Pheidias had moulded the Zeus of Homer. When the ten commissioners arrived from Rome, he restored to the Macedonians their country

kal Tas trodes édevOépas oixeiy Kai avTovopous, éxatov 5é taXavra 'Pwpaiols vTroredciv, ob mréoV
h SumAdatov tots Bactredowv eicépepov. Oéas Sé javrodanayv aywovev Kat Ovaias émiTredo@v Tos Oeois éctidcers Kai Seitrva ampovbeto, yopnyia
' 9 aA A bd A , Ul
pev éx tov Bacitixav afore ypapevos, Tak
5é¢ kal Koopov Kai KatakXices Kal deEtooes Kal
THv mpos Exactov avTod THs Kar akiav tints kal ptroppocvyns aicOnow ottws axpiBn Kai meppovticpévny evdecxvipevos wote Oavpatew tous "EAAnvas, e& pndé tHv Tadidv dpotpov J 4 o} > \ A , atroAeiTret o7rovdns, GAAA THALKADTA TpdTTwY
aynp TpayuaTa Kal Tols pixpois TO TpéTOV arro-
, € \ , v eo A Sidwatv. o 5é nal tovtow Eyatpev, Ste TOAK@Y mapecKevac pévov Kal AapTpPaY 76 Hdto Tov avTos
qv atoAavopa Kal Oéapa Tots trapovat, Kal mpos
\ 4 \ b A A
tous Oavydtovras tiv émipérderav Ereye Tijs
aitis elvat uyns tapardfews te mpoothvat
Karas Kal cuptrociou, Ths pév, brrws hoBepwrdry
Tots ToAEpiols, TOD 8, WS EvYapLaTOTATOY H Tots
A bd \ b] > ce) A > , auvovaw. ovdevds & Hrrov avtod tiv édevOepto-
\ / > / ©

TnTa Kal THY peyadoWvylay émrnvovy ot avOpw-Wot, TOAY pev apyuptov, TOAD dé ypuatov éx TOV
Baciuxdv nOpotopévoy ovd ideiv eOedncavtos,
9 a , ? \ 4 4
GAXA Tois Tapas ets TO Snpooloy TapadoyTos.
pova ta BiBAia Tod Baciréws diroypaypatovat

Trois uiéow émétpeev éEerécOa, cal Sravéuwv 430
AEMILIUS PAULUS

and their cities for free and independent residence ; they were also to pay the Romans a hundred talents _in tribute, a sum less than half of what they used to pay to their kings. He also held all sorts of games and contests and performed sacrifices to the gods, at which he gave feasts and banquets, making liberal allowances therefor from the royal treasury, while in the arrangement and ordering of them, in saluting and seating his guests, and in paying to each one that degree of honour and kindly attention which was properly his due, he showed such nice and thoughtful perception that the Greeks were amazed, seeing that not even their pastimes were treated by him with neglect, but that, although he was a man of such great affairs, he gave even to trifling things their due attention. And he was also delighted to find that, though preparations for entertainment were ever so many and splendid, he himself was the pleasantest sight to his guests and gave them most enjoyment; and he used to say to those who wondered at his attention to details that the same spirit was required both in marshal- ling a line of battle and in presiding at a banquet well, the object being, in the one case, to cause most terror in the enemy, in the other, to give most pleasure to the company. But more than anything else men praised his freedom of spirit and his greatness of soul; for he would not con- sent even to look upon the quantities of silver and the quantities of gold that were gathered together from the royal treasuries, but handed them over to the quaestors for the public chest. It was only the books of the king that he allowed his sons, who were devoted to learning, to choose out for

431

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

apioreta THS payns Airio TouPéport ™? yauBpp
didrnyv ewe trévte der pév onKTY. obTOs éore TovBépwy dv paper pETa ouryyevav oixely éx-Kaidéxaror, amo yndtov pixpod Scatpepopevery andyrav. Kat Tp@Tov dpyupov éxeivov pacw eis TOV Aidiov olxoy elaenOety, vr aperis eal Tins Eeloayouevoy, TOV .. addov Xpovov ob avTovs ovTe Tas yuvaixas! apyupiov ypnlev 7
vgou.
XXIX. Aroxnpévov dé TaVvTOV avT@ Kaos domacdpevos tovs “EAAnvas, Kal mapaKarécas tous Makxedovas penvicbar ris Sedopevns vo ‘Popaiwr erevdepias catovtas avrny ds’ evvopias Kal opovoias, avétevEev érl ryyv “Harecpoy, eXov Soypa ovyKhyTov TOUS TUMPEMAN TLEVOUS
auT@ THY 7 pos Iepoea payny OTPATLOTAS amro TOY éxel TroNCwy OhErToat. BovAopevos 5é racw dpa kal pndevos mpoa SoxavTos, arr’ éEaihuns €TiTEg ei, METETEULAPATO TOUS TPWTOUS eE éxdarns

TOAEWS avd pas déxa, Kal mpooeratev avrois, 5a0¢ dpryupos éott Kal Xpuaes ev oixials Kal tepois, nMepg puta Karapéper. éxdatous bé ouvemepypev
@s én' avto 67 TOUTO dpoupay oT pATLOT OY kat takiapxov T pom ovovpevov Snreiv Kat Taparap-Bavew TO Xpuatov. evotdans TIS ne pas, Dp' é&va kal Tov avTov dua Karpov opyncartes
éTpatrovTo Tpos KaTadpouny Kal Svaprrayny TOV TOAEWY, WATE WPA pla TevTexaidexa avOpwrov
ékav8par odio 8 fvat pupiddas, éEBdounnovta dé mores tropOnOjvat, yevea Bat & ao TOTAUTAS pbopas i a éxdoT@ OTpATLOTN THY 1 rds yuvaixas Bekker, after Reiske: yuvaixas.

=7

themselves, and when he was distributing rewards for valour in the battle, he gave Aelius Tubero, his son-in-law, a bowl of five pounds weight. This was the Tubero, who, as I have said,! dwelt with fifteen relations, and a paltry farm supported them all. _ And that is said to have been the first silver that ever entered the house of the Aelii, brought in as an honour bestowed upon valour, but up to that time neither they themselves nor their wives used either silver or gold.

XXIX. When he had put everything in good order, had bidden the Greeks farewell, and had exhorted the Macedonians to be mindful of the freedom bestowed upon them by the Romans and preserve it by good order and concord, he marched against Epirus, having an order from the senate to give the soldiers who had fought with him the battle against Perseus the privilege of pillaging the cities there. Wishing to set upon the inhabitants all at once and suddenly, when no one expected it, he sent for the ten principal men of each city, and ordered them to bring in on a fixed day whatever silver and gold they had in their houses and temples. He also sent with each of these bodies, as if for this very purpose, a guard of soldiers and an officer, who pretended to search for and receive the money. But when the appointed day came, at one and the same time these all set out to overrun and pillage the cities, so that in a single hour a hundred and fifty thousand persons were made slaves, and seventy cities were sacked ; and yet from all this destruction and utter ruin each soldier received no more than 1 Chapter v. 4.

Soot ov peilov evdexa Spaypav, ppiéas 5¢ ravtas
avOpwrrovs TO Tov TrOAEMOU TEXOS, Els [LLKPOV OUT@
N 9 (4 An 4 Ww 4
To Kal’ Exactov Anupa Kal Képdos EOvous Grou KaTaKxeppatiabevtos.
XXX. Aipirsos pév oty TovT0 mpdkéas paduiocta
Tapa THy avrov hvaow émienh cal ypnotHny ovoav
> 9 N 4 > Cad > 9 , \
ets Opixov xateBn: xaxeiOev eis ‘Iradiay pera
tov Suvayewv meparwbels dvérrAe Tov BvSpiv ToTapov emt tHS BactdtKns Exxatdexnpous KaTe-oKevacpevns eis KOTpov STrAOLS aixyparwTols Kai ghowixiot kal troppupats, ws xal tavnyupivew EEwOev xabarrep eis Tiva OptapSinns Oéav roumis
Kal mpoaTroNavelv Tovs Pwpaious, TO polio oxeé-Snv brayovts thy vaby avtimapeEayovtas.
O: 8é otpatri@trat Tois BaciiKots yphpacww
b / e > ef 9¢/ v
éropGarmicartes, ws ox Sowv nkiovy éervyor, apyifovTo pév adjraws ba TovTO Kal yareTas 9 N N > + > 4 A A elyov mpos Tov Atuinov, aitimpevor S€ pavepas drt Bapus yévoito nal SeorroriKds avrois dpywv, ov tavu mpoOvpws ert thy bTép tod OptduBov
omovony anynvrncav. ataBopevos 5é Todt Lép-Bios Taras, éxyOpos Aipursov, yeyovas 8¢ tav br avrov yidapywv, eOdppnoev avadavéov eitreiy
e 2 / ¥ \ 4 > \
@s ov Soréov ein Tov OpiaywBov. évels 5é roAXds
T® oTpatiwtixn@® TAGE SuaBoras Kata Tov atpatnyoo kal tiv ovcay opyny Ett pad2Xov
> , 9 A A 4 bd
éfepeOicas 7Teiro mapa tev Snudpywv addnv
npepav’ éexeivny yap ov é€apKely tH xaTnyopia, téacapas éTt AotTas wpas Eyovoav. Tav sé 434

eleven drachmas as his share, and all men shuddered
at the issue of the war, when the division of a whole nation’s substance resulted in so slight a gain and profit for each soldier.
XXX. Aemilius, then, after executing a commission so contrary to his mild and generous nature, went down to Oricus. From there he crossed into Italy with his forces, and sailed up the river Tiber on the royal galley, which had sixteen banks of oars and was richly adorned with captured arms and cloths of scarlet and purple, so that the Romans actually came in throngs from out the city, as it were to some spectacle of triumphant progress whose pleasures they were enjoying in advance, and followed along the banks as the splashing oars sent the ship slowly up the stream.

But the soldiers, who had cast longing eyes upon the royal treasures, since they had not got as much as they thought they deserved, were secretly en- raged on this account and bitterly disposed towards Aemilius, while openly they accused him of having been harsh and imperious in his command of them; they were therefore not very ready to second his eager desires for a triumph. And when Servius Galba, who was an enemy of Aemilius, although he had been one of his military tribunes, perceived this, he made bold to declare openly that the triumph ought not to be allowed him. He also sowed many calumnies against their general among the masses of the soldiery, and roused still further the resentment they already felt, and then asked the tribunes of the people for another day in which to bring his accusations, since that day was not sufficient, of which only four hours still remained. But when dnpdpyov héyery aurov, ef te Bovnderaz, xehev- ovtwv, apEdpevos pape Kai Bracdnuias € eEXovTE mavroban as ypjobat oye TOV Xpovov avnhoce THS npepas: Kal yevopevou TKOTOUS ot pev b7}- papxot THY éxxdyo lav agdjxav, mpos dé Tov ParBav oi OTpaTiaTaL cuvédpapov Opacutepos yeyovotes, xal suvyxpoTnoapres avrous wept Tov GpOpov avs catahapSdvovras to KarerwXov- éxel yap ot Snuapyo. thy éxxAnolay Eueddov a£euv.

XXXI. "Apa S TpEPS Ths Wgpouv Sodeons F Te Tparn pur Tov OplapBov areynpitero, Kat TOU TpPayHaTos aicOnaors eis TOV Gd)ov O7jpov Kal TH ovyKAnTov Kate. Kar TO pev TAH os Umeparyoiv T@ mponnraxiver Bat Tov Aipirsoy € ev pevais qv am paKrous, ob bé yeptporarot TOY amo Bours Sevov elvat TO yevopevoy Boavres adAnhovs mapexdovy émraBéobat THS «TOV oTpaTL@TaY do edyeias Kal Spacvrntos, emt way agiEoperns dvopov Epyov cal Biaov, et pndev

éurroday avTois yévouo Tladrov Aipirsov apenccat Trav émiixioy Timor. Go dpevor dé roy éxdov Kai dvaBdvres a9 poor Tois Snudpyors éXe-ryov emia xe THY ynpopopiar, axpu ay beA Bway
a Bovdovras qpos 70 TArHGOS. emia XOvT@V dé TavTOV Kal yevopevns CLOTHS ave Gov avnp
UTATLKOS cal mohepious elxoot Kal Tpels éx ™ po-KANTEwWS aYNPNKAS, Mdpxos LepBirsos, Aipidsov pev épn Ilavaop, HAlKos avToKpaTop yévorro, viv padiota YylLvMOKELD, opav bons aneBeias ‘yeuovTt Kal Kakias oTpatevpats ypwpevos oTw Karas 436

the tribunes ordered him to speak, if he had anything to say, he began a speech which was long and full of all sorts of injurious statements, and so consumed the time remaining in the day. When darkness came, the tribunes dissolved the assembly,
but the soldiers, now grown bolder, flocked to Galba, formed themselves into a faction, and before it was light proceeded to take possession of the Capitol ;
for it was there that the tribunes proposed to hold the assembly.

XXXI. As soon as it was day the voting began, and the first tribe was voting against the triumph, when knowledge of the matter was brought down to the rest of the people and the senate. The multitude, deeply grieved at the indignity offered to Aemilius, could only cry out against it in vain; but the most prominent senators, with shouts against the ignominy of the thing, exhorted one another to attack the bold license of the soldiers, which would proceed to any and every deed of lawlessness and violence if nothing were done to prevent their depriving Aemilius Paulus of the honours of his victory. Then pushing their way through the | throng and going up to the Capitol in a body, they told the tribunes to put a stop to the voting until they could finish what they wished to say to the people. All voting stopped, silence was made, and Marcus Servilius, a man of consular dignity, and one who had slain twenty-three foes in single combat, came forward and said that he knew now better than ever before how great a commander Aemilius Paulus was, when he saw how full of baseness and disobedience the army was which he had used in the successful accomplishment of such great and

437

Kataplwce Kal peyddas wpakes, Javpdferv dé 279
Tov Ofjpov el Tois am TAAUpiay Kat Auyvor ayanNopevos OprapBors avr pOovei tov Ma-

xedovwy Baciriéa CovTa Kal THY ‘AdeEdvdpov Kal Pirinrov bofay émidety Ud Tois ‘Popatov
dm ows dryomevny aixpddortov. “TI@s yap ov Sewvov,” elrrev, “e, Piyns mepl pirens aBeBatou ™ poTEpov els THY TONW éumecovans, educate Tots Geots EUXOMEVOL TOU NOyou TovTOV TaYéws aTroNa-Beiv THY ow, HKovTos O€ TOU oTpatnyob pera THS arn Ouwijs viKNS apatpeiobe Tav pev Oeay thy TL LHD, aura 5é ty Xapdy, ws poBovpevor bea-cac8at To péyeBos TOY KaTopOwudtov i] petdo-pevor TOD Tone pO ; KatTot Kpeit Tov hy TO 7 pos
exetvov ehép, pn TO T™ pos avToxpatopa, bPovep AvOAvat TOV OpiapBov. aX’ els TOTaUTND, " én,
TO xkaxonbes éEovciay mpodyetat St’ pov wate mepl otpatnylas Kal bpudpBov TONUG eyetv
avO pwros aT pwTos Kal TO TowaTe otthBov vmo AEeLoTNT Os Kal ox.atpapias ™ pos npas TOUS TOCOU-
TOLS TPAvLAce memratbevjevous dperas Kal Kaxias Kpivety aTpaTayav. dpa 5é Tis éo Ofjros duaoXwY éEednve kata TOV oTépvaY OTELAAS aniatous
TO TAHOos. elra petaotpadels Gia THY ovK
EUT PETTOS év by yupvobabar Soxow tev Tou TWMATOS davexahue, Kab m pos TOV T'd\fav émrtie Sup “do per,” én, “yedds ei rovras, érya o¢ TEpvovopat pos TOUS moniTas vmép Tov-TOV yp nuépav Kat vUKTA TUvEX OS tarmac duevos TavuT éo ov. Grr’ aye NaBwv avtous émi THY Wipov éyo Sé cataBas mrapaxorovdia Tat,
Kal yvaoouar Tovs KaKovs Kal axapiorous Kat 438

AEMILIUS PAULUS

fair exploits ; and he was amazed that the people, while exulting in triumphs over TIllyrians and Ligurians, begrudged itself the sight of the king of Macedonia taken alive and the glory of Alexander and Philip made spoil by Roman arms. “For is it not a strange thing,’ said he, “that when an unsubstantial rumour of victory came suddenly and prematurely to the city, you sacrificed to the gods and prayed that this report might speedily be veri- fied before your eyes ; but now that your general is come with his real victory, you rob the gods of their honour, and yourselves of your joy in it, as though afraid to behold the magnitude of his successes, or seeking to spare the feelings of your enemy? And yet it were better that out of pity towards him, and not out of envy towards your general, the triumph should be done away with. But,” said he, “to such great power is malice brought by you that a man without a wound to show, and whose person is sleek from delicate and cowardly effeminacy, dares to talk about the conduct of a general and his triumph to us who have been taught by all these wounds to judge the valour and the cowardice of generals.’ And with the words he parted his gar- ment and displayed upon his breast an incredible number of wounds. Then wheeling about, he un- covered some parts of his person which it is thought unbecoming to have naked in a crowd, and turning to Galba, said: “ Thou laughest at these scars, but I glory in them before my fellow-citizens, in whose defence I got them, riding night and day without ceasing. But come, take these people off to their voting ; and I will come down and follow along with them all, and will learn who are base and thankless

439

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

SnpaywyeiaOar warXov év Tois ToAgmoLS } OTpPAtnyeic Oar Bovopévous.” XXXII. Odtw gacly id THY AOywr TOvTwY dvaxorhnvat Kal petaBareiy TO oTpatiwTiKoV @aoTe Tacats Tals pudais émixupwOnvar TH At-prio tov OpiapBov. meupOivar S avtov otTw Néyouow. o pev Shmos ev te Tois iwmixols Oed-Tpows, & Kipxovs xandodot, epi te THY ayopay ixpta wnEdpevos, Kal TaAXNA THS TrorEwWS pépN KataraBovtes, ws Exacta Tapelye THS TouTAS érroyriv, eBe@vtTo Kabapais éoOfot Kexoomnpevot.
mas 6€ vaos avéwxto Kal oreddvev cal Oupiapa-TOV HY TANPNS, UTNpETAaL TE TOAAOL Kal paBOSovopoe TOUS aTaKTWS GUppéovTas eis TO pécoY Kal Siaéovtas é£eipyovtes dvatentapévas Tas odovs cal xaOapas trapetyov. tis 5é wopmijs eis Hpépas Tpeis VEvELNMEVS, n pev T porn pos éfapxecaca
Tots aixparwtos avdptaot Kal ypadais «cai KoNocaols él Cevyav mevtnxovra kai Ssaxociwv xopelopévos Tovtwy éxye Oéav. HS totepaia Ta KaANCTA Kal ToAUTeXMoTaTa TOY Make-Sovxav OtwY eréwreto ToAKAIS apakats, aUTA
A /

TE PappLaipovTAa YArAK@ veoopynnT@ Kal odypo, thy te Oéow ex téyvns Kal cuvappoyhs ws i paduora ouprredpopnpevors VvdSny Kal avTopdTas €oixot tTemonueva, Kpadyn pos aoricat nai Oo-paces éml xynyuiot, cal Kpnrixal mértar xal @paxia yéppa nai hapérpar peta inmixav avape-pypévat Karwar, cal Eidn yusrda dia TovTov TapavioxovTa kal odpioat Taparennyvial, cvp-HETpov eXOVvTWY YddNacLa TOV STAwY, wate THY mpos GAAnra Kpotow év TH StapépecOa tpayxv 440 and prefer to be wheedled and flattered in war rather _ than commanded.”

XXXII. This speech, they tell us, so rebuffed the soldiery and changed their minds that the triumph was voted to Aemilius by all the tribes. And it was conducted,' they say, after the following fashion. The people erected scaffoldings in the theatres for equestrian contests, which they call circuses, and round the forum, occupied the other parts of the city which afforded a view of the procession, and witnessed the spectacle arrayed in white garments. Every temple was open and filled with garlands and incense, while numerous servitors and _lictors restrained the thronging and scurrying crowds and kept the streets open and clear. Three days were assigned for the triumphal procession. The first barely sufficed for the exhibition of the captured statues, paintings, and colossal figures, which were carried on two hundred and fifty chariots. On the second, the finest and richest of the Macedonian arms were borne along in many waggons. The arms themselves glittered with freshly polished bronze and steel, and were carefully and artfully arranged to look exactly as though they had been piled to- gether in heaps and at random, helmets lying upon shields and breast-plates upon greaves, while Cretan targets and Thracian wicker shields and quivers were mixed up with horses’ bridles, and through them projected naked swords and long Macedonian spears planted among them, all the arms being so loosely packed that they smote against each other as they were borne along and gave out a harsh and dreadful sound, and the sight of them, even though

1 In November, 167 B.c.
44!
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kat poBepov v barnxew, Kad pnde vEeveKn Levary ago-Bov elvac thy dypev. pera 5é tas omAoddpous apafas avdpes € émemopevovTo TplaxiAsor voUic wa hépovTes apyupoby ey aryyetots EWTAKOO LOLS TEVTN-KovTa TpiTahavTos, ov éxag Tov ava Téocapes éxopstor™ arrot be KpaThpas apyupovs xal Képara.
ral pidras rat KodiKas, ed Staxexoo wnuéva, 1 pos Oéav éxaota kal mepitta TH peyéOer Kal TF TWAXVTNTL THS Topeias.
XX XIII. Ths 5é tpitns TpEpas EwOev pev
evOus € émropevov To cadmuyeral pédos ov ™ poo ootov Kal TOMTLKOD, aN’ oi axouévous emoT puvovaw
avrous ‘Popaior, T poaeryKEeevopevor. pera bé TOUTOUS HYyovTo XputoKepe Tpopiat Bods EXQTOV elxoat, pir pass HoKNMEVOL Kat OTE MMATLY. a & dryovTes auTous veaviaKot mrepilopaow evTrapugors éoTahpevot mpos tépoupytav éxaipour, Kat traides apyupa oBeia Kal Xpuae a Kouivovtes. elta peta TOUTOUS ot TO YpucodY vO plo pa pepovres,

els aryyeia TpiTadavtiaia He pepto wevov opotas
T® apyupiy. TO bé awrH00s Hy TOV dryryetov GySonKovTa T play éovTa. TOUTOLS émréBadov ot Te THY depav pudrny avEXOVTES, iv o Aipidxos éx xpucov Sena taravrov bia AUOwv KaTecKEvaaev, ol Te TAS ‘Avruyovidas Kai Dedevcidas Kab Onpixdreious kal Oca Trept Seimvov Xpurwpara
TOU _Tlepaéws err OELKYUPEVOL, TOUTOLS éeméBadne
TO appa Tob Tlepaés Kat Ta Sarha cal To dia-Onya Tots SrAous eT KEL MEVOD. eita pexpod dia-Aeiwparos 6VTOS Hn Ta TéEKVa TOU Bacthews nyeto SodAa, nal ovv avtois tpodéwy nai d:da-442

273

AEMILIUS PAULUS

they were spoils of a conquered enemy, was not without its terrors. After the waggons laden with armour there followed three thousand men carrying coined silver in seven hundred and fifty vessels, each of which contained three talents and was borne by four men, while still other men carried mixing-bowls of silver, drinking horns, bowls, and cups, all well arranged for show and excelling in size and in the depth of their carved ornaments.

XXXIII. On the third day, as soon as it was morning, trumpeters led the way, sounding out no marching or processional strain, but such a one as the Romans use to rouse themselves to battle. After these there were led along a hundred and twenty stall-fed oxen with gilded horns, bedecked with fillets and garlands. Those who led these victims to the sacrifice were young men wearing aprons with handsome borders, and boys attended them carrying gold and silver vessels of libation. Next, after these, came the carriers of the coined gold, which, like the silver, was portioned out into vessels containing three talents ; and the number of these vessels was eighty lacking three. After these followed the bearers of the consecrated bowl, which Aemilius had caused to be made of ten talents of gold and adorned with precious stones, and then those who displayed the bowls known as Antigonids and Seleucids and Thera- cleian,! together with all the gold plate of Perseus’s table. These were followed by the chariot of Perseus, which bore his arms, and his diadem lying upon his arms. Then, at a little interval, came the children of the king, led along as slaves, and with them a throng of foster-parents, teachers, and tutors, all

1 These last were named from a famous Corinthian artist.
443
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

oxdhov Kal mardaryory ay Sedaxpupever OxXNOS,
avuT@Y Te TAS Yelpas Operyov Tey eis tous OeaTas Kal Ta macdia bia Bat Kal MeTavevery SidacKov-Tov. wo appeva, pev duo, Gnru de ev, ov mayu

cupppovotyTa TOV KAK@V TO péyeBos Sua TH nrduciay a Kal paddov éeewva, Tpos THV peta-Bonny THS avatcOnatas HY, dote puxpod TOV
Tlepoéa Badivew Ta popwpevoy" odTws un' olxTou
Tois VnTrioLs MpocEixov TAs drYfets oF 'Papaior, Kat Sdxpva, TOANOLS ex Barre ouveBn, mao 6é papery pevny arnyndove nal yapits tHhv Oday eivat eypt ov Ta TraLdia mapirdev.
XXXIV. Autos 5é Tav TEKVOV 0 Ilepoevs Kal
Ths meph aura, Jeparreias KaTOT LD _Erropevero, parov pep tmareov Gpmex opevos Kat Kpnribas EX ov ETLYWpLOUS, b76 5é peyéOous Tav KaKav mavTa Gap Sobvre Kal Taparren yy Leven padora, TOV oyto pov €oixas. Kal toute & eieTo 'X0pos dirov Kal our Ov, BeBapnpevor Ta mpoowma
mwévOe, kal T@ mpos Ilepcéa Brérrew ael Kat
Saxpue € evvotay Tapio TavT@y Tots Gewpévors 6 ért THV éxeivou TUXNY oropupovrat Tav Kal" éauTous eAaXLoTa, ppovrivovres. KaiTot WpooéTeue TG Aipirio Seopevos p47) mopmevO vat Kat maparToupevos TOV PpiapBov. 0 dé Ths avav6pias auToo
Kat prropuxias, Os éotke, KaTayehav, " "AMAA TobTO Y> " elrre, 'Kal 7 poTepov Hy err aur@ Kat vov €oTiv, av Bovdnras" énda@v TOV po aloxv-vans Odvarov, dv ovy tropeivas o Seiatos, adr'
in éxmidev TiWaV aTromaraxtobels eyeryover LEpOS TOV avTOU NaduUpwD.
"EqdeEns 5é rovtous éxopilovro ypvaoi atépavor in tears, stretching out their own hands to the spectators and teaching the children to beg and supplicate. There were two boys, and one girl, and they were not very conscious of the magnitude of their evils because of their tender age ; wherefore they evoked even more pity in view of the time when their unconsciousness would cease, so that Perseus walked along almost unheeded, while the Romans, moved by compassion, kept their eyes upon the children, and many of them shed tears, and for all of them the pleasure of the spectacle was mingled with pain, until the children had passed by.

XXXIV. Behind the children and their train of attendants walked Perseus himself, clad in a dark robe and wearing the high boots of his country, but the magnitude of his evils made him resemble one who is utterly dumbfounded and bewildered. He, too, was followed by a company of friends and inti- mates, whose faces were heavy with grief, and whose tearful gaze continually fixed upon Perseus gave the spectators to understand that it was his misfortune which they bewailed, and that their own fate least of all concerned them. And yet Perseus had sent to Aemilius begging not to be led in the procession and asking to be left out of the triumph. But Aemilius, in mockery, as it would seem, of the king's cowardice and love of life, had said: " But this at least was in his power before, and is so now, if he should wish it," signifying death in preference to disgrace ; for this, however, the coward had not the heart, but was made weak by no one knows what hopes, and became a part of his own spoils.

Next in order to these were carried wreaths of

TETPAKOGLOL TO TAHOOS, ots al models apa tela Tihs viKns T@ Aimarto pera m pea Betov émepupay.
elt' auTos éméBadXev dppare KEKOO MNMEVD bta-TpETOS émiBeBnkas, avnp Kat dixa TOTAUTNS
éfovatas af.o0éaros, ddoupyiba Xpvaomac tov
GPT EXO LEvos Kat Sagyns Kava TH befud Tpo-TELVOD. edagpunpoper 5é Kal ovpTras 0 oTpaTOs,
TO pev Gppare Tov oTpaTynyoo Kara Aoxous Kal
Tafers Err Opevos, dev dé Ta pev wdds Ttivas Tartplous avapeporywevas yEAWTL, TA be maravas émvixious Kai TOV StaTren pay pevev emraivous els TOV Aiuidsoy mepiBrenrov 6 évta Kal Enrwrov v7rd wavrwy, ovdevt oe TOY arabe émigOovov TrIY eb Tt Saxpoviov dpa. TOY peyddwv Kas UmepoyKav elAnyey evTUYIOY atTapuTeLW Kal peryvova TOV avO porrvov Biov, Straws pndevi Kaxay axpatos ein Kal _kabapos, ade Kal "Opnpov a dpiora doxact mparrewy ols ai TUXaL TpoTHY ew aupoTEpa THV TparywadTov exovoww.
XXXV, "Heap yap avT@ Téa Tapes vioi, dv0
bev eis érépas atr@Kiopévor ovyyevetas, ws dn AéhexTat, Lanwiov Kat Paws, dv0 dé maides ere THY ixiay, ods emi THS olKias ele THs éavtob yeyovoras ef érépas yuvarkes. @v Oo pev npépas wévte TpOo TOU OprapBeverv Tov Aipinsov érerev-TICE TegoaperKaiveKeTNSs, o 6€ dwdexérns pera T pets nwepas OptapPevoavros érramé0avev, Wore pndéva ryevéa Bau "Papatov Tow ma0ous) avdynTov, adda dhpi—ar THY @poTnTa THs TUNNS a dmavtas, @S OUK n8écaTo mevos Too obTov ELS oixiay ondou Kal yapas Kal Ovaav yéuovoay eiadyovca, Kal

gold, four hundred in number, which the cities had sent with their embassies to Aemilius as prizes for his victory. Next, mounted on a chariot of mag- nificent adornment, came Aemilius himself, a man worthy to be looked upon even without such marks of power, wearing a purple robe interwoven with gold, and holding forth in his right hand a spray of laurel. The whole army also carried sprays of laurel, following the chariot of their general by companies and divisions, and singing, some of them divers songs intermingled with jesting, as the ancient custom was, and others paeans of victory and hymns in praise of the achievements of Aemilius, who was gazed upon and admired by all, and envied by no one that was good. But after all there is, as it seems, a divinity whose province it is to diminish whatever prosperity is inordinately great, and to mingle the affairs of human life, that no one may be without a taste of evil and wholly free from it, but that, as Homer says,! those may be thought to fare best whose fortunes incline now one way and now another. XXXV. For Aemilius had four sons, of whom two, as I have already said,? had been adopted into other families, namely, Scipio and Fabius; and two sons still boys, the children of a second wife, whom he had in his own house. One of these, fourteen years of age, died five days before Aemilius celebrated his triumph, and the death of the other, who was twelve years of age, followed three days after the triumph, so that there was no Roman who did not share the father’s grief; nay, they all shuddered at the cruelty of Fortune, seeing that she had not scrupled to bring such great sorrow into a house that was full of gratula-

1 Iliad, xxiv. 5265 ff. 2 Cf. chapter v. 3

Katapsyvuovca Opyjvous Kal Saxpva tatdow émt-vixtots Kal OpidpBors.
XXXVI. Ov pnv adn’ o Aipuirdsos 6pOas Noye-Fopevos avdpetas Kat Oappareorytos avO parrots ov ™ pos Oma Kat capioas Xphow elvat povov, adhe 1 pos Tacav Opanis TUXNS avrigtacw, oUTWS npyocaro s Kat KATEKOO ENTE THY TOV Tmapov-TOV ouyKpact @oTe Tois ayabois Ta patra cal Ta olKxela Tots Snpociots evahavia Dévta ra) Ta-Tewvaaas TO péyeBos unde cabuBpicas TO akiopa
THS ViKNS. TOV Mev YE TPOTEpoY TV maiSey & aqro-Oavovta Barras evOus eO pid Bevoer, « @s NéXNEK TAL:
Tov be devtépou PETA TOV OpiauBov TEMEUTITAVTOS TUWAYAYOV Ets éxxnotav Tov “Pwpaiwy Sipov éXpytaro Aoyors avdpos ov Seouévov mapapvbias, aAXra mapapv0oupévov Tovs troAitas SvoTaboivtas éf ols éxeivos CSuatuyncev. edn yap Sry tép dvO pwrivev ovdev ovdérrote Seicas, Ta 6é Deion as amtaToTaTov Kal TroiKiNwrTaTov Tm pay pa Thy

TUX ND del poBnbeis, pddora Tept ToUToY auris TOV TONEMO?, domep TVEVLATOS Aap poo, Tas
mpabeot mapovons, Statedoin peraBorqy Tia Kal madippotav Tpoa eX opevos. “Mid pep yap,” elev, - npeépa tov ‘lovov amo Bpevtectou Wepacas Ets Kepxupay Katy ony: weuTraios & exeiBev
év Aerdois ™@ Ge@ Ovaas, érépats adOis ad mévTe THv Suvapsev év MaxeSovia mapérafor, Kal Tov elwGoTa ovvtTedéoas xabappov auris Kal Tov mpatewv evOus evap apevos év TpEpas adras mevrexaivera TO Kado TOV éméOnxa T@ Tod pp tédXos. amictav de TH TUYN Sid THY evpoLay TOY 448

tions, joy, and sacrifices, or to mingle lamentations and tears with paeans of victory and triumphs.
XXXVI. Aemilius, notwithstanding, rightly con- sidering that men have need of bravery and courage, not only against arms and long spears, but against every onset of Fortune as well, so adapted and adjusted the mingled circumstances of his lot that the bad was lost sight of in the good, and his private sorrow in the public welfare, thus neither lowering the grandeur nor sullying the dignity of his victory. The first of his sons who died he buried, and im- mediately afterwards celebrated the triumph, as I have said; and when the second died, after the triumph, he gathered the Roman people into an assembly and spoke to them as a man who did not ask for comfort, but rather sought to comfort his fellow-citizens in their distress over his own mis- fortunes. He said, namely, that he had never dreaded any human agency, but among agencies that were divine he had ever feared Fortune, believing her to be a most untrustworthy and variable thing; and ‘since in this war particularly she had attended his undertakings like a prosperous gale, as it were, he _had never ceased to expect some change and some reversal of the current of affairs. “For in one day,” said he, “I crossed the Ionian Sea from Brundisium and put in at Corcyra; thence, in five days, I came to Delphi and sacrificed to the god; and again, in other five days, I took command of the forces in Macedonia, and after the usual lustration and review of them I proceeded at once to action, and in other fifteen days brought the war to the most glorious issue. But I distrusted Fortune because the current of my affairs ran so smoothly, and

TpayuUaTwV, WS Abela TrOAAN Kal Kivduvos ovdels
HV aro TOV TONE MLLOD, padiota. Karta wrodv éde-
Stew Thy petaBodny Tou Saipovos én’ euTuxia, TOTOUTOV oTpaTov vevixniota Kal Aagupa Kal
Baatnreis aixuadwrous Kopivo. ov pay andra Kal awbels pds bpas Kat THY mOALY opav cdg po-ours Kal oihou Kab Ouatay yéwoucay, ert Thy tuxynv 8¢ dbrrowias elyor, ed@s ovdev etdixpivés ove dvepéontov avO pwr ats TOV peyahov apt-Couévnv. al TOUTOV ov T™ poTEpov n vex TOV poBov a@divovca Kal TEpia KOTOUPLEVY TO péAXOv vmep THS TOAMWS abicey i) THMKAUTD pe Irpoc-mraigat dvatuxig Tept TOV OlKoY, vi@V dpioroy, ods euauTe povous éederrouny Siadoxous, Tapas emTahd1)dous ev npépais tepais peTaxetpioduevov.

vov ov axivduvos tps Ta péytota Kal Oappe, kal vopita THY TUXNY Dpiv mapapevely aPraBh Kai BéBarov. ixavos yap éuol Kal rots éuois Kaxois eis THY TOV Katop0wpeévary aTrOKEXpNTAL vépeoty, our adavéoTepov éxovea wapadevypa THis av0 pw-awivns aaBeveias TOU OptapBevopevov Tov Optap-Bevovta- TAHY OTe Tepaeds peéev exer Kal vevixn-Hévos TOUS maidas, Aipirtos 5€ rods avrod vixnoas améBanev.”
XXXVII. Otto pév evryevels Kal peyaXous Aoyous TOV Aipidvov é& amddotov Kal arnOvod ppovnuaros év Te Srp S:arexOhvat Aéyouat.
TO dé Ilepoei, KalIrep OiKTEelpas THY pera Borny
Kal para BonOijoas mpodupndeis, ovdev eipeto
TV peTacTacews éx TOU Kaoupevov KapKEpE
Tap autots eis TOTOV xadapov Kal prravbpwmotépav Siavtav, Sov hpovpovpevos, ws pev ot 450

AEMILIUS PAULUS

now that there was complete immunity and nothing to fear from hostile attacks, it was particularly during my voyage home that I feared the reversal of the Deity’s favour after all my good fortune, since 1 was bringing home so large a victorious army, such spoils, and captured kings. Nay more, even when I had reached you safely and beheld the city full of delight and gratulation and sacrifices, I was still suspicious of Fortune, knowing that she bestows upon men no great boon that is without alloy or free from divine displeasure. Indeed, my soul was in travail with this fear and could not dismiss it and cease anxiously forecasting the city’s future, until I was smitten with this great misfortune in my own house, and in days consecrated to rejoicing had carried two most noble sons, who alone remained to be my heirs, one after the other to their graves. Now, therefore, I am in no peril of what most concerned me, and am confident, and I think that Fortune will remain con- stant to our city and do hernoharm. For that deity has sufficiently used me and my afflictions to satisfy the divine displeasure at our successes, and she makes the hero of the triumph as clear an example of human weakness as the victim of the triumph; except that Perseus, even though conquered, has his children, while Aemilius, though conqueror, has lost his.”
XXXVII. With such noble and lofty words, we are told, did Aemilius, from an unfeigned and sincere spirit, address the people. But for Perseus, although he pitied him for his changed lot and was very eager to help him, he could obtain no other favour than a removal from the prison which the Romans called “‘carcer’’ to a clean place and kindlier treatment ; and there, being closely watched, according to most

451

Q
Q
bt
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TAreloTor yeypapacty, darexaptépnoev, Eviot be THS 275
TeAEUT IIS ldcov Tuva Kat Tmapnrdarypévov TpOTrov
ioTopovct. peprrapevous yap Tt Kal Gupwbevtas
avT@ Tovs Tepl TO Tapa OTpATLOT AS, as Erepov ovdep ndvvavTo Aumreiv kal Kaxodv auton, ef eip-ye Tov Urver, Kai Tpos€éXovTas axpiBers éviorac0at Tais katagopais Kab TUvEXely € eypnyopoTa wacn enXavh, pexpt o8 TovTov Top TpoTov éx-Tovnbeis eTENEUTNTED. eTeMevTIOE d€ Kal Tov Tavtwv ta dvo. TOV dé tTpitov, ‘Ad€Eavdpor, evpva pev év TO TopeveLy Kal Aewroupyety yeveofat pacir, éxpabovra dé Ta ‘Popaina ypdupata kai thy Stadextov _Urrorypapparevey ToiS dpXouow, émrweEvov kal yapievta epi tavTny thy Umnpeciay éFeralojevov.
XXXVITI. Tats 6 Maxedovnais moukect Tob
Aipediou SnpoticwTarny mpoaypadovat xapu
bmép TOY TOANOY, os TOTOUVTWY EIS 70 dn poatov
TOTE XPNMaT Ov vn avtod TeOevT@y @OTE PNKETL
Sefirat TOV Sfjpov elo everynely dype TOY Iptiov cat Idvoa Xpoveor, ot mept TOV TT P@TOV ‘Avtaviou
cal Kaicapos TONE MOV umatevaayv. KaKeivo © (dvov Kal mepitTov tov Aiptriov, TO otrovdato-pevoy bro Tov SHmou Kal Tipwpevoy SsadeporTws él THS plat oKpaTiKhs peivar T Poa per ews, Kat pndev evtrety pode mpakat xapere TOY TOANOY, GNX TOFS Twos kal K ariarots del ouvegera-GerOas Tept THY TrodkTetav. 5 Kal ypovots BaTe-pov “Ammtos aveloicev “Ag picave Laentiove, peyoToe yap dvtes ev TH TONE TOTE THY TLUNTL-KnY apxXnv peTnetav, Oo wev THY BovAny éxwv Kal 452

AEMILIUS PAULUS

writers the king starved himself to death. But some tell of a very unusual and peculiar way in which he died, as follows. The soldiers who guarded his person found some fault with him and got angry at him, and since they could not vex and injure him in any other way, they prevented him from sleeping, disturbing his repose by their assiduous attentions and keeping him awake by every possible artifice, until in this way he was worn out and died. ‘Two of his children also died. But the third, Alexander, is said to have become expert in embossing and fine metal work ; he also learned to write and speak the Roman language, and was secretary to the magis- trates, in which office he proved himself to have skill and elegance.

XXXVIII. To the exploits of Aemilius in Mace- donia is ascribed his most unbounded popularity with the people, since so much money was then brought into the public treasury by him that the people no longer needed to pay special taxes until the times of Hirtius and Pansa, who were consuls during the first war between Antony and Octavius Caesar.! And this, too, was peculiar and remarkable in Aemi- lius, that although he was admired and honoured by the people beyond measure, he remained a member of the aristocratic party, and neither said or did anything to win the favour of the multitude, but always sided in political matters with the leading and most powerful men. And this attitude of Aemi- lius was in after times cast in the teeth of Scipio Africanus by Appius. For these men, being then greatest in the city, were candidates for the censor- ship,? the one having the senate and the nobles to

1 The so-called ‘‘War of Mutina,” in 43 B.c.; cf. the Cicero, xlv. 3-5. 3 In 142 B.c.

TOUS apioTous TEpt avToV’ av’tn yap Ammios 7 moNTela waTplos: Oo bé péeyas pev av ed’ éavTod, peyarn & adel tH mapa tov dnuov yapite Kal omovon Kexypnucvos. ws ovv éuBdaddovtos els ayopay Tov Xxntiwvos KaTelde Tapa WAEUpaY oO “Ammios avOpwrous ayevveis cat SedoudNevKoTas, dyopatious 5é cal duvapévous byXov ouvayayew Kal omovdapyxia Kal Kpavyh wavta mpaypata BiacacOat, péya Bonoas, “’OQ Tladne,” elzev, “ Aiutvse, otévakov UTo ys aiaOomevos tt cou tov viov Aipirdtos o KApvE cat Acxivyros Bido- veikos émt TyunTeiav KaTayovoly. dAAA Lenriwv pev abEwv ta mrciota tov Sijpov eivouy elxev, Aipirttos 5€, xaimep Ov aptotoxpatiKos, ovdev Attov Ure TOV TOAAMY HyaTaTO Tov padtoTa Snpaywyelv Kat mpos ydptv optreiv Tots ToANOIS

SoxovvtTos. edndr\waav b€é peTa TOV GAXNWY KAAOV cal Tyntelas avtov akiwcartes, itis oti apyn macav iepwratn Kal Svvapevn péya mpos Te TadXa Kal mpos éeracww Biwy. éxPRanreiy te yap éfeots ovyxAntov Tov ampera@s Covta Tots TLun-tals, Kal mpoypavrat Tov apioTop, immou T adat-pécet TOV véwY aTLLaoaL TOY aKoACTaiVvorTa.
Kal T@V OVOLOY OUTOL TA TiuNnuaTa Kal Tas aToypadas émicxotrobaly. ameypdyavTo pév odv kat avtov pupiddes dr Opamrwv tpiaKxovta Tpels, éru 8 érraxiaxirsou TETPAKOTLOL TevtnKovTa Ovo, THs 6é Bovrts ™ poeyparre pev Mdpxov Aipidsop Aémibov, 38n tTeTpdKis KapTovmEevoy TavTny Thy 454

support him, for this was the hereditary policy of the Appii, while the other, although great on his own account, nevertheless always made use of the great favour and love of the people for him. When, therefore, Appius saw Scipio rushing into the forum attended by men who were of low birth and had lately been slaves, but who were frequenters of the forum and able to gather a mob and force all issues by means of solicitations and shouting, he cried with a loud voice and said: “O Paulus Aemilius, groan beneath the earth when thou learnest that thy son is escorted to the censorship by Aemilius the common crier and Licinius Philonicus.” But Scipio had the good will of the people because he supported them in most things, while Aemilius, although he sided with the nobles, was no less loved by the multitude than the one who was thought to pay most court to the people and to seek their favour in his intercourse with them. And they made this manifest by con- ferring upon him, along with his other honours, that of the censorship,! which is of all offices most sacred, and of great influence, both in other ways, and especially because it examines into the lives and conduct of men. For it is in the power of the censors to expel any senator whose life is unbecoming, and to appoint the leader of the senate, and they can disgrace any young knight of loose habits by taking away his horse. They also take charge of the pro- perty assessments and the registry lists. Accordingly, the number of citizens registered under Aemilius was three hundred and thirty-seven thousand four hundred and fifty-two; he also declared Marcus Aemilius Lepidus first senator, a man who had

1 In 164 B.o.
455

mpoedpiav, €€éBanre Sé tpeis ovyKANTLKOYS OV TAY
éripavav, kat mept thy tav immévv é&étacty
€ 4 ld > , A 4, I
Omoiws éueTpiacey autos Te Kal Mapxios Pirirr-Tos 0 cuvapKXwV avTod.
XXXIX. Atoxnpéevovy b€ Ttav TrEeictwVv Kal

, nw “A
peyiotwy évoonae vooov évy apyn pev éemicphanrn, ypovm 6€ axivduvoy, épywdn 6€ Kal dvcamddda-KTOV yevopuevnv. emel de TeLaOeEls UO TOY laTpaV érrevoev eis “EXéav tis ‘Itadias cal drétpiBev
, Cal
avToO: mAeiw ypovoy év tapadios aypois Kat TOAAnY Hovytay Exovalv, émoOncav avTov oi
e a \ b) 4 9 ,
Pwpaior, cat dwvas troddAaKis év Oeatpors olov evydouevor Kat atrevdovtes ideiv adpjxay. avons
dé Tivos lepoupytas avayKaias, Hdn Sé Kal doxodv-Tos ixavas éxewv avT@ TOD awapatos, émavydbev
> @¢€ , ? a \ v \ A wv
ets ‘Pounv. Kaxeivny péev Ebuce peta TOV GX\NOV
Tyv Ovaiav lepéwv, eTipavas Tod Sypov trept-Kexupévov Kal xalpoytos: TH 8 voTEepata madu EOucev avtos Urép avTod cwtypia Tois OGeois.
, , wn
kal auptrepavOetons, ws mpocipntat, THS Oucias
e 4 v 5 N Xx @ ld } ? Oé tmoatpéwas oixabe Kal xataxXdOeis, mply aicbe-cOat Kal vonoat tHv petaBorgrny, év éxatdcet ol a , 4 A
kal wapapopa THs Stavoias yevdopuevos tpttatos
’ , ’ V9 \ 2e 9 \ in \ éredeuTnaev, ovdevos evdens ovd aTEANS TOY T pds 4 , evdatmoviay vevopucpéevwr yevouevos. Kal yap %
A N
wept Thy expopav troumn Oavpacpoy Eoxe, Kai nw A \ ? A A \ a Chrov érixoopovvTa THY apeTny Tov avdpos Tos dpictots Kal paKxapiwtatots évtadios. tadta S
>
jv ov Xpvads ovd edépas ovd 17 Novy TroAVTEAELG 456
76

AEMILIUS PAULUS

already held this presidency four times, and he expelled only three senators, men of no note, and in the muster of the knights a like moderation was observed both by himself and by Marcius Philippus

his colleague.
XXXIX. After he had performed most of the more important duties of this office, he fell sick of a disease which at first was dangerous, but in time became less threatening, though it was troublesome and hard to get rid of. Under the advice of his physicians he sailed to Velia in Italy, and there spent much time in country places lying by the sea and affording great quiet. Then the Romans longed for him, and often in the theatres gave utterance to eager desires and even prayers that they might see him. At last, when a certain religious ceremony made his presence necessary, and his health seemed to be sufficient for the journey, he returned to Rome. Here he offered the public sacrifice in company with the other priests,! while the people thronged about with manifest tokens of delight; and on the follow- ing day he sacrificed again to the gods privately in gratitude for his recovery. When the sacrifice had been duly performed, he returned to his house and lay down to rest, and then, before he could notice and be conscious of any change, he became delirious and deranged in mind, and on the third day after died.? He was fully blessed with everything that men think conducive to happiness. For his funeral procession called forth men's admiration, and showed a desire to adorn his virtue with the best and most enviable obsequies. This was manifest, not in gold or ivory or

1 See chapter iii. 1-3.
® Seven years after his triumph, 160 B.o.

Kat prrotepia Tis TapacKevis, adr' ebvota.xal
TLLN Kal yapLS Ov Lover Tapa, TOV TOT AY, adda
Kal TOV TOhEMLOY. boot youu Kata TUXNY Taphaap "IBypov Kal Atyvov Kal Makxedover, ol per ioyupol Ta TapaTa Kal véot dvadaBovtes TO AéXos UMédvaay Kal mapexdpstov, of b€ mpecAu-TEpOU ovynKohovdouy dvaKarovpevot TOV Atpidtov evepyeTny Kab TwThpa TOV mat pidwy. ov yap peovov éy ols expaTnae KaLpors Trias Tae Kal
prravO pars anndr.ayn Xpnoapevos, adra Kat Tapa mavTa Tov NoLTrov Biov deb Te mpaT Toy ayabov avdtois Kal xndopevos Gorrep olKeiwy Kal ouyyevaov SieTédece.
Tnv & odciay avtod poms érta Kal TptaKovta pupidbwv ryever Bar A€eyouow, HS avTos pev apporépous TovUs viovs amrédLTTE KANPOVOmOUS, Oo Se VEWTEPOS Lanmiov TO abeASO maoay exery ouve-XOpysev avros ets olxov eUTOPWTEPOY tov 'Adpt-Kavov dedopevos. ovtos ev o IavaAov Alto Tpomos Kal Bios Néyeras yevéc Oat.
TIMOAEONTOS KAI WAYAOY AIMIAIOY
SYTKPISIS
I. Tovovter b¢ TOV KATA THY ioTopiav évT@y, djdov QS ovK exe TOAhas Siapopas oveé avo-MOLOTNTAS 1) TUK PLOTS. ot Te yap ToAELoL TOS

évdo£ous yeyovac wv apdhorépots dvrayoviaras, TP pev Maxedovas, TH de KapynSovious, at te pixar weptBontot, Tov pev édrovtTos Maxedoviav 458

COMPARISON OF TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS

the other ambitious and expensive preparations for such rites, but in good will and honour and gratitude on the part, not only of his fellow citizens, but also of his enemies. At all events, out of all the Iberians and Ligurians and Macedonians who chanced to be present, those that were young and strong of body assisted by turns in carrying the bier, while the more elderly followed with the procession calling aloud upon Aemilius as benefactor and preserver of their countries. For not only at the times of his conquests had he treated them all with mildness and humanity, but also during all the rest of his life he was ever doing them some good and caring for them as though they had been kindred and relations.

His estate, we are told, hardly amounted to three hundred and seventy thousand drachmas, to which he left both his sons heirs; but the younger, Scipio, who had been adopted into the wealthier family of Africanus, allowed his brother to have it all. Such, as we are told, was the life and character of Paulus Aemilius.

COMPARISON OF TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS

I. Sucu being the history of these men, it is clear that our comparison of them will have few points of difference or dissimilarity to show. For the wars which both conducted were against notable antago- nists; in the one case against the Macedonians, in the other against the Carthaginians. Their victories, too, were far-famed: the one took Macedonia and

459

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kal Thy aT’ “Avtuyovou Sadoxny év éBdou@ Baornrei KATATAVTAVTOS, roo 6¢€ Tas Tupavvidas mdoas avedovTos &ék LiKedias Kal THY vio ov éhevepwo avtos” eb py v1) Aia Bovdorro TLS Tapeyxetpely @S Aipinrsos pev eppapeve Tlepoet Kat ‘Pwpaious veveKNKoTL, Tiporéav dé Atovu-ow wavTamaow dmetpnKore Kal KATATETPLULBLEVED
auvétece, Kal maduy UTrép Teporéovtos, OTL WoNAOUS ev Tupdvvous, peyahny be THY Kapyxn-Soviay Suvapep amTo THS TUYOVENS oTpaTias

eviKna ey, ovx @otep Aipidtos avépdow epmreLpo-Tone woes Kal pepadntoory apxec bas XPomevos, adra pa Pod opors ovat Kal OTPATLMTALS aTaKToLs, 7 pos ndovny elO ra pévors atpatever Oat. Ta yap aw ouK tons mapacKevijs ica Katop§opata TO oTPATNYO THY aittay meptTiOnar.
II. Kadapav ow Kal Sicatov év Tots 7 pa-yuacw apport épov yeyovoren, Aipirsos pév UTrO TOY vOMwY Kal THs mar pibos ovTwWs Eotxev evs adixéoBar Taped KEVvac UEVOS, Tiporéwv 5€ ToLobtov avTos eauTov Taper xe. TOUTOU TEX [L1}pLOov éTt ‘Pewpaior pev opards ey ™@ TOTE Xpovep WT av-TES Ho av eUTaKToL Kab Urroxetptot Tots eGuc pois kal Tovs vopous dedioTes Kat TOUS TOTAS, EdAqvev 5é ovdels 7) YE POV éotiv ovdé oTpaTHyos
ds ov StepOdpn TOTE YKErLas anpapevos éFo Aiwvos. xaitor Aiwva Tool povapxias OpeyerGau Kal Baotheav TLVa Aaxavixny ovetporro-Neip Dmrevoour. Ti imatos dé cal ['vAurarov acres dnot cat drips amoréuypat Zupaxovatous, prdojTXouTiay avTov Kal amhnotiav év TH OTpaTnYyia 460

brought the royal line of Antigonus to an end in its seventh king; the other abolished all the tyrannies in Sicily and set the island free. One might, indeed, argue otherwise, and say that Perseus was strong and victorious over the Romans when Aemilius en- gaged him, while Dionysius, when Timoleon engaged him, was altogether crushed and desperate. And, again, it might be said in favour of Timoleon that he conquered many tyrants and the force of the Carthaginians, large as it was, with what soldiers he could get, not having at his service, as Aemilius had, men who were experienced in war and taught to obey orders, but men who were hirelings and disorderly soldiers, accustomed to consult their own pleasure in their campaigns. For when equal successes follow an unequal equipment, the greater credit accrues to the commander.

II. Further, in their administration of affairs both were just and incorruptible; but Aemilius, it would seem, was made so from the outset of his career by the laws and customs of his country, while Timoleon’s great probity was due to himself. There is proof of this in the fact that the Romans in the time of Aemi- lius were, all alike, orderly in their lives, observant of usage, and wholesomely fearful of the laws and of their fellow citizens; whereas, of the Greek leaders and generals who took part in Sicilian affairs during the time of Timoleon, not one was free from cor- ruption except Dion. And Dion was suspected by many of being ambitious for a monarchy and dream- ing of a kingdom like that in Sparta. Furthermore, Timaeus says that even Gylippus was sent away in ignominy and dishonour by the Syracusans, because they found him guilty of avarice and greed while 461

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kateyvwoxotas. & dé Ddpak o Yraptiatys Kal
Kdddurmos o 'AOnvatos édrricavtes dpkew LeKxe-
Alas Tapevounoay Kal trapectrovdnaay, U7 TON-NOY avayéypatrat. KaiTOL Tives Hh THALKWD KUplou wpaypatwv dytes odToL ToladTa AATCAaD;
ov o pev éxtrentwxota Yvpaxovadyv éepareve Atovictov, KaddXrrmos Sé els Hv tov tepi Aiwva
ce) ? 4 ? A \
Eevayov. aGdrAd\a Tiportéov aitnoapévois xal Senbeiow attoxpatwp meupbels Yupaxovaioss, kal duvaptv ov Enreivy aArN Eye odetrAwy iv
éxaBe Bovropévoy cat didovrwy, tépas émounaato THS avTOD oTpaTnyias Kal adpyYns THY TOY Tapa-VOLO APYOVTwWY KATaAVOLD.
, A , a > , , @
Exetvo pévtot tov AiptAiov Oavuactoy, Ste
4 / J IQ
TnAtkauTnvy Bacireiay KaTacTpewapevos ovdé
Spaxyyn peifova thy ovoiay éroinaey, ovdé eldev
ovdé Hato TOY YpnudTwr, KaiToL TOAAA Sovs
e¢ / lA tJ , oe 4
érépois Kal dwonodpevos. ov rNEyw dé Ott Tipo-Adwy peu"mTos €oTLV oiKiay Te KaAnVY AaRwv Kai ywpiov' ov yap To NaBelv éx ToLovTwWY aicypor, GAA TO py AaBeiv KpeirTov Kal Teptovaia Tijs
apetys, ev ols é€eotw émideccvupévns TO py Seopevov,
"Ezrel Sé, ws ca@partos piyos Odrrros dépery
Suvapévov To pos apdorépas ev TeduKods opod Tas peTaBoras pwparewrtepor, ovTH Yruyis axpa-
4 a
Tos evpwotia Kal taxus, fy ovTe TO evTUYXELY
4 4 \ > 7s w \
UBpet OpuTrre: Kal avinow ovte cuppopal rarresla' ' e La!
vovot, paiverat TedeLoTEpos Oo Alpirsos, év yareTr7 462
COMPARISON OF TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS

he was their general.!. And how Pharax the Spartan and Callippus the Athenian violated laws and treaties in their hopes of ruling Sicily, has been told by many writers.2, And yet who were these men, or of how large resources were they masters, that they entertained such hopes? One of them was a servile follower of Dionysius after he had been driven out of Syracuse, and Callippus was one of Dion's captains of mercenaries. But Timoleon, at the earnest request of the Syracusans, was sent to be their general, and needed not to seek power from them, but only to hold that which they had given him of their own free will, and yet he laid down his office and command when he had overthrown their unlawful rulers.

It is, however, worthy of admiration in Aemilius that, although he had subdued so great a kingdom, he did not add one drachma to his substance, nor would he touch or even look upon the conquered treasure; and yet he made many liberal gifts to others. Now, I do not say that Timoleon is to be blamed for accepting a fine house and country estate, for acceptance under such circumstances is not disgraceful; but not to accept is better, and that is a surpassing virtue which shows that it does not want what it might lawfully have.

Furthermore, a body that can endure only heat or cold is less powerful than one that is well adapted by nature to withstand both extremes alike. In like manner a spirit is absolutely vigorous and strong if it is neither spoiled and elated by the insolence which prosperity brings, nor humbled by adversity. The character of Aemilius, therefore, was manifestly more

1 See the Nicias, xxviii. 2 f.
3 See the Zimoleon, xi. 4.

4 , 4 a \ \ a
TUXn Kal wd0et peyddr@ TO Teplt Tos Traidas
ovdéy TL pixpoTEepos ode doepvoTtepos 7 dia TaV
6 evtuynudtwy dpabeis: Timoréwy Sé yervaia mpda-Eas wepl rov abdedpov ove avtécxye TO AOYLT UO
N \ / 9 \ J Us
mpos TO TdOo0s, A\AA peTavoia Kal AVTIN TaTrEvwbels érav eixoot TO Bhua Kal thv dyopay idety
b e 4 " > \ , \
ovY Uméueve. Set dé TA ataxypa devyew Kal aideicOat, TO 5& wpds Tacayv dbokiav evrAaBes émuetxods péev HOovs Kal amanrod, péyeOos bé ovK EyovTos.

perfect, since in the grievous misfortune and great sorrow brought upon him by the death of his sons he was seen to have no less greatness and no less dignity than in the midst of his successes; whereas Timoleon, although he had acted in a noble way with regard to his brother, could not reason down his sorrow, but was prostrated with grief and repentance, and for twenty years could not endure the sight of bema or market-place. One should scrupulously shun disgraceful deeds ; but the anxious fear of every kind of ill report among men argues a nature which is indeed kindly and sensitive, but has not greatness.

465
VOL. VI. HH
Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES
HH 2

Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES
A

Achradina, pp. 67, 77, 89, 305, 307, 313, the first extension on the main-land of the island city of Syracuse, stretching from the Great Harbour northwards to the sea.
Acilius, 177, Caius, not otherwise known.
Acrae, 59, a small city of Sicily about twenty miles west of Syracuse.
Adranum, 287, 289, 299, 301, a city of "Sicily at the foot of the western slope of Mt. Aetna, founded by Phe elder Dionysius in 400 B.c.
Adria, 25, an ancient and famous city of Cisalpine Gaul, originally a sea-port between the mouths of the Po and the Adige, but now some fourteen miles inland. It gave its name to the Adriatic sea.

Agrigentum, 57, 345, one of the most powerful and celebrated of the Greek cities in Sicily, situated on the south-west coast of the island. It was colonised from Gela in 582 B.c.
Agrippa, 185, Marcus Vipsanius, a fellow-student of ctavius Cesar at Apollonia, and a most intimate friend. He became one of the prominent and powerful men of the Augustan age. He lived 63-12 B.C.
otherwise

Alcimenes, 49,
known
Amphipois 47, 49, an important n §.E Macedonia, on the at Been. about three miles from the sea.
Anicius, Lucius, 387, Lucius Anicius Gallus, praetor in 168 B.O., PLUT. VI.

not

acted in concert with Appius Claudius against Genthius the Illyrian, and was completely successful ii a campaign of thirty days, for which he celebrated a triumph.
Antigonus (1), 373, 461, King of Asia, surnamed the One- eyed. Lived 382-301 B. &
Antigonus (2), 373, surnamed Doson. On the death of Demetriuns II. (229 B.c.) he was appointed guardian of his son Philip. He married tne widow of Demetrius and assumed the crown in his own right. He supported Aratus and the Achxan League against Cleomenes of Sparta. e died in 220 B.c.

Antigonus (3), surnamed Gonatas, 373, a son of Demetrius Poliorcetes by Phila, and grandson of Antigonus King of Asia. He succeeded to the title of King of Macedonia on his father’s death in 283 B.c., and gained possession of part of. his realm in 277 B.c. He died in 239 B.o.
Antimachus, of Colophon, 347, a great epic and elegiac poet who flourished during the latter part of the Peloponnesian War (420-404 B.0.). See the Lysander XViii. 4f.
Antiochus of Ascalon, 129, called the founder of the Fifth Academy. He was a teacher of Cicero at Athens in 79-78 B.c., and Cicero speaks of him in the ‘highest and most ehureclehye terms (Brutus, 91, 315).
duces the Great, 363, 371, King of Syria 223- 187 B.0. He was defeated by the Romans under Glabrio at Thermopylae in 191, and by Scipio near Magnesia in Asia in 190 B.c.

He made peace with Rome in 188 B.c., ceding all his dominions west of Mt. Taurus.
Antium, 173, an ancient and powerful city of Latium, on the coast, thirty-eight miles south of Rome, the modern Porto d’Anzo.
Antonius, Caius, 181-187, a brother of the triumvir, legate of Julius Cesar in 49 B.c., praetor urbanus in 44 B.C., receiving Macedonia as his province.

Antonius, 421, Lucius A. Saturninus, governor of Upper Germany under Domitian, raised a rebellion; but an inundation of the Rhine deprived him of the assistance of the Germans which had been promised him. Cf. Suetonius, Domit. 6.
Appius, 453, 455. Appius Claudius Pulcher, consul in 143 B.c., father-in-law of Tiberius Gracchus. He lived in constant enmity with Scipio Africanus the Your ger.
Apollocrates, 81, 107, 117, eldest son of Dionysius the Younger.
Apollonia, 319, a small city in the central and northern part of Sicily, mentioned last by Cicero (in Verr. iii. 43, 103.)

Apollonia, 175, 181-185, an ancient Greek city of Illyria, near the river Aoiis and about eight miles from its mouth. Towards the end of the Roman republic it became a famous seat of learning. ;
Archedamus the Aetolian, 417. In 199-197 B.c. he acted with the Romans against Philip V. of Macedon. Later he was prominent in the war between the Aetolians and Rome, and joined Perseus in 169 B.c.
Archedemus, 37, apparently a disciple of Arch :
Archytas, 37 a Greek of 41
Tarentum, distinguished as philosopher, mathematician, general, and statesman. He flourished about 400 B.c. and onwards. Cf. the Marcellus, xiv. 5.

Arete, 18, 43, 109, 121, 123, niece and wife of Dion.
470

PROPER NAMES

Aristides the Locrian, 275, mentioned elsewhere (Aclian, Var. Hist., xiv. 4) only as more grieved at the manner than at the fact of his death.
Aristippus of Cyrene, 39, 41. founder of the Cyrenaic school of philosophy, obnoxious to Xenohon and Plato on account of his uxurious ways of living.
Aristomache, 7, 14, 109. 121, 123 sister and mother-in-law o Dion.
Aristoxenus the musician, 205, a pupil of Aristotle, and a philosopher of the Peripatetic school. Only fragments of his musical treatises have come down to us.
Aristus, 129, brother of Antiochus of Ascalon, and a teacher of philosophy at Athens when Cicero was there in 51-50 B.c. (ad Att., v. 10, 5). Cicero calls him "' hospes et familiaris meus " in Brutus, 97, 332.
Athanis, 319, 351, of Syracuse, wrote a history of the events attending and following Dion's expedition. He was probably one of the generals elected by the Syracusans in Dion's place (Dion, XxXXviii. 2).
Attillius (Atilius), 213, otherwise unknown.

Atticus, 191, Quintus Caecilius Pomponianus, surnamed Atticus on account of his long residence in Athens, where he took refuge from the storms of the civil wars in 85 B.c. He was Cicero's most intimate friend. He returned to Rome in 65, and died in 32 B.C., at the age of seventy-seven. He was a man of wealth, learning, and refinement.

B

Basternae, 377, 383, a powerful tribe of European Sarmatia (Russia). They were driven back across the Danube by _ the Romans in 30 B.c.

Bibulus, 153, 177, Lucius Calpurnius B., youngest son of the Bibulus who was Caesar's consular colleague in 59 B.c. He surrendered to Antony after the battle at Philippi (42 B.c.), was pardoned by him, and made commander of his fleet. He died shortly before the battle of Actium (31 B.C.).

Brundisium, 449, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural int of departure from Italy to he East, and was the chief naval station of the Romans in the Adriatic.

Brutus, 151, 169, 187, Decimus Junius Brutus, surnamed Albinus after his Postumius Albinus, the consul of 99 B.c. He was widely employed, highly esteemed, fully trusted, and richly rewarded by Julius Caesar, and yet joined his murderers. After Caesar's death he opposed Antony successfully, but fell a victim to the coalition between Antony and Octavius in 43 B.O.

Buthrotum, 183, a city on the western coast of Epirus, opposite Corcyra, celebrated by Vergil in Aeneid, iii. 293 ff.
C

Calauria, 337, a town of Sicily not mentioned elsewhere.
Calends (Kalends), 147, the Roman name for the first day of the month.
Callippus, 33, 61, 115-123, 463, of Athens, a disciple of Plato in common with Dion, to whom he came to have much the same relation as Brutus Albinus to Julius Ceesar.
Camarina, 59, a famous Greek city on the southern coast of Sicily, about twenty miles east of Gela. It was colonized from Syracuse in 599 B.C.
Canidius, 131, 133, perhaps the Publius Canidius Crassus who was the friend and supporter of adoption by Aulus-

PROPER NAMES

Antony (Plutarch, Antony, xxxiv.-lxxi.).
Canutius, 173, mentioned only here.

Carbo, 191, Gnaeus Papirius C., a leader of the Marian party and consular colleague of Cinna in 85 and 84 B.c. He was put to death by Pompey in 82 B.c. (Plutarch, Pompey, x. 3f.).
Carystus, 179, an ancient city on the south coast of Euboea, famous for its marble.

Casca, 157, 163, 229, Publius Servilius C., tribune of the people in 44 B.o. He fled from Rome after Caesar's murder, and died soon after the battle at Philippi, in which he fought. His brother Caius was also oné of Caesar's murderers (Plutarch, Caesar, vi. 5).

Catana, 123, 291, 305, 335, 341, 348, an ancient city on the eastern coast of Sicily, about midway between Syracuse and Tauromenium, directly at the foot of Mt. Aetna.
Cato (1), 411, Marcus Porcius C. Licinianus, son of Cato the Elder by his first wife Licinia. It was after the battle of Pydna that he became the son-in-law of Aemilius Paulus. For his education, and his exploit at the battle of Pydna, see the Cato Major, chapter xx.
Cato (2), 237, 239, son of Cato the Younger. After the death of his father, Caesar pardoned him and allowed him the use of his patrimony. See the Cato Minor, chapter i.
Caulonia, 57, a Greek city on the eastern coast of Bruttium, conquered by the elder Dionysius in 389 B.O.
Ceos, 345, one of the Cyclades islands in the Aegean sea, about thirteen miles S.E. of Attica most famous as the birthplace of the great lyric poet Simonides.
Cicero, 179, 183, Marcus Tullius, only son of the great orator, born in 65 B.0o. He joined the army of Pompey in Greece when only sixteen years of age, and gained

, 471

DICTIONARY OF

credit as an officer of cavalry. After Pharsalus, he resided at Athens, where he fell into loose habits for atime. After Caesar's death, he served as military tribune under Brutus. After Philippi, he was taken up by Octavius, and became his consular colleague in 30 B.c. See the Cicero, xlix. 4.

Cimber, 163, 169, Lucius Tullius, had been one of Caesar's warmest supporters) and rewarded by him with the province of Bithynia. After Caesar's murder he went to his province, raised a fleet, and co-operated effectually with Brutus and Cassius.

Cinna (1), 191, Lucius Cornelius, leader of the Marian party during Sulla's absence in the East (87-84 B.C.). He was consul in 87, 86, 85, and 84. He was killed in a mutiny of his soldiers at Brundisium, where he had hoped to prevent the landing of Sulla. See the Pompey, chapter Vv.

Cinna (2), 167, 181, Lucius Cornelius, son of the preceding. He served under Lepidus and Sertorius (78-72 B.c.), but was restored from exile by Caesar and made praetor in 44 B.Oo. He would not join the murderers of Caesar, but approved of their deed.

Cinna (3), 171, 173, Caius Helvius, a friend of Catullus, and probably the same person as the Helvius Cinna whom Valerius Maximus (ix. 9, 1), Appian (B.C. ii. 147), and Dion Cassius (xliv. 50) call a tribune of the people. Cf. Suetonius, Div. Jul. 85; tarch, Caesar, Ixxili. 2f. Only fragments of his poems remain.

Clodius (Claudius), 171, Publius Claudius Pulcher, youngest son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in the Sulla, xxix. 8. He helped to demoralize the soldiers of Lucullus in Asia (Lucullus, chapter xxxiv.), became a venomous foe of Cicero, was notorious for incest and licentiousness (Caesar, 472 chapters ix. and x.), and was at last killed in a street-brawl with Milo in 52 B.0. (Cicero, chapters xxViii.-xxxv.).

Colophon, 347, one of the Ionian cities of Asia Minor, situated on the river Hales, near the sea, north of Ephesus.
Corcyra, 449, an island in the Ionian sea, opposite Epirus, the modern Corfa.
Cornificius, Lucius, 185, afterwards an able supporter of Octavius in war on land and sea. He became consul in 35 B.c.
Cratippus, the Peripatetic, 177, of Mitylene, a contemporary and intimate friend of Cicero, and a teacher of Cicero’s son.
Crimesus (Crimisus), 323, 325, 331, a river in the N.W. part of sicily. near Segesta.
Cyzicus, 187, a Greek city on the Propontis, in Mysia, wonderfully arate on the neck of a pennsula.

D

Demetrias, 181, an ppor sent city in the S.E. part of Thessaly, at the head of the Pagasaean ulf, founded by Demetrius oliorcetes about 290 B.c.
Demetrium, 423, of Samothrace, probably a sanctuary of Demeter connected with the austere and worship of the Cabeiri.
Demetrius (1), 373, Demetrius
Poliorcetes, son of Antigonus
King of Asia, lived 337-283 B.c.
See Plutarch's Life.
Demetrius (2), 373, Demetrius II.
son of Antigonus Gonatas, king o Macedonia 239-229 B.c.
Demetrius (3), 375, younger, and only legitimate son of Philip V.
of Macedon, sent to Rome as hostage after the battle of Cynoscephalae (197 B.0.), where he won that favour of the Romans which roused the jealousy of his brother Perseus and brought about his death.
Diogenes, of Sinope, 297, a Cynio philosopher, born 412 B.o. He
DICTIONARY OF

became a pupil of Antisthenes the Socratic at Athens, and changed from a dissolute to a most austere life. He was sold into slavery at Corinth, where he acquired freedom and passed his old age. He died in 323 B.c., according to Plutarch (Morals,
p. 717 c) on the same day as Alexander the Great.
Dionysius, of Colophon 347, a.

painter contemporary with Polygnotus (latter half of the fifth century B.C.), of whom he was said to be an imitator. According to Aristotle, his work lacked idealism.
Dolabella, 131, 141, 181, the profligate and debt-ridden son-in-law of Cicero, lived 70-43 B.o. He took part with Caesar in 49 B.C., but approved of his murder, and gained the consulship for the remainder of the year 44. He was outlawed and declared a public enemy on account of his extortions in Asia, and committed suicide.
Domitian, 421, 423, Roman Emperor 81-96 A.D.
E

Ecnomum (Ecnomus), 57, a hill on the southern coast of Sicily, between Agrigentum and Gela.
Elea (Velia), 177, 345, 457, a Greek colony from Phocaea in Ionian Asia or, founded about 540 B.O. on the N.W. coast of Lucania in southern Italy (Herod. i. 164-167). Itreceived the Roman franchise in 90 B.Cc., and was a noted health resort.
pat Pe 129, mentioned only here, unless he is the same person as the orator, Empylus Rhodius, mentioned by Quintilian (x. 6, 4).

Ephorus, 77, 79, 271, of Cymé pupil of Isocrates, and author of a ghly rhetorical history of Greece from the “ Dorian Invasion ’ down to 340 B.0., in which year he died.
PROPER NAMES

Epicurus, 207, founder of the philosophical school named from him, born in Samos, 342 B.©., died at Athens, 270 B.o. He established his school at Athens in 306, was a man of pure and temperate habits, and _ bore suffering with cheerful fortitude.
Epidamnus, 181, the city on the coast of Illyria known in Roman history usually as Dyrrhachium. It was a free state, and sided consistently with the Romans.
Epipolae, 313, a triangular plateau rising gradually westwards from Syracuse, visible from the interior of the island city, and surrounded by precipitous cliffs. . the Nicias, xvii. 1; xxi. 5-9.
Eudemus, the Cyprian, 47, a member of the Platonic circle and an intimate friend of Aristotle. Aristotle’s dialogue entitled  Eudemus, or On the Soul,” is preserved only in scanty fragments (cf. lutarch, Morals, P. 175 b, and Cicero, de Div., . 25, 53). Eudemus fell in a battle between the friends of Dion and the traitor Callippus (Diodorus, xvi, 36, 5).
Evander, the Cretan, 417, mentioned only here.
F

Favonius, 149, 151, 201, 203 Marcus F., called the “ Ape of Cato,” was aedile in 652, and raetor in 40 B.C. He joined ompey in the East notwithstanding personal enmity to him, and accompanied him in his flight from Pharsalus (cf. the Pompey, \xxiii. 6 f.)

Flavius, 241, Caius F., an intimate friend of Brutus, and his praefectus fabrorum at Philippi.
G

Gaesylus, the Spartan, 105, 107, mentioned only here.
Galba, 435-439, Servius SulpiciusG., uuilitary tribuae under Aemilius 473

DICTIONARY OF

Paulus, praetor in 151, and famous for his faithless cruelty in his province of Spain. He was consul in 144 B.c. He was also an orator of power.
Galepsus, 417, a colony of Thasos on the coast of Thrace.
Gela, 57, 345, an important Greek city on the southern coast of Sicily, between Agrigentum and Camarina. It was colonized in 690 B.c. from Crete and Rhodes. The Carthaginians destroyed it in 405 B.C.
Gelon, 319, tyrant of Syracuse 485—478 B.C., and victor over the Carthaginians at Himera in 480 B.C. ; Genthius, 387, King of Illyria. He graced the triumph of his conqueror, Lucius Anicius, in 167 B.C., and died in captivity.
H

Hanno, 307, had successfully in the last war between the Carthaginians and Dionysius the Elder (368 B.c.). His failure to prevent the landing of Timoleon in 344 probably led to his recall and the substitution of Mago in his place. He was afterwards put to death for conspiracy.

Harpalus, 393, mentioned only here.

Helicon, of Cyzicus, 41, for some time a resident at the court of Dionysius the Younger. Suidas S cntioda a work of his astrology.
Heracleides, 25, 71, 73, 81, 83, 95, 99, 101-107, 111-117, was commander of the mercenaries of Dionysius the Younger, and fled from Syracuse with Dion (Diodorus, xvi. 6, 4).
Hermocrates, 7, an eminent and nobly patriotic Syracusan at the time of the great Athenian expedition against the city (415-413 B.C.), and prominent in the narrative of Thucydides. After the destruction of the Athenian armament, he served his native 474 commanded

on

PROPER NAMES

city ably as admiral in conjunction with the Spartan fleet, but was deposed in 409 B.C. by a years d attempt to gain possession of Syracuse by force.
Herostratus, 179, mentioned only here.

Hicetas, 123, 265, 277, 281, 283, : a uring e - orders following the death of Dion succeeded in establishing himself as tyrant of Leontini.

Himera, 319, an important Greek city on the northern coast of Sicily, at the mouth of the river of the same name.
Hirtius, 453, Aulus H., a warm friend and supporter of Julius Caesar. He fell in gallantly leading an assault upon Antony's troops.
Hortensius, 181, 187, Quintus H. Hortatus, a son of the great orator Hortensius, though apparently cast off by his father on account of dissolute habits. He joined Caesar in 49 B.c, and served him in important commands. In 44 B.c. he held the rovince of Macedonia, and rutus was to succeed him.
Hostilius, 377, Aulus H. Mancinus, consul in 170, and pro-consul in Greece in 169 B.c., where he conducted a safe but inconclusive warfare against Perseus.

I

Iapygia. 53, the ancient (Greek) name for Calabria, the eastern eninsula of southern Italy. obably the Iapygian promontory is here meant.
Ion, 425, a military officer of Perseus.

J

Junia, 141, Junla Tertia, a half-sister of Brutus. She lived till 22 a.D., and left large legacies to the leading men of Rome.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

L

Labeo, 151, 241, Quintus Antistius

L., an eminent, jurist, and father of a jurist more eminent still,
who lived under Augustus.
According to Appian (B.C. iv.
135), Labeo, unwilling to survive Brutus, himself killed by a trusty slave and buried in his tent.
Lacedaemon, 231, apparently a town of Macedonia near Thessalonica.
Laenas, Popilius, 159, 161, a Roman senator, not otherwise mentioned (cf. Appian, B.C., ii. 115 f.).
Leontini, 59, 85, 89, 301, 319, 339,
an ancient Greek city of Sicily,
between Syracuse and Catana,
about eight miles inland.
Lepidus, 169, 187, 455, Marcus emilius L., trlumvir with Octavius and Antony. He joined the party of Caesar in 49, and was praetor in Spain in 48 B.c., Caesar's magister equitum in 47 and 45, and his consular colleague in 46. After Caesar's murder he sided with Antony, and as member of the triumvirate received Spain and Narbonese Gaul as his province, then, in 40, Africa, where he remained till 36 B.c., when he was deposed from the triumvirate

He lived till 13 B.c.
Leptines, 123, 299,319, a Syracusan, who aided Callippus in capturing Rhegium in 351 B.C. exile
by Timoleon was in 342 B.c.
Leucadia (Leucas), 295, an island in the Ionian sea, once a part of the mainland of Acarnania.
Licinius, Publius, 377, P. L.
Crassus, consul in 171 B.0o.
Lilybaeum, 321, a promontory and city at the extreme western end of Sicily.

Lycon, the Syracusan, 121, not otherwise mentioned. .
M

Maedica, 383, the territory of the aedi, a powerful tribe in western Thrace.
Mago, 303-315, commander of the Carthaginian ficet and army in Sicily in 344 B.c., succeeding Hanno.
Mamercus (1), 359, son of Pythagoras. Cf. the Numa, xiii. 9.
Mamercus (2), 291, 335-351, tyrant of Catana.

Marrucinians, 407, a warlike tribe of central Italy, generally sharing the fortunes of the neighbouring Marsi and Peligni, and after 304 B.O. faithful allies of Rome.
Maso, 365, Calus Papirius M., consul in 231, died in 213 B.c.
Maximus (1), Fabius, 393, 447, see Plutarch’s Life.
Maximus (2), Valerius, 247, compiler of a large collection of anecdotes,
in the time of Augustus.
Mediolanum, 257, the chief clty of Cisalpine Gaul, the modern Milan.
Messala, 215-229, 245, 247, Marcus Valerius M. Corvinus, born about 70 B.O., educated at Athens, and a friend of Horace. He attached himself to Cassius after the death of Caesar, and fought ably at Philippi. After the death of Cassius he became a supporter of Antony, and then of Octavius (Augustus). He was also a poet, historian, grammarian, and orator. He wrote commentaries on the civil wars

after Caesar’s death.
Messana, 103, 123, 309. 335, 343,
an important city of Sicily, on the strait between that island and Italy, nearly opposite Rheium.

Milo, 395, 397, of Beroea, an officer in the army of Perseus. He had been successful against the Roman consul Licinius Crassus in 171 B.c. From Pydna he fled to Beroea, but soon surrendered the lace to Aemilius.
tas, the Thessalian, 47-51, not otherwise mentioned.
Mycalé, 421, a promontory in Asia Minor, opposite the island of Samos, where the Athenians defeated the Persians in 479 B.o.
Mylae, 351, an ancient Greek city on the northern coast of Sicily about thirty miles west of Messana, and generally dependent on that city.

N

Nasica, see Scipio (2).

Neon (1), the Corinthian, 305,
mentioned only here.
Neon (2), the Boeotian, 417, one of the principal authors of the alliance between the Boeotians and Perseus. After the battle of Pydna he fell into the hands of the Romans and was executed.
Nicolatis, the philosopher, 247,
probably Nicolaus Damascenus,

a famous historian and philosopher of the Augustan age.
Nisaeus, 263, not otherwise mentioned.

Norbanus, 209, an officer sent forward into Macedonia by Octavius and Antony (Appian, B.C., ix. 87).
Numantia, 415, a famous city in northern Spain. :
Nypsius, 87, 93, 99, not otherwise mentioned.

O

Octavius, Gnaeus, 423, 425, praetor in 168 B.C., consul in 165. He was assassinated in 162, while on an embassy in Syria.
Oreiis, 377, formerly called Histiaea, an ancient and important town in northern Euboea.
Oricus (Oricum), 435, a town and harbour of Illyria, a few miles south of Apollonia.
P

Pachynus, 53, the south-eastern promontory of Sicily.
Paeonians, 403, an ancient and powerful people of Upper Macedonia. ;
Pansa, 453, Caius Vibius P., a devoted friend of Julius Caesar, who made him governor of Cisalpine Gaul in 46, and consul for 43 B.C. with Hirtius.

Patara (Patareans), 131, 197, a flourishing city on the southwestern coast of Lycia in Asia Minor, celebrated for its temple and cult of Apollo.

Pelignians, 407, a warlike people in central Italy, neighbours to the Marsi and Samnites, and after 304 B.C. faithful allies of Rome.
Pella, 415, 417, was made the capital of Macedonia by Philip IT.
and was the birthplace of Alexander the Great. It was some fifteen miles from the sea,
west of the river Axius.
ee Lucius, 203, mentioned only ere.

Pelusium, 199, a strong frontier-town on the eastern branch of the Nile.
Perrhaebia, 393, a district in northern Thessaly.
Pharax, 103, 287, 463, perhaps the 8ame person as the envoy from Sparta to Athens mentioned by Xenophon in Hell. vi. 5, 33, and as the Pharax characterized by Theopompus as most un-Spartan ia his mode of life (Athenaeus, Pp. 536 c).
Philip, 371-375, Philip V. of Macedon, one of the ablest
Macedonian monarchs, reigned
220-179 B.c.
Philippus, Marcius, 457, Quintus
M.P., consul in 186, and again in 169 B.C., in which year he conducted the war against Perseus, handing over his command to Aemilius Paulus in the foliowing year. He was censor. with Aemilius in 164 B.c.
Philippi, 179, 187, 207-211, a city of Macedonia on the river Strymon, formerly called Crenides, but renamed by Philip II.

Philistus, 25-29, 39, 53, 77, 79, 299
a Syracusan, an eye-witness o
the events of the Athenian siege of Syracuse in 415-413 B.o., which he described thirty years
later in a history of Sicily.
Plancus, 167, Lucius Munatius P., a friend and supporter of Julius Caesar, and after Caesar's death of Antony. He was consul in
DICTIONARY OF

42 B.c., ay Caesar had planned.
He abandoned the cause of Antony in 32, and joined Octavius, whose favour he thenceforth enjoyed.
Plataea, 421, the little city of Boeotia near which the allied Greeks defeated the Persians in
479 B.C.
Pollis, the Spartan, 11, a Spartan naval commander in 376 B.C., defeated by Chabrias of Athens.
Polybius, 185, 398, 395, 405, of egalopolis in Arcadia, the Greek historian of the Punic Wars, born about 204 B.O., long resident in Rome, and an intimate friend of the younger Scipio, with whom he watched the destruction of Carthage in

146 B.C.
Porcia, 153, 1655, 247, wife of Marcus Brutus, daugher of Cato
the Younger by his first wife.
See the Cato Minor, Ixxiii. 4.
Poseidonius, 129, 405-418, of Apameia in Syria, a Stoic philosopher, pupil of Panaetius of Athens, contemporary with Cicero, who often speaks of him and occasionally corresponded with him.

Ptoeodorus, the Megarian, 35, mentioned only here.
Pydna, 397, 415, 419, a town of southern Macedonia, on the Thermatc gulf.
Pythagoras, the philosopher, 359, of Samos, flourished about 540-510 B.o. After extensive travels he settled in Crotona of southern Italy, and founded a numerous and mysterious sect.
R

Rhegium, 123, 281-285, 307, an important Greek city in' the Bruttian peninsula of southern Italy, nearly opposite to Messana in Sicily.
Samothrace, 419, 423, a large island in the northern Aegean sea, about forty miles south of the Thracian coast.
PROPER NAMES

Scipio (1), the Great, 359, 367, ublius Cornelius 8. Africanus Major, conqueror of Hannibal. He lived 234-183 B.c.
Scipio (2), 393, 395, 399, 403, 418,

425, Publius Cornelius 8. Nasica

Corculum, celebrated as jurist and orator, consul in 162, censor in 159, and consul a second time in 155 B.c. He appears to have written commentaries on this campai under Aemilius, which is his first appearance in history.

nee (3), 189, Publius Cornelius 8.

asica, adopted by Metellus
Pius and therefore often called Metellus Scipio. He was Pom-pey's colleague in the cone or part of the year 52 B.0., an became a determined foe of aesar. He killed himself after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.c.).
Scipio (4), 365, 413, 415, 447, 453,
55, 459, Publius Cornelius 8.
Aemilianus Africanus Minor,
younger son of Aemillus Paulus, adopted by Publius Scipio, the son of Scipio the Great, was born about 185, and died mysteriously in 129 B.o.
Servilia, 127, 129, 135, 137, 247,
after the death of her first husband, the father of Brutus, married Decimus Junius Silanus,
who was consul in 62 B.o.
Servilius, Marcus, 437, mentioned only here.
Sestius, 133, Publius Sestius, a supporter of Cicero in the suppression of the Catilinarian conspiracy, and active in securing Cicero’s recall from exile. See Cicero’s oration pro Sestio. In the civil war, he sided first with Pompey, and then with Caesar.
Silicius, Publius, 187, called Siliclus Coronas by Dion Cassius (xlvi.
49), a Roman senator, appointed one of the judges to try the murderers of Caesar. He ventured to vote for the acquittal of Brutus, and was therefore proscribed and put to death by the triumvirs.
Simonides, 3, 349, of Ceos, the

atest lyric poet of Greece, Speusippus 35, 45, 47,77, a disti peusippus, ’ ’ & inguished disciple of Plato, whom e followed as head of the Academy (347-839 B.O.).
Statilius, the Epicurean, 149, 151,
mentioned only here.
Strato, 245, mentioned only here.
T

Tauromenium, 285-289, a city on the north-eastern coast of Sicily, about midway between Catana and Messana.
Thasos, 227, an island in the northern part of the Aegean sea, off the coast of Thrace, half a day’s sail from Amphipolis.
Theomnestus, the Academic, 177,
a brother of the Aristus mentioned in chapter ii. 2, and me Lege his successor as head of the Academy.
Theopompus, 51, 271, of Chios, a fe ow-pupil of Isocrates with Ephorus, wrote anti-Athenian histories of Greece from 411 to $394 B.o., and of Philip of Macedon from $60 to 336 B.C.
Thessalonica, 231, an important city at the head of the Thermaic gulf, capital of the Roman province of Macedonia.
Thurii, 299, 307, a Greek oy of Lower Italy, on the gulf of Tarentum, near the site of the ancient Sybaris. Its colonization in 444 B.c. was one of the great projects of Pericles. See the Nictas, v. 2.

Timaeus, 18, 29, 69, 77, 79, 271, 285, 345, 461, of Tauromenium, lived between 350 and 250 B.0. During a long exile in Athens he wrote a voluminous history of his native island from earliest time down to 264 B.0o.
Timon, 35, of Phlius, a philosopher of the Sceptic school, author of a famous satiric poem called Swii, taught successfully at Chalcedon and Athens. He flourished about 280 B.O.

Timonides, the Leucadian, 47, 67, 69, 77, accompanied Dion to Sicily and fought on his side.
Timotheiis, 345, son of Conon the great Athenian admiral. He was made general in 378 B.c., and about 360 was at the height of iia popularity and glory.
Titinius, 223, 225, a centurion.

His story is told also in Appian (B.C. iv. 113) and Valerius Maximus (ix. 9, ext. 2).
Trebonius, 163, 169, Caius T., tribune of the peo fe in 55 B.C., and an instrument of the first triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul and was loaded with favours by him, but joined his murderers.
Tubero, 367, 427, 4338, Quintus Aelius T., son-in-law of Aemilius Paulus. Cf. Valerius Maximus, iv. 4 ext. 9.
V

Vatinlus, 181, Publius V., tribune of the people in 59 B.O., and a aid creature of Caesar. After harsalus, Caesar gave him high command in the Kast. He was compelled to surrender his army to Brutus, but did not forfeit the favour of Octavius and Antony.

Velia, 345, 457, see Hlea.
Volumnius, Publius, 235, 241, 243,
mentioned only here.
x

Xanthus, 131, 195, 197, the largest and most prosperous city of Lycia in Asia Minor, at the mouth of the river of the same name.
Zz

Zacynthus, 47, 49, 119, 121, an island off the western coast of Peloponnesus, the modern Zante.
PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY R. CLAY AND SONS, LTD., BRUNSWICK STREET,
STAMFORD STREET, S.E. I, AND BUNGAY, SUFFOLK,

Pe Pa ee a ee GY meee pene >i ane sabes

PLUTARCH’S |
LIVES WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY
BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
Vil
DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO
ALEXANDER AND CAESAR
}
CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
MOMLXVII
|
|
|
SS SN SIE ae YS

First printed 1919

Reprinted 1928, 1949, 1938, 1967
Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS

PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE .....
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN TIIIS EDITION ,.. Viii

TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES ix
DEMOSTHENES: 5. Go see G7 Bae Sarai le Lh Se fot ee, veo ME]
CICBRO on ¢ 5, 1 oS ee SCE Susi REG Soe eae S(O
COMPARISON OF DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO 211
ATEXANDER 206. 4: ie vend 26 SG Be ee hae Oe
CRRSAR ue ae Ss Aa ee a ew Oo A ee ee DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES 6.-- 6s 61)
PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agree- ment between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any important departure from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the inanuscripts of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. None of the Lives presented in this volume are con- tained in the two oldest and most authoritative manuscripts—the Codex Sangermanensis (S*) and the Codex Seitenstettensis (S), or in the excellent Paris manuscript No. 1676 (F*). Their text there- fore rests principally on the Paris manuscripts Nos. 1671, 1673, and 1674 (ACD), although in a few instances weight has been given to readings from the Codex Matritensis (M*), on the authority of the collations of Charles Graux and his editions of the Demosthenes and Cicero. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader must be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846, 4 voll., 8vo), or to the rather inaccessible text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler, in the Teubner Library of Greek and Latin texts (Vol. IIL, Fase. I. was published in 1915). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared and_ utilized, including those of the Cicero and Caesar by Professor Long. And more or less use has been made of the follow- ing works: Graux, Vie de Démosthene, and Vie de Cicéron, Paris, 1883 and 1882; Holden, Plutarch’s

Demosthenes, Cambridge, Pitt Press Series, 1893; Gudeman, Sources of Plutarch's Cicero, Philadelphia, 1902; Sihler, Cicero of Arpinum, New Haven, 1914, and Annals of Caesar, New York, 1911.
B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.
November, 1918.
Vil

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES

IN THIS

EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE

OF THE GREEK

VoLuME I.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VouuME II.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.
VouumeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-

imus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
VoLuME IV.
(6) Alcibiades and Cortola-
nus.

Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLuME V.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
Coinparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
vill

LIVES.

VouumE VI.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Coniparison.
Vouume VII.

(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
VoutumE VIII.

(15) Sertorius and Kumenes.
Comparison.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
VoLuME IX.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
VoLUME X.

(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.

(10) Philopoemen and Flam-

ininus.

Comparison.
VoutumeE XI.
(24) Aratus.

(23) Artaxerxes.

(25) Galba.

(26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus ind Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.

(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.

(21) Demetrius and Antony.

(22) Dion and brutus.

AHMOSOENH2

‘ tal td A
TI. “O pév yparas to eri TH vixn THs ‘Odvp-
, id z > > , > ,
mia immodpoutas eis “AXKtBiaddnv éyxw.or,
yw) > f G ¢ ‘\ ~ f ra ks
eit’ Evpiridns, @s 0 Todvs Kpatet Aoryos, €i0
9 / a a
ETepos Tis HV, Locate, dyol yYphvat TH evoaipove
na ey Oe ee | / oN » 9 \
mpatov uTapeat “ tav! aod evookipov:” éyw
dé TH pev evdatmovncev pwédAXovTL THY aANOiHY
Dp [LOVELY | iy adi
3 , La 3 by4 \ / ‘ ~ , evoatpoviar, is ev 0c Kal dialéoes TO TWrELTTOV
/ a 2) /
éativ, ovdev Siadhepery nyovpat atofou Kal taTetra A \ U \ al
vAS watpidos pntpos ayoppouv Kat peKpas ye-tf ~ \ yy +] \ > /
veoQat. yeXotov yap El TLS OLoLTO THY lovAiéa, pEp0S pLtKpoVv ovoav ov peyarys vagou THs Kéo,
nw > a]
Kal thy Aiyiwav, hv tov Arttix@v tis éxédevev ws Anunv adatpety tov Ilepatms, vroxpitas N > \ ? \ ? SA y > pev ayabous tTpépety Kal Toitas, avdpa 8 ovK
id f fal

dv wote dtvacOat, oixaltoy Kai avTapKn Kal vody

/ fal

éyovTa Kal peyadouyov TpoeveyKely. Tas yap
7 / > 7 ’ ‘ ’ , Ry ’
ddras Téyvas eiKos €oTL TpOS Epyaciay 7) doEav

cuvictapevas év Tais adofous Kai TaTretvais To0-

, ‘

Aeoiwvy aTropapaiverOar, Thy 8 apeTHV, BoTeEp
N / aA
iayvpov Kai dsapxes hutov, ev atravte pifovcOar

, a \ / a

TOTO, PUES Te KpnoTHS Kal htro7rovov ruxs

, e b % a w~

émtAapBavopevny. O0ev od Amets, ef Te Tod

1 sav Sintenis', and Graux with M®; rh».

Paris
Edition,
a. 1624, p.
846

DEMOSTHENES

I. Tue author of the encomium upon Alcibiades for his victory in the chariot-race at Olympia,! whether he was Euripides, as the prevailing report has it, or some other, says, Sosius,? that the first requisite to a man’s happiness is birth in “a famous city’’; but in my opinion, for a man who would enjoy true happiness, which depends for the most part on character and disposition, it is no disad- vantage to belong to an obscure and mean city, any more than it is to be born of a mother who is of little stature and without beauty. For it were laughable to suppose that Iulis, which is a little part of the smal] island of Ceos, and Aegina, which a certain Athenian was urgent to have removed as an eye-sore of the Piraeus,? should breed good actors and poets, but should never be able to produce a man who is just, independent, wise, and inagnanimous. The arts, indeed, since their object is to bring business or fame, naturally pine away in obscure and mean cities; but virtue, like a strong and hardy plant, takes root in any place, if she finds there a generous nature and a spirit that shuns no labour. Wherefore we also, if we fail to live

1 See the Alcibiudes, chapter xi.

2 One of Plutarch’s Roman friends. See the note on the 7'heseus, i. 1. 3 See the Pericles, vill. 5.

‘The great poet Simonides was of Ceos, and the great actor Polus of Aegina.
3

PLUTARCHS LIVES

ppovety ws Set kai Brody EAAELTOMED, TOUTO TH TMLKPOTNTL THS mat pioos, aX avtois Sixalws aval no ope.
II. Té pévto. cuvtaki vroBeRAnpévw Kai istopiav éE ov mpoxeipwv ovd oixeiwy, adda Eevev Te TOY TONGY Kal over Tr appeveov év eT EpOLs cuviotoay dvayvodLatov, 7@ OVTL xpn

TP@TOV Urdpxew Kal pddiora THY TOW Ev-Soxtpov kal ptrdoxadov cal ToAvavOpwTop, as BiBrtov Te TavtodaTav adOoviav EXOV, Kat é6aa TOUS ypagovras vagevyoura TwWTNpPLA pon wns emupavertépav etAnde mioTu UToAapBaven a aKon Kal StarruvOaropevos, 11) TOAA@Y und' avaryKaiwy évdeés amodidoin TO Epyov. eis 5é pexpav oixouvTes ToALW, Kal iva py HLLKpOTEpa, yevntar piroxwpodvres, év 6é Poun Kal tals wept THY
"Tradiav deat ptBais ov axXodNs ovons yupva-CecOar wept THY "Pwpaixny duddexTov vO ypELav
TodtTiK@y Kal Tov sta dtdocodiav mrnoLa-CovTwy, ore ToTe Kal TOppw THS HAtKias noEapea 'Pwuaixots Ypappacwy evtuyxavel. Kal T pay pa Javpacrov per, GND arn bes emaoXopen.
ov yap obTws éx TOV ovouaToy Ta mpdypara
ouvieval Kat ue piven ouveBarver 1) nuiy, Os €K TOV T PAYLAT@V ALOS ve TOs elXopev eumerpiav érra-xorovbety Oe avta' Kal Tots ovopact. KaAXous dé 'Popairis amayyehias Kal TaXous ai Baver Bar Kal peTapopas ovopaTav ral appovias Kal TOV dddwv ols o AOyos ayddNETAaL, YapLevy pev rryoU' cumerpiav. . . 5: abrd with M4 and Graux: éuweipias...
81a Taira (Bekker, é av... éureiplas).
4

DEMOSTHENES, 1. 3-11. 3

and think as we ought, will justly attribute this, not to the smallness of our native city, but to ourselves.

II. However, when one has undertaken to compose a history based upon readings which are not readily accessible or even found at home, but in foreign countries, for the most part, and scattered about among different owners, for him it is really necessary, first and above all things, that he should live in a city which is famous, friendly to the liberal arts, and populous, in order that he may have all sorts of books in plenty, and may by hearsay and enquiry come into possession of all those details which elude writers and are preserved with more conspicuous fidelity in the memories of men. He will thus be prevented from publishing a work which is deficient in many, and even in essential things. But as for me, I live in a small city, and I prefer to dwell there that it may not become smaller still; and during the time when I was in Rome and various parts of Italy I had no leisure to practise myself in the Roman language, owing to my public duties and the number of my pupils in philosophy. It was therefore late and when | was well on in years that I began to study Roman literature. And here my experience was an astonishing thing, but true. For it was not so much that by means of words I came to a complete understanding of things, as that from things I somehow had an experience which enabled me to follow the meaning of words. But to appreciate the beauty and quickness of the Roman style, the figures of speech, the rhythm, and the other embellishments of the language, while I think it 5

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

peBa KL OUK Tepes" 7 dé pos TOUTO pereTn
Kab doKnows ouK Ev XEpTS, GNN ols Teot Teton Te oXoM) Kal TQ THS @pas éTl TPOS Tas TOLAUTAS ETL a PEt prrorepas.
III. Aco «al ypapovtes év TD BiBrLw TOUT, TOV TApAaAA/AwWY Biwv dvTr TéuTT@, Tept An-pooobévous Kai Kixépwvos, amo tov wpdkewy Kat TOV TOATEL@Y Tas dUEIS aUT@Y Kal Tas dta-Oécets mwpos adAjAAS erro xetroneba, TO 6é TOUS hoyous avreteT ale Kat arropatved Bat TOTEPOS OLov 7) " SeLvoTepos eimeiy, edo open. " Kay yp ws pyaw 6 "lwv, "1 berdivos év yépow Bia," } Ny o mwepittos ev atract Kexidsos ayvonoas éveavievoato avyKptotv Tod AnpooBévous Kal Kuxépwvos ékeveyxetv. GdrG, yap lows, ét TAvTOS HY TO Dvd cavToy" EXEL TPOVELPOV, OVK av éOoKeL Tporrary La. Oetov elvat.
Anpoc Bev yap Kal Kixépava, TOV aurov
EOLKE TRATTOV aT apxis 0 Sai pov TONAAS jev epBanreiv els THY puow aur ov TOV OMOLOTHT OY, @omEep TO Perorepov Kal prredevepov ev TH
TonTEla, ™ pos dé KLVOUVOUS Kal TONELOUS aTON-pov, TONG oy avapl€at Kal TOV TUX POD. &vo
yep ETEPOUS ovK av eupel van Sond prtopas eK

pev adofov Kal pK p@v iayvpous Kal peyarous
YEVOMEVOUS, TporKpovaavTas 6é Bactrebou Kal
TUPAVVOLS, Ouyatépas & aToBaXovtas, é exTe OVTAS 6é THs matpidos, KaterOdvtas S€ peta TepAs, d Kart . . . Bla an iambic trimeter (Nauck, 7rag. Graec. Frag." p. 744), restored by Reiske: Kaxel. .. "Iwv, deApivos . Bla (for in this attempt the dolphin's might would be on dry land).

6

847

DEMOSTHENES, 11. 3-171. 3

a graceful accomplishment and one not without its pleasures, still, the careful practice necessary for attaining this is not easy for one like me, but appropriate for those who have more leisure and whose remaining years stil] suffice for such pursuits.

III. Therefore, in this fifth book! of my Parallel Lives, where I write about Demosthenes and Cicero, I shall examine their actions and their political careers to see how their natures and dispositions compare with one another, but I shall make no critical comparison of their speeches, nor try to show which was the more agreeable or the more powerful orator. " For useless," as Ion says, "is a dolphin's might upon dry ground," a maxim which Caecilius, who goes to excess in everything, forgot when he boldly ventured to put forth a comparison of Demosthenes and Cicero. But really it is possible that, if the "Know thyself" of the oracle? were an easy thing for every man, it would not be held to be a divine injunction.

In the case of Demosthenes and Cicero, then, it would seem that the Deity originally fashioned them on the same plan, implanting in their natures many similarities, such as their love of distinction, their love of freedom in their political activities, and their lack of courage for wars and dangers, and uniting in them also many similarities of fortune. For in my opinion two other orators could not be found who, from smal] and obscure begin- nings, became great and powerful; who came into conflict with kings and tyrants; who lost each a daughter; who were banished from their native cities and returned with honour; and who, after

1 See the note on the Dion, ii. 4. 2 At Delphi,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

amoépavtas & avdis cai AndOévtas bro TeV ToOAELioVv, dua dSé Tavoapéevy TH TOV TOALTOV
éhevOepia tov Biov ovycatactpéavtas' woTe, ei yévotto TH hvoer Kal TH TUX KAOaTrEp TEXVI-Tails autdrAa, yarevas av StaxptOjvat toTeEpov avTn Tols TpOTrOLS 7) TOS Tpaywaciv EKELYN TOUS
dvépas opototépovs ameipyactat. dextéov Oé qept Tov MpecButépou mpoTeEpov.
1V. Anpoobévns o tratnp Anpoabévous hv peév
Tav Kadk@v Kal aya0av avipav, ws toTopet Ocorroptros, émexanreito b€ payaipotroLos épyaaTiplov exw péya Kat SovAovs TExXViTAS TOUS
TouTo mpatrovras. & 6 Aiayivns o pntwp eipnKe Tept Ths pntpos, ws ek LvAwvos Tivos én' aitia mpodocias dhevryovtos €& aoteos yeyovoe cat Bap-Bapov yuvatxos, ovK Exopev ettrety eit' adnOas elpnxev elte Bracdynuav Kat Katarevdopevos.
atrorerdeis & o Anpoobévns vireo Tov tTatpos émTaéTns év evTropia (putKpoy yap atréduTreV 1)
CULTATA Tinols AVTOU THS OvoLas TrevTEKaibeKa TAAAVTOV) UTO TaV éTLTPOTMV HOLKHON, TA [eV
voodioapmévoyv, Ta © apedrnoavtar, WaTE Kal TOV
d:dacKkddXwv avtod Tov picOdv aTrooTEpijcat. did TE 61) TOUTO TOV éupEer@v Kal TPOTHNKOVTOY érEv-Oépp racdi paOnudtwv atraidevtos doxel yevéea Oat Kat 1a THY TOD cMpaTos aabéveray Kal OpvYnr, ov Tpoieu"evns Tots Trovots THS "NTPOS avTov, ovdE
mpocBialouevov TOY Taldaywyav. nv yap é& APXS KATLAXVOS KAL voTwdNS, Kal TV NoLdopoL-8 DEMOSTHENES, 111. 3-iv. 3

taking to flight again and being captured by their enemies, ended their lives as soon as their countrymen ceased to be free. So that, if there should be a competition between nature and fortune, as between artists, it would be difficult to decide whether the one made the men more alike in their characters, or the other in the circumstances of their lives. But I must speak of the more ancient first.
IV. Demosthenes, the father of Demosthenes, belonged to the better class of citizens, as Theopompus tells us, and was surnamed Cutler, because he had a large factory and slaves who were skilled workmen in this business. But as for what Aeschines

the orator says of the mother of Demosthenes,} namely, that she was a daughter of one Gylon, who was banished from the city on a charge of treason, and of a barbarian woman, I cannot say whether he speaks truly, or is uttering slander and lies. However, at the age of seven, Demosthenes was left by his father in affluence, since the total value of his estate fell little short of fifteen talents ;? but he was wronged by his guardians, who appropriated some of his property to their own uses and neglected the rest, so that even his teachers were deprived of their pay. It was for this reason, as it seems, that he did not pursue the studies which were suitable and proper for a well-born boy, and also because of his bodily weakness and fragility, since his mother would not permit him to work hard in the _palaestra, and his tutors would not force him to do so. For from the first he was lean and sickly, and_ his 1 On the Crown, §§ 171 f.
2 A talent was equivalent to about £235, or $1,200, with five or six times the purchasing power of modern money.

9 or

to

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 > , N , 3 Si a“ pévny émwvupiav, tov Butadov, eis TO copa / ld es a] , a NEyeTaL skKaTTOLEVOS UTO TaY Taidwy aBfeiv.
$ \ € / e \ ” / ’ \ nV 6€ o Batados, ws peev EVLOL dacty, AVANTNS n é ‘ 4 ral
TOV KATEAYOTWV, KAL OpapaTioy Eis TOUTO KwLO-
a“ N >] i /
Sav avtov ’Avtidavyns tweToinkev. vioe dé tives
wn \ fA
@S TOLNTOUV TpYdepa Kat Trapotvia ypadovTos aA 4 a N a tov Batadou péuvnviat. Sdoxet 6€ Kai TeV ovK

a n a , / EVTIpPEeTO@V TL AEVOHVAL TOV GHUATOS LOPLaY Tapa
a > wn 4 n e 9
tots Attixois tote KkadreicoGart Batadros. o 6
> nw \ wn Zc wn“ g Apyas (kat tovto yap dace T@ Anpoabéver
, , xX \ N 4
yeveoOat Tapwvum“ov) Tpos TOV TpOTTO!, ws
/ \ \ U
Onpiwdn Kat wiKpov é€7TéOyn: Tov yap oduv Evtot
a nw “ > A ‘N
TOV TOLNT@VY Upyav ovoudlovoivy’ Tpos Tov
/ a / AOYOV, WS GAVL@AVTA TOUS AKpowpévoUS’ Kal yap Apyas Tovvoua Tointns nv vopwy Tovnpayv Kal
/ a , apyaréwv. Kat Tavta pev TavTy.} riya be \ \ f e a b) \ 5) A
V. Tis d€ apos Tous Noyous opens apxXnV avT@
Ah 4 ~ cs
hace totavtTnv yeveoPar. Kaddtotpatou tov pi)-
4 N ’ a
Topos aywrivecbar tHv Tept OQpwrov Kptiow év nw 4 4 > 4 n /
T@ SLKATTNPLW p“EXNOVTOS TY mTpocdokta THs diKns
, \ a ef ? b] aA
peydAn ova TE THY TOD PHTOpos SUvamuLy, avOovVTOS
U , el 60 \ PS \ \ a 5
TOTE padtota TH OOEN, Kal dta THY TPAELY OvVaaY
, , e / a
TeptBontov. axovoas ovv o Anpoalévns tav
4 a A didackddAwy Kal Tov Talbaywoyov cuvtTi Gepéevwr
a 4 wn f + nw
TH OlKn Tapatuyelyv, Everce TOY EavTOU Traiba-NX 4 - 4
ywyov Seopevos Kal mpoOvpuovpmevos OTwsS avToV

1 After these words Bekker retains the xara MAdtwva which Coraés, Sintenis, and Graux, after Wyttenbach, reject asa gloss. Cf, Plato, Symposium, p. 220, ec.

opprobrious surname of Batalus is said to have been given him by the boys in mockery of his physique. Now Batalus, as some say, was an effeminate flute-player, and Antiphanes wrote a farce in which he held him up to ridicule for this. But some speak of Batalus as a poet who wrote voluptuous verses and drinking songs. And it appears that one of the parts of the body which it is not decent to name was at that time called Batalus by the Athenians. But the name of Argas (for they tell us that Demosthenes had this nickname also) was given him either with reference to his manners, which were harsh and savage, the snake being called “argas’’ by some of the poets; or with reference to his way of speaking, which was distressing to his hearers, Argas being the name of a composer of vile and disagreeable songs. So much on this head.

V. The origin of his eager desire to be an orator, they tell us, was as follows. Callistratus the orator was going to make a plea in court on the question of Oropus,'! and the trial was eagerly awaited, not only because of the ability of the orator, who was then at the very height of his reputation, but also because of the circumstances of the case, which was notorious. Accordingly, when Demos- thenes heard the teachers and tutors agreeing among themselves to be present at the trial, with great importunity he persuaded his own tutor to 1 In 366 B.c. Oropus, a town on the confines of Attica and Boeotia, was wrested from Athens by the Thebans. Sub- sequently there was « trial for treason at Athens, in which Callistratus the orator and Chabrias the general figured, but the details of the trial are obscure.

/ \ \ b ; e 8 Vv X \ ayayot Tpos THY axpoacw. o 8 éywy pds TOUS
x 4 ,
avoiyovtas Ta dtxactyHpta Snuocious cuvnberap,
? a ¢ a ,
evropnoe Ywopas év 7 KaBi}mEVvOS 0 Tais ddynrAwWS AKOUGETAL TOV REYOuevWY. eEvNLEP)GaVTOS 6é
a / A
tod Kaddotpatou Kat Gaupacbévtos UTepduas, \ / i a éxetvou pev eCnrAwoe THv do€av, opwy mpoTEuTo-

\ a “A \ f aA
Levoy UT TY TOMMY Kal paxapLlopevov, TOD
5€ Aoyou padrov ePavyace Kal KaTevonae THY 1 yetpotabar Kat tiAacever / ee see \ \ , \ TepuxoTos. O0ev édcas Ta NoiTa pabiuata Kal
f \ \ Tas Tatiixas StatpiBas, avTOS auTOY HoKer Kal
a if A n~
Suemovet tais pedrétas, ws av Tov AeyovTwY 9 égouevos Kat autos. éxpnaato 6é ‘Ioaiw pds
a , ?
Tov AOyov Udnyntn, Kaitwep ‘laoxpatous Torte sy 7 /
gTYOAdoVTOS, ELTE, WS TIVES NEYOVGI, TOV MPLA “EvOV
/
picOov “Iooxpate: tedkécar pn Suvdapuevos, tas
, a \ \ » 4 ” va a
Séxa pvas, dra tHv opdaviav, elite wadrov Tod
\ , f a
"Iaaiov tov doyov ws Spactipiov Kai tavodp-
? /
yov émi tHv xpelay amrodexomevos. “Kppemaos / road
dé dno ddecToTaAs vTopYipaciw évtuyeiy év
\ /
ols éyéypamto tov AnpooBérny cuveryorakévat HWratwve Kat wretotov ets Tovs NOyous w@pEdF-
, \ i f \
oGat, KrnowBiov 6€ péuyntat Réyortos Tapa
a , ,
Kadrtov tot Suvpaxouaiouv Kai tivwv AGAXwWY TAS
’ , / \ \ > A ?
Icoxpatovs téxvas Kal Tas “AdKiOduavtos Kpida
s N / n NaBovta tov AnuoobEevnv Karapadeiv.
e a a“
VI. (Os yotv ev ArtKia yevopevos tots émt-Tpomots pEato buxalecGar Kal Noyoypadeiv én’
’ \ € ’
to XUV @MS TAaAVTAa
1 os wavta Graux with M®: awdvra.

take him to the hearing. This tutor, having an acquaintance with the public officials who opened the courts, succeeded in procuring a place where the boy could sit unseen and listen to what was said. Callistratus won his case and was extravagantly adinired, and Demosthenes conceived a desire to emulate his fame, seeing him escorted on his way by the multitude and congratulated by all; but he had a more wondering appreciation of the power of his oratory, which was naturally adapted to subdue and master all opposition. Wherefore, bidding farewell to his other studies and to the usual pursuits of boyhood, he practised himself laboriously in declamation, with the idea that he too was to be an orator. He also employed Isaeus as his guide to the art of speaking, although Isocrates was lecturing at the time; either, as some say, because he was an orphan and unable to pay Isocrates his stipulated fee of ten minas,! or because he preferred the style of Isaeus for its effectiveness and adaptability in actual use. But Hermippus says that he once came upon some anonymous memoirs in which it was recorded that Demosthenes was a pupil of Plato and got most help from him in his rhetorical studies. He also quotes Ctesibius as saying that from Callias the Syracusan and certain others Demosthenes secretly obtained the rhetorical systems of Isocrates and Alcidamas and mastered thei.

VI. However this may be, when Demosthenes came of age he began to bring suits against his guardians and to write speeches attacking them.

1 Equivalent to about £40, or $200, with five or six times the purchasing power of modern money.

avtous ToAAaS dtadvcEls Kal Tadwvd.iKias evpi-
\ \ /
oKOVTAas, éyyupVvacdpevos, KATA TOV MovKvdidny,
va / ’ a

Tais peréTais ovK aKivdUVwWS OVS apy@s, KaTEv-
/ > a \ Oe \ 10 10
Tuxnoas éxT@pak&at pev ovdé ToANOaTOY HovYNnON
a ’ lA N \ \
Hépos TOY TaTpMwY, TOApay 5é TpPOS TO Aéyev Kal cvvnbeav ixavyv AaBwv Kal yevoapevos THs
aA / \ /
Wept Tovs ay@vas dtroTipias Kat duvapews ére-
/ \ \
YElpNoev Els METOY TrapLévat KAL TA KOLVAa TpaT\ / rd \ b] rd
tev. Kal Kabatep Aaopédovta tov ’Opyopéviov iv, / \ \ , ,
Aéyouat KayeELav TIVA OTANVOS auvVopevoy Spo-Hols paxkpolts xpholat Tov LaTpaV KEdXEvodYTMD, ssp ee 4 \ ir4 > / ~
ei@ ovtws dtatrovncarta Thy EEw éemiPécOat Tots
/ a aA ,
aoTepavitals ay@ou. Kal ToY akpwv yevéobar SorLryospouwy, ovT@s TO AnpodOéver cuveBn TO Xx p lad = é Teed ”
A ig a 207 bd
TpaTtov étavoplwaews evexa TOV idiwy aTrodvYTL
\
Tpos TO A€yetv, €x TOUTOV KTHTAapévw SEeLVOTHTA
, “a al
Kal Ovvapuv év Tois ToXrLTLKOls dn Kaladmep aTepavitats ay@ot TpwTevey TOV amd TOD By-patos aywyilouévov TorLTOV.
f a a Kaitot To ye mpw@tov évtuyxavwv TO dHuw
, / \ a Be os
GopvBots wepiémimte Kal KaTeyeraTo Ou anOeay, Tov oyou auyKexXvaat Tals Tepiodots Kal Be-4 a nm
BacavicOat tots évOuynpace mixpa@s ayay Kal
/ a / Kataxopws Soxovvtos. Av Oé TLS, ws EoLKe, Kal
A > / x , b] 4 \ /
doris acbévera Kai yAwTTNs adodgea cal Tvev-
, \ a a
patos KoAoBoTnS émiTapaTTovaa Tov vodv TOY
Neyouévwv TO SitacTacbat Tas Teptodovs. TédOS
A is
8 aroctavta Tov diyov Kal peuBouevoy év Ilee-

They devised many evasions and new trials, but Demosthenes, after practising himself in these exercises, as Thucydides says,! not without toil and danger, won his cause, although he was able to recover not even a small fraction of his patrimony. However, he acquired sufficient practice and confidence in speaking, and got a taste of the distinction and power that go with forensic contests, and therefore essayed to come forward and engaye in public matters. And just as Laomedon the Orchomenian—so we are told— practised long-distance running by the advice of his physicians, to ward off some disease of the spleen, and_ then, after restoring his health in this way, entered the great games and became one of the best runners of the long course, so Demosthenes, atter applying himself to oratory in the first place for the sake of recovering his private property, by this means acquired ability and power in speaking, and at last in public business, as it were in the great games, won the first place among the citizens who strove with one another on the bema.

And yet when he first addressed the people he was interrupted by their clamours and laughed at for his inexperience, since his discourse seemed to them confused by long periods and too harshly and immoderately tortured by formal arguments. He had also, as it would appear, a certain weakness of voice and indistinctness of speech and shortness of breath which disturbed the sense of what he said by disjoining his sentences. And finally, when he had forsaken the assembly and was wandering about

1 Kal dumeipdrepot eyévorto meta Kivdtvwv Tas meAETaS ToOLOU- neva: (i. 18, 3 of the Athenians and Lacedaemonians).

r5

to

parel dv’ adupiayv Evvopos) Opiacros 78m Tavu
YEpon | Geacdpuevos _émreTinnaey, OTL TOV ovyov
EXeov OM“oLtoTAaTOV TO Tlepexréous Tpodiboaty vm aTohplas kal paraxtas eQuTOV, ove TOUS dxAous

UptaTdpevos ev0apa@s, oUTE TO Gau"a Tpos
TOUS ayavas éEaptuopevos, GANA TpUdH TepLopav Mapatvopevov.
VIL. Wladiv b€ roté hac éxrecovtos avtod Kat amtovtos oixade auyKxeyupévou? xal Bapéws épovtos émakorovOjocat LatTvpov Tov vVroKpiTHy
€m 677) 0€LOV 6vTa Kat cuverdeiv. odupopevov dé
TOU Anpoo Gevous Toos avTov GTt TavTwy dido-TOVWTATOS WV 7 Ov AeyovTwy Kak puxpod déwv KaTAVvahw@Keva THY TOU TOMATOS dx une ELS TOUTO
xa pe OUK EVEL T pos TOV Ofpov, ara KparTaray-TES avOpe rot vavtat Kai dpadeis aK OvOVTAL Kal
KaTéyouat TO Biyua, Tapopatas 8 autos, ’AdnOH Néyers, @ Anpoabeves,” havat Tov Latupor, “arr éy@ TO aitvov Lao ope Bees ay po. TOV Eupe-mi8ov TW, pyoewv y Lopoxreous ededyjons el TTeELy amTO oTOpatos. ettrovtos bé TOU Anioa Gevous peTaraBovta tov Latvpov obtw wrdcar Kal SueEeAOety év Oe: mpétovtT: Kai cvabéces THv avuTny phow wad dros /erepay T@ Anpoobever pavivar. meta Jévra, oy da-ov ex TAS UToKpiTEws
TO NOYO KOo Ov Kal XapeTos TporErTe, fuLK pov iyjoacbar Kal TO pndev evar THY aoKyot a [e-AovvtTe THs mpodhopas Kal d:abécews TOV eEyo-pévwv. €k TOUTOV KaTdyELoV péy oiKodouncat 1 guyxexuuevou Graux with M4; guykexaduppévou (with muffled head).
16

dejectedly in the Piraeus, Eunomus the Thriasian, who was already a very old man, caught sight of him
and upbraided him because, although he had a style of speaking which was most like that of Pericles, he was throwing himself away out of weakness and lack of courage, neither facing the multitude with boldness, nor preparing his body for these forensic contests, but suffering it to wither away in slothful negtiect.
VII. At another time, too, they say, when he had been rebuffed by the people and was going off homewards disconcerted and in great distress, Satyrus the actor, who was a familiar acquaintance of his, followed after and went indoors with him. Demos- thenes lamented to him that although he was the most laborious of all the orators and had almost used up the vigour of his body in this calling, he had no favour with the people, but debauchees, sailors, and illiterate fellows were listened to and held the bema, while he himself was ignored. “ You are right, Demosthenes,” said Satyrus, “ but I will quickly remedy the cause of all this, if you will con- sent to recite off-hand for me some narrative speech from Euripides or Sophocles.’’ Demosthenes did so, whereupon Satyrus, taking up the same speech after him, gave it such a form and recited it with such appropriate sentiment and disposition that it appeared to Demosthenes to be quite another. Per- suaded, now, how much of ornament and grace action lends to oratory, he considered it of little or no use for a man to practise declaiming if he neglected the delivery and disposition of his words. After this, we are told, he built a subterranean

17

PLUTARCH S3biyv is

A \ nA
pedAeTHTHpLoV, 0 On StecwleTo Kal Kal nuas,
a \ ,
evTavda b€ TAaVTWS MeV EXaTTNS Nuépas KATLOVTA
\ , \ a TAATTELY THY VTOKpLOW Kai SiaTovEly THY huvyp,
, \ \ wn ¢ A ? \ wn ,
mo\Adkis d€ Kai pnvas ERs Sv0 Kal Tpéeis ouva-
, fol fal
mre, Evpovpevoy THs Kepadns Oatepov pépos
“ / , A
vmép Tov noe BovrAopevw wavy TpoedOeiv evdéyeobar bt aicyvvny.
‘ \
VIII. Ov pany dddXa Kal Tas mpos TOUS éxTOS
9 ‘4 ‘ f \ 9 / ¢ f
evtevéels Kal oyous Kal aaxyorlas vi7obéceEts
3 a \ b \ a a >
ETTOLELTO KAL adoppas Tov dtrAoTOVElW. aATrad-
\ A Nayels yap avT@v TaytoTa KaTéBatvev els TO 4 \ i, / sf > fal
pereTnTyptov, Kali OveEner Tas Te mpdEes edeEis ° \ wn y
Kal TOUS UTEP AUT@V aTrOoAOYIapoUS. eTL b€ TOUS
/ /
Noyous ols mapéTvye Aeyouévots, avarapPavov
‘ > , ~ \ /
ElS EAUTOV ELS YYWpAS aViyye Kat Teplobous, émrapv-
\ \
opAwdets TE TaVTOOATTIAS Kal peTappdcels exaLvo-

fa) / e ° \
TOMEL TMV ELpNnuevwy Ud’ ETEpOV Tpos EauTOV +}
A | /
id’ avtov Tadiv mpos adrov. €x ToUvToOU do€av
3 e 3 b] \ ? 5] 3 3 ,
ELYEY WS OVK EVvpUNS WY, AAN Ex TrOVOU GUYKEL-
/ . , , id
pévn ServoTnTts Kai duvdmer Xpwpevos. €ddxKeEL TE
A 2 , \ \ , fod
TOUTOU ONMELOV EivaL péya TO wy Padlws aKovcai
/ aN a , 3 \ \
Tiva Anpoalévous EmTl KALPOU NEYOVTOS, AXAA Kal
, 3 9 t , a ,
xkadnpevov €v exkdAnoia ToddaKis TOD Snpou
a a“ > \ KAXODVTOS OVOpaTTL wn TapedOelv, EL pn TUYOL
, > a“ TeppovTik@s Kal TrapEedKEevacpévos. Els TODTO
n fal 4
d€ adAOL TE TOAAOL TOV Sypaywyav éxreva Lop
9 , \ , 3 ie 3 lA SYA
avrov, kat IIlvGéas éemickwmtwy edXdUXViwY Edn-18

study, which, in fact, was preserved in our time,]! and into this he would descend every day without exception in order to form his action and cultivate his voice, and he would often remain there even for two or three months together, shaving one side of his head in order that shame might keep him from going abroad even though he greatly wished to do so.

VIII. Nor was this all, but he would make his interviews, conversations, and business with those outside, the foundation and starting point for eager toil. For as soon as he parted from his associates, he would go down into his study, and there would go over his transactions with them in due order, and the arguments used in defence of each course. And still further, whatever speeches he chanced to hear delivered he would take up by himself and reduce to propositions and pcriods, and he would in- troduce all sorts of corrections and changes of ex- pression into the speeches made by others against himself, or, contrariwise, by himself against others. Consequently it was thought that he was not a man of good natural parts, but that his ability and power were the product of toil. And there would seem to be strong proof of this in the fact that Demosthenes was rarely heard to speak on the spur of the moment, but though the people often called upon him by name as he sat in the assembly, he would not come forward unless he had given thought to the question and was prepared to speak upon it. For this, many of the popular leaders used to rail at him, and Pytheas, in particular, once told him scoflingly that his arguments smelt of lamp-

1 An erroneous tradition identifies this with the choragic monument of Lysicrates (the ‘‘ Lantern of Demosthenes ”).

3 “~ \ a 9
4 cev oe avtov Ta evOupHnuata. TovTOV pev OUv
A - \
nueipato mixpas o Anpoobévns: “OU tadTa F230 es BeOS \ ea (aye e , yap, elev, “éuot Kat coi, ® Ilva, o XvYVOS
- 39 N N ‘ ” bd] -
guvolse.” mpos S€ TOUS AAXOUS Ov TravTdTacLD
> la
ny e€apvos, adr ovTEe ypatras oi’T adypada
a / \ Koutoy A€yetv @pmoroyer. Kai pévTo. OnpotiKov
’ , v x , a avrépawev avdpa Tov réye pereT@vTa: Oepa-
N a
Teas yap €ivat TovTO Snuwov TapacKeuny, TO 8
vd ° € \ N \ , 9
omws e€ovolv ol TOAXOL POs TOY AOYoV adpov-
A 3 “a \ , A A A
TiaTelv OrLYapyLKOD Kat Bia parrov % meOot
, A \ ‘ \ b] / ’ A
5 MpocéyovTos. THs d€ Mpos KaLpoY aTOApias avTOD
Kat TOUTO ToLoDYTaL onpetlov, OTL Anuddns pev
9 , , 4 b) \ 3
exeivy GopuBynOevte ToAANdKis avactTas eK Trpo-
A a 9 ,
Xelpov auvettev, éexetvos O ovdérote Anuddn.
, e ,
IX. [lodev ody, hain tes av, 0 Ataxivns mpos
\ a ,
THY Ev TOLS AOYyoLs TOALaVv POavpaciwTaToY aTe-
“4 A a
Kader Tov avdpa; mas dé Ivdam tH Bulartio
4 AS LSA al x A 9
Opacuvomévw Kal péovTt TOAA® Kata Tov "AOn-
? \ f nn al
valwy avaotas povos avteizev, Aapayou tov
, , 3 s b] a \

Mupwvatov yeypadotos éyxap.ov “AXeEdvdpou Kat
, a /
DPirimrmov tay Baciréwv, ev & TOANA OnBaious
5 / > f a \ 93 ,
2 xat OnrvvOtous etpyKes Kaxos, Kal dvaylvwoKov-
6] if ‘ tos Ondvpriaci, mapactas cai deeEeXOav pel” e U ¢ y
iotopias cal amrodetEews boa OnBaiow xat Xad-
“A e \
KLOEvoWW UTdpyet Kaka Tpos THY ‘EXXAdSa, Kal
1 See Aeschines, On the Crown, § 152.

wicks. To him, then, Demosthenes made a sharp answer. “Indeed,” said he, “thy lamp and mine, O Pytheas, are not privy to the same pursuits.” To the rest, however, he made no denial at all, but confessed that his speeches were neither altogether unwritten, nor yet fully written out. Moreover, he used to declare that he who rehearsed his speeches was a true man of the people: for such preparation was a mark of deference to the people, whereas heedlessness of what the multitude will think of his speech marks a man of oligarchical spirit, and one who relies on force rather than on persuasion. Another circumstance, too, is made a proof of his lack of courage for an emergency, namely, that when he was interrupted by the clamours of the people, Demades often rose and spoke off-hand in his support, but he never rendcred such a service to Demades.

IX. How, then, some one might say, could Aeschines call him a man of the most astonishing boldness in his speeches?! And how was it that, when Python of Byzantium? was inveighing with much boldness and a great torrent of words against the Athenians, Demosthenes alone rose up and spoke against him? Or how did it happen that, when Lamachus the Myrinaean had written an encomium on Kings Philip and Alexander, in which many injurious things were said of Thebes and Olynthus, and while he was reading it aloud at Olympia,? Demosthenes came forward and rehearsed with historical proofs all the benefits which the peoples of ‘Thebes and Chal- cidice had conferred upon Greece, and, on the other

2 An envoy of Philip to the Athenian assembly, in 343 B.c, See Demosthenes, On the Crown, § 136. 3 In 324 B.c.

VOL. VII. B 21

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TAALY OTWY ALTLOL YEYOVAGL KAKWY Of KONAKEVOD-
/ ¢ / /
tes Maxedovas, otTws éréatpewre ToUs TapovTas
e 4 “~ \ “~
@aTe deitcavTa TH DopvRw Tov copiatHy vTEKOvlo f
Val THS Tavynyvupeas ;
3 ? ” ¢ b] \ lo) / \ \
AXX €otxevy 0 avnp tov IlepixXéous Ta pev
” \ \ ¢ \ ¢ J \ \ /
Gra pay TpPOs AVTOY nynoac Bat, TO dé TES ja, Kal TOV TXNMAT LT wov avToD Kal TO [1 TAXEWS
pnde mepl TAVTOS €x TOU TA PLOT AsLeEVvOU Neyer, @aTEp ek TOUTOV peyarov yeyovoTos, CyA@Y Kal oh \ la) a [ulLovpevos, ov Tavu mpocieccOat THY év TO KAaLp@
i #0? 3 \ / / e \ > A
do€av, oO eri TUYN TOANAKLS EX@V Elvat TroLEL-\ f f \
Oat THv Suvapuy. errel ToApay ye Kal Oapaos oi
AexOevres vn aUTOv oryor | TOV ypapevtov pan-
Nov eiXov, ev te Set Toa TEVEW ‘Epatoo Géver Kal
Anpntpte TO Parnpet Kab Tots KopiKots, Ov
"Epatocbévns pe pnow avTov év Tots Novos
Toraxod yeyovevar TapaBaxxov, 0 6€ Parnpevs
TOV E L/L Pov éxelvov Opkov Opfocal OTE TPOS TOV Sov wamep evOovotavTa:
LA YAY, MA KPHVAS, MA TOTApLOUS, WA VapaTa.

A a e M4 \ A
TOV O€ KWOMLKOV O LEV TLS AVTOV aTTOKAAEL poTo-
e \ 4 v4
mepTrepnOpav, 0 S€ TAPATK@TTOV WS YPwpLEVOY
fal A
TO avtiléTo hyaclv ovTas:
A. avéXaBev @otrep ExaBev.
B. nyadTnoev av
X

TO phya TovTO TaparaBov Anuocbérns.

1 Kock, Com. Att. Frag. ii. p. 128. From Plutarch's Morals, p. 845 b, it is to be inferred rather that this was a verse of Antiphanes_ ridiculing the perfervid manner of Demosthenes. 2 Kock, op. cit., ili, p. 461.

hand, all the evils of which the flatterers of the Macedonians had been the cause, and thereby so turned the minds of the audience that the sophist was terrified at the outery against him and slunk away from the festival assemblage ?

But although Demosthenes, as it would appear, did not regard the other characteristics of Pericles as suitable for himself, he admired and sought to imitate the formality 0: his speech ana bearing, as wel) ag his refusal to speak suddenly or on every subject that might present itself, as if his greatness was due to these things; but he by no means sought the reputation which is won in a sudden emergency, nor did he often of his own free will stake his influence upon chance. However, those orations which were spoken off-hand by him had more courage and boldness than those which he wrote out, if we are to put any confidence in Eratosthenes, Demetrius the Phalerian, and the comic poets. Of these, Eratosthenes says that often in his speeches Demosthenes was like one frenzied, and the Phal- erean says that once, as if under inspiration, he swore the famous metrical oath to the people :—

" By earth, by springs, by rivers, and by streams,''! Of the comic poets, one calls him a " rhopoperpere-thras," or trunpery-braggart,? and another, ridiculing his use of the antithesis, says this :-—

(First slave) " My master, as he took, retook."'

(Second slave (?)) " Demosthenes would have been delighted to take over this phrase."' %

3 Kock, op. cit., ii. p. 80. A verse precedes which may be translated : ''My master, on reveiving all his patrimony," and the point appsrently is that the heir took what was a gift as his rightful due.

' N > \ 5 , 8 XN ¢ \ ¢ 4
EXTOS EL py VN Ata mpos Tov uiep AXovynaov
, CaF , \ \ / A '
Noyov o Avtehavns Kal tovti wéracyev, hv 'AOn-
/ / \ ,

vaiots Anpocbévns cuveBovreve fn AapPRaveur, \ 4
QXN aTo\apBaverv mapa Piditmov.
r i 4
X. WAjv tov ye Anuddnv wavtes wporoyour
a bs \ s
tH pve Yp@LEVOY AviknTov Eivat, Kal TapadépEev
) 3 * ye X la ; / ,
avtTooyecuitovTa tas tod Anpoodevous oxerress \ ’ ’ ’ » ¢ aie \
Kal TapacKkevas. “Apiaotwv 5 0 Xtios kat @eo-
\ / U \ a ,
dpdatou tiva dofav taTopynKe Tepl TOV PNTOpwY.
€ afr lo’ /
epwTnGevta yap omroios Tis avTO haiveTtat PHnTwp & f > ~ cou fel U 99
o AnpoocOévns, etrety: A&tos THs Toews:
id a ¢ \ , ¢ omrotos O€ Anuadns, “'Trép tiv wort.” o &
? , € ~ N
autos ditocopos Wodvevxtov tatopet Tov Lprjr-
a , ,
TLov, Eva TOV TOTE ToALTEVop“évoY ~AOHYnoL>,
N
aTopaivecOat péytotov pev eivat pytopa Anpo-
, , \ a] / ~
obévny, duvvatwtatov 6é etmety Pwxiwva: Tret\ ? , , al ’ / \
atov yap ev Bpayutatyn NE~et vouv exdhépetv. Kal
\ \ / , ¢
pevtos Kat tov AnpooBerny daciv ator, oadKis
A 4 ’ A > A ,) , ,
av’ avtepov avt@® Pwxiwv avaPatvot, réyeuv \ \ ‘0 cee a x, A , \ mpos tous avvnfes: “H trav éu@v Aoyev Kkoris
, ” “
GVITTATAL. TOUTO MeV OY AONAOY ETE TPOS TOY
/ lal NaN e
Noyov Tov avdpos 0 Anpoabérns el're mpos Tov
, \ \ ’ 3 , ns r \
Biov cal tiv doEav érerov0e:, ToAX@Y TavU Kal
~ if A ~ ~
WaKp@v Tepicdwyv ev phua Kal veda mot
3 > id /
EYovTos avOpwrou KuUpL@TEpov ryoUpEVos.

,r rv nw \ ~ 9 f of
XI. Tots 6€ cwpatixois éXatTwpact ToLavTnY
a 4 e \
emnyev aoxnat, ws o Parnpevs Anurntptos tato-1 4y omitted by Bekker, after Coraés and Schaefer ; also by Graux with Ma.
24

DEMOSTHENES, tx. 5-x1. 1

Unless, indeed, this, too, was a jest of Antiphanes upon the speech of Demosthenes concerning Halonnesus,! in which the orator counselled the Athenians not to take the island from Philip, but to re-_ take it.

X. Still, all men used to agree that Demades, in the exercise of his natural gifts, was invincible, and that when he spoke on the spur of the moment he surpassed the studied preparations of Demosthenes. And Ariston the Chian records an opinion which Theophrastus also passed upon the two orators. When he was asked, namely, what sort of an orator he thought Demosthenes was, he replied: " Worthy of the city''; and what Demades, "Too good for the city." And the same philosopher tells us that Polyeuctus the Sphettian, one of the political leaders of that time at Athens, declared that Demosthenes was the greatest orator, but Phocion the most in- fluential speaker; since he expressed most sense in fewest words. Indeed, we are told that even De- mosthenes himself, whenever Phocion mounted the bema to reply to him, would say to his intimates: "Here comes the chopper of my speeches." Now, it is not clear whether Demosthenes had this feeling towards Phocion because of his oratory, or because of his life and reputation, believing that a single word or nod from a man who is trusted has more power than very many long periods.

XI. For his bodily deficiencies he adopted the exercises which I shall describe, as Demetrius the Phalerian tells us, who says he heard about them from 1 Or. vii., wrongly attributed to Demosthenes. There is in § 5 a phrase similar to the one under comment.

25

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

A / 3 " / ? , ,
pet, A€ywv avTod Anpoolévous axovev mpecBv-
/ \ ' U
TOU YEyGVOTOS, THY pev acagelav KAL TPAVAOTYTA
a , ? , x " b] \
THS yAwTTns éxBiuilerbat cai bvapOpotrv ets TO / / id \ etd a / oTopa Wyhovs AauBavorvta Kat poe apa dé-
\ > a /

yovTa, THY de Paviy €v Tols Spopwers yupvaler Oat
A X \ \ ,
Kal Tals POs TA Lua TpoaBaceot diareyouevov
\ / / a Kal NOyous Tivas 1) TTLYOUS ama TO Tvevpate
/ / > > b] a /
TT UKVOUMEVO ™ pocpepopevov elval 6 auT@ peya
, v \ a 3
KATOTTPOV olKOL, KAaL TPOS TOUTO Tas ped€Tas €F évavtias (aTamevoy Trepatvery.
, ,
Aéyerat Sé, avOpwrrov mpocedOovtos deopévou
, \ ? e ¢ / ,
guvnyopias Kal dteEvovtos ws vmo Tov Adore \ , bf \ Tanyas, “AANA av ye, havat tov Anpocbévnr, ce f e / WY; / Q 39 ? /
TOUTWY WY NEyELS OVOEV TrETTIOVUAS. ETrLTELVADV-
\ “ , fa)
Tos 6€ THY hovyny Tov avOpwrov Kat Boayvros
’ N tf 39
«°Rivw, Anuooberves, ovdev temova ;” “Ni Ata,”
an , \ ,
hava, “viv axovw gavnv adixovpevov Kal Te-Pd ¢ wv / AS / s
movOoTos. OUTWS ETO MéyA TOS TioTLVY elvaL
, la! , a
TOV TOVOY Kal THY UTOKPLOLY TOV AEYOYT@V. TOLS
9 A e / f le)
[Lev OU TOAAOLS UTTOKpLI'OMEVOS pecKe OaupacTas,
, \ a
of dé YaptevTes TaTrELVOY aYyOUVTO Kat awyeVVes fa \ iL Ms 4
avTOD TO TAdC MA Kal “adakor, OV Kat Anuntpios
e , / ¢
o Dadnpevs €otiv. Aiciwva de dnow” Kpyitmos,
4 A , \ aA
épwtnbévta mepl TOV Tadat pyNTopwv Kal TOV
b] n ¢ 4
xa’ avtov, eltmety ws dxovwv pev av tes eOav-
, f n A
HaGEY EKELVOUS EVKOTMWS Kal weyadoTpETa@S TO
/
diuw@ dcadeyomevous, avaylwwokopevot 0 ot Anpo-ofévors NOYOL TOAV TH KaTacKEVH Kal Suvapet

f e \ Cs / a , Stahepovotyv. ol pev ov yeypappEevor TOY NOYwH 26

qn

DEMOSTHENES, x1. 1-4

Demosthenes himself, now grown old. The indistinctness and lisping! in his speech he used to correct and drive away by taking pebbles in his mouth and then reciting speeches. His voice he used to exercise by discoursing while running or going up steep places, and by reciting speeches or verses at a single breath. Moreover, he had in his house a large looking-glass, and in front of this he used to stand and go through his exercises in declamation.

A story is told of a man coming to him and begging his services as advocate, and telling at great length how he had been assaulted and beaten by some one. ‘ But certainly,’ said Demosthenes, “ you got none of the hurts which you describe.” Then the man raised his voice and shouted: “ I, Demosthenes, no hurts?” “Now, indeed,” said Demosthenes, “I hear the voice of one who is wronged and hurt.” So important in winning credence did he consider the tone and action of the speaker. Accordingly, his own action in speaking was astonishingly pleasing to most men, but men of refinement, like Demetrius the Phalerian, thought his manner low, ignoble, and weak. And Hermippus tells us that Aesion,? when asked his opinion of the ancient orators as compared with those of his own time, said that one would have listened with admiration when the older orators discoursed to the people decorously and in the grand manner, but that the speeches of Demosthenes, when read aloud, were far superior in point of arrangement and power. Now, it is needless to remark that

1 Strictly, an inability to pronounce the letter ‘‘r,” giving instead the sound of ‘‘].” See the Alcibiades, 1. 4.

2 A contemporary of Demosthenes.

ef sy 9’ iN, ‘ \ \ ¥ , A

6TL TO AvoTNPOY TOAU Kai TixpoV éxovat, TL Av

a , A \

Néyou Tis; ev O€ Tals ATaVYTHOECGL TAs Tapa TOV
a a ,
KaLPOV EYpPHTO Kai TO yerotw. Anuaddou pev yap

> / ‘cc E \ A Gé e (ei \ "A@ ~ 99
ELT OVTOS pe Anpoabevns, 9 bs THY nvav, ci 39
‘Avbrn, elev, “7 AGnva 7 pony ev KodhuT@ poryevouaa edpOy.” 7 pos b¢ TOV RET TY Os émexanelTo NadKkovds, Kab auTtov eis Tas ay pu-
if “ \ 7 , /
TVIAS AUTOU Kal vuUKTOYypadias TreLpwEVOY TE / 66 O76 > 4) oo LE a , NEVELY, toa, elmrev, “ott ce AVTW AUYVOY
/ ¢e a / > v ’ a \ Kaiwv. wupets 6€, @ avdpes "AOnvaio, ur) Gav-/ 4 patete Tas yiwopévas KNOTUS, OTaVY TovS jmeéDv
aA \ / f
KNETTAS YarKovds, tovs S€ Toixous THrLVOUS
” >? \ \ N 7 , Vv
EX@HEV. GNAA TEPL LEV TOUTOV KarTep €Tt TED NEvyeLy EXovTeEs evTavla Tava opeba: Tov & aNdov
aUuTOU TpoTrov kat To HOS ato TaY Tpdakewy Kai THS za cis Oewpeta Par Stxatov éotiy.
2 \ \

NII. Opyrjce plev ovv emt TO T PAT TEL Ta Kowa Tob Poxecod TONE MOU TUVETTATOS, @S avTas wédnot cal raBeiv Ect aro Tov Pirer-
e \ \ 4

TLKOY Onn yopeav. at perv yap 701) Ovarem pa-yHevay EKELVOD yeyovacty, ai 6€ mpecBuTatat TaV éyytora Mpaypwaroy aT TOVTAL. Oj)Aos 8 é€oti Kab THY Kara Meséiou TAPAT KEVAT A [EVOS em ely deny vo pev eri Tots TPLaKOvT a, yeyovws érn,

/ o ” 3 A 3 A de } undéro © éxwv ia your é€v Th TorTeELa poe ofav.
O Kal padtoTa pot Sorel Seiaas em dapyuplo
/ \ \

catabécbar Thy Tpos Tov avOpwirov ExPpav:

’ , : / > \ 5 209 9 ,
ov yap TL YAUVKUOUMLOS aYNp HY OVS ayavodhpmr,
——.-

1 357-346 B.c. 2 On the Crown, § 18.
3 About 350 B.o. The speech ‘Against Meidias” (Or. xxi.) was never delivered. See § 154.
28

DEMOSTHENES, x1. 4-xut. 2

his written speeches have much in them that is harsh and bitter; but in his extempore rejoinders he was also humorous. For instance, when Demades said: “Demosthenes teach me! As well might the sow teach Athena.” “It was this Athena,” said Demosthenes, “that was lately found playing the harlot in Collytus.” And to the thief nick- named Brazen, who attempted to make fun of him for his late hours and_ his writing at night, “Tf know,” he said, “that I annoy you with my lighted lamp. But you, men of Athens, must not wonder at the thefts that are committed, when we have thieves of brass, but house-walls of clay.” However, though I have still more to say on this head, I shall stop here ; the other traits of his character, and his disposition, should be surveyed in connection with his achievements as a statesman. X1J. Well, then, he set out to engage in public matters after the Phocian war! had broken out, as he himself says,” and as it is possible to gather from his Philippic harangues. For some of these were made after the Phocian war was already ended, and the earliest of them touch upon affairs which were closely connected with it. And it is clear that when he prepared himself to speak in the prosecution of Meidias* he wes thirty-two years old, but had as yet no power or reputation in the conduct of the city’s affairs. And his fears on this score were the chief reason, in my opinion, why he compromised his case against the man he hated for a sum of money :

“For he was not at all a sweet-tempered man or of gentle mood,” 4 4 Thad, xx. 467, of Achilles,
29
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ann’ évtovos Kat Biatos Tepi TAS apUvas. opav
S ov davrov ovdé tis avtov duvdpews Epryov
avopa Kal tAOUTM Kal OY Kal Pirots Ev TeE-ppaypévoy Kaberewv, tov Meadiav, évédwee Tots uTép avTod Seopévors. at O& Tpicxidiae Kal?

éavtas ovK av pot Soxovar thy Anpoabérous auPrOva, Wikpiav, éAmifovTos Kat duvapévou mepryevéc Oat.
AaBov 6€ THs ToXrtTElas Kady vTdbeoLW THY T pos Didvarmov UTEp TOV ‘EAM vor dixatoroyiar, Kal ™pos TAUTHY ayoviSomevos akios, TAXU bofav eaXe Kal meptPrETTOS UTO TOV hoyov 7jpOn Kab Ths Tappnoias, wate OavpalecOar pév év TH ED-
Adbt, Cepatrever Oat & rd TOD peyadrou Baciréws, TAElaTov & avToU Noyoy elvar Tapa TO PidirTH TOV ONMAYWYOUVTWY, OfoAOyElY Sé KAaL TOUS aTreE-yGavopévous OTt ™pos évdoFov avrois av0 pwrov
0 ayov eo7t. Kal yap Alaxivys Kal “Lrrepetons
“ ¢

TOLAUTA UTEP avTou KATHY OpovYTES elpyKxacty.

XIII. “Odev ov 0f8 drrws TO. peo7n Ocomopme Neyerv avTtov aBéBaiov TO TpoTw yeyovévat Kal
pire Teaypact wnt avOpwros wodkvy ypovor Tots auTots émipévery Suvapevor. daivetar yap, els pV an axis TOV TpaypaTav pepida Kal TaAgw auTov év TH ToXtTEla KATETTIOE, TAUTIY ax pu TENOUS Suagundigas, Kat ov povoy ép TO Bro
pry weTaBaropmevos, GANA Kal TOV Biov é éml TO 7} peta Barecbar T POE MEVOS. ov yap, ws Anpddns dT oNoyoUpEVOS Sua THY év 7H MOLT EL pera Bonny
eheyen, auTo pev avrov Tavaytia Toh deus eLpn-KEVaL, TH S38 mde pndérote, Kat Medavwrros 30

DEMOSTHENES, xu. 2-xu1 2

but vehement and violent in his requitals. How- ever, seeing that it was no mean task and one beyond his power to overthrow a man like Meidias, who was well hedged about with wealth, oratory and friends, he yielded to those who interceded in his behalf. For it does not seem to me that the three thousand drachmas of themselves could have dulled the bitter feelings of Demosthenes if he had expected or felt able to triumph over his adversary.

But when he had once taken as a noble basis for his political activity the defence of the Greeks against Philip, and was contending worthily here, he quickly won a reputation and was lifted into a conspicuous place by the boldness of his speeches, so that he was admired in Greece, and treated with deference by the Great King; Philip, too, made more account of him than of any other popular leader at Athens, and it was admitted even by those who hated him that they had to contend with a man of mark. For both Aeschines and Hypereides say thus much for him while denouncing him.

XIII. Wherefore I do not know how it occurred to Theopompus to say that Demosthenes was un- stable in his character and unable to remain true for any length of time to the same policies or the same men. For it is apparent that after he had at the outset adopted a party and a line of policy in the conduct of the city's affairs, he maintained this to the end, and not only did not change his posi- tion while he lived, but actually gave up his life that he might not change it. For he was not like Demades, who apologised for his change of policy by saying that he often spoke at variance with him- self, but never at variance with the interests of the

avtTiToAtTevopevos Kaddtotpit@m Kat moddakis 852

e ' ? a / , at / Um avTov Xpypace petatiGéuevos erwler Eyer
' Xx n cc € \ 3 A b] f N ' mpos tov Shuovr " O pev avnp éyGpos, TO ce
r , , é 99 , $ c
Ths TOAEWS ViKAT@ oupdéepov, Nuxodnwos Sd o
/ 4 ar 7, f ,
Meoonmos Kacdvipw mpootiGepevos mpotepor,
see) e x , Ll b] W eit' avO.s vTrep Anpntpiov TroXLtevopevos ovK Edy
\ \ > f
Tavavtia éyew, del yap elvar oupdépov ax-a a) fe ¢ \
poacbat TOY KpaTovYTwY, OUTwW Kal Tept An-
A a « poadévous Eyomev ettreiy oiov extpeTropevou Kal
, a N XN ee 9 ? ed wraytdfovtos dwvyv) wpakiv, adr womwep
' bd Cae \ b] ld - A ad' évos kal dpetaBryTov Siaypappatos Ts / e 4 x a
ToALTELAaS Eva TOVvoY EXwY év TOLs TPaypacW «dé Ud ' e if, a dsetéXece. TLavaitios 8 o didocodos Kal trav f > n ce uf \ /

AOyov avtod dyaow ovtTw yeypadGat tous mret-
, a a > N n~ Y
OTOUS WS Lovo TOV KAXOU SL AUTO alpEeTOD OVTOS, a / nj
TOV Teplt TOU oTEpavou, TOY KaTa AploTOKpaTouSs,
4 e N a , a \ / 3 @
TOV UTEP TOV ATEXEL@V, TOUS DiduTTLKOUS* év ots
a \ Ni ¢ lal TAGW OV TPOS TO HOLaTOV 1) PaoTOV 7H NUVOLTENEv \ , b \ fa) \
GTATOV ayél TOUS TOALTAS, GNAA TOAANAYOV TV
N , v ~
aogareav Kab Tiv ocwTynpiav oletat delv év
a an a \ a)
Sevtépa TaEeL TOU KANOD ToleioGat Kal TOD Tpé-
/ a N \ , ns
TOVTOS, WS, elye TH TEpl Tas vTOoGéces avTod
, N n “ f 9 , a piroreura, Kal 77 ay OOM EVYEVELL TAPI}V
>] nm
avOpELa TE TOAEMLLOTIPLOS Kal TO KADapasS ExacTa
, > ? a \ / \ la
TMpauTTe, ovK ev T@ KaTAa MotpoxrEea eat Morv-Ve , 3 a a e ' 3 ’ evKTOV Kal Trrepetony aploOue TOV fp) TOpwV, GAX N we, \ f dive peta Kipevos cai Oovevdidou xai HeptxdXéous
wv = (ene)
aktos hy TiWecOa,
32

DEMOSTHENES, . 2-4

city; nor like Melanopus, who, though opposed politically to Callistratus, was often bought over by him, and then would say to the people: “e The man is my enemy, it is true, but the interests of the city shall prevail ’’ ; nor like Nicodemus the Messenian, who first attached himself to Cassander, and fhen again advocated the interests of Demetrius, but said that he was not contradicting himself, for it was always advantageous to listen to one’s masters, We cannot say such things of Demosthenes also, as of one who is turned from his course and veers to and fro either in word or deed—nay, he followed one unchangeable scale, as it were, and ever held to one key in politics. And Panaetius the philosopher says that most of his speecnes also are written in the conviction that the good alone is to be chosen for its own sake, as, for instance, the speech “On the Crown,” ! the one “ Against Aristo- crates,’ * that “For the Immunities,’? and the Philippics ;* for in all these he does not try to lead his countrymen to do what is pleasantest or easiest or most profitable, but in many places thinks they ought to make their safety and preservation second- ary to what is honourable and fitting, so that, if the loftiness of his principles and the nobility of his speeches had been accompanied by such bravery as becomes a warrior and by incorruptibility in all his dealings, he would have been worthy to be num- bered, not with: such orators as Moerocles, Polyeuctus, Fiypereides, and their contemporaries, but high up ‘with Cimon, ‘Thucydides, and Pericles.

1 Or, xviii, 2 Or. xxiii.
* Or. xx. (Against Leptines), SOL 8. UVa Vie, 1X
33

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XIV. Tév yotv cat avtov 0 Paxiwy ovK ématvoupevns mpoiotdpevos Tohitelas, AAAA CoKeY
‘ v4 > 3 a \ 4
paxedovitery, Ouws Os avdpeiav cal dtxavocoviny nw , bY
ovdey ovdaun Yeipwv edokev “Ediadtov Kai Ape-/ \ 4
2 areidou Kai Kipwvos avnp yevéeoOat. AnpooBévns
3 3 SN >) wn e 3 s 4 (2
d ovk ov €v Tols OTAOLS aEvoTLATOS, OS PHT Oo
\ \
Anpijtptos, ovde Tmpos TO AaUPBavey TavTdTacWw
> , F Dak \ a \ \ @ XL
AT WYUPWLEVOS, GAA TH pev Tapa DirtTTov
\ 1 , 3 f wv A 3 ” 9
kat Maxedovias avddwtos wv, TO 8 avoder éx
Ny ¢ \3 f > \ / XN
Sovoewv kat ExBatavav émsBatos ypuct@ yeyovws
4 id \ e /
KAL KATAKEKAUGLEVOS, ETALVETAL MEV [KAVWTATOS
Q \ a , f /
WY Ta TOV TpoyoveY Kara, piunoacBa, bé ory ad bd \ id QE’ e_N CL, ses be Opmolos. émrel Tous ye Kal avTov prtopas (éFw ée
td - / \ nA / nA Noyou TiPenat Dwxiwva) Kai TO Biw TapHrle.
4 \ \ d ¢ A
3 paiverat 66 Kai peta Tappnolas padsota TO
, \ \ \ / na
dnu@ StareyouEevos Kal Tpos Tas émtOupLas TOY TOAROY AYTETELVOY KAL TOLS AapT)}MacLY avTOV
? / e > a / al ”
emipvopevos, ws €k TOV AOywv AaPeEly EotiD.
e a 55 \ ? ef nw b] , 3 /

laTopel d€ Kal Oeotroutros Ott, TOV AOnvaiwv éri
/ 2 N hi € p: b)
Tiva TpOPAadAopEVwY AUTO KATHYOpLAV, WS d OVX
tc. 9 @ / > \ 5 wee nA
umnxove, GopuBovvtwv, avactas etter: “‘Tyets 3 ev do ov > a ‘ di av \
éuot, @ ardpes AOnvaior, cupBovrA@ per, Ka pT Oérnte, ypnoesOe: cuxopav7n de ovde av OédnTEe.”
4 adodpa 6 aptotoxpatixoy avTov TodtTevpua Kal
‘ . 3 n A ee \ a) /
To wept Avtid@vTos’ Ov vie THS éKKANGIAS
apelevta curdaBov ert tnv éE ’Apeiou muyou
1 Theopompus almost always displays hostility to Athens and her popular leaders.

34

DEMOSTHENES, xiv. 1-4

XIV. At any rate, Phocion, among his contem- poraries, though he took the lead in a policy which is not to be commended, and though he had the reputation of favouring Macedonia, nevertheless, by reason of his bravery and integrity, was held to be in no wise inferior to Ephialtes and Aristides and Cimon. Demosthenes, however, was not worthy of confidence when he bore arms, as Demetrius says, nor was he altogether inaccessible to bribes, but though he did not succumb to the gold which came from Philip and Macedonia, that which came down in streams from Susa and Ecbatana reached and overwhelmed him, and therefore while he was most capable of praising the virtues of earlier gene- rations, he was not so good at imitating them. For certainly the orators of his own day (though I leave Phocion out of the account) were surpassed by him even in his life and conversation. And it is manifest that beyond them all he reasoned boldly with the people, opposed himself to the desires of the multitude, and persistently attacked their faults, as may be gathered from his speeches. And even Theopompus! tells us that, when the Athenians nominated him to conduct a certain impeachment, and, on his refusal, raised a tumult against him, he rose and said: “ Men of Athens, I will serve you as a counsellor, even though you do not wish it; but not as a false accuser, even though you wish it.” Moreover, the measures which he took in the case of Antiphon? were exceedingly aris- tocratic in their spirit. Antiphon had been acquitted by the assembly, but Demosthenes arrested him and brought him before the council of the Areio-

* See Demosthenes, On the Crown, §§ 132 f.

30

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

BovrAnv aviyaye, Kal Tap ovdév TO TPOTKpOvaaL
a ,

TO num Géuevos NreyEev vrecxnpevoy Pirin7@
XN 2 > / \ \ e
Ta vewpla éumpjoey Kal Tapadobels 0 avOpwros
“A a / , uTo THs BovAns améBave. Katynyopnoe b€ Kal
THs lepetas Pewpidos ws arAXAa TE padioupyovans ToAXa Kal Tovs dovAoUs é€aTraTay bidacKovaNs’
Kal Oavatou TipLyoapEVvos ATEKTELVE,
XV. Aéyetat 8é xat tov Kata Tipobéov tod
a“ ¢ 9
aTpaTnyoD Aoyov, © Xpnodpevos ‘A7rodAdGSwpos
elke tov avopa Tov odrAnpatos, Anpoabévns ypavat T® Amrohrobwpw, KaSdrep Kal Tovs pos ay / b)
Poppiwova kai Xtépavov, ef’ ois eixotws 7d0Enae.
, f Kal yap 0 Poppiwy nywviteto Aoyw Anpoabevous mpos tov ‘AqvoAdobwpov, atexvas KabaTep é& C29 EN / \ > b] / 3 , EVOS MAXALPOTMALOV TA KAT AAANAOD eyyelpidoia aA a An A \ TWAOVYTOS AUTOD TOIS avTLoLKOLS. TaY bé dHLO-
, ¢ AY > 93 / ‘ if ciwy o pev Kat “Avdpotimvos xat Ttpoxpatous Nd A id 4 > if ” wn
kat AptotoKpatous eTépots eypadyaay, ovTw TH
f a \ a 3
moATeLa mpocerndubotos: Soxet yap Sdvetv 3}
é
tpiav Séovta &Tn TplaKovTa yeyovws eFeveyKety \ ‘ bd / \ N x ,
Tovs Noyous éxelvous: Tov d€ KaTa AploToyELTovos
> Q , / \ \ a 9 a \ autos HywVvicaTo, Kal TOV TeEpl TOY aTEAELOV, bia
r “ 7
7ov XaBpiov ratda Krijormov, os dyotv avtos,
¢ ‘ , a / as 8 €viol A€éyoudt, THY LNTEPA TOV vEeavioKou
, ’ \ 4 / ’ \ ,
LVOMEVOS. OV pHY Eynue TavTHV, adda Lapa
36
853

DEMOSTHENES, xiv. 4-xv. 3

pagus, and making no acconnt of the offence thus given to the people, convicted him of having promised Philip to set fire to the dockyards; and Antiphon was given up to justice by the council and suffered death. He also accused the priestess Theoris of many misdemeanours, and _ particularly of teaching the slaves to practise deceit; and by fixing the penalty at death he brought about her execution.

XV. It is said, too, that the speech which Apollo- dorus used in order to secure the conviction of Timo- theus the general in an action for debt was written for him by Demosthenes, and likewise the speeches which Apollodorus used against Phormio and Steph- anus, in which cases Demosthenes properly won dis- credit. For Phormio contended against Apollodorus with a speech which Demosthenes had written for him,! the orator thus simply selling to the disputants, as it were from one and the same cutlery-shop,? the knives with which to wound each other. Moreover, of his public orations, those against Androtion® and Timocrates* and Aristocrates* were written for others to pronounce, before he had as yet entered public life; for it appears that these speeches were produced when he was twenty-seven or twenty- eight years of age. But he himself delivered the speech against Aristogeiton,® as well as the one “On the Immunities,’* at the instance, as be himself says, of Ctesippus the son of Chabrias, but as some say, because he was wooing the mother of this young man. However, he did not marry this woman, but had a certain woman of Samos

IO PRN Vi. 2 See chapter iv. 1. ae ee ate

«Or. xxiv. OS Or ee Xilh: BO) he kOCy, OR Ae

oF

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘ 4 e cd a A , e M / TIVL TUV@KNTEV, WS LaToper Anuntpios 0 Mayvns
a , e \ ? A
év Tols TEpl GUrwvUpwV. Oo O€ Kat’ Aiaytvou THs Uj f > / /
Tapamper eas adndov et A€NexTat Kaitos Pyaly
\ \ f ‘
"Idouevevs mapa tptaxovta povas Tov Alayivny
b] A b] ? b] ” et 4 b] 4
atropuyety. aN OUK EOLKEY OUTWS EveLY TAA Es,
? a a /
El O€i TOls TrEpL oOTEpavoU Yyeypappéevots ExaTépwry
, , /
oyous TexpaipetOat. péuvntar yap ovdéTEpos
A A \ mn 4 an nm

avTa@y évapyas ovdé Tpavas éxetvou TOD ayavos / , \ \ oo ei
ws ayps dixns mpoedMovTos. TauTi pev ody ETEpar dtaxpivovat “adXov.
\ A /
XVI. ‘H 6€ tod Anyoobévous roditeia havepa
XN y 4 \ n ’ , /
Mev tv ETL Kal THS EipnvNsS VTapxovons, ovdev
A a , a
E@VTOS UVETITILNTOY TOV TPATTOMEevwY UT TOD
, 3 >
Maxedovos, adv ef éxadatw TapattovtTos Tovs
’ / 3) / bt Sales \ ”
A@nvaiovs Kai diaxatovtos él tov av@pwrov.
\ \ \ iA a“ 9 f 3 lal
610 Kal Tapa Pilimm@ TrELATTOS VY AOYOS avTOD
\ , / e 2 /
Kal oTe mpea Bevan Séxatos Kev ets Maxedoviar,
’ 4 a“
HKOVaE fev Tavrwy Didsmmos, avTetTe Sé peTa
f b / N \ b) / , 9
TRELOTHS ETLJLENELAS TPOS TOV ExKELVOU AOYOV. OV \ ” in ” pe \ 7
pny ev ye Tats arXAats Tipalts Kal hiroppoavvais ee e \ aA / a b) \ Guotov avtov TO Anpocbéver tapetyev, adra
a ’ / TpoanyeTo Tovs Tept Atayivnv Kat Piroxkpatny lal e > i 3 i \ i‘ uardrAov. OOey EvratvovvTwy éxeivev Tov PidiT TOV
° , 3 a os Kal Néyery SvYaT@TaTOV Kal KadNALCTOV Of67)-
a e , var Kal vn Ata cuurtety tkavwtatov, nvayKaketo
f Ss ‘ an N
Backaivoy émickwnrTey ws TO pEev cod.aTod, TO ‘ , N \ A vy / ’
dé yuvatkos, TO 8€ aomoyylas ein, Bactdéws 6
\ ‘
OVOED ErYKWLLOV.
38 DEMOSTHENES, xv. 3—xv1. 2

to wife, as Demetrius the Magnesian tells us in his work “ On Persons of the Same Name.” Whether the speech denouncing the treacherous embassage of Aeschines! was aoliered or not, is uncertain; and yet Idomeneus says that Aeschines got off by only thirty votes. But this would seem to be untrue, if we are to Judge by the written speeches of both orators “On the Crown.”? For neither of them speaks clearly and distinctly of that contention as one which came to trial. This question, however, will have to be decided by others.

XVI. The political attitude of Demosthenes was manifest even while peace still lasted, for he would let no act of the Macedonian pass uncensured, but on every occasion kept rousing and inflaming the Athenians against him. Therefore Philip also made most Pecan of him; and when Demosthenes came to Macedonia in an ‘embassy of ten, Philip listened indeed to them all, but took most pains to answer his speech. As regards all other marks of honour and kindly attention, however, Philip did not treat Demosthenes as well as the others, but courted rather the party of Aeschines and Philocrates. And so when these lauded Philip as most powerful in speaking, most fair to look upon, and, indeed, as a most capable fellow-diinker, Demosthenes had to say in bitter raillery that the first encomium was appropriate for a sophist, the second for a woman, and the third for a sponge, but none of them for a king.

Or. xix.

See the second note on xxiv. 1 f.

3 In 346 B.c, they obtained the so-called Peace of Philocrates.

1

2

39

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yr . 2)) \ x \

XVII. ’Evel 6 els to woAguety Eppeme Ta

a ‘ i \ t \

Tpayuata, TOU pev Pirtmmov pn dvvapévov THY

“~ bf b] i

novxiay ayer, Tov & “AOnratwv éyerpopevor id ‘ a) Ul ” \ > A uTo tov Anpoclevous, mpa@Ttorv pev evs Evora

b , \ bd / 4 t ‘
éEwpunae tous AOnvatovs KatadecovAwpevny VO
a) id / \ f ? dd
Tov TUpavvav Piri7T@ Kal dtaBavTes, exeivov
, ' \
To Whdtopa ypawartos, é&y\acav tovs Make-
\ / > if Sovas. bdevtepov dé Bulavtiows éBonOnoe kal
r \ a oN) t t
IleperOiors vo tov Maxedovos trodepovpévors, \ ral , \ if Teicas Tov Oiov apevta thy EXxOpav Kat TO ww ~ \ \ QA
pepviobat TOV TEPL TOV TULPLAYLKOV UA PTH LEVY
al , ral
éxaTépols ToAemov atrootetAa Svvaply avTots,
¢ 7? @ 5) , v / \
ud’ As éowOncarv. éErerta mpecRevwrv nal dia-
, m then \ 4 / Neyopmevos Tos” KM AANGL Kat TapoEVVwY GULéTTHGE
eS > i? ef bd \ \ if 4
TAHY OALYOV aTavTas emt Tov DidtrTov, wWaTE
, val N /
cuvtativ yeverOar weSav pev pupt@v Kai TevTa-
i e / \ / wv ~
KiTXLALOV, ITTEWY b€ SLTVIAL@Y, AVEV TOY TOAL-
a“ / f \ \ “
Tik@yv Ouvdpewy, Yenwata de Kal piobors Tois
, ? , / ad 7
Ecvors etadepecGur mpofvpws. oTe Kal nor
, nw e ry
Qcodpactos, akiovvtay TOY cvppaywv opta6i-‘ > , > A Y , N
vat Tas eladhopas, evmety KpwBvXov tov Snpua-
/ an YWYOV WS OV TETAYMEVA TLTELTAL TOAELOS.
~ € ‘ \ /
"Emnppevns 6€ THs “EAXAdSOS pas TO péAXOD
\ lA) eQ \ (A >, / Kal cuviotapevov Kat €Ovyn Kat modes KvSoéwr,
a “ 4 is
"Ayatav, Kopivdiwv, Meyapéwv, Aeveadiov, Kep-
/ ~
Kupalwv, 0 méylaTos UTedetTETO TH Anpoodéver

“~ , ; 4 f a
TOV aywovev, OnBaiovs mpocayayéclar TH cup-40

DEMOSTHENES, xv. 1-4

AVI. And when matters were inclining at last to war, since Philip was unable to keep quiet and the Athenians were being stirred up by Demosthenes, in the first place, he urged the Athenians to invade Euboea, which had _ been brought into subjection to Philip by its tyrants ; and it was on his motion that they crossed over to the island and drove out the Macedonians. In the second place, he came to the aid of the citizens of Byzantium and Perinthus when the Macedonian was making war upon them, by persuading the Athenian people to remit their hatred and forget the wrongs committed by each of these cities in the Social War,! and to send thein a force,—the force which saved them. Next, he went on an embassy to the Greek states, and by arguing with them and pricking them on brought almost all of them into a league against Philip, so that they raised a mercenary force of fifteen thousand foot and two thousand horse, apart from the citizen soldiery, and readily contributed money to pay them. It was at this time, as Theophrastus says, when the allies were demanding that their contributions be fixed within limits, that Crobylus the popular leader said: ‘‘ War has no fixed rations.” 2
Greece was now in suspense as it thought of the future, and its peoples and cities were leaguing theinselves together, Euboeans, Achaeans, Corinthians, Megarians, Leucadians, and Corcyraeans. But the most important struggle still remained for Demosthenes in bringing the Thebans to join
* At the outbreak of the Social War (357-355 .c.) Byzan tium and other allies of Athens had revolted from her. 2 See the note on the Crassus, ii. 8.

41

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

paxia, xopav TE “7 uvopoy THs "ATTLKAS Kat Suva-pay “evaryoveov EyovTas, Kat amare TOTE TOV ‘EAAnver evooxipobvTas éy Tots Om dots. ay °° ov padsov ert ™pooparors EVEPYETHUACL Tots mepl
tov DwxKixov TONE LOV TeTeGac evmevous vm0 Tob @Pirtriov petacticat tous OnBaiouvs, Kal pd-
nan \ 3
NtoTa Tals Sta TV YyEeTViaATLY aYIpayiats ava-Favomevwv EKXAOTOTE TOV TOAEMLKOV TPOS AAANra a ?
Aas Stahopwv Tats wodecw.

XVIII. Ov piv arn eet Direrros UTo Tis Tept THY Aphiooay evTUYias ETULPOMEVOS Els THY
ayy la > id Pp] , \ \ ,
urAaTecay éEaidyns éverrece kat tHhv Pwxida KATETYEV, EKTET TAY PEVOV TOV A@nvaiwoy Kal pen devos TONLOVTOS dvaBaivety él TO Bia poe EXOVTOS 6 Tl xPn Néyetv, GAN’ GT opias ovans év [ETw KAL TLwT hs, Tapeh Oo {LOVvOS O Anpoobevns cuveBovreve TOV OnBatwv ExecOat Kai Tadra
, .

mapabappuvas Kal peTewpioas, warrep elwlen, Tov Onuov tats éXtTioLv, aTEeTTAAN TpecBEvTNS pc?” Erépwv eis On Bas. Erepre 5€ cal DirirTos, e M / / ane 7 \ \ Kk Xe
ws Mapovas dyotv, Apvvtav pev cat KrEapyov Maxeddvas, Adoyov 6€ Occcadov kai Opacvdaiov GVTEPOUVTAS.
my \ 9 , ? , \ ia)

To pev ovv cvupdépov ov diepevye Tous THY ) / Xx / aes b] v v4
))Batov OyLTMous, u EV OMMaglY EKA TOS
ele Ta, TOU TONEMOV Oewwd, ETL TOV Donixav TPQUMAT@V vEeapov TO Pa. LEVvOVT@Y™ 7 O€ TOU p1)- Topos duvapus, ws Pyot Oeoropros, éxpimifovca

1 In 339 B.c., Philip was deputed by the Amphictyonic Council to punish the city of Amphissa, near Delphi, for sacrilege. Cf. Demosthenes, On the Crown, §§ 143 ff.

the alliance, for they had a territory bounding that of Attica and a force ready to take the field, and at that time were accounted the best soldiers in Greece. But it was no easy matter, in view of the recent benefits with which Philip had cultivated their favour during the Phocian war, to make the Thebans change sides, and especially because in the petty quarrels brought on by their proximity to Athens the differences which made for war between the two cities were all the while stirred up anew.

XVIII. Philip, however, elated by his good-fortune in the matter of Amphissa,! surprised Elateia and occupied Phocis. This step drove the Athenians out of their senses: no one ventured to ascend the bema and no one knew what ought to be said, but perplexity and silence reigned in the assembly. Then it was that Demosthenes, and he alone, came forward and advised the people to cling to ‘Thebes; and after giving them courage in other ways and buoying them up with hopes, as he was wont to do, he was sent with others as ambassador to Thebes. Philip also, as Marsyas tells us, sent Amyntas and Clearchus of Macedonia, Daochus of Thessaly, and Thrasydaeus, to speak in opposition to the Athenians.

Well, then, the Thebans, in their calculations, were not blind to their own interests, but each of them had before his eyes the terrors of war, since their losses in the Phocian war? were still fresh ; however, the power of the orator, as Theo- pompus says, fanned up their courage and inflamed

2 The second so-called Sacred War (357-346 B.c.), in which Athens aided the Phocians, and Philip the Thebans.

Tov Oupov avT@v Kat Otakaiovea THY dtNoTLpiav
éemecKOTNOE TOLS AAXOLS ATractv, Wate Kal PoBov Kat Noytopov Kal yap éxkBareiv avtouvs évOov-oLavTas vUTO TOU Aoryou T™ pos TO KANO. oT
6é peya Kal Aa pom pov efuvn TO TOU pyTopos Epryov
WOTE TOV bev Piet Tov ev0us emexnpuKevec Oat Seopevov eipryvns, opOnv b€ tTHvy “EAXNdda yevéoIar

cal ouveEavactivat mpos TO péAXNOv, UINpETEtY
dé 1 povoy tovs otpatnyous T® Anpoabéver
TOLOUVTAS TO TPOTTATTOMEVOY, GANA Kal TOUS
Bowwrdpyas, dtocxeta Oar O€ Tas éxxAnatas dTracas ovdey HTTOVY UT éxeivou ToTEe TAS OnBaiwy 7)
Tas ’AOnvatwv, ayatwpévou Tap audotépots cal
SUVATTEVOYTOS OVK UOLKWS OVE Tap aé&LaV, WaTEP
avodaivetat Pecmopumos, dda Kal Tavu Tpogn-
;
KOVTOS.
AOS Tux 5é Tes Eoxe Sacpovtos € ev mrepipopa TpayLaTov, els ExElVO KAaLpO) TULTEpaivovaa THY érevOepiav ths “EdAdédbos, evavtiotafar ois TpaTToMEevols, KaL TOAAA onpEla TOD pEéXXOVTOS
avadaivery, év ois } Te WIu0ta decva mpovdacve HAVTEVLATA, KAL YPNTMOS ETO TANALOS EK TOV dYuBvudArelwr
A 3 , , ’ , ,
THS Tt OeppwdovtTe wayns avravevde yevoiny, aleTos év vehéeaat Kai népt Onnoacbar.
/ e s e \ f 3 s
KNQALEL O vixnoeis, 0 06 VLKNTAS ATONE.
Tov 6€ Ocppwdorta pacw eivaut map nyy ev
Natpoveta TOT a pLov pox pov els TOV Ka gpeoov éuBadrov. nets O€ vov pev ovdevy 00TH TOY
peupatov io pev ovomaloperov, eixafopev oe€ TOV Kadovpevov Alipova Oepuwdovta éyeaOat TOTE
44

DEMOSTHENES, xvii. 3-x1x. 2

their honourable ambition and obscured all other considerations, so that, casting away fear and _ calculation and feelings of obligation, they were rapt away by his words into the path of honour. And so great and glorious was the orator’s success seen to be that Philip at once sent an embassy and asked for peace, while Greece was confident and up in arms to aid Demosthenes for the future; and not only did the Athenian generals assist him and do what he ordered, but also the Boeotarchs. He managed at this time all the assemblies of the Thebans no less than those of the Athenians; he was beloved by both peoples and exercised supreme power, not illegally nor unworthily, as Theopompus declares, but rather with perfect propriety.

XTX. But it would seem that some divinely ordered fortune in the revolution of affairs, which was putting an end at this time to the freedom of the Greeks, opposed their efforts, and showed forth many signs of what was to come. Among these were the dire prophecies which the Pythian priestess made known, and an ancient oracle which was recited from the Sibylline books :— “From the battle on Thermodon may I be far removed,

To behold it like an eagle in clouds and upper air.
Tears are for the conquered there, and for the eonqueror, death.”
Now, the Thermodon, they say, is in my native territory, in Chaeroneia, being a little river which empties into the Cephisus. But I know of no river bearing this name at the present time; I conjecture, however, that the stream now called Haemon then kal yap mapappet mapa TO HpadkXerov, drrou Kate-

\ \ a \ NS f 4

f e \ f
aorpatomécevoy of “EAXnvess Kal Texpatpoucla THS MAYS yevouevns aipatos éumAncbévta Kal vexp@v TOV ToTawov TavTny StarrAGEat THY TpOG-
, e \ A 3
nyopiav. o 6€ Aovpts ov ToTamov eivat dyot XN , > > e , x \
Tov OeppwdovTa, addr totavtas Tivas oKnYHY
Kal TEPLOPUTTOVTAS avdoplavTiaKoY EvpEly ALOLVOD,
° nA ,
UTO Ypaumatwoyv Ttiav diacnuaivomevov ws ein Ocpuwdwv, év tais ayxarais ‘Aualova épovta TeTpWmevnY. el Sé TOVTW YpPNnoMov AAXoOY
adec Oat NéyovTa:
\ 33 \ f / ‘4 /
Thy O eT OepuwdovtTs payny péve, Taypérav oput’
, / \ , b ,
TNVEL TOL KPEA TOANA TrAapeooeTaL avo puTeELa.
XX. Tatra pév ody orws exe, StaiTtHoat
4 e \ / fe A a yanretov: o 6€ Anpocbévns AéyeTat Tos TaY “EAAnveoy OmXols ExTEePappnKws, KaL NaTpPOS UTrO
/ a pauns Kal Tpobvmtas avdp@v TOGovVTwY TPOKAaXoOVjuevwy TOVS TOAEMiOUS alpomevos, OTE YpNopmols

éav Tpooéyety OUTE pavTeias axovely, AAAG Kal rynv I[v0tav vrovociy ws didtimmifovoay, ava-
, 5) , \ , \
pupvynoKka@yv “Emapivw@vdov tovs OnBatovs «al Tlepexréovs tous ’A@nvaious, ws éxeivot TA TOLAVTA SetAias rjryovpevoe mpodacers éypavtTo Tos Xo-
n \ 9
yi ots. péeyple mev ov TOUTwY avnp HY ayalos* bf \ A , x ’ \ »>Q) e if év O€ TH MaXn KaXOY ov p dé TH n KaXov ovdEev OVS OpodoyoupEvo 46

DEMOSTHENES, xix. 2-xx. 2

bore the name of Thermodon. For it flows past the Heracleum, where the Greeks had their camp; and I judge that after the battle the river was filled with blood and corpses and therefore received its present name in exchange.! Duris, however, says that this Thermodon was not a river, but that some soldiers who were pitching a tent and digging a trench about it, found a small stone figure, an inscription upon which signified that it was Thermodon,’ carrying in its arms a wounded Amazon. They say also that in reference to this another oracle is recited as follows :—

“ For the battle on Thermodon wait thou, all-black bird ;
There thou shalt have in abundance the flesh of men.”

XX. How this matter really stands, then, it is difficult to decide; but as for Demosthenes, he is said to have had complete confidence in the Greek forces, and to have been lifted into a state of glow- ing excitement by the strength and ardour of so many men eager to engage the enemy, so that he would not suffer his countrymen to give heed to oracles or listen to prophecies; nay, he even sus- pected the Pythian priestess of being in sympathy with Philip, reminding the Thebans of Epaminondas and the Athenians of Pericles, and declaring that those great leaders regaided things of this kind as pretexts for cowardice, and therefore followed the dictates of reason. Up to this point, then, he was a brave man; but in the battle? he displayed no con-

1 Deriving Aluwy from afua (blood).

2 2.e. the god of the river Thermodon, in Cappadocia, on the banks of which the Amazons were thought to dwell. Cf. the Theseus, xxvii. 6. 3 At Chaeroneia, 338 B.c.

4 La % e b] 5 c A ” iN Epyov ols etmey arodeEduevos wyeto eTwY
\ / > ‘ wv \ XN tid es
Thy Taki, aTrodpas aia ytata Kal Ta OTAa pivas,
> A X > \ A ’ , e ba
ovdée thy éemiypadny ths damidos, w; édeye 4 ’ / ? , ,
Ilu@éas, aicyuvets, eriyeypapmevns ypaupace
“ a / ypuaots, Ayabn TUXN.
, > e s ’ a 4
Ilapautixa pev otv 0 Didtrmos emi TH viKy \ \ li \
dia Thy Xxapav eEvBpicas, Kal Kwydaas eT TOUS \ hf > ‘ \ A vexpous peOuwr, 6€ THY apynVv TOV AnpoabEvous
\ f A Whpicpatos mpos Toda btatpov Kal UroKpovwr Anuoodévns Anpoc@évous Uatarieds tad’ elrrev:

exviras 6€ Kat TO péyeOos Tod TEpiaTaVTOS aUTOV
ayavos év v@ NaBav edpeTte THy CetvoTnTa Kal Thy SUvaptv TOU prTopos, ey péper IKE@ plas Huépas Tov UTEP THS YELovias Kal TOD GwpaTOS
avappiwat xivdvvoy avayxacGeis vm autod.
diixto & 1) b0€a péxype Tov Ilepow@v Baciréws: KaKelvos émeu Wwe Tois caTpatats él Oaraccav
ypappata, Xpnpata Anpoo ever dubovat KeXevar, Kal Tpocexey eKelv@ pddiota ToOV EXAnvwr, ws TepioTdoue Svrapev@ Kal KaTacxelv Tats “EXXpixais tapayais tov Makedova. tatta pev ody yy és “w 9
aLPOETLY ETTL-
vatepov ébwpacev Ar€Eavédpos, ev oToNds Tivas dvevpwy TOU Anpocbévous Kal ypap-fata TOV Bacirtéws aotpatnyav, dnAovrTa TO TANHGoS Tov OoVEvTWY AUTO XPNLATwD.
XXI. Tote 6€ Ths atvyias Tols “AAHaL
YEVEVNKEVNS OL PED AVTLTOALTEVOMEVOL pNTOPES 48 DEMOSTHENES, xx. 2-xxr. 1

duct that was honourable or consonant with his words, but forsook his post, cast away his arms, and ran away most disgracefully, nor was he ashamed to belie the inscription on his shield, as Pytheas said, whereon was written in letters of gold, “ With good fortune.”

Immediately after his victory, then, Philip waxed insolent for joy, and going forth in revel rout to see the bodies of the slain, and being in his cups, recited the beginning of the decree introduced by Demosthenes, dividing it into feet and marking off the time :—

“Demosthenes, son of Demosthenes, of Paeania, thus moves; }

but when he got sober and realized the magnitude of the struggle in which he had been involv ed, he shuddered at the power and the ability of the orator who had forced him to hazard his empire and _ his life in the brief span of a single day. And the fame of this orator penetrated even to the Persian king, who sent letters to his satraps on the coast, bidding them to offer money to Demosthenes, and to pay more attention to him than to any other Greek, since he was able to distract and detain the Macedonian? with the troubles which he raised in Greece. These things, now, were discovered at a later time by Alexander, who found at Sardis certain letters of Demosthenes and documents of the King’s generals, which disclosed the amount of money they had given him.

XXI. At this time, however, when their disaster tell upon the Greeks, the orators of the opposing

1 The Greek words form an iambic tetrameter cataletic. 2 Philip was threatening the invasion of Asia.

3 2) , “ iN Oé / bd emeufativov7es TO Anpocbéver xatecKevalov ev-/ \ \ bd > by f e \ “A 3 f
Ouvas Kat ypadhas éx avtov: o 6é Shoes ov povov
/ \ a TOUTwY améAvEev, GAA Kal Ti@v SreTérXEL Kal
, 5 ” b) \ f
TpoKkarovpevos avlis ws EvvoUY Eis THY TONLTELAD, / a 3 J ry /

WOTE KAi TOV OTTEwV EK Natpwveias Kopiabévtwv
\ / \ \ a Kat Gartopevwy Tov émt tots avépdow érarvov
a > “ fal
ETE ATESWKEV, OV TATELVAS OVS ayEVVaS hépwv
f \ nw ,
TO oupBeRnKos, ws ypader Kal Tpayode? eo-
3 \ ~ al / \ nA
TOUTOS, GANA TO Temay puriota Kal Koopely Tov
, > / \ N A
oupPBovrov aTroderkvupevos TO Mn peTapércea Vat
a / \ \ 5 , s
Tots BeBourevpévots. Tov pev ovv Roryov eizrev e / A \ M4 4
o Anpoc@évns, tots b€ Whdicpaciw ovy éavTor, 4 n f
arr’ é€v péper Tov dirwy Exacrov éméypader, ste K pies es 8 , \ 7) / ; €forwvtCouevos Tov idtov daipova Kat THY TYYNY,
¢ /
Ems avéis aveBuppynoe Pidimmov TerXeuvTICAVTOS.
‘TeNEUTNOE O€ TH TEpl Natpwreray evTvYia ypovo eTENEUTNOE O€ TH TEPL Nalpwre UTUXLA VY pPovov > \ b 7 \ cal a“ ral
ov ToAUY éemtBiwoas: Kal TOUTO CoKEL TO TEXEV-
“A n € ‘ 4
TALM TOV ETOV O Xpnopos aTolecricar’
, e , KANaiet o viknOeis, 0 6 ViKNaAaS TOAWXED.
XXII. "Eyre pév ody xpvdha tHv tov Diriamov
TereuTnv oO Anposbévns, twpoxatarapBavev sé
N a 3 \ \ / \ > 4
TO Oappeitv émt Ta pédAXOvTA ToVs “A@nvaious, mponrGe pardpos eis THY BovrAnY ws dvap éwpa-Kas ab ov Te péeya mpocdoxary “AOnvaiots 9 , \ > > \ A e N ,
ayalov: Kat MeT Ov TOAU Trapyaav ot Tov DiriT-59°

DEMOSTHENES, xxi. 1—xxu 1

party assailed Demosthenes and prepared reckonings and indictments against him; but the people not only absolved him from these, nay, they actually continued to honour him and invited him again, as a loyal man, to take part in public affairs. Consequently, when the bones of those who had fallen at Chaeroneia were brought home for burial, they assigned to him the honour of pronouncing the eulogy over the men; nor did they show a base or ignoble spirit under the calamity which had befallen them, as Theopompus writes in his inflated style, but by the special honour and respect which they paid to their counsellor they made it manifest that they did not repent of the counsels he had given them. The oration, then, was pronounced by Demosthenes, but to the decrees which he proposed he would not put his own name, but rather those of his friends, one after the other, avoiding his own as inauspicious and unfortunate, until he once more took courage upon Philip's death. And Philip died, surviving his success at Chaeroneia only a short time ;! and this, it would seem, was foretold by the Jast verse of the oracle :—

"Tears are for the conquered there, and for the conqueror, death,"

XXII. Now, Demosthenes had secret intelligence of Philip's death, and by way of inspiring the Athenians with courage for the future, he came forth to the council with a glad countenance, declaring that he had had a dream which led him to expect some great blessing for Athens; and not long afterwards the messengers came with tidings of 1 Philip was assassinated by Pausanias, one of his royal bodyguard, in 336 B.c. See the Alexander, x. 4.

mov Qavutoy amayyzdXovtes. evIus ovv EOvoY
a , ,
evayyerla Kal atehavody éewndicarto Havaaviav.
a € , f \ €
Kat TpondGev o Anuocdevns Eyov ANapuT pov twaTtov
3 , € 4 t , A X
ea tehavewpévos, E8dounv apepav ths Ouvyatpos
b) a , Ud e b , \ a avrov TeOyyxkvias, ws 0 Atoyins dyot Nordopov

a a a“ ,
emt TOUT@ Kal KaTHYOP@V avTOU ptooTEXxviar, 92 N “a ’ \ \ f bd \ / \
avTos @VY ayevyns Kab padakos, EL TA TEVON Kab \ x¢. . ¢ f \ ? A
TOUS dduppLOrs Auépov Kal diootopyouv wWuyijs
9 a a \ \ 3 / , “
ETOLELTO onpeta, TO O€ AdUTWS HépelY TaUTA
\ , ’ i. , > Kal Tpaws aTredoKipaten.
bd A ? \ :
Eyo 8, ws pev emi Oavatw Baoiréws npépws
of \ # 9 9? > 4 ‘
oUTw Kal diravOpwres év ots nUTUYNTE YpHaa-/ w “ a péevou Tiaicacw av7ols otehavyndhopety Karas
if 9 3 v A
etye Kal Ove, OvK ap ElTrolu Tpos yap TO ral ? / a“ \ n
ve“eont@ Kat ayevvés, CovTa pev Timav Kat
a , ' > © 7? € Ff 4
ToiaOat modtTHY, TeaovTos & Ud €ETépov pi)
A tS \ is 9 bf 3 A na
pepely THY Yapav peTPLWS, WAN ETLOKLPTAaY TH
ca \ 4 if b \ b
vexp@® Kal tmatwvive, WoTep avtors avdpa-‘ U yaOijoavtas’ OTL pevToL Tas olKoL TUYAS Kal
t ee) \ ’ a a \ € Sdxpva Kal oduppors amrorXTMY Tals yuvarti oO
A Gé A a ae , v -~ 3? npoabévyns, & TH TOAEL GuuEepery WETO, TAUT
a“ \ , “A
EmpaTtev, emai, Kat TiWenat TorLTLKAS Kal % , A DayeN A ‘ \ ¢ , avipwdous Wuyis del Tpos TO KOLVOY taoTdLevov
\ a / \ a
Kal Ta OiKEela TAOH Kai TpayuLaTa Tots Onuoaiots
ww \ tA \ onl
émavéexovta THpely TO akiwua ToNU paAAOY 7 52

DEMOSTHENES, xxi. 1-4

Philip’s death. At once, then, the Athenians pro- ceeded to make thank-otferings for glad tidings and voted a crown for Pausanias. And Demosthenes came forth in public dressed in a splendid robe and wearing a garland on his head, although his daughter had died only six days before, as Aeschines says,} who rails at him for this and denounces him as an unnatural father. And yet Aeschines himself was of a weak and ungenerous nature, if he considered mournings and lamentations as the signs of an aflec- tionate spirit, but condemned the bearing of such losses serenely and without repining.

For my own part, I cannot say that it was honourable in the Athenians to crown themselves with garlands and offer sacrifices to the gods on the death of a king who, in the midst of his successes, had treated them so mildly and humanely in their reverses ; for besides provoking the indignation of the gods, it was also an ignoble thing to honour him while he was alive and make him a citizen of Athens, but when he had fallen by another's hand to set no bounds to their joy, nay, to leap, as it were, upon the dead, and sing paeans of victory, as if they themselves had wrought a deed of valour. However, for leaving his domestic misfortunes and tears and Jamentations to the women and going about such business as he thought advantageous to the city, I commend Demosthenes, and I hold it to be the part of a statesmanlike and manly spirit to keep ever in view the good of the community, to find support for domestic sorrows and concerns in the public welfare, and to preserve one's dignity far more than actors

1 Against Clesiphon (or On the Crown), § 77.

\ \ n lal
Tous vmoKxpiTas TOV BactdIKoOV Kat TUpavVe-wn e e la > >
KOV TPOTWOTOV, OVS OPAmev OVTE KAALOVTAS OUTE
yerovtas év tots Pedtpots ws avtot Oédovawp,
S) ? e e >] \ 3 na Ss N (? 4 aX WS 0 AY@V aTaLTEl TpOs THY VTTOOECLD.
g \ > n
Nwpis 6€ TovTwy, et det TOY aTVYYCAaVTA pA)
n , a ,
Teplopay aTrapyyopyntov év TH Tale Ketpevoy,
5 \ \ / n / a N
GAAXa Kal Noyots YpHaGat Kovdtifovar Kal Tpos
X

HOlw WpayHaTa TpeTEw THY CLlavolav, WaTrEP nm N lal ca)
ob TOUS OdOardpt@vTas amo TOV apTrpaV Kal
\ \ \
avTiTuTwY éml Ta YAWPA Kal paraKa Ypw-
3 , V4
pata THy Ow amaye KEedEvOVTES, ToOEV av
, f A
Tus érayayorto BeXtiw Tapnyopiay 7) martpidos fal) cal) n \ n
evTUYOUGIS eK TOV KOWWaY TAVaY emt TA OtKEla
/ a i 3 ie
ovyxpaciv tropilopevos tots PBedttocww adpavi-~ ’ wn N iy b wn WA
Covcav Ta Yeipw; TadTA pEV OvY ElTrEly TPOIKXON-Ce bf ca) \ \ > ,
MEY OPOVTES ETLKADVTA TONAOVS Kat aTroOnNv-
, A U , \ ?
vovta Tov Aiaxivnv TO NOYw TOUTH TPS OLKTOV.
5 aie. wae / Le
XXITIT. Ad 6€ modes wadw tov Anuoadévous
\ / an avappimifovTos avtas cuvictavTo. Kal OnGaior N b) / a a ‘ \ x n
pev émefevto TH Ppovpad Kat TrOoAXNOUS aveEtro?, ¢ a) Uf n
oTrAa tov Anpoobévous avtolts cupmapacKevacavtos, "A@nvaio: & ws Toreu“noovTEs MET AUTOV
\ n n e TapeckevalovTo. Kal To Biya Katetyey o An-
‘ \ ,
poadévns, Kal mpos tous év ‘Acta otpaTnyous
a f ” \ > a ? / U
Tov Bactréws Eypade Tov éxeiVer eTTEyELpwY TOXE-pov ’AreEdvopw, twatéda cat Mapyitny aroxadov
, N \ , /
avuTov. é7rél mévTOL TA TEpL THY YwpaVv BépeEvos
A \ Ny a > f
Taphv avtTos meta THS Suvapews els THY Bovrwrtiar, 54

DEMOSTHENES, xxi. 4-xxut. 2

do when they take the parts of kings and tyrants ;
for these, as we see in the theatres, neither weep

nor laugh according to their own inclinations, but as the subject of the action demands.
And apart from these considerations, if it is our duty not to allow the unfortunate to lie comfortless in his sorrow, but to address him with cheering words and turn his thoughts to pleasanter things (like those who tell people with sore eyes to withdraw their gaze from bright and hard colours and fix it upon those which are soft and green), how can a man obtain better consolation for his domestic griefs than by blending them with the general welfare of a prosperous country, thus making the better things obscure the worse? These things, then, I have been led to say on seeing that many have their hearts softened to effeminate pity by this discourse of Aeschines.
XXIII. The cities of Greece, under the incitations of Demosthenes, now formed themselves into a league again. The Thebans, whom Demosthenes had helped to provide with arms, fell upon their Macedonian garrison and slew many of them; while the Athenians made preparations to go to war along with them. Demosthenes reigned supreme in the assembly, and wrote letters to the King's generals in Asia stirring them up to make war upon Alexander, whom he called a boy and a Margites.!. When, however, Alexander had settled the affairs of his own country and came in person with his forces into Beeotia, prone lay the courage Lae. Silly Madman. A mock heroic poem bearing this name was attributed to Homer. Cf, Aeschines, On the Crown, § 160.
55

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

% if \ e , ~ b] , YG éEexéxomrtTo pev 1) OpacuTyns Tov AOnvaiwy Kai o Anpoabévns ater Brjxet, OnBaio: 5é tpodobevtes Um éxelvwy rywvicavto KaO avTovs Kal THY
/ > / A \ , \
mod améBarov. OopvBov b€ peyarou Tovs "A@nvatovs TepteaT@T0s, aTeaTaAn péev o Anpo-aOévns aipeBets pel' éEtéepwy mpecBevt1s mpos "AréEavdpor, deicas b€ THY Opynv éx tod Kidac-

pOvoes aveywpnaoev oTiaw Kat THY MpEea Petar
a e adjcev. ev0us 8 o ’Ar€Eardpos eEntes méuTrwv
Tov Snpaywyav séxa pév, ws ‘ldopevers xal
Aotpis eipyxacw, oxTw 8, WS ol TAEloTOL Kal
“A , , Soktpotato. Tav avyypadewv, tovace, Anuoalé-
3 la)
vnv, IloAvevetov, “Kgiadtnv, Aveotdpyov, Mos-poxréa, Anpwva, Kardro0evnv, Xapidnuov.
a . \ 4 kes) / , e
Ore kai Tov wept TOV TpoBuTwy Royor o
aA A , A lal , Anpoabévns mpociWe 70 Sym, &) Tots AUKOLS
Tous Kuvas é€FcdwKe, Sienynodpevos avTov peév
€lKATE KAL TOUS TLV AUT@ Kuvalv UTEP TOU S1}Mou
‘
payouévors, AréEavdpov 6€ tov Maxedova povo-
N ' y S. «Oo » +
UKOV TpoanyopEevaoev. ETL O, aomep, €pn, “Tous éumopous opwpev, Tay év tpuBrLw Selypa mepipépwat, St odiywy Tupw@y Tous TorXovS TiMpaaKoVvTAS, OUTWS EV Huiy NavOdveTe TaVTAs avTovS cuvexdLoovTes. TAaUTA pev ovV 'Aptaoto-
€ /
Bovros 0 Kaacavépevs tatopnxe.
Bovrevopévav b€ tav ’AOnvaiwy Kxat b:Lar7r0-
, ¢ , N , , \
povvtwy, 0 Anuadns AaBov reéevte TdNavTa Tapa
al fal , ,
TOV avopav wpmoroynce mpecBevoev Kal 5e2)-
1 rpoonpe... & Graux with M4; ds.
56

DEMOSTHENES, xxi, 2-5

of the Athenians, and Demosthenes was extinguished, while the Thebans, betrayed by their allies, fought by themselves and lost their city.) Then, in the midst of the great confusion which reigned at Athens, Demosthenes was chosen and sent with others as an ambassador to Alexander, but fearing the wrath of the king he turned back at Cithaeron and abandoned the embassy.2. Then straightway Alexander sent to Athens a demand for the surrender to him of ten of their popular leaders, according to Idomeneus and Duris, but according to the most and most reputable writers, only eight, namely, Demosthenes, Polyeuctus, Ephialtes, Lycurgus, Moerocles, Demon, Callisthenes, and Charidemus.

It was on this occasion that Demosthenes told the Athenians the story of how the sheep. surrendered their dogs to the wolves, comparing himself and his fellow-orators to dogs fighting in defence of the people, and calling Alexander “the Macedonian arch-wolf.”” Moreover, he said further: “Just as grain-merchants sell their whole stock by means of a few kernels of wheat which they carry about with them in a bow] as a sample, so in surrendering us you unwittingly surrender also yourselves, all of you.”” Such, then, is the account which Aristobulus of Cassandreia has given.

The Athenians were deliberating on this demand and were at a loss how to treat it, when Demades, for five talents which he had received from the men demanded, agreed to go on an embassy to

' In October, 335 B.c.

2 Cf. Aeschines, On the Crown, § 161.

fa) a ’ a ,
cecbat Tod Bacthéws UTEP avUTOYV, elite TH Hirta “ N e/
TLOTEVWD, ELTE TPOTOOKOY [LETTOV EUPITELW HOTTEP
> § \
Néovta ovov Kexopeapévov. Emrerce O odv Kat
/ \ v e 4 \ /
TapnTnaato Tous avspas o Anuddns, Kai dindXa-
a \ ,
Fev avT@ THY TONLYD.
Ss ,
XXIV. ’AmerOovtos 6€ “AXreEadvdpou peyador
C \ e
ev Hoav ovTol, TaTeva 6 eémpattev o Anpo-é tym Oe “Ayide tO Laraptiar

aGevns. xwoupevp de “Ayidu 74 preaty
4 if f 95 4 “A
Bpayéa ovvexivyOn maruv, eit Extnfe, Tov pev
3 / 3 £ / “ ® v }
A@nvaiwy ov cuveEavactavTwy, Tov Arytoos / “w oe
mecovtos Kal Tov Aaxedatpovioy cuvTpiBerTov.
s , a)
EiaonyOn 5€ tote Kal 4 epi Tov atedavov \ \ K a a \ SAAN,
ypadyn kata Krnoipwvtos, ypadetoa pev ert Xatpwvdov apxyovtos puixpov éTava tov Xatpwvi-
a “A ¢ b)
Kar, Kpietoa & vaTepov Etect déxa em’ AptoTto-
a / “ ,
havtos, yevouévn 5€ ws ovdepia TV Snpootwry / / \ / a“ if \ TepiBontos dea Te THY OoEaY TOV NEyOVTwY Kal
nA 4 / € n 7
Thy TaVv OixalovTwY evyéveray, ob Tols éXavVOVGL
/ / a tov AnpocGévnv tote wielotov Suvapévors Kal / b) , \ ? le paxedovilovoly ov TponKavTo THY KAT avTOU

a ’ , ef a 3 / ae \
Wipov, aXX ovTwm AauTPwWS aTréXVGAaV WOTE TO
/ “A / 3 f
mTéumTov pepos TOV Wihdwv Atoyivnv py jpeTta-
a a \ 9 \ a

AaBely. eéxelvos péev odv evOus ex THS TOrAEWS

1 From 333 B.c. to 330 B.c., Agis IIL, the king of Sparta, carried on war against Macedonia in conjunction with Persia. In the latter year he was defeated and slain by Antipater, Alexander’s regent in Macedonia.

2 In 336 B.c., Ctesiphon proposed that Demosthenes receive a golden crown for certain public services, and Aeschines indicted Ctesiphon for proposing an illegal measure. The document (Demos. De Cor. § 54), from which Plutarch takes the king and entreat him in their behalf; either because he relied on the friendship of Alexander, or because he expected to find him sated, like a lion glutted with slaughter. At any rate, Demades persuaded the king to let the men off, and reconciled him with the city.

53

857

XXIV. So when Alexander went back to Macedonia, Demades and his associates were high in power, but Demosthenes acted a humble _ part. It is true that when Agis the Spartan was active in revolt Demosthenes once more made a feeble effort in his support, but then he cowered down, since the Athenians would not join in the uprising. Agis fell in battle, and the Lacedaemonians were erushed.}

It was at this time that the indictment against Ctesiphon in the matter of the crown came on for trial. It had been prepared in the archonship of Chaerondas a little before the battle of Chaeroneia, but came on for trial ten years later? in the archonship of Aristophon. It became the most celebrated of all public causes, not only on account of the fame of the orators, but also because of the noble conduct of the judges, who, though the prosecutors of Demosthenes were then at the height of power and acting in the interests of Macedonia, would not vote against him, but acquitted him so decisively that Aeschines did not get a fifth part of their ballots.2 Consequently, Aeschines forsook the city at once, and spent the

the name of Chaerondas, the archon of 338, has been shown to be spurious. The case was tried in 330 pr.c.

3 This made Aeschines liable to a fine of 1,000 drachmas, and made it impossible for him to bring any future action before an Athenian court.

” > ’ , \ ME Ls / , 3 / @OXET aTiov, Kat Tept “Podov Kai ‘lwviay codgu-CTEVOV KATES. WCE.

XXV. Mer ot wodtv & “Aprardos teev é&
\ b)
"Actas ets tas “A@ynvas atrodpas *>AréEavdpor,
e a ? \ \ >
AUT@ TE TPaypLaTAa TUVELOwS TrOVNpAa Ot dowTiay, 3 a ” \ v a / ,
KaKElVOY 70n XYaXeTroV dvTA Tots Pirols SedoiKas.
/ \ N a a KaTagduyovtos 6€ Tpos Tov Ohmov avTov Kal pera nw \ a aA ‘\
TOV VPNMATWOV KAL TOV VEOY AVTOV TAPAdLOOYTOS, e ‘ bd Cor, bf] \ > f
ot pev adAot pytopes evdus érrodOarptacaytes
\ ‘ a bd / \ / \
pos Tov mAovTOY €BoxCovv Kat cuvérreOov TOUS
9 ; f N , \ Caper ¢ \
A@nvatous eéyecOat nai owe Tov ikéTnV. 0 O€
a f
Anpooévns mpwtov pev aTedavvery TuvEeBovrEVE
\
tov “ApzraXov, kat duratTecOat en THY Tod > ih ? , >] ’ Pp] f \
euBdrwoiv Els ToNeuov €€ OUK avayKatas Kal +Q7 , € A 9 ~~ 7” ef
adtkou mpopdacews’ Huépars 6 Odriyats botepov 9 , a t ON 2 \ Co
éFetalopévwr TOV XpNudTwY Lowy avTov o ”Ap-Gg f a f \
manos naGevta BapBapixyn KUALKL Kal KaTapap-
, \ 5
Gavovta THv Topetav Kal TO ElOos, exédEvcE S1a\ € aA lé c
Baotacarta tiv oXKiv TOD Xpvatou cKepacGat.
f \ a ig \ / \
Oavpacavtos b€ tov Anpwoabévous to Bapos Kat
, a ” / eed
mvuOomévou Tocov aye, peidtacas o “AprtraXos, “"AEe cot, naw, “elxoot TddavTa’ Kat nw N a yevomevns TaXlaTa THS vuKTOS ErEeurey avT@
a / 9
THY KUAIKA META TOV elkoot TAaAaYTOYV. HY &
/ aA N
apa devos 0 “Aprrados épwttxot mpos xXpuaiov
’ ‘\ Vv 4 4 \ al ’ tA

avopos owes kat dtayvoe Kat Porais opupatov aveupety 7005. ov yap avtécyev 0 Anpoadevys, 60

rest of his life as a teacher of rhetoric in Rhodes and Ionia.

XXV. Not long afterwards Harpalus! came out of Asia to Athens. He had run away from Alexander, because he was conscious that his prodigality had led him into criminal practices, and because he was afraid of his master, who was now become harsh to his friends. But after he had taken refuge with the Athenian people and put himself in their hands with his ships and _ his treasures, the other orators at once fixed their longing eyes upon his wealth, caine to his aid, and tried to persuade the Athenians to receive and save the suppliant. But Demosthenes, in the beginning, counselled them to drive Harpalus away, and to beware lest they plunge the city into war upon an unnecessary and unjust ground ; a few days afterwards, however, while they were making an inventory of the treasure, Harpalus saw that Demosthenes was eyeing with pleasure a cup of barbarian make, with a keen appreciation of its fashion and of the ornamental work upon it. He therefore bade him poise it in his hand and see how heavy the gold was. And when Demosthenes was amazed at its weight and asked how much it would amount to, Harpalus smiled and said, “ For you it will amount to twenty talents;” and as soon as night was come he sent him the cup with the twenty talents. Now, Harpalus was skilful in detecting the character of a man who had a passion for gold, by means of the look that spread over his face and the glances of his eyes. For Demos-thenes could not resist, but was overcome by the

1 Alexander’s treasurer. He came to Athens in 324 B.c

ara TANYyELS UTO THs dwpodoKias WoTrEP Trapa-
, Q / at i“
dedeypévos ppovpav TpocKexwprKcer TO ApTrdaro.
Kat pel apépav ev Kal KANDS Eplots Kal TaLVials
KATA TOU Tpaynrov KadedEdpevos Els THY EK-
/ “A \ / > 7S
KrAnoiav mponrdde: Kat KEedXevovTwY avictacbat
Kat Néyetv, Svévevey WS ATTOKEKOMMEVNS AUT@ THS nA ¢€ bo] >] n A >] ¢ \ dwvijs. ot 5 evdvets yrevafovtes ovxX vio
bd > A
ouvayxns Efpalov, ANN UT’ apyupayxns ErAnpOat vurtwp Tov Snpaywyov. vaTtepov de TOD Sypou
\ >] f \ 4 \ ,
Tmavtos aicOGouévov 11)v Swpodoxiav Kat Bovro-Y a \ U 5) 7A ’ \
pevov atroroyetoOat Kal TWelGEly OvK EDVTOS, ANAG N fal
yaretaivovtos Kal GBopvBovytos, avaotas Tis
iA
gcoxwowey eitwv: “OvK axkovoecbe, ® avdper
3 aA nm \; (4 yy 33
AOnvaiot, ToD THY KUALKA EXOVTOS;
Tore pev ovv amétepav €x THs Toews TOV
\ , A “Apranopv, dedi0Tes 5€ un Aoyov aTratTa@vTat ¥pPN-Cae Cotes 4
udtwv @v SinpTaKeray ob pytopes, Sytnow érot-
n / , ODVTO VEAVLKIY KAL TAS OLKLaS ETTLOVTES NpEvYOD,
le) ~ %
wry THS KaddtkrA€ous Tod “Appevidov. povny
f
yap THY TOUTOV VEWOTL YEYALMNKOTOS OVK ElacaV 3 a f y bt4 ¢ 4 a éLeyyOijvat, vusdns évdov ovans, ws toToper ®eorroptros.
c , fa) XXVI. ‘O b€ Anuoobévns omoce ywpady etor)- \ > 4 veyce Wijdtopa thy €& “Apetou mayou Bovdjy
a \ f éfetdoat TO Tpaypa Kat Tous éxetvyn Sokavtas wn n \ lal al
abdixety Sobvat Sixnv. ev b€ TPwTOLS abToD THs

bribe, and now that he had, as it were, admitted a garrison into his house, promptly went over to the side of Harpalus. Next day, after swathing his neck carefully in woollen bandages, he went forth into the assembly; and when he was urged to rise and speak, he made signs that his voice was ruined. The wits, however, by way of raillery, declared that the orator had been seized overnight, not with an ordinary quinsy, but with a silver quinsy. And afterwards, when the whole people learned that he had been bribed, and would not permit him, when he wished it, to have a hearing and make his defence, but were angry and raised a tumult against him, someone rose and said jokingly: " Men of Athens, will you not listen to the man who holds the cup?"'!

At that time, then, they sent Harpalus away from the city, and fearing lest they should be called to account for the moneys which the orators had seized, they made a zealous search for it, and went round to their houses on the quest, except that of Callicles the son of Arrhenides. For his house was the only one which they would not allow to be searched, since he was newly married and his bride was within, as Theopompus relates.

XXVI. But Demosthenes put a bold face on the matter and introduced a bill providing that the case should be referred for investigation to the council of the Areiopagus, and that those should be brought to trial who were found guilty there. He was himself, however, among the first condemned by the council, and came before the court for trial,

1 At feasts, the cup passed from guest to guest, and the one who held it had the right of uninterrupted speech or song.

/ f tov dixnv Kal trapadofels eis TO Seapwrnpov,
’ , A 7 \] \ ee 9 Gé nA
aiayuvn THS aitias Pyot! Kal 6s acGéverayv Tov
, , , \ e ‘ ’
TwUATOS OU Cuvauévou Hépely TOV Elpypov aTro-PS cel \ \ ‘al , a be al n b) / pavat tous pev AaOovta, ToV de AaGeiy eEovatav
if id) \ n f Sovtmy. Réyetat your ws ov paKpayv Tov aaTEOS

if ’ , n , bf lal
hevywv aicGo.rd tTivas Tov dtahopwv avT@ ToNXt-
-” > “ -, \ ? \ e X ?
TOY eTLoL@KOVTAS, Kal BovAOLTO fev AUTOV aTrO-

ft e b] b] - i? v \

KpuTTey, ws 0 exetvot POeyEduEevot TOUVvOma Kal

, \ / n , 9
mpoceNOovtes eyyvs edéovTo AaBetyv épodia Tap
~ ? \ a - iA
AUTO@V, €T AUTO TOUTO KopmitovTEs apyuUpLOV OlKO-

, , / \
Gev Kal tovtov xapi éridiwkavtes abtov, dua be aA , \ / >] al N
Oappety Tmapexddouv Kai pn hepev aviape@s TO U 14 nA Z ‘
auuBeBnkos, ETL paddAov avakrXavoacGat Tov \ > n n b] , Anuocbévny kat eimetv: “las 8 ov péd\r@
, / ? \ 4 ? ‘\ i
dhépery Bapéws avrodtTwv TOALY EXO povs TOLOUTOUS

v “ b Ce / e - ? Cat , éyovaay olovs év eTEepa hirous evpety ov padzsov bP) ECT;

\ ‘ \ nA eld
"Hyeyxe 66 THY huyny parakas, év Alyivn Kat
n , \ \ \ N

Tpottive cabefowevos ta moka Kat Tpos THY
, e
"Artixny amoBrérav cedaxpupéervos, @oTE Havas
e , a“ n
oUK evyvmpovas ovd of"oXOYOVCAS ToOls eV TH
, , 3 / ,
TOALTELA Vveavlievpadiy aTropvnuoveverOal. Reé-nA Yi > , \

yeTab yap €k TOU aaTEOS WTAaNrAATTOMEVOS Kal
, / AY a b) a“ TPOS THY AKPOTOALY avaTELVasS TAS Keipas Elmrety:
z r EN \ n
‘OC, déormowa Todas, te 62) Tptat Tols YadeTTo-

, N \
TaToLs yatpers Onpiois, yNavKt Kal SpaKovTs Kal
1 gnoi Reiske, and Graux with M*: ¢act.
64
858

DEMOSTHENES, xxvi. 1-4

where he was sentenced to a fine of fifty talents and delivered over to prison in default of payment. But out of shame at the charge under whieh he lay, as he says,’ and owing to the weakness of his body, which eould not endure confinement, he ran away, through the carelessness of some of his keepers and the connivance of others. At any rate, we are told that when he was in flight at a short distance from the eity, he learned that some of the citizens who were his enemies were in pursuit of him, and there- fore wished to hide himself; and when they ealled upon him loudly by name, and came up near to him, and begged him to aecept from them provision for his journey, declaring that they were bringing money from home for this very purpose, and were pursuing him only in order to get it to him; and when at the same time they exhorted him to be of good courage and not to be pained at what had happened, Demosthenes broke out all the more into eries of grief, saying: “ Surely I must be distressed to leave a city where my enemies are as generous as I ean hardly find friends to be in another.”

And he bore his exile without fortitude, taking up his quarters in Aegina and Troezen for the most part, and looking off towards Attica with tears in his eyes, so that utterances of his are on record which are not generous or consonant with his spirited efiorts as a statesman. We are told, namely, that as he was leaving the city he lifted up his hands towards the aeropolis and said: “ O potent Guardian of the City, Athena, how, pray, canst thou take delight in those three most intraetable beasts, the

1 In the second of the letters which have come down to us under his name, § 17.
05

4 39 \ \ , b] a x ,
& Onuw; ' TOUS O€ TPOTLOVTAS aVT@ Kal cuVdLaTPpi-U4 a /
Bovras veavickovs améTpeTe THS TONLTELAS AEyOV
° a / e A ? a nw
@S el, dvely TpokEepmevwvy OO@Y AT apXis, THs \ bd \ \ A \ \ > , A > pev ert To Biya Kai thy éxxrnolav, THs 8 dvte-
\ \ \
Kpus els TOV ONEO POY, ETUYYaVE TPDELOW; TA KATA
\ , Le 4 x 4 \
THY TorlTeLav Kaka, PoBovs Kat POovous kai ww >) e wn
diaBoras Kat ayvas, emi TavTnY av oppncat
‘ \ A , tiv evdv Tod Gavutou Telvovcar.
r > X \ 5) A XXVIT. “AANA yap ete hevyovtos avtod ty 3 , \ > iy \ ’ ig
eLonpevny guyny “AreEavdpos perv éTerevTyCE,
€
Ta 6 “EXAnviKkad cuvictayvto Tmadiv, AewoOévous
A N , avopayabodytos Kal wepiteryifovtos ’Avtimatpov
bd , 7 / \ i e
2 év Aapia todtopxovpevov. Ivéas peév odv o
¢ n pytwp Kat Kaddrtpédwv o KapaBos €& ’A@nvav
>]
dhevyovtes Avtimutp@ mpoceyévovto, Kal pera
A , , o
TOV éxeivou dirtwv Kal twpécBewv TeEpLiovTEes OUK
v > / \ c/ 3 \ /
clwy apiatacbat Tous “EXAnvas ovdé tpocéyery
A > , / \ A
tots A@nvaiow: Anpocdévns 6€ tots @& doteos
\
mpeaBevovot mpoopitas éautTov nywvifeTo Kai
/ wn
TUVETPATTEV OTWS ai TOAELS TUVETLONHCOVTAaL TOFS Makedoct kat cvvexBarovaw avtous THs “EXXa-
>] A
3 dos. é€v & ’Apxadia Kat Nodopiav tod IlyOéou

A \ Kat tov Anpuoabérovs yevéeoPat mpos adXdXoUS
> e if wn
eipncev 0 Purapxos ev exxdnaola, ToD pev Urép wn A la) ¢
tov Makeddovor, Tod 8 umép Tov “EXXjvwY ré-/ \ N \ / bd va) e ryovtos. Aéyetar dé Tov pev LluOéav eizrety Ott, / 3 ra %,
Kabamep otktav els HY dvetoy ElLaohépeTas yadda,
, e
KAKOV TL TUVTWS EVELY VOULComEv, OUT@ Kal TOALY
wn ¢ 2) / ,
avayKn voce eis iv A@nvatwv mpecBeaa trapa-66

DEMOSTHENES, xxvi. 4-xxi11. 3

owl, the serpent, and the people?’’ Moreover, when young men came to visit and converse with him, he would try to deter them from public life, saying that if two roads had been presented to him in the beginning, one leading to the bema and the assembly, and the other straight to destruction, and if he could have known beforehand the evils attendant on a public career, namely, fears, hatreds, calumnies and contentions, he would have taken that road which led directly to death.

XXVII. But while he was still undergoing the exile of which I have spoken, Alexander died,! and the Greek states proceeded to form a league again, while Leosthenes was displaying deeds of valour and walling Antipater up in Lamia, where he held him in siege. Accordingly, the orators Pytheas and Callimedon (called the Stag-beetle) fled from Athens and joined the party of Antipater, and travelling about with the regent’s friends and ambassadors tried to prevent the Greeks from revolting or attach- ing themselves to Athens; but Demosthenes, joining himself to the ambassadors from Athens, used his utmost efforts in helping thein to induce the cities to unite in attacking the Macedonians and expelling them from Greece. And Phylarchus states that in Arcadia Pytheas and Demosthenes actually fell to abusing one another in an assembly, the one speak- ing in behalf of the Macedonians, the other in behalf of the Greeks. Pytheas, we are told, said that just as we think that a house into which asses’ milk is brought must certainly have some evil in it, so also a city must of necessity be diseased into which an Athenian embassy comes; whereupon

1 At Babylon, in May, 323 B.o.
67
PEWEARCH SCELVES

4 yivetau' Tov b€ Anpoobérny otperat TO Tapd-
, \ ‘ lA \ wv b>] 2 LG f
Sevypa, bnoavTa Kat TO yada TO Ovelov ep vVyLELa \ bf if li
cat tous "A@nvatous él cwtypia wapayiweobat TOV VOTOLVTOD.
@ n / n
Eq’ ols odes 6 Trav ’APnraiwv Shyos Wydiral / i) Cera 7 Anpoobéver KkdOodov. TO pev ody is t \ BY
wndicpa Anpwv o Iatavievs, aveyrtos wy An-, Sut ate ra) de / > 9
poabévous, etarnveyxev: éeTéeuhOn dé TpLnpns ém
’ X > v ? \ “A J i
5 avtov eis Alyevav. éx« 6€ Tlepatas avéBatvev wv v v b / >) / >] \
oUTE APYOVTOS OUTE lEpews aTroNELPOEVTOS, GAA
Kab TOV GA\NOV TONTOV OMOd TaVTwWY aTAVTWD-
Tw Kal Ceyouevwy Tpobvpws. OTE Kal dyotv Si eX € , , ,
avrov o Mayyns Anr)tptos avatetvavta Tas Nelpas paKkapioat THs iuepas exeivns autor, ws
, 9 , f ,
Bérxtiov ~AdrxtBtadov Katiovtas Wemetopevous
f > / e > > a / \
yap, ov BeBiacpévous, UT’ avtov déyecPat Tovs
/ a \ a “ a
6 woAiTas. THs oe XPnbar ees Cnuias AUT@ pevovans (ov yep egy xapere AVGAaL karadirey) éoo pi- 859
TAaVTO ™ pos TOV vOjL0v. elwOcres yap év TH
Quaia tod Aos tod owtipos apyupiov Tedeiv Tols KaTtacKevalovas Kal Koopovat Tov Bwpor, éxelv@ TOTE TAUTA TOLhoaL Kal TApATYELV TEVTH-
4 ¢ na
KoVTa TaravTwv éFéOwKav, Oocov Fv Tipnuya THs
/ |
KATAOLKNS.
ons, tr N
XXVIII. Ov pny emi wordy ypovov atéXarvoe
Ths TaTpioos KaTeNOar, dra TAYV TOV LAAHVI-K@V Tpayuatov ovvTpiBévtwv Mertayertyidvos pev 7) Tept Kpavyava paxn ovvetece, Bonédpo-63

Demosthenes turned the illustration against him by saying that asses' milk was given to restore health, and the Athenians came to bring salvation to the sick.

At this conduct the Athenian people were de- lighted, and voted that Demosthenes might return from exile. The decree was brought in by Demon of Paeania, who was a cousin of Demosthenes; and a trireme was sent to Aegina to fetch him home. When he set out to go up to the city from Piraeus, not an archon or a priest was missing, and all the rest of the people also met him in a body and welcomed him eagerly. It was at this time, too, as Demetrius the Magnesian says, that he lifted his hands towards heaven and blessed himself for that day, since he was coming home from exile more honourably than Alcibiades did; for he had persuaded, not forced, his fellow-citizens to welcome him. It is true that his pecuniary fine remained standing against him (for it was not lawful to remit an assessment by act of grace), but they found a device to evade the law. It was their custom, namely, in the case of a sacrifice to Zeus the Saviour, to pay a sum of money to those who prepared and adorned the altar, and they now gave Demosthenes the contract to make these pre- parations for fifty talents, which was just the amount of his assessment.

XXVIII. However, he did not enjoy his native city for long after his return from exile, but the cause of Greece was speedily crushed, and in the month of Metageitnion the battle at Crannon took place,! in that of Boédromion the Macedonian 1 August 6th, 322 B.c. In this battle Antipater and

Craterus crushed the combined armies of the Greeks and concluded the so-called Lamian war. 6

9

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

pu@vos d€ mapndOev ets Movvvyiayv 1 dpoupd, Ilvaveiavos b6¢ Anpuocbérns améBave tovde Tov TpOTOV.

'Os 'AvTimrat pos Kal Kpatepos NYVEXOVTO mpoatovTes ert Tas "AOnvas, ot pev mepl tov An- pooOevny POacavtes vTeENNOov ex THs TOdEWS, o 6é Shuos avTav Oavatov Katéyvw Anwddou 4 ¥ \ b] " , ypaavtos. addXwv 6€ ddAXAaXoD StactapéevToVv 0 'Avtimat pos TEPLETTE LTE Tous cvAAapBavortas, Oy yyEepov iy 'A pxtas) KA Gets puyad0oOnpas. Tovtov 6€ Qovpiov évta TO yever Aayos Exel Tpa- yootas vmoxpiverOai mote, Kat tov Aiywwntny Il@Xov tov brepBadovta TH TéeXVN TWavtas éxelvou yeyovévat pabnrijy tatopovaiv. “Eppurmaos

d€ Tov ‘Apxiav év Tots Aaxpitov TOU p7TOpoSs uadnrais! avaypade: Anpntpios dé THIS “Avagipevous Svat piBijs HETETXNKEVAL poly avrov. obTos ovv Oo 'Apxias ‘Trrepetony bev TOV pytopa Kal
"A pea rovixoy TOV Mapa@anov Kal TOV Anyntpiov TOU Parnpéws adehpoy ‘Ipepaion e év Abyivn KaTa-puyovtas emt TO Aldxetov amooT dao as emreprpev els KXewvas mpos “Avrimarpoy KQKEL dep Oapnoav, ‘Trepeidov dé xal tiv yAOtTav éxtTpN-Orvar N€youct.
XXIX. Tov 6é AnpocPévny ruOopevos ixérnu év Kanavpiq év TO lep@ Tlocesdavos KabeCer Gar, ClaTevoas UTNpETIKOIS Kal arrofas peTa Opg-KOU Sopudopev ere ev avactavTa Badiferv peT
avtTov mpos Avritatpov ws Suayepés Teroopevor 1 uadntais with Reiske, Coraés, Bekker, and M* (Graux):
mabynriy.
70

DEMOSTHENES, xxvii. 1—xxix. 3

garrison entered Munychia, and in that of Pyanep- sion Demosthenes died, in the following manner.

When Antipater and Craterus were reported to be advancing upon Athens, Demosthenes and _ his associates succeeded in escaping by stealth from the city, and the people, on motion of Demades, passed sentence of death upon them. Since they dispersed themselves to different places, Antipater sent his soldiers about to arrest them, under the command of Archias the so-called Exile-hunter.
This man was a native of Thurii, and the story goes that he was once a tragic actor; indeed, it is recorded that Polus of Aegina, the best actor of his time, was a pupil of his. But Hermippus states that Archias was one of the pupils of Lacritus the rhetorician; while Demetrius says that he belonged to the school of Anaximenes.
This Archias, then, finding that Hypereides the orator and Aristonicus of Marathon and Himeraeus the brother of Demetrius the Phalerean had taken refuge in the sanctuary of Aeacus at Aegina, haled them away and sent them to Antipater at Cleonae.
There they were put to death, and Hypereides,

it is said, also had his tongue cut ont.
XXIX. Moreover, on learning that Demosthenes had taken sanctuary in the temple of Poseidon at Calauria, Archias sailed across to the island in small boats, and after landing with Thracian spearmen tried to persuade the fugitive to leave the temple and go with him to Antipater, assuring him that he would suffer no harsh treatment. But ek

, ¢€ \ \
ovdév. 0 6€ Anuoobévns étvyyavev drvpiy Ewpaxas
\ \ ¢ / fal
KATA TOVS UTvous éxEivNS THs vVUKTOS GAAOKOTOD.
286 \ ' 1 he a 3 / , édoxet yap avraywritecbar TO 'Apxia Tpaywdiay
¢ / "A , ' UTOKpLVOMEVOS, EUnmEepav O& Kal KaTéywV TO
/ > i al \ ,
Géatpov évoeia mapacKkeuvhs Kal yopnytas Kpa-
A N a b] , \ ,
tetc ar. 610 Tov "Apyiov modrda hiravOpwra } / ' a} x ' Ul ef
tareyPevros davaBrdeyas pos autor, wa7rEp aes, , 6c? ' a) eee Cen at etuyvare Kadynpevos, '""O Apxta, etmev, " ovte ° , , Vi if % nw ?
UTOKPLVOMEVOS ME ETTELTAS TWTTOTE OVTE VUV Treétbf] / 39 ? , ? ? A
oes éTrayyedXopevos." apEapévou 6 amendety
a » , te] fal T:A 3 »" / ¥ tov Apxiou pet opyis, " Nov,' ébn, " deyers Ta > aA lal , 4 ' ,
éx ToD Maxedovixod TeimoSos, apts O UmeEKpivov.
\ , , ~
piKpoVv oUY EmloyEs, OTMS ETLTTELAW TL TOLS oikol. Kal TaUT EelT@V eVTOS aveywpnaEe TOD
w~ x f € , ,
vaovo' Kat \aBov LuPrtov ws ypadew péedrAwv
n / \ ,
TPOTHVEYKE TO TTOMATL TOV KdAAMOV, Kal daKw", ef A n > @omep év To StavoetoGar Kai ypapev etwder,

, \
Ypovoy TivVa KaTécyer, eiTa ocuyKaduWapevos
’ , \ td e \ 9 X \
uTexNLVE THY KEparyV. ol PEeVv OVY TAPA TAS
Ug A / / ¢, 3
Gupas éotwtes Sopuhopor KateyédXwv ws aTr0-
O€ELALWYTOS AUTOD, Kal fadaKOoV aTEKaXOUY Kal
v e ? 3 / \ > /
avavopov, 0 6 ‘Apyias mpoce\Owv avictacbat
\ ’ al ,
TAPEKUNEL, KAL TOUS AUTOUS UVAKUKA@V ROyoUs
9 \ \ le
avOis éemnyyédrXeTO dtadrayas pos Tov ’Avtt-Tatpov. 0n 6€ ouvyncOnpevos o Anpoodévns
Ul A fal “
EMTEPUKOTOS AUT@ TOV PapMaKOV Kal KpAaTOvYTOS YZ \ / ‘ \ ?
éfexaruyato: cat dvaPdéras mpos tov ’Apyxiar,
3 ? > ‘ a “Ouvn dv gOavos,’ eimev, “dn Tov ex THS Tpa-f , be f AS “A yodtas umoxpivopevos Kpéovta Kat To o@pa 72

DEMOSTHENES, xxix. 1-5

it chanced that Demosthenes, in his sleep the night before, had seen a strange vision. He dre: amed, namely, that he was acting in a tragedy and contending with Archias for the prize, and that although he acquitted himself well and won the favour ai the audience, his lack of stage decorations and costumes cost him the victory. Therefore, after Archias had said many kindly things to him, Demosthenes, just as he sat, looked steadfastly at him and said: “O OHEG. thou didst never convince me by thine acting, nor wilt thou now convince me by thy promises.” And when Archias began to threaten him angrily, “ Now,” said he, “thou utterest the language of the Macedonian oracle ;! but a moment ago thou wert acting a part. Wait a little, then, that I may write a message to my family.’ With these words, he retired into the temple, and taking a scroll, as if about to write, he put his pen to his mouth and bit it, as he was wont to do when thinking what he should write, and kept it there some time, then covered an d bent his head. The spear-men, then, who stood at the door, laughed at him for playing the coward, and called him weak and unmanly, but Archias came up and urged him to rise, and reiterating the same speeches as before, promised him a reconciliation with Antipater. But Demosthenes, now conscious that the poison was affecting and overpowering him, uncovered his head; and fixing his eyes upon Archias, “Thou canst not be too soon now,” said he, “in playing the part of Creon in the tragedy and casting this

1 a.e. thy real sentiments, in obedience to Antipater.

~ € f \ ’ f s
TouUTO pittwy atadov. éyw d,@ dire Ilocedop, ére Cov eEavictapat Tov lepov' T@ be “AvtiTatp@
\ , >~ © \ \ \ ) ,
kat Maxedoow ovd 0 cos vaos KaBapos atroné-
A 4 nw
NeLTTAL. TAUT ElTwr, Kal KEXEVTAS UTONAPELD
3 s ” f \ / ee a avTOV 70H Tpé“ovTa Kal aadXopmEvoy, awa TO
nw 5 \ \
mpoerOety Kat TwapadrAaar Tov Bwpov éTvTece Kal 4 > wn \ f ;
otevakas adie THY Wuyi.
na ad % ‘ , > / “a XXX. To d€ dappaxov “Apiotwov pév exe Tov Kadapmov AaBew dynow avtor, ws etpntar ar/ e \ / A b) , qos O€ TLS, OU THY toTopiay "EpuiTios aveidnde,
f A \ \ \ A
hyal, TETOVTOS AUTO Tapa Tov Bwpoy év pev TO B Bru / > we ? \ e Ad ;
LBrL@ yeypappevny eTLTTOAHS apyny evpeO vat, “AnpooOévns “Avtimatp@, Kat pndév ardor
/ \ a \ ‘ tA f

Oavualopéevyns 5é€ THs TEept Tov Bavatov oEUTHTOS
n \ \ rad ? “~ °
SunyetaCat Tous Tapa Tats Ovpas Opixas ws &x
, \ a a aA
Tivos pakiov NaBwv ets THY YElpa TpoaOoito TO Ff 7 SS
TTOMATL Kal KaTaTILOL TO Puppakov: avTol § dpa
x7 9 N / G
xpucoy wnOncav eivat TO KaTaTLVOpEvov' 1 8
al id aA
UnpeTovaa Taldlokn, TuvOavopévwy TOV Treph
\ > , , N 5 s
tov *“Apxiav, dain modvv eivar ypovov é& ob f \ > y A e e hopoitn tov atrodecpov éxetvov o Anpocbévns as
, oe ml / \ s\ JIRLEN >
duraxtnpiov. “Epatoabévns b€ Kat adtos épv
/ \
Kpiko dyal Koikw TO hPadppaxov durdocewv Tov \ , 5 A 2 oA , ,
dé KpiKoY Eivat TOTOY avT@ hopnpa TrepiBpayto-
a ” e A
viov. TOV OS drwy, door yeypadact TEpl avTod, f / > \ \ b) ’ a TapToAro S€ etal, TAS Stahopas ovK avayKaiov wn Q ef 4 t fal
emeEeNOeiv: mr1,v OTL Anpoyapys o tod Anpo-74

body out without burial! But I, O beloved Poseidon, will depart from thy sanctury while I am still alive; whereas Antipater and the Macedonians would not have left even thy temple undefiled.” So speaking, and bidding someone support him, since he was now trembling and tottering, he had no sooner gone forth and passed by the altar than he fell, and with a groan gave up the ghost.

XXX. As for the poison, Ariston says he took it from the pen, as I have said; but a certain Pappus, from whom Hermippus took his story, says that when he had fallen by the side of the altar, there was found written in the scroll the beginning of a letter, “ Demosthenes to Antipater,” and nothing more; and that when men were amazed at the suddenness of his death the Thracians who had stood at the door told the story that he took the poison into his hand from a cloth and put it to his mouth and swallowed it; and that they themselves, strange to say, had supposed that what he swallowed was gold; and that the little maid who served him, when inquiries were made by Archias, said that Demosthenes had long worn that cloth girdle as a safeguard against his enemies. And even Eratosthenes himself says that Demosthenes kept the poison in a hollow bracelet, and that he wore this bracelet as an ornament upon his arm. But the divergent stories of all the others who have written about the matter, and they are very many, need not be recounted; except that Democharès the relative of Demosthenes says

1 An allusion to the Creon in the Antigone of Sophocles, by whose edict the body of Polyneices was to be left unburied (wv. Of. LOL ff).

abévovs oixetos olec bai dnow aitov ovy uTO fappaxov, Cewy b€ TYun Kal mpovoia THY Maxedovav @MOTHTOS Ee€apTaynvalt, ouvTopws Katactpé-Wwavta xal aduTws. Katéotpepe 5€ extn emi déxa Tov Ilvaveyiavos pnvos, év » THY oxvOpw-ToTaTyy TOV Oecpohopiwy Huépav ayovcar Tapa Th Oe@ vyoctevovaty at yuvaixes.

5 Tovtw peév ortyov botepoyv o tav ’APnraiwv Shjuos aktay amodidovs Tiny eixova Te YadKv dvéatnoe Kal Tov TpecBUTaTOV eyndicato TaV amo yévous év Iputaveiw aitnaw éyew. Kat To émiypaupa TO Opvrovpmevov eTreypadyn TH Race ToD dvoptavTos:

eimrep anv popnv yvoun, Anuoobeves, eives, ovTroT av ‘EAA jvwv HpEev”Apns Maxedav.

of yap avtov tov Anpoobévnv tovto Totjoat révyoutes €v Kadavpia, pédNovtTa TO hadppaxov mpoaphéperOat, ould) pPrAvapovar.

XXXI. Mexpov 6€ mpocbev 4} tapaBanretv nuas “AOnvale RAé€yera’d te Tocovde cvuBhvac.
aTpaTLWTys éml Kpiow TWA KaAXOUpEVOS Ud’ ryyepovos, door elye Xpucisuopy Els TAS YEelpas évéOnKe Tou avdptavtos. éaTnKe S€ TOUS daKTUAOUS GUVEyou &¢ adriAwV, KaL TapaTéduKev ov peyary
2 TAGTAaVOS. ATO TAUTNS TOAKA TOV PUAAOD, EiTE

1 An annual festival in honour of Demeter and Persephone. 2 This statue, the work of Polyeuctus, was erected in 280-279 B.c., on motion of Democharcs, a nephew of Demos-that in his opinion it was not due to poison, but to the honour and kindly favour shown him by the gods, that he was rescued from the cruelty of the Macedonians by a speedy and painless death. And he died on the sixteenth of the month Pyanep- sion, the most gloomy day of the Thesmophoria,! which the women observe by fasting in the temple of the goddess.

It was to this man, a little while after his death, that the Athenian people paid worthy honour by erecting his statue? in bronze, and by decreeing that the eldest of his house should have public maintenance in the prytaneium. And this cele- brated inscription was inscribed upon the pedestal of his statue :—

“ If thy strength had only been equal to thy purposes,
Demosthenes,
Never would the Greeks have been ruled by a Macedonian Ares.”’

Of course those who say that Demosthenes himself composed these lines in Calauria, as he was about to put the poison to his lips, talk utter nonsense. XXXI. Now, a short time before I took up my abode in Athens, the following incident is said to have occurred. A soldier who had been called to an account by his commander, put what little gold he had into the hands of this statue of Demos- thenes. It stood with its fingers interlaced, and hard by grew a small plane-tree. Many of the leaves from this tree, whether the wind accidentally thenes. The well-known marble statue of Demosthenes in the Vatican is thought to be a copy of it. See Pausanias, i. 8, 2, with Frazer’s notes.

7H

’ ¢ , wv ?
TvevmaTos €k TUXYNS KaTaBadorTOS, ElT avTOS ovTws o Geis ExadduWe, TepiKeiueva Kal cuuTEcoD-
na \ /
Ta Aabety eroince TO YpUcioy OvK OAiyor YXpovoD.
’ bd ’ \ n
ws & 0 avOpwros eTravehOav avetpe Kal S1ed00n
/ a a
Noyos UTép ToUTOV, TOAAOL TMV cevhvav UTobeciY
N / n
NaBovtes eis TO Adwpoddoxyntoyv Tov Anpucabévous
n n La OLnpLLAA@VTO TOLS ETLypappace.
/ 4 ’ \ ’ , Anuddny b€ ypovov ov modvy amoAavcavta
a“ 4 / e / 7 /
THS pvonevns SoEns 4 Anpoabéevouvs dikn Kat-
, ca
yayev eis Maxedoviar, ods éxodaKkevey aia ypas, € ‘ sf 3 / f 3 a \ UmTo TovTwmy éEoXNovmEVOY SiKaiws, éTAaXOH mév
y / nA , >]
6vTa Kal TpoTepov autots, TOTE 6 Els aiTiav
/ \
adduxtov éumecovta. ypappata yap é&étrecev 9 al > Ka f OL ? a avtod, ov wv tapexare Llepdixcay émuyerpety
is f \ 7
Makedovia Kat cafe tovs “EXXnvas ws amo n fe) , \ campov Kal TAXaLOD aTHMOVOS (A€ywr TOV ’AvTL-
/ >? e / a jTatpov) nptnmévous. ép ois Aevapyov tot ié / \ ¢ KopuOtov xatnyopnaavtos tmapokuvleis o Kadown n f A ee?
cavdpos éyxatéeohakev avTou TH KOATH TOV VIOP, 3 6 wn nw / Lal
elTa OUTWS EKELVOY avedetv TpodéeTakeEV, EV TOIS
peyloTols OLOaTKOMEVOY ATUY HPAL OTL TPWTOUS
e \ € 4 “A a ,
EAUTOVS Of TPCOOTAaL TwADDGLY, 0 TOAAAaKIS Anpo-

,
abévous TpoayopEevovToS OVK éTLTTEUGE.
‘ , ’ / /
Tov pev otv Anpoabévous améyets, Loocte,
* n f A id
Biov c& av pets aveyvapev 7) dincovoapev.
78

blew them thither, or whether the depositor himself took this way of concealing his treasure, Jay clustering together about the gold and hid it for a long time. At last, however, the man came back, found his treasure intact, and an account of the matter was spread abroad, whereupon the wits of the city took for a theme the incorruptibility of Demosthenes and vied with one another in their epigrams.

As for Demades, he had not long enjoyed his growing reputation when vengeance for Demosthenes brought him into Macedonia, whose people he had disgracefully flattered, only to be by them justly put to death. He had been obnoxious to them even before this, but now fell under a charge from which there was no escape. A letter of his, namely, leaked out, in which he had urged Perdiccas to seize Macedonia and deliver the Greeks, who, he said, were fastened to it only by an old and rotten thread (meaning Antipater). And when Deinarchus the Corinthian denounced him for this, Cassander! flew into a rage and slew the son of Demades as he stood close by his father’s side, and then ordered that Demades should be likewise killed. _Demades was now learning amid his extremest misfortunes that traitors sell themselves first, a truth of which Demosthenes had often assured him, but which he would not believe.
And so, Sosius,? thou hast the promised Life of Demosthenes, drawn from such written or oral sources as I could find.
* The son of Antipater and, later, his successor.
4 See the opening sentence of the Life.
79

— OE —

~~ —

KIKEPON

il Kixépavos 6é Thy jev pnTépa Aéyovaw 861 ‘EXBtay Kat yeyovevat KANOS Kal BeBroxevas, Tept de Tob TAT POS oudev iy mubéabau [eT plov.
Ol ev yap év Kvapeiep TLVh Kal ever Gar Kal
Tpapivar TOV avépa. héyovow, ot & ets Tuddov
'ATTuy avayovet THY apn Tod yevous, BaarevgavTa AapTpas évy OdorotvcKols Kal TrOdEL?)- cavta ‘Pwpaiots ove addvvat@s. 0 MEVTOL TPA@TOS éx TOU yévoUS Kuxépeov érovopac Beis aEtos NOyou Soxel yeveo bau, 640 THD embehnow OuK diméppupay of pet avTov, aAN NOT AT AYTO, KALTTEP TO TOANY xArevaloperny. KiKxepa yap ot Aativot
TOV. épeBurdov Kahovot, KaKeivos ev TO TEpaTe
THs pivos SiacTorry, Ws EoLKeD, dp Preiap elev OoTEp €peBtvOov Orabuny, ad’ ns EXTTATO THY éemavupiar. AUTOS YE py Kicépwv, t UTEep ov Td0€ yeypan rat, TOV pirov auTov olopevany beiv, OTE TT P@TOV apxiy peTneL Kal ToALTElas TTTETO, puryetv ToUvoma Kal perabécbau, eyeTat VEAVLEV-TA pLEVOS ev Tety ws aywvieitat Tov Kinépwva tav SKaupov kat Tov Kathov evdoforepov aTrobetEat, TOpMEvoY & évy LuKxedia xal Tots Geots avaOn wa
TOLOUMEVOS apyupoby Ta Lev Tpara duo TOV dvoudatwrv éméypae, tov te Madpxov kal tov 82

CICERO

I. Ir is said of Helvia, the mother of Cicero, that she was well born and lived an honourable life; but of his father nothing can be learned that does not go to an extreme. Tor some say that he was born and reared in a fuller’s shop, while others trace the origin of his family to Tullus Attius,! an illustrious king of the Volscians, who waged war upon the Romans with great ability. However, the first member of the family who was surnamed Cicero seems to have been worthy of note, and for that reason his posterity did not reject the surname, but were fond of it, although many made it a matter of raillery. For “cicer”’ is the Latin name for chick-pea, and this ancestor of Cicero, as it would seem, had a faint dent in the end of his nose like the cleft of a chick-pea, from which he acquired his surname. Cicero himself, however, whose Life I now write, when he first entered public life and stood for office and _ his friends thought he ought to drop or change the name, is said to have replied with spirit that he would strive to make the name of Cicero more illustrious than such names as Scaurts or Catulus. Moreover, when he was quaestor in Sicily and was dedicating to the gods a piece of silver plate, he had his first two names inscribed thereon, the

! Called Tullus Aufidius in the Coriolanus, xxii. 1.

4 . a / TvAXLov, avti d€ TOU TpiTov cxwTTwV épéBtvOov
f \ \ \ /
€X€NEUTE TAPA TA Ypup4paTa TOV TEXViTHY eVvTO-nw ww 9 aA e
pedoa. TavTa ev OvdY TrEpt TOD dVvOpaTOS iaTO-pntat,
IT. TeyOjvar b5€ Kexépwva A€yovow avodvvas \ ' / ts > fal a XN ¢ ,
Kal aTrOveOS hoxevGeions abtob Tihs mytpos Huépa Tpitn Tov vévy Karavdav, év 1 vuv ot apyovTes yy , a , A evyovtar Kal OUovoty UTép TOD yE"ovos. TH SE
'4 a nw °
titTOn dhacpwa Soxet yevéeoOat Kal mpoeTety ws
" , ca) ie ® / b / nm
2 oderos peya aot Pwpaios extpepovon. tTavta
\ 3 , \ / % A
dé dAAws Ovetpata Kal drvapov eivat SoxovvTa / SEN b , , 3 \ ' € TAXEWS AUTOS aTrederEe pavTEeLay UrXNOLWHY EV 1)ALtf " , ' > Pp] of 3 /
Kla Tov pavOuvew YEVOHEVOS, ds evdviav éxrap-~ X wv \ > wn /
was kal pnaBaov Gvopa cat dofav év tots maton, @OTE TOUS TaTépas avTwV émipolTav Tois didav , a) A bat /
aKanretos owes TE BovrAopevous tOety TOV Kixépwva

KaL THY Upvoupévynv avTtod epi Tas padnoets
/ ¢ al
ofUTnTa Kal guUVEedLY LoTOpyaat, TOUS & aypotKo-
, ? a e? e n al
Tépous opyilecPat Tos viéow opa@vTas év Tats ¢ wn N Fe , , ¢ ww > \ nm i?
odots TOV Kixépwva pécov avtav em TYn AapBa-/ 2 c ¢ / b) cal
3 vovtas. yevouevos 6, wamep o IIdkdtwv aéktot
n , ,
Thv dirouaby Kai ptrocopov hvaty, clos aomale-n / \ be , Y- ,
cba wav padnua Kai pndév Noyou pde Tardeias
4 's atimatew eidos, éppun mas mpofuporepoyv émi
/ \ x
TOWNTLKNY. KAL TL Kal Trotnuatioy ere rados
A 4 a
avtov dtacwlerat, Ilovtios VXaixos, ev tetpa-

1 January 3, 105 B.c. Plutarch follows the Greek method of reckoning from a fixed point in the month. Cicero says (ante diem) III. Nonas Januarias (ad Att. xiii. 42, 2), the

S4

CICERO, 1. 4-11. 3

Marcus and the Tullius, but instead of the third, by way of jest, he ordered the artificer to engrave a chick-pea in due sequence. This, then, is what is told about his name.

Il. It is said that Cicero was born, without travail or pain on the part of his mother, on the third day of the new Calends,! the day on which at the present time the magistrates offer sacrifices and prayers for the health of the emperor. It would seem also that a phantom appeared to his nurse and foretold that her charge would be a great blessing to all the Romans. And although these presages were thought to be mere dreams and idle fancies, he soon showed them to be true prophecy ; for when he was of an age for taking lessons, his natural talent shone out clear and he won name and fame among the boys, so that their fathers used to visit the schools in order to see Cicero with their own eyes and observe the quickness and intelligence in his studies for which he was extolled, though the ruder ones among them were angry at their sons when they saw them walking with Cicero placed in their midst as a mark of honour. And although he showed himself, as Plato? thought a nature should do which was fond of learning and fond of wisdom, capable of welcoming all knowledge and incapable of slight-ing any kind of literature or training, he lent himself with somewhat greater ardour to the art of poetry. And a little poem which he wrote

when a boy is still extant, called Pontius Glaucus, Nones being the fifth of January. Strictly speaking, only the first day of the month was called the Calends, but Plutarch seems to call the opening days of the new official year ‘‘ the new Calends.” 2 Republic, p. 475 b.

oo \ A
peTPW TeTTOLNMEeVOY. Tpoiwy 5€ TO YpoVvm Kal
, n a) /
TOLKLNWTEPOY ATTOMEVOS THS TWEPL TAVTA povenNs,
” 3 f (WA > \ x \ ba
édo£ev ov povoy pHntwp, GAXa Kal TOLNTNS ApLOTOS
, N A a
eivat Pwpuatimy. 1 pev ovv emt TH pyntopiky doa
n , / n
pévpe viv dvapéver, KaiTEp ov puKpas yeyevn-
/ ,
HEINS TEplL TOVS RAOyovs KaLwvoTomias, THY O€ TOLNTIKHY AUTOV, TOAABY Eevdhvav Emriyevopmevwn, lal U4 , ,
TAVTATACW AKNEN KAL ATipoy Eppety cuULBEBNKEDV.
Ill. “Amadrayels d€ tav év ratol dt:atpiSav
la) bd , a Dirwvos HKovaee TOD €E "Axadnueias, Ov partota € nn “ ra 4 , \ SS \
Popato: Tav KXectonaxyov cvviOwv Kai bua Tov
\ \ ,
Noyor Cavpacay Kat dia TOY TPOTOY HYaTHCaD.
n , \
da O€ Tots Trept Movxtov avdpace cvvev ToArtTL-

A fal Lal %
KolS KAL TpwTEVOVaL THS BovaAnsS els eurrErpiav
“ An , f
TOV VOMWY WHEAEITO’ KAL TLVA YpoVvoVv Kal oTpAa-
, Z € X ~S , \ \ \
Telas peTeoxey UTO XvAAQA TEPi TOY MaporKxoy
3 ta nw \ “
jmovenov. €10 opa@y eis aotdouw, ex O€ THS OTGagews els xpaTov éumintTovTa Ta wTpaypata povapxylav, éml tov cxXoraaTHy Kal OewpntiKov
/ n , éerXOwv Biov”EXXAnot cvviy diroroyots Kal Tpoc-A a) , ” t / > 4
etye Tois padnpuacw, aype ob YAAas éxpaTynce
\ , 4 if € ,
Kal KaTdoTacty Tiva NapPaverv edokev 7 TOALS.
ai de n ee 4 Ne t 3 rAeEV
y d€ TO Ypovw TOUT@ Npuvaoyovoes aTeEdev-Ss / / \ ? / ¢) 3
Oepos YvAAa TpocayyetAas TLVOS OVTLAY ws Ex
A \
Tpoypapys avatpeVévtos autos éwvycato diaxe/ “ b \ \ € 7 ¢ en \
3 riwy Spaypav. éret d€ “Pwoxios 0 vids Kai
n , ?
KANPOVOMLOS TOD TEOVNKOTOS HYAVaKTEL KAaL THY
1 90-88 B.c. It was under Pompey, however, that Cicero served (Phil. xii, 11, 27). a incS2 5. c, 86 and composed in tetrameter verse. Moreover, as he grew older and applied himself with greater versatility to such accomplishments, he got the name of being not only the best orator, but also the best poet among the Romans. His fame for oratory abides to this day, although there have been great innovations in style; but his poetry, since many gifted poets have followed him, has altogether fallen into neglect and disrepute.

III. After he had finished the studies of boyhood, he attended the lectures of Philon the Academic, whom, above all the other disciples of Cleitomachus, the Romans admired for his eloquence and loved for his character. At the same time he consorted with Mucius Seaevola, a statesman and leader of the senate, and was helped by him to an acquaintance with the law; and for a little while he also did military service under Sulla in the war against the Marsians.! Then, seeing that the commonwealth was hurrying into factions, and from factions into unlimited monarchy, he betook himself to a retired and contemplative life, associated with Greek scholars, and pursued his studies, until Sulla got the mastery and the state appeared to be somewhat settled.?

About this time Chrysogonus, a freedman of Sulla's, put up at public auction the estate of a man who, as it was said, had been put to death under proscription, and bought it in himself for two thousand drachmas.* Then Roscius, the son and heir of the deceased, was indignant and set

3. In translating Cicero's ''duobus millibus nummum," Plutarch erroneously reckons in denarii (which were equivalent to drachmas, or francs) instead of in sestertii (worth only one-quarter as much).

5 - \ , ovolay amedselKVUE TEVTHKOVTA Kal Stakociwy Rn fs id - /
Taravtwv ovoav akiav, 6 Te SUANaS eheyyYopevos / lo A
éyanérraive Kal diKny TaTpoxTovias EemHYyE TO a vr ik
'PwoKio, TOU Npvaoyovov KaTacKkevacayTos, €8o-
, a
nOew 8 ovdeis, GAN atreTpeTIOVTO TOV YAAa TH
, CY N 3 id a yareToTnTa SedoxoTes, oUTW 61 dt epyytay TOD
aA 4 , e ,
petpaxiov TO Kiképwrr mpoodpvyovtos of dtrou TULTAPOPUOV, WS OUK av avT@® Aaptrporépay
s 3 \ \ 80 ¢ , Oe U avis apxnv mpos dofav etépav ovde Kkarrdiw
s \

yevnoopevnv. avadceEduevos ovv THY cUYNyopiaV
0) icQn- dedi@s 5€ TOV Lv
Kat Katoplwaas eOavyacOn: dediws b€ TOY SvA-Aav aTednunoey eis THV ‘EAXXaba, StacTelpas
e A a , ?
NOYOY WS TOD GwWLATOS AUTO OepaTretas Seopévou.
9 : f
Kal yap iY OVTWS LOXVOS Kal AoapKoS, a4ppwotia
\ \ ? 4 > \ nA
OTOMdYOU piKpa Kal yAloxpa jLoyes oe Tis ee / ‘ e be \ N \ N @pas Tpocdepopevos’ n O€ Pwvn TodAN pev Kat
’ , \ be \ ” € \ oe a ayabyn, oxrnpa b€ Kat amwXaotos, Uo 5é Tov
U U n
Aoyou chodpoTnta Kal Tabos EyovTOS ael Sid TOY
+ , i “n lal
dvw Tovey €1.avvoyevn hoSov Tapetyevy UTép TOU TWLATOS.
IV. ’Adixopuevos 8 eis "AOijvas ’Avttoyou Tod
9 , tA “A Ss) , nn f
Ackawvitov Sunkouce, TH pev evpoig THY NOyor rs \ ig Oy 39 a ’
avTOU Kal YapiTL KnAOUpEVOS, & O° Ev TOS Oéypa-aw évewtépitev ovK enrawav. Hon yap éEictato
a , A bd - €9
THS véas Aeyopévns “Akadnpetas o ’Avtioxos Kal
, ,
tTyv Kapveddov otdaw éyxatéderTev, elite Kap-
a a an
TTOMEVOS UTO THS evapyelas Kal TOY aicOnoewr,
” (cA v Xo td ‘ \ } A
ELTE, WS Pay EVLOL, PiAOTLLLG TLVL KaL OLahopa 83

CICERO, ut. 3-1v. 1

forth clearly that the estate was worth two hundred and fifty talents, whereupon Sulla, enraged to have his actions called in question, indicted Roscius for the murder of his father, Chrysogonus having trumped up the evidence. No advocate would help Roscius, but all avoided him through their fear of Sulla’s cruelty, and so at last, in his destitution, the young man had recourse to Cicero. Cicero’s friends encouraged him to undertake the case, arguing that he would never again have a more brilliant or a more honourable opportunity to win fame. Accordingly, he undertook the defence of Roscius,! won his cause, and men admired him for it; but fearing Sulla, he made a journey to Greece, after spreading a report that his health needed attention. For in fact he was spare and lean, and owing to a weakness of the stomach could only with difficulty take a little light food late in the day; his voice, however, was full and streng, but harsh and unmedulated, and _ since, owing to the vehemence and passion of his oratory, it was always forced into the higher tones, it made men apprehensive for his health.

JV. On coming to Athens he attended the lectures of Antiochus of Asealon, and was charmed by his fluency and grace of diction, although he disapproved of his innovations in doctrine. For Antiochus had already fallen away from what was called the New Academy and abandoned the sect of Carneades, either moved thereto by the clear evidence of the sense-perceptions,? or, as some say, led by a feeling of ambitious opposition to 1 See the oration pro Roscio A merino.

2 This the New Academy refused to admit.

mpos tovs Krestopayou cat Dirwvos cuvybeus Tov Stwixov éx petaBorrns Geparrevwv ANdyov év
Tois mAeiatos. Oo b€ Kixépwv éxelva ryyara KAKELVOLS 7 pooeine padhov, Svavoovpevos, éL
: 'A Tavrdmaciw exTesor TOU Ta Kod MpdooeLy, detipo HETEVEYKALEVOS TOV Biov € ex THs ayopas Kal Tihs mwoNtTelas é€v aovyia peta girocodias KATACHD.
"Karel é avT@ NvAANaS TE m™poanyyerOy TeOV)- KOS, Kal TO G@pa TOS yupva.a tous avappovuy-pevon ets €&wv EBadile veavixipy, 1) Te Povyn AapBa-pouga TAGGLW nOELa eV pos aKony étéOpaTrto,} eT pias b€ ™ pos TI ee iippoato Tob TWMATOS, Tora HEY T@V ATO 'Papns ditwy ypapovtwr

Kal Seomevov, TOANG O “AVTLOXOU TApaKkeNEvo-pévov Tous KoLVOlS emtBanreiv TpaypLacty, avors
@oTeEp dpyavov €Enptveto™ TOV pntopexov Aoryov
Kal GvEeKivel TV TONTERY Suvapy, aut ov Té Tais peNéTats StaTrovav Kal TOUS éTaLtvoupévous peTiov prytopas. O0ev eis “Aciav xai ‘Podov émevae, Kal TV pev Aglavav pyTopwv Revoknret
TO ASpaputT ve Kat Atovucia TO Maryunre Kal
Mevirrrre T® Kapt curecxonracey, év 66 ‘Podw PYTOPL [ev ’Arroh\Awrla TO Modevos, Prrordde
d€ Llocesdwviw. réyerar S& tov "AmoANdvLOY Ob oUVLEVTE TI ‘Pwpaixny duadextov 6enO jar TOU Kexépwvos ‘EAAnuea ti HereT HOA TOV © UTaKOUcat TpoOvuws, olowevov ovtTws EcecOat BerTiova
1 éréOparro the words kat moAAy (and full) which follow this verb in the MSS. are deleted by Gudeman as contra- dictory to iii. 5 and due to the double woaaa below.

2 éfmptvero Graux, after Madvig: é&nprue.

go

CICERO, iv. 1-4

the disciples of Cleitomachus and Philon to change his views and cultivate in most cases the doctrine of the Stoics. But Cicero loved the systems which Antiochus discarded and devoted himself the rather to them, purposing, in case he was altogether driven out of a public career, to change his home to Athens, away from the forum and the business of the state, and spend his life in the quiet pursuit of philosophy.

But word was now brought to him that Sulla was dead,! and since his body, strengthened by exer- cise, was taking on a vigorous habit, while his voice, acquiring modulation, had grown pleasant to the ear, and had been moderated into keeping with the habit of his body; and since, moreover, his friends at Rome earnestly besought him by letter and Antiochus strongly urged him to apply himself to public affairs, he once more sought to prepare for service therein his instrument, as it were, to wit his rhetorical style, and to rouse to action his political powers, diligently cultivating himself in declamation and taking lessons of the popular rhetoricians. With this end in view he made a voyage to Asia and Rhodes. In Asia, he studied oratory with Xenocles of Adramyttium, Dionysius of Magnesia, and Menip- pus the Carian; in Rhodes, oratory with Apollonius the son of Molon, and philosophy with Poseidonius.? Apollonius, we are told, not understanding the Roman language, requested Cicero to declaim in Greek, with which request Cicero readily com- plied, thinking that in this way his faults could tie 5 Boe: 2 Cf. Cicero’s Brutus, 91,

g!I
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ b , bd \ ’ ’ ; ‘ \

5 THv éravopOwow: evel 6 éuedeTHoE, TOUS peV
’ n a \
adXous eéxmeTANKOae Kat StaptdracAat pos
a fe 3 b
adAAnAOUS Tos émraivots, Tov & ’AmroAAwVLOY OUT akpowpevov avtov dtayvOfvat Kal Tavoapévov 4 auvvouy KabéfecOat todvy yporov, ayPopévov Oé 863
a , ’ a cS f >
tov Kuxépwvos eimeiy. “de pev, © Kexépor,
a a / érawa kal Oavualo, THs dé “EXAdSos orKktEtpw THY TUXNHY, OPOV, & “ova TOV KAAOY Huty UTrENEt-
a / a ,
metTo, Kal TaAVTA ‘Pwpraiots da cod Tpoayevoueva, Taivelay Kal Noyov.”
,
a - /
V. ‘O yodv Kixépwy édrTridmv peaotos él Try
, \ a TontTeLav PEepopmevos UO Ypnapov TLvos aTNLva \ ¢ , 9 , \ > OA ‘ ’
Brvv8n THY OpHIY. Eepomevy yap auT@ Tov ev
Aerdois Peov ows av evdofotatos yévotto, Tpoc-étakev 1) lu0ia thy éavtod dvatv, ddrQ pty THY al a , ¢ t a n , TOY TOANw@Y SofaV, HyE“oVva ToleiaOat Tov Biov.
\ “ ¢ \
a ¢ , t a
2 Kal Tov ye TpeTov év “Pon ypovoyv evrAABas
a a a 3 “ 4
dujye Kal Tals apyats oxvnpas Mpoane Kai Tapn-
a fo \ ¢€ - an id
peXEiTo, TAVTA 51) TA Pwyaiwy tois Bavavoota-ToLsS TMpoxepa Kai cuvnOn pynuata, Tparxos Kat
\ ’ / ’ \ ‘ t ’
gTyoNacTiKos axovwrv. émel Oe Gvoer idotipos
3 U \ A \ a av Kal wapokviopevos vie Tov TaTpos Kal Tov Q \ a Ul
hitwv érédwxev eis TO TuVHyopEiy EavToV, OvK
+ / a / a >] ’ 3 \ 3 /
Npé“a TO TWOwTELW TMpoonyev, aX evdus e€e-
aA , \ , \ a Naprbe TH OOEN Kal Ovepepe TOV THY aywuto-

bd “n pévaon er ayopas.
, \ \ 9 \ bp) \ e , fa!
3 Aéyeras 6é cal avtos ovdéy HTTOV voanaas TOD
\ \ , a“ N
AnpocOévovs mpos THY UioKploLv, TOUTO peV
g2

CICERO, tv. 4 v. 3

better be corrected. After he had declaimed, his other hearers were astounded and vied with one another in their praises, but Apollonius was not greatly moved while listening to him, and when he had ceased sat for a long time lost in thought; then, since Cicero was distressed at this, he said: “ Thee, indeed, O Cicero, I admire and commend ; but Greece I[pity for her sad fortune, since I see that even the only glories which were left to us, eulture and eloquence, are through thee to belong also to the Romans.”

V. However, though Cicero, full of hope, was being borne on towards a politica] career, a certain oracle took the edge from his eager desire. When he inquired, namely, of the god at Delphi how he could become most illustrious, the Pythian priestess enjoined upon him to make his own nature, and not the opinion of the multitude, his guide in life. And so during the first part of his time at Rome! he conducted himself with caution, was reluctant to sue for office, and was therefore neglected, being called “Greek” and “Scholar,” those names which the low and ignorant classes at Rome were wont to give so readily. But he was naturally ambitious and was urged on by his father and his friends, and so when he gave himself in earnest to the work of an advocate, he did not advance slowly to the primacy, but his fame shone forth at once, and he far surpassed those who strove with him for distinction in the forum. But it is said that he too, no less than Demos-thenes, was weak in his delivery, and therefore

1 Cicero returned to Rome in 77 B.c., being in his thirtieth year.

‘Pwokio TO Ko UO, ToutTo & Aicwre T@ Tpa-
Yd@ TPOTEXELV eT LMENOS. Tov © Alowmov
TOUTOD toTOpovcLy UTrOK pLVvofLevov ev Peatpe TOV
mept THS TLwooplas tov Ovéatov Bovrevopevov
’ATpéa, TOV UnnpeTav Tivos apyw ma padpapOvTOS, eEo T@V EAUTOU Aoyeg wav 61a TO 780s
ovTa TO TK TT PD Taragat Kal dvenelv. ov puikpa be 7 pos TO TreiGeuy v vmrhpxev ex TOU UTOKptvera porn TO Kiwepeove. Kat TOUS ye TH Body peyanra Xpwfeevous * piytopas eTTKOT TOV ereve be’ aoOéveray é emt THY Kpavyny WOT EP Xorovs eb
imarov ™nOav. n O€ Tepi Ta TKOMLATA Kab THv mardiav TAUTHD evTpaTrehia Oukavexov pev édoxet Kat yragupon, Xpopevos S auth KaTaxopas Tod-Nous EXUTrEL KaL KaKONOELAS edd Bave do£av.
ae ‘Arroberx Gels dé Tapias év ottodeta Kat haxov Sexehiay VOXANTE TLS avO porous ev apxn oitov ELS ‘Pony aToaTéN New dvaryKatopevoes. Vatepov dé Tihs err pehetas Kal O1KaLOGUyys Kal TPZOTHTOS auTOvD mreipay AapBavovres OS
ovoerva TOV mam oO ary epoveov étiunoav. éel ¢
ToAAol TOV amo Pwpuns vévy EvdoEot Kat yeyovo-TES KANO, aitiay éyovtes atakias Kal paraxtas mept TOV TOAELOD, averréupO naar emt Tov oTpa-THYOV THS DLuKeMas, ouvetmey avrois) _Kirepov emipavas Kal TepLeTroLNoeD. éml Tovtols ovr péya dpovev eis ‘Poyny Badiwv yerotov tt mabety dnot. cuvTuxX@v yap avépt Tov étipavav

1 neydAa xpwpevous MSS., Sintenis!, and Bekker ; Sintenis? adopts Cobet’ 8 evan ertreee (boasting loudly of’) ; meyaaa Boav xpwuévous Graux with M®, sought with care to imitate now Roscius the comedian, and now Aesop the tragedian. This Aesop, they tell us, was once acting in a theatre

the part of Atreus planning to take vengeance on Thyestes, when one of the assistants suddenly ran across the scene, and the actor, losing control of himself in the intensity of his passion, smote him with his seeptre and laid him dead. Now, Cicero's delivery contributed not a little to his persuasive power. Moreover, of those orators who were given to loud shouting he used to say jestingly that they were led by their weakness to resort to clamour as cripples were to mount upon a_ horse. And his readiness to indulge in such jests and pleasantry was thought indeed to be a, pleasant characteristic of a pleader; but he carried it to excess and so annoyed many and got the reputation of being malicious.

VI. He was appointed quaestor! at a time when grain was scarce, and had the province of Sicily allotted to him, where he annoyed people at first by compelling them to send grain to Rome. But after- wards they found him careful, just, and mild, and honoured him beyond any governor they had ever had. Moreover, when large numbers of young men from Rome, of illustrious and noble families, were accused of lack of discipline and courage in the war and sent up for trial to the praetor of Sicily, Cicero pleaded their cause brilliantly and won the day. While he was journeying to Rome, then, highly elated over these successes, he had a laughable experience, as he tells us.2, In Campania, namely, he

Yn 5 36

* Or. pro Plancio, 26. This was in the succeeding year

(74 B.C.).

pire Soxobyte Tept Kapraviav, épéo Bau tiva 8n TOV TET ary LEVOV UT auto oryov exovar 'Popoaioe Kat Th ppovodary, as OVO LATOS Kal 60&ns
TOV TET PAYLEVWY AUTO THV TOAW ATracay éuTeE-TANK@S* TOY O eimreiv: " Ilob yap 7s, @ Kixépov, TOY YXpovoy TovTOV;' TOTE pev ov éEabupHoat
TavTaTract, eb KabaTEp Els TeNAYOS AYaves TID
TOAL ELTETMVY O TEPL avUTOU AOdyos oOvdev Els
dofav éridnrov wemoinkev: Batepov 5é Noyta mov éavT@ didovs Toru Tis Pirotiplas vpetrev, ws
Tpos aoptaTov mpaypa THY doEay dpi RXO jLEV05
Kal TEpas ouK epic Tov Eyovgav. ov pay adna,
TO ye Yaipew em aivoupevov Stag epovTws Kal ™ pos
dofav éumabéctepov Eyerv AXpt TavTos avT@ Tapeuetve Kal modAovs TOAAAKIS TOY oplaY émreTapate Noyta uv.

Via “AT TO{LEVOS 6é TAS ToreTEelas T pobupo-TEpOD, alax pov nyetro TOUS ev Bavavaous opyavols Xpwopevous Kat oKeviery apuxoes pndevos awyvoetv dvopa poe Yvopav 7 Svvapey avr OY, TOV
dé TOALTLKOD, @ ov avO pwrrav a cowal m pagers TEpaivovTa, pad vpe00s Kat GpEeh@s exe Tept THY TOY TOTO yrOow. 60ev ov povov TOV /Ovoma-
Tov et Oube pn wovevely avTOV, ara Kat TOTOV ev
@ TOV Yvopipov éxaaTos oiKel, Kab xeplov ov KEKTI TAL, Kal pirous ols TLct NpHrae, Kal yettovas éyivwaKe: Kab Tacav ody “Itadtas diatropevopévo Kixépwve mpoxetpov tv etmety cal émdetEas Tous ToV dirwy aypovs Kal Tas éTavrELs.
Ovciav Sé ptxpav pév, (xavnv 6€ Kal tails daTdvats évapKh KexTnuevos eOavyaveto pre 96

864

CICERO, vi. 3-vn. 3

fell in with an eminent man whom he deemed his friend, and asked him what the Romans were saying and thinking about his achievements, supposing that he had filled the whole city with the name and fame of them; but his friend said: ‘Where, pray, have you been, Cicero, all this while?” At that time, then, as he tells us, he was altogether disheartened, seeing that the story of his doings had sunk into the city as into a bottomless sea, without any visible effect upon his reputation ; but afterwards he reasoned with himself and abated much of his ambition, con- vinced that the fame towards which he was emulously struggling was a thing that knew no bounds and had no tangible limit. However, his excessive delight in the praise of others and his too passionate desire for glory remained with him until the very end, and very often confounded his saner reasonings.

VII. And now that he was engaging in public life with greater ardour, he considered it a shameful thing that while craftsmen, using vessels and instru- ments that are lifeless, know the name and place and capacity of every one of them, the statesman, on the contrary, whose instruments for carrying out public measures are men, should be indifferent and careless about knowing his fellow-citizens. Wherefore he not only accustomed himself to remember their names, but also learned to know the quarter of the city in which every notable person dwelt, where he owned a country-place, what friends he had, and what neigh- bours ; so that whatever road in Italy Cicero travelled, it was easy for him to name and point out the estates and villas of his friends.

His property, though sufficient to meet his ex- penses, was nevertheless small, and therefore men

97

5

pura Dous punjre Mpa 7 poo LepEvos amo THS TuVN-yoplas, padtota © ore THV Kara Beéppov Stxny avéXaBe. TevTOY yap oTpaTnyov yeyovota THs Ducedlas Kal ToANA TeToVNnpevpévoy TOV X«xe-NwToOv Siw@KOVTM@VY EtrEV, OUK ElTMV, AA eE
avTov 7 poTrov TLVA TOU [Ly ELTrEtD. TOV 14p oTpatnyav T® Béppyn xapfouévwv Kat TID Stxny imepBéceor Kat Staxpovoect TodXals els Ty voTaTny éxBarrovtor, Ss Hv Tpoonrov OTL TOS Noyous oO THs mpEpas OUK eFapnecel Xpovos ovee apperar 7 Epas 7) Kplals, avactas 0 Kuxépov épy pr) deta Par Noyvov, aNr’ erayayov TOUS MupTupas
Kal emuxpivas EXENEVTE pepe Thv Whdhov Tovs
SiKaoras. Opes € TOA Xaptevra dia pevnmovev-ETAL Kal Tepl exeivnv avTOD THY Siknv. PRéppnv yap ot ‘Pwyatoe Tov éxteTUNnMEVvoY Yotpov KaXovgw. WS OUP dmerevOepiKos avOpwrros EVOXOS TO tovdaiverr, évona Kexinrtos, éBovnero TaApwoo apevOS TOUS LiKehioras KaTnyope TOU Beppov_ ge Ds
"lovdai@ pos Xoipov; épy o Kixépwv. fv bé
TO Béppn ayTiT as ULOS, OUK ehevdepios SoK@v Tpoic rac Oar THs apas. AowdopnOets ovv oO Kuxe-pov ELS _padaiay umo tov Béppou, ‘ Tots viots,” elTreD, ‘ éytos Oupav bei Aotdopeta Far.” Tov 6€ pyTtopos ‘Oprnciou THY peev evleiav TO Béppn CUVELTELY [41 TOALNOAVTOS, év O€ TO TLL MATE
merabévtos mapayevécOat Kal Aa Boros éXehav-

1 That is, the last day on which the case could be tried during that year. The city praetor already elected for the coming year (69 Bc) favoured Verres, and Hortensius, the advocate of Verres, was to be consul in that year. He wondered that he would accept neither fees nor gifts for his services as advocate, and above all when he undertook the prosecution of Verres. This man, who had been praetor of Sicily, and whom the Sicilians prosecuted for many villainous acts, Cicero convicted, not by speaking, but, in a way, by actually not speaking. For the praetors favoured Verres, and by many obstacles and delays had put off the case until the very last day,! since it was clear that a day’s time would not be enough for the speeches of the advocates and so the trial would not be finished. But Cicero rose and said there was no need of speeches,? and then brought up and ex- amined his witnesses and bade the jurors cast their votes. Nevertheless, many witty sayings of his in connection with this trial are on record. For in- stance, ‘‘verres”’ is the Roman word for a castrated porker; when, accordingly, a freedman named Caeci- lius, who was suspected of Jewish practices, wanted to thrust aside the Sicilian accusers and denounce Verres himself, Cicero said: ‘‘What has a Jew to do with a Verres?”” Moreover, Verres had a young son, who had the name of lending himself to base practices. Accordingly, when Cicero was reviled by Verres for effeminacy, ‘‘ You ought,” said he, “to revile your sons at home.” And again, the orator Hortensius did not venture to plead the cause of Verres directly, but was persuaded to appear for him at the assessment of the fine, and received an ivory therefore used every artifice to delay the case. See Ciccro, in Verrem, i. 10, 31 ff.

2 Of the seven orations against Verres (including the Divinatio ir Caecilium) only the first two were delivered ; the others were compiled after the verdict had been pro- nounced,
99

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ti Lpiyya pa bov, ebTé TL Traryicos) Kixéepov

T pos avTov" Tov 6€ pyavtos aiveyparoov AvoEws drei pias EXEW, se Kai pnv emt tis otKxtas,” &py,} “ony Shiyya exes.

VIII. Otto 6€ tov Béppou Katadicacderros, éBoopi}Kovta. TEVTE pupiadooy TLUN GHLEVOS THY Sixny o o Kixépwy StaBornv éoxyev ws er apyupio TO Tipn ia. Kal uperpevos. ov pny GAN of Suxedd- Tae Xap eldores aryopavopodvtos avToU TOAXG pev aryovTEs aro THs vajoou, TOAAA Oé Pépovres HOV, ov ovdey €T01jT ATO KEpOOS, arr écov émevwricas THY ayopav amexXpijaato Th ptroTiwla TOV dvO porov.
“Exéxrnto dé xoptov kanov ev “Apross, Kal Tept Néay TOALY 79V dr pos Kal wept Toprnious ETEpos, Ov peydror peppy) TE Tepevtias THS yv- varios T POTEYEVETO pupiddwy Séxa, Kal KANpOVoO- puta. TLS vets évvéa Syvapiov cuvaxGeioa pupiaoas. aro TOUTWD érevd epics apa, Kal codppoves Outyrye PETA TOV cupSrovyTay “EX Agvev Kal ‘Popatov pirohoyor, omaveo, ev TOTE, 7 po Ov HOV pAtov KATAKRIVO{LEVOS, ovx, oUTw oe aoxoMay, @s Oa TO TOpa TO TTOMEX pox Onpas Svaxelpevov. AY dé Kal THY aNdayy Tept TO copa Ocparreiay aKpt-

Bs Kal wepiTTos, @oTe Kal tpiireot Kat TepuTra-TOUS apiOue TeTaypéevors xphe ar. TovTOV TOV TpoTrov SraTrardaryory ov THY éEu avoo ov Kal dtapKn 7 pos TONAOUS Kal peyanous ayavas Kab MOVOUS TULELXED. oixiav 6é THY pev TaTppav TO aserg@ TApeX WNT ED, AUTOS. & wKEel Wept TO Tlavatiov umép Tov pn pakpay Basifovtas évo-1 oixtas, pn, Hv Graux with M*: olxlas rn».

1o0o0

sphinx as his reward; and when Cicero made some oblique reference to him and Hortensius declared that he had no skill in solving riddles, “ And yet,” said Cicero, “thou hast the Sphinx at thy house.”

VIII. When Verres had thus been convicted, Cicero assessed his fine at seven hundred and fifty thousand denarii,! and was therefore accused of hav- ing been bribed to make the fine a low one. The Sicilians, however, were grateful to him, and when he was aedile brought him from their island all sorts of live stock and produce; from these he derived no personal profit, but used the generosity of the islanders only to lower the price of provisions.

He owned a pleasant country-seat at Arpinum, and had a farm near Naples and another near Pom- peii, both small. His wife Terentia brought him besides a dowry of a hundred thousand denarii, and he received a bequest which amounted to ninety thousand. From these he lived, in a generous and at the same time modest manner, with the Greek and Roman men of letters who were his associates. He rarely, if ever, came to table before sunset, not so much on account of business, as because his stomach kept him in poor health. In other ways, too, he was exact and over-scrupulous in the care of his body, so that he actually took a set number of rubbings and walks. By carefully managing his health in this way he kept it free from sickness and able to meet the demands of many great struggles and toils. The house which had been his father’s he made over to his brother, and dwelt himself near the Palatine hill,? in order that those who came to pay their court to 1 See the note on iii. 2.

2 Ina house purchased after his consulship (ad fam. v. 6, 2).
IO]

A \ (a 3 U > i?
yAEtoPar Tous Gepatrevovtas avTov. éOepamrevov \ , € / > AS tA “ > > , dé Kal” auépav exit Ovpas hortavtes ovK édat-

N td > A / \ Ps \
toves 7) Kpaooov ért mrovT@ Kal opumpiov dca
A , ,
Thy €v TOS oTpaTEvpact SvVapw, Davpalopmévous ¢€ Jf padtota Pwpaiwy cat peyiotous évtas. Top-fo y \ / ’ 4 \ ,
mnios d€ Kal Kixépwva éOepareve, kal peydda
\ ? A , Y
mpos Ovvapuv avT@ Kal do€av 1 Kexépwvos cuvé-
EA Tpakce TONLTELA.
r dé \ Fi; ed \ > “A Te Lrparyyiav d€ meTiovT@Y aa CRD IA.
fal \ “ id / s
TONNWY KAL MEYANOV TPWTOS ATAUYTWY UVNYyopev-
On Kai Tas Kpioes Edoke Kabapas Kal Kadr@s
“A / \ / ig
EpaBedoa. Déyerar 6€ cal Atkxivvtos Makep,
\ , aA ,
avnp Kat Kal’ avtov toyvwv év TH TWOdEL peya
/ , A , A
kat Kpacow xXpwopevos BonO@, Kpivopevos KNOT IS
’ A “ \ al
ém avutov,! tH Suvvayer kal omovdh mremo0ws;
$14 \ A “A “ f ,
eve THY Wihov Tov Kpitav diadhEepovtwv atar-\ ” , ? \ \ XN
Aayels olkade KetpacOat Te THyv Keharnv KaTa \ ¢€ “ie id ‘\
Tayos Kal Kalapov ipatiov ws veriknKas KaBav > \ af fal \
avOus ets ayopay Tpoiévar: Tov d€ Kpdoaou rept THY AUAELOY ATAVTIHGAYTOS AUTO Kal PpacavTos
ef , oF cal ¥ 3 / \ OTL Tagals Edhoxe Tats Whos, avactpeas Kat
nw \ \ al ~
KatakAdtvels aTroVavervy. To dé mpayua TO Kuré/ v7 La > “~ , \
pove do€av nveyxey ws emripera@s BpaBevoavte TO / \ \ / \ Y4
Sixaotypvov. érret 6€ Ovartinios, avnp éyov Tt \ *, U > td b] A
TpaYU Kal TPOS TOUS apxovTas Oywpov éVv Tats
A \ ,

curnyopiats, yoipddwy d€ Tov TpaXndoV TeEpi-
b) ~ ft \ N fa) /
TAEWS, ITELTO TL KaTATTAS Tapa TOD KiKképwvos, 1 én’ avtod Cobet’s correction of the MS. bm’ aizod, adopted by Sintenis?, So Graux with Ma, 102

865

CICERO, vit. 3-1x. 3

him might not have the trouble of a long walk.!_ And men came to his house every day to pay him court, no fewer than came to Crassus for his wealth or to Pompey because of his influence with the soldiery, and these were the two greatest men among the Romans and the most admired. Nay, Pompey actually paid court to Cicero, and Cicero’s political efforts contributed much towards Pompey’s power and fame.

IX. Although many men of importance stood for the praetorship along with Cicero, he was appointed first of them all;? and men thought that he managed the cases which came before him with integrity and fairness. It is said, too, that Licinius Macer, a man who had great power in the city on his own account and also enjoyed the help of Crassus, was tried before Cicero for fraud, and that, relying upon his influence and the efforts made in his behalf, he went off home while the jurors were still voting, hastily trimmed his hair and put on a white toga in the belief that he had been acquitted, and was going forth again to the forum; but Crassus met him at the house-door and told him that he had been convicted unanimously, whereupon he turned back, lay down upon his bed, and died. And the case brought Cicero the reputa- tion of having been a scrupulous presiding officer. Again, there was Vatinius, a man who had a harsh manner and one which showed contempt for the magistrates before whom he pleaded ; his neck also was covered with swellings. As this man once stood at Cicero's tribunal and made some request of him,

1 Cf. the Marius, xxxii. 1.

2 In 66 8.c. Eight praetors were appointed, and the one who received most votes was made city praetor, or chief magistrate.
103

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kat on Svdovtos, AAAA BovdrEvopévou TorvY ypo-VOV, ELTEV WS OUK AV AUTOS StOTaGELE TEPL TOUTOU
oTpaTny@v, emratpadets o Kuixépwv, “’AXAN eyo, el7rev, ‘ovK EY@ THALKOUTOV TPayNrOV.”
"Ete 0 Ayépas dvo 7) Tpets ExovTs THS apxys
avt@ Tpocnyayée tts Mavidtoy evOtvwrv KkdoTrHs.
0 6€ Mavirtos obTos Evvolay Eixe Kal oTrovdHY

e \ fa!

UTo TOU Onpov, Soxav érXavvecBat b1a Ioptrniov:
éxeivou yap nv piros. attovyévou 8 nuepas
avtov piav o Kixépwy povnv tiv ertotaay ebwxe: Kal 0 Ofmos yavantTyoey elOtopwévwv TOV OTpPATN-yav dSéxa TovAdYLaTOV nuépas OLidovat Tots Kiv-duvevouat. Tav O€ Onudpywv avToy diayayovTeVv éri TO BHua Kat KatTnyopovvTeY, axovabjvat denGeis eitev 6TL TOis KiVOvVEVOVELY dé, KAP OTOV Ol VOMOL TAPELKOVGL, KEYPNMEVOS ETTLELKAS
kai piravOowras Sewvov yyetto TH Mavirio TAVTA I) TapacyXeiv: is ovV ETL fLoVNS KUPLOS HV HuEpAasS OTPATHYaY, TavTHY émiTNHdES OpicaL TO yap els adXov apxKovta Thy Kpiow éxBarelv ovK
eivat Bovronévov PBonfeiv. tavta Reybévta Gavpactiy éroince Tov Shmouv petaBornv Kai ToNAa KaTevpnmovvTes avTov ed€ovTO THY UTEP tov Maviriov auvyyopiav avadaBeiv. o 8 v7é-aTn Tpolvmws, ovy HKiaTta Ova Llowmniov atovta:
Kat KaTaoTas wari é€& vrapyns ednunyopnae, VEAVIK@S TOV OdLyapyLKoVv Kat TO Llopryiw
pbovovvtwr Kaba ToueEvos.
X. Eat 6€ thy bratetay ovx Brtov UTe TeV

104

CICERO ta e=x. 41

Cicero did not grant it at once, but took a long time for deliberation, whereupon Vatinius said that he himself would not have stuck at the matter had he been praetor. At this Cicero turned upon him and said: “ But I have not the neck that you have.”

Two or three days before his term of office expired, Manilius was brought before him on a charge of fraudulent accounting. This Manilius had the good will and eager support of the people, since it was thought that he was prosecuted on Pompey’s account, being a friend of his. On his demanding several days in which to make his defence, Cicero granted him only one, and that the next; and the people were indignant because it was customary for the praetor to grant ten days at least to the accused. And when the tribunes brought Cicero to the rostra and denounced him, he begged for a hearing, and then said that he had always treated defendants, so far as the laws allowed, with clemency and kindness, and thought it an unfortunate thing that Manilius should not have this advantage; wherefore, since only one day was left to his disposal as praetor, he had purposely set this day for the trial, and surely it was not the part of one who wished to help Manilius to defer it to another praetor’s term. ‘These words produced a wonderful change in the feelings of the people, and with many expressions of approval they begged Cicero to assume the defence of Manilius. This he willingly consented to do, chiefly for the sake of Pompey, who was absent, and once more mounting the rostra harangued the people anew, vigorously attacking the oligarchical party and those who were jealous of Pompey.

X. Yet he was advanced to the consulship no less

9 a“ A lan) “A S X\ Q ApLaTOKpATIiKaY TOV TOAN@Y TpOnYOn dia TiY
fal 7
TOA €& ALTiAaS AUT@ TOLAVTNS CUVAYWVYLTALEVOV.
A € \ SOA / a \ \ THS vO YvArAa yevouevns petaBorANns Tept THY aA XN , 4 , \
ToNTELav Ev apYH bev aTOTOV haveions, TOTE O€
Cal a) N , ,
Tols TOANOLS VIO Ypovou Kal ovvnOeias On Tiva
f / / 9
KaTaoTaow exe ov dhavrnv doxovans, haav ob
} tal tal al
Ta TapovTa dtacetoar Kal petabeivat Entodytes 9Q/ ¢ en > \ \ /
idiwy evexa TrEoveet@v, ov mpos TO BédXTLOTOD,
of. \ 4 a a ,
Tloumrniou pev ett Tots Baorredouv ev Ilovtw kai oN , x A y be “A ‘p / S a previa ToAepobyTos, ev O€ TH Poun undepsas
e eo 3 eae:
upecTMaNS TPOs TOUS vewTepifovtas aEvopiayou duvauews. ovTOL Kopudpaioy eiyov avdpa ToAun-
\ ,
THY Kal peyaroTpayLova Kal TolKiiov TO 00s,
? / a /,
Aevxtov Katidivav, ds aitiay moté mpos adXots LOLK) yanots éXaB é :
adixynpact meyadols EhaBe TtrapOévw avyyeyovévat
, a > 3 \ e A \ 4 bl) \ Ouyatpl, ctetvat 0 adedgpov avtod: Kal dixny éml
f 4 4 wn
Tout doBovpevos erresce LUANaV ws ETL CovTA \ yy a ?
Tov avOpwrov év Tois aToPavoupévors Tpoypaat.
TOUTOV OVY TPOTTATHY oO! TOoVNpOL AaBovTES AAAS

a ? 7 ” \ 7
Te TioTels aAANAOLS Edvcav Kal KataQvaavTes
” 3 / a a / >
avOpwrov éyevoavto Tov capKkav. SiépOapto § Cd a ‘ id aA fol é

um avTov TOAV pepos THs év TH ToAEL VEOTNTOS,

4 lal

O0VaS KAL TOTOUS Kai yuvatK@V Epwtas del Tpo-
a 4 ? A
EevodvTos eXadoT@ KAaL THY els TavTa daTravny

9 al , 3 fal 3 v4

abevoas TapacKkevdfovto0s. eéemhpto 8 4 te Tup-

N ce S fal
pyvia mpos arootacw OAH Kal Ta TOAXKA THs ‘ 4
évros “AXrewy LTadatias. émrichadéotata 8§

e ¢ , \ \ 9 & \ \ bd a

7 Pwun mpos petaBornv elye dia THY év Tails

106

866

CICERO, x. 1-4

by the aristocrats than by the common people, and in the interests of the city, both parties seconding his efforts for the following reasons. The change which Sulla had made in the constitution at first ap- peared absurd, but now it seemed to the majority, owing to lapse of time and their familiarity with it, to afford at last a kind of settlement which was not to be despised. There were those, however, who sought to agitate and change the existing status for the sake of their own gain, and not for the best interests of the state, while Pompey was still carrying on war with the kings in Pontus and Armenia, and there was no power in Rome which was able to cope with the revolutionaries. These had for their chief a man of bold, enterprising, and versatile character, Lucius Catiline, who, in addition to other great crimes, had once been accused of deflowering his own daughter and of killing his own brother; and fear- ing prosecution for this murder, he persuaded Sulla to put his brother’s name, as though he were still alive, in the list of those who were to be put to death under proscription.! Taking this man, then, as their leader, the miscreants gave various pledges to one another, one of which was the sacrifice of a man and the tasting of his flesh.2 Moreover, Catiline had corrupted a large part of the young men in the city, supplying each of them continually with amusements, banquets, and amours, and furnishing without stint the money to spend on these things. Besides, all Etruria was roused to revolt, as well as most of Cisalpine Gaul. And Rome was most danger- ously disposed towards change on account of the

TET epNe NS 0. XM NL, 2.
2 Cf. Dion Cassius, Hist. Rom. xxxvii. 30, 3.
107

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

% / > , " \ b] , / ovatats avwpuadriay, TOV pev év do&n padiota Kal
, , A
ppovipate KaTeTTwKEvLEVwD Eis Oéatpa Kat bei-
\ , \ > , A \ lA
mva Kat dirapyias Kal oixodoputas, Tov b€ Wrov-
A 4
TwWY Els ayevvEels Kal TaTELWOUS cUVEppYNKOTOY
4 on t ~ "a x
avOpwrrous, BaTE pliKpas pots deiaGar Ta Tmpa-YyMATA Kal TAVTOS Elvat TOD TOALNGAaYTOS éKOTH-
\ a fal
Cat THY TONLTELAY avTHY Up avTHS vocovdaay.
XT. Ov pry adda Bovdopevos 0 Kartirivas
/ aA isyupov TL TpokaTaraety opuntipiov vratelav peTyEel* Kat NapTrpOs iv Talis éXriow ws Lal
? ¢
Avtwviw cuvuTatevowr, avdpt Ka? avutov peév \ ' / XN A e
ovTe mpos To BEXTLOV OUTE TPOS TO YEtpoV HryeE-
aA 3
povik@, wpoc8ijxkyn & ayovtos Etépou Suvapews écouévw. tavta 61) TOV Kadav Kal ayabav oi a d N A
TrELaTOL TpoatcOopevoe TOV Kixépwva tmponyov
emt THY UTaTELay' Kal Tov Sypou SeEapévou Tpo-
, e N oe , > 4 , \ N Gupwso pev Kartirivas é&étece, Kixépwv dé xat
oo ¢ , A [dios "Avtwvios npéOnoav. Kaitot TOV peTioV-
€ / e a
Twv 0 Kixépwy povos nv é& immtKkovd TraTpos, ov Bovrevtod, yeyoves.

aa x ,
NIT. Kat ra pév wepi Kartirivav Euerrev rt
\ \ 4 / \ ?
Tous ToANOUS AavOavovTa, Tpoaywves SE beyaNot
Thv Kexépwvos utratetay é€ed€EavTo. TovtTo peév
\ ¢ / \ \ WN’ /
yap ol KexwAULEVOL KATA TOUS LVANA VomOUS
,o9 ’ a 3 f% bl] ,
apxew, ovT aabeveis ovTes ovT OALyoL, pwETLOVTES
\ A 4
apyas édnuaywyour, Toda THS DAA Tupav, ro) ld a vidos adnO pév Kal dixata KaTnyopobvTes, ov
\ a poy ev d€ovtTt THY TOALTE(av ovde GUY KaLPO wn “A \ , > “A KivOUVTES’ TOUTO O€ VvOsLOUS ELaHYOV oi Sijpapyxot 108

CICERO x. 4-xtl.2

irregularity in the distribution of property, since men of the highest reputation and spirit had beggared themselves on shows, feasts, pursuit of office, and buildings, and riches had streamed into the coffers of low-born and mean men, so that matters needed only a slight impulse to disturb them, and it was in the power of any bold man to overthrow the common- wealth, which of itself was in a diseased condition.

XI. However, Catiline wished to obtain first a strong base of operations, and therefore sued for the consulship; and he had bright hopes that he would share the consulship with Caius Antonius, a man who, of himself, would probably not take the lead either for good or for bad, but would add strength to another who took the lead. Most of the better class of citizens were aware of this, and therefore put forward Cicero for the consulship, and as the people readily accepted him, Catiline was defeated, and Cicero and Caius Antonius were elected.|. And yet Cicero was the only one of the candidates who was the son, not of a senator, but of a knight.

XII. The schemes of Catiline were still to remain concealed from the multitude, but great preliminary struggies awaited the consulship of Cicero. For, in the first place, those who were prevented from holding office by the laws of Sulla, and they were neither few nor weak, sued for offices and _ tried to win the favour of the people, making many charges against the tyranny of Sulla which were just and true, indeed, but disturbing the govern- ment at an improper and unseasonable time; and, in the second place, the tribunes were introducing

1 For the year 63 B.c 109
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ \ SEN bea eee , - Tpos THY avTiy vTOEatY, dexadupylav KabiaTar-
, "A e "~ TES AUTOKPATOPwWY AVOPAY, ois Edetto TaaNS pev
aT / 4 de Ss / \ eo 5 \ TI oh
Tartas, Taans d€ Lvptas, Kal doa dra Lourniov
/ - a VEeWOTL MWpoTWPLOTO KUpLoUS OVYTaS Twdely TA
, / A fe
dnpoola, Kpivery ods dSoxoin, duyddas éx Barre,
, , a "A guvoixivey modes, YXpipata AapBavew ex Tov
id , / \
TAMLELOV, OTpaTiwTas Tpéhey Kal KaTaréyeu
\ \ "A , "A
oTocwy O€owTo. O10 Kal TO VvOLM Mpocelyov
» " a \ a > e
avo TE TOY ETLhaVvaV Kat TP@TOS "AvT@VLOS oO
"A / "
Tov Kuxépwvos cvvapxov @s tay déxa yevnoo-
3 / \ \ '\ al 7 \
pevos. €doKer O€ Kai Tov Katiriva vewtepto pov
20 \ 3 , e\N , ; A
elom@s ov duaxepaivery UTO TANOOUVS Savetwy' 6
A f / n
partota Tos apiotos PoGov wapetye.
n A S e
Kat todtov mpa@tov Oepavevwy o Kixepwy
by / \ > 7 al > n , exetvo pev Eerndicato tav éerapyiav Maxedoviar,
n \ \ | / lé /
avt@ dé THY LTadatiav didopevnv trapnticato,
, "A 4 iA ' b] /
Kal KATELPYaTAaTO TH YUapiTL TAVTN TOV > AVTwVLOY
e \ a \ @oTeEp vToKpiTy)VY éuproPov avT@ Ta devTEpa
5 a / > «
neyely UTep THS TaTpioos. ws 6 OdTOS éadwxKet
\ , b) / n of na ¢

Kat xelporijOns éyeyover, “adrAov 16n Oappav o r / \ a “A
Ktxépwy éviotato mpos Tovs KaLvoTomovYTas. ey
3 A “A f \ “A ,
pev ovvy tH BovrAn KaTHYOpLAaY TiVa TOU VvoLoU
. e / \
diatiOémevos ovTws eer AnEEY abTovs TOUS ciodé-
\ / b] \ 9
povtas wate pydevy avtihéyerv. émel 8 atOus
/ fal
émrexelpovy Kal TapecKevacpévot TpoeKaodvTo
\ “A b] \ , ¢
TOUS UTUuToOUS él TOV dSHuov, ovdev UITOdEetaas O
\ \ \
Kixépwv, adr THY BovAny érecbat Kedevoas Kab
/ / \ /
mooedOwv, ov povoy é€€Bare Tov vopuov, adrAda aA oy) \
Kat TOV GAAwWY aTroyVavat Tors Snpapyous
| @ te)

CICERO, xu. 2-5

laws to the same purpose, appointing a commission of ten men with unlimited powers, to whom was committed, as supreme masters of all Italy, of all Syria, and of all the territories which Pompey had lately added to the empire, the right to sell the public lands, to try whom they pleased, to send into exile, to settle cities, to take moneys from the public treasury, and to levy and maintain as many soldiers as they wanted. Therefore many of the prominent men also were in favour of the law, and foremost among them Antonius the col- league of Cicero, who expected to be one of the ten. It was thought also that he knew about the conspiracy of Catiline and was not averse to it, owing to the magnitude of his debts; and _ this was what gave most alarm to the nobles.

This alarm Cicero first sought to allay by getting the province of Macedonia voted to his colleague, while he himself declined the proffered province of Gaul; and by this favour he induced Antonius, like a hired actor, to play the second réle to him in defence of their country. Then, as soon as Antonius had been caught and was tractable, Cicero opposed himself with more courage to the inno- vators. Accordingly, he denounced the proposed law in the senate at great length, and so terrified the very promoters of it that they had no reply to make to him. And when they made a second attempt and after full preparation summoned the consuls to appear before the people, Cicero had not the slightest fear, but bidding the senate follow him and leading the way, he not only got the law rejected, but also induced the tribunes to desist

Pit

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

= , NY a A , ,
émoinoe, Tapa ToTOVTOV T@ NOyYH KpaTnOEevTAS UT AUTOD.
Yr \ oe . /
XIII. Mddtota yap ovtos 0 arynp érréderEe 86
e / ee ¢ a / a n , Pwpaiots doov 7S0vis NOYOS TO KAXO Tpocttef N , , ‘0 Nn b] a Ono, Kal OTL TO StKaLoy antTTHTOV éoTLV av OpOas
/ \ A \ b] A , coy
NéyynTas, Kal Sed TOV EumeADS TWoOALTEVOMEVOY EL
A \ “A F
TO peev Epy@ TO KaAOV avTL TOU KONAKEVOVTOS Fr a aA \ , \ a b] a fa)
aipetabat, T® SE NOY TO AUTrODY adatpEty TOD
& &
, a ‘ ’ a a \ \ ,
auudepovtos. detypa O€ avTod THs wept Tov do-
\ \ \ \ , a yov Xapitos Kal TO epi Tas Beas ev TH UTraTEla
, “A \ e a) , a YEVOLEVOV. TOV Yap (mmTLK@V TpOTEpoV év TOTS
/ a “a x
Oeatpots avapepiypévoy Tots Todos Kab peta
A , “ ,
Tov Sipuou Oewpévwv ws ETUXE, TOMTOS Sréxpivev
“A \ / \ ‘a wv a
eal Tien TOUS imméas ATO TOV AdNWY TOdTOV
5 Y a \ Madpxos “OOwyv otpatnyav, cat Créverpev idiav iA ¢ a /
éxetvors Oéav, iy éte Kat viv é£atpetov eyovat.
wn \ 5] 4 c an byé \ f
TOUTO pos ATipias Oo Ohwos EXKaBe, Kal dhavévtos na , ie
év Oedtpw tov “Obwvos ehufpifwrv ecupiTtev, ob
8 (mwmeis uméXaBov Kpotw tov avdpa AaUTPG

Ss P é P ‘ ad pws.
> \ ¢ wn > / N - 9S
avOts b€ o Shuos eméTetve Tov cuUpLypov, cita
n , ,
éxelvol Tov KpoToV. €x b€ TOUTOUV TpaTrOopMEVOL
/ A , \ Tpos GAAAOUS Eyp@vTo Ao.doptats, Kal To Oé-
, a \ b] ¢ @
aTpov adxoopia katetyev. éret & 0 Kixépwy ire
, \ XN wn aA
muOopevos Kab Tov Shpov éexxaréoas pos TO TIS IT fa) e \ is ,
Epvods (tepov émetinoe Kal Tapnvecev, amred-
1 See the three orations de Lege Agruria, which have come down to us almost intact.
112

CICERO, xu 5-x1n. 4

from the rest of their measures, so overpowered were they by his eloquence.!
XIII. For this man beyond all others showed the Romans how great a charm eloquence adds to the right, and that justice is invincible if it is correctly put in words, and that it behooves the careful statesman always in his acts to choose the right instead of the agreeable, and in his words to take away all vexatious features from what is advantageous. A proof of the charm of his discourse may be found in an incident of his consulship connected with the publie spectacles. In earlier times, it seems, the men of the equestrian order were mingled with the multitudes in the theatres and saw the spectacles along with the people, seated as chance would have it; Marcus Otho was the first to separate in point of honour the knights from the rest of the citizens, which he did when he was praetor,? and gave them a_particular place of their own at the spectacles, which they still retain. The people took this as a mark of dishonour to themselves, and when Otho appeared in the theatre they hissed him insultingly, while the knights received him with loud applause. The people renewed and increased their hisses, and then the knights their applause. After this they turned upon one another with reviling words, and disorder reigned in the theatre. When Cicero heard of this he came and summoned the people to the temple of Bellona, where he rebuked 2 It was in 67 B.c., four years before Cicero’s consulship, that Lucius Roscius Otho, as tribune of the people, introduced his law giving the equites a special place at the spectacles, namely, the fourteen rows of seats next those of the senators. The law, however, had only recently been enacted.

N / bd / Ny
Govres adOus eis TO Péatpov éxpotovy tov "Obwva val ‘\ \ e 4 f
AapTpPOs Kal Tpos Tous immeas apthray €7rot-
A lal ‘i , “ ,
odvto Tept Tyua@y Kal doEns TOU avdpos.
ea \ \ pee i
XIV. ‘H 6€ wepi tov Katidtvay cuvwpocia
/ \ a amTnkaca Kai KaTabetcaca THY apynV adOls ave-/ \ “ 5] 4 \ ,
Ouppet, Kat ovviyyov uddnXovs Kal Tapexadovy
ef ~
EUTOAMOTEpoY amtecOar TOY Tpaypatwy TTply
>] lal Pion ” / ¢, , éeraverOetv Loprijiov dn Neyomevoy uToatpéhery \ la) ? id \ NX /
peta THS Suvduews. pardtota o€ Tov Katerivav
4 a éEnpéOrSov of YvAAA Tddat otTpaTi@Tal, StaTre¢ \ oe fa! ? 4 “ \ \
PUKOTES ev oANS THS IradXias, wreltaTtot b€ Kat
, la tad 4
payipetato tats Tuppnvixais éyxatecTrappévor
t e \ f \ / ,
TONETLY, ApTayas TUAW Kal dtahopijcels TOV-
, bd a“ & \ 4
TWV ETOLMWVY OVELPOTTOAOVYTES. OUTOL yap nyEwova
, / nw 9 ~ \ 4
Madrduov éxovtes, avopa Tov éripaves vo LVA-
, fal vi

AQ oTpaTevoapévwy, cuvictavto T® Katirtra
lol e ,
Kal Taphoav els ‘Pouny cuvapxatpectacovtes.
a ,
UTatetay yap avOis petnet, BeLovrevpévos ave-
a / N \ a a
Nery Tov Kixépwva Tept avTOV THY apyYatpeci@V \ , x0 7 \ \ \ t
tov GopuBov. édoxet &€ Kat TO dalpovioy Tpocn-\ f Cal \ an
ualvery TA TpacaopEera cEeLapmois Kab KEepauvois
¢ ’ ? id ,
Kat dacpaciv. at 0 am avopwtav pxnvicers
b lal \ i ” a] > of. 3 aA arnOeis pév aay, ovrw O ets EdXeyXov aToYpa-
\ \ / / a gai Kat avdpos évddEou cat dvvapévou péya Tod bad , \ \ ¢ , a ’ A Karidiva. 610 THY pepav TOV apyalperiov
e , e ul > 7 \ cad , b uTepOewevos 0 Kixepwv éexadret tov Katirivav ets
, \ a /
THY TVYKANTOY Kal TEPL TOV eyouevwy avex pier.
\ 27 9
o 6é ToAAOUS OlOpFVOS Eivat TOUS Tpay_LaToV
~ / > a“ “ er “
Kawov epiemevous ev TH BovdAn, Kal apa Tols
T14

CICERO, xi. 4-xiv. 4

and exhorted them, whereupon they went back again to the theatre and applauded Otho loudly, and vied with the knights in showing him honour and esteem.

XIV. But Catiline and his fellow-conspirators, who at first were cowed and terrified, began once more to take courage, and assembling themselves together exhorted one another to take matters in hand more boldly before Pompey came back, and he was said to be now returning with his army. It was the old soldiers of Sulla, however, who were most of all urging Catiline on to action. These were to be found in all parts of Italy, but the greatest numbers and the most warlike of them had been scattered among the cities of Etruria, and were again dreaming of robbing and plundering the wealth that lay ready to hand. These men, I say, with Manlius for a leader, one of the men who had served with distinction under Sulla, associated themselves with Catiline and came to Rome to take part in the consular elections. For Catiline was again a candidate for the consulship, and had determined to kill Cicero in the very tumult of the elections. Moreover, even the heavenly powers seemed, by earthquakes and thunderbolts and apparitions, to foreshow what was coming to pass. And there were also human testimonies which were true, indeed, but not sufficient for the conviction of a man of reputation and great power like Catiline. For this reason Cicero postponed the day of the elections, and summoning Catiline to the senate, examined him concerning what was reported. But Catiline, thinking that there were many in the senate who were desirous of a revolution, and at cuveporais eveerxripevos, amexpivato TO Kuixepove pavichy amoxpiow "Tiyap,' én, " mpatta Servov, et, Svetv cwpmaTwv dvT@v, Tod péev Laxvod kat katepOivnxdtos, éxovtos b& Keparry, TOD 0 axepdrov pév, iaxupod dé Kal peyarou, TOUT Keharny avtos éretTlOnp;" TovTw@y eis TE TH Boudry Kal Tov Shpov yveywévov vT avtov, parrov 6 Kexépwr SSerce, kal TeOwpaxtopévov avtov of te Suratol WavTEes ATO THS oikKias KaL TOV vévwy modo KaTiyayov eis TO Tediov. Tov dé Owpaxos érityndes brépawé Tt Tapavaas &k TOV WLwV TOU YLTOVOS, évderxvUpevos TOs OpPMTL TOV KLVOUvov. of & ayavdxrouv Kab ouvertpépovto Tept avrév: Kal Tédros ev Tais Wydous Tov pev Katinrevav abOis é&éBadov, etAovto 5€ Liravov vratov Kat Moupnvav.

IIs

XV. OF worAAG 8 Batepov TovTwy Hon TO Karirira tav év Tuppnvig cuvepxopevwr Kat kataroxilopevwr, Kal THS wploperns pos THV erica huépas éyyus ovens, jKov emt tHv Kexepovos oixiav mept péras ruKTas aydpes of TpaTot

cal Svvatotato. ‘Pwpaiwy, Mapxos te Kpaoaos cat Mdpxos Mapreddxs Kat L«nmiwv MétedXos:
kowavtes 5é Tas Ovpas Kal Kadécavtes Tov Ovpwpov éxédevov emeyeipar kal ppdcar Kixépwre Thy Tapovelav avTav. ip dé rotovder TS Kpacow peta Seitrvov émiatoddas arodidwow o Ou-popes, v1rd Sy Tivos avOpaTrou KopLaOeicas ayve-otov, dAdas AAXols Eruyeypammévas, aVT@ de Kpdoow piav adéorotor. hv povny avayvous
6 Kpdaaos, ws &ppave ta ypappata dovov yevn-116

the same time making a display of himself to the conspirators, gave Cicero the answer of a madman: “What dreadful] thing, pray,’ said he, “am I doing, if, when there are two bodies, one lean and wasted, but with a head,! and the other headless, but strong and large, I myself become a head for this?” Since this riddle of Catiline’s referred to the senate and the people, Cicero was all the more alarmed, and he wore a_ breastplate when all the nobles and many of the young men escorted him from his house to the Campus Martius. Moreover, he purposely allowed the spectators to get a glimpse of his breastplate by loosing his tunic from his shoulders, thus showing them his peril. The people were incensed and rallied about him; and finally, when they voted, they rejected Catiline once more, and elected Silanus and Murena consuls.”

XV. Not long after this, when Catiline’s soldiers in Etruria were already assembling and forming into companies, and when the day set for their attack was near, there came to the house of Cicero at mid- night men who were the leading and most powerful Romans, Marcus Crassus, Marcus Marcellus, and Scipio Metellus; and knocking at the door and sum- moning the doorkeeper, they bade him wake Cicero and tell him they were there. Their business was what I shall now relate. After Crassus had dined, his doorkeeper handed him some letters which an unknown man had brought; they were addressed to different persons, and one, which had no sig- nature, was for Crassus himself. Crassus read _ this letter only, and since its contents told him that

1 Unum debile, infirmo capite (Cicero, pro Murena, 25, 51).
2 For the year 62 B.c.

haa J / ~ aopevov trodvv 61a Katidiva, cal Twapnver Tis e a \ ’ X >]
monews vmeEeNGeiy, Tas AANas ovVK EXVGEV, UAX
‘ \ la)

Heev evOds mpos Tov Kixépwva, wrANyEls VITO TOD
a a , ,
Oelvov, KAL TL THS AlTias ATTOAVOMEVOS HY ETE \ a“ ag
dua didiav Tov Watidtva.
Bovrevodpuevos otv o Kixépwy ap’ ryuépa Bov-
; ieee ge sealed gine cre dc
,
AyV cuPIyaye, Kal TAS ETLTTONAS KOpicas aTre-
aN / 7 a
dwxev ols oayv émetTadpéval, KedNeVaAas Phavepars na n ’ ® e , \ avayveval. mwacat & Aoav opotwsériBovrAnv
f > \ \ 4 rT Ia ba SN ppufovoat. éret d€ kal Koivtos “Apptos, avnp
, ,
TTPATHYLKOS, aTNYyyENXE TOUS ev Tuppyria Kata-
4 \ , f \
AOXLT MOUS, KAL MadQuos ATNYYENAETO TUV KEL pL
f \ \ b) , b] ra ,’ ,
peydryn Tepl TAS TONES ExELVAS ALWPOU{LEVOS del
a \ ‘ a / 4
Te mTpoadokav Kaivoy amo THS “Pwuns, yivetat
al A 7 “
doypa THs BovAs wapaxatatibecbat tots vira-
\ {8 / 3 i
Tos Ta mpayparta, SeEapévous 6 éxEivous ws
/ “ , \ fa)
émiagtavrat dtoixety Kai cwbe THY TOALW. TOTO
b] b] ao > > ce A / wn
6 ov TWoAAdKIS, GAN OTAaV TL peya Seton, TOLELV
/
elwGev 7) ovyKANTOS.
rT ; 5 fi
XVI. ’Eaet 6é tavtnv AaBwv tiv éEovciav o
a \ f , A ,
Kixépwv ta pev Ew mpdypata Kolvto MerérAXro
f \ \ , 5 \
diemtatevoe, THY O€ TOdW eElye Oia YeEtpos Kal
, , / ’ fal
Kal’ *pépav mponet Sopupopovpevos UT avdpav \ aA ind a A
TocovTwYy TO TAHVOS WaTE THS ayopas ToAv
, > nw
pépos KaTéxerv €uPadXovtos avtov Tovs TapaTrép-

a \ TOVTAS, OVKETL KapTEep@Y THY pédAdXynaow oO Karti-a b] N ‘ 3 nm ” ‘ \ ,
Alvas avTOS meV ExTINdaY Eyvw pos TOV MaddXLov
1 See the Crassus, xiii 3. Cicero’s treatise on his consulship, there referred to, was written in Greek, and is not extant.

there was to be much bloodshed caused by Catiline,
and advised him to escape secretly from the city, he did not open the rest, but came at once to Cicero, terrified by the danger, and seeking to free himself somewhat from charges that had been made against him on account of his friendship for Catiline.}
Cicero, accordingly, after deliberation, convened the senate at break of day, and carrying the letters thither gave them to the persons to whom they had been sent, with orders to read them aloud. All the letters alike were found to tell of a plot. And when also Quintus Arrius, a man of praetorian dignity, brought word of the soldiers who were being mus- tered into companies in Etruria, and Manlius was reported to be hovering about the cities there with a large force, in constant expectation of some news from Rome, the senate passed a decree that matters should be put in the hands of the consuls, who were to accept the charge and manage as best they knew how for the preservation of the city.2 Now, the senate is not wont to do this often, but only when it fears some great danger.

XVI. On receiving this power Cicero entrusted matters outside to Quintus Metellus, while he himself kept the city in hand and daily went forth attended by so large a bodyguard that a great part of the forum was occupied when he entered it with his escort. Thereupon Catiline, no longer able to endure the delay, resolved to hasten forth 2 Dent operam consules ne quid respublica detrimenti capiat (Sallust, Catiline, 29); decrevit quondam senatus ut L. Opimius consul videret ne quid res publica detrimenti caperet (Cicero, ta Catz. i. 2, 4).

émri TO atpatevpa, Mdpxvov oé Kat KéOnyov éxé-Aeuoe Eipn AaBovras EXOeiv et Tas Ovpas Ew O ev
QS LOTAG OMEVOUS TOV Kirépova Kal Say prjoaaOat TpooTred ovTas. TovTo Dovrfia, yur? Tav éemipavav, éEayyédrer T@ Kixépwvi, vuxtos en Goboa Kal BONES purarrec 0a TOUS

mept tov Ké@nyov. 5 nov ape MEE, Kal Koduevtes cicenBely + jjendma Kal KaTeBowr
eTL Gupass, MOTE UTOTTOTEPOL yevéo Pau. 7 poen-Pav 2 O Kirépov eKaNEL THY ouyKA TOV Eis TO Tov Stnotov Aros Lepov, Ov Lrdropa Popator
Kadovory, Ldpupevon € Ev APXH THS tepas 0600, 7 pos
TO Harareov avidvtwyv. évtavda Kat tod Kate-iva peTa TOV AdrwY EXMOVTOS wS aTOOYNCO-pévou, cuyKabiaat pev ovdels Uréperve TOV oUY-KNYNTIKOV, ANA TavTEs GTO TOD BaOpou peTHA-Oov. apEdapevos dé Neyerv EOopuBelto, Kat TEXOS avagTas o Kixépwv mpooerager avT@ THs Toews aTanrrattecOa Seiv yap avTod pee Aorvyous, éxelvou 6 oTdoLs TONLTEVO[LEVOV plécov elvat TO TELXOS. 0 pev ovv Karedivas evOvs efeN av
META TpLAKOOLOY om hopopav Kat TEPLOTNO AMEV OS
avT@ paBsovxtas QS dpxovre Kal TENEKELS Kat
onpatas émrapapevos, mpos tov Maddtov eYopet:
Kal Sto pupiwv ofLovd TL ovvnOpore peveov eT Net Tas Toves avarelOwy Kal adloTdas, WOTE TOU TOXE-pov pavepod yeyovoTtos Tov *AvT@vioy aToaTAaNhvat Stapayovpevov.
een rm et me

1 From Cicero’s oration pro Sulla (6, 18) and Sallust’s Catiline (28) it appears that the names of these would-be murderers were Caius Cornelius and Lucius Vargunteius.

to Manlius and his army, and ordered Marcius and Cethegus! to take their swords and go early in the morning to the house of Cicero on pretence of paying him their respects, and there to fall upon him and dispatch him. This scheme Fulvia, a woman of high rank, made known to Cicero, coming to him by night and urging him to be on his guard against Cethegus and his companion. The men came at break of day, and when they were prevented from entering, they were incensed and made an outcry at the door, which made them the more suspected. Then Cicero went forth and summoned the senate to the temple of Jupiter Stesius (or Stator, as the Romans say), which was_ situated at the beginning of the Via Sacra, as you go up to the Palaces hill. Thither Cantina also came with the rest in order to make his defence; no senator, however, would sit with him, but all moved away from the bench where he was. And when he began to speak he was interrupted by outcries, and at last Cicero rose and ordered him to depart from the city, saying that, since one of them did his work with words and the other with arms, the city-wall must needs lie between them.' Catiline, secon ainelys left the city at once with three hundred armed followers, assumed the fasces and axes as though he were a magistrate, raised standards, and marched to join Manlius; and since about twenty thousand men altogether had been collected, he marched round to the various cities endeavouring to persuade them to revolt, so that there was now open war, and Antonius was sent off to fight it out.

* CE Cicero, m Cate. i. 5, 10.

Leos

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

r > ¢ ~ 4 val
XVII. Tods & varorepbevtas év TH TONEL TOV
4 ¢ x lal ed , ~ \
dtehOappévoy vo tov Katidiva ouviye Kat
, if
mapefappuve Kopyidcos Aevtdos Lovpas étikry-SN / \ ' f \ \ /
ov, avynp yevous ev évdoEou, BeBiwxas b€ hav-
/ an a
Aws Kal bt acérXyetayv e€EeAnAapEvos THS BovdrAs
f X\ ~
MTpoTEpov, ToTE O€ aTpaTHYoY TO SEeVTEPOY, @S GOos éati tots €& UTapxhs avaxtwpévots TO Bov-
, / \
NeuTLKOY aELwpa. RéyeTas O€ Kal THY érikANoLD
A 4 4
avT@ yevéobat tov Lovpav €& aitias Toravrns.
a eA L ?
év Tots Kata LvANaY yYpovols Tapsevwv aUYVa TOV Snpociwv XYpnuaTwoV aT@rEdE Kai SrePOerpev.

9 ~ XV “A , \ 4 b] ayavaktouvtos b€ Tov YvAAa Kal Aoyov atral-
lal “ \
TOUYTOS EV TH TVYKANTW, TpPoEAGwY OdLYWPwWS
“A , Tavu Kal KatappovnTiKas oyov pev ovK edn
/ / \ \ / ef
diddvat, Tapéxerv O€ THY KYnLNY, OoTEp EL@O ELT AD
id n~ ~ /
ol Taides OTaV Ev TO ohHhaipiCew apiptwatv. éK
, / / \ €
TovTou Lovpas mapwvouacOn covpayv yap ot ‘p a \ , XE aN be é
w@pato. THY KYnunv Eeyovolt. Tari 6é Sixnv f f a a éyov kat dtapGetpas éeviovs tev SixacTap, érel
\ 2 Z f / 4 ,
dval povais amrepuye Wudols, edn Tapavaropa / / io / a yeyovévat T0 Oatépm KpiThH Sobév: apxety yap et Kat pia Widw povoy amervd
: ey MN tae i 1). ‘ ;
Totrov ovta tH duces ToLovtToOV KEKLVNwévOY
‘ an / , a uTo Tov Katiriva mpoocdsépOetpav édXmiat Kevais wrevdoudvTers Kal yontes ern TeTacpEVA Kal \ 46 e bf a v / yYpnopous aovTes, ws ek TOV LuBvAdELwv, Tpo-fa) , 9s ma ¢ ,
SnrovvTAS Elpappévous eivae TH “Pawpwn Kopynr-~ = Q 7 \ >
ous Tpéls povapyous, @Y Ovo peEv On TEeTANPOre X , Kk \ ~~ , , \ KEvaL TO Ypewv, Wivvay Te Kal SUAXADY, TPLIT@ de 122

CICERO, xvu. 1-4

AVI. The creatures of Catiline who had been left behind in the city were brought together and encouraged by Cornelius Lentulus, surnamed Sura, a man of illustrious birth, but one who had led a low life and for his licentiousness had formerly been ex- pelled from the senate, though now he was serving as praetor for the second time, as is the custom with those who have recovered their senatorial dignity. It is said too that he got his surname of Sura for the following reason. In Sulla’s time he was quaestor and lost and wasted large amounts of the public moneys. Sulla was angry at this and demanded an ac- counting from him in the senate, whereupon Lentulus came forward with a very careless and contemptuous air and said that he would not give an aecount, but would offer his leg, as boys were accustomed to do when they were playing ball and made a miss. On this account he was surnamed Sura, for “sura”’ is the Roman word for deg. At another time, too, he was under prosecution and had bribed some of the jurors, and when he was acquitted by only two votes, he said that what he had given to the second juror was wasted money, since it would have sufficed if he had been acquitted by one vote only.

Such was the nature of this man who had been stirred up by Catiline, and he was further corrupted by vain hopes held out to hiin by false prophets and jugglers. These recited forged oracles in verse pur- porting to come from the Sibylline books,! which set forth that three Cornelii were fated to be monarchs in Rome, two of whom had already fulfilled their destiny, namely, Cinna and Sulla, and that now to AeCl Cicero, 1m Cali. 111.4, 9.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

an , b 4 , \ i AOLTO Kopynhim oe pepovta Tae aes gies!
e “ / N
HKewv Tov Saipova, Kal ety wavtws SéyerOas Kai \ , yp. A} / ef
pn dvadGetpery péAXXOVTA TOUS KaLpOS, WaTTED Katirivas.
XVITI. Ovd€ev obv érrevoes ptxpov o Aévtros 4)
’
donuov, GAN ededoKxTO THY BovAnY amacay avatpely TOV T AAAWY TOALT@Y Soous SvUVaLTO, THY
4 > > \ f , ,
wok 6 avtivy KaTtatipmpavar, heidecOat Te pndevos 7} TAV Lloumniov téxvwv' tavta & éEap-
’ n
TATAMEVOUS EXELY VP AUTOS Kal PuAAaTTELY GuNpa
an N II fw 6 x , Bs 0 \ b) / tov mpos Ilopmniov diadvoewv’ dn yap édoita \ / \ , C \ b] a ,
joAus NOYyos Kal BEeBaros uTEp avTov KaTLOVTOS
a , ve: \ o¢
aro THS meyadns oTpaTelas. Kal vvE pév WptaoTo
s \ peed , an / , ‘ mpos THY eiPecw mia Tov Kpoviddwr, Edn dé wn A \ a f
Kal otummeta Kat Oetov ets THY KeOnyou dépovtes 5S eld 3 , LA \ , e \ oikiay améxpuav. avdpas 6€ tTd€avtes éxaTor
a ~ ¢ ’
Kal pépn Tocavta THs Pwpns exactov ed Exa-

Le fal
oTw@ SLEKAHPWTAY, WS OL OALYOU TOAAGY arvav-
, /
twv hréyoto travTayolev 1 Torts. adror be \ 3 s v7 >] if > ¢ TOUS OXETOVS E“eddrOV euhpakavtes aTroapattetv
e ie
TOUS VOpEevopmeEvous.
IIpatropéevwr S€ Tovtwy etvyov éridnjovdytes

, /
"ArXdoBpiyov dvo mpéecBes, EOvovs partota 67
,
TOTE TOVNPA TpaTTOVTOS Kal PBapvvoygevou TH
e , , e \ , > ,
Hyemoviav. TouTous ot wept AevTNOY wErtwous
\ “ \ a WYOUMEVOL TPOS TO KLITTaL Kal peTaBaXeiy THY

i , \ f
Taratiav éroinoavto ovvmpotas. Kal ypaupata an \ a , id
pev autois mpos THv éxet Bovrnv, ypappata be a N Ay
apos Katidivay Socay, TH pev vntoxvovpmevot 124

CICERO, xvu. 4-xvitt. 3

him, the third and remaining Cornelius, the heavenly powers were come with a proffer of the monarchy, which he must by al] means accept, and not ruin his opportunities by delay, like Catiline.
XVIII. Accordingly, it was no trifling or insignifi- eant plan which Lentulus was cherishing, nay, it was decided to kill all the senators and as many of the other citizens as they could, to burn down the city itself, and to spare no one except the children of Pompey ; these they were to seize and hold in their own custody and keep as hostages for their recon- ciliation with Pompey; for already there was current a wide-spread and sure report of his coming back from his great expedition. A night had also been fixed for the attempt, a night of the Saturnalia,! and swords, tow, and brimstone had been carried to the house of Cethegus and hidden there. Moreover, they had appointed a hundred men and assigned by lot as many quarters of Rome to each one severally, in order that within a short time many might play the incendiary and the city be everywhere in a blaze. Others, too, were to stop up the aqueducts and kill those who tried to bring water.

But while this was going on, there chanced to be staying at Rome two ambassadors of the Allobroges, a nation which at that time was in a particularly evil plight and felt oppressed by the Roman sway. These men Lentulus and his partisans thought would be useful in stirring up Gaul to revolt, and therefore took them into the conspiracy. They also gave them letters to their senate, and letters to Catiline, making

1 At the time of the conspiracy of Catiline the Saturnalia lasted only one day, December 19; in the time of Augustus three days were devoted to them (December 17-19). See the note on Sulla, xviii. 5.

Thy érevGepiav, Tov d€ Katirivay mapaxanovvtes érevdepmaavTa Tovs dovrous ent THY Payny éNavvery. curaTeaTEdRov dé peT avTav ™ pos
tov Katirivay Titov tua Kpotwmarny, Kxopi-Covta tas émtatoAds. ola 6 avOpwrayv actad-nTwOVY Kal peT Olvou TA TOAAA Kal yUVvaLKaY
b , bd , i , \
ahrAndots EvTVyYavovtwy BovrAevpaTa TOVw Kal OYTO vnPovee Kal Tuverel TEPLTTH Stokov 7) Kixépor, Kal TONAOUS ev EXov éEwOev émricko-mobvTas TA T PAT TOMLEVA, Kat cuvettxvevortas avTO, Toots 6€ TOV peTeXeLv SoxouvT@vy Tips
cwveapLoias Suaher/ojrevos Kpupa Kal TL TEVOY, éyya THY mpos Tous Eévous Koworoyiav: Kal vuKkTos évedpevaas €raBe Tov Kpotmvdtny cal ta ypaupata, curepyouvTwy adyAws tav *AXXo-Bpiyov.
XIX. "Apa é MEY Bovrnv aOpoicas Els TO THs 'Oporotas iepov eEaveyva TQ ypappara Kat
TOY pqvuTav Sujcoucer. épn O€ Kat Leaves
"lovvios axnkoévat tivas Ke@rjyou déyovtos ws Umatol TE THElS KAL OTpaTHYyoOL TETTAPES avatpeEl-
c@at pérXXovat. Towadta 6 Erepa Kai Letcwr, oeN e / bf i Fue , xt , avnp uTaTLKOS, elanyyere. TVadios 5€ Xovarrixcos, eis TOV OTPATHYOY, et THY olkiay TeudOels Tod Ke@zjyou moda pev év aura Bern Kal O7mAa, TrElaoTA O€ Eby Kal payaipas ebpe veoOnk Tous aTUoas. téoOs 6€ TO Kpotwmdry Waypioanerns
adetav é7l penvvg ee TIS Bovris eLereyx Geis O AévtXos aT@pocato Ty apyny (aTpaTnyav yap érvyyave), Kal THY wepiToppupoy év TH Bovrn Kataléuevos dinrrakev eoOijta TH cuppopa Tpé-

the senate promises of freedom and urging Catiline to set the slaves free and march upon Rome. ‘They also sent with them to Catiline a certain Titus of Croton, who was to carry the letters. But the conspirators were unbalanced men who seldom met together without wine and women, while Cicero was following their schemes industriously, with sober judgement and surpassing sagacity; he also had many men outside of their conspiracy who kept watch upon their doings and helped him track them down, and he conferred secretly and confi- dentially with many who were supposed to belong to the conspiracy; he therefore came to know of their conference with the strangers, and, laying an ambush by night, he seized the man of Croton and his letters with the secret co-operation of the Allobroges.!

XIX. At break of day, then, he assembled the senate in the temple of Concord, read the letters aloud, and examined the informers. Silanus Junius also said that certain ones had heard Cethegus de- clare that three consuls and four praetors were going to be taken off. Piso, too, a man of consular dignity, brought in other reports of a like nature. Moreover, Caius Sulpicius, one of the praetors, on being sent to the house of Cethegus, found in it many missiles and weapons, and a huge quantity of swords and knives, all newly sharpened. And finally, after the senate had voted immunity to the man of Croton on condition that he gave information, Lentulus was convicted, resigned his office (he was then praetor), and laying aside his purple-bordered toga in the senate, assumed in its placc a garment suitable to his

Cr, Cicero, +m Cait. 11, 2. 4-6,
127
3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

@ \ 9S € ‘ ~ ,
Tovday. OUTOS MEV OVV Kal Ol OLY AUT@ TrapeEdo-
A a“ a
Onoav eis adeopov durakny Tols oTpaTHYOCS.
“HS oO e , ¥ \ a“ } / 4
n 0 éattépas ovons Kal TOU SHwouv Tepimeé-3 U ‘ e f \ ,
vovTos aOpoov, tpoedOwv o Kixépwv, kal dpacas

\ a a / \ ,
TO Tpaypa Tois ToNTALS Kab TpoTEUpleis, Trap-
a“ 3 3 , f “A > \ \ 9 ¢
mMrAGEv Els Oikiav hirov yEertvL@vTos, evel THY exel-
“A a ¢ a ,
YOU yuvalKEs KATELYOV, lEpols aTroppHToLs opyta-
. ¢ ¢ A > sot
Covaat Ceov nv Popatot pév Ayadnv,” EXXnves 6é
/ 3 n Tuvatcetav ovopafovor. Ovetas 8 avTH Kat a a C , \ éviauTov év TH olKLa TOD UTaTOU bLa yuVaLKOS }
ral a e f , untpos avTod, tov ‘Eortidédwv rapGévav tapovral b \ 9? ¢ f > ¢e ,
cov. eloed\O@v ovv o Kixépwv, cal’ avtor,
, , > a“ , b f
OMyworv TavTaTacw avT@® TapovToyv, éhpovtitev
a b) , / \
OTwS XpHoaLTo TOls avopuct. THY TE Yap aKpav
/ ,
Kal TpoonKkovacay adiKnpacL THALKOVTOLS TLLO-
a , 3 /
piav é&eviaBeitro Kat Katwxver Ot émleixerav ov ee \ ¢ \ o E. a b / ”
nGovsS Aua KAL WS fn COKOLN TIS EEOVCLaS ayay
A an /
éupopetobar cat wixp@s émepPatvey avdpace yé-
\ / a vel TE TPWTOLS Kal didovs duvatous ev TH ToreEt
‘ /
KEKTNLEVOLS* MANAKWTEPOY TE KPHTapMEVOS WPPw-
a / \
del TOY aT aUTa@V KivduvoY. ov yap ayamTnoeD
/ ¢ f > peTpiwtepov Tt Gavatov tralorvtas, aX els arrav
, f a A f
avappaynoer at Torus, TH Wadala Kakia véav
3 \ , 3 / 60 y
opyiv mpocrhaPovtas autos te Sofetv avavdpos
\ , 299 ” a“ ’ ,
Kal parakos, ovd’ adrdos Soxdv evTOAMOTATOS
Elvat TOLS TOAAOLS.
XX. Taidta tod Kixépwvos diaropobytos yi-
1 ae. for confinement under guard in their own houses

(libera custodia).
128

CICERO, xix. 2-xx. 1

predicament. He and his associates, therefore, were handed over to the praetors for custody without fetters.}

It was now evening, and the people were waiting about the temple in throngs, when Cicero come forth and told his fellow-citizens what had been done.? They then escorted him to the house of a friend and neighbour, since his own was occupied by the women, who were celebrating inystcrious rites to a goddess whom the Romans call Bona Dea, and the Greeks, Gynaeceia. Sacrifice is offered to her annually in the house of the consul by his wife or his mother, in the presence of the Vestal Virgins. Cicero, then, having gone into his friend's house, began to deliberate with himself—and he had only very few companions —what he should do with the men.? For he shrank from inflicting the extreme penalty, and the one befitting such great crimes, and he hesitated to do it because of the kindliness of his nature, and at the same time that he might not appear to make an excessive use of his power and to trample ruthlessly upon men who were of the highest birth and had powerful friends in the city; and if he treated them with less severity, he was afraid of the peril into which they would bring the state. For if they suffered any milder penalty than death, he was sure they would not be satisfied, but would break out into every extreme of boldness, having added fresh rage to their old villainy: and he himself would be thought unmanly and weak, especially as the multitude already thought him very far from courageous,

XX. While Cicero was in this perplexity, a sign

2 The third oration in Catilinam.
3 Cf. Sallust's Cutiline, 16.
129

2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

veTat Te Tais yuvatkt onpetov Ovovaas. oO yap Beopos, }6n ToD Tupos KaTaKeKkotmhaOar SoKodv-
, A " / a)
TOS, Ex THS TéePpas Kal TOV KEeKavuevar hrOLOV
f \ > wn \ , e 3 e e droya mToAAnY aviKke Kat KauTTpaY. vp 1S at \ ba / e IEE N Va \ bev ddXrat StemTonOnaay, at O tepat mapbévor Tiy ww 4 nn , e
tov Kixépwvos yuvaica Tepevtiay éxéXevoav 7
fad \ N f
TUXOS Ywpely mpos Tov avdpa Kal KedevEL ois

a AS A / éyroKxev éeyyetpely umép THs tatpisos, ws péya
- \ f ol A nn nn
mTpos TE TwTNpiav Kat dofav avT@ THs Geod pas
, € \ »! , \ \ +39? » = didovans. 1 d€ Tepevtia (kal yap ovd adAXwS AV
nw > f \ ?
mpactd TL ov aTOALOS THY puaoww, GAAA odo-7 \ \ a e b U ec f
TLLOS YUVH Kat “arAOV, ws auTOs dyno oO KuxépOv, TOV TOALTLK@Y peTaXapBarovca Tap éxel-
/ 3 al a A
vou povtiswy 7 petadibodca TAY oiKLaKaDV
A \ N ,
éxeiv@) TADTa TE TPOS auTOV Edpace Kal TAape(oe €
Euvev él Tous avodpas: opolws b€ cai Koivtos o
A \ 4
aderhos Kal Tov ato gdidrocodias étatpwv Ilo-ees e _\ n \ f \
martos Neyidtos, © Ta TELoTA Kal péyioTa Tapa
x A
TAS TOALTEKUS EYPHTO mpaktess.
TH o va ia yEevomermv € YKAHTO NO
7 TEPALA YEVOMEVWY EV TVYKARTO NOYOV id n ’ A e A
TEpl TtLwplias TV aVvepav, 0 TpwTOS épwTnOels
@ \ 5 \ / n
yvouny YAravos cite THY eaxXaTyny Sixnv dodvar
/ \
mpoanxe aylevtas eis TO SecpwripLlov. Kal mpocetiGevto TovTm mavTes epeEns péype Laiov
r A ‘ A
Kaicapos Tov peta tadta dintatopos yevopévov.
, 3 ld \ \ fos
TOTE O€ VéoS wp ETL Kal Tas TpwTas eywY TIS av&noews apyas, non O€ TH TOXLTEL L Tat
joews apyas, On O€ TH TOAITELA Kal Tails 9 , > b 4 \ eQr b] \ e \
éXrtou els exetyny Thy odov éuBeBnKkws % Ta
€ id ? / / ,
Papatwy es povapylay petéotnoe Tpdypata,
130

CICERO, xx. 1-3

was given to the women who were sacrificing. The altar, it seems, although the fire was already thought to have gone out, sent forth from the ashes and burnt bark upon it a great bright blaze. The rest of the women were terrified at this, but the sacred virgins bade Terentia the wife of Cicero go with all speed to her husband and tell him to carry out his resolutions in behalf of the country, since the goddess was giving him a great light on this path to safety and glory. So Terentia, who was generally of no mild spirit nor without natural courage, but an ambitious woman, and, as Cicero himself tells us,! more inclined to make herself a partner in his political perplexities than to share with him her domestic concerns, gave him this message and incited him against the conspirators ; so likewise did Quintus, his brother, and Publius Nigidius, one of his philosophical companions, ot whom he made the most and greatest use in his political undertakings.

On the following day the senate discussed the punishment of the conspirators, and Silanus, who was the first to be asked to give his opinion, said that they ought to be taken to prison and there suffer extremest punishment. All the senators acceded to his opinion one after the other, until it came to Caius Caesar,? who afterwards became dictator. At this time, however, he was a young man still and at the very beginning of his rise to power, but in his public policy and his hopes he had already entered upon that road by which he changed the Roman state into a monarchy. His

1 In some passage no longer extant.

2 Cf. Cicero, in Cutil. iv. 4, 7.

4

PEDTARCH Sb ES

Tous “ev ArNous eAdvOave, TO b€ Kixépwve wor-NaS pev UToWias, AaBiv & ovdeuiav eis EXeyyov mapéowKkev, GAA Kal AeyovTwMY HV Eviwy aKovELDY
e ’ \ ? \ e a“ a ‘\ wv

ws éyyus éAOwv adrovar drexdvyor Tov avdpa.
“ s taal
tives 66 hace Tapioety ExovTa Kai TapadiTrely THY
> 9 f , , “ , 5) a \
Kat éxelvou pyvucw do8w TaV hitwy avTov Kal
a 5 s ¢
THs Suvapews' TavtTl yap elvat mpodnrov Ort
n a ,
uwarrov ay éxetvor yévowwto TpocOnKkn Kaicapr
~ /
cwTnpias } Kaioap exetvors Kohacews.
XXI. "Emel 6 ovv 4 yvoun wepinrOer ets avTov, avactas atedivato pi) Gavatovv Tovs
” b] \ A ? / 3 f b) N
avépas, addNa TAS Ovaias eivat dynpootas, avTovs
> 9 , ? , lat Rs / a XN a S avaydevtas ets trodeus THs Itadtas as adv d0xF
A £ Kixépwri, tnpeta Oar decepevous axpt av ov KaTa-lal ” \ n~ moreunOn Katertvas. ovons d€ THs yvopns émi-
a “ A 9 “A
ELKOUS Kal TOV Aé€yorTOS ElTrEtY SUYATwWTATOU, pony 0 Kixépwy mpocénxev ob puxpav. autos
/ >
Te yap avaoTas évexelpnoev ELS EXATEPOV, TA pLeV
fal / \ a , / ,
TH MpoTépa, TA O€ TH YV@pun Katoapos auvertror,
e/ aN f 27 rn K f / ot TE $i or mdvres olopevor TH Kinépove oupe-a b] 2 ee A peev THY Katoapos yummy (nTTov yap év attiats
A , a ésecGar py POavateécavta Tovs avdpas) npodvto
Tiv OevTépavy pmaANoV yrounv, WoTE Kal TOV
/ a Yiravov advOis peraBarropevoy maparteiabar Kat
N€éyerv WS OVS avTOS Eitor OavaTiKnYy yvoOunr
? f N ? ‘\ tole ks , ?
éoyatny yap avdpt Bovrevth “Pwpaiwy erat
, bd / \ a
Sixny To Secpwtypiov. elpnpevns O€ THS yvopmns
a f “A mp@tos avTéxpovaev avtn Katros Aovtattos:
> ’ f \ a s a

eita deEapevos Kutov, kat TO NOYH aphospas 132

87]

CICERO, xx. 4-xx1. 3

designs were still unnoticed by the rest, but to Cicero he had given many grounds for suspicion, and yet no hold which could lead to his conviction, although many were heard to say that he had come near being caught by Cicero, but had eluded him. Some, however, say that Cicero purposely overlooked and neglected the information against him through fear of his friends and his power, since it was clear to every one that the other conspirators would be included in Caesar's acquittal, rather than Caesar in their punishment.

XXI. When, then, it was Caesar's turn to give his opinion, he rose and declared it to be against putting the conspirators to death, but in favour of confiscating their property and removing them to whatever cities of Italy Cicero might deem best, there to be put in fetters and closely guarded until Catiline should be defeated. The proposal of Caesar was merciful and its author a very able speaker, and Cicero added no little weight to it. For when he rose to speak himself,! he handled the subject in both ways, now favouring the first proposal and now that of Caesar. All his friends, too, thinking that Caesar's proposal was an advantageous one for Cicero, who would be less subject to censure if he did not put the conspira- tors to death, chose the second proposal rather, so that Silanus also changed his position and excused himself by saying that even his proposal had not meant death: for "extremest punishnient,"' in the case of a Roman senator, meant the prison. Lutatius Catulus was the first to oppose the opinion which Caesar had given; then Cato followed him, helping ' The fourth oration in Catilinam.

133

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

auvetepetaas éml tov Kaicapa tiv trovoay, évérrAnoe Ovpov Kal dpovnuatos Tv TVyKANTOP, arte Oavatov Katandicac0a. Tov avdpav.
mept O€ Synwevtews YONudTwv évictato Kaicap, oun aélav Ta prravdporra TIS EAUTOVD YVOsLNS éxBarovtas et Xpyucac bar TO oKvOpwmoTare.
Bralopevon dé TON@Y érexanelro TOUS Onpudpyous. ot 8 ovy vayjxovorv, addra Kixépwv adtos évoous avijxe THY Tepl OnpwEevaoEews yVO-UND.

XXII. ’Eywpes d€ peta THs Bours emt tovs advdpas. ovK év TauT@ Ce TavTes oav, adros 6
adXov epvrAaTTE TOV OTPATHY@V. Kal WpaTov éx IlaXatiov mapaxaBwv tov Aévrdov tye da Tis (epas 0600 Kal Ths ayopads péayns, TOV ev
WYELOVLKOTAUTOV AVOPOV KUKAW TEPLETTELPALEVWY
Kal Sopupopowyter, ToD dé Sywou dpittovtos ta
Spwpeva Kab TapiovTos | Tut), pomora dé TOV
Vewy, OoTEp (epols TLTL Tarp. ‘ous dplaTOKpaTeKis Tivos €€ovatas Teretabat peta hoBovu Kat OapBous
Coxovvtwyv. dieXOwv Sé THY ayopav Kal yEevopevos Tpos TO SegpaTHPL@ TrapédwKe Tov AévTrOY TO Snuto Kal wpocétakey averety. 610 EES Tov KéOnyov, Kat ovT® TOV AX\Xwv Exactov KaTa-yaywv améxtetvev. opa@yv Oé moddoUS ETL TOV avo THS* cuYMpotias ev ayopa ouverTo@Tas aOpoous Kal Thy pmev TWpakw ayvoodvtTas, THY é VUKTA TpoomevorvTas, ws ETL CwovTwV TOY avdpov cai duvapévoy éEaprracbivar, PbeyEdpevos péya mpos autovs, “'Efnaav,” eivev. otto dé “Po-' rapidvtos Bekker and Graux adopt the mapiévros (acqui-escung) of Coraés.

2 rev awd THs Graux with M4: ris.
134

CICERO, xxt. 3~xxi. 2

by the vehemence of his speech to fix suspicion upon Caesar, and filled the senate with angry resolution, so that a decree of death was passed upon the con- spirators. As regarded the confiscation of their property, however, Caesar made opposition, deeming it wrong that the merciful part of his own proposal should be rejected and the one part that was most severe adopted. And when many of the senators insisted upon it, he invoked the aid of the tribunes, but they would not listen to his appeal; Cicero him- self, however, yielded the point, and remitted that part of the vote which called for confiscation.

XXII. Then he went with the senate to fetch the conspirators. ‘These were not all in the same place, but different praetors had different ones under guard. And first he took Lentulus from the Palatine hill and led him along the Via Sacra and through the middle of the forum, the men of highest authority surrounding him as a body-guard, and the people shuddering at what was being done and _ passing along in silence, and especially the young men, as though they thought they were being initiated with fear and trembling into some ancient mysteries of an aristocratic regime. When Cicero had passed through the forum and reached the prison, he delivered Len- tulus to the public executioner with the order to put him to death. Then Cethegus in his turn, and so each one of the others, he brought down to the prison and had him executed. And seeing that many members of the conspiracy were still assembled in the forum in ignorance of what had been done and waiting for night to come, with the idea that the inen were still living and might be rescued, he cried out to them with a loud voice and said: “They have

135

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pateov ot duodynpety pn BovrAopevoe TO TeOvdvas onuaivovaw.
"Hon 8 iv éorépa, kai bs ayopas avéBaivev
els THY olKlaVv, OUKETL GLWITH TOV TONTOYV OvbE Take TWpoTELTOVTWY avTOV, arAA dwrais Kal
Kpoto.s deyoumévwyv Kal’ ods yévotTo, gwTHpa Kal KTlaTHY avaKadovvTayv Tis atpioos. Ta é POTA TOAG KATEAALTE TOUS TTEVWTTOUS, NAUTAdia xal d46as taot@vTey éml tats Ovpats. ai bé yuvaixes ex TOV TEYOV T povparvov én TLyLn Kal
Jéa Tov dvdpos, vTo TouTy TOV dpia tov pana TELVOS avLovTos” @V ot Theta Tot TOAEMOUS TE KATELPY AC [EVOL peydous Kal bua Opi uPov elo-edn akores Kal T POT KEKTNLEVOL yy Kal Oddar-Tav OUK OdLYNnY eBadeCov dyopohoyovpevor ™pos aXhijdovs TONNOLS ev T@V TOTE nYEHOvOY Kab oTpAaTHYav movTOU Kab Aabvpov Kal uvdpews Xap opei ery TOV ‘Popatov Ojuov, acdharetas
dé Kal coTnpias evi pov Kixépovt, THALKCODT OY aedovre Kal Tog ovTOV avtou KLVOUVOV. Ov yap TO Konrdoat Ta T part T opera, Kal Koddoat TOUS
TpaTTovTas €ddxet Oavyactov, AAN OTL péytoTov TOV TWTOTE VEWTEPLT UL@V OUTOS EAAYlOTOLS Kaxois
avev oTATEWS Kal _TApaxys Katéa Bece. Kal yap TOV Karedtvay ol WAEloTOL TOV _TUVEPPUNKOT OY
7 pos avTov dpa Te TrUbécOat Tat Tepb Aévtiov
Kat Ké@nyov éyeatadumdrtes @YOvTO Kal peta
TOV TUM Emer KOT OY auto Svaryovir duevos Pos
"Aytoviov adtos te SiebOdpn Kal 7d oTpatomTedov.
XXIII. O8 poy adn FHoav of tov Kixépova TapecKevacuevol Kal Aéyey el TovTos Kal 136

87

4

CICERO, xxn. 2-xxu. 1

lived.” For thus the Romans who wish to avoid words of ill omen indicate death.
It was now evening, and Cicero went up through the forum to his house, the citizens no longer escort- ing him on his way with silent decorum, but receiving him with cries and clapping of hands as he passed along, calling him the saviour and founder of his country. And many lights illuminated the streets, since people placed lamps and torches at their doors. The women, too, displayed lights upon the house- tops in honour of the man, and that they might see him going up to his home in great state under escort of the noblest citizens. Most of these had brought to an end great wars and entered the city in triumph, and had added to the Roman dominion no small extent of land and sea; but they now walked along confessing to one another that to many of the com- manders and generals of the time the Roman people were indebted for wealth and spoils and power, but for preservation and safety to Cicero alone, who had freed them from so peculiar and so great a peril. For it was not his preventing their schemes and punishing the schemers which seemed so wonderful, but his quenching the greatest of all revolutions with the fewest possible evils, without sedition and commotion. For most of those who had flocked to the standard of Catiline, as soon as they learned the fate of Len- tulus and Cethegus, deserted him and went away ; and Catiline, after a conflict with his remaining forces against Antonius, perished himself and his army with him.}

XXIII. However, there were those who were ready to abuse Cicero for what he had done, and to 1 Near the beginning of 62 B.c.

oS

a “ , a
TOLELY KAK@S, EXYOVTES NYEMOVAS TOV Eis TO EANOV
, ta)
apxovtoyv Kaicapa pév otpatnyouvta, MéredXov
, A A \
6é kat Byotiay Snpapxodvtas. of thy apxny
, a Yr
maparaGovtes, Ett TOU Kixépwvos ipepas odtyas APXOVTOS, OVK elwyv SnuNnyopEty avTOY, AAX VITEp
a 4 , b]
Tov €uBorwyv Babpa Gévtes ov Tapiecav ovd 9 émétpeTrov Aéyerv, GAN éKédevov, e& PovXroLTO,
A A , ,
fLOvOY TEPL THS ApYHS aTopotavTa KaTaBaiverv.
KaKElvos él TOUVTOLS ws OpocwY mponAGE? Kal YEVOMEVNS AUTO TLWTHS WpvVvEV, OV TOV TUATPLOP, > x YN TF \ \ or 3 \ /

AX LOLOV TLYA KAL KALVOV OPKOY, 1) UNV TETWKEVAL
i / N ,
Thy TaTploa Kal StaTETHNPHKEVAL THY HYyEepmoviav.
\ a , € lal
éTm@pVvve O€ TOV OPKOV ALT@ cuuTras Oo OHnmwos. ep
v A ee r wn ¢/ ,
ols éts padrov 0 Te Kaicap ot Te dnpapyor
, 4 a A \
VanreTraivovTes adras Te TH Kixepwv. tapayas
nw if wn n
EULNYAVOVTO, KAL VOMOS UT avTa@V ELonyEeTO KaNELDY
\ aA a yA
Hlounniov peta THS oTpaTLAas, @s 6) KaTAXV-
\ , , b] > = covta tHy Kixépwvos Sdvvactetav. arr Hv
v , A Ras , \ / a opedos peya TO Kixépwve Kat Taon TH ToXEt
aA / \ a ,
dnuapyev tote Katy Kal tots éxetywv! ronrs-4 b] > \ > td f \ , Teupacw amt ions pev eEovaias, peiCovos dé d0Ens
b) , , \ wv e , wf aVTITATTOMEVOS. TATE YAP adrAA padiws EdvaE,
\ , , 9 a
Kal Thy Kixépwvos umateiay ovTws pe TO AOYH
, er a a ,
peyarny Snunyopnaas WATE TLLAS AVTO TAY TH-
7 4 a
Tote peyiatas WhndicacGar Kai mpocayopevoat
, \ u a
TaTépa Tatpioos. mpwTw yap éKxeivm doxei
1 éxelywy Coraés, Bekker, and Graux, after Xylander:
éxetvov (referring to Caesar).
138

CICERO, xxi. 1-3

work him harm, and they had as leaders, among the magistrates-elect, Caesar as praetor, and Metellus and Bestia! as tribunes. When these assumed office, Cicero having still a few days of consular authority,? they would not permit him to harangue the people, but placing their benches so as to com- mand the rostra, would not suffer or allow him to speak; instead, they ordered him, if he wished, merely to pronounce the oath usual on giving up office, and then come down. Cicero accepted these terms and came forward to pronounce his oath ; and when he had obtained silence, he pronounced, not the usual oath, but one of his own and a new one, swearing that in very truth he had saved his country and maintained her supremacy. And all the people confirmed his oath for him. At this Caesar and the tribunes were still more vexed and contrived fresh troubles for Cicero. Among other things, a law was introduced by them for calling Pompey home with his army, in order, forsooth, that he might put down the arbitrary power of Ciccro. But Cato, who was tribune at this time, was a great help to Cicero and to the whole state, and opposed the measures of the other tribunes with an authority equal to theirs and a greater good repute. For he easily put a stop to their other projects, and so highly extolled the “arbitrary power” of Cicero in a speech to the people, that they voted him the greatest honours ever conferred and called him the father of his coun- try. For he was the first, as it seems, to receive this

1 Bestia was tribune in 63 B.c., and could not have had any part in dictating the procedure of Cicero.

2 Caesar, as praetor, assumed office January 1, 62 B.c., the day after Cicero laid down the consulship; but the new tribunes for the year 62 assumed office early in December of 63.

TOUTO cabuTrapEat, Katwvos avtoyv ovtws év TO 87 Lew 7 poaayopevaayTos.
XXIV. Kat péyotov pev taoyuoev ev TH TOE
¢ a Ui as e S) , ee
TOTE, TOAAOLS O EmihVovoy EauToV ETOiNoEY aT
‘ A A a
OVOEVOS epyou Tovnpov, & émawely adel Kat pera uve avTos éauTov UT TONEY dua Xepa-voMEvOS. OUTE Yap Bourn oure dj u0v ovTe dixaaTijptov iv cuvedOety ev @& pn Katirjivav eet
? 3 a \ / ’ \ \
Opvrovpevov axovaoat Kat AévtTAov. ada Kal
\ / “ / ‘ \ /
Ta Pi PALA TEAEUT@Y KATETANGE KAL TA OVYYpPap-aA A Ul bY
Hata TOY eye pio: Kal TOV NOYOV Hota rov OvTA
Kal Xapev EXOvTa. TrELTTNY em axon Ka poptexoy errounce TOlS UKpowpevols, WOTTEP THVOS det KN POS
¢
avT@® THS andtas TavTHS Tpocovans. sSuws Sé, KaiTEp OUTWS dKpare prrorepia CVO, dir
NAKTO TOD pOoveiv ETEPOLS, apdovwrtatos ov éy
\
T® TOVS TPO aUTOV Kal TOvS KAP avrov avdpas
ey wm wiacery, MOS €k TOV cUyypaypaTwy AaPeiv
\ 3 a

€oTlt. ToOAAa & avTov Kal atrop“ynpovevovow’
3 / et 7
olov wept “AptototédXous, TL Ypvaiov ToTapos
v / an
Ein p€éovtos, Kal Tept tov IdXatwvos diadoyor, e fal td / A e
ws Tov Avos, eb AOyYw YpHoOat wéepuKer, ovVTw / \ Soya / Sie, ‘
dianeyopevov. Tov d€ Mcodpactov cimler tTpudinv idiay amoxadelv. Tepi b€ taVv AnpocPevous
4 3 A , / , 3
Aoyor €pwTnleis Ttiva Soxoin KaAXNLOTOY éeivat, iA la
TOV MEYLOTOY ETE. KALTOL TLVES TOY TPOTTFOLOU-
, , 3 ? a) ~ 4
[EVV Onpioo Devitery emepvovtat povy tod Kuxe-
/
p@vos, vy Tpos TIA TOV éTaipor €Onxev év éte-GTOAH ypawas, €viayov TV Aoywr aTovuaTatetw

1 Cicero himself nowhere says this, nor does he mention Cato in connection with the title. In his oration in Pisonem, title,) after Cato had given it to him before the people.

XXIV. So at this time Cicero had the greatest power in the state, but he made himself generally odious, not by any base action, but by continually praising and magnifying himself, which made him hateful to many. For there could be no session either of senate or assembly or court of justice in which one was not obliged to hear Catiline and Len- tulus endlessly talked about. Nay, he even went so far as to fill his books and writings with these praises of himself; and he made his oratory, which was naturally very pleasant and had the greatest charm, irksome and tedious to his hearers, since this un- pleasant practice clung to him like a fatality. But nevertheless, although he cherislied so strong an am- bition, he was free from envying others, since he was most ungrudging in his encomiums upon his pre- decessors and contemporaries, as may be gathered from his writings. There are also many sayings of his on record which prove this; for instance, he said of Aristotle that he was a river of liquid gold,* and of the dialogues of Plato that Jupiter, were it his nature to use human speech, would thus discourse.° Theophrastus, too, he used to call his own special delight. And when he was asked which of the speeches of Demosthenes he thought the best, he replied, “the longest.” And yet some of those who pretend to be imitators of Demosthenes dwell much upon an expression which Cicero used in a letter to one of his friends, to the effect that in some parts of

3, 6, he says that Quintus Catulus gave him the title in the Senate. 2 Acad. Prior. ii. 38, 119.

3 Brutus, 31, 121 (si Graece loquatur).
I4!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ , a ‘ , a
tov Anpoabevn tov d€ peyadXov Kal Gavpactav
, e a n \ A ,
éraivwv ols Tod\aXOD Xpitat Tepl Tov avopos, v4 a. A , fal OQ? ,
Kal OTL TeEpl ods pudtota TOV Lotwy éaTrovdaceE 9 , Aoyor, Tovs Kat “Avtwviov, Pirimmixovs éré-ypawev, auynpovovct.
A > \ /
Tav 6€ kar avtov évdokwv amo Xoyou Kat
/ 3 ” CN \ a 3 b] ? b] G / codias ovK éotiv ovdeis ov ovK eTroinoev éeveoko-
A / XN - 3 la \ t TEpov 7) Aéyeor 7) ypadhwv EevpEevas Tept EXdoTov.
, i a n ‘ \
Kpatimae 6€ TO Hepieratntix® dterpatato pev
¢ , , \ / U wv
Popato yeverOat tapa Katoapos adpyovtos 1j6n, \ \ Day , / dtemrpakato 8é Kai) thy €& ’Apetov mayou BovAny F n / b] \ ?
Widicacbat denOjvar pévery avtov ev “AOnvars tA A / A
Kal d1aréyecOat Tois véots @S KOTMODYTA THY 4 b \ be Ni a“ K , > N
Tod. émiaToXal 6€ mapa Tov Kixépwros cial ‘ id , id \ \ \ cs? » mpos Hpwdnv, érepat O€ pos Tov vlov, éyKEXEvO-
, a / ,
pevov cuudtrdocode Kpatima@. Topyiav 6é
if 3 \ ,
TOV pyTOPAa alTL@pevos Ets 1d0vaS Kal TOTOUS
\ is lal
TPOdyEW TO [MELPUKLOVY aTrEeAaUVEL THS TUVOUCIAS
~ \ N ¢ a ¢ A
avTov. Kal cxyedorv aitn Te TOV EAANMIKOV pia
\ , \ , 5} , b) b] A
Kat deutépa mpos TléXovra Tov BuCavtiov év opyn

, \ \ id na
Tive yeypantat, Tov pev Topytay avtov mpoan-ie f ik A KOVTWS ETLKOTTOVTOS, ELTEP HY PAVAOS KAL akKo-
@ , “‘ \ ‘N , actos, nrep eddKxel, mpos de Tov TléXoTA puKpoca 5 n -
Noyoupevou Kal peurwipotpovvTos wWaTrEp apEdr-
A A ia
caVTAa Tlds TIVAaS aUT@® Kal WnhdicpaTa Tapa
, /
Bulartiov yevéo Gat.
-‘*r aA tA \ 4
XXV. Tatra te 6n htdotipa, Kal TO TOANAKIS
1 «al supplied here by Reiske, and deleted before den@jvat by Sintenis! (in crit. notes). Graux simply transposes.

Ie

87

‘

CICERO, xxiv. q-anv. 1

his speeches Demosthenes nods; but of the great and admirable praises which he often bestows upon him, and of the fact that those speeches of his own to which he devoted most labour, namely, the speeches against Antony, were entitled by him Philippics, they say nothing.

Moreover, of the men of his own time who were famous for eloquence or learning, there is not one whom he did not make more famous by what he said or wrote in favour ofhim. For Cratippus the Peripatetic he obtained the Roman citizenship from Caesar, now in power, and he also induced the council of the Areiopagus to pass a decree requesting him to remain at Athens and discourse with the young men, and thus be an ornament to the city. Furthermore, there are Jetters from Cicero to Herodes, and others to his son, in which he urges them to study philosophy with Cratippus.t_ But Gorgias the rhetorician he censured for leading the young man into pleasures and drink- ing parties, and banished him from his son’s society.? This is almost the only one of his Greek letters (there is also a second, addressed to Pelops of Byzantium) which was written in a spirit of anger; and Gorgias he properly rebukes, if, as he was thought to be, he was worthless and intemperate ; but towards Pelops he shows a mean and querulous spirit for having neglected to obtain for him certain honorary decrees from the Byzantians.

XXV. These complaints were characteristic of 1 These letters are not extant.

2 The younger Cicero, in a letter to Tiro (ad fam. xvi. 21, 6). says that he had found Gorgias useful as a teacher of declamation, but had dismissed him in obedience to his father’s positive command,

> f aw , nw ies , \
ératpom“evovy TOV Aoyou TH CEeLVOTHTL TO TpéTrOV
oh t \ mpolec@at. Movvatio pev yap more avynyopy-
\ \ f a ,
gas, ws anodvywy thy Sikny éxelves édiwKev ¢, a) a al Uy lal étaipov avtov SaBivov, ottw AéyeTat TpoTEcetD ane nan ¢ ! e > > OA SE es \ Pees um opyis o Kixépwyv @aot etmreiv: “Xu yap éxei-8 Z \ , b 4 \ U
yyy, & Movvatie, THv dixkny atéguyes 61a cavutor, lal \ U \ a) 4
ovK é“ov ToAv oKoTos ev duwtl TO StxaoTnpiw / »” be x f bd] / meptyeavtos; Mapxov oe Kpacocoyv éyxwptatwv
a 4 3 , \ bi e / amo TOU PHyaTtos evnmepynoe, Kat pel’ Huépas 9 b>] , la >) / e 9 a > avOis odtyas AoLdopa@v avTOV, ws EexEiVvos eitrED wn ‘ b) X lal 3 f “OU yap évtavia mpwnv autos nas émnves;”
, , , , \
“Nai,” yor, “ mereTns evecev yupvafwv Tov
, > s e 4 bb 3 4 4
Aoyov els havany vmToGeow. eElTovTos O€ ToTE,
a ld , 3 ¢ /
tov Kpacaov pndéva Kpdocov év ‘Popn BeBio-
, / 3p
Kévat praxpotepov é€nxovtaetias, €(8 totepov
’ / \ / ee A as N 2 A Oc
apvovpevov Kal AEYOVTOS, i & av éyo twadov wn > Db] v > ld ¢ iP td
trout elmov; ‘Hidess,” py, “ Pwpaiouvs déws \ nm 3 , 3 ,
aKovgomévous Kal Sta TOUT ednpaywryes. apé-

\ lal 4 a o a ‘2 axecOa 6€ TOV Kpacoou Tots Xtwixols dycartos, of 95 \ > \ b] ,
OTt WRovGLOY Eivat TOV ayalov amTopairovew, a“ 8 ” Up lal A “"Opa 1) parrop,” eltrev, “OTL TAaVTA TOU cogpov
, 8 93 b] > /
Aeyouowy eivar. SieBddreTo 6 els hirapyupiav
& = \ ~ a , e
o Kpdoaos. émel 6€ tov Kpacoov tov maidwr o er > 4 \ a e 3 \ \ a étrepos Akiw Tivi Sox@v bmotos Eivat, Kal Ota TOUTO ~ \ Ul 3 \ > \ a 3 ts
Th PNTpL TpooTpLBopevos aicypav emt TH “AEi@
f 4 al ,
dtaBorny evdoxipynoe Noyor ev BovrAyn duedOor,
e Ve id , 4 b] “ Ww bD] épwrnfeis o Kixépwv te haivetar avTe@, “"Aézos, ® 6c if ”?
etme, “ Kpaucoou.
144

CICERO, xxv. 1-4

ambition, as well as the fact that he was often led on by the cleverness of his speech to disregard propriety. For instance, he once served as advocate for Muna- tius, who was no sooner acquitted than he prosecuted a friend of Cicero’s, Sabinus, whereupon, it is said, Cicero was so transported with anger as to say: “ Was it, pray, on your own merits, Munatius, that you were acquitted, and not because I spread much darkness about the court when before there was light?” And again, he gained great applause by an encomium on Marcus Crassus from the rostra, and then a few days afterwards as publicly reviled him, whereupon Cras- sus said: “ What, did you not stand there yourself a day or two ago and praise me?” “ Yea,” said Cicero, “exercising my eloquence by way of practice on a bad subject.” Again, Crassus once said that no Crassus had lived in Rome to be older than sixty years, and then tried to deny it, exclaiming, “ What could have led me to say this?” ‘You knew,” said Cicero, “that the Romans would be delighted to hear it, and by that means you tried to court their favour.” And when Crassus expressed his satisfaction with the Stoics because they represented the good man as rich, “ Consider,’’ said Cicero, “whether your satis- faction is not rather due to their declaration that all things belong to the wise.”” Now, Crassus was ac- cused of covetousness. Again, one of the sons of Crassus who was thought to resemble a certain Axius, and on this account had brought his mother’s name into scandalous connection with that of Axius, once made a successful speech in the senate, and when Cicero was asked what he thought of him, he answered with the Greek words ‘‘ Axios Krassou.” !

1 « Worthy of Crassus.”

145

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXVI. MéAXwv 8€ Kpaccos ets Zvpiav atat\ aA fal /
pev €Bovreto Tov Kixépwmva waddXov avt@ pidrov
‘ i f f
h éy@pov elvaty Kai piroppovovpevos Epyn Pov-
a A a e /
NecOar SeiTVAoa Tap avTo> KaKeivos UTEdEEATO
> / ¢ ,
mpoOvuws. oOdrryats © UoTepovy nuépars epi
/ , ~ ,
Bativiou didwv tiver évtuyyavovTav @s pywpe-
\ f > \ f
vou diadvcets Kal dirtav (Hv yap éxOpos), “Ov / 99 s a My dyrouv xat Bativeos,” ceive, “Sermvncat tap epuol
4 > N \ 8) An BovreTat;” pos pév ovv Kpacaoyv torovtos. av-
\ / A tov 6€ tov Batimov éyovta yotpddas &v TO ‘ Us id ca)
TPAXNAW Kal éyovta OtKNVY oldodyTA pyTopa
mn > cf
Tpoceimev. axovoas & OTe TébyynKev, eitTa peTa
, A e fal La \ puxpov TrvOopmEevos cadas ote Fn, “ Kaos toivur
b) , A e , ” b \ \ , GTONOLTO KAKWS O Wevodpevos. émel d€ Kai-
, \ 3 Zz ,
cape Wndicapevp thy ev Kapravia Xepay
fa “a \ KaTaveunOnvat Tols oTpatiwtats moddAGL pep
a “a , \ ,
éSvayépatvov év tH BovryH, Aevxios d€ Tédd105
a) nN 3 b)
Omov Te TpecBUTATOS BY EiTEY WS OV YEVITETAL
“A nw “a / 29>
trouto fCavtos avtov, “ Ilepipeivwpev, eimrev o
, (73 \ \ > 3 a , Kixépwv, “ paxpav yap ovK« aitettat LedXuos
e 4, 99 Ly lA > car > , ¥

umépGeow.” tv O€ tis ‘Oxtaovios attiay éyev
, ‘ nA Y ,
éx AtBins yeyovérar’ mpos tovTov év tive dixy n A is \ ¢
Néyovta TOU Kixépwvos pn eEaxovery, “Kai pny 9 DA ” e 66 \ } > 4 29 4
ovK Eyels, Elmre, “TO OVS aTpuTNTOV. Mertédrov
, va / A
dé Néwwtos etmovtos OTt TAELOVAS KATALAPTUPOY avnpynKey 7) curvnyopov aéowxKev, ““Oporoy@ 4 9d 6c / 3 b) \ f a é t
yap, edn, “ WioTEws EV Emo TAEOV H CELvOTNHTOS
s 39 , , , ,
eivat. veavicxov 6€ TLV0s aitiav éxovtos év TrakodvT. dadppaxoy TO TaTpi dedwxévar Opa-146

CICERO, xxvi. 1-5

XXVI. When Crassus was about to set out for Syria, wishing that Cicero should be a friend rather than an enemy, he said to him in a friendly manner that he wished to dine with him; and Cicero readily received him into his house. Buta few days after- wards, when some friends interceded with him for Va- tinius, saying that the man sought reconciliation and friendship (for he was an enemy), “It surely cannot be,’ said Cicero, “that Vatinius also wishes to dine with me.” Such, then, was his treatment of Crassus. Now, Vatinius himself had swellings on his neck, and once when he was pleading a case Cicero called him a tumid orator, Again, after hearing that Va- tinius was dead, and then after a little learning for a surety that he was alive, “ Wretchedly perish, then,” said Cicero, “the wretch who lied!” And again, Caesar once got a decree passed that the land in Campania should be divided among his soldiers, and many of the senators were dissatisfied, and Lucius Gellius, who was about the oldest of them, declared that it should never be done while he was alive; whereupon Cicero said: “Let us wait, since Gellius does not ask for a long postponement.” There was a certain Octavius, too, who was reputed to be of African descent; te this man, who said at a certain trial that he could not hear Cicero, the orator replied : “And yet your ear is not without a perforation.” ! And when Metellus Nepos declared that Cicero had brought more men to death as a hostile witness than he had saved from it as an advocate, “ Yes,” said Cicero, “I admit that my credibility is greater than my eloquence.” Again, when a certain young man who was accused of having given his father poison in 1 Usually the mark of a slave.

147

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

guvopévov Kal A€yovTos OTL RAoLtdopyjcer Tov Kixépova, “Todto,” édy, “mapa cod BovrAopar pGiddov i) TAraKobyTa.” Ilowdiov 6€ Synortiov ou yyopov jev aurov ey TIVE dixn TaparaBovros

pel? évépav, avroo dé maya, Bovdopévou éyerv Kab pdevi TAPLEVTOS eivrety, ws OHAOS HY apte-pEvos UTO TOV Sicaa Tov 79) THs Wapou pepopevns, “X pa onpLEpov,” ébyn, “TO Katp@, Lot Le:
pérXrets yap aisprov iStwTy5 elvat.” Wodmrduov 8 Kovortay VOpLKOV evar Boundopevor, OvTa o apa-
Of Kal abun, mpos Twa diKny exdheoe peapTupa
Tob dé pndey eldévat ddcxortos, “"Iaws,” én, “Soxels Tepl TOV vopiK@v épwtacda. Merérhou oé Néretos eV Srahopa rit TOAAGKLS NEyovtos ‘Tis cov maTnp €oTLv, 0 Kuxepav Sai TauT ay” Ein “Thy amoKpiaw 7 unTHp NareTro-Tépay emoinoer.” edoxer S akoddaotos 7 LyTHpP elvat TOU Nerwros, avTos 6€ TLS evpeTa Boros.
Kat Tote Tv Onuapyiay amohTev addyw pos lloumniov é&érdevoev eis Yvptav, eit éxeiOev emai ev GROYOTEPOD. Oarypas dé Piraypov TOV Kadyyntny emipehes TEpov éméatnaev avTovu
TO Tabw Kopaxa NAwov: Kaio Kixépwy “ Toor” edn soparepov éroinaas’ méTecOar yap ae padov y Aeyerv edidakev.” érret dé Mapxos
"Atrios éy tiv dikn Tpootmalomevos eitre dirov avtod dSedenoOat Tapacyeiy émipedecav Kal Xo-
s S f c¢ 72) ef 2 c¢ yloTnTa Kat Tiattv, “ Ki’ ovtws, edn, “ o1dnpovs yéyovas dvOpwiros wate pnodeyv ex ToToUTwY av ntnaal’ o diros Tapacyxetv;” 148

874

CICERO, xxv. 5-8

a cake put on bold airs and threatened to cover Cicero with abuse, “That,” said Cicero, “I would rather have from you than a cake.” There was Publius Sextius, too, who retained Cicero as an advocate in a case, along with others, and then wanted to do all the speaking himself, and would allow no one else a word ; when it was clear that he was going to be ac- quitted by the jurors and the vote was already being given, “ Use your opportunity to-day, Sextius,” said Cicero, “ for to-morrow you are going to be a nobody.” Publius Consta, too, who wanted to be a lawyer, but was ignorant and stupid, was once summoned by Cicero as witness in a case; and when he kept say- ing that he knew nothing, “ Perhaps,” said Cicero, “you think you are being questioned on points of law.” Again, in a dispute with Cicero, Metellus Nepos asked repeatedly “ Who is your father?” “In your case,” said Cicero, ‘‘ your mother has made the answer to this question rather difficult.” Now, the mother of Nepos was thought to be unchaste, and he himself a fickle sort of man. He once suddenly de- serted his office of tribune and sailed off to join Pompey in Syria, and then came back from there with even less reason. Moreover, after burying his teacher Philagrus with more than usual ceremony, he set upon his tomb a raven in stone; whereupon Cicero remarked: “In this you have acted more wisely than is your wont, for he taught you to fly rather than to speak.”” And again, when Marcus Appius prefaced his speech in a case by saying that his friend had begged him to exhibit diligence, eloquence, and fidelity, “And then,’ said Cicero, “are you so hard-hearted as to exhibit none of those great qualities which your friend demanded ?”

XXVII. Té pév ody pos éyApovs 7) avtidixous oKoOppact yphaVat mixpoTtépots Soxet pyntopexory elvat’ TO 6 ols EtUXE TpodKpovey Evexa Tod yedotou TORU GUVIyE Hicos auT@. ypdarrw oé Kal TOUT@Y ONL. Mdpxov *Axviviov é éyovta duo yapuSpovs puyacas "Aépacrov eKarEl. Aeuxiou dé Kotra TENT UK IY EYOVTOS apy, tXotvoTatov
8 OvTos, UTaTEelay METLOV O Kixépov edipnae, Kal tov dieov KUKMD TEPLOTAVTOY @S Enver, “ ‘OpGas poseia be,” eltre, “ {1 Lot ryévotTo Xar-e705 O TLUNTNS OTL vdwp Tivw. Bexovio §
amavrioas dyovte pe’ éavtod Tpels duoppordtas Ouyatépas avedbéyEaTo:
‘“ , b) > IA v / bh
DotBou wort ove €@vTos EoTrEtpEV TéKVA.
Mdpxou 6é Tedriov do0xodvtos ovK ef érevd Epo yeryovevat, Aaumpa b6€ 77 Pwvn Kal weyary pap fata Tpos THY ouryeANTOV efavayvovrtos, ‘ ‘My Oavpatere, 4 elmre, ‘xal autos els éoTe TOV ava-TEPOVNKOTOY. émel O€ Paiiotos) LuANa Tou
POvapX7TavTOs év ‘Poun Kal TONOUS émt Gava-
TO T poypaypavTos éy Saveious yevopevos Kal ToAra THs ougias diacmabyjoas a dm dptvov Tpoeypaye, TAUTNY epn pardov aUT® THY Tpoypadny ape-KEL THY TaTppay.
XXVIII. "EK = ToUTwY éyiveTo Todnois éma.- xOns° Kal ol peta KrArwédiou cuvertnoay er avTov apxnv TOLAUTHY Aa Bovres. Av KAwézios aynp Evyevs, TH pev HNALKLA Vvéos, TO 5€ Ppovnuate
_—

1 Adrastus, mythical king of Argos, gave his two daughters in marriage to Tydeus and Polyneices, both of whom were fugitives from their native cities,

AXVII. Now, this use of very biting jests against enemies or legal opponents seems to be part of the orator’s business; but his indiscriminate attacks for the sake of raising a laugh made many people hate Cicero. And I will give a few instances of this also. Marcus Aquinius, who had two sons-in- law in exile, he called Adrastus.1 Again, Lucius Cotta, who held the office of censor, was very fond of wine, and Cicero, when canvassing for the consulship, was a-thirst, and as his friends stood about him while he drank, said: “ You have good reason to fear that the censor will deal harshly with me—for drinking water.” And when he met Voconius escorting three very ugly daughters, he cried out :—

“It was against the will of Phoebus that he begat
children.”’ 2
Again, when Marcus Gellius, who was thought to be of servile birth, had read letters to the senate in a loud and clear voice, “Do not marvel,” said Cicero, “he too is one of those who have cried aloud for their freedom.” * And when Faustus, the son of the Sulla who was dictator at Rome and placarded many people for death, got into debt, squandered much of his substance, and placarded his household goods for sale, Cicero said he liked this placarding better than his father’s.
XXVIII. Asa consequence of this he became odious to many; and besides, the partisans of Clodius combined against him on the following ground. Clodius was a man of noble birth, young in years, but bold

2 An iambic trimeter from some lost tragedy, perhaps the Ocdipus of Euripides (Nauck, T'rag. Graec. Frag.?, p. 911).

3 A play upon the phrase (used of a slave) ‘‘ in libertatem reclamare.”

Opacus Kat avdadns. ovTos épav Toumrnias THS Katcapos yuvarKos eis TIHV olxiay avTou _Tapeio- re Kpupa, AaBav éo0ijra Kal oKeuny rar- T plas” é@vov yep ab yuraixes THY aTroppyTov éxeiynv Kal adearov avopacu Duciay éy TH TOU Katcapos oixia, Kal mapiy aynp oudeiss aAAG pelpaKlov @Y ETL Kab pyTH ryevercov 0 Kidwézos rm iE AnoesOar dea dvs Tpos THY Hopaniav

pera TOV yuvarkay. ws 8 eianrOe VUKTOS Ets oixiay peyarny, nTopetto Tay dL0dwv" Kal TAa-VOMLEVOV AUTO iSotoa Avpmrias Oepatrauvis THs
Kaicapos LNTPOS, NTN EDV dvopa. pbeyEac bau
S avayxacbévtos éxeivou Kal pg avTos aK ONOU-Oov Iloprnias Snteiv "ABpav tovvopa, cuvetca
Ty povnv ov yuvarxetav ovaav avéxpaye Kal
TUVEKANEL Tas yuvaikas. ait & amoxreicacat TAS Ovpas Kal mavTa Svepevvespevae AauBavovart tov KrAws.ov eis olka TALOLT RNS, 1 n cuverainrOe, KaTaTepevyoTa. TOU 6€ TPayLatos meptBorrov yevouevou Katodp te tHv Uopurniav adjxe cai dixnv } aceBeias aveypayato T6 Kiwoiw.
XXIX. Kixépwv & iv pév avtov diros xal
Tov mept Katirtvav TParTopEevav EXpHTO Tpo-OumoTatTm cuvepy@ Kal puraxe TOU TOMATOS, ia xuptSopevov d€ 7 pos TO eye AN Lat TO poe ryevyovevar Kat’ € éxeivov ev ‘Pwpn Tov ypovov, arr’ ev Tots Topparara Xeopiows. dar piBew, KaTepwap-TUpnoey ws adiypwévov pos autov olxade Kal
* Slieny before this word Sintenis and Bekker assume a lacuna in the text, where once stood some such phrase as eis Tav Snudapxwy (Plutarch, Caesar, x. 5). So (substantially) Graux, 1§2

875

CICERO, xxvii. 1—xx1x. 1

and presumptuous in spirit. This man, being in love with Pompeia, Caesar’s wife, got into his house secretly, by assuming the dress and guise of a lute- player; for the women of Rome were celebrating in Caesar's house that mysterious rite which men were not allowed to witness,! and no man was there; but being still a beardless youth Clodius hoped without being noticed to slip through to Pompeia along with the women. But since he got in at night and the house was large, he lost his way in the passages; and as he was wandering about, a maid of Aurelia, Caesar's mother, caught sight of him and asked him his name, Being thus compelled to speak, he said that he was looking for an attendant of Pompeia named Abra, whereupon the maid, perceiving that his voice was not that of a woman, raised a cry and called the women together. These shut the doors, searched carefully all about, and found Clodius, who had taken refuge in the chamber of the girl with whom he came into the house. The affair having become noised abroad, Caesar divorced Pompeia and had an action for sacrilege brought against Clodius.

XXIX. Now, Cicero was a friend of Clodius, and in the affair of Catiline had found him a most eager co-worker and guardian of his person; but when Clodius replied to the charge against him by insist- ing that he had not even been in Rome at the time, but had been staying in places at the farthest remove from there, Cicero testified against him, declaring that Clodius had come to his house and

1 Cf. chapter xix. 3,

2 drecXeypévov Tmept TLv@v" OTE HY arndes. Ov pny €OOKEL paptupeiv) Kexépov 61a THY arnberar,
a) pos THY avTou yuvatka Tepevtiav amronoryoupevos. my yap avutn T pos TOV KrXwdrov aré-xGera Oa THY adedpiy THY éKElVvOU Krwdiar, WS
TO Kixépove Bovdoperny yapnFhvar Kal TOUTO
bua TvAXov TLVOS MpaTrovaar, os éTaipos pev Ay
Kat auvnOns év Tos padtora Kixépwvos, del b¢
Tos Thv Krwoiav port ov Kal Geparreveov eyyus
3 o1xovcay vrowiay 73) Tepev tia TAperXe. Va-hem dé Tov oO otca Kal Tob Kirépevos dpyovca tapwtuve TH KAwdiw auveriPécBat Kai KaTapaptupijcat. Katevaptupovy dé tov Kiodiou To\AoL TOY KAN@Y Kayabav avdpay émLop-Klas, pgosoupytas, dxyrwv dexacpous, POopas
YUVALKOV. Aevxovrros dé Kat Oeparratvisas
TApElLYey WS TVYYEVOLTO TH VEewTATH TAY AdeAPav
4 0 KAwédcos, te AcvxovAdw ouvexKet. Torn O jv Soka Kal Tats adhaus Svalv adehpais Th oud lev tov Krwdsov, wv Teptiav bev Mapevos 0
'PHE, Krwdiav d€ Méredros o Kenep eixev, Hv Kovadpaytiav * €xadovy, OTL TOV epactay Ts auTH XarKous eBarov els Baravtvov OS apyv-plov cloémeuwe? TO O€ AETTOTATOV Tov _Xahkov VOpLoLaATOS KOVaOpavTny éxdoup. él TAUTN pddoTa TOV adedpav KAKOS Hove ev 6 KaAdduos.
5 ov pny GAB TOTE TOU d7}Lo0u 7 pos TOUS KATOpOp-

7.
TUPOUVTAS AVTOV KAL GUVETTATAS aVTLTATTOMEVOU
1 Kovadparrfay Sintenis with the MSS.; Kovadpayraplay Bek-ker, after Xylander and Du Soul (cf. Cic. pro Cael. 26, 62, mulier quadrantaria).

consulted him on certain matters; which was true. However, it was thought that Cicero did not give his testimony for the truth's sake, but by way of defence against the charges of his own wife Terentia. For there was enmity between her and Clodius on account of his sister Clodia, whom Terentia thought to be desirous of marrying Cicero and to be con- triving this with the aid of a certain Tullus; now, Tullus was a companion and an especial intimate of Cicero, and his constant visits and attentions to Clodia, who lived near by, made Terentia suspicious. So, being a woman of harsh nature, and having sway over Cicero, she incited him to join in the attack upon Clodius and give testimony against him. More- over, many men of the better class bore witness against Clodius for perjury, recklessness, bribery of the multitude, and debauching of women. And Lucullus actually produced female slaves who tes- tified that Clodius had commerce with his youngest sister when she was living with Lucullus as his wife. There was also a general belief that Clodius had intercourse with his other two sisters, of whom Tertia was the wife of Marcius Rex, and Clodia of Metellus Celer; the latter was called Quadrantia, because one of her lovers had put copper coins into a purse and sent them to her for silver, and the smallest copper coin was called " quadrans."' It was with regard to this sister in particular that Clodius was in evil repute. However, since the people at this time set themselves against those who com bined and testified against him, the jurors were no

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

hoByibévtes of Stxactal duraxny TeptectHaayTo, Kal TAS OEATOUS Ol THELTTOL TUYKEXUMEVOLS TOUS
ypampacw WVEYKADV. opens d€ WAEtoves éofay ol damon vores yever at: Kat TLS erEXOH Kal Oa:
6 LOS dveAG civ. a0ev o per KatXos a ATrAVT HOAs TOUS
KpLTats, * SV ers, elTreD, ' 'ws arnbas virép aopa-Aelas ntno ac Ge THY puraxiyp, poBovpevor bn
TiS UL@Y apEernrat 70 dpy upto." Kixépwv oe
TOU Krwdiov T POs avrov NeyovTos OTL LapTupay OUK ETE mor Tapa TOUS dicacrals, ORNS
époot HEV, " eivev, "ol TWévTEe Kal eixoot TOV StKa-CTO emia tevoay' TOT OVTOL yap gov cate wn dbiayo" gol dé TpedKovTa OUK emlaTevoay' ov yap mT poTEpov amtéXvaav 3) eraBov TO dpyuptov." 70 HEV TOL Kaicap ov KATE LApPTUPNGE Kr1/Gels eT TOV KAw6zov, ovo &pn porxetay kareyvoxKevar THS yuvaros, agerkevar 5 avr HY OTe TOV Kaicapos ede yasov ov mpatews aicypas povov, dAXAa Kal dyuns cabapov eivat.
XXX. Atapuywv b€ tov Kivdvvoyv @ Krwédzos
Kab Onpapxos aipeeis evOus elXeTO tov Kexépw-VOS, nave opod Tpayywara Kal mvt as v0 pwrous cuvaryov Kal TapaT Tov ém avtTov. Tov Te yap
Of wov @KELw@oaTO vopors piravOpar ots, Kab TOV

UT UT OV EKAT EDD peyaras éemapxias éevrndicato, Heicw pev Maxeéoviar, TaBwin ce Lupiar,
TONNOUS be TOV aT ope GuVveTAT TEV els 70 TOA TEVA, Kal dovrouUS oma pevous TEpl AUTOV ElYe.
2 Tw O€ TAEtcTOY SuvVapévwY TOTE TPLOV avdpar,

1 Cf. also the Caesar, x. '7. Each juror was provided with. three tablets, on one of which was marked A (absolvo); ona second C (condemno); and ona third N.L. (non liquet). The frightened and surrounded themselves with a guard, and most of them cast their voting-tablets with the writing on them confused.! But nevertheless those who were for acquittal appeared to be in the majority; and some bribery also was said to have been used. This led Catulus to say, when he met the jurors, “It was indeed as a measure of safety that you asked for your guard; you were afraid that someone would take your money away from you.” 2 And Cicero, when Clodius told him that as a witness he had found no credit with the jurors, said: “ Nay, twenty-five of the jurors gave me credit, for so many voted against you; and thirty of them gave you no credit, for they did not vote to acquit you until they had got your money.”’3 Caesar, however, when sum- moned as a witness, gave no testimony against Clodius, and denied that he had condemned his wife for adultery, but said that he had put her away because Caesar’s wife must be free not only from shameful conduct, but even from shameful report. XXX. But Clodius, having escaped his peril, and having been chosen tribune,* at once began to attack Cicero, arraying and stirring up against him all things and all men alike. He won the favour of the people by benevolent laws, got large pro- vinces voted to each of the consuls (Macedonia to Piso, and Syria to Gabinius), brought many of the poorer class into organized political activity, and kept armed slaves about his person. Now, of the three men who at that time had most power, jurors voted hy placing one of these tablets in the urn, Plutarch must have misunderstood his source.

2 Cf. Cicero, ad Att. i. 16, 5.

3 Cf. Cicero, sbid. 16, 10. 4 For the year 58 B.c.

i a Kpaooov pev avtexpus Keixépwve trodepodvtos,
of. f \ f
Iloprniov dé Opumtopéevov mpos apdortépous,

,
Kaioapos 6€ uédXovtos ets T'adatiav éftévar peta
s lad \ ¢
OTPATEULATOS, UTO TOUTOV UTodus oO KuKépwr, / ? v , > > ef ? “ \
KaLTTep OUK OVTA PirAOV, AAX UTOTTOV EK TOV TrEpPL
K XL 3 ger \ b a atirivav, nkiwoe mpecRevTns avT@ ovoTtpa-
/ a , revelry. OceEapévov 5€ tov Kaicapos 0 Krdzos ¢ a 4 N ie nn \ f
op@v expevyovta thy Snmapxtav avtod tov Kuixeé-pwva mpocetroteito cupBatixa@s Exew, Kal TH
, \ f > \ 2s ? f
Tepevtia tTHv wielaoTnv avatibels aitiav, éxeivou
a“ / dé peuvnpevos errieck@s ael Kal Aoyous evyvo-b 7 e v > “~ ? \
Hovas évo.oovs, @S av TLS OV pLo@Y OVE Yaref b] tee pd ~ f \ a , TAlWwV, AA €yKadwy pEeTplLa Kal hirdtKa, TavTa-
“a \ f a“ 4 a A Tact avtov Tov hoSov avijxev, WoT aTreiTrEty TO
, \ f 4 ~
Kaicapt tHv mpecBeiay nal wadw éxecOat ths
, 37? @ \ e a ,
Tortteias. é€h @ wapokvvbels o Kaicap tov te Krwdsov éméppwoe cat Wopmijiov améotpete
” ~ , b) / Kouton ToD Kixépwvos, autos Te KaTep“apTupno ev
a \ a a a
év TO Onuw wn SoKEiy AVT@® Karas pNdé Vvopipws
v ? , 3 wn \ N 4
avépas axpitous avnphobat tovs mepi Aévtdov
re N f
kat KéOnyov. attn yap qv n KaTnyopia, Kai éri Toul’ o Kixépwy éxadreito. Ktivouvetwrv otv Kal
, ? a / \ / ? f
Suwmxopevos eoOATa peTHAXNaEE Kal KouNsS ava-ee 4 XN Aw al
TAEWS TEpliov ixéTEvEe TOY Sipuov. TravTayoU 8 o
\ \
Krwdtos amrnvta Kata ToUs otevwTrous, avOpa-
\ ‘ A ¢
mous éywv UBpiotas Tept avTov Kali Opaceis, ot

\ \ , ? f 3 A
TOAAG pey YAEUaCoVTES AKONGOTS Els THY pETA-\ ‘N lal wn , nm
Bornv Kal to oxjpa tov Kixépwvos, roAdayod
1538
87

CICERO, xxx. 2-5

Crassus was an out-and-out foe of Cicero, Pompey was dallying with both, and Caesar was about to set out for Gaul with an army ; into Caesar’s favour, therefore, Cicero insinuated himself (although Caesar was not a friend, but an object of suspicion owing to the affair of Catiline), and asked to accompany him on his campaign as legate.1 But no sooner had Caesar granted the request than Clodius, seeing that Cicero was thus escaping his tribunicial power, pretended to be desirous of a reconciliation, and by laying the chief blame upon Terentia, and always speaking of Cicero in friendly terms and using kindly expressions about him, as one who bore him no hatred or even ill-will, but had mode- rate complaints to make of him in a friendly way, he altogether took away his fear, so that he declined the office of legate under Caesar and again applied himself to public matters. But at this conduct Caesar was exasperated, and encouraged Clodius against Cicero, and completely alienated Pompey from him, while he himself testified before the people that he did not think it right or lawful that men should be put to death without a trial, as in the case of Lentulus, Cethegus, and their accomplices. For this was the denunciation made against Cicero, and to this he was summoned to make answer. And so, being in peril of prosecution, he changed his attire,? and with his hair untrimmed went about supplicating the people. But Clodius met him everywhere in the streets, with a band of bold and insolent men about him, who made many unbridled jests upon Cicero’s change of attire,

1 According to Cicero (ad Att. ii. 18, 3), it was Caesar who made the request. 2 Toa garb of mourning.

159

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a / / a
6€ wydkwo Kat AGous BdadrAovtTes evictavto Tais
/
(KECLALS.
XXXII. Ob py adda TO Kixépwrt tp@tov peév al \ an e nw wn
6Xiyou Sely cuptTay TO TOY iTTLKoY TAHOOS cuppeteBare thy écOijta, Kat dicpvpiwv ov«
7 na
EXaTTOUS véwy TapnKoAOVOOUY KOLaVTES Kal cuVI-
lo a ,
KeTEvOVTES? eTreLTa THS BovAns cuverOovans 6Tws
, \ a e > AN , a

wWwndicaito Tov Siwov ws ert mévOect pwetaBRanety Ta (atia, Kal TOV UTdTwY évavTiwOévtav, Krw-
, \ , \ \ ,
diov 6€ atdnpohopovpevov mept TO BovrAevT prov,
> 4 b] b] 4 A n
2€é8papov ove orjLyot TOV BovrEUTLKaV KaTap-x al wn
pyyvipevoe Tous yiT@vas Kal BowvTes. ws & Hv
7 ? 3 # IQA \ \ ” b >
ovT olKToS OUTE TLS aldws Tpos THY Oi, AAXr Es oy Kuiké evyey 7 Bia Kal oLdn édes Tov Kixepwva gevyev 7 (ta np@ ms \ ‘ , IQA a,
xpihivat mwpos tov Karwdiov, édetto Topsniov
aA , \
BonOeiy éritnies éxtrodwy yeyovotos cat dsatpi-nw \ ? , \ fa)
Bovtos év aypots Tept tov AdXBavov. Kat tpwTor \ ” II , \ \ PS /
pev érreprve Iletcwva tov yapBpov denoopevor:
4 Ay > N > , v >] e
émerta Kat avtos avéBn. truOopnevos 6 o Top-Foe b] e , > bd > @ cal PS \ \ Wnios OvX vTmEemetvev Els Orly EAVELV, CELYN yap auTov aidws elye mpos Tov avdpa peydrous nywviapevoy ayoavas uTép avTovd Kal ToAXa pos
i > ld , b) \ r , vapw éKxelv@m mTeTrodLTeUpEvov, urddrAa Kaioape
yapBpos @v Seouév@ mpovowKe Tas Tradatas / \ \ ig ” e \ 3 yvapitas Kal Kata Ovpas adXas uTEEEN wv are-‘6 \ 4 ef or 5 0 \ e SidpacKxe thy evtevErv. ottw $7 mpodobels o
a \ \ M4 \
Kixépov ta’ avtod Kal yeyovws Epnuos emi Tovs ¢e , , \ ti \ > umatous KaTepuye. Kal LaPuivios pev nv yare-\ Or nté , \ , , > an mos adel, Ileiowy de SuehéyOn mpaotepoy arte, 160

CICERO, xxx. 5—Xxxx1. 4

and often pelted him with mud and stones, and so interfered with his supplications to the people.

XXXI. However, in the first place, nearly the whole body of knights changed their attire with Cicero, and as many as twenty thousand young men escorted him with their hair untrimmed and joined in his suppliant entreaties to the people;! and besides, when the senate had met in order to pass a vote that the people should change their dress in token of public calamity, and the consuls had opposed it, and Clodius was in arms about the senate-house, not a few of the senators ran out, rending their garments and crying aloud. But since "this sight awakened neither pity nor any mercy, but Cicero was obliged either to go into exile or to appeal to force and the sword against Clodius, he begged for aid from Pompey, who had purposely got out of the way and was staying at his country seat in the Alban hills. First Cicero sent Piso,? his son-in-law, to entreat for him; then he went up thither himself also. Pompey, however, on learning of his coming, could not endure to see him, for he felt a strong sense of shame towards the man who had made great struggles in his behalf and had often adopted a political course to please him; but since he was Caesar's son-in-law, at his request he proved false to his old obligations, clipped out by another door, and so ran away from the interview. Thus betrayed by him and left desolate, Cicero fled for refuge to the consuls. Gabinius was always severe with him, but Piso dealt

1 Cf. Cicero's oration post red. ad Quir. 3, 8.

2 Not the consul who is mentioned in xxx. 1 and below in § 4,

TAPALWOV EXOTHVAL Kal UTOYwpHoat TH TOV Krwdiov puun Kat THY peTaBoArAnv TOV KatpaY éveyxKeEtv Kal yeveoOat Tadtvy cwThpa Hs Tatpidbos ev
n b] aA
oTdcect Kal Kaxols Ou éxeivov ovaons.
Totavtns Tuy@y amroxpicews 0 Kirépwy éBov-
, a /
NevETO auV Tols hirots: Kat AevKOVAXOS pEV ExE-Ds e t " \ ,

NEVE MLEVELVY, WS TEpleTopevoV, AANoL Oe hevryery, ry f
os Tayv Tov Snpyov ToOrjcovtos avTov, Stay 9 wn nw , (A \ 5 4
éuTrAncOn Hs KAwdiov pavias Kal arrovoias.
a > Fe. / \ \ ‘ ov a taut édofe Kixépwruy Kal To pev ayadpa THS
’ nA a \ , bd b ‘ A ’ 4
A@nvas, 6 qoduy XYpovov EXwy eml THS otKias e / b Ble f ? A idpupévov étiva ditagepovtws, ets Kamitadtov
f b) LQ. > , ‘“o? ral e , KopLoas ave neev emuyparpas ; AGnvG Pons
PUAaKt, TouTovs S€ Tapa Tov diiwv AaBav
\ / 7 iC A n , \ A Tept pécas vuxtas vTEeEnAGe THS TOAEWS Kal TEST
if
dra Aevxavias étropeveto, AaBécOat Xtxedias Bovropuevos.
XE “Os 6" a os 10 D
2.@: S nv pavepos non Tmedevyas, nw wn fo) e
émiyyayev avT@ guys Widov o KrAwsd:os, cat &idypappa Tpov0nkey elpyery mupos Kal datos Tov
\ / S
avépa Kal py Tapéyeww oréyny évTos putdiov
/ ? , a \ ¢ ” mevtakooiwy Itadtas. Tots pev ovv adXots
A ,
éXaxlaTos jv Tov diaypappatos TovTOV oOyos
\ / a aldovpévors Tov Kixépwva, cal macav évdeckvv-
, /
pevot @troppocvvnvy Tapémeutov avtov: év &
td , 4 n / A b fal A ImToviw, Toke THS AevKavias, Hv OtuBadva viv
i 2h s pee eee ” \
KaNrovaw, OviBios, LiKedos avynp, addAa TE TOAKA
wn f , 9 \ \ \
THs Kixepwvos pidtas aTroAeXavews Kai yeyovws 162

87!

CICERO, xxxt. 4—xxxu. 2

with him more gently, advising him to stand aside and yield to the impetuous assaults of Clodius, to submit to the change in the times, and to become once more a saviour of his country when she was involved in seditions and misfortunes through Clodius.

After getting such answer to his appeal, Cicero took counsel with his friends: Lucullus urged him to remain in the city, believing that he would prevail ; but others advised him to go into exile, believing that the people would quickly long for him when they were sated with the folly and madness of Clodius. This Cicero decided to do; so he took the statue of Minerva which had long stood in his house, and which he honoured exceedingly, carried it to the capitol,! and dedicated it there with the inscription " 'To Minerva, Guardian of Rome"; then, accepting an escort from his friends, about midnight he slipped out of the city, and set out on foot through Lucania, desiring to reach Sicily.

XXXII. But as soon as it was known that he had fled, Clodius caused a vote of banishment to be passed upon him, and issued an edict that all men should refuse him fire and water and that no man should give him shelter within five hundred miles of Italy. Now, most men paid not the slightest heed to this edict out of respect for Cicero, and escorted him on his way with every mark of kindness ; but at Hipponium, a city of Lucania,? which is now called Vibo, Vibius, a Sicilian, who had profited much from Cicero's friendship and_particularly by being made prefect of engineers during

1 Cf. Cicero, de leg. ii. 17, 42 ; ad fam. xii. 25, 1.
2 Rather Bruttium.

UTATEVOVTOS AUTOD TEKTOVWY ETAPXOS, OKLA LEV > INL E \ / de , > f
ovx €dé£aTo, To ywpiov de KaTaypa ew éeTNyyérfiw € a , AeTo, Kal [dios Ovepytrsos, 0 THs XLeKedtas oTpaa / /
TynYyos, év Tols pardtata Kexépwr Keypnpévos,

4 3 , a Ss ? x4) e ? f éypawev amréxer Oat THs RuKedtas. eh ols aGvmncas Opunoev éri Bpevtéciov, caxeiGev ets Auppa-Yi A ¢ ’ 4
Yiov avéum@ hop@ Tepatovpevos, avTimvEevcavTos Teraylou pel ipépav érradwdpounoer, eft’ atOrs
avynyOn. Réyetar S€ Kal KaTaTAEvCarTOS Es Avppaytov avtod Kat pédXovtos amroPaivev cet-
n A \ / a
omov TE THS YRS Kal oTacpOY apa yevécOas Tis ¢ > 4) @ / ¢ \ \ Oaratrns. ah @v avvéBadrov ot pavtixol py povipov avt@ Thy duyiy ésecGar peTaBorgHs yap civat TavTa onpela. Tod\rA@Y Sé holT@YTWY ar-nw i¢ 9 b] f \ “A ¢ , 4 Sp@v um evvotas kai tov “HAAnvidwy TrOACwV
\ \ a aa
StaplAAWMEVOV TrPOS aUTAS Talis TpETBElals, OWS bf] “ \ f tol \ Yd \) \
abupov kat Twepidvios Suye TA TOANA, TPS THY ef € f n n
[radiav, @omep of Sucépwtes, apopov, Kal T@
\ \ ¢ a ppovnywatt puxpos ayav Kal Tamewvos Ure TIS aovppopas yeyovas Kai ovverTarpéevos, ws ove ay Tis avdpa Tavela cupBeBimxota TocavTy mpocé / b] \ > , \ EOOKNGE. KALTOL ToAXrAKIS avTOS HEloV ToS dirovs un pyTopa Karey avTov, GAA dirocodor: / \ e f e a“ ry dirocogiav yap ws épyov npjoPat, pytopien &
a /
dpydve xpicGat ToAtTevopevos él Tas YXpelas.
\ \ , ¢
arn 7 dda Savy tov Noyov, Os TEp Rady, arro-
, a a \ \ a“ la > ,
KAVoAaAL THS Wuyijs, Kal TA TOV TONY evomdpb is Uy \ a Eacda. mdOn dt opiriav cab ovvybeav ois
164

CICERO, xxxu. 2-5

his consulship, would not receive him in his house, but sent him word that he would assign him his country-place for residence; and Caius Vergilius, the praetor of Sicily, who had been on most inti- mate terms with Cicero, wrote him to keep away from Sicily.t Disheartened at this treatment, he set out for Brundisium, and from there tried to cross to Dyrrhachium with a fair breeze, but since he met a counter-wind at sea he came back the next day, and then set sail again. It is said, too, that after he had put in at Dyrrhachium and was about to land, there was an earthquake accompanied by a violent convulsion of the sea. Wherefore the soothsayers conjectured that his exile would not be lasting, since these were signs of change. But although many people visited him out of goodwill, and the Greek cities vied with one another in sending hin: deputations, still, he passed his time for the most part in dejection and great grief,? looking off towards Italy like a disconsolate lover, while in his spirit he became very petty and mean by reason of his misfortune, and was more humbled than one would have expected in a man who had enjoyed so lofty a discipline as his. And yet he often asked his friends not to call him an orator, but a philosopher, because he had chosen philosophy as all occupation, but used oratory merely as an instrument for attaining the needful ends of a political career. But public opinion has great power to wash away reason, like a dye, from the soul of man, and by force of familiar association to impress the feelings of the vulgar on those who engage

1 Cf. Cicero, pro Plancio, 40, 95 ff.
? As his letters to Atticus (ili, 8-21) show.

4 # , ba , ,
TOALTEVOMEVOLS, AV LN TLS EV para huvrAATTOMEVOS © aA \ al s
oUTw cuUudépnTat Tols EKTOS WS TOY TPAaypaTwV
a A \ A a“
QUT@V, OV TOV ETL TOIS TPaypnact TAaGaY cvppe-OéEwr.
XXXITI. “O d€ Krwosos éFeAdcas tov Kuixépwva KaTéeTpnoe pev avTov Tas émavrets, KaT\ beats A émpnae O€ THY OlKiay Kal T@® TOTM vadv 'EXev-/ ? 4 \ > > + ? ’
Oeptas ém@Kodopunoe tHv 8 AdAXNV ovotav éerwrEL
’ /
Kal dtexnpuTte Kad nuépav, pndév wvoupévou pn-
\ ? \ A a Sevos. €k O€ ToUTOV PoPeEpos BY Tots aptaToKpaa \ \ on 3 , ? ef \
TLKOLS, Kab TOY Ojpov aveimevoy as UBpiv ToAAHY
\ , , b] , A
Kab OpacuTnta TUVEPENKO[EVOS, emexetper TO Hloprnio, Tov dtwoxnpévwoy vr’ av’tod Kata THY oTpateéiav Evia orapdttwv. éd ols o Topmaaios adoEay éxaxilev avTos avTov mpoémevos Tov Kixé-pwva' Kat Tadw éx petaBorns Tavtotos éyiveto TpaTTwv KaGodov AVT@ peTa TOV hirtwv. Eevicta-

A / f a A
pevov 5€ ToD KrAwdiov cvvédo£e 7H BovrAn unbdev
/ a fe) \
dla pécov mpaypa Kupody poe mpattTew dnpuo-cov, e+ py Kixépwrr xaOodos yévotto. tay &é
f A
mept AévTXov UTaTEeVvoYTWwY Kal THS OTdTEws
i? f a a Tpocw Badilovens, date TpwOhvat wev ev ayopa
, Iw \ \ oe , b] N - dSnudpyous, Koivtov 6é tov Kixépwvos adergov év
a a / A e
Tois vexpois ws TeOvNnKOTa Keipevoy d1arabely, 6
A 4 A a, a
Te Onpos HpxeTo TpeTECGar TH yvwoun, Kal TOY
, Ww t “ > f iN Snuapxov “Avvtos Mitwv patos éToAunoe TOV
, ,
Krwdiov es Sixny amdyev Biatwv, cal Toumnio
A f “A i A
ToANol cvvAAGov Ex TE TOD Onuwov Kal TOV TépLE
, bd e \ \ \ , ,
Tovewy. peo wv mpoekOwv Kat tov Krwdrov 166

CICERO, xxxtl. 5—XXXII. 3

in political life, unless one is right well on his guard when he engages himself in things external, and is resolved to participate only in the things themselves, and not in the feelings attendant upon them.

XXXITI. As for Clodius, after driving Cicero away he burned down his villas, and burned down his house, and erected on its site a temple to Liberty ; the rest of his property he offered for sale and had it proclaimed daily, but nobody would buy anything. Being therefore formidable to the patricians, and dragging along with him the people, who indulged in great boldness and effrontery, he assailed Pompey, attacking fiercely some of the arrangements made by him on his expedition. The disgrace which this brought upon Pompey led him to reproach himself for his abandonment of Cicero; and changing front he used every effort to effect Cicero’s return, and so did his friends. But since Clodius opposed himself to this, the senate decided to ratify no measure that came up in the mean time and to do no public busi- ness, unless Cicero should be permitted to return.! During the consulship of Lentulus,? however, when the disorder went on increasing, so that tribunes were wounded in the forum and Quintus the brother of Cicero lay unnoticed for dead among the slain,’ the people began to change their minds, and Annius Milo, one of the tribunes, first ventured to prosecute Clodius for violence, and many joined themselves to Pompey both from the people and from the surround- ing cities. With these Pompey came forth, drove

1 Cf. Cicero, pro Sest. 31, 67 f.; Plutarch, Pompey, xlix. 1-3.
2 57 B.C.
2 Cf. Cicero, pro Sest. 35, 75 f.

avactiaas €k THS ayopas emi thy Wihhov éxaret TOUS ToNiTas. Kal NEvyeTas pydémroTe pn dev ex ToT AUTNS opoppoauvns emiupnpicac bar TOY b7)- pov. 1 O€ GUYKANTOS dpe TOs TOV d7} ov éryparrev emauveOiva TAS TOAELS boar TOV Kuxé-pova Tapa 7 Thy puyny eOeparrevoar, Kal T1v oixiav avT@ Kat Tas emavras, as Krwdcsos dvebOapces, Téreat Onpoctow avactabjvat.
Karnet 6¢ Kixépov ExardendT@ pnt pera tiv 87k
puyny: Kab TOTAUTN Tas TONELS yapa Kal amoven
TOUS avOpam ous Tepl THY aT aVTNaW Elyev ooTe
TO pnOev v7r0 Kexépevos t Uo repov évdeéaTepov elvat
THs arnOeias. edhy yap aurov éml TOY @ Lov TID
'Iradiav pépoveay els THY 'Pomny eloreveryKely, OTrOU Kat Kpacoos, ex Opos QV avT@ po THS duyijs, TOTE ™ poOvpws amiyra Kab Stedvero, TO Tatot TomAte yapilopevos, ws Ereye, EnrwrH Tov Kexépwvos ovtt.
XXXIV. Xpovoyv & ov mworviw Stadimav Kal mapapurdtas atoénpovvta tov Krwdzsov érnrGe MeTAa TOAAOY TO KatritTwAL@, Kal TAS SnuapytKas
déXTOus, év ais avaypadai Tov dtwxnpévwv Hoar, améotrace Kat SvépOerpev. €yKaXovvTos O€ Tepl
TOUTOU TOU Kr.éiou, Tou o€ Kuxépwvos A€yorTos
WS Tapavopors EK TAT PLKLOY els Onpapxiav TAaper-Got, Kal KUpLOV ovdey elvat TOV TET pany fev ov ie
auton, Katov NYAVEKTNTE Kal aVTELTE, TOV pev
KA @érov ove érrawav, adda Kal dua xepaivev TOLS
TeTOALTEUMEVOLS, OeLVOV O€ Kal Biatov aTrodaivev
1 On the question of Cicero's recall.
2 Cf. Cicero, in Prsonem, 22, 52. |
3 Cf. Cicero, post red. in sen. 15, 39. |

Clodius from the forum, and summoned the citizens to the vote.! And it is said that the people never passed any vote with such unanimity. The senate, too, vying with the people, wrote letters of thanks to all the cities which had ministered to Cicero during his exile, and decreed that his house and his villas, which Clodius had destroyed, should be restored at the public cost.?

Thus Cicero came home in the sixteenth month after his exile; and so great was the joy of the cities and the eagerness of men to meet him that what was said by Cicero afterwards fell short of the truth. He said, namely, that Italy had taken him on her shoulders and carried him into Rome.? And there Crassus also, who was his enemy before his exile, now readily met him and was reconciled with him, to gratify his son Publius, as he said, who was an ardent admirer of Cicero.

XXXIV. After allowing only a short time to pass and watching for an opportunity when Clodius was absent from the city, Cicero went up with a great company to the capitol, and there tore away and destroyed the tablets of the tribunes, in which were the records of their administration. When Clodius brought charges against him for this and Cicero argued that it was illegal for Clodius to pass from the ranks of the patricians into the tribunate,* and that therefore none of his acts was valid, Cato was indignant and spoke against Cicero; not that he approved of Clodius, nay, he was actually displeased at his political course, but he set forth that it was a 4 Clodius had secured an adoption into a plebeian family in order to become a candidate for the tribuneship. Cf. Cicero, pro domo sua, 29, 77.

avaipedty Yn picacbat Soypatov Kal mpatewr TOTOUTOP THY a UYKANTOD, év ais elvat Kat tiv éavtov tov tept Kutpov cal Bufavtiov dsotxnouv. éx TovTov mpocéxpovoey 6 Kixépwv avt® mpoc- Kpovowy els ovdev eupaves 7 pochOobcay, aX’ WOTE TH diroppocvvyn ypnalat pos aAXAAOUS dL [Lav poTeE pov.

XXXV. Mera ratdta KiXwédtov pév adroxtivyvet Midov: cat diwxopuevos povov Kirépwva tape- oTHTAaTO GvYHyopov. 7 de Bovrn PoPnOeioa p71) KLVOUVEVOVTOS dvd pos évdoEou Kal Oupoedobs Tod

Midtwvos tapayn yévntar mept THY TONY, émre-tpewe Lloparnio TaVvTyy TE KAL TAS adXas Kploets BpaBedoat, Tapéyovta TH ToAEL Kal Tos StKa-arn plous dopaneray. exetvou dé THY aryopav ETL VUKTOS amo TOV aK pov meptraPovTos Tots oT pare
@Tas, 0 Miawy tov Kixépwva detaas pn mpos Thy owl anbeia diatapax dels Yetpov Ssaryor'- onTat, cuverrercer év popeio Kopiabevta 7 pos
Thy aryopav navy abel, a aype ov cuviacwy ol KpiTal
Kal mAnpovrat TO OtxaaTHpLov. O06 ov povov HW, Ws éorKen, ev omhous alapons, arra kal TO Neyer
peTa poBou Tpoonet, Kal ports ay ératoato}
TANXNOMEVOS KAL TPELOY ETL TOANOY UYOVOV AKBHV
Tov AOYoU Kal KaTdoTacLy AaBortos. Atxivviw
de |] Moupijva pevyovte dixny i3d Kdtwvos Bon-Oar, Kal Prdoripovpevos ‘Optyocov vmepBanreip evnpmeprjoavta, Jtépos ovdev aveTTAavaaTO THS vu-KTOS, @S UTO TOD apodpa ppovticat Kal dtaypumvnca Kaxwlels évdcéotepos avtod davnvat.
1 &y émavoato Graux with D (averavoaro M4): émravuuro.

170

CICERO, xxxiv, 2-Xxxv. 3

strange and violent measure for the senate to vote
the abrogation of so many acts and decrees, among which were those for his own administration in Cyprus and Byzantium. This led to an antagonism between him and Cicero which came to no open manifestation,
but made their friendly treatment of one another less marked.

XXXV. After this Clodius was killed by Milo;} and Milo, being prosecuted for murder, engaged Cicero as his advocate. But the senate was afraid that at the trial of Milo, who was a man of repute and high spirit, there might be a disturbance in the city, and therefore intrusted the superintendence of this and the other trials to Pompey, who was to furnish security for the city and the courts of jus- tice. So Pompey, while it was still night, posted his soldiers on the heights so as to command the forum, and Milo, fearing that Cicero might be disturbed at the unusual sight and conduct his case less success- fully, persuaded him to be brought in a litter to the forum and to wait there quietly until the jurors assembled and the court-room was filled. Now Cicero, as it would seem, was not only without courage under arms, but also felt fear when he began to speak, and in many trials he hardly ceased quivering and trem- bling after his eloquence had become high and sus- tained. When he was to plead for Licinius Murena in a case brought against him by Cato, and was ambitious to surpass Hortensius, who had made a successful plea, he took no rest at all during the night before, so that his lack of sleep and his great anxiety did him harm, and he was thought inferior

1 Early in 52 8.c. For this year Pompey had been made sole consul, 171

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 tore O ow ért THv TOU Midwvos dixny éx TOD
popetou ™ poeOov Kab Jeacapevos TOV Topm jiov ave KabeSoperov G ooTep ev oTpatomese, Kal KUKA@ TA OT Aa TepihaTrovTa THY ayopay, ouvex On Kal Ors evnpEato TOU oyou, Kpadarvomevos TO copa Kab tHv dhovnv évucyopevos, avtov Tod Midwvos evOapo@s Kai avdpeiws TaptaTapévou
7 ayove kal Kkopnv Opéra. Kai petaBanreiv écOijta hatav atakiwcavtos: bTEp ovy HKioTa doxel avvaitioy avT@ yevécbar Ths Katadixns.
aX’ 6 ye Kixépwy dca tadta didrétaipos madXov
H detdos &do£ev eivat.
XXXVI. Tevetat 6€ cat Tov tepéwv obs A’ryou-pas “Pwpaios xaXovawv, avtt Kpdacov tov véov pera THY eV TdpOous avTov TEAEUTID. elra KA1P@
haxov TOV emapXeay Kedtxiav Kat OTOATOV OTAL-TOV puptov Kal dtoyiriwv, immréwv Be Ova XerLeov éEaxootwy, E€TNEUTE, mpoaray Gey aUuT® Kal Ta
mepl Karmadoxiay ‘A proBaplavy To Bactret
2 gira Kab meiOjvia mapacxeiv. TavuTa TE 57) Tap-€OT1}TATO Kal TUVi}ppoaev a PeMT TOs arEp TONE-pov, TOUS TE Kidceas op@v [pos TO THap@txov 879
TTA ja ‘Pwpaiwv Kat Tov év Lupia VEWTEPLE HOV EMNPMEVOUS KATETPAUVEV NUEPWS ApYwv. Kal 6@pa pev ove TOV Bactrhéwy SeddvTwY Eafe, Settvwr dé TOUS ema pXeKovs auAKEV" aVTOS dé kal? 7 LE pap TOUS xaplevTas dvedapSavev € EO TLAT EO LY Ov TONV-
3 Tees, arr’ erevdepios. 48 olKia Oupwpov ovK elyev, 0V0 avtTos WhO KaTaxelipevos br’ ovdeEVES, arr’ Ewlev Ext@s 7) TeptmaTaY Tpo Tov dwpuaTiov Tous aamalopévous edeEtovTO. AéyeTar bé prjTe 172

CICERO, xxxv. 4—xxxvi. 3

to himself in his plea. And so at this time, when he came out of his litter to plead Milo’s cause and saw Pompey stationed on the heights as in a camp, and arms flashing all around the forum, he was confounded and could scarcely begin his speech, for his body quivered and his voice faltered; whereas Milo showed the good courage of a brave man at the trial and had not deigned to let his hair go untrimmed or to change his attire to a dark one; and this seems most of all to have contributed to his condemnation. However, Cicero’s behaviour led men to think him devoted to his friends rather than cowardly. XXXVI. He became also one of the priests whom the Romans call Augurs, in place of the younger Crassus, who had died among the Parthians.!. Then the lot gave him Cilicia as his province, with an army of twelve thousand men-at-arms and twenty-six hundred horsemen, and he set sail,? with instructions to keep Cappadocia friendly and obedient to King Ariobarzanes. This he accomplished and arranged satisfactorily without war, and seeing that the Cili- cians, in view of the Parthian disaster to the Romans and the uprising in Syria, were in an agitated state, he pacified them by his mild government. Gifts he would not receive, not even when the kings offered them, and he relieved the provincials from the expense of entertainments; but he himself daily re- ceived men of pleasing accomplishments at banquets which were not expensive, although generous. His house, too, had no door-keeper, nor did anyone ever see him lying a-bed, but early in the morning he would stand or walk in front of his chamber and re- ceive those who came to pay him their respects. It is

1 Tn 53 B.o, See the Crassus, chapter xxv. cul Gotan) bes ae

es pe fe / ea tars) | a f paBdos aixicacbat tiva pit éoOjta Tepicxicar 4 / e >’ 3 aA A a wn
pnte Braohynputav ur opyjns 7 Enutas mpoaBanreiv 9 ef ’ ‘ \ \ le) / ue? UBpewv. avevpwv b€ TodArdAA TOV Snpociwy
KEKNEMPEVA TAS TE TOAELS EVTFOPOUS ETOLNGE, Kal
TOUS aTroTivovTas ovdév TOUTOV TAEioy TabdvTas 4 émitipous dtepvrAakev. rato dé Kal mrodéuou,
ca) >
AnoTas TOY TEpl TOY 'Apavoy oiKOvYTOY TpEYa-pevos’ €h ® Kal avTOKpdTwWP UTO TOV oTpaTLWan 3 10 K , 1 oe “A er o Tav avnyopevOn. Kastrtouv! 6€ tod propos Seo-
a ‘ / pévov TrapodreEls avT@ Tpos Tiva Oéav eis ‘Pwopny
éx Kidtxlas atroatetAat, xadrAwriComevos emt Tols Tem paypevors ypade Tpos AUTOV OUVK Eivat TAp-Oar ‘y Kidixias medevyévar yap eis Kapi drew ev a mepevyevar yap ets Kapiay
b wv fal f
ayavakTovaas OTL ovat woNEmoUVTAL, TaYTwY
, f ? n

elpnunyv éyovTwy. mréwv O ato THs étapyias

a \ e , / A be) f Tovto pev ‘Pod mpocécye, TodTo & 'AOnvats
b] / Vv / a) / ca)
évoréeTpipev dopevos 100m Tov Tarar SraTpiBov.
avopdat 6€ Tols TMpwWTOLS amo TraLoeias TUYyEVOpevos Kal TOUS TOTE diAous Kal curjOers doTacapevos Kal Ta mpérovta Oavpacbels trod Tis “EAAdOos els THY TOALY eTraVIADEY, 7}5n TOV Mpa-
\ “A yuaTwVY WaTEp VT pr€eymovns apioTapéevwy eTrt Tov éupvrtoy modELOv.
s \ in “ XXXVIT. “Ev pev ody tH BovrH Wndilopévwv
’ “A / eo Kn 4 a
avT@ OpiapBov Adwov av &pyn wapaxorovOjaoa
, 4
Kaicaps OpiapBevovtt cupBacewr yevopévor:
/ \

idta 5€ cuveBovrAeve TOhAA prev Kaicapt ypddwr,

1 Ka:Afov Coraés, Bekker, and Graux, after Xylander: KexiAlou.
174

CICERO, xxxvi. 3-xxxvit. r

said, moreover, that he never ordered any man to be chastised with rods or to have his raiment torn from him, and that he never inflicted angry abuse or con- tumelious punishments. He discovered that much of the publie property had been embezzled, and by restoring it he made the cities well-to-do, and men who made restitution he maintained in their civil rights without further penalties. He engaged in war, too, and routed the robbers who made their homes on Mount Amanus;! and for this he was actually saluted by his soldiers as Imperator. When Caelius the orator asked Cicero to send him panthers from Cilicia for a certain spectacle at Rome, Cicero, pluming himself upon his exploits, wrote to him that there were no panthers in Cilicia; for they had fled to Caria in indignation because they alone were warred upon, while everything else enjoyed peace.? On his voyage back from his province he first touched at Rhodes, and then gladly spent some time at Athens in fond remembrance of his old pursuits in that place. Then, after associating with men who were foremost for their learning, and after greeting his old-time friends and intimates, and after receiving from Greece the tokens of admiration that were his due, he returned to Rome,’ where a violent inflamma- tion, as it were, was already forcing matters on towards the civil war.

XXXVII. Accordingly, when the senators were voting him a triumph, he said he would more gladly follow in Caesar’s triumphal procession if matters could be settled ; and privately he gave much advice

+ Cf. Cicero, ad fam. ii. 10, 2 f.
Ad fame uy 1,2.
3 January 4, 49 B.o. Cf. ad fum. xvi. 11, 2f.
175

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 aA 4 (of.
modrka 8 avtov Iloumrntov deduevos, mpaivev ExaTepov Kal Tapapvlovpevos. ws 0 Hy avijxecta kat Katoapos érepyopévou Llopmrnios ovx Epeuvev, ANNA META TOAKOY Kal ayaday avdpav THY TOW
4 lal lel
éEéduTre, TavTns pev aTreAetpOn THs huyis o Kuxé-
/ A pov, édoke 6€ Kaicaps tpoctiPecOar. Kai dros
9 A , . ¢€ \ pyaar b f €OTL TH yYwuUN TOAAG pimtacbets eT apdoTtepa kai OvoTrabnaas. ypader yap év tais émictoXais A i ef
diatropety ToTépwoe xXp1 TpemecGat, Ilopmniov
\ 5 \ \ ef \ \ t 2
prev Evdokov Kat Kadynv vToGecwv mpos TOY TOAE-
/ A
pov Eyovtos, Katcapos 8 apetvoy tots moaypace Vpwpévou KaL padrov éEavTOY Kal Tovs didous
, ee > \ a f \ ” \
awlovtos, wat évew pev dy huyn, py eves O€ \ A td 4 4 \ wn , mpos by duyyn. TpeBatiov dé, tivds Tov Kaicapos
e f be 3 \ ef a a 7
éraipwv, yparpavtos émiatoAny ott Kaicap oletat
A td A 3 \ 9 tf 3 ¢ A Sey partota péev avtoy ée€eTralerGar pel avtod
\ A ’ ? ,) > 9 , \
Kal tov édmidwy perexev, eb & avadvetar dia
aA ¢ 4 a
yipas, ets THY EdAAdba Pabdilery Kaxel xaOnpevov Hovyiay ayew exmob@v apdotépors yevopevor,
£ i“ 5
Javuacas o Kixépwy ots Kaicap avtos ov éypa-
, \ \
ev, aTrexpivato mpos opynv ws ovdey avat.ov
a , XN a

ampakes TOV TeTONITEVLEVWOY. TA Lev OdY év Tals ETLTTONALS YEeypappeéeva TOLADTA eoTL.
XXXVIIL. Tov 5é€ Kaicapos ets 1 8npiav drapavtos, evdus ws Tlopajiov érdevce: xa ois
f v
pev GArAros agpEevors Of0n, Katov & adtov idav idSta moda KaTepéeugheto Lloumrniw wpocbépevor a \ A ral
auT@ bev yap ovyl Kadws Exe éyxaTaXdirely hv 176

CICERO, xxxvi. 1-xxxvin. 1

to Caesar by letter, and much to Pompey in person by way of personal entreaty, trying to mollify and pacify each of them. But when things were past healing, and Caesar was advancing upon the city, and Pompey did not stay there, but abandoned the city in the company of many good men, Cicero did not take part in this flight, and was thought to be attach- ing himself to Caesar. And it is clear that his judge- ment drew him strengly in both directions and that he was in distress. For he writes in his letters that he knew not which way he ought to turn, since Pompey had honourable and good grounds for going to war, while Caesar managed matters better and had more ability to save himself and _ his friends; he therefore knew from whom he should flee, but not to whom he should flee.! And when Trebatius, one of the companions of Caesar, wrote him a letter stating that Caesar thought he ought above all things to range himself on his side and share his hopes, but that if he declined to do this by reason of his age, he ought to go to Greece and take up a quiet life there out of the way of both, Cicero was amazed that Caesar him- self did not write, and replied in a passion that he would do nothing unworthy of his political career. Such, then, is the purport of his letters.

XXXVIIT. But when Caesar set out for Spain, Cicero at once sailed to Pompey.? The rest of Pompey’s followers were glad to see him, but when Cato saw him, he privately blamed him much for attaching himself to Pompey. In his own case, Cato said, it was not honourable to abandon the 1 Ego vero quem fugiam habeo, quem sequar non habeo (ad Ate. viii. 7, 2).
2 In April, 49 B.c., Caesar set out for Spain, and in June Cicero sailed for Greece.
177

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Sees oe? a ch a , , ? a \ aw apyis eiXeTo THs Tworitelas Taku, éxeivoy be , , “A / \ ww , ’
VPNTLLWTEPOV OVTAa TH TAaTpLOL Kai TOS dirots El

lod \ \ A b]
pévey loos Exel Thos TO aTOBaivov npuoleTo, KAT
> , \ +09 b] 3’ / /
ovdéva Aoyiapov ovd €E& avayKns TodEmLOV YyeEYo-
/ , ,
véevat Kaicapte kal tocovtov peOéEovta Kivdvvou devp KEL.
Lg , \ a r , ’ ‘ e sf
Odrot Te 67 Tov Kixépwvos avéotpedov oi Né6yot
\ , \ , bf A a
THY YVOUNV, Kal TO péeya pnoev avT@ yYpnoOat
\
Tloprniov. aittos & tv adtos ovK apvovpevos
, , \ A oh
petapéerecOar, dravpilov € Tob Wopmniov thy
‘ \ ,
Tapackevny Kat Tpos TA BovrevuaTta SvcKonral-
, \ a“ ,
VWV UTOVAWS, KAL TOU TAPAaTKwWITELY TL Kal Neve
, > ‘ , b] b f 3 >
VaApPlev Els TOUS TUMLpLAYOUS OVK ATEYOMEVOS, GAN
N \ y , SAN wl A
QUTOS fev AYEAATTOS aEl TEptioy ev TO aTPATO-6 / ,
Tédw Kal cKVOpwTrOS, ETEpOLS O€ Tapévov yédAwTaA \ fi / N \ f 5] , pndev Seopévars. BEérXTLOV S€ Kal TOUTwWY bALya
, / , 4 3 ?
wapabecba:. Aopitiov toivuy advOpwrrov eis Tab
\ YU \ /
HYEMOVLKNY AYOVTOS OV TrOAELLKOV Kal A€YOVTOS WS
) \ \ , Bae, \ , oT’ 3% €TLELKNS TOV TPOTTOV éoTl Kal cwdporv, ‘Ti od», 4 un
eimev, “ouK eTLTpOTOY ALTO Tols TéeXVOLS hUAdC-> 9 dé f S / \ , geus; émaivouvTwy 6€ Tivav Mcodavnv tov Aé-a 9 a f i aB.ov, 05 iv €v TO TTpaToTéd@ TEKTOVOY ETrap-
e * , ¢ , \ ,
yos, ws ev TapauvOncatto “Podiovs tov cTtddov
, ¢€ , b M2
atoBanrovtas, “ Hdtxop,” etter, “ayadov éott TO NX f 4 33 ,
Tpatxov éyew émapyov. Kaicapos &€ xatop-

A \ A , A
Jodvtos Ta TELTTA Kai TPGTOV TWA TOXOpPKOUY-
b] / , N > 4 f
tos autous, AévTA@ pev etmovte trurv@avecOas 178

&é

CICERO, xxxvmi. 1-4

line of public policy which he had chosen from the beginning; but Cicero, though he was of more service to his country and his friends if he remained at home without taking sides and accommodated himself to the issue of events, without any reason and under no compulsion had made himself an enemy of Caesar, and had come thither to share in their great danger.

By these words the purpose of Cicero was upset, as well as by the fact that Pompey made no great use of him. But he was himself to blame for this, since he made no denial that he was sorry he had come, made light of Pompey's preparations and showed a lurking displeasure at his plans, and did not refrain from jests and witty remarks about his comrades in arms; nay, although he himself always went about in the camp without a smile and scowling, still he made others laugh in spite of themselves. And it will be well to give a few instances of this also. When Domitius, then, was advancing to a post of command a man who was no soldier, with the remark that he was gentle in his disposition and prudent, "Why, then," said Cicero, "do you not keep him as a guardian of your children?" And when certain ones were praising Theophanes the Lesbian, who was prefect of engineers in the camp, because he had given excellent consolation to the Rhodians on the loss of their fleet, ""What a great blessing it is,' said Cicero, "to have a Greek as prefect!"' Again, when Caesar was successful for the most part and in a way was laying siege to them,! Lentulus said he had heard

1 At Dyrrhachium. See the Caesar, xxxix.; Caesar, B.C. iii. 41-55,

179

\ s \ ‘ / 3 l4
otuyvovs evar tovs Kaioapos didous, amexpt-
: oA ’ \ } n K , 33 M
5 vaTo éyets avtous ducvoety Kaicapt. Map-/ be 4 b ’ , \ \
kiov 6€ tevos HKovtos é& “Itadtas veworti Kal Aéyoutos ev ‘POun hyunv éwixpatety ws ToALOp-n as wR. 27 ”» 4 Prete:
xotto Llopmnios, Kit é&émXevcas,” elrev, “iva TOUTO mMiaTevaons autos Peacdpevos;” peta dé
, e a
Thy HTTav Novviov pev evtrovtos OTe Set ypnotas
/ e \ \ a éAmidas exe, EwTa yap aeTous év TO aTpaTo-A of a aA >
méom tov Jloumniov rAeretdOar, “Kards av,
” ‘“ f ’ ae. A ”
6 edn, “ wapyvets, Eb KoOLOLS ETTOAELODMEV. Aa-Benvod b€ pavtetats tic loxvptfopévou Kat rée 8 a , Q Il Po 6s b] a 39
yovTos ws det TepiyevécOat Lloumniov, ‘‘ Ovxour, u , ig 7 fad
Edn, “oTpaTnynpate TOUT XpwpmeEvol vOV aTroPe-BAnKkapev TO oTpaTOTEboV.”
\ / >
r > a XXXIX. “AANA yap yevouévns THs Kata Pap-
e , . canov payns, 5 ov petéecyve Ot appwortiar, Kal of f e
Ilourniov duyovtos, o uev Katwv cal otpatevya ouyvov é€v Avppayim Kal otoXov éywv péyav
a f a a
éxetvov nEiou oTpaTnyely KATA vomov Kal TO THS uUTaTteias akiwpya mpovyovta. StwOovpevos Oé
\ ’ \ & / ‘\ <4 7 \ Thv apxnv o Kixépwv Kat dros hevywv To
, \ > A
avaTpateverbat tap oddev Oev avaipeOhvat,
of a , \ a / ,
2 Iloumniov tov véov Kai Tav dirwv mpodorny
i \

aToKanovvtoy Kai ta Elpn oracapdvor, ef py K , 3 \ Xr ’ aN \ } aA 3 \ aTwV évoTas moArts adeireTo Kal dijKxev avTov ék Tov otpatoTébov. Katacy@v 8 eis Bpevte-
’ a / ,
otov evtavla cuétpthe, Kaicapa mrepipévev BpadSvvovta Sta tas év ’Acta Kxal wept Alyutrrov
3 , 3 ‘ 3 > [A 4 lA
3 acxyoNlas. eres & ets Tapavta xadwppiopévos 180

CICERO, xxxvii. 4-xxXxIx. 3

that Caesar’s friends were gloomy, to which Cicero replied: “You mean that they are ill-disposed to Caesar.’ And when a certain Marcius, who had recently come from Italy, spoke of a report which prevailed in Rome that Pompey was_ besieged, “ And then,’ said Cicero, “did you sail off that you might see with your own eyes and believe?” Again, after the defeat, when Nonnius said they ought to have good hopes, since seven eagles were left in the camp of Pompey, ‘ Your advice would be good,” said Cicero, “if we were at war with jackdaws.” And when Labienus, insisting on certain oracles, said that Pompey must prevail, “ Yes,” said Cicero, “this is the generalship that has now cost us our camp.”

XAXIX. However, after the battle at Pharsalus,! in which Cicero took no part because of illness, had been fought, and Pompey was in flight, Cato, who had a considerable army aud a large fleet at Dyr- rhachium, asked Cicero to take the command in accordance with custom and because of his superior consular rank. But Cicero rejected the command and was altogether averse to sharing in the cam- paign, whereupon he came near being killed; for the young Pompey and his friends called him a traitor and drew their swords upon him, and that would have been the end of him had not Cato inter- posed and with difficulty rescued him and sent him away from the camp.2 So Cicero put in at Brun- disium and tarried there, waiting for Caesar, who was delayed by his affairs in Asia and Egypt. But when word was brought that Caesar had landed at

1 In August, 48 B.c.
2 Cf. Cato the Younger, lv. 3.
VOL. VII, G 181

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

annyyédreTo Kal Teoh Teptiov éxeibev eis Bpev-

TEGLOY, WPILnoe TPOS avTOV, Ov Tdvu pev ov SugEATLS, aidoupevos 5€ TOANK@Y Ta.povT@v avdpos exOpov Kat K paTouvTos Aap Bavew melpav. ou
pny edena ev avT@ mpagat Te map afiav i] elmrety.
Oo yap Kaicap, as elev auTov TOD po Toy arAXov aTravT@vra, Karten Kal nowucaTo Kal SlaNEYOMEVOS LOVH TUXVOV aTAdiwY OdOV TpPOnA-Jev. éx a: TOUTOU SteTerEL TLL@Y Kal prog povov-pevos, MaTE Kal yparpavte oryov eyKa cov Ka-TWVOS aytiypadpev TOV TE AOYOY avTOU Kat TOV
Biov as Hadtora TO Tlepuxdéous. €oikoTa Kal
Onpapevous eT aLvely. O pev ov Kure pwvos Aoyos Katwy, o 6¢ Kaicapos ’Avtixatwv éruyéypanrar.
AevyeTat dé xat Koiytov Auyapiou Sixny pev-‘YOVTOS OTL TOV Kaicapos TONE LLWY els evyeyovet, Kat Kixépovos auT@ BonOodvtos, etmety Tov Kaicapa ™ pos TOUS pirous: ed I K@AVEL ola
xpovou Kirépwvos axodoas AeyovTos, ere madnat KEK PLT QL Tmovnpos 0 avnp* Kal TONELLOS 5” émel O° apEapevos Aéyeu 0 Kixépwy UTEpp ues éxivet Kal
mpovBaiwev avT@ Tabet Te TOLKLAOS Kab Xapire davpaaros o oO oyos, TOANAS pev lévat Xpoas eTL
Tov mpoowTrouv Tov Kaicapa, tacas 5é THs Wuxis
T PET OMEVOV TpoTras KATASNAOV elva, TENS O€ TOY
KaTa Pdpcarov aapevou Tod prTopos ayavoy extra ryevopuevov Tivax Ojvar TO copa Kal THIS XELpPOS éxBarety via Tov Ypapparetwv. TOV youv advOpwirov améduce THS aitias BeSiacpévos.
? 6 avho Bekker, after Schaefer: arha.
182
88]

CICERO, xxxtx. 3-6

Tarentum! and was coming round by land from there to Brundisium, Cicero hastened to meet him, being not altogether despondent, but feeling shame to test in the presence of many witnesses the temper of a man who was an enemy and victorious.
However, there was no need that he should do or say anything unworthy of himself. For Caesar, when he saw him approaching far in advance of the rest, got down and embraced him and journeyed on for many furlongs conversing with him alone. And after this he continued to show him honour and kindness, so that in his reply to the encomium upon Cato which Cicero wrote he praised Cicero's eloquence and his life, as most resembling that of Pericles and Theramenes. Now, the discourse of Cicero was entitled "Cato," and that of Caesar " Anti-Cato."

It is said also that when Quintus Ligarius was under prosecution because he had been one of the enemies of Caesar, and Cicero was his advocate, Caesar said to his friends: " What is to prevent our hearing a speech from Cicero after all this while, since Ligarius has long been adjudged a villain and an enemy?' But when Cicero had begun to speak and was moving his hearers beyond measure, and his speech, as it proceeded, showed varying pathos and amazing grace, Caesar's face often changed colour and it was manifest that all the emotions of his soul were stirred ; and at last, wlien the orator touched upon the struggles at Pharsalus,? he was so greatly affected that his body shook and he dropped from his hand some of his documents. At any rate he acquitted Ligarius under compulsion.

1 In September, 47 B.c 2 Cf. pro Ligurio, 9, 27 f.

XL. 'Ex tovtov Kixépwr, ets povapyiav tijs TOMLTELAS pelerTaons, ab épevos TOU Ta KoLWa Tparrew eoxorale Tous Bovropévors ptrooopety TOV VED, Kab axedor € ex Ths 70s TOUTOUS ouVn-Ocias, evyevertatovs Kal TpwTovs dvTas, avdts
2 loyvev év TH ToOAEL péytaTov. auvT@d dS Epyov pev WV TO TOUS prroo ogous OUVTEAELY diadoryous Kal petadpatery, Kat TOV dtarextixov 1) phuotkav OvOLAaTwWY ExaTTOV els 'Popaixny peta Bandrewv duanextov? éxetvos yap €atwv, ws hac, o Kal THY davtaciav Kal TV cuycatabeaw Kab THY eT OX) Kat THY KaTaryypu, & Ett O€ TO ATOMOP, TO dpepés, TO KEvor, Gdha TE TOAAA TOV TOLOUT@Y é€ovopdoas TP@TOS i) pada 'Popaiors, Ta pev petagopais, Ta © olxeroTno tv arrAaLs Ye pupa
3 Kal T poon'yopa ENXavyo dpevos. TH O€ TPOS THY Toinav evxoia Trailov éXpijto. éyerau Yap, omnvira puety Tpos TO TOLOVTOV, THS vuKTOS en TOLELY TEVTAKOTIA.

To pev ody TAelo Tov TOU Xpovou TovToU mepl TodcKdov év Xeptous auTou Oud-yor éypade T pos TOUS pirous Aaéptov Bio ony, €LTE Tailor, Os €00s elyev, €10' vo dtAoTiuias OTAapy@v TpOS TY TrodTelay Kal adnuovav toils KabecTact.
4 omaviws & eis dotu Oepateias évera tod Kat-

TAPOS KATHEL, KAL TPWTOS HV TOV TUVAyopEeVOVYTMY
Tals TLuals Kal NEyELY GEt TL KALVOY Eis TOY Avdpa
Kal T& TpaTTopeva PtroTipmovupevwr. oldv éote
1 In Latin, respectively, visum (conceptton), assensio(assent), assensionis retentio (withholding of assent), comprehensio (perception), individuum (atom), vacuum (void); ‘‘ameres”

184

CICERO, xu. 1-4

XL. After this, when the government had been changed to a monarchy, Cicero abstained from public affairs and devoted his time to those of the young men who wished to study philosophy, and mainly from his intimacy with these, since they were of the highest birth and standing, he was once more very influential in the state. He made it his business also to compose and translate philosophical dialogues, and to render into Latin the several terms of dialectics and natural philosophy; for he it was, as they say, who first, or principally, provided Latin names for “ phantasia,”’ “synkatathesis,” ‘“epokhe,’ and “katalepsis,” as well as for ‘“ atomon,”’ “ameres,’ “kenon,’! and many others like these, contriving partly by metaphors and partly by new and fitting terms to make them intelligible and familiar. His facility in verse-making, too, he em- ployed to divert himself. It is said, indeed, that when he applied himself to such work, he would make five hundred verses in a night.

During this time, then, he lived for the most part at his country-seat in Tusculum, and he used te write to his friends that he was living the life of Laertes,? either jesting, as was his wont, or because his ambition filled him with a desire for public activity and made him dissatisfied with the turn things had taken. He rarely went down to the city, and then only to pay court to Caesar, and he was foremost among those who advocated Caesar’s honours and were eager to be ever saying something new about him and his measures. Of this sort is (indivisible), with its Latin equivalent, does not occur in the extant works of Cicero (Gudeman), 2 Cf. Odyssey, i. 189 ff.

185

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Y \ \ A of. \ > ¢ A
kal To wept Tov Iloumniou AeyOev etxovwv, as
? 4 \ , e a oe ek
avnpnuevas Kal kataBeBrnpévas 0 Kaicap éxé-ANevoeyv avactabhvar' Kai aveatadbnaav. &Epn yap e rr la 4 / A tg a 0 Kixépwv ote tavtn 7H ptrtavOpwria Kaicap of / \ a tous pev Lloumnyiov tatnos, tous 8 avtov m7-yvuaw avoptayTas.

S ,
XLT. Acavoovpevos 8, ws A€yeTat, THY TaTpLOV istopiav ypabyn meptrkaBelv Kat TOANA ouppi_as aw em a“ \ ec \ / ,
tav EXAAnWUKwY KaL OXWS TOUS GUYNYMEVOUS Xo-
b “~ Q / b] Cal / aw YOUS AUT@ KAL pvOous éevravGa Tpevat, TOAXOLS
a ,
pev Onpcatots, TONS 6 tdLots KaTEANPON Tpa-yuactw aBovrrTos Kal maQectwv, @v avlatpeta
a a a a \ \ doxel TWAELaTA TUUBHVAL. TWP@TOV péev yap aTe-
, \ a / ’ \ e 3
Téuwato thy yuvaica Tepertiay apernOels tar
auTAS Tapa Tov ToAEMOV, WaTE KaL TOV avay-/ >? / > \ ’ fo) \ + 2
kalwv épodiwy évdens atootadjnvar kat und bre
A 9 4, wn
Katihpev avOts ets “Iradtay tuyeiv evyvopovos.
‘See \ \ ’ 9 al b B / 6 /
avtTn pev yap ovk AAOev, ev Bpevteciw dvatpi-Bovtos avtov ToAvy Xpovov, épyopnevn Se TH Ov-
? e / yaTpl, TaccioKyn véa, ToTavTnY odoVv, Ov TOUT
,
mpémovgay, OU Xopnyiay mapéoyev, adda Kal Thy oixiay TO Kiképwvte TavTwy Epnpov Kal Kevipy
amederEev emt TmodXois obAnpact Kal peyarots.
avTat yap elo at rEeyouevat THS StacTacews eumpeméatata, mpopaces. tH bé€ Tepevtia xal
li \ /
TaUTas apvovpéevn NapTrpaV ETroLnoe THY aTONO-
“ >
ylav autos éxeivos eT ov TorXUY Xpdvoy yas
\ G , TwapOévov, ws pev 1 Tepevtia xatepnurter, épwte a ce G \ if uy a , ’ / THs @pas, ws b6é Tipwy o tov Kixépwvos atrerev-186 CICERO, xv. 4-XLt. 3

what he said about the statues of Pompey. These Caesar ordered to be set up again after they had been thrown down and taken away; and they were set up again. What Cicero said was that by this act of generosity Caesar did indeed set up the statues of Pompey, but firmly planted his own also.

XLI. He purposed, as we are told, to write a comprehensive history of his native country, com- bining with it many Greek details, and introducing there all the tales and myths which he had col- lected ; but he was prevented by many public affairs which were contrary to his wishes, and by many private troubles, most of which seem to have been of his own choosing. For in the first place he divorced his wife Terentia because he had been neg- lected by her during the war, so that he set out in lack of the necessary means for his journey, and even when he came back again to Italy did not find her considerate of him. For she did not come to him herself, although he tarried a long time at aeabaibetent, and wiicn her daughter, a young girl,} made the long journey thither, she supplied her with no fitting escort and with no means; nay, she actually stripped and emptied Cicero's house of all that it contained, besides incurring many large debts. These, indeed, are the most plausible reasons given for the divorce. Terentia, however, denied that these were the reasons, and Cicero him- self made her defence a telling one by marrying shortly afterwards a maiden.2. This he did, as Terentia asserted, out of love for her youthful beauty; but as Tiro, Cicero's freedman, has written,

1 Tullia was old enough to have lost her first husband and married a second (§ 5). 2 Publilia, of patrician family.

Jepos yeypaper, evTopias évexev pos Suadvow

4 Saveiwr. nv ap a mais opodpa Wrovaia, Kal THY OUclaY avTis o Kixépwv év miote: kAnpoVvdjLos aTronerp Geis _Svepvrar rev. _Opethov dé Tohhas pupiadas t UTO TOV pirav Kal oixetov emetaOn THY Taioa yar Tap nAiKiav Kal Tovs daverotas 882
amanr.aFar Tots éxeivns Ypyoduevov. "Avtwrios dé TOU yapou pynabeis év Tais Tpos tous Didi7-TLKOUS dvTuypapais exPanetv avrov pyoe yuvatKa
Tap 7 7 eyipace XapLevtws apa TV olxouplay OS
AMpakKTOUV Kal (GOT patEevTOU TAPATKON TOV TOU
5 Kixépwvos. ynpavtt & avt@ pet ov TodvY Ypo-vov n Ouvyarnp an éOave TiKTovod mapa Mévtrw*
TOUTED yap éyapunOn pera THY [letowvos TOU 7™po-TEpou avdpos TENEUTHD. Kat auvndOov ev em Thy Tapauvliay TO Kuxépove mavtay ober OL diro! Bapéws 8 ayav hveyxe TO cvpBeBnKOs, Mate Kal THY yaunOcioay aToTépWac bat doEacay noOnvar TH TEeAEUTH THS TuAXLas.
XLII. Ta pev ody kat oixov ottws elye TO Kixépwm. ths 8 émt Katcapa, TUVLT TAPLED)S

mpakews ou HETETXE, KaiTrep ayy eTa‘pos év Tots padiara, Bpovtov kat Bapvveo Bat TQ TapovTa.
Kal Ta TWadat TOGciY TpaypaTta SoKaY ws ETEPOS ovéeis, adr Edercay of dvdpes avdtod THD TE puow @s evoea TONS, TOV TE (xpovov, ey @ Kat Tas eppopever Tatars puoeow emihetTel TO Oap-
2 peitv. ws 6 ovv em ET PAKTO TOLS TEL Bpobrov Kal
Kdootov 70 épyov cat tov Kaicapos pirov ovu-CTALMEVWY ETL TOUS avdpas avdis Av d€05 éuduAlots
ToAgwols TepiTmeTH yevéoOar Thy TwortLv, ’Avto-1 gfro: Graux, after Volkmann: g:Adgopor.

to get means for the payment of his debts. For the girl was very wealthy, and Cicero had been left her trustee and had charge of her property. So since he owed many tens of thousands he was persuaded by his friends and relatives to marry the girl, old as he was, and to get rid of his creditors by using her money. But Antony, who spoke of the marriage in his replies to Cicero’s Philippics, says that he cast out of doors the wife with whom he had grown old, and at the same time makes witty jibes upon the stay-at-home habits of Cicero, who was, he said, unfit for business or military service. Not long after Cicero’s marriage his daughter died in child-birth at the house of Lentulus, to whom she had been mar- ried after the death of Piso, her former husband. His friends came together from all quarters to comfort Cicero; but his grief at his misfortune was excessive, so that he actually divorced the wife he had wedded, because she was thought to be pleased at the death of Tullia.

XLII. Such, then, were Cicero’s domestic affairs. But in the design that was forming against Caesar he took no part, although he was one of the closest companions of Brutus and was thought to be dis- tressed at the present and to long for the old state of affairs more than anybody else. But the con- spirators feared his natural disposition as_ being deficient in daring, and his time of life, in which courage fails the strongest natures. And so, when the deed had been accomplished by the partisans of Brutus and Cassius,! and the friends of Caesar were combining against the perpetrators of it, and it was feared that the city would again be plunged into civil

1 On the Ides of March, 44 B.c.

\ e , N \ r \ vos pev viratevwy thy BovrANVY auvnyaye Kal
i / \ e / y U \ \
Bpaxéa diehéyvOn rept opovoias, Kexépwv 5é Toda
\
mpos Tov Katpov otKeiws StehOwv Emetce THY

, ?
aguykrAntov ‘“AOnvaiovs pipnoapevny apynotiav
a SN , f A \ A Tov emt Katoape Wndicac@ai, veipat Sé Tots mept Kaactov cai Bpovtov érapyias. éaye 5é
f / +Q? f \ a Spans \ > 4?
TOUTW@Y TEADS OVOEV. 0 yap SHwOS AUTOS peEV ad
a“ s éavTov mpos oixtov é€ayOeis ws ede TOV vExpoV
9 , > 9 a ry , \ \ \
€xxoptlopevov 6.’ ayopas, “Avtwrtov 6€ Kal tH
A ~ vA
éoOita SetEavtos autois atwatos KaTaT Newry Kal KEeKompevny TaVvTn Tols Etheowv, expavévtes vTr
opyns €v ayopa Cytnaw émowovvtTo Tov avopar, kal mup éxovtes emt Tas otxtas EOeov ws Uddwovtes. ot b€ TovUTOV pev TH TpoTedvAdyOar
4 \ , e / \ \ \
duéhuyov tov Kivduvoy, éTépous dé ToAXOVS Kal
/ A ? ‘4 N ‘
beydXous Tpocdoxavtes €EE€LTOV THY TOLD.
r = e 3 ~
XLIII. Evéds otv o “Avtwvios érfpto, Kai
A 9 ‘ e la)
Tao. wev nv hoSepos ws povapynowr, T@ dé Kexépwvt hoSepwtatos. avappwvvupévny te yap
avT@ TaALY Op@Yv TiVY SvVautY ev TH ToALTELa
\ : a \ “ ? , ION v i Kat Tots wept Bpovtov émitidecov edas 1)yGeTo
a, « nw
TAapovTt. Kal TOV TL Kal TpovTHpYev virowias
3 n \ 3 / \ \ aA , SY avtTols mpos aANnAOUS KaTa Thy THY Biwv avopovoTnta Kal dsadopav. tavta detcas o Kinépwv val e/ \ Tp@Tov pev wpunoe mpecBevtns AoroPérra
a ’ Ss / O89 \ So ¢ / :
cuvexTrAcdoal els Lupiav: éemet & of méXXovTES
b 3 f
vmatevery pet Avtw@vov, “Iptios cai Iavaas,
\ ‘\ nA /
dvdpes aya0ol Kai Enrwtat tov Kixépwvos, édé“w “A 4
ovTO 1) ohaS KATANT ELV, UTOdEXOMEvOL KATANU-190

wars, Antony, as consul, convened the senate and said a few words about concord, while Cicero, after a lengthy speech appropriate to the occasion, persuaded the senate to imitate the Athenians! and decree an amnesty for the attack upon Caesar, and to assign provinces to Cassius and Brutus. But none of these things came to pass. For when the people, who of themselves were strongly moved to pity, saw Caesar's body carried through the forum, and when Antony showed them the garments drenched with blood and pierced everywhere with the swords, they went mad with rage and sought for the murderers in the forum, and ran to their houses with firebrands in order to set them ablaze. For this danger the conspirators were prepared beforehand and so escaped it," but expecting others many and great, they forsook the city.

ALI. At once, then, Antony was highly elated, and all men were fearful that he would make himself sole ruler, and Cicero most fearful of all. For Antony saw that Cicero's power in the state was reviving, and knew that he was attached to Brutus and his party, and was therefore disturbed at his presence in the city. And besides, they had previously been somewhat suspicious of one another because of the marked difference in their lives. Fearing these things Cicero at first was inclined to sail to Syria with Dolabella, as his legate; but the consuls elect to succeed Antony,? Hirtius and Pansa, who were good men and admirers of Cicero, begged him not to desert them, and undertook

1 These declared a general amnesty after the overthrow of the Thirty Tyrants by Thrasybulus in 403 B.c, 2 Cf. Plutarch's Brutus, chapter xx. * In 43 B.c.

>] id D>] / / € 9 v9 >
cetv Avtwriov éxetvou trapovtos, 0 & ovT arrt-a 7 wv , / \
oTWY TavTUTacL oUTE TLIGTEVwY AordoPérXAaD [Lev

, & a Elace Yatpery, owoNoynaas O€ Tots Trepl Tov "I prov
N 4 > >] A 7 td 3 3 a
To Oépos év "A@nvars dia€ewv, OTav 8 éxetvos maparaBwot Thy apxny, aptEecPar rddw, avTos kal’ éavtov é€émdevoe. yevouévns O€ meplt Tov
A a U € TrobY dtaTpLAAs, Kal Aoywv amo “Pwpuns, ota hirel, KaWwov TpoctecovTwy, peTtaCeBrARCOat
’ \
pev Avtovov Oavpactny petaBornv Kat TavTa
f \ \ TMpaTTEw Kal TodLTEvEedOat TPOS THY TVYKANTOD,
a a i. , \ \
évdety O€ THS EXELVOU TApOVOLasS TA TpdyLaTa pL
, lg
Thy apioTny exer didGecwv, KaTapeurapevos
AS ¢ a) \ \ 3 if on WA avTos avuTov THY TOAAnY evrAaPELaY avéoTpEedeV avis eis “Pwounv. Kal TOV TWewTwV ov dinuap-> 4, Cal nm 3 , ¢ N
Tavev éXTiOwy TocovTOV TANOGos avOpatwv Ud
an 4 \ \ sf
yapas Kat moVou pos THY aTavTnow éFeyuOn,
f
Kal cyEdov 1EpIjTLov dvnAwWOAY YXpoVvoV ai Trept
Tas WvAas Kal Tip elcodov auTov deEtwoes Kal
/ A > ¢ 4 \
diioppocvvar. tH Oo votepaia Bovrnyv cuvaya-
, \ a o
yovtos Avtwviov Kat KaXOvYTOS avTOV ovK HAOED, GNAA KATEKELTO MANAKOS EYEW EK TOU KOTIOU OKN-
U 3 / \ 3 \ 3 A ?
mTomevos. ed0xer Oe TarnNOEs emvBovrATs eivas 1D ” € 4 \ f >» ¢Qr boos ex Tivos UTOWias Kal pnvucews kal? odov
a > , \ a avtT@ mpoctecovons. “Avt@vios 5é YareTras Lev
> aan a a ‘\ , ”
etyev emt TH dtaRodn Kat oTpati@tas Errepev
a \ ,
diye QUTOV 1) KATATPHaaL THY OiKlav KEXEvVCAS,
: l de ANG L 6enOé 4
évotavtwy O€ Today Kai denOévtwy évéyupa
4

AaBwv povov éravaato. Kat TO AoLTOV OvTwS
if 3 4 \ 4
avtimapetvovTes atpéua kal duratropevoe deeTe-192

883.

CICERO, xu. 2-6

to put down Antony if Cicero would remain at Rome. So Cicero, who neither distrusted nor trusted them altogether, let Dolabella go without him, and after agreeing with Hirtius and Pansa to spend the summer at Athens, and to come back again when they had assumed office, set off by himself. But there was some delay about his voyage, and, as is often the case, new and unexpected reports came from Rome, to the effect that Antony had undergone a wonderful change and was doing and administering everything to please the senate, and that matters needed only Cicero's presence to assume the best possible complexion ; he therefore blamed himself for his excessive caution and turned back again to Rome. And in his first expectations he was not disappointed ; for a great crowd of people, moved with joy and longing for him, poured forth to meet him, and almost a day's time was consumed in the friendly greetings given him at the gates and as he entered the city. On the following day, however, when Antony convened the senate and invited him to be present, Cicero did not come, but kept his bed, pretending to be indisposed from fatigue. The truth, however, seemed to be that he was afraid of a plot against him, in consequence of some suspicion and of information that had unexpectedly come to him on the road. But Antony was indignant at the implication and sent soldiers with orders to bring Cicero or burn down his house; but since many opposed this course and entreated him to desist, he did so, after merely taking sureties. And thenceforward they kept up this attitude, quietly ignoring one another and mutually on their guard, 193

Nour, ax pl ov Kaicap o véos é& *“AtroAXwvias
TAparyevouevos TOV TE KA pov avedéEato Tov
Kaicapos €KELVOU, Kal Tepl TOV dio thio TevTa-KOTLWY pupidd@y as “Avr@vios ex THS ovoias KATELYED, ELS Sta opav KaTéaTy TOs. aUTOV.
XLIV. "Ex 6€ TovTou Pirurmos o 0 THY payTépa Tov véov Kaicapos eXov Kal Mapxedros o TH
adeh pny adixopevor peta TOD veavic Kov ™ pos TOV Kixépora cuvebevto, Kixépova pev éxelv@ THY GTO TOV AOYOU KAL THY ATO THS TOALTELAS Stivapw
ev TE TH Bourg Kal TO Onwe TApEXELY, éxetvov O€ Kixépwve THY ATO TOV XPNLAT OY Kal TOV Or Aov
adopdrerav. on yap OUK OALYOUS TOV vTo Kaicapt otpatevoapévwy mepi avtov eye TO petpaxtov. édoxer dé Kal peiCwy Tis aitia yeyovevat Tov Tov Kixépwva déEacbat Trpobvpas tiv Kalcapos ¢iriav. tt yap, os Force, Llopmniov Cavtos kal Kaioapos ééofe xata tovs tavovs
o Kixépwv Kxadeiv tiva tovs TOV oUYKANTLKO@Y qmatéas e(s TO Kamitrwrtov, ws péddXovtos é& avuTav éva Tod Atos arr oberkyver tis “Pwpns Hyryewova: Tous O€ TodiTas bro oTovosys Jeovras iatac0at mept TOV vewr, Kab TOUS Taioas év Tals TepiTroph upots KabélecOat otw7riy eXovTas.
éEaiduns d€ TOV Oupav avorx Gera Kal’ &va TOV TAlowy AVL TAPEVOV KUK AD mapa Tov Geo ‘Tapamopever0al, Tov O€ TavTas émioKOTElY Kal GTOméuTrey ayOopévovs. ws & ovtos Hv Tpociwy Kat avTov, exreiva Ty deErav Kal ettreip:
dG) ‘Popaior, TéEpas vpiv éupudioy TORE MOV OUTOS YEMWY YyEevouEvos. TOLoUTOV hac Eévv-194

CICERO, x in. 6—xLiv. 4

until the young Caesar came from Apollonia,! assumed the inheritance of the elder Caesar, and engaged in a dispute with Antony concerning the twenty-five million drachmas which Antony was detaining from the estate.”
ALIV. After this, Philip, who had married the mother, and Marcellus, who had married the sister of the young Caesar, came with the young man to Cicero and made a compact that Cicero should give Caesar the influence derived from his eloquence and political position, both in the senate and before the people, and that Caesar should give Cicero the security to be derived from his wealth and his armed forces. For already the young man had about him many of the soldiers who had served under the elder Caesar. It was thought, too, that there was a stronger reason why Cicero readily accepted the young man's friend- ship. For it would appear that while Pompey and Caesar were still living Cicero dreamed that some- one invited the sons of the senators to the Capitol, on the ground that Jupiter was going to appoint one of their number ruler of Rome; and that the citizens eagerly ran and stationed themselves about the tem- ple, while the youths, in their purple-bordered togas, seated themselves there in silence. Suddenly the door of the temple opened, and one by one the youths rose and walked round past the god, who revicwed them all and sent them away sorrowing. But when this young Caesar advanced into his pre- sence the god stretched out his hand and said: "O Romans, ye shall have an end of civil wars when this youth has become your ruler." By such a dream as

1 Where he was studying.
* Caesar's widow had made Autony guardian of the estate.
195

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

9 , \ aa / \ N »>Qs A mviov toovta Tov KiKépwva thy pév tdéav tov
, aA \
matdos éxpeuayat Kal KaTéYelv evapy@s, aUTOV
b] b] > / > e / \ ta
& ove érictacba. pel pépay O€ KataBaivov-\ , x i la \ tal
Tos elg TO Tedloy TO "'Apetovy avTov, TOs Taidas
f , ? A non Yyeyupvacpmevous atépyet0al, KuKelvov Oh-fal A la wv ,
Ojvat TO Kixépwvt mpatov oios whOn xal
ef > , \ , , v
Umvov, éxtrayevta 6é€ TuvOdavecPat Tivwy ely \ bd of a 3
yovewy. Hv d€ TaTpos Oxtaoviou TeV ovK ayav al b] , a ,
éeripavav, "Attias d€ pytpés, aderdidyjs Kaigapos. d0ev Katcap avt@® matéas ove éyov
. { os > a
idlous TV ovalav éavToU Kal Tov oikov év Tats
, " > , \ \ r ,
diabnnats ESwxev. €x TovTOV daal Tov Kixépwra
A \ \ ,
TO Talol KATA Tas aTavTHaEls evTUyyavev érLa ? a > , L \ if MEAS, KAKELVOV oLKelos exer Oa Tas dtrodpoav-vas? Kal 14p éK TUXNS aUT@ yeyovevat cup BeBrjKet Kuxépwvos v UTATEVOVTOS.

XLV. Attar péev obv tpopdceas joav ai
U Al \ be a "A , al kK , Neyopevat'! ro d€ mpos "Avt@mor picos Kinépwva wn 9 f i lal
TpOTOY, ELTA 7 PVGLS HTTWY OTA TILAS Tpoce-
, F / A
moinoe Katocapt voplfovta mpoodapPavew th
, \ > , / 7 \ e ,
TORLTELG THY eKElvoU Suva pay. ovTH yap vrjEL
TO pelpdkloy aUTOV wWaoTE Kal TaTépa Tpoca-
, > 4? e 40 B A 3 aA oY
yopevery. ep Ww odhocpa Bpovtos ayavaxtav év ~ ‘ > N “~ ln’
Tais mpos AtTtikov émistoAats KadiWato tod
Fa , 24 } \ / > Ld 4
Kexépwvos, ott O1a hoPov “Avtwviov beparevwn LY 2 a , bd b > Sf a tov Katcapa Shros éotw ovx édevOepiav TH
i? 3 \ ,
TaTplo. TpaTTwOV, adrAa SeatTroTHY dthavOpwrroy
a , \ \ , a
AUT@® pvwpevos. ov funy GAAa TOV ye Taida
1 aj Acydpeva: Bekker, after Reiske;: Aeyduevas.
196

CICERO, xtiv. 4-XLv. 2

this, they say, Cicero had impressed upon him the appearance of the youth, and retained it distinctly, but did not know him.! The next day, however, as he was going down to the Campus Martius, the youths, who had just finished exercising there, were coming away, and the youth of his dream was seen by Cicero for the first time, and Cicero, amazed, inquired who his parents were. Now, his father was Octavius, a man of no great prominence, but his mother was Attia, a daughter of Caesar’s sister. For this reason Caesar, who had no children of his own, willed his property and his family name to him. After this, it is said, Cicero took pains to converse with the youth when they met, and the youth welcomed his kind attentions; and indeed it happened that he was born during Cicero’s consulship.

XLV. These, then, were the reasons that were mentioned ; but it was Cicero’s hatred for Antony in the first place, and then his natural craving for honour, that attached him to the young Caesar, since he thought to add Caesar’s power to his own political influence. And indeed the young man carried his court to him so far as actually to call him father. At this Brutus was very angry, and in his letters to Atticus attacked Cicero, saying that in paying court to Caesar through fear of Antony he was plainly not obtaining liberty for his country, but wooing a kind master for himself? However, Brutus took up

1 According to Dion Cassius (xlv. 2) and Suetonius (Divus Augustus, 94), Cicero dreamed that Octavius was let down from heaven by a chain of gold, and presented with a whip by Jupiter.
2 Cicero, ad Brutum, i. 17, 5 (Brutus to Atticus),

ee

a 3
Kexépwmvos o Bpodtos év ’AOnvats ScatpiBovta
al \
Tapa Tols gtdocddos avaraBwv éoyev éd’
\ a , NYEMOVLAS, KAL TOAAG YpwpEVOS aLT@ KaTwpOov.
a \ r i ? \ of e , > Tod b€ Kixépwvos axpny éxyev 1) Svvapus év
a / a ¢
Th Wore TOTE peyloTnY, Kal KpaTa@y Oaov éBov-eto Tov pev “Avt@vov é€éxpovoe Kal KateoTaclace Kal ToEMHCOVTAS aAv’T@ Tos dvO
e f v \ , ge / ,
vT@atous, Iptiov cai lavoap, é€ereu we, Kaicape
\ \
dé paBdovyous Kal orpatnyiKov Kocpov, ws 61)
TPOTONELOVVYTL THS TaTpLOos, ETELTE Whdicacbat THY auyKAnTOV. émel & "Avtw@vios pev HTTNTO,
aA / a
Tov O uTaTwY apdoTépwy atoCavovtwy ex THs
\
payns mpos Kaicapa avvéotncay ai duvapers, dei © 7 Bovry véov avdpa cal tUyn NauT Pa ioaca 0 n véov avdpa Kal TYYN NauT pa
> a a \ a bd

KEYpPNuEevov ETEIPaTO Tiais Kal dwpeais arrown aA \ nA
Kadelv avTov Ta oTpaTevwaTa Kal TeEptomday iz \ / a
Thy Ovvapty, ws pn Seomévn TOV TpoTOAELOUYT WY
>] , id ¢ a“
Avtwviov mepevyotos, obTws 0 Kaicap doBnbeis
al uu ‘\
UTémepTte TO Kixépwre tots deouéevovs Kat tret-
/ , e A
Govras vrateiay peéev audotépors ood mparret,
a \ a 4 a 7a 4
yvphabar o€ Tots TPaywaciy oTwS AUTOS EyvOxE,
7 > \ \ i?
TupadapBavovta THY apxny, Kal TO pelpaKtov
n / Storxety ovopatos Kal dons yAtyopevov. wpyo-
, \ a > \ e \ , \
rAoyet € Kaicap avtos ws debiws KaTddvow Kal
/ a Kivduvevwy epnwos yevéoOar xpncatto TH Kuxé-/ 4 pm@vos év déovTe pirapxia, TpoTpeiramevos avtoy UTATELAY fLETLEVaL ULTpPaTTOVTOS avTOvD Kal ovvapyatpectalovtos.
198

884

CICERO, xiv. 2-5

Cicero’s son who was studying philosophy at Athens,
gave him a command, and achieved many successcs
through his instrumentality.!

Cicero’s power in the city reached its greatest height at this time, and since he could do what he pleased, he raised a successful faction against Antony, drove him out of the city, and sent out the two consuls, Hirtius and Pansa, to wage war upon him, while he persuaded the senate to vote Caesar the lictors and insignia of a praetor, on the ground that he was fighting in defence of the country. But after Antony had been defeated,” and, both consuls having died after the battle, the forces had united under Caesar, the senate became afraid of a young man who had enjoyed such brilliant good fortune, and endeavoured by honours and gifts to call his troops away from him and to circumscribe his power, on the ground that there was no need of defensive armies now that Antony had taken to flight. Under these circumstances Caesar took alarm and secretly sent messengers to Cicero begging and urging him to obtain the consulship for them both, but to manage affairs as he himself thought best, after assuming the office, and to direct in all things a youthful colleague who only craved name and fame. And Caesar him- self admitted afterwards that it was the fear of having his troops disbanded and the danger of finding him- self left alone which led him to make use in an emergency of Cicero’s love of power, by inducing him to sue for the consulship with his co-operation and assistance in the canvass.

1 Cf. the Brutus, xxiv. 2; xxvi. 3.

2 Near Mutina, a city in Gallia Cispadana, early in the year 43 B.c. Octavius Caesar acted in conjunction with the two consuls, Cf. Appian, B.C., in. 71.

XLVI. ’Evratéa pévtow. padiota Kirépwov émapbeis vmod véou "ye pov Kal pevaxia Gels Kal cuvapxatpeciacas Kal _Tapacxav aUT@ THY cuyKhytov evOUs pev vmo TOV pirov aitiav elxev, only @ 8 aTepov avTov aTONWAEKOS nodeTo Kal Tob Sijpov TPOEMEVOS THY ehevdepiar. av&nbeis yep O veavias Kab THY uTaTtetay AaBav Kixépova bev elace yatpew, Avtwviw 6¢ cai Aetridw didos yevopmevos Kal THY Svvapuy els TAUTO TUvEveyKOY, Bonep aXXo TL KTHMA, THY NYyEwovlay evel waTo
Tpos avTous. Kal Kateypadnoay avdpes obs édet OunoKev, vimrep dtaxoatous. TrELTT HY dé TOV audio ByTnwaTOV avuTols cpu n Kixépavos 7 poypagy TApEa XE, ‘Avtaviou pev acupPBatas exov-Tos ef pn Tp@TOS exelvo; aTroOvncKot, Aeridov
S ‘Avtwviw mpoateuevon, Kaicapos 6é mpos audorépous aVTEXOVTOS. éyivovto 8 at cuvodor povous am oppnrot TEpl TONY Boveviay ep Tpepas
Tpels, Kal ouynEecay eis TOTOY TWa Tpoow TOV TTPATOTESWY TOTAM@ TWeptppeomevov. AéyeTas bE Tas TMpoTas npépas draryovid dpevos UTep TOU Kexépevos o o Kaioap evoodvat TH TpiTn Kal 7 poeo bat Tov avopa. Ta 6é Ths avtdscews obTas elyev. eder Kixépwvos éxotivat Kaicapa, Havnrov 5eé tadeXdov Aémidov, Aevxiov 6é Kaicapos
"Avto@viov, ds jv Oeios avT@ pos pntpos. olTws
éférrecov UTO Oupod Kal Avaons TaV avo pwTriverv
Noyts wv, HaXXov | & amrébeaEav ws oddév avO pw@mov
Onpiov éaotiv aypi@tepov éEovciay male: tpocAa-Bovtos.
XLVIT. Upartopéver be TOUTOV O Kixépov 7 my pev év aypots tdtors mept Todoxdor, Eywy Tov 200

CICERO, xvi. 1-xtvu. 1

XLVI. Here, indeed, more than at any other time, Cicero was led on and cheated, an old man by a young man. He assisted Caesar in his canvass and induced the senate to favour him. For this he was blamed by his friends at the time, and shortly aftei- wards he perceived that he had ruined himself and betrayed the liberty of the people. For after the young man had waxed strong and obtained the con- sulship,! he gave Cicero the go-by, and after making friends with Antony and Lepidus and uniting his forces with theirs, he divided the sovereignty with them, like any other piece of property. And a list was made out by them of men who must be put to death, more than two hundred in number. The pro- scription of Cicero, however, caused most strife in their debates, Antony consenting to no terms unless Cicero should be the first man to be put to death, Lepidus siding with Antony, and Caesar holding out against them both. They held secret meetings by themselves near the city of Bononia for three days, coming together in a place at some distance from the camps and surrounded by ariver. It is said that for the first two days Caesar kept up his struggle to save Cicero, but yielded on the third and gave him up. The terms of their mutual concessions were as follows. Caesar was to abandon Cicero, Lepidus his brother Paulus, and Antony Lucius Caesar, who was his uncle on the mother's side. So far did anger and fury lead them to renounce their human sentiments, or rather, they showed that no wild beast is more savage than man when his passion is supplemented by power.

XLVII. 'While this was going on, Cicero was at his own country-seat in Tusculum, having his brother with

1 In August, 43 B.c., when only twenty years of age.
201
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

adedpov yweO avtou: tuOopevor O€ TAs Tpoypadas éyvoaay eis"*Aotupt peTaBnval, Xwplov Tapadov
a) / > a \ A > 7
Tov Kuxépwvos, éxetOev S€ mreiv eis Maxedoviav
\ a # \ e \ > a , ? ,
mpos Bpotvrov: 76n yap uvmep avtov Novos époita
fo) 4 >
Kpatouvtos. éxoptlovto & ev hopetos amretpnKores
vmo AUTINS' Kal KATA THY OdOV EpioTapeEVvoL Kat Ta hopeia tmapaBarrXovtes AAAS TpoTwXoO-iA a b 2, lao > 4, ' dupovto. parrov 6 o Koivtos jOvper, Kat
\ > ; aA
Noylo pos avTOV Elanet THS aTropias: ovdev yap ébn rAaBeivy olxobev, AAAA Kal TO Kixépove 4 = > / " cy 3 \ \

yAioxpov nv épod.ov: apewov ovv eivat TOV pev
V4 , A A AY \
Kixépwva trpodapBavew 77 puyn, avrov b€ pera-
a a?
Ociv oixobev cvacKkevacapevov. TtavTt édofe* Kal meptraBovTes aAAnAOUS Kal avakNavaodpeEvot dueAvOnoayr.
¢ ‘ 9 Pas >] nw ee e ;
O pev ovv Koivtos ov ToAXats VaTEpov nuepats
LTO TOV OiKETOV Tpododes Tots EnTovow avnpeOn \ “ 50 e be / 9 v
peTa TOU Tatoos. o O€ Ktkéepwy ets “Aotupa
\ \ o ¢e \ ’ \ > \
Koutabeis Kai mAotov evpwv evOds evé8n Kal
, /
TapeTrevoev axpe Kipxatov, mvevpate ypwmevos.
9 wn \ , 3 \ v A éxetOey Sé€ Bovropevav evOus aipey tov KuBeEp-ynt@v, elite delaas tHyv Oddaccay eit ovTH
,
mavTadtact tiv Katcapos ameyvaxws TicTlD, > / ‘ nw aA / ¢€ \ id >
amTéBn kat TapnrGe meln atadtovs ExaTov ws Els 9 7
‘Pwunv wopevopevos. av0us 8 advwv Kai peta-
, , N 4 ? od
BarXropevos katynet wpos POaracoav eis "Aotupa.
Kael OtevyKtépevoev emi Oevav Kal atropwv
Noyltapav, ate Kal TapeNOetv els THY Kaicapos
3 ? / / \ / e \ 3 \
oixiay dtevonOn Kxpuda Kat odakas €avtov éri 202

88

CICERO, xivu. 1-4

him; but when they learned of the proscriptions they determined to remove to Astura, a place of Cicero’s on the sea-coast, and from there to sail to Brutus in Macedonia ; for already a report was current that he was in force there. So they were carried along in litters, being worn out with grief; and on the way they would halt, and with their litters placed side by side would lament to one another. But Quintus was the more dejected and began to reflect upon his destitute condition; for he said that he had taken nothing from home, nay, Cicero too had seanty pro- vision for the journey; it was better, then, he said, that Cicero should press on in his flight, but that he himself should get what he wanted from home and then hasten after him. This they decided to do, and after embracing one another and weeping aloud, they parted.

So then Quintus, not many days afterwards, was betrayed by his servants to those who were in search of iim, and put to death, together with his son. But Cicero was brought to Astura, and finding a vessel there he embarked at once and coasted along as far as Circaeum, with the wind in his favour. From there his pilots wished to set sail at once, but Cicero, whether it was that he feared the sea, or had not yet altogether given up his trust in Caesar, went ashore and travelled along on foot a hundred furlongs in the direction of Rome. But again losing resolution and changing his mind, he went down to the sea at Astura. And there he spent the night in dreadful and desperate calculations; he actually made up his mind to enter Caesar's house by stealth, to slay him- self upon the hearth, and so to fasten upon Caesar an

THs €oTias addotopa mpodBareiy. adda xa
TAUTNS AUTOV aTEKpOVaE THS OO0d béos Bacuver:
Kal ToAXa ! Tapax@on Kal TadtvtpoTa Bounevpara THiS yvapns pmeTarapSivorv TapedwKe Tots olKeTaes EQUTOV els Kauyrny" Kata 7 ouv KOLt-Ceu, Exwy Exel ywpia Kal Katadvynyv Opa Oépous
diravpwrov, dTay Hototov ot étTyndia. KaTa-TVEWOLD.
"Eyes & 0 témos kal vaov 'AroAXwVOS pLKpOV
vmep TAS: Jararrys. évted0ev apOevtes a0 poor
KOpAaKes UTO Khayyis TpooepEpovTo TQ TAOLW Tov Kixépavos érrh yy eper comer" ral Kabi-cavtes émt THY Kepaiav exatepobev ot pev éBown, ot © ékoTTOV Tas TOV pn pupaT ov dpxas, Kal mao €édoKet TO onfetov elvat Tovnpov. amTreBn dS ovv 0 Kixépwr, cat mapeO@y eis THY éTavrAWw
@S dvaTavaopevos KaTEKrLOn. ToV dé KOpaKwY ot TrOAXOL pev él THs Oupisos drexdOnvto dUcyyoevo JopuBades, eis 6é KataBas él TO K«Awwidvov
ery KeKaRUHMEVOU ToD Kixépwvos a anipye TO TTOMATL Kara pK pov amo TOU TPOTWTOV TO (MaTLov. ot
5 oiKeT al Tavd opavres, Kal KAKloavtTes EaUTOUS
€L TEpluévovat Tov SeaTroTOU ovevomevou GeaTtal
yevéoOat, Onpia 8 ab't@ Bonbet nal mpoxydetat Tap aEtav TpuTTOVvTOS, autol & ovK dpuvouat,
Ta pev Oeopevor, Ta. dé Bia AaBovtes exopsfov év
T® opelo 7 0s THY Jadaccay.
XLVIII. 'Ev trovre & of chayeis éemhrOov, éxa-Tovtapyns "Epévvios kai TomiddXos ytrdiapyxos,
1 roAAG Graux, after Coraés : taAAa.
2 Kant: Coraés and Bekker, after Wyttenbach ; Ka:jras

Sintenis (in notes), and Graux ; Kazitas MSS.
204

CICERO, xiv. 4-XLVUL. I

avenging daemon. But a fear of tortures drove him from this course also; then, revolving in his mind many confused and contradictory purposes, he put himself in the hands of his servants to be taken by sea to Caieta, where he had lands and an agreeable retreat in summer time, when the breath of the Etesian winds is most pleasant.
The place has also a temple of Apollo, a little above the sea. From thence a flock of crows flew with loud clamour towards the vessel of Cicero as it was rowed towards land; and alighting on either end of the sail-yard, some cawed, and others pecked at the ends of the ropes, and everybody thought that the omen was bad. Nevertheless Cicero landed, and going to his villa lay down to rest. Then most of the crows perched themselves about the window, cawing tumultuously, but one of them flew down upon the couch where Cicero lay with muffled head, and with its beak, little by little, tried to remove the garment from his face. The servants, on seeing this, rebuked themselves for waiting to be spectators of their master's murder, while wild beasts came to his help and cared for him in his undeserved misfortune, but they themselves did nothing in his defence. So partly by entreaty, and partly by force, they took him and carried him in his litter towards the sea.
XLVIIT. But meantime his assassins came to the villa, Herennius a centurion, and Popillius a tribune,

205

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

? , A f a) ¢
@ TWATPOKTOVIAS MOTE Stxny pevyovTe TUVELTFED 0
Kixépor, EXovTEs Umnperas. émel O€ TAS Oupas
Kekhero pevas eUpovTes éféxoay, ov patvomevou TOU Kuxépavos ovde TOY évoov etdevat packovtar, reyeTat veavic Kov Tiva TeOpappéevov peév uT0 TOU Kixépwvos ev ypaupacuy erevOepiors Kal paenpaow, dmredevOepov d6€ Koilytov tod adedgod, Diroroyov Toivopua, ppdcar TO XerLd px TO popetov KopCojevov Ova TOY Katapirey Kal acuvoxiwy Tepitatwv emt thy OdraTTav. oO pev ovv Kedtapxos Odbyous avaraBov pel éavtod mepreDet pos TI éEodov, TOU o Eee dpoLo Pepopevou bua TOV TEPLTAT OV 0 Kixépwv iaerto, Kal TOUS olKeTas exehevo ev évtavda karabéc bat

TO popeiov. AUTOS of OoTEp eta0et, TH dapratepa yEtpl TOV ryevelov aT TOMEVOS GTEVES évewpa Tots apayetouy, avy pod Kat KOS AVaTAEDS Kal
OUYTETHKMS UTO Ppovtiowy TO TpOTwTOV, WATE TOUS mTAELaTOUS eyeadupacbar TOU “Epevviou opalovtos QUTOV. eopayn O€ TOV Tpaxnrov ex Tov popelov mpotetvas, ETOS éxetvo yeyovas €&n-KOoTOY Kal TETAPTOD. THY b€ Keharny aT éKowev avtod Kal Tas yelpas, “Avtwviov KENEUTAYTOS, ais Tous Pirsrmixovs éyparvev. autos TE yap oO Kixépov TOUS. Kat ‘Avtoviov Noyous DiruwmeKovs éméypawre kat péexpe viv Ta BiBria Didtrrmixoi KaXovvTat.
XLIX. Tov 8 dxpwTnpiov ELS ‘Pouny KOjLt-abevTav eTUXE pev apxarperias TEA@V O ‘AvTovos, akovaas 66 Kai tomy aveBoncev ws voUY al mpoypapal tédXos éyoev. THv O€ KEepar}yv Kai Tas Yelpas exéXevoev UTEP THV éEuBorwy el TOD 206 CICERO, xtivint, 1--xLix, 1

who had once been prosecuted for parricide and de- tended by Cicero; and they had helpers. After they had broken in the door, which they found closed, Cicero was not to be seen, and the inmates said they knew not where he was. Then, we are told, a youth who had been liberally educated by Cicero, and who was a freedman of Cicero’s brother Quintus, Philo- logus by name, told the tribune that the litter was being carried through the wooded and shady walks towards the sea. The tribune, accordingly, taking a few helpers with him, ran round towards the exit, but Herennius hastened on the run through the walks, and Cicero, perceiving him, ordered the ser- vants to set the litter down where they were. Then he himself, clasping his chin with his left hand, as was his wont, looked steadfastly at his slayers, his head all squalid and unkempt, and his face wasted with anxiety, so that most of those that stood by covered their faces while Herennius was slaying him. For he stretched his neck forth from the litter and was slain, being then in his sixty-fourth year.! Herennius cut off his head, by Antony’s command, and his hands—the hands with which he wrote the Philippics. For Cicero himself entitled his speeches against Antony ‘‘ Philippics,’ and to this day the documents are called Philippics.

XLIX. When Cicero’s extremities were brought to Rome, it chanced that Antony was conducting an election, but when he heard of their arrival and saw them, he cried out, “ Now let our proscriptions have an end.” Then he ordered the head and hands to be placed over the ships’ beaks on the 1 Ciccro was murdered ou the seventh of December, 43 B.c.

, 4) a Gé ‘p / , ’ N
Brnpatos Peivat, Péapa Pwpaios dpixtov, ov TO € aad f 4 “
Kixépwvos opay mpocwtov olopévots, GANG THS
’ i A > , ‘\ oe 4 ?
Avi7mviov wWwuyis elxova. mAnv ev ye TL Ppovn-
, / , A ws
gas metprov év tovtols Lopurwva th Koivtov in N N @ ror Ss +) e be / yuvatkt Tov Didodoyov wrapédmxer. 1% S€ Kupia
a / A
yevouevn TOU cwpaTtos adAaLS TE SeLVAals EYPHTAaTO
\ , > , “
TLLWPLALS, KaL TAS TAaPKAS ATOTE“LVOYTA TAS aUTOD
\ 9 A LOL ayes 4 ¢ ¢
KATA [LLKpPOV OTTTAaY, ElT EoOie VdyKaTEV. OUTH
“ 4 e / ¢
yap éviot T@V avyypadhéwy totopnxaciw: o & 9 ra a lA 3 f , \
avtov tov Kixépwvos aedevdepos Tipwy 70 \ / fo) lal
TapaTav ovde péemynta. THs tov PidodOyou
?
m™poodoatas.
, , , “a IlvvOavopat dé Kaicapa xpovots modXoils botea N 4 A fa)
pov eiaed ety mpos Eva TOV OvyaTpio@v: Tov &é
/ a BiBrXtov Exovta Kirépwvos év tats yepolv éx-
A J ¢
TAAYEVTA TO ipatio meptxaruTTev: idovta &é Kaicapa r\aBetv nal dvedOety éEotata pépos Torv na tA ‘ >] , “
Tov SiBAlov, Tadkw 8 azodidovtTa TH petpakio

4 ? 4 = a ,
pavat ‘‘ Aoytos avnp, ® Tat, Noytos Kal dtdo-99 ? ‘ 4 /
maTpls. é€mel pévTOL TaYLOTA KaTETTONEULNoEV
e id ‘ Of.
‘AvT@viov vTatevwy autos elheTO cuvapyovtTa
a , \ er 949)? ® , > 9 F e Tov Kixépwvos tov viov, ép ob Tas 7 eixavas 7
a ,
Bovry cabeirev “Avtwviou Kai Tas ddXdas HKVpwoe
4 A
TLULAS KaL TpOTEYHndicato pnoevt Tov “AvtTwviwr
b) 9: ef N
dvona Mapxov civat. ovtTw TO datpoviov els TOV
9 ig \ a
Kixépwvos olxov emavyveyxe T0 TéXOS THS Avtwviov KOAdGEWS.
208

886

CICERO, xix. 1-4

rostra, a sight that made the Romans shudder; for they thought they saw there, not the face of Cicero, but an image of the soul of Antony. However, he showed at least one sentiment of fair dealing in the case when he handed over Philologus to Pomponia, the wife of Quintus. And she, having got the man into her power, besides other dreadful punishments which she inflicted upon him, forced him to cut off his own flesh bit by bit and roast it, and then ‘to eat it. This, indeed, is what some of the historians say; but Cicero’s own freedman, Tiro, makes no mention at all of the treachery of Philologus.

I learn that Caesar, a long time after this, paid a visit to one of his daughter’s sons; and the boy, since he had in his hands a book of Cicero’s, was terrified and sought to hide it in his gown; but Caesar saw it, and took the book, and read a great part of it as he stood, and then gave it back to the youth, saying: “ A learned man, my child, a learned man and a lover of his country.” Moreover, as soon as he had finally defeated Antony,! and when he was himself consul, he chose Cicero’s son as _ his colleague in the office, and it was in his consulship that the senate took down the statues of Antony, made void the other honours that had been paid him, and decreed besides that no Antony should have the name of Marcus. Thus the heavenly powers devolved upon the family of Cicero the final steps in the punishment of Antony.

1 At Alexandria, in 30 B.c. (see the Antony, Ixxxi. 1 f.).

AHMOS@ENOYS KAI KIKEPONOS
SYTKPISIS
T."A pev ody a&ia prvnuns Tov wept Anpo-
/
abévous Kai Kixépwvos tatopoupéva@y els TIv 1mean lal a 9 f
Tépav adixtat yv@olv, TavT éoTiv. adetxas Oe
a 4 e a
TO ouyKpivey tHhv év Tois Royo E&v autor, nw a \ V4 f €xeivd pot Sox® py Tapncew appntov, drt An-\ \ / la) o
poabévns pev els TO PNTOPLKOV eveTELVE TAY GaoV % b ¢ A b) / , e ' elyev Ex PvoEews 1} AoKITEWS OYLOV, UTEpBaddo-pevos évapyeia pev Kat Sewotnte Tovs emt Ta
fal a /
adyoveyv Kal tov dixav cuveEetalopévous, byKxo
4
Sé Kal peyadotpereta Tods éTLOELKTLKOUS, AKpt-
f \ \ / \ A A \
Beta b€ Kal tTéyvn tovs codiotds: Kixépov oé
\ / a ,
Kal ToAvpabns Kab ToLKidos TH TEPL TOUS NOYoUS
fal , \ 3107
amovon yevopevos auvtakes pev dias dtdroao-
b] 4 b] bp] 4 3 \ , ous a7roNéXouTrev ovK odiyas ets TOV "AKadn-
- \ cal
paixov tpotrov, ov pny adda Kal dia TOV pds
, a /
tas Sixas Kal Tovs ayavas ypadopévwy Aoywv
A , \
dnAOS €oTL EuTrELpiav TIVa YpaLmaTwY TapeTt-
i"
Setxvucbat Bovropuevos.
Ww - \ a 3 a / e
Eote 6 tis Kat Tov 7)0ous év tots Novos Exa-
' , e

Tépov dtoves. o pev yap Anpocbevixos &&w
X\ ty A \ a lA
TavTos wpaicpov Kat matdias ets SewotnTa Kai
\ , b] b] / ” ¢
oTovony suvnypevos ovK edduvyviwy Gdwdev, wa-¢€ / 4 3 ? ¢ 7 \
mep o Ilv0éas éoxwrtev, adr vdporocias Kal
ppovrTidwy Kal THs Neyouevys mixpias Tod Tpomou kal otvyvotntos, Kixépwy $€ modrdayod 7@ 210

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, 1. 1-4

COMPARISON OF DEMOSTHENES AND
CICERO

I. THesr, then, are the memorable incidents in the recorded careers of Demosthenes and Cicero which have come to our knowledge. And though [have renounced the comparison of their oratorical styles,! yet this, I think, ought not to be left unsaid, namely, that Demosthenes devoted to the rhetorical art all the powers of speech which he possessed by nature or acquired by practice, surpassing in force and effectiveness his rivals in forensic and judicial pleading, in pomp and majesty of utterance the professional declaimers, and in precision and _ skill the sophists; Cicero, on the other hand, became widely learned and had a variety of interest in the pursuit of letters, and left behind him not a few philosophical treatises of his own conforming to the fashion of the Academy; indeed, even in the speeches which he wrote for the forum and the courts he clearly desires to display by the way a considerable acquaintance with letters.

It is possible, too, to get a glimpse of the character of each in his style of speaking. For that of Demosthenes, which had no prettiness or pleasantry, and was condensed with a view to power and earnestness, did not smell of lamp-wicks, as Pytheas scoffingly said,? but of water-drinking and anxious thought, and of what men called the bit- terness and sullenness of his disposition; whereas Cicero was often carried away by his love of jesting

1 See the Demosthenes, iii. 1.
2 Cf. the Demosthenes, vili. 3.
211

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TKOTTKD TPOos TO Bwporoxov expe popevos Kat
TpaywaTa om ovdis akva yehore Kal Tada
KAT ELPWVEUO[EVOS év Tats Otxars eis TO yperades npecoet Tou T PET OVTOS, OoTEp ev Th Katdiov *
ouInyopia pndev ATOTTOV TOLELY AUTOV ev TooauTn Tpudh Kal TOAUTERELE Tais ndovats Xpepevor: 70
yep av é&eaTe pay peTé yeUv, paveKov eivat, Kal

Tavta éy)O0vn TO Eevdatmov TOY émihavertdtwy
dirocodwyv TiOenévwr. ean 6€ Katavos
Movpivay d:@KovTos Uratevwy aToXoyetc Oar Kal TodrAa dia TOV Kadtova copodety tiv Stwixyy ai peau éml Tals atoTiatss TaV TapadoEwp Aeyo-evo Sorypat ov YEd@TOs dé Aapn poo KATLOVTOS €K TOV TEPLETTWTWY TPOS TOUS Sexaoras, 7 Nov?
Staperdtaaas 0 Katey T pos TOUS cad npevous evmreivs “ Os yedoion, oO avdpes, € EX opev Umartov.’ Soxel dé Kal yéXwrTos oixelos 0 Kixéowv yeryovéva Kal procKkortns, TO TE ™ poo wr ov QUTOU pétdiapa Kal yadnvnv mapetye. TO bE Anuocbérous del TUS CHD omouvdr), Kal TO TedpovTLKos TobTO Kal ourvour ov pacias an édevmev* ® dev Kal SvaKohov avtov ot €xOpol Kat Svotporov, ws avtos dyna, amexddouvp.
Il. “Ere rowvuy év tots cuyypdpuace xatideipy got, TOV pmev euped@s Kal averrayOas TaV eis avuToy amtopmevov éyxwplwy, OTe TovTOV dencat mpos €repov te petfor, TaAAa 8 evAABH Kal pé-tTptov: 1 b€ Kexépwvos ev Tots Noyots apeTpia Tis 1 KatAfov Coraés, Bekker, and Graux, after Wyttenbach :

KextAfov.
2 aréXecnev With Graux and Bekker, after Coraés: améAcwev, 212

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, 1. q-n. 1

into scurrility, and when, to gain his ends in his cases, he treated matters worthy of serious attention with ironical mirth and pleasautry, he was careless of propriety. Thus, in his defence of Caelius, he said that his client, surrounded as he was by great luxury and extravagance, did nothing out of the way when indulging in pleasures; for not to enjoy what is in one’s possession was madness, he said, particularly when the most eminent philosophers assert that true happiness consists in pleasure.!} And we are told that when Cato prosecuted Murena, Cicero, who was then consul, defended him, and because of Cato’s beliefs made much fun of the Stoic sect, in view of the absurdities of their so- called paradoxes ;? and when loud laughter spread from the audience to the jurors, Cato, with a quiet smile, said to those who sat by: “ What a funny man we have, my friends, for consul!’’ And it would seem that Cicero was naturally prone to laughter and fond of jesting ; his face, too, was smiling and peaceful. But in that of Demosthenes there was always a certain intense seriousness, and this look of thoughtfulness and anxiety he did not easily lay aside. "For this reason his enemies, as he himself says,” cailed him morose and ill-mannered.

II. Still further, then, in their writings it is pos- sible to see that the one touches upon his own praises cautiously and so as not to give offence, when there was need of this for some weightier end, while on other occasions he is eareful and moderate ; whereas Cicero’s immoderate boasting of 1 Cf. Cicero, pro Caelio, 12, 28; but Plutarch’s interpreta- tion does Cicero great injustice. CE. Pig oo. 2 Cf. pro Murena, 29-31. 3 In Phil. ii. 30.

VOL. VIL. Heed 3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, , ‘
TeplavToNoyias axkpaciav Twa KaTNHYOPEL TT POs
A X a /
éo€av, Bowrvtos was Ta OTA Edet TH THBEvYM Kal
A , \ \ e , /
TH yAOTTn THY OptapBrKny UTreixey Oadvnv. TeE-
A ’ \ NevTav 6 ov Ta épya Kal Tas mpdkes povor,
b) ‘ \ \ Z. bd va] \ ’ / e 4)
ANNA KAL TOUS NOYOUS ETTALVEL TOUS ELpNuEeVvoUS UP
avtou! Kal yeypappévous, waoTep “looxpate: Kai "Avakipéves tots codiatais Staperpaxtevopevos, 3 \ € ? A wv 9 A \ 3 a ov Tov Pwpaiwy djpov aye aEiav cal opOodr,
¢ o /
Bp.Ouv, owdtToTaXay, Odiov avtiT@adots.
loxverv pev yap dia Aoyou Tov TrodtTEVOpEVvor avayKaiov, ayaTav & ayevvés Kal AuxXvEevery THY ato ToD Aoyou ddEav. 6Oev épBpiOéatEpos Tav-™ Kal peyarorpetéatepos? o Anpoobévns, THY pev AUTOD Ovvam éuTreplay TLVa TOAAHS SEope-UHV THS Tapa TOV GKpowpLevwov evvoias aTropatvo-pevos, averevGépous b€ xat Bavavaovs, woTrEp eiai, TOUS éml TOUT hYTwpLEeVOUS NYOUV[EVOS.
TIT. ‘H peév ody év TO Snunyopety Kat troAtTev-ecOat Sivapis omaras audortépots varnpEev, date
Kal TOUS TOV OTAWY Kal OTpaTOTébwY KUPioUS
detaPat, Anuoabévous pev Napnta cai Acorrei@ny kal Mewobévnv, Kixépwvos b€ Lloumniov nat Kai-capa TOV véov, ws avTos 0 Katcap év tots mpos
"Aypimmav cat Marxijvav vropvypact elpnkev.
1 §¢’ abrov Graux with M®; bn’ adrov.
2 peyadompenéatepos With Bekker, after Stephanus: peya-Aompenéotatos.
214

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, u. t-11. 1

himself in his speeches proves that he had an intemperate desire for fame, his cry being that arms must give place to the toga and the laurel of triumph to the tongue.! And at last he praises not only his deeds and actions, but also his speeches, both those which he delivered himself and those which he committed to writing, as if he were impetuously vying with Isocrates and Anaximenes the sophists, instead of claiming the right to lead and instruct the Roman people,

“ Steadfast, in heavy armour clad, destructive to

It is necessary, indeed, that a political leader should prevail by reason of his eloquence, but ignoble for him to admire and crave the fame that springs from his eloquence. Wherefore in this regard Demosthenes is more stately and magnificent, since he declares that his ability in speaking was a mere matter of experience, depending greatly upon the goodwill of his hearers,’ and considers illiberal and vulgar, as they are, those who are puffed up at such success.

III. It is true that in haranguing and guiding the people both had equal power, so that even those who controlled armies and camps had need of their services; Chares, Diopeithes, and Leosthenes needed Demosthenes, and Pompey and the young Caesar needed Cicero, as Caesar himself says in his Memoirs addressed to Agrippa and Maecenas.

1 Cedant arma togae, concedat laurea laudi (in Pisonem, 29.72 i1.).

2 The second verse of an elegiac distich attributed to Aeschylus in Morale, p. 334d. Cf. Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, li.4 p. 242. 3 Cf. On the Crown, 277.

“A , s
26 dé Soxet padicta Kat NeyeTaL TpOTroY avdpos
>’ f 4 / 3 / 3 4
émiverxvuvat Kal Bacavitev, éEovcia Kal apy?)
mav 7Tados Kivovoa Kal Tacay aToKadUTTOVCA
, , \ > e n QO

ckakiav, Anpwocbever pev ovy vanptev, od Edwxe ToLAUTHY SLaTrELpaY EavTOD, pndEeMiay apynY TAY
9 A v A Oe a e >] e al
éemipavav ap&as, 0s ovde THS Up avTOv curTEtaypevns ért Dirtimmov €atpatnynce duvdpews:
r / de f > x / \ 3 Av
3 Kixépwv 6€ tapias eis XtxedXav Kat avOvTratos
ae ,
eis Kudttxtav xat Kanmaboxiayv atootanels, év
e ral a / 3 f 7 a @ Kaip@® THS PirAoTAouTias axpwalovens, Kat TOV
“A 4 a
TELTOMEVWY TTPATHYOV Kai IYELOVOY, WS TOD
n 3 N e
KNETTELY AYEVVOUS OVTOS, ETL TO apmraley TpETFOpéevwv, ov TO Aap Bavev edoxer Secvov, AA oO
a A a \ HETPLWS TOUTO TOLOY NYaTATO, TOAAHY jev ETri-
e / , bd / \
decEw vmepowias XpnpyatTwy emoincato, TONY \ / \ , bd IA \
4 6€ diravOpwrias Kat ypnatoTynTos. ev auth oe
ac , U \ bf \ ed b ,
TH Popn Noyo pev atrodey Geis Urratos, éEovciav
S¢ AXaBov avtoxpdtopos Kal &txTdTopos ert Tovs
\ 4 b tA (ia n 7
mept Katirivav, euaptupnoey apa to HAXatTom pavtevouevw tadvav é€ev Kxax@v Tas ToXeLs, e ’ 3 \ Vf , / \ /; we
Gtay eis TAVTO SUVamis TE MEyaXNH Kal Ppovnats ex
TLVOS TUXNS XPHNOTHS aTavTyjon peta Suxatocvvys.
5 NpnpaticacGat toivvy ato Tov Xoyou Anpo-
/ a ofévns péev errinpoyws NéyeTal, Noyoypapav Kpuda tois wept Poppiwva kal’ AmrodXObwpor aytidixots,
\ \ \ a a ,
kat csaBrAnGels pev emt Tos BacirtKols Ypnuacwy, oprov 6¢ Tov ‘Aprarewv. ef 5é tadtTa Tovs
) ’ 2 ~
ypahovtas (ovx« orjtyot 8 eloiv obToL) evdecIa 216
DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, i. 2-5

But what is thought and said most of all to reveal
and test the character of a man, namely power and authority, which rouses every passion and uncovers every haseness, this Demosthenes did not have, nor did he give any such proof of himself, since he held no conspicuous office, nor did he even command the force which was raised by him against Philip ; whereas Cicero was sent out as quaestor to Sicily, and as pro-consul to Cilicia and Cappadocia, at a time when the love of wealth was at its greatest height, and when those who were sent out as praetors and governors, feeling that theft was an ignoble thing, resorted to open plundering, so that the taking of property was not thought heinous, but he who did this in moderation was held in high esteem; and yet Cicero gave many proofs of his contempt for wealth, and many of his humanity and goodness. And when in Rome itself he was appointed consul in name, but really received the power of a dictator and sole ruler against Catiline and his conspirators, he bore witness to the truth of Plato’s prophecy! that states would then have respite from evil, when in one and the same person, by some happy fortune, great power and wisdom should be conjoined with justice. Moreover, it is said to the reproach of Demosthenes that he made money by his eloquence, since he secretly wrote speeches for Phormio and Apollodorus, who were adversaries in the same case, and since he was accused in the matter of the Great King’s money, and condemned for taking that of Harpalus. And if we should say that those who write these things (and these writers are not few)

! Republic, p. 473 d.

painuev, adr’ Ste ye Tpos Swpeas Bacidéwv avdv yYapite Kal Teun Stdopéevas avTtBrEpat Anpoc OE-/ 9) wn
yns ovK av éeroApLNGEDV, OVS Hv TovTO Epyov! av-Oowmov saveifovtos emi vavutiKols, apnjyxavov 9 an \ \ , oe \ a avrTeimev: mept dé Kixép@vos, OTe Kal YKEeALwWTa@V ayopavopovyts Kat Bacitéws tov Kammadoxav

3 s \ a) bd ¢ , / + > heh avOutTratevovtt Kai TaVv év Pwpun dirav, OT €Fe-
fo / \ \ ;
TUITE THS TWOEWS, SwpoULEeVOV TOAAG Kai Seopeéyov AaBeEiy avTécyeEr, EipNTat.
\ \ 4 4 A \ 3 \ a
IV. Kai pny i) ye puyn TO pev atoxpa KroT IS e€ , / fal \ f v7 b] / adovtt cuvérede, TO 5€ KAAXNTOV Epyov avOpw-
, a / Tous aNLTNPLOUS exKoWavTe THS matptoos. 610
a \ bf \ 4 b , 27? e 9 e
Tod pev ovdels AOyos extimtovTos, ef @ 8 7
auyKAntos écOnra TE dujAXraEE Kal TévOos Eaye Kal yvounv wrép ovdevos elmrety érmeicOn Tpod-vr , tepov 7) Kuxépwrt xaboboyv Wwndicacba. trv
nm ¢
pévto. guyny apyas o Kixépwv dujveyxev év Makedovia Kcadrpevos, TO S€ AnpocBéver Kai 1)
/ / a / puyn péya pépos THS TortsTELas yéyove. auva-
, , 4 ” af \
yovilowevos yap, woTeEp cipntat, Tots’ EXAnae Kal ‘ U / b 7 b] /
tous Makedovwy mpéoBes eEedavvwy émnpyeto
Tas Toes, TortU BeATiov Oeutotoxr€ouvs Kal
\
"ArKiBiadou Tapa Tas auTas TUXAaS havels ToXé-Tns* Kal pévtoe KaTEN@py atOts éavtov érrédmxev
\
els THY AUTNV TAUTHY ToALTELAY, Kal SLETENEL TrO-
a > / Aexaoyv wpos Avtimatpoyv Kai Maxedovas. Kuxeé-
n ~ 4,
pwova © wveidioev év TH BovrAyn Aatrtos aitoupévou
1 sovro €pyov Bekker and Graux, after Reiske: rotro rd Epyov.
218
888 |

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, 1. 5-1v. 3

tell what is untrue, still, at least, that Demosthenes could not bring himself to look with indifference upon gifts which kings offered as marks of honour and favour, and that this was net to be expected of a man who lent money on bottomry, it is im- possible to deny; whereas, in the case of Cicero, that the Sicilians when he was quaestor, and the king of Cappadocia when he was pro-consul, and his friends in Rome when he was going into exile, offered him large sums and begged him to take them, only to meet with his refusal, has been said. IV. And surely in the matter of banishment, at least, for the one it was disgraceful, since he had been convicted of theft; but for the other it was a most honourable result, since he had rid _ his country of baleful men. Therefore no account was made of the one when he went into exile; but for the other the senate changed its garb and put on mourning and could not be induced _ to discuss any business until Cicero's return had been decreed. However, Cicero spent his exile idly, remaining quietly in Macedonia; but the exile of Demosthenes proved to be a great part of his service to the state. [Tor he took part in the struggles of the Greeks, as has been said, and drove out the Macedonian envoys in the various cities which he visited, and so showed himself to be a far better citizen than Themistocles or Alcibiades when they were having the same fortune; and furthermore, when he returned from exile, he again devoted himself to this same public service, and steadfastly continued waging war upon Antipater and the Macedonians. Cicero, on the contrary, was re- proached in the senate by Laelius for sitting silent

Katoapos umatetay peti€vat Tapa vopov, ovtrw
yevet@vTos, aiwmn Ka9nuevov. éypade Sé xal
Bpottos éyxadkov ws peifova Kxal Baputépav TeTalooTpiynKoTe Tupavvida THs vd' avTod Katadvéeions.
V. 'Emi raat b€ THs TeNeuTAS TOV pev OlxTELpat
Tis av, avdpa mpecButnv b¢ ayévverav bro o-KET@V AVW Kal KATW TrepLpEpopevoy Kal Tepided-yovta Tov Oarvatov Kal dmcKpuTTOmEvoy TOUS Ov TodvD mpo THS pvaoews tKovtas ém' avdtov, eit aTvrocpayevta: tod 6, eb Kal yuxpa mpos THY ixeTetay €védwKev, GyaoTn pev 1) TapacKevyn TOD pappaxov Kal tTHpyows, ayaoty 8 1 xXpHoes, OTe ToD Oeod fn Tapacyovtos avT@ THY acurlay, @otep él pelCova Bwpov catadvyov, ée TOV
OTAwY Kal TOY Sopvdopwv AaBwy EauTOY wyYeTO, THs Avtimdtpov KATAYENUTAS WMOTNTOS.
DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO, iv. 3-v.

when Caesar asked leave to stand for the consul-ship, which was contrary to law, since he was still a beardless youth. And Brutus also, in one of his letters, accused him of having reared up a tyranny greater and more severe than that which the writer himself had overthrown.!
V. And after all, the one is to be pitied for the manner of his death—an old man ignobly carried up and down by servants, trying to escape death, hiding himself from those who were coming after him not much in advance of nature’s final summons, and then beheaded; whereas in that of the other, even though it had a slight touch of supplication, we inust admire the preparation of the poison and its place of custody, must admire, too, the use he made of it, because, since the god would not afford him asylum, he took refuge at a greater altar, as it were, made his escape from arms and inercenaries, aud laughed to scorn the cruelty of Antipater.

} Cicero, ad Brutum, i. 17, 2 (Brutus to Atticus),

I. Tov ’AreEavdpov tod Bacitréws Biov Kal
TOU Kaicapos, up ov KatedvOn Tloprrjios, év
TOUT® TO BiPrXiw ypadovtes, dia TO TWAHOOS TOV
DTroKetpeveoy mpafewy ovoev adrO 7 poepodpev n TmapaiTna opeba TOUS avaylyWOoKoVTas, €av pn mdavTa pnde Kal’ Exactov eFeupryacpéeves TL TOV meptBontov aT AY YEAXW LED, aN eTLTEMVOVTES Ta WrEloTa, Mn GUKOparTElyY. OTE yap LoTopias ypidhomev, aArNa Biovs, ovTE Tais émipavertTaTals mpakect TavTws éverte SHjAwWOtS ApeETHS 7} Kakias, GAAA Tpayywa Bpayv TodAaKkis Kal pHya Kat TALOLa TES Eupacw nOous émroinae baXdov 1)
paxas HupLover pot Kal maparaters at péytoTat
Kal TOALopKiat TONEWD. @aTrEp OvV Ob Soypagor
TAS OMOLOTHTAS ATO TOV TpoTwTroU Kai THY Tept
Thy Ovi eidav, ols eupaiveTar TO 780s, ava-AapuBavove wv, eAaytota TOV hour ay pep@y ppov-TiSovres, ovTwS uly SoTéoV els Ta Ths Yuxiis onweta Ha dov évoved Aa Kal bua TOUT@Y el00-
To.iy Tov éxaotov PBiov, édcavtas étépois Ta peyeOn Kai Tous ayavas.
If. “AréEavdpos Ott TH yéver pos TaTpos pev
jv ‘Hpaxreidns amo Kapavov, 7 pos be HMNTPOS Alaxidns amo Neortodrénov, tav mavu TTL
,
aoTeupéeveoy éott. Réyetae b€ Pidimos év Lauo-

I. Ir is the life of Alexander the king, and of Caesar, who overthrew Pompey, that I[am writing in this book, and the multitude of the deeds to be treated is so great that I shall make no other preface than to entreat my readers, in case I do not tell of all the famous actions of these men, nor even speak exhaustively at all in each particular case, but in epitome for the most part, not to complain. For it is not Histories that I am writing, but Lives; and in the most illustrious deeds there is not always a manifestation of virtue or vice, nay, a slight thing like a phrase or a jest often makes a greater revelation of character than battles where thousands fall, or the greatest armaments, or sieges of cities. Accordingly, just as painters get the likenesses in their portraits from the face and the expression of the eyes, wherein the character shows itself, but make very little ac- count of the other parts of the body, so I must be permitted to devote myself rather to the signs of the soul in men, and by means of these to portray the life of each, leaving to others the description of their great contests.

II. As for the lineage of Alexander, on his father's side he was a descendant of Heracles through Caranus, and on his mother's side a descendant of Aeacus through Neoptolemus; this is accepted with- out any question. And we are told that Philip, after , a? / N 3 if i?

Goan Th Orvpriads cvppunbeis avtos Te petpa-
\ A KLov @Y €TL KakelYnS Tatoos Oophavis 'yovewy
a \ \ fi e
épacOivar Kal TOV Yapuov OUTWS appocal, TELTAS
\ a - Tov adeAhov avTis ApupBav. 7 pév ody vimdn, MTpo THS vuKTOS 7 ovVELpXOnoay eis TOY Oddrapo)r, wn , n nw al
ed0£e BpovrTijs yevoueuns eumreceiy auTns TH yaoTpl
/ a a \ fal
KEpavuvoy, eK O€ THS TANYHS TOAD Tp avagdler,
, 3 ,
eiTa pynyvipevov els phroyas mwavtn dhepopévas
A e \ , ¢ , ' \
diarvOjvat. o 5€ Didirimos voTepw Kpove peta
\ , 3 A e N ' 7 wn
TOV yapov eldev Ovap avTov emt BadrovTa ohpayioa
A a 4 \ a
Th yaoTpl THS yuvatKos' 4 O€ yAuUd) THs odpaa / s ' val
yidos, @S @eTo, A€ovTOS Elyev ElKova. TOV dE
" , e / \ v € b)
rwv pavtewv Uhopwméevov THY dryly, ws aKpLa fal id al
Beatépas vrais deoménov 76 Didinam@ Tov

\ \ , bi , e \ mept Tov ydapov, “Apiotavdpos o Tedpunaocers
f ” ‘\ ” +X \ > f
xvety E¢n THY avOpwrrov, ovdev yap atoodpayi-tecOar Tov Kevav, Kal KvEeLW Traida Ovmoeldy Kai
4 4
NeovT@dN THY daw. WhOn dé ToTE Kai SpdKwv
, n bd fal
Kolmwperns THS Odvyuriddos TtapexteTapevos TH
cwpate Kal TODTO padtaota Tov PidimTou TOV \ lal gpwra Kat Tas piroppocvvas apavp@aat Néyovaty,
¢ a 3
w@s pndée hortay étt ToAAdKIS Tap avTHY ava-4 Tmavoopevov, elite SeicavTd Tivas payetas er
A \ f A A i td ,
avT® kal ddppaka THs yuvatKkos, ete THY Ota
s f > ,
WS KPELTTOI'L TUVOVENS apoadLovEvon.
¢ be \ f bd \ / e a Etepos b€ wept TovTwy éoTi Noxyos, WS TATAL fal a / a 9 A
pev at THOE yuvaixes Evoyot Tois Opdixots odoar Kat toils wept tov Atovucoy opytacpmots ék Tov
, a , / f
qTavu waralov, Krwdwrés te cat Mipardoves 226

ALEXANDER, u. 1-5

being initiated into the mysteries of Samothrace at the same time with Olympias, he himself being still a youth and she an orphan child, fell in love with her and betrothed himself to her at once with the con- sent of her brother, Arymbas. Well, then, the night before that on which the marriage was consummated, the bride dreamed that there was a peal of thunder and that a thunder-bolt fell upon her womb, and that thereby much fire was kindled, which broke into flames that travelled all about, and then was ex- tinguished. Ata later time, too, after the marriage, Philip dreamed that he was putting a seal upon his wife’s womb; and the device of the seal, as he thought, was the figure of a lion. ‘The other seers, now, were led by the vision to suspect that Philip needed to put a closer watch upon his marriage rela- tions; but Aristander of Telmessus said that the woman was pregnant, since no seal was put upon what was empty, and pregnant of a son whose nature would be bold and lion-like. Moreover, a serpent was once seen lying stretched out by the side of Olympias as she slept, and we are told that this, more than anything else, dulled the ardour of Philip’s attentions to his wife, so that he no longer came often to sleep by her side, either because he feared that some spells and enchantments might be practised upon him by her, or because he shrank from her embraces in the conviction that she was the partner of a superior being.

But concerning these matters there is another story to this effect: all the women of these parts were addicted to the Orphic rites and the orgies of Dionysus from very ancient times (being ealled Klodones and Mimallones!), and imitated in many 1 Macedonian names for Bacchantes. 227

3

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

emovupiay éXovea, TOAAG Tais '"Hémviot Kat Tals TeEpl TOV Aipov Opyacats Opole. dpaciv, ad' @y SoKet xa TO OpnoKevery 6 ovopa, Taig KATAKOpOLS ryevéa Bat Kal TEpLepyols lepoupyiats,) dé 'Odup- meas paddov étépwv Cnrtocaca Tas KATOVAS KL TOUS evdovorac mous éEdryovca BapBapixo- Tepov odes peydrous yeiponGers epetdKeTo Tots Otdcots, of mwoAXAdKIS EK TOU KLTTOUD Kal TOV HMUCTLE@Y ALKVOV TAPAVASVOMEVOL KAL TEPLEALTTO- pevot TOs Ovpacolts TOV yuvatK@V Kal Tols oTEda- vows é€émAnTtTov Tovs avdpas.
III. Od pv adr Dorin HEV, [ETA TO pac pa meat Xaipova TOV Meyadoronitny ELS Aergous, x xpNe HOV Kouta Onvat heyouce Tapa tov Geov KENEVOVTOS "Appove Ovew Kat céBecOar partota tovTov Tov Oeov: anoBareiv dé TeV Owewv avTov THY ETE pay, yy TO THS Ovpas appe@ ™ poo Bahov KAT@MTEVC ED ev poppy OpaKovTos cuvevvatouevov TH yuvatkt Tov Oeov. bé Onup- TLAS, WS 'Epatoabevns pict, Tpomepmouvea TOV "ArdeEavopov éml THv oTpaTelay, Kal ppdoaca Love TO Tept THY TEKVOOU aTroppytop, éx €XEVEV akia dpovety ths yevécews. EtEpor SE hacw aAvTHV ahoorotabat Kal every" "Ov TAVGETAL pe d:aBarAXwv 'AREEavdpos Tpos THY "Hpav;" "Eyevvnbn & ovv "AréEavdpos (otapévou pnvos 'ExatouBatovos, dv Maxedoves A@ov xadovour,
1 Plutarch apparently derives this verb from @pjaca (Thracian women).
2 Sacred to Dionysus, and carried on the headg of the celebrants.
228

ways the practices of the Edonian women and the Thracian women about Mount Haemus, from whom, as it would seem, the word “ threskeuein’’! came to be applied to the celebration of extravagant and superstitious ceremonies. Now Olympias, who affected these divine possessions more zealously than other women, and carried out these divine inspirations in wilder fashion, used to provide the revelling companies with great tame serpents, which would often lift their heads from out the ivy and the mystic winnowing-baskets,? or coil themselves about the wands and garlands of the women, thus terrifying the men.

III However, after his vision, as we are told, Philip sent Chaeron of Megalopolis to Delphi, by whom an oracle was brought him from Apollo, who bade him sacrifice to Ammon and hold that god in greatest reverence, but told him he was to lose that one of his eyes which he had applied to the chink in the door when he espied the god, in the form of a serpent, sharing the couch of his wife. Moreover, Olympias, as Eratosthenes says, when she sent Alexander forth upon his great expedition, told him, and him alone, the secret of his begetting, and bade him have purposes worthy of his birth. Others, on the contrary, say that she repudiated the idea, and said: ‘Alexander must cease slandering me_ to Hera.” *

Be that as it may, Alexander was born early in the month Hecatombaeon,* the Maeedonian name for

3 The lawful spouse of Zeus Ammon.

4 356 B.c. The day of birth has probably been moved back two or three months for the sake of the coincidence mentioned below (§5). Hecatombaeon corresponds nearly to July.

e a > ,
extn, KAO Av nyuépav o THs KEeotas ‘Aptépedos
3 : , , e De. i e wy + 5]

éverpnobn vewss @ y Hynotas 0 Mayvns émi-
/ \ .
Tepavnkev evipwovnpa KatacBéoat THY TUpKaiay
e 4 , 3 / x
éxeivynvy vumTo Wuxpias Suvayevoy' eixoTws yap
A \ \ an ,
éhn KataprexOjvar tov vewyv tis “Aptéuscos 3 / \ \ pk ‘ o /
agyoNoupevns mept Thy AdeEavdpov paiwouv.
o \ a t ? Ia? 5 /
doo. O6€ Tav paywv év “Edéow dtatpiBovres > 4
ETUXOV, TO TEpt TOV Vewr TAOOS nrYyoUpmEvOL TAO OUS
a f \ /
étépou onpetoy eivat, dtéGeov Ta TPOTWTA TUTTOfa YU
pevoe Kal Powrvtes aTnv aya Kal ovppopayv
a \ /
peyddny TH Acta THY nuepav exEelyny TETOKEVAL.
N f F / e f A Dirinme b€ dpte Uotidacavy npnxote Tpets HKov
> , \ \ Jase , e \ ’ \ ayyerlar KaTa TOV AUTO Ypovov' 7 meV IXXUPLOUS
e a ra) a , tr } \ iB / e be yTTacGat payn peyadrn dra Llappeviwvos, 4 dé
/ / ,
Oruptiacw int@ KérAnTte vevixnKkévat, TPiTN Oé “ bd b e / mept THS AdeEavdpou yevioews. ef ois 7Od0peEvor,
4 a / a ,
WS ELKOS, ETL MANXOV OL paVvTELs ETHpav aTopatvo-
\ “A ,
plevol TOV Tatoa Tplal viKals auyyeyerynuévov
avikntov écecOat.
LV. Tov pév ovv dav Tod cwpatos ot Avairv4 a 3 ¢ bf ? e >
Tetol paddtata Tov avopiavtay éudpaivovaw, bd
e , \ f
ov povov Kat autos 1)£lou TAaTTETHaL. Kal yap f > A A “A , ef \ wn
uardio® a TOrdOL TOY StadoxYwV VaTEpoY Kali TOV
“ f 4 A
PLAWY ATELMLLOVYTO, THY TE AVATATLY TOD AVYEVOS
“A f \
ELS EUWYULOV NAVY KEKALWEVOU Kat THY UypOTNTA

“ “A e
TOV OmpaTtov, dvateTHnpnKey axptBas Oo TEYViTNS.
A XN
2’Amedrns O€ ypddwy tov Kepavvopopoy ovK
\ , \ ,
EULLNTATO THY Xpoav, AAA PaLoTEepov Kal TeTL-ff > 4 § \ “ e ¢e \ YW pLeVOV ETTOLNTEV. HY O€ AEUKOS, WS haat 7) dé 230

which is Loiis, on the sixth day of the month, and on this day the temple of Ephesian Artemis was burnt. It was apropos of this that Hegesias the Magnesian made an utterance frigid enough to have extinguished that great conflagration. He said, namely, it was no wonder that the temple of Artemis was burned down, since the goddess was busy bringing Alexander into the world. But all the Magi who were then at Ephesus, looking upon the temple’s disaster as a sign of further disaster, ran about beating their faces and crying aloud that woe and great calamity for Asia had that day been born. To Philip, however, who had just taken Potidaea, there came three messages at the same time: the first that Parmenio had conquered the Illyrians in a great battle, the second that his race-horse had won a victory at the Olympic games, while a third announced the birth of Alexander. These things delighted him, of course, and the seers raised his spirits still higher by declaring that the son whose birth coincided ‘with three victories would be always victorious.

IV. The outward appearance of Alexander is best represented by the statues of him which Lysippus made, and it was by this artist alone that Alexander himself thought it fit that he should be modelled. For those peculiarities which many of his successors and friends afterwards tried to imitate, namely, the poise of the neck, which was bent slightly to the left, and the melting glance of his eyes, this artist has accurately observed. Apelles, however, in painting him as wielder of the thunder-bolt, did not reproduce his complexion, but made it too dark and swarthy. Whereas he was of a fair colour, as they say, and his

AevKoTNS eTEhoiviacev auto mepi To a7h0os
panriaera wal TO TPOT@OTov. Ort b€ TOD YpwTOS ua rov anémves Kal TO oT Oma KATELY EV evodia Kab THY capKa Tacay, @oTE mrnpova bat TOUS
YiTw@VLiTKOUS, avéyvopev év VTTopYyuacw ’ Aptoto-Fevetous.
Aitia 6¢ tows TOD 70 LAT OS Kpacls TONU-Geppos ovoa Kal mupw@dys” y yap evwdia yiveraut meet TOV VYPOV uTO Fepporntos, WS oleTaL
Ceoppacros. o0ev ot Enpot Kab O:dTrupor TOTrOL THS olKoupern)s Ta TreloTa Kat Kad OTA TOV apopatwov pépovaiw: éEatpet yap 0 HALos TO UypoD DOT EP UN onmedovos émiTohagov Tois THAT LD.
“AdéEar6 pov b€) Jepporns TOU TWOLATOS, WS EOLKE, Kal TOTLKOV Kat Gupoero;) Tapeiyer.
"Ete 6€ OvTos avrou Tatoos TE Twp poo wn)
defaivero T® Tpos TadAAa paybatov sbvTa Kal pepopevoy opodpés ep Tals noovais Tats Tept TO oMpLa Sua Kivytov eivat Kat pera TOAANS T™ pQorn-Tos antecOat Tav TOLOUTMY, y TE prroripia Tap
NALKLAD eu BprBes eixe TO ppovnua Kal peyarowpu-Xov. OUTE yap aTO TAVTOS OUTE TacaY HYyaTa do€av, ws Didimmos Noyou Te Sewornre copt-TTLKOS KarwmeFopLevos Kal Tas éy ‘Ohvprria vikas TOV appara eyXaparrov TOUS vouicpacw, AXA Kal TOV mept QUTOV aTroTrELpwUevwV et Bovdour’ av “Odvutiacw aywvicacbat otdoior, iy yap TOSWKNS, eS Oy yer é~yn, ‘‘ Bactreis €LENAOV eeu avTayovrras, daiverat bé Kal xkaQorouv pos TO TOY GOANTaY yévos adXoOTPiWs évwv mrEelaTous ye Toe Beis ayavas ov povov 232

fairness passed into ruddiness on his breast particu- larly, and in his face. Moreover, that a very pleasant odour exhaled from his skin and that there was a fragrance about his mouth and all his flesh, so that his garments were filled with it, this we have read in the Memoirs of Aristoxenus.

Now, the cause of this, perhaps, was the tempera- ment of his body, which was a very warm and fiery one; for fragrance is generated, as Theophrastus thinks, where moist humours are acted upon by heat. Wherefore the dry and parched regions of the world produce the most and best spices; for the sun draws away the moisture which, like material of corruption, abounds in vegetable bodies. And in Alexander’s case, it was the heat of his body, as it would seem, which made him prone to drink, and choleric.

But while he was still a boy his self-restraint showed itself in the fact that, although he was im- petuous and violent in other matters, the pleasures of the body had little hold upon him, and he in- dulged in them with great moderation, while his ambition kept his spirit serious and lofty in advance of his years. For it was neither every kind of fame nor fame from every source that he courted, as Philip did, who plumed himself like a sophist on the power of his oratory, and took care to have the victories of his chariots at Olympia engraved upon his coins; nay, when those about him inquired whether he would be willing to contend in the foot-race at the Olympic games, since he was swift of foot, " Yes," said he, "if I could have kings as my contestants." And in general, too, Alexander appears to have been averse to the whole race of athletes; at any rate, though he instituted very many contests, not only

Tpaywoov Kal avrAnTov Kal kLPapwdav, adr Kab
€ " / a \ ¢ palwdav, Onpas te tavtodaTis kat paBdo-
" an Ww f
MayYias, OUTE TUYLUNS OUTE TAYKpAaTLOV [META TLVOS
aomovons éOnxcev aOrov.
V. Tovs 5é rapa rod Ilepoav Bacthéws mpeé-
4 b) aA / /
oBeus Heovtas atodnuovytos Didimmov Eevilwv
U al
Kal yevouevos avv7Ons oUTwS exetpwaaTo TH dtdo-ppocuvyn Kai TO pnoev Epwrnua tracdixov épwth-CNOA
OAL MNOE MLLKPOV, UA' OOOY TE pK Kal TrOpEias
THS avw tpoTrov éxtruvOdvecOar, Kal Tept avTov
la) an XN
Tov Baciéws, omotos €in mpos TovS ToNépous, \ ig e a b) \ \ , ? , Kat Tis 7 Lepoay adn Kai dvvapus, Mote Oavma-
b / \ \ U4 4 /
fev éxelvovs Kai THY AeyouEevny DiritTov Sevo-\ Lal \ A '. e TNTAa pNnoev HyetoOat pos THY TOU TaLdds Opunv
id e A
Kal meyarompaypocurny. oaaKkls your aTayyeniZ / x / ig \
Bein Dirsrrmos 7} worw évdo£or ynpynkwos 1} paxny \ , id i
Tia TEpLBONTOV VEviKNKwWS, OV TaVvY haLopos ry

b) , 3 \ \ \ € , M4 ce?
aKkovwy, aA TpOs Tous nALKLwWTAS Edeyer? “°O,
A / id e / > \ \ X+QN
Taloes, TAVTA TPOANWETAL O TATIP* éuol O€ OOEY
> , > e an ” b) , /
amoneiper wed vuwv épyov atoseiEacOat péya \ , 9 ’ \ e \ A IQA a Kal NapTpov.” ov yap noovny EnX@v ove TACDd-
b) bee | \ \ 60 » Peed & a la
Tov, WAN apeTny Kal do€av, évopslev, dow mrEiova
SS a ,
ANWEeTaAl Tapa TOU TaTPOS, éAaTTOVA KaTOPOwceELY
A \ al
60 éavtov. 616 Tois Tpadypacw av€ouévols KaT-
\ 3 a avarioxecGa Tas mpakers ets exetvov aHyoupevos,
b 4 \ / be \ \ b) , éBovreTo hm) Ypnuata pnoé Tpupas Kal amoNav-
’ 9 bd “ \ / \ /
gels, GAN ayavas Kal TorEmovs Kai PidoTipias
éyovoay apxny TaparaPetv.
\ , °
TIodXol pév ody repli Thy émtpérelay, ws ELKGs, 234

667

ALEXANDER, w. 6-v. 4

for tragic poets and players on the flute and players on the lyre, but also for rhapsodists, as well as for hunting of every sort and for fighting with staves, he took no interest in offering prizes either for boxing or for the pancratium.

V. He once entertained the envoys from the Persian king who came during Philip's absence, and associated with them freely. He won upon them by his friendliness, and by asking no childish or trivial questions, but by enquiring about the length of the roads and the character of the journey into the interior, about the king himself, what sort of a warrior he was, and what the prowess and might of the Persians. The envoys were therefore astonished and regarded the much-talked-of ability of Philip as nothing compared with his son’s eager disposition to do great things. At all events, as often as tidings were brought that Philip had either taken a famous city or been victorious in some celebrated battle, Alexander was not very glad to hear them, but would say to his comrades : “ Boys, my father will anticipate everything; and for me he will leave no great or brilliant achievement to be displayed to the world with your aid.”” For since he did not covet pleasure, nor even wealth, but excellence and fame, he con- sidered that the more he should receive from his father the fewer would be the successes won by himself.

Therefore, considering that inerease in prosperity meant the squandering upon his father of opportunities for achievement, he preferred to receive from him a realm which afforded, not wealth nor luxury and enjoyment, but struggles and wars and ambitions.

In the work of caring for him, then, many persons,

*® > a a \ \ \ /
HoaV avTOV Tpodets Kal Tadaywyot Kal didadoKa-
4 A
dot Aeyomeror, Wace 8 eperati Ker Aewridas, avijp
f 9 > \ \ \ y ,
To Te 7005 avaotnpos Kal avyyevis Odvprriasos,
\ a / 3
avTos pev ov hevywy TO THs Tatdaywyias dvopa
\ , aN Kanov épyov éyvovons Kal NapTpOV, VITO Oé TOV
wv XN \ De ate \ \ > , \ ddAXNov dia TO alwpa Kal THY olKELOTHTA TpodeEds
3 AnreEdvdpou cal xalnyntns Kadovpevos. o be
~ a ~ \
TO CX Ma TOV TraloaywyoU Kal THY TpOenyopiav (¢ , iy 7 aA 4 b] , UTroTrotoupevos HY Avoimayos, TO yéves Axapvay,
¥ \ 2 x ” b tal ef 9 e€ \ \ aXXo pev ovdevy EYwV aoTeEtov, OTL & éavTov pev
b /
ovopmatve Dowixa, tov d€ AdeEavdpov 'AyirXr€Ea,
4 \ \ , ' a ' ,
II[nréa 6€ tov Pirtrzov, yyaTato Kai devtépay
3 s elye YOpav.
, a a
VI. 'Eqvet 6€ Pirovetkxov Tod Oeccarod Tov
5 , aA
Boveeddrav ayayovtos wviov TO Piditiwre tpic-
/ b) \ , KAaLOEKA TANGYTMY KaTEBNGaY Els TO TEdiOV SoKt-
' , \
padaovTes Tov imroVv, boxe TE KAANETOS Elva Kal
A / y > , /

Komto;) SvtypnoTtos, ovTE avaBaTny Tpoctépevos
by ‘ Cal
oTE Hwviy VToMévwv TIWOS TOV Tept Tov Direr-4 Tov, adr atavtwy Kate~aviatapevos, dua xepat-
a , \ ,
vovtos 6€ Tov Didiwmov Kal KEdEVOVTOS aTayeELV
e 4 \ > Ul
@S TavTdTacly ayplov Kal aKoXaCTOV, TapwY
5 Ug
"AréEavdpos eitrev “‘Otov trmov amoAXvovat ov
, / \
ametpiav Kal padakiav ypnoacbas py duvapevot,” \ Q c) aA ¢ , > ‘ ,
TO ev ovV TP@TOV O DidiTTos éEoLwT noe TONNG-
a , \ a xis b€ avtod Tapadeyyopmévov Kai Tepitabovr-fa aeae Wy) a 7°99 ~~» 66 , 4 tos, “’Emitiuas ov, edn, “ mpecButepols ws Te
, > . OG. A Cal t/ , TNEOV AUTOS ELOWS TF padAAOY iTTM® YpHnacacbat 236

as was natural, were appointed to be his nurturers, tutors, and teachers, but over them all stood Leonidas, a man of stern temperament and a kinsman of Olympias. Although he did not himself shun the title of tutor, since the office afforded an honourable and brilliant occupation, yet by other people, owing to his dignity and his relationship, he was called Alexander's foster-father and preceptor. The man, however, who assumed the character and the title of tutor was Lysimachus, a native of Acarnania, who had no general refinement, but because he called himself Phoenix,! Alexander Achilles, and Philip Peleus, was highly regarded and held a second place.

VI. Once upon a time Philoneicus the Thessalian brought Bucephalas, offering to sell him to Philip for thirteen talents,? and they went down into the plain to try the horse, who appeared to be savage and altogether intractable, neither allowing any one to mount him, nor heeding the voice of any of Philip's attendants, but rearing up against al] of them. Then Philip was vexed and ordered the horse to be led away, believing him to be altogether wild and un- broken; but Alexander, who was near by, said: “What a horse they are losing, because, for lack of skill and courage, they cannot manage him!” At first, then,

Philip held his peace; but as Alexander many times let fall such words and showed great distress, he said: “ Dost thou find fault with thine elders in the belief that thou knowest more than they do or art better able to manage a horse?”

1 The preceptor of Achilles.
2 The talent was worth about £235, or $1,200, with four or five times the purchasing power of modern money.

> le
3 duvapevos; “Tovtw yoodv,” ébn, “ xpnoatuny av Cet t 19:5) ck iS \ f / A, erepou BeNTLOD. Av 0€ £N XpNoN, Tiva OLKNDY a / ear Pie , \ ny 4
THS TpoTreTelas upeters; Eyo, vy Av, etzrev, “amotlaw Tov immou THY TinY. yevouevov €
/ 3 e A \ ? f ? \
YEAWTOS, ELTA OPtTmoU Tpos AAANAOUS Els TO
\ a apyup.ov, evOus TpocdSpap@v TO iTTo Kal Tapa-
N , \ ¢
AaBov Thy jviav éréatpewe pos Tov HALOV, ws
€olKev, évvoncas OTL THY oKLaY TpoTitTOoVaaY
/ e a a
Kal cadEevopmevny Opa@Vv mpd avTodD OLtaTapdTTotTo.
\ ¢
puikpa € OUTW TapaKkadTracas Kal KaTaWyaas, / le \ a b)
@S Ewpa TANPOULEVOY Oupod Kal TvEvMATOS, ATOP-
a a \ /
piyas Houxh THY XAapuvOa Kal peTEWpiaas AUTO
5) an / \ \ \ \ “ aoPharas TEpleBn. Kal miKpa prev TEeptrtaBwv Tats
, \ a a
nviars TOV YaALWov avev TANYHS Kai oTapaypLov
,
mTpocavéotetrev'! ws d€ Ewpa Tov immor apeiKoTa
\ 3 , ? a \ \ \ , ? \
THY aTELAHY, Opy@vTa O€ Wpos TOV Spopoy, édeis
OtwKxev 116n hdwvn Opacutépa Kal Todos Kpovce
: , y iy a 7 i \ \ PS / 2 e ia F
Ypw@pevos. Ta dé Tept TOY DiriTTOV HY aywvia
\ a \

Kal olyn TO TWp@Tov: ws b€ Kaprpas érréotpeev
? al \ \ Q e ~*~ A U
op0as coBapos Kat yeyndws, ot wev adrot TavTeEs
3 Ul ¢e be \ x Ps a / U nrdratay, o d€ TAaTHpP Kal OaxpUaal TL EyETAL
\ a mpos THY XYapdv, Kat KaTaBavtos avTOU THY Ke-
> a 39 A
hariy piryaas, ‘PO wat,” pavas, “ Gytet ceavt@
/ a Baotrelav iconv: Maxedovia yap ce ov ywpel.”
wn \ fd nA
VII. Kadopav dé tHv dua avtod dvaKivyntov \ 9 Sin 4 \ An e OL be pev ovaoav épicavtos pn PRracOhvat, padiws de
\ \
aryouevny vTO AOyou pos TO Séov, AUTOS TE TTeEi-1 wpocavéoterdey Bekker has apooeore:Aey, with inferior

MSS.

“This horse, at any rate,’ said Alexander, “I could manage better than others have.” “ And if thou shouldst not, what penalty wilt thou undergo for thy rashness?”’ “Indeed,” said Alexander, “I will forfeit the price of the horse.’”’ There was laughter at this, and then an agreement between father and son as to the forfeiture, and at once Alexander ran to the horse, took hold of his bridle-rein, and turned him towards the sun; for he had noticed, as it would seem, that the horse was greatly disturbed by the sight of his own shadow falling in front of him and dancing about. And after he had calmed the horse a little in this way, and had stroked him with his hand, when he saw that he was full of spirit and courage, he quietly cast aside his mantle and with a light spring safely bestrode him. Then, with a little pressure of the reins on the bit, and without striking him or tearing his mouth, he held him in hand ;! but when he saw that the horse was rid of the fear that had beset him, and was impatient for the course, he gave him his head, and at last urged him on with sterner tone and thrust of foot. Philip and his company were speechless with anxiety at first ; but when Alexander made the turn in proper fashion and came back towards them proud and exultant, all the rest broke into loud cries, but his father, as we are told, actually shed tears of joy, and when Alexander had dismounted, kissed him, saying: “My son, seek thee out a kingdom equal to thyself; Macedonia has not room for thee.”

VII. And since Philip saw that his son’s nature was unyielding and that he resisted compulsion, but was easily led by reasoning into the path of duty,

2 Amyot, ‘“‘le remeit gentiment.”

tO

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Oew érreipato paddov 1) mpooTatTEV, Kat Tots
\ ‘ \ 4 n
Tept MOVvoLKNY Kab TA €YKUKALa TraLoevTais ov
, ‘ / “
qavu TL TloTEVMY THY éTLOTATiaY avTOvD Kal 4 / iS ,
KATAPTLOLV, WS pEeLCovos OVTAY TpaypaTeEias Kab LS ,
KaTa Tov ~opoxrEa
nw a“ >’
TOAAOY Yadtvav Epyov olukwv O apa, peteTéwrato Tay dirocopay tov évdo€otatov 668

Q , bd / \ Q Ul
Kat Noytwratoyv ApioToTeXny, Kaa Kal TpeTTOVTA
f al \ nm
biacKkddia Tehécas avT@a. THY yap Srayepitav
/ 3 ® a > ,) , C2
ToAw, €& WS AY “AptaotoTeAnS, avactaTov UT
a / ,
QUTOU YEyEVNMEVNV TUVOKLTE WAAL, Kal TOUS OLahuyovTas 7 Sov\evovtas TOY TOALT@V aTOKAaTE-OTNCE.
Nv \ \ > b nn ‘ } ‘ ‘ \
LYoAnY pév ovy avtois Kat dratpiPiv TO Trept / nw > 4 ee 4 a) Mielav vupdatov aédetEev, Strov péype voy
? / ¢ , \ e 4
Apiatotérous edpas te ALGivas Kal UTogKious
f , v \ ? f
mepimatous Setxvvovalv. Eéorxe O€ ‘AXé£Eavdpos 9 Ud N 3 N \ \ a ov povov Tov 7O0tKOY Kai TOXNTLKOY Tapanraely
, 5) \ \ a > / \ f
Noyor, GAAa Kal TOV aTroppyTwY Kai BaduTéepwr “ e ft PENTA)
didacKkadiorv, as of avdpes idiws akpoapmatiKas
3 % if
Kal émomTiKas mpocayopevovTes oux eEepepor els
, a ay \ > aa id é

TodXouvs, peTacxe. On yap ets Actay dtaPe-
, \ 4 f \ bd ,
Bnxos, Kal muOopmevos ayous Tivas ev BiPALows \ ig Ld \ 9% / 3 , , wept TovTwy ve ’ApiatotéXous ExdeddaOa, ypa-
, /
get mpos avtov Urép pirocogias wappynaralopevos im b / emia ToAny, HS avTiypadoyv €otiv: “’AX€Eardpos
i ’ la) /
"ApiotoTéves ev mpaTTew. ovKk oplas éroinoas
a U f €xO0US TOUS AKpOamaTLKOUS TAY NOYwH' TivL yap 240

ALEXANDER, vn. 1-4

he himself tried to persuade rather than to command him; and because he would not wholly entrust the direction and training of the boy to the ordinary teachers of poetry and the formal studies, feeling that it was a matter of too great importance, and,
in the words of Sophocles,!
“A task for many bits and rudder-sweeps as well,”

he sent for the most famous and learned of philoso- phers, Aristotle, and paid him a noble and appropriate tuition-fee. The city of Stageira, that is, of which Aristotle was a native, and which he had himself destroyed, he peopled again, and restored to it those of its citizens who were in exile or slavery.

Well, then, as a place where master and_ pupil could labour and study, he assigned them the pre- cinct of the nymphs near Mieza, where to this day the visitor is shown the stone seats and shady walks of Aristotle. It would appear, moreover, that Alex- ander not only received from his master his ethical and political doctrines, but also participated in those secret and more profound teachings which philoso- phers designate by the special terms “acroamatic ” and “epoptic,”? and do not impart to many. For after he had already crossed into Asia, and when he learned that certain treatises on these recondite matters had been published in books by Aristotle, he wrote him a letter on behalf of philosophy, and put it in plain language. And this is a copy of the letter. ‘‘ Alexander, to Aristotle, greeting. Thou hast not done well to publish thy acroamatic

1 Nauck, Trag. Graec. Fraq.? p. 315. 2 z.e., fit for oral teaching only, and for the initiated ; ‘‘esoteric,” as opposed to “‘ exoteric” doctrines.

241

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

57 Stolcopmey nueis TOV Addr, Eb KAD ods ETTAL-SevOnuev oyous, OUTOL TMavTwY EcovTaL KoLVOL;
éya b€ Bovroluny dv rais wept Ta dpliota éurrecpiais } tats duvapeot Stadéperv. Eppwao.” Tav-THY men oby THY prroripiay avToU _TapapuOovpevos “A pia ToTEhys amonhoyetTat Tept TOV hOYwv éxeivon, os Kal éxdedopevonv Kal pn éxdedopevorv™ arnOas Yep " peta TA Palka Tpaypareia 1 POs didacKkanriay Kal wabnow ovdév & exovea Xproupov UTOoELYya TOs TeTaLbevpévols aT apxXAs Yé-YypamTrTat.
VIII. Aoxe? 6é por Kat To pircatpeiv ’AXeEar-Spe mpoatpiracbar paddov eTEpOV “A ptaroTéAns:
ov yap fLovoy THY Oewpiay nyaTna ev, aNAa Kal vor ovaLy éBon ber TOUS pirous KAL TUVETATTE Gepa-TELaS TLVaS Kal Olaitas, ws €k TOV eT LT TONDY
AaBeiv éotrv. Hv b€ Kal huvcet Piroroyos Kat piravayvoorns. Kal THY ev ‘Trrdda THS TOAE-LLKIS aperis epodiov Kal vomifor Kat ovo pata, érxaBe mev A pta ToTEAOUS SiopPwaarros 7; iy €x TOU vapOnKos Kahovow, eixe dé del peta TOU eyxXelpediov KeLpevny Utd TO mpoo cep dharov, OS ‘Ovnat-KpLTOS laTopnKe, TOV 6 G\rxov BiBrtov ovK ev-Topay ev Tots vw TOTTOLS “Apranov éxéXevae Teurpat. Kaketvos eTeurey avT@ tas Te Pir-oToOv BiBrous Kab TOV Evperidov Kab Lopoxdéous Kal Alaxvrou TparywoLr@v TuxXras, kat TedXéotov
Kab Pirofevov d.0upauSous. A ptarorehny O¢
Oavpatov év apxi Kat ayaT ov ovxX HT TOV, @S AUTOS Edeye, TOD TATpPOS, wS bt €xEtvoY pev Cav, dia TovTov Sé Karas Cav, Uatepov UTomroTEpoV 242

ALEXANDER, vu. 4-vin. 3

doctrines ; for in what shall I surpass other men if those doctrines wherein | have been trained are to be all men’s common property? But I had rather excel in my acquaintance with the best things than in my power. Farewell.” Accordingly, in defending him- self, Aristotle encourages this ambition of Alexander by saying that the doctrines of which he spoke were both published and not published ; for in truth his treatise on metaphysics is of no use for those who would either teach or learn the science, but is written as a memorandum for those already trained therein. VIII. Moreover, in my opinion Alexander’s love of the art of healing was inculcated in him by Aristotle preeminently. For he was not only fond of the theory of medicine, but actually came to the aid of his friends when they were sick, and prescribed for them certain treatments and regimens, as one can gather from his letters. He was also by nature a lover of learning and a lover of reading. And since he thought and called the Iliad a viaticum of the military art, he took with him Aristotle's recension of the poem, called the Iliad of the Casket,! and always kept it lying with his dagger under his pillow, as Onesicritus informs us; and when he could find no other books in the interior of Asia, he ordered Harpalus to send him some. So Harpalus sent him the books of Philistus, a great many of the tragedies of Euripides, Sophocles, and Aeschylus, and the dithyrambic poems of Telestws and Philoxenus. Aristotle lie admired at the first, and loved him, as he himself used to say, more than he did his father, for that the one had given him life, but the other had taught him a noble life ; later, however,

1 Cf. chapter xxvi. 1.

Le)

4 > ee a / f > ' f
ETXEV, OVX WOTE TOLNTAL TL KAKOV, AXX al Ptro-
\ a \ dopoctvat To chodpov exeivo Kai oTEpKTLKOY OUK
> \ ,
Eyougal TPS AVTOV AAXOTPLOTHTOS eyévovTO TEK-
id \ / \
pnptov. oO pevToL Tpos Pirocodiay euTepuKars
: / b b) ol A aA
kat suvteOpappévos am apyns avt@® bros Kal
, b] ? 7 a a e e \ 3 , mwO0o0s ove eEeppun Tis Wuyns, ws 7 mept Avak-
\ ,
apyov te Ty Kal Ta TeupOévta Bevoxparter
\ \
TevtnKovta TdvavtTa Kai Aavoamts cat Kadavos oUTw orovoac OevTes papTupovat.
\ ,
IX. Dirliamov &€ ctpatevovtos ert Bulavtiovs,
Ay pev éexxardexéeTns AréEavdpos, amrorepOels dé
, 7 aA A
Kuptos év Maxedovia TOV TpayyaTwY Kal Tis
a i \ A
oppayioos, Maidwy te tovs adecta@tas Kate-
, \ 4 e \ b>] A \ \
oTpewato, Kal TodLy EhwY aUTOY TOUS pev Bap-
, ? , , a , b
Bapous é&jXace, cvppixtous 6€ Katotxioas 'AXeE-
, i J \ Ty 4

avo pomrodu Tpoonyopevoe. — eV Oe Xatpwveig THS mpos Tous” KAAnvas wayyns Tupwv peTeryxe, Kal NéyeTal TP@TOS Evoeloat TH lEp@ AOYW TOV
ld ” \ \ 2 ¢ a 3 , s \
OnBaiwv. ére d€ kal KaP pas ébeixvuto TWadaia
N 4 al
mapa Tov Kndioov ’AXeEavdpou xkaroupéry dpis,
\ , , \
mpos Hv TOTEe KaTETKHVwWOE, Kal TO TOoAUdYSpLOV
ov woppw tav MaxeSovwy éotiv.
> \ 9% f e >] , , @
Ex ev ovy TOUTWY, ws Elkos, PireTTOs VITEpN-
, ui \ a
ydTa TOV ViOV, BOTE Kal yalpew TOV Maxedovwv
? , \ i id \
AnréEavdpov pev Baciréa, Pitimmoy 6€ otpaty-
e \ yov KaXouVT@Y. al dé Tept THY oixiay Tapaxai, \ \ if a
61a TOUS YyaMmous Kal TOUS Epwtas avTOv TpoTrOY
aA , a 4
Tia THS BaclrElas TH yuvatkwritLos GvYVOGOUCNS, 244

ALEXANDER, vin. 3-1x. 3

he held him in more or less of suspicion, not to the extent of doing him any harm, but his kindly attentions lacked their former ardour and affection towards him, and this was proof of estrangement. However, that eager yearning for philosophy which was imbedded in his nature and which ever grew with his growth, did not subside from his soul, as is testified by the honour in which he held Anaxarchus, py his gift of fifty talents to Xenocrates, and by the attentions which he so lavishly bestowed upon Dandamis and Calanus.!

IX. While Philip was making an expedition against Byzantium,” Alexander, though only sixteen years of age, was left behind as regent in Macedonia and keeper of the royal seal, and during this time he subdued the rebellious Maedi, and after taking their city, drove out the Barbarians, settled there a mixed population, and named the city Alexandropolis. He was also present at Chaeroneia and took part in the battle against the Greeks,? and he is said to have been the first to break the ranks of the Sacred Band of the Thebans. And even down to our day there was shown an ancient oak by the Cephisus, called Alexander’s oak, near which at that time he pitched his tent; and the general sepulchre of the Macedonians is not far away.

In consequence of these exploits, then, as was natural, Philip was excessively fond of his son, so that he even rejoiced to hear the Macedonians call Alexander their king, but Philip their general. How- ever, the disorders in his household, due to the fact that his marriages and amours carried into the king- dom the infection, as it were, which reigned in the 1 See chapter Ixv. 2 In 340 Buc. > In 338 B.c.

TONGS aitias Kal peydras Stadhopas Tapetxyor, ray a ? \
as 9 THs 'Odvpmiddos yadrerrorns, Svalnrov Kat BapvO jpou yuvarkes, ere petfovas emote, Tapotvvovans tov 'AréEavdpov. éxpaveotatny é
v nm ?
Attanros tapécyev év tots KdXeotratpas yapors,
a € / ? , , bd \ >
Hv o Dikimmos Ayayeto wapGévov, épacbes tap
ral n wn ¢ HArAtKiaV THS KOpNS. Delos yap Ov auTHAs o "Artaos €v T@ TOT peOUwy Tapexadre: Tovs Maxe-
, b] al 4 A , > 4 T
dovas aiteicOat Tapa Oewv yunavov éx Piditrrrov fel ,
xal KXeorratpas yevécbar diddoyov THs Bactnelas.
> A r \ e3 , \ 9 ,
ért TouTm trapokuvOels 0 "AXéEavdpos Kat etry,
"A a Ca >
""Huels 5€ cot, canny Kehbarn, vo0or Soxovpev;
géBare oxvgov ém' avtov. o 8&€ Pirimmos é éxetvov éEavéstn cracdpevos To Ethos, evTuxia
, \
dé éxatépov d:a Tov Oupov Kai Tov olvov EmeceE
, e adareis. o b€ 'AréEavdpos éfuBpifav, " Obras
t » 4 co 5 te , ? Suuat pevTot, elmev, " dvdpes, eis Actav é€& Kupwmrns / , a bd N / ? \
mapecxevaleto dtaSaiver, Os émi KXrLYNY ato KMivns StaBaivwy avatétpaTtTat." pera TaVTNV
\ , y \ \ Y / \
THY Tapoviay avataBwv thv 'Odvpmidda Kat

, ? ” Sea 3 > a Kataotnaas eis “Haretpov avtos év ‘IXdupiots dceTpuBev.
e /
"Ev tovt@ 5€ Anpadpatos o KopirOcos, Eévos av
A / Ths oixias Kal mappynaias peTéeYwv, adixeto Tpos
, \ \ \ , , \
Dirurmov. peta b€ Tas mpwtas SeEtwoes Kai diroppocivas étepwravros tov Didimmov més 7
éyovaw opovoias mpos addAnAous of “EXXAnVves, “Tlavu yobv,” édyn, “aot mpoonke, Pirie,
, A ¢ vA ra) XN 9 \ nw xndeaOat THS “EXXdbos, ds TOY olKoV TOV cEeavTOdD 246

ALEXANDER, 1x. 3-6

women’s apartments, produced many grounds of offence and great quarrels between father and son, and these the bad temper of Olympias, who was a jealous and sullen woman, made still greater, since she spurred Alexander on. The most open quarrel was brought on by Attalus at the marriage of Cleopatra, a maiden whom Philip was taking to wife, having fallen in love with the girl when he was past the age for it.1 Attalus, now, was the girl’s uncle, and being in his cups, he called upon the Macedonians to ask of the gods that from Philip and Cleopatra there might be born a legitimate successor to the kingdom. At this Alexander was exasperated, and with the words, “ But what of me, base wretch? Dost thou take me for a bastard?” threw a cup at him. Then Philip rose up against him with drawn sword, but, fortunately for both, his anger and his wine made him trip and fall. Then Alexander, mocking over him, said: ‘ Look now, men! here is one who was preparing to cross from Europe into Asia; and he is upset in trying to cross from couch to couch.” After this drunken _ broil Alexander took Olympias and established her in Epirus, while he himself tarried in Illyria.
Meanwhile Demaratus the Corinthian, who was a guest-friend of the house and a man of frank speech, came to see Philip. After the first greetings and welcomes were over, Philip asked him how the Greeks were agreeing with one another, and Demaratus replied: “It is surely very fitting, Philip, that thou shouldst be concerned about Greece, when thou hast filled thine own house with such great 1 Amyot, ‘hors d’age et de saison.” In consequence of this passion Philip had divorced Olympias.

247

OTUTEWS TOTAUTNS Kal KaKo@DV éuTréTANKAS. Ov\ , e 4 v N tw 6) oupdpovicas o Dirdsmros eee Kat
if n KaTnyaye Tetcas Sta TOU Anuapatouv tov ’AdéE-avopov.
a
X. ’Emet de [1eEgdapos, 6 Kapias catpazyns,
\ ,
Urodudpevos bt’ olxeroTnTos eis THY WDiAtmoV 4 , ~ cuppayiay, eBovrAero THY mpecButatny Tav Ovyarépwv ’Appidaiw t@ Didimmov yvvaika Sdotvat
/
Kat mept tovtwy ‘ApiordKpirov ets Maxedoviay 4 ‘ dméoretev, adits eyivovto Adyor Kat SdraBoyat \ a / \ “~ \ \ "Ade mapa Tov didwy Kat THS pNTpos Tos é€av-
a “~ 4
Spov ws ‘Apptdaiov émt 7H Pacrreita Drrimrov
“A A / ? >?
yapots Aapmpots Kal mpdaypact peyayots ELcot-Ketoovtos. vd av Satapayeis méumer Oeccafe ~ ~ vA
Aov eis Kapiay, tov tay tpaywdtayv dmoKpiTny,
4 7
Tuéwddpw diadeEdpevov ws xpy Tov voboyv éacay-\ ad ?
va, Kat od doeviipn, peOapydccacbar To KHdos Ets
\ \
’AdéEardpov. Kat [liEwdapw pwev ov mapa pukpov
of ~ ~ a ¢€ \ 4

ypeoke TaUTa THY Tpotépwr paddAov Oo de Didiztos aicGouevos, twv eis To ’AXeEavdpov dwpua-TLov,' raparaBwv Tay dirwy avtod cal cvrvnbwv eva, Pirwtav Tov Tappeviwvos, éretiunoev ioyv-
w~ ~ / nn A
pas, Kal Tixpos edordopnoev WS ayevYH Kal THY UTAPYOVTwWY TEpt aUTOV ayabwv avakov, et Kapos
b , \ / a ,
avOpwrov Kat BapBapw Baciret SsovrEvovTos
> fal * / \ N N
ayara yauBpos yevéoOar. tov b€ Oeccarov
4 AL ee > 4 > <8
eypae KopivOors Omws avatréurpwow év wédats dedeuévov. Tav dé dAwv Etaipwv “Apiradov Kal

1 idy... Swudtioy an anonymous correction of the MSS. dvta Tov *AdrgéZavdpov eis Td Swudtiov, after Amyot; Sintenis and Bekker adopt idvra, the correction of Stephanus (learning that Alexander was coming).

dissension and calamities.” Thus brought to his senses, Philip sent and fetched Alexander home, having persuaded him to come through the agency of Demaratus.

X. But when Pixodarus, the satrap of Caria, trying by means of a tie of relationship to steal into a military alliance with Philip, wished to give his eldest daughter in marriage to Arrhidaeus the son of Philip, and sent Aristocritus to Macedonia on this errand, once more slanderous stories kept coming to Alexander from his friends and his mother, who said that Philip, by means of a brilliant marriage and a great connexion, was trying to settle the king- dom upon Arrhidaeus. Greatly disturbed by these stories, Alexander sent Thessalus, the tragic actor, to Caria, to argue with Pixodarus that he ought to ignore the bastard brother, who was also a fool, and make Alexander his connexion by marriage. And this plan was vastly more pleasing to Pixodarus than the former. But Philip, becoming aware of this, went to Alexander's chamber, taking with him one of Alexander's friends and companions, Philotas the son of Parmenio, and upbraided his son severely, and bitterly reviled him as ignoble and unworthy of his high estate, in that he desired to become the _ son-in-law of a man who was a Carian and a slave to a barbarian king. And as for Thessalus, Philip wrote to the Corinthians that they should send him back to Macedonia in chains. Moreover, of the other companions of Alexander, he banished from Mace-

Néapyov, éte & “Epeyduov nat Wrodepaiov ex

Maxedovias petéctycer, ovs Batepov AréEavdpos
KaTayayov év Tais peyiotats éoye Tipats.
Emel 6€ ayoavias ’AttaXov yvepn cat Kre0-matpas uBpicGeis Kal pn Tvy@v Stns aveire @Pitirmov, TO pev TrEtoTov eis "OXNvpTLAdaA THs aitias mepinrOev, ws Ouvpovpévm TO veaviox@ mpoceyxeNevoaperny Kal tapokvvacay, EBbuye bé tis kal AXeEdvopou SiaBorn. RéyeTat yap évtvyovtos avT@ Tod Ilavcaviov peta thy bBpww éxelvnv Kal atrodupopéevou mpoevéeyxacOas TO THs Mnédelas fapPetov:
/
Tov OoVvTa Kal yHuaVTA Kal yapoupevyny.
f al ipa
ov "nv ANA Kal TOUS TUVaLTLOUS THS EwTLBOUVATS
> , Sa! \ \ 2 3
avatntnoas éxodace, Kal THY KXeoratpav anobn-
a n an ’ n
mouvTos avTov THs Odupmiados Mas peTayerpe-4
TAMEVNS HYAVAKTNGE.
XI. HapérxaBe pév obv tn yeyoves elxoot tTHVv
/ r , \ ‘ 4 ‘
Bacireiav, POovous peyarous Kai bea pion Kal
/
Kiwoduvous Tavtayolev -Eyovoav. ote yap Ta
, \ , , \ , ¥
BapSapa Kal mpocoika yevn Thy dovrAwWOLY edepe,
a“ \ , , a \ €
moGovvtTa Tas TaTtpious Baotdelas, ovtTe THY EX-Nada KpaTHaas Tots O7TAOLS O DidewTos olov KaTan \ a i“ 4 > \ ,
CevEar Kal tTiPacevoat Ypovoy Ecyev, ANAG MovoY
1 The AMedeia of Euripides, v. 289 (Kirchhoff). The context makes the verse suggest the murder of Attalus, Philip, and Cleopatra.
250

67)

ALEXANDER, x. 3-x1. 1

donia Harpalus and Nearchus, as well as Erigyius and Ptolemy, men whom Alexander afterwards recalled and had in the highest honours.

And so when Pausanias, who had been outrageously dealt with at the instance of Attalus and Cleopatra and could get no justice at Philip's hands, slew Philip, most of the blame devolved upon Olympias, on the ground that she had added her exhortations to the young man's anger and incited him to the deed; but a certain amount of accusation attached itself to Alexander also. For it is said that when Pausanias, after the outrage that he had suffered, met Alexander, and bewailed his fate, Alexander recited to him the iambic verse of the " Medeia" } :—

"The giver of the bride, the bridegroom, and the bride."'
However, he did seek out the participants in the plot and punished them, and was angry with Olympias for her savage treatment of Cleopatra during his absence.?
AI. Thus it was that at the age of twenty years Alexander received the kingdom, which was exposed to great jealousies, dire hatreds, and dangers on every hand. For the neighbouring tribes of Barbarians would not tolerate their servitude, and longed for their hereditary kingdoms; and as for Greece, al- though Philip had conquered her in the field, he had not had time enough to make her tame under his yoke, but had merely disturbed and changed the

* "After his death Olympias killed Philip's infant son, together with his mother Cleopatra, niece of Attalus, by dragging them over a bronze vessel filled with fire" (Pausanias, viil. 7, 5).
251

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ \ / \ , \
petaBarov Kai tapakas Ta Tpayuata ToNUY
, y \ r ¢ nv. 9 , ee
gaXov €vyovTa Kal Kivnow UTO anOelas aTédALTE.
/ \ fa) } \ f \
hofovpévav d€ tov Maxedcvwy Tov Katpov, Kal \ \ eM ae / ' . \ \
Ta wey KAAnUKA TauYTws adelvaL KAL fn TPOG-
\ / al
Bidlec@at tov *AdéEavdpov otopéevwv deiv, Tovs \ b] / ca] 4 b " dé adiotapévovs tov BapBdapwv avakareialar
f \ / \ b \ a T paws Kal Cepam evew Tas apxyas TOY vewreEpl-wn a ei
SUA, AVTOS AT EVAVTLMV AOYLTLOV WPUNnTE TOA-
a s bn Kal peyaroppocivyn Kktacbat Thy acdadeav

n~ 4 e lal
Kal GwTnpiay Tos mpaypacly, ws, KaV oTLOUY ¢ / > al fa) s 9 , Upéwevos apn tov ppov)jpatos, émiBycopevwy
td \ 9
aTdavTwov. Ta péev otv PapRapixa Kiwhpata Kat
a Ud Ud / \
Tous éKel TOAEM“OUS KaTéTTaVaEY OFEws éTLOpapoV
n / \ \ 7
oTpaT@ péexpt wpos tov “lotpov, 7 Kal Yvppov Saas la / \ fA ca) rf
eviknoe Man meyadry, Tov Pacirea Tav T'ptBar-av: OnBatous dé apectavat TuOopevos Kai cup-n na / * nm
ppoveiv autots “AOnvatous, evdus tye cra Uvrev
\ , bd \ 4 / a \
Ty Ouvapl, eiro@v ore Anpuoobever maida pev
‘ > 3 ~ al
avutov, Ews Fv ev IAXNuplots Kai TptBardois, amo-
al \
KadodVTL, petpaKlov dé Trept OeTTAaALav yevomevor, NS aA > /
Bovr\eTat pos tois “AOnvaiwy teiyeoiv avnp pavinvat.
\ ca / a Ipoopitas 5€ tats OnBars Kai did0vs Ett TOV
f / TeTpayuévov petavotay €Entet Poivixa Kat Ipo-
a / Ournv, kat toils petaPadropévots pos avtov
a) 3 s Lol Oe (©) / y ig adeav éxiputte. Tov o€ OnBaiwy avteEattovr-

1 In September, 335 B.c. Plutarch makes no mention of a previous expedition of Alexander into Southern Greece, im- mediately after Philip’s death, when he received the submiscondition of affairs there, and then left them in a great surge and commotion, owing to the strangeness of the situation. The Macedonian counsellors of Alexander had fears of the crisis, and thought he should give up the Greek states altogether and use no more compulsion there, and that he should call the revolting Barbarians back to their allegiance by mild measures and try to arrest the first symptoms of their revolutions; but he himself set out from opposite principles to win security and safety for his realm by boldness and a lofty spirit, assured that, were he seen to abate his dignity even but a little, all his enemies would set upon him. Accordingly, ke put a speedy stop to the disturbances and wars among the Barbarians by overrunning their territories with an army as far as to the river Danube, where he fought a great battle with Syrmus, the king of the Triballi, and defeated him; and on learning that the Thebans had revolted and that the Athenians were in sympathy with them, he immediately led his forces through the pass of Thermopylae, de- claring that since Demosthenes had called him a boy while he was among the Illyrians and Tribal- lians, and a stripling when he had reached Thessaly, he wished to show him that before the walls of Athens he was a man.

Arrived before Thebes,! and wishing to give her still a chance to repent of what she had done, he merely demanded the surrender of Phoenix and Prothytes, and proclaimed an amnesty for those who came over to his side. But the Thebans made sion of all the Greek states except Sparta, and was made commander-in-chief of the expedition against Persia, in Philip's place. See Arrian, Anab. i. 1.

Tov meV Tap avTou Pirorav Kat "Avtimatpov, KnpuTTOVTwY O€ TOUS TIPV 'EANaEa. Bovropévous cuvehevdepoby 'rattec Oat per AUTOV, oUTMS eTpewe TOUS Maxedovas 7 pos TONE HOV. nYyo- via On poev ovv uiép SuvamlY apEeTH Kal mpobupia Tapa tav OnPaiwy' TohaT aators over TOLS Toheploes avritaxJevtov émel d€ kal THY Kao- pela apévTes ot dpovpol Tav Maxedovev émé- TenT OV aurois eforea bev, Kuerobevres Ol WELT TOL Kara THY waXny avTHVY ETEcor, a be TOMS HAW Kab Siaptacbeioa KatecKkagy, TO pev OXOV 7 poo SoKiTAaVTOS auUTOU TOUS "EXAnVAas exTharyevTas made. tTyrALKOUT@ Kal mrn~avTas aTpEemrnoery, ddrAws be Kal Kawa awevov xapilecr bar Tots TOV TULA OV eye Anpace Kab yap Pwxets Kat ITXataets tov OnBatov KaTnyopnaay. ume fe- Nopevos 5é TOUS lepets Kal TOs E€vous TOV Make- Sovav dnavtas Kal Tovs amo Luvddapou yeyovotas Kal TOUS brevavtimbevTas TOLS Ynpecapevors THY anoaractw, am €50T0 TOUS ANXOUS Tept Tplo MUpLoUsS rEvOMEVOUS" ot 5é amtoBavovtes Urép éEaxtayt- lous Hoa.

XII. Ey oe Tois ToAAols Twabect Kab Xarerois éxeivots & THY TON KATELXE, Opgxes TIVES exKO- avtes olxiay Tipoxretas, yuvatKos €voo£ou kal

Tw@PPOVOS, QaUTOL pev Ta Xprypara Sunptrafov, o 0 b¢
YE MOV 7H yuvarel T™ POs Biav TUYYEVOMLEVOS Kat
KATALOXUVAS, aveKpiver el Trou Xpvatov EX OL KE-Kpuppévov % apyvpiov. 9 dé exetv wpmodroynae,
1 rapa Tay OnBalwy Coraés and Bekker, following Reiske:
7a Tapa TAY OnBalwy, Be 254

ALEXANDER, x1. 4-xu. 2

a counter-demand that he should surrender to them Philotas and Antipater, and made a counter-proclamation that all who wished to help in setting Greece free should range themselves with them ; and so Alexander set his Macedonians to the work of war. On the part of the Thebans, then, the struggle was carried on with a spirit and valour beyond their powers, since they were arrayed against an enemy who was many times more numerous than they; but when the Macedonian garrison also, leaving the citadel of the Cadmeia, fell upon them in the rear, most of them were surrounded, and fell in the battie itself, and their city was taken, plundered, and razed to the ground. This was done, in the main, because Alexander expected that the Greeks would be terri- fied by so great a disaster and cower down in quiet, but apart from this, he also plumed himself on grati- fying the complaints of his allies; for the Phocians and Plataeans had denounced the Thebans. So after separating out the priests, all who were guest-friends of the Macedonians, the descendants of Pindar,! and those who had voted against the revolt, he sold the rest into slavery, and they proved to be more than thirty thousand; those who had been slain were more than six thousand.

XII. Among the many and grievous calamities which thus possessed the city, some Thracians broke into the house of Timocleia, a woman of high repute and chastity, and while the rest were plundering her property, their leader shamefully violated her, and then asked her if she had gold or silver concealed anywhere. She admitted that she had, and after

1 «* And we are told that Alexander preserved the house of Pindar the poet, and the descendants of Pindar, out of regard for Pindar" (Arrian, Arab. i. 9, 10).

08 PLUTARCH SS LIVES

Kal jLovov els TOV KATOV ayayovoa Kab beiEaoa, ppéap, evtavda egy THS TONEWS adi KOpELNS cataBanrel avTn Ta TULOTATA TOV NPNLAT OV.
eYKUTT OvTOS 6€ TOU Opgxos Kal KATATKET-TOMEVOY
TOV TOTO, €waEV AUTOV éfomia bey ryevop.evn, Kab Tov Nw éreupBarovdaa Tordovs arréxTetvey, ws 6€ aviyOn Tos "AneEavdpov UTO TOV Opgxav dedené17), m p@Tov yey ato THS ovpecs KaL THS Badicews ébavy TES (eSt@parixi) Kal peyaroppov,

GVEKTAIKTOS Kat adeds eT OMELN Tots ayovow
évetta TOU Pactiéws EpwtnacavtTos tres ein yuvat-Ka, amex pivaro Ocaryevous aderpy ryeyoverat,
TOU TapaTaganevov Tpos Diodurrov t bmreép THS TOV ‘EAA veOv érevbepias Kal TET OVTOS éy Xatpwveia aTpatyyouvTes. Gavudcas otyv o "AnéEavdpos avTtis Kal THY aTOKploly Kal THY TpakW, exérEv-cev éhevOépay amiérat meTa TOV TEKVOD, XIII. "A@nvaiors bé SindtrXayn, Kaitrep ob perT-pices éveyxovdot TO Tepl OnBas dvoTvynpa’ Kal
\ a , € \ > \ 514
Yap THY TOY pUTTHpioOY EopTHY ev NEpoly EXOVTES
Umo mévOous apijcay, Kal Tots Katagbvyovow ert}
THY TOALY aTUVYTOV peTecioocay TaVv diravO pw-TWV. GAN’ EiTEe pEaTOS OY HON TOV BupoY, OoTEP
ol NéovTes, ETE ETTLELKES Epyor @poTdT@ Kal OKU-Oowmorare Tapaparetw Bovropevos, ov povoy apiKev aitias TaoNs, GNA Kal T pocexely exe-Aevoe TOUS mpdypact TOV vouv THY TOLD, @S, €b Tl cupBain Tept avtov, ap Eove ay THS ‘EX)dOos.
DoTepov [evTor TONNAKES avTov) OnPatov aviaoa cuphopa réyeTat xa TPQOTE pov OUK OnLy os mapasxetv. Gdrws Oé Kal TO Tept KAeitov épyov
1 gataguyovow én Bekker corrects to puyoter eis.
256

671

ALEXANDER, xu. 2—xi1. 3

leading him by himself into the garden and showing him a well, told him that when the city was taken she had itll her own hands cast in there her most valuable possessions. Then, as the Thracian was bending over and inspecting the place, she came behind him and pushed him in, cast many stones upon him, and killed him. And nei the Thracians led her, with hands bound, to Alexander, she showed by her mien and gait that she was a person of great dignity and lofty spirit, so calmly and fearlessly did she follow her conductors; and when the king asked her who she was, she replied that she was a sister of Theagenes, who drew up the forces which fought Philip in behalf of the liberty of the Greeks, and fell in command at Chaeroneia. Amazed, therefore, at her reply and at what she had done, Alexander bade her depart in freedom with her children.

AI. Furthermore, he was reconciled with the Athenians, although they showed exceeding sorrow at the misfortunes of Thebes; for although they had begun the festival of the mysteries, they g gave it up in consequence of their grief,! and upon the ‘Thebans who sought refuge in their city they bestowed every kindness. But notwithstanding this, whether his rage was now sated, as a lion’s might be, or whether he wished to offset a deed of fhe. inost sullen savagery with one that was merciful, he not only remitted all his charges against the city, but even bade it give good heed to its affairs, since, if anything should happen to him, it would have the rule over Greece. In later times, moreover, as we are told, the calamity of the Thebans often gave him remorse, and made him milder towards many people. And certainly the 1 According to Arrian (i. 10, 2), 16 was from panic fright.

=o

PLUTARCR'S LIVES

év olv@ revo mevov Kal THY 7 pos 'Tv6ous TtTav Make-dover drrobeiMaow, womep aTenh THY otpateiay
Kal THY dofav avTov TpoEuevar, Els pHi avijye
Atovicov ral VEMET LY. my dé OnBaicv ovdels TOV TmepLyevopeveny OS evTuXov TL Kat den Bets DoTtepov ov duetpakéato map avtod. Tavta pev Ta TeEpi @nBas.
XIV. Kis dé Tov To O pov TaV "EXMjvov auNXe-yevT@V Kal Wn pro apeveov émi Ilépoas pet' 'AXeEavdpov OTPATEVELY YEW avnyopevdn. TONNOY be Kal TONTLKE@Y av0pav Kat pirocopwr amnv7n-KOTWY avT@ Kal cuvndopévav, nATLCE Kal Atoyéyy Tov Sweréa tavto Tomaew, S:atpiBovta mept KopivOov. ws 6 €KELVOS eMaXLa Tov "AneEavdpou Aoyor éywy év TO Kpaveio oxXoNy YeD, AUTOS emo pevero Tos avr ov" ervxe dé Kataxel-pevos év NAL@. Kal piKpov peév avexdlicer, av-OpweTrwv tocovtwy émepyopevar, Kat dreBreErev eis Tov "AXeEavdpov. ws bé éxeivos doTacdmeros Kal TpocerT@V avTOV pot na Ev el TIVOS TUYXaveEL Seopevos, rs Mexpov," elt@ev, "amo TOU nAtoU peTaoTnOt. mWpos TOUTO NeyeTas Tov *"AXEEavdpov
ovTw diateOHvat Kal Gavpacar xatadpovnbévra
THY UTEepowiay Kal TO méyeos TOD avdpos, WaTE
TOY TEepl AUTOV, @S aTEcap, OrayehovT@v Kab
axwTtovtav, "'AXAG py eyo," elrrev, "ed pn
"AréEavdpos Hunv, Avoyévns av Hun.
1 See chapter li. 2 See chapter I xii.
8 This god was said to have been born of Semele, daughter of Cadmus the founder of Thebes, 258

ALEXANDER, xu. 3-xIv. 3

murder of Cleitus,! which he committed in his cups, and the cowardly refusal of his Macedonians to follow him against tne Indians,? whereby they as it were robbed his expedition and his glory of their consum- mation, he was wont to attribute to the vengeful wrath of Dionysus. And there was not a Theban of those that survived who afterwards came to him with any request and did not get what he wanted from him. Thus much concerning Thebes.4

XIV. And now a general assembly of the Greeks was held at the Isthmus,5 where a vote was passed to make an expedition against Persia with Alexander, and he was proclaimed their leader. Thereupon many statesmen and philosophers came to him with their congratulations, and he expected that Diogenes of Sinope also, who was tarrying in Corinth, would do likewise. But since that philosopher took not the slightest notice of Alexander, and continued to enjoy his leisure in the suburb Craneion, Alexander went in person to see him; and he found him lying in the sun. Diogenes raised himself up a little when he saw sO many persons coming towards him, and fixed his eyes upon Alexander. And when that monarch addressed him with greetings, and asked if he wanted anything, *‘ Yes,’ said Diogenes, “stand a little out of my sun.” It is said that Alexander was so struck by this, and admired so much the haughtiness and grandeur of the man who had nothing but scorn for him, that he said to his followers, who were laughing and jesting about the philosopher as they went away, “ But verily, if 1 were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes.”

* For a full account of Alexander’s capture and destruction of Thebes, see Arrian, Anab. i. 8 f.

5 See the note on xi. 5.
259

4

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Bovdopevos 6é TO Oew xpycacbar " epl (Tis
oTparetas ArAGev ELS Aeros: KaL KAT a TUYHY
7 LEP@V aTog pacay ove ay, év ais ov vevopeg Tas epsa reve, Tpatov pev ETE [LTE TapaKaroy THY 7 POMAVTLD. OS dé apyvouperns Ka Tpoia opens TOY vomov avTos avaBas Bia Tpos TOV VAOV elAKev avT IY, 7" O€ @oT Ep eEyrrmpwevn THs o TOVONS elev" si ‘Avixntos él, @ Tal, TOUTO akoveas ‘ANE Fav-Opos OUKETL épn yp tev ETEPOU HAVTEUUATOS, ANN EVELV ov éBovheTo map QAUTHS XpnT Lov.
"Earel O€ opunoe 7 POs THY oTpaTEiayv, Ara Te Soxel onueia mapa Tov datuoviou yevéaOat, Kal to mept AeiBnOpa tod “Opdéws Eoavov (hv be KUTAPLTTLVOV) (OP@TA TOAD vmO TAS 7 MEpas éxel-vas adiKe. poBoupevov d€ WavTwY TO onfLELoV, ‘Aptatavdpos éxéXeve Jappein, @S dowipous Kat

meptBontous KATEPYATOpLEV OV mages, at mwoNuY Lopara KQt TOVOY Uuvovot TOLNTals KaL MOoVaLKOLS
mapéEovet.
XV. Tijs dé oTpaTtias TO TANS ob pev éX =
VLoTOY NeyovTes T pio wuptous mefous Kal TeT pa
KLoKXLNLOUS innels, ot o€ Teta Tov melovs ev
TETPAKLO MUpLOUS Kal TpLaXtNOUS, LTméas O€ TeEV-TakloytrdLous avaypagovatv. epddsov bé TovToOLS
ob mhéov éBdouijxovta TaddavtTwy exen aur ov ‘A ptatoBounos ioropet, Aotpis be TpedKxovTa jL0-vov n MEep@v dtatpopyy, ‘Ovnaixpetos b€ Kal Oia o~ oa TahavTa Tm poaoet hel. arra Kaimep ago
LIKP@Y Kal OTEVOV OUTWS OPpLwpEVvos, OV TPOTEpOV
1 In the early spring of 334 B.c,
2 Cf. Arrian, Anab. i. 11, 2.
260

67

ad

ALEXANDER, xv. 4-xv. 2

And now, wishing to consult the god concerning the expedition against Asia, he went to Delphi; and since he chanced to come on one of the inauspicious days, when it is not lawful to deliver oracles, in the first place he sent a summons to the _ prophetess.
And when she refused to perform her office and cited the law in her excuse, he went up himself and tried to drag her to the temple, whereupon, as if overcome by his ardour, she said: “Thou art invincible, my son!” On hearing this, Alexander said he desired no further prophecy, but had from her the oracle which he wanted.
Moreover, when he set out upon his expedition,!
it appears that there were many signs from heaven,
and, among them, the image of Orpheus at Leibethra (it was made of cypress-wood) sweated profusely at about that time. Most people feared the sign, but Aristander bade Alexander be of good cheer, assured that he was to perform deeds worthy of song and story, which would cost poets and musicians much toil and sweat to celebrate.?
XV. As to the number of his forces, those who put it at the smallest figure mention thirty thousand foot and four thousand horse; those who put it at the highest, forty-three thousand foot and five thou- sand horse.? To provision these forces, Aristobulus says he had not more than seventy talents; Duris speaks of maintenance for only thirty days; and One- sicritus says he owed two hundred talents besides. But although he set out with such meagre and narrow resources, he would not set foot upon his ship until

3 <*Not much more than thirty thousand foot, including light-armed troops and archers, and over five thousand horse ” (Arrian, Anab. i, 11, 3).

b / a \ A» \ a € , ,
éméBn THs vews 7’ Ta TaV EéETAalpwY TpaypaTa
a A t aA
oKEWaMEVOS ATOVEl“LAaL TO MEV GYpOV, T@ O€ Kw-
A ,
NV, TO O€ GUVOLKias TPOTOdoV 1H) ALpEvOS. 7/0 \ We \
dé KaTavn\wpévwov Kal drayeypaupéevwv oxXedoy Cd , aA n ¢ OL 66 rat antavrav tov Baciitxov o Ilepdixxas “ Yeavt@ IY ” 5 cc 2 “ / , 9 A Oe
é, eltrev, “aw Bactred, TL KaTadeElTEts; TOV Oé€
e , a > dyoavtos 6Tt Tas éAtriOas, “ OvKody,” edn, “ Kai wn t \ A
LES TOUTWVY KOLVWYNTOMEV OL META TOD OTPA-
f > A Tevopevol. Tapaitnaapévov Sé tod Ilepdixxou
THV OLAYVEYPALMEVNV KTHTLW AUTO, KAL TOV ANNOY
‘4 ” \ 3 \ b {é A x , hirwv éviot TO avTO éTOincav. Tols d€ AapBa-/ if ,
vovat Kal Seopuévors mpolvpws éeyapileTo, Kai
a a ,
Ta wrelota Tov év Makedovia diavépwv odTws
\ e a aA
KATNVEAWOE. TOLAUTN MEY OPH Kal TapacKeuT
¢€ ,
dsavoias tov “EXXjam7ovtov Suevépacev.
v A ’ aA
"AvaBas &€ eis “INtov EOvce tH “AOnva xa
a ef v \ NES , / Tols Howow éorerce. THY d€ AYES GTNANV

, \ \ a ,
anreupapevos Nita Kal peta TOV ETALPWY TUVaAVA-
4 e b)
Spapnov yuuvos, @omep EOS éativ, eoTepavuce,
\ © n A
pakapioas ad'tov btt Kal Cav didov miotov Kat TENEVTI TAS LeyaNov KipvKOS ETUXEV. ev O€ TH
os a \
meptievat kat OeaoOar Ta Kata THY Tod épope-
N > > vou Tivos avTov et BovreTat THY '"AdeEdvdpov
a id ,
AUpav loeiv, EXaxXLaTAa hpovTile exes Eby, THY
a \ /
S 'AyirrAéws Cnteiv, 7 Ta KNEA Kal Tas Tpdéets
buver TOv ayabav avdpav Exeivos.
id A A
XVI. 'Ev 6é tovt@ tav Aapéiov otpatnyav
4 f
pweyarny dovvapuiv nOpotxotwyv Kal tapaTteTaype-vov él TH dvaBdoe Tod Vparxod, wdyerbae pév 262

ALEXANDER, xv. 2—-xv1. 1

he had enquired into the circumstances of his companions and allotted to one a farm, to another a village, and to another the revenue from some hamlet or harbour. And when at last nearly all of the crown property had been expended or allotted, Perdiccas said to him: " But for thyself, O king, what art thou leaving?" And when the king answered, "My hopes," "In these, then,' said Perdiccas, "we also will share who make the expedition with thee." Then he declined the possessions which had been allotted to him, and some of the other friends of Alexander did likewise. But upon those who wanted and would aecept his favours Alexander bestowed them readily, and most of what he possessed in Macedonia was used up in these distributions. Such was the ardour and such the equipment with which he crossed the Hellespont.

Then, going up to Ilium, he sacrificed to Athena and poured libations to the heroes. Furthermore, the gravestone of Achilles he anointed with oil, ran a race by it with his companions, naked, as is the custom, and then crowned it with garlands, pro- nouncing the hero happy in having, while he lived, a faithful friend, and after death, a great herald of his fame. As he was going about and viewing the sights of the city, someone asked him if he wished to see the lyre of Paris. “For that lyre,” said Alex- ander, “I care very little; but I would gladly see that of Achilles, to which he used to sing the glorious deeds of brave men.”'!

XVI. Meanwhile the generals of Dareius had as- sembled a large force and set it in array at the crossing of the river Granicus, so that it was prac-

4 See the Iliad, ix. 185-191.

> a cy ce 3 4 A > ie
laws avayKatoy Hv, WoTep ev TUAaLS THS 'Acias,
a / \ a a a Tept THS eladdov Kal apyns Tod b€ ToTAapod TO \ ce. ral
Ba0os xat tThv dvwpariav kcal TpaxvTnTa TOV ¢ 4 , mépav byOwv, pos ods Ede yiverVar THY aTrO-
\ A , Bact peta payns, TOV TrEoTwY SedtoTwD, eviwDy
x a d€ Kal TO Tepl TOY pHVvA vEevoutcpEévov OLomévwv Sey duraEacOa (Aataiou yap ovK eiw@betoay ot
a a , \ Baowrets tov Maxedovwr éEayerv thy otpatiav),
aA ,
ToUTO pev emnvwpPwaato Kedrevoas dSevTEpOY
? / v “A \ lA e > \ Aptepuictoy ayewv, tov dé [lappeviwvos, ws ove
a , “ * >
THS WPAS OVTNS, OUK EOVTOS ATOKLVOUVEVELY, ELT@V
S ¢ alaxuverOat tov EXXaijo7rovtov et PoBycetat Tov ay \ ~ \ b) A b] U aA c , lpavixoy dia BeBncos EKELVOD, en Barret 7@ pev-
ba patt ovv tras immévwy tpitoKaioexa. Kal pos
A , \ “A ¢
évavtia Bédn Kal Tomovs atoppayas OTXoEs
\ / \
KataTreppaypévous Kal immo éXavvwv, Kal dia pevpatos TapahépovTos Kai mepixruCovtos, Edoke a S; f A

pavKkas Kal mpos amovotavy padXrov 7 yvopn
“A 3 x ? % 3 \ a 2 \
oTpaTnyeiv. ov uny Arr éeugvs TH dtaBdoe Kai a hi a / A KpaTioas TOV TOTMY YarETaS Kal MOXLS, VYPaV
\ A 4 A \ , > x
Kal Teptaparav yevouevmy 61a TOV TiIprOV, EVOUS 9 , / / ‘ > yw
nvayKatleto buponv payecOat Kai Kat avdpa ovpTr€éKer Oat Tois emiepopevols, Tply ets TAELY
A 4
TWa KaTacThvat Tovs dtaBaivovras. évéKEtvTo
al \ \ Cf
yap Kpavyn, Kal Tovs immovs TapaBadXorTes
a a “i / n
Tots trios éxpwvto Sopact, Kat Eihect THY Sopd-
bd a Toy ouvtTpiSevtTwy. @oapévwy b€ TOAN@Y ET ky a A fo) 4
avtov (nv 6€ TH TEATH Kal TOD Kpavous TH YatTn
/ ¢ f s
Stat pens, HS ExaTéepwOey EiaT KEL TTEPOV NEVKO-264

ALEXANDER, xvi. 1-4

tically necessary to fight, as it were at the gates of Asia, for entrance and dominion there. But most of the Macedonian ofhcers were afraid of the depth of the river, and of the roughness and unevenuess of the farther banks, up which they would have to climb while fighting. Some, too, thought they ought to observe carefully the customary practice in regard to the month (for in the month of Daesius the kings of Macedonia were not wont to take the field with an army). This objection Alexander removed by bidding them call the month a second Artemisius; and when Parmenio, on the ground that it was too late in the day, objected to their risking the passage, he declared that the Hellespont would blush for shame, if, after having crossed that strait, he should be afraid of the Granicus, and plunged into the stream with thirteen troops of horsemen. And since he was charging against hostile missiles and precipi- tous positions covered with infantry and cavalry, and through a stream that swept men off their feet and surged about them, he seemed to be acting like a frenzied and foolish commander rather than a wise one. However, he persisted in his attempt to cross, gained the opposite banks with difficulty and much ado, though they were moist and slippery with mud, and was at once compelled to fight pell-mell and engage his assailants man by man, before his troops who were crossing could form into any order. For the enemy pressed upon them with loud shouts, and matching horse with horse, plied their lances, and their swords when their lances were shattered. Many rushed upon Alexander, for he was conspicuous by his buckler and by his helmet’s crest, on either side of which was fixed a plume of wonderful size and 265

\ f f b \ \ TTL Kab peyéOer Oavpactov), axovtiabels pév
, A , UTO THY UmoTTUXLOa TOD OwpaKos ovK éTPwON,
e 4 \ \ / A “A Porcdxov b$€ cal XmiOpiddTov TaY oTpaTnyoY
ei \ , Tpoopepopéevav aya, Tov pev exkrLvas, “Porcaxyn
dé mpoeuBarov teOwpakiapéevw Kai To dopu KaTa-Krdoas él TO éyxetpidlov Opynoe. oULTETTH-KoTwv dé avTav o LriOpidatns vToctHcas éK
\ a Trayiwv Tov irmov Kal peTa oTOVoNS cuve~ava-
a \ oTas Komidt BapBapixn KatnveyKxe Kal TOV peév
t b) , \ / A \ \ ,

Nopov améppake peta Oatepov mTEpod, To O€ Kpa-
\ A ‘
Vos Tpos THY TANYHY aKpLB@s Kat pods ayTé-TXEV, ETE TOV THATAV Watcal TPLY@Y THY TTE-
a \ pvya ths Komrisos. érépav bé Tov YriOpidatynv mTuArw émaipopevoy EfpOace Krettos 0 pédas TO
A e A ¢
Evot@ diedacas pécov. ood dé Kai ‘Poroaxns émecev urd "AnreEavipou Eihet wANYELS.
"Ev tovtT@ 6€ Kivdtvou Kal awyavos ovans THs inmropuayias h Te HdAaYE SiéBatve TOV Makedo-vov Kal cuviryov ai melal duvapes. ov pny wré-
> ’ bf \ \ f ’ >
TTNTAV EUPWOTWS OVE TOAVY YpOVoV, GAN’ Epuryov
/ \ a / e , TpaTropevol, mAnv TaV ptoOodopav “EXXjvev.
if Uf ? \
ovTo: O€ Tpos Tivt AOhwW GVYEOTAaVTES 7TOVY TA \ \ ? , e \ A A a
aicta tov “AnréEavipov. o b€ Oup@ pad2Xov 7 Aoylouw TeeTOS éuBarwv Tov Te inmmov atoBar-
Y fon, E / ee \ 9 \ 4
A Lal Ly,
ret Eihes wAnyévta Sid THY TrAEVPaY (Fv bé ETe-

’ e / \ \ / A
pos, ovx 0 Bouxedddas), Kai Tovs TAELTTOUS THY atobavovtwyv Kal tpavpaticbévTmv éxet cuvéSn KiVOUVEDC aL KaL TeaELY, TpOS avOpwWTTOUS aTTEyVO-KOTAS Kal MAXLLOUS TULTAEKOMEVOUS.
266

whiteness. But although a javelin pierced the joint of his breastplate, he was not wounded; and when Rhoesaces and Spithridates, two Persian commanders, made at him together, he avoided the one, and smote Rhoesaces, who wore a breastplate, with his spear ; and when this weapon snapped in two with the blow, he took to his sword. Then, while he was thus engaged with Rhoesaces, Spithridates rode up from one side, raised himself up on his horse, and with all his might came down with a barbarian battle-axe upon Alexander’s head. Alexander’s crest was broken off, together with one of its plumes, and his helmet could barely and with difficulty resist the blow, so that the edge of the battle-axe touched the topmost hair of his head. But while Spithridates was raising his arm again for another stroke, Cleitus, ‘« Black Cleitus,” got the start of him and ran him through the body with his spear. At the same time Rhoesaces also fell, smitten by Alexander’s sword.

While Alexander’s cavalry were making such a dangerous and furious fight, the Macedonian phalanx crossed the river and the infantry forces on both sides engaged. The enemy, however, did not resist vigorously, nor for a long time, but fled in a rout, all except the Greek mercenaries. These made a stand at a certain eminence, and asked that Alexander should promise them quarter. But he, influenced by anger more than by reason, charged foremost upon them and lost his horse, which was smitten through the ribs with a sword (it was not Bucephalas, but another); and most of the Macedonians who were slain or wounded fought or fell there, since they came to close quarters with men who knew how to fight and were desperate.
267

, fo

Aéyovta: 56 weCol pév duc puptor TOY BapBRapwr, € a ‘ , U a a) N
iaTets be Sua XiAvo1 MEVTAKOTLOL TETELV. TOV OE
Tepl TOV ‘AréEavEpov ‘A pta toBovros pyar Téa-

Tapas eal T ptaKOVTa vEKpOvS yevér Gar TOUS TAVTAS, OV évvéa melovus €lval. TOUTwWY pev ouv éxéA EUCEV elxovas avacTabivac XarKas, as AvolnTos elpyadcato. KOWOUMEVOS dé THY vlenv Tous “EX ow LOL pev Tots "AOnvatots érrepape
TOY al x HAhwT ov Tpraxocias aamibas, Kown 6é Tots aAXOLs Nadhupors ExéXevaev Erruyparpat dido-
/ 3 4 5 66? 7 } e la

TimotaTny emiypadyny: “° AnreEardpos 0 Didtrmou

\ ec \ , , \ a
Kat ob EAAnves aha Aakedutpovioy amo TOV
PapBapov TOV tThv ‘Acta KATOLKOUVTOY.” €x-TwUATA O€ Kab moppupas, Kab Oca TOLAUTA TOV Ilepotxav dae, mavra TH puntpl mArAnv ordiywv emeurvev.
. €

Dov ae Odtos 0 ayov peyadyy evOus érroince
TOV T pays LaTOV pera Borny T pos” ‘AdeEavépor, @aTe Kal Lapdes, 7d Tm pooxnpa THS ert Jarao-on ToOV BapBapwy aAyemovias, TapadaBeiv Kat
> / , \ e \
TaAAa TpootiPecOar. povn dé “AdAtKapvacaos
5 , \ , a € \ \ , \
avTeaTy Kab MiAnrTos, as EAWV KATA KPUTOS Kal
Ta Teph auras TAVTA NEL Pwo dpEvos appiBoros
WW Tpos TA NOLTA TH Youn. Kal TOANGKLS pev éomevoe Aapei@ cuuTeco@v atoxivduvedoat Tepl
a ef , \ a“ 3 \ A ie TOV ohuy, TONAKLS dé Tots éml Garaoon T payHact Kal Xpnpace Otevoetro TT PQ@TOV olov éva-
‘

oKicas Kal pwcas avTov otTws avaBaivey én’

1 Diodorus (xvii. 21, 6) says that more than ten thousand Persian footmen fell, and not less than two thousand horse- men; while over twenty thousand were taken prisoners.

Of the Barbarians, we are told, twenty thousand footmen fell, and twenty-five hundred horsemen.! But on Alexander's side, Aristobulus says there were thirty-four dead in all, of whom nine were footmen. Of these, then, Alexander ordered statues to be set up in bronze, and Lysippus wrought them.? More- over, desiring to make the Greeks partners in his victory, he sent to the Athenians in particular three hundred of the captured shields, and upon the rest of the spoils in general he ordered a most ambitious inscription to be wrought: “ Alexander the son of Philip and all the Greeks except the Lacedaemonians from the Barbarians who dwell in Asia.” But the drinking vessels and the purple robes and whatever things of this nature he took from the Persians, all these, except a few, he sent to his mother.

XVII. This contest at once made a great change in the situation to Alexander's advantage, so that he received the submission even of Sardis, the bulwark of the barbarian dominion on the sea-coast, and added the rest of the country to his conquests. Walicar- nassus alone withstood him, and Miletus, which cities he took by storm? and subdued all the territories about them. ‘Then he was in doubt as to his future course. Many times he was eager to encounter Dareius and put the whole issue to hazard, and many times he would make up his mind to practice himself first, as it were, and strengthen himself by acquiring the regions along the sea with their resources, and

2 According to Arrian (Anab. i. 16, 4), about twenty-five of Alexander’s companions, a select corps, fell at the first onset, and it was of these that Alexander ordered statues to be made by Lysippus.

3 The siege and capture of these cities occupied Alexander till the late autumn of 334 B.c,

> A ww \ fel , , \ 4! éxetvov. €ote de THs AuKias Kpnvn wept Try pat Ud @
Favétwyv modu, 5s TOTE NEyovow avTouaTas
¢ id \ e 4 ? “A 7
mepitTpaTreions Kal vTepBarovons éx BuOod béd-TOV EXTETELW YAAKHVY TUTOUS Eyovcayv apyYaiwy
ypapatwv, év ois édnrodTO mavcecOat! tip
llepoayv apynv imo ‘EAAnvwv Katadvbeicar.
3 TovTols émapbels nreiyeTo THY Tapadiav ava-
/ / A , \ de ‘ e Kabnpacbat pexps Tis Powixns cat Kedixvas. 1
dé THs Tlaudvrias tapadpoun modXols yéyove
TOV laTOpLKaY UTOOEaLS ypadexn TpOos éxmAnELv
Kat OyKov, ws Oeia TiWi TUYN Tapaywpnoacav
"AreEdvop@ tHv Oddaccay, arAXAws del TpaxeEiav
éx TENUOUS TpotpEpopevnv, oTaviws dé ToTE
A \ AeTTTOUS Kal TpogEYels UTO TA KpPNUYwOdH Kal
TApEeppwyoTa THS opevis jayous StaxadvrTov-

4 cav. Snrot dé cal Meévavdpos év xopmdia maifwy wpos TO mapado€ov:
ws AreEavdpwdes 76n TodTO: Kav Ente Twa, > / Ad / N A \ QUTOMATOS OVTOS TapEecTtal Kav dteOety dnra51) dia Jaracans Sén ToTov Ti', ovTOS éxTat jot Bartos.
3 A A
avtos 6€ "AdéEavépos €v tats émrtatoAais ovdev
TOLOUTOVY TEpAaTEVTapEVvoS OdoTOLHaaL dyot TIDY
1 ravoecbar Sintenis?, with C and Stephanus; ratcacéas Sintenis! and Bekker.
1 According to Arrian (Anab. i. 26, 1 f.), there is no route along this beach except when the north wind blows. '* But at that time, after strong south winds, the north winds

then to go up against that monarch. Now, there 1s in Lycia, near the city of Xanthus, a spring, which at this time, as we are told, was of its own motion upheaved from its depths, and overflowed, and cast forth a bronze tablet bearing the prints of ancient letters, in which it was made known that the empire of the Persians would one day be destroyed by the Greeks and come to an end. Encouraged by this prophecy, Alexander hastened to clear up the sea-coast as far as Cilicia and Phoenicia. His rapid passage along the coasts of Pamphylia has afforded many historians material for bombastic and terrifying description. They imply that by some great and heaven-sent good fortune the sea retired to make way for Alexander, although at other times it always came rolling in with violence from the main, and scarcely ever revealed to sight the small rocks which lie close up under the precipitous and riven sides of the mountain.!| And Menander, in one of his comedies,? evidently refers jestingly to this marvel :—

" How Alexander-like, indeed, this is; and if I seek some one, Spontaneous he'll present himself; and if I clearly must Pass through some place by sea, this will lie open to my steps.”

Alexander himself, however, made no such prodigy out of it in his letters, but says that he marched by blew, and rendered his passage easy and quick, not without the divine intervention, as both he and his followers interpreted.”

2 Kock, Com. Att. Frag. iil. p. 240.

271

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, A e
Aeyouevny Kriwaxa xat dvedOetv opunoas éx
, a PacnrLdo0s. é10 Kat TrAElovas Huépas Ev TH 0-Nee Ovétpiyrev: ev ais Kat Oeodéxtov tePvnKkotos
5 \ , IAN > s ’ a ’ (qv 3&€ Dacynritns) id@v etxova avaKermévny év
la) Q a , ra
ayopa, meta Seimvov éemexwmpace peOvav Kal Tov
, > 7 , ? La 3
otepadvev éméppiye moddovs, OvVK ayapl ep
atovad amodsoous Tiny TH yevouevyn be *Aptmasdi¢ ods Tymiy TH yevouévn 8 "Ap
, \ , e / ‘ \ v
OTOTEAHY Kal ptrocoptay opiALa TOS TOV avopa.
XVIIL Mera tatta eordav te rovs avti-, ef \ , bd a \ , otavrTas nper Kal Ppvytav éyetpovto: Kat Topdzov
/ a aA
moAu, eotiav Midov tod tmaXaLov yevéodat reyo-
f f ‘4 e
pevnv, Taparasav, tiv Opvrovperny apuakav cide aA f , b a prom xpavias évdedepévnv, kab AOyov ém’ a’th
\ aA a TtoTEvomeEvoy UTTO THY BapBdpwv jKovcEV, WS TO
, N \ / a 4
AvoavtTte TOY Seopov elwaptas Baciret yevecOat
THS otKoupévyns. Ob pev ovv TOAXOL dace, TAY

a \ Sees, \ ? \ \ os 5) , decpav TUPAas EYovTMY TAS apyas Kai du’ adAN-
wv TOANGKLS TKOALOLS EALypols UVTOdEpopevur, \ , f , a a a
tov ‘AnréEavpov dpnyavodvta AUaat StaTepety
Th paxatpa TO cvvappa, Kai Todas €& adtob
, > \ A > , \ \
KoTrEVTOS apxas havivat. AptotoBovros 6€ Kal
, , e 7 9 A \ , ,
mavu eyel padtav avT@ thy AVow yevécOaL, 5 , a“ ¢ a SS ee ,
éfeXovTt TOU pupod Tov Extopa KadovpeEvoY, wo
, N , Sf)? 4 e f
auveiyeto TO Cuyoderpov, ei ovTwS UdEedkvoarTt Tov Curyov.
a ,
"Evredbev Waddayovas te cal Karradoxnas
Tpocayayouevos, Kat thy Méuvovos axoveas
ANeuTHV, OS TV emt Para Aapet
TENEUTHY, OS TOV emt OaratTyn Aapetouv otpaTn-272
ALEXANDER, xvit. 4-xvul. 3

way of the so-called Ladder, and passed through it, setting out from Phaselis. ‘This was the reason for his spending several days in that city, during which he noticed that a statue of Theodectas, a deceased citizen of Phaselis, had been erected in the market-place. Once, therefore, after supper and in his cups, he led a band of revellers to the statue and crowned it with many of their garlands, thus in pleasantry returning no ungraceful honour for the past asso-ciation with the man which he owed to Aristotle and philosophy.

XVIII. After this, he overpowered such of the Pisidians as had offered him resistance, and subdued Phrygia ; and after he had taken the city of Gordium,! reputed to have been the home of the ancient Midas, he saw the much-talked-of waggon bound fast to its yoke with bark of the cornel-tree, and heard a story confidently told about it by the Barbarians, to the effect that whosoever loosed the fastening was des- tined to become king of the whole world. Well, then, most writers say that since the fastenings had their ends concealed, and were intertwined many times in crooked coils, Alexander was at a loss how to proceed, and finally loosened the knot by cutting it through with his sword, and that when it was thus smitten many ends were to be seen. But Aristobulus says that he undid it very easily, by simply taking out the so-called “hestor,” or pin, of the waggon- pole, by which the yoke-fastening was held together, and then drawing away the yoke.?

Setting out from there, he subdued Paphlagonia and Cappadocia, and on hearing of the death of Memon, one of the commanders of Dareius on the 1 Early in 333 B.o. 2 Cf. Arrian, Anab. ii, 3.
273
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

an \
yav éridoEos hv “AdcEavopw modAAa Tpdypata Kal pupias avTirmpets Kal aoxorias mapéFeuv,
5) , \ ‘ BUA / a 4
émreppwaadn mpos THY aVw oTpPAaTELaY paddAov. 1d
dé cal Aapeios éx Yovowv xatéBawev, émraipo-
, A a \
pevos TE TO TAHOE THS Suvdpews (EF jKovTA yap Hye pupiddas oTpaTODdD), Kai TLVOS Gveipov Oappv-VOVTOS AUTOV, Ov ot payor pds Yap é€EnyodYTO
a KA \ \ > , 4 \ \ , adXov 1) KaTa TO ELKOS. d0EE yap Tupi véepeaOat TOAAG THY Maxcdovav darayya, Tov 6é
"AréEavdpov Eyovta aotodnpy hy avtos épopet Tpo-
? A na / e a ? A Tepov aotavons av Baciréws, Urnpetely avTe@
/ \ > \ “A f 4 3 A maperOovra b€ eis TO TOD BydXov réuevos adavh
yeveoOar. 61a TovTwY, ws EoLKev, UIrednNOUTO Tapa Tov Jeod AauTpa pev yevyoecOar Kai Teptaw “a > Aw
gavn ta tOv Maxedover, “AréEavdpov $é tijs pev ’Acias Kpatnoev, waotTep éexpdtnce Aapetos
b] 2 , \ / \ \ \
é& aotavoov Baciredvs yevomevos, Taxyv Oé ov d0&y Tov Biov atrorciwvecy.
XIX. "Ere 68 padrov éOdppnce Katayvors
Sevttav “ArXeEdvdpou todvy xpovov év Kirrxia Siatpiwavtos. Hv 561 SiatpBy Sia vooor, hv oi N b] , e Oe 4 ? a a f
bev EX KOTTMD, Ol O€ NoVTALEV@ Ev TO TOD KUdvov
pevpate KataTayévte! mpooteceiy Aéyouct. TaV \ 9 4 > “a > \ b] v4 , bev ovv AXXwY LaTpa@Y ovdels EOappee BonOncey,
\
GNA TOV KivdUYOY olopEevOL dans LayUpOTEpOV
eivat BonOetas éfoBodvto thy éx Tov charqvat di:aBornv mpos tovs Maxedovas: Piditros 8 6

1 xatamayévt: Bekker reads kal xatamayévrs (and got chilled).

274

ALEXANDER, xvul. 3-x1x. 2

sea-board, who was thought likely to give Alexander abundant trouble and infinite annoyance, he was all the more encouraged for his expedition into the in- terior. Moreover, Dareius was already coming down to the coast from Susa, exalted in spirit by the magni- tude of his forces (for he was leading an army of six hundred thousand men), and also encouraged by a certain dream, which the Magi interpreted in a way to please him rather than as the probabilities de- manded. For he dreamed that the Macedonian phalanx was all on fire, and that Alexander, attired in a robe which he himself formerly used to wear when he was a royal courier, was waiting upon him, after which service he passed into the temple of Belus and disappeared. By this means, as it would seem, it was suggested to Dareius from Heaven that the exploits of the Macedonians would be conspicuous and brilliant, that Alexander would be master of Asia, just as Dareius became its master when he was made king instead of royal courier, and would speedily end his life with glory.

XIX. Dareius was still more encouraged by Alex- ander's long delay in Cilicia, which he attributed to cowardice. The delay was due, however, to a sickness, which assailed him in consequence of fatigues, ac- cording to some,! but according to others, because he took a bath in the river Cydnus, whose waters were icy cold. Be that as it may, none of the other physicians had the courage to administer remedies, but thinking that the danger was too great to be overcome by any remedy whatever, they were afraid of the charges which would be made against them by the Macedonians in consequence of their failure ;

1 So Aristobulus (Arrian, Anab. ii. 4, 7).
275
ao

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ee pox Onpa pep ewpa Ta TEpl avr ov ova,

n oe didrta TLOTEVOY, Kal devov YOU MEV Os el civBovetor Ty guyKwduvevo et HEX pl THS éoxXa-THs welpas Pondav kal mapaBarhopevos, eTrex el page pappaxeia Kal cuvémetcey QUT OV UT OME VEL Kat melv, omevdorTa pocdhvar ™ pos TOV TOE HOV.
év toute 6€ Ilappevior emepunpev ema Tony a0
otparoméou, Oraxehevopevos avT@ purafacbat Tov Ditirmov ws vwo Aapetov Tremetopeévoy ert dSwpeats peyadrats Kal yaum Ovyatpos averety 67

"AnréEavdpov. 0 O€ THY éETLeTOANY avayvods Kal pnoevi SetEas TOV hitwy vO TO TpoaKepddatoy

vméOnxev. ws 6€ TOD KaIp9d TrapovTos etondrADe
peta T@V éETaipwy Oo Pidimros TO happaxov év KUALKL KOmifwy, éxeivm pev er@édmKe THY érLOTO-apy, avTos dé 70 happaKkov edéEato TpoOvmas Kal aQvuTOTTOWS, @TE OavpacTHY Kat OeaTpiKnY THY ow eivat, TOD pey avaywwcKovtTos, TOD dé TivOvTos, elra apa pos GX) AOUS aToSXeT ovTwY ovx opoiws, GNA TOD pev “AReEdvOpov parope
TO TPOTOT Kal Svakexuperep THY T pos TOV
Dirurrov eiudveray nal riotw drodatvovtos, éxeivou 6é€ wpos THyv dtaBorny éEtatapevov Kal
mote pev OeoxruTodyTOS Kab TPOS TOY Ovpavor
avaTeivovTos Tas Yelpas, Tote 5€ TH KAiVN TeEpt-TLTTOVTOS Kal TApAaKaroovTos TOV “AreEavdpov evOupeiv Kal T poo Ex ew auT@. TO yap p appaxov év apy Karo ay ToD TWMLATOS olov dn éwoe Kal KATEOUC EV els Babos THY Ovvaey, @aoTe Kal pavny €mihimely Kal Ta TEpl THY alcOnaw dcadh Kat pexpa Komloy yeveoOat, ALTOOUpLas eTLTETOVENS.
276

-

v

ALEXANDER, xix. 2-5

but Philip the Acarnanian, who saw that the king was in an evil plight, put confidence in his friend- ship, and thinking it a shameful thing not to share his peril by exhausting the resources of art in trying to help him even at great risk, prepared a medicine and persuaded him to drink it boldly, if he was anxious to regain his strength for the war. Mean- while, however, Parmenio sent a letter to Alexander from the camp, urging him to be on his guard against Philip, for the reason that he had been persuaded by Dareius, with the promise of large gifts and a marriage with his daughter, to kill Alexander. Alexander read the letter and placed it under his pillow, without showing it to any one of his friends. When the time appointed was at hand, and Philip came in with the king’s companions, carrying the medicine in a cup, Alexander handed him the letter, while he himself took the medicine from him with readiness and no sign of suspicion. It was an amazing sight, then, and one well worthy of the stage,—the one reading the letter, the other drinking the medicine, and then both together turning their eyes upon one another, but not with the same expression; for Alexander, by his glad and open countenance, showed his good will towards Philip and his trust in him, while Philip was beside himself at the calumny, now lifting up his hands towards heaven and calling upon the gods to witness his innocence, and now falling upon the couch on which Alexander lay and beseeching him to be of good courage and obey his physician. For at first the medicine mastered the patient, and as it were drove back and buried deep his bodily powers, so that his voice failed, he fell into a swoon, and became almost wholly unconscious. However, he

4 b] \ , \ a ov pny aAArAA TAYEwWS avaAnPOeEis VIO TOD PirIT-Tov Kal paioas avtov éméderEe tots Maxedoou:
3 \ ? Le \ 9 a ‘ > , “A ov yap émavovto mpl deity tov ‘“AdXéEavdpor au povvtes.
A , nn
XX. "Hv 6é tis év tH Aapetov ctpate wepev-
/
yos éx Maxedovias avnp Maxedeorv, *Apurtas, 9 bd a ? / ra 2
ovK ameipos tHS 'AXcEdvdpov gdvcews. ovTOS
4 A A A
wopynuévoy io@v Aapetoy eiow TaV otevav Badi-> 9? 3 , IN A \ , e t
Cew er AdéEavdpov, édeito kata Ywpav Urope-ve, €v TWAATOS EYouaL Tediols Kal avaTreTTApe-
,
vows mpos €AdtTovas TAME TOoTOUTM Stapayov-4 \ , , 2 wevov. amoxpiwapévov be Aapeiouv dedrévae py dbacwoiv avtov atrodpavTes ot Tonéutoe Kal
>
dtahuyov AréEavopos, “AXA TovTOV ye,” el7rer, “a Baotred, yapw Odppe Badrettat yap éxeivos SN A \ \ 4 , 29 n , emt oé, Kal axedov dn Badiler.” Tavita rAéyou
b] = v Q » > > \ 2 4
Apuvtas ovx ereev, aXX avactas €eTropeveTo
Aapeios eis Kidixiav, dua de ’ArXéEavdpos eis
3 Suptav é’ éxeivov. év b€ TH vuKti dtapaprovtes
4 arAnA@Y adlis avéotpedov, ‘ArXéEEavdpos pev HOOMEVOS TE TH TUYTUXia Kal OTEVOWY ATraVTHCAL
a \ mepl ta oteva, Aapetos d€ THY TpoTépay arawn v4 \ wn an 9 ,
AaPeivy oTpatoTrEedeiay Kai TaY otevav éFediEae
THY OUvapLV. %5N yap eyvOKEe Tapa TO GUUdépow
> \ e N > i 4 \N oy éuBeBrAnkws éavTov ets ywpia CaraTTyH Kal opece

Kal ToTau@ oa pecou péovts TO IIwap@ dvcimma, Kal OleoTracpéva TroAAayo', Kal pos
A rN N 4
THS GALYOTNTOS TOY ToOAELioy ExovTa THY Oéaty.
‘ , f ,
4 'AreEdvipw b€ Tov pmev ToTOV H TYUXN Tapecyer, 278

was speedily restored to his senses by Philip, and when he had recovered strength he showed himself to the Macedonians, who refused to be comforted until they had seen Alexander.

XX. Now, there was in the army of Dareius a certain Macedonian who had fled from his country, Amyntas by name, and he was well acquainted with the nature of Alexander. This man, when he saw that Dareius was eager to attack Alexander within the narrow passes of the mountains, begged him to remain where he was, that he might fight a decisive battle with his vast forces against inferior numbers in plains that were broad and spacious. And when Dareius replied that he was afraid the enemy would run away before he could get at them,and Alexander thus escape him, " Indeed," said Amyntas, "on this point, O king, thou mayest be without fear; for he will march against thee, nay, at this very moment, probably, he is on the march." Dareius would not listen to these words of Amyntas, but broke camp and marched into Cilicia, and at the same time Alex- ander marched into Syria against him. But having missed one another in the night, they both turned back again, Alexander rejoicing in his good fortune, and eager to meet his enemy in the passes, while Dareius was as eager to extricate his forces from the passes and regain his former camping-ground. For he already saw that he had done wrong to throw himself into places which were rendered unfit for cavalry by sea and mountains and a river running through the middie (the Pinarus), which were broken up in many parts, and favoured the small num- bers of his enemy. And not only was the place for the battle a gift of Fortune to Alexander, but

279

eoTparHynae dé TOY amo THs TUXNS UTapXOvT@Y
7 pos TO vikhnous BédTLov, os ¥é ToT OUT e mrajAet TOV BapBapov AELTOMEVOS EKELVOLS pev ov Tap-éaVeE KUKKOOLY, avTos 6é TO beFtd 70 EUWVUJLOV
uTepBarov Kal ryevopievos Kata Képas puyny eTOLnTE TOV Kad QUuTOV BapBdpov, év 7 paras dyovilonevos, WOTE TpoOjvar Eiger TOV unNpor, os pev Xapns dynoiv, vo Aapetou (cupTecety yap avTous ets xetpas), "Ad€Eav6 pos bé mepl THS paxns eETLITENNOY Tous mepl TOV "Avrimatpov
ovK elpncer bots WV O TpwaaAsS, OTL Oe Tpwbein

TOV pnpov eyXerpLover, Suaxepes & obdév amd tod
TPAUVLATOS ouuBain yeypage.
Nuxnoas 6€ Aaumpas Kat KkataBarov wvrép
évdexa, pupiaoas TOV TohenLiov, Aapetov. peév ovx ele TETTAPAS oradious 7) TEVTE mpodaBovra TH puyn, TO oé apy a Kal TO ToEov avTov haBoov éravnrOe cal KatéraBe tovs Maxedovas tov ev anrdov TOUT OV en tov BapBaptxov atpatomédov pépovtas Kal dyovtas umepBardovra TrIDet, Kaimep evC@vev ™ pos THY paxny TaparyevopLEevov
Kal Ta TreloTa THS aToaKEUNS ey AapacKkd
KATANTOVTOY, Thy o€ Aapetou cKNY HY eEnpncoras oe Gepamreias Te apm pas Kal TapacKevijs XPNHATOV TOAN@Y yewoucay. evOvs ovv derobued uevos Ta OTA T pos TO Nout pov €Babrtev, elroy: ‘To pev aro ova ofEvot TOV ATO THS Maxs idipwTa TO Aapetou AouvT pS.” Ka TLS TOV stalpov “Ma TOV Ata” elmer, “ddr TW
’AdeEavdpou: Ta yap TOV ATT peéveov elval TE Sei Kal mpocayopevec(at Tod KpatovvTos.” ws dé 280

6

6

ALEXANDER, xx. 4-8

his generalship was better than the provisions of Fortune for his victory. For since he was so vastly inferior in numbers to the Barbarians, he gave them no opportunity to encircle him, but, leading his right wing in person, extended it past the enemy’s left, got on their flank, and routed the Barbarians who were opposed to him, fighting among the fore- most, so that he got a sword-wound in the thigh. Chares says this wound was given him by Dareius, with whom he had a hand-to-hand combat, but Alex- ander, in a letter to Antipater about the battle, did not say who it was that gave him the wound; he wrote that he had been wounded in the thigh with a dagger, but that no serious harm resulted from the wound. Although he won a brilliant victory and destroyed more than a hundred and ten thousand of his enemies, he did not capture Dareius, who got a start of four or five furlongs in his flight; but he did take the king’s chariot, and his bow, before he came back from the pursuit. He found his Macedonians carry- ing off the wealth from the camp of the Barbarians, and the wealth was of surpassing abundance, al- though its owners had come to the battle in light marching order and had left most of their baggage in Damascus; he found, too, that his men had picked out fur him the tent of Dareius, which was full to overflowing with gorgeous servitors and furniture, and many treasures. Straightway, then, Alexander put off his armour and went to the bath, saying: “ Let us go and wash off the sweat of the battle in the bath of Dareius.”” “No, indeed,” said one of his companions, “but rather in that of Alexander; for the property of the conquered must belong to the conqueror, and be called his.” And when he

$s \ va \ \) N / %
elde ev OAKLA Kal Kpoocous Kal mvéhous Kal draBaorpovs, TavTa xpuaod, noKnpeva Te put TOS, @dwdet 6€ Jeatréctov otov v0 dpa waTov Kal
pLUPwY O OLKOS, Ex O€ TOUTOU TapHAOEY Eis oKNYND
e a \ ies Te Kal peyéler Kal TO Tept THY OTPwWLVYINY
nA A /
Kat tpaTélas Kal TO Setrvov avTod Koopw Oavpa-/ \ td a tos akiav, diaBréas pos Tovs ETatpous, “ TovTo 5 e ty 33) a3 \ , ”
AV, ws éorxev, Edn, “TO Bacirevewv.
XXT. Tperopévm 5€ pos TO Setrvov auT@
nw 3 ’ /
ppaver tus €v Tois alypadwrtos ayouévas pnTépa
a“ / \ cal yuvaixa Aapeiov Kai Ovyatépas dvo Twapbév-
. \ , / \
ous isovaas TO appa cal Ta TOka KoTTETOat Kal
n , / \
Oonveiv, ws amoAWOTOS ExElvOU. GuyYVOY ov 3 \ f b] , Q nm 3 , éemisywv xpovov “AdéEavdpos, Kal Tais éxelvwv
a) XN a) A \ ’ TUYAaLS MANXOD 1) Tals EavTOD EuTrabns yevopevos, méumer Acovvatov, atrayyetvat KehEVTAS WS OUTE
nw >] f
Aapetos téOvnxev ote “AXéEavdpov dediévae p77"
4 Q \ hs A ?
Aapeim yap uTép nyepwovias TroNepety, exetvars O€
, e / & \ / ,
mavta virapftew wv Kat Aapetov Basidevovtos wn la’ \ 4 n I, nEvovvTo. tov 6€ AOyov Tails yuvatElw Huépou
a) / / a N va
Kal ypnoTov havévtos Ett padrov TA TOV Epywv annvita diravOpwra. Oaryar yap Caous éBov-
a ” 3 A \ f
Novto Ilepca@py edwxev, EoOHRTL Kal KOT Mw Ypnaa-

/ 3 A , / a
pévais €k TV Nadupan, GOepareias TE Kal TLMAS
A a >as ¢ a“ ’ a / \ \ / Hv elyov ovd oTtoby adetre, ovvTdtes O€ Kal pel-
nw a /
Covas éxaptrovvtTo TOY TpoTépwr. 1 d€ KaAMaTH
> A
Kal BactitkwTaTyn Yapis iv Tap avTov yuvarkt
i yevraials yevopévats atypyarwtos Kal cwdpoat
, a 7 e n~ , “
[NTE AKOVTAL TL MHTE VTOVOHCAaL pNTE TpoG doKi-282

saw the basins and pitchers and tubs and caskets, all of gold, and curiously wrought, while the apartment was marvellously fragrant with spices and unguents, and when he passed from this into a tent which was worthy of admiration for its size and height, and for the adornment of the couch and tables and banquet prepared for him, he turned his eyes upon his companions and said: “This, as it would seem, is to be a king.”

XXI. As he was betaking himself to supper, some- one told him that among the prisoners were the mother, wife, and two unmarried daughters of Da- reius, and that at sight of his chariot and bow they beat their breasts and lamented, believing that he was dead. Accordingly, after a considerable pause, more affected by their affliction than by his own success, he sent Leonnatus, with orders to tell them that Dareius was not dead, and that they need have no fear of Alexander; for it was Dareius upon whom he was waging war for supremacy, but they should have everything which they used to think their due when Dareius was undisputed king. If this message was thought by the women to be mild and kindly, still more did the actions of Alexander prove to be humane. For he gave them permission to bury whom they pleased of the Persians, and to use for this purpose raiment and adornment from the spoils, and he abated not one jot of their honour- able maintenance, nay, they enjoyed even larger allowances than before. But the most honourable and most princely favour which these noble and chaste women received from him in their captivity was that they neither heard, nor suspected, nor

283

gat TOV AigyYpOV, AAr’ wWaTEp OvK ev oTPAaTOTEdw

TorEeuiwy, Ar’ év lepots Kal aytows PuvAaTTOmEevas

mapSevacwv aToppyntoy ExEewW Kal dopaTov ETEpots

Siartav. Kaitot NéyeTat ye THv Aapetov yuvaixa

TON TATWY TOV Bacthidwv EVTPETEDTUTND yEre-ofa, xabarep Kab avTOs Aapeios dvd pay Kad-Ma TOS Kal péytatos, TAs O& Taidas éotKévat ToOIs OVEUC LY.
"AX "AréEavdpos, ws Eorxe, TOD viKaY TOUS
Toveulovs TO Kpateiy éavtov PacidiKxwrTepov NHYOUMEVOS, OVTE TOUTMY EOLyEY OVTE AAANY eyvw
yuvaika 7™ po ydpou, ANY Bapowvns. arn 0€, peTa TH Mépvovos TerXeuTIV Ynpa yevomevn, Tepl
Aapackov érAndn. TeTaLoeupeyn | éé matdelav
‘EAA qpueny Kal Tov TpoTroy emLetkns ovca Kal
TAT pos "A ptraBafou ‘YE/ov0TOS éx Bactréws Ov-
Yat pos, éyvwa On, Tlappeviovos 7 pot pewra.uevou TOV “AreEavépor, as pnow ‘Apia toBounos, Ka-ANS Kal yevvaias ayacAat yuvatkos. Tas é ddras alXYMAXwWTOUS OpaV a “Ar€éEavopos eadnet Kal poeyeBer Sua epovaas éXeye Trailwy ws eloly anynooves Oppatoov at Mepatdes. dy tem tOELKvupevos dé 7 pas Ty idéav THY éxetvwv 70 Ths totas eyxpatetas Kat oppor vrs KEAXNOS, MoTTEP AWv-ous €ikovas ayakpdtwv Ta pemeprpen.

XXII. ’Exrel d¢€ Deroevos 0 TOV ert Oaratry
TTPATHYOS éypawev eivat Tap’ AUT @eddepdv tiva ‘Tapavtivov EXovTa matoas @viOUS dvo THY Opuy meppuels, Kal muvOavopLevos es m pinta, KareTras évey Kev éBoa TONNAKES 7 pos TOUS gihous, épwtav ti mwToTe Pidokevos ataypov avT@ 284

ALEXANDER, xxi. 3-xxm. £5

awaited anything that could disgrace them, but lived,
as though guarded in sacred and inviolable virgins’ chambers instead of in an enemy’s camp, apart from the speech and sight of men. And yet it is said that the wife of Dareius was tar the most comely of all royal women, just as Dareius himself also was handsomest and tallest of men, and the daughters resembled their parents.

But Alexander, as it would seem, considering the mastery of himself a more kingly thing than the conquest of his enemies, neither laid hands upon these women, nor did he know any other before marriage, except Barsiné. This woman, Memnon's widow, was taken prisoner at Damascus. And since she had received a Greek education, and was of an agreeable disposition, and since her father, Artabazus, was son of a king's daughter, Alexander de- termined (at Parmenio's instigation, as Aristobulus says) to attach himself to a woman of such high birth and beauty. But as for the other captive women, seeing that they were surpassingly stately and beautiful, he merely said jestingly that Persian women were torments to the eyes.) And displaying in rivalry with their fair looks the beauty of his own sobriety and self-control, he passed them by as though they were lifeless images for display.

XXII. Moreover, when Philoxenus, the commander of his forces on the sea-board, wrote that there was with him a certain Theodorus, of Tarentum, who had two boys of surpassing beauty to sell, and enquired whether Alexander would buy them, Alexander was incensed, and cried out many times to his friends, asking them what shameful thing Philoxenus had ever

1 Cf. Herod. v. 18.

a)

qn

UVEYVOKWS TOLAavTA OoVveidn tmpokev@v KAOnTAL.
Lg A
tov 6€ Dirokevov avtov év émigToOAR TOANA Rol-

/ b] f ' a / \ ,

Sopnaas éxéXevoev avtois hoptiots Tov Oeodwpov 9 /
eis TOv OdXeOpov atroaTédrewv. érrémrnEE Oé Kat

"Ayvove. ypaavts mpos attov ott KpwBvrov

NOOKL LOU év Kopitv@m BovreTat Ld LE evookipmouvTa év pivbq v T pud Levos
b an X f 4 \
ayayety mpos avrov. muvOavopevos 5é€ pwicdogopov twev yovaa SuedOapxévar Aduova cat Ttp0-Oeov Maxedovas tov vo Tlappeviave otpartevo-
" / 7 9\ 3
pévov, &ypare Uappeviwvt xerevwv, av érey-yaa, ws Onpia éri katapOopa tav avOpwtrav yeyovoTa TLuwpnodpevoy arroKTeivat. Kal rept éavtov Kata réEw év tavtTn TH éemtaToOAn vyé-oc? \ \ ’ e e ore e , ypadev “'Eya yap ovy OTl Ewpakmws av evpePernv \ nw 3 a) b tv Aapeiov yuvaixa 7) BeBourAnpeévos ideiv, aXX ovdé TOV AEyovTwWY TeEpl THS evpopdias avTijs

/ \ , 23 yy \ 4
mpoadebeypevos TOV AOyov. Ereye Oé peddeaTa cuviévat Ovntros av éx Tov Kabevoey Kal cuvou-
n / a aialely, ws aro plas éeyyivopevov aabeveias TH
dice Kal TO TovodY Kal TO 7OdmEVOr.
"Hy 6€ nai yaotpos éyxpatéotazos, Kal TovTO aNXots TE ToAAOLS €Or)AWoE Kal TOis mpos “Adav
NeyOetowv, iv emromjcato pntépa Kal Kapias
/ b] f e \ ? /
Bacittacay amédekev. ws yap éxeivn didodpo-
/ X\ \ ’
voupevyn Tora pev Oia Kal’ huépav améateddev
“ \ A fa)
avUT@ Kal Téupata, TéXos S€ Tous SoKodvTAas Eivat

’ \

Sevotatous ovotrotovs Kal aptototovs, ébn ToUv-XN nA
Tov pnodevos SetcOarr Bedrtiovas yap dwWoroLovs

Eyely UTO TOV Tatdaywyud Aewvidou Sedopéevous

286

ALEXANDER, xxi. 1-5

seen in him that he should spend his time in making such disgraceful proposals. And on Philoxenus himself he heaped much reproach in a letter, bidding him send Theodorus to perdition, merchandize and all. He severely rebuked Hagnon also for writing to him that he wanted to buy Crobylus, whose beauty was famous in Corinth, as a present for him. Further- more, on learning that Damon and Timotheus, two Macedonian soldiers under Parmenio’s command, had ruined the wives of certain mercenaries, he wrote to Parmenio ordering him, in case the men were con- victed, to punish them and put them to death as wild beasts born for the destruction of mankind. In this letter he also wrote expressly concerning him- self: “As for me, indeed, it will be found not only that I have not seen the wife of Dareius or desired to see her, but that I have not even allowed people to speak to me of her beauty.” And he used to say that sleep and sexual intercourse, more than any thing else, made him conscious that he was mortal, implying that both weariness and pleasure arise from one and the same natural weakness.

He had also the most complete mastery over his appetite, and showed this both in many other ways, and especially by what he said to Ada, whom he hononred with the title of Mother and made queen of Caria.) When, namely, in the kindness of her heart, she used to send him day by day many viands and sweetmeats, and finally offered him bakers and cooks reputed to be very skilful, he said he wanted none of them, for he had better cooks which had been given him by his tutor, Leonidas ; for his break-

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. i. 23, 8.

a / \
aUT@, TpOS mev TO Apiotov, vuKToTopiav, mpos Oe \ n ? , "«O ss »_\ e
To detmvov, oAtyaploTiay. avToS ovTOS
Tan ee 'e \ a / ? \ v3
avnp, éby, "Kal TOY GTPOLATOY ETLOV TA AyY-a fal / a 4 /
yela Kal TOV ipatioy EdvEv, ELTKOTO@V 41) TL \ 3 N , Z be)
plot TpUhEpoy % Tepicoov 7 uNTHp EvTECeErKeDv.
r > \ ic ® /
XXIII. *Hv 6é xcal mpos oivoy irrov 7 edoKet
4 " \ \ '\ , A > ,
Kkatapepys. edoke O€ dia Tov Ypovoy ov ov TivwY
a 3 n & 3
HANXov 7) Aadav eidxev Eh EXdaTHS KUALKOS, GEL
paxpov Tiva Aoyov StaTiPéwevos, Kal TavTA TOA-
A a % , \ ,
ARS TVOANS ovaNS. E7rEl TpOS ye TAS TpAakeEts OVK oivos éKelvov, OVY UTVOS, OV TALdLa TIS, OV YapLOS, 3 Oé Q / IAX aay 4 3 7
ov Oéa, xadaTep addovgs aTpaTnyous, éTéoye.
A \ e , a 4 X /
dnrot 6€ 0 Bios, bv Biacas Bpayvy Tavtatact,
/
TAELTTWY Kal peyioTov Tpakewy evéerrAnoEv. €V
dé Tats TYOAAIS TP@TOV perv avasTas Kal Ovaas
a a \ , 7
tois Oeois evOus Hpiata KaOrjpevos: Ererta Sinpeébos x 3 a peve Kuvnyov 7 Oikalwv i) cuVYTAaTTMY TL TOV Leo N ? , b] ' CAN ,
TONEMIKWV 7) avayiooKkwV. e€t de odov Badifor
\ /

pa) ALav €rre’youcap, eudvOavev Gua TopEevo[Levos 3 ,
1) ToEevew 7) émtBaivery Gppatos éXavvopévou Kal
3 / ¢ \ / \ 3 ,
aToSatvew. todaKis 66 Tailor Kal ad@meKas
’ ’ an n
eOnpeve Kal opvidas, ws cote AaGelv ex ToV éhn-
4 a \ pepiowv. Katadvous 5€ Kal TpEeTomeEevos TPS
\ A - ‘ n n
NouTpov 7} aArepupa, Tos él TOV GITOTOL@Y Kal
A 3 tA > N \ wn
HayeLpwY aVEKpLVEY EL TA TPOS TO SElTVOY EvTpE-an ff \ an
ww@S EXovalt. Kal Sevmvety wey oe Kal oKOTOUS yO , 7 \ \ iy ¢
ON KaTaKALVOMEVOS HpYeTO, Oavsaati dé Hy 1
b] / \ / > \ n , [4
emiperera kat TepiBreWis Eri THs TeaTrélys, OTTwWS de bd / Oe >] , id N N
pndey avicws pnoe orALywpws StavésotTo: TOV bé 288
ALEXANDER, xxu. 5-xxu. 3

fast, namely, a night march, and for his supper, a light breakfast. ‘‘ And this same Leonidas,” he said, “used to come and open my chests of bedding and clothing, to see that my mother did not hide there for me some luxury or superfluity.”

XXIII. To the use of wine also he was less ad- dicted than was generally believed. The belief arose from the time which he would spend over each cup, more in talking than in drinking, always holding some long discourse, and this too when he had abun- dant leisure. [For in the stress of affairs he was not to be detained, as other commanders were, either by wine, or sleep, or any sport, or amour, or spec- tacle. This is proved by his life, which, though altogether brief, he filled to overflowing with the greatest exploits. In his times of leisure, however, after rising and sacrificing to the gods, he immedi- ately took breakfast sitting; then, he would spend the day in hunting, or administering justice, or ar- ranging his military affairs, or reading. If he were making a march which was not very urgent, he would practise, as he went along, either archery or mounting and dismounting from a chariot that was under way. Often, too, for diversion, he would hunt foxes or birds, as may be gathered from his journals. After he had taken quarters for the night, and while he was enjoying bath or anointing, he would enquire of his chiet cooks and bakers whether the arrange- ments for his supper were duly made. When it was late and already dark, he would begin his supper, reclining on a couch, and marvellous was his care and circumspection at table, in order that everything might be served impartially and without stint; but

289

Ge

e

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ei \
TOTOV, MoTED ElpNTal, MAKPOV UTO adorEcyias
Iges \ 9S 4 4 XN
é€étewve. xal TAXA TavTwoYv Hotatos oY Baa , wn n
gidéwy ouveivat Kal YaptTos ovdemas apmolpar, ~ , \ 4 4
TOTE Tals peyaravyiats andns éyiveto Kat Nav
4 N \ ~
OTPATLWTLKOS, AUTOS TE TPOS TO KOmTTa@dES UTrO-
a , \ hepomevos Kal Tos KoAaEW EavTOV avEeiKws (TI1Ta-3 * e , nw f
acipov, up WY Ol YapleoTEepoL THY TAapOYTwY émeTpiBovto, mite autdkraa Gas Tots Koraks unre
s ~ a NelrrecGar Bovdrcpevoe TOV avTa@V érraivwrv. TO N \ by ‘ 280 \ de ‘4 5 ”
pev yap aicxypov édoxet, TO dé xivdvvov édepe.
\ \ , ,) ‘4 . ,
ETA O€ TOV TOTOV AOoVaapEVos ExXalEvOE TOANAKIS
/ f e méexpt méons tuépass éote O° Ste nal Sunpépevev év T@ xadevdeu.
\ Ne oe. \
Avtos pev obv Kai Owy éyxpatns hv, OoTE Kal
Ta OTaVLwWTaTAa TOANUKIS TOY ato BadaTTNS
a / avT@ Koptlopevwy axpodpvav Kat iyOvev éExaoto
, a) / ¢ ~ /
S.ATEUTOMEVOS TOY ETALPWY EAVT@ poVvm pNdeV
a N / a 3
KaTaNITELW* TO pevTOL SEeimVvOY Hy del peyano-
N a / a
TpeTées, KaL TOiS EvTVY pace THS SaTUVvns dpa
, S 3 , “A
cuvavkomévns TéXOS Els purias dpaypuas TponAGED.
al \ y N “ al

évtav0a 5é€ EaTn, Kat TocoUTOY wpicOn Terety
A e / b , tows vTodevopuevors AdéEavdpor.
XXIV. Meta é€ tHv paynv tiv év loo wép-
? N f \
was eis Aapackov é\aBe Ta Xpnyata Kal Tas
\ \ \ 4 \ a a
GTOTKEVaS KAL TA TEXVA Kal TAS YyuUvaiKas TOV
a \ “ \ n
Ilepoav. Kat wreiota pev wpernOyncay of tav
~ e ~ 4
Ococar@v immets: TovTovs yap avdpas ayabous
t > “A 4 4 >
SiaEepovTws Ev TH MAXN yevomevous Ereprpen érri-290

67

ALEXANDER, xxi. 3-XXIv. I

over the wine, as I have said, he would sit long, for conversation’s sake. And although in other ways he was of all princes most agreeable in his intercourse, and endowed with every grace, at this time his boastfulness would make him unpleasant and very like a common soldier. Not only was he himself carried away into blustering, but he suffered himself to be ridden by his flatterers. ‘These were a great annoyance to the finer spirits in the company, who desired neither to vie with the flatterers, nor yet to fall behind them in praising Alexander. ‘The one course they thought disgraceful, the other had its perils. After the drinking was over, he would take a bath and sleep, frequently until midday; and sometimes he would actually spend the entire day in sleep.

In the matter of delicacies, too, he himself, at all events, was master of his appetite, so that often, when the rarest fruits or fish were brought to him from the sea-coast, he would distribute them to each of his companions until he was the only one for whom nothing remained. His suppers, however, were always magnificent, and the outlay upon them increased with his successes until it reached the sum of ten thousand drachmas. ‘There it stood, and that was the prescribed limit of expenditure for those who entertained Alexander.

XXIV. After the battle at Issus,! he sent to Da- mascus and seized the money and baggage of the Persians together with their wives and children. And most of all did the Thessalian horsemen enrich themselves, for they had shown themselves surpassingly brave in the battle, and Alexander sent them on this expedition purposely, wishing to have them enrich

TOES apernOivac Bovdopevos: eve oO dé Kal
TO owrrov evTmopias oTpaToTecoy. Kat yevodpevot TOTE Tpatov ot Maxedoves Vpucov Kal cpyopou kal yuvatkov Kal Ssartns BapBapuxgs, OoTEp KUVES éo-mevoov avrapevoe aotiBou dSioKxey
Ba cyexvevewy Tov TOV Ilepoay rhodrov.
U unv a2AN ’AreEdvdpw tp@tov edoxet KpatvveoOat Ta pos Pardoon. Kuzrpov pev ouv evdus ot Bacireis KOV eyxeupifovres avT@, Kal Powieny ThYV Tupov. Tupov bé TONLOPKOV eT TA pfvas XOuact Kal pnxavais Kal Tpuypect dla-Koalais ék Oararrns, ovap elde Tov ‘Hpaxréa deEtovpevoy QvTOV ATO TOD TELXOUS Kal KadovvTa.
TOV dé Tupiwv TONO‘S Kara TOUS vrrvous edo€ev
0 “AmroAov eyeuv OS area T pos “AreEavopor ov yap aperKew avT@ Ta ‘Tpaccopueva Kata THY TOMY. GAN avTo. wey WoTEp aVOpwrov avuToOporovvTa Tpos TOUS ToAEulovs eT avTopwMpH tov Oeov eiinhotes cerpas TE TH KONOTT®@ TeEpté-Bardov avtov Kal Ka@nrouv mpos tHv Bao,
"AreEavdpta tn KanrovvTes. /erepay dé dvpev ‘Aréav6pos ele Kata Tovs Uvous. Larupos auto pavels édoxet mpooraile moppoben, elTa
Bovdopuévov AaBetv umeEéhevye’ TéXOS O€ TrOAAA NTApPHNTAaVTOS Kal TepLdpapovTos HAOEV ELs YeEt-
pas. ol O€ pavTers TOUVOma SiatpodVTES OVK aTrL-Paves epacav autre: “37 yevnoerat Tupos.”
Kal Kpyvny O€ TiVa deuxvdovat, Tpos Hv KATA TOUS
UTVOUS idetv édoke TOV Larupov.
Aud pécou O€ THs ToXtopkias él Tovs "ApaBas
Tous wpocoixourtas TO 'AvTtAtBave otpatevaas

themselves. But the rest of the army also was filled with wealth. Then for the first time the Macedo- nians got a taste of gold and silver and women and barbaric luxury of life, and now that they had struck the trail, they were like dogs in their eagerness to pursue and track down the wealth of the Persians.

However, Alexander determined first to make himself master of the sea-coasts. As for Cyprus, then, its kings came at once and put the island in his hands, together with Phoenicia, with the exception of Tyre. But Tyre he besieged for seven months,! with moles, and engines-of-war, and two hundred triremes by sea. During this siege he had a dream in which he saw Heracles stretching out his hand to him from the wall and calling him. And many of the Tyrians dreamed that Apollo told them he was going away to Alexander, since he was displeased at what was going on in the city. Whereupon, as if the god had been a common deserter caught in the act of going over to the enemy, they encircled his colossal figure with cords and nailed it down to its pedestal, calling him an Alexandrist. In another dream, too, Alexander thought he saw a satyr who mocked him at a distance, and eluded his grasp when he tried to catch him, but finally, after much coaxing and chasing, surrendered. The seers, dividing the word “satyros” into two parts, said to him, plausibly enough, “Tyre is to be thine.” And a spring is pointed out, near which Alexander dreamed he saw the satyr.
While the siege of the city was in progress, he made an expedition against the Arabians who dwelt in the neighbourhood of Mount Antilibanus. On 1 January—-August, 332 B.c.
293
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

5) if \ \ \ f 3
exivduveuce Sta TOV Taldaywyov Avoipayov: é&n-
/ \ b A , a , 9
Ko\ovOnge yap avT@ Aéywv Tov PotviKos ovK
3 , > \ f 3 \ \
eivat yelpwv ovde mpeaBuTepos. émel S€ Tr7-gladcas Tos Opetvots Kab TOUS tamoUs aTroALTTOV melos é€Bddrlev, of pev AAXOL ToAV TpoHdrOor, SieN \ \ / e A BA
avtos 6€ Tov Avaoipaxov, éomrépas $n KaTAadap-Bavovons Kat TOV TOAEHIinY éyyUs GyTwY, aTra-
,
yopevovta Kat Bapuvopevoy ovy UTropévwv arroAt-~ 3 ,

mel, GAN avakadovpevos Kal TapaKkopilor,
a f éxade Tov oTpaTevpatos aToaTaabels meT OrLYOV
, la
Kal GKOTOUS Gua Kal piyous opodpod vuKTEpevwv
a U év yopiots YadeTrois. eldev ody TOppw TUPA
\ , / A ,
TOAAG KaLOmEeva oTropadny TOY TONELLwV. Oap-
p@Vv O€ TOU THMATOS TH KOUPOTHTL, KAL T@ Tovety avTos del TapapvOovmevos THV atroptav Tov Make-
4 a a“ ,
Sovev, Tporédpape Tols éyyloTta Tup Katovot Kal
S a A f meptxabnuevous TH TWUpa dvo BapBapous watakas
a > ? \ \ e f \
TO eyxelptdiw Kal dadov aprdcas KE pos TOUS
A , , A
EauTOU Komilwv. éyKavaavTes O€ TIP TOAV TOUS \ +f) N > , ee a ‘\ > » , pev evdvs éfpoBnaav wate puyeiv, tovs 8 ériov-5 / \ f b) i
Tas étpéavto, Kal KatnudicOncay axivdvvos.
a ,
TauTa pev ovy Napys totopyxev.
XXV. ‘H 6€ wodopxia towvrtov éoxe Trépas.
\ a "AreEdvdpou Thy mév TOAAnY THs SuVapEews ava-
\ a , A
TAVOVTOS ATO TOAAOY ayovwy Tov EumpoaOer, 9 ? , (d \ iA e ,
ddiyous b€ TLVaS, WS I TKXOAaCOLEY OF TOAELLOL,
a 4
Tols Tetyeot Tpocayovtos, Apiatavdpos 0 pavtts éapayiaveto: Kai Ta onuelta KaTioa@v Opacutepov 294

6

=

g!

ALEXANDER, xxiv. 6-xxv. 1

this expedition he risked his life to save his tutor, Lysimachus, who insisted on following him, declaring himself to be neither older nor weaker than Phoenix.! But when the force drew near the mountains, they abandoned their horses and proceeded on foot, and most of them got far on in advance. Alexander himself, however, would not consent to abandon the worn and weary Lysimachus, since evening was already coming on and the enemy were near, but sought to encourage him and carry him along. Before he was aware of it, therefore, he was separated from his army with a few followers, and had to spend a night of darkness and intense cold in a region that was rough and difficult. In this plight, he saw far off a number of scattered fires which the enemy were burning. So, since he was confident in his own agility, and was ever wont to cheer the Macedonians in their perplexities by sharing their toils, he ran to the nearest camp-fire. Two Barbarians who were sitting at the fire he despatched with his dagger, and snatching up a fire-brand, brought it to his own party. These kindled a great fire and at once frightened some of the enemy into flight, routed others who came up against them, and spent the night without further peril. Such, then, is the account we have from Chares.

XXV. The siege of the city had the following issue. While Alexander was giving the greater part of his forces a rest from the many struggles which they had undergone, and was leading up only a few men to attack the walls, in order that the enemy might have no respite, Aristander the seer made a sacrifice, and after taking the omens, declared very confidently

2 Cf. chapter v. 4.

, ' 4 A
Siwpliaato Tpos TOUS TapovTas ev ExEelv@ TO evi
s € , \ / / \
2 mavtws adwoecOat THv Tod. Yyevouévou Sbé
a \ / "a yYAevac pov Kal yéXwTos (HV yap H TEXEUTALA TOD
f \ ¢
pnvos nuépa), Sinmropnuévov avtov tdav o Bact-NevS Kal cuUdiAOTLMOVMEVOS GEL TOS HaVTEVLATW
éxéXeve pnKkéTs Tptaxdda Thy nhuépav Exeivnp, GAA Tpitny POirovtos aptOpetys Kai TH Tad-
a a a ,
TiyYl ONLHVAS ATETELPATO TMV TELYOV Eppwpmeve-
a 4
aotepov rep €& apyns SrevonOn. yevopevns Oe Napmpas eriBors Kat undé Tov étl oTpaToTédou
\
KAPTEPOLYT@V, ANAA TUYTPEXOVT@Y Kal TROT BoON-Oovvtwy, ametrov ot Tupiorr Kxal THv woXW etre
>

KaT é€xelyny THY Huepay.
Ni \ a fe) , ’ la) a 3 Mera d€ tadta mortopxovwts Talay avta, Ths Sv f f / > , a ’ \
Lupias peyiotny WoAL, éumimte: BOXos els TOV
= > \ v iy ‘ v e \ ew ? 3
@uov apelels avwbev vio dpviBos. 0 O€ dpres é
¢ la /
év TOV pnXavnuatwrv Kabioas éEdabev évayebels
Tois veupivots KexpudaAots, ols mpos Tas émLTTPO-
4 has TOV TyoWiwy éyp@vT70. Kal TO onpelov
\ \ ’
avtéBn kata tHy Aptaotavdpou tpoppnaw: étpabn > 4 pev yap AndéEavdpos eis Tov @pmov, EXaLe O€ THY ToAW. atrooTé\Awy b€ ToAAA TOY AaAdh’pwY
>] a Ordvpriads kat Kreotratpa Kai tots pidots, caté-
\ ? a A f
Tene Kat Aewvidn TH Taidaywy@ Tddavta
NBavwrtov TevTakocia Kal TuVpYS ExaTOV, ara-
5 pvnobeis wardixns edrrridos. o yap Aewridns, os
v 3 , \ N N) , 5
éouxev, ev Gvaia Tote mpos Tov ’AréEavdpov ére-
, , a dpakapevov adotépats tais yepol Kal Kxalaryi-a @ ff col ? ” 66 a gavta Tov Cuptapatos, Otay, ey, TiS 296

ALEXANDER, xxv. 1-5

to the bystanders that the city would certainly be captured during that month. His words produced laughter and jesting, since it was then the last day of the month, and the king, seeing that he was perplexed, and being always eager to support his pro- phecies, gave orders to reckon that day, not as the thirtieth of the month, but as the twenty-eighth ; and then, after the trumpet had sounded the signal, he attacked the walls with greater vigour than he had at first intended. The assault became fierce, and even those troops which had been left in camp could not restrain themselves, but ran in throngs to help the assailants, and the Tyrians gave up the fight. So Alexander took the city on that day. After this, as he was giving siege to Gaza,! the principal city of Syria, a clod of earth, which had been dropped from on high by a bird, struck him on the shoulder. The bird alighted on one of the bat- tering-engines, and was at once caught in the network of sinews which were used to give a twist to the ropes.2, And the omen was fulfilled as Aristander predicted ; for though Alexander was wounded in the shoulder, he took the city. Moreover, as he was dispatching great quantities of the spoils home to Olympias and Cleopatra and his friends, he sent also to Leonidas his tutor five hundred talents’ weight of frankincense and a hundred of myrrh, in remembrance of the hope with which that teacher had inspired his boyhood. It would seem, namely, that Leonidas, as Alexander was one day sacrificing and taking incense with both hands to throw upon the altar-fire, said to him :—“ Alexander,

1 During September and October of 332 B.c.
Ci, Curtius,- fist; Alex. iv, 6,114, 297

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

adpwpatodopov xpatyans, “Ar€Eavdpe, mrovoiws oUTws érLOuptaces’ viv dé hedopévws YP Tots mapodot. tote ov ‘AréEavdpos éypawe mmpos
avtov: “’Amectddxapev cot AULBavwtov adGovor Kal opupvay, das Travan Tpos TOUS JEeovs puLKpo-NOyoumEvos.
AOS VI. KiBoriov dé Tivos avT@ mT poo eve Dev-
TOS, ov TOAUTENETTEPOV ovdey éddvy Tols Ta
Aapetov Xpnwara Kal TAS amroaKevas TApanai-
Bavovorr, NPOT a TOUS pirous 6 TL OoKOLN padiora
Tav akiwy aTovdns eis aUTO KaTabécOat Toda 5é€ mod\N@Y Xeyovtwy avtos edy THY “Ihidda hpoupjcey évtavda xatadémevos. Kal TavTA pev ovK OALyot TOV aELtoTiDTwWY fe“apTUPHKaGLY. El &’, dmep "AreEavdpets Aéyouow “Hpaxrrgeldn me-oTevovtes, adynbés éativ, OVKOUY apyos OVdE aaUpE-Boros alt@ avaotpatevery Eorxev” Opnpos. déyovat yap OTL TIS Aiyurrou Kpatnoas éBovXeTo TONY peyahny Kal TovavO por ov EAA yviOg TUvOLKiGUs éevwvujoy eavtod Kataher ely, Kab Tia TOTO
YVOLN TOV APYLTEKTOVOY OaOY OVOETW OLEMETPELTO
Kal wepteBadreEyv. EtTAa VUKTMP KOLWwpeEVvOS OrLY
EOE Gavpact ny avnp TOANLOS ev para THY Kon
Kal yEpapos To «00s éd0kev avT@ Tapactas Neyely TA EN TAOE
a U Yi , N / Nijoos €merta Tis ETTL TOAVKAVOTH Evi TOVTO,
’ , / / / /
Atyumtou tpotrapode Dapov b€ € KtKANTKOVOLD.
‘\ ¢
evOus ovv éEavactas éBadifev emt tiv Ddpov, 4)
TOTE meV ETL VGOS HV, TOU KavwPtKovd puxpov
, a
avMTEPW TTOMATOS, VOY Oé ba YOpaTOS avetrn-298

when thou hast conquered the spice-bearing re- gions thou canst be thus lavish with thine incense ; now, however, use sparingly what thou hast." Ac- cordingly, Alexander now wrote him: "I have sent thee myrrh and frankincense in abundance, that thou mayest stop dealing parsimoniously with the gods."

XAXVI. When a small coffer was brought to him, which those in charge of the baggage and wealth of Dareius thought the most precious thing there, he asked his friends what valuable object they thought would most fittingly be deposited in it. And when many answered and there were many opinions, Alex- ander himself said he was going to deposit the Iliad there for safe keeping.! This is attested by many trustworthy authorities. And if what the Alexan- drians tell us on the authority of Heracleides is true, then it would seem that Homer was no idle or un- profitable companion for him in his expedition. They say, namely, that after his conquest of Egypt he wished to found a large and populous Greek city which should bear his name, and by the advice of his architects was on the point of measuring off and enclosing a certain site for it. Then, in the night, as he lay asleep, he saw a wonderful vision. A man with very hoary locks and of a venerable aspect appeared to stand by his side and recite these verses :—

" Now, there is an island in the muclhi-dashing sea, In front of Egypt; Pharos is what men call it.''?

Accordingly, he rose up at once and went to Pharos, which at that time was still an island, a little above the Canobic mouth of the Nile, but now it has been

1 Cf. chapter viii. 2. 2 Odyssey, iv. 354 f.

4 7TaL Wpos THY Nrecpov. ws ovv Eide ToOTOV evduia dtadépovta (tawia ydp éotiv icOue
, . v : 4 Y P ? MS
5 a
TAATOS EXOVTL TUupETpOY émLELKwS SLELpyoUcAa
Aluvyny TE TOAANnY Kal Odraccav év Aipérve
4 "A > ' € v4 §) "
peyddw TeXNEUTM@OAaY), ELTWY ws" Opnpos HY apa

Td TE GANA GOavpactos Kal copwtatos apyiTé-KTwY, exédevoe Sraypawat TO TXHpA THS TOAEWS
a f , \ A AY bp) A 5 T® TE RACH ALE Kal 2) pev oY Taprny
n ’ ‘ /
AevKH, TOV S€ AAPitwy AapBavovTes ev TEediw
a , \ peXayyel@ KUKAOTEPH KOATGY Hryov, ov THY évTOS
a ? \ mepipéperav evOetas Paces womep ATO KpacTédwv > an ? ¢€ ¢ Pb] 4 id
els oXHpA YAapveos UrrerduPavor, €& icov cuvd-‘ / e , \ a / nA
youoat To peyebos. nabévtos b€ TH StaGéces Tov 686
i f \ ta) a Baciréws aidvidioyv dpuibes avo Tod ToTapod Kat
a \ THS Aliuvyns, WANnOEL TE ATrELpoL Kal KaTa yévos
,
TavTooaTrol Kal peyeOos, emt Tov TOTOV KaTaipor-Tes véheoty eoLKOTES OVOE puLKpPOV UTEéALTTOY TaV
\ ’]
additwov, wate xat tov ‘AdéEavdpov statapa-n U yOjvat Tpos TOV OLwvor.
’ \ b) \ ~“ ¢ a 4
6 Ov pny adda TOV pavtewy Oappely Tapatvoutr-
N , Twy (ToAvapKeoTaTny yap oixifecOat Tod UT’ avtov, Kal TavtodaT@y avOpwotTwv éecopévny Tpo-
» ?
ov) épyov KerXevaas EyecOat Tovs éemipednTas
* ean
autos wppnoev ets "Appwvos, odov pmaxpay Kat \ \ ” > 4 \ 4 ?
ToANA Mev EYoucaY Epywon Kal TaXalTwpa, KiVdv-
/ « »
vous 0€ dUo, TOY pev avudpias, Ot’ iy Epnuos éatuv
b) > , e “ ‘ , > / bd ”
ovK OALywY tuep@v, TOV dé, Ef AdBpos ev dupo
A /
Bafeia kai ayavel mopevopévols emimécot voTos, 300

ALEXANDER, xxv. 4-6

joined to the mainland by a causeway. And when he saw a site of surpassing natural advantages (for it is a strip of land like enough to a broad isthmus, extending between a great lagoon and a stretch of sea which terminates in a large harbour), he said he saw now that Homer was not only admirable in other ways, but also a very wise architect, and ordered the plan of the city to be drawn in conformity with this site. There was no chalk at hand, so they took barley-meal! and marked out with it on the dark soil a rounded area, to whose inner arc straight lines extended so as to produce the figure of a chlamys, or military cloak, the lines beginning from the skirts (as one may say), and narrowing the breadth of the area uniformly.2 The king was delighted with the design; but suddenly birds from the river and the lagoon, infinite in number and of every sort and size, settled down upon the place like clouds and devoured every particle of the barley-meal, so that even Alexander was greatly disturbed at the omen. However, the seers exhorted him to be of good cheer, since the city here founded by him would have most abundant and helpful resources and be a nursing mother for men of every nation, and so he ordered those in charge of the work to proceed with it, while he himself set out for the temple of Ammon. The journey thither was long, full of toils and hard- ships, and had two perils. One is the dearth of water, which leaves the traveller destitute of it for many days; the other arises when a fierce south wind sites men travelling in sand of boundless depth,

1 Cf. Arrian, Anah. iii. 2, 1.
*See Tarbell, ‘‘The Form of the Chlamys,” Classical Philology, 1906, p. 285.

@S Tov Kal maha NéyeTal mepl Tov KapSvoov
oT parton, avaotiaas Giva peyarny Kal KULATOTAS
TO Trediov pupiddas avOpwrwv TévTEe KATAXYwCAaL Kal drag Peipar. TaUTa WdvTa ayYedov T avTEs ehoyilorto, Karem ov dé Hv “AAEEavd pov amToTpepat mpos oTuoby @punpEevon. i) Te yap TUXN TAis emiBorais t Umetkovoa THY yvounv io Xupav €Trolel, Kal To Gupoerces axe TOV Tparywarov vmekepepe
THY prroverkiav ANT THTOV, ov movov Trodepious, GXXA Kal TOTOUS Kal KaLpous cataBratoperny.
MAVIT. By your T™) TOTE _Topeta, TA GUYTU-yovTa tals aTopiats mapa Tov Oeov BonPnwata
T@V UETEDWY XPNT WAV ema Tevon badQov: TpoTov
dé TLva Kal ToLs Xeno pois y miatis €K TOUTWY varhypee. 7 p@TOv pep yap eK Aros bowp TOND Kal dapKets veTch Vevopevor Tov Te Tis Oivrns po/3ov éXucaV, Kal THY Enpornta xatacBecavtes
THS cipou, VOTE PAS yevoperns Kal pos avuTny
Evpmecovons, EUTVOUV TOV aépa Kal kabapwrepov

TapeoYov. ETELTA THV opwn, olmep noav Tots odnyois, auyxv0évrwy Kal Tradvns ovons Kal dtactacpod tay Badifovtwrv bia THY ayva.ay, Kopakes exhavevtes vTedauPavoyv THY 1yEewoviay
THS Topelas, ETopévov pev Eutrpoabev TeTomevot Kal omevoovtes, VaTEpouvTas b€ Kai Bpadvvovtas
avapévovtes' 0 b€ Hv Pavypaciwratoy, ws KadrLabévns pynoi, Tais dwvais avaxadovpevor TovS
1 Cf. Herod. iii. 26.

2 According to Ptolemy, son of Lagus, two serpents served Alexander's army as guides to the oracle and back again. ''But Aristobulus, whose account is generally admitted to as is said to have been the case with the army of Cambyses, long ago; the wind raised great billows of sand all over the plain and buried up fifty thousand men, to their utter destruction.1_ Almost all of Alexander's followers took all these things into consider- ation, but it was difficult to turn him aside from any course so ever when he had once set out upon it. For Fortune, by yielding to his onsets, was making his purpose obstinate, and the high spirit which he carried into his undertakings rendered his ambition finally invincible, so that it subdued not only enemies, but even times and places.

XXVII. At all events, during the journey which he made at this time, the assistance rendered him by Heaven in his perplexities met with more credence than the oracles which he afterwards received, nay, in a way, the oracles obtained credence in conse- quence of such assistance. For, to begin with, much rain from heaven and persistent showers removed all fear of thirst, quenched the dryness of the sand, so that it became moist and compact, and made the air purer and good to breathe. Again, when the marks for the guides became confused, and the travellers were separated and wandered about in ignorance of the route, ravens appeared and as- sumed direction of their march,' flying swiftly on in front of them when they followed, and waiting for them when they marched slowly and lagged behind. Moreover, what was most astonishing of all, Callisthenes tells us that the birds by their cries called back those who straggled away in the night,

be correct, says that two ravens flew in front of the army and acted as Alexander's guides" (Arrian, Anab. iii.
B, © {.).
393

T NAVW[LEVOUS YUKTOP Kat KAaCovTES Els iyVvos KaGiotacay THs Topelas.
"Karel dé bel erOoov THY épnyLov NKEV ELS Tov

TOTOD, 0 pev T popayrys aurov 0 “A pL woves aro TOU Deob xaiper, os amd TATpos, T poo eiTen™)
6€ € em] peTo pry TLS aUvToOV El) taTrepevyas T@V TOU
TAT pos povew. eupnpetv 6€ TOU 7 pod Tov KEAEVTAVTOS, OV Yap Elvat matépa Ovnrov avT@, pera Sarov ev avero, TOUS: Didiaroy poveis éL TavTas eln TET LILO PT MEVOS® eiTa TWept TIS LPXNS, el TavTwY avT@ didwotv avOpomev Kuplep ryevecba. xpijcavtos 88 Tod Oeod Kai TobT0 SiSévat
Kat Didiwmoy aréxye ExTAEW THY OLKNY, EOwWPELTO Tov Oeov avabrjuact KapTpois Kal Ypnuact TOUS
av0 pwrovs.
Tatta mept TOV YPHTLOV ot TAELT TOL ypa-povow autos é€ “ANEEavopos ev em LoTON} T pos THY ENTEpa pnat yeyovevat TWAS AUTO pavreias aT oppiyTous, as avTOS ema eh Oo dpdcer POs povav éxeivyv. Eévioe 5€ hace Tov bev ™ popyT nv ‘EAANVLGTL Boudopevov Tpooevrrely ETA TLVOS
piroppoavinys * °Q, radiov,” év TO TEAEUTAL@ TOV
HO oyywv t vTO PapBaptiopob T pos TO oiypa ékeve-XO ivan Kat evrety, “°O macdios,” QVTL TOU VD TO oiypa NENT apLevor, acpéve 5é 7@ "AreEdvdpw TO opadpa, THS povijs yeveo Gat Kab dradoO hvac doyov ws matoa Atos avtov tod Oe0d rposerTorTos.
NéyeTat b€ Kal Vappwvos év Aliyvrt@ Tod dido-cohov btaxovoas amodéEacPar pddtata Tov ANeYGévtwy, OTe TavTes ot AvOpwiror BactdevovTat umo Jeov: TO yap apyov ev ExdoT@ Kal KpaTodY 304

ALEXANDER, xxvn. 3-6

and cawed until they had set them in the track of the march.
When Alexander had passed through the desert and was come to the place of the oracle, the prophet of Ammon gave him salutation from the god as from a father; whereupon Alexander asked him whether any of the murderers of his father had escaped him.
To this the prophet answered by bidding him be guarded in his speech, since his was not a mortal father. Alexander therefore changed the form of his question, and asked whether the murderers of Philip had all been punished; and then, regarding his own empire, he asked whether it was given to him to become lord and master of all mankind. The god gave answer that this was given to him, and that Philip was fully avenged. Then Alexander made splendid offerings to the god and gave his priests large gifts of monev

This is what most writers state regarding the oracular responses; but Alexander himself, in a letter to his mother, says that he received certain secret responses, which he would tell to her, and to her alone, on his return. And some say that the prophet, wishing to show his friendliness by address- ing him with “O paidion,” or O my son, in his foreign pronunciation ended the words with “s”’ instead of “‘n,” and said, “O paidios,” and that Alexander was pleased at the slip in pronunciation, and a story became current that the god had addressed him with “O pai Dios,” or O son of Zeus. We are told, also, that he listened to the teachings of Psammon the philosopher in Egypt, and accepted most readily this utterance of his, namely, that all mankind are under the kingship of God, since in every case that a fal SS 4

Geiov éotiv: Ett O€ paAXOV aAvTOS TEpl TOUTwWY 6S
, , \ , e ,
dtrocodwrepoy do€dlew Kal Néyerv, ws TavTOV / , 3
pev ovta Koivov avOpamwv tatépa tov Oedov, lbi-
fal \ ,
OUS O€ TOLOVMEVOV EAaUTOD TOS AploToOUS.
=o f \ \ \
XXVIII. Kafonrou 6 wpos pév tovs BapBa-
\ 3 \ / f
povs coBapos Av Kai opodpa tetetopévw rept a “A / \ , e a THs €x Oeod yevérews Kal TEXVM@TEWS GjOLOS, TOIS 4 ‘ d6€"EAAnoe petpiws kat vrrobedopévws éavtov ty
f A A 4 fe b>] /
éFedeiale: TAHY Tept Lduou ypadwv ’APnvaioss, cor N \ 3 # 39 f cw fA aN Gé , Sy@ Mev ovk av, hyoiv, “vp éhevlepav Tro-

Ne / \
ALY EdwKa Kal évdoEov: ExeTte 6€ adTiv AaBovtTes
fa) / if \ \ fa)
Tapa TOU TOTE KUpioV Kai TAaTPOS é€u“od Tpocayo-

39 f \ /
evomévov, Aeywv Tov Pirrtrov. vatepov 6ée
p és \ \ ?
a bg \
TANYH TepiTec@v VITO TokEvaToS Kal TepLary?s r Ou Ways , 99 4 Ape , NE eeas
yevopevos, “Toto per,’ eitrev, “@ iro, TO péov
\
ala, Kal OvK
> , a} 4 Ces , aA b>
Ly@p, olos TEP TE péet paxapecce Oeotauy.
3 \ \ , x aA ,
émet O€ peyddns more BpovtTis yevouevns xar
, ? / > f iy \
mTavtTwv extrAayevTwy Avakapxos o codtaotns
, a map@y éepyn mpos autov, “Mn te ov toovtov o tov Atos;” yerdaas éxetvos, “OU Bovromat yap,”
3 ‘6 % 3 a , (4 ,
eimre, ‘hoPepos eivat Tos Piro, WaoTEP TU pe
\ n 6 a
KeAevels 0 KaTahavAtlwy pou TO Séitvoy, OTL Tals
¢ a , tpaneélats iv@vas opds émixepévous, od catpa-
a LS A \ M4 , \ bd , mov Keparus. T@ yap ovTte A€yeTae Tov ’Ara-
€ ,
Eapxov iXOvdiov Hpaoriove Teuplévtmy w7rd
TOU Baothéos TOV 7 poeipnpevov errupléyEac dar
Aoyov, olovy é€evTedilovTa Kal KaTELpwYEvoMEvOV
306

ALEXANDER, xxvil. 6-XxvII. 3

which gets the mastery and rules is divine. Still more philosophical, however, was his own opinion and utterance on this head, namely that although God was indeed a common father of all mankind, still, He made peculiarly His own the noblest and best of them.

XXVIII. In general, he bore himself haughtily towards the Barbarians, and like one fully persuaded of his divine birth and parentage, but with the Greeks it was within limits and somewhat rarely that he assumed his own divinity. However, in writing to the Athenians concerning Samos, he said: “I cannot have given you that free and illustrious city; for ye received it from him who was then your master and was called my father,” meaning Philip. At a later time, however, when he had been hit by an arrow and was suffering great pain, he said: “This, my friends, that flows here, is blood, and not ‘Ichor, such as flows from the veins of the blessed gods.’’’}

Once, too, there came a great peal of thunder, and all were terrified at it; whereupon Anaxarchus the sophist who was present said to Alexander : “ Couldst thou, the son of Zeus, thunder like that?” At this, Alexander laughed and said: “ Nay, I do not wish to cause fear in my friends, as thou wouldst have me do, thou who despisest my suppers because, as thou sayest, thou seest the tables furnished with fish, and not with satraps’ heads.’’? For, in fact, we are told that Anaxarchus, on seeing a present of small fish which the king had sent to Hephaestion, had uttered the speech above mentioned, as though he were dis-

1 Tliad, v. 340. 2 Cf. Athenaeus, pp. 250 f.
3°7
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ \ , / , \ ,
TOUS Ta TreptBrAETTTA pLEyaNoLs TOvoLs Kal KLVSU-vows OLWKOVTAS, WS OVOEV 7) pLKpoV év r)d0Vvais Kat
’ , , ” n ” ew «4
aToN\avaoeol TWAEOY EXOVTAS TOV AXAwY. Oo 8 oOvdP
"ArdEavdpos kal amo TV elpnuévwv SHAOS éoTev
avtos ovdev tretrovOas ovdé TeTUdwUEVOS, AANA Tous aAAous KatadovAovpevos TH S0En THs Oeto-TNTOS.
XXIX. Els 6€ Dowiknv éraverOav é& Airyv-

, a a atouv Ovaias tots Geois Kai Twopmas éreténet Kal
YOp@V KUKALwY Kal TpayLKaY ayavas, od ovo
“ ~ 3 + \ A e ,

TALS TAPATKEVALS, ANAA KAL TALS apidrAaLs Aap-

Tpovs yEevouévous. EXopyyouv yap ot Bacireis a r ? if > , e ,
tov Kumpiov, womep “A@jvnow ov KrAnpovpevot \ Be , \ ’ iC @ a Xx 4
Tas pvadds, kal nywvilovto GavpactH dtrdoTipia

\ ’ 7 'é \ , e

Tpos GAAjAous. partota b€ Nixoxpéwy o Ladrava Y € /
pivios Kat Tlacixparns 6 Soros Svehidovetenoar.
outot yap éXayov tols évdoEotaTos wtoKpitais

a , > / yopnyetv, Tactxpatns pev “A@nvoddop@, Nexo-
, .@Q a Ya ’ , \ > \

Kpewv d€ Oeccard, Tept dv éomovddKe Kat avdTos
> \ /
"AnréEavdpos. ov piyy dvepnve THY omovdny Tpo-Tepov 7) Tals Widows avayopevOjvat vix@vTa Tov

9 @ 0 , b¢ ld ” > \ 54 ‘

AOnvodwpov. ToTE O€, ws EoLkeV, ATTLBY EhN TOUS

\ “ ,
MEV KPLTAS ETALVELY, AUTOS MEVTOL [Epos AV 7déws
a , “ mpoccOar THS Bacirelas él TO pw Oeccarov

b a , b \ \ 3 / e \ a iSety verexnuevov. émet dé “A@nvodwpos bro TAY

> , 4 ef \ \ 3 a “

AOnvaiwy Cnutwhets, OTL Tpos TOV ayova Tov
’ ?
Atovucioy ovK amnvtnoev, n&iov ypayat mTepl

paraging and ridiculing those who undergo great toils and dangers in the pursuit of eminence and power, since in the way of enjoyments and pleasures they have little or nothing more than other men. From what has been said, then, it is clear that Alexander himself was not foolishly affected or puffed up by the belief in his divinity, but used it for the subjugation of others.

XXIX. When he had returned from Egypt into Phoenicia,! he honoured the gods with sacrifices and solemn processions, and held contests of dithyrambic choruses and tragedies which were made brilliant, not only by their furnishings, but also by the com- petitors who exhibited them. For the kings of Cyprus were the choregi, or exhibitors, just like, at Athens, those chosen by lot from the tribes, and they competed against each other with amazing ambition. Most eager of all was the contention between Nicocreon of Salamis and Pasicrates of Soli. For the lot assigned to these exhibitors the most celebrated actors, to Pasicrates Athenodorus, and to Nicocreon Thessalus, in whose success Alexander himself was interested. He did not reveal this in- terest, however, until, by the votes of the judges, Athenodorus had been proclaimed victor. But then, as it would appear, on leaving the theatre, he said that he approved the decision of the judges, but would gladly have given up a part of his kingdom rather than to have seen Thessalus vanquished. And yet, when Athenodorus, who had been fined by the Athenians for not keeping his engagement in the dramatic contest of their Dionysiac festival, asked the king to write a letter to them in his behalf,

Pearly in 351.8.C,

VOL, VII. Teor!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 nw a / wn \ 3 3 ?, QA
avtov Tov Bactdéa, TodTO Mev OK eTrOiNaE, THY
\ , > + > a , \ dé Cnuiay amréoterke Trap éavtovd. Avewvos 6é a / al a
Tov XKaphéws evnuepovytos év TO GedtTpw Kal
\ 4 s oTiyoV eis THY Kwpwotavy éuParovTos aitnot
s TeplevovTa OeKa TANAVTD, yedacas dwKe.
Aapeiou 6€ réuwpavtos éricToAnY Tpds avTov
\ , iA , \ € \ " e
Kai pirous SEomévous pupta pev UTEép TOY éarw-Cad \
KOoToV NaBetvy TddavTa, THY dé évtos Evdpadtov ad , a Tacay €xXovTa Kal ynuav7a piav Tov Buyatépwr hirov eiva. Kal cvppayov, éxolvoUTO Tols ETAI-\ , » ea \ ,) pos Kal Tlappeviwvos ettrovtos "'Eyo pév, et
/ a ,
"Ar€Eavdpos tunv, éiaBov av tadta," " Kayo,
> t /
yy) Mia," eirev o 'Ad€Eavdpos, " et Tlappeviov." \ \ \ " bg e > '\ > s mpos 6€ Tov Aapeiov éyparrer, ws ovdevos atuy?)-
fa) f 3 \ \ > ' ? \ ,
ge. ToV diriavOpwrwy EMawv pos avTOY, Et O€ [41), avTos én' éxetvoy dn TopevecOat.

XXX. Tayd pévtoe peteweryjOn tis Aapetou yuvatkos atroPavovans év wdiau Kal havepos rv
/
aVLOmEVvOS- ws eémlderEty ov puixpay adnpnpévos ld Ky \
xpnatoTntos. €Gawev obtv tHv dvOpwrov ov-
a : , , a denias wodvTereias hecdopevos. Tav d€ Gadrapun-
4 € an
TWOAWY TLS EVVOVYWY, Ol TUVEAAwWKELTAY Tais yuU-
\ a vatEiv, atrodpas €x Tov otpatoTédov Kal pos
a ’ a , v Ui
Aapeiov apimmacapevos, Teipews dvopa, dpaker
Tov Oavatov avT@ THs yuvaikos. ws b€ WANE\ \ \ ? ld 66 A fa!
peevos THY Kehadrnv Kat avakravaas “Dev Tod n a A a Ilepoav”’ by “ datpovos, e¢ THY Bactrtéws yuvai-\ 3 \ 3 , 3 , ,
Ka Kal adeddnv ov povoy atypaurwtov yevécOas 310

6§

ALEXANDER, xxix. 3-xxx. 2

though he would not do this, he sent them the amount of the fine from his own purse. Furthermore, when Lycon of Searpheia, who was acting successfully before Alexander, inserted into the comedy a verse containing a request for ten talents, Alexander laughed and gave them to him.!
When Dareius sent to him a letter and friends,? begging him to accept ten thousand talents as ransom for the captives, to hold all the territory this side of the Euphrates, to take one of his daughters in marriage, and on these terms to be his ally and friend, Alexander imparted the matter to his companions. “If I were Alexander,” said Parmenio, “ I would accept these terms.” “ And so indeed would I,” said Alexander, “were I Parmenio.” But to Dareius he wrote: “Come to me, and thou shalt receive every courtesy; but otherwise I shall march at once against thee.’’ 3

XXX. Soon, however, he repented him of this answer, when the wife of Dareius died in child- birth, and it was evident that he was distressed at this loss of opportunity to show great kindness. Accordingly, he gave the woman a sumptuous burial. One of the eunuchs of the bed-chamber who had been captured with the women, Teireos by name, ran away from the camp, made his way on horseback to Dareius, and told him of the death of his wife. Then the king, beating upon his head and bursting into lamentation, said: “ Alas for the evil genius of the Persians, if the sister and wife of their king

1 Cf. Morals, pp. 334 f.

* This was during the siege of Tyre, according to Arrian Pau. Wy Zoe 1)
* This was but the conclusion of an arrogant letter. Cf.
Arrian, Anab. ii. 25, 3.
311

PEULTARCEH S gelyias

a ’ \ \ , v A Caicav, GN\a Kal TedEUTITAaGAaY apotpoyv KEtaOat n A \ e /
tabs BaciitKhs,’ vroikaBav o Padrapuntonos,
a / ” > 9 a “’AXAA Tadns ye Kup, eimwev, ““@ Bactred, Kal TLS aTUCNS Kal TOU MpétrovTOS ovdev EyeELS
\ / n aitiacacOat Tov wovnpov oaipova Llepowv. ovte
a , Sr \ \ A
yap Swoon TH SeoTrotvn NtTaTEipa Kab pnTpL of Kal TéxvoLs evéder TOV Tpodbev ayalav Kal Karov 7
\ \ er oA A a / b 4 \
TO guV opav as, 0 Tadtv avarap wee NapT pov
° n f
0 KUplos “Opoudaadns, ote aTroPavotca Koa pou bY / \ \ ,
TLVOS GfLoLpOS Yyéyovev, GAXA Kal Todepmiov TeTi-
e \ f \ penta dakpvow. ovTw yap EoTL YpNoTOS KpaTi)-
’ / ag XN / >
cas ’AndéEavdpos, ws dewos payopevos.
rnon A \ Tadta axovoavta Aapetov 1) tapayn Kal To , Sues \ e / > Q ‘
mados e€ehepe pos vTotas atoTrous' Kal Tov
fa) , n A /
evvodyYov evooTépw THS TKHVAS aTayayov, “Ki

\ A n 39 f ,
fn) Kal ov peta THs Llepoay, Edy, “ TUXYNS HaKe-
, > > + / b] \ n , f
dovilers, AAX Ett oot SegTroTHS eyw Aapelos, eivé
, / A 4
por oeBopevos Mi@pov te das peya cal deFtav
f 9 \ \ , nm e
Bactr\eov, dpa pn TA piKpoTata Tov Ytateipas
n , \ KAALW KAK@Y, OlKTPOTEpA Oé Cwarns ETAT YOLMED, nm nx ? A an Kat paddov av Kat aklay édvaetvyodpEv BLO Kal oxv0pwT@ TEepiTecovTes EXOPM; Ti yap evTrpeTes
>] \ f \ b ~ A nA
avdpl vem mpos €xOpov yvvaixa péype! tipis Cs ij bb] “A TocavTns aupPoraov;” tt RéyovTos avTod
\ b] \ \ - f ¢e N e A KaTaBarov él tous Todas Teipews avtov ixé-b a \ / an
Tevey evdpynueiy Kat unte “AdéFavdpov adrxety
\ “a A
pte THY TEOVEO@TAaY AbEXP)Y Kal yUValKA KATALnm , £. n \
OXUVVAL, HTE AUVTOV THY MEeyioTIVY OV eMTALKEV
1 néype Coraés and Bekker: xal wéxpu
B12
ALEXANDER, xxx. 2-5

must not only become a captive in her life, but also in her death be deprived of royal burial.” “ Nay, O King,” answered the chamberlain, “as regards her burial, and her receiving every fitting honour, thou hast no charge to make against the evil genius of the Persians. For neither did my mistress Stateira, while she lived, or thy mother or thy children, lack any of their former great blessings except the light of thy countenance, which Lord Oromazdes will cause to shine again with lustre; nor after her death was she deprived of any funeral adornment, nay, she was honoured with the tears of enemies. For Alexander is as gentle after victory as he is terrible in battle.”

When Dareius heard this, his agitation and grief swept him into absurd suspicions, and leading the eunuch away into a more secluded part of his tent, he said: ‘“‘If thou also, together with the fortune of the Persians, dost not side with the Macedonians, and if I, Dareius, am still thy lord and master, tell me, as thou reverest the great light of Mithras and the right hand of thy king, is it not the least. of Stateira's misfortunes that I am now lamenting? While she was alive did I not suffer more pitiful evils? And would not my wretched fortune have been more compatible with my honour if I had met with an angry and savage enemy? For what inter- course that is proper can a young man have with an enemy's wife when it leads to such marks of honour?"'? While the king was still speaking, Tei- reos threw himself down at his feet and besought him to hold his peace, and neither to wrong Aloe ander, nor shame his dead sister and wife, nor rob himself of the greatest consolation for his disasters,

of3

PLUTARCH Sabry iS

adatpeta Cat mapapvOtar, 70 Soxeity um avdpos HrTho at KpelTTOVOS) KATA THY cv pom ivay $e ow, ddra Kal Gavpalev "AdéEavdpov os WNeElova tais Ilepoav yuvarki cwdbpoa vynv 7% Ilépcais avopevav émude decry Levon. apa dé Gpxous Te ppe-Koes TOU Garapnrorov KLVOUVTOS UTEP TOUTMD,
Kal Trepl THS GAANS eyKpatetas Kal peyarowuxias
THIS "AnreEavopou AEyovTos, efehOov T pos. TOUS éral pous o Aapetos Kat XEtipas avaret a5 7 pos TOY
oupavov émevEaTo- ""@cor yeveOr.or cat Bacinrevor, puriata pev éuol didoinre TY Tlepca@y tuyny ets
opOov avdis orabeioav ep' ois edeEapnv ayabois
aT ONT EL, iva KpaTno as cpvetro eat Tas "Ane Eav-Spov Xapitas ov ELS Ta pidtata Traioas eTUXOV" el 0 apa TUS ovros ELLAPTOS KEL Xpovos, opetho-PEVOS veuéeoet Kal petaBory, Tavaacdlat Te Ilep - cv, pndels Ado avO pwr ov cabicerev ELS TOV Kvpov @povov wrnv 'AreEdvépov." tadta pev ovTw yevéoOas Te Kal Nevennae Pacw ol TrAELoTOL TOV suyypadéwr.
XXXI. "AréEavdpos 5 thy évtos tod Eidpa-
Tov Tacav vd éavT@ Toincdpevos nravvev ert Aapetiov éxatov puptdot otpatod KataPatvorta.
Kai TIS AUTO ppater TOV ETALPWY, WS 67) 'ENWTOS aEtov mpaypa, TOUS axodovGous TmaivovTas Els dv pEpy Sunpneevat opas avTous, ov ExaTEpou oT parry ov eivat Kal myepova, TOV pev "AdEEav-Spov, tov oé Aapeiov UT AUT@Y MmpocayopEevo-pevov" apapévous dé Bonrous axpoBonriferO at Tpos GAAYAOUS, Elta Tuypats, TéAOS exxexadabat
TH ptrovexta Kal péexpt ALGwv Kai EvAwy, TOA-314

namely, the belief that he had been conquered by a man who was superior to human nature; nay, he should even admire Alexander for having shown greater self-restraint in dealing with Persian women than valour against Persian men. Then, while the eunuch was confirming his testimony with the most solemn oaths, and discoursing on the general self- mastery and magnanimity of Alexander, Dareius went out to his companions, and lifting his hands towards heaven, prayed: “O ye gods of my race and kingdom, above all things else grant that 1 may leave the fortune of Persia reéstablished in the prosperity wherein I found it, in order that my victory may enable me to requite Alexander for the favours which I received at his hands when | had lost my dearest possessions ; but if, then, a fated time has now come, due to divine jealousy and the vicissitudes of things, and the sway of the Persians must cease, grant that no other man may sit upon the throne of Cyrus but Alexander.” That these things were thus done and said is the testimony of most historians.!

XXXI. But to return to Alexander, when he had subdued all the country on this side of the Euphrates, he marched against Dareius,? who was coming down to meet him with a million men. On this march one of his companions told him, as a matter worth laughing at, that the camp-followers, in sport, had divided themselves into two bands, and set a general and commander over each of them, one of whom they called Alexander, and the other Dareius; and that they had begun by pelting one another with clods of earth, then had fought with their fists, and finally, heated with the desire of battle, had taken

' Cf. Arrian, Anab. iv. 20. 2 In June or July of 331 B.c.

id P a .
Nous Kal dvoKxatamave Tous yeyovotas. Tabra 6: aKkovoas eK ENEVT EY AUTOUS povopaxijoar TOUS nyepovas® Kal tov pev “AréEavdpov avTos anh, tov 6€ Aapeiov Pirwtas. €Oeato Sé 0 aGtTpaTos, €v OlwV@ TLVt TOD pEAXOVTOS TLOEWEVOS TO ryLyVOpevov. loxupas d€ THS wayns Evowevns evirrjo ev
0 KANOULEVOS ‘Arefavdpos, Kat dwpeav édaBe OwoeKka KO "AS Kal oTOAn Ilepocen Vv pio Gat.
TaUTa pLeV OUV "Eparoodévns i (oTopnKe.
Thy 6¢ pey any any 7 pos Aapetov ovx éy
"ApBirols, @aTEP Of TOAAOL ypadovaw, ANG ev Davyapi rors ryevéo Oat TUVETETE. onpaiven é activ oixov Kapeyrov tHv SidrExToV, érel THY Tava. Tus Bacthéwyv éexhuywv Toreputous ent KQ[L1)N OV Spomdbos evraiba Kadidpuvoev auTny, amoragas TWAS K@mas Kal 7 poo osous els THY emiperetav. 7% ev ovv aeAnVH TOD Bondpomta@vos

eEéhutre TEpl THY TAY pvaoTypiwy TOV "AOHYnow
apynv, evdexdtn O€ amd THs éxrEivews vuKTt TOV OTpaTOTEédwY Ev Get yeyovoTwy, Aapetos pev év omdots cuvetye THY SUVA, UTO NapTadmy érrimropevopevos tas Tak€es, "AdéEavdpos O€ TaV Maxedovey avaTravopevov AUTOS TPO THS OKN-vijs pera TOU _(LEVTEDS Aptatavdpov Over pi Bev,
/
iepoupytas TLVAS ATrOppI)TOUS Lepoupyoupevos Kal
TO Po8o opayvalonevos. or oe 7 peo BuTEpor TOV eTALpov, Kab patra, Tlappevior, OS TO pev mediov To petakév tov Nidatov cal tav opev
Tav Topdvaiwy dtayv éwpato KataXapTopevov Tots BapBapixois peyyercr, GTEK [Lap TOS 6€ TIS dwvi cuppeprypéevyn Kat OopuBos éx tod otpato-316

ALEXANDER, xxx1. 2-5

to stones and sticks, being now many and hard to quell. When he heard this, Alexander ordered the leaders themselves to fight in single combat; to the one called Alexander he himself gave armour, and to the one called Dareius, Philotas. The army were spectators of the combat, counting the issue as in some measure an omen of the future. After a strenuous battle, the one called Alexander was vic- torious, and received as a reward twelve villages and the right to wear Persian dress. ‘This, at any rate, is what we are told by Eratosthenes.

Now, the great battle against Dareius was not fought at Arbela, as most writers state, but at Gau- gamela.! The word signifies, we are told, “ camel’s house,” since one of the ancient kings of the country, after escaping from his enemies on a swift camel, gave the animal a home here, assigning certain vil- lages and revenues for its maintenance. It so hap- pened that in the month Boédromion the moon suffered an eclipse,? about the beginning of the Mysteries at Athens, and on the eleventh night after the eclipse, the armies being now in sight of one another, Dareius kept his forces under arms, and held a review of them by torch-light; but Alex- ander, while his Macedonians slept, himself passed the night in front of his tent with his seer Aristander, celebrating certain mysterious sacred rites and sacri- ficing to the god Fear. Meanwhile the older of his companions, and particularly Parmenio, when the saw the plain between the Niphates and the Gor- dyaean mountains all lighted up with the barbarian fires, while an indistinguishably mingled and _ tu- multuous sound of voices arose from their camp as

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. iii. 8, 7. 2 September 20, 331 B.c.
317
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

médov Kalarep €& ayavots Tpoonyes TEAGYOUS, Javudaoavtes TO wWANHOOS Kat TpdsS AANAHXOUS

dtareyGevtes ws péya Kal yadrerov Epyov ein cuuTecovTas €k mpopavovs TocovTov waacbat TOAELOY, ATO TOV lep@Vv yevouevwm TH Bacirel
mpocerOovtes erretOov avtov émiyephoat vuKTwp Tois ToNEuions Kal T® aKOTM TO hofEepwrTaTor aouyxaruwat Tod pé\XovTOs ay@vos. oO 6€ TO jen provevopevov etTra@v, “ Ov Kreme THY viKny,” éviows pev edoke petpaxcadn Kal Kevny aT OK play merrowho Gat, mailov T pos Toa ouTOV Kivouvoy, éviows 5€ Kal TO TapovTt Oappeiv Kai oToxalecOat
TOU HEXOVTOS op as, en dd0vs Tpohaci HTTN-
Oevtt Aapeie 7 pos addqv aves dvabapphyaat Te(pay, ai Tee pero TOUTOY VUKTA Kal TKOTOS, ws con Kal oteva Kal Gadacoav TOV 7 poTepov.
ov yap OTAwY ovdé TWMATOY aT opig mavcecbat TohepobvTa Aapeiov a0 TuKairns: duvapews
Kat Xopas TOTAUTNS, GAN OTav adj TO dp povnpeat Kal Thy edmida, Oe éuhavods HrTHS KATA KPATOS éEerey Geis.
XXXII. ’AmedOdvrwy b@ tovrwy KcataxrALOels
urd oKnVHY AéyeTaL TO AOLTOY pépos THS vUKTOS
tmve Badet xpatnOjvat Tapa To eiwOos, wate Gavuatew éredOovtay GpPeev tovs myemovas Kal Tap avToY efeveryKeiv Tapayyehpa 7 p@Tov
apio tom orelabas TOUS oTpaTiwtas' émelTa TOU Katpov Katemeiyovtos eiaedOovta Ilappeviwva
Kal TapacTavTa TH KALYN Ols 7 Tpls avToU hbéy-Eac@at tovvopa Kal dueyepGévtos ot Tws épwtav 318

ALEXANDER, xxx1. 5—XxxU. I

if from a vast ocean, were astonished at their multi- tude and argued with one another that it was a great and grievous task to repel such a tide of war by engaging in broad day-light. They therefore waited upon the king when he had finished his sacrifices, and tried to persuade him to attack the enemy by night, and so to cover up with darkness the most fearful aspect of the coming struggle. But he gave them the celebrated answer, “I will not steal my victory” ; whereupon some thought that he had made a vainglorious reply, and was jesting in the presence of so great a peril. Others, however, thought that he had confidence in the present situ- ation and estimated the future correctly, not offering Dareius in case of defeat an excuse to pluck up courage again for another attempt, by laying the blame this time upon darkness and night, as he had before upon mountains, defiles, and sea.! For Dareius would not give up the war for lack of arms or men when he could draw from so great a host and so vast a territory, but only when he had lost courage and hope, under the conviction brought by a down- right defeat in broad day-light.

XXXII. After the men were gone, Alexander lay down in his tent, and is said to have passed the rest of the night in a deeper sleep than usual, so that when his officers came to him in the early morning they were amazed, and on their own authority issued orders that the soldiers should first take breakfast. Then, since the occasion was urgent, Parmenio entered the tent, and standing by his couch called Alexander twice or thrice by name; and when he had thus roused him, he asked him how he could possibly sleep as if he were victorious, instead of being about to fight the greatest of all his battles. Then Alexander said with a smile: ‘What, pray? Dost thou not think that we are already victorious, now that we are relieved from wandering about in a vast and desolated country in pursuit of a Dareius who avoids a battle?” And not only before the battle, but also in the very thick of the struggle did he show himself great, and firm in his confident calculations. For in the battle the left wing under Parmenio was thrown back and in distress, when the Bactrian cavalry fell upon the Macedonians with great impetuosity and violence, and when Mazaeus sent horsemen round outside the line of battle to attack those who were guarding the Macedonian baggage. Therefore, too, Parmenio, much disturbed by both occurrences, sent messengers to Alexander telling him that eamp and baggage were gone, unless he speedily sent strong reinforcements from front to rear.t Now, it chanced that at that instant Alex- ander was about to give the signal for the onset to those under his command ; but when he heard Par- menio’s message, he declared that Parmenio was beside himself and had lost the use of his reason, and had forgotten in his distress that victors add the baggage of the enemy to their own, and that those who are vanquished must not think about their wealth or their slaves, but only how they may fight gloriously and die with honour.

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. iii. 10, where it is Parmenio who advises a night attack.

6 te 67 wemovOms Uarvov Kabevdor vertKnKoTos, ouxl pmédAXoVTOS aywvietcbas TOV péylaTOV TeV aywvev. tov your Adé£Eavdpov eirety Svaperdea- cavta: "Ti yap; ovK dn cot verikynKévat Soxod- pev amndrary LeVvoe ToD TAavacbat Kal droxKety €v TONAT Kal catepOapuery pvyopaxobvra Xopa Aapetov; " ov jeovov b€ po THS pays, andra Kal Tap aQUvTOV TOV KivouvoV emredet Earo péyay Kal TUVETTIKOTA TO hoyiSerbar Kal Gappeww EQUTOV. eoXe ep 0 ayov imorpomny Kal oddov év TO EVOVULD KépaTl KATA Hlappeviova, THS Baxrpt- aVvns immou pol TOAD Kal peta Bias Tapep- TEecTOvans ELS TOUS Maxeddvas, Malaiov dé mepiréuravtos €€@ THS haduyyos imeis Tos sxevopvrakovat mpoaBadovvtas. 610 Kai Oopv- Bovpevos UT depot pov o Ilappeviwy améoreire ™ pos Aaefavopor aryyédous ppatovras oixeo Oat TOV Na para Kal Tas amooKeuds, et i) KATA TAXOS Borevav o oxupay amo 708 TTOLATOS menrpere TOS omicOev. Ervye pev ovv KAT EeKxElvo KaLpoU TOIS mepl aurov épodov dLdovs onpetov" ws O€ MKOUCE ©

Ta, Tapa Tob Tlappeviovos, ovK edn owppoveiv avtTov ovdé évtos elvat TOY Aoyeg Ma, arr' em NEAHaOat TAPATTOMEVOY OTL VIKOVTES MEV TPOTKT- covTat Kal TA TOY Toreniwy, NTTwmEVOLS bE / > , TY, ? & / 3 b PpovTtaTeov ov YpnuaTwv ovde avdpaTodwy, adr Omws aTofavodyTat KAAMS Kal AauTPas ayort- Copevoe. a A Tavr Ta €TIT TELNAS Tappevicove TO Kavos TEpL- éJeto, Tov b€ ANAOV OTALTpOV EVOLS ATO oKNVAS

After sending this message to Parmenio, he put on his helmet, but the rest of his armour he had on as

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. iii. 15, 1, where Parmenio’s message recalls Alexander from the pursuit of Dareius.

elyev, UTévdupa TOV YKerLKav SwaTor, émi &é TovTw Owpaka ditrovv Awodv éx Tov ANPOEévTwWY
év ‘loa@. To dé Kpadvos Hy pev aldnpodv, EcTiNB
d. pdvos hy pev otdypodr, ¢ \ ee v / ” ,
dé wamep apyupos Kalapos, Epyov Oeodirov,
A e TVYNPLOTTO OE AUTO TEPLTPAYNALOV Opoiws oLdn-pouv, ALGoKONAHTOV: payaipav Sé Bavpacriy
Baby xal Kkovpotntt, Swpnoapuévov tod Kutréwy
, > > if \ \ a
Bactréws, eiyev, NoKnmEevos Ta TOANA yYpPHa Oat paxyaipa rapa Tas paxas. emiTopTrmpa bé époper
a \ ? , , A \ ‘\ BY
TH pwev épyacia coRapwtepoy 7) KaTa TOV addov

e , > \ Yd e n fal A omic mov: HV yap Epyov [XtK@Vos TOD TadaLod, Ten O€ THS “Podiwy Torews, UP Hs &500n Spor:
n \ ~
éypito 6€ Kal TovT@ Mpos TOUS ayavas. ayxpL pev ovv ourTaTTwY Te THS Padayyos Tapa-
, N 4 N > a ,
KeAEVO"EVOS 4) OLOdaoKoY 7 ehopav TwapeEnrauver, didXov immo eiye, TOU Boveedara Perdopevos dy TapnrLKos OvTOS’ Yw@pobvTL Oe pos Epyov éxelvos \ 9
mpoanyeTo, Kal peTaBas evOus Apyev épodov.
XXXIII. Tote d€ trois @ettadols mrElora
“ /
Suareyels ai tols adrous" EAAnowy, ws emréppw-> NX a v SGN \ A \ cav avtov Bowrtes ayev émi Tovs PapB8dpovus, To Evotov és THY apiotepay petaBarav TH deEta mapexare Tos Oeovs, ws Kaddrobévns dyair, emevyomevos, eltep dvtws Arofev éatl yeryovas, > oA \ a \ oo e \
apvva, Kat ouvevippwaat tous “EXAnvas. o 6é
- 3 / f \ ” \
pavtis “Aptotavdpos yAavida every Exwv Kal Ypucouv oTépavoy ETESLKVLTO TAPLTTEVWY ETOV 322

ALEXANDER, xxxm. 5-xxxut. 2

he came from his tent, namely, a vest of Sicilian make girt about him, and over this a breastplate of two-ply linen from the spoils taken at Issus. His helmet was of iron, but gleamed like polished silver, a work of Theophilus; and there was fitted to this a gorget, likewise of iron, set with precious stones. He had a sword, too, of astonishing temper and lightness, a gift from the king of the Citieans, and he had trained himself to use a sword for the most part in his battles. He wore a belt also, which was too elaborate for the rest of his armour; for it was a work of Helicon the ancient, and a mark of honour from the city of Rhodes, which had given it to him ; this also he was wont to wear in his battles. As long, then, as he was riding about and marshalling some part of his phalanx, or exhorting or instructing or reviewing his men, he spared Bucephalas, who was now past his prime, and used another horse; but whenever he was going into action, Bucephalas would be led up, and he would mount him and at once begin the attack.

XXXIII. On this occasion, he made a very long speech to the Thessalians and the other Greeks,! and when he saw that they encouraged him with shouts to lead them against the Barbarians, he shifted his lance into his left hand, and with his right ap- pealed to the gods, as Callisthenes tells us, praying them, if he was really sprung from Zeus, to defend and strengthen the Greeks. Aristander the seer, too, wearing a white mantle and having a crown of gold upon his head, rode along the ranks pointing out to 1 Sometimes the term ‘*‘ Hellenes” excludes. and sometimes it includes, the Macedonians. The context must decide. Cf. xlvii. 5.

na 3

uTep Keharns AdeEdvdpov cuveTratwpovpevoy Kat

KkatevOvvovta TH mTnoEL OpOtov emt Tods TroAe-pious, @oTE TOAD pev Odpaos éyyevéoOat Tois

€ nA . a a nw \ n 3 / op@aw, éx d€ Tov Oappety Kal Tapaxadely adXri-
, A e A © ,
Nous Spow ols tmmevow tepévots emi Tovs
es , ’ / \ / \ \
3 ToNeuious émixupaivery THY harayya. amply be an \ , 507 e 4
oupptEar tovs mpwtous e€exrAtvav of BapBapo., \ 9 4 3 \ ,
Kal Ouwypos HV TOAUS, ELS TA “LéGAa TUVEAAUVOVTOS

’ , . ‘ , e aA *

Anrefavdpov To vixwpevov, Otrov Aapetos iv.

\ \ An nw
woppwOev yap autTov KaTetce Sta TOY TpoTETAaypeéevwy ev Bade. THs Baotdexts trys éxdavevta, \ v \ / 949 (id e wn
Kadov avopa kal péyav éf a&ppatos vynrod
a aA e a a) BeBota, TrodXots trmevot Kat AaLTpOts KaTA-meppaywevoy ev pdra cuverTetpapéevols Trepl TO

dipua kat wapatetayuéevois SéyecOas Tods ToXe-

4 puous. aAra Sewos opOets éyytOev "AréEavdpos

\ \ - > \ > \ 4
Kal Tovs dhevyovtas éuRadrwyv els Tovs pévovTas
/ a € éEémdnEe nai dvecxédace TO Wrelotov. ov Se dpisto. Kal yevvaoTatot mpd Tov PBaciréws
, \ >] b] / , 3 \
POVvEevopevot KAL KAT GNANAWD TLITTOVTES EpLTTOOwWY
n > , \
THs Simkews oav, éumAEKOpevos Kal TepioTa-
a 7
povTes avTots Kat trots.

5 Aapetos bé, Tov Sewav ardavtwv év odbarpols dvTwy Kal TaY TpoTeTaypéevwy dSuvdpewy épevTro-[EVD ELS AUTOV, WS OVK HY ATOATTPEWal TO Appa Kal
f er ’ 9 / \ ,

SteEeAdoar padsov, adr’ of Te TpoxYol suUVELYOVTEO

7
TTOMATL TEPUPPEVOL TOTOVTOLS Of TE iTTOL KATA-324

ALEXANDER, xxxim. 2-5

them an eagle which soared above the head of Alex- ander and directed his flight straight against the enemy, at which sight great courage filled the be- holders, and after mutual encouragement and exhor- tation the cavalry charged at full speed upon the enemy and the phalanx rolled on after them like a Hood. But before the foremost ranks were engaged the Barbarians gave way, and were hotly pursued, Alexander driving the conquered foe towards the centre of their array, where Dareius was.! For from afar he was seen by Alexander through the deep ranks of the royal squadron of horse drawn up in front of him, towering conspicuous, a_fine-looking man and tall, standing on a lofty chariot, fenced about by a numerous and brilliant array of horse- men, who were densely massed around the chariot and drawn up to receive the enemy. But when they saw Alexander close at hand and terrible, and driving those who fled before him upon those who held their ground, they were smitten with fear and scattered, for the most part. The bravest and noblest of them, however, slain in front of their king and falling in heaps upon one another, obstructed the Macedonians in their pursuit, weaving and twining themselves in their last agonies about riders and horses.

But Dareius, now that all the terrors of the struggle were before his eyes, and now that the forces drawn up to protect him were crowded back upon him, since it was not an easy matter to turn his chariot about and drive it away, seeing that the wheels were obstructed and entangled in the great numbers of the fallen, while the horses, surrounded and hidden

1 Alexander’s tactics are minutely described by Arrian

(Anab. iii. 14, 1-3).
325

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

/ \ 3 s n , fad
AapBavopevot Kab dM oKPUTTOMEVOL TH mrajee TED al b CQ ¢€
vexpov €EjAXOVTO Kal aUVETaPATTOV TOV HVLOXOP,
? / \ \ eo \ \ eo / 4
amToNciTEL bev TO Appa Kal Ta StrAa, Onrevav 6, ef s ivf \ 4 > \
ws pact, veotoKoyv immo TepiBas Epuyev. ov pny
, x 286 & an 3 \ f Ka e
TOTE AV EOOKEL OLADVYELY, EL [LN TAALY NKOV ETE\ "~ , cal fal
pot mapa Tov Tlappevimvos tirets pwetaxadovvtTes
"AréEavdpov, as cuverToaNS ETL TOAATS SuvapEws
A A / €xel KaL TOV TrOAELIOY OK EvdLOOVTMY. OAWS Yap
a 3
aitcavrat Ilappeviwva Kat éxelvny thy paxny \ / 4 nr
vwOpov yevérOat Kai dvaepyov, cite TOD yHpws
an ,
HON TL TAPANVOVTOS THS TOALNS, ETE THY éEovTiaY
Kat Tov oyKxov, oF Kaddabévns dyat, tis 'AXe-Eavdpov duvapews Bapuvouevov cal rpoadOo-A , ie $ e \ Sey nA
voovTa. TOTE ovv 0 Baatrevs ariabeis 77
f a \ peTaTréuyet TOS pév OTPATLWTALS OUK EppaceE TO
' , > > > sf A , \ ,
arnbes, ANN ws avexwV TOU hovevEetvy KAL TKOTOUS dvTos avaKAnolv eoijpavers éXavYWV dé TpOs TO KivdvuvEedoy pépos jKovce Kal' odov HrTHAaOat TavTatac. kal hevyey Tovs ToAEpLLoUS.
XXXIV. Totvto tis payns exeivns KaBovans
f \ b) \ n
TO Tépas, » pev apxn tavtataocw 1 Lepody
, nm
édoxes Katarervabat, Bacirers bé THs *Acias
? LE S ? f re] " a AréEavdpos avnyopevyevos eOve Tots Peots peyaan n f n

AoTrpEeTasS Kal Tols dirows edwpetto TAOVTOUS Kal
\ f OlKoUS Kal NyEep“ovias. eNoTipovpevos O€ TpOs ‘ ia Dee ” \ oO , tous “EXAnvas éEypate tas tupavvidas Tacas
aA \ , 3 , 307 \
Katahv@ vat Kat TodvTevEry adbTovopous, idia oé TlXataedot tHv todw avotxodopeiv, Ste TV
, ¢ ? A Py
Yopav ol TaTépes avTav evaywricacbar Tols 326

68

ALEXANDER, xxxin. 5—xxxiv. 1

away by the multitude of dead bodies, were rearing up and frightening the charioteer, forsook his char iot and his armour, mounted a mare which, as they say, had newly foaled, and took to flight. However, it is thought that he would not then have made his escape, had not fresh horsemen come from Par- menio! summoning Alexander to his aid, on the ground that a large force of the enemy still held together there and would not give ground. For there is general complaint that in that battle Par- menio was sluggish and ineflicient, either because old age was now impairing somewhat his courage, or because he was made envious and resentful by the arrogance and pomp, to use the words of Callis- thenes, of Alexander's power. At the time, then, although he was annoyed by the summons, the king did not tell his soldiers the truth about it, but on the ground that it was dark and he would therefore remit further slaughter, sounded a recall; and as he rode towards the endangered portion of his army, he heard by the way that the enemy had been utterly defeated and was in flight.

XXXIV. The battle having had this issue, the empire of the Persians was thought to be utterly dissolved, and Alexander, proclaimed king of Asia, made magnificent sacrifices to the gods and rewarded his friends with wealth, estates, and provinces. And being desirous of honour among the Greeks, he wrote them that all their tyrannies were abolished and they might live under their own laws; moreover, he wrote the Plataeans specially that he would rebuild their city, because their ancestors had furnished their ? Arrian makes no mention of a second appeal for aid from Parmenio.

327

Zz

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"EA Anow bmrép THS erevOepias TAPETXOV. em eppe

d€ Kal Kpotwriarais ets ‘Itadiav [4€p0s TOV Lagupov, TV Pavrrov TOU ab Anrod TUpLeoy TT pO-Oupiay Kal apetTny, Os mept Ta, Mnéica TOV Gd\AwY ‘Tradtwrav ateyywkoToy tovs “EXXnvas idtocrTo-Nov Eywy vadv émhevoev ELS Larapiva, Tou KLV-Suvou TL ped eEov. OUT® TES EUHEVNS Hy T™ pos aracav apeTnvy Kat KaXoVv epywy gvrAaF& Kat OLKELOS.
XXXY., *Eami@p 6é THY BaBvurwviav arracay evOvs em avT@ ‘yevopevny eCavpace padvora TO TE xao pa. TOU TUPOS @oT ep éx THY NS oUVEXaS ava hepopevon, Kab TO pedpa TOU _vadba Atma.
Covtos bra TO TAOS ov TOppw TOU VAT MATOS, OS
Tada Bey ao Part 7 poo EoLKeD, oUTw be evTradns
TPos TO T Up eoTL Gore, mptv } Oryeiv THY proya, Ol aUTHS THS Tept TO POs éfam Topevos avyns Tov petakv TONAGKIS dépa. ouverKateLy. eT LOELKVU-
pEvor O€ THY puow avTou Kal OUvapty ot | BapBapot
TOV ayovTa: pos THY KaTadvow Tov Bactrhéws oreveomov eadpe@ T@ papacy KaTepeKxacay:
elTa aoTavTes €% AKpw@ TOUS hapnTipas ToLS BeBpeypevors mpooeOnkar: 70n yap cweoKorate.
TOV 5é rpwtav evOrs awapevov OvK Ex yey 7 voun
-V povoyv aia Onrov, arr dua, vonmare Outro T pos
Oarepov TEPAS Kab Top EVYEYOVEL TUVEXES 0 TTEVW-
70S. my o€ tes “AOnvodayvns "A@nvaios tov
Tept areupa Kal Aovtpov eiwOoTwY TO copa
Geparevery TOD Bactréws Kal THv Ocdvoray ep HEADS amare él TO paOvpov. ovTOS ev TO NouTPHVLE TOTE Tatoapiou TH ’ArcEavdpw Tape-328

ALEXANDER, xxxiv. 2—xxxv. 3

territory to the Greeks for the struggle in behalf of their freedom.! He sent also to the people of Croton in Italy a portion of the spoils, honouring the zeal and valour of their athlete Phajyllus, who, in the Median wars, when the rest of the Greeks in Italy refused to help their brother Greeks, fitted out a ship at his own cost and sailed with it to Salamis, that he might have some share in the peril there.? So considerate was Alexander towards every form ot valour, and such a friend and guardian of noble deeds.

XXXV. As he traversed all Babylonia, which at once submitted to him, he was most of all amazed at the chasm from which fire continually streamed forth as from a spring, and at the stream of naphtha, so abundant as to form a lake, not far from the ehasm. This naphtha is in other ways like asphaltum, but is so sensitive to fire that, before the flame touches it, it is kindled by the very radiance about the flame and often sets fire also to the intervening air. To show its nature and power, the Barbarians sprinkled the street leading to Alexander's quarters with small quantities of the liquid ; then, standing at the farther end of the street, they applied their torches to the moistened spots; for it was now getting dark. The first spots at once caught fire, and without an ap- preciable interval of time, but with the speed of thought, the flame darted to the other end, and the street was one continuous fire. Now, there was a certain Athenophanes, an Athenian, one of those who were accustomed to minister to the person of the king when he bathed and anointed himself, and to furnish suitable diversion for his thoughts. This man, one time when there was standing by Alexander

1 In 479 B.c. 2 Cf. Herodotus, vili. 47.

A n s 3
TTWTOS evtehous opospa Kai yerotou thy oi, aSovros dé XapeevTos, Ytépavos éxaretto, " Bovhen " dnotv, "@ Bactrev, Stdmetpav éy Lrepaveo Tob hapudkov AdBopev; dv yap arntat tovTou
a , ¥ Kal pn KatacBeoOn, Tavtdraciw av dhainv apma-
a 93 bd
yov kat devnv avtov thy Svvapiv éivat. Tpo-
" , e
Fb pos dé ws Kal Tov Tarda.ptou S:d0vtos éavTov
TPOS THY TELPAV, ALA TO Treprareiypar Kal Ouyeiv
éEnvO noe proya TooavTny TO cpa Kal Tupt Katecyebn To TaV Bate TOV 'AXEEaVépop Ets Trav
b) / \ A 3 a 3 \ \ \ /,
amropias Kai Séous édOety: eb O€ py KaTa TUXNY
A n \ \ ' e
TOANOL TapHaav ayyela TWpos TO AOUTpOY UVdaTos \ aA " 9 a ov e , dia yepov Exovtes, ovK av EpOacev 7 BorPea \ bd , 3 A \ U / ,

THY émivomyy. GAAAG Kal TOTE poyls KaTeaBecav 68K

lal " cy al ,
TO T@pua TOD Tatoos St' GAOV TUP YEevouEVOY, Kal
peTa TADTA YaAXETTaS Eayer.
> > » \ A > r \
Eixotws obv éviot Tov poGov avacwlovtes pos
A b) f a if 3 \ n ,
Tv arnOeray TovTO haa eEivat To THS Mnéeias

2 \ f

pdppakov, @® TOV Tpaywdovpevovy atépavov Kal
\ \ n Tov wémAov Eyptcev. ov yap €& avTov éxeivar

3 ‘ nw

ovde amr avToudtov Aduwat TO TOP, GAAG ro-\ , bd a e
ros éyytdev mapateleions o€etav odK}Y Kal cUVA-dyv adnrov aicOyjae yevérOat. Tas yap axtivas

\ ¢ a N ,

Kal Ta pevpata Tov Tupos amwhev érepyopueva

A \ V4 ¢ na
TOlS MeV AANOLS THOUATL PAs Kal OepuoTnTAa TpoC-
\ a Barretv povov, év O€ Tots EnpoTHnTAa TvevpaTiKNy
/ \ n
7?) votioa AtTapav Kal diapKh KexTnpévots GO pot-
? \ wn
Coueva Kat tupipavodyTa petaBdrrAcy oFéws THY e Lal ,
vAnV. apetye O€ aumopiay nH yéveois... ETE 33°

ALEXANDER, xxxv. 3-6 in the bath-room a youth who had a ridiculously plain countenance, but was a graceful singer (his name was Stephanus), said, “Wilt thou, O King, that we make a trial of the liquid upon Stephanus? For if it should lay hold of him and not be extinguished, I would certainly say that its power was invincible and terrible.” The youth also, strangely enough, offered himself for the experiment, and as soon as he touched the liquid and began to anoint himself with it, his body broke out into so great a flame and was so wholly possessed by fire that Alexander fell into extreme perplexity and fear; and had it not been by chance that many were standing by holding vessels of water for the bath, the youth would have been consumed before aid reached him.

Even as it was, they had great difficulty in putting out the fire, for it covered the boy's whole body, and after they had done so, he was in a sorry plight.

It is natural, then, that some who wish to bring fable into conformity with truth should say that this naphtha is the drug which Medeia used, when, in the tragedies, she anoints the crown and the robe. For it was not from these objects themselves, they say, nor of its own accord, that the fire shot up, but a flame was placed near them, which was then so swiftly drawn into conjunction with them that the senses could not take cognisance of it. For the rays and emanations of fire which come from a distance impart to some bodies merely light and warmth; but in those which are dry and porous, or which have sufficiently rich moisture, they collect themselves together, break into fierce flame, and transform the material. There has been much discussion about

ral e s fal N e nw \ ¢€ XN
pLaNXOV UTEKKAUUA THS Proyos vITappEl TO UYypoOV
A fa \ ,
ex THS ys Pvow ALTApav Kal TUpLYyOVOY exovoNs.
‘ 4 3 e / , /
kal yap éaotiv 9 BaBvrwvia chodpa tupwdns,
0 f a @oTe TAS pmeyv KpLOaS Yapolev éexTNdaVv Kal aTo-mTadreaGat TOoAAAKLS, Olov LTO hrEyLOVAS TaV ToTwv aduypous e€vovtwy, Tavs dé av@pwrous ev n 4 b) fay ¢
TOS KavpacW er coKoV TETANPOLEVOY VdaATOS
xaGevierv. “Aptraros d5€ THs XYwopas aTrorerdOeis
A e a“
émiperntys Kat diroxaraov EdAnvixais puTecass Siaxoopnoar ta Bacireta Kal TOUS TEpiTaTous,
A \ ” 3 lA N ‘ \ >
Tov pev adrAwY expaTynoe, TOV OE KLTTOV OUK
fo) 4 >
éxtetev 7 yh povov, GAN del déhOetpev ov hépov-\ A e N A f ¢ a S Ta THY Kpaow: pev yap Tupwdys, o bé htdo-
wn 9 /
Wuyxpos. ToY pev ody ToLoUTwY TapexBaceEw)D, dv pétpov éywotv, HTTov lows ot dUocKoXOL KaTNyopnoovely.

XXXVI. ’AréEavdpos 66 Yovowy xuptevoas
ral la mapéhaBev é€v tots PBactretars TeTpaKiopvpLa
/ ‘
Ta\avTa voplopatos, THy b6€ AAAnY KaATAaTKEUHY
\ , > / ee \ ‘
Kal woAvTédeay ddinyntov. Omouv dacl Kat
e A nA
moppupas Epptovixns evpeOnvat tadavta TevtTa-
4 4 \ lal 4
Kityihta, cvyKermevns pev €& ETaV Oéxa SeovTwY
, XN
dtakoclwv, Tpocpatov O€ TO avOos Ett Kat veapov durattovens. aitiov d€ Tovtov daciv eivat TO \ ‘ \ f / A e a
thy Bapyy ova pédtTos yiverOar THY adoupyar, 62 éXaiou &€ AevKod TOV AeVKaV: Kal yap TOUTwY
/
Tov loov Ypovov éyovTw@Y THY AauTpOTNTA Kala-N: \ , c oA , ,
pav Kat oti Bovoav opacda. Acivwy o€ dyat \ e b) , A tinea \ a Kal vowp amo te tov NeitAov cat tod “Iarpov 33?

ALEXANDER, xxxv. 6—-xxxvi. 2

the origin of! .... or whether rather the liquid sub- stance that feeds the flame flows out from a soil which is rich and productive of fire. For the soil of Babylonia is very fiery, so that grains of barley often leap out of the ground and bound away, as if its in- flammation made the ground throb; and the inhabit- ants, during the hot season, sleep on skins filled with water. Harpalus, moreover, when he was left as overseer of the country and was eager to adorn the royal gardens and walks with Hellenic plants, succeeded with all except ivy; this the soil would not support, but always killed it. The plant could not endure the temper of the soil, for the soil was fiery, while the plant was fond of coolness. How- ever, if such digressions are kept within bounds, perhaps my impatient readers will find less fault with them.

XXXVI. On making himself master of Susa, Alex- ander came into possession of forty thousand talents of coined money in the palace, and of untold furni- ture and wealth besides. Among this they say was found five thousand talents’ weight of purple from Hermione, which, although it had been stored there for a hundred and ninety years, still kept its colours fresh and lively. The reason for this, they say, is that honey was used in the purple dyes, and white olive oil in the white dyes; for these substances, after the like space of time, are seen to have a brilliancy that is pure and lustrous. Moreover, Deinon says that the Persian kings had water also brought from the Nile and the Danube and stored

1 “This naphtha,” and the first ‘‘ whether ”-clause, have fallen out of the text.

* Cf. Arrian, Anab. iii. 16, 7, A talent's weight was something over tifty pounds.
333

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

N n ,
MleTA TOV ANAWY METATELTOMEVOUS els THY yulaYy
amTotiGecOat tors Bactrets, otov éxBeBarovyévous
TO péyeOos THS GPXAS Kat TO KUplEevElY ATAaVTMODV.
XXXVIT. Tis db€ Hepcidos ottons ba Tpa-
, f \ f e \ yuTntTa ducgewBorov Kal dudrattopévyns vio yev-
n " \ ' 7
vatotatwy Wepcav (Aapetos pev yap émedhevyer) / rd ylyveTat Tivos TEpLodou KUKXOV exyovans ov TOLD yyEeuoVv avT@ diykwooos avOpwios, eK TATPOS
, \ \ , , er
Avxtov, pntpos 5é Ilepaidos yeyouws: Gv dhacuy, étt Tratoos ovtos 'AXeEdvSpov, thy TIvOiav mpoet-
A 7 \ 4 Cal
TEV, @S AUKOS EaTaL KAOnyepwv 'AreEdvdpmw THs
? iy -
émt Ilépcas mopeias. ovoyv pev ovv évtaida
aA 4
TOADY TOV ANLaKOpEeV@Y yevéecOat cuvéTTETE: Ypa-N e ' fal " ~
het yap AUTOS ws VoulCwY AVT@ TODTO AvVOLTEAELY
3 f , , \ 3 , ,
éxéXevevy atroopattedGat Tovs avOpwrous' vopt-be e . "4 er b) wae \ de opatos O€ evpeiy TARGOS Ocov ev Sovaots, THY" b€
4 \ \ \ la) 3 r /
QAXANV KATACKEUNV KAL TOV TAOVTOY ExKoptaOhvat
la af
dace puptos optxots Cevyect Kal mrevraxiaxtALals

KapLnols.
FépEou 6€ avéptavta péyav Oeacdpevos wr
a ld

TAHOovs TOV @PovpEvwY Eis TA Bacidea TAHL-

A /

MEAS GvaTETpappEevoY EeTrégTH, Kal KaOaTrep ep-
7 , U 3 2
wruxov mpocayopevaas, “ llotepov ce,” ei7re, “ dia \ aN \ ct /
Thy éeTt TOUS EXAnvas oTpaTeElav KEly~EvOV Trap-
3 \ f
EAOwpev 7) Sta THY aANY pEeyarodpocvvny Kal
b \ 3 / a 4 be \ a N
apeTny eyelpwpev;’ Tédos O€ TOADY YXpovov Tpds al / nw
EaAUT@ yEevopevos Kab ciwmijoas TaphnrGe. Bovdo-pevos O€ TOUS OTPATLWTAaS avarafetV (Kal yap 7D 334

up among their treasures, as a sort of confirmation of the greatness of their empire and the universality of their sway.
XXXVII. Persis was difficult of access, owing to the roughness of the country, and was guarded by the noblest of the Persians (for Dareius had taken to flight); but Alexander found a guide to conduct him thither by a circuit of no great extent. The man spoke two languages, since his father was a Lycian and his mother a Persian; and it was he, they say, whom the Pythian priestess had in mind when she prophesied, Alexander being yet a boy, that a “lycus,” or wolf, would be Alexander's guide on his march against the Persians.!_ In this country, then, as it turned out, there was a great slaughter of the prisoners taken; for Alexander himself writes that he gave orders to have the inhabitants butchered, thinking that this would be to his advantage; and they say that as much coined money was found there? as at Susa, and that it took ten thousand pairs of mules and five thousand camels to carry away the other furniture and wealth there.

On beholding a great statue of Xerxes which had been carelessly overthrown by a throng that forced its way into the palace, Alexander stopped before it, and accosting it as if it had been alive, said: “Shall I pass on and leave thee lying there, because of thine expedition against the Hellenes, or, because of thy magnanimity and virtue in other ways, shall I set thee up again?” But finally, after communing with himself a long time in silence, he passed on. Wishing to refresh his soldiers (for it was winter

1 Arrian (Azab. iii. 18, 1f.) speaks only of a forced march through the mountains. 2 In Persepolis.

YELL@vos Opa) Téeccapas pnvas avroOs ounyare.
NéyeTat O€ KaGicayTos avTOU TO TPWTOV VTO TOY

Ypucody ovpavicxov év T@ Bactdtx@ Opovw tov
Koptv@iov Anpudpatov ebvovy dvta avopa xat
Twatp@ov dirov ‘AreEdvdpou mpeaButixas ére-Saxptaat, Kal eirreiy ws peyarns 1)S0vns oTEpotvTo Tov ‘EXXAnvwv of TeOvnKoTEs piv toety *AXéEar-dpov év T@ Aapetou Opovw Kabrpevov.
XXXVIIL. ’Ex tovtov pédrwv éEedavverv eri
Aapeiov étvye pev eis méOnv tiva Kali tradsav
Tols ETalpots éavTov SedwKwS, WATE KAL YyUVaLa
ouptrivey él K@pov KovTa Tpos Tous épactds.
év d€ TOUVTOLS EVdoKiMOvGA partoTa Mais 4 I1To-Nexatov ToD PactAEevoarTos VaTEpoV ETALpa, YyEVvOS
"ATTiKn, Ta méev euperas erratvovaa, Ta O€é Tati-Covca mpos Tov AréEavdpov, dua TH weOn NOyov eiTety TponKXOn TH pev THs Tatpidos Gee mpé-TovTa, peitova 5€ 7) KaT auTnv. é&pn yap wv TeTovnKke TeTAaYN EVN THY Aciav aToNauBavety
yapwv exeivns THS hyépas evTpupHoa Tots vmepndavots Iepoayv Bactretos: ett O dv Hdvov wro-Tphoat Kwpdcaca tov =épfov Tod Kataxavcavtos tas ’A@ivas oixov, abt) TO TIP awaca Tod Baothéws opavtos, ws av doyos Exn Tpos av@pwmous OTL TOY vavuadxywv Kal Telopaywv exelvwv oTpaTnyav Ta peta AdeEdvdpov yvvata petSova dixny éméOnne épcais trép tis “EXAd-Sos. dua 6€ TO AOyw TOVTw@ KpdTOV Kal BopUBov yevomevou Kal TapaxeNevoews THY ETAipwHY Kai 336

687

ALEXANDER, xxxvi. 3-xxxvuill. 3

time), he spent four months in that place. And it is said that when he took his seat for the first time under the golden canopy on the royal throne, Demaratus the Corinthian, a well-meaning man and a friend of Alexander’s, as he had been of Alexander’s father, burst into tears, as old men will, and declared that those Hellenes were deprived of great pleasure who had died before seeing Alexander seated on the throne of Dareius.

XXXAVIII. After this, as he was about to march forth against Dareius, it chanced that he consented to take part in a merry drinking bout of his com- panions, at which women also came to meet their lovers and shared in their wine and revelry. The most famous among these women was Thais, an Athenian, the mistress of Ptolemy, who was after- wards king. She, partly in graceful praise of Alex- ander, and partly to make sport for him, as the drinking went on, was moved to utter a speech which befitted the character of her native country, but was too lofty for one of her kind. She said, namely, that for all her hardships in wandering over Asia she was being requited that day by thus revel- ling luxuriously in the splendid palace of the Per- sians; but it would be a still greater pleasure to go in revel rout and set fire to the house of the Xerxes who burned Athens, she herself kindling the fire under the eyes of Alexander, in order that a tradition might prevail among men that the women in the train of Alexander inflicted a greater punishment upon the Persians in behalf of Hellas than all her famous commanders by sea and land. As soon as she had thus spoken, tumultuous applause arose, and the companions of the king eagerly urged him on,

, > \ e \ \ »
piroTiplas, éemicrvacbeis 0 Bactdevs Kal avatn-
“i v / \ , n e
4 dnoas éxwv otéhavoy Kal AapTaba Tpojyev. ol \ , f fal of.
dé érropuevor KOw Kal Bon Teptictavto Ta Baci-
“ e , Aela, Kal TOV GAY Makedovwv of TuvOavopevot
/
OUVETPEXYOY [ETA apTadwWY YaipovTes. HATLCOY
\ ¢ ca \ a
yap ort Tots olxot mpoaéxovTos eaoTe Tov vodY Kal
\ / 3 f > “ \ th
Hn wéXAOvTOS ev PapBapols otKely TO TipMpavat
\ / \ / e ‘ ef a Ta Bactrea Kai dtadOeipew. of pév oUTwW TadTa / / £ \ 3 \ * vd 3 9) yeveoOar dhaciv, ot 6€ amd yvopns OTe & ovv
, / /
petevonoe Tayv Kal KatacBécar mpocérakev
e nw
omodNoyelTat.
a a , x ,
XXXIX. Duces 66 Gv peyarodwpotatos ért
A / al nn
HaAXOV ETEOWKEY ELS TOUTO TOV TpaypaTwy av-
3 \ al € 2g > e
Fouévav' Kat tmpoonv » hiroppocvvn, pel as
, e 3 “A ¢e 4 ,
povns ws adAnO@s ot didavTes yapifovtar. pyn-

/ \ > 4 b) / ty n s cOycopat 6é odiywv. “Apictwy o tav Ilatovev YU
nyoUmEvoS aTOKTELVaS ToOAeuLOY Avdpa Kal TiV
\ ? ¢ b] n 77s pe 39> Ly
Keparnv émiderEduevos auto, “'Todto,” eizev,
A 3 al > dé “A A “@ Buotred, Tip Huty exTr@patos Ypvcod Tima-
A 99 id \
Tat TO O@pov. o 6€ ‘AXéEaVdpos yerXaaas, ow A ”» 4 fan Oy: \ ’ r KKevov ye, etmrev, “ éyw 0€ Gol pEeoTOY akpuTou > val \ bo) / TpoTiopar. Tov o€ ToAAMY Tis Maxedovwr of ¢ , \ v4 id
Hravvev Hutovoyv Bactdikov xXpvaciov Kopitovta:
a if *
KGpVOVTOS O€ TOD KTIVOUS AUTOS apdpuevos exoptte
N a ¢
TO poptiov. tdav ody o Bactrevs OrtSdpevov
> N \ , x ral f
auTov ogodpa Kai mu@opevos TO TPaypa, pér-
z , Novtos KataTiGecOar, “ NI} Kapns,” elmer, “ adra 338

ALEXANDER, xxxvul. 3-XxxxIx. 2

so that he yielded to their desires, and leaping to his feet, with a garland on his head and a torch in his hand, led them the way. The company followed with shouts and revelry and surrounded the palace, while the rest of the Macedonians who learned about it ran thither with torches and were full of joy. For they hoped that the burning and destruction of the palace was the act of one who had fixed his thoughts on home, and did not intend to dwell among Bar- barians. This is the way the deed was done, according to some writers; but others say it was premeditated.} However, it is agreed that Alexander speedily re- pented and gave orders to put out the fire.

XXXIX. Alexander was naturally munificent, and became still more so as his wealth increased. His gifts, too, were accompanied by a kindly spirit, with which alone, to tell the truth, a giver confers a favour. I will mention a few instances. Ariston, the captain of the Paeonians, having slain an enemy, brought his head and showed it to Alexander, saying : “In my country, O King, such a gift as this is re- warded with a golden beaker.” ‘‘Yes,” said Alex- ander with a laugh, “an empty one; but I will pledge thy health with one which is full of pure wine.” Again, a common Macedonian was driving a mule laden with some of the royal gold, and when the beast gave out, took the load on his own shoulders and tried to carry it. The king, then, seeing the man in great distress and learn- ing the facts of the case, said, as the man was about to lay his burden down, “Don’t give out, 1So Arrian, Anab. iii. 18. 11 f., where there is none of Plutarch's romance. For this, ef. Diodorus, xvii. 72; Curtius, v. 7, 1-7.

Gn

/ " af \ egr > \ \ \ € mpooGes Ett THY NOLTTHY OdoV ETL THY TKNVHVY Eéavforay a 4 99 ew \ " re tal \
TH! TovTO Koploas." OXWS be nx Gero Tois pa AapBavovat "adrov 7) Tols attovor. Kab Dwxi-\ ld N ¢ > ,
@ve pev eypawev Eto TOANVY WS OV KpNTopeEvos
5 a , ' / > a a 4
avT@ diriw TO NotTrOV, Eb diwOotTo Tas YapiTas.,
id a '\ / Nepamiwovt O€ TaY ato ohaipas Tivi veavioxwy
? \ 297 N \ \ 3 a ¢ 9 3 \
ovdey €didou Ora TO pndév aitety. ws OvY Els TO
'4 , e WV f "
adhapifav tapayevouevos o Lepatiwv addors
\ a 3 , a" /
éBarr€ tTHv ohaipav, eimovtos 5€ TOD Bactréws, \ b] , \ 3 ~ x
"'Kuot 6€ ov didws;" "OU yap aitets," eirzre,
\ \ UL
TOUT® bev On Yeddoas TOANG dwxe. II pwréa dé
A ,
TWL TOY TEP OKOMpATA Kal TOTOV OVK apmovawY
" > 3 a , a" \ / ,
édok&e Ou' opyis yeyovevar: tav b€ dirwv Ceopévwv
b] / , " 4 b] a Kakeivou dSaxpvovtos Eby StadrAaTTEecOau Kaxet-an 99 o a , vos, "Ovxovdv, eimev, "a Bactred, dos Te pot
a" 3 9 a
TLOTOV TP@TOV. €KEAEVTEV OVY AUT@ TEevTE Td-
a \ N " a / \ a
Aavta SoPhvar. repi 6€ TMV Tots hidots Kal Tots
A / 4 e / >
TwUaTopPvAakl vEe"op"evwv TAOVTWY, NALKOV EL YOV

” 3 , 3 b] lal 3 4 aA
OyKov, éudaiver os emiotoAns Odvytrids, iv
4 if > /
éypawre ampos avtov. “Adds, dyoiv, “ed
4 \ 4 \ 3 f ” a“ >) ’
mole Tous hirous Kat évdoEous aye: viv & tao-
a c Baociréas Tavtas Totets Kat todvudtrXtas Tapa-uf ’ a“ e ‘ N 3 a b>) if oxevalets avtots, éautov 5€é épnpols.” ToANdKLS a “ b) cd
dé ToLravTa THs "OXvyTrLados ypadovans édvrAaT-
, \ , \ A e
TEV ATOPPNTA Ta Ypappata, TANnV ara& Hdaiotiwvos, woTrEp E.wW0EL, NVOEioay eTLTTOANY AUTO
\
CUVAVAYLVYMOKOVTOS OVK Exw@AVTEV, GANA TOV Oa-1 ggurg Sint., with the best MSS.; Coraés and Bekker have geauvrg@. Cf. § 5.
340

68E

ALEXANDER, xxx1x. 2-5

but finish your journey by taking this load to your own tent.” Furthermore, he was generally more displeased with those who would not take his gifts than with those who asked for them. And so he wrote to Phocion in a letter that he would not treat him as a friend in future if he rejected his favours. Again, to Serapion, one of the youths who played at ball with him, he used to give nothing because he asked for nothing. Accordingly, whenever Serapion had the ball, he would throw it to others, until the king said: “ Won't you give it tome?” ‘ No,” said Serapion, “ because you don’t ask for it,” whereat the king burst out laughing and made him many pre- sents. With Proteas, however, a clever wag and boon companion, he appeared to be angry; but when the man’s friends begged his forgiveness, as did Proteas himself with tears, the king said that he was his friend again, whereat Proteas said : “In that case, O King, give me something to prove it first.” Accordingly, the king ordered that five talents should be given him. What lofty airs his friends and bodyguards were wont to display over the wealth bestowed by him, is plain from a letter which Olympias wrote to him. She says: “I beg thee to find other ways of conferring favours on those thou lovest and holdest in honour; as it is, thou makest them all the equals of kings and providest them with an abundance of friends, whilst thyself thou strippest bare.”” Olympias often wrote him in like vein, but Alexander kept her writings secret, except once when Hephaestion, as was his wont, read with him a letter which had been opened; the king did not prevent him, but took the ring

KTUALOV ahehopevos TOV AUTO TpoTeOnKE TH exeELvou oTOMaTt THY opparyica. Mafatov 6€ Tod peyotou mapa Aapeiw yevouévov trast catpametav EvovTe devtépav mpoceTiOe: petfora. Tapattovpevos O€ éxetvos eimev: “"O. Bactred, TOTE pev Hv els Aapetos, viv dé ov Todos TeTroinKas
"AreEdvdpous. e Weeaanaue per ovv TOV Bayoou EO@KEV OLKOV TOV TEpL Lobca," év @ hevyeTau xeric Taravrwv evpeOhvas (patio pov. mpos & “Avtt-Tatpov éypae KeXevwv Ever dvAaKAaS TOU co-patos ws émeBovrevopevov. TH O€ uNnTpl ToAXAa prev edwpetto Kal KatémeuTev, ovKx ela S€ TroAv-™ parywovelv ove Tapactparyyetv" éyxanovons O€ TpPLws Epepe TV Xarer ora. TAnY arak torte
"Avtimat pov paxpav KAT auras ypavvartos emreoToAny avaryvous ayvoeiv elev ‘Avtimatpov or pupias émiatoAas ev Sdxpvoy aTraneiet HNTpOS.
XL. ’Ezet 6€ tous TeEph QUTOV éWpa TaVTa-Tacw éxTeTpupyKotas Kal dhoptixovs Ttais dsai-Tats Kal ToduTeAclals bvTas, wate “Ayvwva pev tov Tniov dpyupods év tais xpnmiow Hrous popety, Aeorvarep 6€ TohrAais Kaunrow am AtyuTToU KOvI els Ta yupvacia mapaxopifes Bat, Piriora dé T pos Onpas oracioy EKATOV avratas
yeyovevat, pvp dé Kpwpevous iévat T pos CM erpa Kal ouTpov Gaous ove eat, TpLT Tas dé Kal
KATEVVAT TAS T EPLa'YOMLEVOUS, emreTinae Tpaws
Kal dirocddas, Oavpdterv pa pevos El TOT OUTOUS TY@VeT LEvOL Kal THALKOUTOUS ayavas ov pvn-
a OTL TOV KaTaTOoVNnOevTwWY Ol KATATOVN-1 olxov roy mept Zovea, Coraés and Bekker: olkxov, é @ Aéyetat Tay wep) Sovoa x.7.A.
342

ALEXANDER, xxxix. 5-XL. 2

from his own finger and applied its seal to the lips of Hephaestion. Again, though the son of Mazaeus, the most influential man at the court of Dareius, already had a province, Alexander gave him a second and a larger one. He, however, declined it, say- ing: “O King, formerly there was one Dareius, but now thou hast made many Alexanders.” To Parmenio, moreover, Alexander gave the house of Bagoas at Susa, in which it is said there was found apparel worth a thousand talents. Again, he wrote to Antipater bidding him keep guards about his person, since plots were being laid against him. To his mother, also, he sent many presents, but would not suffer her to meddle in affairs nor interfere in his campaigns ; and when she chided him for this, he bore her harshness patiently. Once, however, after reading a long letter which Antipater had written in denunciation of her, he said Antipater knew not that one tear of a mother effaced ten thousand letters. XL. He saw that his favourites had grown alto- gether luxurious, and were vulgar in the extravagance of their ways of living. For instance, Hagnon the Teian used to wear silver nails in his boots; Leon- natus had dust for his gymnastic exercises brought to him on many camels from Egypt; Philotas had hunting-nets a hundred furlongs long; when they took their exercise and their Baths: more of them actually used myrrh than olive oil, and they had in their train rubbers and chamberlains. Alex- ander therefore chided them in gentle and reason- able fashion. He was amazed, he said, that after they had undergone so many and so great contests they did not remember that those who conquer by toil sleep more sweetly than those who are con-

caves Hdtov Kabevdovow, ovdé op@ot Tots Lep-cewv Bios TOUS éauT ap mapaBarnXortes, 6Tt dov-MOT ATOV pev éott TO Tpupay, BacimKxorartov
dé 70 mwovely. " Kaitot was av Tis, epn, SOE!
éavtod Oepatrevoetev immov 4 hoyxnv doKnoevev n Kpavos, amretOika@s TOU pidtatov oT @pL.aTOS am Te-
o0at Tas Xetpas; ' "Oun | lore, elev, 'OTL TOD
K patel TE pas npiv éoTe TO He TavTa qoLety Tots
KEK PATN{LEVOLS ; cs em €TELVEY ouv éTL _MadXov AUTOS
EQUTOV éV TAS oTpateiats Kal Tois KUN YyErtots, KaKkoTad@y Kal mapaBardopevos, OTE kat Aa-Kova mpeo BevTny Taparyevopuevov avT@ R€ovTa kataBaddovte peyav elrrety" "Karos Y6, "AXe-Eavdpe, ™ pos Tov héovTa NY OVC at Tepl TAS Baot-Aetas. — TOUTO TO KUVNYLOV Kpatepos ELS Aerhous
aveOnen, elKovas Xarnas TOT a [LEvos TOU Xé-OVTOS Kal T@V KUVOY Kal Tov Baciréws TO EovTe TVVETTOTOS Kal avTOU mpoc Bonboovtos, @Vv Ta
pev Avoimmos érAace, Ta € Aewydpns.
XLT. 'AréEavdpos pév ody éavtov acKxav aya Kal TOUS adXAOUS Trapok-vVwY Tpos apEeTHY éKLVOv-vevev' of d€ trot Ova wOUTOY Kal oyKOV non Tpupav Bovdopevoe Kal oxonralew éBapwvovto Tas
wravas Kab Tas oTparelas, Kal Kara puuxpov odT@ ™ por) ACov els TO Prac hype Kab KAKOS every auTov. 0 6€ Kal Tavu mpaws év apx7 T pos TavTa ScéxerTo, packer Baowduxov elvar TO KAK@S GKOUvELV ev TowouvTa. KalToL To fetK po~ TATA TOV YEevounevayv Tois cvvnGeot Tap avTod onuela peyadns UTApYev evvolas Kal TLS' BY odiya Tapabnacopat.

quered by their toil, and did not see, from a com- parison of their own lives with those of the Persians, that it is a very servile thing to be luxurious, but a very royal thing to toil. “And yet,” said he, “how can a man take care of his own horse or furbish up his spear and helmet, if he is unaccus- tomed to using his hands on his own dear person? Know ye not,” said he, “that the end and object of conquest is to avoid doing the same thing as the conquered?” Accordingly, he exerted himself yet more strenuously in military and hunting expeditions, suffering distress and risking his life, so that a Spartan ambassador who came up with him as he was bringing down a great lion, said: ‘“ Nobly, indeed, Alexander, hast thou struggled with the lion to see which should be king.” This hunting-scene Craterus dedicated at Delphi, with bronze figures of the lion, the dogs, the king engaged with the lion, and him- self coming to his assistance; some of the figures were moulded by Lysippus, and some by Leochares.

XLI. Alexander, then, in exercising himself and at the same time inciting others to deeds of valour, was wont to court danger; but his friends, whose wealth and magnificence now gave them a desire to live in luxury and idleness, were impatient of his long wanderings and military expeditions, and gradually went so far as to abuse him and speak ill of him. He, however, was very mildly disposed at first toward this treatment of himself, and used to say that it was the lot of a king to confer favours and be ill- spoken of therefor. And yet in the most trifling attentions which he paid his familiar friends there were marks of great good-will and esteem. I will instance a few of these.

Hevxéota perv éypawe peupopevos Ste dnxGels
e > 0 : e | alge EB / = > x 3
Um apKToU Tols pev AAXols Eypawev, aUT@ O€ OUK
, ’ \ nn A
édjnrtwoev. ‘AAA vov ye,” dyai, “ ypdvpov Tas
4 “A f
EXELS, KAL fn TLVES GE THY GTUYyKUYNYETOVYTOV
b] i / , a) >») A \ \ éyxatéditrov, iva Cixny Saat. Tots be Tepl € 7 \ , \ 3 “A sd
Hdatotiwova é:a mpakées tTivas atrovclv éypawev
e u n \ f a ,
OTe TaLCovTM@Y aAUVT@Y Tpos tyVvevpova TO Llepdix-
, r \ \ \
Kov Oopatiw mepirecwyv Kpatepos tous pnpovs
> , , \ / ” ’
érpwOn. Weunéota b€ cwlévtos éx Tivos acbev-
/ ¥ \ > , \ b] \ >

elas €ypawe wpos AdeEiTmov Tov tatpoy evyapt-a r n \ fa v 9 ‘ 3
atav. Kpazepov b€ vocotytos ow idwv Kad
e / f / a
Umvoyv autos TE TLVas Ovalas EOvoEV UTép avTOU
a A / f \ \
Kaketvov Ovaat éxédevoev. eEypare b€ xal THav-
, cal y A 4 \ \ gavia T@ (aTp@ BovrNopevw tov Kparepov édre-
s \ \ > nw \ \ wn
Bopical, Ta fev aywVvLaV, TA Ys TAPAatvav OT WS
n , \ \
Ypicetae TH happaxeia. Tovs d€ TpwTovs TV
€ , \ \ oe / > ,
Apwdndou duyny Kal amrodpaciy atrayyethavTas
\ ¢
éonoev, Kdiartyny cat Kiooov, ws Katarevdo-
nA ’ 3 \ \ \ n
pévous TOD avopos. eel b€ TOUS aaOevovrtTas
b] A \ 4 > 3 > f >
avTou Kal yépovtas eis oixov atoaTédXovtos Ev-7 > ral > ee e \ > \ pvroxos Atyaios eévéypayev éavTov eis Tovs
A 5 \
vocouvTas, eita dwpaleis Exwy oddev KaKOV wLoO-
/ A \ a
Noynoe ‘TerXeoinmmas éepadv Kal ovverraxonrovbeipv
7 4
émt Oaraccav amiovans éxelvns, HpwTNGE TivwYy
- \ \ f b] 7 \ A
avOpwtrav éoTi TO yuvatov. axovaas b€ OTL TOV
, A e a 4 99 e 9
édevOepwr etaipav, ‘ Huas pev,” etaev, “a Eva i“ dd \ a 4
purpoye, TrvEepavras EvEls’ Opa Oe OTTwS TELOwLEV
, , \ ,
A ANoyous 7) OWpors THY TeXeotTTaD, Erreldnmep €E fd b) 493
éNevdépas éort.
346

689

ALEXANDER, xu. 2-5

He found fault with Peucestas by letter because, after being bitten by a bear, he wrote about it to the rest of his friends but did not tell him. “ Now, how- ever,’ said he, ‘‘ write me how you are, and tell me whether any of your fellow-huntsmen left you in the lurch, that I may punish them.” To Hephaestion, who was absent on some business, he wrote that while they were diverting themselves with hunting an ichneumon, Craterus encountered the lance of Perdiccas and was wounded in the thighs. After Peucestas had safely recovered from an illness, Alex- ander wrote to the physician, Alexippus, expressing his thanks. While Craterus was sick, Alexander had a vision in his sleep, whereupon he offered certain sacrifices himself for the recovery of his friend, and bade him also sacrifice. He wrote also to Pausanias, the physician, who wished to administer hellebore to Craterus, partly expressing distress, and partly advis- ing him how to use the medicine. Those who first brought word to him that Harpalus had absconded, namely, Ephialtes and Cissus, he put in fetters, on the ground that they were falsely accusing the man. When he was sending home his aged and infirm soldiers, Eurylochus of Aegae got himself enrolled among the sick, and then, when it was discovered that he had nothing the matter with him, confessed that he was in love with Telesippa, and was bent on following along with her on her journey to the sea-board. Alexander asked of what parentage the girl was, and on hearing that she was a free-born courtezan, said: “I will help you, O Eurylochus, in your amour; but see to it that we try to persuade Telesippa either by arguments or by gifts, since she is free-born.”

: \ 14 ee \ ,
XLIL Oavpdoa 58 adtov éotiv OTe Kai péexpe
f 3 “ a / > / @
TOLOUTWY éTLcTOA@Y TOIs pirots eayora€er, ola
Ta > /
ypaber maida Lerevxov ets Kidixiav amodedpa-
“A \ , KoTa Kerkevwy avatyntnoat, Kat Llevxéotay érat-
a e a “ ,
vev ott Nixwva, Kpatepod dotXov, avrédaBe, Kai nw f la) A e A MeyaBvlo mepl tod Geparovtos Tov ev TH Epa
, 4 > , Xx 7
cabeComévov, KeXevoV autor, av duvntat, gudAXa-
a fa) a 4 3 \ lal
Betv &Ew Tov iepovd mpoxareodpevos, ev 66 TO e a ‘\ / , ‘\ \ bs) , lep@ pn TpocaTTecOar. RéyeTas dé Kal Tas dixas
Lp \ \ lal cal
Staxpivey ev apxyn Tas Cavatixas THY KXEtpa TeV
la) “ /
OTWY TO ETEPW TPOTTLOEVaL TOU KATHYOpOU Néyov-
“A XN Fd

TOS, OTWS TO KWovvEevovTL KaDapov durdTTyHTAaL
3 , Kal AdLaBANTOV. GAN VaoTepoy ye avTov é€eTpa-
, \ nm al
yuvav at Toddal SsaPoratl, dra TOV adnOdY Tap-\ n fa)
odov émt ta wevdh) AaBovcar. Kai pddLoTA a 7 , “ sae! \
KAK@S akovwnv eEiaTaTO TOU ppovery Kat YaNETOS
, \ \ , a
HY Kal amTapaityntos, ate 69 THv dokav aytl Tov
A nn a ,
Chv cai THs Bactreias nyaTyKwSs.
Tore 6€ é&)XNavvev él Aapetov ws mandi
‘
payoupevos: axovaas b€ THY UTO Bijacou yevo-
a / pévnv avtov cvArAn anédXvae TOs Meccarous vf 4 4 \ bd /
oixade, Cloxidta TddavTa dwpeav emipeTpnaas
a a \ \ \ f ? ,
Tats ptaOopopais. ampos b€ tHv diwkiwy apyaréav
\ \
Kal paKkpav ywwopmevny (&vdexa yap 7 mépas imma-
k \ , gaTo TplcyYtrdiovs Kal Tplaxociovs otadious)
, N e a
aTnyopevaay ev ol WAEloTOL, Kal pddLoTAa KATA
\ b] 4 v \ , > /
Thv avudpiav. év0a bn Maxedoves arnvtnoav
avT@ Tires Ddwp év aaoxols éd’ Hutovor KoutCovtes
3 \ fa n
amo TOU ToTapmoU Kat Oeagadpevor Tov “AdéEav-348

ALEXANDER, xt. 1-4

XLII. And it is astonishing that he had time to write so many letters for his friends. For instance, he wrote one giving orders to seek out a slave of Seleucus who had run away into Cilicia; and one in commendation of Peucestas for arresting Nicon, a servant of Craterus; and one to Megabyzus about an attendant who had taken refuge in a sanctuary, bid- ding him, if possible, entice the slave outside the sanctuary and then arrest him, but not to lay hands upon him in the sanctuary. It is said, too, that at first, when he was trying capital cases, he would put his hand over one of his ears while the accuser was speaking, that he might keep it free and unpreju- diced for the accused. But afterwards the multitude of accusations which he heard rendered him harsh, and led him to believe the false because so many were true. And particularly when he was maligned he lost discretion and was cruel and inexorable, since he loved his reputation more than his life or his kingdom.

Now, however, he marched out against Dareius,} expecting to fight another battle ; but when he heard that Dareius had been seized by Bessus, he sent his Thessalians home, after distributing among them a largess of two thousand talents over and above their pay. In consequence of the pursuit of Dareius, which was long and arduous (for in eleven days he rode thirty-three hundred furlongs), most of his horsemen gave out, and chiefly for lack of water. At this point some Macedonians met him who were carrying water from the river in skins upon their mules. And when they beheld Alexander, it being now midday, in a 4 In the spring of 330 B.c,

Spov non peonpBpias ovens KaKaS Wen) _ Sixpous EXOvTa TAXU TANT apEevor xpdvos TOT 1VEYKAY.
mrudowevov dé avtod tio Kops OLED, " Tiois," epacay, ' ' iStous" adra cov CavTos ETEMOUS ToLncopeda, KAY exelvous aToOnET wey." TavUTa AKovoas eda Bev els TAs Xetpas 70 Kpavos- meptBeWas dé kal Gea TAMEVOS TOUS TEpt avrov immels dravTas éyxexrLeoTtas Tals Keparais Kal pos TO OTOP Brérrovtas arédwxev ov Tiov, GAN émawéeoas \ , , ee \ > 7 99 » Pen)
Tous avOpwrous, 'Av yap autos, edn, "Tio Hovos, adupnoovaty oUTOL. Geacapevot 6€ THY eyapareray avTOV Kal peyarowuxiar | ot immets
aye dveK paryov Gappodyta Kat Tovs tmmous éuadotefov: ovTe yap Kadpvew ovTe Oupav ove' bAXws Gvyntovs civat vopiley avTovs, Ews av Eywot Bactréa ToLovTo".
XDI. A bev obp mpolupia TAVTOY ay omota*
povous 6€ hac éEnkovta cuvetotreceiy els Ta aTpatoTreda TOV TONE MLOY. évOa 61) ToXuy pev dpyupov Kal \"pucov €ppempevov umepBatvovtes, TONAGS dé Taidwy Kab yuvarKav appapatas
TVLOX OY €pN {Lous Seapepopevas TA pepNopevot, TOUS TP@TOUS edi@xon, @s éy exelvars Aapetov
OvTa. pots be eUptoKeTat TONY AKO TLG LAT OV
KATATAEWS TO THOUa KEipwevos ev appapakn,
PL POV | Groner oy Tov TedevTay. Spws dé Kat met nTnoe, Kal Tiwy Bdwp Wuypov elite ™ pos TOV Sévra To\votparov: 0, avOpwre, TOUTO pot Trépas yéyore SvaTuyias amdons, ed Tradeiv apetracbat pn Surduevov" aXn' "Arefavdp 0S

amobwae. got THY yap, AreEavdpw dé of Oeot 525

69¢

ALEXANDER, xu. 4—xLul. 2

wretched plight from thirst, they quickly filled a helmet and brought it to him. To his enquiry for whom they were carrying the water, they replied: “For our own sons; but if thou livest, we can get other sons, even if we lose these.” On hearing this he took the helmet into his hands, but when he looked around and saw the horsemen about him all stretching out their heads and gazing at the water, he handed it back without drinking any, but with praises for the men who had brought it; “ For,” said he, “if I should drink of it alone, these horsemen of mine will be out of heart.” But when they beheld his self-control and loftiness of spirit, they shouted out to him to lead them forward boldly, and began to goad their horses on, declaring that they would not regard themselves as weary, or thirsty, or as mor- tals at all, so long as they had such a king.

XLIII. So, then, all were alike ready and willing ; but only sixty, they say, were with Alexander when he burst into the camp of the enemy. There, in- deed, they rode over much gold and silver that was thrown away, passed by many waggons full of women and children which were coursing hither and thither without their drivers, and pursued those who were foremost in flight, thinking that Dareius was among them. But at last they found him lying in a waggon, his body all full of javelins, at the point of death. Nevertheless, he asked for something to drink, and when he had drunk some cold water which Polystra- tus gave him, he said to him: “ My man, this is the extremity of all my ill-fortune, that I receive good at thy hands and am not able to return it; but Alexander will requite thee for thy good offices, and the gods will reward Alexander for his kindness to

35°

PLUTARCH S LIVES

THS els pnTépa Kal yuvaixa Kal Taidas Tous émous émueikelas, © TavTny Sidwps THY SeELav dia aod.” TavTa ela Kat AaBdopuevos THS TOU IloAvoTpatov XELpas eEeherrev. ‘AdéEavdpos dé os emir Oev, anya@v te TO Tabet pavepos my Kat TY éauT ov
yrapvea Mucas é7éBane T@ TO MATE Kal Tepte-oteive. Kal Biaoov pev Uotepov eUpov dueo hev-Sovyjcen, opOtav bévdpav eis TAUTO KappOevtov ExaTepy HLEpos Tpocaptnaas Tob THMATOS, elTa pedeis ExaTepov, as OpLNnTo pvyn Pepopevor, TO T poo ijKov av7@ [Epos velar dat. TOTE O€ TOU Aapetou TO mev oO pa KEKOG J7) LEVOV BacirtKes
Tpos TV batepa améa TELE, Tov 6€ dberdov
"EEdOpny eis Tous ETalpovs avéraPev.

XLIV. Avdtos 5€ peta THS akpwatotatns suva-pews eis Tpxaviav catéBawe Kai TeXayOUS Lowy KOATrOV OvK é€AUTTOVa pev TOD IlavTov davévta, yAuKUTEpoy b€ THS GAANS OaraTTNs, capes pev ovdey éxxe TvGécOat Trepit avTov, pardiaota Se elxage THS Matwtidos Ali“vyns avaKoTiy éEivat.
KaLTOL TOUS ‘YE puacKovs avopas ove érabe Ta-AnGEés, AMAA ToNNois eTETLY eum poo Gev THS “Ade-EavSpou oTpATELAs LoTopnKacly OTL Teccapwv
KOATIOV eloeXOvT@V TO THs €&W Jardcons Bopevotatos ovtos éatt, TO “Tpxkaviov wéXayos kal Kaomcov ood mpocayopevopevov.
"Evrav0a TOV BapBapov tives dm poadoKnTos
TEPLTUXOVTES TOS ayouct TOV ir Tov avrob TOV
3 Bouxedadrav NapBavovaw. o Sé HveyKev ov pe-
1 These details of the death of Dareius are not to be found in Arrian (Anab, iii. 21 fin.), but in Curtius (v. 13, 28) and Diodorus (xvii. 73).

my mother, wife, and children; to him, through thee, I give this right hand.” With these words he took the hand of Polystratus and then expired.! When Alexander came up, he was manifestly distressed by what had happened, and unfastening his own cloak threw it upon the body and covered it. And when, at a later time,? he found Bessus, he had him rent asunder. Two straight trees were bent together and a part of his body fastened to each ; then when each was released and sprang vigorously back, the part of the body that was attached to it followed after. Now, however, he sent the body of Dareius, laid out in royal state, to his mother,’ and admitted his brother, Exathres, into the number of his companions.

XLIV. He himself, however, with the flower of his army, marched on into Hyreania. Here he saw a gulf of the open sea which appeared to be as large as the Euxine, but was sweeter than the Mediter- ranean. He could get no clear information about it, but conjectured that in all probability it was a stag- nant overflow from the Palus Maeotis. And yet naturalists were well aware of the truth, and many years before Alexander’s expedition they had set forth that this was the most northerly of four gulfs which stretch inland from the outer sea, and was ealled indifferently the Hyrcanian or Caspian Sea.

Here some Barbarians unexpectedly fell in with those who were leading Alexander's horse, Bucephalas, and captured him. Alexander was angry

2 In the spring of 329 B.c. Cf. Arrian, Anab. ii. 30, 5;
NARS sie Uh
3 «To Persepolis, with orders that it should be buried in the royal sepulchre” (Arrian, Anab. iti. 22, 1).

Sa6

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

. > \ 7 / ’ / , Tpiws, AXAA KyHpUKA TEAS NmEi\ANTE TaVTAsS
a \ / nw
GATOKTEVELY PETA TEKVWOY KAL YUVaLK@Y, El TOV
? ‘mer a. , > ON \ \ \ (TWITOv avT@ pn avaTréurerav. émel b€ Kal TOV (TTOV AYOVTES KOV Kal TAS TOAELS eyyELplCovTes, éypycato ditavOpwrws Tact Kal Tov immou AUTpa Tots AaBovawy Edwxev.
XLV. ’Evteddev ets thv UapOtxnv avavtervéas
\ i“ A ? , \ \
Kal cyoNdlwy mpa@tov évedicato THv BapBapixny oTOAnY, elite BovAOMEVOS AUTOVY GUVOLKELODY TOTS
, , -
ETLVWpPLOLS VOmols, ws péeya mpos eEnwepwow
b] 4 \ Uf \ e U v9 ’ , avOpwrwv to auvnfes kai opoduroy, elt amo-Telpu Tis upeEelto THS mpooKuyyncews avTN Tos
; ' N N
Makedoct, cata pixpov avacyécbar tTHv éxd.ai-
’ “ \ \ b] , > \
2 tTnolv auTov Kat peTaBorny eOrGopévors. ov pany
/ \ ,
thy ye Mndcxny éxewwny mpoonxato mavtaract \ ee) , % yO\ 9 ,
BapBapixkny Kai adXoxoTov ovaay, ovdé avakuptdas ovd€ Kdvduv ovdé ttapay édaPer, adXra ev x “ a A “A péow tiva THS Ilepatets cat THs Mndcehs prEalb peevos eU TWS, ATUPoTepay pev exetvyns, TaAUTNS O€
a) N n
coBapwrépav ovoav. éxpito 5€ TO péev TpaToOV
~ t \ -~ 4
évtuyxavwv tots BapBapos Kat Tois ETAaLpots KAT’

= = A “A er b] f \ oikoVv, elTa TOiS TOAXO’S OUTS eFeAaVYMY Kal
, wn \ N A
3 ypnpaTilwy ewpaTo. Kal AVTNPOY peEV HY ToOIS
; / \ / \ \ » A
Maxedcot 70 Oéapa, tTHy dé GAXnV a’Tov Gavua\ f a ow A Covtes apeTnv @ovto deiy Evia TMY pos 1dOV7V al U w ef \ A
avT@ Kat do€av émerywpetv: G5 ye Tpos Atract TOLS
, - \
GArows EvayYos Tésevpa pey Els THY KYHUHDY 354

ALEXANDER, xuiv. 3-xLv. 3

beyond measure, and sent a herald threatening to put them all to the sword, together with their wives and children, if they did not send him back his horse. But when they came with the horse and also put their cities into his hands, he treated them all kindly, and gave a ransom for his horse to those who had captured him.

XLV. From thence he marched into Parthia,! where, during a respite from fighting, he first put on the barbaric dress, either from a desire to adapt him- self to the native customs, believing that community of race and custom goes far towards softening the hearts of men; or else this was an attempt to intro- duce the obeisance? among the Macedonians, by accustoming them little by little to put up with changes and alterations in his mode of life. How- ever, he did not adopt the famous Median fashion of dress, which was altogether barbaric and strange, nor did he assume trousers, or sleeved vest, or tiara, but carefully devised a fashion which was midway between the Persian and the Median, more modest than the one and more stately than the other. At first he wore this only in intercourse with the Bar- barians and with his companions at home, then people generally saw him riding forth or giving audience in this attire. The sicht — was offensive to the Mace- donians, but they admired his other high qualities and thought they ought to yield to him in some things which made for his pleasure or his fame. For, in addition to all his other hardships, he had recently been shot by an arrow in the leg below the knee, so ' In the early autumn of 330 B.c.

* Prostration on the ground before a great personage, a peculiarly Persian custom, 355

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

AaBwv, bf ob TO THs KEpKidos daTéov am oO pau-adev eerrece, NiO dé Trnyels Tadw els TOV

TpaXnrOY WOTE Kal Tats dypeowv ay uv UTrO-Spa pety Trapapeivacay OUK odyov Xpovor, OMws OUK €TAavETO XPOmEVOS EAUT@ TPOS TOUS KLIVOUVOUS
apevoas, adra kal TOV "Ope€d pray ts ToTa-[Lov, OY AUTOS WETO Tavaiv eval, Kal TOUS 2 «vas Tpeyrauevos elwtev émt oa tadtous éxaTtov, évo-YAOUpEVOS UTTO Stappoias.
XLVI. ’Evtadda 6é Mpos avTov adixér ba THD ‘Apafova ot TOAXOL heyouow, @V Kat Kreirapxos
éott xat Tlodverertos Kal “Ovnoixpttos Kal ‘Avtuyerns Kal “lotpos: “AptatoBovros 6€é Kal
Xapys o eloaryryedeus Kab IroAepaios Kal ‘Avtt-KrELOns Kal Pirov O OnBaios Kal Dirurrros) Ocayyerevs, mpos O€ TOUTOLS ‘Exatatos o ’Lpe-miptevs cal Dirurmos o Xadndevs Kab Aodpis O Ldap.os mAdcpa gaol yeyovévat TovTo. Kal paptupety AUTOLS EOLKEV “AneEav Epos. BLEEP yap aTAaVTA ypapav axptBas TOV pev Lavdny avT@ pynot di60var THY Guvyatepa Tpos yapov,
"A pabdvos dé ov pvnpoveves. éyeTae O€ TOANOIS
V povols ‘Ovyotkpitos vatepov 707 Bactrevovte Avaoipax Tov BiBriov 70 TETAPTOV avayiveoKELY, ev @ yeypanra mept THS “Apalovos: tov ouv Avaipaxov AT PEMA pediacavtTa Kai Tov, i pavar, “ TOTE Heavy éyw;” Tadta pev ovy av TLS OUTE ATLOT@Y WTTOV OUTE TLoOTEvWY paNdoOV
"AréEavdpov Oavpacete.
XLVIT. DoBovpevos 6€ trovs Maxedévas, wy ets Ta UTOAOLTA THS OTpaTElasS aTayopevcweot, TO peev GAO WAHGOS elace KaTAa ywpav, TaUs dé 356

ALEXANDER, xiv. 3-xtvir. 2

that splinters of the larger bone came out; and at another time he was smitten in the neck with a stone so severely that his eye-sight was clouded and remained so for some time. Nevertheless, he did not cease exposing himself to dangers without stint, nay, he actually crossed the river Orexartes (which he himself supposed to be the Tanais), put the Scythians to rout, and pursued them for a hundred furlongs, although he was suffering all the while from a diarrhoea.
XLVI. Here the queen of the Amazons came to see him, as most writers say, among whom are Cleitarchus, Polycleitus, Onesicritus, Antigenes, and Ister; but Aristobulus, Chares the royal usher, Ptolemy, Anticleides, Philo the Theban, and Philip of Theangela, besides Hecataeus of Fretria, Philip the Chalcidian, and Duris of Samos, say that this is a fiction. And it would seem that Alexander's testi- mony is in favour of their statement. For in a letter to Antipater which gives all the details minutely he says that the Scythian king offered him his daughter in marriage, but he makes no mention of the Amazon. And the story is told that many years afterwards Onesicritus was reading aloud to Lysimachus, who was now king, the fourth book of his history, in which was the tale of the Amazon, at which Lysi- machus smiled gently and said: " And where was I at the time?"' However, our belief or disbelief ot this story will neither increase nor diminish our admiration for Alexander.

ALVII. Fearing that his Macedonians might tire of the rest of his expedition, he left the greater part of thera in quarters, and while he had the best of apiotous éywr év "Tpxavia pe? éavtod, Sicpupt-ovs melous Kal Tpiaxytdious imets, mpocéBare, Neyov ws voy Lev AUTOS évUTTULOY TOV BapBdpwV

opwvtay, av dé povoy tacdtavtes tHv "Aciav atiwolw, émiOncopévwr evGus dorvep yuvarkiv.
ou pny adr amévat ye TOUS BovAopéevous edixe,} papTupapevos OTL THY oiKOUpLEVnY Tots Maxedoor KTWMUEVOS EYKATANEAELTTAL META TOV Hhirwv Kal Tov eXovTwy oTpaTEevelv. TavTa ayedov avTois ovopacw éy 7H mWpos 'Avtitatpov émicTodAH
yéypattat, Kal OTL TAVTA ELTOVTOS AVTOD TaVTES
éEéxpayov oot BovreTat THS olKoupéevns aye.
deEapéevwy 6€ TOUTwWY TINY Teipay oOUKéeTL HY Yaretov mpoayOnrat To mAHG0s, AANA padiws emnKkonrovl naev.
Otte 6) cal Thy diartav rt padXov wpoiou Te Tois émtywplois éavTor, éxetvad TE TMpoanye Tols Maxedovixois éOecw, avaxpace Kal Kowwvia parrov Ot evvolas KatactHoecOal Ta TPpaypaTa
vopifov Bla, pakpay amatpovtos avtov. 6&0 Kal Tplopuplovs taidas émtdreEdpevos éxédevce ypappata Te pavOavery "EXdXAnuika cal Maxedom-Kots arAos évtpedecOat, morXovs é€mtaTaTas KaTaoTHnaas. Kal ta mept "PwE&dvny épwtt pev empayOn, KaAnVY Kal wpatay év TLL YOpw Tapa
motov opletcar, edoge 5€ ovK avdpmooTa TOIS UTOKELMEVOLS ELVaL TpdypactW. éOappnoav yap
ot BapBapot tH Kolvwria Tov yapov, Kat Tov

1 épijxe Coraés’ correction of the épy nat of the MSS., adopted by Sint.; Bekker reads agiéva: ... %pn.

358

ALEXANDER, xtv.1. 1-4

them with him in Hyrcania, twenty thousand foot and three thousand horse, he addressed them, saying that at present they were seen by the Barbarians as in a dream, but that if they should merely throw Asia into confusion and then leave it they would be at- tacked by them as if they were women. However, he said, he allowed those who wished it to go away, calling them to witness that while he was winning the inhabited world for the Macedonians he had been left behind with his friends and those who were will- ing to continue the expedition. This is almost word for word what he wrote in his letter to Antipater, and he adds that after he had thus spoken all his hearers cried out to him to lead them to whatever part of the world he wished. After these had met his test of their loyalty, it was no longer a hard matter for the main body to be led along too, nay, they readily followed after.

Under these circumstances, too, he adapted his own mode of life still more to the customs of the country, and tried to bring these into closer agree- ment with Macedonian customs, thinking that by a mixture and community of practice w hich produced good will, rather than by force, his authority would be kept secure while he was far away. For this reason, too, he chose out thirty thousand boys and gave orders that they should learn the Greek language and be trained to use Macedonian weapons, appoint- ing many instructors for this work. His marriage to Roxana, whom he saw in her youthful beauty taking part in a dance at a banquet, was a love affair, and yet it was thought to harmonize well with the matters which ne had in hand. For the Barbarians were encouraged by the partnership into which the marriage brought them, and they were beyond

359

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

% IT& e - 4 ¢
AréEavdpov wtepnyarnaayv, 6TL cwppovéatatos
ral \ e ,
TEpl TAVTA yEeyov@s ovo€é HS povns nTTHON yuvat-KOS dvev vomov Ouyetv Vm éewenvev.
5 \ \ \ A / er a ,
Emel 6€ kat tov didwy éwpa TOV peEeyioTwV ‘Hdaiotiova peév ématvobyta Kat ovppeTaKxoo povU-pevov avto@, Kpatepov b€ Tois maTpiows EupevovTas
> 9 , \ ) , a , \ dz éxeivou pev éypnuatile tots BapSapois, dia
a / al /
tovrov 6€ Tots “EAAnot Kal tois Maxedoce xal
e \ \ b] 4 , N ye eh at/ ,
Odkws TOV pev epirer wartoTta, Tov O€ éTipa, vopi-

\ A > ON \ \ e , Cwv Kal rAéyov aet tov pev Hoarotiwva dira-réEavdpov eivat, Tov d€ Kpatepov didoBacirEéa.
\ N \ 2) / e / v /
640 Kal mpos AAANAOVS UTTOVAWS EXOVYTES TUVE/ ot be \ \ bd \
Kpovov qmoAAaKis. amak& o€ epi tHY ‘Ivdixnv
\ 3 a 9 i \ , \
Kat els Xelpas 7AOov oTacdpevar Ta Eihn, Kal
Tov piriwy éxatépo TapaBonlovvtwv TpoceAXdcas
, ¢ al
"AnréEavdpos érotdopes tov “Hdatotiwva davepas, EUTANKTOV KANOV KAL MALVOMEVOD, EL 1) OUViNT WW ¢ Sink 3) “ N > / 3 /
@s, éav tis avtov tov ‘AréEavdpov adérnrat, X \ wn n n
pndév éotiv: idta b€ Kai Tov Kpatepod mixpas
, \ \ bf \ \ s
Kabinpato. Kal cuvayaywv avtous Kal draddaEas
3 , N ” \ \ ” , 5
éemwpoce Tov Apywva Kat Tovs adXous Geovs, 7
pny partota pirety avOpwrwv atavtwy éxeivous*
a XN / ¥ , 3 a av d€ wad alicOntar dtapepopévous, aToKTEVELY
>] hk A ‘ b] , e e/ > \
audhotépous, } Tov apEdpevov. bOev baTteEpov ove
, ., nw b x nw \ 9 , mattovtTes eimrely TL ovde TPAEaL TPOS UAANAOUS NEVovTat.
\ e XLVIII. Dirwras 5é 0 Llappeviwvos aFiwpa
ry , , \
pev etyev év tots Maxedocu péya’ kai yap ava 19 / \ \ t f \
dpetos édoxes Kal KapteptKos elvat, Pirodwpos 5é 360

ALEXANDER, xivu. 4—xivii. t

measure fond of Alexander, because, most temperate of all men that he was in these matters, he would not consent to approach even the only woman who ever mastered his affections, without the sanction of law.

Moreover, when he saw that among his chiefest friends Hephaestion approved his course and joined him in changing his mode of life, while Craterus clung fast to his native ways, he employed the for- mer in his business with the Barbarians, the latter in that with the Greeks and Macedonians. And in general he showed most affection for Hephaestion, but most esteem for Craterus, thinking, and constantly saying, that Hephaestion was a friend of Alexander, but Craterus a friend of the king. For this reason, too, the men cherished a secret grudge against one another and often came into open collision. And once, on the Indian expedition, they actually drew their swords and closed with one another, and as the friends of each were coming to his aid, Alex- ander rode up and abused Hephaestion publicly, calling him a fool and a madman for not knowing that without Alexander's favour he was nothing; and in private he also sharply reproved Craterus. Then he brought them together and_ reconciled them, taking an oath by Ammon and the rest of the gods that he loved them most of all men; but that if he heard of their quarrelling again, he would kill them both, or at least the one who began the quarrel. Wherefore after this they neither did nor said anything to harm one another, not even in jest.

XLVIII. Now, Philotas, the son of Parmenio, had a high position among the Macedonians; for he was held to be valiant and able to endure hardship, and,

obTwm Kal irétatpos pet' avTov "Ar€Eavdpov ovoeis. A€yeTae your OTe TaV auInOwY TiVOS aitodvtos apyuptoy éxédevoe Sodvar: dracavtos
dé tod dtoixntod py exe, "Ti réyeus;" elmer,
"ovde TOT?) pLov Evers oveé (MET LOD; oyKe@ ¢ pov wartos Kal Paper movTOV Kal TH Tepl TO copa Geparreia Kab O1airy XpwpLevos éraxOéore-pov A «ar ididtyy, Kal TéTe 67 TO oepvOV Kab bynrov ovK EUPENOS, aX avev xapitov TO gONOiLKw Kal TAPAT ILD [LL LOUPLEVOS, vTowiay Kab
pOovov ¢ EaXEVs @OTE Kal Lappeviova TOTE elmreip pos avr ov" TO) mal, XElpav pot ytvov." ampos dé avtov "AdéEavdpov éx avy ToN\\NGY xXpovev eTUyXaVE dra BeBrnpEv05. OTe yap Ta Tepl
AapacKoy EANW NPNLAT OL Aapeiou vexn Devt os ev Kedexcta, TONA@V TMOMATOV Kopia Gevt cov EiS TO
otpatomedoy evpéeb n yuvaroy év Tots aX Wahwrors,
TO bev Les [ludvaior, eUT peTTes Oé TI oyu éxanelro dé" Avtuyov. TovTO éayvev 0 PidoTas:
oia 6é véos Tm pos Epopmevny Kal GUY OlvVM TOA prrorepa Kal OTPATLOTLKG Trappnovatouevos é €au-TOU Ta peyiota TOV epyov damrépatve Kal TOU
TAT POS, "AnreEavdpor dé pel paktov amekanrer 60

avUTOUS TO THS apxijs ovoua KapTOUMEVOD. TavTa
THIS yuva.tros expepovans 7 pos TLVA TOV ovrndav, éxeivou Oé, @S ElKOS, ™ pos ET Epon, mepihrOev els Kpatepov o Aoryos" Kat NaBwv TO yuvatov elonyarye Kpvpa T pos ‘An€eEavdpov. axovaas 6é exEelvos exehevoe port av ELS TAVTO TO Prora, Kal wav, 6 te dv é€xtrvOntat TovTov, Tpos avTOV avayyérrew Badifovear.
362

after Alexander himself, no one was so fond of giving and so fond of his comrades. At any rate, we are told that when one of his intimates asked him for some money, he ordered his steward to give it him, and when the steward said he had none to give, “What meanest thou?’ cried Philotas, “hast thou not even plate or clothing?” However, he displayed a pride of spirit, an abundance of wealth, and a care of the person and mode of life which were too offensive for a private man, and at this time par- ticularly his imitation of majesty and loftiness was not successful at all, but clumsy, spurious, and devoid of grace, so that he incurred suspicion and envy, and even Parmenio once said to him: “ My son, pray be less of a personage.” Moreover, for a very long time accusations against him had been brought to Alex- ander himself. For when Dareius had been defeated in Cilicia and the wealth of Damascus was taken, among the many prisoners brought into the camp there was found a young woman, born in Pydna, and comely to look upon; her name was Antigone. This woman Philotas got; and as a young man will often talk freely in vaunting and martial strain to his mistress and in his cups, he used to tell her that the greatest achievements were performed by himself and his father, and would call Alexander a stripling who through their efforts enjoyed the title of ruler. These words the woman would report to one of her acquaintances, and he, as was natural, to somebody else, until the story came round to Craterus, who took the girl and brought her secretly to Alexander. He, on hearing her story, ordered her to continue her meetings with Philotas and to come and report to him whatever she learned from her lover,

353

XLIX. ‘O pév otvy Birertas ériBovdrevopevos
OUTS HYyVoEL, KaL cuVHY TH AvTLyovN TOAAa Kal
Tpos opyny Kal peyadavyiayv pryuata Kal Noyous KATA TOU Bacthews ave Tn OElous T poiépevos. 0
dé ‘AdéEavopos, KaLTFEp KapTepas evoei Eews KaTa Tov Didwrou TpooTEr ovens, exapTEpnce o1wT 7h Kal KATET XEN, eite Oappav TH TLappeviavos €Uvoig pos auTov, elite d€dL0@5 THY dogav auTov Kal THY Suvapuy. év b€ T@ TOTE ypovw Maxedov
dvoma Nipyos, EK Xaraicrpas, em Boureveov “Ane-Eavdpo Nixopaxov Twa TOV vewD, ™ pos OV AUTOS

EPWTLKOS elXev, emt THY Koweviay THs trpaktews
Tapekdrel. Tov O€ py SeEapéevov, PpacavTos bé TaAdEAPO KeBarivw thy Tetpav, éd\Oav éxeivos
mpos Pidwrav exeevoey elo dye avTovs T pos ‘Ad€Eavdpoy @s Trept avayKatov eXovTas evTUYely
Kal peyadov. o 6€ Direras, 6 te &y mabav (adnXov yup €aTtv), ov maphyev AUTOUS, WS ™ pos anrow petfoce yuyvopevov Tov Bactréws. Kal ToUTO ls Emoinaev. ot 6€ KAP VTOWiay dn TOD
Piwrov Tpamopevor mpos Erepov Kat év éxetvou
TO ’AnreEdvdpe TporanGevres TP@TOV Mev TA TOD
Alpvou KATELTOV, eTELTA Taped) ora HOU
TOV Pirarav, OS GpEeNHoEtev AUTAV OLS evTUX Ov-TWV. Kal TOUTO 67) ohodpa Tapweuve Tov ’AXé-Eavdpov' nai Tov TweudOevtos emt tov Aipvov, ws
7] PUVETO cuhhapSavopevos, ATOKTELVAVTOS AUTOD, ETL pardov duerapayOn, Tov eAeYX OV extrepevyevar THS ém@tBovAns vopilwr. Kal mixpas Exwv 693

1 In the late autumn of 330 B.o,

XLIX. Now, Philotas was ignorant of the plot thus laid against him, and in his frequent interviews with Antigone would utter many angry and boastful speeches and many improper words against the king. But Alexander, although strong testimony against Philotas came to his ears, endured in silence and restrained himself, either because he had confidence in Parmenio’s good will towards him, or because he feared the reputation and power of father and son. Meanwhile, however, a Macedonian named Limnus, from Chalaestra, conspired against Alexander’s life, and invited Nicomachus, one of the young men, whose lover he was, to take part with him in the undertaking. _Nicomachus would not accept the invitation, but told his brother Cebalinus of the attempt, and he, going to Philotas, ordered him to conduct them into the presence of Alexander, on the ground that there were matters of great import- ance about which they must see him. But Philotas, for whatever reason (and the reason is not known), would not conduct them in, alleging that the king was engaged on other matters of more importance. And he refused their request twice. They now be- came suspicious of Philotas and applied to someone else, by whom they were brought before Alexander. In the first place they told him about the plot of Limnus, and then threw out veiled insinuations against Philotas, on the ground that he had ne- glected their petitions on two occasions. This greatly incensed Alexander; and when he found that Lim- nus had defended himself against arrest and had therefore been killed by the man sent to fetch him, he was still more disturbed in mind, thinking that the proof of the plot had escaped him. And since

T pos TOV Pirwrav éreaTadoaTo TOUS Taal pLcovvTas avTov, 60 pavepas héyovtas ws padupia TOD Bacrrews ein Aippoy olopevou, Nadatotpaiov avO pwrroy, emixerpiioar TOLMNLATL TOTOUT@ Kal auTov" GXNG TOUTOV meV UmnpeTny elvat, padrov dé 6pyavov amo peiCovos apyns aprépevor, ev éxelvous d€ THY émuBovrnyv EntynTéov ols padtoTa Tavta ravddve cuvéfEepe. TotovTots Royots Kal UTovoials avaTreTadcavTOS Ta OTA TOV Bactréus émiryov Hon pupias Kata Tod Pidwtov dLaBoras.
éx ToUTOU OE curr pbeis aveKpivero, TOV ETALDWP eperT@Tav tats Bacavots, "AneEdvpou dé KaTa-KOVOVTOS efw0ev auraias TApareTaperns OTE én Kai hac avTov etreiy, oixTpas Kal Tareas
tov Pirwtov dwvas Kat Senoers Tois tept Tov
'Hoatotiwva tpocdépovtos: " ObTw 67 paraxos
ov, @ Pihota, Kai avavdpos émeyetpets Tpdypact TyALKOUTOIS;" aTroOavorTos bé TOU PirwTov Kal Hlappeviwva tréprras ebtOvs els Mndiav avetrer, dvépa. TONNe fev Diirre ovykaTepyac auevor, p-ovov dé 7) pideota Tov mpecButépwv dirov
"Ad€Eavdpov ELS 'Aciav eFopmnjoavra dia Bijvas, T pea d€ viv avs EaVEV, ETL THS TTPATLAS duo pev emtdovta Tporepoy aToVavovTas, TO O€ TPLT@ ovvavatpeOevTa.
Tatra mpaxGévra TodXols TOV pihov doBepov
érroinae tov AndéEavdpov, pddtota dé 'Avrima-Tew Kal mpos AitwXovs Ereue xptha TicTeLs didovs Kat AauBdavoer. éfoBodvto yap *AXé-Eavdpov Attwrot da THY Olviad@v avactacw, iv

1 Of. Arrian, Anab. iii. 26.

he felt bitter towards Philotas he drew to himself those who had long hated the man, and they now said openly that the king took things too easily when he supposed that Limnus, a man of Chalaestra, had set his hand to a deed of so great daring on his own account ; nay, they said, he was only an assistant, or rather an instrument sent forth by a higher power, and enquiry into the plot should be made in those quarters where there was most interest in having it concealed. After the king had once given ear to such speeches and suspicions, the enemies of Philotas brought up countless accusations against him. Consequently he was arrested and put to the question, the companions of the king standing by at the torture, while Alexander himself listened behind a stretch of tapestry. Here, as we are told, on hearing Philotas beset Hephaestion with abject and _ pitiful cries and supplications, he said: "So faint-hearted as thou art, Philotas, and so unmanly, couldst thou have set hand to so great an undertaking?” After Philotas had been put to death, Alexander sent at once into Media and dispatched Parmenio also, a man whose achievements with Philip had been many, and who was the only one of Alexander’s older friends, or the principal one, to urge his crossing into Asia, and who, of the three sons that were his, had seen two killed on the expedition before this, and was now put to death along with the third.!

These actions made Alexander an object of fear to many of his friends, and particularly to Antipater, who sent secretly to the Aetolians and entered into an alliance with them. For the Aetolians also were in fear of Alexander, because they had destr oyed the city of the Oeniadae, and because Alexander, on

, a A > > N
avOduevos ove Olviadoy bn traidas, adr avTov
3 4 , 3 nn
éemOnaey diknv Aitwrots.
A / x
L. OU moAA@ b€ VatEepoy cuvnvéexXOy Kal Ta \ ta “ ef \ e a / A mept Kyeitov, ov tw pev amdos Tudopevolts TOY
\ 4 , , f
Kata Pidkwtay aypiwrepa’ OY pévTOL ouUVTL-
f ?? \ s
Gévres Aya Kal THY alTiay Kal TOY KaLpOY, OVK
D N , 3 \ / \ “A e f aTo yvouns, dra OvoTUXLa TLV TAVTA EUpLoKo-4 A , > N \ U
pev TeTpaypeva TOD Bactdéws, opyny Kat peOnv
, n bd 4 , f
mpodaci Te Knreitov datpore tmapavyortos.
> s \ e © , ’ if eT émpaydn dé oUTws. KOov TIVES OTWpav ENXANM-‘ ’ N 4 “a “ la € \
Kkny amo Gadaucaons TO Bactrel KomtfovtTes. Oo O€
4 \ ? \ \ N , > , \
Gavpacas THY UkpNY KaL TO KaNXOS EXadEL TOV
a) La) \ A ¢
Kvytetrov, éridetEut cal petadovvat Bovropevos. o \ , \ SS b) \ N \ / 3 / dé Ovwy peév éTUyyavev, adels 6é THY Avciav éBa-
, A 66e- Kal Tpla TwOVY KaTeoTELaLéEVwWY TpOBaTwV
A 4 \ e

émnxorovOncevy avtT@. muGopevos d€ 0 BactrEus
’ A A , > 4 \
avexowvouTo Tois pavteow Apictavdp@ Kai Kreo-
A \
pavre. TO Adxkwr. dnodvtwy b€ Tovnpov eivat ‘ ral a 3 \ ,
TO onpetov, ExéXevoev ExOvoacGar KaTa TuYOS
e \ a , \ N See e / , uTep tov KrXettov. Kat yap autos npépa TpiTn \ \ iA bf “a v ” / \
KaTa Tous Umvous tdety Oiwv atoTrov: dSo—at yap ra 4 A \ A sf eA
avtw Tov KAettoy peta Tov Ilappevriwvos vidy ev
, € , ty , e , péracw ipatiows KabeCecPat, TeOvnxoTwy atrav-
> \ ” © a a > ,
Tov. ov pny épGacey o Krettos éxduadpevos,
> 3 Or b] \ ‘ 6 a e f e
arr evOus emt TO Seitvoyv Ke, TeAvKOTOS TOU
, / / \ A
Baciréws AtocKovpots. mwotou dé veavKod cup-Ya / / ¢
payevtos noeTo Troijpata IIpaviyou tives, ws 5é 4 ’ \ hac éviot, lltepiwvos, es Tovs otTpatnycus Te-learning of it, had said that it would not be the sons of the Oeneadae, but he himself who would punish the Aetolians.

L. Not long afterwards came the affair of Cleitus,} which those who simply learn the immediate circuimn- stances will think more savage than that of Philotas ; if we take into consideration, however, alike the cause and the time, we find that it did not happen of set purpose, but through some misfortune of the king, whose anger and intoxication furnished occasion for the evil genius of Cleitus. It happened on this wise. Some people came bringing Greek fruit to the king from the sea-board. He admired its per- fection and beauty and called Cleitus, wishing to show it to him and share it with him. It chanced that Cleitus was sacrificing, but he gave up the sacrifice and came; and three of the sheep on which libations had already been poured came following after him. When the king learned of this cireum- stance, he imparted it to his soothsayers, Aristander and Cleomantis the Lacedaemonian. Then, on their telling him that the omen was bad, he ordered them to sacrifice in all haste for the safety of Cleitus. For he himself, two days before this, had seen a strange vision in his sleep; he thought he saw Cleitus sitting with the sons of Parmenio in black robes, and all were dead. However, Cleitus did not finish his sacrifice, but came at once to the supper of the king, who had sacrificed to the Dioscuri. After boisterous drinking was under way, verses were sung which had been composed by a certain Pranichus, or, as some say, Pierio, to shame and ridicule the

1 During the campaign of 328 B.c., at Sainarkand, in Sogdiana. Cf. Arrian, Anab. iv. 8 f.

TOUNPEVA 7 TOUS évaryXos NTT MEVOUS UTo TaV Bap-Bapov ém' aiaxuvn Kat yedore. TOV 6€ T peo BuTépov duo xeparvovtov Kat NowopovvT@v TOV
TE TOLnT ny Kal TOV adovta, TOU b¢ 'AneEdv6pov
Kal TOV TEL AUTOV ydéws GKPOWMEVOY Kat NEéyeELY
KEAEVOVTOV, O Kretros 0" peO veo Kat poet TPAXUS ov opyny Kal avdabys 7 nyavdK TEL padora, dackwv ov Kaas ev BapPapos Kab Tone pious vB piver Bar Maxecovas TOAD Bertiovas Tav yeavr, el Kal dua tuxig KEXPNVTAL. pycavros dé TOU 'Aref avopov TOV Kyretrov AUTO ouvnyopelv duo TUYLay aropaivovTa THY devhtay, € eTMAavacTas O Kreitros, "Abry [LEVTOL OE, ELTrEV, " 1) devhia TOV éx Gedy 0n TO mB pibarou Eider TOV va@Tov EKTPETOVTA meplerroinae, Kat TO Maxedovev ai-hare Kab TOIS TpAavmacL TOUTOLS eyevou THALKODTOS @ote "Appwvt cavtov eiomoleiy amretTTapeEVvos Dirirtov."
LI. TapofvvGels otv o 'AXEéEavEpos, "°H tad-
Ta, elmev, ""@ Kkaxkn Kedardy, ov rept nudov
EXAOTOTE Leyov Kai dtactacialwyv Maxedovas Xalpryo ev vous ters; 7 NNN once viv," Eby,
a Katpoper, "AnréEavOpe, Towavra TEAM TOV TOVWD KopFopievoe, paKkaptCouev 5€ Tovs 1}6n TeOvNKOTAS apiv émidety Mndixais paBdors Eatvopévous Maxe-dovas, Kab epody deouevous iva T@ Bacirel mpooeOwpev. Toate, TOU Kreérou Moppnola-Comevou Kal TOY TrEpl 'Ar<Eavdpov avTavig TAape-YuV Kab AoSopouvTwy QAUTOV, OL _mpeo BuTEpar
KATEXELV ET ELPOVTO TOV Jopuov. Q dé "AréFav-Spos aTootpadels mpos Fevodoyov tov Kapoiavov
S10

69:

generals who had lately been defeated by the Bar- barians. The older guests were annoyed at this and railed at both the poet and the singer, but Alexander and those about him listened with delight and bade the singer go on. Then Cleitus, who was already drunk and naturally of a harsh temper and wilful, was more than ever vexed, and insisted that it was not well done, when among Barbarians and enemies, to insult Macedonians who were far better men than those who laughed at them, even though they had met with misfortune. And when Alexander de- clared that Cleitus was pleading his own cause when he gave cowardice the name of misfortune, Cleitus sprang to his feet and said: “It was this cowardice of mine, however, that saved thy life, god-born as thou art, when thou wast already turning thy back upon the spear of Spithridates ;! and it is by the blood of Macedonians, and by these wounds, that thou art become so great as to disown Philip and make thyself son to Ammon.” ?

LI. Thoroughly incensed, then, Alexander said : ‘Base fellow, dost thou think to speak thus of me at all times, and to raise faction among Macedonians, with impunity?” “Nay,” said Cleitus, ‘not even now do we enjoy impunity, since such are the rewards we get for our toils ; and we pronounce those happy who are already dead, and did not live to see us Macedonians thrashed with Median rods, or begging Persians in order to get audience with our king.” So spake Cleitus in all boldness, and those about Alexander sprang up to confront him and reviled him, while the elder men tried to quell the tumult. Then Alexander, turning to Xenodochus of Cardia

' Cf. chapter xvi. 5. 2 Cf. chapters xxvii. f.

> ae ~

kal tov Korodwviov ‘Aptéptov, Od Soxodow,” > cs Sf a e fa) PY > a M 80 e¢ eitrev, “ vuty ot “EXAnves ev tots Maxedoow ado-3 / e i - be) A \ , mep €v Onptows Hteor TepiTaTetv; Tov de Krei-N v > \ > i ray f i
TOU [Ln ELKOVTOS, AAA Els weoov a BoureTat A€yeLV
\ > / , A \ a > \ tov AréEavépov KeXevorTos, pn Karelv eri
detmrvov avopas érevOépous Kat Tappyotav eyov-Tas, GvAXa peTa BapBapev chy Kai dvdparrooan, ot THY Ilepotxny Cwvny Kai tov dtddXevKOV avTOd
LT@VvA T poo kuyijaovaw, OUKETL Pépov THY opyny
‘Ad€Eavdpos paprov Tapakeéevovy évi Barov ETALGEY AUTOY Kal TO ey xerplo.ov éCntet. Tav é Twp“aTopvrAaKwy évos “Aptatopavouvs POacavTos
e / \ fal 4 , AN
uderécGat, Kal TOY AAXwWY TEpLEYoVTwWY Kai beo-

/ a péevov, avatnoyjaas aveSca Maxedoucti carov Tous uTacTLaTUs (ToUTO O€ HY GUUBorOV JopuBou peeyarou), Kal Tov carmiyKxTHy éxéXevTe oNMAI-vel, KaL TUE ETatoev ws StaTpiBovtTa Kal pn Bovropevov. ovtos pév ody VaoTepov evdoxipnaey
an a \ ,
@S TOU LN cuvtapaxOjvas TO oT paToTedov ALTLO-TATOS YEVOMEVOS. Tov 6€ Kr«irov ody Udiepevov ol piror ports éEewoay TOU «rdpavos.
‘O 6é kat addras Ovpas avOis clone, para odktywpws Kat Opacéws Evpiioou ta é€& *Avdpopayns tapPeia Tadta Tepatvev:
cae 3 al
oiuot, KAO “EXAGS’ ws KAKaS voutCeTat. ouTw 87) AaBov mapa TLVOS TOD Sopudopev ‘ARE-Eavdpos ax env AT AVT@VTA, Tov Krétrov avt@ Kal TapdyovTa To TPO THS Ovpas mrapaxd dupa dueXauvet. mecovtos b6€ peTa oTevaypov Kal 4 Verse 683 (Kirchhoff).

and Artemius of Colophon, said : “ Do not the Greeks appear to you to walk about among Macedonians like demi-gods among wild beasts?” Clcitus, however, would not yield, but called on Alexander to speak out freely what he wished to say, or else not to invite to supper men who were free and spoke their minds, but to live with Barbarians and slaves, who would do obeisance to his white tunic and Persian girdle. Then Alexander, no longer able to restrain his anger. threw one of the apples that lay on the table at Cleitus and hit him, and began looking about for his sword. But one of his body-guards, Aristophanes, conveyed it away before he could lay hands on it, and the rest surrounded him and begged him to desist, whereupon he sprang to his feet and called out in Macedonian speech a summons to his corps of guards (and this was a sign of great disturbance), and ordered the trumpeter to sound, and smote him with his fist because he hesitated and was unwilling to do so. This man, then, was afterwards held in high esteem on the ground that it was due to him more than to any one else that the camp was not thrown into commotion. But Cleitus would not give in, and with much ado his friends pushed him out of the banquet-hall.

He tried to come in again, however, by another door, very boldly and contemptuously reciting these iambics from the “ Andromache” of Euripides! :
« Alas! in Hellas what an evil government ! es

And so, at last, Alexander seized a spear from one of his guards, met Cleitus as he was drawing aside the curtain before the door, and ran him through. No sooner had Cleitus fallen with a roar and a groan

Bpvxijpatos evOus ab iev O Oupos avtov. Kal EVO [LEVOS. Tap €avT@ Kal Tous pirous Lowy ape vous ear Oras Axvoac Gat pev éx Tod vex pou THY ax uny épOace, matcat & éavTov opunoas Tapa Tov Tpaxnrov éemeaxeOn, TOV T@paTopurAaKov
TAS Xelpas avToo LaBovtwy Kal TO capa Bra
TOL pEVEYKOVT OY els TOY Odrapov.
LIT. ’Ezret 66 tnv te vinta Kaka@s KKatwy 617)- veyKe Kal THY ériovcay nuépay dn TO Boav Kal Opnvety ameipnxeas avavoos éxerto, Bapets avapépwv otevaypous, deicavTes of hidoe THY atroauoTnow elonrGov Bia. Kal TOY péev AAdwY Ov TpoaleTo Tovs Noyous, Apiotavdpou Oé Tov pdv-TEMS VTOMLLVHOKOVTOS avTOY THY TE Ori iv
elde rept Tov Krettov, cal TO onpetov, ws 87
Tara Kabepappevov TOUT TOV, edokev évdiovae.
520 Kahvuo Gevny TE TOV prrocopov Tapelanyaryor, ‘Apia toré)ous | OiKEtoV OVTA, Kal Tov "AB-Onpityy ‘Ava£apxov. Ov Karr\odevns pev OKs
émetpaTo Kal TPaws, UTOSvOpLEVOS TO oye | Kal
Tepuiov ahUT OS, AaBerbar TOU mabous, o 6€ ‘Ardfapxos idtav Tiva TOPEVOMEVOS é& apxijs odov év prrocogia, kal dofav eiAndas UTEpoYias Kal odtywplas TOV cuvGor, evus etc eGov aveBonoev: “ Ovbtos éotwy “Are Eavopos, els OV 77 oLKou-pévn vov amroBréTret: o Oé Eppemrat KNaLwv OoTEP
cvdpam bor, avO pwrray vopon | Kal poyov Sedorx@s, ois avTov tmpoonKer vopov eivas kal bpov Tov Sixatwy, émeimep apxKew Kal Kpatelv vevixyxey, GNNG pty SovrAEvELY UTO KEVAS OOENS KEKpAaTHMEVOD.
374

695

ALEXANDER, Lr, 6-t11. 3

than the king’s anger departed from him. And when he was come to himself and beheld his friends standing speechless, he drew the spear from the dead body and would have dashed it into his own throat, had not his body-guards prevented this by seizing his hands and carrying him by force to his chamber.

LIT. Here he spent the night and the following day in bitter lamentations, and at last lay speechless, worn out with his cries and wailing, heaving deep groans. Then his friends, alarmed at his silence, forced their way in. To what the others said he would pay no attention, but when Aristander the seer reminded him of the vision he had seen con- cerning Cleitus, and of the omen,! assuring him that all this had long ago been decreed by fate, he seemed to be less obdurate. Therefore they brought in to him Callisthenes the philosopher, who was a relative of Aristotle, and Anaxarchus of Abdera. Of these, Callisthenes tried by considerate and gentle methods to alleviate the king's suffering, employing insinuation and circumlocution so as to avoid giving pain; but Anaxarchus, who had always taken a path of his own in philosophy, and had acquired a reputation for despising and slighting his associates, shouted out as soon as he came in: ''Here is Alexander, to whom the whole world is now looking ; but he lies on the floor weeping like a slave, in fear of the law and the censure of men, unto whom he himself should be a law and a measure of justice, since he has conquered the right to rule and mastery, instead of submitting like a slave to the mastery of a vain opinion. Knowest

1 Of, chapter 1. 2 f.
375
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 ovK olc0a," elev, § 'Ore Thy Ateny evel m dpedpov
o Zevs Kal thy Cémy, iva may TO mpax ev UTO TOU KpatoovTos Oeperov 7) 7" Kal dixatov;" TOLOUTOLS tial ovyors Xpnoapevos i) "Avaapxos TO pev
mwavos exouglae TOU Baciréos, TO O€ 7005 eis TONG Xauvorepov Kal TAPAVOpLOTEpOV émroinoen, auTOV b¢ Satpovios é év7/ppLoce, Kat Tob Kadvuode-VOUS THY Outrdiav, ode AAXws éTivaply Sta TO avoTnpov ovcay, mpotdtéBare.
Aéyetat € Tote Tapa Setrvoy UTEP WPaY Kal Kpdoews TOU TEPLEXOVTOS Aoyor OVT@V, TOV Kan.
Aco Bevny, peTEXOVTA dofns TOUS Aéyouor TAKEL
padrov elvat puxpa Kal dua xetpepa TOV "EXAn-VLK@Y, EVAYTLOUMEVOU TOU "Avakdpxou Kab pe AoveEerKoUVTOS, elmeity? "'AXXA pny avaryen col TavtTa éxelvav oworoyely YruxpoTepa® au yap éxet
pev ev tpiBwve dteyetpates, evtavla dé Tpets ém-BeBAnpEvos damibas KATAKELOAL. TOV bev ovV
"Avakapxov Kati TovTO MpooTapatuve.
LILI. Tovs dé adrovus copia Tas Kat KohaKas 0 Karhio evs éXUTrEL orrovdalopevos pey UT TOY véwy Oa Tov NOYOP, ovx AT TOV ¢ TOLsS mpeaBurepos GpecKoy 64a Tov Biov, €UTAKTOV ovTa Kal oepvov Kal avtapKn, Kal BeBatovyta THY Aeryopéevny THS aroonpias Tpopact, ¢ OTL TOUS ToNTas

Kataryayety Kab KaToLKio al Tad THY TaTpioa
Prhori movpevos aveBn ™ pos ‘Ar€Eavdpov. po-VOUJLEVOS dé Ota THY dofav € Early & kat cal avTov
Tots OtaBdrrovot Tapetye, Tas Te KANTELS TA
1 Olynthus, which had been destroyed by Philip in 347 B.c, 370
ALEXANDER, tl. 4-Li1. 2

thou not," said he, "that Zeus has Justice and Law seated beside him, in order that everything that is done by the master of the world may be lawful and just?" By using some such arguments as these Anaxarchus succeeded in lightening the suffering of the king, it is true, but rendered his disposition in many ways more vainglorious and lawless; he also made himself wonderfully liked by the king, and brought the intercourse of Callisthenes with him, which had always been unpleasant because of the man's austerity, into additional disfavour.

It is said that once at supper the canversation turned upon seasons and weather, and that Callis-thenes, who held with those who maintain that it is more cold and wintry there than in Greece, was stoutly opposed by Anaxarchus, whereupon he said : "You surely must admit that it is colder here than there; for there you used to go about in winter in a cloak merely, but here you recline at table with three rugs thrown over you." Of course this also added to the irritation of Anaxarchus.

LIII. Moreover, the other sophists and flatterers in the train of Alexander were annoyed to see Callisthenes eagerly courted by the young men on account of his eloquence, and no less pleasing to the older men on account of his mode of life, which was well-ordered, dignified, and independent, and confirmed the reason given for his sojourn abroad, namely, that he had gone to Alexander from an ardent desire to restore his fellow-citizens to their homes and re-people his native city. And besides being envied on account of his reputation, be also at times by his own conduct furnished material for his detractors, rejecting invitations for the most

377

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ToAAa btmPovpevos, Ev TE TH Guvetvar BapvTnTs
Kal owwin SoK@V ovK éeTraLvEiy OvlE apécKxedOat Tots yiwopevots, BaTE Kat Tov "AéEavopov elTeiv éT auto"
a / ee 1. e oO - [Low COPLITHV, OD TLS OVD AUT® Godos.
Aéyeta 0€ ToTe TOAN@Y TapaKexAnLEeVvwY eri
a) / al

TO O€lmvov ératvéecar KerNevabels etl Tod TOTN-/ 4 e J ef > A ptov Maxedovas 0 Kadduobévns obtas evpojoat
N\ / ev 4 ray
Tpos THY vToVEcLY WaTE avicTapévous KpoTeEtV
N 4 ‘ , > > > , b] ad
Kal Barre TOUS aT epavous em’ avrov' eimelp
ovv TOV ‘AdEavdpov OTt, Kat Evpimidnv, tov AaBovta TV NOYywV
\ bd \ by 4‘ yy * /
kahas apoppas ou mév epyov ev NEyeLy “CANN EvdetEat,” ddvar, “tv abtov dvvamy nuty Katnyopnaas Maxedover, va nal Bertious yévavTat pabovtes a TAIN MLUENOVGLY. oUt 57)
TOV avdpa Tpos Tv Tardwpoiav T PATO LevoV
TONG. mappnovacacbat KaTa TOV Makedover,
Kal THY EXAqueeny OTA AiTiaV anopivavta
THS yevopevns mept Pidimmov av&jncews Kal duvapews EeLTrELy"
\

b] \ / e U ” a év d€ Otyootacin Kal 0 TayKaKos éXAaYE TLLAS
) ’ @ ‘ \ \ > / A A
ep @ mikpov Kal Bapv éyyevécOat picos Tots Maxedoat, cat tov ’“AréEavdpor eiteiy as od TAS 1 An iambic trimeter from an unkuown play of Euripides (Nauck, 7'rag. Graec. Frag.? p. 652).

part, and when he did go into company, by his gravity and silence making it appear that he disapproved or disliked what was going on, so that even Alexander said in allusion to him :—
“ T hate a wise man even to himself unwise.’ !

It is said, moreover, that once when a large company had been invited to the king’s supper, Callisthenes was bidden, when the cup came to him, to speak in praise of the Macedonians, and was so successful on the theme that the guests rose up to applaud him and threw their garlands at him; whereupon Alexander said that, in the language of

Euripides, when a man has for his words
‘‘A noble subject, it is easy to speak well;” ?

“But show us the power of your eloquence,” said he, “by a denunciation of the Macedonians, that they may become even better by learning their faults.” And so Callisthenes began his palinode, and spoke long and boldly in denunciation of the Macedonians, and after showing that faction among the Greeks was the cause of the increase of Philip’s power, added :
* But in a time of sedition, the base man too is in honour.” 3
This gave the Macedonians a stern and bitter hatred of him, and Alexander declared that Callisthenes

2 Bacchae, 260 (Kirchhoff).
3 A proverb in hexameter verse, sometimes attributed to Callimachus. Cf. the Nicius, xi. 3; Morals, p. 479 a.
S79

PLUPTARCH S LIVES

dewvoTnTos 0 KaddtoGévys, addXa THs SucpeEveias Ul la
Maxedoow amodekw bédwxe.
LIV. Tatra pev ody o “Eppermos pynoe tov
> , nw 4, nw 3
avayvootny tov KadducOévouvs XtpotBov ’Aptototéve Sinyeiabat, Tov dé Kadrucbévny ovvévta
N > / n“ , \ A \
Thy addoTpLOTHTA TOV Baciréws Sis 7 Tpls ATLOVTA TPOS AUTOY ELTrEty
id \
KaTOave xat Ilatpoxdos, bmep oéo ToAXov
/
ALELWOV.
ov havrws ovv evTety éovKev) ‘AptatoteAns ¢ OTL Kadnduadevns oy pev mV Suvaros Kal peyas, voov dé OvK elyev. Garda THD ¥é TpooKuynow ia XUpOs AT WT ALEVOS Kal prrocopes, Kab “ovos
év havep@ dvehOwv a Kptdha Tavtes ot BéXtiCTOL Kal mpecBuTatot ron Maxedovav yyavaxtour, TOUS pev “EXAnvas ala Xvvns amnrrake peyanrys, Kal peiCovos “AréEavopor, aToTpéewas THY Tpoa-KUUNOLY, autov 6é UT ONETED, éxBidcacbar Soxav pLarXov 7 Teta at Tov Bactréa.

Xapns dé 0 Metuanvatos dnote Tov “AréEavdpov
ev TO cUmTOTiD miovTa piddrnv Tm poreivat tev TOV pido" Tov dé beEdpevov Tpos éoTtiav ava-OTHVal Kab TeovTa TpooKuvijoar TpWTOV, ELTA hiijoat Tov ‘AnréEavd por, Kab KaTaKrd iva.
TavTwy dé TOUTO TOLOULT@Y epeijs TOV Kadnruclévny XNaBovTa TY pearyy, ov MpocéyovTos TOU Bacthéos, AXA ‘Hdatotiove Tpocdiaheyopevov, TLovTa Tpoctévat dirnaovta, Anuntpiov sé tov
1 Achilles to Hector, Iliad, xxi. 107.
380 69)

ALEXANDER, uit. 5-ttv. 4

had given a proof, not of his eloquence, but of his ill-will towards the Macedonians.

LIV. This, then, according to Hermippus, is the story which Stroebus, the slave who read aloud for Callisthenes, told to Aristotle, and he says that when Callisthenes was aware of the alienation of the king, twice or thrice, as he was going away from him, he recited the verse :

‘Dead is also Patroclus, a man far braver than thou art. +

What Aristotle said, then, would seem to have been no idle verdict, namely, that Callisthenes showed great ability as a speaker, but lacked common sense. But in the matter of the obeisance, at least, by refusing sturdily and like a philosopher to perform the act, and by standing forth alone and rehearsing in public the reasons for the indignation which all the oldest and best of the Macedonians cherished in secret, he delivered the Greeks from a great dis- grace, and Alexander from a greater, by leading him not to insist upon the obeisance ; but he destroyed himself, because he was thought to use force rather than persuasion with the king.

Chares of Mitylene says that once at a banquet Alexander, after drinking, handed the cup to one of his friends, and he, on receiving it, rose up so as to face the household shrine, and when he had drunk, first made obeisance to Alexander, then kissed him, and then resumed his place upon the couch. As all the guests were doing this in turn, Callisthenes took the cup, the king not paying attention, but conversing with Hephaestion, and after he had drunk went towards the king to kiss him; but

381

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

mpocovounatomevov Deldwvos etmovtos, “OQ Baa-

Nev, wy Hirnons ovTos yap ae povos ov Tpoc-EKUUITE, StakXivat TO pihnua TOV ‘AnreEavdpov, Tov 6é Karnuo bevy peya pbeyEdwevov ELTTELD “ Dirnuate Tolvuv éhacaov EXOV AT etl.
LV. Totavrns vmoyevopévns ddrXotpLoTyTOS mpa@tov pev ‘Hdarotiwy émiateveTo Néeywv Gtt our enevos 7 pos AUTOV O Karntodevns TpooKUV-oat spevoaito THY omoroyiay ETELTA Avaipaxor Kal “Aqveves émepvovTo pacKovtes Teptievat TOV copicTny ws emt KATANVGEL Tupavvioos peya ppovobvta, Kal o YT PENX EL T pos aUTOV TA poeipaxa Kab Te ple ELV Os povoy éhevd epov év ToT avTAals pupidot. 610 Kal TOV TreEpl ‘Epporaov émtBov-Aevcdvtwov To "AreEavdpw Kal davepOv yevo-pévwv edokav adnOéowv Gpota Katnyopety ot dtaBddXrovtes, OS TH pwev TpoBadovtt TAS av
b ¢ / v > nN b) evdobotatos YEVOLTO avO pws, evmrev, “© Ap amro-Kreivy TOV évdoforatov,” Tov 6é Eppordaov emt THV m paw mapogvvev exeheve ry) deduevar Thy Xpua hy KALVNDY, andra pevnpeovevety OTL Kal vooouvTe
Kal TLTPWOT KOpEVD T POT ela wv avAparg. KaLTOL Tov Tept KE pyoraoy ovdeis ovde did THS eaxaTys avayKns ToD Kaadrcodévous KATELTEV. GANG Ka
"AreEavdpos avTos evOus Kpatep@ ypadwrv Kat
"AtTadrw Kal “AdKéTa nat TOUS Taisas Bacavi-Sopévous OMmOAOYELY ws avtot TavTa mpafevar, adXos dé ovdeis cuverdein. vatepov b€ ypadwv ampos “Avtitatpov cat tov Karrobévny cuver-1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. iv. 12.
2 The conspiracy of the pages (Arrian, Anab. iv. 13).
382

ALEXANDER, tiv. 4-Lv. 3

Demetrius, surnamed Pheido, cried: “O King, do not accept his kiss, for he alone has not done thee obeisance.” So Alexander declined the kiss, at which Callisthenes exclaimed in a loud voice: “ Well, then, I'll go away the poorer by a kiss.”’ !

LV. The king having been thus alienated, in the first place, Hephaestion found credence for his story that Callisthenes had promised him to make obeisance to the king and then had been false to his agree- ment. Again, men like Lysimachus and Hagnon persisted in saying that the sophist went about with lofty thoughts as if bent on abolishing a tyranny, and that the young men flocked to him and fol- lowed him about as if he were the only freeman among so many tens of thousands. For this reason also, when the conspiracy of Hermolatis and his associates 2 against Alexander was discovered, it was thought that the accusations of his detractors had an air of probability. They said, namely, that when Hermolaiis put the question to him how he might become a most illustrious man, Callisthenes said: “ By killing the most illustrious;”’ and that in in- citing Hermolaiis to the deed he bade him have no fear of the golden couch, but remember that he was approaching a man who was subject to sickness and wounds. And yet not one of the accomplices of Hermolaiis, even in the last extremity, denounced Callisthenes. Nay, even Alexander himself, in the letters which he wrote at once to Craterus, Attalus, and Alcetas, says that the youths confessed under torture that they had made this attempt of them- selves, and that no one else was privy to it. But in a letter written later to Antipater, wherein he ac- cuses Callisthenes also of the crime, he says: “The

4 AUTLAT ApLEVOS, “Or pev taides,” dyatv, “ vio TOY Maxedovev Katerevo Onoar, Tov O€ copia thy eyo KOAGoW Kal TOUS exTrepnpay tas avrov Kal
TOUS UTodeXouEvous Tals qTroAEct TOUS epol eT L-Bovdevovras,” aVTLK US év ye TOUTOLS aT oKaNv-T TOMEVOS 7 pos “Aptorotehny: Kal yap eTeO pao Kadrrodevns Tap avT@ d1a THY ouyyeverar, e& - ‘Hpods yeyoves, dveas "ApiatotéXous. amro-Oavety d€ avTov ot pév vt’ ’AXeEdvdpou Kpeuaaofévra déyovaty, ot be év médats Sedeuévov Kal voorcarta, Xadpys 6é pera THY oudy yey eT Ta pvas puratredbat 6edeuevor, os ev TO cuvedpicp
x piBein TApoVvTos ‘Aptatoréhous, € év als 88 7 nLEpals
"AréEavdpos étpoHOn wept tHv “Ivdiav, amroaveiy UTEpTAXUY "Vevopevov Kal pbepiacarta.
IDMe Taira fev odv VaoTeEpov empayOn. Anpapatos b€ o Kopivétos 76n mpecBuTepos av
ederoriunOn 7 p0s AreFavdpov avaBivat Kal Jeacapevos auTOV elmre peyarns ndovis eaTEphcOat Tous "EAAnvas, door TEA Kact Tpiy idetv “AreEav8pov ev TO Aapetou Opove cabnuevov. ov pv él wA€ov ye THis 7 Os avTov evvoias TOD Bacirtéws atréXavcev, aAnN €& dppwartias amto-Javey exndevOn peyaroTpeTos, Kal TAO & EXWoED
0 TT PAT OS em aUT@ TH TEpL MET PO péyav, Urvpos bé
TNX OV bySo/covra Ta 6€ dAEipava TéOpiTT TOV KEKOT LNLEVOY NaUTPAS ETL OdAagoaV KATEKOMLCE.
LVIT. MéAAwv bé brrepBdrXrev eis THY “Ivd1-KH, @S €wpa TANOEL Aahvpov THY oTpatiav On

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. iv. 14, 3f., where other accounts still are mentioned.

youths were stoned to death by the Macedonians, but the sophist I will punish, together with those who sent him to me and those who harbour in their cities men who conspire against my life;’’ and in these words, at least, he directly reveals a hostility to Aristotle, in whose house Callisthenes, on account of his relationship, had been reared, being a son of Hero, who was a niece of Aristotle. As to the death of Callisthenes, some say that he was hanged by Alexander’s orders, others that he was bound hand and foot and died of sickness, and Chares says that after his arrest he was kept in fetters seven months, that he might be tried before a full council when Aristotle was present, but that about the time when Alexander was wounded in India, he died from obesity and the disease of lice.!

LVI. This, however, belongs to a later time.” Meanwhile Demaratus the Corinthian, who was now well on in years, was eagerly desirous of going up to Alexander; and when he had seen him, he said that those Greeks were deprived of a great pleasure who had died before seeing Alexander seated on the throne of Dareius.? However, he did not long enjoy the king’s good will towards him, but died from debility. His obsequies were magnificent, and the army raised in his memory a mound of great circumference and eighty cubits in height. His ashes were carried down to the sea-board on a four-horse chariot splendidly adorned.

LVII. Alexander was now about to cross the mountains into India,# and since he saw that his army was by this time cumbered with much booty

2 The spring of 327 B.c. 3 Cf. chapter xxxvii. 4.

4 In the late spring of 327 B.o, a \ 4 4s See Tee /

Bapetav cal dvoxtvntov ovaay, au nuépa auve-
A a , N e f
oKEvacLevoyv TOV auaEaY, THWTAS MEV UTETPNTE
a a , \ \ /
TaS avTOU Kal T@Y EéETAlpwy, peta SE TaUTAS
a A , A A
éxéXevoe Kal Tais TOV Makxedovwy évetvat top.
\ a“ , ‘ s a bd / kal Tov mpaypyatos To Bovrevwa petlov épayyn

X , 9 , \ \
Kal Setvorepov % TO Epyov. OXdtyous pev yap Sat e \ a a \ ? a \ nviageY, Ol O€ TAEtaTOL Bon Kal adaXayu®@ pEeTa
A A A /
évOovotacod Ta pev avayKaia Tots Seopévors
t \ , A / 2 \
peTaoLoovTes, Ta O€ TEpLovTAa THS ypEelas avTot
/ ie a \ KaTakaiovtes kai dradOetpovTes opps Kal Tpo-
f b] / \
Ouuias éevevipwracay tov ’“AréEavdpov. dn 6é
, \ a
kal poBepos hy Kal aTapatTnTos KoAaoTHS TOV
, \ \ , } , A
TAnupENOVYTMWY. Kat yap Mévavdpov tiva tov 7 / éTaipwv apyovta dpouptov KkatactHaas, ws ovK
> Z A €BovrAETO MEVELY, ATIEKTELVE, KAL TOY ATOTTAYTOV
, 9 , > x ,
BapBdpov ’Opacodatny avtos xateToFevce.
, Ul a a IIpoBdatov 6€ TexovTos apva Tepi TH Kehary oX}ua Kal Yp@pa TLapas EyovTa Kat SiOvpovs Exa-
A \ N A
tépwlev avtod, BdeduxGeis TO onpetov exabapOn X\ (4 \ A ip A 9 ” J iZ
pev vTrd TaV BaBvAwviwr, ovs €& EOous éemrjyeTo
N \ A \ \ \
Tpos TA TOLAUTA* dieXEy On dé TPOS TOUS pirous WS
5) 5 ’ e 4 b \ } a) / 4 \ \
ov d¢° avtov, adda Ou exEtvous TapPaTTOLTO, [41) TO
A / v KPATOS Els ayevYH Kal avadKw avO pwrov éxXtTOV-
a 4 \ s
TOS AUTOD TEpLaTHoN TO OatmovLoV. ov pny adrAa
f a , ‘\
BérXtLov Te onpetor yevouevoy tThv abuulay éXvaev, Oo yap érl THY oTpwuaTopuAaKwY TeTAyMEVvOS av7npP
? ’ / ~ A A
Maxedav, dvoypa Ipofevos, 77H Baoithixh oxnvi} 386

697.

and hard to move, at break of day, after the baggage-waggons had been loaded, he burned first those which belonged to himself and his companions, and then gave orders to set fire to those of the Macedonians. And the planning of the thing turned out to be a larger and more formidable matter than its execution. For it gave annoyance to a few only of the soldiers, while the most of them, with rapturous shouts and war-cries, shared their neces- saries with those who were in need of them, and what was superfluous they burned and destroyed with their own hands, thus filling Alexander with zeal and eagerness. Besides, he was already greatly feared, and inexorable in the chastisement of a transgressor. For instance, when a certain Menander, one of his companions, who had been put in com- mand of a garrison, refused to remain there, he put him to death; and Orsodates, a Barbarian who had revolted from him, he shot down with his own hand.

When a sheep yeaned a lamb which had upon its head what looked like a tiara in form and colour, with testicles on either side of it, Alexander was filled with loathing at the portent, and had himself purified by the Babylonians, whom he was accus- to take along with him for such purposes ; and in conversation with his friends he said that he was not disturbed for his own sake, but for theirs, fear- ing lest after his death Heaven might devolve his power upon an ignoble and impotent man. How- ever, a better portent occurred and put an end to his dejection. The Macedonian, namely, who was set over those in charge of the royal equipage, Proxenus by name, as he was digging a place for the

Yopav opuTToV Tapa tov “OQ£ov ToTAa pov aveka- Aue myyy vypou AuTrapouv Kal TtpLeNwdous: dmravtTdovpevou d€ TOU 7 pw@rou xabapov avéBru lev nOn Kal dtavyés EXatov, ovTe Oop Soxody ovTE yevoes édatov dtadéperv, aottAmVvoTnTa TE Kal ALTapOTNTaA TavTdTacl amapdAXaxkTor, Kal Tata THS Xopas. poe éhaias pepovars. heyerau pev ouv Kal TOV "OEov abtov etvat HANAKOTAT OV vVowp, @oTE TO Sépuwa Tots Novopevots eTLALTIAL- vey. ov pv arrA.a Savpactas “Ar€Lavdpos nabels Ofros éoTiv ef Ov ypaper 7 pos “Avti-TaTpov, év TOUS peyioTous TOUTO TOY amo TOU Geod yeyovor ey auTe TOE pLevos. ot be [aVvTeEls

évdo€ov Bev oT pareias, emumovov 6€ Kab xXarem hs TO onpetov émroLobvTo" Tovey yap apwynv éatov avOparots v0 Geov S600 Gat.
LVIE. Torroi pev ov Kara TAS paxas avT@
Kivdvvor ouvétecor Kal TPAVLATL veaviKots ari
THGE, THY O€ TAELaTIY POopay atropiat TOV avay-Katwv Kat dvoxpaciar Tou T€PlEX OVTOS dtreiprya-CAVTO THS oTpaTias. autos 6é TOMI THV TUXNY umepBaréo bar Kal THD Svvapuy a aperh) ptAoTLpov-Mevos, ovdEV wWEeTO TOs Gappodaty avddwTov ovdé ox upoy elvat TOUS GTONMOLS. AeveTac dé THY Ltot-piO pov TroALopKaY TET pav aBatov ovoav Kal amo-Topov * ab upovvTav TOV OT paTeoT av EPHTHT aL
TOV "Okvaptnv motos tis avTos ein THY Wuyny
O Leo piO prs. dycavros Oe Tob ‘O£vaprov dec-
Notatov avOpwrwy, “Aéyets oU ye, ” havat, “ tH

1 @xérouov Coraés’ correction of the MSS. axpéaBarov, for which Bekker reads ampécpaxov, after Schaefer. Sintenis? suggests amdtouoy xal ampdo Baroy, king’s tent along the river Oxus, uncovered a spring of liquid which was oily and fatty; but when the top of it was drawn off, there flowed at once a pure and clear oil, which appeared to differ from olive oil neither in odour nor in flavour, and in smoothness and lustre was altogether the same, and that too though the country produced no olive trees. It is said, indeed, that the Oxus itself also has a very soft water, which gives sleekness to the skin of those who bathe in it. However, that Alexander was marvellously pleased is clear from what he writes to Antipater, where he speaks of this as one of the greatest omens vouchsafed to him from Heaven. The seers, however, held that the omen fore- shadowed an expedition which would be glorious, but difficult and toilsome; for oil, they said, was given to men by Heaven as an aid to toil.

LVIII. And so it proved; for he encountered many perils in the battles which he fought, and received very severe wounds; but the greatest losses which his army suffered were caused by lack of necessary provisions and severity of weather.
Still, he was eager to overcome fortune by boldness and force by valour, and thought nothing invincible for the courageous, and nothing secure for the cowardly. It is said that when he was besieging the citadel of Sisimithres, which was steep and inaccessible, so that his soldiers were disheartened, he asked Oxyartes what sort of a man Sisimithres himself was in point of spirit. And when Oxyartes replied that he was most cowardly of men, “ Thy words mean,” said Alexander, “ that we

, al Ed \ \ ? bd) lel
TETNAV AAWGLMOV HuLY EiVaL* TO Yap ApYoV avTIsS
> / , \
ovK OXUpOV éoTL. TAUVTHY pev Od ExpoBHGas TOV
, Ye es \ e , b ,
XuciptOpnv EXaBev. Etépa Sé opolws aroTOLM
, a ,
TpocBarwv Ttovs vewtépovs Ttav Maxedover
id \ ? / / 7
Tapwpna, Kal ’Are~avopov tiva Kadovpevor
, Pre) \ , » 4 cas
mpocayopevaas, “ AXAa cot ye, et7rev, “ av-an \ x 99
Spayabetv mpoonjKe Kai d:a THY ewvupiav. érrel
a e / , U
d€ AauTpas oO veavias aywviCopevos ETETEV, OV
, > / A \ / f “A
peeTpiws €dnyOn. tH Sé Karovpévn Nvaon Tov
/ / s\
Maxedoverv oxvovvtwy Tpocayey (Kal yap ToTa-
1 4 \ yA 6; ’ a; Nae ee Los AV pos aUTH Badus) emiatas, “Ti yap, elev,
al ? ’
“0 KAKLOTOS Ey@ velvy OVK Eualov; Kai non éxwv
\ > / A Oé 3 \ \ /
Tv acTioa Tepav nOérAnoev. eet 5é KaTaTIAV-“A a XN a gayvTos THy payny avtod Taphoav amo TOY
/ ,
ToALopKoupEevov TOAEwY TpéaBes Senoopevor, a \ > \ f n ee
ampa@ tov pev oPGeis abepamrevtos év Tois OmAots
3 4 3 f v ? \
eféTTANEev aAvTOUS ETEetTa MpoaKedhaXraiov TLVOS
3 A / > , , / ‘

avuT® Koptadevtos exedXevoe AaPovTa Kabicar Tov
, v ’ n / a mpecButatov' “Axoudus éxareito. Oavyacas ov \ f \ / e o
THY AapTpoTHTAa Kal PiriavOpwriav o “Axovdus
? f “
npwta TL BovrETat ToLOvYTAS AUTOUS ExeLV didous.
\ a ? ,
pycavTos dé tod “ArdeEdrdpou, “ dé pev apYovTa
/ “A \ aA
KATACTHGAVTAS AUTMY, pos dé Huds Tew WavTas
\ vw ‘\ b] f 99
EKATOV Avopas TOUS apioTous, yeAdaas Oo “Axov-> XN / %) 2 my dis, “ AdAa Bertiov,” eltrev, “ dpEw, Barred,
, \ \ A a TOUS KAKLOTOVS TPOS GE TE“ras padXoOV 1%) TOvS
aplaTous.
¢ \ te / A a
LIX. ‘O d€ Takirns Aéyetar pév THs “IvdiKhs
a / Eyer potpav ovK amrodéovaayv Aiyumtou TO péyeE-
” \ \ / bd a ,
Gos, evBotov bé Kal KadXixaprrop év Tols wddoTA, 399

698

ALEXANDER, tvin. 2-Lix. 1

can take the citadel, since he who commands it is a weak thing.” And indeed he did take the citadel by frightening Sisimithres. Again, after attacking another citadel equally precipitous, he was urging on the younger Macedonians, and addressing one who bore the name of Alexander, said: “ It behooves thee, at least, to be a brave man, even for thy name's sake.” And when the young man, fighting gloriously, fell, the king was pained beyond measure. And at another time, when his Macedonians hesitated to advance upon the citadel called Nysa because there was a deep river in front of it, Alexander, halting on the bank, cried: ‘Most miserable man that I am, why, pray, have I not learned to swim?” and at once, carrying his shield, he would have tried to cross. And when, after he had put a stop to the fighting, ambassadors came from the beleaguered cities to beg for terms, they were amazed, to begin with, to see him in full armour and without an attendant; and_ besides, when a cushion was brought him for his use, he ordered the eldest of the ambassadors, Acuphis by name, to take it for his seat. Acuphis, accordingly, astonished at his magnanimity and courtesy, asked what he wished them to do in order to be his friends. “ Thy countrymen,” said Alexander, “ must make thee their ruler, and send me a hundred of their best men.” At this Acuphis laughed, and said: “Nay, O King, I shall rule better if I send to thee the worst men rather than the best. ””!

LIX. Taxiles, we are told, had a realm in India as large as Egypt, with good pasturage, too, and in the highest degree productive of beautiful fruits. He

ICf. Arrian, Anab. v. 2, 1-3.

coos b¢ Tis avnp elvat, Kal Tov ‘AreEav6pov do Tac apEevos, “Te det TONE MOV, pavat, i Kat
paxns nputy, ‘Ar€Eavope, pos add rovs, él pyre Dowp adarpnaopevos TO apigat pte Tpopryy avayKaiay, UTép BY LovoVv avayen orapaxes Oar voov eXovotv av pwr ors ; TOUS be arrows X PHA L Kal KT pal Aeyopevors, él pev put KpelTT Ov, EroLpLos eD trovety, eb O€ HTTwY, ov Pevyw nap
éye ev Tadov.” jo bels ovr oO ‘AreEavdpos Kal deEtwaapevos avrov, “ "H Tou vomiers,” epn,
a dixa pays évea ba THY evreveey npiy aro TOLOUTOD Aoyov Kal prroppoc wns ; arr ovdev
Got Wéov' eyo yap aryoviot par TOs oe Kal
Srapaxodpat Tals yapiow, @>s pov XpPNT TOS @V
[1) Tmepuyevy.” NaBov dé d@pa TONG Kal Sous mretova TéXOS YALA TahavTa vopio 1aT 0s avT@ T poem Lev. ep ols TOUS pev pirous ta yupars
eXUTNGE, TOV dé BapBdpav TOAANOVS érroinoev MEPOTEPOS exelv pos avr ov.
"Eel 6€ tov ‘Ivdav ot HAXtMOTATOL pea GogopouvTes emepoitav Tais TONETLY Eppopevns apv-vovTes Kal TONG TOV “Ar€Eavb pov éxaKomTrotovy, omeroapevos &v Tie TOAEL TPOS AUTOUS aTrLOVTAS

év 06@ AaB@v amavtas améxtewe. Kal TovTO
ToS TONEmLKOLS Epryols aUTOU, Ta ANAM Vopipws
Kal BaciNtKk@s TO pHNCAYTOS, BaTEP KNALS TPOG-EOTIV. OUVK EXdoaOVAa O€ TOVTwWY ot Pidocodot TpayHaTa TapéoYov avT@, Tovs Te mpocTLe-pevous ToV Bacihéwy Kaxilortes Kal Tous édev-Gépovs SHpouvs adiotavtes. S10 Kal TovTwy TONNOUS Expeuace.
392

ALEXANDER, ux. 1-4

was also a wise man in his way, and after he had greeted Alexander, said: “ Why must we war and fight with one another, Alexander, if thou art not come to rob us of water or of necessary sustenance, the only things for which men of sense are obliged to fight obstinately ? As for other wealth and pos- sessions, so-calied, if I am thy superior therein, I am ready to confer favours; but if thine inferior, I will not object to thanking you for favours conferred.”’ At this Alexander was delighted, and clasping the king’s hand, said: “Canst thou think, pray, that after such words of kindness our interview is to end without a battle? Nay, thou shalt not get the better of me; for I will contend against thee and fight to the last with my favours, that thou mayest not surpass me in generosity.’ So, after receiving many gifts and giving many more, at last he lavished upon him a thousand talents in coined money. This conduct greatly vexed Alexander’s friends, but it nade many of the Barbarians look upon him more kindly.

The best fighters among the Indians, however, were mercenaries, and they used to go about to the different cities and defend them sturdily, and wrought much harm to Alexander’s cause. Therefore, after he had made a truce with them in a certain city and allowed them to depart, he fell upon them as they marched and slew them all. And this act adheres like a stain to his military career; in all other in- stances he waged war according to usage and like a king. The philosophers, too, no less than the mer- cenaries, gave him trouble, by abusing those of the native princes who attached themselves to his cause, and by inciting the free peoples to revolt. He there- fore took many of these also and hanged them.

393

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a \ ~
LX. Ta &€ mwpos [l@pov avtos év tais émicto-ANals ws EmpayxOn yeypade. dyal yap év péow
; pdyOy yeypage. dyaot yap ev péag
TaV otTpatoTédwy tov ‘TdaacTov péovtos aytt-
. e f \ b) , JN N ~
Topouvs toTavtTa Tous édehavtas det tov Iapov ~ , Q b]
émitnpely tiv didBactv. auTov pev ovv Kal
e / e , / a \ / b a“ nuépav exaotyny ropov mrorety Kai OopuBov ev TO

S - 3/47 \ ,
aTpatoTédm modu, €Oifovta tovs BapBapovs
\ n \ \ , \ 3 /
pn poBetcOar: vuKtos b€ yetmepiov Kal aoedXrnVoU haPovta TaV TECH Epos, immeEts b€ TOUS KpaTit ral
OTOUS, Kat mpoehOovTa TOppw TaY TroAELLOY
la) N fal
dtaTepacat Tpos vngov ov peyadnv. evtab0a
, \ 4 3
dé paydaiov pev exyvévTos duBpou, mpnoTHpwv
dé TOAA@Y Kal KEepavv@v eis TO aoTpaTtoTedov
f ed ¢ a ,
PEepomevav, Ouws Opwv atrodhAUpévous TLVaS Kal
e \ “ “ a
cuppreyopévous UTO TMV KEpavvaYv ard THs
n i / a 3
vnaidos apas mpoohépecOar tais avtitépas by-
\ \ € n
Oats. tpayuv b€ tov ‘Tddomnv bd tod xet-
UOvos ETLOVTA Kal pEeTéewpov, Expnyma ToLtioat
\ , > , a péya, Kal modu pépos exeivn dépecOat Tod
e ¢ 3 \ \ / \ / 3
pevpatos: autous 6€ dé€acdar TO pécov ov
, ee \ / \ A
BeBaiws, ate 61 cuvodtcOdvoyv Kal repippynyvi-3 NO be > ~ 2 , cc
pevov. évtavda 6é eitretvy dacw avtov “"O
>] A = , / xX e f e
A@nvaiot, apa ye miaTEevoatTe av diKOUS UTr0-ig f ~ an eva Kivduvous Evexa THS Tap bpiv evdokias;” 3 \ a \ ’ Z v oS /
arra TovTO pev Ovancixpitos elpnxev, avtos Sé
\ i f a dynat tas oyedias adévtas avtovs peta TaV
e 4 ba “a
OTAwY TO Expnypya SraBaivery dypt pactav Bpe-
\ \ a“ ~ yoméevous, diaBas b€ TOV TeCOV elxoct TTAadiovs
ae a 4 3 ¢ s A
T poiTmEevaal, NOYLEOMEVOS, EL LEV OL TrOAELLOL TOLS
394

LX. Of his campaign against Porus! he himself has given an account in his letters. He says, namely, that the river Hydaspes flowed between the two camps, and that Porus stationed his ele- phants on the opposite bank and kept continual watch of the crossing. He himself, accordingly, day by day caused a great din and tumult to be made in his camp, and thereby accustomed the Barbarians not to be alarmed. Then, on a dark and stormy night, he took a part of his infantry and the best of his horsemen, and after proceeding along the river to a distance from where the enemy lay, crossed over to a small island. Here rain fell in torrents, and many tornadoes and thunder-bolts dashed down upon his men; but nevertheless, although he saw that many of them were being burned to death by the thunder-bolts, he set out from the islet and made for the opposite banks. But the Hydaspes, made violent by the storm and dashing high against its bank, made a great breach in it, and a large part of the stream was setting in that direction; and the shore between the two currents gave his men no sure footing, since it was broken and slippery. And here it was that he is said to have cried: “O Athenians, can ye possibly believe what perils I am undergoing to win glory in your eyes?” This, how- ever, is the story of Onesicritus; Alexander himself says that they left their rafts and crossed the breach with their armour on, wading breast-high in water, and that after he had crossed he led his horsemen twenty furlongs in advance of his infantry, calculating that, in case the enemy attacked with

1 See Arrian, Anab. v. 9-19. It was in the spring of 326 B.C.

¢ f \ , 3 \
immows mpocBaroev, TodV KpaThoev, eb S€ KuVa \ Ul , \ \ % a
olev THY harayya, POncecPat Tovs Tefovs avT@ mT poayevouevous’ Oatepov 5é cupSiyvar. TaY yap imméewy YiALovS Kal TOV appatawv é£r)KovTa ovup-
, \ \ A
TecovTa TpEipevos, TA pevy Appata RAaBeiv anavta, Tov & inméwv avedely TeTpaKkoctous.
¢ AY ca)
ovTw 61) cuedpovycavta tov Il@poyv ws avtos
’ /
ein StaBeBynxews ’AX€Eavdpos, émiévat peta Taons
nA \ A
THS Suvapews, TANV Ocov Eptrodwv eElvat Tois
a /
S:aBatvovet tov Maxedovey arédire. goByOeis
\ \ / \ NY a a / > \ dé Ta Onpia Kal TO TAOS TOV TOAELiwV AUTOS

a \ a a pev évocioa, Kata Oatepov Képas, Koivov 6é T@
An n n / \ wn
defi poo Bane Kehedoat. ryevoperns dé T poms
e “A éxatépwOev avaywpeiv acl mpos ta Onpia Kal
la) \ 3 / ef 4 ‘
cuvetretabar Tovs éxBiafopevous, GOev Hon THY 4 5 \ U b] ‘ ef
LAY HY GvapeplyMEeVNY Eival, KaL pores oydons Wpas na ié n \ € n
amTevmely TOUS TrOAEuiOUS. TAUTA pEéV OUY Oo THS
S: nw n
MAXNS TOLNTHS AVTOS Ev Tals émMLaTOAAls ELpNKeED.
° fa) e fal
Oi 5€ mAciotoe TOV GUyypadéwv oporoyodat
a ? al
tov Il@pov virepaipovta Tecoadpwerv mnyav omOan fo) / a Lip TO phKos immotou pnoey arodciv mpos Tov
x, / if } \ \ 4, @Q \ \ M4
éhéhavta cuppetpia ota TO péyeOos Kal Tov byKov
a le /
TOU owpaTos. KaitTor péyiotos Av o édéhas:
\ i cuveci 5€ Oavpactiny éredetEato Kal Kndepoviay
a / \ i a
tov Bactiéws, éppwuevov pev Ett Ovu@ Tovs 4 \ , TPOTHAXOMEVOUS ApLVVOMEVOS Kal AVAKOTTT@V, WS
\ ” A , \ , 4
Sé nobeto Bedkav mrANOeL Kai TpavpaTwv Kdp-\ “A nw ‘ s vovTa, delaas pn TEpLpp’H, Tois pev yovacw Ets
a n / “A \
yi UPnKe Tpdws EavToy, TH d€ Tpovopaia Nap-396

ALEXANDER, -x. 4-7

their cavalry, he would be far superior to them, and in case they moved up their men-at-arms, his infantry would join him in good season. And one of these suppositions came to pass. For after routing a thousand of the enemy's horsemen and sixty of their chariots which engaged him, he captured all the chariots, and slew four hundred of the horsemen. And now Porus, thus led to believe that Alexander himself had crossed the river, advanced upon him with all his forces, except the part he left behind to impede the crossing of the remaining Macedonians. But Alexander, fearing the elephants and the great numbers of the enemy, himself assaulted their left wing, and ordered Coenus to attack their right. Both wings having been routed, the vanquished troops retired in every case upon the elephants in the centre, and were there crowded together with them, and from this point on the battle was waged at close quarters, and it was not until the eighth hour that the enemy gave up. Such then, is the account of the battle which the victor himself has given in his letters.

Most historians agree that Porus was four cubits and a span! high, and that the size and majesty of his body made his elephant seem as fitting a mount for him as a horse for a horseman. And yet his elephant was of the largest size ; and it showed re- markable intelligence and solicitude for the king, bravely defending him and beating back his assailants while he was still in full vigour, and when it perceived that its master was worn out with a multitude of missiles and wounds, fearing lest he should fall off, it knelt softly on the ground, and with its proboscis

1 Six feet and three inches.

Bavwv atpéva tov Sopatiwy Exaotov éEnper Tov

8 gwuatos. émel d€ AnPOévta Tov Ildpov o 'Aré-Eavdpos npwTaT as avTe xpynontat, " Bacidixas," eime: tmpoomulopevov b€ pn TL GAAO Revel,
"Tldvta," eimev, "éativ ev TO Bacihixas. ov povov ouv aicev avTov dpe Gy eSactreve, TaTpaTHy Kaovpevon, aya Kal ™ poo eOnxe Xe-pav tous! AUT OVOLOUS KaTaoT pew dpevos, év 7 TEV TEKALOEKA pev €Ovn, TONES Oe TEVTAKLTXtALAS
aktoXoyous, Kwpyas 5€ TapTroAXas eivai daw addrAnv b€ tpls tocavTny js Didimmov tia Tov éTalpwv catpamny amédeEer.
LXI. 'Ex 6€ tis mpos Ilapov payns Kat o
Bouxedddas éreXevTHoEV, oVK EVOUS, GAN VoTepor,

WS ol TET TOL Aéyouoww aT TpavpaTtov Gepa-TEVOLEVOS, @s O€ ‘Ovnaixprtos, bua “Yipas Umép-Tovos YEVOLEVOS* TpidKkovta yap érT@v atrodavety avTov. €dnyVOn loxupas "AréEavdpos, ovdéev
ano y ovvyOn Kal pirov amoBeBAncevat vopicwv:
Kal TOALY otKioas én aur Tapa TOV ‘Tédorny
Bouxepadiav Tpoanryopeuce. AeyeTas 6€ Kal KUVa Hepitay dvoua TEA pa pipevov vn avTov Kal oTepyopevoy aToBadav KTLOAL TOMY eT WVULOY.
TovTo 6€ Xwttwv dyol Hotduwvos dxodoat tod Ae Biov.
LXII. Tods HEVTOL Maxedovas 0 Tpos. Ta@pov
aryov ap Brute pous emote Kai TOU Too THS
"Tvdiuchs ete mpoenrOety erécye. pods yap éxeivov
1 rots with Bekker, after Coraés : xa) rods.

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. v. 19, 4 f.
* Alexander carried his conquests from the Indus to the gently took each spear and drew it out of his body. Porus was taken prisoner, and when Alexander asked him how he would be treated, said: “ Like a king ”’ ; and to another question from Alexander whether he had anything else to say, replied: “ All things are included in my ‘like a king.’’’ Accordingly, Alexander not only permitted him to govern his former kingdom, giving him the title of satrap, but also added to it the territory of the independent peoples whom he subdued, in which there are said to have been fifteen nations, five thousand cities of considerable size, and a great multitude of villages. He subdued other territory also thrice as large as this and appointed Philip, one of his companions, satrap over it.

LXI. After the battle with Porus, too, Bucephalas died,—not at once, but some time afterwards,—as most writers say, from wounds for which he was under treatment, but according to Onesicritus, from old age, having become quite worn out;! for he was thirty years old when he died. His death grieved Alexander mightily, who felt that he had lost nothing less than a comrade and friend; he also built a city in his memory on the banks of the Hydaspes and ealled it Bucephalia. It is said, too, that when he lost a dog also, named Peritas, which had been reared by him and was loved by him, he founded a city and gave it the dog's name. Sotion says he heard this from Potamon the Lesbian.

LXII. As for the Macedonians, however, their struggle with Porus blunted their courage and stayed their further advance into India.? For having had Hyphasis (Arrian, Anab. v. 25), subduing the Punjab. It was now September, 326 B.c.

' , , a \ id c A oadapevot Sic puptots TeCois Kal Sic xtALols iTTEvaL
, b] a) b] ,
Tapata&dpevov, avtéctynaay iaxupas AreEavdpo
va) /
Bialopéve kal tov Vayyny mepacat trotapor, eUpos pev avTov Ovo Kat TpLdKoVTa oTAdiwY Eivat
' \ ,
muvOavouevor Kab Bados opyvias éxaTov, avtimépas 6€ tas 6y8as amoKxexpvdbat mrANnOeow
e \ (7 \ 9 s b / \
OTAWY KaL iTTWY Kal EhehavTwv. EdEYOVTO yap OKT® pev pupiddas immoT@v, elkoot dé Trelar,
e . 3 , \ , f
dppata 6€ oKTakioxtALa Kal paytpmous éXMépavTas
e r Yj ¢ " \
éEFaxicxirtous éxovtes ot Tavdapitov cat Ipac-ciwy Pacirets vropevety. Kal KOmTTOS OVK AD
A b f \ "
mept Tavta. 'AvdpoKxottos yap vatepov ov TOAA@
f ys , / ~ /
Bacitrtevoas Ledkevk@ TevTaKkoctovs éEdéehavtTas
éSwpngato, Kal otpatov pupidow éfij)Kovta THV
"Tvdsxny érirOev arracav Katactpepopevos.
To péev ody mpetov Uo Svabupias Kal opyis
\ /
auTov eis THY aKnviy Kabeip~as Exerto, yap
? a ovdeuiay eLdws Tots OvaTreTmpayuevols Eb un Tepa-N es > > ' , (4 f

aeve TOV Vayynv, ddd’ eEomoroyynow Artns 710E-\ 4 pevos THY avaywpnaw. ws bé of Te Piro Ta EixoTA fal NX a TAapnyopovvTes AUTOV Ol TE OTPATL@TAL Krav-
al \ a) ? a)
Oud kat Bon mpocitotapevot Tats Ovpars ixétevov, émixracGeis avefevyvue, TOAAA Trpos Sokav atra-
\
TNAA Kab cOpLaTLKa UNYavameEvos. Kal yap 67a
peiCova Kat datvas inmwv cal yarivors Bapv-TEpOUS KATATKEUdCAS aTEALTE TE Kal Stepper
ispvcato dé€ Bwpovs Gewv, ods péypt viv oi IIpa:ciwy Baotreis StaB8aivovtes céBovtat Kat 400

ee

ALEXANDER, cxi. 1-4

all they could do to repulse an enemy who mustered only twenty thousand infantry and two thousand horse, they violently opposed Alexander when he insisted on crossing the river Ganges also, the width of which, as they learned, was thirty-two furlongs, its depth a hundred fathoms, while its banks on the further side were covered with multitudes of men-at-arms and horsemen and elephants. For they were told that the kings of the Ganderites and Praesii were awaiting them with eighty thousand horsemen, two hundred thousand footmen, eight thousand chariots, and six thousand fighting elephants. And there was no boasting in these reports. For Androcottus, who reigned there not long afterwards, made a present to Seleucus of five hundred elephants, and with an army of six hundred thousand men overran and subdued all India.

At first, then, Alexander shut himself up in his tent from displeasure and wrath and lay there, feel- ing no gratitude for what he had already achieved unless he should cross the Ganges, nay, counting a retreat a confession of defeat. But his friends gave him fitting consolation, and his soldiers crowded about his door and besought him with loud cries and wailing, until at last he relented and began to break camp, resorting to many deceitful and fallacious devices for the enhancement of his fame. For in- stance, he had armour prepared that was larger than usual, and mangers for horses that were higher, and bits that were heavier than those in common use, and left them scattered up and down. Moreover, he erected altars for the gods, which down to the present time are revered by the kings of the Praesii when they cross the river, and on them they offer

401

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ovovow ‘EXdnvixas Ovotas. “AvdpoxoTttos 6é peét-

4 bay 2 aN > 4 5 \ / paxvov wy avtov ’AdéEavdpov cide, Kat EyeTat
f >] a (24 e > 3 \ S \ TONAGKLS ELTTELY VITEPOV WS Trap ovodEeV FADE TA
, a ? , A
Tpaypara AaPetv AreEavdpos, [LLTOUMEVOU TE Kal Katadpovoupevov Tov Bacthéws Ova poxOnpiav Kal duaryévevay.
LXIII. “Evretev oppjoas “AdréEavdpos tiv
é&w Gadaccav émidely, Kal moda mopO peta
KOT PN Kal oxedias mn Ed Mevos, exomileTo Tots ToTapots Urropepopevos oXoAatWS. 0 6€ TAODS
OUK apyos ny ovee ATPONEMOS, | m poo Biddov dé
Tats modeot Kal aToBatvwy éyetpodTO TavTa.
\ \ A 4 al e
mpos 5€ Tols Kadoupévorts Maddois, ots dacu ‘Tvdav paxytpwtatous yevéoPar, pixpov édénoe KATAKOTHAVAaL, TOUS meV yap avOpwrous Béreaty \ fa) a a
aro THY TELXaD amecKedace, mT pOT0S 6€ 1a KripaKos TEELaNS dvaBas € éml TO TeElYos, WS 7 TE crhipak ouvert piBn Kab TOV BapBapov udiatapeveov mapa TO TELXOS chau Bave TrNYVAS KaT@er, OALYOoTOS OY avaTpeWas EavTOV Els pégoUS AahHKe
TOUS ToAEuious Kal KaTa TUYNY OopOds Earn.
/ \ aA ad M4 e /, Tiwagapevou d€ TOUS omhors, édoEav ot BapBapou
oéXas Te Kat pdcpa TPO TOU T@MATOS héperOar.
610 Kal TO 7 p@Tov epuyov Kab SverKedda bycay
@s 6€ elOov aurov peTQ vei UT AC TLOT OY, eT - dpapovres ol pev €K YELpOS Eipeot Kat Sopace bua TOV omhav ouveritpwckov GLUVO{LEVO?, els 6€ pukpov am@tépw atas epnxev ato to€ou BéXos
¢ \ f. \
oUTws evTovoy Kai Biatov Bate TOV OwpaKa Sia-

Koay éuraynvat Tois wept Tov paaboy oaTéots.
1 Hydaspes, Acesines, and Indus (Arrian, Anab. vi. 1).

402

ALEXANDER, cx, 4-Lx111. 3

sacrifices in the Hellenic manner. Androcottus, when he was a stripling. saw Alexander himself, and we are told that he often said in later times that Alexander narrowly missed making himself master of the country, since its king was hated and despised on account of his baseness and low birth.

LXIII. From thence, being eager to behold the ocean, and having built many passage-boats equipped with oars, and many rafts, he was conveyed down the rivers! in a leisurely course. And yet his voyage was not made without effort nor even without war, but he would land and assault the cities on his route and subdue everything. However, in attacking the people called Malli, who are said to have been the most warlike of the Indians, he came within a little of being cut down. For after dispersing the in- habitants from the walls with missiles, he was the first to mount upon the wall by a scaling ladder, and since the ladder was broken to pieces and he was exposed to the missiles of the Barbarians who stood along the wall below, almost alone as he was, he crouched and threw himself into the midst of the enemy, and by good fortune alighted on his feet. Then, as he brandished his arms, the Barbarians thought that a shape of gleaming fire played in front of his person. Therefore at first they scattered and fled; but when they saw that he was accom- panied by only two of his guards, they ran upon him, and some tried to wound him by thrusting their swords and spears through his armour as he de- fended himself, while one, standing a little further off, shot an arrow at him with such accuracy and force that it cut its way through his breastplate and fastened itself in his ribs at the breast. Such was

403

4

cr

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

mpos Se Thy TANYHY évdovtos avTOv Kal TO Toma Kaprpavtos, o wey Barwv érédpape BapBapixnpy paxatpav TTATULEVOS, lleveéoras dé Kal Atpvaios TpocaTnoav' ay mryyevt@y éxaTépwy 6 Ev
at éGave, Tleveéotas b€ avTeixe, Tov dé BapBapor “AAEEavdpos UTEKTELVEV. AUTOS 6¢ Tpavpata
TOAAA AABwr, TENOS dé _mhnyels UTEP KATA TOU
Tpaxnrou, TPO) pEtae TO TeLXEL TO copa, Brérrwv Tpos TOUS ToOAEmious. €v TOUT dé TOY Make-Sovwv tmepiyvb vty dpracbels avaia Ontos 6n
TOV mept auTov eT GKNVIS exopivero. Kal

TapautTixa pev ws TeOveatos mv Royos év 7@ TT PAT OT ESO" Karem as d€ Kal ToAVTOVWS TOV
ola TOY exT PLOdVT OY EvAwoy ovta, Kab TOU Owpaxos ovT@ pores aToAvGevtos, meph THY exKOT YD éyivovTo THS axisos évoeduxulas évl TOV ootéwy. RéyeTar 6€ TO wey TAATOS TPL@V SaKTUwy Eval, TO OE pHKOS Tecodpwr. 0 Tais ALTOOUpiats éyyiora davatov cuvehavvopevos éFarpouperns auras, 6 LOWS dvéraBe. Kal Sraduyov Tov Kivduvor, é ert dé do Bevis @V Kal TONY VY povov
év d:aitn Kat Oeparretars Exov aurov, é&w Gopu-Bovvtas ws nobero mofouvTas aut ov ety TOUS
Maxedovas, AaBov t bwaTioy mponrGe. Kat duoas
Tots Geois aibus avnxOn Kal Tapexouiveto yYwpav
TE TOAANY Kab TOAELS pEyaras KaTao TpEPopEvos.
LXIV. Tov é Dupvocopiatay TOUS pddiora
TOV ~aBBav avanéioavtTas amooThvat Kal KaKa
Tr€loTAa TOS Maxeddor TapacXovras AaBov
déxa, Servos SoxovvTas eivat Tept TAS aTrOKpiCELs
1 Leonuatus, according to Arrian, vi. 10, 2.

the force of the blow that Alexander recoiled and sank to his knees, whereupon his assailant ran at him with drawn scimitar, while Peucestas and Limnaeus ! defended him. Both of them were wounded, and Limnaeus was killed; but Peucestas held out, and at last Alexander killed the Barbarian. But he himself received many wounds, and at last was smitten on the neck with a cudgel, and leaned against the wall, his eyes still fixed upon his foes. At this instant his Macedonians flocked about him, caught him up, already unconscious of what was going on about him, and carried him to his tent. And straightway a report that he was dead prevailed in the camp; but when with much difheulty and pains they had sawn off the shaft of the arrow, which was of wood, and had thus succeeded at last in removing the king's breastplate, they came to the excision of the arrow- head, which was buried in one of the ribs. We are told, moreover, that it was three fingers broad and four long. Its removal, therefore, threw the king into swoons and brought him to death’s door, but nevertheless he recovered. And after he was out of danger, though he was still weak and kept him- self for a long time under regimen and treatment, perceiving from their tumult at his door that his Macedonians were yearning to see him, he took his cloak and went out to them. And after sacrificing to the gods he went on board ship again and dropped down the river, subduing much territory and great cities as he went.

LXIV. He captured ten of the Gymnosophists who had done most to get Sabbas to revolt, and had made the most trouble for the Macedonians. These philosophers were reputed to be clever and concise

Kal Spaxvroyous, epwTniara m podBanev avrots amropa, pnoas dmroxrevety TOV HN opOars a arroxpwwapevov T POTOV; elTa epetins OUT TOUS aNXous*
éva dé Tov mpea BuUTaToV exédeuoe Kpiverv. O pev ouv 7 P@TOS epotneis MOTEPOV OLETAL TOUS CavTas elvat melovas a TOUS TeOnKoras, Edn TOUS Carv-TAS’ OVKETL yap Elva TOUS TeOUNKOTAS. O ce SevTEpos, TOTEPOV TI yp 4) TH Oddatray pel-Cova tTpépewy Onpia, THY yy" TAUTNS yap HEpos elvat THY Oddrarray. o 6é TpLTOs, Tmotov oT!
Spov TavoupyoTatov, nC) expe vov, elev, “ avOpamos OUK eyvoKer. o o€ TETAPTOS ava-K pLvopevos Tivt Noyic Lo Tov LaBBav am éaTNG eV;
ameKpivato, “ Karas Civ Bovdopevos avTov Y KANOS arroBavetv.” 0 dé TET TOS epornGeis T0-TEpoy olerau TV npeepav y THY vuKTa TpoTépav ryeyovevat, Thy neepav, ele, “pepe par
Kat TPOoETELTEY ovTOS, Javpacavtos TOU Baot-NEWS, OTL TOY ATTOpwY epwTHTEewV aVaYKN Kal TAS
amToxpiges amtopous elvat. petaBadwv ovv Tov
EXTOV HpWTA TAS av TES prrnbein pddora Av
KPaTLOTOS ov,” eh, “py poBepos 7. Tov oe
NOLT WV Tplav o pev épwrtnbeis mas av TUS e& dvOpaTrov ryevotTo Oeds, Ei Te mpaterev, ‘ elev, Conn pagar SvvaTov av pwr ep pn ear” o be mepl
Coiis Kat Gavarou, TOT EpOv to XvpoTepor, aT e-K PLATO THY Conny Tocabra KaKG pepovaar. o oe
TEN evTaios, pEX pl TIVGS avO pone KANOS éxov ony, se Méxpe ov 1) vopiger TO TeOvavat TOU Chv apecvov. ovTw 6) TpaTropevos 7 pos TOV Sicacriyy éxéXevoevy atopaiverbat. tod dé &repov étépov
A > , ' se Ce ae bee \
yelpov eipnxevar pijcavtos “ OvKody,” épn, “ov 406
70

in answering questions, and Alexander therefore put difficult questions to them, declaring that he would put to death him who first made an incorrect answer, and then the rest, in an order determined in like manner; and he commanded one of them, the oldest, to be judge in the contest. The first one, accordingly, being asked which, in his opinion, were more numerous, the living or the dead, said that the living were, since the dead no longer existed. The second, being asked whether the earth or the sea produced larger animals, said the earth did, since the sea was but a part of the earth. The third, being asked what animal was most cunning, said: “ That which up to this time man has not discovered.” The fourth, when asked why he had induced Sabbas to revolt, replied : “ Because I wished him either to live nobly or to die nobly.” The fifth, being asked which, in his opinion, was older, day or night, replied: “ Day, by one day’; and he added, upon the king expressing amazement, that hard questions must have hard answers. _Passing on, then, to the sixth, Alexander asked how a man could be most loved ; “ If,” said the philosopher, “he is most powerful, and yet does not inspire fear.” Of the three remaining, he who was asked how one might become a god instead of man, replied: “ By doing something which a man cannot do”; the one who was asked which was the stronger, life or death, answered: “Life, since it supports so many ills.” And the last, asked how long it were well for a man to live, answered: “ Until he does not regard death as better than life.” So, then, turning to the judge, Alexander bade him give his opinion. The judge declared that they had answered one worse than another. “ Well, then,” said Alexander, “thou shalt

™ patos anobav7 TowadTa Kpivav. “Oven av Yer elev, “ @ Bacired, EL pn ov Wevdn pycas. Tpo-TOV QTTOKTEVELVY TOV aT OK PIV jEVOV KAKLOTA.
LXV. Toutous pev OvY ad ice Swpna dpevos:
™pos dé Tous év d0&n padtoTa Kal Kal’ abtovs év novxia CovTas émrepyrev ‘Ovnatxpitov, apices ba Sedpevos mpos autov. 0 6€ OvnatKpttos iv prro-copos TOV Atoyevet TO Kurexo@ cuverXoaxorov.
Kab pyc TOV pev Kadavov iBproricds Tavu Kal TPAXEWS KEAEVELY ATrOOUYTA TOV xeT@va ryULLVOV
axpoaa bat TOV Aoyov" adhos d€ ov brarefec Oar Tpos aUTOV, OVO’ el Tapa ToD Avos apiktas TOV dé Adveapu 7 PQOTEpov eival, Kal OvaxovcarTa
mepl LwKxparous Kat IvOayopov Kal Aoyévous ELTTELY WS EUPVELS pev avT@ yeyovevat Soxovaw ot avdpes, Atay dé ToS vomous aicyvvdpevoe BeBro-EVAL arrow d€ pace TOV Advéapuy ovdev evmrely aXW 1 TOTOUTOY povov" “Tivos Xdpw 0 “Ad EEav-dpos o0d0v TocauTny dep HAGE; TOP pev ToL Kadavov é@recev o Takidns édOety mpos ’Adé-Eavdpov. éxareito dé Xdivns: eel 6é Kat
Tvdicny yA@tTav T@ Kare mwpocayopevov avi Tod Xaipew tovs évtuyxavovtas nomaveto, Kahavos w7ro TOV “EAAnVOV avonacOn. TouUTov 6€ AéyeTat Kab TO Tapaderypa THS apxis TO ‘Ane-Eavopy mpobea Bar. KataBadov yap ev per

Bvpoay Twa Enpav Kat KaTeoKhnKviay eT aT ATE
TO axpov" 9 66 els év meaVeioa TOUS aNXOLS emnp-
On pépect. Kal TovTo Tepliov ey KoKMD Kal
TueSooy Kal exaoT ov edeiavue yeyvopevor, axpe ob
TO péaov eTLTTAS KaTéETXE Kal TaVTAa oUTWS Hpé-408

die first for giving such a verdict." "That cannot be, O King," said the judge, "unless thou falsely saidst that thou wouldst put to death first him who answered worst.'

LXV. These philosophers, then, he dismissed with gifts; but to those who were in the highest repute and lived quietly by themselves he sent Onesicritus, asking them to pay him a visit. Now, Onesicritus was a philosopher of the school of Diogenes the Cynic. And he tells us that Calanus very harshly and insolently bade him strip off his tunic and listen naked to what he had to say, otherwise he would not converse with him, not even if he came from Zeus; but he says that Dandamis was gentler, and that after hearing fully about Socrates, Pythagoras, and Diogenes, he remarked that the men appeared to him to have been of good natural parts but to have passed their lives in too much awe of the laws. Others, however, say that the only words uttered by Dandamis were these: "Why did Alexander make such a long journey hither?" Calanus, nevertheless, was persuaded by Taxiles to pay a visit to Alexander. His real name was Sphines, but because he greeted those whom he met with " Cale," the Indian word of salutation, the Greeks called him Calanus. It was Calanus, as we are told, who laid before Alexander the famous illustration of government. It was this. He threw down upon the ground a dry and shrivelled hide, and set his foot upon the outer edge of it; the hide was pressed down in one place, but rose up in others. He went all round the hide and showed that this was the result wherever he pressed the edge down, and then at last he stood in the middle of it, and lo! it was all held down firm and still.

409

unoev. €BovreTo dé 7) eixwy évderEts evar tov Ta péoa Sety pdrdtota THs apyns wrélev Kal py pakpav avotAavac Oat Tov "AréEavdpor.
LXVI. 'H dé ota TOV TOTALOY Tpos T Thy Oa-NaTTay uTaryory?) pnvev em Ta, xpovor avadwoer.
éuBarwv b€ Tats vavolv els Tov 'Oxeavov avé-TrEVTE TPOS VHgov iv UKihAodaTw avToOS wVOpacev, ETepor O€ Virtovav. évtatéa bé€ droBas €Ove Trois Geois, Kal tTHv dvaw éretde TOU weda-yous Kal THS TapaXdlas doov édixtov iv. eita émevEdpevos pndéva pet avtov avOparwy vrep-Siva Tous bpous Tihs oTpateias avéoT pepe. Kal

Tas ev vais éxéXevae TepiT Ney év de&ia THY Tvdeanv éyovaas, YE Hove. prev Tt Néapyxov arro8el-Eas, PON Tg dé ‘Ovnoixperor: avTos € mel © Opertav TOPEVOMEVOS ELS eoxatny aT0-play ripen Kat TAnGos avOpwrav aT WET ED, MOTE Tis paxipov Supauews pnde TO TETApTOV €k THS “Tvdiahs amayaryeiy. KALTOL dw@dexa pen pupeddes 7) Hoav ob meCol, TOO (mT LKOV ELS puptous
Kal TEevTakLg XiAOUS. andra Kal vooot xarerral
Kat dtartac movnpal Kal Kaupata Enpa kal TELTTOUS 0 Atpos SréhOecper, domopov xopav éTLOVTAS avO pwr KaKo Bio, ONiyYa Kal wyevVvh TpOBAaTAa KEKTNMEVOY, A TOUS GaratTious txOds
elO.a pwéeva mpoa Peper ar odpKa, poxOnpav elye Kat Suawon. ports ouv év npepars efnKovTa, TAUT ND diehOov Kal TIS Despwotas awdpevos evdus év ahOovols Hv Tact, TOV éyyloTa caTpaTa@v Kai Bactiéwy TapacKkevacavTwr.

1 In midsummer of 328 b.c.

2 It is Cilluta in Arrian (Anab. vi. 19, 3).

ALEXANDER, cxv, 4-Lxv1. 3

The similitude was designed to show that Alexander ought to put most constraint upon the middle of his empire and not wander far away from it.

LXVI. His descent of the rivers to the sea consumed seven months’ time. And after emerging with his fleet into the ocean,! he sailed out to an island to which he himself gave the name of Scillustis, others that of Psiltucis.2 Here he landed and sacrificed to the gods, and studied the nature of the sea and of all the sea-coast that was accessible. Then, after praying that no man after him might pass beyond the bounds of his expedition, he turned to go back. His fleet he ordered to go round by sea, keeping India on the right ; Nearchus was appointed admiral of the fleet, Onesicritus its chief-pilot. But he himself proceeded by land through the country of the Oreites, where he was reduced to the direst straits and lost a multitude of men, so that not even the fourth part of his fighting foree was brought back from India. And yet his infantry had once numbered a hundred and twenty thousand, and his cavalry fifteen thousand. But grievous diseases, wretched food, parching heats, and, worst of all,

famine destroyed them, since they traversed an untilled country of men who dragged out a miserable existence, who possessed but few sheep and those of a miserable sort, since the sea-fish which they ate made their flesh unsavoury and rank. It was with difficulty, then, that Alexander passed through this country in sixty days; but as soon as he reached Gedrosia he had all things in abundance, for the nearest satraps and princes had provided them.
411

PEUTARCH SS LIVES

LXVILI. ‘AvaraBov ouv evrabda THY Suvapup
eEw@ppnoe KOLO XPOLEVOS ep aypepas emTA OLa TIS Kappavias. avrov pep ovp (m7 Ob ayédnv éxouelov OKT, META TOV éTaipav UTT ep Ouperns ev vyIrA@ Kal TEpipavel TraLTLY memnyutas €UcoXOU MEV OV TUVEX WS npepas Kai VUKTOS" apakae dé TauTrndeis, al pev adoupyois Kal TOLKLAOLS meptBoraios, ai & Ans ael _mpoapatou Kal
XAwpas oxvalopevar KAdOoLS, ElTOVTO TOUS aA-Nous aryoud at dirous Kal nyeu“ovas éatepavwpevous Kat Wivovtas. ebdes O av Ov TéATHY, OV
Kpavos, ov cdpicay, adda Piddrars Kai puTois Kai Onpixrelors Tapa THY OOoV aTaCaY OF TTPATIATAL
Bartifovtes éx wifwyv pmeyaddwv Kal Kpatnpwv
GAANHNOLS TPOETTLVOY, OL pméev EV TO Tpodyew apa Kal Badifer, ol 6¢ KATAKELMEVOL. TON) 6é pov-ga cuplyyav Kal avr@v Bois Te Kal Nvrarpod Kal Baxxevas yuvark av KATELXE TavTa TOTOV. T@ dé
ATAKT® Kab TETAAYNMEVO TIS Topetas TAPElTETO
Kal maudua Baxxeris UBpews, ws Tob Jeov Tap-ovTOs avTov Kal TULTAPAT ELT OVTOS Tov K@ Lov.
émel de Ke THS Ledpwaias eis TO BaciNeov, av-Gis averauBave tiv oTpaTiay may yyupiov. dé-yeTau o€ peOvovta AUTOV Oewpety aryavas Nopav, Tov 6€ é €podpevov Bayoay Yopevovta vixhnoat Kai Kexoounpuevoyv Ota TOD Oeatpov tapedrOdvta Kabioat Tap avtov: toovtas dé TovsS Maxedovas Kpotety Kat Body didrfjaat xedevovtas, aypt ov mepiBarov Karepirnoer.

—

' According to Arrian (Aned. vi. 28, Lt), this bacchanalian procession through Carmania rests on no credible authority.

LXVII. Accordingly, after refreshing his forces here, he set out and marched for seven days through Carmania in a revelling rout. He himself was con- veyed slowly along by eight horses, while he feasted day and night continuously with his companions on a dais built upon a lofty and conspicuous scaffolding of oblong shape; and waggons without number fol- lowed, some with purple and embroidered canopies, others protected from the sun by boughs of trees which were kept fresh and green, conveying the rest of his friends and commanders, who were all garlanded and drinking. Not a shield was to be seen, not a helmet, not a spear, but along the whole march with cups and drinking-horns and flagons the soldiers kept dipping wine from huge casks and mixing-bowls and pledging one another, some as they marched along, others lying down; while pipes and flutes, stringed instruments and song, and revel- ling cries of women, filled every place with abundant music. Then, upon this disordered and straggling procession there followed also the sports of bacchan- alian license, as though Bacchus himself were present and conducting the revel.! Moreover, when he eame to the royal palace of Gedrosia, he once more gave his army time for rest and held high festival. We are told, too, that he was once viewing some contests in singing and dancing, being well heated with wine, and that his favourite, Bagoas, won the prize for song and dance, and then, all in his festal array, passed through the theatre and took his seat by Alexander's side; at sight of which the Mace- donians clapped their hands and loudly bade the king kiss the victor, until at last he threw his arms about him and kissed him tenderly.

LXVII. ‘Eyradda TOV mept Néapxov avaBav-
TOY 1 pos avTov jabeis Kal StaKkovaas 7a meph
Tov mWAODY, Oppnoev avTos TrEvC AS KaTa TOV Evdparny TTOAW peyarw, elTa Tepl THY "ApaBiav
kat rny AiBinv Tapaxopiabels 61a otndo@v ‘Hpa-KArelwv éuBareiv eis tiv évtds OddXaccav. kal Troia TavTooaTa Trept Odrwaxov émnyvuto, Kat
cuynyovTo vaitar Kal xuPepviitar wavtayoeev.
O€ AVM oTpareia Xarer 7) yevomevn Kal TO TEpL
MaaxXovs Tpabpa Kal um pOopa TONAN AexPeioa THS duvapews anata THs. coTnpias avTOU Ta TE UmnKOG 7 pos dTroaT aa els émnpe Kal Tos OTpartnyous Kab cartpam ats adexiav } TONNIY Kal ™EoveE-Etav Kal vBpw eve oinae® Kal dds , Sued pape

GdXos aTdvTwy Kal vewtTepicmos. O7ov Kal ampos “Avtimatpov ‘Odvumias kat Kreordtpa oTaclucacaL OLecAOVTO THY apyYnr, ‘Odupmids
pev “H-recpov, Kreoratpa 6é Maxedoviay trapa-NaBovca. Kat TovTO aKovaas ‘AréEavdpos Bér-TLov eb BeBovretobar THY pnTépa: Maxedovas yap ovK dv vopeivar Baatevopevovs v0 YUVALKOS.
Ava tradrta Néapyov pév adfis émi Odraccav
emepapen, euT AHO at TONEY aTacay eYVOKOS
THY Tapantay, avTos 6é cataBatvor éxonate TOUS TOVNpOVvS T@V aoTpAaTHY@V. Tov € ‘A Bouhntov matowy éva pev “Okvaprny avtos amméxtetve caption dtedacas, A Boudajrov bé pnoev TOV dvaykatov TApATKEvaoavTos, arr 7 Tpioxirea TUAQAVTA VvOpiTpaTOS avVT@® TpocayayovTos, éKé-
1 dd:clav Bekker reads axnSlay (indifference) with a Munich MS. (M.).
414

70

ALEXANDER, cxvu. 1-4

LXVIII. Here Nearchus came up to meet him, and Alexander was so delighted to hear of his voyage that he eagerly desired to sail down the Euphrates himself with a large fleet,) and then, after circum-navigating Arabia and Africa, to enter the Mediter- ranean by way of the pillars of Heracles. And vessels of every sort were built for him at Thapsacus, and sailors and pilots were assembled from all parts. But the increasing difficulties of his march back, his wound among the Malli, and the losses in his army, which were reported to be heavy, led men to doubt his safe return, inclined subject peoples to revolt, and bred great injustice, rapacity, and insolence in the generals and satraps whom he had appointed. Ina word, rest- lessness and a desire for change spread everywhere. For even against Antipater, Olympias and Cleopatra had raised a faction, and had divided his realm between them, Olympias taking Epirus, and Cleopatra Macedonia. When he heard of this, Alexander said that his mother had made the better choice; for the Macedonians would not submit to be reigned over by a woman.

For these reasons he sent Nearchus back to the sea,” determined to fill all the regions along the sea with wars, while he himself, marching down from Upper Asia, chastised those of his commanders who had done wrong. One of the sons of Abuletes, Oxy- artes, he slew with his own hand, running him through with a spear; and when Abuletes failed to furnish him with the necessary provisions, but brought him instead three thousand talents in coin, Alexander

1 It was after his return to Persepolis that this desire seized him (Arrian, Anabd, vii. 1, 1).
2 Early in 324 B.c.

a C/ \ b ? a ¢€ ANevae TOls immols TO apyUpLoy TrapaBarely. ws
' > b a / 66 / 5 wv (ral a & ove éyevovto, dycas, "Tt ovv operos nyiv ths a A " n SN 3 , ons TapacKevns; KabeipEe tov ABovrAnrny.
/ a" LXIX. Ev 6€ Ilépcais mpa@tov péev atédwxe 70
a , 4
voulopa Tals yuvakiv, womep ebw0ercav of Bact-
a / ,

Nels, oodks ets Hépoas adixowrto, dudovar ypv-

A \ aA ,
covv éxdotn. Kal dia tovTO daciw éeviovs pyr TorrdKs, OQyov 6€ pnde arrak eis Ilépcas wapa-
\ f a yevéoOar, ia puexporoyiav amokevacavta Tihs
, e / 4 N , , -
maTtploos éuvtov. émerta Tov Kupov tddov ev-
\ ,
pov diopwpuypévov améxtetve Tov dadtKnoarta,
an 9 a e
xaitot [leXXatos HY ov TOV donpoTdtwV Oo TANL, yg , \ \ > \
perrjoas, dvoua Todkvpayos. thy 5€é émiypadny
? \ Sees: e a e , avayvous éxédkevoey EXXAnuikois vmoyapakéat
, Sep be e : FC) of Q ee
ypdupaci. elye O€ oTwS avi pwrre, batts 9? N ef 4 ed \ of \ (v4 s 3 4 el kat O0ev Hees, OTL pév yap Ee, oida, éyw
a € / A Kipos epi o Wlépcars xtnodpevos thy apxiy.
a f , a pen ody THS OAlyns poe TavTNS ys POovijons } na ' lo)
TOULOV Coma TepikaduTTEL. TavTa pev ovV
a , \ a éuTralh opodpa tov AréEavdpoy eroincey, ev v@

f
NaBovta THY adnrAOTHTA Kal peTAaBorNDY.
‘O d€ Karavos évtat@a ypovov od modvy vie Kotdias evoyAnVEls NTHTAaTO TUpav aUvT@ yevéaOat. Kal Koptobels imm@ mpos avtny, émevédpevos Kal KATAGTELTaS EaUTOVD Kal TOV T PLY OV atrapEdmevos, avaBaivoy édeE.odTo Tous TwapovTas
a / \

Ttav Maxedovwr, cal wapexdrer THV pépav éxetordered the money to be thrown to his horses. And when they would not touch it, “ Of what use to us, then,’ he cried, “is the provision you have made?” and threw Abuletes into prison.

LXIX. In Persia, to begin with, he distributed the money among the women, just as their kings were accustomed, as often as they came into Persia, to give each one of them a gold piece. And for this reason, it is said, some of their kings did not come often into Persia, and Ochus not even once, being so penurious as to expatriate himself. In the second place, having discovered that the tomb of Cyrus had been rifled, he put to death the perpetrator of the deed, although the culprit was a prominent Mace- donian native of Pella, by name Polymachus. After reading the inscription upon this tomb, he ordered it to be repeated below in Greek letters. It ran thus: Q man, whosoever thou art and whencesoever thou comest, for I know that thou wilt come, I am Cyrus, and I won for the Persians their empire. Do not, therefore, begrudge me this little earth which covers my body.” These words, then, deeply affected Alexander, who was reminded of the uncertainty and mutability of life.}

In Persia, too, Calanus, who had suffered for a little while from intestinal disorder, asked that a funeral pyre might be prepared for him.2 To this he came on horseback, and after offering prayers, sprinkling himself, and casting some of his hair upon the pyre, he ascended it, greeting the Macedonians who were present, and exhorting them to make that

Cf. Arrian, Anah. vi. 29, 4-8.
2 The self-sacrifice of Calanus is narrated by Arrian {Anab. vii. 3).

yyy nodéws yevécOar Kat peOvabjvar peta tov Bactréws, autor b€ éxeivoyv Epn pet’ orALyov ypo- vov év BaBur@rt oecGat. Tavta & eimwv KaTa-

Kr els Kat TUYKAAVY A HEVOS ove exivy7On TOU TUpOs TANoLaLOVTOS, arr’ é&v ® KateKhiOn aX) part, TOUTO dcatnpav éxaddépyoev EAUTOV TO Tar pio Vou TOV €KEL copia Ta. TovTO Tools eTeoty VoTEpov Gros "Tvdos év ‘AG ijvats Kaicape cuvwv éroince Kal SeixvuTat MEY pL VOY TO uYN-petov lvdod mpocayopevopevov.
LXX. ‘O dé ’AdéEavdpos aro THs Tupas yevo-PEVOS, Kal cuvayayov TOdOUS Tov didov Kal TOY ny ELOVe@Y emt Oeimvon, ayava ™ povOnke Kal oTepavov axpaToTroctas. 0 pev ovv mrEioTOD
TLV Il popayos axpe VO@y TET oO Upw@Vv mT ponrOe Kal haBav TO vent pLov, orépavov TadavTtatov, Tpepas Tpels emélnoe. TOV d6€ GAAWY, WS Xapns ona, TETTAPAKOVTA Kal els arébavov TLOVTES, LayupoU ™ pedn Kpvous eTUYEVOMEVOU.
Tov 6€ € éralpov yapov ev Lov ous ETLTEA@DV, KAL
NauBdvwv péev autos yuvaixa tHV Aapetov Ovya-Tépa Yratecpav, diavéwwv S5€ Tas aptotas Tots apiotols, Kowwov b€ TaV 6m 7 poyeyaunKorov Makedovev yapov avrov! éotiacas, ev © pact evVAKLTXLMOY TOY TAPAkEKANMEVOY emt 70 Get mvov ovTwy EKETT Xpua hy diary T pos Tas oToVveds bof jvat, Ta Te adda Javpacras eda 7 puvaro Kab Ta vpéa Tos davetcacw UTE p TOV operdovTov aUvTos dsaduoas, TOU TAVTOS QvaXwpatos éAdoooves pupiwy TaddvTwv éxaTov Tplda-1 &AAov Bekker, after Coraés: xaddyv with the MSS.

day one of pleasure and revelry with the king, whom, he declared, he should soon see in Babylon. After thus speaking, he lay down and covered his head, nor did he move as the fire approached him, but continued to lie in the same posture as at first, and so sacrificed himself acceptably, as the wise men of his country had done from of old. The same thing was done many years afterwards by another Indian who was in the following of Caesar,! at Athens; and the “Indian’s Tomb” is shown there to this day.

LXX. But Alexander, afte: returning from the funeral pyre and assembling many of his friends and officers for supper, proposed a contest in drinking neat wine, the victor to be crowned. Well, then, the one who drank the most, Promachus, got as far as four pitchers;? he took the prize, a crown of a talent's worth, but lived only three days afterwards.

And of the rest, according to Chares, forty-one died of what they drank, a violent chill having set in after their debauch.
At Susa he brought to pass the marriage of his companions, took to wife himself the daughter of Dareius, Stateira, assigned the noblest women to his noblest men, and gave a general wedding feast for those of his Macedonians who had already contracted other marriages. At this feast, we are told, nine thousand guests reclined at supper, to each of whom a golden cup for the libations was given. All the other appointments too, were amazingly splendid, and the host paid himself the debts which his guests owed, the whole outlay amounting to nine thousand

1 Augustus Caesar.
2 The ' chous," or pitcher, held about three quarts.
419

3

2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

KovTa TahavTous yevouevov. érret 6€ "Avtiyévys
0 érepopOan pos OS apetdwy aTreypawato pevdas, Kat Tapayayeov Tiva pacKovta Sedaverkévar 7 pos
Thy Tparelay, ATETLOE TO apyupiov, elTa epwpa-
On Wevdopevos, opyea bets O Bactrevs aTnhace THS avAns avToyv Kal TapeteTo THY TIVE MOVLAY.
jv 6€ AapTpas ev TOS TrONEmLKOIS Oo "AvTLyévns Kat étt d€ véos wv, Pidimrov TrodopKodvtTos ITépwOov, éumecovtTos avT@ KatameAtiKov BéXous ets TOV OPGarpor, ov Twapécye Bovropévars é€e-hety TO BéXos ovdé UPHKato T ply dcacbat tpoc-wax opevos Kal KaTaKhetoat TOUS Tohepious ets
TO TELXOS. ov HeTpios ouv TOTE THY aruuiay
Epepev, GAAA SHAOS Hv éavTov vie AUTNS Kal BapuOupias Siaxpyaopevos. Kal TOUTO detoas O Bactrevs avijce THY Opynv Kal Ta Xpypata exe éxéNevoev avTov.
LXXI. Tov dé rraidwy trav tpiopuptwr, ods aaKxoupévous Kat pavOavovtas améduTe, Tois TE copacw avdpetwv davévtwy Kat Tois eideowy
evmperra@v, éTt 5é Kal Tails per€Tals evyepevav

Kat Kovgotnta Oavyaotny émidevEapévwr, avtos
pev Han, tois 6€ Maxedoot SucOvupia trapéoty Kal dé05, WS TTOV avTois TOD Bacthéws mpoce-Eovtos. 610 Kal Tovs acOevels Kal TeTNnpwpévous avTov KatatéumTovTos emt Odrattav UBpw éepacap elvau Kab _Tpommhakia Lov, av0 pwrrots arro-KENT apwevor eis aravra vov arrotiBea bas ou
aloxXUYn Kat Tpocpintev Tais Tatpict Kal Tots

1 Alexander also paid the debts of all his soldiers, amounting to 20,000 talents (Arrian, Arnab. vii. 5, 1-3), eight hundred and seventy talents.! Now Antigenes, the One-eyed, had got himself enrolled as a debtor fraudulently and, on producing somebody who affirmed that he had made a loan to him at the bank, the money was paid over; then his fraud was discovered, and the king, in anger, drove him from his court and deprived him of his command. Antigenes, however, was a splendid soldier, and while he was still a young man and Philip was besieging Perinthus, though a bolt from a catapult smote him in the eye, he would not consent to have the bolt taken out nor give up fighting until he had repelled the enemy and shut them up within their walls. Accordingly, he could not endure with any complacency the disgrace that now fell upon him, but was evidently going to make away with himself from grief and despondency. So the king, fearing this, put away his wrath and ordered him to keep the money.

LXXI. The thirty thousand boys whom he had left behind him under instruction and training 2 were now so vigorous in their bodies and so comely in their looks, and showed besides such admirable dexterity and agility in their exercises, that Alexander himself was delighted ; his Macedonians, however, were filled with dejection and fear, thinking that their king would now pay less regard to them. Therefore when he also sent the weak and maimed among them down to the sea-board, they said it was insult and abuse, after using men up in every kind of service, now to put them away in disgrace and cast them back upon their native cities and their parents, no longer unless this is the donation which Plutarch has here erro- neously connected with the great wedding feast. Cf. Athenaeus, xii. pp. 538 ff. 2 Cf. chapter xlvii. 3.

yovetalv, ov ToLovTous TapadaPovTa. TuVvTas oby éxédevov adiévat Kat mavTas aXpHaoTous
vopitery Maxedovas, (ExovTa TOUS VEOUS TOUTOUS TUPPLXLOTAS, our ois emo KATAKTHOETAL THY

oixoupevny. ™ pos Tatra Naren as O “AréEavd pos EXE, Kal ToAXa pev éhordopnaey QUTOUS Tpos
opy ny, amedacas dé Tas pudaras Ta peSwKe
Ilépaars Kat KaTéo THO ED ex TOUT@Y Sopupopous
Kat paBdodopous, up ov op@ures aurov Twapa-TE [LTOLEVOV, avTous d€ a aT €LpryOLEvOUS Kat ™poTrn-AaKlopevous, ETaTrELVOUYTO® Kal didovTes Noryov
eUptoKov atrous odMyou Sety pavevtas vmod &ndo-TuTias Kal opyfs. TéXOS be TULP porns aves éBaéilov advotrrot Kal povoyitwves ett THY oKNvay, pera, Bons Kat KravO Lod mrapacidovTes éavTous Kab xpycacGat KéehevovTes OS Kaxois Kab axapioTous.) & ov 7 poo ieTo, KaiTrep 780 pahacaopevos. ot S ovK ames Tn oay, GNX TEpas dvo Kal vUKTas OUTW TpocTETTaTES Kal OAOhUPO-fevot Kal Kolpavov avaKxadovvTes exapTépnaar.
Th O€ Tpitn mpoeAOwy Kali Deacdmevos otKTpods kal TeTATELV@LEVOUS eSdxpve TONY Xpovov elTa
pe papa pevos peT pla Kat _Mpooaryopevoas dirav-Oowmws améNuce TOUS aXPNTTOUS S@pnaapevos
peyaron pers, Kal yparras 7 pos "Avtitrat pov 67 WS év TaoL ToS aydor Kab Tos GeaTpous mpoEdptav & EXovTeEs eo repaveopevor KabeCowto. TOV 6 TeOuNKOT@Y Tous taidas ophavovs évTas éupi-aBous érroinaen.

1 The account of the quarrel between Alexander and the Macedonians in Arrian (Anab. vii. 8-11) differs materially from that of Plutarch.

the men they were when he took them. Accordingly, they bade him send them all away and hold all his Macedonians of no account, since he had these young war-dancers, with whom he could go on and conquer the world.! At these words of theirs Alexander was displeased, and heaped much abuse upon them in his anger, and drove them away, and committed his watches to Persians, and out of these constituted his body-guards and attendants. When the Macedonians saw him escorted by these, while they themselves were excluded from him and treated with contumely, they were humbled; and when they reasoned the matter out they found that they had been almost mad with jealousy and rage. So finally, after coming to their senses, they went to his tent, without their arms and wearing their tunics only, and with loud cries and lamentations put themselves at his mercy, bidding him deal with them as base and thankless men. But Alexander would not see them, although his heart was softening. And the men would not desist, but for two days and nights persisted in standing thus before his door, weeping and calling upon their master. So on the third day he came forth, and when he saw their piteous and humble plight, wept for some time; then, after chiding them gently and speaking kindly to them, he dismissed those who were past service with magnificent gifts, and wrote to Antipater that at all the public contests and in the theatres they should have the foremost seats and wear garlands. He also ordained that the orphan children of those who had lost their lives in his service should receive their father's pay.?

* Cf. Arrian, Anab, vii. 12.

€ \ > A LXXITI. 'Os 6€ jxev ets ExSatava tis Myéias
\ , °
Kal StwoKNGE TA KaTETELYOVTA, Tad Ty év Oea-
, \ 4 A
TpOLS Kat Tavnyupeciv, ate 1 TPLTXLALWY AUTO
a 3 \ a e , ' / " TexviTav amo Ths "EAXdbos aduypévav. Etvye
e tv ,
dé epi Tas nuépas éxeivas Hdaiatiwy mupéo-
\ \
cwv ola b€ véos Kab oTpatiwtiKos ov dépwv 3 a f e a \ 3 \ A axpiBn startav, dpa to Tov tatpov TAav«ov
a U U
amenOeiv eis TO O€atpov mept aptaTov yevopevos
\ \ > , e X \ fal
Kat Katapayov arextpvova edOov Kali Wwuxtiipa
\ ' a / N
péyay exTi@y olvou KaK@s €aye Kal puxpov dia-
\ > / " 3 \ a A 4

AuTr@Y aTéBave. TOUTO OvdEerlt NOYLTL@ TO TADOS
Yi bd \ 7
"AréEavdpos nveyxev, AXN evOvs pev introus Te
a , / / ,
Kelpat TavtTas émt wévOer Kal nutovous éxédeuvce
\ a i , ’ a \ 3 f \
Kal Tov TéepLE Trohewy udetre Tas emTradkets, TOV \ oy > \ 3 z ’ ‘\ \ f
dé GOXtov taTpov avertavpwaerv, avrous € KaTé-
\ \ a A
Tavoe Kat povotkny taaav év TO oTpaToTéso
\ , ce 3 ” 9 A
moXvy xXpovov, Ews €& “Appwvos 7rAGe pavteia
A € , AS / e ied oo td
tiwav Hdatotiova cat Ove ws hpwi TapaKered-“ \ / t a ovoa. Tov b€ wévOovs rapnyopia TO Toru
td (4 JN / \ /
Ypa@pmevos, WaTrep el Onpay Kal Kuvynyéotov av-
/ b] A \ N Sac , vw
Opworwv €&f\Oe cal to Koccaiwv éO@vos Kxarte-
- ‘d ¢ * 3 , a \
atpédeto, TavTas nBndov aTochutzTwv. TovTO 6é
€ 4 > \ 3 al Zz \ Hdatotiwvos évayiopos éxadretto. TUpBov be \ lay N a 4
Kal Tapny avTov Kal Tov Tepl TADTA KOTMLOV ATO
4 4
pupiwy TaXravTwY eTtTENEcal SLtavoovpevos, UTEp-Barécba. b€ TO hiroTtéxvw Kal TeptTTe® TH
& é& xX e Pp é THS
A , 9 a, ra)
KaTaoKeuns THY SaTravyy, éwoOnce padiota TAY
TeXViTOY XTacixpatynv, peyadoupylay tiva Kal
\ ; a TOAMAaY Kal KO-TrOY Ev Tals KalvoTOMiats éTAy-424

ALEXANDER, -xxn. 1-3

LXXIJ. When he came to Ecbatana in Media and had transacted the business that was urgent, he was once more much occupied with theatres and festivals, since three thousand artists had come to him from Greece. But during this time it chanced that Hephaestion had a fever; and since, young man and soldier that he was, he could not submit to a strict regimen, as soon as Glaucus, his physician, had gone off to the theatre, he sat down to breakfast, ate a boiled fowl, drank a huge cooler of wine, fell sick, and in a little while died. Alexander's grief at this loss knew no bounds.! He immediately ordered that the manes and tails of all horses and mules should be shorn in token of mourning, and took away the battlements of the cities round about ; he also crucified the wretched physician, and put a stop to the sound of flutes and every kind of music in the camp for a long time, until an oracular response from Amnion came bidding him honour Hephaestion as a hero and sacrifice to him. Moreover, making war a solace for his grief, he went forth to hunt and track down men, as it were, and overwhelmed the nation of the Cossaeans, slaughtering them all from the youth upwards. This was called an offering to the shade of Hephaestion. Upon a tomb and obse- quies for his friend, and upon their embellishments, he purposed to expend ten thousand talents, and wished that the ingenuity and novelty of the construction should surpass the expense. He therefore longed for Stasicrates above all other artists, because in his innovations there was always promise of great

1 Arrian finds great diversity in the accounts of Alexander's displays of grief at Hephaestion's death (Anab.
vil. 14),
425

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 yeANOmEVOV. OUTOS yap aUT@® mMpoTEpoy evTVYwV
Epn TOV Opav partota TOV Opaxcov "AOwy divatv-4
3 , , \ 4
Twow avopeikedov SéxyecOar Kat dtapoppwoi
/ a dv ovv Kerevy, povimwTatov ayadkpdTwov avT@
\ , b] ? \ " A Kal Tmepipavéotatov é€epyacecbat tov "Adar, Ti
a ld
fev aploTEepa Yelpi TEptAauBavovTa puptavdpor TOAW oLKovpEeVyY, TH O€ SeELa oTEevdovTA TOTAapod
ea \ 3 \ f > ?
pevpa darwires ets tHY Paddaccav atroppéovTos.
TAVTA Mev OY TAPNTHTATO, TOAA® O€ aTOTMTEPA
\ , 4
kat damavnpotepa TovTwy codifopevos TOTE Kal
a / TULELNVAvOpevos Tols TeyviTass OvéTpIBev.
LXXIIT. Es 6€ BaBvrava tpodyovtos av'tod
/ b t, \ g > 4 3 \
Néapyos (adixeto yap avOis eiamdevaas eis Tov Evdparny dia THs peyadrns Paraoons) pn Tivas a A id a évtuyely avT@ Xaddaiovs, Tapatwovvtas aéxe-
aA by

a0a. BaBvawvos tov “AréEavdpov. o bé ovx
b , > > ? f \ \ a ?
eppovTicev, ANA ETrOpEvETO’ KAL TPOS TOLS TEL-
€ A tA
YeTL yevopevos opa Kopaxas TrodXovs dtadhepopé-VOUS Kat TUTTOVTAS GAANAOUS, WV EVLOL KATETTETOV
-
2 Tap avTov. meta pyvvcews yevouevyns Kata
"AvoAXob@pou Tov atpaTnyod THs BaBvAOvos ws v \ > a“ Z 3 UA ? \
ein Trept autou TeOvpmevos, éxarer Tlu@ayopay tov MavTlw. ovK apvovpevov b€ TH” TpakEW npaTnae
A ° A , i
TOY iep@v Tov TpoTov. dryaavtos bé GTL TO z 9 ” 6é II 4% 3 ow? \ ‘ nmap 7v aroBov, aval, elev, “toyupoy TO A ” \ a , by \ 3 he onuetov’” Kai tov Iv@ayopay ovéév nbdixnoer.
HYOeTO € wn TeLcOels TH Ned py, Kai TA TONKA
A a v a \ /
THs BaBuradvos é&m xatacknvav Kat TEepttTrEwv 426

ALEXANDER, txxn. 4 LXXxI. 2

magnificence, boldness, and ostentation. This man, indeed, had said to him at a former interview that of all mountains the Thracian Athos could most readily be given the form and shape of a man; if, therefore, Alexander should so order, he would make out of Mount Athos a most enduring and most con- spicuous statue of the king, which in its left hand should hold a city of ten thousand inhabitants, and with its right should pour forth a river running with generous current into the sea. This project, it is true, Alexander had declined ; but now he was busy devising and contriving with his artists projects far more strange and expensive than this.

LXXIII. As he was on his way to enter Babylon, Nearchus (who had joined him again after sailing through the ocean into the Euphrates) told the king that certain Chaldaeans had met him and advised that Alexander should keep away from Babylon.! Alexander paid no heed to this, but con- tinued on his march; and when he was arrived at the walls, he saw many ravens flying about and clawing one another, and some of them fell dead at his feet. Again, being informed that Apollodorus the commandant of Babylon had sacrificed to learn Alexander’s fate, Alexander called Pythagoras the seer. Pythagoras did not deny the fact, whereupon Alexander asked him what was the character of the sacrifice, And when the seer told that the victim's liver had no lobe, "Ah me!" said Alexander, "a forcible omen!" and did Pythagoras no harm. He was sorry, too, that he had not obeyed Nearchus, and passed most of his time outside of Babylon, either

1 According to Arrian (Anab. vii. 16, 5), the Chaldaeans besought Alexander in person to suspend his march to Babylon. It was in the spring of 323 B.c.

3 tov Evdpatny duetpiBev. nvwyrer 8 avtov a / \ \ Ty, a / onpela TOAAA. Kal yap NEoVTA THY TpEpoLEevwV
, \ iA ce wv $ \
péyloTov Kal KaXXdLOTOV TuEpos Ovos éTEeAOwY
A 3
Kat NaKticas dveirAev. atroduvcapévou dé mTpos area Kal ohaipay avtod tailovtos of veaviaKkot of ahatpifovtes, ws det madw AaBeiv Ta ud Jopaorv av vy TO Opo befo iwatia, Ka0opwoty avOpwrov ev TO Opovw Kabelo-uevoyv otwmn, TO diadnua Kal THY oTOANnY THY Ba-N id « ? s
4 GCLALKIY TEPLKELLEVOY. OUTOS avaKpLVOMEVOS baTIS v \ ' " = f \
eln, TOAVY Ypovoy avavdos Hv: ports O€ cUpdpo-
, , \ ¥ A ,
vicas Arovvctos pev én xareicbat, Meoaonmos dé elvas TO yévos: é« O€ TLVOS aitias Kal KaTN-
, 3 na \ ? N 4 N
yoptas evtav0a Koptobets ato Gadaoans Todvy
a \ a ypovov yeyovévar év Secpois: apts 6€ avT@ Tov Sapaniv émiotavta tors deapovs aveivat xal mpoayayety dedpo, Kal Keredoat AaPBovta TV
\ a oToAny Kal TO Oiddnua Kabioat Kai ciwTay.
LXXIV. Tatra axovoas o 'AdéEavdpos Tov
\ " de Sarah, € a ? s pev avOpwrov, MaTEp ExéXEVOY Of pavTELs, Hda-

b] \ \ 3 4 \ , @ N ‘
vioev' avtos Oé nOvper Kal duceATIS Fv pos TO wn > id
Geiov 5n Kat mpos tous dirovs bromtos. pa-
Nota bé€ Avtitvatpov époPeito Kai Tovs traisas, @ 77 ‘ ’ , a e A / av “lodas pev apyowvoyoos nv, 0 dé Kacavépos
? a \ f 4 \ ,
adixto pev vewatlt, Oeacdpuevos d€ BapBapous
fay ef \ , ¢€
TWas MpooKkuvourtas, ate 5) TeOpappévos “EA-ANUKas Kal ToLvodTO MpoTEepov pHdev Ewpakas,
e ?
2 éyékace TpoTetéaTepov. o d€ Arét~avdpos wpryin A fa) , a8, cal dpaEdpevos avtov tov tptyav ofodpa 428
ALEXANDER, -xxin. 3-Lxxiv. 2

living in his tent, or sailing about on the Euphrates. And he was troubled by many omens. For instance, the largest and handsomest lion in his menagerie was attacked by a tame ass and kicked to death. Again, he once took off his clothes for exercise and was playing at ball, and when it was time to dress again, the young men who were playing with him beheld a man seated on the king’s throne, in silence, wearing the royal diadem and _ robes. When the man was asked who he was, he was speechless for a long time; but at last he came to his senses and said that his name was Dionysius, and that he was a native of Messenia; in consequence of some charge brought against him, he said, he had been brought thither from the sea-board, and for a long time had been in chains; but just now the god Serapis had come to him and loosed his chains and brought him to this spot, bidding him put on the robe and diadem and sit on the throne and hold his peace.}

LXXIV. On hearing of this, Alexander put the man out of the way, as the seers directed; but he began to be low-spirited, and was distrustful now of the favour of Heaven and suspicious of his friends. He was particularly afraid of Antipater and of his sons, one of whom, Iolas, was his chief cupbearer ; the other, Cassander, had only recently come to Babylon, and when he saw some Barbarians doing obeisance to Alexander, since he had been reared as a Greek and had never seen such a sight as this before, he laughed boisterously. But Alex- ander was enraged, and clutching him fiercely by

1 Other predictions of Alexander’s death are given in Arrian (Anab. vil. 18, 22, and 24), 429

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tals xEpaly apporTépars em a.as THY Kkeparnv T pos TOV TOIXOV. avOis 5€ mpos TOUS KaTnyopobvTas ‘Avrem at pou Névyely Te Bovhopevov TOV Kdoavépov éxxpovwv, “Ti réyets;” édyn, “TocavTny odov avOpwrovs pndev adsxovpévovs, dANA ouKOpar-toovtas édGeiv;” dicavtos 5é tov Kacavédpou TOUTO AUTO ONnpEtov Eivat TOU aUKOdarTELV, OTL paKkpay iKovat TOV eACY NOV, avayedacas o 'A)é-Eavopos, “Tabra €xelva, eb, “copiopata TOV ‘Apiarorédous ELS ExATEPOV TOV ovyou oluw Eope-vov,! av Kal puxpov adixovyTes TOUS avOpwirous pavire.” TO 6€ dAOV OUTw gaat dervov évdvrat Kal devoorooy eyyevéa Oat TH uxh Tob Kacav-dpou To dé0s, waTE VaTEpoV Xpovoes TONAOES, non MAO es Bactrevorvta Kat KparouvTa Ths ‘EX-Aabos, éy Acrdois TepLTaTovvTa Kat Gewwevov TOUS avdpiavras, ELK OVOS ’AdeEdvopou paveions, ddvw wAnyévta dpitar kal xpadavOFjvat TO capa Kal ports avaraPelv EavTor, thiyytacavtTa Tpos THY Oe.

LXXV. ‘O 8 obv “AréEavdpos Ws EVEOWKE TOTE ™ pos Ta Oeta Tapaxwons YEVvOpEVOS Kai mepihoBos THY dtdvocar, ovdev my pcx pov OUTWS TOY anbav Kat atoTwv & pn TEpas €TOLELTO eal onpeior aGXra Ovopeveov Kal cabatpovtov Kal pavTevov-TwY pecToY Vv TO Baciretov. ovTwWS dpa Setvov pev 1) amiotia mpos Ta Oeia Kal Katadpovnars avtav, den dé avOes 7) Setocdaipovia, 4,2 Sieny Udatos del WpOs TO TATTELVOUMEVOY KaTappéoVTOS,”

1 oluwtonéevwy Sint. with the best MSS.; ofuwtoueévou ye Coraés ; oiudtn nev obv Bekker.

2 4, xatappéovtos supplied by Bekker, after Curaés, 430

-

the hair with both hands dashed his head against the wall. And at another time, when Cassander would have said something in opposition to those who were bringing charges against Antipater, Alexander interrupted him, saying: “What meanest thou? Would men come so long a journey if they had not been wronged and were making false charges?”? And when Cassander declared that this very fact of their coming a long distance away from the proofs showed that they were making false charges, Alexander burst out laughing and said: “ These are the famous sophisms of Aristotle’s disciples for either side of the question ; but ye shall rue the day if it appear that ye have done these men even a slight wrong.” And in general, as we are told, Cassander’s spirit was deeply penetrated and imbued with a dreadful fear of Alexander, so that many years afterwards, when he was now king of Macedonia and master of Greece, as he was walking about and surveying the statues at Delphi, the sight of an image of Alexander smote him suddenly with a shuddering and trembling from which he could scarcely recover, and made his head swim.

LXXV. Alexander, then, since he had now become sensitive to indications of the divine will and perturbed and apprehensive in his mind, converted every unusual and strange occurrence, were it never so insignificant, into a prodigy and portent; and sacrificers, purifiers, and diviners filled his palace. So, you see, while it is a dire thing to be incredulous towards indications of the divine will and to have con- tempt for them, superstition is likewise a dire thing, which, after the manner of water ever seeking the aveT’npouv! aBertepias KxatadoBov tov ’Are-

\ a Eavdpov yevopevov. ov pny adda Kal Xpnopov ye Tov wept Hdacotiwvos éx Oe0d Kopicbevtoy
? , \ a ny § 3 f \
aToBéuevos TO TévOos avOis Hy év Ovatats Kai
a f TOTOLS. éaTidoas O€ AauTPas Tos mept Ne-

s Ve ef 77 f
apyxov, elTa ovoapeEros, WoTrEp etwmber heANOY cabevdev, Mndiov denbévtos ByeTo Kwpacopevos
, a fa ,
Tpos AaUTOV’ KaKEl TLwY GANY THY eTLovGAaY 1)LE-
” i , of, f ‘H a
pav nofato TupéTTav, ovte cxvgov Hpaxréovs
\ , X
éxtri@y ovTe abvw Stadryns yevopevos TO peTa-
e \ a ,
hpevov waTEp AOYXN TWeTANywS, adda TadTa
Tives @oVvTO Sely ypadev WaTrep SpduaTos peya-Nouv Tpayixoyv éEdd.oy Kal TepiTrabes TAACAYTES. aX U 6 , > NV , ptaotoBovros 6€ dyna avtov TupeTTOYTA pavi-Kas, Supnaarvta 6¢ cpodpa Tuety oivoy’ éx TovTOU
dé hpeviTidoat, Kal TeXeuTHoat Tptaxdds Aatoiou
£
LLNVOS.
- A , iY
LXXVI. "Ev 6€ tats éfnpepiow ottws yéeypa-
, b] ,
MTaL TA Tepl THY vooov. oydon éml SexaTn
Aa.otov pnvos exabevdev Ev T@ NoUTP@VML La TO
, “A AP oe, cal , b>] A J mupéear. TH Oe EENS NovadpeEvos Eis TOV Oddapov nn ai \ } , \ / 16 tZ pmeTHrAGe, Kal Sunpepeve mpos Mndsov xuBevov.
9 3 3 \ ? ‘ \ ¢ \ ~ a ?
eit Owe AOVTUMEVOS Kal Ta lEepa TOis OeEots érrt-\ > \ \ \ 9 4 A 3 Z
Geis euhayov oid vuxKtos émupete. TH ELKads
, ? v \ ? / ,
Novadpevos marw eOvae THY E:Oropevny Bvciar:
Kal KaTakeipevos év TH NOUTPHML Tots Trepl Néap-

1 gvenArpouv Coraés’ correction of the MSS. xa) avarAnpoir, adopted by Bekker.
2 xatapoBov Coraés’ correction of the MSS. xal gdBou, adopted by Bekker.

lower levels, filled with folly the Alexander who was now become a prey to his fears. Notwithstanding, in consequence of oracular responses regarding Hephaestion which were brought him, he laid aside his grief and betook himself once more to sacrifices and drinking-bouts. He gave a splendid entertainment to Nearchus, and then, although he had taken his customary bath before going to bed, at the request of Medius he went to hold high revel with him ;! and here, after drinking all the next day, he began to have a fever. This did not come upon him after he had quaffed a “bowl of Heracles,” nor after he had been seized with a sudden pain in the back as though smitten with a spear; these particulars certain writers felt obliged to give, and so, as it were, invented in tragic fashion a moving finale for a great action. But Aristobulus says that he had a raging fever, and that when he got very thirsty he drank wine, whereupon he became delirious, and died on the thirtieth day of the month Daesius.

LXXVI. Moreover, in the court ‘‘ Journals ” there are recorded the following particulars regarding his sickness.? On the eighteenth of the month Daesius 3 he slept in the bathing-room because he had a fever. On the following day, after his bath, he removed into his bed-chamber, and spent the day at dice with Medius. Then, when it was late, he took a bath, performed his sacrifices to the gods, ate a little, and had a fever through the night. On the twentieth, after bathing again, he performed his customary sacrifice; and lying in the bathing-room

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. vii. 25.
? They are given also by Arrian (Anab. vii. 25).
3 June 2, 523 B.c,
433

9 f b) 4, \ \ \ ~
yov €ayodatev, akpowpmevos Ta Teplt Tov mAouv Kat THY peyddnv Oarattav. TH Sexatyn POivov-TOS TAUVTA Toljcas maAXAoV avepr€yOn, Kal THV
\ A vinta Bapéws eoye, Kal THY émLovacaY Hyépav
, \
émupeTTe aPodpa. Kal peraplels KaTéxELTO Tapa
\ 7 , e \ a ¢ f
Thy peyarnv KorvpBnOpav, te 51) Tots rHyEenoct
A /
dierexOn mept tav eprjpmwv nyepovias taker,

ef , / if , ,
OTs KaTacTHowot SoxiudacavTes. éEBSoun odho-
\ \ a dpa mupéttwy eOucev éEapeis mpos Ta tepa: TOV
\
S€é nyewovwy éxéXEvE TOUS peytaTous StaTpiPew év
Th avrAy, takiapyous d€ Kai wEevTaKocldpyous EEw
, ’ \ A / /
vuxTepevelrv. els 6€ Ta Téepav Bacireaa diaxom-“A e ¢e
adels TH Extn piKpov Urvacer, o d€ TupETOS OvK XA 3 / \ a € , a v
avixev. érreOovtwy d€ TaV NyE“ovav HY adw-
\ A vos, o“oiws b€ Kal TH TéumTny: 510 Kal Tots MaxeSdoowv é50£e TeOvdvat, Kai kateBowy érdOovtes
> \ \ 7 \ fa) nw ¢ f 4
evi Tas Oupas, Kai SuntretAovyTo Tots ETALpots Ews
éBiacavto: Kai Tav Oupav avtois avoryOeroav év
a A {/ \ \ ,
Tois xiT@ar Kal Eva TavtTes Tapa THY KALYHDV
el , \ nA ¢€ , ¢ \ , mapeEnrOov. tavTys d€ THS Nuépas ot Tept Ilv-
\ , b] \ ~ 3
Owva kat Lédeveov eis TO Lapazretov atoctan-
id >] 7 > , 3 ~ \ > , EVTES NPOT@V EL Kouicwow Exel Tov AreEavdpov" ¢ \ \ \ , IA ’ a a \ ,
o 5é Geos Kata ywpav éav avetre. TH SE TpiTY
, \ iA ’ i
hOivovtos mpos Seihnv arreGave.
LXXVII. Tovtwyv ta mreiota xata réEw ev tais édnucpiow ovtTw yéeypamta. happaxetas

dé UToviav TapauTixa pev ovdelts Exyev, Extw SE 707

he devoted himself to Nearchus, listening to his story of his voyage and of the great sea. The twenty-first he spent in the same way and was still more inflamed, and during the night he was in a grievous plight, and all the following day his fever was very high. So he had his bed removed and lay by the side of the great bath, where he conversed with his officers about the vacant posts in the army, and how they might be filled with experienced men. On the twenty-fourth his fever was violent and he had to be carried forth to perform his sacrifices ; moreover, he ordered his principal officers to tarry in the court of the palace, and the commanders ot divisions and companies to spend the night outside. He was carried to the palace on the other side ot the river on the twenty-fifth, and got a little sleep, but his fever did not abate. And when his commanders came to his bedside, he was speechless, as he was also on the twenty-sixth; therefore the Macedonians made up their minds that he was dead, and came with loud shouts to the doors of the palace, and threatened his companions until all opposition was broken down; and when the doors had been thrown open to them, without cloak or armour, one by one, they all filed slowly past his couch. During this day, too, Python and Seleucus were sent to the temple of Serapis to enquire whether they should bring Alexander thither; and the god gave answer that they should leave him where he was. And on the twenty-eighth,! towards evening, he died.

LXXVII. Most of this account is word for word as written in the " Journals." And as for suspicions of poisoning, no one had any immediately, but five

1 June 13, 323 B.c.

ETEL pact MNVUTEDS YEVOMEVNS Thy 'Odupmidda TOAXOUS [MEV avenety, expivras ¢ TO Aeipava, TOU Tova TEOUNKOTOS, @$ TOUTOV TO papparov eyXeavtos. ot dé "Apiototédny pao KovTes "Avrima-TPO cup Bovrov ryeryevija Oat THS T™ pacews, Kab ONwS OL exEtvov Topia Oar TO pappaxon, 'A yvo-Oepov TLVa Sunyeta Bau Aeyouaty w@s "Avtuyovou Tov Bacitéws dKovoavta: TO bé dappaxov bdwp elvat Wuypov Kal TayeTOdes ATO TETPAS TLVOS eV Nwvaxpt6s ovens, iv waoTtep Spocov NeTTHV ava-NapLuvovtes ets dvou YnANY atroTiOEevTaL' TAV yap addAwy ovdev ayyetoy otéyetv, aAAG SiaKo-

mTelv uTO uypoTnTos Kat SpiuvTnTos. oat dé Treia ToL TOV Aoyou Oheos olovrar met AAT OAL TOV mepl TAS. pappaxeias: Kal TEK LNpLOV autois €oTLV ov MiKpov OTL TOV HYyELOvwDV cractag dvT@y ep' mpEpas TONAAS alepamevtov TO T@pA Ketwevov
év tomo Geppois Kat MvLy wer Ww ovdev eave TOLAUTNS pOopas onpetov, GAN Epecve xalapov Kal mpoo parov.
'H 6€ 'Pwkdvn xvovca pév étiyyave Kal dia
TOUTO TLL LEVY Tapa tots Maxedoce: cua ln hws
d€ €yovga Tpos THY Lrdrerpap éEnm@atnoev avr hy
EMLTTOAT TLVE TeT AAT MEY mapayeverOat, Kat
Mpocayayovoa meTa THs adeAPys amréxteve, Kal
TOUS VEKPOUS eis TO dpéap Katé Bane Kal ouve-Yooer, elSoTos Taira [epdixcov Kal supTpart-TOVTOS. Hv yep exeivos evOus év Suvd pee peytotn, TOV 'Apptoaton ¢ OOTEP Sopupdopnua tis Baothelas
ePEArKO[EVOS, yeyovora pev ek YUVALKOS adoEou Kat Kowhs Pirtvyns, ated} O€ TO Ppovetyv dvTa 436

ALEXANDER, -xxvi. 1-5 years afterwards, as we are told, upon information given, Olympias put many men to death, and scattered abroad the ashes of [olas, alleging that he had administered the poison. But those who affirm that Aristotle counselled Antipater to do the deed,! and that it was entirely through his agency that the poison was provided, mention one Hagnothemis as their au- thority, who professed to have heard the story from Antigonus the king; and the poison was water, icy cold, from a certain cliff in Nonacris; this they gathered up like a delicate dew and stored it in an ass's hoof; for no other vessel would hold the water, but would all be eaten through by it, owing to its coldness and pungency. Most writers, however, think that the story of the poisoning is altogether a fabrication; and it is no slight evidence in their favour that during the dissensions of Alexander's commanders, which lasted many days, his body, al- though it lay without special care in places that were moist and stifling, showed no sign of such a destructive influence, but remained pure and fresh. Now, Roxana was with child, and on this account was held in honour among the Macedonians; but she was jealous of Stateira, and therefore deceived her by a forged letter into coming where she was, and when she had got her there, slew her, together with her sister, threw their bodies into the well, and filled the well with earth, Perdiceas being privy to the deed and partner in it. For it was he who was at once in the greatest authority, dragging Ar- rhidaeus around after him to safe-guard, as it were, the royal power. Arrhidaeus was Philip's son by an obscure and common woman named Philinna, and

1 Cf. Arrian, Anab. vii. 28.
VOL, VII. p 437
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

, “~

61a TwWLATOS VOTOV ov duce TPOTTETOVGAaY OvbE
/ \ ’
avToudatws, ad\Aa Kal Tavu daci tratdos dvTos 9 fe) , / $ \ 3 b) s avtov Siadaivecbat yaptev 7005 Kai ovK ayevvés,
> , 4 e \ a /
elta pévtot dhappaxois vd ‘OdvpTriddos caxw-Oévra SiapPapivar thy didvo.ap, 438

ALEXANDER, Lxxvu. 5

was deficient in intellect owing to bodily disease. This, however, did not come upon him in the course of nature or of its own accord, indeed, it is said that as a boy he displayed an exceedingly gifted and noble disposition: but afterwards Olympias gave him drugs which injured his body and ruined his mind, 439

Il. KAIZAP

I. Tiv Kivva tod povapynoavtos Ouyatépa
KopynAiav, ws érexpatnoe YvAXraS, OVTE EATIiCLY
ovte hoBw suvvnbeis atoomacat Kaicapos, €57-pevae THY hepyny avtTns. aittia dé Kaicap: tijs
N 4 > / e \ , 5] ,
mpos YwArav amex elas 7 ™pos Mapuov otxeotns
jv. “Tova yap, TAaTpos aderghy Kaicapos, O mpeaBbrepos TUVWKEL Maptos, eE 75 eryeryover
2 Mapuos o 0 VEWTEDOS, dveryvos @v Kaicapos. ws O€
v0 wArAnOous povev év px Ka ée aaxonas
UTO Zura TAPOpw{LEvos OvK nyurnoey, arra
METL@OY lepwauYnY els TOV OHmoV TponAOEY OvTTH
TAVU MELPAaKLOY @Y, TAUTNS pév exTrETELY AUTOV vrevayTiwbels YUANAS TaperKEevaceE, TEpl Sé avatpécews Bovrevopevos, eviwy AeyovTwY ws OvK
Exot Aorvyov aTOKTLVYUVaL matoa THALKODTOD, CUK Eby vou Exel QUTOUS, EL p17) TONOUS év TO mato
3 TOUTM Maptous evopaat. TAUTNS Tis davis averexOetans T pos Katcapa guyrov pév Tia xpovov

TAAVOMEVOS ey LaBivors exhemTev éavTov é7retTa
d: appwotiay eis olxiav étépav petaxoptlomevos
KATA VUKTA TEPLTITTEL TTPATLOTALS TOU LAA
1 Many think that opening paragraphs of this Life, de- scribing the birth and boyhood of Caesar, have been lost.

2 In 86 B.c., after the death of his colleague, Valerius Flaccus.

I. Tue wife of Caesar ! was Cornelia, the daughter of the Cinna who had once held the sole power at Rome," and when Sulla became master of affairs, he could not, either by promises or threats, induce Caesar to put her away, and therefore confiscated her dowry. Now, the reason for Caesar's hatred of Sulla was Caesar's relationship to Marius. For Julia, a sister of Caesar's father, was the wife of Marius the Elder, and the mother of Marius the Younger, who was therefore Caesar's cousin. More- over, Caesar was not satisfied to be overlooked at first by Sulla, who was busy with a multitude of proscriptions, but he came before the people as candi- date for a priesthood, although he was not yet much more than a stripling. To this candidacy Sulla secretly opposed himself, and took measures to make Caesar fail in it, and when he was deliberating about putting him to death and some said there was no reason for killing a mere boy like him, he declared that they had no sense if they did not see in this boy many Mariuses.4 When this speech was re- ported to Caesar, he hid himself for some time, wandering about in the country of the Sabines. Then, as he was changing his abode by night on ac- count of sickness, he fell in with soldiers of Sulla who

3 In 82B.c. Cf. the Pompey, ix. 1 f.

'Nam Caesari multos Marios inesse (Suetonius, Divus Julius, i.).

Suepevywpevors éxelva Ta Neopia Kat TOUS KEK PULL [LEVOUS gvAdapSavovory. @v TOV nryEHova Kopyn-Nov wetaas dug Taravtos adeiOn, Kal kataBas
evdds emi Oadarrav e&émr eve ev els BiOuviav ™ pos Nexounony Tov Baciréa. trap @ Ovatpivras
x povov OU TOAUY, EtTA am oT ew adtioxerat mepl THY Pappaxovocav vio ov uo TELPATAV 170 TOTE
aTohous peryarots Kal oxddeow arto KaTe-YOvTwWY THY Oddarrav.
TT. II parov peev OUV aitnbeis UT avT@V AuTpa elKooe TahavTa KaTeyehacey OS ouK elOGT@Y OV

PHKOUED, avTos be Oporhoynae TEVTNKOVTA owoety’ ETELTA TOV mepl auToy adov els arrnv Ova ep was modu éml TOV TOV YpHudTwY TroptcpoV, év avOpeotros ghovexwtatos Keres pe? évos pidrov Kal duvoty axoXovoty aTrOAEAELLMEVOS OUTW KaTA-ppovyn Texas elev Gore T ELT OY oodKis ava-TAVOLTO MPOTETATTEV AUTOIG cLwMaV. NwEpats
b€ TecoapaKovTa dueiy Seovaas, @ OoTEp ov ppovpovpevos, adrAa Sopupopouperos um avTov, emt TOXNAS abetas ouverrarte Kat ouveyupyacero. Kat TOL WAT OL ypapav Kal Aoyous Twas axpoatais éxeivous €xXpHTO, Kal Tous pe) Gavpalovras avTt-KpUs amaoevTous Kal BapBapous GTrEKUNEL, Kat ou yehwre TONAGKLS HTT E Kpewav auTOUS. ot O€ € EXaI por, aerea Til Kab Tada THY Tap
pnaiav TavTny vewovTes. ws S€ HKOV Ex Midsjrou Ta AUTpa Kat Sovs ageiOn, Troia wWANPwCAS evOus éx ToD MiAdnciwy ALpévos éml tobs AnaTas

1 Caesar served under Marcus Thermus, praetor of Asia, in 81-80 B.c., being then nineteen years of age, and by him

444

(

CAESAR, 1. 3-1. 3

were searching those regions and arresting the men in hiding there. Caesar gave their leader, Cornelius, two talents to set him free, and at once went down to the sea and sailed to King Nicomedes in Bithynia,! With him he tarried a short time, and then, on his voyage back,? was captured, near the island Pharmacusa, by pirates, who already at that time controlled the sea with large armaments and countless small vessels. II. To begin with, then, when the pirates de- manded twenty talents for his ransom, he laughed at them for not knowing who their captive was, and of his own accord agreed to give them fifty. In the next place, after he had sent various followers to various cities to procure the money and was left with one friend and two attendants among Cilicians, most murderous of men, he held them in such disdain that whenever he lay down to sleep he would send and order them to stop talking. For eight and thirty days, as if the men were not his watchers, but his royal body-guard, he shared in their sports and exercises with great unconcern. He also wrote poems and sundry speeches which he read aloud to them, and those who did not admire these he would call to their faces illiterate Barbarians, and often laughingly threatened to hang them all. The pirates were delighted at this, and attributed his boldness of speech to a certain simplicity and boyish mirth. But after his ransom had come from Miletus and he had paid it and was set free, he immediately manned vessels and put to sea from the harbour was sent to Bithynia in order to raise a fleet to assist in the siege of Mitylene.

2 According to Suetonius (Div. Jul. 4), it was on a voyage from Rome to Rhodes (after 77 B.c.) that Caesar was captured by pirates, 445

rs)

at

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avijryeTo° Kal catrahaBov ere 7 POs Th Vvijow@ vav-AoxobvTas expatnae TOV TELTTOV, Kal TA pev
Xpipara Aetav emoujoaro, Tous 6é avd pas ev
Ilepyap@ Katalewevos eis TO Seg HoT pLov AUTOS emropevOn pos TOV SuéTrovTa thy ’Actav ‘Touveov,' OS éxELv@ poo hKov OVTL oT paTny~ Kohda a Tous gadwxdras. éxetvou Sé Kal Tots KPI macy €T 0-plarmiavTos (jv yap ovK GAtya) Kal TEpl TOV aixmadaroy oKevrer Oar pacKovtos em h TXOXis, Kalper edoas aUTOV oO Kaioap els Tépyapov @XETO, Kal Tpoayaryov Tous AnoTAs dmavras aver Tavpwcey, domep avtois Soxav raltew év Th
vnc Tpoerpycel 7 TONAGKLS.
III. Ex dé TOUTOV THs DLvAAa Suvd news 60
ja parvoperns Kab T@V OiKOL KahovvT@V avTov em Aeuoey eis “Podov eal oXOMD ™ pos “Atrohhoviov tov Tov ModAwvos, ov Kal Kixépov 7K pOATO, copia TevovTos émipavas Kal Tov TpoTrov err vet-Kovs elvat SokodvTos. AéyeTas de Kal pivas POs
NOyous wodTiKo’s Oo Kaicap apiota, nal dra-TOVijo at pidoriporata THY pvc, ws TA OevTEpeta
pev adypitas Exel, To oe TPOTELOY, OT WS TH Suvdpe. Kal Tos omhots _TP@TOS eln peaddov aoxorndeis, apeivat, Tpos O7rEp 7) huats vonyeito Ths év TO ever GewvoTnTos, t bir0 OTPATELOY Kat monTeias, 7 KATERTHO ATO THY mYyEpoviay, ovK
éEtxomevos. avTos & ov totepoy ev TH pos
Kixépwva mepi Kadtwvos avtiypadn mapartetrat [) OTPATLWTLKOU NCYOY avdpos avTeEeTaleww Mpos
1 “lovyxoy Sintenis.

1 According to Suetonius (Div. Jul. 4), this voyage, on which he was captured by pirates, was undertaken after his ot Miletus against the robbers. He caught them, too, still lying at anchor off the island, and got most of them into his power. Their money he made his booty, but the men themselves he lodged in the prison at Pergamum, and then went in person to Junius, the governor of Asia, on the ground that it belonged to him, as praetor of the province, to punish the captives. But since the praetor cast longing eyes on their money, which was no small sum, and kept saying that he would consider the case of the captives at his leisure, Caesar left him to his own devices, went to Pergamum, took the robbers out of prison, and crucified them all, just as he had often warned them on the island that he would do, when they thought he was joking.

III. After this, Sulla’s power being now on the wane, and, Caesar’s friends at home inviting him to return, Caesar sailed to Rhodes! to study under Apol- lonius the son of Molon, an illustrious rhetorician with the reputation of a worthy character, of whom Cicero also was a pupil. It is said, too, that Caesar had the greatest natural talent for political oratory, and cultivated his talent most ambitiously, so that he had an undisputed second rank; the first rank, how- ever, he renounced, because he devoted his efforts to being first as a statesman and commander rather, and did not achieve that effectiveness in oratory to which his natural talent directed him, in consequence of his campaigns and of his political activities, by means of which he acquired the supremacy. And so it was that, at a later time, in his reply to Cicero's Cato,’ he himself deprecated comparison between the diction of a soldier and the eloquence of an unsuccessful prosecution of Dolabella, mentioned in the next chapter. See the note oni. 4.

devoTynta pytopos evdvods Kal oYoAny emt TovTO TONANY AYOVTOS.

IV. "EzavenOwv 8 eis “Paunv AoroBérXav explve Kakwoews éTrapyias, Kal Tora TOV aTo THS EdAd6os TONEWY paptupias avT@ TAPET NOV. O pev ovy AoroSérras am epuye THY dixny, o be hatoap der Bopevos Thy ‘EAXXdba THS apoOupias curnyopeva ev aura IlowAtov ‘Avt@viov diwxovon Swpodoxias ért AeveouAdov TOU Madpxov Maxe- dovias oTparn yoo. Kal TocouToV toxuoev OTE tov “Avtwvioy emixareraaba TOUS Onpuapxous, od wevov OUK exe To igov év TH “EX G6 7 pos “EdAnvas. év 6€ ‘Pon TON pev el TO Novo Tepl TAS ournyopias avuTOU Yapts éfddamre, TOAAN 6€ THS Tepi Tas Se~rwoets Kal operas dirodpocvyns evvota Tapa TOY SnmoTaV aTHVTa, Geparrevtixod Tap HAtKiav OvTos. Hv dé Tus Kal

ato Oeitrvwy Kal tTpaTéfns Kal dXwsS TAS, Tepl Ty diartay AapT poTnTos avéavopern xara putx pov auT@ Suvapes els THY ToheTelay. yy TO 7 p@Tov of $Oor obVTES Olouevot TaYD TeV AVANOLATOV
dacehm barre é€ityAov ésecbat, TEpLe@pay avOov-cay éy Tois ToAAOtS oe be no Oovro, peryarns Kal SvoavarpémTou yevomerns Kal BadiSovens
aVTLK pUS ez THY TOY ONOY peTaBorny, OS oudepay apxny T payLaTos nryntéov + pK pay, hy ov TAXU TroLEet Heyaany TO evdoereves ex TOU Kata ppovnO vat TO [2 kohvOfvar AaBovoay. 0 youv
T P@TOS umidéobar doxov avTtod Kat poPnOjvar
THS ToXtTelas wWaTep JaraTTns Ta dtayerovTa
1 nyntéov MSS. and Sint.2; ayntéov oftw Coraés, after Stephanus ; oftw nynréov Sint.13; oftws yntéov Bekker, orator who was gifted by nature and had plenty of leisure to pursue his studies.

7(

IV. After his return to Rome he impeached Dola- bella! for maladministration of his province, and many of the cities of Greece supplied him with testimony. Dolabella, it is true, was acquitted, but Caesar, in return for the zealous efforts of the Greeks in his behalf, served as their advocate when they prosecuted Publius Antonius for corruption before Marcus Lucullus, the praetor of Macedonia. And he was so effective that Antonius appealed to the tribunes at Rome, alleging that he could not have a fair trial in Greece against Greeks. At Rome, moreover, Caesar won a great and brilliant popu- larity by his eloquence as an advocate, and much good will from the common people for the friendli- ness of his manners in intercourse with them, since he was ingratiating beyond his years. He had also a large and gradually increasing political influence in consequence of his lavish hospitality and the general splendour of his mode of life. At first his enemies thought this influence would quickly vanish when his expenditures ceased, and therefore suffered it to thrive among the common people ; but later on when it had become great and hard to subvert, and aimed directly at a complete revolution in the state, they perceived that no beginnings should be con. sidered too small to be quickly made great by con- tinuance, after contempt of them has left them unobstructed. At all events, the man who is thought to have been the first to see beneath the surface of Caesar's public policy and to fear it, as one might fear the smiling surface of the sea, and who com-

1 In 77 B.C.

\ q > lal f \ ¢ nw
Kal thy év TO htravOpwrw Kal ihap@ KEKPUp-
2 a f N)
pévny dewvoTnta TOV HOovs KaTapalov Kixépwv
. “a 7 ce > / b A
éXeye Tols aAAOLS ATacW éTiBovAEevpacL auvTOD
\ a Kal ToALTevpacle TUpavyiKnY évopav d.idvorar,
f ef
“AN Otay,” édn, “ THY KOpNY oOvVTH StaKELpevny
a n / ,
TEptTTOS low KaKeivoy Evi SAKTULM KVYWpEVOV, OU
nw , aA
pot Soxel wadty ovTos av@pwros Ets vody ay
a , , a éuBaréc0at tHrALKoDTOY KaKOY, avaipeoly THs
> A ¢ ‘Pwpatwy odtTelas.” TavTa peéev ov voTEpor.
A f \ b] , A
V. Tod 8& Snuov rpwrny pev amodaéw ths \ > \ b , oo. a4 \ fw , mpos avTov evvoias EXaBev OTe pos Vaiov Iomt-
a sf
tov épicas vmép yidLapyias mMpoTEepos avnyo-
/ / A pev0n: devtépay b€ Kal xatahavectépay Ste, TIS
\ ’ /
Mapiov yuvatkos ‘lovAias amoGavovons, adedrgu-a N > A > f li \ > b) a dots Ov altThis éyx@ptoy Te NapTpoy ev ayopa wn \' x ‘ b \ ? 4 > 4
dunrOe, kal Tept THY éxhopay eTOrAUNCEY ElKOvAS
, A ’ ,
Mapiov mpofécOat, tote Tpa@tov opGeioas peta \ Jaen 4 , , a b a
THV ert YVAAA TONTELAY, TOAEMiOY TOY avdpav \ 4 \ , cpiOévT@V. el TOUTM yap éeviwvy KaTaRonoaYTwY
a ate e a > , a ,
tov Kaicapos o dios avtyxynoe AapTpas, SeEd-f \ @ , er > ¢ & é \ pevos KpoT@ Kal Oavyaoas wotrep €& “Atdov dia
a \

Ypovov TorArAoY avayovta tas Mapiov tipas eis
\ \ ‘
THY ROAW. TO pev Ovv €rl yuvarkt TpecBuTépas
f 9
NOyous émitahious dieEvévat wAaTpLov Hv Pwpatoss,
, be bd a 2 ea aA b> J K a >
véats 6€ ov dv év Ger patos cite Kaicap én
A a / \ A
Ths éauTOD yuvatkos atoPavovcns: Kat TovTO
A \ /
NVEYKEY AUT@ Yaply TWA Kal ovVEednUaywYNaE
A t \ \ e G4 ” \
T® Ta0eL TOUS TOANOYS WS TuEpov avdpa Kal
mepiuectov Oous ayaTay.
450

CAESAR, rv. 4-v. 2

prehended the powerful character hidden beneath his kindly and cheerful exterior, namely Cicero, said that in most of Caesar’s political plans and projects he saw a tyrannical purpose; “On the other hand,” said he, “ when I look at his hair, which is arranged with so much nicety, and see him scratching his head with one finger, I cannot think that this man would ever conceive of so great a crime as the over- throw of the Roman constitution.”’ This, it is true, belongs to a later pericd.

V. The first proof of the people’s good will to- wards him he received when he competed against Caius Popilius for a military tribuneship and was elected over him; a second and more conspicuous proof he received when, as nephew of Julia the deceased wife of Marius, he pronounced a splendid encomium upon her in the forum,! and in her funeral procession ventured to display images of Marius, which were then seen for the first time since the ad- ministration of Sulla, because Marius and his friends had been pronounced public enemies. When, namely, some cried out against Caesar for this procedure, the people answered them with loud shouts, received Caesar with applause, and admired him for bringing back after so long a time, as it were from Hades, the honours of Marius into the city. Now, in the case of elderly women, it was ancient Roman usage to pronounce funeral orations over them ; but it was not customary in the case of young women, and Caesar was the first to do so when his own wife died.2 This also brought him much favour, and worked upon the sympathies of the multitude, so that they were fond of him, asa man who was gentle and full of feeling.

i Tn 68 B.c 2 In 68 B.C, 451
3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“A b) > 4, CEN
Oavas dé tv yuvaira tautas ets 1Bypiav evi

nw A nA A t Tov otpatnyav Bétept cuveEndOev, Oy auToy TE a > ee, | 4 \ N en 4 3 \
Tius@v ael SueTéXETE KAL TOY VLOV TadW AUTOS
\ \ A
dpywv tapiay éroince. yevowevos 6€ amo THs
b nw ’ 4 / 9’ 4 “A cis
apyis éxeiyns tpitny nyayeto yuvatca Tlourniay, of 2k KK Alas Guyatépa thy votepov Iopnéywy ex Kopyndias Guyatépa TH p m oh , A , \ A
rniw Mayve yapunéetoav. Oe eas dé Tails 4 9 aw \ “~ b) if \
Satavais aderdas, kal doxav pev éprpepov nat
A 3 , , >
Bpaxetay avtixatadraTTecGar peyadov avaw-
, 50 > 4 be aw b Q tf \
patov dofav, @vouuevos O€ Tats adnGelais Ta
n ? , péyloTa piKp@Vv, NéyeTaL ply ets apynv Tiva
i f ka0ictacOat yidiw@y Kal TpLaxoolwy yevéoPat / f > 4 \ an XN e n ypewherdérns TadavTwy. émeEt O€ TOVTO pEV OOOv
A at f b \ ? \ f
THs Amias atroderyGets emipedntns twapmod\da
Vpywata T POTAVANWOE TOV EAUTOV, TOUTO 6é
A 4
ayopavopav fevyn povouaywy Tptaxocia Kai
x nw 14
elkogt Tapéaye Kal Tais addas Tept Oéatpa Kal
TouTas kat ceimva Yopnylats Kat TodvTEdELALS \ Q e A / / e ,
TAS TPO AUTO KaTéxdAVGE PtdoTiMias, OUTW d:é-
N a \ \ \
Onxe Tov Otjmov ws Katvas péev apyas Kaas 5é
tTias Enretv Exactoy, als avtov apetraiyto.
VI. Avety 6é ovoay év TH TédNeL OTdTEWY, TIS
, a aA
pev amo VvdAAa pévya Suvapevns, THs 5é Mapravis,
i) TOTE KaTeT@TN KEL Kal StéoTATTO KOMLOH TaTrELVA TpaTTovea, TAVTHY avappwcat Kal Tpocayayécat BovNopevos év tais ayopavopixais Pidrotupt-
1 In 67 B.C,

After the funeral of his wife, he went out to Spain? as quaestor under Vetus, one of the praetors, whom he never ceased to hold in high esteem, and whose son, in turn, when he himself was praetor, he made his quaestor. After he had served in this office, he married for his third wife ? Pompeia, having already by Cornelia a daughter who was afterwards married to Pompey the Great. He was unsparing in his outlays of money, and was thought to be purchasing a transient and short-lived fame at a great price, though in reality he was buying things of the highest value at a small price. We are told, accordingly, that before he entered upon any public office he was thirteen hundred talents in debt. Again, being appointed curator of the Appian Way, he expended upon it vast sums of his own money; and again, during his aedileship,? he furnished three hundred and twenty pairs of gladiators, and by lavish provision besides for theatrical performances, processions, and public banquets, he washed away all memory of the ambitious efforts of his predecessors in the office. By these means he put the people in such a humour that every man of them was seeking out new offices and new honours with which to requite him.

VI. There were two parties in the city, that of Sulla, which had been all powerful since his day, and that of Marius, which at that time was in an altogether lowly state, being cowed and scattered. This party Caesar wished to revive and attach to himself, and therefore, when the ambitious efforts of his aedileship were at their height, he had images

2 Caesar was first married to Cossutia, the daughter of a rich Roman knight. 3 In 66 B.c.

ais axpiny éxovoats etKovas émotnoato Maptov
if \ , f A , \
Kpuga Kal Nixas tpotatopopous, as Pepwv vuxtos 71
/
eis To Katitédtov avéctnoev. aua be npuepa

Tous Geacapévous pappaipovta TavtTa Xpva@ Kal
A / Téyvn KaTeTKEvacpéeva TEptTT@S (StEedHNAOU Sé / \ K \ @ , \ @ ,
ypdupact Ta KipBpiea KxatopOwuata) PapBos
’ A a“ \ @ v
gaye THS TOAMNS TOD avabévTos (ov yap HY adn-\ be oN e / 40 ,
Xos), TaYv Sé Teptiwy o Aoyos Opole Tavtas
3 , \ \ v 3 ? € \ b) / avOpwrovs mpos THv Of. add a1 pev eBowy
, f
Tupavvida todtteverGat Kaicapa, vopos Kat
/ /
Soypact KaATOpwpvypévas éTTaVicTaVTA TLas, Kab
TOUTO Telpay él Tov Ohmov elvat mpouadraTTo-
A / >
pevov, et TeTLOdcevTat Tais didoTipiats UT av-
A / A \ a
Tov kal didwot Tailey ToLavTa Kal Ka.voTopely, ot 6€ Maptavol mapadappyvavtes aNXAHNOUS TA-\ oe / > , \
Get te Oavpactol door duepavyncay éeEaidvns, Kal
, a \ , a \ \
KpoT@m Kateiyov TO Kamit@Atov: TodXols bé Kal
, \ / g , ld € > ‘6 wn
ddxpva tiv Mapiov Gewpévors driv vd’ 7dov7s
, a J,
éywpe, Kat péyas iv 0 Kaicap éyxwpiots aipo-
f € \ A
uevos, ws avtTl mdvtwv aktos ein 0} avnp TIS Mapiov cuyyeveias. ouvaydeiaons && mept tovtwv THS Bovrns, KatrXos Aovtatios, avip evdoki-
A € “
pov TOTe wadtoTa Pwpaiwv, dvactas Kal KaTn-
/
yopnoas Kaicapos émepOéyEato To pvnpovevo-= “OZ t \ € , 99» ‘ce a pevov UKETL Yap VIrovopoLs, Edy, “ Kaicap,
? > » a Con \ , 99 ’ \
arr’ on pnyavais aipet THY TordtTELav.” é7rel
. A A
d€ atroXoynodpevos mpos TavTa Kaicap érece
\ , ¥ a € , > \
THY TUYKANTOY, ETL WAaAXOV ot OavydlovtTes avdTov

} ef 6 bracketed by Sint.3, 454
CAESAR, vi. 1-4

of Marius secretly made, together with trophy- bearing Victories, and these he ordered to be carried by night and set up on the Capitol. At day-break those who beheld all these objects glittering with gold and fashioned with the most exquisite art (and they bore inscriptions setting forth the Cimbrian successes of Marius!) were amazed at the daring of the man who had set them up (for it was evident who had done it), and the report of it quickly spreading brought everybody together for the sight. But some cried out that Caesar was scheming to usurp sole power in the state when he thus revived honours which had been buried by laws and decrees, and that this proceeding was a test of the people, whose feelings towards him he had _ previously softened, to see whether they had been made docile by his ambitious displays and would permit him to amuse himself with such innovations. The partisans of Marius, however, encouraged one another and showed themselves on a sudden in amazing numbers, and filled the Capitol with their applause. Many, too, were moved to tears of joy when they beheld the features of Marius, and Caesar was highly ex- tolled by them, and regarded as above all others worthy of his kinship with Marius. But when the senate met to discuss these matters, Catulus Lutatius, a man of the highest repute at that time in Rome, rose up and denounced Caesar, uttering the memor- able words: “No longer, indeed, by sapping and mining, Caesar, but with engines of war art thou capturing the government.” Caesar, however, de- fended himself against this charge and convinced the senate, whereupon his admirers were still more

1 See the Jfarius, chapters xi.—xxii.

455

bo

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

b] , \ 4 A la f emnpOnaav, Kal TapEexeNEVOVTO wHOEVL TOU povn)-
\ , a patos vdiecOar TadvTwv yap éxovTe TO SOrHpw mepiececOar Kal TPwWTEVvoELD.
VII. “Ev d€ tovrw cat MetéAXov Tov apyte-
, ,
péws TEAEUTITAVTOS Kal THY lepwouLnY TepijLayntov ovaav ‘loavpixov cal KdtAov petiovTwy,
b) f ’ > \ / 5 a
éemupaveotatwv avopdy cal péytatov év BovaAn / > e a > a e a 9 \ duvapévov, ovy uTetEev avtois 0 Katoap, adda
kataBas ets tov Shpov avtimapiyyedrev. ay-
, \ a a / e ,
yopdrov 5é€ THs arovdns dhatvopévns, 0 KatXos,

> \ i ’ , A 3 “a \ b) , ato pelfovos a€ias wadrov oppwhav THY adnro-
/ a THTAa, TpocéTEupe Tei\Owy atrootHvat Tov Kai-a , SSN a , e \
capa THS piAoTiulas ETL TOAKNOIS yYpHMacLY. O O€
Kal TrELwW TpoToavercapevos Epn dtaywvieia Oat.
TA » 4 A \
Tis & apépas évotdans Kat THs pntpos emi
, Pere \ Tas Ovpas avtov ovK abaxpyTlL TpoTEeuTOVe)s, aoTacapevos avTny, "QO, whtep,” elzre, “ Tr) wEpov
Aas , N ec. , ” ” , Hh apxiepea tov viov } guydoa oye.” SreveyOei-be fal / X 4 e / b) 7, ans 0€ THS Wapou Kal yevouevns apirAdANS éxpa-/ a a tal
THOE, Kal Tapéaxe TH BovdrAn Kal Tois aplaTots
pofov ws ert wav Opacvtntos mpoaEwy tov 67-ef e \ , \ ete b] A
pov. O0ev ot wept Hetowva cai KdtXov nridyto
r , , a Kixépwva detaodpevov Kaicapos év tots mepl Kartidivay XaBny mapacyovtos. o yap 6) Kati-
id a Atvas OV povoY THY TroALTELaY peTaBarelV, AAN
OANY avedEiy THY HYEwoviay Kal TaYTAa Ta Tpa-
, .
yuata ouyyxear dtavonfels adtos pev éekérece,
1 In 63 B.C.
456
CAESAR, vi. 4-vil. 4

elated and exhorted him not to lower his pretensions for any man, since the people would be glad to have him triumph over all opposition and be the first man in the state.

VII. At this time, too, Metellus, the pontifex maximus, or high priest, died,!} and though Isauricus and Catulus were candidates for the priesthood, which was an object of great ambition, and though they were most illustrious men and of the greatest in- fluence in the senate, Caesar would not give way to them, but presented himself to the people as a rival candidate. The favour of the electors appeared to be about equally divided, and therefore Catulus, who, as the worthier of Caesar’s competitors, dreaded more the uncertainty of the issue, sent and tried to induce Caesar to desist from his ambitious project, offering him large sums of money. but Caesar de- clared that he would carry the contest through even though he had to borrow stil] larger sums.

The day for the election came, and as Caesar’s mother accompanied him to the door in tears, he kissed her and said : “ Mother, to-day thou shalt see thy son either pontifex maximus or an exile.” The contest was sharp, but when the vote was taken Caesar prevailed, and thereby made the senate and nobles afraid that he would lead the people on to every extreme of recklessness. Therefore Piso and Catulus blamed Cicero for having spared Caesar when, in the affair of Catiline, he gave his enemies a hold upon him. Catiline, namely, had purposed not only to subvert the constitution, but to destroy the whole government and throw everything into confusion. He himself, however, was expelled from the city,?

2 In 63 B.c, Cf. the Cicero, chapters x.-xxii.

/ \ a \ mTepimtaigas €AdTTOOW édEyXOLS TPO TOU Tas
a a Ul
éoxatas avtou BovAas anoxarudOjvat, Aevtrov
a , , b /
bé nal KéOnyov év TH Tove Stadcyous amédt7re
n bd \ 7 nw ,
Ths ovvwpocias, ols ef pev Kpupa Tapelye Tt bc L duva 9 Kai LOnAOV € dpaous Kal dvvapyews 0 Kaioap adnrov éotwy,
a a f \
év 6¢ TH Boudkh Kata Kpdtos éFeheyxPevtwy Kat
a a \ Kixépwvos Tov vmdtou yywpas épwT@vTos mepl / sa C \ A / ,
KONaTEWS EKATTOY, Ol wey arXrAOL pexXpt Kaicapos
a A \ ,
Oavatovv éxéXevov, 0 6€ Kaicap avaotas dXoyov
A la “~ \ /
bij rAGe TeppovtTiopevov, WS ATOKTELVAL MEV AKpt-
\
tous avopas akimpats Kal yévet apTpovs ov
a \ \ a Soxel Tatptov ovdé Sixatov eElvat, pn META TIS
bd 4 > 4 3 \ a / > éayatns avayKns, et 5é ppovpoivto Sebevtes ev
, a 3 / A A y \ és rf moveat THS ItTadtas as av autos EXnTtat Kixépwvr, péxpt o0 KatatroreunOn Katidivas, votepov ev elpnvn Kat Kal’ novyiav mepi éExactov Th Bovrr yvavat Trapébet.
VIII. Oitw 6€ THs yrouns gtravOpwrov

a 4 a a havelans Kal TOU AOyou SuvaTas én’ airh pnOev-
/ \ A TOS OV MOVOY OL peETAa TOVTOY avidTapeEVvoL TpoC-4 \ \ ‘ Lal \ b) aA \ eti0evto, mo\Xol 5€ Kal TOY TPO avTOD TAS bi elpnuéevas yvwpas atreimapevor Tpos THY éxeivou peTeaTynaav, Ews emt Katwva To mpayya kal
” A / nw
KatArov trepinr@e. tovtTwy dé veaviKds évavTiw-Gévtwv, Katwvos 6€ Kal THv UTovotay aya TO
, a
NOY oureTEpEicavTOS avT@ Kal auyKateEava-7 , . ’
TTAVTOS EPPWLEVWS, OL MeV avdpes aTrOPavovpeEvot
, , \ ~ a
TmapeovOncav, Kaicaps dé tis Bovrns é€tovte

1 Cf. the Cato Minor, xxii. 4 £.

having been overwhelmed by proofs of lesser in- iquities before his most far reaching plans were discovered ; but he left Lentulus and Cethegus behind him in the city to promote the conspiracy in his place. Now, whether or not Caesar secretly gave these men any countenance and help, is uncertain ; but after they had been overwhelmingly convicted in the senate, and Cicero the consul asked each senator to give his opinion on the manner of their punishment, the rest, down to Caesar, urged that they be put to death, but Caesar rose in his place and delivered a long and studied specch against this. He pleaded that to put to death without legal trial men of high rank and brilliant lineage was not, in his opinion, traditional or just, except under ex- tremest necessity ; but that if they should be bound and kept in custody, in such cities of Italy as Cicero himself might elect, until the war against Catiline had been brought to a successful end, the senate could afterwards, in a time of peace and at their leisure, vote upon the case of each one of them.

VIII. This opinion seemed so humane, and the speech in support of it was made with such power,}! that not only those who rose to speak after Caesar sided with him, but many also of those who had pre- ceded him took back the opinions which they had expressed and went over to his, until the question came round to Cato and Catulus. These warmly opposed Caesar's proposal, and Cato even helped to raise suspicion against Caesar by what he said.2 As a result, the men were handed over to the execu- tioner, and many of the young men who at that time formed a body-guard for Cicero ran together

2 See the Cato Minor, chapter xxiii.

a /
qmodAot TaV Kixépwva dpovpovyvtwy tote véwy
/ b] yupva ta Ein cuvdpapovtes émécyov. aArAra
a A
Kovpiwy te AéyeTat TH THREvvw TEptBara@v UTeE-
~ 4 e f
ayayeiv, autos Te 0 Kixépwy, ws ov veavioxor
a \ \ a
mpocéBrewav, avavedoat, poBnGeis Tov Sipov, 7 TOV Povoy Ows adeKov KaL TApavopoY TYoUpEVOS.
aA 4) e
Todto pev obv ovx oida Omws 0 Kixépwr, elzep
9 9 , 3 a \ “ e , 3 ”
hv arneés, ev TH TEpl THS VraTteias ovK Eypaer
: / a a
aitiav O€ etxev VoTEpOY WS APLTTA TO KALPwO TOTE
? \ A / \
TapacyorTt Kata Tov Kaicapos un xXpnoapevos, 9 ’ b] , \ a e€ a if GXX aTobeidoas Tov Ojpuov UTEppuas TEpLexo-wn f s4 \ > 3 f
pevoyv Tov Kaicapos, 6s ye Kal pet OrLyas NUépas
> \ \ > / $ “A \ \ * 3
eis THY BovrAnY eioeNOovTos avToOD Kal Tepl wv év Urowiats Hv amoXoyoupéevou Kal TepiTitToVvTos
a n GopuBots tmovnpots, érevdn mrELwY TOV GUYHOoUS
a A , a
eyiryveto tH BovrAn KxabeCouevn xpovos, érhdOe
peta Kpauyhs Kal TEpLegTN THY TUVYKANTOD, aTraL-
a ¢ - nw
TOY TOV avopa Kal KEXevwWY Adeivar. 610 Kal
Kdtov poBybeis pddiota tov é€x TaV amopwv
/ ¢ A VEWTEPLGLOV, OL TOV TavTOS UTéxKaULA TANHOOUS
@) a ‘é ‘\ bf , wv yd noav ev T) Kaicape tas éAmidas exovtes, évetce THY TUYKANTOV ATOVvEt MAL TLTNPETLOY aUTOLS Epunvov, €& ot daTavys pev ETTAKOGLAL TeEVTNKOYTA puptades é€viavatot TpogeyivovtTo Tots GAAOLS ava-
a \ la 4 3 a ? /

AWLATI, TOV LEVTOL PEyav ev TH TrapovTt hoPov
a N / a
ésBece trepthbav@s TO ToAriTevpa TODTO, Kal TO
A 3 , a“
TrEloTOV aTréppynke 775 Katoapos duvapews Kal 460

CAESAR vin. 2~4

with drawn swords and threatened Caesar as he was leaving the senate. But Curio, as we are told, threw his toga round Caesar and got him away, while Cicero himself, when the young men looked to him for a sign, shook his head, either through fear of the people, or because he thought the murder would be wholly contrary to law and justice.

Now, if this is true, I do not see why Cicero did not mention it in the treatise on his consulship ;! however, he was afterwards blamed for not having improved that best of all opportunities for removing Caesar. Instead, he showed a cowardly fear of the people, who were extravagantly attached to Caesar ; in facet, a few days afterward, when Caesar came into the senate and tried to defend himself in the matters wherein suspicion had been fixed upon him, and met with a tumult of disapproval, the people, seeing that the session of the senate was lasting a longer time than usual, came up with loud cries and surrounded the senate-house, demanding Caesar, and ordering the senate to let him go. It was for this reason, too, that Cato, fearing above all things a revolutionary movement set on foot by the poorer classes, who were setting the whole multitude on fire with the hopes which they fixed upon Caesar, persuaded the senate to assign them a monthly allowance of grain, in consequence of which an annual outlay of seven million five hundred thousand drachmas was added to the other expenditures of the state.2 However, the great fear which prevailed at the time was mani- festly quenched by this measure, and the greatest part of Caesar's power was broken down and dissi-

1 No longer extant. & Cf. the Cato Minor, xxvi. 1.
461
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a a 4 \
dtecKédacev ev KaLp@, aTpaTHNYELY fEéAROVTOS Kal
U \ 5)
hoBepwrépov dia THY apYnv ovToS.
> A > b] b] “
IX. Od piv avéBn tt Tapaxyades am auth,
> \ \ / a K f 4
GNAA KaL TUX) TLS aYapls TO Katoapt cuvyve-SN
On wept tov oixov. Tlomdtos KrXwdcos jv avnp

, \ > 1 \ , \ XO x
ryévet ev evTaTplons Kab TWAOUT@ Kal NOY@ apL¢ n , mpos, UBpe de nal OpacvTnts Tov emi Bodedupia
/ > \ f e ”
TeptBontwv ovdevos SevTepos. ovTos pa Tlop-
A ral /
mnias ths Katoapos yuvaikos ovdé avtis axov-
3 A , an , 3
ons. GANA hurakal Te THS yuvatkwviTLoos aKptvad 49 e , A , ’ / Bets joav, 7) Te paytTnp TOV Katoapos AvpnAta, yur ToPpwVv, TepleTrovaa THY vUpny del yareany Kal TapakeKwduvevpéevyny autos émoies THY évTrevw.
"Eote 66 “Pwpatos Oeos hv "Ayabnv ovopatouaiv, @oTep LeAXnves Tuvarceiav. nat Ppvryes pév
’ , , , a Ul s
oixeovpevot Mida pntépa tov Baciréws yevécOar dhaci, ‘Pwpaios dé viudyv Apvada Patve cvvot-4 ad \ A id f \ knoacav,” EXdnves &€ trav Atovicou pntépwv thy appntov. GO0ev apredtvois Te TAS GKNVAS KX71-pact éoptalovaat Katepépovar, Kat Sparov
e XN , ~ lal \ ‘N ~
lepos Twapaxabidpytas TH Oem Kata Tov pdOor.
bl \ a > ‘4 + O09 > \ A ’ avépa b€ mpocedOety ov Oéuts ovS emi tis ol-
/ a) A
Kias yeverOat TaV lepav opytatopévwv: avTal dé
> e \ e A \ A ? A Ka?’ éauTas at yuvaixes ToAdXA TCis ’Opdeixois oporoyoovTa Spav éyovTat Tepl THY lepoupyiav.
e A fo! , e
OTav ovv oO THS EopTis KaOnnyn yYpovos, UTaTEvoVvTOS 7) aoTpaTHyobVTOS avdpos, aUTOsS pev éfi-462 CAESAR, vit. 4-1x. 4

pated in the nick of time, since he was praetor elect,) and would be more formidable on account of his office.
1X. However, there were no disturbances in consequence of Caesar's praetorship, but an unpleasant incident happened in his family. Publius Clodius was a man of patrician birth, and conspicuous for wealth and eloquence, but in insolence and effrontery he surpassed all the notorious scoundrels of his time. This man was in love with Pompeia the wife of Caesar, and she was not unwilling. But close watch was kept upon the women's apartments, and Aurelia, Caesar's mother, a woman of discretion, would never let the young wife out of her sight, and made it difficult and dangerous for the lovers to have an interview.

Now, the Romans have a goddess whom they call Bona, corresponding to the Greek Gynaeceia. The Phrygians claim this goddess as their own, and say that she was the mother of King Midas; the Romans say she was a Dryad nymph and the wife of Faunus ; the Greeks that she was the unnameable one among the mothers of Dionysus. And this is the reason why the women cover their booths with vine-branches when they celebrate her festival, and why a sacred serpent is enthroned beside the goddess in conformity with the myth. It is not lawful for a man to attend the sacred ceremonies, nor even to be in the house when they are celebrated ; but the women, apart by themselves, are said to perform many rites during their sacred service which are Orphic in their char- acter. Accordingly, when the time for the festival is at hand, the consul or praetor at whose house it is to be held goes away, and every male with him,

1 For the year 62 B.c.

oTaTal Kal TAV TO Cppev, H SE YULN THY olKiaVv
Taparafovaa dtaxoo pet. Kab 7a, HEyoTa vU-KT p TedelTaL, matd.as AV ALE {LLY [LEVNS Tais Tavpuxiot Kal HovatKens dpa TONS T apovens.
X. Tavrny tote thy eopr ay THS Loprnias emiteNovans, 0 KAwdsos oUTM yevermv Kal dua ToUTO AnoeEV olopevos eoOATA Kal oKevnY Wad-Tplas avadtaBawv éywpet, véa yuvatel thy ove éoix@s. Kal tats Ovpats éemeTUYMV avEewmypevats eloXOn peep A0EWS UTO THS guverdvias Geparraivi-605, exeluns b€ mpoSpapovons MS TH Hopanig
ppacese, Kal ryevomevys dat pBis, TE PLLevely | pev
Omrou Kcaterei pen 7@ Krodio pe Kaptepovytt,
T ave even 5 év otKta peydidn Kal TepipevyovTe
Ta PwTa Tpoomesovca THS Adpyrias axorov0os
@s 6) yuvn yuvaika Tailew wpovKearetto, Kal pn)
Bovropevor els TO pécov eidAKe, Kal Tis eats Kal
ToGev émruvOdveto. tov d€ Krwodiov dijcavtos
"ABpav tepipéverv Iloumanias, avto Tovto Ka-Aoupevynv, Kal TH hovh yevouevov xatadpavods,
9 pev akorovOos evOus atreTndnae Kpavyh

Tpos TA Pata Kal Tov dyXov, avdpa Tepwpakévat Bowaa, Tav b6€ yuvarKav StaTTonGecav 7 Atpnria Ta pev Opyta THs Oeod Katémavce Kal
auvexdduwev, avtn dé tas Ovpas atrokXcioat KENEVTATA TEpinEel THY OlKiaY UIT Aap adwv, tntovcea Tov Krodiov. evpioxetat © Ets olxnpa Tadic Kns 7 ouverai Oe Katatrepevyas: Kal rYEVOLEVOS pavepos ume THY yuvatk@v efeavvetat dia TOV OupoOVv. TO dé TPaypa Kal vUKTOS evOus al yuraikes amlovcat Tois avt@y eppatov 464

71

CAESAR, 1x. 4-X. 4

while his wife takes possession of the premises and puts them in due array. The most important rites are celebrated by night, when mirth attends the revels, and much music, too, is heard.

X. At the time of which I speak, Pompeia was celebrating this festival, and Clodius, who was still beardless and on this account thought to pass unnoticed, assumed the dress and implements of a lute-girl and went to the house, looking like a young woman. He found the door open, and was brought in safely by the maid-servant there, who was in the secret; but after she had run on ahead to tell Pompeia and some time had elapsed, Clodius had not the patience to wait where he had been left, and so, as he was wandering about in the house (a large one) and trying to avoid the lights, an attendant of Aurelia came upon him and asked him to play with her, as one woman would another, and when he refused, she dragged him forward and asked who he was and whence he came. Clodius answered that he was waiting for Pompeia's Abra (this was the very name by which the maid was called), and his voice betrayed him. The attendant of Aurelia at once sprang away with a scream to the lights and the throng, crying out that she had caught aman. 'The women were panic-stricken, and Aurelia put a stop to the mystic rites of the goddess and covered up the emblems. Then she ordered the doors to be closed and went about the house with torches, searching for Clodius. He was found where he had taken refuge, in the chamber of the girl who had let him into the house; and when they saw who he was, the women drove him out of doors.

Then at once, and in the night, they went off and 465

3 if \ ’ e / 3 , \ A U avdpact, Kal we” nuepav éywper bia THS TrOdAEwS
e la) /
AOryos ws Wbécpots eTiKexerpnKoTos TOV Krwdiov
A , b A e / / 3 \ \
kat Oixny ov Tois UPpicpévots povov, GAA Kal
Th Wonder Kal Tois Beois OeirAovTos. éyparyraTo
A /
pev ovy tov Krwdcov els TOV Snudpywv aaePetas, Kal auvéotncayv 7 avTov oi duvatwTaTtoL TOV va ol 7
avo Tis Bours, AdArXas Te Sewwas daoeryeias KATAPMAPTUPOUYTES Kal pwotyetay aderdijs, *) Aev-KOVANW TUVMKI}KEL. Tpos d€ TAS TOVTWY GTOVOAS ¢ wn > , e \ wv a Fa / N o Ojos avtitatas éavtov Huvve TH KrAwdilo, Kal / N be \ bd > b]
éeya mpos tous dtkaactas dheros tv éxteTrHypevous Kal Sedoixotas Td TAOS. 0 6€ Kaicap 3 , x > \ \ of , *
aTeTewWato pev evdus THV Lopumniav, waptus &é
\ \ / \ b N ¥ A 4
Tpos THY Stkny KANGels OvdeY Eby TAY AEyouéevwY
\ a , 4 e \ A U
Kata ToD Krwoiov yryvwoxeav. ws d€ TOU Aoyou
mapabofou pavévtos 6 Kat yyopos npwTnae, “ Ids =e 3 / \ a“ 9? co > 66 \
OUY ATETTELW THY YUVALKa; Ov, edn, “ THY 3 \ 3 / Ah Pd la) 99
eunv n&tovy pndé vTrovonOnvas.
Tatra ot peéev odtw gdpovodvta tov Kaicapa
, > A € \ a“ / %, ¢
A€youaw eivretv, ot O€ TSO SHuw yaplopuevov wp-/ , X , , pnpevo cwlev tov Krwdiov. amodevyer 8 obv
‘ 4 A A

TO é€ykAnua TOV TrELCTWY SiKaTTOY GUYyKEXU-
Z A HEvOlS TOS Yypdppace TAS Yyvwpas aTroddyTw)Y, OTWS NTE TapaKxlWduvvevawow év TOls TrOAXOIS / ee ’ r aN ,
Kkatawnpioapevor pnte aTodvaavtTes aloEncwat Tapa Tos apiotoss.
r e aA lel
XI. ‘O 6€ Kaicap ets aro tis otpatynyias
wn A \ > v4
ToV eTapylav THY IBnpiay NaBav, ws Fv Svabea-466
CAESAR, x. 4-XxI. 1

told the matter to their husbands, and when day came a report spread through the city that Clodius had committed sacrilege and owed satisfaction, not only to those wnom he had insulted, but also to the city and to the gods. Accordingly, one of the tribunes of the people indicted Clodius for sacrilege, and the most infiuential senators leagued themselves together and bore witness against him that, among other shocking abominations, he had committed adultery with his sister, who was the wife of Lucullus. But against the eager efforts of these men the people arrayed themselves in defence of Clodius, and were of great assistance to him with the jurors in the case, who were terror-stricken and afraid of the multitude. Caesar divorced Pompeia at once, but when he was summoned to testify at the trial, he said he knew nothing about the matters with which Cledius was charged. His statement appeared strange, and the prosecutor therefore asked, “ Why, then, didst thou divorce thy wife?”’’ <‘* Because,”’ said Caesar, “I thought my wife ought not even to be under suspicion.”

Some say that Caesar made this deposition honestly ; but according to others it was made to gratify the people, who were determined to rescue Clodius. At any rate, Clodius was acquitted of the charge, the majority of the jurors giving their verdicts in illegible writing, in order that they might neither risk their lives with the populace by condemning him, nor get a bad name among the nobility by acquitting him.!

XI. Immediately after his praetorship Caesar re- ceived Spain as his province, and since he found it

1 The sacrilege and trial of Clodius are described at length also in the Cicero, chapters xxviii. and xxix.

Oetov AUTO TO TEpt TOUS davetaTas évoxXhodv7 as éEvovte Kai caTaBowrTas, émt Kpaooov Katepuye

TrOVveLwWTAaTOV OvTa ‘Pwpaiwr, Seomevov dé THs
Kaicapos akpis cal Oepmotntos émt tay ™ pos
Hop njiov dvTimoheTetay. avaceEapevou be TOU
K paaaou TOUS MaXLCTA Xarerous Kat ama patty) TOUS TOV Savero TOY Kal Sueyyurjoavtos OKTAKOoie Kal TplaxovTa TANAVTMV, OVTWS EEHAOEV emt THD emapXiay.
Aéyetat 6é, Tas "AXrets UarepBddXovTOS avTod Kal ToAlyVLov Tt BapBaprxov ouxoupevov UTO
avO pomov TavTanacw Odyov Kal NUT POV Tapep-VOMEVvOU, TOUS éraipous dpa yéXwte Kal pera
mavoras “"H cov” davar “ KavradGa Tivés elo
UTEep apyov dtroTipiar Kal Tepl TpwTEelwy Aptr-Nat Kal PGovoe Tov SuvaTa@v mMpos AAXAjoUS;”
tov 6€ Kaicapa crovidcavta pos avtovs eitrety, Eye pev éBovrouny Tapa TovToOLs Elvat “adrov Tpa@Tos » Tapa Pwpaios dSevtepos.” opoiws dé
Tadw év ‘TBypia cXOANS ovens avayivoOrKovTa Te TOY mepl "Aref dv8pou YEYPappeveov opodpa ryevéo Ga T POs EaUTO TOAVY Ypovor, elra Kal 6a: Kpocar tov dé dirov Oavuacdvtwy tiv aitiav ettrety' “OU doxet byt aEtov eivae AUT NS, Eb THAL-KovTos pev my “AdéEavdpos 5n TocovTwr éBaci-Never, Euol S€ AapTrpov ovdev OvTIW TETPAKTaL;” XII. Tis youu ‘TAnpias émiBas evvs nV €vEp-yos, wo qpepass odiyaus dexa omelpas ouva-yayetv ST pos. Tats T poTe pov obo ass elKosl, Kal oTpatevoas emt KadXaixous Kai Avottavovs Kpa-
! Early in 61 8.0, 468
715

CAESAR, xi. 1-x11. 1

hard to arrange matters with his creditors, who obstructed his departure and were clamorous, he had recourse to Crassus, the richest of the Romans, who had need of Caesar’s vigour and fire for his political campaign against Pompey. And it was only after Crassus had met the demands of the most importunate and inexorable of these creditors and given surety for eight hundred and thirty talents, that Caesar could go out to his province.
We are told that, as he was crossing the Alps and passing by a barbarian village which had very few inhabitants and was a sorry sight, his companions asked with mirth and laughter, “Can it be that here too

there are ambitious strifes for office, struggles for primacy, and mutual jealousies of powerful men?" Whereupon Caesar said to them in all seriousness, "I would rather be first here than second at Rome." In like manner we are told again that, in Spain, when he was at leisure and was reading from the history of Alexander, he was lost in thought for a long time, and then burst into tears. His friends were astonished, and asked the reason for his tears. Do you not think," said he, "it is matter for sorrow that while Alexander, at my age, was already king of so many peoples, | have as yet achieved no brilliant success? " 2

XII. At any rate, as soon as he reached Spain he set himself to work, and in a few days raised ten cohorts in addition to the twenty which were there before. Then he led his army against the Callaici

2 Suetonius (Div. Jul. 7) and Dio Cassius (xxxvii. 52, 2) connect this anecdote more properly with Caesar's quaestor- ship in Spain (67 B.c.), when he was thirty-three years of age, the age at which Alexander died.

THoaL Kal TpoehOeiy ay pe THs é&w Oardoons Ta Ht) 7 poT €pov UTAKOVOVTA "Peopators eOun KaTa-
aTpepopevos. Dépevos 6€ Ta Too | TONEMOU KANOS, ov _XEtpov éBpaBeve Ta THS eLpyvys, opovoay TE Tais ToAEot cabiaras, Kal pada Ta, TAS TOV XpewperdeT av Kal averaTov be evos S:ahopas.
erage 14p TOV T po LovT@y Tols opetrovar Ka?'
éxaotov éviavtov ovo pev pmépn Tov Saveratny avatpeia Oat, TO O€ AoLTO ypHjaOat Tov SearoTny, aypte av ottws éxrAvO7 TO Sdvetov. er TOUTOLS EVOOKLL@V arn\rayn THs eTAapXias, AUTOS TE
TOUTLOS YELOVOS | Kal TOUS TT PATLWOTAS OPeArnKas
a7 0 TOV TTPATELAY, Kal Tpoanyopevpevos avto-KPaTwOp UT' aAUTODV.
XIII. "Evel d€ tovs eV pV@MEvOUS PpianBov

Ew Svat piBerv édet, TOUS b€ peTLovTas UTratetav
rapivras év TH TONEL ToUTO T PAT TEL, év TOLAUTY Yeyoves avriwopig Kal Tpos auras Tas UTATLKAS airy pév0S dpxatped (as eve" We TOS THY oUyKAN-Tov attovpevos avT@ So@nvat tapayyéAXE ets
UTaTEeav aTrovtt Sia TOV pirov. Katavos € T pOTov per taxuptCopevov T® VOL WpoS THY akin, ELTA, WS Ewpa Todos TeOepamevjevous UTO TOU Kaicapos, eXK POUTAYTOS TO Ypoveo TO mpayyua Kat THY nuépay €v TO réyerv KaTaTpi-

Wavtos, eyveo TOV OpiapBov “adels) Kaioap
éyecOar THS vTatetas. Kal TmapeOov evOvs wro-OveTat To Teva TL TavTas avOpomous é€aTra-
Thoav TANnVY Kadtevos. mY d€ TovTO diadrayyy Hopmrniov Kal K padcaovu TOV Méeytorov ev TH TOKEL
duvauevor’ ods cuvayaywv o Kaicap eis didtav 470

CAESAR, xu. 1-xt. 2

and Lusitani, overpowered them, and marched on as far as the outer sea, subduing the tribes which before were not obedient to Rome. After bringing the war to a successful close, he was equally happy in adjusting the problems of peace, by establishing concord between the cities, and particularly by healing the dissensions between debtors and creditors. For he ordained that the creditor should annually take two thirds of his debtor’s income, and that the owner of the property should use the rest, and so on until the debt was cancelled. In high repute for this administration he retired from the province; he had become wealthy himself, had enriched his soldiers from their campaigns, and had been saluted by them as Imperator.

XIII. Now, since those who sued for the privilege of a triumph must remain outside the city, while those who were candidates for the consulship must be present in the city, Caesar was in a great dilemma, and because he had reached home at the very time for the consular elections, he sent a request to the senate that he might be permitted to offer himself for the consulship m absentia, through the agency of his friends. But since Cato began by insisting upon the law in opposition to Caesar’s request, and then, when he saw that many senators had been won over by Caesar’s attentions, staved the matter off by consuming the day in speaking, Caesar decided to give up the triumph and try for the consulship. So as soon as he entered the city he assumed a policy which deceived everyone except Cato. This policy was to reconcile Pompey and Crassus, the most in- fuential men in the city. These men Caesar brought together in friendship after their quarrel, and by

471

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

éx Ssahopas, kal Thy am’ audoty cuveveyKapevos iayvv els Eavtor, py pirdvOpwrov EXovTt Tpocnyoplay €\abe petactijcas THY ToALTELaVY. Ov yap, ws of wretoToL vopifovoly, 7 Kaicapos cat
Ilouaniov diadopa tovs éuduriovs atrepydcato

TOAELOUS, GAAA pAAXAOV 17) Hiria, gvaTavT@V eT KaTadvoel THS aplaToKpaTias TO TpwToV, Elta
oUTwWS Kal Tpos addANAOUS StacTdvTwY. Katwvri
d€ ToAAdKLS TA péAAOVTA TpoPcaTiGovTe TrEpLAY duoKoXou pev avOpw@rovu TOTE Kal TOAUTPaYLOVOS, Uatepov dé povisouv pév, ovK evtuyous 6€ cup-Bovxrov AaBetv do€av.
XIV. Ov piv addr’ 0 Kaicap ev pécw tis Kpdcaov xai Ilopmniov didtias dopudopovpevos éml Tv UTateiavy KaTHYOn: Kal AauTpas avaryopevOeis peta Kadzrrovpyiov Burov Kal Kxata-atas eis THY apyny EvOvds elaéhepEe vosous ovY UTATwW TpogrKovTas, GAAa Snudpy@ Twi Opacv-TATM, TPOS NOOVHY TOV TOAAMY KANPOVXLAS TUVAS
yopas Kal Stavopds etonyoupevos. év dé TH BovrAn TaV Kado Te Kal ayalav avTiKpovaavTwr, mara Seopevos mpopdcews, avaxpayov cal pap-Tupaevos ws els Tov Shuov dxwv éFeXavvorTo Oeparrevowy éxetvov €& avaryans UBpet Kat xare-TOTNTL THS Bovdijs, mpos avtov éerndnce Kal TEplaT NO ApLEvOs évOev wey Kpdocov, évOev de Tloumaniov, npwtnoev et tovs vosous érratvoten.
evatvety 6€ dackovtwy, tapexadre. BonOeiv emi Tous eviotacbas peta Evhav adretrovvtas. éxeivol 472

CAESAR, x1, 2-xIVv. 3

concentrating their united strength upon himself, succeeded, before men were aware of it, and by an act which could be called one of kindness, in changing the form of government. For it was not, as most men supposed, the quarrel between Caesar and Pompey that brought on the civil wars, but rather their friendship, since they worked together for the overthrow of the aristocracy in the first place, and then,
when this had been accomplished, they quarrelled with one another. And Cato, who often foretold what was to come of their alliance, got the reputation of a morose and troublesome fellow at the time, but afterwards that of a wise, though unfortunate, counsellor.}
XIV. Caesar, however, encompassed and protected by the friendship of Crassus and Pompey, entered the canvass for the consulship ; and as soon as he had been triumphantly elected, along with Calpurnius Bibulus, and had entered upon his oflice,? he proposed laws which were becoming, not for a consul, but for a most radical tribune of the people; for to gratify the multitude he introduced sundry allotments and distributions of land. In the senate the opposition of men of the better sort gave him the pretext which he had long desired, and crying with loud adjurations that he was driven forth into the popular assembly against his wishes, and was compelled to court its favour by the insolence and obstinacy of the senate, he hastened before it, and stationing Crassus on one side of him and Pompey on the other, he asked them if they approved his laws. They declared that they did approve them, whereupon he urged them to give him their aid against those who threatened to oppose

2 Cf. the Pompey, xvii. 1-5. = In 59 B.c.

dé Umea XvOUrTO™ Topmrnios dé Kat Tpocenei rev
ws adpi€orto wpos Ta Ein pera Tov Eibous Kal Oupeov Kopilov. éml TOVT@ TOUS wep apa TOKpa-TLEODS avlacer, ovK akiay THS TEept avTOV aidods, ovde THS T pos THY ouyK A TOV evraBetas 7 peTrouaay, anna HAVIKNY KaL pepaktwdyn dwynv aKov-cavTas, 0 0¢ &nmos adn.
Kaicap dé perloves & eTl Tis Houaniov OUVA MEWS UrrodpatTopevos, AY yap avT@ 'Tova Guyatnp
ey yeyuneern Lepovidty Karriwvt, TavT HY éveyyunoe Lloprnio, THY O¢ Hlopaniou TO _Repovidio
dwcew Ebnoev, ovOE avTnY avéyyVOY OvVdAaY, ANAG Davoto 1TH YaAXAa adit Kabwporoynpuévnv.
driyo 6€ Yatepov Kaicap iyayeto Kadroupviapv Ouyatépa Iletawvos, tov bé lletcwva xatéotyncev UTAaTOV els TO wédXov, évtavOa $7 xa apotpa papTupopevov Katwvos cai Be@vtTos ovK avexTov
elvat, yapots Stapactporrevoperns TS YEHovias
Kal dla yuvaiwy ets eTmapxias Kal oTpatevyata
Kal Suvdpers adhajrous aVTELTAOVTOD.
O [ev Ov ouvipyov TOU Katcapos BuP os, éTel KWAUVWY TOUS VOHLOUS ovdev éré éparven, Gdra ToNANUKls exivdvveve peta Katwvos él Ths ayopas aTroJavety, &YKNELTApEVOS OiKOL TOY TIS AaPYIS \V povov OueTehece. Topanios b¢ yas evdus évé-TANCE THY ayopav 67AwY Kal TUVETTERUPOL TO Sx ue TOUS VOLOUS, Kaicaps 6€ tiv évtos "Adrreav Kal thy éxtos atacay Kedrtixnv, mpoalels to 'Tyrvupixov peta taypatwv Tecodpoy eis Tevtaetiav. Katova pev ody émixeipnoavta tovtois avTiréyery amiyyev els PurAakny o Katcap, olopevos
auTov émikaréaedVat Tous Snpapyous: éxeivou bé

474

him with swords. They promised him such aid, and Pompey actually added that he would come up against swords with sword and buckler too. At this impulsive and mad speech, unworthy of the high esteem in which Pompey stood and unbecoming to the respect which was due to the senate, the nobility were distressed but the populace were delighted.
Moreover, Caesar tried to avail himself still more of the influence of Pompey. He had a daughter, Julia, who was betrothed to Servilius Caepio. This daughter he betrothed to Pompey, and said he would give Pompey's daughter in marriage to Servilius, although she too was not unbetrothed, but had been promised to Faustus, the son of Sulla. And a little while afterwards Caesar took Calpurnia to wife, a daughter of Piso, and got Piso made consul for the coming year, although here too Cato vehemently pro- tested, and cried out that it was intolerable to have the supreme power prostituted by marriage alliances and to see men helping one another to powers and armies and provinces by means of women.

As for Caesar's colleague, Bibulus, since he availed nothing by obstructing Caesar's laws, but often ran the risk with Cato of being killed in the forum, he shut himself up at home for the remainder of his term of office. Pompey, however, immediately after his marriage, filled the forum with armed men and helped the people to enact Caesar's laws and give him as his consular province Gaul on both sides of the Alps for five years, together with Illyricum and four legions. Cato, of course, tried to speak against these measures, but Caesar had him led off to prison, sup- posing that he would appeal to the popular tribunes ; but when Cato walked off without a word and Caesar adwvou Ba&silovtos opav o Kaioap ou povov TOUS KpatiaTous dua hopoivras, anrra Kral 70 Snporixov aidot THIS. Katwvos aperis owwTh Kal pera, KaTN-gelas Em Op1evov, avTOS edenOn kpugda tav dSnudp-Ya évos aera Ga Tov Katwva.

8 Tar dé Gov TUYKANT ERO oAlyot TavTaTacww avT@ cuvjecay els Bovryy, ol oé AovTrol duaxKeEpai-votes éxmosav aap. elTOvTOS dé Kovoudiov TLVOS TOY ododpa YyepovT@Yy @S poBovpevor Ta OWAa Kal TOUS oTpariwras ou TvvepXowTo, id lis ovv, ébn o Kaicap, 'ov cai ov tadta Sdebdims oixoupets;" Kal o Kovatdcos eimevs "Ort pe troret un hoBeic0at TO yhpas' oO yap ETL EcTrOmEvos

Bios ob aroAdHS OAtyos My Seitat mMpovolas.” 9 alaXtaTov 6é Ta TOTE ToNTevpaTwy edokev év
TH Kaicapos UTaTELA Onmapyov aipeOhvae Kro-Otov exeivov, Up ov Ta TEpl.TOV ydpov Kal Tas aTroppytous mwapevounOn tavvvyioas. npéOn dé émi TH Kixépmvos xatadvoe cai Katoap ov tpotepov €&nAOev ert THY oTpaTLay i) KaTagTactacal Kixépwva peta KrX@diov cat cuvexBarety é« tis "IraXias.
XV. Toradta pév ovv Réyetar yevéesOar Ta mpo tov Varaticov. o 6€ T@Y TokéuaV ods eTrohen Noe pera TavTa, Kal TOV oT parerav ats nHEPMTATO THY Kerrexyy, \Vpovos, Oomep addny apy AaBovros avtob Kat KATAGTUVTOS ELS eT epav Twa Biov Kat Tparya Tov KALV@Y OOO”, OUK éotTiv OTOU TOY padaTa, TeOaupac mevov ep’ nyEewovia Kal peyote yeyovor oy amroheiT@ovTa
2 TodkemioTy Kal oTpaTyraTHY amédetEev avTor,

476

CAESAR, xiv. 7-xv. 2

saw not only that the most influential men were displeased, but also that the populace, out of respect for Cato’s virtue, were following him in silence and with downcast looks, he himself secretly asked one of the tribunes to take Cato out of arrest.

Of the other senators, only a very few used to go with Caesar to the senate; the rest, in displeasure, stayed away. Considius, a very aged senator, once told Caesar that his colleagues did not come together because they were afraid of the armed soldiers. “Why, then,” said Caesar, “dost thou too not stay at home out of the same fear?’’ ‘To this Considius replied: “Because my old age makes me fearless; for the short span of life that is still left me does not require much anxious thought.” But the most disgraceful public measure of the time was thought to be the election to the tribuneship, during Caesar's consulate, of the notorious Clodius, who had tres- passed upon his rights as a husband, and upon the secret nocturnal vigils. He was elected, however, for the overthrow of Cicero; and Caesar did not go forth upon his campaign until, with the help of Clodius, he had raised a successful faction against Cicero and driven him out of Italy.!

XV. Such, then, is said to have been the course of Caesar’s life before his Gallic campaigns. But the period of the wars which he afterwards fought, and of the campaigns by which he subjugated Gaul, as if he had made another beginning and entered upon a different path of life and one of new achieve- ments, proved him to be inferior as soldier and commander to no one soever of those who have won most admiration for leadership and shown themselves

1 Cf. the Cicero, chapters xxx. and xxxi.

4 'i avn elte PaBiovs cal Xenriwvas cat MetédXovs
\ , a Kal TovS KAT aUTOV 7 pLKpov EumpoaUey avToD,
f ?
XvArav cal Mapiov apdotépovs te AevxovrdAdous
a \ fw by / Ka , e 4 "? a 7H Kat Lloxaniov avtov, ov KX€os UTTOVpaVLoY HnYGEL TOTE TAVTOLAS TEpl TOAELOV apETHs, TaeaPdroL
e ? e ? , ' \
Tis, at Kaicapos uvepBadXovor mpakers Tov peév
/ \ \ a YaneToTnTt TOTwY év ols érroNeuNoe, TOV O€ peEryé-
¢ \ f N
Get ywpas ijy wpocextncato, Tov b€ ANGE Kal
, , ¢ , \ b ?
Bia mrodentwy ods évixnoe, Tov b€ aToTIats Kal
b] ' y cal a f ' \ 3 ¥ antotiats nO@v a Kabwpidrnoe, Tov Sé érlEeLtKELa
\
kal TpaoTyTt Tpos Tovs aALTKOmEvOUS, TOV bé \ 4 dwpots Kal yaptot pos TOUS TVaTPATEVOLEVOVS, mavras 6€ T® WreloTas peuaynobat payas Kal TAELTTOUS aYnpHnKévat TOV avTiTAaXPevTwY. eTN
ad
yap ovdé déxa modennoas rept Tadatiav ronets
\ ®@
fev UTEép OKTAKOGLaS KATA KPaTOS etrev, EOVN OE
eyelpwoaTto TplaKoota, pupidoe S€ Twapatakdpe-VOS KATA pépos TpLaKociais ExaTov pév ev yEpal duepOecper, adras b€ TocavTas éfaryproev.
XVI. Etvota 6€ kal rpodupia otpatiwtav éXPNTATO TOTAUTH TEplL AUTOY WaTE TOS éTépwY
\ 3 a Y , f
uncev év Ttais addXats otpateias Siapépovtas
apayous Kal avuToatatous pépecOat pds Trav \ \ ce) Far a devvov v7ép THS Katcapos do&ns. olos fv TodTO SS ' , a 3 " \ , ?
pev Axtidtos, 0s ev TH wept Maccandtay vavpayia

\ , > ‘\ \ \ \ 3 z
vews Toreuias eTtBeBnkas THY pev Se€tav artref A , al Ave ‘ \ \ ’
Komn Xelpa wayatpa, TH dé éTépa Tov Oupeov ove
3 a 3 \ /
apijxev, adda TUTTwWY Els TA TpdOTwTA TOUS 478
715

CAESAR, xv. 2—xvi. 1

greatest therein. Nay, if one compare him with such men as Fabius and Scipio and Metellus, and with the men of his own time or a little before him, like Sulla, Marius, the two Luculli, or even Pompey himself, whose fame for every sort of military excel- lence was at this time flowering out and reaching to the skies, Caesar will be found to surpass them all in his achievements. One he surpassed in the difficulty of the regions where he waged his wars; another in the great extent of country which he acquired ; another in the multitude and might of the enemies over whom he was victorious; another in the savage manners and perfidious dispositions of the people whom he conciliated ; another in his reasonableness and mildness towards his captives; another still in the gifts and favours which he bestowed upon his soldiers; and all in the fact that he fought the most battles and killed the most enemies. For although it was not full ten years that he waged war in Gaul, he took by storm more than eight hundred cities, subdued three hundred nations, and fought pitched battles at different times with three million men, of whom he slew one million in hand to hand fighting and took as many more prisoners.

XVI. His soldiers showed such good will and zeal in his service that those who in their previous campaigns had been in no way superior to others were invincible and irresistible in confronting every danger to enhance Caesar’s fame. Such a man, for instance, was Acilius, who, in the sea-fight at Massalia,! boarded a hostile ship and had his right hand cut off with a sword, but clung with the other hand to his shield, and dashing it into the faces ot

1 Described by Caesar in Bell. Civ. ii. 4-7.
479
PLUTARCI Selva

Tmoheplous ameat pepe TavTas Kal Tob aKagous emeKpaTnae® TOUTO o€ Kdoovos = XKevas, Os ev TH Wept Auppaxvov HaXn TOV opar pov exkomrels Tofevpatt, Tov O€ & apov vao@ Kal Tov pnpov ETEDW died hapevos, TH O€ duped Berov éxatov Kat TpudKovTa myryas dvadedeypév0s, éxdrer Tovs
TmoAEptous @s Tapad@owy éauTov. dvelv dé
TPOTLOVT DY, TOD pev amreéKxowe TOV @pov TH
paxatpa, TOV 6¢ KaTa TOD T poo wmov matatas am eatpeYen, avtos 6é die oOn TOV olxelov Tept-TXOVTOY. ép O€ Bperrari ia T@V TONEY Ets TOTOV

éxwdn Kal pectov Sdtov éurrecotat Tois Tpw-tows taktapyos émrilepévay aotpatiwrns, Kai-Tapos avTod THY paxny ehopa@vTos, WadpeEvos els
pécous Kal TOAAG Kal TepioTTAa TOALNS aTrodel-Edpevos &pya Tous pev Ttalvapxous ETWTE, TOV BapBapov puyovTar, avr os be NareT As éml Tact
d:aBaivear eppuypev éavTov els pevpara TEAMAT@ON, Kal “ors avev TOD Ovpeod, TA pev VNYOMEVOS, TA
dé Badivov, OueTrepace. Oavpatovtay d€ TOV mept TOV Kaicapa Kal peTa yapas Kal Kpavyis ATAVTOVT OD, avTos ev pdda KatTndhys Kat deda-KPULEVOS T pooeTrET€ T@ Kaicapt, ovyyveopny ai-TOUMEVOS ETL TO mpota Oat Tov Oupeov. év 6é€ AtBun vaov éddvres of mept Lanmiova, Kaicapos, év 2 D'pavios Ilérpey eT ET AEL Tapas amobedet-YHEVOS, TOUS pev aAXous €zroLovvTo heap, ™@ 5e Tapia d00vat THY TwTNpLay ehacav. o 6€ eima@v étt Tois Katoapos oTpaTLoTats ov AauBaverv, arrXa didovat T@Tnplay €Gos éattv, éauTov TO Eider matdEas avetne.
480

CAESAR, xvi. 1-4

his foes, routed them all and got possession of the vesse]. Such a man, again, was Cassius Scaeva, who, in the battle at Dyrrhachium, had his eye struck out with an arrow, his shoulder transfixed with one javelin and his thigh with another, and received on his shield the blows of one hundred and _ thirty missiles. In this plight, he called the enemy to him as though he would surrender. Two of them, accord- ingly, coming up, he lopped off the shou'der of one with his sword, smote the other in the face and put him to flight, and came off safely himself with the aid of his comrades.! Again, in Britain, when the enemy had fallen upon the foremost centurions, who had plunged into a watery marsh, a soldier, while Caesar in person was watching the battle, dashed into the midst of the fight, displayed many con- spicuous deeds of daring, and rescued the centurions, after the Barbarians had been routed. Then he himself, making his way with difficulty after all the rest, plunged into the muddy current, and at last, without his shield, partly swimming and partly wad- ing, got across. Caesar and his company were amazed and came to meet the soldier with cries of joy; but he, in great dejection, and with a burst of tears, cast himself at Caesar’s feet, begging pardon for the loss of his shield. Again, in Africa, Scipio captured a ship of Caesar’s in which Granius Petro, who had been appointed quaestor, was sailing. Of the rest of the passengers Scipio made booty, but told the quaestor that he offered him his life. Granius, however, remarking that it was the cus- tom with Caesar’s soldiers not to receive but to offer mercy, killed himself with a blow of his sword.

1 Cf. Caesar, Bell. Civ. iii, 53
481
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XVII. Ta d€ TolavTa Aypata Kal Tas ptro-TUBLLAas avTos avebpee Kal xatecxevace Kaioap,
Tp@TOv pey TO xaptfecbar Kat THLay apedas EVSELKVULEVOS OTL TOV TAOUDTOY OK Eis TpUdNY
iStav oveé Tivas nduTrabeias ex TOY TONEY AO pol-er, xowa Oe aOra THS avdpaya bias map AUTO pudraccopeva amr oKelTat, Kal PETETTLY éxeiv@ TOU movTely 60a TOS agtous TOV OTPATLOTOY dt-Smo." emelTa T® TAVTA pev xivOuvov EK@V Upiotaa bat, ™ pos undéva 88 Tov TéveV AT AY OPEVELY, TO pev ovv pedoxivevvov OUK eGavpatov avTov dua Ty prrorupiay: n O€ TOY TOvOY Urromovi mapa THY TOU THMATOS Suvapuy eycapTepelv 50-KOUVTOS eLeT AT TEV, OTL Kal THY ef ov toXVOS
Kal THY CapKa euKos Kal dmranos Kal THY Kepa-
ANY voowons Kal Tots émt ToIs ETAT TLKOLS évo-X05; év KopdvBn T P@TOV avT@ TOU Tadovs, OS
AeyeTat, ToUTOU T POT TES OVTOS, ov paraxias eTTOLNT ATO THY appworiav Tpopaci, anra Gepa-Telav THS appwatias THY oTpareiay, Tats aTpu-Tols odoLTropials Kal TAais evTeh Eat diaitais Kal
T® Oupavreiv evdeheX@S Kal TaXarTr@pely aT O-paxopevos 7T@ mabet Kal TO TOpa THPeV oucd-AwTOV. EK OLLATO pev ye TOUS TAciaTOUS UTvous eV OXI Pac i popetors, els pak Thy avETavoly katate LEvos, @XEiTo b€ pe? ne pay emt Ta, ppovpia Kal Tas TONES Kab TOUS xapaxas, évos
auT@ cuvyxadnpévou TALOos TOV UToyppety dpa SuovTos elOua weveny, Evos & é£omiadev epertn-KOTOS OTpaTL@ToU Eidos EXOVTOS. TUPTOVWS be iprauvev obras @OOTE THY 7 PwOTny e£odop amo ‘Pewpns Totnoapevos oysoutos émlt tov ‘Podavov er Getv.
482

71

CAESAR, xvn. 1-4

XVII. Such spirit and ambition Caesar himself created and cultivated in his men, in the first place, because he showed, by his unsparing bestowal of rewards and honours, that he was not amassing wealth from his wars for his own luxury or for any life of ease, but that he treasured it up carefully as a common prize for deeds of valour, and had no greater share in the wealth than he offered to the deserving among his soldiers; and in the second place, by willingly undergoing every danger and refusing no toil. Now, at his love of danger his men were not astonished, knowing his ambition ; but that he should undergo toils beyond his body's apparent power of endurance amazed them, because he was of a spare habit, had a soft and white skin, suffered from distemper in the head, and was subject to epileptic fits, a trouble which first attacked him, we are told, in Corduba. Nevertheless, he did not make his feeble health an excuse for soft living, but rather his military service a cure for his feeble health, since by wearisome journeys, siniple diet, continu- ously sleeping in the open air, and enduring hard- ships, he fought off his trouble and kept his body strong against its attacks. Most of his sleep, at least, he got in cars or litters, making his rest conduce to action, and in the day-time he would have himself conveyed to garrisons, cities, or camps, one slave who was accustomed to write from dictation as he travelled sitting by his side, and one soldier standing behind him with a sword. And he drove so rapidly that, on his first journey from Rome to Gaul, he reached the Rhone in seven days.

To pev ovv immevew EK Tardos 7 ay avT@ paduor ei\Ocato yap els TouTiaw Tas xelpas cm dryou Kal TO VOT W TEPLTTNEKOY ava KpaTos éXNavvev Tov
im7rov. €v exetvn d€ TH oTparela Tpooegno Kno ev immalomevos Tas émlaTOAaS Umraryopevety Kal
dua ty opod ypapovaw éEapxety, as 6€ "Oreos not, cal wreioot. Réyetas O€ Kal TO bia ypapaTwV TOiS pidoes omedety Kaioapa Tp@Tov j.1-xavnoac ban, THY KATA 7 Poo WT OV évTev&ly Umeép TOV eTELyOVTOV Tod Katpoi Ota TE TAG OS ac yo-ALOV Kal THis TOAEWS TO peyellos iT {TE PL pseVOVTOS.
THS 6é mept THY diartap evKorias KaKEtvO 7 oLovv-TAL OnMeELov, OTL TOV SeLTViCoVTOS avToV év Mesio-Advw Eévou Ovardrepiov Aéovtos mapabévtos dom dparyov Kal pupov avt édatov KaTaxXéavtos, avTOS pev APEXWS eparye, Tots Os pirors dua xepat-vouow emeém An Eev. '"Hpkee yap, ebm, " TO By xphoPas Tots dmapeoKkovaty' o 6é TH TOLAUTHY aypotxiay éFedéyxXov AUTOS éoTev dry potkos. év
00@ Oé ToTe gUVEAaTOHEis UTO YEt@Vvos els errav-AW avo pwTrou TEVNTOS, WS OVSEY EvpE TAEOY OLKN-
[aT 0s évos pMaxpus éva béEacbau Suvapevov,
T POs TOUS pirous ELT @V OS TOV pev evTiwoov Tapa-Xo pnt éov eln Tots Kpatio tous, Tov oé dvary Katy Tots aobevertarors, 'Onrmov exehevo ev avanTavcao bac autos 6€ META TOV GAXOV VITO T@ TpooTEyi@ THS Oupas exdbevoev.
XVIII. 'AAAa yap 0 pev T POTOS aUT@ TOY
Keatixav TONE LOY 7 pos "EXByttious TUvETTH
Kat Teyupivous, ot Tas auT@v dwdera TONELS kal

Horsemanship, moreover, had been easy for him from boyhood; for he was wont to put his hands behind his back and, holding them closely there, to ride his horse at full speed. And in the Gallic campaigns he practised dictating letters on horseback and keeping two scribes at once busy, or, as Oppius says, even more. We are told, moreover, that Caesar was the first to devise intercourse with his friends by letter, since he could not wait for personal interviews on urgent matters owing to the multitude of his occupations and the great size of the city. Of his indifference in regard to his diet the following circumstance also is brought in proof. When the host who was entertaining him in Mediolanum, Valerius Leo, served up asparagus dressed with myrrh instead of olive oil, Caesar ate of it without ado, and rebuked his friends when they showed displeasure. ‘Surely,’ said he, “it were enough not to eat what you don't like; but he who finds fault with ill-breeding like this is ill-bred himself.” Once, too, upon a journey, he and his followers were driven by a storm into a poor man’s hut, and when he found that it consisted of one room only, and that one barely able to accommodate a single person, he said to his friends that honours must be yielded to the strongest, but necessities to the weakest, and bade Oppius lie down there, while he himself with the rest of his company slept in the porch.

XVIII. But to resume, the first of his Gallic wars was against the Helvetii and Tigurini,| who had set fire to their twelve cities and four hundred villages and were advancing through that part of Gaul which

1 Cf. Caesar, Bell. Gall. i. 2-29.

da THS vm ‘Pwpatous Tarartias, Oo Ep mada KiuSpoe cat Tevtoves, ovre TONY €KELVWY UTTOdeéoTepor SoxobvTes eivat Kal THOS opards TpLdKovTa pev al Tacat wupraces ovtes, eixoat O€

at paxopevar Beas déovaal. TOVTwWY Teyupivous pev OUK auTos, anrra AaBujvos meupbets wir’ avTov mept TOV “Apapa TOTapov cuvetpirper, ‘EABytriev dé avT@ Tpos Tlva Tov didnv diryovTe THY oTpatiay Kae o60v am poo SoxijTos émiGepéevwy dOacas emi xwptov Kaptepov Kate-purye. KO KEL ouvaryayor Kab mapatagas THY ouvapl, ws (mT Os avT@ mpoanxOn, ‘Toute per, " €py, “ ViKHo as NPNTOpAL pos TH Siow, vov dé iwpev emi Tous Tonepious,” kal welos
opunoas eve Bane. Kpove | dé Kal Narerras
OT AMEVOS TO paxtpov Tept Tats apakars Kal
TO Ku pare TOV WELaTOV eoxe a ovon, ouK QUTOV
proveov UpioTapevoy EXEL KAL HAXOMEVOD, ddnra Kal TaAldES AVTAV Kall yuvaiices dpuvopevoe PEX pl Bavitov TUYKATEKOTIOAY, MOTE THV WaXNV pores
els Heoas VUKTAS TEAEUTHTAL KAA@ be TO THS VUKNS Epy@ KpeiT TOV emeOnke TO TUVOLKiOAL TOUS
Staguyovtas Ex THS paxns TOV TE pLovT@Y Bap-Bapov, Kab KaTavay cao al THY VOpav avaraBety
Nv améhutrov Kal TAS TOKELS Gs orép Oetpar, ovTas
Umep O4Ka. pupiaoas. én page b¢ TOUTO O€OLWS pen THY X@pav epnuov yevouevny ot Teppavol d1a-Bavtes KATATXWOL.
XIX. Aevtepov S€ mpos Teppavovs aytexpus
UTrep Kedrav ETONEULNGE, KALTOL TOV Bactréa
Tpotepov avtav ApioBiatov év “Pwun cippaxov 486

CAESAR? xvii. 1=x1X. 1

was subject to the Romans, as once the Cimbri and Teutones had done. To these they were thought to be not inferior in courage and of equal numbers, being three hundred thousand in all, of whom one hundred and ninety thousand were fighting men.
The Tigurini were crushed at the river Arar, not by Caesar himself, but by Labienus, his deputy; the Helvetii, however, unexpectedly attacked Caesar himself on the march, as he was leading his forces towards a friendly city, but he Bireededn in reaching a strong place of refuge. Here, after he had collected and arrayed his forces, a horse was brought to him. ‘This horse,” said he, “I will use for the pursuit after my victory; but now let us go against the enemy," and accordingly led the charge on foot. After a long and hard struggle he routed the enemy's fighting men, but had the most trouble at their rampart of waggons, where not only did the men themselves make a stand and fight, but also their wives and children defended themselves to the death and were cut to pieces with the men. The battle was hardly over by midnight. To the noble work of victory Caesar added a nobler still, that of settling those of the Barbarians who had escaped alive from the battle (there were more than one hundred thousand of them), and compelling them to resume the territory which they had abandoned and the cities which they had destroyed. He did this because he feared that if the territory became vacant the Germans would cross the Rhine and occupy it.

XIX. His second war, directly in defence of the Gauls, was against the Germans,! although pre- viously, in Rome, he had made their king Ariovistus

1 Cf. Caesar, B.G. i, 30-53.

, > > hy 9 4 a ¢ i TETOLNMLEVOS' ANN Noav ahopyntot Tots varNKoOLS na " s bY
avtov yeltoves, Kal Katpovd TrapadovTos ovK av éSoxouv él Tots Tapovow atpeunoev, adr 9 ? \ Gé \ - e a émweunoecOar cali KadéEev tHv Taratiay. opev
s al
5é tous Hyenovas amodethi@vtas, Kal padiora
6 ~ ww \ la wa wn
OooL TOV emupavey Kal Vewy AUTO ouvetirov ws
6n TpupH XPNToEvoL kal XPNPATLT LD TH peta Kaicapos otpatelg, ouvaryaryev els cxednotay éxéXevoev arriévat Kal pn Kivduvevety Tapa yvopny ovTws avavdpws Kai parakas ExovTas, avTos \ ' , 4 U N See
dé bn TO SéxaTov Taypa povoy TaparaBwv éri
oe ,
tous BapBdpovs wmopevoecOat, pnte xpeittoct
, 4 s pérrov KiuSpwv payec0ar Troreptots prjte avros

f /
av Mapiov yelpwv otpatnyos. €x TovTOU TO pe
\ f déxatov Taypa mpecBevtas Emrepmre mpos avTov
4 wv e “ \ \ o/ \ e Yap éyey opodoyobvtes, Ta 6€ AANA Tors Eéava , e ad
Tov éxaxiloyv nyepmovas, opuns b€ Kal mpobupias yervomevot TWANPELS ATraVvTES NKONOVOOLY odoV ueE-
~ “ , a pav mortar, ws év Staxocioss TOV Todepior
a /
oTadlols KATETTPATOTECEVT AD.
3 \ = ° Y N \ ” > \
Hv pev ody 6 Te Kat mpos THY Ehodoy avTnv
an , ~ 9 4
éréOpavato THs yvopns tov ’AptoBiatov. Tep-
A € td
pavois yap érTtOncecPat Pwpaiovs, ov érepyopeyov ovx av éddoxouy vToaTHvat, 1 TpocdoKjcas \ if s
eOavpate thv Katoapos todkpav xal Tov otpa-
4 A
TOV éwpa TeTapaypevov. Erte 5é wadXov avTovs
\ , a) a A A
MBAUVE TA LAVTEVLATA TOV LEepaVv yuvaltKOyv, al
a ,
ToTapav divais mpooBAeTovcat Kal pevpatav
A ‘ f
EXiypots Kal yropots TEexpmatpoperat mpocBéo Tilov, 488
V7

CAESAR, xix. 1-4

an ally.) But they were intolerable neighbours of Caesar’s subjects, and if an opportunity presented itself it was thought that they would not remain quietly in their present homes, but would encroach upon and occupy Gaul. Seeing that his officers were inclined to be afraid, and particularly all the young men of high rank who had come out intending to make the campaign with Caesar an opportunity for high living and money-making, he called them together? and bade them be off, since they were so unmanly and effeminate, and not force themselves to face danger; as for himself, he said he would take the tenth legion alone and march against the Barbarians; the enemy would be no better fighters than the Cimbri, and he himself was no worse a general than Marius. Upon this the tenth legion sent a deputation to him, expressing their gratitude, while the other legions reviled their own commanders, and all the army, now full of impetuous eagerness, followed Caesar on a march of many days, and at last encamped within two hundred furlongs of the enemy.

Now, the very approach of Caesar somewhat shat- tered the purpose of Ariovistus. For he did not expect that the Romans would attack the Germans, whose onset he thought they could not withstand, and he was amazed at the boldness of Caesar; be- sides, he saw that his own army was disturbed. Still more, too, was the spirit of the Germans blunted by the prophecies of their holy women, who used to foretell the future by observing the eddies in the rivers and by finding signs in the whirlings and 1 Acting as consul, in 59 B.c.

® Cf. Caesar, B.G. i. 40, 489

PLUTARCH SEs

ovx é@aat payny TiOecOat Tpiv ériraprwat véav cerxynvnv. tavta TO Kaicape trvOavopérw ral tous Teppavovs novyalovtas op@vTt Karas éyety éd0Fev ampobvpots ova avtots aupPadrelv pwan- ov) TOV éKElv@v ava pevovTa, Karpov Kabijabae. Kab ™poo Boras TOLOUMLEVOS TOES epupact Kal Nopors éh wv ea Tpatomédevoy, éEnypiawe Kal mapwEvve KataBavtTas T pos opyny Siayoricacbat. YEVOMEVNS O€ apm pas TpoTrijs avTov, émt orao- OUS TET paKoatous aX pe Tob *Payvou duwFas KaTeé- TANTE TOUTO TAY VEKPWV TO Te Otov kal Napvpwv. "AptoBtatos b5€ POdcas pet OrjyoY dteTépace tov ‘“Prvov: apiOuov dé vexpav pupiddas oxTw ryevéo Oat Néyousct.

XX. Taita StatpakFapevos thv péev Svvapw évy Xnxovavois amédere Sraxyetudoovaar, avTos dé tois év “Phun mpocéyev Bovropevos ets T1v mept Iladov Ladatiav xatéBn, THs av’T@ dedo- péevns éTapxias ovcav' o yap KaXovpevos “Pov- Bixwyv rotrapos amo THS vmTd Tats “AXmect Keartexts opifer tav addy ‘Itadiav. évtavéa

Kkadnuevos ednpaywyel, TONA@Y Tpos avToOY adt-KVOU LEVY, OLOOUS @V ExaaTos Senbein, Kal TaVTas ATOTELTOY TA pev EYoVTAS dn Tap avTOd, TA
de édmifovtas. Kal Tapa Tov addov Sé TavTa THS atpateias yYpovov éravOave tov Tloumniov
€y “épel VOY LEV TOUS TrONELLOUS TOTS TOV TOALTOV
OTAols KaTUaTpedouevos, viv bé Tois amo TaD TONEMLWY YpnuaTiW aip@v Tovs Toritas Kal
:
VELPOUILEVOS.
"Earet d€ BéXyas Heovce Suvatwratouvs Kertav

Kal THY TpLTYWV aTraayns THs KerriKhs vewopérous

splashings of the waters, and now forbade joining battle before a new moon gave its light. When Caesar learned this, and saw that the Germans kept quiet, he decided that it was a good plan to engage them while they were out of heart, rather than to sit still and wait for their time. So, by attacking their entrenchments and the hills on which they were encamped, he irritated them and incited them to come down in anger and fight the issue out. They were signally routed, and Caesar pursued them a distance of four hundred furlongs, as far as the Rhine, and filled all the intervening plain with dead bodies and spoils. Ariovistus, with a few followers, sueceeded in crossing the Rhine; his dead are said to have been eighty thousand in number.

XX. After this achievement, Caesar left his forces among the Sequani to spend the winter,! while he himself, desirous of giving attention to matters at Rome, came down to Gaul along the Po,* which was a part of the province assigned to him; for the river called Rubicon separates the rest of Italy from Cisalpine Gaul. Here he fixed his quarters and carried on his political schemes. Many came to see him, and he gave each one what he wanted, and sent all away in actual possession of some of his favours and hoping for more. And during all the rest of the time of his campaigns in Gaul, unnoticed by Pompey, he was alternately subduing the enemy with the arms of the citizens, or capturing and subduing the citizens with the money which he got from the enemy.

But when he heard that the Belgae, who were the most powerful of the Gauls and occupied the third

1 The winter of 58-57 B.c.

2 Cf. Caesar, B.G. i. 54: ipse in citeriorem Galliam ad conventus agendos profectus est.

adheatavat, jToddAas 8% Tivas pupiddas evoTTrOV
avdpav 7Opotxotas, émiatpéyas evOus éywpet
TaXEL TOAN@ Kal TopOova. Tovs TUppmaxous
Tardtas érimecmy ois moXepiots Tovs pev aOpovatatouvs Kal mAEclaoTovs alaxpes aywvigapévous Tpevrdpevos SvépOerpev, BoTE Kal Aipvas Kat totapnovs Babeis tots “Pwpatois vexpav
ANGE Tepatous yevécOa, TOV 8 aTooTavTwD ot
Mev TAPWKEAVLOL TAVTES Guayel TpoTEeXwpNnaav
éml O€ TOUS AYPLWTATOUS Kal PaYLLwWTATOUS TOV
tnoe, NepBious, éotpatevaer, olmep eis cuppryels Spupovs KaTwxnévot, yeveas b€ Kal KTHOELS EV
tive BvO@ THS DANS atwratw Oéwevoe TOV TrorE-piwv, avtol TH Kaicapst motoupévw yapaxa xat
fr) WpogbeyVopévw THULKAUTA THY waxny EEaKiapvptot TO TAOS Svtes aidvidiws mpocétrecor, Kat Tous pev immets éTpéyavto, Tav b€ TaypaTwv
TO dwdéxaTov Kal TO EBSdSomov meptayxovtTes irav-Tas aTéxTevay Tovs TaEvdpyous. ef dé p7 Kaicap aptacas tov @upeov nal Stacywv Tous mpo avTOU payopevous évéBare Tois BapPdpots, Kat
aTO TOV AkKpwv TO S€KaToY KLYdUVEvOYTOS aUTOD xkatédpape Kal dséxo we Tas TdEes TOY ToAELLOD, ovdels dv Soxel mepiyevéaOar viv 5€ 7h Kaicapos TON THY Neyowévny Uirép SivVamLY paynY ayw-Vigupevol TpéTTOVTAL pev OVS Hs Tous NepBious, KaTaKoTTOVat O€ dpUVOMEeVoUS? TeEvTAaKOTLOL yap amo pupidd@yv &E cwOivar Aéyovtat, Bovrevtal dé Tpels aTO TeTpaKOUlwv.
492

71

CAESAR, xx. 3-5

part of all their country, had revolted, and had as- sembled unknown myriads of armed men, he turned back at once and marched thither with great speed.! He fell upon the enemy as they were plundering the Gauls that were in alliance with Rome, and so routed and destroyed the least scattered and most numerous of them, after a disgraceful struggle on their part, that the Romans could cross lakes and deep rivers for the multitude of dead bodies in them. All the rebels who dwelt along the ocean submitted without a battle; against the Nervii, however, the most savage and warlike of the people in these parts, Caesar led his forces. The Nervii, who dwelt in dense woods, and had placed their families and pos- sessions in a recess of the forest at farthest remove from the enemy, at a time when Caesar was fortifying a camp and did not expect the battle, fell upon him suddenly, sixty thousand strong. They routed his cavalry, and surrounded the seventh and twelfth legions and slew all their centurions, and had not Caesar snatched a shield," made his way through the combatants in front of him, and hurled himself upon the Barbarians; and had not the tenth legion, at sight of his peril, run down from the heights and cut the ranks of the enemy to pieces, not a Roman, it is thought, would have survived. As it was, however, owing to Caesar's daring, they fought beyond their powers, as the saying is, and even then did not rout the Nervii, but cut them down as they defended themselves; for out of sixty thousand only five hun- dred are said to have come off alive, and only three of their senators out of four hundred.

1 Caesar's campaign against the Belgae, in 57 B.c., is described by himself in 3.G. ii. 1-33.
2 Scuto ab novissimis uni militi detracto (B.@. ii. 25, 2).

to

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ge Tavra " TUYKANTOS mudopevn) mevrexal-dexa 1)mépas eynpicato Quew Tots Jeots Kal
oxord ler eoptatovras, Goas é€m ovoEwa viny T pOTEpOV. Kal yap) xivOuvos epavy peyas, cOvar a da, TOT OUT@Y dvappayévTov, Kal TO vixnpa
Lapm porepon, ore Kaicap yy. 0 VIKOV, % pds LO evvowa TOV TONY érrotet. Kaicap 3 avTos* ev Oeper os TA Kara tHv Taratiav radu
év Tots Tept []adov Xwploes duexetpate o ovo Keva-Copevos Thy TON. ov yap povov ot TAS apxas maparyyéddovres exeivep Npwpwevor yopnyo Kat Tois map éxeivov Xprpact dra pFetpovres TOV Siwov avyyopevovto, Kal Trav ém partov 0 THY éxeivou Svvauv able Eweddev, GNAA Kal TOV érihavertat@y avdp@v Kal peyioT@V Ol TAELTTOL auvidOov mpos avtov eis Aovxav, Topumnids te Kat Kpdoaos cal" Amatos 0 Tis Lapdovos syepov kal Nérws o THs "IBnpias avOvtatos, wate paBdovyous pév Exatov eikoat yevéoOat, cvyKAN-Texovs d€ mrELovas 7 Staxocious.
BovaAnv oé€ Oéuevor SsexpiOnoav én tovtois:
Ger Hopmniov pev cal Kpioooy trdtous arose:
yO ihvat, Kaicapz 6 xpipata Kal revtuetiav adAnv émipeTpnOnvat THs atpatnyias, 6 Kal wapadroyw-TATOV epaivero Tols voty €yovotv. ob yap TOcaiTa VY PH UAT a mapa Kaicapos AapBavovtes ws ouk éxovtTe dvdovae Thy Bovday érretOov, "addov

dé jparyKaton € ématévovcay ots eynpivovto, Katovos fev ov TapovTos, émitndes yap avTov ets
1 Kaioap 8 abrds Sint.*; abrds 8 Bekker; nal yap abrds MSS., Sint.!, and Coraés.
494

CAESAR, xxi. 1-4

XXI. The Roman senate, on learning of these successes, decreed sacrifices to the gods and cessation from business, with festival, for fifteen days, a greater number than for any victory before.! For the danger was seen to have been great when so many nations at once had broken out in revolt, and because Caesar was the victor, the good will of the multitude towards him made his victory more splendid. Caesar himself, after settling matters in Gaul, again spent the winter? in the regions along the Po, carrying out his plans at Rome. For not only did the candidates for office there enjoy his assistance, and win their elections by corrupting the people with money from him, and do everything which was likely to enhance his power, but also most of the men of highest rank and greatest influence came to see him at Luca,? including Pompey, Crassus, Appius the governor of Sardinia, and Nepos the proconsul of Spain, so that there were a hundred and twenty lictors in the place and more than two hundred senators.

They held a council and settled matters on the following basis. Pompey and Crassus were to be elected consuls for the ensuing year, and Caesar was to have money voted him, besides another five years in his provincial command. This seemed very strange to men of understanding. For those who were getting so much money from Caesar urged the senate to give him money as if he had none, nay rather, they forced it to do so, though it groaned over its own decrees. Cato, indeed, was not there, for he had purposely been sent out of the way ona

1 Quod ante id tempus accidit nulli (Caesar, B.G. ii. 35, 4).
2 57-56 p.c. Cf. the Pompey, li. 3 f.
3 In April of 56 B.o.
495

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kum pov amedioTopTmcavTo, Pacviou bé, os ip CnrwTns Katwvos, @s ovder em epavev ayTt-

Aéywv, €Eadropévov d1a Ovpa@v cal Bodvtos eis
TO TAHOGos. AdNAa Tpocetyev OvdEtS, TOV pev Hlourniov atéovpévwr cal Kpdagoyr, ot 6€ treiato. Kaiocape yapifouevor cal mpos tas at éxeivou Caves édtridas navyalov.
XXII. Tpatropevos 5€ atdis 0 Kaicap émt tas
évy TH Kearixn Oupdpers ToNvLY KaTadapBaver TOE LOV ev TH Xopa, dvo0 Deppavix av éOveov peyarov él Kxataktnoe ys apte TOV “Pijvov dtaBeBnxotwv' Ovcizmras Kkadovdar tovs étépous, tous 6é€ Tevtepitas. mept 6& THs mpos TovToUs ryEVOMEVNS paxns o péev Katoap év tats epnueptar yeypager ws of BapBapot dram peo Bevopevor ™ pos
avTov é€v a7roveais emtOoivro kal” odov, kat dra TOUTO Tpeawro TOUS auTov TEVTAKLTXtALOUS
dvtas imrels oxTaKoatots Tots exeiveov pn m™poa6o-K@VTas’ eita Téwrperav ETEpous Tpos auvToV ads
éfaratavtas, ods Katacywy émayayo Tois Bap-Bdapos TO oTpatevpa, TY TpoS OUTS aTiaTOUS
Kal Tapactovoous miativ evrOerav 1youUpevos.
Tavvctos dé réyer Karova, THs BovrAns emt TH ven Wye Comeviys éoptas Kal Gusias, aTopnvacbar yrounv ws éxdotéov éorl tov Katcapa Tots BapBapors, doo rovpevous 70 Tapacnovonpa
UTEp THS TONEWS Kal THY apav els Tov altLov TpéTrovTas.
Tov dé SvaBavtov at pev KaTaKoTEioal TET apakovta pupiddes oar, OrALyous S€ TOUS dTo-1 Cf. the Cato Minor, xxxiv.

eee

CAESAR, xxi. 4-XxxiL 3

mission to Cyprus,! and Favonius, who was an ardent follower of Cato, finding himself unable to accomplish anything by his opposition, bounded out of doors and clamoured to the populace. But no one gave heed to him, for some were in awe of Pompey and Crassus, and most wanted to please Caesar, lived in hopes of his favours, and so kept quiet.

XXII. On returning to his forces in Gaul,? Caesar found a considerable war in the country, since two great German nations had just crossed the Rhine to possess the land, one called the Usipes,? the other the Tenteritae.2 Concerning the battle which was fought with them Caesar says in his “Commentaries ’’ 4 that the Barbarians, while treating with him under a truce, attacked on their march and therefore routed his five thousand cavalry with their eight hundred, since his men were taken off their guard; that they then sent other envoys to him who tried to deceive him again, but he held them fast and led his army against the Barbarians, considering that good faith towards such faithless breakers of truces was folly. But Tanusius says that when the senate voted sacri- fices of rejoicing over the victory, Cato pronounced the opinion that they ought to deliver up Caesar to the Barbarians, thus purging away the violation of the truce in behalf of the city, and turning the curse therefor on the guilty man.

Of those who had crossed the Rhine into Gaul four hundred thousand were cut to pieces, and the 2 In 55 B.c. Plutarch passes over Caesar's campaign of 56 B.c. in Gaul, following the conference at Luca. Caesar describes it in B.@. iii.
3 Caesar calls them Usipetes and Tencteri (B.G. iv. 1).

SCL OIE,

TepacavTas avs umedéfavo LovyapuBpot, lep-

QVeKon é?vos. Kal tavTnv AaBev aitiav én avtous 0 Kaioap, dd\rAws b€ b0Ens édiépevos Kat tod mpwtos avOpwrwv atpat@ dvaBivat Tov
'Pivov, éyeptpou mAUTOS TE TOAULY OvTA Kal KAT €xelvo Tov Topov padtoTa TANpUpOvVTA Kal
Tpaxr Kat powdn Kal TOUS KaTApEpopevols oTE-Aéveot Kal Evhois TAnyas Kal omaparypous EvOLOOPTA KATA TOV EpeLCovT@y THY yepupay.
adhe TAaUTA T poBorois EvAwY peyadXwv dea TOU Topou KATAT ETN YOTOV dvadeXopevos, Kal yart-VOT AS TO ™ poo mim TOV pevua TO SEUYPATE, TLS TEWS
macys Oéapa KpEetTTov éredelEato Thy yepupav Hepars Séxa ouvTErAcaOeEtaar.
XXIII. Hleparmoas 5€ thy Svvaptv, ovdevos
UTAVTHTAL TOALNTAVTOS, AAAA Kal TOV rHyEmovte-KwTaTwov tod Leppavxotd NovnBwv eis Baleis
Kat VAMELS AVA@VUS avacKEeVaTaLevwV, TUPTO-Ajoas Mev THY TOV TOAELiMY, Oappuvas Sé TOUS
del Ta Pwpatwv aotralopévous, aveywpyoev avbis els THY Taratiav, eixoct dvetv Seovcas nuépas €v 7) Teppaveny Craze pipes.
MH oe én TOUS Bpettavovs oTpareta THD peev ~OApLay eb yev OVOLACT HY T PWTOS yap elS TOV

éo Téptov ‘Oxeavov éréBn TTOND, Kat Sa THS ‘Atha ruichs Jararrns oT patov emt TOAE HOV KO-pile em evo Kal vi}cov amvaToupevny UTO Meé-yéOous Kat TONY pw TapToNoes cuyypapevat Tapacxobaav, ws dvoma Kat Aoyos ov yEeroperns
ovde ovans TETAATTAL, Kata xXetv em LUE LEVOS Tponyayey e€&@ Tis olkoupévns tiv “Pwratwr 498

7]

CAESAR, xxu. 4—xXxul. 2

few who succeeded in making their way back were received by the Sugambri, a German nation. This action Caesar made a ground of complaint against the Sugambri, and besides, he coveted the fame of being the first man to cross the Rhine with an army. He therefore began to bridge the river,} although it was very broad, and at this point in its course especially swollen, rough, and impetuous, and with the trunks and branches of trees which it bore down stream kept smiting and tearing away the supports of his bridge. But Caesar caught up these trunks and branches with bulwarks of great timbers planted across the stream, and having thus bridled and yoked the dashing current, he brought his bridge—sight beyond all credence—to completion in ten days.

XXIII. He now threw his forces across the river.
No one ventured to oppose him, but even the Suevi, who were the foremost nation of the Germans, bestowed themselves and their belongings in deep and woody defiles. Caesar ravaged the country of the enemy with fire, gave encouragement to the constant friends of Rome, and then retired again into Gaul, having spent eighteen days in Germany.
His expedition against the Britanni was celebrated for its daring. For he was the first to leunch a fleet upon the western ocean and to sail through the Atlantic sea carrying an army to wage war. The island was of incredible magnitude, and furnished much matter of dispute to multitudes of writers, some of whom averred that its name and story had been fabricated, since it never had existed and did not then exist; and in his attempt to occupy it he carried the Roman supremacy beyond the confines of 1 B.G. iv. 16-19.

499
9
vo
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

yyepoviav. dis d€ dvatrAEVTAaS Els THY VijcoV éx
Ts avtimépas Vadarttas, Kat paxyats moddais KAKWGAaS TOUS TOAEULOUS pad Aov i) TOUS idious

apednoas, ovdey yap 6 TL Kal AaBeww mY aE ov aT avO por av KaKkoBiwv Kal wevyjTwv, ovx otov éBovreTo TO TONED TENOS em eOnker, GAN' Opn-pous ha Bev mapa Tov Bacrréws Kab TaEapmevos Popous ATHpEV EK THS vo Ov.
Kati KatahapBaver pappara. jédAovTa dia-
Tet 7 pos autov avo Tov év 'Popun pirorv, bn-AobyTa THY THS Ouyatpos avuTovu TENEUTIY" TereuTa € TiKTOVTA Tapa Toprnie. KAL eya bev aQuTov gave Llopmrijiov, péya Oe Kaicapa mevOos, ot b¢ dino. _guverapax na av ws TiS ev ecpivn Kab opovola Tada vooovugayv TV TonuTetay pvvar-TOVENS oiKeLOTNTOS AeAvpeEnn]s" Kal yap TO) Bpedos
evdus ov moA\Xas myeepas peta, THY pytépa bia-Cho av eTENEUT IGE. THY HEV ouv 'TovAtav Bia
TOY ONMapKoV paper ov TO TrAHGOS eis To "A pevov NVEYKE TEOLOV, KAKEL K1)OEVUEtoa KElTaL.
XXIV. Tod 6 Katoapos peyadny On THY Suva pu ovoay els TONG KAT avayKny Xeupeaora StEAOVTOS, avTou dé 7 pos THY 'Irariav, OoTrEp elw0el, TpaTromévov, mavTa pev avOis aveppHyvuTO Ta TOV Padazov, Kal oTpatot peyanot Te priovTes efexomTov Ta Netpadua Kat 7 poo €MaXOVTO Tols Xapaxapace TOV 'Popaior, ol be TrElLoTOL Kal KpateaTou TOV ATOOTAVTOV pera "ABptoptyos
Kotrav pev avt@ otpatorédw Kat Titupiov &é-

1 Once in 55 B.c. (B.G. iv. 20-36) ; again in 54 B.c. (B.G. 1-22).

the inhabited world. After twice! crossing to the island from the opposite coast of Gaul and in many battles damaging the enemy rather than enriching his own men—for there was nothing worth taking from men who lived in poverty and wretchedness—he brought the war to an end which was not to his liking, it is true; still, he took hostages from the king, imposed tributes, and then sailed away from the island.

In Gaul he found letters which were about to be sent across to him. They were from his friends in Rome, and advised him of his daughter's death; she died in child-birth at Pompey's house. Great was the grief of Pompey, and great the grief of Caesar, and their friends were greatly troubled too; they felt that the relationship which alone kept the distempered state in harmony and concord was now dissolved. For the babe also died presently, after surviving its mother a few days. Now Julia, in spite of the tribunes, was carried by the people to the Campus Martius, where her funeral rites were held, and where she lies buried."

XXIV. Caesar's forces were now so large that he was forced to distribute them in many winter- quarters, while he himself, as his custom was, turned his steps towards Italy. Then all Gaul once more broke out in revolt,? and great armies went about attacking the entrenchments and trying to destroy the winter-quarters of the Romans. The most nu- merous and powerful of the rebels, under Abriorix,* utterly destroyed Titurius and Cotta, together with

2 Cf. the Pompey, chapter lili.
3 Cf. Caesar, B.G. v. 24-51.
* Caesar calls him Ambiorix.

N f a
2 pOepav, to b€ bro Kixépwu Ttadypa pupidow ef
4 \ , TepiayovTes €rroNlopKouv Kai piKpov améduiTov
, e
NPNKEVAL KATA KPATOS, TUYTETPWLEVWY ATAYTODV
td \ , b ,
Kal Tapa duvapuiy LTO TpoOumtas amvvopevwn.
a a 7 \
'Qs 6€ ayyéA@n tavbtTa 7@ Kaicaps paxpay
f \ \ e
OVTL, TAYEWS ETLATPEWAS Kal OVVAYyaYywV ETTAKIO-4 / \ , yidlous Tovs cUuTaVTas nrelyeto TOV Kixéepwva
A , / \ \
Thy TodtopKxias éEatpnoopevos. Ttovs b€ ToXrt.- a ' " ' ? bf , e >
OPKOVYTAS OVK éXadev, AAX ATHVYTOV WS avapTra-
A >] , 4
3 gouEevol, THS OALYOTHTOS KaTappovijcayTes. Ka-aA 9 nw ¢ / ' 7 \ , N Ketvos é€aTraTay UTédevyev uel, Kal Ywpia KaBov
b) , " \ \ , >

EMLTNOELWS EXOVTA TPOS TOAAOUS MAYOLEVM [ET
> , 4 / “
ddiywy ppdyvuTat oTpaToTEdov, Kal paxyns Evye \ aA , a \ NX
TOUS E€AUTOU TaONS, avayayety Oe TOV YapaKa Kal
\ 4 > a e , ? iy
TAS TUAAS avotKosopety ws SedoLxoTas nvayKale,
aA A ?
KkatappovnOhvar otpatnyav, méexpt ov smopadnpy
N , >
UTO Opacous TpogBarXovtas éTreEeOwv eT pérato
“A / Kal TOANOUS auUTaV dLepOerpe.
a \ a XXV. Todto tas roddas arroctaces TaY év-tav0a Tarata@v Kkateotopece, Kal Tod yetmovos
\ “A ,
avuTOS émiboiT@y TE TavTayoce Kal Tpocéywn
3 ? n n e
of€ws Tols vewTepicpois. Kal yap Kev é& *Ita-4: > \ a ? / by a , ,
Mas AVTL TOY ATOXWAOTWY AUTO TPLa TaypaTa, Ul WA ‘) a ey? Coa ee t a oumniov pev €x THY UP avT@ dvO ypijcavTos, év
\ 4 > A
d€ veoovAXrExTOV é€x THs wept Hadov Tadatias.
, \ e
2 woppw o€ TOVTM@Y al Tadat KaTAaBEBAnpévat KpU-
\ , \ a aA
pa Kai vewouevat O1a Tov dSuvaTwTtdTwy avdpar 502

CAESAR, xxiv. 2—~xxv. 2

their army, while the legion under Cicero was surrounded and besieged by sixty thousand of them, and narrowly escaped having its camp taken by storm, although all were wounded and went beyond their powers in the ardour of their defence.
When tidings of these things reached Caesar, who was far on his journey, he turned back quickly, got together seven thousand men in all, and hurried on to extricate Cicero from the siege. But the besiegers became aware of his approach, and went to meet him with the purpose of cutting his forces off at once, despising their small numbers. Caesar de- ceived them by avoiding battle coutinually, and when he had found a place suitable for one who was fighting against many with few, fortified a camp, where he kept his men altogether from fighting and forced them to increase the height of their ram- parts and the defences of their gates as though they were afraid. His strategy thus led the enemy to despise him, until at last, when their boldness led them to attack in scattered bands, he sallied out, routed them, and destroyed many of them.

XXV. The numerous revolts of the Gauls in those parts were quieted by this success, as well as by the fact that Caesar himself, during the winter, went about in all directions and kept close watch on the disturbers of the peace. For there had come from Italy three legions to replace the men that he had lost, Pompey having lent two of those under his command, and one having been newly levied in Gaul about the Po. But in remoter regions! the germs of the greatest and most dangerous of the wars waged in described by Caesar in B.G. vi. The seventh book is wholly taken up with the war now to be described (52 B.c.).

1 Plutarch here passes over the events of the year 55 B.c.,

év Tols PAY LLWTATOLS yeveruy dpxat TOU peylotou Kal KivdurwbecTaTov TOY Exel TORE MOY avedai-VOVTO, powobeicat TONAT [ev nrc Kal TwavTa-xobev Orr dots aOporcbeian, peyarous 5é WAOVTOLS els TaUvTO cuvevex Getaw, laxupais b¢ TONE, SucepPoroes dé Xwpais. TOTE 6é Kal KELUOVOS
Opa Tayo HOTA pay Kal veperots dTroKeK puppevo Spupol xa media VELMA P POLS emthedtpvac peva,, Kal wh mev aT eK wapToL Baber yeovos atparol, 7H dé de EXO Kal pevpatoy TApaT peTopeveny dodhea TOAAN THS Topetas TavtTatractw eddKouY av-emeyeipnta Kaicapt ta Tov abiarapevev qovety.
aperaT nner peep obv TOAAA hvAG, Tpooxnpa bé Hoav ApBépvor Kal Kapvourivos, TO 66 cvUpTraY aipebels Kpatos ELve TOU TONELOV Ovepyevtopi€, ov TOV TATE pa. Taddtat tupavvida doxodvta tm pat-TELY ATEKTELVAD.
XXVI. Obrtos ovv ets Toda dLeN@Y THY duvapay HEpn Kal ToAXOUS emLaToas mpyepovas OKEL-ovTO THY Tepe ATaTAaY ay pt TOY TOs TOV "A papa KEKNLMEVOY, Sravoovpevos 50 Tov év 'Pouy ouvt-TTA MEvoy ETL Kaicapa ovpragay éryelpewy TO TONELM Tarariav. Srrep él peKpov oTrepov émpa-Ee, Kaioapos els TOV emp vALov éumecovTos T0-EMoy, OVK ay edadporepor TOV KipBpiay e EKELvov doBor tHv ItaXiav Katéoxov. vuvl 6€ 0 Tact

ev apiora xphoGac TOUS ™ pos TONELOD, pddoTa € Karp@ TEPUKDS Kaicap é apa. T@ mubéc bat THY amogtacty dpas éywper tails avtais odois as 1 GOpoia Beton Sint. with the MSS.; Coraés and Bekker

read aépoiobetos (arms collected from all sides) with the Aldine ed.
504

CAESAR, xxv. 2 xXxvI. 2

those parts began to show themselves. They had for a long time been secretly sown and cultivated by the most influential men among the most warlike tribes, and derived strength from large bodies of young men assembled from all sides in arms, from great riches brought together, from strong cities, and from countries which were hard to invade. At that season of winter, too, frozen rivers, forests buried in snow, plains converted into lakes by winter torrents, in some parts paths obliterated by deep snow, and in others the great uncertainty of a march through swamps and streams diverted from their courses, all seemed to make it wholly impossible for Caesar to oppose the plans of the rebels. Accordingly, many tribes had revolted, but the head and front of the revolt were the Arverni and Carnuntini,! and Ver-gentorix! was chosen to have the entire authority in the war. His father the Gauls had put to death because they thought he was aiming at a tyranny.
XXVI. This leader, then, after dividing his forces into many parts and putting many officers in command of them, was winning over all the country round about as far as the water-shed of the Arar.
He purposed, now that there was a coalition at Rome against Caesar, at once to rouse all Gaul to war. If he had done this a little later, when Caesar was involved in the civil war, Italy would have been a prey to terrors no less acute than those aroused by the Cimbri of old. But as it was, the man endowed by nature to make the best use of all the arts of war, and particularly of its crucial moments, namely Caesar, as soon as he learned of the revolt, set out and marched by the same roads over which 1 In Caesar’s B.G. the names are Carnutes and Ver-cingetorix.

595 PLUTARCH Sei Vis

bunrGe, kat Bia cal Tayee THS Topelas bta i000vree, p wal Tdyee Ths mop i Tov yelmavos éTuderEauevos Tois BapBapots ws
A ? f ,
duayos avtots Kal anttntos emerot otpatos.
ei N , A A otrou yap dyyeXov 1) ypaupatodopov diadbvat Tov tal A = f “A Tap avtod ypovm TOAA@® Hv amtatov, évtavda
e lal A nA / ,
ETA TUTNS EWPATO THS oTpAaTIas aua Ywpas
A \ , \ ,
AVMALHOMEVOS AUTOY KAL EKKOTTOY TA Kowpia,
, id a) é \
KaTacTpepomevos TOES, dvartauBavev Tovs pe-
f \ a be a] f TaTiGepevous, meype Kal TO THY “Edovav €Ovos y , v bd , ray \ ” U eEctrohewaOn mpos avtov, ot Tov adAov yYpovoy 3 N b] ? e \ € / \
aderhous avayopevovTes avtovs “Pwpaiwy Kat
, a / ‘ a
Tiuwpevor StamrpeTms, TOTE O€ TOLS aToaTAaTALS
\ a f a Tpooryevomevot Toddny tH Katoapos atpatia
f a TepteaTnoav abupiay. dtomrep Kat Kuvijoas éxeilev
\ ,
urepéBare ta Acyyovutrd, Bovropevos trpracbar fo la) , b) \ le)
THS Unkovavev hirov Ovt@v Kal TpoKELLéerov THS
‘ U / A
"Iradtas mpos tiv dddnv Vadatiav. évtadda &é n la) / f \ s
QUT@ TOV TOAELLMOY ETLTETOVTMOV Kal TEpLaXOV-
n e / TWOY pLUpLdoL TrOAAaLS, Opncas Staywvicacbat aw A f
Tots Mev OdOLS KATATONELaY EKXpPaTHGE, YXpoVvM
A ‘ / i A ,
TOAXW Kat hovw KataBracapevos tovs BapPBa-

” Nv b] ’ f \ a \ pous, €do0ke dé Kat apyds Te kal ofarivat, Kal ig ? f ‘ A ¢ deexvuovawy A pRépvoe Echidsov mpos lep@ Kpemde \ 7 , Ul A ,
pevov, ws 6n Kaicapos Aagpupov. 6 Ocacdpmevos Shae ef > f \ la) U a auTos vaTEpoy EmEedLtace, Kal TOV ditwy KaGereiy
f > ‘
KENEVOVT@V OUK ELACED, LEPC NYOUMEVOS.
sabe, eat ‘ \ / n
NXXVIT. Ov pny adra Tote TOV Stahvyortwv
e A \ nw
ol TEtoTOL pEeTa TOU Lactréws els TOALY ’AXD-
, , \ an i7 5
olay cuvepuyov. Kal ToALopKouvTL TavTnv Kai-506
CAESAR, xxvt. 2—xxvil. I

he had previously come, and by the vigour and speed of his passage in so severe a winter showed the Barbarians that an unconquered and invincible army was coming against them. For where it was incredible that one of his messengers or letter- carriers could make his way in a long time, there he was seen with his whole army, at once ravaging their lands and destroying their strongholds, sub- duing cities, and receiving those who came over to his side, until the nation of the Aedui also entered the war against him. These up to this time had called themselves brethren of the Romans and had been conspicuously honoured, but now, by joining the rebels, they caused great dejection in Caesar’s army. In consequence of this Caesar removed from those parts and passed across the territory of the Lingones, wishing to reach the country of the Sequani, who were friends, and stood as a bulwark be- tween Italy and the rest of Gaul. There the enemy fell upon him and surrounded him with many tens of thousands, so that he essayed to fight a decisive battle. In the main he got the best of the struggle, and after a long time and much slaughter over- powered the Barbarians ; but it appears that at first he met with some reverse, and the Arverni show a short-sword hanging in a temple, which they say was captured from Caesar. When Caesar himself saw it, at a later time, he smiled, and though his friends urged him to have it taken down, he would not permit it, considering it sacred.

XXVII. However, the most of the Barbarians who escaped at that time took refuge with their king in the city of Alesia. And while Caesar was besieging

597

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

capt doxovaav avaAWT ov eliat peyebet TE TELY OV
Kat wANOE TOV ATOLAXO EVV emUTLMT EL TAVTOS
Noryou peter KivOvvos eEwbev. oO yap iw ev

Varatia KpaTLaTov arto Tov €Ovay cOporaden, € €v OTAOLS HKOV emt ™yv ‘Adqoiay TpLaKovTa pLuplddes ai & év auth TOV [a Xopeveov ovK ehaTTOoveEs Hoav énraxaidera pupiddov, MOTE EV peow Toné-pov Tocovtov tov Kaicapa KATELANMLMEVOY Kal ToLopKoUpevoy dvaryxac iva ditra TeX ™ po-BarécOat, To pev 7 pos THY TONY, TO be amo TOV émeAnrvOoT@v, ws, ef orvvédOotey ai duvapess, KOMLOn Seamrem pay Levey TOV Ka aurov.
Ata TOANG Lev ov ELK OT OS 0 pos "Adrnala
KiVOvVOS & éaxe do£ar, as Epya TOApNs Kal Sewvory-TOS ola TOY add oov CY OVov oveels TAPATXOMEVOS, partota Oe av Tis Oavpacete TO AaOELV TOVS ev TH
TONEL Kaicapa TOTAUTALS pupiact Tats efo Up Barovta Kal _ TE pUryevOpEvOY, padrov d€ Kal TOV ‘Popaiwv TOUS TO 7 pos Th TONE TELXOS pudar-TovTas. ov ap ™ potepor no Povto THY viKny 7
KravO pov éx THs ’AXnaias avdpav Kal KoTeTOv yuvark ov axovo Onvat, Geacapevov dpa Kata Oa-Tepa pep) TOANOVUS [EV aPYULO Kal UXpue® KEKO-TUNLEVOUS Oupeous, Torhous 6€ aipate mepup-JEVOUS Jopaxas, éTt © EXT OpAT Kal oxnvas
Taratixas vo Tov ‘Pwpaiwy eis TO oTpaTOoTrEdoV
Kopifopevas. ovTws o€éws TocavTnH dvvapis, OaTrep ElOwAOV y ove(pov, npavic ro Kat d.eTre-popnto, TOV TrELaT OD év TH LaXn TET OVTMD. ol dé THY ‘AXnaiav exovTes OUK OALYya Tparypara TapacxovTes éavtots kal Kaicape tédos trapé-508

CARSAR, xxvi. 1-5

this city, which was thought to be impregnable by reason of the great size of its walls and the number of their defenders, there fell upon him from outside the city a peril too great for words to depict. For all that was mightiest among the nations of Gaul assembled and came in arms to Alesia, three hundred thousand strong; and the number of fighting men inside the city was not less than a hundred and seventy thousand. Thus Caesar, caught between so large hostile forces and besieged there, was com- pelled to build two walls for his protection, one looking towards the city, and the other towards those who had come up to relieve it; he felt that if the two forces should unite his cause was wholly lost.

For many reasons, then, and naturally, Caesar’s peril at Alesia was famous, since it produced more deeds of skill and daring than any of his other struggles; but one must be amazed above al] that he engaged and conquered so many tens of thousands outside the city without the knowledge of those inside, nay more, without the knowledge even of the Romans who were guarding the wall that faced the city. For these did not learn of the victory until the wailing of the men in Alesia and the lamentations of the women were heard, as they be- held in the quarters of the enemy many shields adorned with gold and silver, many corselets smeared with blood, and also drinking cups and tents of Gallic fashion carried by the Romans into their camp. So quickly did so great a force, like a phan- tom or a dream, disperse and vanish out of sight, the greater part of them having fallen in the battle. Those who held Alesia, too, after giving themselves and Caesar no small trouble, finally surrendered.

5°09

PLUTARCR'S LIVES

¢ \ na e Q
Socay éavtovs. 0 O€ TOU GuUpuTTAYTOS HYyEe"@V
} \ a morénou OvepyevtoprE avadaBov tav btrAWY TA
\ v4
KaXMOTA Kab KoouHnOaS TOY immoyv éEimmacaTo Sia TOV TWUABY? Kal KUKAwW Tepi TOV Kaicapa
t 9 - 95 b , nw (vf
cabeCopevov édacas, eita adadopevos Tov tmmov
\ \ a ' 4 ' \ \ /
Thy pev TavoTriav aTéppiev, autos 5é cabiaas
fal 7
UTO Todas TOD Kaicapos iovyiay tryev, axpt ov
4 , 3 N \ /
TmapesoOn dpovpnacpevos ert tov OpiapBov.
XXVIII. Kaicaps 6€ wadrat pév édéb0xK70 Kata-
" f J aA
Avery Iloprniov, @omEep apédet KaKEiV@ TODTOY:
K , \ 5) im 7 6 5] x X60 a 9
paacov yap év IlapOois amodwAoTos, d5 Hv Epedpos audoty, amedeiteTO TO pev vTep TOD
\ y a yevéeoOat peyioT@ Tov dvTa KaTadvely, TO é, iva
aA a a a
pn TaOn TOdTO, Tpoavacpety ov edEdoixer. TOUTO
of. \ ? / n
Sé Tloparni@o pev €& ortyou doBetcbat wapéoty
¢ n / Téws UTEpop@VvTe Katoapos, ws ov YaXrerov épyov
a eae " a / e > ' a Ov autos nvEnce KatadvOjvas Tardy UT avTod,
a " , ,
Kaiocap 5€ am' apxns brobecw tavtTny Twemro.n-BEeVvOS, ATO TOV avtaywvicTav woTeEp aOANTHS
\ "~ a

EQUTOV UTOTTICAS paKpav Kat TOis KeAtiKois éy-
\ \
YUULVATALEVOS TOAEMOLS ETIjTKHTE meV THY SUVA-
‘ N aA
puv, nvénoe S€ tHv dokav, amo TaV épywy ets brs of. / avtimanrov apbeis tois Lloumniov catopOwpaci, \ n oh
AauBdvev mpopdces Tas pev avtTov Tloumniou, Tas € TOY Kalpav éevdidovTwy Kat THs év “Pon
> ¢
KaKoTroAtTeLas, OL ijv of pey apxYas peTlovTes éb
, 4
péow@ Oéuevor tparrélas édéxalov avaicyvvTws Ta
, \ ¢ n
mr0n, Katner dé 0 Oijtos EuptaOos, ov r>AWrdots 510

CAESAR, xxvit, 1-XXVII. 3

And the leader of the whole war, Vergentorix, after putting on his most beautiful armour and decorating his horse, rode out through the gate. He made a circuit round Caesar, who remained seated, and then leaped down from his horse, stripped off his suit of armour, and seating himself at Caesar's feet remained motionless, until he was delivered up to be kept in custody for the triumph.

XXVIII. Now, Caesar had long ago decided to put down Pompey, just as, of course, Pompey also had decided to put Caesar down. For now that Crassus, who was only waiting for the issue of their struggle to engage the victor,! had perished among the Parthians, it remained for him who would be greatest to put down him who was, and for him who was greatest, if he would not be put down, to take off in time the man he feared. This fear had only recently come upon Pompcy, who till then despised Caesar, feeling that it was no hard task to put down again the man whom he himself had raised on high. But Caesar had from the outset formed this design, and like an athlete had removed himself to a great distance from his antagonists, and by exercising himself in the Gallic wars had practised his troops and increased his fame, lifting himself by his achieve- ments to a height where he could vie with the suc- cesses of Pompey. He laid hold of pretexts which were furnished partly by Pompey himself, and partly by the times and the evil state of government at Rome,? by reason of which candidates for office set up counting-tables in public and shamelessly bribed the multitudes, while the people went down into the forum under pay, contending in behalf of their

1 Cf. the Pompey, lili. 6. 2? Cf. the Pompey, chapter liv.

birép TAU SedwKOTOS, ANAG To£ os Kal Eupect Kal opevdovats GpUXNO[EVOS. aipate dé Kal vex pots TONNKes alo xuvavTes TO Pha dtexplOnoay, d avapxia THY TOALD Oomrep axuBéepyntov vad" UT og epopevny dm OMT OVTES, OTE TOUS vodV exovTas arya-Tav €l TPOS MNOEV AUTOLS xelpor, ada povapytay
ex TOLAVTNS Tapahpos wns Kal TOTOUvTOV KrNvSwvos EKTETELTAL TA TPAYLATA. TOAXOL Oé aap ot Kal Néyety ev pécw TOALOVTES On TWANY UvTO povapxias avnkea TOV elval THY ToNTELaD, Kal TO pappaxov TOUTO XpiHvat TOD TpaoTaToV THY ta-T POV dvacxéeo Oat 7 pos PEepov7os, uTrodnhoby tes tov Llopmiov. ézret be KAKELVOS Roy Tapauret-cOat kad opevos Epy@ TavtTos paAXov ée7é-pawev e& wv dvaderx Ono 0170 duxTaTwp, Tupuppo-VATAVTES ot mept Katova metBouat TH yepovolay Umatov avtov atodetEat povon, @S 1) Budoatto SuKTATOP ryever Gat, VOMIMOTEDG povapxXia Tapn-yopn Gets. ot 6€ Kal _Xpovov éreynpicavro TOV eTmapX Lav: dvo dé elyen, TBnptav Kat AtBuny
cupmacay, as Stw@icee m peo BevTas amroo TEhKov
Kai oT PATEVATA tpépov, ols eXapBavev €x TOU Snpoctou Tap.tetov yYilta TddXavtTa Kal? éxacrov evlauTov.
DOS OG ‘Ex TOUTOU Kaicap umateav eur'aTo
TEMT OY: Kal Xpovov Omotws TeV ldtwv emapxian.
TO [eV OUP T™p@Tov Tloumniou CLWTAVTOS Ob rept Mapxedov Kat Aévthov nvavTLoovTo, peo oovT TES adirws Kaicapa Kat Tots avayKatols OUK avay-Kata T poor evtes ELS arepiay avTou Kab 7 po-myrakiopov. Neoxwpitas yap évayyos vo
! yaw supplied by Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske.

512

72

¢

CAESAR, xxvii. 3-xx1x, 2

paymaster, not with votes, but with bows and arrows, swords, and slings. Often, too, they would defile the rostra with blood and corpses before they separated, leaving the city to anarchy like a ship drifting about without a steersman, so that men of understand- ing were content if matters issued in nothing worse for them than monarchy, after such madness and so great a tempest. And there were many who actually dared to say in public that nothing but monarchy could now cure the diseases of the state, and that this remedy ought to be adopted when offered by the gentlest of physicians, hinting at Pompey. And when even Pompey, although in words he affected to decline the honour, in fact did more than any one else to effect his appointment as dictator, Cato saw through his design and _ per- suaded the senate to appoint him sole consul, solac- ing him with a more legal monarchy that he might not force his way to the dictatorship. They also voted him additional time in which to hold his provinces; and he had two, Spain and all Africa, which he managed by sending legates thither and maintaining armies there, for which he _ received from the public treasury a thousand talents annually.}

XXIX. Consequently, Caesar canvassed by proxy for a consulship, and likewise for an extension of time in which to hold his own provinces. At first, then, Pompey held his peace, while Marcellus and Lentulus opposed these plans; they hated Caesar on other grounds, and went beyond all bounds in their efforts to bring dishonour and abuse upon him. For instance, the inhabitants of Novum Comum, a 1 Cf. the Pompey, lv. 7.

Ses

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Katcapos eV Tarartia KAT@KLO [LEVOUS adn pobvTo
THS ToAtTEelas: Kal Mapiedros uTaTevwy eva Tov eéxet Bovrevtav ets "Pouny adsxopevor nKLoTO paPdos, émtdéyov ws TAaDTAa TOD 41)
'Pwpatoy eivar wapaonua tmpoctiOnow avTa, kal Oetxvverv amtovta Katoape éxédXeve.' peta
dé Mapxedrov, 69 Katoapos tov Tadatexov
TAovTOY apvecOat pudnyv aderKoTos Tact TOS ToAtTevonevats, Kal Kovpimva pév Snuapyodyta
TOAAM@Y ElEevVepwcavTos davetwr, LlavAw dé UTTA-TevovTt yihia Kal TevTaKOcLa TadaVTAa SoVrTos, ad av Kal THY Bacrhixny exeivos, ovopac Tor
avaOnpa, TH ayopa T POT EKO LNTEV avTl TIS DovdBias oixoSopnetcar, ovUTw 67 poBndets Thy avotacw o Llopmnios avadhavdov on dv éavtod
Kal TOV pirov eT paTTEy amosexOjvat buadoxov
Kaicape TIS apxis, Kat MELT OY ar yt TOUS
TTPATLOTAS ous EXPN EV avr mpos Tous Kea-TLKOUS dyavas. O b¢ AT OT ELT El, Swpnadpevos Exaatov dvdpa (TEVTIKOVTO. Kal drakootass dpaxpais. Ol O€ TOUTOUS Toparnie Kopicavres ELS ee TO TANHOOS OvK émvericets ovoe XpnaTrous Karé-ometpav oyous vireo tov Katcapos, avtov 6é Tloumniov édrior xevais duépOerpav, ws troGov-pevov vmo THs Katoapos otpatias Kal ta pep

evTavOa da Govoy TOMTELAS, UmoUNou Hos
EXOVTa, THS 6€ éxel duvd LEews Erouuns vmapyou-ONS aVT@, Kav peovov umepBddwow ELS ‘Iradiay
evOus ésopévns pos éxetvov: oTwS ‘yeyovévat TOV
1 So Coraés and Bekker with the MSS.; Sint.? corrects to

KEAEVEL,

514

CAESAR. vxx1x. 2-4

colony recently established by Caesar in Gaul, were deprived of citizenship by them; and Marcellus, while he was consul, beat with rods a senator of Novum Comum who had come to Rome, telling him besides that he put these marks upon him to prove that he was not a Roman, and bade him go back and show them to Caesar. But after the consulship of Marcellus, Caesar having new sent his Gallic wealth for all those in public life to draw from in copious streams, and having freed Curio the tribune from many debts, and having given Paulus the consul fifteen hundred talents, out of which he adorned the forum with the Basilica,! a famous monu- ment, erected in place of the Fulvia,—under these circumstances Pompey took fright at the coalition, and openly now, by his own efforts and those of his friends, tried to have a successor appointed to Caesar in his government, and sent a demand to him for the return of the soldiers whom he had lent him for his Gallic contests.2 Caesar sent the soldiers back, after making a present to each man of two hundred and fifty drachmas. But the officers who brought these men to Pompey spread abroad among the multitude stories regarding Caesar which were neither reasonable nor true, and ruined Pompey himself with vain hopes. They told him that Caesar's army yearned for him, and that while he was with difficulty controlling affairs in the city owing to the disease of envy which festcred in the body politic, the forces in Gaul were ready to serve him, and had but to cross into Italy when they would at once be on his side; so obnoxious to

1 The Basilica Pauli Aemilii, called also Regia Pauli. It took the place of the Basilica Acmilia et Fulvia, erected in 179 B.C. * See chapter xxv. 1]

515

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

i , A S ? a \ Katocapa rAnder otpater@v AUTINPOY avTOIs Kai
5 ye} ; , (v4 J . Ul Il gdofw povapyias viromtoyv. emt tovtos Llop-TnHiOS EXAVVOUTO' Kal TrapacKeuns pev nwéret
a \ aTpatiwtav, ws un Sedotx@s, Noyous b€ Kal yvopals KaTeTroXLTEveTo TO Soxety Kaicapa, Kxata-

WndiComevos wv éxetvos ovdev éppovtifev? adda
A > a
Kal NéeyeTat Tiva TOV adiypévwvy Tap avToU Ttakidpywv éot@ta mpo tov Bovreuvtypiov Kai
/ ,
mu0opevoy ws ov dSidwatv » yepovoia Kaicape
a aA > Ypovoy Ths apyhs, “’AXN abrn” hava “ doce,’
/ A \ \ a
KpovoavTa TH Kelpt THY NaABHY THS paxaipas.
XXX, OU pay ard’ 4 ye mapa Kaicapos
4 , A akiwmalts TO mpocynpa THs dtKatoroyias Aaptrpov 5 ? , \ b / / Led elyev. n&lov yap autos te catabéoba Ta btha,
of N
kat Lloumrniov tavto mpakavtos apdotépous LOLWTAS YEvoevoUs eEvpioxedlai Te Tapa TH
a ,
TokuT@Y ayabov, ws Tovs avTov perv apatpov-4 > id \ A ic aA ?
pévous, éxeirw Oe Hv eiye BeBatodvtas Svvamuir,
4 ? 4 / f
érepov dtaBaddovtas ETEepov KatacKevadley TUpav-
aA , 9 A / ?
2 voy. Tavta mpokadovpevos €v TO Snuw Koupiwr
\ / 9 a lal Cd
uTép Katoapos éxpotetro Napmpas: of dé Kal 9 Q\ ¢ wn
otepavous ém avtov wamTep aOXnTHY avOoBorovv-
’ f > , \ cal ,
tes nhiecav. “Avtavios dé dnnapyav Kaicapos UTép ToUT@Y emtaTOAHY KomlaOeiaaY Eis TO TAH-9 - \ b] L a aA ¢ te > \
Bos eEnveyxe Kal aveyyw Bia tov UTaTwv. év &é
A a / \ e of.
7h BovrAn Sxntiwv pev o Topmrniov evOepos
1 Cf. the Pompey, Iviii. 2.
516
————E

CAESAR, xxix. 4-xxx. 2

them had Caesar become by reason of the multitude of his campaigns, and so suspicious of him

were they made by their fear of a monarchy. All this fed Pompey's vanity, and he neglected to provide himself with soldiers, as though he had no fears; while with speeches and resolutions of the senate he was carrying the day against Caesar, as he supposed, although he was merely getting measures rejected about which Caesar cared naught. Nay, we are told that one of the centurions sent to Rome by Caesar, as he stood in front of the senate-house and learned that the senate would not give Caesar an extension of his term of command, slapped the handle of his sword and said: " But this will give it." 1

XXX. However, the demands which came from Caesar certainly had a striking semblance of fair- ness. He demanded, namely, that if he himself laid down his arms, Pompey should do the same, and that both, thus become private men, should find what favour they could with their fellow citizens; arguing that if they took away his forces from him, but confirmed Pompey in the possession of his, they would be accusing one of seeking a tyranny and making the other a tyrant. When Curio laid these proposals before the people in behalf of Caesar, he was loudly applauded, and some actually cast gar- lands of flowers upon him as if he were a victorious athlete. Antony, too, who was a tribune, brought before the people a letter of Caesar's on these matters which he had received, and read it aloud, in defiance of the consuls. But in the senate, Scipio, the father-in-law of Pompey,? introduced a motion

2 Pompey had married Cornelia, the young widow of Publius Crassus (Pompey, lv. 1).

, , A A a
ELONYYTATO YVOL_UNVY, Av eV HUEPA PNHTH pty KaTAa-
O@ntat ta GTA Kataap, amodeyOjvat Torépmtov avtov. épwrovtTwy dé Tov Urdtwy e& doxet ILopeo wn \ a mniov abelvat TOUS oTpaTL@Tas, Kal Wat, et
a a > f A
doxei Kaicapa, Th pev orgLyot Tavtatact, TH Oé
5] , f a TuvTes Tap OAlyous mpocéevto' tTav Sé Tepl
>) , 4 > 4 > f \ >
Avto@vioyv wad akiovvtwy audotépous Thy ap-nw f e lal
yy adbetvalt, TAaVYTES OMAXNWS TpocEXMpnaay.
f f , n
aNXG exBialouéevov Lentiwvos, Kat Aévrrov Tov
e , a er a" \ w , vTatov BowvTos oTXwy deity pos avdpa ANoTHD,

\
od Wijdav, ToTe wev SteAVONnaay Kal peTeBdNovTO
a \
Tas éoOAtas érl wévOet Sta THY oTdowv.
rx<tr \ 4
XXXI. ’Ewel 6€ mapa Kaicapos jxov ém-4 / } A > Ges N 3 \
oTo\at petpiavery Soxovytos (nktov yap adels
A fe
Ta ddXa Tavta THY évtos “AXmewv Kal 70 IAXv-\ N a 4 > nn A pexoy peta duely Taypatwv avT@ Soljvat, péxpe 4 / , od tiny devrépay brrateiav ywéTetot), Kal Kixéowv 6 ee? ” \ > f \ \
pyt@p apte twapwv ex Kidrsxias cal d:adr\ayas 4 b f N foe e \ > mpaTtoy éudratre Tov Lloumniov, o &€ Tada
fal \ /
TVYXOPaY TOUS aTpaTLWTas adype. Kal Kixépwv
\ ” \ / , ,
pev émetOe tovs Katcapos dtrovs avvervdovtas
val > / 4 Mi
éml Tais elpnuévais eTTapyiats Kal oTpaTi@Ttats
, a \
povars e€axtoytrors TroteicPar tas Starvcess,
A , ,
Tloprniouv d€ Kaumropévov Kat didovtos ot rept / \ ral Aévthov ovk eiwy vTaTevovTes, AXXA Kal THs
a ’ / \ / ,
Bovrys “Avt@viov cat Kovptwva mporndaxicar-
, \
tes €&)Nacay atipws, THY evmperrectatny Kai-capt Tov Tpohacewy avTol pnyavnodpuevor, Kal
\ ,
du 15 wpadtoTa TOS oTpaTLWTAas TrapwEUVED, érTt-518

72

CAESAR, xxx. 2—xxXxI. 2

that if by a fixed day Caesar did not lay down his arms he should be declared a public enemy. And when the consuls put the question whether Pompey should dismiss his soldiers, and again whether Caesar should, very few senators voted for the first, and all but a few for the second; but when Antony again demanded that both should give up their commands, all with one accord assented. Scipio, however, made violent opposition, and Lentulus the consul cried out that against a robber there was need of arms, not votes; whereupon the senate broke up, and the senators put on the garb of mourning in view of the dissension.

XXXI. But presently letters came from Caesar in whieh he appeared to take a more moderate position, for he agreed to surrender everything else, but demanded that Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum to- gether with two legions should be given him until he stood for his second consulship. Cicero the orator, too, who had just returned from Cilicia and was busy with a reconciliation, tried to mollify Pompey, who yielded everything else, but insisted on taking away Caesar's soldiers. Cicero also tried to persuade the friends of Caesar to compromise and come to a settlement on the basis of the provinces mentioned and only six thousand soldiers, and Pom- pey was ready to yield and grantso many. Lentulus the consul, however, would not let him, but actually heaped insults upon Antony and Curio and drove them disgracefully from the senate,! thus himself contriving for Caesar the most specious of his pre- texts, and the one by means of which he most of all incited his soldiers, showing them men of repute

1 January 7, 49 B.c,

Serxvupevos avdopas éARorvyiwous Kal adpxovras emi puro Otov Cevry av mepevyoras ev eo Ojow oiKxeTiKais. ovtTw yap a6 'Poyns cKevdcavtes eavtovs Sta hoPov vmeEnecay.

XXXII. *Hoav peév odv trepi avtov ov retous inméwy Tpiaxociwy Kal TEvTAaKLTYLNL@Y OTALTOV TO yap aAXO oTpUTevpLA Tépav "AXTewy aTo- heA|tHpeEvOV eweddov ageuv OL menpOevres. opay dé THY apxny @v évicTato m parywaTav Kal THY Epodoy ov ToAvyerpias Seomevny é€v TO Tapovre panrrov 1) Gap Bev Te TOALNS Kal TaXel Katpou Katadyn eay ovear, ex mA ery yap amtotov- [LEVOS paov uy Bracecbat pera TapacKeuns €Tend- dav, TOUS pev Hyepovas Kal TakuapXous éxéNeuce paxaipas eXovTas dvev T@V GAAwV OTAWY KaTA- oVelV "A pipwov THS Kedriiis peyadny TOLD, QS evoeyeTa padtora peroapevous g@ovov kal tapa-

XS; ‘Optyacig | d€ THY Suva pu Tapéduwxer.
AvTOs dé THy pev nuépav Sefer ev pavepa povopayors eperTas yupvalopevoss Kal Gew@pevos®
puuKpov O€ ™ po eo mepas Jepamevoas TO Tapa Kal
Taped Oo els TOV dvdpava Kal _TUYYEVOMEVOS Bpaxyéa Tois TapaKexdAnpévots em TO det7rvor, non ovaKoTavovTos efaveorn, TOUS pev adXovs prrodporn bets Kal KeNevaaS Tept every avrov Ws eave eva opEvor, odiryous d€ TOY pirwv 7 poelpnto 11) KATA TO AUTO TravTas, AAXov bé AAA StMKELD. avTos dé Tav pro Otov Ceuy av emi Bas EvOS ipauvev érépav Tia ™p@rov odop, eita 7 pos TO A pipuvov emiaTpewas, @S mprOev emt TOV SiopiSovta THY évtos “AXrewy Tadatiayv ato ts adAns 'Itarias 520

CAESAR, xxxt. 2-xxxil. 4

and high office who had fled the city on hired carts and in the garb of slaves. For thus they had arrayed themselves in their fear and stolen out of Rome.

XXXII. Now, Caesar had with him not more than three hundred horsemen and five thousand legionaries ; for the restof his army had been left beyond the Alps, and was to be brought up by those whom he had sent for the purpose. He saw, however, that the beginning of his enterprise and its initial step did not require a large force at present, but must take advantage of the golden moment by showing amazing boldness and speed, since he could strike terror into his enemies by an unexpected blow more easily than he could overwhelm them by an attack in full force. He therefore ordered his centurions and other officers, taking their swords only, and without the rest of their arms, to occupy Ariminum, a large city of Gaul, avoiding commotion and bloodshed as far as possible; and he entrusted this force to Hortensius.
He himself spent the day in public, attending and watching the exercises of gladiators; but a little before evening he bathed and dressed and went into the banqueting hall. Here he held brief converse with those who had been invited to supper, and just as it was getting dark rose and went away, after addressing courteously most of his guests and bid- ding them await his return. To a few of his friends, however, he had previously given directions to follow him, not all by the same route, but some by one way and some by another. He himself mounted one of his hired carts and drove at first along another road, then turned towards Ariminum. When he came to the river which separates Cisalpine Gaul from the twotaunov (‘PovBikwy xadeitat), Kat oytapmos

A N \
>) ‘N > , ”~ > / wn a) A avTov elayer paddAov eéeyyifovTa T@ Selva Kat
a / a /
Tepipepopevov TH peyeles THY TOAL@pmEVOD,
\ \ ,
Ex VETO Opopov' KAL THY TOpelay éTLaTHAGAS TOA-\ ‘ > A 9 r A , a \ , Na MEV AUTOS EV EaUTO SujveyKe oLyHn THY yvoOunv
>] bf] 3 ? ¢ \ \ by 4
er appoTepa petarapyBavov, cat TpoTas éaxev
A / avutT@ TOTE TO BovAevpa TWAEtaTAS: TOAAA 6é Kal
a - an e 5 ,
tov pirwv tois trapovow, wv Hv cat HWorNov
’ , , ’ / € ,
Agios, suvdintopyaev, avaroyilopevos 7 ALKwY
A an , ro
Kaxov apter Tacw avOpwras 7 bia8acis, doov
, a a if
Te Noyou auTis Tols avis amoreirovat. TédOs
a - a
dé weTa Pupod Tivos WaTEep AdeEls EaUTOV eK TOD
a \ \ A \ es \ \ \
NoytoLov Tpos TO MEAAOY, KAL TOUTO 67 TO KOLVOY
a ’ 4 ’ , ’ , ,
Tots eg TUXAaS é€uRatvovaly aTropous Kal TOAMAS
, ¢ , er , , >
Tpootp.ov UTretrov, “ AveppitbOw KuBos,” epunce \ \ id ‘ td \ \ vw
mpos THV dtaBaoww Kat dpo“@ TO AoLTOV dN
’ , \ , ‘ ’
YPWMEVvos EloeTTETE TPO Huepas els TO Apipvov
\ 4 f \ a / \ na
Kai KaTegVE. R€yeTaL OE TH TMpoTépa vuUKTL THS
, 4 ’ a ” +9 7 \ 9o oN
d:aBacews bvap ideiv ExPecpov: éddKxer yap avTos
A A , \ 1d a
TH EAVTOD pNTPL piryvucBat THY AppyTor weet.

r Ir 7:
NXXIII. ’Evet d€ xaterypOn 7d ’Apipuvor, / Ley / , WaOTEp avewypmevou TOU TOhE“OU TAATELALS TUAALS
a ¢ a \ a
é7t Tacav onov THY ynv Kat Odraccary, Kat
a ef “ , a TUYKEYUMEVMY Apa TOS Opals THS eTAapXLas TOV
a“ Yd /
VOMOV THS TOAEWS, OUK aVvdpas av Tis @HOn Kal nn Yj ‘ , a yuvaixas, BoTEp ANXOTE, aUY éxTTrAHEEL StaphorTav fol x \ \
ths ItaXias, adda Tas TONES AUTAS dviaTaperas 724 522

rest of Italy (it is called the Rubicon), and began to reflect, now that he drew nearer to the fearful step and was agitated by the magnitude of his ventures, he checked his speed. Then, halting in his course, he communed with himself a long time in silence as his resolution wavered back and forth, and his purpose then suffered change after change. For a long time, too, he discussed his perplexities with his friends who were present, among whom was Asinius Pollio, estimating the great evils for all mankind which would follow their passage of the river, and the wide fame of it which they would leave to posterity. But finally, with a sort of passion, as if abandoning cal- culation and casting himself upon the future, and uttering the phrase with which men usually prelude their plunge into desperate and daring fortunes, «‘ Let the die be cast,” he hastened to cross the river; and going at full speed now for the rest of the time, before daybreak he dashed into Ariminum and took possession of it.! It is said, moreover, that on the night before he crossed the river he had an unnatural dream; he thought, namely, that he was having incestuous intercourse with his own mother.”

XXXIII. After the seizure of Ariminum, as if the war had opened with broad gates to cover the whole earth and sea alike, and the laws of the state were confounded along with the boundaries of the pro- vince, one would not have thought that men and women, as at other times, were hurrying through Italy in consternation, but that the very cities had

1 Cf. the Pompey, |x. 1-2.

2 According to Suetonius (Div. Jul. 7), Caesar had this dream while he was quacstor in Spain (67 B.c.). The interpreters of dreams told him that his mother meant the Earth, the universal parent, which was to become subject to him.

2 puyi Siapéperbar be ar} AOY, Ty dé ‘Popny
OaTep UT O pevpatov TT NA LEVNV puyais TOV méput 67) Lov Kal peTaoTdcEoW, oUTE ap ovTe TWeloat padtav ovcav OUTE oy Kabextny, év
TONG Krvoove Kab TAXM [LK POV amonurreiy au-
THY id’ avtis dvarerpidbau. 7adn yap aVTiTANa
3 Kal Biava KaTeixe KUN MATa WaVTA TOTIOV. OvUTE
14p TO Xatpov nouxiay YD, aXrAa TO SedorKxoTe Kal AUTOULEVM KATA TOAAA GUT iTToY év pEeyarn mode. Kal Opacuvopevov UTép Tov pédXOVTOS be épidwyv tw, avtov te Lopumyiov éxmemAnypévov ddAros GAANayobev ETAapaTte, Tots perv, wS NUENTE Kaicapa xa? éavtod xal tis Hryepovias, evOvvas
UTexXorTa, TOY O€, OTL TapelKoVTA Kal T poretyo-Wéevov evyv@povas duarvoets epnKxe Tots rept 4 Aevtov UBpioar, KATITYOPOVYT WD. Pawvios be avTov éKéXeve TH TOOL KTUTELY THY Yyhv, érrel MEyAANYOP@V TOTE TPOS THY GUYKANTOV oOvOEY ela
ToAvTpaypovely ovde ppovtTive éxeivous THS ert
TOV TOAEMOY TApagKEUTS’ AUTOS yap, OTaV érin, Kpovaas TO €dados TH TOOL oTpaTevpaTwv épmTrAnoew THY ITadiav.
5 Od phy adda Kai TOTE TANOEL SuVdpews UTrEpé-Barnev 6 Llopmrnios thy Katcapos: elace & ovdeis
TOD avdpa xpicacbas TOUS éauTov hoya pois, ara
UT’ AYYEALATWOV TOAX@V Kal Yevdar Kal poor,
WS eperTOTOS 7100 TOD TOAEMOU Kal Tavra KaTé-NovTos, elEas Kal cuverxpova Gets TH TAVTOV pope wapiverar TAaPAYNY opay, Kal THY mohev éFéduTre Kehevoas émrec Oat THY yepouciav, Kal pendéva, pévewy TOV _Tpo Ths Tupavvidos ypnuévov tiv matpiba Kat Thy édAevPeplar.
524

risen up in flight and were rushing one through another; while Rome herself, deluged as it were by the inhabitants of the surrounding towns who were fleeing from their homes, neither readily obeying a magistrate nor listening to the voice of reason, in the surges of a mighty sea narrowly escaped being overturned by her own internal agitations. For con- flicting emotions and violent disturbances prevailed everywhere. Those who rejoiced did not keep quiet, but in many places, as was natural in a great city, encountered those who were in fear and distress, and being filled with confidence as to the future came into strife with them; while Pompey himself, who was terror-stricken, was assailed on every side, being taken to task by some for having strengthened Caesar against himself and the supreme power of the state, and denounced by others for having permitted Lentulus to insult Caesar when he was ready to yield and was offering reasonable terms of settlement. Favonius bade him stamp on the ground; for once, in a boastful speech to the senate, be told them to take no trouble or anxious thought about preparations for the war, since when it came he had but to stamp upon the earth to fill Italy with armies.!

However, even then Pompey’s forces were more numerous than Caesar's; but no one would suffer him to exercise his own judgement; and so, under the influence of many false and terrifying reports, believing that the war was already close at hand and prevailed everywhere, he gave way, was swept along with the universal tide, issued an edict declaring a state of anarchy, and forsook the city, commanding the senate to follow, and forbidding any one to remain who preferred country and freedom to tyranny.

1 Cf. the Pompey, lvii. 5. an

XXXIV. Oi nev ody braTo. poe & VO{LOS. éoTl mpo é&oduu Oucavres épuyov" epevyov dé kat TOV Bovreutav ol TELTTOL, TpoToy Teva Ov dpraryiis
avo Tov idtey 6 te TUXOLEY WaTTED GAXOTPiOV AapuBavovtes. cial 5é ol Kai cpodpa ta Kaicapos npneevor mpotepoy e&émecov uTo OduBous Tore TOV AOYiTLaV Kal cuuTapynvéxXOnoay ovdey Seopevou TO pevpate THs popas éxeivys. olKTpoTaToY dé TO Jéapa THS TOAEWS Vs em ube poievou TOgouToU NEL PLOVOS, @aoTep VEWS umro cuBepyntav ATAYOPEVOVYTWY TPOS TO TUVTUYOV EKTETELY KOpt-Copevyys. Gna KaiTep oUTW THS JLETATTATEWS OL-KTpas ovens, THY pev puyny ol aOparot TaTpioa 64a Llourpiov yyoovTo, Thy oé ‘Popny os Kaicapos oTPATOTEOoY efeheuov" 6Trov Kal AaBunvos, avyp €v Tots padwota iroes Kaicapos Kab mT pea BevTNs yeyovas Kal cuynywvicpévos év TACL mpoOupotata Tots Kertixots todéuous, TOT exel-Vov aTOOpas APLKETO TT POS Lopmniov.
"ANAG TOUT Lev Kal Ta Xpynpata Kal Tas
amoaKevas dnérepwer 0 Kaicap: Aoperti¢n O€
NYOUPLEL | OTELPOY TpiadKovTa Kal KATEXOVTL Koppivioy emeNeov TapearTpatoTedevaer. 0 6€ aTroyvous Ta Kal’ éautov nTnoE TOV LaTpoY oiKeTHY
ovTa happaxov' Kal NaBwv to doGev Emtev ws TeOvnEopevos. met OALyor 5€ axovaas TOV K aicapa Cavpacrh Tee pirravOpwria Xphobae ™pos TOUS Eah@KOTas, avTOS aiyr ov dre privet Kal THY

o€vtTnTAa TOD Bovhevparos TAT O. TOU & lat pood Gappuvavtos auton, @S UTVv@TiKoY, ov Gavactpov, TETWKOTA, TepLyapns avactas ame. Tpos Kai-526

CAESAR, xxxtv. 1-4

XXXIV. Accordingly, the consuls fled, without even making the sacrifices usual before departure ; most of the senators also fled, after seizing, in a sort of robbery, whatever came to hand of their own possessions, as though it were the property of others. Some, too, who before this had vehemently espoused the cause of Caesar, were now frightened out of their wits, and were carried along, when there was no need of it, by the sweep of the great tide. But most pitiful was the sight of the city, now that so great a tempest was bearing down upon her, carried along like a ship abandoned of her helmsmen to dash against whatever lay in her path. Still, although their removal was so pitiful a thing, for the sake of Pompey men considered exile to be their country, and abandoned Rome with the feeling that it was Caesar’s camp.! For even Labienus, one of Caesar's greatest friends, who had been his legate and had fought most zealously with him in all his Gallic wars, now ran away from him and came to Pompey.

But Caesar sent to Labienus his money and his bag- gage; against Domitius, however, who was holding Corfinium with thirty cohorts under his command, he marched, and pitched his camp near by. Domitius, despairing of his enterprise, asked his physician, who was a Slave, for a poison ; and taking what was given him, drank it, intending to die. But after a little, hearing that Caesar showed most wonderful clemency towards his prisoners, he bewailed his fate, and blamed the rashness of his purpose. Then his phy- sician bade him be of good cheer, since what he had drunk was a sleeping-potion and not deadly ; where- upon Domitius rose up overjoyed and went to Caesar,

1 Cf. the Pompey, lxi. 4.
527
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

capa, Kat haBov beEvav avis dueEerece T pos TLopemniov. TAUTA ELS THY Popny aTraryyeXNOpeva, Tous avOpatrous Hdious emrotel, Kal TWes huyovTeEs aver Tpeyar.
eX Vee Once Kaicap TaD Te TOU Aopertou
oTpatiavy mapéd\aBe Kat Tovs adXovs, dcoUS EV
tais ToAcat Lloumniw otpatoroyoupévous Eplace xkatarkaBwv. morvs b€ yeyovws 5n Kalb hoBepos em aUuTOV ipauve Topmiiov. o O€ ovK edéfaro THY Epodor, adr’ ets Bperrésiov duywv Tovs pev
VIaTOUS ™ poTepov ECTELNE peTa Suvd mews ELS
Auppaxtor, autos O€ Odin “you Uo tepov emeFovtos Kaicapos éfémevoen, @S €v Tots Tept éxEtvou pans optevors Ta Kal? éxaa Tov dnrwbnoerat.
Katcape 6€ Bovropev pev eves di@xewy dmropia

veav Hv: eis b€ THY “Pounv avéotpee, yeyovas év nuepars éEnxovta Taans avatpwtt THs ItTaXtas KUPLOS.
"Emel 6€ kal THv ToALW ebpEe adXov } TpOGeEdoxa xabeat@aav Kat TOV aro Bounhs év auTy TUXVOUS, TOUTOLS meV emeerkh, Kal OnpotiKa Ste-NEXON, TapaKkarav avTous Kal pos Toprnjiov drrooréxhew avopas emt cupBdcect mpeTovaats:
umynxovae & ovdeis, elite hoBovpevor Lopmniov eYKATANENELLLEVOY, elTE [7 vouitovres otTw Kai-capa ppovety, AXXr evTrpeTreta Loyeou xpijo Gat.
Too O€ Snpuapxov Meréddou K@AVOVTOS avrov éx
TOD aTrobeTav Xpypara hapBaverv Kab vojous
TLVaS TpopepovTos, oun épy TOV auTov Om hov Kat VOLOV Katpov elvae' “ Xd dé ef Tots T PAT TOLEVOLS dSucKoAaivers, vov pev extrod@y amie Tappnotas 5238

the pledge of whose right hand he received, only to desert him and go back to Pompey. When tidings of these things came to Rome, men were made more cheerful, and some of the fugitives turned back.

XXXV. Caesar took over the troops of Domitius, as well as all the other levies of Pompey which he surprised in the various cities. Then, since his forces were already numerous and formidable, he marched against Pompey himself. Pompey, however, did not await his approach, but fled to Brundisium, sent the consuls before him with an army to Dyrrhachium, and shortly afterwards, as Caesar drew near, sailed off himself, as shall be set forth circumstantially in his Life.! Caesar wished to pursue him at once, but was destitute of ships; so he turned back to Rome, having in sixty days and without bloodshed become master of all Italy.

He found the city more tranquil than he was expecting, and many senators in it. With these, therefore, he conferred in a gentle and affable manner,? inviting them even to send a deputation to Pompey proposing suitable terms of agreement. But no one would listen to him, either because they feared Pompey, whom they had abandoned, or be- cause they thought that Caesar did not mean what he said, but was indulging in specious talk. When the tribune Metellus tried to prevent Caesar’s taking money from the reserve funds of the state, and cited certain laws, Caesar said that arms and laws had not the same season. “ But if thou art dis- pleased at what is going on, for the present get out

1 Chapter Ixii.

2 Caesar gives a summary of his speech to the senators in B.C. i. 32, 529

PLUTARCHS ERY ES

yap ov OetTat Todepos' Stray b€ KaTdOwuar Ta Oma cupBdacewy yevouévwyv, TOTE Taptwv Snpua-ywyroes. Kal tTadta, édbn, “réyw THY €“auToU Suxaiwy uplémevoss €uos yap & Kal OV Kal TAVTES Gaous elAnha TOV Tpos eu“ée oTaciacdyTMY.”
tavta mpos tov MétedXov eiva@v eBudsle mpos
Tas Ovpas TOU Tamteiov, wy patvowevwv bé TOY KNELOOY YarKels meTaTEeuWapevos exxoTTEw exé-Nevey’ aves b€ evicotapévov tos MeréAXov Kat
TLVWY ETTALVOVYTO!, SLATELVAMEVOS NTTELANGEV ATTO-KTEVELY AUTOV, El LN TAVAAaLTO TapevoxrAaDV. “ Kat TouTo, édn, “‘melpaKlov, ovVK «ayvoeis OTL pmol SuvtKovA@TEpov Hv elmeiy mpakat.” ovTos oO
AGyos TOTE Kal MéteAXOv arrenOety erroince KaTa-Seicavta Kai Ta Adda padiws avT@ Kal TaYXéws uTnpeTeiaOar Tpos TOV ToNELOP.
XXXVI. ’Eotpateve 6° ets “I 8npiav mporepov éyvoxws tors wept Adpaviov Kat Bappwva Tlopaniov tpecPevtas exBareiv, cal tras éxel duva-pels Kal Tas éTapyias Up avT@ Toinodpevos
ovTws ert Loumrniov éXavvev, undeva KATA VWTOU
TOV TONELLMY UTONELTOMEVOS. KLYdUVEvaAS 6é Kal TO TOpaTt TOANAKLS KaT Evédpas Kal TO oTpPAaT@ pdrtoTa Oia ALLOY, OVK aAVAKE TPOTEpPOV
Si@KwY Kal TWpokKadovmEevos Kal TreptTappevwr
Tous avdpas 7 KUptos Bia yevéoPar TOY oTpaToO-Tédwy Kal TOY duvadpewv. ob 5é HYyEmoves WYOVTO
apos Iloparniov pevyortes.
XXXVI. “EaverOovta bé es “Popnw Kai-capa Iletowy pév 0 mevOepos mwapexarer Tpos llouwniov amoctédAayv avdpas vrép dadvoews, 539

CAESAR, xxxv. 3-xxxvu. 1

of the way, since war has no use for free speech ;
when, however, I have come to terms and laid down my arms, then thou shalt come before the people with thy harangues. And in saying this I waive my own just rights; for thou art mine, thou and all of the faction hostile to me whom I have caught." After this speech to Metellus, Caesar walked towards the door of the treasury, and when the keys were not to be found, he sent for smiths and ordered them to break in the door. Metellus once more opposed him, and was commended by some for so doing ; but Caesar, raising his voice, threatened to kill him if he did not cease his troublesome interference. "And thou surely knowest, young man," said he, "that it is more unpleasant for me to say this than to do it." Then Metellus, in consequence of this speech, went off in a fright, and henceforth everything was speedily and easily furnished to Caesar for the war.}

XXXVI. So he made an expedition into Spain,' having resolved first to drive out from there Afranius and Varro, Pompey's legates, and bring their forces there and the provinces into his power, and then to march against Pompey, leaving not an enemy in his rear. And though his life was often in peril from ambuscades, and his army most of all from hunger, he did not cease from pursuing, challenging, and besieging the men until he had made himself by main force master of their camps and their forces. The leaders, however, made their escape to Pompey.

XXXVII. When Caesar came back to Rome, Piso, his father-in-law, urged him to send a deputation to Pompey with proposals for a settlement; but

1 Cf. the Pompey, lxii. 1. * Cf. Caesar, B.C. i. 34-86.

53!
No

"Ioavpixos Se Kaicape XaprSopevos avTetTer.
atpebeus dé OuxTaTop t imo THs Bovrns duyddas Te KATHYAYE, Kal TOV er 2UAAa Sua tuyna dvtav
TOUS maidas ETLTLMLOUS eroinae, Kal ceca bea
TLVL TOKOY éxougele Tous Xpewperreras, adrwv TE TOLOUTWY iyaTO ToOALTEVLATwY OV TOANOY, arn' év Huépais Evdexa THY pmév povapyiay atre-Tdpevos, UTaTov 5€ avadet~as EauTOYV Kal Lepoui=
Nov Icaupixov, ei yeTo THs oTpaTetas.
Kal tas pév GddXas Suvapers xa" oddv éretyo-pevos Tmaphrden, immets b€ exov hoydoas éGa-Koatous Kal TEVTE TAaYLaTa, XEtu@vos év Tpomats OvTos, io Tapeévou "Tavvovapiov pnvos (otros & ap ein Llocesdeap A Onvaioss) apnKev els TO TEAAYOS*

kal S:aBarwv tov “lévioy "Opixov xai ’Ato\Nviav aipet, Ta O€ Thoia Tad dr émepayev ets Bpevtéctov ent TOUS VoTEpijcavTas TH mopeta TTpaTLOras. or de axpe pev KAP odoy 7) oay, are 67 Kat TCP KLAKOTES non tots Tomar Kal T pos Ta, TrION TOV TONLWDY AT ELPNKOTES, év aitials
etx ov TOV Kaicapa- “Tlot 69 Kal mpos ti mépas nas obTOS O avip katabyaerac Trepipépav Kal XPwopevos GoTeEp aTpuToLs Kal arpuxous piv ; Kab oidnpos éfera pe Tras, kat Oupeod Tis éore pedo é év Xpovep TOT OUT Kat OwpaKxos. ovod€e amo TOY T Papa ov apa hovikerar Kaicap 6 OTL Ountav
pev dpxet, Ovnra &é TepvKapev mdaxew Kal ar-ety; @pav d€ Yetwa@vos Kal TvevpaTos év OadadT-™ Kkatpov ovee Oem BiafecOar Svratov: arn OvUTOS mapaBddretat Kadatep ov SitwKwy ToAEpious, GANA hevywy.” ToLadTa NéyovTEs eTrOpEd-53?

CAESAR, xxxvit. 1-4

Isauricus, to please Caesar, opposed the project. So, having been made dictator by the senate, he brought home exiles, restored to civic rights the children of those who had suffered in the time of Sulla, relieved the burdens of the debtor-class by a certain adjustment of interest, took in hand a few other public measures of like character, and within eleven days abdicated the sole power, had himself declared consul with Servilius Isauricus, and entered upon his campaign.

The rest of his forces he passed by in a forced march, and with six hundred picked horsemen and five legions, at the time of the winter solstice, in the early part of January! (this month answers nearly to the Athenian Poseideon), put to sea, and after crossing the Ionian gulf took Oricum and Apollonia, and sent his transports back again to Brundisium for the soldiers who had been belated on their march. These,as long as they were on the road, since they were now past their physical prime and worn out with their multitudinous wars, mur- mured against Caesar. ‘ Whither, pray, and to what end will this man bring us, hurrying us about and treating us like tireless and lifeless things? Even a sword gets tired out with smiting, and shield and breastplate are spared a little after so long a time of service. Will not even our wounds, then, convince Caesar that he commands mortal men, and that we are mortal in the endurance of pain and suffering ? Surely the wintry season and the occasion of a storm at sea not even a god can constrain; yet this man takes risks as though he were not pursuing, but fly- ing from, enemies.” With such words as these they

1 48 8.c. The Roman calendar, at this time, was much in advance of the solar seasons. P ei:
VOL. VIL S

9)

2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ovTo TXOALWS ELS TO Bpevréciov. ws 6€ er OovTes eupoV GvnyALEVOV TOV Kaicapa, TAYU may av peTaParovTes €xaxiCov EavTOVS mpodotas a aToKa-AooVTES TOD avTOKpUaTOpOS, EKaKLCov O€ Kal TOUS nryepovas: ovK eT TAX VVAVTAS THY mopelay. rea }- Hevot 66 é emt TOV ax pov 7 pos TO mEAYOS Kal THv
"Harerpov dm ea KoTOUY Tas vads éd’ wv &ueddov meparova bat T™ pos EXELVOD.
XXXVIII. ’Ev oe ‘ATod via Kaicap ov«
EY Ov aE Lopaxov THY pel eavtod Our ap, Bpaduvovans O€ Tis éxeiOev, GT OPOUPEVOS Kab TE puT a.
Gav, SElvov éBovrevae Bovrcuua, Kpuda Tm avTov els mAOtoV éuBas TO péyeOos Owdexdakadpor a avayOrvar ™ pos TO Bpevréctov, TIMKOUTOLS OTOAOLS TELEX OMEVOU TOD TENUOUS UTO TOV mo May VUKTOS ovv ecOnte Jeparrovtos eT LK PUWaHEVOS évéBn, kal eataBarov éavTov Os TWA TOY mopypednpeveoy novxate. tov 6€’ Awou Totapod TIP vadv bropepovTes Ets Thy Garaccar, TI pev Ew Ouvv avpay, i) Tapelye THVEKAUTO mept TAS éxPoras yarayvny aTrwiotoa T Oppo TO a TOUS mvevoas TEAL LOS 61a vUKTIS amo Peoe 7 pos dé THY TAN LUA THiS Gararrys Kab THY avtiBas ow TOU KAUS@VOS dry piatvov 0 T OTAL0S, Kea TPAXUS dpa Kai KTUTD peyary Kal oKAnpats AVAKOTTOMEVOS divas, dTrOpos HV Bracivar TO KuBepynty Kal peta Bahety exéXevae TOUS vaUTas
ws atTooTpéywy tov Trovv. aicBopevos &€ Oo Kaicap avacerxvucw EavTOV, KAL TOD xuBepyntov Aa Sopevos THS YELPOS ex Tem hay Lev ou 7 pos THY owe, “"T00,” edn, “ yervate, ToApa Kat bédiOe

marched in a leisurely way to Brundisium. But when they got there and found that Caesar had put to sea, they quickly changed their tone and reviled themselves as traitors to the Imperator; they reviled their officers, too, for net having quickened their march. Then, sitting on the cliffs, they looked oft towards the open sea and Epirus, watching for the ships which were to carry them across to their commander.

XXXVIII. At Apollonia, since the force which he had with him was not a match for the enemy and the delay of his troops on the other side caused him perplexity and distress, Caesar conceived the danugerous plan of embarking in a twelve-oared boat, without any one’s knowledge, and going over to Brundisium, though the sea was encompassed by such large armaments of the enemy. At night, accordingly, after disguising himself in the dress of a slave, he went on board, threw himself down as one of no account, and kept quiet. While the river Aoiis was carrying the boat down towards the sea, the early morning breeze, which at that time usually made the mouth of the river calm by driving back the waves, was quelled by a strong wind which blew from the sea during the night; the river therefore chafed against the inflow of the sea and the opposi- tion of its billows, and was rough, being beaten back with a great din and violent eddies, so that it was impossible for the master of the boat to force his way along. He therefore ordered the sailors to come about in order to retrace his course. But Caesar, perceiving this, disclosed himself, took the master of the boat by the hand, who was terrified at sight of him, and said: “ Come, good man, be bold

pndév Kaicapa pépes Kat THY Kaicapos TUXMY

4 cupTrEovTaD. éXabovto Tov XELpuavOs ot vavTal, KL Tats KOT ALS EMpuvTes eBialovto Taon mpoOvuia Tov ToTapov. Os dé Av amopa, deEaPEVOS TONANHY Oadatrav Kal Kivduvevaas é€v T@ OTOPATL TUVEX@PNTE dra aKav TO xuBepyirn peTaBareir. aviovte b€ avT@ KaTa TOs ATHVT@V OL TTPATLOTAL, ToANd peppopevor Kal duo ravoby tes el pn TéTETTAL Kal ovY avTois {LOVOLS (Kavos Elvat yiKay, arr’ axOerat Kab TapaBarretar Sta Tovs aTovTas ws aTLaTa@Y TUS Tapovow.

XXXIX. "Ex TOUTOU KaTém hevoe pev >Avto-

VLoS ATO Bpevtectov Tas duvapes ayav: Oappycas dé Kaicap Tpouxanretto Tloparniov iSpupevov
EV KANO Kal Nopnryovpevov éx TE yHS Kal OaXdarT-
TNS ATOXPOVTMS, avTos év ovK apOovars dtayov Kat PX, borepov dé Kal a podpa Tea Gels aTropla TOV dvayKatov. GAXa pifav Tiva KO-TTOVTES Ol TTPATLATAL Kal yDakre pupavtes
2 mpocehépovTo. Kai mote Kal dvavrAacavTes é& avThs aptovs Kal tais mpodvAaxkais T@V TroXe-piwv emOpapovTes éSardov elow Kab Sveppimrouy, eT UNE YOVTES OS, aype av) yh Toltavtas exhépn pifas, ov TavoovTaL ToMopKobvTeEs Hopaaiov. 0
pévtoe Llopmnios ovTe TOS ApToUsS OUTE TOUS Oyous ela touvtous éxpépecOar mpos TO mANOAos.
nOvwovy yap ol OTpaTLOTAaL, THY aypLOoTHTAa Kal Thy aTafeayv TOV TOdELioV WoTrep Onpiwy op-pw doves.
3 ’Ael O€ Teves mepl Tols épupace Tots Tloparniov payat omropabes éyiyvovto: Kai Tepinv wdaats oO

and fear naught; thou carryest Caesar and Caesar's fortune in thy boat.” ! The sailors forgot the storm, and laying to their oars, tried with all alacrity to force their way down the river. But since it was impossible, after taking much water and running great hazard at the mouth of the river, Caesar very reluctantly suffered the captain to put about. When he came back, his soldiers met him in throngs, find- ing much fault and sore displeased with him because he did not believe that even with them alone he was able to conquer, but was troubled, and risked his life for the sake of the absent as though dis- trusting those who were present.

XXXIX. After this, Antony put in from Brundisium with his forces, and Caesar was emboldened to chal- lenge Pompey to battle. Pompey was well posted and drew ample supplies both from land and sea; while Caesar had no great abundance at first, and afterwards was actually hard pressed for want of provisions. But his soldiers dug up a certain root, mixed it with milk, and ate it.? Once, too, they made loaves of it,and running up to the enemy’s outposts, threw the loaves inside or tossed them to one another, adding by way of comment that as long as the earth produced such roots, they would not stop besieging Pompey. Pompey, however, would not allow either the loaves or these words to reach the main body of his army. For his soldiers were de- jected, fearing the ferocity and hardiness of their enemies, who were like wild beasts in their eyes.

There were constant skirmishings about the forti- fications of Pompey, and in all of them Caesar got

1 Cf. Dion Cassius, xli. 46, 3.
E7Ci. Caesar, B.C, iti 48,

Katoap TANY plas, ev 7 TPOT NS peyarns 'yevo-MeEVvNS exivouvevoev aToXécat TO TT PAaToTEdov.
opm niou yap 7 poa BudXovTos oveels E[ELVED, adda Kal TAPPOe KATETLMTAAYTO KTELVOMEVOD, Kal meph Tots AUTOV Napaxopace Kal TepeTeLyt-opacw emir tov eLauVOMEvOL mpoTpomdony. Kai-cap dé vravred lov ETELPATO Lev dvagtpepet
TOUS pevyorras, em épaive 6é oven, arr em hap
Bavopevou TOV onpetav aT eppimTouv ot Kopi-Covtes, Mate Svo0 Kal Tpidxovta aPelvy ToUS TOAEMLOUS. AUTOS bé Tapa pLKxpov HAOEV aTrofavely.
cvdpt yap peyir Kal popware pevyovTe map.
avTOV éTIBarov THY YKelpa pmévery ExEeAEVTE Kal atpéherlat 7pos ToUs ToAEptous: o O€ pegTOS aY Tapayns Tapa To Servoy émnpato THY pwaxatpav ws Ka9rEopevos, bOaver 6€ 6 TOD Kaicapos trac-TLoTHS aToKoas avTOv TOY pov. oOUTw 6€ dem éyvon TO Kad abrov Gore, é7rel Toparnios vm evraPetas TLVvOs 7) TUXNS epye peyaho TENOS ovK em éOnkev, AXA KabetpEas Els TOV Vapaka TOUS pevyovras dvex@pnaer, cimev apa T pos TOUS
pidous ATLWV 0 Kaioap, x ~nuepov cay ") vinn Tapa Tois ToNELLOLS min €l TOV vuxovTa elyov.
QAUuTOS 6€ Tapeh ay els THY oKnyny Kal KATAKXI-Deis VUKTA TATOY éxelvny VLA POT AT I/D Surryaryev
év GTOpOLS Noyta pois, @s KaKds Eo TPATNYNKDS, OTL KaL Ywpas emixetpevns Balcias Kal TOodEwV
evcatovwy tov MaxedomKxarv kal OertadrtKav, €daas éxel Treplam@dgat Tov TrodEenov évTavda cablélorro mpos OadatTn, vavepatovvT@y TOV TONELLWY, TWOALOPKOUMEVOS TOLS aVvayKaio"Ls pad-538

the better except one, where there was a great rout oi his men and he was in danger of losing his camp. For when Pompey attacked not one of Caesar's men stood his ground, but the moats were filled with the slain, and "others were falling at their own ramparts and walls, whither they had been driven in headlong flight. And though Caesar met the fugitives and tried to turn thein back, he availed nothing, nay, when he tried to lay hold of the standards the bearers threw them away, so that the enemy captured thirty-two of them. Caesar himself, too, narrowly escaped being killed. For as a tall and sturdy man was running away past him, he laid his hand upon him and bade him stay and face about upon the enemy; and the fellow, full of panic at the threat- ening danger, raised his sword to smite Caesar, but before he could do so Caesar's shield-bearer lopped off his arm at the shoulder. So completely had Caesar given up his cause for lost that, when Pompey, either from excessive caution or by some chance, did not follow up his great success, but with- drew after he had shut up the fugitives within their entrenchments, Caesar said to his friends as he left them: 'To-day victory had been sa the enemy, if they had had a victor in command." ! Then going by himself to his tent and lying He he spent tice most distressful of all nights in vain reflections, convinced that he had shown bad generalship. For while a fertile country lay waiting for him, and the prosperous cities of Macedonia and Thessaly, he had neglected to carry the war thither, and had posted himself here by the sea, which his enemies controlled with their fects, being thus held in siege by lack of

1 Cf. the Pompey, Ixv. &., 539
7

Ne)

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Nov Tols OTOL ToALOpKaY. oUTw On piTTTAa-cbeis Kal addnuwovycas mpos THY atopiay Kal yaderoTyTAa THY TaporvT@V avicoTn TOV oTpaTOD, éri Sentiwva mpoayew eis Maxedoviay éyvwkos:
yap émratacecOat Uoprniov Omrov paxettat
Ly Xopyyovpevos opoiwas ato THs Baratrys, 7)
Teptécer Oat pepovwpévov LKNTLMVOS.
XL. Todto thy lloumniov stpatiay émwhpe xat TOUS TEPL AUVTOV HyE"ovas WS TTHLEVOU Kal Pev-yovtos éyecGat Kaicapos. avtos péev yap evhaBas eixe opmijios avappiprar paxynv wept TNALKOUTWY, KaL TAapecKevagpévos apioTa Tact
mpos Tov Ypovoy HEiov TpiBey Kal papaivery Ti TOY TorEuLwy akpny Bpaxeiay obcav. 76 yap TOL payiuwwotatov THS Katoapos duvapews éepr7recpiav pev elye Kal TOAMaY AyUTOTTATOY TOS TOUS ayavas, év dé Tals wravats Kal Tals oTpaToTredelais Kal TeryouaxovrTes Kal vuUKTEyEpTODVTES
éLéxapvov bid yipws, Kal Bapeis Hoav 'Tots TWLATL TPOS TOUS ToVOUS, dt acOEeveray éyKaTa-NetTOVTES THY TpoOUmlay. TOTE bé Kal TL VOTHpLA
Aotpwades EXEYON, THY aToTiav THS d1aiTHS TotN-
TUMEVOY UPYnV, eV TH oTTpaTLA TrepipepedOat TH

Katcapos. Kal To péylotov, ovTEe yprpacty ép-pOLévOS OUVTE TPOPHS EvTrOpaY ypovouv Bpayxéos édoxer TEpt aUT@® KaTadvOrjoec Oat.
XLT. Ava tadta Tloprniov payecOar pn Bovopevov wovos ernver Katwy hecdolt Tay TodTaY’ 540
—_

provisions rather than besieging with his arms. Thus his despondent thoughts of the difficulty and perplexity of his situation kept him tossing upon his couch, and in the morning he broke camp, resolved to lead his army into Macedonia against Scipio; for he would then either draw Pompey after him to a place where he would give battle without drawing his supplies as he now did from the sea, or Scipio would be left alone and he would overwhelm him.

XL. This emboldened the soldiers of Pompey and the leaders by whom he was surrounded to keep close to Caesar, whom they thought defeated and in flight. For Pompey himself was cautious about hazarding a battle for so great a stake, and since he was most excellently provided with everything necessary for a long war, he thought it best to wear out and quench the vigour of the enemy, which must be short-lived. For the best fighting men in Caesar’s army had experience, it is true, and a daring which was irresistible in combat; but what with their long marches and frequent encampments and siege-warfare and night-watches, they were beginning to give out by reason of age, and were too unwieldy for labour, having lost their ardour from weakness. At that time, too, a kind of pestilential disease, occasioned by the strangeness of their diet, was said to be prevalent in Caesar's army. And what was most important of all, since Caesar was neither strong in funds nor well supplied with provisions, it was thought that within a short time his army would break up of itself.

XLI. For these reasons Pompey did not wish to fight, but Cato was the only one to commend his course, and this from a desire to spare the lives
541

bs ye Kal TOUS TEOOVTAS év T ayn Tay TONE-pov els x tALous TO TrA00s YEVOLEVOUS LOWY
amt nrNOev eyxaruypapevos Kal KaTacaxpvoas. ol 5 adroe mares ex anfov TOV Toparniov duvyouaxobvra, Kal Tapogvvov “Aya pepvova Kal Bacthéa Pactéwv dmroxahowTes, OS én pn Bovdopevor
arrobéabat THY povapxiav, adr Grad opevoy NYE HOVOY TooOUT@V éEnpTnméevav avrob Kab poe-TOVTMY eT oKNUNY. Dawvrios 6€ THY Katwvos Tappyolav vTroToLOvpEvos, paviKas e€ayeTAlalev
el noe THTES Ectar TOV Trept TovocKAdvoY «aTo-Aatoat avxwy bia THV Hopaniov dirapxiav.
A ppavios dé (vewoti yap é& T8npias apixro KAKOS oTparnyno as) draBarnopevos emt xPI-pace mpododvar TOV orparoy, para bud Ti pos
>
TOV EWTOpov ov ptXovTat TOV €@v7 LEVOV Tap
avTov Tas éemapxias. ex TOUT@Y ATAVTWY TUVE-Aavvopevos axwv els paynv o Lloumnios éywper TOV Kaioapa SroKxev.
‘O b€ THY péev AAANY TopEiayv YaNETOas Hvucer, ovdEeVvOS TAPEXOVTOS ayopay, UAAA TdaVTw@V KaTAa-hpovovvtwy 1a THY evaryXOs NTT AY as 6€ ide
Doudous, Oeccarieny | Toy, ov /LOVOY eOpeve
THY oTparidy, GNA Kal Tou VOT NPATOS anjrhagte
TApAoyos. apbove yap evéTuXov oivw, Kal
TLOVTES aveday, elTa XPopevor K@LOL Kal Bax-YEVOVTES AVA THY OOO”, éK pens dex povaavTo Kal
Tapnd\ArAalav To TaOos, eis EEwv Evépav Tols cwpact [ETATEDOVTES.
XLIT. ‘Os 6€ efs tv Papoariayv éuBarovtes
aupoTepor KaTeotpatomédevaay, o pev Tloptrijios 542

728

CAESAR, xu. 1—xLin t

of his fellow citizens ; for when he saw even those of the enemy who had fallen in the battle, to the number of a thousand, he burst into tears, muffled up his head,and went away. All the rest, however, reviled Pompey for trying to avoid a battle, and sought to goad him on by calling him Agamemnon and King of Kings, implying that he did not wish to lay aside his sole authority, but plumed himself on having so many commanders dependent upon him and coming constantly to his tent. And Favonius, affecting Cato’s boldness of speech, complained like a mad man because that year also they would be unable to enjoy the figs of Tusculuin because of Pompey’s love of command.! Afranius, too, who had lately come from Spain, where he had shown bad generalship, when accused of betraying his army for a_ bribe, asked why they did not fight with the merchant who had bought the provinces from him.1_ Driven on by all these importunities, Pompey reluctantly sought a battle and pursued Caesar.

Caesar accomplished most of his march with diffi- culty, since no one would sell him provisions, and everybody despised him on account of his recent defeat; but after he had taken Gomphi, a city of Thessaly, he not only provided food for his soldiers, but also relieved them of their disease unexpectedly. For they fell in with plenty of wine, and after drink- ing freely of it, and then revelling and rioting on their march, by means of their drunkenness they drove away and got rid of their trouble, since they brought their bodies into a different habit.

XLII. But when both armies entered the plain of Pharsalus and encamped there, Pompey's mind 1 Cf. the Pompey, lxvii. 3.

avirs els TOV apxatov avexpoveTo ovo pov THY VoOuny, ere Kal pacparov OUK aiciwy 7 poayevo-pévov Kat Ka? brrvoy dwews. €éd0Ker yap éauTov opav év T@ Oedtp@ KpoTovpevoy vTO "Pawpaiwr,
... ot 6€ wept avTov oUTwH Opacets oav Kal TO viKn pa Tais éATict TpoeeAnpores QTE pedor et-Keiv ae THs Kaicapos apxtepwavvns Aopitiov Kal LmivOhpa Kal Lantiova Sra pthhopevous an-AyjAous, TET ELV dé ToONOUS els 'Popny pra Bov-févous Kal TpokaTadapBavovTas olKias UTaTevovcl Kat oTpaTnyovaw éreiTndetous, ws EvOdS dpEovtes weTa TOV TOAEMOV. pdrtoTa bé éoda-dalov ot immets ert THY MLaYNY NOKNLEVOL TEPLTTOS OTA Aap poTnat Kal Tpopais immoy Kal KaNree TMOPATOD, péeya hpovoovtes kat 51a TO TrIOOS, emtaKiaxtheot POs YEALOUS TOUS Kaicapos ¢ OV TES.
Hv O€ Kal TO TOV TWECHY TAHOOS ovK ayY@padroy, GNAG TETPAKIOpUpLOL KAL TrEVTAKLTYiNLOL TapeE-TUTTOVTO Suc pupious Kal SuorxtAtors.
XLII. 'O 6é Kaicap TOUS OT pPATLOTas ovvayayov, Kal TpoeiTav ws dU0 pey AVT@ TaypaTa Kopdivios ayov éyyis éotiv, adrat O€ Trevte-Katdexa omeipar peta Karnvod xdOnvtac crept
Méyapa xai 'AOjvas, npwtnoev elite BovrovTat
TE PLLEVELV éxelvous, elTE AUTOL Svaxwouveboar Kage EavTOUS. ol O€ dveBonoay Sedpevoe pn Te pt-peeve, ara parnov, OT WS TaXLTTA cuviacw ELS
yvetpas Tots Todemlois, TexvalecOat Kal oTpa-

THyelv. Trocoumévw Sé Kabappov avT@ Ths duva-1 The substance of what has fallen from the text here may be found in the Pompey, Ixvili. 2. Sintenis brackets the sentence as an intrusion here from marginal notes.

reverted again to its former reasoning, and besides, there befell him unlucky appearances and a vision in his sleep. He dreamed, namely, that he saw himself in his theatre applauded by the Romans,... Those about him, however, were so confident, and so hope- fully anticipated the victory, that Domitius and Spinther and Scipio disputed earnestly with one another over Caesar's office of Pontifex Maximus, and many sent agents to Rome to hire and take posses- sion of houses suitable for praetors and consuls, assuming that they would immediately hold these offices after the war.! And most of all were his cavalry impatient for the battle, since they had a splendid array of shining armour, well-fed horses, and handsome persons, and were in high spirits too on account of their numbers, which were seven thousand to Caesar's one thousand. The numbers of the in- fantry also were unequal, since forty-five thousand were arrayed against twenty-two thousand.

XLIII. Caesar called his soldiers together, and after telling them that Corfinius? was near with two legions for him, and that fifteen cohorts be- sides under Calenus were stationed at Athens and Megara, asked them whether they wished to wait for these troops, or to hazard the issue by themselves. Then the soldiers besought him with loud cries not to wait for the troops, but rather to contrive and manoeuvre to come to close quarters with the enemy as soon as possible. As he was holding a lustration

1 Cf. Caesar, B.C. iii. 82 f.; Plutarch, Pompey, Ixvii. 5.
2 An error for Cornificius, pews Kat Ovoavte 70 Mp@rov iepeiov ev us) Mayes eppate T pee 7 PEp@V BaXN xpiOnoea bar T pos TOUS TohEpious. €popevou dé TOU Kaicapos el Kal mrepl Tov TéAOUS évopa TL TOUS Lepois eUonLov, sf AvTos av," épy, " ov ToUTO BEXTLOY U vToKpivaco TAUTO. poeyadny yap of Ocot wetaBornv Kal peTa-TTOOW ent Ta evavTia TOV KadeoToTav Onoda, Gore él pev ev TWpaTTEV NY ceauTov emt TO Tapovre, THD Xelpova m™ poo 60Ka, TUXNY" él 0€ Ka-KOS, TH dpeivova. TH 5€ 7 po THS paxns vurti

Tas purakas épodevovros avtov mepl 70 Heo o-VUKTLOV OpOn Aapmas ovpaviov Tupos, iv vmEpevex Geloav TO Katoapos o7 pat oTredov AauT pav

Kal hroyoon yevopuevny eo€ev ets TO Tlopaniov
KATATETELD. ewOuviys d€ purakijs Kal TavLKoV Tapaxov no Govto yeryvopevov Tapa TOUS TONE [LOLS ov pay payelodal ¥¢ Kat éxelvnv TpoaedoKka THY TLEpay, ara ws éml Yeotovacns odevwov ave-Cevryvuev.
XLIV. ’Emel b€ tTav cenvdv dn KaTadedv-peveov ot oKoTol T poo immevaay aUT@ TOUS TrO-AEmious em waxy kataBaive arraryyéddovres,
Tepixapns yevopevos Kat TpooevEdpevos Tots Oeots
TApeTATTE THY parayya, THY Takw TpiTdAHy
Tov. Kal TOS pev perous emeo noe Kadivov Aopitvor, TOV O€ KepaTov TO [ev elev "AvTwvios, autos O€ TO beEtov, év TO dexdT@ Taypare HEADY
payer Oat. KaTa TOUTO dé TOUS TOV TOMpLOV immrets dyTUTapaTarTopevous opay, Kal dedouxws THY apm poTnta kal TO TrHGOS QUT@V, ATO TAS
eax aTns rafews adnrors exéhevoe meptehGetv POs éavtov €& oteipas Kal KaToTLy éatyae TOU SeELOd, 729 546

CAESAR, xin. 2 xiv. 2

and review of his forces and had sacrificed the first victim, the seer at once told him that within three days there would be a decisive battle with the enemy. And when Caesar asked him whether he also saw in the victims any favourable signs of the issue, ‘‘Thou thyself,” said the seer, “canst better answer this question for thyself. For the gods in- dicate a great change and revolution of the present status to the opposite. Therefore, if thou thinkest thyself well off as matters stand, expect the worse fortune ; if badly off, the better.’ Moreover, on the night before the battle, as Caesar was making the round of his sentries about midnight, a fiery torch was seen in the heavens, which seemed to be carried over his camp, blazing out brightly, and then to fall into Pompey’s. And during the morning watch it was noticed that there was actually a panic confusion among the enemy.! However, Caesar did not expect to fight on that day,? but began to break camp for a march to Scotussa.

XLIV. But just as the tents had been struck, his scouts rode up to him with tidings that the enemy were coming down into the plain for battle. At this he was overjoyed, and after prayers and vows to the gods, drew up his legionaries in three divisions. Over the centre he put Domitius Calvinus, while of the wings Antony had one and he himself the right, where he intended to fight with the tenth legion. But seeing that the enemy's cavalry were arraying themselves over against this point, and fearing their brilliant appearance and their numbers, he ordered six cohorts from the furthermost lines to come round to him unobserved, and stationed them behind his right

1 Cf. the Pompey, xviii. 3. 2 August 9, 48 B.c 547
PLUTARCRH'S LIVES

/ a \ ~ 7 Cf a , €
didaEas & Xp ToLeiy OTAaV Of THY TOdEMiwDY bT-
~ 4 oe \
meis tpoopépwvtat. Uoprrajios d€ TO pev avTOS
3 al \ »] , “
elye TOV KEepatwv, TO 6 Evwvupov Aopitios, TOD
\ c , \ e¢ a
Sé pécou SKnwiwy hpxev o wevOEpas. ob 6€ tmmeEis
e Jaren \ ? \ ” e \ S amavtes emt TO apictepov éBpicay ws TO deEvov
a {?
KUKAWOOMEVOL TOV Toreulwv Kal rNaApTpaV TreEpt
, 4 N \
AUTOV TOV NYELOVA TOLNTOMEVOL TPOTIHY: OVOEV yap
e a avééEev Bados omrutexns parayyos, GANA oup-
\ , ~
tpivecOat kal katappakecOar Tavta Tois évav-Tiols emt Borns Ga TOTOUTMY LTTéEwWY yEevomerns.
’Earel 6€ onuaive EuerdXov apporepor THY Epo-
. / fa)
Sov, Lloumrios pév éxéXevce TOUS OTALTAS ETTOTAS év mpoBorH Kal pévovtas apapotws dSéyecOat THv cal , A a eTLOpopmny TOV Toenlwy, wéexpt av Vacod Boris
, a fa
évtos yéevovtat. Katcap 6€ kai Tepi tovTo dvapap-
a / / Teiy dyow avtov, ayvoncavTa THv peta Spopou
A 3 a , B)
Kat popas €v apxyn ywopevny ocvppakiy, ws ev TE “ al ,
tals wAnyais Biav mpoatiOnat Kal avvexkaies TOV Ouyov éx mavtwy avappimitouevov. autos €
a ‘ 7 / \ wo \ 3 > + Kively THY Padrdayya MEAXWY KAaL TpOtwY em Epyov
a ec oa a ,
non Tpa@Tov opa Tov Taktapywy davdpa TiaToVv
a / ,
auto Kal Todkéuwy EuTretpov, EmtGapavvovTa TOUS @€ 4? Cpe \ 4 > ee ? n ud avT@® Kal TpoKaNovpEvon els Aptdhrav adKjs.
a 3 ?
ToUTOY GvopacTt mpocayopevaas, “Té éArmi Soper,”

3 cc S is Toe K , \ a“ , eitrev, “@ Laie Kpacociue, cat mas tt Oapaous
” ait c oe K ? bd , \ } \ éyowev;” 0 6€ Kpacotvos éxteivas thy deEvav
, / ee 3) a Kat peya Bonaas, “ Niexnoopev,” pn, “ \auTpas, a a SN Se ~ / N f
® Kaicap> éué 6€ 7 Covta thmepov } TeOvnKoTa
3 Coal tal o~
emraivésels. TAUTA ELTOV TPATOS EuBAaArXrEL Tots 548

CAESAR, xuiv. --6

wing, teaching them what they were to do when the enemy's horsemen attacked. Pompey had one of his wings himself, and Domitius the left, while Scipio, Pompey’s father-in-law, commanded the centre. But his horsemen all crowded to the left wing, intending to encircle the enemy’s right and make a complete rout about the commander himself; for they thought that no legionary array, however deep, could resist them, but that when so many horsemen made an onset together the enemy would be utterly broken and crushed.}

When both sides were about to sound the charge, Pompey ordered his legionaries to stand with arms at the ready and await in close array the onset of the enemy until they were within javelin cast. But Caesar says? that here too Pompey made a mistake, not knowing that the initial clash with all the im- petus of running adds force to the blows and fires the courage, which everything then conspires to fan. As Caesar himself was about to move his lines of legionaries, and was already going forward into action, he saw first one of his centurions, a man ex- perienced in war and faithful to him, encouraging his men and challenging them to vie with him in prowess, Him Caesar addressed by name and said: “ Caius Crassinius,? what are our hopes, and how does our confidence stand?” Then Crassinius, stretching forth his right hand, said with a loud voice: “We shall win a glorious victory, O Caesar, and thou shalt praise me to-day, whether I am alive or dead.” So saying, he plunged foremost into the enemy at full

1 Cf. the Pompey, |xix. 1-3 Seb sC oa oe.
3 In Caesar’s version of this episode (B.C. iii. 9] and 99), the name is Crastinus, 549

G2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

modeulots Spopw, TuveTTtaoTAaTaMEVOS TOUS TEpt
éauTov EKATOV KL elkooe \TPATLOTas. Siaxowas
dé Tous TpwrTous Kal Tporw Xopav pove TOAA®
Kab Bravopevos dvanomreTat Eiger TANYELS Sua TOU OTOMATOS, MOTE KAL THY ALYMIY UTEP TO LvLoV dvacyelv.
XLV. Otto be TOV areCov Kara TO peoov
TUppAryEvT@Y Kat HAXOHEVOD, aTO TOU KEPATOS ot Top niov iT 1rets coBapas em NQUVOV els KUKOaw tod deftod Tas thas avayedpmevoe Kat TpLV
a mpoo Barely aUTOUS EKTPEYOUVTLY al oaTrEtpaL Tapa, Katoapos, o ovX, wWaoTep Elw@lEecaV, aKov-Tho Laat Xpwpevoe Tots Vaaois, ovdE peN]pous Tai-OVTES EK XELpos 7 KUnLAS TOV TrohE Lion, adna
TOV Ovpewy eptepevor Kal Ta TpdowTa SUVTLTPO-oKkovTes, UTO Katicapos Sedidarypevor TOUTO TOLELD, érxmifovtos dvopas ov wodXa TroAguoLs oOvdE Tpavpacty OpidyKoras, véous 6€ Kal KOM@VTAS éTt KaXAEL Kal wpa, Hahiara Tas ToLaUTas mryyas uTowerOas Kal pn peveir, Tov é€y T@
TapovTe Kivduvoy apa Kal thy adOts aioyvvnv
SedotxoTas. 6 81 Kal cuvéBaivev' od yap Hvei-XovTo TOV vooay dvapepopevror, ovee erohwav év opOar pots TOV atdnpov Op@VvTes, ANN’ aT EDT pe-povro Kal TWEKANUT. TOVTO herdopevoe TOY Tpoc-oTwY' Kal TéAOS OUTWs TapdEavTas EavTOUS érpuTovTo evyety aloytota, AvpNVapEvoL TO cuuTrav. evdus yap ot pev vevixnKoTes TOvTOUS éxukAOUVTO TOUS TrEfOUS Kal KaTa VwTOU TpoodTi-UTOVTES EXOTTOV.
Iloumyios 6€ ws Kxatetdev amo Gatepou tous

speed, carrying along with him the one hundred and twenty soldiers under his command. But after cutting his way through the first rank, and while he was forging onwards with great slaughter, he was beaten back by the thrust of a sword through his mouth, and the point of the sword actually came out at the back of his neck.} XLV. When the infantry had thus clashed together in the centre and were fighting, Pompey’s cavalry rode proudly up from the wing and deployed their squadrons to envelope the enemy's right; and before they could attack, the cohorts ran out from where Caesar was posted, not hurling their javelins, as usual, nor yet stabbing the thighs and legs of their enemies with them, but aiming them at their eyes and wounding their faces. They had been instructed to do this by Caesar, who expected that men little conversant with wars or wounds, but young, and pluming themselves on their youthful beauty, would dread such wounds especially, and would not stand their ground, fearing not only their present danger, but also their future disfigurement. And this was what actually came to pass; for they could not endure the upward thrust of the javelins, nor did they even venture to look the weapon in the face, but turned their heads away and covered them up to spare their faces. And finally, having thus thrown themselves into confusion, they turned and fled most shamefully, thereby ruining everything. For the conquerors of the horsemen at once encircled the infantry, fell upon their rear, and began to cut them to pieces.

When Pompey, on the other wing, saw his horse-

Cf, the Pompey, Ixxi. 1-3.

immets huyhn aKedacGévtas, ovuxéte vy 6 avTos ovd éuéuvnto Loumrnios ay Madyvos, adr' wrrd Qeod partota Prartopévo THY yoounv éoixas apBoyyos OXETO aTuay ert TKN, Kal xabe-Copevos éxapacoKer TO pedo", axpe ou TpomNs dard Tov ryevopierns em éBawvov 0 TONEMLOL TOU Xadparos Kal StemdovTo ™ pos TOUS purarrovras. TOTE 6é WaTEP €EVvYOUS 'YEVOEVOS, Kal TAUTHY povnv, os haat, dPwvnv adets, ' OvKodv Kal éri THY TapEe"BoANnV; aATredUcaTO meV THY évaywvLoY Kal otpatnyixny écO0ira, devyovte b€ 1wpémovcav petadaBov men Gev. aXX ovtos pey olats bo Tepov XpNg apLevos TUXALS OTWS TE Tapadous EQUTOY TOES Alyumtioss avopaow avnpéOn, dnrov-prev €v TOLS Trepl éxeivou Ypammacw.

XLVI. 'O o€ Kaioap @s é€y 7 Vapakl TOU

Toprniov ‘yevopevos TOUS TE KEL{LEVOUS vexpous
dn TOV ToNeuiwy ede Kal TOUS ETL KTELVOMEVOUS, elev dpa orevagas:  'Tovto €BouvrnOnoay, els TOUTO pe dvayKns vIrnyayovTo, iva Daios Kaioap
0 peyiotous Tohe Lous Kkatopbocas, ef Tponea pny Ta oTpaTevpaTa, KAD KaTedinda On.” TAaUTa ona TIloAAtwv ‘Aaivntos TA pryuata Popaiort pev dvapbeyfac bat TOV Katcapa Tapa TOV TOTE Kalpov, EDAnve Th 0 um’ avtou yeypap bar: TOV
d€ dn ofavovtoy TOUS Tela TOUS oixétas yevér Oat wept THY Kararmy TOU YapaKkos avaipebévras, TTpPATLOTAS d€ p41) WAELoUS eLaxiaXihov TECELW.
TO d€ Corto ddovT@v KaTéwsEe TOUS TELTTOUS
o Kaicap eis ta TaypaTa* ToANois dé Kal TOY em upavav adecav EOWKED, ov Kal Bpodros 7 AY Oo KTéivas avTOV UaTEpor, ep @ A€yEeTaL [1 hatvo-552

73)

CAESAR, Xv. 4-X.vI. 2

men scattered in flight, he was no longer the same man, nor remembered that he was Pompey the Great, but more like one whom Heaven has robbed of his wits than anything else, he went off without a word to his tent, sat down there, and awaited what was to come, until his forces were all routed and the enemy were assailing his ramparts and fighting with their defenders. ‘Then he came to his senses, as it were, and with this one ejaculation, as they say, “ What, even to my quarters?” took off his fighting and general’s dress, put on one suitable for a fugitive, and stole away. What his subsequent fortunes were, and how he delivered himself into the hands of the Egyptians and was murdered, I shall tell in his Life.}

XLVI. But Caesar, when he reached Pompey’s ramparts and saw those of the enemy who were already lying dead there and those who were still falling, said with a groan: “ They would have it so; they brought me to such a pass that if I, Caius Caesar, after waging successfully the greatest wars, had dismissed my forces, I should have been con- demned in their courts.” 2 Asinius Pollio says that these words, which Caesar afterwards wrote down in Greek, were uttered by him in Latin at the time; he also says that most of the slain were servants who were killed at the taking of the camp, and that not more than six thousand soldiers fell. Most of those who were taken alive Caesar incorporated in his legions, and to many men of prominence he granted immunity. One of these was Brutus, who afterwards slew him. Caesar was distressed, we are told, when

1 Chapters Ixxvii.—-]xxx.

? Hoe voluerunt; tantis rebus gestis Gaius Caesar con-demnatus essem, nisi ab exercitu auxilium petissem (Suetonius, Div. Jul. 30).

553

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pEvep per ayoudcal, owfévtos b€ Kal Tapayeor-Jévou 1 p0S oa noOnvar dtadepovTas.
PVE Snpetoov 6 TONA@Y _Yevopeveov THS viens eTLPAaverTATOV ioTopetrat TO mepl TpanrrXets.
év yap ‘Ep@ Nixns dvdpras. elo THKEL Kaicapos, Kal TO TEpL AUT@ Kwpiov avo TE oTepeov puces
Kat NiO w oednpo KATEOT PWMEVOV Dv avedev ex TOUTOU Aéyovow avarethat HoiviKa Tapa THY Baow Tov avdpidvTos. eV be HaraBie Tdios
K opyn Atos, avip evdOKLLOS em pavteKh, ArBiov TOU Tvyypapews TOTS Kal YrewpLpos, éruyxavev én olwvols Ka 1) LEVOS éxetvny THY nyepav. Kal
7 POT OV pe, WS AiBros oyoe, TOV KaLpov eyo TIS Haxns, Kal ™ pos TOUS TapovTas elev ore Kab 6
TEpaiveTat TO XpHpea Kat ouviact els épyov ou avdpes. avis dé T pos TH Gea YeVvOMEVOS Kal TA onueta KaTLb@v dvnhato HET ’ évOovarac pod Boav, “Nixds, @ Kaicap.” €xT LaYEVTOY b€ TOV
TAPATUXOVT@Y TEPLEA@V TOV orepavov aTO THS
Kepanrijs EVO HLOTOS edn py Tp emOjoec Gar Tarw i TH TéEXYN papTUpijcaL TO Epyov. TavTa pev ovv o AiBtos ot Tas yevéoOar kataBeBatovTat.
XLVIIT. Katcap d6€ tO Ocettarav Over tiv ehevOeptav avadets vexentypeov édimxe Loumpiov:
ayrdapevos 6€ THS ‘Actas Kyidtovs te OcomouTr@
TO cuvayayovTe TOUS podous Xapilopevos nrev-Bbépwce, Kal maot tots tiv Actay Katotkovat
TO TplTov Tov popwy avikev. es bé ’AreEavdperav emt Hopmarnio TeOvnKOTe KaTaydets Oeo-SoTOV pev ameaTpady tv Llopaniou Keparny mpochépovta, THvy O€ odpayida SeEdpevos tod §54

CAESAR, xvi. 2-XxXLvmt. 2

Brutus was not to be found, but when he was brought into his presence safe and sound, was pleased beyond measure.
XLVII. There were many portents of the vic- tory, but the most remarkable one on record is that which was seen at Tralles. In that city’s temple of Victory there stood a statue of Caesar, and the ground around it was itself naturally firm, and was paved with hard stone; yet from this it is said that a palm-tree shot up at the base of the statue.! More- over, at Patavium, Caius Cornelius, a man in repute as a seer, a fellow citizen and acquaintance of Livy the historian, chanced that day to be sitting in the place of augury. And to begin with, according to Livy, he discerned the time of the battle, and said to those present that even then the event was in progress and the men were going into action. And when he looked again and observed the signs, he sprang up in a rapture crying : “ Thou art victorious, O Caesar!”’ The bystanders being amazed, he took the chaplet from his head and declared with an oath that he would not put it on again until the event had borne witness to his art. At any rate, Livy insists that this was so.?

XLVIII. Caesar gave the Thessalians their free- dom, to commemorate his victory, and then pursued Pompey ; when he reached Asia he made the Cnidians also free, to please Theopompus the collector of fables, and for all the inhabitants of Asia remitted a third of their taxes. Arriving at Alexandria just after Pompey’s death, he turned away in horror from Theodotus as he presented the head of Pompey, but he accepted Pompey’s seal-ring, and shed tears over 1 Cf. Caesar B.C, tii 105 ad fin.

2 In Bock exi, which is lost.
S50

€e3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

’ \ LA o¢ \ a e a, 5) A avdpos KaTedaKkpucev’ Ocot b€ THY ETAIPwWY aUTOD
4 \ (/ e
Kal cuvnOwv TAAV@MEVOL KATA THY Ywpav éaArO-
A / /
Keoav UTO TOV BaclrXéws, TavTas EvEpyeTNGE Kal
(a) \ ‘4 > e / wv
TpoanyayeTo. Tots d€ dirs eis Paopny éypadev
a / >) , al ,
OTL THS VikKnS aToNavot ToUTO péytoToV Kal
¢ % , ‘ \ aA 4
HOtaeTOY, TO TOWLE TLVAS dEl TOV TETTONEMNKOTWY TONT@OY AUTO.
rqx\ , 4 \ A Tov d€ avto@t morXepov ot péy ovK avayKaioy,
f A
arr’ épwtt KrXeovdtpas ddoEov abt@ Kal Kxivdv-
, / , e \ \ \
yoon yevécOar Néyouvcty, of 6€ Tos BactrLKOvS
“A \ A /
alTt@vTal, Kal padtoTta Tov evvovyov IloMecvo»,
e \ oy \

Os wWAelaTov duvdpevos Kai Lloumniov pev avn-4 \ pnkws évayyos, éxkBeBrAnxas 6é€ Kreoratpar,
¢ \ > 7 a) , \ XN a 4
Kpupa pev étreBovreve T@ Katicapt: cai dia totTo ‘ > , f la act avutov apEdpevoy Extote StavuxTepevey ev a A lal lal , aA
Tols TWOTOLS EveKa PvraKhs TOV cwomaTos’ Parepas \ ? > ’ \ ar, \ \ \
dé ove Hv avextos éTipOova mora Kal Tpos
ef > \ bat / dA \ if vBpw es tov Katcapa Aéeywv Kal TWpdTT@v.
\ \ Z f
TOUS MEV YAP OTPATLWTAS TOV KUKLOTOY LETPOULE-
4 a /
VOUS Kal TaNaLoTAaTOY aiToY éxédevoeEV avexer Oat
\ f > U \ > 4 ‘\ \ \
Kat oTépyev, €oOtavtas Ta AAXOTPLA, Tpos 5é TA
al ? “A A
deirva axeverty éypnto Evdrivois Kai KEepapeots,
\ A \ > A ’ id
WS TA Xpuca Kai apyupa Tauvta Kataapos éxyovtos
4 , f \ e a
elg TL Ypéos. @petle yap o Tod BactdevorTos
, \ / / ,
Tote matnp Kaicape xXtdtas Ertakocias TevTn-
, \ / a a
KOVTa pupiisas, @Y Tas pev adAaS aVKE Tots
‘) a , e i \
Taw avtov mpotepov 0 Kaicap, tas b€ xtrias
1 Cf. the Pompey, Ixxx. 5.
* See the Pompey, Ixxvii. 2.
556

731

CAESAR, xivin. 2-4

it! Moreover, all the companions and intimates of Pompey who had been captured by the king as they wandered over the country, he treated with kindness and attached them to himself. And to his friends in Rome he wrote that this was the greatest and sweetest pleasure that he derived from his victory, namely, from time to time to save the lives of fellow citizens who had fought against him.

As for the war in Egypt, some say that it was not necessary, but due to Caesar's passion for Cleopatra, and that it was inglorious and full of peril for him. But others blame the king's party for it, and especially the eunuch Potheinus, who had most influence at court," and had recently killed Pompey; he had also driven Cleopatra from the country, and was now secretly plotting against Caesar. On this account they say that from this time on Caesar passed whole nights at drinking parties in order to protect himself. But in his open acts also Potheinus was unbearable, since he said and did many things that were invidious and insulting to Caesar. For instance, when the soldiers had the oldest and worst grain measured out to them, he bade them put up with it and be content, since they were eating what belonged to others ; and at the state suppers he used wooden and earthen dishes, on the ground that Caesar had taken all the gold and silver ware in payment of a debt. For the father of the present king owed Caesar seventeen million five hundred thousand drachmas,? of which Caesar had formerly remitted a part to his children, but now demanded payment of ten millions for the

* During Caesar's consulship (59 B.c.) Ptolemy Auletes was declared a friend and ally of the Romans. To secure this honour he both gave and promised money to the state.

9)

nEiov TOTE AaBov dad peyrar TO oTpatevpa. TOD 6é Todenvod viv pév adtov amtévat kcal tov
peydrwy execGat TpayuaTw@V KENEVOVTOS, VaTEPOV
d€ KoptetaoGat peta Xa plros, ELTOV WS Atyurtioy eXaXLoTa d€ouTo cvpBovruv, pupa Thy Kyeo-TATPAV ATO THS xXoOpas METETELLTFETO.
XLIX. Kaxeivy TaparaPotoa TOV giro
'AtrohhoOwpov TOV DeKcehorny eovov, Ls aKaTvov
pixpov éuBadca Tots pev Bacirelors mpocéaxer
On cuaKoTavovTos: amropou bé Tov NaGety dvTOS ArAAWS, 1) pev Els OTPwWLATOSETpOY évdvaAa TPpoO-TelveL pakpay éauTry, 0 b€ "AtroNdOSwpos imavTe
guVOnaas TOV oTPwMaTOoET MOV EicKopiter Sta Oupav mpos Tov Kaicapa. Kal TovT@ TE POT eyeTal TO TeXVipaTe THS KrEeotaTpas ad@var, ANapupas daveians, Kab THS aAANS OmtAtas Kai yapiTos HTTwv yevouevos dtaddraEat mpos Tov
aderhov ws avpBaciievcovoav. émetta 6 év
Tais dtadrayals éotiwpévev atravTov otKkérns Kaicapos xoupevs, da Setdiav, 4 wavtas avOpomous umepéBanrev, ovdev éov aveEéTaaTOV, GAN'

@TAKOVGTOV Kal ToAVTpPAayLOVaY, auVAKEY éT-Bovr\nv Kaicapte mpattopévnv vm’ ’AyiAda TOD aotpatnyov Kal LoGewvov tov ebvovyov. dwpdaaas
b¢ 0 Kaicap Ppoupay jeev TEPLETTIOE TO avd pave, TOV Ge Ilo@ecvov aveirev: o 5é AXOMAGs guyav
els TO OTPATOTESOY Tepiia THT avT@ Bapov Kal
dvopeTaxei pla Tov TONEMOD, duyoord TOTavTHY GLUVOMEV@ TOA Kai SUVamuLY. év ® ™p@Tov pep exwwouvevoev VOaTOS atrokAEtabels? ai yap Sopuyes aTrw@xodopnOnaarv bro TOV TodEpiov: Sev-TEpOV O€ TEPLKOTTTOMEVOS TOV aTOAOY 7vayKddby 558

CAESAR, xtvii. 5—x1tx. 3

support of his army. When, however, Potheinus bade him go away now and attend to his great affairs, assuring him that later he would get his money with thanks, Caesar replied that he had no need whatever of Egyptians as advisers, and secretly sent for Cleopatra from the country.

XLIX. So Cleopatra, taking only Apollodorus the Sicilian from among her friends, embarked in a little skiff and landed at the palace when it was already getting dark; and as it was impossible to escape notice otherwise, she stretched herself at full length inside a bed-sack, while Apollodorus tied the bed-sack up with a cord and carried it indoors to Caesar. It was by this device of Cleopatra's, it is said, that Caesar was first captivated, for she showed herself to be a bold coquette, and succumbing to the charm of further intercourse with her, he reconciled her to her brother on the basis of a joint share with him in the royal power. Then, as everybody was feasting to cele- brate the reconciliation, a slave of Caesar’s, his barber, who left nothing unscrutinized, owing to a timidity in which he had no equal, but kept his ears open and was here, there, and everywhere, perceived that Achillas the general and Potheinus the eunuch were hatching a plot against Caesar. After Caesar had found them out, he seta guard about the banqueting- hall, and put Potheinus to death; Achillas, however, escaped to his camp, and raised about Caesar a war grievous and difficult for one who was defending him- self with so few followers against so large a city and army. In this war, to begin with, Caesar encountered the peril of being shut off from water, since the canals were dammed up by the enemy; in the second place, when the enemy tried to cut off his fleet, he

559

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Sea TupOs atwaacbat Tov Kivduvor, O Kat THY peeyadnv BrBrLoOnKnv eK TOV vewptov émLvepo-[LevOV Osed Dexpee TpiTov O€ Tepl TH Papo paxns
FUVETTHTNS KateTrOno yey aro TOU XOLATOS
Eig aKxatlov Kal tapeBonbex Tots aywvitopevoes, em LT MEOVTOV 6é Todhaxobev aAUT@ TOV Atyuttion pirpas éavTov els (THY Oadacoav ameviEato ports Kal Nahe ws. OTE Kat N€yEeTAaL BiBr«eva KpaT@v

TONNG pn mpoeabar Bardopevos Kal Barrefopevos, GAN avexXov ump THS Oaracons Ta BiBrtdca TH ETEpA xeupl vr xeo Bau TO O€ dear Lov evdus éBv0ic8n. Téhos 6€, tov Bactrtéws 7 pos TOUS qToAeulovs amoywpioavtos, émedOoyv Kak
cuvawas PAXNY EVLKNTE, TOAXOY TETOVTWV AUTOD Te TOD Bactréws adavovs yevouévov. KaTadtTov dé THY KXeomdtpav Bacthevovoay Aiyurrou Kal pixpov VaTepov €E avTov Texovoay viov, Ov “Ae Eavdpeis Karcapiwva tpoonyopevoy, Opunoev ert Supias.
L. Kaxetdev ériwy thy “Aciav éruvOaveto Aopitioy pev vo Papvdxou Tov MiOpidatov tmasos WTTHMLEVOV EK Ilovrov mepevyevae oov odious, Dapvaxny 6€ TH vin PW [LEVOV aTrAHT TOS Kab Bed uviav éeNovTa kal Kammaboxiay “A pHevias epier Oar THIS pixpas KadXoupévyns, Kal TavTas avior ava TOUS TaUTN Barrels Kal TeTPapXas. evOvs oy éml Tov dvdpa T pov Nauve Tay Lact, Kal Tept TOA Lipav paxnr peyarny cuvaas
avtov pev €&€Bare tov Ilévtov hevyovta, tHv dé 1JIn the Museum, founded by the first Ptolemy (ob.
283 B.c.). The destruction of the library can have been only partial.
560

CAESAR, xix. 3-L. 2

was forced to repel the danger by using fire, and this spread from the dockyards and destroyed the great library; and thirdly, when a battle arose at Pharos,? he sprang from the mole into a small boat and tried to go to the aid of his men in their struggle, but the Egyptians sailed up against him from every side, so that he threw himself into the sea and with great difficulty escaped by swimming. At this time, too, it is said that he was holding many papers in his hand and would not let them go, though missiles were fly- ing at him and he was immersed in the sea, but held them above water with one hand and swam with the other ; his little boat had been sunk at the outset.3 But finally, after the king had gone away to the enemy, he marched against him and conquered him in a battle where many fell and the king himself disappeared. Then, leaving Cleopatra on the throne of Egypt (a little later she had a son by him whom the Alexandrians called Caesarion), he set out for Syria.

L. On leaving that country and traversing Asia,‘ he learned that Domitius had been defeated by Pharnaces the son of Mithridates and had fled from Pontus with a few followers; also that Pharnaces, using his victory without stint, and occupying Bi- thynia and Cappadocia, was aiming to secure the country called

Lesser Armenia, and was rousing to revolt all the princes and tetrarchs there. At once, therefore, Caesar marched against him with three legions, fought a great battle with him near the city of Zela, drove him in flight out of Pontus, and

2 An island off Alexandria, connected with the mainland by a mole, or causeway, which divided the harbour into two parts.

3 Cf. Dio Cassius, xlii. 40. 4 In July of 47 B.o.
561

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

oTpaTlav aponv aveine. Kal TS pays TAUTNS
THY o€UTNTa Kal TO TAXOS avayyéAXwv ets 'Paopeny TpOs nee Tav dtAwy Apavtioy eypave TPELS reEas " "HA Gor, eloov, évixnaa." 'Popaiatt 6€ ai NéEEts Els Opoloy ATONHYyovcaL OXIA PLATS
ovx amiOavoy tiv Bpaxvroytav Exovowy.
LI. 'Ex rovrov dsaBarov ets Itadiav avéBatvey els 'Pony, TOU pev éviauTou KATATTPEPOVTOS els Ov hpnto OLR TATOP TO devTEpon, ovdemore THS cpxfs. eKELv/S TPOTEpov eviauvatov ryevoperns" Ets dé TOUT LOD bTatos amredety On. Kal KAKOS Tycov-GEV OTL TOV TTPATLWT@Y OTacLacavTwY Kal dvO
oTpaTnyiKous avopas avedovtwyv, Kooxwviov Kai TarBav, éretinoe pev avtois tocovtToy ocov
aVvTL OTPATLWTOV TOAITAS TpoTayopEvaal, YLALAS
dé dréverpev Exdotw Spaypas Kal yxwpav THs "ITa-Alas aTEeKAHpwWoE TOAAHV. AV € avTOD dtaBory cat» AodoBérAXa pavia Kai 7 "Auavtiov didap-yupla xal pedumv 'Avt@vios kai Kopdivios tiv Tlouaniov cKxevwpovpevos oikiav Kal petotKoco-U@V WS LKaVnV OUK OVGAY. éTL TOUTOLS yap éduvC-dopouv "Pwpyata. Kaicap 6€ da thv vrodeow THS TOALTELAS OVK AyvowV OVE BovrAOLEVOS NYAY-xaleto ypnoGat Tols UTroupyover.
LIT. Tay dé rept Katova Kal LKntiwva peta
THY év Dapoare pax ets AtBuny puyovtoy KaKel, TOU Bactréws "loBa BonGodvros avrois, nO potxoTa@y Ovvdapets aEtorNOyouS, eyvw oTpAaTEvELY
0 Kaicap én' avtovs: Kai Tept TpoTras Yetpepivas
1 Veni, vidi, vici. According to Suetonius (Div. Jul. 37), the words were displayed in Caesar'a Pontic triumph.

annihilated his army. In atuouncing the swiftness and fierceness of this battle to one of his friends at Rome, Amantius, Caesar wrote three words : “ Came, saw, conquered.” ! In Latin, however, the words have the same inflectional ending, and so a brevity whieh is most impressive.

LI. After this, he crossed to Italy and went up to Rome, at the close of the year for which he had a second time been chosen dictator,” though that office had never before been for a whole year ; then for the following year he was proclaimed consul. Men spoke ill of him because, after his soldiers had mutinied and killed two men of praetorian rank, Galba and Cosco- nius, he censured them only so far as to eall them “citizens” when he addressed them, instead of “ soldiers,’ and then gave each man a thousand drachmas and much allotted land in Italy. He was also calumniated for the madness of Dolabella, the greed of Amantius, the drunkenness of Antony, and for the fact that Corfinius built over and refurnished the house of Pompey on the ground that it was not good enough for him. For at all these things the Romans were displeased. But owing to the political situation, though Caesar was not ignorant of these things and did not like them, he was compelled to make use of such assistanits.

LH. After the battle at Pharsalus, Cato and Scipio made their escape to Africa, and there, with the aid of King Juba, collected considerable forees. Caesar therefore resolved to make an expedition against them. So, about the time of the winter solstice, he

2 The senate named Caesar Dictator for the year 47 immediately after the battle at Pharsalus,

* Cf. Appian, B.C. ii. 93.

diaBas ets LuxeMiay, Kab Bovdopevos evOus arro- Kowar TOV mept aQuTOV yyeHoveoy anacav éTia peddrjoews Kal drat puis, emt TOU KNUC UATOS émn&e THv éavTov a KYIV" Kal yevopevov TVEU- patos euBas avixOn meta TpLaxX iho meCav Kal im éwy orion. am oBuBacas o€ ToUTOUS NaAbwy avnyOn TaN, umép THs petCovos Oppwocer ouvd- pews” Kal Kara Odratray ovaw 1)0n TpoTTUY@V KaTHYyayev AravTas els TO OTPATOTEOLY.

Tuvavopevos dé XPT HP TeYe mTararo Oappetv
TOUS Tohepious, WS TPITHKOV aél TO Srey eebveov yéver Kpatety ev AtBun, YaNETOV ELTELY ELTE prav-pitov év Travia Tut TOV Laymiova oTparnyouvTa TOV Tronepicon, ere Kal oroven TOV OLWVOV OiKELOv-HEvOS, Hv yap Kal Tap avT@ TLS avO pwrros addws jev evKaTappovntos Kab Trapnuednpevos, olKLas
d€ THS "Adpicavav (Racymteov exareiTo Lanhou-otiwy), ToUTOV ev Tals payats TpoeTATTEY MaTEP HyEeLova THS TTpATLAS, crayKalomevos TOANAKIS
éFamtecOat TOV ToAEpioy Kai hiroupayelv. Av yap oUTE otToS Tots avopac apbovos OUTE UTTO-Curious YINOS, GNAG Spvors nvaryKatovTo Garar-TLOLS, aroThubetans THS arpupioos, omvyny dy pa-orl Oot ep ove pa TA paperyVUVvTEs eTWMyElv TOUS immous. ol yap Nopades errupatvopevor TOROL
Kal Taxels EXAOTOTE KaTeixov THY Xw@pav' Kab
TOTE TOV Katoapos immeov TYOANY ayovT@V (érvyxe yap avTois avnp AiBus ET LOELKYUMEVOS opxnaw apa Kat poovauray Oavpatos altos, ot € TEPTFOLLEVOL Kab hvro Tois tatol tous immous éTt-TpewavTes), eEaidvns mepehOovres eu Baddovat
Ol TONEMLOL, KAL TOUS péev AVTOU KTELVOVOL, TOLS OE 504

CAESAR, ul. 1-5

crossed into Sicily, and wishing to cut off at once in the minds of his officers all hope of delaying there and wasting time, he pitched his own tent on the sea-beach. When a favouring wind arose, he em- barked and put to sea with three thousand infantry and a few horsemen. Then, after landing these un- observed, he put to sea again, being full of fears for the larger part of his force, and meeting them after they were already at sea, he conducted all into camp.

On learning that the enemy were emboldened by an ancient oracle to the effect that it was always the prerogative of the family of the Scipios to conquer in Africa, he either flouted in pleasantry the Scipio who commanded the enemy, or else tried in good earnest to appropriate to himself the omen, it is hard to say which. He had under him, namely, a man who otherwise was a contemptible nobody, but belonged to the family of the Africani, and was called Scipio Sallustio. This man Caesar put in the forefront of his battles as if commander of the army, being com- pelled to attack the enemy frequently and to force the fighting. For there was neither sufficient food for his men nor fodder for his beasts of burden, nay, they were forced to feed their horses on sea-weed, which they washed free of its salt and mixed with a little grass to sweeten it. For the Numidians showed themselves everywhere in great numbers and speedy, and controlled the country. Indeed, while Caesar's horsemen were once off duty (a Libyan was showing them how he could dance and play the flute at the same time in an astonishing manner, and they had committed their horses to the slaves and were sitting delighted on the ground), the enemy suddenly sur- rounded and attacked them, killed some of them,

VOL. Vit. T 56 5

6

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

€ig TO oTpatoTredoy mpotpoTadny éAavvopévols OUVELGETTETOV. EL OE 1) Kaisap avtos, Gpua dé Kaioape Todrtov "Agivytos Bonoivres ex TOD
Yapakos Eaxov THY guy, Sewer part av 0 To0-NELOS. éore & 6Te kal nal” érépay paynv émheovéxTng ay ot TOA EMLOL CULTNOKNS yevoperns, év
7 Katcap TOV detopopov pevyovTa ever at Kata
TX OY ek Tob avxEvOS dvactpeyat Kal evTrety ‘Evravéa elaty ot mrodéptot.”
IDOE Tovrors MEVTOL TOUS T poTEprpacty émnpOn
Lent leov pan K pO far Kal KaTaNT@Y Ywpis pev ‘A gpavior, Xo pis dé ‘ToBav be Odyou [oT pato-medevovTas, avros érerxelev U vITreép Mipyns epupa. TO oTpatoT Edw mepl TOMY Odyov, w@s ein Taotv érri THY paxny OpENTNpLOV Kal Katagpuyy. TroVvovpévw O€ AVT@ TEpL TAUTA Kaicap rwdets ToTous Kal mpoo Boras appagtovs éyovtas apnyave ta-yer SteAO@y tovs pev exuKdovTO, TOls Sé mpoce-Barre Kata oTopa. TpeYrd pevos oe TOUTOUS EXPHTO TO KaLp@ Kal TH pupn THs TuXNS, UP Ss
avToBoet pev pet to ‘Adpaviou oT patomesov, avtoBoel dé dhevyovtos ‘loBa Steopber TO TOV Nopddov: auépas 56 mas pepe HLKP@ T pPL@v oT patoT ew@y eyKparis YEyoves Kat TEVTAKLG [LUpious TOV TOAELioY avNpHKwWS OvdSe TeEVTHKOVTA Tov tdiwy aTéBanrev.
Or pév tadra TeEpi THs HaXNS exeivns avayyérovat: ot O€ ov pact aurov éy 7@ épyo yever Oat, TUVTATTOVTOS O€ THY oTpaTiay Kal Siaxocpodvros
awacbat to ctvnbes voonpa* Tov dé evOds aico-EVO ApXomevov, mpiy extapaTtTecGat Kal KaTa-566

733

CAESAR, Li. 6-Linn. 3

and followed hard upon the heels of the rest as they were driven headlong into camp. And if Caesar himself, and with him Asinius Pollio, had not come from the ramparts to their aid and checked their flight, the war would have been at an end. On one occasion, too, in another battle, the enemy got the advantage in the encounter, and here it is said that Caesar seized by the neck the fugitive standard-bearer, faced him about, and said: " Yonder is the enemy."

LIII. However, Scipio was encouraged by these advantages to hazard a decisive battle: so, leaving Afranius and Juba encamped separately at a short distance apart, he himself began fortifying a camp beyond a lake near the city of Thapsus, that it might serve the whole army asa place from which to sally out to the battle, and as a place of refuge. But while he was busy with this project, Caesar made his way with inconceivable speed through woody regions which afforded unknown access to the spot, outflanked some of the enemy, and attacked others in front. Then, after routing these, he took advantage of the favour- able instant and of the impetus of fortune, and there- by captured the camp of Afranius at the first onset, and at the first onset sacked the camp of the Numid- ians, from which Juba fled. Thus in a brief portion of one day he made himself master of three camps and slew fifty thousand of the enemy, without losing as many as fifty of his own men.}

This is the account which some give of the battle ; others, however, say that Caesar himself was not in the action, but that, as he was marshalling and array- ing his army, his usual sickness laid hold of him, and he, at once aware that it was beginning, before his

1 In April of 46 B.o.

AapBavecOat Tavtadnacww vTO Tov wabovs THY ais Onow non oeLomerny, els Tiva TOV ™Ano tov Tupyav Koja O vat Kab Siaryaryely ép novxta.
Tov oé mepevryoTov ék THS. paxns UTATLK@Y Kal OTPATHYLKGY avdpav OL pep eau Tous drepOerpar ado Kopevot, auxvors 6é Kaicap éxrecvev andovtas.
lerve Katwva dé NaBetv favre pirortpovperos
éo Tevoe 7 pos 'Irunny exelvny yap Tapapudar-TOV THY mOALY ou HETETXE TOV AYOVOS. mu Gopevos
Sé ws éauTop 0 aVvnp Olepyacai7o, dios peev HY
dnyeis, eb & dé adyov. elie 8 oop: ed
Katov, PO ovis GOL TOU Oavarou: Kal yap ov pol
TIS corn pias epOornaas." O Mev OUY pEeTa TAUTA ypageis vt avTov mpos Katwva teOvedta Novos ov Soxet T Paws EXovTos ovde EVOLANAGKTOS onpetov etvat. TOS yep av épetoato CavTos els avaic@nrov exXéas opyny TOT AUT NY; Th dé mpos Kixépova Ka Bpovrov auTov kal puplous adrous

TOV TETOREMNKOTOY émerketa TexMaLpovTat Kai
TaV oor éxetvov ovK é& ameyOelas, aXra prro-Tima TOALTLKN ouvreTax ar dua TOLAUT HY aitiav.
éyparpe Kixépwv eryKe@opcov Kadtovos, Ovopa TO Aoy@ Oépevos Kdteva- Kat Toots 0 NOxos mp
Ota oroudis, as elxoS, UTO TOU SetvoTatov T@V PNTOPwV Ets THY KaXN OTH TET OLNLEVOS v7 o0e-ou. TOUTO jvia Kaicapa, kat nyopiay auTOU vouitovta Tov Tov TeOyynKoTos Ov avTov erratvoy.
éypawev ovv ToAXAus Tivas Kata Tov Katwvos aitias cuvayayov: To 6€ BiBXtov *Avrixatwv eT UyeypaTrTaL. Kal oTovoaaTas éyer TOV NOYov éxatepos 61a Kaicapa cal Katwva trodxXous.
568

CAESAR, tit. 3-Liv. 3

already wavering senses were altogether confounded and overpowered by the malady, was carried to a neighbouring tower, where he stayed quietly during the battle. Of the men of consular and praetorial rank who escaped from the battle, some slew them- selves at the moment of their capture, and others were put to death by Caesar after capture.

LIV. Being eager to take Cato alive, Caesar hastened towards Utica, for Cato was guarding that city, and took no part in the battle. But he learned that Cato had made away with himself,! and he was clearly annoyed, though for what reason is uncertain. At any rate, he said: “Cato, I begrudge thee thy death ; for thou didst begrudge me the preservation of thy life.” Now, the treatise which Caesar after- wards wrote against Cato when he was dead, does not seem to prove that he was in a gentle or reconcil- able mood. For how could he have spared Cato alive, when he poured out against him after death so great acup of wrath? And yet from his considerate treat- ment of Cicero and Brutus and thousands more who had fought against him, it is inferred that even this treatise was not composed out of hatred, but from political ambition, for reasons which follow. Cicero had written an encomium on Cato which he entitled “Cato”; and the discourse was eagerly read by many, as was natural, since it was composed by the ablest of orators on the noblest of themes. This annoyed Caesar, who thought that Cicero’s praise of the dead Cato was a denunciation of Caesar himself. Accordingly, he wrote a treatise in which he got to- gether countless charges against Cato ; and the work is entitled “ Anti-Cato.” Both treatises have many eager readers, as well on account of Caesar as of Cato.

1 See the Cato Minor Ixv.
569
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

LV. 'AXAa yap os emavirder els ‘Pwunv aro

, al \ e a AtBuns, mp@tov péev vTép THS viens eweyadn-yopnoe mpos Tov Onmov, @S TOTAaVTHY KEXELpo-Ul / o >
pEevos Ywopay oon TwapéEes Kad ExacToy éeviavTov
Els TO OnooLov GiTtou pev elxoat puptadas AtTe-KOV pedtuvov, €EXaiov Sé ALTp@V pupLadas TpLAa-Kooias. émetta OptauBovs Katyyaye tov Atyu-J \ , \ , b) b) NX

mtiaxov, tov Lovtixoy, tov AtBuKov, ovK ao
f A a XKynriwvos, GAN aro “loBa d4Oev tod Baciréws.

/ id a tote Kat “loBas vios Ov éxeivov Komton vijtreos ev
TO Q@ L is B 4 a , ir \ aN » OptauBo TapyyOn, paxaptwTtdTnv arovs dro-

, ¢ a

aw, €x BapBapov Kat Nopuados “EXAnvev ois
/
Totupabertatos evapiOusos yevéoOar ovyypa-

A \ \ \
dedor. peta b€ Tovs OptduRous otpati@tats TE é \ 2Q/ \ N A ? f
peyaras Swpeas edidov Kal Tov Shyov averap-
e 4 7
Bavev éotiacect Kal Oéass, éotuioas pev év dic-
/ / / a peuplows Kat dtoxXtALoLs TPLKALVOLS OmovU avuTAV-lé u a
Tas, Géas 5é Kai povopayer Kai vavpayev avdpav Tapacyov éni tH Ovyatpt ‘lovAia wddat Te-Ovewon.
Mera 6€ tas Oéas yevouévor Timnoewy avTt TOY
mpotépwy dvety Kal TpiadxovTa pupiddwr éEnta-cOyoav at macat TevtTeKaidexa. THALKAUTHY 7 Taos aTeipyaoato caupdopav Kal TocodToy
3 ? A f A v , , aTAaVaXwWaE TOV Onpouv pépos, Ew Aovyou TLPEpE-

, ’
yous Ta KaTagYoVTA THY adAnV ‘ITadiay atvy71)- pata Kal Tas émapxias.
LVI. Suvrerecbévtwy 6€ tovtwy Uratos azo-

\ / 3 ed /
SecyGeis To TéETaptov ets IBnpiav éotparsvoer
o72

CAESAR, Lv. 1-LvI. 1

LV. But to resume, when Caesar came back to Rome from Africa, to begin with, he made a boastful speech to the people concerning his victory, assert- ing that he had subdued a country large enough to furnish annually for the public treasury two hundred thousand Attic bushels of grain, and three million pounds of olive oil. Next, he celebrated triumphs, an Egyptian, a Pontic, and an African, the last not for his victory over Scipio, but ostensibly over Juba the king. On this occasion, too, Juba, a son of the king, a mere infant, was carried along in the triumphal procession, the most fortunate captive ever taken, since from being a Barbarian and a Numidian, he came to be enrolled among the most learned historians of Hellas. After the triumphs, Caesar gave his soldiers large giits and entertained the people with banquets and spectacles, feasting them all at one time on twenty thousand dining-couches, and furnishing spectacles of gladiatorial and naval combats in honour of his daughter Julia, long since dead.

After the spectacles, a census of the people was taken,! and instead of the three hundred and twenty thousand of the preceding lists there were enrolled only one hundred and fifty thousand. So great was the calamity which the civil wars had wrought, and so large a portion of the people of Rome had they consumed away, to say nothing of the misfortunes that possessed the rest of Italy and the provinces.

LVI. After these matters had been finished and he had been declared consul for the fourth time, Caesar made an expedition into Spain against the 1 According to Suetonius (Div. Jul. 41), this was not a census of all the people, but a revision of the number of poorer citizens entitled to receive allowances of grain from the state.

571

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

€mri TOUS Toparniou qjatoas, véous pev ovtas €Tt, Pavpactny 6€ TO TAHOE oTpariay cuvethoxoTas
Kal TOhpay drroderxvupévous dF 10x pewv T pos mye poviay, WOTE Kivouvov TO Kaicape TEpla Tia at TOV Ea xXatov. n 0€ peyarn ayn mept Trodw
TUveTTD Mobvéar, ev 7 Katcap exOtBopevous

Op@Vv TOUS eavTov Kal KAKOS avTévovTas éBoa, dia TOV OTAwY Kal TOV TaEEwY EtaGewy, Et uNndev
aidodvrar NaBovres autor eyxerpiaar Tots maibaplots. joes be mpobupig. TOXT TOUS Torepious WO ApLEVOS exelvov Bev UTEP Tpiapuptous O1€- pepe, TOV 6¢ auToU XtrLous aTwhere TOUS dpi-OTOUS. am Lay 6é pera THY pany Tos TOUS pidous ELTEV WS TONKS pev aryoviaLto mept ViKNS; vov o€ 7 T™p@Tov Tept Wnts. TAavTNY THY paxny evixnae 7H Tov Atovuciwy €0pTh, Kal spy AéyeTat Kal Top nios Maryvos €ml TOV TONE [OV éferGetv: Sta pécov € Xpovos evLauT OV Tego apov
dun dOe. tay dé Lloumniov maidwr o pev VE@TEPOS Suehuye, ToD Sé TpeaBuTépov peP Huépas drgLyaS Acidios aviveyKe THY KEeparrp.
Todtov €xyatov Kaioap émwoXeunoe Tov Trode-pov' o 6€ am avtod Kataybeis OpiauBos ws ovdev AAO ‘Pwpaiovs nviacev. ov yap adrodv-ous rrye“ovas ovdé BapRdpovs Bactrels xatn-rYy@VLO LEVOP, avd pos dé “Popatoy Kpatia Tov TU-xaes KeXpnwevov Tatoas Kal ryévos dpénv avnpn-Kora. Tats TAS TaTpLoos eT UTOpT EVEL cupdopais ov HarOS eLyev, dyaXdopevov él TOUTOLS GV pia Kal T pos Oeovs Kal 7p0S avOpa@rrous amonoyia TO per avayKns mTempay ban, Kal TavTa 7 pOTEpov LTE ayyerov pte ypaypata Onpocta wéuWartTa 572

734

CAESAR, tvi. 1-4

sons of Pompey. These were still young, but had collected an army of amazing numbers and displayed a boldness which justified their claims to leadership, so that they beset Caesar with the greatest peril. The great battle was joined near the city of Munda, and here Caesar, seeing his own men hard pressed and making a feeble resistance, asked in a loud voice as he ran through the armed ranks whether they felt no shame to take him and put him in the hands of those boys. With difficulty and after much strenuous effort he repulsed the enemy and slew over thirty thousand of them, but he lost one thousand of his own men, and those the very best. As he was going away after the battle he said to his friends that he had often striven for victory, but now first for his life. He fought this victorious battle on the day of the festival of Bacchus,! on which day also it is said that Pompey the Great had gone forth to the war; a period of four years intervened. As for Pompey’s sons, the younger made his escape, but after a few days the head of the elder was brought in by Deidius. This was the last war that Caesar waged; and the triumph that was celebrated for it vexed the Romans as nothing else had done. For it commemorated no victory over foreign commanders or barbarian kings, but the utter annihilation of the sons and the family of the mightiest of the Romans, who had fallen upon misfortune ; and it was not meet for Caesar to cele- brate a triumph for the calamities of his country, priding himself upon actions which had no defence before gods or men except that they had been done under necessity, and that too although previously he had sent neither messenger nor letters to announce

} March 17, 45 B.c.

573

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

meph vinns ao TOV eppudiov TONEMWY, Ur' ATWO {LEVOV alaxuvy THY dogav.
LVII. Ov pay GAXa Kab Tpos THY TUYNY TOU avdpos ery KEKALKOTES Kal Sederypevor TOV Xahwor, Kal TOV eu udicov TONE LOY Kab KaK@V avarvony Hyoumevot THY poovapxian, SixTaTopa fev QUTOV am eerEay d:a Biov: tTovTo & Hy omororyoupevn) Tupapvis, TO avuTrevOUVO THs povapyias TO aKata-
T AUGTOV mpoohaBovens" TL WLS dé Tas mporas Kuxépeovos els THY Bovdny yparyartos, OV ALOS
yé THs avO por evov my To peyelos, Erepor ™poo-TiOévtes vmepBoras Kal Stapidropevor Tpos ad-dajprous efeipyacavto Kal Tots TpaoTar ous ena Oh
TOV avopa Kat ut pov yevecar Sra TOV OyKov
Kal THY atoTiay Tav Whdifopéevwv, ois ovdév
HTTOV olovTat avvaywvicacbat TOV KONAKEVOVTMV
Kaicapa tovs pucodvtas, OTws OTL TAELOTAS
KaT avUTOD Tpohdces Exwot Kal peTA pEeyiocTwV eyxhnparov em uxerpelv Soxaaou. emel Ta YE anna, TOV EudvAtov aVT@ 7 ONE LOY Tmépas eax KOTOV, aveyKhyTov éavtov} Tapelxe Kal TO ye
THS 'Ereevcetas, lepov ouK amo TpoTrov SoKovat Xaplarnptov éml TH TPQOTNTL Wnpicacbar. Kal yap adie TOAOUS TOV TET ONE UNKOTOY T POS
auTov, éviows 6€ Kal apyas Kat Temas, WS Bpovte cat Kaocig, TpoceOnker ETTPATIYOUV Yap aj-porepor. kab Tas Tloprniov cata BeBrnpevas ELKOVAaS OU Tepeider, ann' aver TnaeD, eh wv Kat Kixépwv eirrev OTe Kaicap tovs Hourniov orjcas
avopiavtas Tous idious éxnte. trav 8€ dirov 1 QvéyxAntoy éavtéy Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: aveyKANToV.
574

to the people a victory in the civil wars, but had scrupulously put from him the fame arising therefrom.

LVII. However, the Romans gave way before the good fortune of the man and accepted the bit, and regarding the monarchy as a respite from the evils of the civil wars, they appointed him dictator for life. This was confessedly a tyranny, since the monarchy, besides the element of irresponsibility, now took on that of permanence. It was Cicero who proposed the first honours for him in the senate, and their magnitude was, after all, not too great for a man; but others added excessive honours and vied with one another in proposing them, thus rendering Caesar odious and obnoxious even to the mildest citizens because of the pretension and extravagance of what was decreed for him. It is thought, too, that the enemies of Caesar no less than his flatterers helped to force these measures through, in order that they might have as many pretexts as possible against him and might be thought to have the best reasons for attempting his life. For in all other ways, at least, after the civil wars were over, he showed himself blameless ; and certainly it is thought not inappropriate that the temple of Clemency was decreed as a thank-offering in view of his mildness. For he pardoned many of those who had fought against him, and to some he even gave honours and offices besides, as to Brutus and Cassius, both of whom were now praetors. The statues of Pompey, too, which had been thrown down, he would not suffer to remain so, but set them up again, at which Cicero said that in setting up Pompey’s statues Caesar firmly fixed his own.! When his friends thought it

1 Cf. Cicero, xl. 4, p. 186.

ak vovvror avTov Sopudopeta ba Kab TONOY emt
TOUTO TapeXovT@V EavTous OVX Urréuever, ELT @V WS Bédreov eo TW anak ato0avety 7) del ™ poo bo-Kav. tiv ® evvotay ws KadMOoTOY aya Kai Be-Bavotatov éavT@ mept Bard ope vos pudaxTy ploy, aves ave ipBave TOV Ofjpou € éoTiaceot Kal o1Tnpeaiors, TO 6€ OT PATLOTLKOY GTroLKiaLs, oY emt
paver tartar Kapyndov Kab Kopuv8os joav, ats Kal mporepov THY ahootw Kal TOTE THY avadnyw dua Kat Kare TOV AUTOV Ypovoyv auporépars ryevéofa cvuveTuye.

LVIII. Tay dé duvara@v Tots pev Umatetas Kal oTparnyias eis TOvTTLOV EMNYYENAETO, Tous & array ticiv eEovciats Kal Tipais mrapepvbetro,
mao. be édmive évedidov, pvnotevopevos apyxetv
éxovtwy, ws Kat Makipou tod vmdtou TeXevT7-TavTos els THY Tepodoay ETL TIS apxijs piav
n ME pay Dratov atrobetEat Kaviviov "PeBirtov.
T pos OV, WS EOLKE, TON Oov beErmoacbat Kal 7 pomeppar BadiSovtwy O Kixeépan, ¢ Srevdwpev,” edn, “ mpl hOdon THs vmateias éEehOwv o av-Gpowrros.”

Eze 6€ TO ghicet peyaroupyov avtod Kat dtrAoTLov at ToANAal KaTOpOwceEs OV POS aTrO-Ravel ETpEeTOVY THY TreTOVNMEVWY, ANN UTEK-Kavya Kal Oapoos ovcat mpos Ta pédAdOVTA pecCovwy évétixtoy érivoias mpayuatwv Kal
Kawnhs EpoTa d0Ens ws ATrOKEX PN MEVY TH Tapouen, TO pev TaOos ovdey 7) AV eTepov i) Cipdos auTov Kabarep Grou Kat peroveria TUS uTrép
TOV MEAXOVTWY TAOS TA WETpaypéeva, TapacKeuy 576

CAESAR, tv. 4-LVUL 3

best that he should have a body-guard, and many of them volunteered for this service, he would not consent, saying that it was better to die once for all than to be always expecting death. And in the effort to surround himself with men’s good will as the fairest and at the same time the securest protection, he again courted the people with banquets and dis- tributions of grain, and his soldiers with newly planted colonies, the most conspicuous of which were Carthage and Corinth. The earlier capture of both these cities, as well as their present restoration, chanced to fall at one and the same time.!

LVIII. As for the nobles, to some of them he promised consulships and praetorships in the future, others he appeased with sundry other powers and honours, and in all he implanted hopes, since he ardently desired to rule over willing subjects. There- fore, when Maximus the consul died, he appointed Caninius Revilius consul for the one day still remain- ing of the term of office. To him, as we are told, many were going with congratulations and offers of escort, whereupon Cicero said: “ Let us make haste, or else the man’s consulship will have expired.”

Caesar’s many successes, however, did not divert his natural spirit of enterprise and ambition to the enjoy- ment of what he had laboriously achieved, but served as fuel and incentive for future achievements, and begat in him plans for greater deeds and a passion for fresh glory, as though he had used up what he already had. What he felt was therefore nothing else than emulation of himself, as if he had been another man, and a sort of rivalry between what he had done and what he purposed to do. For he

1 Both cities were captured in 146 B.c., and both were restored in 44 B.C.
577
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dé Kal youn oT patevely pev ert IldpOous, KaTacTpeyapLevo 5€ ToUTOUS, Kal ov ‘Tpxavias
Tapa THV Kaontay Jaracoay Kat TOV Kavcacov
éxtreprenO ov tt TOV Tlovrov, els THY LacvB oxy éu-

Bareiv, Kat Ta Tepiywpa Veppavois cat Tep-paviav avTHY emeépa pov bua KeAtov éravenOetv
els ‘Tradap, Kat cuvarra TOV KUKNOV TOUTOV THS
nryepovias 7 mavrax ober ‘Oxcav@ meptopia Bet-
ons. Ola perou d¢€ TIS oTpateias TOV TE Kopiv-Grov "Ico é ETE XELpEL Cvackam TEL, "Avinvov éri TOUT® T POXELPLE ULEVOS, kal tov TiBepuv ev us
aro Tis Toews vTokaBov Stwpuye Bubeia Kal TEPLKhaTas é7ti tO KipKxaiov ep Barely eis THY ™ pos Tappaxivy Oadarttay, aap ddevay aya Kab peotavny Tots OL epTropias poraow els ‘Popny MNXAVOLEVOS* TpPOS be TOUVTOLS TA pev EAN TA
mept Ilwpevtivov Kat Snriav exTpewas medtov dmoveiEae TorXrais évepyov avOpwTreav puplace,
TH 6é éyylora THS ‘Popns Garacan KrelOpa b1a
NO LUT ov eTayayor, Kal Ta TudAra Kal vo oppa THs ‘Qottaviis niovos avaxaOnpapevos, ALpévas éumoincacOat Kai vavroxa mpos TooavTny akco-TioTa vavTiiiav. Kal TavTa pey ev Trapa-TKEVATS iV.
LIX. ‘H 6éé 700 TEEpororiov dtaGeats Kai dtop-Owats THS Tept TOV _Xpovov GVO LaANIAS dtdogodnbeiaa XaprevTas ur avTov Kal TENS AaBodoa
yragupworarny Ta perXe npeta. ov yap povov
€v Tols Tandatotsy Tavu Xpovors TeTapaypevars EXPavTO ‘Pepaioe Tals TOV MNVOV 7 pos TOV évtauTOv mepLooots, Hote TAS Guaias Kat Tas éopTas UTopEepomévas KATA puKpoV eis évavTias éxTEeTTTO-578

CAESAR, tvin. 3-LIx. 1

planned and prepared to make an expedition against the Parthians ; and after subduing these and marching around the Euxine by way of Hyrcania, the Caspian sea, and the Caucasus, to invade Scythia ; and after overrunning the countries bordering on Germany and Germany itself, to come back by way of Gaul to Italy, and so to complete this circuit of his empire, which would then be bounded on all sides by the ocean. During this expedition, moreover, he intended to dig through the isthmus of Corinth, and had already put Anienus in charge of this work; he intended also to divert the Tiber just below the city into a deep channel, give it a bend towards Circeium, and make it empty into the sea at Terracina, thus contriving for merchantmen a safe as well as an easy passage to Rome; and besides this, to convert the marshes about Pomentinum and Setia into a plain which many thousands of men could cultivate ; and further, to build moles which should barricade the sea where it was nearest to Rome, to clear away the hidden dangers on the shore of Ostia, and then construct harbours and roadsteads sufficient for the great fleets that would visit them. And all these things were in preparation.

LIX. The adjustment of the calendar, however, and the correction of the irregularity in the com- putation of time, were not only studied scientifically by him, but also brought to completion, and proved to be of the highest utility. For not only in very ancient times was the relation of the lunar to the solar year in great confusion among the Romans, so that the sacrificial feasts and festivals, diverging gradually, at last fell in opposite seasons of the year,

, a , Ca) A \ \ \ ,
2 Kéval Tols ypovolts Wpas, adAG Kal TEPL THY TOTE
U
ovaay HALAKNY OL pev AAAOL TAYTaTTAGL TOUTWY
A / daurroylaTws elyov, ot O€ Lepets povot TOV KaLpOV

eLootes eEaidvns Kal mponoOnpévov pndevos Tov

> / Us A U >

éuBortpmov mpocéypagoy pinva, Mepxnoovior dvo-

ia A "~ € \ A 9 wn

pavovtes, Ov Nouas 0 Bactdevs patos éuBarelv

\ \ Y

NévyeTal, pixpav Kal dStaTeivovaay ov Troppw Bon-\ cal \ \ >
Jeav é€evpmv Ths wept Tas amokatactdaceEls
, a \ /
TANM[LEAELAS, WS EV TOS TEPL eKEivOU YyéypaTrTal.

3 Kaicap 6€ Tois apictos THY dirocopwv Kal

A \ A
padnuatix@v TO TpOBAnMa TpoVeEls Ex THY UTO-
, BA / 4 3Q7 \ \
Ketevov On peOocwy Euikev idtav Tiva Kal bin-
4 A 3 , ?
cpiBwpevny padrrov érravop$wow, 7 Ypw@mevoe péxpt viv 'Pwpatos Soxovow Artov étTépwv shar-
,

NecOar TEpl THV avMpariav. ov pnVv adda xal TovTo Tots BacKkaivovot Kat Bapuvopévors tHv pe A “ , aA ¢ Suva aitias jwapetye. Kixépwv yovy o pntwp,
e 54 , / ” > , i?
@S Eotke, PNTAVTOS TLVOS aUpLoY emLTEAXELY AUpaD, GOING ee ae co 2 8 s >» e \ ie
Nat, eimev, ‘‘€x dlatayuaTos, ws Kat TOUTO mpos avaykny Tay avOpaTrwv Seyopnévwn, LX. To dé éudaves padtaota picos rai Java-
4 3 b b] \ e Cal ? 4 b] 7
Tnpopov ew avTov o THs Baciretas Epws éeFerpyaa a , o
gato, Tols pev modXdols attia mpwTn, Tois be UTOUAOLS TAAAL Tpophacls EvTpETETTATH yevo-pevn. Kaitot Kat oyov Twa KaTéoTeELpay Eis ol / ,
Tov Onpov ot TavTnv Kaicapt tiv tiny mpoke-VOOVTES, WS EK YpapmadToV YBvAXrEiwY adwoiwa 736
/ € ? a ta Ilap@wv gdaivorto Pwpators cu Bacirel 580

CAESAR, Lix, 2-Lx. 1

but also at this time people generally had no way of computing the actual solar year;! the priests alone knew the proper time, and would suddenly and to everybody's surprise insert the intercalary month called Mercedonius. Numa the king is said to have been the first to intercalate this month, thus devis- ing a slight and short-lived remedy for the error in regard to the sidereal and solar cycles, as I have said in his Life? But Caesar laid the problem before the best philosophers and mathematicians, and ont of the methods of correction which were already at hand compounded one of his own which was more accurate than any. This the Romans use down to the present time, and are thought to be less in error than other peoples as regards the inequality between the lunar and solar years. However, even this fur- nished occasion for blame to those who envied Caesar and disliked his power. At any rate, Cicero the orator, we are told, when some one remarked that Lyra would rise on the morrow, said: “Yes, by decree,” implying that men were compelled to accept even this dispensation.

LX. But the most open and deadly hatred to- wards him was produced by his passion for the royal power. For the multitude this was a first cause of hatred, and for those who had long smothered their hate, a most specious pretext for it. And yet those who were advocating this honour for Caesar actually spread abroad among the people a report that from the Sibylline books it appeared that Parthia could be taken if the Romans went up against it with a king,

1 At this time the Roman calendar wus more than two months ahead of the solar year. Caesar’s reform went into effect in 46 B.c. 2 Chapter xviii.

581

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TTpAaTEvomevols eT AVTOUS, AAAWS avédtKTa OvTA' kal xataBaivovtos é& “AXBns Kaicapos eis tH TOA éTOApnoaY avToY aotdoacbat Bactréa.
Tov dé Onuou d:atapayPevtos axybeabels exeivos ovx én Bactrevs, GANA Kaicap xareicPat Kai yevouéevns mpos TOUTO TavT@Y alwTHAS ov mavu paid pos ove Evers map bev. év O€ ovyehyre@ Teas TLVaS umeppuels auT@ Wndicapevov éTuXe ev virép TOV éuBodwv wabeLopevos, T Pog Lovr@y
d€ TaYv UTadTwY Kal TOV OTPATHYOY, dua 6€ Kal THS Bours an acns ETOMEVNS, ovy vreLavacras,
GNX w@oTrep LOL@TALS teat yenpaTtiCon, amex pt-
VATO GUaTOAS parrov } Tpocbécews TAS TLLAS Seic Oat. Kal TodTO ov povoy Hviace THY BovAny, aXXa Kab TOV Onjov, as év TH BovrAn THs ToAEws
T pomnraKtlopevns, Kal pera dew hs KaTnpelas amirGov evdus ols éEAv py TApapevery, @OTE KiL-Kelvoy évvoncavTa tTapaypnua pev olxade Tpa-mécOar Kal Body T pos TOUS pirous, amayaryovTa TOU Tpax7}rov TO iparvov, WS Eromos ein T@ Bov-
NO Mevo THY opayny TApeNery, orepov dé mpopa-oiler Pat TID vooov" ov yap eOehewy Thy aicOnow at pepety TOV obras EXOVTOY, OTav LoTapevot Sta-NéywvTac T pos OX AOD, GXXA ceLomevnv TAXY Kal
Te pipe po mevnv idiryyous emia ao Gat Kal KaTa-AauBiver Bar. TO 6¢ ovx elyev oUTWS, GAA Kal mavu Bovropevoy avtov uTeEavacthvat tH BovrAn Aéyouow vm Tov TAY hirwv, wadXov b€ KONaKw)Y, Kopyynrtov BarBouv, KatacxeO var pncavros:
Ou pemyynon Kaicap OY, ovde akiwces ws xpeittova Oepatrever Oat ceavTov;” 582

CAESAR, Lx. 1-5

but otherwise could not be assailed; and as Caesar was coming down from Alba into the city they ventured to hail him as king. But at this the people were confounded, and Caesar, disturbed in mind, said that his name was not King, but Caesar, and seeing that his words produced an universal silence, he passed on with no very cheerful or contented looks. Moreover, after sundry extravagant honours had been voted him in the senate, it chanced that he was sitting above the rostra, and as the praetors and consuls drew near, with the whole senate following them, he did not rise to receive them, but as if he were dealing with mere private persons, replied that his honours needed curtailment rather than enlarge- ment. This vexed not only the senate, but also the people, who felt that in the persons of the senators the state was insulted, and in a terrible dejection they went away at once, all who were not obliged to remain, so that Caesar too, when he was aware of his mistake, immediately turned to go home, and draw- ing back his toga from his neck, cried in loud tones to his friends that he was ready to offer his throat to any one who wished to kill him. But afterwards he made his disease an excuse for his behaviour, saying that the senses of those who are thus afflicted do not usually remain steady when they address a multitude standing, but are speedily shaken and whirled about, bringing on giddiness and insensibility. However, what he said was not true; on the contrary, he was very desirous of rising to receive the senate; but one of his friends, as they say, or rather one of his flatterers, Cornelius Balbus, restrained him, saying : " Remember that thou art Caesar, and permit thyself to be courted as a superior."

583

a

PLUTARCR'S LIVES

LXI. 'Ezreyiverat tovtots tots T poo Kpous pac ty
0 TOV Onpapxov TpoTrAKLG LOS. VY fev yap % TOV Aovrepradtov E07}; mepl nS TOOL ypa-hovoly ws ToLwevwv TO TaXaLOY eElyn, Kal TL Kal T POT nKeL Tots A praduxots Aveatots. Tov ©
EVYEV@V veavioxoy Kal apxovTov TOAXNOL OLa-Jéovow ava THY Toh yupvot, OKUTEDL Aacious
Tous éurrodwy él waded Kat yéAwTe Traiovtes:
ToAAal 6€ Kal Tov év TéXEL yuvatK@Y érriTNOES UTavT@cAaL TapeXOVoLY WaTTEP EV d.6arKddou To Xeipe Tais mAHyats, TeTeLo Meval pos evToKiay
Kvovoals, ayovots d€ mpos Kuno w ayadov elvat.
Tabra Katcap €@eato caOnpevos é ent TOV éuBorwy emt dip pou xpvood, OprapPin@ KOo Lp 'KeKOT UN - pévos. 'AvTw@vios oe TOV Geovtwy tov 'epov Spo-pov els Ave Kal yap Umdrevev. @S Ov Els THY ayopay évéBare kal to mARO0s avTo Oven, péepov dradnpa orepavey dagvns me pemreTheyevov
epee TO Kaicapu- Kat yiveTar KpOTOS ov Aap
™ pos, GX bréLyos ex TApPad KEUTS. ATWO afLevou 5é Tov Kaicapos amas 0 Ofjjos aveK poTnaey' abéis € 7 poo hépovTos oruryor, Kal ay, de€apévov made amayres. ovTH dé THs melpas éfereyxXopevngs Kaicap bev avioratat, TOV orepavov els
To Kamit@Atov amevexOivat Kxedevoas, wh0n-cav 6€ avdptaytes avtob Sradnuacw avacecepevot Bacirsxois. Kal TOV Onpdpxov dvo, ra-ovios Kal Mapun2ros, emer Oovtes arTréoTracay, Kal TOUS doTATALEVOUS Bacthéa TOV Kaicapa T™ po-TOUS éEeupovtes am iyyov els TO Seaport nptov. “)

dé Ojos eltmeto KpoTta@v, Kal Bpovtous atrexanret Tous avopas, Ott Bpodros Hv 0 Katadvcas THY TOY 584

CAESAR, Lxi. 1-5

LXI. There was added to these causes of offence his insult to the tribunes. It was, namely, the festival of the Lupercalia, of which many write that it was anciently celebrated by shepherds, and has also some connection with the Arcadian Lycaea. At this time many of the noble youths and of the magis- trates run up and down through the city naked, for sport and laughter striking those they meet with shaggy thongs. And many women of rank also purposely get in their way, and like children at schoo] present their hands to be struck, believing that the pregnant will thus be helped to an easy delivery, and the barren to pregnancy. These cere- monies Caesar was witnessing, seated upon the rostra on a golden throne, arrayed in triumphal attire. And Antony was one of the runners in the sacred race; for he was consul. Accordingly, after he had dashed into the forum and the crowd had made way for him, he carried a diadem, round which a wreath of laurel was tied, and held it out to Caesar. Then there was applause, not loud, but slight and preconcerted. But when Caesar pushed away the diadem, al] the people applauded ; and when Antony offered it again, few, and when Caesar declined it again, all, applauded. The experiment having thus failed, Caesar rose from his seat, after ordering the wreath to be carried up to the Capitol ; but then his statues were seen to have been decked with royal diadems. So two of the tribunes, Flavius and Mar- yllus, went up to them and pulled off the diadems, and after discovering those who had first hailed Caesar as king, led them off to prison. Moreover, the people followed the tribunes with applause and called them Brutuses, because Brutus was the man who put

585

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Bacihéwv dcadox7v Kal TO KPaTOs eis Boudyy Kal
Ojuwov éx povapytas KaTACTHOAS. él TOUT@
Kaioap mapotuvets THY pev apx iy apeineTo TOV Tepl TOV Mapunvov, év 6€ TO KaTnyopety AUTO apa Kal TOV Of Lov éguBpivor ToAraKLs Bpovtous
re Kal Kupuatous aTreK ANE TOUS avopas.
LXII. Otto 64 tTpérovtat tpos Mapxov Bpod-
TOD ol TONNOL, ryevos pev éxeiOev eivat Soxobvta
7 pos TATEPOV, Kal TO pos puNnTpos O€ aro Zepoue-Aiwy, oixias éTépas emepavovs, yapSpov 6¢ Kal
adehp ody | Kdtwvos. tovtov €& éavtod pep oppijo at 7 pos. KaTaAXvoL THS povapxias ip Bruvov ab Tapa Kaicapos TLpat Kat dpites. ov yap

povoy éawOn trepl Papoarov amTO THS Toparniov ghuyis, ovdé TodXovs TOV erretnoetov ET Woe
eLartno auevos, ana Kal maT ete peyadny Tap avT@. Kal oTpaTnyiav pev éy Tots TOTE THY éxupavertarny édaBev, Umatevey O€ éuednrev els TéTAPTOV 705, épioavtos Kaaciov TporrunOeis.
Neyerae yap o Kaicap elmety OS Sixaorepa pev
Néyor Kaaowos, avtos pévtot Bpodtov ove av TapeOot. Kab TOTE Kal bcaBardovtov TLV@V TOV
dvopa, TPAaTTo“Erns 789 THS Tuvepogias, ov ™ pooerxer, andra TOU TwM"ATOS TH KELpt Guyav eon 7 pos TOUS 6taBaddovtas . ‘Avapevel TOUTO TO Séppa Bpodros, & OS afvov pev ovta TIS EOXAS
és apeTny, Oia O€ Thy apxny ovK av aydptotov Kal Tovnpov yevomevoyv. ot d€ THs petaPorHs ee ee ae ee ee

1 See the Publicola, i.-ix.

2 The word ‘‘brutus” in Latin signified stupid (cf. the Publicola, iii. 4); and the people of Cymé, in Asia Minor, were celebrated for stupidity (Strabo, p. 622).

37

an end to the royal succession and brought the power into the hands of the senate and people instead of a sole ruler.! At this, Caesar was greatly vexed, and deprived Maryllus and Flavius of their office, while in his denunciation of them, although he at the same time insulted the people, he called them repeatedly Brutes? and Cymaeans.?

LXIJ. Under these circumstances the multitude turned their thoughts towards Marcus Brutus, who was thought to be a descendant of the elder Brutus on his father’s side, on his mother’s side belonged to the Servilii, another illustrious house, and was a son- in-law and nephew of Cato. The desires which Brutus felt to attempt of his own accord the abolition of the monarchy were blunted by the favours and honours that he had received from Caesar. For not only had his life been spared at Pharsalus after Pom- pey’s flight, and the lives of many of his friends at his entreaty, but also he had great credit with Caesar. He had received the most honourable of the praetor- ships for the current year, and was to be consul three years later, having been preferred to Cassius, who was a rival candidate. For Caesar, as we are told, said that Cassius urged the juster claims to the office, but that for his own part he could not pass Brutus by. Once, too, when certain persons were actually accusing Brutus to him, the conspiracy being already on foot,

Caesar would not heed them, but laying his hand upon his body said to the ac- cusers: “ Brutus will wait for this shrivelled skin,’ + implying that Brutus was worthy to rule because of his virtue, but that for the sake of ruling he would not become a thankless villain. Those, however, who

3 Cf. the Brutus, vii. 1-3.
4 Cf. the Brutus chapters vili., 1x.
587

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

€ pre wevor Kat 7 pos Povey éxelvov 7) TP@Tov aTo-BrérrovTes auT@ pev OUK éTOh pov diareyer Gat,
VUKTP dé kareriumdacay Ypappatov To BHya
Ka TOV Sip pov eh’ ov oTpaTny av expnparever” @V HV TA TOAAG TOLAvTA* “Kadevders, a @ Bpovre,” cat “Ov ef Bpodtos.” vd’ wv 0 Kaacios aicbo-[LEVOS Sraxivovpevov NOUXT TO piroTLpuov avroo, paAXov 7 TporEpov eVEKELTO Kal Tapwtvven, avToOs idia Te eal picous EXeov 7 pos. TOV Kaicapa, be’ aitias as ev Tots Tept Bpovtov YE Pap pEvoss edn woxaper, exe PEVTOL Kat ov brrowias o Katcap avtov, wate Kai 7 pos TOUS pidous eLTreLy more: * Ay paivetar Bovropevos Up Kacotos; enol pev yap ov Mav apeo Kes May @YPOs wv.”
waru oé heyeTau, rept ‘Avt@vtov kat AodoBédra SiaBorns pos avtov, ws vewtepiCorer, EXMovens, “Od Tay,” hava, “‘rovrous dédorKka TOUS Taxets
Kal KOMNTAS, padXov O€ TOUS @Xpous Ka’ NETTOUS Exeivous’” Kaoovov Aeyoou Kal Bpovtov.
Loree ANN: couKev ovx OUTS am poo SoKntov
@S apvnakTov elvau TO TeTpwpmevov, eTEL Kal onpeta Oavpacra Kal pacpara pavivas Néyouae.
céka pev ovv ovpavia Kal KTUTOUS VUKT Op TOXhaxov Suaepopevous Kab KataipovTas eis aryopav épnysovs épvidas ouk aftov iows emi wade, THN-KOUT® pvnpovevoar XTpaBwv 6é o prrooodos to Topet TONKOVS LEV avOpwrrous dat vpovs emt-pepopevous pavivar, oTpatiwtou é av8pos oiKe-Tnv eK THS YELpos éx Baneip TONY proya Kab Soxeiv xaicoOat Tous Op@dly, WS 6é eTAVTATO, undev exe Kxaxov tov advOpwrov: avt@ be Kai-583

CAESAR, Lx. 4-Lxin. 2

were eager for the change, and fixed their eyes on Brutus alone, or on him first, did not venture to talk with him directly, but by night they covered his praetorial tribune and chair with writings, most of which were of this sort: “Thou art asleep, Brutus,” or, “ Thou art not Brutus.” ! When Cassius perceived that the ambition of Brutus was somewhat stirred by these things, he was more urgent with him than be- fore, and pricked him on, having himself also some private grounds for hating Caesar; these I have mentioned in the Life of Brutus.! Moreover, Caesar actually suspected him, so that he once said to his friends: “ What, think ye, doth Cassius want? I like him not over much, for he is much too pale.” And again, we are told that when Antony and Dolabella were accused to him of plotting revolution, Caesar said ; “ Tam not much in fear of these fat, long-haired fellows, but rather of those pale, thin ones,” meaning Brutus and Cassius.}

LXIII. But destiny, it would seem, is not so much unexpected as it is unavoidable, since they say that amazing signs and apparitions were seen. Now, as for lights in the heavens, crashing sounds borne all about by night, and birds of omen coming down into the forum, it is perhaps not worth while to mention these precursors of so great an event; but Strabo the philosopher says? that multitudes of men all on fire were seen rushing up, and a soldier's slave threw from his hand a copious flame and seemed to the spectators to be burning, but when the flame ceased the man was uninjured; he says, more-

1 Cf. the Brutus, chapters viii., ix.
? Probably in the ‘ Historical Commentaries” cited in the Lucullus, xxviii. 7.
589

Gea

an

PLUTARCH S LIVES

, \ Q/ >] ~ , a
capt Ovovtse THVY Kapdtay adavi) yevéobas Tod
, ~ \ > \ , \ b ts
(epetov Kat etvoyv elval TO TEpas’ ov yap ay Pucet
A “ f 4 \ A
ye cuoTthvat Saov axdpoiov. ate d€ Kai TavTa
A wn id f ? n
TONAGY aKOUT at Cue ScovT wn, OS TLS AUT@ PavTis
nuepa Maprtiou pajvos, yy Eddous ‘Pwatos Ka-LovaL, TpoetTroe peeyav pudattec Gat xivouvov éerXGovans € Tis Huepas Tpoiwy 0 Kaicap eis tHhv
, , A
GUYKANTOV aoTacapEevos TpooTatieere TH pavTet
? ‘ce € \ oO? i f weé \ ie Pb Sty hapevos: ‘ At pev on Maptiar Kudoi maperow, o oe e aA \ 3 \ vw ce NT \ 4 3 3

€ NOU Tpos auTov eitrou ‘Nat wapeiotv, adr
; , ” \ a eee td ra ov Tapernrvlact. mpo pias dé nuépas Mapxov
, la \ \ nw
Aemtoov Setrrvifovtos avtoy étuxe pev émTLaTOAtS
f ‘ i Uroypapov, OTTED eve Oet, KATAKEL[EVOS* é Tr ecOvTOS d€ AOyou Toles dpa THY Oavatowv dplaTos, émavTas peacas efeBonoer 2a) am poo 0oKijT0S.”
peTa TAavTa KOLLO@LEVOS, women ewle, Tapa TH
,
yuvakl, Taco dua tov Ovpdv tod Swpariov
A , 4
Kat TOV Oupiowy avaTetavyupévany, StatapaxGeis
¢ n 4 n f. wn
AUAaA TO KTUTM KAL TO HwHTL KATAXAUTOVENS THS
, wv \ , / \
cernyyns, noGeto tiv Kadrovpviav Babéws peév
, nw ‘ x \ \
xaGevdovaary, acadels 6€ havas Kat ctevaypovs
/ A e t
avap0 povs avaTéutrovoay €k TOY UTvwY: €dOKEt
, A \ A ,
d€ apa KNalELY Exelvoy ETt Tals ayKadals EvovTa
,
KaTteopayevov.
¢ 3 “ x f \
Or dé ob pace TH yuvatet Tavtyy yever ar THY oyriy: arra IV yap Te TH Kaicapos oKig 7 poo KElLEVOY OLOV ETL KOT LM Kat GE“VOTNTL TIS
/ 5 / ¢
Bovrrs vapioaperns CKPWTIPLOY, OS AtBtos (atopel, TovTo dvap 1 Kadrovpria Peacapern KaTappynyye pevov écoke worvriabar Kai Saxpvey.
nuépas © obv yevopevns édeiro tov Kaicapos, 02

738

CAESAR, -Lxu. 2-6

over, that when Caesar himself was sacrificing, the heart of the victim was not to be found, and the prodigy caused fear, since in the course of nature, certainly, an animal without a heart could not exist. The following story, too, is told by many. A certain seer warned Caesar to be on his guard against a great peril on the day of the month of March which the Romans call the Ides; and when the day had come and Caesar was on his way to the senate- house, he greeted the seer with a jest and said: * Well, the Ides of March are come," and the seer said to him softly: "Aye, they are come, but they are not gone." Moreover, on the day before, when Marcus Lepidus was entertaining him at supper, Caesar chanced to be signing letters, as his custom was, while reclining at table, and the discourse turned suddenly upon the question what sort of death was the best; before any one else could answer Caesar eried out: "That which is unexpected."' After this, while he was sleeping as usual by the side of his wife, all the windows and doors of the chamber flew open at once, and Caesar, confounded by the noise and the light of the moon shining down upon him, noticed that Calpurnia was in a deep slumber, but was uttering indistinct words and inarticulate groans in her sleep; for she dreamed, as it proved, that she was holding her murdered husband in her arms and bewailing him.

Some, however, say that this was not the vision which the woman had; but that there was attached to Caesar's house to give it adornment and distinction, by vote of the senate, a gable-ornament, as Livy says, and it was this which Calpurnia in her dreams saw torn down, and therefore, as she thought, wailed and wept. At all events, when day came, she begged Caesar,

So

el prev olov Te, TpoerOetv, arr' avaBarécOut THY GUYKANTOVY: Eb O€ TOV exeivns ovelpwv éXd-Xora ppovriver, oKxewacGat dua HavTeKns arAns
Kat Lepa@v TEpt TOU HEAROVTOS. eiye 5€ TUS, os
EOLKE, Kaxetvov uTowia Kal poBos. ovdeva yap YUvaLKLa WOv év Serr Oarpovia TpoTEpov KATEYVO-Ket THS Kadroupuias, TOTE O€ € ewpa mepimadovoar.
ws 6€ Kal TOANA KaTaBtaavTeEs of pavTEets Edpagav att@ dvotepeiv, éyvo méuas *Avtwviov adetvat THY cUyKANTOV.
LXIV. 'Ep &€ TOUT Acxipos Bpotros émTiKAN-ow "AABiv0s, TLd TEVOLEVOS pev UTrO Kaicapos, @oTe Kal SevTEpOS om AUTO KAN povosLos "ye-ypapbat, Tois 6é€ TEpl Bpovrov TOV ETepov Kal Kaoovov peTeX ov TIS TUVW{LOTLAS, poPnbeis
yn THY 7 ME par exetyny Stax povaapévov | TOU
Kaicapos EXTTUOTOS Y makes yevntat, TOUS TE pavrers exrevate Kat Kann TeTo TOU Kaicapos, as aitias Kat d1aBoras éavT@ KT@PEVOU ™ pos THY oUyKAN ov evtpupaa bar donodcav KEY [Lev yap avr KEhEVTAYTOS exelvou, Kal Tm po uous elvat Wage rCeaOat TavTas omas TOV exTOS 'Itarias errapxiav Bactrevs avayopevoito Kal hopotn dia-dna THY adAnV éTtLov yHv Kal Odraccav: et &é ppace Tis autos cabeCopevors yov peev amraNXattea Oat, Tapetvat oe avdrs 6 OTaV evTUX Bedrioow

avetpous Kadroupvia, Tivas éseaBas Noyous Tapa TOV PO ovouvT wv) TiVa TOV pirov dveEeaOau di6acKovT@V os ovxt dovheta TAUTA Kat Tupavvis €oTlv; GX et SoKet TAVTMS, épn, THY neepay aporwaoacbat, Bérr1ov avTov tapedOovta Kat mpocayopevoavta Ty BovrAnv uTepPécOat, Tavl” 592

CAESAR, cx. 6—-LxIv. 4

if it was possible, not to go out, but to postpone the meeting of the senate ; if, however, he had no concern at all for her dreams, she besought him to enquire by other modes of divination and by sacrifices concerning the future. And Caesar also, as it would appear, was in some suspicion and fear. For never before had he perceived in Ca]purnia any womanish superstition, but now he saw that she was in great distress. And when the seers also, after many sacrifices, told him that the omens were unfavourable, he resolved to send Antony and dismiss the senate.

LXIV. But at this juncture Decimus Brutus, sur- named Albinus, who was so trusted by Caesar that he was entered in his will as his second heir, but was partner in the conspiracy of the other Brutus and Cassius, fearing that if Caesar should elude that day, their undertaking would become known, ridiculed the seers and chided Caesar for laying himself open to malicious charges on the part of the senators, who would think themselves mocked at; for they had met at his bidding, and were ready and willing to vote as one man that he should be declared king of the provinces outside of Italy, and might wear a diadem when he went anywhere else by land or sea; but if some one should tell them at their session to be gone now, but to come back again when Calpurnia should have better dreams, what speeches would be made by his enemies, or who would listen to his friends when they tried to show that this was not slavery and tyranny? But if he was fully resolved (Albinus said) to regard the day as inauspicious, it was better that he should go in person and address the senate, and then postpone its business. While

eS

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dpa Néywv o Bpodrcs tye tis xXerpos NaBopevos
TOV Kaicapa. Kal pbk pov pev auT@ TpoeOovTt
TOV Oupav olxeTns GNAOTPLOS évTuxety ™ pol upou-HEVOS, WS 1)TTATO TOD mept éxetvov wbtapod Kal ThiGous, Brac apevos els THY olxiav Tapedw@ner éauTov ™) Kaaroupvig, puharre Kehevoas axpe av éravenOn Kaisap, ws €yov pweydrXa Tpaypata KATELTELY TPOS AUTOV.
LXV. ’Aptepidmpos 5é Kvidcios ro yévos, ‘ENX2)- vikov AOywv codiaTiIs Kal bid TovTO yeryovws éviois auynOns tav epi Bpodtov, wate Kai

yV@vat TA TELTTA TOV TPATTOMEVOD, HKE EV ev BiBrsdie Komilov aqrep EMeA NE penvvery, opav dé
TOV Kaicapa Tay BiBredvev ExaoTov bexopevov
Kal tapad:oovta Tots TEpL avTOY banpérats, éyryus opodpa mpocedOow, : Todt," ébn, " Kaicap, dvayvot [0V05 Kat TAX EWS" yeypaTTat yap ree Tpaypatov peyarwv Kat oot Srapepovtov."
deEdpevos ovv Oo Kaicap avayv@vat ev uTo TrNOoVS THY EevTVyXaVvoVT@Y exwAVON, KaiTrEp
opprjaas TONAGKLS, év 6€ TH KeLpl KaTEX@V Kal puratT wv HOvov EXELVO TrapirOev els THY ouy-KAXyNTOV. EvLOL 6¢ dacty addov émidodvat TO BiBrLov Todto, Tov & ‘’Aptepidwpov ovbé brAwWs mpocerUetv, arr €xOrXUBivat Tapa wacav Ti OOOv.
LXVI. "AdAd tatta pev 76n Tou pépel Kui
TO auToparoy o 6é deEdpevos Tov povoy éxeivov Ka TOV ayova X@pos, els a7 a) TUYEANTOS nO poiaOn TOTE, Tloumniov peév etkova, Kelpevny éyov, Lopumniov o¢ avalnpa yeyovws THY mpoaKEeKoo pN-594

CAESAR, Lxiv. 4 -Lxvl. 1

saying these things Brutus took Caesar by the hand and began to lead him along. And he had gone but a little way from his door when a slave belonging to some one else, eager to get at Caesar, but unable to do so for the press of numbers about him, forced his way into the house, gave himself into the hands of Calpurnia, and bade her keep him secure until Caesar came back, since he had important matters to report to him.

LXV. Furthermore, Artemidorus, 2 Cnidian by birth, a teacher of Greek philosophy, and on_ this account brought into intimacy with some of the followers of Brutus, so that he also knew most of what they were doing, came bringing to Caesar in a small roll the disclosures which he was going to make ; but seeing that Caesar took all such rolls and handed them to his attendants, he came quite near,
and said: "Read this, Caesar, by thyself, and speedily ; for it contains matters of importance and of concern to thee." Accordingly, Caesar took the roll and would have read it, but was prevented by the multitude of people who engaged his attention, although he set out to do so many times, and holding in his hand and retaining that roll alone, he passed on into the senate. Some, however, say that another person gave him this roll, and that Artemidorus did not get to him at all, ‘but was crowded away all along the route.

LXVI. So- far, perhaps, these things may have happened of their own accord; the place, however, which was the scene of that str ugele and murder, and in which the senate was then assembled, since it contained a statue of Pompey and had been dedi- cated by Pompey as an additional ornament to his

“A 5] , la ,
pévoy TO Oeatpw, TavtaTacty aTrepaive Saipovos 73
‘ é
Tivos Udnyoupévov Kal KaXrotvTos éexet THY TpaEuy
’ > t Epyov yeyovévat. Kal yap ovv Kat éeyetTar Kao-
a a \ fal
auos eis Tov avdptavta Tov Llourniouv mpo Tis éyxerpyoews amoB\éTwv eémixareicbat ciw77,
, > ’ / XN A b 4 f
KaLTEP OVK GANOTPLOS WY THY 'ExLKOUpoU NOywr" GX’ 0 KaLpOS, Ws EorKev, HON TOD SeLvod TapEeTTOtos évOouctacpov évetroies Kal tados avtl Tav TPOTEPWY NOYLT LOD.
> , BS 4 \ ¥ s \
Avr@viov péev ovtv mictov évta Katicapi Kat Cal “a > ww
poparéov €Ewm tmapaxatetye Bpovtos “AdPivos, éuBar@v éritndes opidiay pnKos €yovoav: eict-f \ 4 e \ ‘ e , ovtos 6€ Kaicapos 7 Bovrn pev vmeEavéory Gepamevovaa, Tav 5é mepit Bpovdtoy ot peév é€o-micGev tov dippov avtod teptéatnaay, ot &é
A 4 ? a
anrnvrncav, ws dn Tehrdtw KiuSpw wept aderdod
, ,
duyados évtuyyavovtt cvvdencopevol, Kai ouve-
, “ 4 aA id
SéovTo péypt tov Sigpou tapakoXovOodvtes. ws

4 , Sé xabicas dtexpoveto Tas Senoets Kal TpocKel-
f ¢e pévov BraroTepoy rnyavaxret mpos ExacTov, Oo mev
\ a a TidALos thy THBEevvoy aUTOD Tals Yepoly audoré-pais cvANaBwv aro TOU TpAXi)NOU KaTHYyev" Strep nv cuvOnpa THS emLyetpnaEews. TpaTos 6€ KacKas
, \
Eipee Tater mapa Tov avxéva ANY ov Bavatn-
, > N a“ > 3 e 3 , 5] > wn
gopov ovdé Babeiav, aN, ws eEtKos, ev apyT
TOALNUATOS peyadrou Tapaxlels, BaTE Kal TOV / val Katoapa petactpagevta tov éyyetpidiov ra-
1 These discouraged belief in superhuman powers, 596

CAESAR, txvt. 1-4

theatre, made it wholly clear that it was the work of some heavenly power which was calling and guiding the action thither. Indeed, it is also said that Cas- sius, turning his eyes toward the statue of Pompey before the attack began, invoked it silently, although he was much addicted to the doctrines of Epicurus ;1 but the crisis, as it would seem, when the dreadful attempt was now close at hand, replaced his former cool calculations with divinely inspired emotion. Well, then, Antony, who was a friend of Caesayv's and a robust man, was detained outside by Brutus Albinus,? who purposely engaged him in a lengthy conversation; but Caesar went in, and the senate rose in his honour. Some of the partisans of Brutus took their places round the back of Caesar's chair, while others went to meet him, as though they would support the petition which Tillius Cimber presented to Caesar in behalf of his exiled brother, and they joined their entreaties to his and accom- panied Caesar up to his chair. But when, after taking his seat, Caesar continued to repulse their petitions, and, as they pressed upon him with greater importunity, began to show anger towards one and another of them, Tillius seized his toga with both hands and pulled it down from his neck. This was the signal for the assault. It was Casca who gave him the first blow with his dagger, in the neck, not a mortal wound, nor even a deep one, for which he was too much confused, as was natural at the beginning of a deed of great daring ; so that Caesar turned about, grasped the knife, and held it fast.

2 By Caius Trebonius, rather, as Plutarch says in the Brutus, xvii. 1. Cf. Appian, B.C. ii. 117; Cicero, ad fam. x. 25.
=»

oJ

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Bear Kal KaTac xel. dpa dé tas eEehwvnoav
O wey mAnyels ‘Pwpaicte: “ Mtapwrate Kaoxa, Ti trovets;”> o 6€ mAnEaS ‘EAAnuatt pos TOV adergov' ° Adergeé, Bon Gee.” Totavtyns b€ THs apyis yevouenns TOUS pev ovder TUvELooTas exTA ELS ele Kat ppixy 7 pos Ta Spapieva, pnte pevyev pate apuvvewv, adda punoe povny éxBadrew TOAPLOVTAS. TOV 6€ 7 a.pe-oKEVAT PEVOY éml Tov povov EXO TOU yuuvor aTrOdetEavtos TO Eidos, €v KUKA® TE PLEX OMEVOS Kai
7 pos 6 TL Tpéeere THY inbey TAHYyats aravTav
Kal oLerpe@ PEepopevwm Kal Kara TPOTWTOU Kal
KAT opGarpav SveR Avvo pevos OoTEp Onptov é €VEL-AeltTo Tats mavToV Kepow" admavras yap éde xatapéacbar Kat yevoacbar tov dovov. 610
cai Bpodtos avtT@® TANnyHY evéBare piav els TOV BouBava. rRéyetat 5€ UO TWwY ws Apa TpOs
Tous dAdoUS aTopmaxKopuevos Kat dtadépwv Sevdpo
KAKEL TO TMA Kai KExpayas, OTe Bpodtov cider
€o TAG MeVvOV TO Eigos, edethxveato Kata TAS
Keparns TO (watvov Kal Taphev EAUTOD, ELTE aT6
TUXNS elite UTO TOV KTELVOVTWY aTTwobEis, TpOS
Ty Bacw éd fs o Touarniov BeBnxev avopids.
Kal TON Kady pager avTny O povos, ws doKxety avTov épertavar 7H TUL pla TOU TONEMLLOU Hopaniov UTO TOOAS KEKALLEVOU Kal TEplLaTALpovTos UT ™ArnGous Tpaupatov. elxooe yap Kat T pla, da ety Aeyerau Kat TroAXal Katetpadnaay vr GAAnAwY, els EV aATrEpEeldoMEevoL Toa TANYAS TodavTas.
LXVII. Katetpyacpévou 6€ Tov’ avdpos 7 peév yepoucia, Kaitrep €is pécov edOovtos Bpovtou ws 598

CAESAR, -xvi. 5-Lxvn. 3

At almost the same instant both cried out, the smitten man in Latin: “ Accursed Casca, what doest thou?’’ and the smiter, in Greek, to his brother:
*‘ Brother, help!”

So the affair began, and those who were not privy to the plot were filled with consternation and horror at what was going on ; they dared not fly, nor go to Caesar’s help, nay, nor even utter a word. But those who had prepared themselves for the murder bared each of them his dagger, and Caesar, hemmed in on all sides, whichever way he turned confronting blows of weapons aimed at his face and eyes, driven hither and thither like a wild beast, was entangled in the hands of all; for all had to take part in the sacrifice and taste of the slaughter. Therefore Brutus also gave him one blow in the groin. And it is said by some writers that although Caesar defended him- self against the rest and darted this way and that and cried aloud, when he saw that Brutus had drawn his dagger, he pulled his toga down over his head and sank, either by chance or because pushed there by his murderers, against the pedestal on which the statue of Pompey stood. And the pedestal was drenched with his blood, so that one might have thought that Pompey himself was presiding over this vengeance upon his enemy, who now lay prostrate at his feet, quivering from a multitude of wounds. For it is said that he received twenty-three; and many of the conspirators were wounded by one an- other, as they struggled to plant all those blows in one body.

LXVII. Caesar thus done to death, the senators, although Brutus came forward as if to say something

Tt /Tepl TOV TET pay LEvov epobvTos, OUK dvacyxopéevn Ova Oupav efemimre Kal pevyouea KaTe-TANTE TAPAXTS «al déous dm opou TOV dij pov, @OTE TOUS pev oLKlas Krélew, TOUS 6€ aTroAEL TEL
Tpamevas Kal XPnpatic Tnpla, O popu b€ xo pely TOUS Lev el TOV TOTOV orropevous TO mabos, TOUS
b¢ éxetOev € EWPAKOTAS. "Avtevios 6é Kal Aém6os ol padiora iro Kaicapos Umexduvres els oikias érépas Kkatéduyov. ot O€ TTeEpi Bpobrov, Oa TEP Hoav ete Oeppot T@ pove, yupra Ta Ein
SercvuvTes, apa TAVTES amo TOU BoureuTnpiov TVTTPAPEVTEs €X@povy els TO Kamitoduov, ov pevryovaty €otKoTEs, GANA para pardpol Kal Jap-panréor, TapaKkarovyTes emt Thy éhevdepiay TO wAHG0s Kab T poo Sex opeVvoL Tovs api Tous TOY eEVTUYXavOVTOY. EvLot be Kal cuvave Barvov av-Tots Kal KaTepiryvuc ay EAUTOUS as HETETXNKOTES Tov &pyou Kal T poem orovyTo Tv Ookav, wv ny kat Vaios ‘Oxraovios cal Aévrrdos LariwOrp.
ovuTor pev ovv Ths aAralovetas Sixnv &dwxav UoTEpoY UTTO ‘Avte@viov kal tov véov Kaicapos avatpebevres Kal poe THS b0Ens, buy amréOynoKOV, aTroAava aVTEs anwatia TOV AAAWY. ovdE yap ov Kcodabovtes avrous Tis mpakews, GANG THS BovrAncews THY Sixny éaBov.

Mc” jpyépav 5€ TaV Trept Bpodrov Kate OovTwv Kal TOlNT apEVvOV ovyous, o pev Onuos ove duaxe-paivev ovTe ws éTawov Ta TET pary Leva, TOUS Aeyouevors 1 POooeLXeED, aXn vrednhov TH TONAN
ciwtn Kaicapa pev olxtetpwr, aiSovpevos Se Bpodtov, 7 8€ cuyKAnTOs auynotias Twas Kal 600

740

CAESAR, txvir. 1-4

about what had been done, would not wait to hear him, but burst out of doors and fled, thus filling the people with confusion and helpless fear, so that some of them closed their houses, while others left their counters and places of business and ran, first to the place to see what had happened, then away from the place when they had seen. Antony and Lepidus, the chief friends of Caesar, stole away and took refuge in the houses of others. But Brutus and his partisans, just as they were, still warm from the slaughter, displaying their daggers bare, went all in a body out of the senate-house and marched to the Capitol, not like fugitives, but with glad faces and full of confidence, summoning the multitude to freedom, and welcoming into their ranks the most distinguished of those who met them. Some also joined their number and went up with them as though they had shared in the deed, and laid claim to the glory of it, of whom were Caius Octavius and Lentulus Spinther. These men, then, paid the penalty for their imposture later, when they were put to death by Antony and the young Caesar, with- out even enjoying the fame for the sake of which they died, owing to the disbelief of their fellow men. For even those who punished them did not exact a penalty for what they did, but for what they wished they had done.

On the next day Brutus came down and held a discourse, and the people listened to what was said without either expressing resentment at what had been done or appearing to approve of it; they showed, however, by their deep silence, that while they pitied Caesar, they respected Brutus. The senate, too, trying to make a general amnesty and 601

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, 4 A Fuel, \ ¢
cuuBaces mpadttovca tract Kaicapa pév ws
\ A lal ,
Oeov tipav eyndicato Kal xively pnd TO puKpo-
A tA n
TaTov wv éxelvos dpxwv éBovrevce, Tois dé TreEpt
a i \ Bpodrov évapyias te duéverpe Kal Tras aTrédwxe

e b) \
MpeTovcas, WaoTe TavTas ol~cPat TA TpayyaTa
/
KaTaoTacl eye Kal avyKpaciy aTeidnpévar THY
,
aptoTny.
LXVITI. ’Esel 56 trav dcaPneav tov Katoapos 9 A ¢ 4 4 € J e / avayGerca@yv evpebn dedopevn Pwpaiwy éexaot@
na 3
docs aktoNoyos, kal TO c@ua KoutCopevov ou
bJ A b] ? “a nw ,
ayopas ¢Gedcavto Tais mANnyais brarerwBrypévor,
9 \ a a
OUKETL KOTMOV Eiyev OSE TAELY AVTaV TO TANOOS, 9 . an \ fal , 9 9 n
GArAa TO pev vexp@ Tepiawpevoavtes €& ayopas
, \ / \ , ¢ a ? A
Bapa Kal KuyKrt6as Kat TpaTélas Udiay avtov
Kal KaTéxavoav, apdpevot b€ darovs dLaTrUpoUsS
4 fa
€Geov emi Tas oikias TOV aYNpHKOTwWY ws KaTA-J , an hrEEovtes, AArou b€ Efoltwr TavTayoce TIS To-News TUAAaBEV Kal dtacTacacGat Tovs avdpas
“A ia ld \
Cnrovvtes. ols éxeivwy pev ovdeis amnvTnceD, 4 / ara ev Teppaypevor mavtes Hoav. Kivvas 6€
a ,
tis Tov Kaicapos étalipwy etTvye pév, OS hact, THS TWAPWYNMEVNS VUKTOS OLY EWPAKwS ATOTOY
90 / \ e \ La / ae “ a edoxer yap Uo Katcapos éml detrvov xareio bat, \ 14 n ¢ >] n
mapattovpevos b€ ayecOa THs Yetpos UT avTov
\ , > > > , € >] BA
yr) BovrOpevos, GAN avtiTetvwv. ws 8 NKovoev
“~ A 4 A
év ayopa TO cMpa Katec0a Tov Kaicapos, dva\ b : , & > \ fal , e , , otas éBadiley emi tin, Kaitep vpopwpmevos TE 4 ,
Thy OWly Gua Kai TupéTTMOV. Kat TIs OPOEvTOS
a nan nn - , 3.

avTov T@Y TO\NBY EfpaceEy ETEPH TOUVOLA TUP-602

CAESAR, txvit. 4 LXvVIt. 3

reconciliation, voted to give Caesar divine honours
and not to disturb even the most insignificant measure which he had adopted when in power ;
while to Brutus and his partisans it distributed provinces and gave suitable honours, so that everybody thought that matters were decided and settled in the best possible manner.
LXVIIJ. But when the will of Caesar was opened and it was found that he had given every Roman citizen a considerable gift, and when the multitude saw his body carried through the forum all disfigured with its wounds, they no longer kept themselves within the restraints of order and discipline, but after heaping round the body benches, railings, and tables from the forum, they set fire to them and burned it there; then, lifting blazing brands on high, they ran to the houses of the murderers with intent to burn them down, while others went every whither through the city seeking to seize the men themselves and tear them to pieces. Not one of these came in their way, but all were well barricaded. There was a certain Cinna, however, one of the friends of Caesar, who chanced, as they say, to have seen during the previous night a strange vision. He dreamed, that is, that he was invited to supper by Caesar, and that when he excused himself, Caesar led him along by the hand, although he did not wish to go, but resisted. Now, when he heard that they were burning the body of Caesar in the forum, he rose up and went thither out of respect, although he had misgivings arising from his vision, and was at the same time in a fever. At sight of him, one of the multitude told his name to another who asked him

603

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Oavopéva, Kaxeivos GAN, Kal Ota TravT@V evOuS
HV WS ovUTOS é€oTLVY 0 avnp TaY avnpnKoTwV Kai-gapa* Kal yap HY TLs Opwvupos éxeivm Kivvas év Tots TVVOLOTAapEVOLS, OY TOUTOV Elvat TpoAaBovTES
oppnoav evOrs Kal dieoctacay év péow TOV ar-Opwrov. TovTo padtaota SetoavTes of Tepi Bpod-Tov Kat Kagowov ov TOAA@Y MEp@Y SiayEevomeva@V
aTeyapnoay €K THS TOdEwWS. a Sé Kal mpdé~ayTes cal twabovtes éTENEUTHGAY, EV TOis TEL BpovTou ye ypaTTat.
LXIX. Ovnoxe S€ Kaicap ta pév ravta ye-yovws étn TevtnKkovta Kal €&, loprnio 6 émt-Buwoas ov TOAD TAEOV éT@Y TEcTUpar, iy dé TO Bio mavti apynv cal duvacteiay d1a Kwvdvvav
TOTOUT@Y OSLWKMY POLS KATELPyddaToO, TAaUTNS

ovdey OTL pn TovVoLAa povoyv Kal THY émridOovor KapTwodapevos Cofav Tapa TOV TOMTAY. Oo Mé-
Tor wéyas avTov daipwv, @ Tapa Tov Biov éypn-
CATO, KAL TEAEVTICAVTOS ETNKOAOVONTE TLULWPOS
Tov dovou, dua TE YRS TAGS Kal OadaTTNs éXav-VOV Kal aviyvEevoVv aYpL TOU pwNndéva LTE TAY
ATEKTOVOTM@V, UNXA Kal TOvS KAY OTLODY H YELpl Tov Epyou Ouyovtas } yvwpuns peTacyovtas érre€- edetv.
Oavpaciwtatoy d€ Tav pev avOpwrivwyv to mept Kacovovy nrTnGeis yap é€v Pirimmrots exeivo
TO Eihidio SvePOecpey Eavtov @ Kata Kaicapos
éypjaato: tay 6€ Belwy 6 TE péyas KOmNTNS (é€pdavn yap emi vuxtas émta peta THY Kaicapos 604

CAESAR, cxvin. 3-Lx1x. 3

what it was, and he to another, and at once word ran through the whole throng that this man was one of the murderers of Caesar. For there was among the conspirators a man who bore this same name of Cinna, and assuming that this man was he, the crowd rushed upon him and tore him in pieces among them.!. This more than anything else made Brutus and Cassius afraid, and not many days afterwards they withdrew from the city. What they did and suffered before they died, has been told in the Life of Brutus.
LXNIX. At the time of his death Caesar was fully fifty-six years old, but he had survived Pompey not much more than four years, while of the power and dominion which he had sought all his life at so great risks, and barely achieved at last, of this he had reaped no fruit but the name of it only, and a glory which had awakened envy on the part of his fellow citizens. However, the great guardian-genius of the man, whose help he had enjoyed through life, followed upon him even after death as an avenger of his murder, driving and tracking down his slayers over every land and sea until not one of them was left, but even those who in any way soever either put hand to the deed or took part in the plot were punished.
Among events of man’s ordering, the most amazing was that which befell Cassius; for after his defeat at

Philippi he slew himself with that very dagger which he had used against Caesar; and among events of divine ordering, there was the great comet, which showed itself in great splendour for seven nights

1 Cf. the Brutus, xx. 5 f.

adayiny Siam pers, celta npavia On) Kal TO mept 741 4 TOV iALov dpavpopa THS avyns. 6XOV yap EKELvov Tov eveauTov GX POs fev 0 KUKAOS Kal pappapuyas OUK eXov averennep, adpaves dé Kal dem Tov aw avtTov KAT HEL TO Geppor, @OTE TOV pev aépa dvopepov Kat Bapvv aadeveia THS Sax pivovans
auTov aréas emu epeo Gat, Tous 6€ Kaprovs 7 pe TéT TOUS Kal atedets aravO haat Kab TApakLac at 5 da THY Wuxpornra TOU TEPLEXOVTOS. partoTa dé To Bpovta ryevopLevoy pacpa THY Kaicapos £on-Awae ThHayHVY ov yevouevyny Geots apeatyy: Hv 5é
TOLOVOE. pérhov TOV oT paTov ef 'AB d6ou dtaBt-Bagew eis THY eT epay NIT ELPOV dveTt aveTo VUKTOS, Oorep elwOer, KATA TKNUHY, ov cabevowr, anra
hpovTilwv Tepi Tov MéXXOVTOS' AéEyETAaL yap OUTOS avnp yKlora 67) TOY oTPATH YOY Drvwdns yeveabat Kal TEL TOV EaVTO Ypovov eypnryopore pi
6 oar mepuKws* opou dé TWOS aicbécbat mept Thy Ovpav édo€e, Kab 7 pos TO TOD hUxXvoU has non KaTAapepopevou oKerapevos op eLO€ poBepav avd pos exprov TO péyeBos Kal xarerrob TO eidos.
ext aryels dé TO 7 p@TOV, WS éwpa pene 7 PATTOVTG Te pare POeyyouevov, anda eoTaTa ovyn Tapa,
ii THY Ki, NOwWTAa OOTLS cori, ATTOK PLVETAL
avT@ To dacpa: "'O aos, @ Bpovte, daipnwv KaKOS" Owes 5€ we wept Pidimovs." TOTE pev oy 6 Bpodtos evOapaas, " "Owpopat," ele: Kal TO Satpovtov evOus ext oO@y amTne. T@ O tkvovpevep Xpove mept TOUS Pirirrovs dvritax Debs
"AvT@Vip Kab Kaicape TH pev TpoTn ayn Kpa-Thoas To Kal EéavTov éTpéyrato Kab deEnXace
8 topGa@v to Katcapos otpatotedov, THy bé deuTéafter Caesar’s murder, and then disappeared ; also, the obscuration of the sun’s rays. For during all that year its orb rose pale and without radiance, while the heat that came down from it was slight and ineffectual, so that the air in its circulation was dark and heavy owing to the feebleness of the warmth that penetrated it, and the fruits, imperfect and half ripe, withered away and _ shrivelled up on account of the coldness of the atmosphere. But more than anything else the phantom that appeared to Brutus showed that the murder of Caesar was not pleasing to the gods ; and it was on this wise. As he was about to take his army across from Abydos to the other continent, he was lying down at night, as his custom was, in his tent, not sleeping, but thinking of the future ; for it is said that of all generals Brutus was least given to sleep, and that he naturally remained awake a longer time than anybody else. And now he thought he heard a noise at the door, and looking towards the light of the lamp, which was slowly going out, he saw a fearful vision of a man of unnatural size and harsh aspect. At first he was terrified, but when he saw that the visitor neither did nor said anything, but stood in silence by his couch, he asked him who he was. Then the phantom answered him : “Tam thy evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi.” At the time, then, Brutus said courage- ously : “I shall see thee; ’’ and the heavenly visitor at once went away. Subsequently, however, when arrayed against Antony and Caesar at Philippi, in the first battle he conquered the enemy in his front, routed and scattered them, and sacked the camp of Caesar; but as he was about to fight the second

607

PILLUTARCH’S LIVES

pav avT@ paxerbar peddovTe porta TO avTO pa-oa THS VUKTOS avis, oux MOTE TL ‘T poo etre, aNrG ouvels 7) Bpodros TO TET PW LEVOV eppipe dhépwy éautoyv eis Tov Kivduvoy. ov pny em eg ev arywvilopevos, arrAa THS TpoT Hs yevomerns ava-duyov mwpos Tt K PN LVades Kal To Eider Yyupye Tpoafarwv TO oTEpvoD, apa Kal gidov TLVOS, WS pact, cvvevippwoavtos THY TANY)V, am éOaver.
608

CAESAR, -xix. 8

battle, the same phantom visited him again at night, and though it said nothing to him, Brutus under- stood his fate, and plunged headlong into danger. He did not fall in battle, however, but after the rout retired to a crest of ground, put his naked sword to his breast (while a certain friend, as they say, helped to drive the blow home), and so died.!

1 Cf, the Brutus, xxxvi.; xlviii.; lii.

609

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

Achillas, 559, one of the guardians of Ptolemy XII. (Dionysus), and commander of his troops when Caesar came to Egypt. See the Pompey, Ixxvii.-lxxx.

Afranius, 531, 543, 567, Lucius A., @ warm partisan of Pompey, and one of his legates in Spain during the war with Sertorius. as well as in Asia during the Mithridatic war. He was consul in 60 B.c. He was killed after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.c.)

Agrippa, 215, Marcus Vipsanius A., fellow student of Octavius Caesar at Apollonia, and an intimate friend. He was one of the prominent and powerful men of the Augustan age. He lived 63-12 B.c.

Alcetas, 383, a brother of Perdiccas, whom he supported after Alexander's death. After the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.c., Alcetas forsook Eumenes, and was joined by Attalus, the brother-in-law of Perdiccas. They were defeated by Antigonus in 320, and Alcetas slew himself rather than fall into the hands of his enemy.

Alcidamas, 13, of Elea in Asia Minor, a popular rhetorician of the school of Gorgias, who resided at Athens 431-411 B.o.

Anaxarchus, 245, 307, 375 f., of Abdera, a philosopher who accompanied Alexander on his campaigns in Asia and won his favour by flattery. After the death of Alexander, Anaxarchus fell into the hands of Nicocreon.

king of Salamis in Cyprus.
whom he had offended, and was cruelly put to death.
Anaximenes, 71, 215, of Lampsacus, a rhetorician and historian, who lived circa 390-320 B.c.
Androcottus, 401 f., or Sandro-cottus, an Indian prince who achieved the conquest of northern India after Alexander's death.
Seleucus waged unsuccessful war upon him.
Anticleides, 357, of Athens, author of a history of Alexander about which nothing further is known Antigenes, 357, otherwise unknown.

Antigonus, 437, surnamed the One-eyed, king of Asia, and father of Demetrius Poliorcetes.
Antiochus of Ascalon, 89 f., called the founder of the Fifth Academy.
Cicero speaks of him in the highest and most appreciative terms
(Brutus, 91, 315.)
Antipater, 67-79, 219-437, regent of Macedonia during Alexander's absence, and of Alexander's empire after the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.c. He died
in 319.
Antiphanes, 11, 25, of Rhodes, a poet of the Middle Comedy, who began his career in 383 B.c.
Antonius, 109 f., 121, 137, Caius A., uncle of Mark Antony the triumvir. He served under Sulla 613

DICTIONARY OF

in the Mithridatic war, and was expelled from the senate for plundering the allies and wasting his substance. After the events here described, he went to his province of Macedonia, and in 59 B.C. was convicted of extortion there, in spite of the defence of his conduct by Cicero.

Apollonia, 195, 533 f., an ancient Greek city of Illyria. Towards the end of the Roman republic, it became a famous seat of learning.

Apollonius, 91 f., 447, son of Molon, and sometimes called Molon, a native of Alabanda in Caria, and a distinguished rhetorician. Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 90, 312; 91, 316.
Aristander of Telmessus, 227, 261, 905 f., 317,328, 369, 375, the chief soothsayer of Alexander, and probably the author of a work “On Prodigies ’’ referred to by Pliny and Lucian.
Aristobulus, of Cassandreia, 57, 261, 269, 273, 285, 357, 433, accompanied Alexander on his expedition and wrote a history of his campaigns, of which we know most from Arrian’s Anabasis.
Ariston, the Chian, 25, 75, a Stoic philosopher who flourished about 260 B.O.
Aristoxenus, 233, a pupil of Aristotle, and a philosopher of the Peripatetic school. Only fragments of his musical treatises have come down to us.
Arrhidaeus, 249, 437, a bastard son of Philip of Macedon. He was put to death by order of Olympias in 317 B.c.
Artemidorns, 595, of Cnidus, a teacher of rhetoric at Rome, and a friend of Caesar.

Artemisius, 265, see Daesius.

Attalus (1), 247, 251, one of Philip’s generals. After Philip’s death he was assassinated by order of Alexander.
Attalus (2), 383, one of Alexander’s chief officers, and the brother-in-law of Perdiccas. After the murder of Perdiccas, Attalus joined Alcetas, and was defeated and taken prisoner by Antigonus. See Alcetas.

B

Balbus, 583, Lucius Cornelius B.,a native of Gades in Spain, who came to Rome at the end of the war with Sertorius (72 B.C.). He served under Caesar both in Gaul and during the civil war, and was the manager of Caesar's property. After Caesar’s death Balbus was high in favour with Octavius. For the incident here noted, cf. Suetonius, Div. Jul. ie

Bessus, 349, 353, satrap of Bactria under Dareius III]., and commander of the Persian left wing at the battle of Arbela.
Bestia, 139, Lucius Calpurnius B., one of the conspirators with Catiline. Cicero was afterwards reconciled with him, and defended him unsuccessfully when accused of bribery in his candidacy for the praetorship in 57 B.C.

Bibulus, 473 f., Lucius Calpurnius B., aedile in 65 B.C., praetor in 62, and consul in 59, in each case a colleague of Julius Caesar. He died in 48.
Boédromion, 69, 317, the Attic month corresponding to parts of our September and October.
Brundisium, 181 f., 529, 533, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural point of departure from Italy to the East. and the chief naval station of the Romans in the Adriatic.
Brutus, 593, 597, Decimus Junius B., surnamed Albinus, was widely employed, highly esteemed, fully trusted. and richly rewarded by Julius Caesar, and yet joined his murderers. He was put to death by order of Antony in 43 B.c.
DICTIONARY OF

C

Caecilius, 7, Caecilius Calactinus, a native of Sicily, a distinguished rhetorician at Rome in the time of Augustus.
Calanus, 409, 417, one of the Indian philosophers called gymnosophists.

Calenus, 545, Quintus Fufius C., tribune of the people in 61 B.c., and praetorin 59 through Caesar' 8 influence, whom he ever afterwards faithfully served, holding high commands under him in Gaul and during the civil war. He died in 41 B.c.

Callias the Syracusan, 13, otherwise unknown.
Callisthenes, 303, 323, 327, 375-385, of Olynthus, a philosopher and historian, who accompanied Alexander on his expedition in the East until put to death by him in 328 B.c. Besides an account of Alexander's expedition, he wrote a history of Greece from 387 to 357 B.o.
Callistratus, 11, 13, 33, a distinguished orator and statesman at Athens,who flourished from about 380 to about 361 B.c., when he was condemned to death and fled the city.
Carneades, 89, of Cyren¢, head of the Academy at Athens in 156 B.c. (when he was one of an embassy of philosophers to Rome) and until his death in 129. See the Cato Major, xxii.
Casca, 597 f., Publius Servilius C., at this time tribune of the people. He fought in the battle of Philippi, and died soon afterwards. His brother, Caius Servilius Casca, had also been a friend of Caesar,and was a fellow couspirator.
Cassander, 33, 429, f., a son of Antipater the regent of Macedonia. He was master of Athens from 318 to 307 B.c., when Demetrins Poliorcetes took possession of the city. He died in 297 B.A.

Catulus, Quintus Lutatius C., 83., 133,357, 495. f., a leading aristocrat of the nobler sort, consul in 78 P.C., censor in 65, died in 60.

Chares (1), 215, a famous Athenian general, eeomne oe from 367 to 334 B Chares (2), “581, 295, 357, 381, 385, 419, of Mitylené, court. chamberlain’ of Alexander, and author of an anecdotical history of Alexander’s campaigns.
Cicero, 503, Quintus Tullius C., younger brother of the orator, served as legate under Caesar in Gaul, but went over to Pompey in the civil war. He fell a victim to the proscription of the triumvirs in 43 P.c.
Cimber, 597, Lucius Tillius C, had been a warm supporter of Caesar and was rewarded by him with the province of Bithynia, to which he retired after Caesar’s murder, and co-operated with Brutus and Cassius.

Cinna, 603 f., Caius Helvius C., see the Brutus, xx. 5 f. , and the Dict. of Proper ‘Names for Vol. vi.
Cithaeron, 57, the mountain range between Attica and Boeotia.
Citium, Citieans, 323, a city of Cyprus.
Cleitarchus, 357, a historian who accompanied Aléxander on his expedition to the East, and wrote a highly rhetorical account of it. He was the son of Deinon of Colophon, who was author of a history of Persia.
Cleitomachus, 87, 91, a Carthaginian by birth, ‘and a teacher of philosophy at Athens from about 146 B.c. to about 111. In 129 he succeeded Carneades as head of the New Academy.
Cleitus, 259, 267, 360-375, was commander of one of the two 615

DICTIONARY OF

companies of the ‘‘ companion ” cavalry, and at the time of his death had been made satrap of Bactria by Alexander.
Cleopatra (1), 247, 251, 297, 415,
soon after this put to cruel death by Olympias, together with her infant child, who was regarded as a rival of Alexander.
Cleopatra (2), 557 ff., queen of Egypt. See the Antony, xxv. ff.
Clodius. 151-171, 463-467, Publius
Claudius (Clodius) Pulcher, youngest son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in the Su//a, xxix. 3. He helped to demoralise the soldiers of Lucullus (Lucullus, xxxiv.), and became a venomous foe of Cicero.
Coenus, 397, son-in-law of Par-menio, and one of the ablest of Alexander’s officers. He _ died shortly after the army had begun its return from India.
Collytus, 29, an Attic deme, or township.
Cornificius, 545 (Corfinius), Quintus
C., a quaestor under Caesar in 48 B.¢c., and a friend of Cicero.
In 45 Caesar made him governor of Syria, and in 44 he had the province of Africa, where he fought against the second trium.
virate, and fell in battle.
Craterus, 345-383, one of the ablest of Alexander’s officers, and a man of noble character. He fell in battle against Eumenes in ae B.o. See the Eumenes,
vi. ff:

Cratippus, the Peripatetic, 143, of Mitylene, a contemporary and intimate friend of Cicero,
and a teacher of Cicero's son.
See the Brutus, xxiv. 1 f.
Ctesibius, 13, perhaps the Cynic philosopher of Chalcis in Euboea, who was the instructor of Antigonus Doson, king of Macedonia
(229-221 B.C.).
Curio, 461, 515-519, Caius Scribonius C., an able orator, but reckless and profligate. He was tribune of the people in 50 B.c., and sold his support to Caesar, 616

who made him praetor in Sicily in 49. Thence he crossed into Africa to attack the Pompeians
there, but was defeated and slain (Caesar, Bell. Civ., ii, 23-44.)
D

Daesius, 265, 433, a Macedonian month answering to the Attic Thargelion. i.e. May-June. It followed Arteniisius.
Dareius, 263 ff., Dareius IIT., surnamed Codomannus, came to the throne of Persia in 336 B.c.
Deinon, 333, of Colophon, see Cleitarchus.
Demaratus the Corinthian, 247 f., 337, 385, known only from these incidents.
Demetrius (1), 33, Demetrius
Poliorcetes, son of Antigonus
(cf. Plutarch's Demetrius, ix.).
Demetrius (2), the Phalerean, 23-27 35, 71, a celebrated rhetorician and orator (346-283 B.c.). He was guardian, or regent, of Athens for Cassander from 318 to 307.

Demetrius (3), surnamed Pheido, 383, son of Pythonax, one of the "'companion " cavalry (Arrian, Anab., iv. 12, 5).
Demetrius (4), the Magnesian, 39, 69, a Greek grammarian contemporary with Cicero.
Diogenes of Sinopé, 259, 409, a Cynic philosopher, born 412 B.o. He became a pupil of Antisthenes the Socratic at Athens, and changed from a dissolute to a most austere life. He died at Corinth in 323, according to Plutarch (Morals, p. 717 c) on the same day as Alexander the Great.
Dionysius of Magnesia, 91, a distinguished rhetorician. Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 91, 316.
Diopeithes, 215, an Athenian general, father of the poct Menander. He was arraigned by the Macedonian party at Athens, and was defended by Demosthenes in the extant oration '' On the Chersonese."' Dolabella, 191 f., 449, 563, 589, the profligate and debt-ridden son-in-law of Cicero, lived 70-43 B.c. He took part with Caesar in 49, but approved of his murder, and gained the consulship for the remainder of the year 44. He was outlawed and declared a public enemy on account of his extortions in Asia, and committed suicide.

Domitius (1), 179, 527 f., 545, 549, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, consul in 54 B.c. He was Cato’s son-in-law, and one of the ablest supporters of the aristocratic party. He opposed both Pompey and Caesar until their quarrel, then sided with Pompey.

He met his death at Pharsalus.
Domitius (2), 547, 561, Gnaeus
Domitius Calvinus, consul in 53 B.C. He was a _ supporter of Bibulus against Caesar in 59, but after 49 an active supporter of Caesar. After the battle of Pharsalus he was Caesar’s lieutenant in Asia.
Duris, 47, 57, 261, 357, of Samos,
a pupil of Theophrastus, historian and, for a time, tyrant,
oe Samos, lived circa "350-280 De eraehban. 181, 529, a city on the coast of Illyricuin, opposite to Brundisium, known in Greek history as Epidamnus. It was a free state, and sided with the Romans consistently.
E

Eratosthenes, 23, 75, 229, 317, of Cyrené, librarian at Alexandria, most distinguished as geographer and chronologist, a writer also on philosophy and ethics, 275-
194 B.C.
Erigvius, 251. of Mitylené, an officer in Alexander’s army.
He fell in battle 328 B.o
F

Favonius, 497, 525, 543, Marcus
F., called the ‘“‘ Ape of Cato,” was aedile in 52 R.c.,and praetor in 49. He joined Pompey in the East, notwithstanding personal enmity to him, and accompanied him in his tlight from Pharsalus

(cf. the Pompey, \xxiii. 6 f.).
He was put to death by order of Octavius Caesar after the battle of Philippi (42 B.o.)
G

Gabinius, 157, 161, Aulus G., tribune of the ‘people in 66 B.C. , praetor in 61, consul with Piso in 58, the year during which Cicero was exiled. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking bribes, and exiled. He died in 48.
Granicus, 263 f., a river in the Troad "emptying into the Propontis.
H

Hagnon, the Teian, 343, 383, afterwards admiral under ” Antigonus.
Harpalus, 61 f., 243, 251, 333, 347,
Alexander’s faithless "treasurer.
Antipater demanded his surrender by the Athenians, who put him in prison, whence he escaped and went to Crete.
Here he was assassinated.
Hecataeus, of Eretria, 357, known ouly from this citation.
Hegesias, the Magnesian, 231, a rhetorician and historian who flourished in the early part of the third century B.C., and was noted for his inane conceits.
Helicon, 323, son of Acesas, of Salamis in Cyprus. Father and son were famous weavers of embroidered textures, probably in the latter part of the fifth century B.c.
617

DICTIONARY OF

Hephaestion, 307, 341, 343, 347, 361, 367, 381, 383, 425, 433, officer and beloved friend of Alexander.
Heracleides, 299, of Alexandria, a historian who flourished under Ptolemy IV. (222-205 B.c.)
Hermioné, 333, a city in southern Argolis.
Hermippus, 13, 27, 71. 75, 381, of Smyrna, a distinguished philosopher and biographer who was active in the second half of the third century B.o.
Herodes, 143, probably the business Manager of Cicero’s friend Atticus. Cf. Cicero ad Att., vi. 1 ee
I

Idomeneus, 39, 57, of Lampsacus, a pupil and friend of Epicurus (342-270 B.c.) author of biographical works entitled ‘‘ The Socratics’’ and ‘‘ The Demagogues.

folas, 429, 487, the time and manner of his death are unknown. He is last mentioned in connection with the marriage of hls sister to Perdiccas, in 322 B.c. lon, 7, of Chios, a popular poet at Athens between 452 and 421 B.c., and author of a_ prose work entitled ‘ Sojourns,” in which he recounted his experiences with famous men of his time.
Isaeus, 13, a professional writer of speeches for the law-courts 420—350 B.c., and numbered among the ten great Attic orators.
Isauricus, 457, 533, Publius Servilius Vatia I., deserted the aristocratic party to support Caesar, but after Caesar's death returned to his former allegiance. He tried with more or less success to hold a middle course as between Antony and Octavius Caesar.

Isocrates, 13, 215, the celebrated Attic orator and _ rhetorician, 436-338 B.C.

Ister, 357, a slave, and afterwards a friend of Callimachus_ the Alexandrian grammarian and poet (250-220 B.c.), a voluminous writer, whose works are all lost.

L

Labienus, 181, 487, 527, fled to Africa after the battle of Pharsalus, and after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.0.), to Spain, where he was the immediate cause of the defeat of the Pompeians at Munda, and was slain (45 B.C.).

Lacritus. the rhetorician, 71, of Phaselis in Pamphylia, a pupil of Isocrates about 350 B.c.

Laelius, 219, perhaps the Laelius Decimus who was prominent during the civil war as a partisan of Pompey, and held military command under him.

Lentulus (1), 513, 519, 525. Lucius Cornelius L. Crus, on the outbreak of civil war joined Pompey in the East, fled with him from Pharsalus, and was put to death influence, but took the field for Pompey at the outbreak of civil war in 49. He also, like Lentulus Crus, fled with Pompey to Egypt, but got safe to Rhodes.

See the Pompey,

Lentulus (3), 123-127, 135 f., 141, 459, Publius Cornelius L.. surnamed Sura, was consul in 71 B.c., but in the following year was expelled from the senate. This led him to join the conspirators with Catiline.

Lentulus (4), 189, the name by which Dolabella was sometimes called after his adoption into the plebeian family of Gneius Lentulus in order that he might become a candidate for the tribuneship. Dolabella was Tullia’s third husband. See Tullia.

Leonnatus, 283, 343, 405, one of Alexander’s most ’ distinguished officers. He fell in 322 B.C., while attempting to relieve Antipater at Lamia.

Leosthenes, 67, 215, an Athenian, general of the league for expelling the Macedonians from Greece after the death of Alexander. He died during the siege of Lamia.

Lepidus, 201, 591, 601, Marcus Aemilius L., joined the party of Caesar in 49 B.c., was Caesar’s magister equitum in 47 and 45, and his consular colleague in 46. After Caesar’s murder he sided with Antony, and as member of the second triumvirate received Spain as his province, then, in 40, Africa. Here he remained till 36, when he was deposed from the triumvirate.

He: lived till 13 B.o.
Lucullus, 449, Marcus Licinius L., younger brother of the great Lucullus, also called by adoption M. Terentius Varro Lucullus, consul in 73 B.c., and afterwards a warm friend of Cicero. He died before the civil war.
Lysimachus, 357, 383, an officer of Alexander, not prominent during Alexander's life, but afterwards king of Thrace. He fell in battle with Seleucus, 281 B.c.
a

Maecenas, 215, Caius Cilnius M., the patron of poets and artists during the reign of Augustus, whose prime minister he was.
Marcellus, 195, 513 f., Caius Claudius M., consul in '50 Ce a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Caesar. But after the outbreak of the civil war he remained quietly and timidly in Italy, and was finally pardoned by Caesar. As husband of Octavia, the sister of Octavius Caesar, he had _ considerable influence. He is last heard of about 41 B.C.
PROPER NAMES

Marsyas 43, of Pella in Macedonia, author of a history of his own country from earliest times down to 332 B.c.
Mazaeus, 321, 343, a Persian officer under Dareius III., afterwards made satrap of Babylon by Alexander.
Megabyzus, 349, probably a priest or keeper of the temple of Artemis at Ephesus.

Menippus, the Carian, 91, the most accomplished rhetorician of his Bue in Asia. Cf. Cicero, Brutus, Metellus ‘(), 119, 155, Quintus Caecilius M. Celer, consul in 60 B.C., and an influential aristocrat. He was a violent opponent of Caesar during the latter’s consulship in 59, in which year he died.
Metellus (2) 529 f., Lucius Caecilius M. Creticus, little known apart from the ee here narrated.
Metellus (3), 139, 147, f.. Quintus M. Nepos, a brother of Metellus Celer, a partisan of Pompey, and for a time a violent opponent of Cicero. As consul, however, in 57 B.c., he did not oppose the recall of Cicero from banishment. He died in 55.
Metellus (4), 479, Quintus Metellus Pius, consul with Sulla in 80 B.c., and one of Sulla’s most successful generals. Against Sertorius in Spain he was less fortunate. He died about 63.
Murena, 117, 171, 213, Lucius Licinius M., had been quaestor, aedile, and praetor, and had served under Lucullus against Mithridates (Lweullus, xix. 7). He was accused of bribery in his canvass for the consulship, was defended by MHortensius and Cicero, aud acquitted.
619

DICTIONARY OF

N

Nearchus, 251, 411, 415, 427, 433f., the trusted admiral of Alexander.

Nicocreon, 309, king of Salamis in Cyprus. After the death of Alexander he took sides with Ptolemy of Egypt.
Nonacris, 437, a town in Arcadia, near which the water of the river Styx descended from a cliff.
O
oo 417, Dareius II., 424-404
Glens O97. 2314 247, 200s 20
341, 415, 437, 439, Alexander's mother. She was put to death in 316 B.c., by order of Cassander

Guscieritiia: 243, 261, 357, 395, 399, 409, 411, a Greek who accompanied Alexander in Asia and wrote an account of his campaigns. His work contained valuable information, but was full of exaggerations and falsehoods.
Oppius, 485, Caius O., an intimate friend of Caesar, "and author (probably) of Lives of Marius, Pompey, and Caesar.
Oricum, 533, a town on the coast of Epirus, 'north of Apollonia.
Oxyartes, 389, a Bactrian prince, father of Roxana. Alexander made him satrap of northern India. He supported EKumenes until the death of that officer, and then came to terms with Antigonus.
P

Panaetius, the philosopher, 33, chief founder of the Stoic school at Rome, flourishing between 150 and 110 B.c.
Pappus, 75. otherwise unknown.

Parmenio, 231, 249, 265, 277, 285f., i oI BIT 327, 343, '361ff., 369, 620

an able and trusted commander
under both Philip and Alexander.
Pasicrates, 309, king of Soli in Cyprus.
Patavium, 555, an ancient and important city of Venetia, the modern Padua.
Paulus, 515, Lucius Aemilius P., consul in 50 B.c. with Claudius Niarcellus. He had been a violent opponent of Caesar. Cf.
the Pompey, lvili. 1.
Pelops, of Byzantium, 143, not otherwise Known.
Perdiccas, 79, 263, 347, 437, the officer to whom the dying Alexander is said to have given his signet-ring, and who was regent for the royal successors of Alexander till 321 B.o.
Peucestas, 347f., 405, a distinguished officer of Alexander, and satrap of Persia. It was chiefly due to him that Eumenes met with disaster in 316 B.c. See the Eumenes, xiv. ff.
Pharmacusa, 445, a small island off the coast of Caria, about 120
furlongs south of Miletus.
Philip (1), 195, Lucius Marcius
Philippus, consul in 56B.¢., married Atia, the widow of Caius Octavius, thus becoming the stepfather of Octavius Caesar.
He remained neutral during the civil wars.
Philip (2), 399, made satrap of India by Alexander in 327 B.C.
In the following year he was assassinated by his mercenaries.

Philip (3), the Chalcidian, 357, known only from this citation.
Philip (4), of Theangela (in Caria), Soe. author of a history of Caria which 1 is cited by Athenaeus and fa

Philistus, 243, the Syracusan, an eyewitness of the events of the Athenian siege of Syracuse, which he described thirty years later in a history of Sicily.
Philo, the Theban, 357, known only from this citation.
Philon, the Academic, 87, 91, a native of Larissa in Thessaly, DICTIONARY OF and a teacher of rhetoric and philosophy at Athens and Rome during Cicero’s lifetime. Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 89, 306.

Philotas, 249, 255, 317, 343, 361-369, the son of Parmenio.
Philoxenus, 243, of Cythera, one of the most distinguished dithyrambic poets of Greece (435-380 B.c.), resident at Athens and Syracuse.
Phylarchus, 67, an Athenian historian, author of a history of Greece from 272 to 220 B.c. Plutarch is heavily indebted to him in his Agis and Cleomenes, and Pyrrhus.
Piso (1), 127, 457, Caius Calpurnius P., consul in 678B.¢c., and a violent aristocrat. As pro-consul he plundered his province of Gallia Narbonensis. He must have died before the civil war.
Piso (2), 157, 475, 531, Lucius Cal purnius P., father-in-law of Julius Caesar. "He plundered his province of Macedonia shamelessly, and was recalled in 55 B.c. He is covered with invective in Cicero's oration de Provine. Cons. He took no part in the civil war that followed.

Piso (3), 161, 189, Caius Calpurnius P. Frugi, married Cicero's daughter Tullia in 63 B.c. He was quaestor in 58, and used every endeavour to secure the recall of Cicero from exile, but died before his father-in-law's return. Cicero mentions him often with gratitude.
Pollio, 523, 553, 567, Caius Asinius bare: famous orator, poet, and historian, 76 B.c.—4 A.D. He was an intimate friend of Julius Caesar, fought under him in Spain and Africa, and after Caesar's death supported Octavius Caesar. After 29, he devoted himself entirely to literature, and was a patron of Vergil and Horace. None of his works are extant.
Polycleitus, 3857, of Larissa in Thessaly, one of the numerous historians of uncertain date.

Poseidonius, 91, of Apameia in Syria, a Stoic philosopher, pupil of Panaetius of Athens, contemporary with Cicero, who often speaks of him and occasionally corresponded with him. CT, Cicero, de Natura Deorum, 1, 3, 6.
Potamon, the Lesbian, 399, a rhetorician who enjoyed the favour of the emperor Tiberius (14-37 A.D.), and was an authority on the career of Alexander.

Potheinus, 557f., one of the guardians of the young Ptolemy when Caesar came to Egypt.
Ptolemy, 251, 337, 357, one of the ablest of Alexander's officers, and afterwards king of Egypt. He wrote a history of Alexander's campaigns which is the chief authority for Arrian.

Pyanepsion, 71, 77, the Athenian month corresponding to parts of October and November.
Python (or Pithon), 435, son of Craterus, one of the seven select officers forming the immediate bodyguard of Alexander. After the death of Alexander he supported Perdiccas, but went over to Antigonus and Seleucus when they made war upon Eumenes.
Alexander, of

RK

Roxana, 359, 487, daughter of Oxyartes the Bactrian prince. With her son by Alexander she was taken to Macedonia by Antipater. Mother and son were put to death in 311 B.c. by order of Cassander.
8

Samothrace, 227, a large island in the northern Aegean sea, about oy miles south of the Thracian coast.
621

DICTIONARY OF

Scaurus, 83, Marcus Aeinilius S. Father and son of this name were prominent in the Roman aristocracy from 126 to 52 B.c., the former having been consul in 115. Both were venal, but the first was often highly praised, and the second was defended, by Cicero.

Scipio (1), 479, Publius Cornelius 8. Africanus Major, the conqueror of Hannibal, 234-183 B.c.
Scipio (2), 481, 517, 519, 541, 545, 549, 563f., 571, Publius Cornelius Scipio Nasica, adopted by Metellus Pius, and therefore often called Metellus Scipio, was Pompey's colleague in the consulship for the latter part of the year 52 8.C., and a determined foe of Caesar. He killed himself after the battle of Thapsus. Though a Scipio by birth, a Metellus by adoption, and a father-in-law of Pompey, he was rapacious and profligate.
Seleucus, 349, 401, 435, founder of the Seleucid dynasty in Syria.
Silanus, 117, 127, 131f., Decimus Junius S., stepfather of Marcus Brutus, had been aedile in 70 B.C.

Sotion, 399, a native of Alexandria, who lived in the first part of the first century A.D.
Stateira, 419, 437, daughter of Dareius III., and wife of Alexander. Stateira was also her mother's name (pp. 311ff.).
T

Tanusius, 497, Tanusius Geminus, a Roman historian of Cicero's time (probably), the nature and scope of whose work is uncertain.
Telestes, 243, of Selinus in Sicily, won a dithyrambic victory at Athens in 401 B.c. A few of his verses are preserved in Athenaeus (pp. 616 and 617, 626a, 637a).

Thapsacus, 415, an important town

comilanding a crossing of the Euphrates, east of Upper Syria.
Theodectes, 273, a distinguished rhetorician and tragic poet, a pupil of Isocrates, Plato, and Aristotle, and an imitator of Euripides. He flourished in the time of Philip of Macedon, and lived for the most part at Athens.
Theodotus, 555, a rhetorician of Chios (or Samos), put to death by Brutus. See the Pompey, Ixxvii. 2; lxxx. 6.
Theophilus, 323, an artist in metal work, not otherwise known.
Theophrastus, 25, 41, 141, 233, the most famous pupil of Aristotle, and his successor as head of the Peripatetic school of philosophy at Athens. He was born at Eresos in Lesbos, and died at Athens in 287 B.c., at the age of eighty-five.
Theopompus, 9, 31, 35, 43, 51, 63, of Chios, a fellow-pupil of Isocrates with Ephorus, wrote anti-Athenian histories of Greece from 411 to 394B.c., and of ay of Macedon from 360 to Theramenes, 183, a brilliant Athenjan naval commander who cooperated successfully with Alcibiades during the closing years of the Peloponnesian was. He was one of the Thirty Tyrants, and favoured a moderate course, but fell a victim to the jealousy and hatred of Critias.

Thurii, 71, a colony of Athens in Lucania, Italy, founded under Pericles.
Tralles, 555, a large and flourishing city 1n north-western Caria.
Tullia, 189, daughter of Cicero and Terentia, married Caius Calpurnius Piso in 63 B.C., was a widow in 57, married Furius Crassipes In 56, from whom she was soon divorced. In 50 she married MDolabella (Lentulus) from whom she was divorced in 46. She bore him a son in 45, but died soon after at her father's house in Tusculum., DICTIONARY OF

Vv

Varro, 531, the most learned Roman scholar, the most voluminous Roman author, and yet no literary recluse. He held high command under Pompey in the war against the pirates, the Mithridatic war, and in 'Spain with Afranius. "After the campaign in Spain he joined Pompey in Greece, but after the battle at Pharsalus threw himself on Caesar's Mercy, was pardoned by him, and restored to literary activity. He was at this time nearly seventy years old.
PROPER NAMES

x

Xenocles, of Adramyttium, 91, a distinguished rhetorician, mentioned by Strabo (p. 614). Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 91, 316.
Xenocrates, 245, of Chalcedon,

396-314 B.c., an associate of Aeschines the Socratic and Plato, and head of the Academy at Athens for twenty-five years.
623

a ee a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES.
®
VoLumeE I.
THESEUS AND ROMULUS.
LYCURGUS AND NUMA.
SOLON AND PUBLICOLA.
Vouume II.
THEMISTOCLES AND CAMILLUS.
ARISTIDES AND CATO MAJOR.
CIMON AND LUCULLUS.
VouuME III.

PERICLES AND FABIUS MAXIMUS.
NICIAS AND CRASSUS.
Vo.tumeE IV.

ALCIBIADES AND CORIOLANUS.
LYSANDER AND SULLA.
VoLumME VY.

AGESILAUS AND POMPRY.
PELOPIDAS AND MARCELLUS.
VoLumME VI.

DION AND BRUTUS.
TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS PAULUS.
VoutumE VII.

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO.
ALEXANDER AND CAESAR.
PLUTARCH’S
- LIVES
WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
Vill
SERTORIUS AND EUMENES

PHOCION AND CATO THE YOUNGER
LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN

NEW. YORK : G. P. PUTNAM’S SONS
MCMXIX j
.

«
#6
»
e.sr @
a
-s*
° 3
°
e
%e “%*wve
e
.
°@
e%ee
» e
o %
a oe
reg?
? ae
' r
Sa
ave
? ’
oy?
over y
o
.
e@eaave
e2eee
. e ete
eles
°
s
e ~ o7
e

.f e
s, e
e @eenr,
S e oe "6
%
“ee Pad
1a

PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agree- ment between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any important departure from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the manuscripts of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. None of the Lives presented in this volume are con- tained in the two oldest and best manuscripts—the Codex Sangermanensis (S*) and the Codex Seiten- stettensis (S), or in the excellent Paris manuscript No. 1676 (F*). Their text therefore rests principally on the Paris manuscripts Nos. 1671, 1673, and 1674 (ACD). No attempt has been made, naturally, to © furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical ap- paratus. For these, the reader must be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846, 4 voll., 8vo), or to the rather inaccessible text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler, in the Teubner

PREFATORY NOTE

Library of Greek and Latin texts (Vol. III.,- Fase. I. was published in 1915). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.
All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared and utilized, including those © of the Sertorius and Cato by Professor Long.

B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.
October, 1919.
vi

CONTENTS

PREFATORY NOTE .. 1... 0 es + eee eee v

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION ... Viii
eADTORAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES . . .. « ix SERTORIUS: 24) u:-8 % & & 4 ed ep be a ee Oe 1
SUMERIh sb a 8 he ee en 77
COMPARISON OF SERTORIUS AND EUMENES. 137

PHOCION . e : e ry e e e . a e ca e ° ° e E ® e e e 143 CATO THE YOUNGER ....¢.. +. +e eee eee 235

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES ..... £=413

ORDER OF THK PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VoutuME I.

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VotumeE II.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.
(9) ‘Aristides and Cato the

Elder.
Comparison. .
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison. |
VovuumeE III.
(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-
imus. .
Comparison.
. (14) Nicias and Crassus. .
Comparison.
~Votume IV.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
nus.
Comparison.
(12) Lysafder and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLuME V.
(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.

Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
Vill

oom

Vouume VI.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemiliug
Paulus.
Comparison.
VotumME VII.

(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
(17) Alexander and Julius

- Gaesar.

VoruME VIII.

_ (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

Comparison.

_ (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

VonumE IX.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
(11) bi and Caius Marius.
Vout ME X.

' (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and

Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.

ininus.
Comparison.

VotumeE XI.
| (10) Philopoemen and Flam-

) (24) Aratus.

(23) Artaxerxes.
(25) Galba.
| (26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.
(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
| (7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus,
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius,
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Weiesvee,

(24) Aratus. P

(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.

ix

SERTORIUS

VOL. VIII.

2

ZEPTOQPIO2R

I. @avpactoy pev lows ovK éorw, év ameipe

Paris
Edition)
TO xpove THS TUXNS GaNAOTE GANWS peovons, éml a. 1624, |

TavTa CULT TOMATA TOAAAKLS catapéped Gar TO avTopaTov. elite yap ovK Eat TOV UTOKELMEVOY
apa wevov TO TANS, agpOovov Exel THIS TOY dtroTehoupevey OMOLOTNTOS Xepnyov v) TOXN Thy THS ANS evmropian, elt’ &« TiveV apio pévery app oumTrEKET AL Ta mpdypata, TONNGKLS avayKn TavTa yiverOau bia TOV auTav Tepatyopeva. érrel & arya OvTEs éveot 7a Towaira ourd-youow totopia Kal aKof TOV Kara TUXNY ryeryov0-TOV doa Loyeo pod Kal Tpovoias épyors EouKer, oloy 6 dt. dvetv “Artewv yevopevey eupavar, Tob pev Xvpov, tov oé "Apkdoos, é ExaTEpOS TO vos aT @NETO, dveiv dé “AxTarover, 0 pev bro TOV KUVvOV, 0 © UT TOY épac tap dveotraaOn, duety dé LanTeaver, up’ ov pep évixnOnoay Kapyxndovoe mporepov, U ug ov Oe aTepov dponv avnpeOnoay, éadrw dé 7} "TAcov op’ ‘Hpaxréous dua Tas Aaope-Sovtos immous Kal wo ‘Ayapépvovos dua Tov
Soupeiou mpocayopevOévtos immou, tTpitov & wre
1 The story of a Lydian Attis who was killed by a wild boar is told by Pausanias, vii. 17,5; that of the Arcadian Attis is unknown.
2 The Actaeon, son of Aristaeus, who saw Artemis bathing,

2

I. Ir is perhaps not to be wondered at, since fortune is ever changing her course and time is infinite, that the same incidents should occur many times, spontaneously. For, if the muJtitude of elements is unlimited, fortune has in the abundance of her material an ample provider of coincidenees ; and if, on the other hand, there is a limited number of elements from which events are interwoven, the same things must happen many times, being brought ~ to pass by the same agencies. Now, there are some who delight to collect, from reading and hearsay, such accidental happenings as look like works of calculation and forethought. They note, for example, that there were two celebrated persons called Attis, one a Syrian,! the other an Arcadian, and that both were killed by a wild boar; that there were two Actaeons, one of whom was torn in pieces by his dogs, the other by his lovers? ; that there were two Scipios, by one of whom the Carthaginians were conquered in an earlier war, and by the other, in a later war, were destroyed root and branch ; that Ilium was taken by Heracles on account of the horses of Laomedon, by Agamemnon by means of what is called the wooden was changed by the goddess into a stag and devoured b ai he his own dogs. An Actaeon, son of Melissus, was belov Archias of Corinth, who sought to take him away by Poise

The friends of Actaeon resisted, and jin the struggle Actaeon was torn to death (Plutarch, Morals, p- 772).

3
B 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Xapidnuov, tats tua iarirou Twos ELE OVTOS aTOKNELo aL TaXy T@p, Idvéov pu) SuvnevTwy,

Sveiv 8¢ opovipor tale edadertarors putois 70-

hewy, “lov xal Siniphns, TOV mount ay “Opnpov év

49 pev yevéo Bas Agyouewy, év 7) O€ amobaveiy, pépe

Kal TOUTO repog Od pev avtois, OTL Kal TOY OTpa-

THYOY ot TONE moKdTAT OU Kal wreloTa SoX@ KaTEp-

yaodpevot ‘eta Servorntos étepopOarpot yeyo-vae t, PtAcarros, "AyTiyovos, ‘AwiBas Kal qTéept ob.1phe' 7d ciyypaypa Leptwpios, dv Didiarov

per. ‘dv ris atopaivorto awd pover Tepov rept TAS “efyuvaixas, Avteyovov 5é Tea TOT Epov mept pirous,

. oe -AvviBouv 8é TE PWT EPO 7 pos TroAepous, NeLTrO-

>» pevov dé ouveoer pev ovdevos TouTwv, TUYn Sé

‘ qavTov, 7 TOV TOY éudavav ToAEuioVv yane-TWTEPa Tepl WavTa xpnodpevos éeTravicwoer éavTov éumetpia pev TH Metéddov, ToApn O€ TH
Tlopmniov, tuyn 5& TH SvArAa, Svvaper S€ TH
‘Pwpaiwv, duyas nal BapRapov Ernrus apyov GVTLTAEAMEVOS.
6 Tovtm 8) pddtota Tov ‘EAAjvev tov Kap-
Stavov oporcodpev Evpévyn? appotepor yap apycxol Kal avv S0A@ TodeutKol, Kal THS pev avTav dtokevwbévtes, nynodpevor 8 adrodaTrav, THY 5¢ ypnodpevor Biaiw Kal adixw rept tiv Ted«Ev-Thy: émiBovrgevbévtes yap audotepor, pel” ov
TOUS TrodEpLOUS eviKwY, LTO TOUTwY advnpeOnaav.
II. Koivtm Yeptwpio yévos Hv ovK aonyota-tov év mode Novocots tijs YaBivwv tpadels Se 4

SERTORIUS

horse, and a third time by Charidemus, because a horse fell in the gateway and prevented the Ilians from closing the gate quickly enough ; that there are two cities which have the same name as the most fragrant plants, Ios and Smyrna,! in one of which the poet Homer is said to have been born, and in the other to have died. I will therefore make this addition to their collection. The most warlike of generals, and those who achieved most by a mixture of craft and ability, have been one-eyed men,— Philip, Antigonus, Hannibal, and the subject of this Life, Sertorius ; of whom one might say that he was more continent with women than Philip, more faithful tohis friends than Antigonus, more merciful towards his enemies than Hannibal, and inferior to none of them in understanding, though in fortune to them all. Fortune he ever found harder to deal with than his open foes, and yet he made himself her equal when he arrayed himself against the experience of Metellus, the daring of Pompey, the fortune of Sulla, and the power of Rome, though he was an exile and a stranger in command of Barbarians,

With him we may best compare, among the Greeks, Eumenes of Cardia. Both were born to command and given to wars of stratagem; both were exiled from their own countries, commanded foreign soldiers, and in their deaths experienced a fortune that was harsh and unjust ; for both were the victims of plots, and were slain by the very men with whom they were conquering their foes.

II. Quintus Sertorius belonged to a family of some prominence in Nussa,’ a city of the Sabines. Having

1 Violet and Myrrh.
* Nursia, in Latin writers, and in Amyot.
PLUTARCR’S LIVES

Koopios UTdO pnTpl XPS TaTpos ophavos vrepguas Soxei dirountwp yevéoOar. dvoua Tis pntpos ‘Péay Aéyovowv. HoKxnto pev ovv Kal mept Sixas ixavas, kai twa Kal Sivamw év TH
TOANEL PeLpaKLoy BV amd TOU AéryeLV éayer" ai dé Tepl Ta oTpaTiwTiKa NapTpPOTHTES avTOD Kal catop0wces évrad0a thy dirotimiav petéatnoav.
III. Ipa@rov péev odv KipBpov cai Tevtover éuBeBAnkotwv eis Taratiav otpatevopevos v0 Kaitiou, Kakoas ayovicapévav trav “Pwopaiwr
Kal TpoThs yevonévns atroBeBAnKas Tov immov Kal KaTaTETpwWLEVOS TO C@pa TOV ‘Podavoy S:er7épacev, avT@ Te TH Owpaxi Kal Oupe@ pos évav-Tiov peda ToAU vnXoMEVOs' OUTW TO copua poparéov hv avt@ Kxalt Starovov tH aoKnoe.
Sevtepoy S€ TaV av’Tav érepyopévwy puplact ToAnNais Kal Seivais aretNais, Mote Kal TO pévey
dvipa ‘Pwpaiov év taker rote kal To weiGecOau
TO OTpPAaTHY@ péya Epyov eivat, Madpios pev rryei-
To, Leptw@pios b€ KatacKoTHny UTécTH TOY TrOAEpiov. écOAre dé Kerrixy oxevacdmevos Kal Ta KowoTata THS Stanréxtou Tpos évtevkw emi Kas-pov TaparaBar, avapiryvuTat Tobs BapBapous: Kal Ta pev id@v, Ta & axon wvOopevos TéV éretyovtwy éravnrGe mpos Mdpiov. rote pev ovv apicteiwy étuyev’ év O€ TH RAoiTH otpareia TOAAG Kal cuvécews Epya Kal TOAUNS aTrodeaka-peevos eis Ovopa Kal Tictl vUTd TO oTpaTHyoD mponxOny peta be TOV KiuBpev kal Tevrovey Tohepov extreupbets UTro Acdip TTPATHYD Xtre-apxyos émt “IPnpias éy tH more Kacrraave 6

569

SERTORIUS

lost his father, he was properly reared by a widowed mother, of whom he appears to have been excessively fond. His mother’s name, we are told, was Rhea. As a result of his training he was sufficiently versed in judicial procedure, and acquired some influence _ also at Rome from his eloquence, although a mere youth ; but his brilliant successes in war turned his ambition in this direction.

III. To begin with, when the Cimbri and Teutones invaded Gaul,! he served under Caepio, and after the Romans had been defeated and put to flight, though he had lost his horse and had been wounded in the body, he made his way across the Rhone, swimming, shield and preastplate and all, against a strongly adverse current ; so sturdy was his body and so inured to hardships by training. In the next place, when the same enemies were coming up with many myriads of men and dreadful threats,? so that for a Roman even to hold his post at such a time and obey his general was a great matter, while Marius was in command, Sertorius undertook to spy out the enemy. So, putting on a Celtic dress and acquiring the commonest expressions of that language for such conversation as might be necessary, he mingled with the Barbarians ; and after seeing or hearing what was of importance, he came back to Marius. At the time, then, he received a prize for valour ; and since, during the rest of the campaign, he performed many deeds which showed both judgement and daring, he was advanced by his general to positions of honour and trust. After the war with the Cimbri and Teu- tones, he was sent out as military tribune by Didius the praetor to Spain,' and spent the winter in Castulo, a

1 In 105 B.c. 2 In 102 B.c.
3 In 97 B.c. Didius was then pro-consul.

4 mapexeipate THs KedtiBnpwv. émet S€ Tav oTpaTLaT ay év adbovois UBpilovray Kal Ta TOAAG MeOvovT@V Karadpovicavres ot BapBapor pereneurpavTo VUKTOS émuxoupiay Tapa TOV datuyetovov 'Opitavev cal cat' oixias émtovtes
e 9~ 7
ExTELvoy AUTOUS, UTTEKdSUS O LEepT@ptos pet' OALY@V
\
kal tous éxmimtovtas cuvayay@v KUKAw THY qwoAtv TepinrOe Kal Kal' as ot BapRapot mvAas
éxabov tmapeomecovTes avemypéevas etpwv, ov
> \ 3 4 4 > \ \ ? ,
TavTov éxetvors Erraber, GAXra hpovpas éemioTHCAas
N '\ 4 \ / v
Kat xataraBov mavtayobev thy Tod ExTELvE
' > ar / , e oe > é0 > /
5 ToUs év HALKia TrayTas. @s bé avnpéOnaar, éxé-
\ A AevTE TOUS OTpaTLwWTAaS TdvTas Ta pev avUTOY
e \ \ b fo] , a \ A érAa Kat Thy éoOATa KatabécOa, Tois dé TOV BapBdpov évoxevacapévovs Erec0at mpos THY modu éxelwnyv é& Ao amertdAncayv ot viKTwp
/ a A wn
émiTecovTes avTois. evoduevos S€ TH TOV

étwAwY det Tos BapBdpouvs tds Te WiAas ave-
/ 2 \ a > , ” > @rypwévas evpe Kal TAHGOs avOpwrwv EXaBev oiopévov arravTav ev TeTpaxoor pirows Kal ToNX-
a a e Taius. 640 mAcioTo. péevy vO Tov ‘“Pwpaiwv
9 , \ 4 e \ \
é€opdttovto wept Tas TvUAas, of bé€ oTrol Trapa-Sovtes Eavtous érpabnaar.
b 4 , ? ~ ? ,
IV. Ex _ToUTOU LepTwpios év TH I8npig die-
BonOn: Kai 6Te wpa@tov. érravynxey ets Popny,
, > / a \ / / Tapias atrodeixvutas THs wept Iadov Tadatias, an \ le)
év SéovTt. Tov yap Mapocxod ToAguov cumota-Mévov, oTpaTLM@Tas Te TpoTTAaYOEeY aUT@ KATAXEyew Kal OAa troveicBat, arrovdny Kal Taxos 8

~

SERTORIUS

city of the Celtiberians. Here the soldiers shook off all discipline in the midst of plenty, and were drunk most of the time, so that the Barbarians came to depise them, and one night sent for aid from their neighbours, the Oritanians, and falling upon the Romans in their quarters began to kill them. But Sertorius with a few others slipped out, and assembled the soldiers who were making their escape, and surrounded the city. He found the gate open by which the Barbarians had stolen in, but did not repeat their mistake; instead, he set a guard there, and then, taking possession of all quarters of the city, slew all the men who were of age to bear arms. Then, when the slaughter was ended, he ordered all his soldiers to lay aside their own armour and cloth- ing, to array themselves in those of the Barbarians, and then to follow him to the city from which the men came who had fallen upon them in the night. Having thus deceived the Barbarians by means of the armour which they saw, he found the gate of the city open, and caught a multitude of men who supposed they were coming forth to meet a successful party of friends and fellow citizens. Therefore most of the inhabitants were slaughtered by the Romans at the gate ; the rest surrendered and were sold into slavery.

IV. In consequence of this exploit the name of Sertorius was noised abroad in Spain ; and as soon as he returned to Rome he was appointed quaestor of Cisalpine Gaul, and at a critical time. For the Marsic war! was threatening, and he was ordered to levy troops and procure arms; to which task he brought such earnestness and celerity, as compared with the

1 Or Social War, 90-88 B.c.

\ a \ \ a v ,
mpocbeis TH Epy@ Tapa THY TOV adN\jWY vévwY Bpadutira xa paraxiav avdpos éumpdxtas Biocouévov dokav éaxyev. ov pny vdynKato THs
A 4 ’ 9 gs \
TTPATLWTLKHS TOAMNS Els aEiwpa MpoEeANnAVOaS
NYEHOVOS, GANA Kal yetpos emiderxvipevos Epya Oavyacra Kal TO cpa Tois ayoow adetdas
? 4 Led bg > / \ | See >
éridtdous, TaV Oirewy améBare THY ETEpav éEx-
A 9 4 \ 4
KoTrétaav, emt touTm dé Kal KaddAwTLCopevos > N 4 \ \ \ ” b 2 ON \ ae SueTédet, TOUS prey yap AAXoUS OVK det TA
papTtupia ToY apioTeLav Teptpéperv, GANA Kal anotiWecGat otpenta kal Sopata Kal otepavous, avt@ b€ THs avépayabias Tapapévery TA yvepi-CMaTa, TOS aUTOUS ExoVTL THS apeTHS apa Kal
a Sa , 9 / \ \ e a THS cuughopas Ocatds. amédwxe dé cai o SHpos aUT@ Tyny TpéTovcav. eiceAOovtTa yap ets Oéatpov é€edéEavTo Te KpoT@ Kal KaTevpnunoay, ov
\ a la , :
ovdé Tois mavu mponxovow nrKia Te Kal SoEn Tuxely jv padtov. Snpapyiav pévrow peTiov YY / 4 > \N 97 Py ‘
yvAAa KaTactaciacavtTos avTov éfemece’ O10
‘\ A , / > \ \ /
kat Soxet yevéoOat prcoavaras. érret dé Mdpuos \ ¢ N St \ ” / \
pev bro SvAAa KpatnOeis Ehevye, BaAras é MiOpiddtn tworeunowv annpe, Tov S€ vrdtwv
"OxtaBtos peév ert THs YvAXAa Tpoatpécews Epeve, |

, n
Kivvas 8 vewrepifov vaodepopévnv avexanreiro
\ , 4 «oN e
tnhv Mapiov ordow, TovT@ Tpocéverpeyv avTov oO / ” \ 9 , Coa
LepT@pios, GAAwS Te Kal Tov OxtaBuov opav
a ,
avrov péev apSrUTepov dvta, Tots dé Mapiou
le) \ “ e

pirows amioctobvta. ‘yevouevns O€ Tois UTaTOLS 10
570

SERTORIUS

slowness and indolence of the other young men, that he got the reputation of a man whose life would be one of great achievement. However, he did not remit the activities of a daring soldier after he had advanced to the dignity of a commander, but displayed astonishing deeds of prowess and exposed his person unsparingly in battle, in consequence of which he got a blow that cost him one of his eyes. But on this he actually prided himself at all times. Others, he said, could not always carry about with them the evidences of their brave deeds, but must lay aside their neck- laces, spears, and wreaths; in his own case, on the contrary, the marks of his bravery remained with him, and when men saw what he had lost, they saw at the same time a proof of his valour. The people also paid him fitting honours. For, when he came into the theatre, they received him with clapping of hands and shouts of welcome, testimonials which even those who were far advanced in years and honours could not easily obtain. Notwithstanding this, when he stood for the tribuneship, Sulla formed a_ party against him, and he lost the election; for which reason, apparently, he became an opponent of Sulla. And so when Marius was overwhelmed by Sulla and went into exile,! and Sulla had set out to wage war against Mithridates,? and one of the consuls, Octavius, adhered to the party of Sulla, while the other, Cinna, who aimed at a revolution, tried to revive the drooping faction of Marius, Sertorius attached him- self to Cinna, especially as he saw that Octavius was rather sluggish himself and distrustful of the friends of Marius. A great battle was fought in the

1 In 88 B.c.
2 In 87 B.c. Cf. the Marius, xli. 1. tl]

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

bd 9 ” 4 ir "0 4 ‘ 9 4
év ayopa payns peyadns ‘OxtdBuos pev éexparnce, Kivvas 6€ cai Yepr@pios ob ToAA® eAaTTOUS TOV
, ? s ” \ a \ ‘\
pupiov amroBarovtes Epvyov: Kal TaY Trepl THY
"Ttadiay és Stectrappévav otpatorébwv mpoca-/ nw a
youevoe Ta Treicta TweOoi tayd Katéctnoav
9 f a \ \ > ,
aftopayoe Tots mept Tov ‘OxrdBrov.
V. Mapiov &€ xatarrevoarvtos éx« AtBins Kat
a / , e \ eo»? , e + T@ Kivva tpoctiOevtos éavtov ws LOveTnv UTaTe, Tots pev adrots edoxet SéyerOar, Yeprwpios Se amnyopevev, elite Tov Kivvav tTov oiduevos éav-
a \ , /

T@ tMpoaeEev avdpos nyE“oviKwWTEpouv TrapovTos,
¥ ‘\ 4 fe) , , \
elre thv Bapvtnta tov Mapiov Sedoxas, pr
\ / A / TavTa Ta Tpadypata auyyén Ouu@ pétpov ovK
, el a ‘
Eyovtt, wépa dixns év TH Kpatetvy Wpoepyopevos.
\ » \ ¢€
Edeyev ovY pLKPOV ElvaL TO VITOAELTTOMEVOY EpryoVv autos 46n xpatovot, deEapévwy 5é tov Mdpuov
a / a lo
TO ovptrav oicecOar ths SoEns éxelvoy Kal THs Suvapews, YadeTroy dvTa mpos Kolvwriav apxis
a / le)
Kal dmictov. ettrovtos 6€ tod Kivva taidra pev
a ‘ a 6p0as vaonroyitecOar Tov Yeptwpiov, aideicOar
a \ 5é nat Svaropeiy OTws at@cetat tov Madpiov
autos él KoWwvia TpaypatwV KEKANKOS, UrT0-9
AaBeov o Leptwpros eitrev’ “”’AAN eyw@ pev avrov

“A \

ad’ éavtod Mapuov Frey vopifwv eis “Itadiav ro

\ \ \ \

aupdépov éoxkotrouy col dé THY apxynv ovdé Bov-

a A \ n

NevecOat Karas elyev HKovTos Oy autos édOeiv

A , A /

nkiwaas, adda xpncOar nai SéxecIar, THs Tri-12
SERTORIUS

forum between the consuls, in which Octavius was victorious, and Cinna and Sertorius took to flight, after losing almost ten thousand men; and then, winning over to their side most of the troops still scattered about Italy, they soon made themselves able to cope with Octavius.!

V. And when Marius sailed home from Libya ? and was proposing to serve under Cinna as a private citizen under a consul, the rest thought that his offer should be accepted, but Sertorius declared against it, either because he thought that Cinna would pay less attention to him when a man of greater military experience was at hand, or because he was afraid of the harshness of Marius, and feared that he would throw everything into confusion by a passion which knew no limits, and exceed the bounds of justice in the hour of victory. Accordingly, he said that little remained for them to do, now that they were already victorious, and that if they received Marius he would appropriate to himself all the glory and the power, since he found it hard to share authority and was not to be trusted. Cinna replied that these considerations of Sertorius were sound, but that for his part he had perplexing scruples about rejecting Marius after having himself invited him to join their cause. To this Sertorius answered: “Indeed, I for for my part thought that Marius was come of his own accord into Italy, and so I was trying to discover what was advantageous in the matter; but in thy case it was not well to deliberate at all after the arrival of one whom thou thyself didst ask to come ; nay, thou shouldst have received and employed him,

1 In 87 B.c. Cf. the Afarius, xli. 1.
2 Cf. the Marius, xli. 2 ff.
13

OTEWS pndevi hoytau@ Xwpay bidovens.” ovTasS
METATTEMTETAL TOV Mdpuoy Kivvas- Kal TALYh THS
Suvapews Staveunderans 7; Wpxov Ol Tpeis.
4 Acarronepunbévros 5é tov ToAéwov Kal T@v Trept
TO Kivvav kal _Mapioy éudopoupévav UBpews Te Kal muxplas ardans, dare xXpvaov amobdeiEae ‘Peopaiors Ta Tou TONE MOU Kaxd, Leprapros réyeTau povos ovTe amoKTeEtvai Twa ™ pos opyny
ovTe evuBpicat Kata, andra Kal TO Mapio
Suaxepaivery Kal tov Kivvay é evTuyxavev idia Kat
5 Sedpevos eT piw@Tepov moveiy. TENS 88 trav Sov-Awv, obs Mdptos TULpLaXOUS pev ev 7 TOhew@
Sopupopous ¢ dé THS Tupavvidos é Ex cov taxyupous Kal
WAovaioUs énoinge, Ta pev pelo S:Sévr0s Kal
KeNevovTos, TA Se Kai Bia Tapavouourtay els TOUS
Seamoras, oparrovrav pep aUTOUS, Tais be dec-Toivars TAnoalovT@y Kal Bralopever TOUS 1 ai-das, ovK dvacxera TOLoUpEVOS O Leprwptos a atav-TAS év TavT@ aTpatoTredevovTas KATNKOVTICED, OvUK éXaTTOUS TET PAKLTXLALOV ovTas.
VI. "Emel dé Mapvos pev eTEAEUT ITE kat Kivyas avnpéOn pK pov Uorepov, o b€ veavias Mapuos AKOVTOS AUTO Tapa TOUS VOMOUS uTaTelay éraBe,

KdpBoves $é xal NapBavol Kal Lenmiaves em L-ovTt vA KAKOS emohepouv, Kal Ta wey avavdpia Kat paraxia TOY oTpPATHY GY épOcipero, Ta b¢ ot
2 mpodidovres ama@ddva ay, Epryoy 5é ovdév Hv avtod TApoOvTos Tots Tpaywace pox Onpas she hin vows 4a TO Yeipov poveiy Tous padAov duvapé-
1 That is, when the party of Sulla and the senate ceased to resist and Rome had surrendered.
2 Cf. the Marius, xliv. 6. 3 In 86 B.c.

since a pledge leaves room for no discussion.'' So Cinna sent for Marius, the army was divided into three parts, and the three men held command.

When the war had been brought to an end,! Cinna and Marius were filled with insolence and all bitterness, and made the evils of war appear as gold to the Romans; Sertorius alone, as we are told, neither killed any one to gratify his anger, nor waxed inso- lent with victory, but actually rebuked Marius, and by private interviews and entreaties made Cinna more moderate. And finally, there were the slaves whom Marius had used as allies during the war and as body-guards of his tyranny. They had thus become powerful and rich, partly by the permission and under the orders of Marius, and partly through their lawless and violent treatment of their masters, whom they would slay, and then lie with their masters' wives, and outrage their masters' children. Such a state of things Sertorius felt to be unendurable, and there- fore when the slaves were all encamped together he had them shot down with javelins, and they were as many as four thousand in number.'

VI. But presently Marius died ;3 and shortly after- wards Cinna was murdered ;* and the younger Marius, against the wishes of Sertorius and contrary to the laws, assumed the consulship ;° and such men as Carbo, Norbanus, and Scipio were unsuccessfully op- posing Sulla's advance upon Rome; and the cause of the popular party was being ruined and lost, partly through the cowardice and weakness of its generals, and partly by treachery ; and there was no reason why Sertorius should remain to see matters go from bad to worse owing to the inferior judgement of those

4 In 84B.c. Cf. the Pompey, chapter v. 5 In 82 B.c.

/ \ 4

vous, TéXos 5€ YaAAas LenTwiwve wapactpatoTe-

7 devoas Kal dirodpovovpevos, ws elpynvns écopéerns,
/ a duepOerpe TO oTpadtevpa, Kal tavTa mpodréyor

4 \ 4 4 > 4
Lentiov. Kat diddoxwv Yeprw@pios ov« éererbe, TavTadTacw atroyvous THY TOALY wpuNnoev eis
9 / ? \ a
IBnpiav, ws, eb POdoe Thy éxet Kpatuvdpevos
\ a a“ a apxnv, xatagvyn tois mratovow eéevtad0a tav 571
hirwv écopevos.
a \ a / b /
3 Xeupwor S€ yareTois ypnodpevos ev ywpiots > a e \ iA > 4 4 \
Gpetvois uma BapBapwyv émpatteto TéAn Kal
ce) a eqs
pucOovs tov trapedOeivy thy odov. dayavakTovvtov 6¢ Tav civ avT@, kal Sewvoroyoupévar et
A a ‘Pwpaiov avOvtatos tékn KataBaret BapRapots
orLO pois, piKpa PpovTicas Tov SoxovvTOS aia ypod, Kat Katpov @vetoOar diyoas, ov oTraviwTEepov ovdév avdpi peydrwv édiepévo, tors ev BapBdpous
3 4 / \ > 9 / 3 \
EOepdrrevoe yYpnuact, tHv & “I Bnpiav éreryGeis
A \

4 xatéoxe. traparaBov dé €Ovn mAnOe pev Kal

nrtkia axpatovta, wAeovegia Sé kai UBpe Tav
a \ TeuTomevwy ExdoTOTE oTpaTHY@Y Mmpos SAV
a ,
Kaxas Siaxeipeva THY Hyepoviay, avehapuBavev
optria te Tovs Suvatovs Kal popwv avécer TOUS ToANoUS. pardtota 6€ TeV émiotabmay aTrar-
4 > / \ \ / ? 4
AadEas nyatnOn TOvs yap oTpaTL@Tas HvayKalev
A / a
éy Tois MpoacTeios Yelwadia THyvUGIaL, TPwTOS 5 autos oUTW KaTacKnV@V. ov pny él TH TOV
a \ BapBdpov eivoia To wav érroujoato, ‘Pwpatiwr dé 16
~~

SERTORIUS

who had superior power. And finally, Sulla encamped near Scipio and made friendly overtures, assuming that peace was to be made, and proceeded to corrupt his army.! Sertorius warned Scipio of this plainly, but could not persuade him. At last, therefore, altogether despairing of the city, he set out for Spain, in order that, in case he should succeed in firmly establishing his power there, he might afford a refuge to those of his friends who were worsted at Rome.

After encountering grievous storms in mountainous regions, he was asked by the Barbarians to pay them tribute and purchase his passage. His companions were indignant, and considered it a terrible thing for a Roman pro-consul to render tribute to pestilent Barbarians ; but Sertorius made light of what they thought a disgrace, and with the remark that he was purchasing time, than which nothing is more precious to a man bent on great achievements, he pacified the Barbarians with money, and then hastened on and took possession of Spain. He found its peoples strong in numbers and in fighting men, and since the rapacity and insolence of the Roman officials sent thither from time to time had made them hostile to the empire in all its aspects, he tried to win them over, the chiefs by his personal intercourse with them, the masses by a remission of taxes. His greatest popularity, how- ever, was won by ridding them of the necessity of furnishing quarters for soldiers ; for he compelled his soldiers to fix their winter-quarters in the suburbs of the cities, and he himself was first to pitch his tent there. However, he did not rely wholly on the goodwill of the Barbarians, but he armed all the

1 Cf. the Sulla, xxviii. 1-3.

TOV aVTOOL peToLKOUYTWY TOUS ev HALKia KADOTALoas, unXavas te tTravrodaTas Kal vavTnyias tTpinpwv wuToBaropuevos, did yeupos elye Tas TONels, Huepos pey wv ev tais eipnuixais xpetass, gdoBepos Sé TH TapacKevy Kata TOV ToAEuLoV hawopevos.

VII. 'Os 6€ SvAXAay pev érvvOdvero tis "Pons Kpateiv, Eppa dé tyv Mapiov Kal KdpBwvos oTdoly, aUTiKa TpocdoKay otpatiav SiatTroNEpncovoay avt@ pel Hryewovos apiEecOar ppayvuTas 7a Ilupnvaia épn da "lovAiov Yaduwvartopos é€axtoxXtALiovs omAitas ExovTos. Kal peT ov TOAD Tdios "Avvtos éxteupOels tro TvANa Kal Tov

"lovALov admpocpayov opav év amopw Kadjoto
2 mapa tais uimwpelats. Kadtovpviov Sé Tivos émixrnow Aavapiov Sorodovncaytos tov *lov-Mov Kai TOV OTpaTLwTaV Ta axpa Ths IlupHyys
éxdTrovTwv, UTepBarwv Avvios émrjer yetpl peya-An TOUS eprrodev aviotds. Lepraptos 5é ove Ov dE vopaxos peTa TPLTXLALwY Ets Kapyndova THY véav Katapuyer, KaxeiOev émiBas TeV veov Kal Siatepdaas To TrédXayos, AiBin xata tHv Mav-
3 povciay wpocéoyev. adudrdktots b€ Tols oTpa-TL@mtTais Vdpevopevols TOV BapBdpwv émitecovTwr, avyvors atoBarwrv adOis eis ‘IBnpiav amémnee:
Kal TavTns pev atroxpovetat, Kittooay dé Ano Tpt-
Swy avt@ mpocyevopévay Ilutvovaean vnow mpocé-Bane, cat awéBn thv tap’ Avviov dpovpay Bra-odpuevos. “Avuos 5¢ pet ov TodAv TrapHy vavoi 18

~

SERTORIUS

Roman settlers of the country who were of military age, and by undertaking the construction of all sorts of engines of war and the building of triremes, kept the cities well in hand, being mild in the affairs of peace, but showing himself formidable by the preparations which he made against his enemies.

VII. When he learned that Sulla was master of Rome,! and that the party of Marius and Carbo was on the way to ruin, he expected that an army with a commander would come at once to fight the issue out with him. He therefore sent Julius Salinator with six thousand men-at-arms to bar the passage of the Pyrenees. And not long afterwards Caius Annius was sent out by Sulla, and seeing that Julius could not be assailed, he knew not what to do, and sat idly down at the base of the mountains. But a certain Calpurnius, surnamed Lanarius, treacherously killed Julius, whose soldiers then abandoned the heights of the Pyrenees; whereupon Annius crossed over and advanced with a large force, routing all opposition. Sertorius, not being able to cope with him, took refuge with three thousand men in New Carthage ; there he embarked his forces, crossed the sea, and landed in the country of the Maurusii, in Africa. But while his soldiers were getting water and were off their guard, the Barbarians fell upon them, and after losing many men, Sertorius sailed back again to Spain. From this shore too he was repulsed, but after being joined by some Cilician piratical vessels he attacked the island of Pityussa, overpowered the guard which Annius had set there, and effected a landing. After a short time, however, Annius came

1 In 82 B.c,

n ¢ N Te TodXNais Kal TevTaKiaytALo“s OTALTALS, POS
a a a Ov emexeipnae cv Stavavpayelv, Kaitrep édadpois
‘
Kal WpOs TAXOS, OV TWpds GAKHY, TeETOLNMEVOLS
Ul / 4 \ “A nn 4
oKxaheot ypwpevos, Cepvp@ Sé Aaurp@ TOD Treda-
b , a A
yous avictapévov Kal Ta TOAAG TOV TOU Lepld 4 a Twplov MAoiwy bmd KOoUhoTnTos TWAUaytAa Tas
e 4 / > A a / \ fol
paxtars meptBadXovtos, avTOS OAiyats vavol THs
\ A “A a pev Oardoons bro TOD YELpavos eipyomevos, Tis
\ a \ a /
dé yAs Ud TOV ToAELLoV, Huépas Séxa TadevoV
\ ce)
Mpos évavtiov Kiya Kal KAVdwva TpaxyvY émLTOvos dvexaptépnaer.
VIII. ’Evdovros 5€ tod mvevpatos hepopevos
4 ynoois tialy évavrtleTat otropdow avudpo.s Kd-
a 4 \ \ \ “a xetOev apas kal duexBarov tov Tadecpaiov ropd-
\ a a “A
pov év deEta Tots extos emiBadrrAe THs “I Bnpéas,
\ \ “A A a puxpov vTép Tav Tov Baitios éxBorwy, os els THY
? \ a AtXavtixny éxpepopevos OdrdatTav dGvoma TH
mept avrov I Bnpia tapéoyev.
a a > A
"Evrav0a vadtai tives evtvyydvovew avT@
/ “A a /
véov éx Tov “ATAAVTLK@Y VHTwWY avaTrETTAEVKOTES, at Svo pév eict AeTTOS TavtTdtract TwopOn@ Siac-4 povpevat, pupious 8 améyovor AuBins oradious
\

kal ovopalovta. Maxdpworv. suBpors dé ypwpevar petpiols otraviws, Ta bé TAELoTA TYEVPAGL padaal A , b 4 b) fe) \ 7
xois Kat SpocoBodots, ov povov dpovv Kai puTeverv
/ \
mapéxovow ayabny Kal miova yopay, adda Kal
\ a a Kaptrov avtopun dépovow atoxpavra mrHGer Kal 4 / yAuniTntTe Booxew advev Tovey Kal wpaypateias
lA on aA de ” e ” 4
cxor\alovra Ojpov. anp O€ aAXuUTTOS WPwY TE Kpa-20

a7

SERTORIUS

with numerous ships and five thousand men-at-arms, and with him Sertorius attempted to fight a decisive naval battle, although the vessels which he had were light and built for speed rather than for fighting. But the sea ran high with a strong west wind, and the greater part of the vessels of Sertorius, owing to their lightness, were driven aslant upon the rocky shore, while he himself, with a few ships, excluded from the open sea by the storm, and from the land by the enemy, was tossed about for ten days in a battle with adverse waves and fierce surges, and with difficulty held his own.

VIII. But the wind subsided and he was borne along to certain scattered and waterless islands, where he spent the night; then, setting out from there, and passing through the strait of Cadiz, he kept the outer coast of Spain on the right and landed a little above the mouths of the river Baetis, which empties into the Atlantic sea and has given its name to the adjacent parts of Spain.

Here he fell in with some sailors who had recently come back from the Atlantic Islands.!. These are two in number, separated by a very narrow strait ; they are ten thousand furlongs distant from Africa, and are called the Islands of the Blest. They enjoy moderate rains at long intervals, and winds which for the most part are soft and precipitate dews, so that the islands not only have a rich soil which is excellent for plowing and planting, but also produce a natural fruit that is plentiful and wholesome enough to feed, without toil or trouble, a leisure folk. Moreover, an 1 Perhaps Madeira and Porto Santo, though these are forty miles apart. Features of the Canary Islands have doubtless crept into the description.

. 21

oe. kal peTaBorgrHs meTpLornte KaTéxKet TAS VHTOUS.
of pev yap évOdvde THs ys amomvéovtes EEw Bopéat kat amnrdorar ba pixos éxtecovtes eis ToTov axyavyn Stacteipovtat kal mpoatroneitrovat, merayto. 5é mepippéovtes apyéctat nat Cépupor Barnyxpovs péev vetovs Kal omopabdas éx Oardrrns
3 4 \ \ “a ? 4 b]
émayovtes, Ta 5€ TOAAA voTEpais aiOpiats émt-uyovres navy Tpépovatv, WaTE wexpt ToV Bap-
/ A , b] \ > , \ 3 4
Bapov SiixOa trict ioyupav avto&. to *HAVoto elvat Tredtoy Kal THY TaV evdatmLovav olKnaL, ny“ Opnpos tuvyce.
IX. Tad& o Sepra@psos axovaas épwra Gavpa\ v > A \ / \ fel b] e / orev Exxev oixjoat Tas vHoOUS Kal Ch ev novyia,
4 ? ‘\ \ J ? ,
Tupavyidos atradXayels Kal TONé“oV aTravoTOD.
> 4 \ e J > \ > A 4
aicOopevot 5é ot Kirsxes, ovOev eipnvns Sedpevor kal oxyorHs, dAAA wWrovTOV Kal Aadupwr, «Eis AtBunv arémrevoar, *Acxadw tov “Id0a xata-
2 Eovres éri tiv Mavpovoiwy Bacirelay. ov pv > / e , ? a \ N od
atréxapev 0 LepTwpLos, AANA Tois mpds Tov “Ackadiv StatroNepodaw eyvw BonOeiv, ws of cov x oA , , , 2 \ \
avT@ Kawny tiva AaBovTes EATriOwWY apxXnV Kal
, e 4 ef ; \ a eN a mpatewy éTépov wroVecw pn StadrvOetev bro Tis
/ a atropias. aapérots 5é tois Mavpoucio adixo-pevos elxeto Epyou, Kal KaTtapayeodpevos Tov 3 “Ackadw érodtdpxe. Ara S€ Tlaxxiavov ékméurpavtos BonOjca: tois wept tov “AoKaduy
peta Suvduews, suuBadrov o Leptw@pios Tov pev Tlaxxcavov amέxteave, Thv 5é otpatiavy Kpatynoas 22
SERTORIUS

air that is salubrious, owing to the climate and the moderate changes in the seasons, prevails on the islands. For the north and east winds which blow out from our part of the world plunge into fathomless space, and, owing to the distance, dissipate themselves and lose their power before they reach the islands; while the south and west winds that envelope the islands from the sea sometimes bring in their train soft and intermittent showers, but for the most part cool them with moist breezes and gently nourish the soil. Therefore a firm belief has made its way, even to the Barbarians, that here is the Elysian Field and the abode of the blessed, of which Homer sang.

IX. When Sertorius heard this tale, he was seized with an amazing desire to dwell in the islands and live in quiet, freed from tyranny and wars that would never end. The Cilicians, however, who did not want peace or leisure, but wealth and spoils, when they were aware of his desire, sailed away to Africa, to restore Ascalis the son of Iphtha to the throne of Maurusia. Nevertheless Sertorius did not despair, but resolved to go to the aid of those who were fighting against Ascalis, in order that his followers might get some fresh ground for hope and occasion for new enterprise, and so might remain together in spite of their difficulties. The Maurusians were glad to have him come, and he set himself to work, defeated Ascalis in battle, and laid siege to him. Moreover, when Sulla sent out Paccianus with an army to give aid to Ascalis, Sertorius joined battle with Paccianus and slew him, won over his soldiers after their defeat,

1 Odyssey, iv. 563-568.

s , , > A CVA
mpoonyayeTo, Kal Thy Tiryyu, es hv o "Aoxanis 4 \ a a) a bd ,
cuvéduye peta THV aderhav, éEeTTONOpKHCED.
"Evtav0a tov 'Avtaiov ot AiBves iatopodat xetc0ar' Kat tov tdpov avtod Leptwpios d:éoxayye tois BapBapots amictav Sia péyeOos.
éytuyav 6€ TO copatt. tmHyav éEEnKovTa piKos, as pact, KaTeTNAaYN, Kal oddytov évteu@v auve-NOTE TO LVRpa, Kal THY TeplL avTOD TLUNVY TE Kal
dnunv avvnve—nce. Teyyitae 5é€ pu€oroyovouy
; ; a /
"Avtaiov teXeutTncavtos THY yuvaixa Tiyynv
"Hpaxret cuvenbeiv, Xodpaxa & ée& avtav yevo-
"a "A 4 :
pevov Bacirtedoar THs YwOpas Kal TONY ém@vupoV
" aA 4 a /
THS pnTpos atrodetEar, Lopaxos Sé maida ryevea Oar
s " lal 9 " e
Avodwpov, & modrka tov AtBuxav eOvav tb77-xovoev ‘EXAnucoy éxovTs oTpdTevpa TOY avToOs Katoxiopevovy bd “Hpaxréovs "OXABiavdv Kat / > \ oe) \ b , “

Muxnvaiwv. add\a TavTa pev avakeicw TH
"loBa xapitt, rod wavtwev totopixwtdtov Bact-
A€wv exeivov yap toTopovat Tovs MpoyovouS
A } , \ “i 9 4 9
todwpou Kat Lopaxos atroyovous elvat.
\ /
Leptwpios Sé wavtwv éeyxparns yevomevos ToVs denbévras avTov Kal miaTevcavTas OVK NdiKNGED,
’ \ / \ 2 \ ’ \
ahha Kal Xpywara Kat Tonets Kab THY apXny am@édwxev avtois, doa Karas elye SeEdpevos S:- SovToVv.
af /
X. "Evtev0ev Stroe ypyn tpamécOat Bovdevopevov éxddovy Avattavol mpéoBes tméurpavrtes 97? e / 4 \ ” + g/ /
ep mYEHoViG, TAVT@S MEY apXOVTOS atiopa peya, Kal éumepiav &yovtos Seduevot mpos Tov atro 24

and forced to a surrender the city of Tingis, into which Ascalis and his brethen had fled for refuge.

In this city the Libyans say that Antaeus is buried ; and Sertorius had his tomb dug open, the great size of which made him disbelieve the Barbarians. But when he came upon the body and found it to be sixty cubits long, as they tell us, he was dumbfounded, and after performing a sacrifice filled up the tomb again, and joined in magnifying its traditions and honours. Now, the people of Tingis have a myth that after the death of Antaeus, his wife, Tinga, consorted with Heracles, and that Sophax was the fruit of this union, who became king of the country and named a city which he founded after his mother; also that Sophax had a son, Diodorus, to whom many of the Libyan peoples became subject, since he had a Greek army composed of the Olbianians and Mycenaeans who were settled in those parts by Heracles. But this tale must be ascribed to a desire to gratify Juba, of all kings the most devoted to historical enquiry ; for his ancestors are said to have been descendants of Sophax and Diodorus.

Sertorius, then, having made himself master of the whole country, did no wrong to those who were his suppliants and put their trust in him, but restored to them both property and cities and government, receiving only what was right and fair in free gifts from them.

X. As he was deliberating whither to turn his efforts next, the Lusitanians sent ambassadors and invited him to be theirleader. They were altogether lacking in a commander of great reputation and ex- perience as they faced the terror of the Roman arms,

25

~ PLUTARCH'S LIVES

'Pp 4 4 >? , 4 e ' wpatov hoBov, éxeivm S€ miorevovtes avrovs ove wuvOavopevot Tapa TOV avYyEeyovoTwY TO 2 700s avtod. Réyetat 6€1 o LYeptaptos ote vd' noovis ovte Ud Séous EevdrwTOS yevécIaL, duces 5é avéxtrAnnTos Oy Tapa Ta Sea Kal pérpLos Ev-Tuxlay éveyxeiv: Kal mpos pev evOupaxiav ovdevos aToAmoTEepos TaY Kal' éavTov Hyepovwr, doa Sé KNwTrelas év ToNeuots Epya Kal mAeovetias Tepl totous éyupovs xal daBdoces tayous Seopévas

atratns te cal wevdar év déovtt, codons Setvo- 573
3 tatos. éy b€ tails Tipais Tay avdpayabnpdtov
Sayrirns pawwopevos, wept Tas Tywpias éuerpiale TOV dpaptnuatwv. Kaitou Soxei repli Tov éoxa-Tov autov Biov wmpoTntos Kal BapvOupias TO 7rept
TOUS ou4npous wpaxOev Epyov emibdetEae THY Pio
OUK OVTAY HuEepov, GAN ETrapTrExXomEvnY NOYLT UO
4 Sua thy avaynny. éwot 8 dperny pev eidxpev7, Kal
KaTa NOYOY cuvEecTacay ovK av Tote SoKEel TUYN
Tis €xoTHoat Tpos TovvavTiov, GAXws Sé mpoatpé-ces Kal duces YpnaTas UTO cuphopay pweyddrov map atiav kaxwleicas ovx advvatov T@ Saipove ovppetaBarelv 76 7005. 6 Kal Leprwptoy olpar
mwabeiv HOn THs TUXNS aUTOY eTLNELTTOVENS, ExT pPa-Xuvopevov bro TOV Tpayparay ylvomévov TroVvnp@v pos Tovs adixodvras.
XI. Ov pov adda Tore ye TOV AvoiTavar Karovvtav amhjpev ex AtBins. Kal rovrous cuvé-tattev evOvs avToxpdtwp otparnyos, Kal TH
éyyos "[8npiay omnxoov émoteito, THY TWAELT TOY ao Coraés and Bekker read ydp with one (inferior) MS.
26

SERTORIUS

and they entrusted themselves to him, and to him alone, when they learned about his character from those who had been with him. And it is said that Sertorius was no easy victim either of pleasure or of fear, but that he was naturally unterrified in the face of danger, and bore prosperity with moderation ; in straightforward fighting he was as bold as any commander of his time, while in all military ac- tivities demanding stealth and the power to seize an advantage in securing strong positions or in crossing rivers, where speed, deceit, and, if neces- sary, falsehood are required, he was an expert of the highest ability. Moreover, while he showed him- self generous in rewarding deeds of valour, he used moderation in punishing transgressions. And yet, in the last part of his life, the savage and vindictive treatment which he bestowed upon his hostages! would seem to show that his mildness was not natural to him, but was worn as a garment, from calculation, as necessity required. In my opinion, however, a virtue that is sincere and based upon reason can never by any fortune be converted into its opposite, although it is true that excellent principles and natures, when impaired by great and undeserved calamities, may possibly change their character as the guiding genius changes. And this, I think, was the case with Sertorius when fortune at last began to forsake him ; as his cause grew hopeless he became harsh toward those who did him wrong.

XI. However, at the time of which I speak he set out from Africa on the invitation of the Lusitanians. These he proceeded to organize at once, acting as their general with full powers, and he brought the neighbouring parts of Spain into subjection. Most

1 See chapter xxv. 4. 27

e ld 4 4 \ PS \ \
éxovaiws mpooTiOepéevwv, pardtota pev ia TO Mpaov avrov Kal Spactnpuoy, Ete O€ & Kal codt-TTLKMS AUTOS Eis aTraTHY Kal KNANOLW eunxavato.
Kal TP@TOY ye TavTw@Y TO TEpl THY EXagoOV. HV dé tovovee.
N > \ 4 "~ 9 \ , 4
Lravos avnp Snuotns Tav éml ywopas Brovytwv
éAddw veoroxm hevyovaon Kuvyyétas éemituyov auThs pev atredrcihOn, THhv dé veBpov, éxmrraryels
ol / a" / a
Th KalwoTnTe THS KXpoas (AevKN yap hv aoa), AapBave Sio€as. kata tHxYnv dé Leptwpiov Tos TOTrOLS evaudicapévou, Kal wav & Tis eF aypas 4
yewpytas Hiroe Kouilwv SMpov acpévas Sexopuévov, \ , 9 / \ 4
Kal diroppovws aperBouévou tovs Peparevortas,
3 , 4 > " \ , e \ , éyxerpiler hépwy avut@ tHv veBpov. o bé deEapevos autixa pev oOn petpiws: ypovm 4é Totnodpevos TUWacov ottTw Kal dirdvOpwrov of N “ > , N / , @aoTe Kal KadovvTos dxovew, Kal Badifovri rot nw wv N , N

mapaxorovleiv, dyAov Te Kal BopvBov maytos
avéyerOat otpatimtixov, Kata puiKpov é&eOciale dacxwy "Apréudos Swpov Thy EXadgor eivat, cal TokAa THOV aonArAwv érepnutteyv avT@ Snrodv,
,
ytwwooKkwy evarwrov eis Secodatpoviay elvar picet
to BapBapixov. o Sé xal wpocetexyvato To.ade:
yvous yap av kpuda Tovs Trodepuious euBeBANKOo-
o) /
TAS TOL THS UT avTOV Ywpas 7 TOALY agioTayTas, Wpoceroreito THY EXahov aUT@ KaTa Tovs Uarrvous
, , > e , 4
duetr€xOar, xedevovoav év ETOipm Tas Suvdapes
éyew. avlis 5€ vicnv tia Tov éavTovd otpaTn-28

of the people joined him of their own accord, owing chiefly to his mildness and efficiency ; but sometimes he also betook himself to cunning devices of his own for deceiving and charming them. The chief one of these, certainly, was the device of the doe, which was as follows.

Spanus, a plebeian who lived in the country, came upon a doe which had newly yeaned and was trying to escape the hunters. The mother he could not overtake, but the fawn—and he was struck with its unusual colour, for it was entirely white—he pursued and caught. And since, as it chanced, Sertorius had taken up his quarters in that region, and gladly re- ceived everything in the way of game or produce that was brought him as a gift, and made kindly returns to those who did him such favours, Spanus brought the fawn and gave it to him. Sertorius accepted it, and at the moment felt only the ordinary pleasure in a gift; but in time, after he had made the animal so tame and gentle that it obeyed his call, accompanied him on his walks, and did not mind the crowds and all the uproar of camp life, he gradually tried to give the doe a religious importance by declaring that she was a gift of Diana, and solemnly alleged that she revealed many hidden things to him, knowing that the Barbarians were naturally an easy prey to superstition. He also added such devices as these. Whenever he had secret intelligence that the enemy had made an incursion into the territory which he commanded, or were trying to bring a city to revolt from him, he would pretend that the doe had con- versed with him in his dreams, bidding him hold his forces in readiness. Again, when he got tidings of some victory won by his generals, he would hide the

29

yov axovoas Tov ev dry'yeXov ExpumTrTe, THY dé EXadoy éotehavapevny én' evaryyeAiors T ponryen, evOupeia Oa TapaKxarov kat Tois Beois Ovew ws
ayaov Ti mevaopevous.
_ XIL. Ottw 66 yesponbecs Touno a puevos airous

To Wpos atavra HETpLMTEpots, ou un' av-
Rit adrobatrov Aoyia way, GNA' bo oi oTpa-Tnyeto Oat mreOopévors, Gua Kat TOV TpaypdTov ETLLAPTUPOUYTWY TH Tapa _Aoyov Thy dSvvapuy avEdveo Gar. SuaxXrAtous yap eEaxoatous obs avouate 'Papatous, TUUpLKTOLS dé emtaxociots AtBvor eis Avottaviay avT@ cvvdiaBaor meNTa-aras TETPAKLTXLALOUS Avovttavov Kai tmreis émTaxoatous mpoodaSov ETrONE WEL TeTTApoL "Po-patov otpatnyois, bp: ols hoa qeCoy pev ba-dexa pupiddes, tireis O€ éEaxroxidsor, Toforas 5é Kal opevdovijrar Sta xidvot, TOKELS dé dvapiO untor
TO TAOS, QUTOS E€LKOGL TAS mao as ev apxi KEKTNILEVOS. arn' Gos dadevns ovTw Kal puK pos dpEapevos ov povoy eOvav é expaTynoe peyadov Kat Toes EldE TONNES, ara Kat To avTiaTpatnyov Korrav pev ev 7 mept THY MeAAapiav qopO ue KATEVAUYHAXNTE, Dovgidiov dé Tov dp-YOVTA THS Bastuchis Tept tov Batre eTpeparo
dia xuAtous arroxreivas: 'Popaiwr, | Aopercov dé Aevxtov! av@vTatov évra THs érépas "I Bnpias dia Tov Tapiov KATAywViT dHEVOS, kal Owpduor, ad)Nov nyewova TOV 1rd MerédAov wepnpbévtwv PETG Suvdpews, avetrev, avrov re tov MéreAddop, 1 Aevxcoy the conjecture of Sint.?, after Amyot, for the MS.
kat Aovciov; Reiske, followed by Sint.! and Bekker, read KaAoulouor.
30

messenger, and bring forth the doe wearing garlands for the receipt of glad tidings, exhorting his men to be of good cheer and to sacrifice to the gods, assured that they were to learn of some good fortune.

XII. By these devices he made the people tractable, and so found them more serviceable for all his plans ; they believed that they were led, not by the mortal wisdom of a foreigner, but by a god. At the same time events also brought witness to this belief by reason of the extraordinary growth of the power of Sertorius. For with the twenty-six hundred men whom he called Romans, and a motley band of seven hundred Libyans who crossed over into Lusitania with him, to whom he added four thousand Lusitanian targeteers and seven hundred horsemen, he waged war with four Roman generals, under whom were a hundred and twenty thousand footmen, six thousand horsemen, two thousand bowmen and slingers, and an untold number of cities, while he himself had at first only twenty all told. But nevertheless, from so weak and slender a beginning, he not only sub- dued great nations and took many cities, but was also victorious over the generals sent against him : Cotta he defeated in a sea-fight in the straits near Mellaria ; Fufidius, the governor of Baetica, he routed on the banks of the Baetis with the slaughter of two thousand Roman soldiers ; Lucius Domitius, who was pro-consul of the other Spain,! was defeated at the hands of his quaestor; Thoranius, another of the commanders sent out by Metellus with an army, he slew; and on Metellus himself, the greatest Roman 1 Spain was divided into two provinces, Hispania Citerior (Hither) and Hispania Ulterior (Further), or Eastern and Western Spain. Fufidius was pro-consul of Western Spain.

” € 4 b A / ,
avdpa ‘Pwpaiwy év trois tote péytotov Kal Soxt-
, > b 4 4 N bd
H@TATOV, OVK OXLYOLS OhdApact TrepLBarwV Es
TocauTHY atropiay Katéatnoev Wate AevKLOV pev MaAXov é€x ths wept NapBova Taratias érOeiv
avt@ BonOov, Uopumrniov 5€ Mayvov é« ‘Pomns KATA TAaXOS aTocTAaAHvar peta Suvdpews.
Ov yap elyev 6 MéreAXOs 6 Te YpHoatTo Tpoc-

A“ > \ A , ? ,
TO\EL@v avdpt ToAUNTH Taons éFavadvopevw
pavepas payns, Tacay 5€ petaBaddopévg peta-
\ > 4 \ / a > a
Bornv evo Tanerg Kal Kouporyte THS IBnpicijs
OTPATLAS, AVTOS OTALTLKO@Y Kal vopipwv aoKNTHS
yeyovas ayovev kal atpatnyos éuBpiOods Kat povipouv ddrayyos, waoacGar pev eis Yetpas €\Povtas orepiovs Kal xataBareivy dapiocra yeyupvacpévns, opetBately dé Kat ouvnptncbat diwkeot nal gduyais atavotos avOpoTav brn-
, \ > / \ / v
veuiwy Kal ALuov avéyecOa kai Siattay amrupovy Kal doxnvop, domep exeivor, pn Suvapevns.
XIII. "Ere 66 auros pev 70n mpeo Butepos HV

Kat TL Kat Tpos averpevny 76n Kal tpudepay di-atTay ex TOMA@Y dyover Kal peydrwn evdeduxas, T@ b€ Yeprwpio cuvecotynKes Wvevpatos akpatov
yé“ovTe Kal KaTecKevacpévoy ExovTse Oavpaciws TO O@pa pwn Kal Taxer Kal ALTOTHTL. péOnsS
pev yap ovd€ pabupayv Arteto, movous bé peya-Nous Kal paxpas odouropias Kai avveyeis dypu-4 9 / ” \ 4 > 4
mvias oArLyos elOtoTO Kal havrols apKovpeEVvos attiows Stadéperv, mAdvors O€é. Ypw@pevos det Kal Kuvnyecious omote ayorala, mdons dtexdvoews 32

of the time and held in highest repute, he inflicted many defeats and reduced him to so great straits that Lucius Manlius came from Gallia Narbonensis to help him, and Pompey the Great was hurriedly dispatched from Rome with an army.

For Metellus was at his wits' end. He was carrying on war with a man of daring who evaded every kind of open fighting, and who made all manner of shifts and changes, owing to the light equipment and agility of his Iberian soldiers ; whereas he himself had been trained in regular contests of heavy-armed troops, and was wont to command a ponderous and immobile phalanx,! which, for repelling and over-powering an enemy at close quarters, was most excellently trained, but for climbing mountains, for dealing with the incessant pursuits and flights of men as light as the winds, and for enduring hunger and a life without fire or tent, as their enemies did, it was worthless.

XIII. Besides this, Metellus was now getting on in years, and was somewhat inclined also, by this time, to an easy and luxurious mode of life after his many and great contests ; whereas his op- ponent, Sertorius, was full of mature vigour, and had a body which was wonderfully constituted for strength, speed, and plain living. For in excessive drinking he would not indulge even in his hours of ease, and he was wont to endure great toils, long marches, and continuous wakefulness, content with meagre and indifferent food; moreover, since he was always wandering about or hunting when he had leisure for it, he obtained an acquaintance with every way

1 Cf. the Pompey, xvii. 2.

4 , 4 > Ul
dhevyovts cal Siwxovts cuxrocews aBdtwv Te Kal
/ N a) Bacipwv toTwv éurretpiay mpocarndea. 610 TO bev elpyopéva payns boa viKwpevo. TacyovoL e fe!
avOpwrot BranrtecOar cuvéBarvev, 0 5é TO Hev-
a \ yew elye Ta TOV SiwxdvTwv. Kal yap vdpetas wf
améxomrre Kal attoroyias elpye, Kal TpoiovTt pev
> \ 2 > / \ ¢ 4 ce)
éxtrob@y jv, éxives S€é idpuvOevta, modopKovyTe 5é AAXous emrihatvopevos avTeToNopKEL TAais TOV dvaykaiwy amopiat, @aoTe TovS oTpaTLWTAs
amayopevetv, kal tov Leptwpiov povopayjaoar ™poxanoupévou tov MéreddXov, Body Kal xedeverv payecOar otpatnyov otpatny@® Kal ‘Pwpaiov
€ , > 4 \ 4 e \ ,
Pwpaio, avadvopevoyv b& yrevaferv. 0 S€é Tov-TOV péev, ev TOLMY, KaTEyéda: OTpaTNHYOU Yap, e ” / ad , b / \ ws hn Geodpactos, det Odvarov arroOvnoxetv Tov oTPATNYOV, OV WeATAGTOU TOV TUXOVTOS. opav 4é
tovs AayyoBpitas ov pixpa TO Deptwpio ova-AapBavopévous, difen 6€ dvTas evadrwTous (év yap qv adtois dpéap ev TH wore, TaY SB év Tos
\
mpoacteios Kal wapa Ta TEelyn va“dTwY oO TrO-ALopKayériKpaTeiv Euendev), Hey Em) THY TWOALY
as juépats dual cuvaipycwv THY TToNLopKiay, Ddatos ovK dvtos. 610 Kal révTe Huepav éemidé-
/ A
pecOat ovtia povov Tpoeipnto Tots oTpaTiwrats.
e
o Leptaptios 8 dkéws BonOyoas éxérevoe Sicyeri-ous aoxous datos éuTAnoa, Kal’ Exactov acKov
? , \ 4 \ a“ \ > VA
apyuptoy cuxvoyv takas. Kali ToAA@Y pev '187-
“A \ 4 e , N
pov, morrdov 56 Mavpovoiwy tidiotapévwv Oo
”

Epyov, émireEdpevos avdpas evpwotous dua Kal 34

SERTORIUS

of escape for a fugitive, or of surrounding an enemy under pursuit, in places both accessible and inaccessible. The result was, therefore, that Metellus, by being kept from fighting, suffered all the harm which visits men who are defeated; while Sertorius, by flying, had the advantages of men who pursue. For he would cut off his opponent's supply of water and prevent his foraging; if the Romans advanced, he would get out of their way, and if they settled down in camp, he would harass them; if they besieged a place, he would come up and put them under siege in their turn by depriving them of supplies. At last the Roman soldiers were in despair, and when Ser- torius challenged Metellus to single combat, they cried aloud and bade him fight, general with general, and Roman with Roman, and when he declined, they mocked at him. But Metellus laughed at all this, and he was right ; for a general, as Theophrastus says, should die the death of a general, not that of a common targeteer. Then, seeing that the Langobritae were giving no slight assistance to Sertorius, and that their city could easily be taken for lack of water (since they had but one well inthe city, and the streams in the suburbs and along the walls would be in the power — of any besieger), Metellus came against the city, intending to complete the siege in two days, since there was no water there. On this account, too, he had given orders to his soldiers to take along provisions for only five days. But Sertorius quickly came to the rescue and ordered two thousand skins to be filled with water, offering for each skin a considerable sum of money. Many Iberians and many Maurusians volunteered for the work, and after selecting men who were both sturdy and swift of foot, he sent them

35
p 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

A a 4
TmobwKes érreure Sid THs Opewhs, Kekevoas, OTav
"A A fol A Tapabaot Tovs aaKovs Tois év TH TodE, TOV
aypnotov wmeEayayely dyndov, Straws eEapKy Tots Gpuvopévots TO ToTOV. exTvaTou b€ ToVTOU YyEvo-/ \ \ 4 4 @ \ HO a peévov mpos tov Meteddrov, nxGeto pev non T EMLTNOELA TOY OTpPaTLWTaV UTavadwxoTor, é&émeprpe O€ él ottodoyiay "Axvivoy é€axioytdiwv myoupevov. atcOopevos S¢ 0 Leptwpios Kal mmpo-Aoxioas THY oddov erravepyonévm TE "Axvive Tptoxtdious avdpas &« Twos svoxiou yapddpas éraviotnow, autos b€ KaTa oTop"a TpocBadwv
4 \ \ \ / \ \
TpéemeTat, Kal Tous pev StadOeipe, rors 5é Nap-Bave Cavras. "Axvivoy é peta Tav Grrov kal Tov immov amtoBeBAnkota SeEdpwevos Méreddos

aigxpas amnel, ToAAa yAevalopevos bd TaV "TBnpov.
v , an
XIV. “Ex re 57 tovtwv Gavpalopevos nyaTato
A UA e , A 4 €
mapa tois BapBapos o Seprw@pios, cat ort “Po-paixots omAtcpois Kal td&eoe Kal ovvOnpacww adatpav To pavixov Kal Onpiddes adtav Tis aXKhs advtt NnoTNpiou peyddou otpaTov érotelTo
N 14 4 9 bd) 4, , 9 A
Thy diva, ett 8 apyip@ yYpwpevos adedas
Kal Xpvo@ Kpavn Te KaTexdoper Kat Oupeods
A / a
avTa@y dvemroiKidre, Kal yNapvow avOwais Kal
yita@ot xphobas SidaoKxwy cal yopnyav eis radTa
\ a“ > , 4 \
kal oupdiroxarav édnuaywoye. pdrotra Se elkev avtovs Ta TV Taidwv.. Tors yap evryevesTatous ato TaY eOvav auvayayev eis “OcKar, TOW peyadny, SudacKarous émiotnoas ‘ENAn-36

575

SERTORIUS

by a route through the mountains, with orders that when they had delivered the skins to the people in the city, they should secretly convey away the unservice- able mass of the population, in order that the water might suffice for the actual defenders of the city. When Metellus learned that this had been done, he was annoyed, since his soldiers had already consumed their provisions, and sent out Aquinus, at the head of six thousand men, to forage. But Sertorius learned of this and set an ambush of three thousand men in the road by which Aquinus was to return. These sallied forth from a shady ravine and attacked Aquinus in the rear, while Sertorius himself assailed him in front, routed him, slew some of his men, and took some of them prisoners. Aquinus, after losing both his armour and his horse, got back to Metellus, who then retired disgracefully, much flouted by the Iberians.

XIV. In consequence of these successes Sertorius was admired and loved by the Barbarians, and especially because by introducing Roman arms and formations and signals he did away with their frenzied and furious displays of courage, and converted their forces into an army, instead of a huge band of robbers. Still further, he used gold and silver without stint for the decoration of their helmets and the ornamen- tation of their shields, and by teaching them to wear flowered cloaks and tunics, and furnishing them with the means to do this, and sharing their love of beautiful array, he won the hearts of all. But most of all were they captivated by what he did with their boys. Those of the highest birth, namely, he collected together from the various peoples, at Osca, a large city, and set over them teachers of Greek and

ViK@V TE Kal ‘Popainay pabnudrov Epy@ pev
eEwunpevoato, hoy dé érraidever, ws avdpaat ryevowevors mWoNTElas TE peradacav Kal apxijs.
ot bé TAT Epes iSovro Javpactas TOUS maidas éy TepiTop Upots OpwVTeEsS pada Koo Lis povravras els Ta Oldackanreia, Kal TOV LepT@ptov imép avTav pcos TedouvTa, Kal TOARGKus dmodei ters AapBavovta, Kat yépa trois akiots ve povTa, Kal
Ta ypuvoad mepidépata Sw@povpevov a ‘Pewpaior Bovhras Kadovow. EOous 8 OVTOS ‘TBnpixod TOUS wept Tov dpxovta TET AY MEVOUS cuvaToOunc ety
avT@ TecovTl, Kal TovTO Tov exel BapBapav KATAOTELOLY ovopalovren, TOUS pev arrows YE foot odiryou TOV UTaoTioT@Y Kal TOV éTAipar, DepTwpio be Todral pupiddes avO pwrmcov KaTE-OTELKOTOY EauTOLS NKOAOVOOUD. Aéyerar dé ™ pos
Tie TOAEL TpoTrijs yevopevns Kal TOV TONE MLOY
ETrLKELLEVOV TOUS “T8npas Gpedjoavtas aura TOV LepT@piov cater Kal Tois @mLoLs éemapapevous
dd Xous 7 po addov dvaxoudia at Tpos Ta Tel, yevouévov & &v aopanrel TOU dpXovtos, ovTw Tpérrec Oat 7 pos guyny exacrov avr av.
XV. Ov povov 5é rots "I Bnpow ay moUetvos, ada Kal ois é& ‘TraMas OT PaTEvouEvoLs, Ilep-mévva, yoov Ovévtwvos aro Tis aris LepTwpi@ oTdoews eis ‘T8npiav Taparyevouevov peta Ypnpatov TONY Kal pmeyadns duvdpews, idia &é Kal” éavtov éyvwKortos Toneuely Mpos TOV Méren-Aop, Educ x épasvov ot TT PATLOTAL, Kab ToAUs ay
TOU LepTopiou oyos ev TO otpatomé}p, Tov Heprévvay avedy evyevelg rar TOUT TeTupwpévov. ov pny arr érret Iloumnios nyyéAXero

Roman learning ; thus in reality he made hostages of them, while ostensibly he was educating them, with the assurance that when they became men he would give them a share in administration and authority. So the fathers were wonderfully pleased to see their sons, in purple-bordered togas, very decorously going to their schools, and Sertorius paying their fees for them, holding frequent examinations, distributing prizes to the deserving, and presenting them with the golden necklaces which the Romans call “bullae.” It was the custom among the Iberians for those who were stationed about their leader to die with him if he fell, and the Barbarians in those parts call this a " consecration."' Now, the other commanders had few such shield-bearers and companions, but Sertorius was attended by many thousands of men who had thus consecrated themselves to death. And we are told that when his army had been defeated at a certain city and the enemy were pressing upon them, the Iberians, careless of themselves, rescued Sertorius, and taking him on their shoulders one after another, carried him to the walls, and only when their leader was in safety, did they betake themselves to flight, each man for himself.

XV. And not only were the Iberians eager to serve under him, but also the soldiers who came from Italy. At any rate, when Perpenna Vento, who belonged to the same party as Sertorius, came to Spain with much money and a large force, and was determined to wage war on his own account against Metellus, his soldiers were displeased, and there was much talk in the camp about Sertorius, to the annoyance of Perpenna, who was puffed up over his high birth and his wealth. However, when word

thv Iupnyny trepBdddor, dvaraBfovtes ot oTpa-TioTaL Ta STAa Kal Ta onucia TOV Ta-ewV
avaprracavtes KaTteBonoav tov Lleprrévva, xedev-OvTES @S TOY LepT@ptov adyev avtovs: ef Sé pn,
/ 9 a b 4 > \ a
KATANLTOVTES Exeivoy HTEiNOUY avTol BadteicAat
mpos avopa awlecOar nal acawlew Svvapevov.
avyyopnoas dé o Leprévvas tryayev adtovs, cal
ouvemte T LEeptwpieo meen eree Kal Tpeis Eywu omeipas.
XVI. DEpTa@plos dé, tav évtos "IBnpos avtT@ TOTALOD TUVTWY OMOD TL TpoaTELEvwY, TANOEL
bev HY péeyas' eTréppeov yap ael kal auvedépovTo ravraxolev mpos avTov: atakia 8 BapBapixy
\ , / 5 . A " :
Kal OpacuTntse TapaTTomevos émiyetpely Tols TONE-picts Bowvtwr Kal thy TpLBnv SvcavacyeTovvToV
? La) A \ , e \ e¢/
2 émetpato wapapvbciabar d1a Aoywv. ws bé Ewpa
YareTraivovtas kat Brafouévovs axaipws, mpor-KATO Kal TepLetoe TUUTAEKOMEVOUS TOIS TrOAEpIOLS 576
5 b a / > \ \
év ols ov TavTedos ovyTpiBévTas, GANA TWANYAS

AaBovtas HAmioe Tpos Ta OITA KATNKOOUS HAA-
4 et \ 4 / > 4
rov E€ew. av 5 eixale yevopévwr, éruBonOnoas
avéraBé te hevyovtas avtovs Kal KatéoTnoev
3 acparas els TO oTpaTOTedov. Bovrdpevos bé Kai

\ 9 , b a b] @e VA >] / 4
Thy adupiav adereiy, uel" nuépas orAtyas wavdnpov éxxAnoiay aOpoicas immous eianyaye Svo,
\ \ ' n / \ , 4 \
Tov pev acbevh TeXews Kal mpeaBuTepoy 76n, TOV 5é Erepov evpeyeOn pév avtov Kal ioyupor, Oavpaothy Sé muKvoTnte Kal KddXrEL TPLYO@Y ovpaV éyovTa. mTapeotnKe O€ TO pev aoevel péyas 40
SERTORIUS

came that Pompey was crossing the Pyrenees, the soldiers caught up their arms and snatched up their standards and made an outcry against Perpenna, ordering him to lead them to Sertorius, and threatening, if he did not, to abandon him and go by themselves to a man who was able to save himself and save those under him. So Perpenna yielded and led them off, and joined Sertorius with fifty-three cohorts.

XVI. Sertorius, then, since all the peoples within the river Ebro were unitedly taking up his cause, had an army of great numbers, for men were all the while coming to him in streams from every quarter; but he was troubled by their barbaric lack of discipline and their overconfidence, since they called loudly upon him to attack the enemy and were impatient at his delay, and he therefore tried to pacify them by arguments. But when he saw that they were impatient and inclined to force their wishes upon him unseasonably, he let them take their way and permitted them to have an engagement with the enemy in which he hoped that they would not be altogether crushed, but would be severely handled, and so made more obedient for the future. Matters turning out as he expected, he came to their aid, gave them refuge in their flight, and brought them safely back to their camp. And now he wished to take away their dejection. So after a few days he called a general assembly and introduced before it two horses, one utterly weak and already quite old, the other large-sized and strong, with a tail that was astonishing for the thickness and beauty of its hair. By the side of the feeble horse stood a

41

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

9 ' N @ , A \ 9? a \ ig
avnp kal pwoparéos, TO 5é ioyup@ puxpos ErEpos

\ v b , , de } kal thy Orv evxatadpovntos. anpeiov dé do-Oévtos avtots o péev iaxupos apporépas tais
xepol Tod tarmou Thy Képkov ws arroppntwv eldKe Bia mpos avtov, o Sé aobevns tod ioxyuvpod Kata
, a“ “A 2¢/ 9 t de € \ piav Tov Tpiyov éereArNev. eel O€ O pmev oux OAlya TWpayuaTa paTnvy éavtT@ Kal Todd yédwrTa Tots Oewuévors Tapacywv arreitev, o bé > \ bd \ A \ > N / A dabevns axapel at ody ovdevi Tove Widny Tpt-yav amébe&e thy ovpav, avactas o Yeptwptos, ‘ce ‘O a 9 9 co 6 / \ J N
pate, elev, ‘“avdpes cvppayot, THY éripmovny dvuctpatépay TAS Bias odaay, Kal moAXNA TOV
b / bd , J / A \ , GOpows arnmrwov évdidovTa TO KaTa plKpov.
dpayov yap To éevdereyves, © TAacaY éTL@Y 0 XpovoS
aipet Kal Katepydberar Suvapuv, evpevns dv cvppaxos Tois Sexoudvors AoytoU@ Tov Katpov avTod, tois 8€ axaipws émeiyouévots TroNE“LwWTATOS.” TOLaUTa = ey O LepTw@ptos éExdotote mwAEKwV
4 A , , \
TmapapvOta tots BapBdpos Sverradaywryer Tov Katpov.
XVII. Ovsevos 5¢ HrTov abrod Tay ToNELLKOV
” b] 4 \ \ ‘ / ,
Epywv eOavpacdn To wept Tovs Neyopévous Xapakitavous. eal dé Sipos bmép tov Tayouov WOTAMLOV, OUK AoTETLY OVE Kpats evoLKOvVTES,
/
GNA Addos early evpeyéOns Kal irpnrdos avTpa
Kal KotN@paTa TeTPaY BrérOvTAa mTpos Bopéav
Teptéxyov. 4 8 wvroKkeévn Taca Ywopa wHdOv
A e \ apythodn kat yy viro yauvotntos evOpuTrrov

man who was tall and robust, and by the side of the powerful horse another man, small and of a contemptible appearance. At a signal given them, the strong man seized the tail of his horse with both hands and tried to pull it towards him with all his might, as though he would tear it off; but the weak man began to pluck out the hairs in the tail of the strong horse one by one. The strong man gave him- self no end of trouble to no purpose, made the spectators laugh a good deal, and then gave up his attempt ; but the weak man, in a trice and with no trouble, stripped his horse’s tail of its hair. Then Sertorius rose up and said:

“Ye see, men of my allies, that perseverance is more efficacious than violence, and that many things which cannot be mastered when they stand together yield when one masters them little by little. For irresistible is the force of continuity, by virtue of which advancing Time subdues and captures every power; and Time is a kindly ally for all who judiciously accept the opportunities which he offers, but a most bitter enemy for all who urge matters on unseasonably.”} By contriving from time to time such exhortations for the Barbarians, Sertorius taught them to watch for their opportunities.

XVII. But of all his military exploits that which he performed in dealing with the people called Characitani is admired as much as any. They are a people beyond the river Tagonius, and they do not dwell in cities or villages, but on a large and lofty hill containing caves and hollows in the cliffs which look towards the north. The whole country at the base of the hill abounds in white clay and a soil that

1 The story is told also in Valerius Maximus, vii. 3, 6.

>] OLo # \. b) , > 4
avadidwalv, ote Tovs émiBaivoytas avéyecOas Kaptepav, ral pixpov arrapévav, @oTep do BeaTov
aA? ’ \ , A ®
h Téppay, él Tov dtayeopévnv. Tav ovv Bap-Bapov, ocaxis $d08@ Toréuov Katabvvtes eis TA omnrala Kal THY Neiavy claw cuVayaryorTeEs aTpE-Lal ” 3 4 e \ , \ \ , Hotev, 6vTwV adnwTwV bro Bias, Tov Sé Lepta@ptov
, , 3 N le) VA
ToTe Otaxexptuévov amo Tov MeréAAov cal xataoTpaToTEdevoavTa Tapa TOV AOhoy UTEepppovovv-TOV @S KExpaTnpévory, elte Um’ opyns éexetvos el'Te
pn Soxety devyerv BovrAopevos au nuépa mpoce-Adoas KaTETKEeTTTETO TOV TOTTOY. ovdapmoOev Se mpooBornv éxovTos, GAAws advov Kal Kevais
A e n A 4, \
V P@MEVOS ATELNALS OPG THS hs exelvns KoviopToV
dvw Tony bro mvevpatos er’ avTovs pepomevov.
TéTpaTTar pev yap, ws pny, TA oTyAaLA TWpOS
Bopéav, o 5é aro Tis apxTov tvéwv! dvemos, Karxiav @vor Kxarotow, éméyes pddtota Kat WrEloTOS é€aTe TOY éxel Tvevpdtov, é€& sbypav
, \ J , 9 A ,
Tedtov Kat vipoBorAwv cupdvawpevos pov: TOTE
,
dé Kal Oépous axpafovtos iayvay Kal Tpepopevos
Th TOV UTapKTioy avéce TaywY HOvoTtos érétvEr Kal KaTelxev avTous te Kal Bota Sv Huépas ava-

la) , e wuxyov. tadta 6) suddoyilouevos 6 Yeprwpios
Kal Tapa Tay éyywpiwv axovwr, éxéXevoe TOUS TTPATLOTAS THS apatas Kal Tepp@dous ys éxelvns aTooTa@vTas Kal twapadépovtas KatavtiKpv Tod
4 “A “A A e 4 4 9 9°
Nopou Piva trosety, jv ot BapBapor yopatos ér avTous elvas KaTaoKevny UirovoobyTes éxAevalor.
TOTE [ev OvV eEpyacapévous TOUS OTpATLMTAS ayXpt
1 wvéwy Van Herwerden: péwy.
44

is porous and crumbly ; it is not firm enough to bear the tread of man, and spreads far about if only slightly stirred, like unslaked lime or ashes. These Barbarians, then, whenever they were afraid of war, would hide themselves in their caves, take all their plunder in with them, and keep quiet, for they could not be taken by force ; and at the time of which I speak, when Sertorius had retired before Metellus and encamped at the base of their hill, they thought scornfully of him as a vanquished man, and he, either out of anger, or because he did not wish to be thought a fugitive, at break of day rode up to the place and inspected it. There was no attacking it anywhere, but as he was wandering about to no purpose and indulging in empty threats, he saw that dust from the soil which I have described was being carried up against the Barbarians in great quantities by the wind. For the caves, as I have said, faced the north, and the wind which blows from that quarter (some call it Caecias) is the most prevalent and the strongest of the winds in that country, being a confluent of winds from watery plains and snow-covered mountains; and at this time particularly, which was the height of summer, it was strong, was fed by the melting snows of northern regions, and blew most delightfully with continual refreshment for man and beast all day. So, reflecting on these things and getting information about them from the natives of the country, Sertorius ordered his soldiers to take some of the loose and ashy soil that I have described, carry it directly opposite the hill, and make a heap of it there. This the Barbarians con- jectured to be a mound raised for assaulting them, and jeered at their enemy. On that day, then, the soldiers of Sertorius worked until night, and were

45

YUKTOS amnyaryev" dpa 8 nyépa TpPATOv pev apa pardann mpoaTreT vel Siaxivotca Tis cuptrepopypévns ys TO NecoTaTov GoTEp axyny oKLOvdpevor, emerTa coBapov tov Karxiov ™ pos TOV HpAsov éx-Neopevou Kal TOV opwv KOVL@ MEvOY CTLOTAVTES
ot TTPATLATAL TOV Te xobv dvérpeTrov bia Bdous Kal TOV omihov ExomTov, Eviot 6é Kab TOUS immous ave Kal KaTo SueEjAacav a GVLOTAVTES TO Xavvepa Kal TH von peTEwpov mapadsoovres. ” 8° viro-

Nap Bdvovea TaVv TO Opumropevov Kal Kivoupevov avo _mpoaéBarne TOUS ok pact TOV BapBaper, kata Ouvpas Sexopevors TOV Karxiav. oi O€, ate én TOV omnhatov play exeiyny dvarvony eXovT@v a TO Ted ya T pooeMLTTE, TAXU pev ATrecKOTOUVTO Tas Ovpes, TAaXY &° dverriwrhayto TvUy@oous doO wars, Tpaxvuv aépa Kal TOA] KOVvet oUp-Tepuppevov Exxovtes. SOev TpEpAS dv0 podas avaTXopmevot TH TpiTy maped@xay EAUTOUS, OU TOG OUTOV Leprooply Suudpews 6 Ssov doEns T poc-Oevres, as Ta 8s STAwY dvarwTa copia KaTepya-TAMEVO.
XVIII. Méxpe fev ovv Tots meph MereAAov emone pel, Ta WAEtoTA KaTevTuxely edoxet, ynpa
Kat prac Spadurire TOU MerédAov ™ pos dvSpa TOMMNT HY Kal ANoT piris pardov Y) TTPATLOTLKTS nryOUjLevov Suvapens ouK avapépovTos® éqrel 6€ Kal Tloprrnio tv Tupyvny bmepBarovte TapacTparomededcas, Kal tacav dya pev S180vs, apa dé AapBavov OT PATH YLK OD Tanaicpatwv Weipar, AVTLTEXVOMLEVOS TE wal pudarTopuevos TELOV eixe, Kopoy SieBonOn péxpe Paopns ws deworatos dy 46

577

SERTORIUS

then led back to camp. But when the next day came, at first a gentle breeze arose, stirring up the lightest portions of the gathered soil and scattering them like chaff ; then, when Caecias was blowing strong with the mounting of the sun and covering the hills with dust, the soldiers came and stirred up the mound of earth to the bottom and broke up the lumps, while some actually drove their horses back and forth through it, throwing up the loosened earth and giving it to the wind to carry. Then the wind caught up all the earth thus broken and stirred and threw it up against the dwellings of the Barbarians, which opened so as to admit Caecias. And the Barbarians, since their caves had no other inlet for air than that against which the wind was dashing, were quickly blinded, and quickly choked, too, as they tried to inhale an air that was harsh and mingled with great quantities of dust. Therefore, after holding out with difficulty for two days, on the third day they surrendered, there- by adding not so much to the power as to the fame of Sertorius, since by his skill he had subdued what could not be taken by arms.

XVIII. Well, then, as long as he carried on the war with Metellus as his antagonist, he was thought to be successful for the most part because, owing to great age and natural slowness, Metellus could not cope with a man who was bold and headed a force composed of robbers rather than soldiers ; but when Pompey also crossed the Pyrenees and became his antagonist,! and each of them had offered and accepted every test of a general’s powers, and Sertorius had the advantage in counter-planning and watchfulness, then indeed it was noised abroad as far

1 In 76 B.c.
47 PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 A ra)
TOAeLOY peTaxepicacbal THY TOTE TTPATHYODV.
Pp) 4 N = \ , > > ov yap TL pixpov nv TO Iloumniov Kréos, aAXr
v , , \ Ul > A \
nvOe. toTe padtota mpos Sokav éx Tay .Tept vara avdpayadnudrov, éd’ ols nat Madyvos vr’ avTov, TouTéoTe peéyas, éravoudcdn Timayv Te OptauBixav ovtw yeverov Ervyev. Sev kal
A /, f
TOANaL TOY LTO LepTwpiw worEwv aTroBrAEacat
a 9 ?
Tpos avToV oppnv peTaBorANs ExyXov, eita émravgavto, Tov epi Aavpwrva mafous Tapa Tacav
/ ,
éXmrida cuuBavros. ;
/ \ a“ bd \
Leptwplou yap rodLopKobvtos avtovs Axe Tlop-Iau le! , 9 e \ 4
THis TavaTpaTig BonOjcwy elra o pep Aodov
ev dokobvTa tepuKéval KaTa THS Toews Tpo-AnWopmevos, 0 S€ TOUTO KwAVTwY HITEi'yeTO. TOD 5é Leptwpiov dOdacavros émictncas Tov oTpaTov
e Sos »” A la , 3 4
O Top jios eXatpe TH ovvTUXia, vopitav éy perm
THS TWOMEWS Kal THS avTodD aoTpaTLas aTresAnpOas Tov YepTwpiov: Kal wpos tovs Aavpwvitas cicé-meme Oappety Kedevov cal xabjobar tepl ta relyn Oewpévovs TodLopKovpevov LepT@ptov. eKel-> 9 / > fs \ \ 4 \
vos 8 axovoas éyéXace, Kal Tov YUAAA pabnTHy (otrTw yap tov Tloumrniov émicxamtwv tpocn-
/ > A ¥ 4 4 A N \
yopevev) avtos épn duddEew Ste Set Tov oTpatnyov KaToTL paddov 7 KaTa Tpoowmoyv PrAérreuv.
Tavta dé Aéywv dua Tos ToALOpKOUpEevOLS érre-Seixvuev EEaxtaxtrtous omditas bm’ avToD KaTa-NerEtupéevous él Tov mpoTtépov yapaxos, SOev
, a

oppnOels, KaTretAnpe Tov Odor, Straws él adds 48
SERTORIUS

as Rome that he was the ablest general of his time in the conduct of a war. For the fame of Pompey was by no means inconsiderable, nay, at this time his reputa- tion was in most vigorous flower in consequence of the valiant deeds which he performed in the cause of Sulla, deeds for which he was given the surname of " Magnus" (that is, Great) by Sulla, and received the honours of a triumph while he was still beardless. Therefore, too, many of the cities which were subject to Sertorius turned their eyes towards Pompey and felt inclined to change their allegiance ; they ceased to do this, however, after the disaster at Lauron, which happened contrary to all expectation.

For Sertorius was besieging that city, and Pompey came to its assistance with all his forces. Now there was a hill which was thought to afford a good command of the city, and this hill Sertorius strove to seize in advance, while Pompey sought to prevent him. But Sertorius got there first, where- upon Pompey, taking position with his army, was delighted with the way things had turned out, believing that Sertorius was caught between the city and his adversary's forces ; he also sent a messenger in to the people of Lauron bidding them be of good cheer and take seats along their walls for the spectacle of Sertorius undergoing siege. When Sertorius heard of this, he gave a laugh, and said that to Sulla's pupil (for thus he was wont to style Pompey in jest) he himself would give a lesson, namely, that a general must look behind him rather than in front of him. As he said this, he pointed out to his beleaguered troops six thousand men-at-arms whom he had left behind at their former camp, from which he had sallied forth to seize the hill; these, in case Pompey moved

49
VOL, VIII. E
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

T peTropEr T® [loprnie Kata vero T pooTréa OLev.
& 67 Kal Hoprijios ore pada oupppovnaas emt-Netpely pev ove eOdppet KUKAwow SedoLKas, aTTO-Aurrely dé NOX UVETO KivOUVEvOVTAS avOparous,
Tapov be Kal aby pevos jvaryratero Opa aTroX-Aupévous: atréyvwoav yap avrous ot _BapBapor Kal T@ Lepraplo mapedwKay. o 6€ TOY péev ow-patov epeioato Ka mavTas adie, THY 5é oA KATET pnoeD, ovy vt opyns oud' @MOTNTOS, éXd-Xora yap Soxel und apicacbas TOY oTparn-you oUTOS avnp, GAN ér aio vv Kal Karnpela TOV TeGaupaxorov Tlopmnion, t iva 7 oryos év Tots BapBdpos 6 OTL Tapav éyyus Kab pHovovov Oeppas-VOMEVOS TH Trupt TOV TUMBAX@Y Ov Tpoonmuver.
XIX. "Hrrau Bev ou To LepTopie TAELOVES
cuveBatvor, auTov pev ANTTNTOV Gael purat rove Kal Tous Kal' aurov, Opavopeve dé epi TOUS

add dous nyepovas: éx S€ wv émnvwpOodTo Tas HTTAS padrov eGaupatero VLK@VTOV TOV avri-oTpaTHYyoY, oloy é év TH TrEept LovKpove paxn T pos Hoparniov, Kal maduy év TH Tepl Tovpiav * 7 pos TE TOUTOV onod cal MéredXov. a) pev obv tept
LovKpove paxn Aéeyerau yeverOar Tob Tlouaniou KaTeTrelEavTos, @S 1) peTdaxor THS viKns MéreA-dos. o 6é LEpTwptos éBovreTo pev TO Toprnic, 7 piv éemenbeiy TO MérteAXopr, SiaryovicacBas,
Taparyaryav dé éomépas 760 ouve Barer, olopevos Eévous ovat Kal ameipors TOV Xeoptov TOUS TONE-piots TO oxoTos éaecOar Kal hevyovow éprrodsov 1 Tovplay Sintenis*, after Ukert; Sintenis', Coraés and Bekker have Tovrriay. The MSS. reading is uncertain.

against the occupants of the hill, were to fall upon his rear. Pompey also became aware of this all too late, and did not venture to attack Sertorius for fear of being surrounded, but he was ashamed to go away and leave the people of the city in their peril, and so was compelled to sit there quietly and see them ruined; for the Barbarians gave up all hope and surrendered to Sertorius. Sertorius spared their lives and let them all go, but he burned down their city,1 not because he was angry or cruel, for he appears to have given way to passion less than any other general, but to put to shame and confusion the admirers of Pompey, in order that it might be said among the Barbarians that though he was near at hand and all but warming himself at the flames of an allied city, he did not come to its relief.

XIX. It is true that Sertorius suffered several defeats, and yet he always kept himself and his own forces undefeated, and got his crushing blows where other generals than he were in command ; and from the way in which he repaired his defeats he was more admired than the victorious generals opposed to him, as, for instance, in the battle on the Sucro against Pompey, and, again, in the battle near Turia against both Pompey and Metellus. Now, the battle on the Sucro? is said to have been precipitated by Pompey, in order that Metellus might not share in the victory. Sertorius, too, wished to fight the issue out with Pompey before Metellus came up, and therefore drew out his forces when evening was already at hand, and began the engagement, thinking that, since his enemies were strangers and unacquainted with the region, darkness would be a hindrance to 1 Cf. the Pompey, xviii. 3.

2 Cf. the Pompey, chapter xix. 51

3 nal Su@xovot. yevouevns 5€ THs pdyns ev yepoly
4 A b N Iu > / b) N éruxye pev ov mpos Llopmrniov adtés, adAAa mpos
"Adpavioy év dpyn asvvertnxas éxovta TO apsoTepov, autos él Tov SekLod TeTaypévos. axovaas Sé 7@ Llopmrnig tots cuvectatas broywpeiv éyxepevm Kat xpateicOar, tro pev Se€iov ear adXots €roujcato atpatynyois, mpos bé éxetvo TO 4 vix@pevovy autos éBondpope. Kal Tovs pev Hon Tpetropéevous tous dé ért pévovtas ev takes cuva-
\ \ b) v4 3 e nA | eee 4 “A yayev kal avabappovas, €€ uTapyns évéeBare TO Tloprnieo didxovtt, cal duyny éroujoato ToAAHD, ¢ A Doe 3 \ 9 \ > al
dte xat oprnios éyyts éAOwv amobaveiy nat
Tpavpatiobels taparoyws Suépuyev. of yap peTa
/} , e bd A“ \ /
Leptwpiov AiBuves, os éXaBov avtov tov tmmov Xpve®@ Kekoopunpévov Kal dardpav avatrAEwv To-
A b “A / \ , \
AUTEAOD, ev TO OtavépecOar nal SiadépecPar rpos
5 aNANXOUS TponKavTo THy Siwkw. *‘Adpdvios Sé tous av0ecta@tas mpos avTov Gua TO Leprwptov 9 nn 9 \ , a 4 b] \ ameNety eri Oatepa BonOobvra tpeyrapevos evs TO otTpatoredov Katnpake: Kal cuvecoTrecoy érropbet aKoTous On dvTos, wnTe THY Tlopmniov duynv
ELO@S LTE TOUS OTPATLOTAS THS apTayHS emuayelv Suvdpevos. év Toute dé Leptw@pios avéotpeve TO Kal avtov verixnnas: cat trois “Adpaviov 8&0’ atakiay tapaccopévos émimec@v todXovs Sté-6 pOepe. mpwt dé adfus é€ordobeis emi paxnv

A 9 / > 4 b \
katéBawev, elita MétedAdXov atcPopevos éyyvs
elvat AVaas THY Takw avétevEev, ciav: “’AAN EyWYE TOY Traida TOUTOV, EL yn TAapHY 7H ypais 52

SERTORIUS

them either in flight or in pursuit. When the fight- ing was at close quarters, it happened that Sertorius was not himself engaged with Pompey at first, but with Afranius, who commanded Pompey’s left, while Sertorius himself was stationed on the right. Hearing, however, that those of his men who were engaged with Pompey were yielding before his onset and be- ing worsted, he put his right wing in command of other generals, and hastened himself to the help of the wing that was suffering defeat. Those of his men who were already in retreat he rallied, those who were still keeping their ranks he encouraged, then charged anew upon Pompey, who was pursuing, and put his men to a great rout, in which Pompey also -came near being killed, was actually wounded, and had a marvellous escape. For the Libyans with Sertorius, after getting Pompey's horse, which had golden decorations and was covered with costly trappings, were so busy distributing the booty and quarrelling with one another over it, that they neglected the pursuit. Afranius, however, as soon as Sertorius had gone off to the other wing with aid and succour, routed his opponents and drove them head- long into their camp; and dashing in with the fugi- tives, it being now dark, he began to plunder, knowing nothing of Pompey's flight and having no power to keep his soldiers from their pillaging. But mean- while Sertorius came back from his victory on the other wing, and falling upon the straggling and con- fused soldiers of Afranius, slew great numbers of them. In the morning, moreover, he armed his troops and came out for battle; then, learning that Metellus was near, he broke up his array and decamped, saying: " But as for this boy, if that old éxelvn, mrnyais dy vovOernaas eis "Po&unv are-oTaNKey."

XX. "HO dper dé devas 51a 70 pndapod pavepav
Thy érapov exeivny elvat: pnxavijs yap él Tous BapBapous é éarépnto Javpacrhs, TOTE 57) pada ma papubias Seouevous. celta pevror VUKTOS an-AOS TAAVOMEVOL TUES emeTuyydvoue tv aura, Kal yopiaavres a0 THS xpoas AapBavovow. axoucas 6€ o LepTwpros exeivous pep GMOOYNTEV, av pndevi ppacwor, HUATA Toa dace, a7ro-Kpiypas dé TH Tage Kal sada odiryas Huepas mpones pdra patdpos an drpews él TO Sijpa, Sumyotpevos Tots nyEHooe TOV BapBdpwv
OS aryabov tT péya Tob Geod 7 popnvuovTos avuT@ Kara, TOUS dmvous' elra avafas él To Bihpa Tots évtuyxdvovow éexpnudriver. 1) dé éxados bre
TOV purAarTovT@y aur hy eyyus apedetoa Kal catibotoa TOV Lepraptov € eX@pet Spopp TMepixapns ™pos TO Biya, Kal Tapactica THY Kepadiy éréOnxe tals yovacw avdtod Kal TE oTOMATL THS beEias épavev, elOua pévn Kal ™ poTEpov TOUTO TOLELV. avtipthoppovoupéevov dé Tov Leptwplou
midavas Kal TL Kal Saxpicavros, ext Anes elye
TOUS TapovTas TO Tp@TOV, ELTA KpoTe@ kat Bon TOV LepTdpiov @S Satpoviov dvdpa Kal Geots pirov olxabe Wporéupartes év evOupiais Kal ypnotais éXriow joav.

XXI. Ey b¢ Tots TeV Layourtivay medious eis Tas éoyatas atropias KATAKEKNELKOS TOUS TTOAE-pious, jvaycacOn oupBareiv avtots KataBaivou-aw ép aprayny Kab auTonoyiav. nyovicdn 6é Lapmpas map aphotépwv. Kal Méppos pév o 54

579

SERTORIUS

woman had not come up, I should have given him a sound beating and sent him back to Rome.”’
XX. He was now greatly disheartened because that doe of his! was nowhere to be found; for he was thus deprived of a wonderful contrivance for influencing the Barbarians, who at this time particularly stood in need of encouragement. Soon, however,some men who were roaming about at night on other errands came upon the doe, recognized her by her colour, and caught her. When Sertorius heard of it he promised to give the men a large sum of money if they would tell no one of the capture, and after con- cealing the doe and allowing several days to pass, he came forth with a glad countenance and proceeded to the tribunal, telling the leaders of the Barbarians that the Deity was foretelling him in his dreams some great good fortune. Then he ascended the tribunal and began to deal with the applicants. And now the doe was released by her keepers at a point close by, spied Sertorius, and bounded joyfully towards the tribunal, and standing by his side put her head in his lap and licked his hand, as she had been wont to do before. Sertorius returned her caresses appropriately and even shed a few tears, whereupon the bystanders were struck with amazement at first, and then, con- vinced that Sertorius was a marvellous man and dear to the gods, escorted him with shouts and clapping of hands to his home, and were full of confidence and good hopes.

XXI. In the plains of Saguntum, after he had reduced his enemies to the greatest straits, he was forced to give them battle when they came out for plunder and forage. Both sides fought splendidly. Memmius, the most capable of Pompey’s generals,

1 Cf. chapter xi. 55

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOV VITO lloprnio otparnyev 1YEMOVLKOTATOS
éy T@ KaptepwTaTo THs paxns erecev, exparet Q , , n A ty 4 , 5é Deprwpios Kal hove TOAA@ Tov ett cuverTotov éwOcito mpos avtov MéreAdov. o O€é Tap’ HrtKiay UTooTaS Kal Tepipavas aywvitouevos
, A n
maieTat Sopatt. TodTO Tovs pey LdovTas TaD

‘Pp , \ de ’ , (oa ” >] wpaiwy, tous dé axovcavtas aidos éaxev éy-KaTaXiTev Tov nye“ova, Kat Oupos Gua mpos
TOUS ToNEeuious TapéaTn. mpoOéguevor 5é Tov Oupeovs Kai ovveteveyxovtes evpwatws éEwOodat tous “IBnpas' Kat yevopévns ottTw TadwvtTpoTou Ths vikns, 0 YepTwpios éxetvous te huyas adecis LNnXavepevos Kat Teyvatov éTépay avT@ duvapty auvedOeiy ef navyias, els ody opewny Kal
KapTepay avapuyov éppayvuTo Ta Teiyn Kal TAS TUAAS W@KUpOvTO, TdvTAa paddov H ToALOpKiay vmopmevety Stavoovpevos. GAN eEnirata Tovs To-Nepious: éxeiva yap mpooKxaebouevot Kal To
/ A fa!
Ywpiov ov xYareTas AnYecOa mpocdoKarTes, tous Te hevyovtas Tav BapBdpwy mpolevto Kral Ths aOpoloméevns avOis TO Yeptwpio duvapews
> VA 10 , bY , e , npernoayv. nOpoivero €, méepurrayTos nyemovas
éml Tas Tones avTod, Kal KeXEVOYTOS OTaV HON
\ bd , 4 9 \ > 4
TONNOUS EXWOLV, AYYENOV ATTOTTELAAL TPOS AUTOV.
émel 6€ améotethav, crv ovdevl Trove Siextraiod-4 la) ry
Hevos Tovs TroNEepious cuvéwEe Tois éavTod: Kal
wdadw émnet ods yeyoves Kal TWEpLexoTrT EV
AUTOV THY wey ATO THS yjs edtropiav évédpars Kal KUKN@CETL Kal TO TavTaxyoce horrav GEvs ériar, 56

fell in the thickest of the battle, and Sertorius was carrying all before him, and, with great slaughter of the enemy who still held together, was forcing his way towards Metellus himself. Then Metellus, who was holding his ground with a vigour that belied his years, and fighting gloriously, was struck by a spear. All the Romans who saw or heard of this were seized with shame at the thought of deserting their commander, and at the same time were filled with rage against the enemy. So, after they had covered Metellus with their shields and carried him out of danger, they stoutly drove the Iberians back. Victory had now changed sides, and therefore Sertorius, con- triving a safe retreat for his men and devising the quiet assembly of another force for himself, took refuge in a strong city among the mountains, and there began to repair the walls and strengthen the gates, although his purpose was anything rather than to stand a siege. But he completely deceived his enemies; for they sat down to invest him and ex- pected to take the place without difficulty, and thus suffered the Barbarians who were in flight to escape, and took no heed of the force that was being collected anew for Sertorius. And collected it was, after Sertorius had sent officers to the cities, with orders that as soon as they had a large body of troops, they should send a messenger to him. Then, when the cities sent their messengers, he cut his way through the enemy with no trouble and effected a junction with his new troops; and so once more he ad- vanced upon the enemy with large reinforcements and began to cut off their land supplies by means of ambuscades, flank movements, and swift marches in 57

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ta © éx Oaratrns AnoTpLKOIs oKadect KaTéyov
THY TapaNdiayv, woTe HYayKdaOnoay ot oTpaTHyol Suarvdevtes o pev eis T'adratiav azredOeiv, Topanios dé mept Baxxatous dSiaxerpacar poxOnpas
io aypnuatias, ypaddwv mpos THY svyKANTOV
@s amd&e. Tov oTparor, e& pn TéuTrOLEY apyupLoV avT@' KaTavadwKévar yap dn Ta avTov po-
A A ? / \ = @ 9
jo\enov THS 'Itadias. Kal rors Hv OovTOS év
e lA , e 4 J > 4
Papn oyos, ws Llopmrniov mportepos ets 'Itadiav apiEotto Yeptw@pios: els TOTOUTOY Tovs mpwTOUS kat Suvatwratous THY TOTE TTPATHYAY LepTwptov Seworns KaTéoTnoev.
XXII. 'EdnAwce 6€ cal MérerXos éxtemrAnypévos Tov avdpa Kal péyay hyovpevos. émexnpuke yap, el tts avTov avérou "Pwpaios, Exatov apyvpov TddAavTa doce kal wAdbpa Stopvpia yas
> \ 4 4 3 ¢€ , e bd ,

et de huyds, Kabodov eis "Paynv, ws atroyvecer davepas dwuvns avovpevos Tov avdpa ba mpoboalas. ére dé vixnoas wore waxn Tov Leptwptov ottws érnpOn Kal THYv evTUYiaY HYdTnOEV WoTE avtoxpatwp avayopevOjvat, Ovotats & avdtov at
, _ 9 A \ " 3Q 7 ,
TONES eTrLpotT@vTa Kal Bwpois edéyovTo. Réryetat 6¢ Kat otedaverv avabécers tpocierOat Kal Seirvwv coBapwrépwy wtrodoyds, év ols éoOfra OprauBicnv éxov emuve, cal Nixas tretmounpévar ov' opydvwv émidpopav Ypvicea TpoTTaLta Kal oTepd-vous Ssadépoveat Katyyovto, Kal yopot taidwv Kal yuvatkav émivixious tuvous noov eis avTov.
be ae > - A > /
éd' ols eixotws Rv KatayéXacTos, et Spamrétnv 53

every direction, and their maritime supplies by be- setting the coast with piratical craft; so that the Roman generals were compelled to separate, Metellus retiring into Gaul, and Pompey spending the winter among the Vaccaei. Here he suffered much from lack of supplies, and wrote to the senate that he would bring his army home unless they sent him money, since he had already exhausted his own re- sources in his war for the defence of Italy.1_ Indeed, this story was prevalent in Rome, that Sertorius would come back to Italy before Pompey did. To such straits were the first and ablest generals of the time reduced by the skill of Sertorius. XXII. And Metellus also made it clear that he was afraid of Sertorius and considered him a great leader. For he made proclamation that to any Roman who should kill Sertorius he would give a hundred talents of silver and twenty thousand acres of land, and to any exile, freedom to return to Rome ; implying his despair of openly defeating the man by this attempt to purchase his betrayal. Moreover, after a victory which he once won over Sertorius he was so elated and delighted with his success that his soldiers saluted him as Imperator and the cities celebrated his visits to them with altars and sacrifices. Nay, it is said that he suffered wreaths to be bound upon his head and accepted invitations to stately banquets, at which he wore a triumphal robe as he drank his wine, while Victories, made to move by machinery, descended and distributed golden trophies and wreaths, and choirs of boys and women sang hymns of victory in his praise. For this it was natural that men should laugh at him, since, while calling

1 Cf. the Pompey, xx. 1.

LwAra xal reirpavov tis KdpBwvos guyfs atro-KANGV TOY YEPT@PLOV OUTW KEYAVYWTAL KAL TeEpt-
A /
Yapns yéyovev, UroywpncavTos avTov Tepiyevo[eEvos.
A A \ Meyadodpocuvns 5 tod Yeptwpiov mparTov pev
\ N , x \ ene \
TO Tovs devyovtas amo "Pwouns BovAevTas Kai
Tap avut@ dsatpiBovtas cvyxAnTov avayopedaat, Tapas TE Kal oTpaTHyoUs EE exetvwr aTrodeKVU-vat, Kal TavTa Tos TaTpioLs vomoLs TA TOLADTA Koopmely émrettTa TO Ypw@pevoyv Otros Kal ypr-
\ ' "A > 4 > ,
pact Kat Todeot Tais IBnpwy pnd' aypt Aoyov
A " > 4 e / \ > UA ig
THS axpas éEovclas udierGar pos avtovs, 'Popaious 6€ caOtotdvar otpatnyovs Kal dpyovTas avTav, ws "Pwpators dvaxtepevov Thy édcvOepiar, oux éxeivous aifovta Kata "Pwpaiwrv. Kal yap
® > A / '\ \ v A a

qv avnp pirorratpis Kai tov éxwv ipepov Tod KaTedOeiy? adr\a dvoTrpayav pev nvdpaydbe Kal
TaTrEeLvoV OvdéY EpaTTE TPOS TOvS TOAEMiOUS, eV
\ “a / / \ 4 \
5é€ tais vixats dveméumeto mpos MéreAXov cat \ fw 4 KN ee /
mpos Uopmrniov érowpos Ov TA OTrAA KaTabécbat kai Buody idtwrns Kadodouv tuyav waddXov yap
LA
eOédXev aonpuotatos év ‘Pan woritns h dhevywv
A le) A a
THY EAVTOU TAaVTwWY OOD TOY GAWY a’TOKPAaTwP avayopevecOat.
/ \ 3 ¢ fo) a
Aéyerat 6€ ov FKtota Ths watpiSos émuOupeiv
\ \ , \ ? a dia THY unTtepa, Tpadels oppavos br avTH Kal To ocuuTay avakeipevos éxeivyn. KadrovvTwv Sé TOV \ LY 9 , / > AN 24? e , mept tThv IBnpiav dirtwv avtov éf nyepovia, 60
580

SERTORIUS

Sertorius a runaway slave of Sulla and a remnant of the routed party of Carbo, he was so puffed up with pride and overjoyed merely because he had won an advantage over Sertorius and Sertorius had retired before him.

But the magnanimity of Sertorius showed itself, firstly, in his giving the name of senate to the senators who fled from Rome and joined his cause, appointing quaestors and praetors from their number, and making all such arrangements in accordance with the customs of his country ; and, secondly, in his using the arms, wealth, and cities of the Iberians without even pre- tending to yield to the Iberians themselves a portion of the supreme power, but selecting Roman generals and commanders over them, feeling that he was re- covering freedom for the Romans, and not strengthen- ing the inhabitants against the Romans. For he was a man who loved his country and had a strong desire to return home from exile. And yet in his misfortunes he played a brave man’s part and would not humble himself at all before his enemies; while as a victor he would send to Metellus and Pompey expressing his readiness to lay down his arms and lead the life of at private citizen if he could get the privilege of return- ing home, since, as he said, he preferred to live in Rome as her meanest citizen rather than to live in exile from his country and be called supreme ruler of all the rest of the world together.

We are told that his desire for his native country was due in large measure to his attachment to his mother, by whom he was reared after his father’s death, and to whom he was entirely devoted. When his friends in Spain were inviting him to take the

1 Cf. chapter ii. 1, 61
PLUTARCRH'S LIVES

TUOOMEVOS THY TEAEUTHVY THS pNTPOS GALyov édé-noev UTO AUTINS TpoécIat Tov Biov. émTa yap nuépas ovTte avvOnua Sovs ovTe OpOeis Tie TOV
dirwv éxetto, Kal worLs of gvaTpdTnyot Kal ouo-TLULOL THY OKHVHY TWeplaTayTEsS nYayKacav avTOoV
mpoeNOovTa Tois atpatiwTtais évyTuyeiy Kal TOV TpaywaTov ev hepopévwv avtirAapBaverOa. S10
Kat qwodnois edokevy Huepos avip ducer yeyovas Kab pos nouxiay éywv émuexas Ss aitias Tapa
yepny Tais otpatnyixais apyais xphoGau, xa
HN TuyXavav adeias, andra ouvehavvopevos v0
Tov €yOpav eis TA STAA hpovpav avayKaiay Tod ToMpaTtos TeptBadrrEc Oat Tov ToNEpOD.
XXIII. "Hv 6€ cal ra awpos MiOpiddtny adtod
ToMTEevpaTa peyaroppocuvns. é7rel yap éx Tov Kata Ywrrav odddrpatos o Mibpidatns dorreEp eis TaXato pa SevTEpov auaTapevos avOts éerrexei-pnoe TH 'Acia, peya Sé 70n TO Leptwpiov Kréos éhoita tavraxoce Kal TOY Tept avTOD AOywY @otep goptiov Eevxav ot mréovtes ato THs éamépas dvamentAnxecav tov Ildvrov, dppunro StatrpecBevecbat Tpos avTov, émnpuévos padtcra tais TOV KoAdKeV adalovelats, ot TOY Mev YEepTa-prov 'AvviBa, tov 6& MiPpidarnv Ilvpp@ mapeina-Covres ov dv épacay 'Pwpaiovs pos Tn\KavTas ouov pvoeas Te Kal Suvdwes emuyerpoupévous
d:yo0ev avtiaxetv, ToD SewvoTatov otpaTnyod TP peyiot@ Tav Bactléwy Tpoayevouévov. Téutres bn wpéoBers 0 MiOpiddrns eis "IBnpiav ypap-62
SERTORIUS

leadership there, he learned of the death of his mother, and almost died of grief. For seven days he lay prostrate in his tent without giving out a watchword or being seen by any of his friends, and it was only with difficulty that his fellow-generals and the men of like rank with him who surrounded his tent could force him to come forth and meet the soldiers and take part in their enterprises, which were moving on well. Therefore many people were led to think that he was a man of gentle temper and naturally disposed to a quiet life, but was practically forced against his wishes into the career of a soldier, where, not achieving safety, but being driven by his enemies to have recourse to arms, he encompassed himself with war as a necessary protection to his person.

XXIII. His negotiations with Mithridates also gave proof of his magnanimity. For Mithridates, after the fall which Sulla gave him, rose up, as it were, for another wrestling bout and tried once more to get the province of Asia into his power. At this time, too, the fame of Sertorius was already great and was travelling every whither, and sailors from the west had filled the kingdom of Pontus full of the tales about him, like so many foreign wares. Mithridates was therefore eager to send an em- bassy to him, and was incited thereto most of all by the foolish exaggerations of his flatterers. These likened Sertorius to Hannibal and Mithridates to Pyrrhus, and declared that the Romans, attacked on both sides, could not hold out against two such natures and forces combined, when the ablest of generals was in alliance with the greatest of kings. So Mithridates sent envoys to Iberia carrying letters

4

63

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

pata Yeptwpim Kal Aoyous Kopitovtas, Oi' ov
AUTOS pev emNnyyéeAXETO YpHpaATA Kai vas Trapé-Eew els tov moXenov, Um éxelvou 5é nEiov THY 9 , 9 A la! A e 4
Aciav avT@ BeBatovobat tracav, hs vreyopnoe
e , N N 4 lA
Pwpaious Kata tas mpos YvAAaY yevouevas ouv-Onxas. aOpotcavtos 5é Yeprwpiov Bovarny, iv
avyKAnToY avoyate, kal TOV dAdXwv SéxecIat TAS TpokAnoels Kal ayamav KedevovTav (dvoua yap Kal ypdupa Kevoy altovpévous yepi TeV ovK
é6yT@v én avtots, avtl tovTwv AapRdvev wv pedrsota Seopevos. Tuyxdvovow), ov' nvéoyeTo oO Lept@ptos, dAAA Bidvviav pev bn wal Karma-Soxiav AapBavovtt MiOpidatyn py POovetv, Evy Bactrevopeva xal pndév mpoorjxovta '"Pwpaiors, hv 6¢ t@ Stxatotdt@ tpoww "Pwpaiwv Kextnpevov érapyiay aperopevos Kal KaTacxy@v TonenA \ > / e N / ‘ \

pav pev éEérrecev Ud DipBpiov, orevdopevos 6é Mpos YvAAaY adhe, TavTnv ovK hyn TeptowecOat
madw wm éxeivm yevouevnv: Seiv yap avféecOa
THY TOMY UT avTOD KpaTodYTOS, ovK éXaTTHCEL
Tov éxeivns Kpateiy avTov' yevvaip yap davébpt PETA TOV KANOD vUKGaY aipeToY, aicypas 5é ovdé cwlecbat.
XXIV. Tadta amayyenOévta MiOpidarns dia
OapPovs erovetto: Kal rNéyerar pev eEitreivy mpos
Tous pirous: “Ti dita mpoordte, Yeptwpios ev Tlavatio xabelopevos, ef viv eis THY’ ATNaYTLKNY éfewopevos Odraccav Gpovs nuav TH BactrgEla
B , b) p 4 1 a , ”
TlOnou Kat Tretpwpévors ’Acias arretret Trodepov; 64 and oral propositions to Sertorius, the purport of which was that Mithridates for his part promised to furnish money and ships for the war, but demanded that Sertorius confirm him in the possession of the whole of Asia, which he had yielded to the Romans by virtue of the treaties made with Sulla. Sertorius assembled a council, which he called a senate, and here the rest urged him to accept the king’s proposals and be well content with them; for they were asked to grant a name and an empty title to what was not in their possession, and would receive therefor that of which they stood most in. need. Sertorius, however, would not consent to this. He said he had no objection to Mithridates taking Bithynia and Cappadocia, countries used to kings and of no concern whatever to the Romans; but a province which Mithridates had taken away and held when it belonged in the justest manner to the Romans, from which he had been driven by Fimbria in war, and which he had renounced by treaty with Sulla,—this province Sertorius said he would not suffer to become the king’s again; for the Roman state must be increased by his exercise of power, and he must not exercise power at the expense of the state. For to a man of noble spirit victory is to be desired if it comes with honour, but with shame not even life + itself.

XXIV. When this was reported to Mithridates he acted like one amazed; and we are told that he said to his friends: “ What terms, pray, will Sertorius im- pose when he is seated on the Palatine, if now, after he has been driven forth to the Atlantic sea, he sets bounds to our kingdom and threatens us with war if

200 pnv adda yivovtai ye cuvOjKat Kal Spxat, Karasoxiav xat Biduviav éyew Me6pidarny
Leptwpiov otpatynyoy avT@ Kal otpatioras wép-TovtTos, Yeptw@pioy sé mapa Midpiddrouv rAaPBeiv
3 TploxiALa TadavTa Kal TecoapdxovTa vads. Téumetas 5é€ Kal otpatnyos eis “Aciay tio Yepto-piov tTav amd BovAns wepevyotwy mpos avTov Madpxos Mdptos, 6 auveEeAX@y Tivas TONES TOV
"Aciddwy o Mipiddrns eiceXavvovTt peta pa-Boar kai weréxewy abtos eiteto Sevtépav taku
4 Kat oxjpa Oepamevovtos Exovciws avetrAnpas. 0
5é Tas péev nrevOépou, tais 5é arérXerav ypadhwv Vdpits Yeptwpiov KaTnyyerev, woTe THY *Aciav avOis évoxyNoupéevny pev bro TaY TEeXwvaV, Bapuvopevny b€ tats mAeoveFiats Kal Urepnpaviass TOV émickiverv, avatronOjnvat mpos thy éAtridba kal wobeiy thy wpocdokwpévny petaBorAny THS nryemovias.

XXV. Ev 0 "I8npia trav wept Yepra@pvov ovy-KANTLKOY Kal LooTiLwV, WS TP@TOV Eis aYTiTTAaNOV
érmida xatéotynoav, éravévtos Tod doBov, 00-vos HirteTo Kal Cros avontos THs éxeivou Suva-pews. eviye 5é Leprévvas 80’ evyéverav érratpopevos hpovnpate Kev@ wpos THY Hyenoviav, Kal Noyous poxOnpovs Siedidov Kpvda Tots émitydel-
2 as: “Tis apa movnpos has UrocaBav éx Kaxav els Yeipova, péper Saipav, ot LUANG pe omod Te cupmacns apxovTe ys Kat Oararrys moteiy 70
TpooTaTToOMEevoy ovK nELovMEY OiKOL pméVOVTES, Setpo 6€ POapévtes ws erEVOEpo. Riwcopevor

we try to get Asia?" However,a treaty was actually made and ratified with oaths. Mithridates was to have Cappadocia and Bithynia, Sertorius sending him a general and soldiers, while Sertorius was to receive from Mithridates three thousand talents and forty ships. Accordingly, a general was sent to Asia by Sertorius, one of the senators who had taken refuge with him, Marcus Marius.! He was assisted by Mithridates in the capture of certain cities of Asia, and when he entered them with fasces and axes, Mithri- dates would follow him in person, voluntarily assuming second rank and the position of a vassal. Marius gave some of the cities their freedom, and wrote to others announcing their exemption from taxation by grace of Sertorius, so that Asia, which was once more harassed by the revenue-farmers and oppressed by the rapacity and arrogance of the soldiers quartered there, was all of a flutter with new hopes and yearned for the expected change of supremacy.

XXV. But in Spain, as soon as the senators and men of equal rank about Sertorius felt confident that they were a match for their enemies and dismissed their fears, they were seized with envy and foolish jealousy of their leader. They were encouraged in these feelings by Perpenna, whose high birth filled him with vain aspirations for the chief command, and he would hold malevolent discourses in secret among his associates: ‘ What evil genius, pray, has seized us and is hurrying us from bad to worse? We would not consent to remain at home and do the bidding of Sulla when he was lord of all the earth and sea to- gether, but we came to this land of destruction with the idea of living like freemen, and are now

1 Cf. the Luculus, viii. 5. 67

Sovevopev Exovalws THD Leptwptou Sopudo-pobytes puyiy, 6 dvopa _Xrevalopevor UT TOY GKOU-OvT@, TUYKANTOS, ovTes, bBpets dé xat Tpoo~
Taypwata Kal TOvOUS OvK érdTTOvaS TP ypov Kat Avowtavay bmouévovtes;’ ” TOLOUT@V dvamiTdpevot AOYwY oF modnol pavepsrs fev ovK adioT avTO, Sedouxotes avTov THv Suva, kpvda Oé Tas Te mpatets éAupaivovto, Kal tous BapBdpous
éexdxouv Kordlovres Tixp@s Kal Sacporoyobrtes, Os Leprepiov KENEVOVTOS. é& av am@roaTdaets
éyivovto Kal Tapaxat mepl Tas Tones. ot dé TE WTO MEVOL tavta Oeparrevew Kat amon paivew emavnpXovTo elovas eFerpyac uevot TOE LOUS
Kal Tas UTapxovcas NvEnxores amreBeias, Gore
TOV Leptwprov éx THS TpoTepas errleteelas Kal
TPQOTHTOS petaBadovra, mept tous ev “Ooky Tpepopevous Tapavopija at maidas Ttav "I Bipwyv, TOUS [Lev dvehovta, Tous &é arodouevov.

XXVI. ‘O 8 ob Tleprévvas mrelovas €v@ [L0-
Tous &yov ‘Tpos Thy em iBeow Tpoodyerat Kat
Manvuop, eva Tav édp nyepovias. ovTOS épav
TLVOS TOD éy wpa petpaxtov Kab prroppovoupevos Wpos avTo pater THY émBoudip, Kehevov awed cavTa Tay adXwv epac Tay avT@ pov TpoaexXety
@s évTds ME POY Od yoV pyar yevngouevo. TO 5é pecpdxvoy étépw til Tov épacray Adgedie pandXov ™ poo merrovOos expépet TOV oyov. aKovaas 6é o Au idtos eEemAayn’ Kal yap auTos
pereixe THS emt LepTaptov oVVwpLoTiAas, Ov pévrou TOV Maaduop eyivwo ne peTexovTa, Tlepmévvay
5é kal Tpaxivov cai twas adXous, Ov avTos 70Ee
68

voluntarily slaves in the body-guard of Sertorius the exile, being a senate, a name jeered at by all who hear it, and submitting to no lesser insults, injunctions, and toils than Iberians and Lusitanians.” Most of his hearers, their minds infected with such sentiments as these, did not, indeed, openly desert Sertorius, be- cause they were in fear of his power; but they secretly tried to vitiate his enterprises, and abused the Barbarians with severe punishments and exac- tions, on the plea that Sertorius thus ordered. Conse- quently there were revolts and disturbances among the cities. And those who were sent to assuage and cure these disorders brought more wars to pass before they returned, and increased the existing insubordination, so that Sertorius laid aside his former clemency and mildness and wrought injustice upon the sons of the Iberians who were being educated at Osca,! killing some, and selling others into slavery.

XXVI. Perpenna, accordingly, having now more accomplices in his attempt upon Sertorius, brought into their number Manlius also, one of those in high command. This Manlius was enamoured of a beau- tiful boy, and as a mark of his affection for him told him of the conspiracy, bidding him neglect his other lovers and devote himself to him alone, since within a few days he was to be a great personage. But the boy carried the tale to another one of his lovers, Aufidius, to whom he was more devoted. And Aufidius, on hearing the story, was astounded; for though he himself was a party to the conspiracy against Sertorius, he did not know that Manlius was. But since the boy mentioned by name Perpenna, Gracinus, and sundry others of those whom Aufidius knew to 1 Cf. chapter xiv. 2 f.

69

TVVO MOTD, ovopuatovtos TOU perpakiou, Svar apa-xoeis 1 pos EXELVOV pev eFepravprte TOV Aoyor, Kal mapexdrer TOU Ma))iou kaTadpoveiv @sS
Kevov Kal aralovos, autos 8é T pos TOV Tepreévvay
Tmopevbels Kal ppdcas THD ofurnta To Katpov

Kat Tov xivduvov exédevoev €muyerpety. ob O€ émeiGovTo, Kat TapacKevdaavres avOpwrov ypap-pata Kouitovta T@ Leptaple T Poa iyaryov. é57-Dov dé Ta ypaupara vixnv Twos Tov UT avTe oT parnyav Kai dovov mroNvy TOV TOKE MOV. éd' ols Tov Yeptwpiov meptxapous évT0s Kal Ovovtos evaryyédia., Ilepmeévvas éoTiagw auT@ Kat Tots mapodot pidous (ovTor 6é€ Hoav éx Tijs TUvw LO aias) rnyyéAreTO, Kal TOAAA ALTTapHoas Etrevoev EN Oeiv.
"Ael weév odv Ta pera Leprwpiou Seimva Tohaay elev aide Kat Koo MOY, obTe opav Tt TOY aloXpw@Vv oUuTE dcovewy UTTOMEVOVTOS, GANA Kal ToVS ouvoyTas EUTAKTOLS Kal avuBpicrots Tau-Siais xpiio Gar Kat prrogppoavvais eOilovtos: TOTE
é, TOU TOTOU pecobvtos, apxnv anpyuaxias Cnrovv-TES avapavoov dxoddaTous EXPAVTO pnyuac, Kal TOAAG T poo Trotovpevot eve NOENYALVOVY WS
mapotuvobyres exeivov. o Oe elTe Sucxepaiver THV aKxoo war, elTe THY Sudvoray avTov TH Opacv-TTL THS AaNLAS Kal TH mapa TO ebwOds drAUywpia cup povycas, peréBare TO oXHpa TAS Kdaovas, Ur vov savels éavTov, @s ovTE T pore wv ouTE
KaTaKovmD. érrel 5€ 0 Tleprévvas piadnv TLva
NaBov axpatov peTakd mivev abhnev EK TOV
Yetpav Kal xrodov érroinaey, Strep Hv avTois ovp-7°

SERTORIUS

be among the conspirators, Aufidius was confounded, and after making light of the story to the boy and exhorting him to despise Manlius as an empty brag- gart, he himself went to Perpenna, told him of the sharpness of the crisis and of their peril, and urged him to attempt the deed. The conspirators were persuaded, and after providing a man to act as the bearer of letters, they introduced him to Sertorius. His letters made known a victory of one of the generals serving under Sertorius, and a great slaughter of the enemy. At this Sertorius was overjoyed and offered a sacrifice of glad tidings, during which Per- penna proposed a banquet for him and his friends who were present (and these were of the conspiracy), and after much entreaty persuaded him to come. Now, the suppers at which Sertorius was present were always marked by restraint and decorum, since he would not consent to see or hear anything that was disgraceful, but held his associates to the practice of indulging only in mirth and merriment that was decorous and restrained. On this occasion, however, when the drinking was well under way, the guests, seeking occasion for a quarrel, openly indulged in dissolute language, and, pretending to be drunk, committed many indecencies, with the hope of angering Sertorius. But he, either because he was vexed at their disorderly conduct, or because he had become aware of their purpose from the boldness of their talk and their unwonted contempt for his wishes, changed his posture on the couch and threw himself upon his back, as though he neither heard nor regarded them. But when Perpenna, after taking a-cup of wine in his hands, dropped it as he was drinking and made a clatter with it, which was

Boxoyp, "AvT@vv0s DIrEpKaTaKelLEVos Tae 7

6 Eien TOV LepTaptov. avactpeyavTos dé ampos
THY Ty. éxetvou Kal guveEavioTapevon, Trept-
TET OV els TO 7700s kaTéraBe Tas Yelpas auo-Tépas, Bate unde Guvvopevoy ToAAwY TraLovTw@Y
at oGavety.
XXVII. Or pep ovv Teta Tor TOY "TBipav evOus @XOvTO Kal mTaped@Kay EavTous émumpe-
a Bevo apevor Tous qept Hoparniov kat Méreddop: Tous 6é€ cuppeivavTas 0 Ileprévvas avaraBov émexelpet TL TpaTTEeLD. XpPneapevos dé Tais Yep-Twpliov TmapacKevais dcop evarxXnuovijaat Kal
pavepos yevéoOar pnre dpxew pare apxer Ga
2 TEPUKOS, Hopmnio mpooeBane: Kal Taxv cup-TptBeis v um avrou Kal YEVOMEVOS aixparwTos aude
THY éoxarny Ur épetve cuppopay TYE HOVLK DS,
Gna TaV Leptwpiov Yeapparav KUpLOS yeyovas
UTUrxXvElTo Topamnte Seifew tratixev avdpav Kat péyeorov ép 'Poun Suva pévov avroypapous emlaTonas, KaNovvT@y LEpT@prov es 'Iraniav,
@S TONA@Y moBouvTewy Ta mapovTa Jkovijoat Kal
3 petaBanreiv THY mohuTeiay. epyov ovv oO Toparn-ios ov véas ppevos, GX' Ev para BeByxvias cal KATNPTUBLEVNS epyacdapevos perydoov amnrrake
THD 'Paunv oBeov kal VEWTEPLT LOY. Tas pev yap €mloToAas éxeivas Kat Ta ypampara, Tov LepTwpiov cUvayaryov dmavra Katéxavoey ove
avTos dvaryvous * ove édoas Erepov: avrov be TOV Tleprévvav KATO TAXOS aveine, poBnbeis pay TOV
OVOLATOV eFevex Devt Mpos Tivas aTooTaceELs Kal Tapaxat yévwvTas.
1 girds avayvois Naber : dvayvods.

their signal, Antonius, who reclined above Sertorius on the couch, smote him with his sword. Sertorius turned at the blow and would have risen with his assailant, but Antonius fell upon his chest and seized both his hands, so that he could make no defence even, and died from the blows of many.

XXVII. Well, then, most of the Iberians imme- diately went away, sent ambassadors to Pompey and Metellus, and delivered themselves up to them; but those who remained Perpenna took under his command and attempted to do something. After using the materials provided by Sertorius just enough to cut asorry figure and make it clear that he was fitted by nature neither to command nor to obey, he attacked Pompey ; and having been quickly crushed by him and taken prisoner, he did not even endure this extreme misfortune as a leader should, but, being in possession of the papers of Sertorius, he promised to show Pompey autograph letters from men of consular rank and of the highest influence in Rome, in which they invited Sertorius to come to Italy, assuring him that there were many there who desired eagerly to stir up a revolution and change the constitution. Pompey, then, did not act in this emergency like a young man, but like one whose understanding was right well matured and disciplined, and so freed Rome from revolutionary terrors. For he got together those letters and all the papers of Sertorius-and burned them, without reading them himself or suffering any- one else to do so; and Perpenna himself he speedily put to death, through fear that seditions and disturb- ances might arise if the names of the correspondents of Sertorius were communicated to anybody.!

1 Cf, the Pompey, xx. 4.

4 Tov 6é 7@ Tleprévva cuvopocapévoy ot pév
2 \ ra’ ’ ps / © gy
ért Iloumniov avayévtes dSiepOapnoav, ot Sé
devyovtes eis AtBunv to Maupovoiwy xatn- |
4 VA b] b) \ A J , kovtiaOnaav. sséduye 8 ovdels mAnv Avddidzos
6 Tov MadXiou avtepacrns: ovtos 5é } AaDwv 7
TmapapednOels év tit BapBdpw Komn Tevopevos
Kal pLoovpEevos KATEYNpAaTeED.

Of Perpenna’s fellow conspirators, some were brought to Pompey and put to death, others fled to Africa and fell victims to the spears of the Maurusians. Not one escaped, except Aufidius, the rival of Manlius; he, either because men did not notice him or because they did not heed him, came to old age in a barbarian village, a poor and hated man. _

Digitized by Google

EUMENES

EYMENH®2

I. Evpévn 6€ tov Kapdiavov iotopet Aotpis 583
TWaTpos pev apakevovtos ev Xeppovnaw Sia Treviav
, fel \ 3 4 b 4
yevéoOar, tpadjvar Sé éXevIepiws év ypadppact
Kal wept Tadaiotpav: ére dé matbds dvTOS avTod
Didimmov tmapenidnpodvta Kal oxornyv dyovta Ta Tov Kapdiavav Oedoacbar Tayxpdtia petpa-
, \ ld , 9 > ,
Kiwv Kal tadaiopata taidwv, év ols evnpepncavta Tov Kipevn nal davévta ovvetov cal av-
a / A a Spetov apécar tH Dirirm@m cal dvarndOjvat.
a a /
Soxovar 5é eixoTa Aéyerv padXov of Sta Eeviav Kal
/ / ‘ 3 UA e N A diriav tmatpwav tov Evpévn Aéyovtes vie Tov Dirimmov mpoayOjva. peta 5é THY éxeivov
TEAEUTNY OUTE TUVETEL TLVOS OUTE TioTEL KeEtTE-Oat Soxav tav tepit 'AréEavdpov éxareito pév apxlypaupatevs, Tuuns Oé WoTrEep of pddLoTA
diror cal cuvidas étvyxavev, Bote Kal otpa-\ 9 A \ A b] \ 979 @€ Aa
THYOS aTooTadHnvat Kata THY “Ivdinnv é’ éEavTod peta Suvapews, Kal tHv Ilepdixxov tmaparaBeiv
e , e / ? / e
immapxiav, OTe Ilepdixxas, amroPavovtos ‘Hdar-
U > A > , “ , \ \
OTLWVOS, Els THY exetvou TrponAGe Takiy. 610 Kal
NeottoNéuov Tod apxytuTacTicToD peta THD
78

EUMENES

I. Eumenes of Cardia, according to Duris, was the son of a man whom poverty drove to be a waggoner, in the Thracian Chersonesus, but received a liberal education in literature and athletics. While he was still a boy, Duris says further, Philip, who was so- journing in the place and had an hour of leisure, came to see the young men and boys of Cardia exercising in the pancratium! and in wrestling, among whom Eumenes had such success and gave such proofs of intelligence and bravery that he pleased Philip and was taken into his following. But in my opinion those historians tell a more probable story who say that a tie of guest-friendship with his father led Philip to give advancement to Eumenes. After Philip’s death Eumenes was thought to be inferior to none of Alexander’s followers in sagacity and fidelity, and though he had only the title of chief secretary, he was held in as much honour as the king's principal friends and intimates, so that on the Indian expedition he was actually sent out as general with a force under his own orders," and received the command in the cavalry which Perdiccas had held, when Perdiccas, after Hephaestion's death, was advanced to that officer's position. Therefore when Neoptolemus, the commander of the Shield-bearers, after Alexander's

1 A mixture of wrestling and boxing.
2 Cf. Arrian, Anab. v. 24, 6f

"AreEavdpov tedeuTHY AéyovTOS WS aUTOS pev
aomida Kal royxnv, Kipévns Sé ypadetov éyav Kal tivaxidtov nKodov0e, KateyéXov ot Maxedo-
VES, META TOV GAAOV KaXO@V TOY Evpévyn Kal THs
KaTa TOV ydpov olKELOTNTOS U7TO TOV BacLréws
eloores aFiwOévta. Bapoivnv yap tiv 'AptaBa-Cov mpwrnv év Acacia yvovs o "AdéEavpos, é& Hs viov éoyev 'Hpaxréa, rav ravtns adderdav II70-Acuaiw pev "Arduav, Evpéves 8¢ Bapoivnv é€é-Swxev, Ste Kal Tas ddrAas Tlepoidas Seéverpe Kal TUV@Ktioe TOLS EéTALpors.
II. Od pv adda Kal wpocéxpovae TroAAdKS
"ArcEdvipe, cal rapexivddvevoe 8s "Hdarotiova.
mpatov pev yap Evip t@ avAnrA rod "Hdaioti-@VOS OiKiaV KaTavEipavToOS fy ob Taides ETUXOV
T@ Evpéver mpoxaretAndotes, eAOwy imo opyhs mpos Tov AnréEavdpov o Evpévns éRoa pera Meév-TOpos WS avAEly ein KpaTicToV Tpayodeiy TA
dma pivpavtas éx TOV Ye_pov, wate AdéEavdpov avT@ cuvayavaxtely Kal ANotdopetc Oar TG "Hdai-oTiwv. TaXY pévToL peTaTEc@V avOis elye TOV Evpévyn 80 dpyis, ws BBpet waAXov pds éautov 7
Tappnoia mpos 'Hohatotiwva ypnodpevov.
"Errecta Néapxov éxméutrov peta veov emt thy éEw Odraccay 7ret ypnuata Tovs pirous: ov yap nv év TO Bacireio. Tov S Evpévous aitnbévtos pev Tplaxoota tddavta, Sovtos 5é éxatov pova, Kal TavTa yAicypas Kal pods avT@ cuverréxOat

death, said that he had followed the king with shield and spear, but Eumenes with pen and paper, the Macedonians laughed him to scorn ; they knew that, besides his other honours, Eumenes had been deemed worthy by the king of relationship in marriage. For Barsiné the daughter of Artabazus, the first woman whom Alexander knew in Asia, and by whom he had a son, Heracles, had two sisters; of these Alexander gave one, Apama, to Ptolemy, and the other, also called Barsiné,! to Eumenes. This was at the time when he distributed the other Persian women as consorts among his companions."

II. However, Eumenes was often in collision with Alexander, and he got himself into danger through Hephaestion. In the first place, for instance, when Hephaestion assigned to Euius the flute-player the quarters which his servants had already taken up for

'Eumenes, Eumenes, accompanied by Mentor, came in a passion to Alexander and cried out that it was best for him to throw away his arms and be a flute- player or a tragic actor. The immediate result was that Alexander shared his indignation and heaped abuse upon Hephaestion. Soon, however, he changed his mind and was angry with Eumenes, feeling that he had indulged in insolence towards himself more than in bold words against Hephaestion.

Again, when Alexander was sending out Nearchus with a fleet to explore the outer sea, he asked money of his friends, since the royal treasury was empty. Eumenes was asked for three hundred talents, but gave only a hundred, and said that even these had been slowly and with difficulty collected for him by

1 In Arrian, Anab. vii. 4, 6, the names of the sisters are Artacama and Artonis, respectively.
3 Cf. the Alexander, Ixx. 2. :

a 9 , , +O\ > /
dua TOV éTiTpOTMY hacKoVTOS, ovdey éyKaéoas
ovdé deEdpevos exéAXevoe Tos Taidas Kpvda TH Aa A J 4 " b] A / > :
oxnvn tov Kvpevous trip éveivar, Bovdopevos éx-copilouevav Tov ypnpatwv AaBeiv én' avtodwpe@ pevdopevov. &bO0n 5é) oxnvy catadrcxOeica, Kal petevonoe TOY ypaypdtov diadOapévTwv o
"AréEavdpos. TO d€ cuyxubev Ypuciov Kal apyv-
A a / ptov umo Tod mupos dvevpéOn TrEiovy 7) KXLALwv
TtaravTwv. édraBe Sé ovdév, GAAA Kal ypawas Tols TavTayov caTpdtrats Kal otpaTnyois avti-

ypada trav SvepOappévav arooréAd\ev wdvtTa
/ > i N > /
TaparauBaverv exeXevoe Tov Kvpevn.
IIdduv &€ rrepi dwpeds Tivos ets S:adopay xataotas mpos tov “Hdatotiwva, nal moddAa pev
? 4 A \ \ b] 4 , \ >
Gkovcas KaAKOS, TOAAG 6€ EiTT@V, TOTE MEV OVK
M. 54 9 9, / * VA
éXaTToy oye: pet OrgLyov Sé TeAEUTHCAVTOS ‘H / O06 e \ } a dato timvos tepirabav o Bactrev’s Kal tao

A 256 a \ ? / @ a ? , de ovs edoxes CovTe pév exeivm POoveiv émiyaipey 5é TeOvnkoTe TpaXéws OMLA@Y Kal yareTros OV, pa-
ATA TOV Edpévn bu’ drrowpias elye, Kal mpovdpepe ToddaKls Tas Stagopas Kal Nodopias éxeivas. oO
dé mavodpyos dv nal miPavos éeyetpnoer ols
b] , 4 e 4 / > \
amTwdduTO owley éEavToV. KaTépuye yap eis THY mpos ‘Hgatotiova didotipiav “AreEdvépov Kal
Yap, Udnyoupevos Te TLMAS al padtoTa Koo pELY
EueAXov Tov TteOvnKoTa, Kal yYpnuata TeXOV Els THY TOD Tahov KaTacKEUNY Aperdas Kal Tpodvpws.
82
084

EUMENES

his stewards. Alexander made no reproaches, nor did he take the money, but ordered his servants secretly to set fire to the tent of Eumenes, wishing to take its owner in a manifest lie when the treasure was carried out of it. But before that could be done the tent was consumed, and the destruction of his papers made Alexander repent him of his orders. Still, the gold and silver that was melted down by the fire was found to be more than a thousand talents’ worth. Alexander took none of it, however, but actually wrote to his satraps and generals everywhere to send copies of the documents that had been destroyed, and ordered Eumenes to take them all in charge.

And still again, Eumenes had a quarrel with Hephaestion about a certain gift, and much abusive language passed between them. At the time, indeed, Eumenes was no less in favour than before; but a little while afterwards Hephaestion died, and the king, in his bitter sorrow, dealt harshly and was severe with all who, as he thought, had been jealous of his favourite while he lived and now rejoiced at his death. Eumenes, in particular, he suspected of such feelings, and often reproached him for his former quarrels with Hephaestion and his abusive language towards him. But Eumenes, who was wily and persuasive, tried to make what threatened his ruin conduce to his salvation. He sought refuge, namely, in Alexander's ardent gratitude towards Hephaestion, suggesting honours which were most likely to adorn the memory of the deceased, and contributing money for the construction of his tomb lavishly and readily.

83
a 2
2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

III. 'AzroBavovros dé *AreEdvipov ral tis ddrayyos SuectHons mpos Tovs ETaipous, TH wev yvaun TovtTois mpocévermev Eavrov o Kipévns, TO 5é Ady@ Kowvos Tis HY Tpds audorépovs Kal id10-TNS, @F ovdeéy ad'TO MpoahKov Eévm dvTt ToNv-mpaypoveiy év tats! Maxedovay diadopais. Kat TaV adXov éraipwv éx BaRvrAdvos avacKkevaca-, b \ e \ b] "A 4 fo Hévov autos Umodehbels év TH TOAEL KATET PAVE ToAAovs Tov Telav Kal mpos Tas Stadvces 7HOi-bd , > \ \ > / b) 4 e ous €mroinoev. érrel dé avamyPévtes adAHAOLS Ot oTpatnyol Kal KaTacTaytes éx TOV TPwWTwY Tapa-yvav Suevé"ovto catparetas Kal aotpatnyias, Ev-pévns NapBdver Karasoxiav cal Taddayoviay kal thy vroKkepéevnv TH Tlovtixg Cardtry péxpe Tpamelodvtos, ota tore Maxeddvar ovcar, "AptapdOns yap avtis éBacinevev, Arn' edeu Acov-4 \ ? / \ lA \ > / vatov Kat Avtiyovoy yep peyadryn Tov Evpévy KaTadyovtas arobeiEar THS K@pas caTpaTny. "Avtiyovos pev ovv ov Tpocéaye Tots ypadetou

e \ II bt / A 1 \ “
vmo Ilepdixxov, wetéwpos Ov 75n Kal Twepid povav
e f 4 \ , N v >
avavtwy, Aeovydtos dé xatéBn pev avober eis Dpuyiav dvadeEouevos Eipéves tiv otpateiav:
‘Exartatou d€ tod Kapdvavav tupdvvov cuppikar-
1 éy rats Bekker, after Coraés: vais.

1 June 13, 323 B.c.

2The quarrel was over the succession to Alexander's throne. The officers, supported by the cavalry, proposed that the crown be reserved for the child of Roxana by

84

EUMENES

III. When Alexander was dead! and a quarrel had arisen between the Macedonian men-at-arms and his principal officers, or companions,? Eumenes sided with the latter in his opinions, but in what he said he was a kind of common friend to both and held himself aloof from the quarrel, on the ground that it was no business of his, since he was a stranger, to meddle in disputes of Macedonians. Moreover, when the rest of the principal officers had withdrawn from Babylon, he remained behind in the city and mollified many of the men-at-arms and made them more dis- posed towards a settlement of the quarrel. And when the officers, having conferred with one another, brought their first tumultuous proceedings to an end, and were distributing satrapies and commands, Eumenes received Cappadocia, Paphlagonia, and the southern coast of the Euxine sea as far as Trapezus. It is true that at the time this territory was not yet subject to the Macedonians, for Ariarathes held royal sway over it; but Leonnatus and Antigonus, with a great army, were to conduct Eumenes thither and declare him satrap of the country.

Now, Antigonus paid no heed to the edicts of Perdiccas, being already lifted up in his ambitions and scorning all his associates ; but Leonnatus came down from the interior into Phrygia in order to undertake the expedition in behalf of Eumenes. Here, however, Hecataeus the tyrant of Cardia joined him and be-

Alexander, if it should bea son, and that Perdiccas should be regent in the meantime ; the infantry demanded that Arrhi- daeus, the bastard brother of Alexander, should at once be roclaimed king. In the end a compromise was effected, and Dordiccas became chief in command under Arrhidaeus, with whom Alexander’s son, when born, was to be joint king. Cf. the Alexander, Ixxvii. 5.

85

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

| TOS avTo@ cal Seopevov Bon Beir paidrov ‘AvTimatpe

4

Kal Maxeddvev roils ev Aapig ToALopKoupevors, @pULnTo diaBaivew cal rov Kipévn mapexdnet kal
dinate T pos tov ‘“Exataiov. jv yap avrois TaTpLKy TLS ex TOAMTIKaY SLadopay vrowia TpOs adAnhous* Kal morAAAKLS O Eopévns éyeryovel pa-vepos KaTnyopav tov “Exatatov Tupavvodvros Kal TapaKahay ‘Ad€Eavpov aTrodotvat Tois Kapéiavois THv éhevepiay. 606 wal TOTE TOU Evevous Tapattoupeévou THY emt TOUS “EAAqvas oTpateiar, cal dediévat bdoxovtos ‘Avtimatpov, LNTOS ‘Exatato Xapelomevos Kal madae pod auTov avery, TLOTEUTAS o Aeovydros ovdey @v eppover
mpos avrov amexpuyaro. oyos ev yap hv 7 Bonbea Kal mpodhacts, éyvaner dé SiaBas evdus avritroteta Oat Maxedovias: Kai TWAS emaTonas
ederfe Krcordtpas peTameprrouerns avrov els
ITé\Aav ws Yaunoouerns. 0 & Evpévns, elite tov
Avtimratpov dedorxas ebTe Tov Aeovvarov eu dn-KTOV évTa Kal hopas peorov aBeBaiov | kat o€eias aTroryvous, VUKT WP avévev&e THv éavtod AaBov dmog Keuny. _eixe 6¢ TpLaKoatous pev tmmeis, Sva-Koatous 6€ TOV Taidwv oTAOPOpous, ev 5é Ypuaots eis apyuptou oyov TadNaVTa TEevTaKLaXidea. gu-yav 6€ oUTwS TpdsS Hepdtcxay cal Ta Aeovvarov Bovretpara KateuTa@v evOrs pev loxve péeya map avuT@ Kal Tov ovvedpiov pereixev, OAryOY dé doTepov eis Kammasdsoxiay xatnyOn peta Svvdpeos,

1 On the death of Alexander the Greeks had revolted from Macedonia, and had driven Antipater and his army into Lamia, a city of southern Thessaly.

2 The sister of Alexander, widow, since 326 B.c., of the sought him to go rather to the assistance of Antipater and the Macedonians besieged in Lamia.! Leonnatus therefore determined to cross over to Greece, in- vited Eumenes to go with him, and tried to reconcile him with Hecataeus. For they had a hereditary dis- trust of one another arising from political differences ; and frequently Eumenes had been known to denounce Hecataeus as a tyrant and to exhort Alexander to restore its freedom to Cardia. Therefore at this time also Kumenes declined to go on the expedition against the Greeks, saying he was afraid that Anti- pater, who had long hated him, would kill him to please Hecataeus. Then Leonnatus took him into his confidence and revealed to him all his purposes.

Assistance to Antipater, namely, was what he alleged as a pretext for his expedition, but he really meant, as soon as he had crossed into Europe, to lay claim to Macedonia; and he showed certain letters from Cleopatra ? in which she invited him to come to Pella and promised to marry him. But Eumenes, either because he was afraid of Antipater, or because he despaired of Leonnatus as a capricious man full of uncertain and rash impulses, took his own equipment and decamped by night.? And he had three hundred horsemen, two hundred armed camp-followers, and in gold what would amount to five thousand talents of money. With this equipment he fled to Perdiccas, and by telling him of the designs of Leonnatus at once enjoyed great influence with him and was made a rember of his council. Moreover, a little while after he was conducted into Cappadocia with an army king of Epeirus. No less than six of Alexander's generals sought her hand in marriage.

3 According to Nepos (Humenes, ii. 4), Leonnatus, failing to persuade Eumenes, tried to kill him.

avtod Ilepdixxov mapovtos Kal otpatnyovros. 585

'Aptapdbov dé AnpOevtos aX maN@Tov Kal THs

YoOpas Umoxerpiou yevopevns amobeiKvuTar catpa-7717S. Kal Tas fev TrOAELS Tous éavtob hiross Tapédwxe, Kal ppoupapxous eykaTéaTya€ Kab du-

KQOTAS ATTENLTE Kal drown as ods éBovreTo, Tov

Tepdixxou pn dev éy TOUTOLS TouTrpayLovodVTos,

avr os dé ovvavétevEev éxeivov TE Ocpamrevov Kat

TOV Baciréwv amoneiTres Oat py Bovdopevos.

IV. Ov pny adr' o Tlepdixxas éf' & peév punto miatevwyv Ob avTOU mpoodtea Gar, TH O€ UTTOAELTIO-peva Seta Oar dpaarnpiov Te Kal musTOU puraros olopevos, dmérepapev éx Katieias TOV Evpevn, Oyo pev emi THv éavTod catpateiav, Eoyw &e Thv Ouopov A ppeviav Terapaypéevny bro Neorto-
2 Aéuov dea XEtpos &Eovra. TovTtov pev ovv o Kv-peévns, Kaimrep SyK@ Tw Kab ppovnpare Kev due Pappevor, émretpaTo tails OptrAcass Karexew" avros dé TH parayya TOV Maxedover é emnpwevny Kal Opaceiay elpoy, domep ayritayja Kater Keu-alev avrh Svvapiy immixcny, TOV pev eyXwpiov Tos (mmevel Suvapévors aveva popias 6i50us Kal

3 arehetas, Tav Oé mepl aurov ols pddora, emia Tevev avnrous Sravéwov iwqrous, prdorepiacs TE Kal bw-peais Ta ppovnpara Tapofuvev Kal Ta copara Kivjoeat Kal pedéraus diatrovav, Bote TOUS meV exTrhayivat, TOUS b¢ Gappioar TOV Maxedovwr, Opavras orAly@ ypov@m rept aitov nOpotcpévors which Perdiccas commanded in person. There Ariarathes was taken prisoner, the country was brought into subjection, and Eumenes was proclaimed satrap. He entrusted the cities of the country to his own friends, appointed commanders of garrisons, left behind him such judges and administrators as he wished, Perdiccas not at all interfering in these matters, and then marched away with Perdiccas, desiring to pay court to that general, and not wishing to be separated from the kings.!

1 Arrhidaeus and the infant son of Alexander, both under the guardianship of Perdiccas. Eumenes thus ranged himself with the legitimists.

IV. However, Perdiccas felt confident of carrying out his projects by himself, and thought that the country they had left behind them needed an efficient and faithful guardian, and therefore sent Eumenes back from Cilicia, ostensibly to his own satrapy, but really to reduce to obedience the adjacent country of Armenia, which had been thrown into confusion by Neoptolemus.?. Accordingly, although Neoptolemus was a victim of ostentation and empty pride, Eumenes tried to constrain him by personal intercourse ; then, finding that the Macedonian men-at-arms were con- ceited and bold, he raised a force of cavalry as a counterpoise to them, by offering the natives of the country who were able to serve as horsemen immunity from contributions and tributes, and by distributing horses that he had bought among those of his followers in whom he placed most confidence; the spirits of these men, too, he incited by honours and gifts, and developed their bodies by exercise and discipline; so that a part of the Macedonians were amazed, and a part emboldened, when they saw that in a short time

2 One of the principal officers of Alexander, to whom Armenia had been assigned as a province. Cf. chapter i. 3 immets oux éXatTous é€aKicyiAiwy Kal TplaKo-oiwv.

V. ’Ezei 6é Kparepos Kat “AvTiTarpos TOV

“EAN jvov TEPUryEVOMEVOL S1¢Basvov els "Aciav THY Tlepdicxov KATANUVGOVTES apxX ny, Kal T™poanyyen-NovTo pédRovTes euBarelv eis Karraéoxiar, o
Tepdixxas avros él Irorenatov oTpaTeEvOV a1ré-SecFe Tov Evpévn trav év ’Appevia xal Karra-Soxig Suvdpewy avToxparopa orparnyév" Kat mept TOUTWY émloTONAS emenwer, "ArKéTar peév Kab NeomroAepov Kvpevee TpoaexXelv Kedevoas, Edpevn dé xpho Gar Tots mpdry wa ST ws avros eyveocer. “Adkéras pev oby avTUKpUS ateiTato TY otparelay, @s tov vm atta Maxedover
‘AvTimat py ev aidoupever pdxeoOar, Kpatepov
5é cat déxerOar bu evvouay eT olen dvtwv: Neo-TONE LOS dé Bovrevov fev étr’ Evpéver mpodoctay OvK ehade, KANOUPEVOS dé ovy UmjKovey, aN TAapeTaTTe THY Suvapuy. ev0a, Tp@Tov) Evpevns aTrédave TiS EaUTOU mpovotas Kat Tapackevis® HTT @{LEvOs yap 76n Kata TO TeCov erpépato Tots
iT Tevet TOD Neomrodepov kal THY amoaKeuny édaBev avTod, Kal TH parayys Svea Tr appern mepl THV Siwy a0 pous emehaoas nvayKace Ta oma, Oécbat Kal Sovtas Kal raBovtas EpKxouvs avTo ova Tpareven.
‘0 pev ov Neo rorepos odiyous TWAS cuvayayov ex Ths tpoTHns Epuye wpos Kparepov cat

1 One of the ablest of Alexander’s officers, who, in the division of the empire that followed Alexander’s death, was nee ruler, in common with Antipater, of Macedonia and

reece,

go

EUMENES

he had assembled about him no fewer than sixty-three hundred horsemen.

V. And when Craterus! and Antipater, after overpowering the Greeks,? were crossing into Asia? to overthrow the power of Perdiccas, and were reported to be planning an invasion of Cappadocia, Perdiccas, who was himself heading an expedition against Ptolemy,’ appointed Eumenes commander of the forces in Armenia and Cappadocia with plenary powers. He also sent letters on the subject, in which he commanded Alcetas® and Neoptolemus to look to Eumenes for orders, and Eumenes to manage matters as he thought best. Alcetas, then, flatly refused to serve in the campaign, on the ground that the Macedonians under him were ashamed to fight Antipater, and were so well disposed to Craterus that they were ready to receive him with open arms. Neoptolemus, however, plotting treachery against Eumenes, was detected, and when he was summoned would not obey, but drew up his forces in battle array. Here first did Eumenes reap the fruit of his forethought and preparation; for when his infantry had already been defeated, he routed Neoptolemus with his cavalry, and captured his baggage, and when the men-at-arms of Neoptolemus were scattered in pursuit of their enemies, charged upon them with his entire body of horse and compelled them ta lay down their arms and make oath with him to serve under him.

Neoptolemus, then, collected a few of his men from the rout and fled to Craterus and Antipater.
2 In the battle of Crannon, Aug. 7, 322, which put an end to the revolt of the Greeks and the war called the ‘‘ Lamian ” war. 3 In 321 B.o.
* Now governor of Egypt. 5 A brother of Perdiccas.

OI

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

’"Avtimatpov. tap éxetvwv Se améotaXrto Tpe-
a Beta Tos Evpévn Tapakanovdoa, perabécGar Tpos avrous, KapToupmevov pev as ele ocatpametas, mpoohaBovra be oT paTiay Kar Xopav Tap avTav, AvtTimatpo pev avr éX9 pov pirov ryevopeevor, Kpatepo 8é pa yevopevov ex pidov TONE-pcov. TaUTa Oo Evpevns axovoas ‘Avturatpe pe ovK ay edn TANALOS Ov xO pos vov yevéoOar piros, GTE AUTOV Opa TOIS Pirots wS éxO pois Xpwmevov, Kparepov dé Tlepdixxe dtadraTTeEv & ETOLLOS elvau Kal cuvdrye émt tots icous Kat Sixaious: apXovros dé mreovetias TO adicouperp BonOncew peX pt ay éumvén, kal wadXov TO o@pa Kal Tov Biov 7H THY Tio TLY TponoerGat.
VI. Of pév ody mept TOV “Avtitrat pov mud opevot Tava Kata axonny éBouhevovto Teph TOV OWD,

) NeomroAepos 5é pera THY puyny adiKxopevos ™ pos avrovs THY TE paxny annyyedre Kab Tmape-kare Bonbeiv, partota pev apport epous, TAVTOS
dé Kparepov: mobeiab au yap UTEppuas exeivov bro TOV Maxedoven, Kav povov idwou THY Kavo lay avTov Kat THY povnv axovowst, pea TOV Om Av HEew pepopevous. Kal yap ny OVTWS OvopLa TOD Kparepob péya, Kal pera, THV “Arefavdpou TENEU-THY TOUTOY eToOnaav ot TONNOL, PmpovevorTes
Stt Kat mpos ’AdéEavdpov omép auTa@y avedeEato
TOAAGKLS amex Geias TOANGS, UTrodEpojévou TpOs
TOV Tepovwov CnXov avTthapBavopevos, Kat Tots
Tar plous apivev dia tpupjy Kal dyxov 76n mEepiv-Bprfopevors.
Tore & ody o Kpartepds tov pev ’Avtimatpov
Q2

But they had already sent an embassy to Eumenes inviting him to come over to their side; he would enjoy possession of his present satrapies, would receive additional troops and territory from them, would become a friend to Antipater instead of an enemy, and would not become an enemy to Craterus instead of a friend. On hearing this proposition Eumenes replied that he had been Antipater’s enemy from of old and could not now become his friend, when he saw him treating his friends as enemies, but that he was ready to reconcile Craterus with Perdiccas and bring the two together on just and equal terms; if, however, either undertook to overreach the other he would give aid to the injured party as long as he had breath, and would rather lose his life than his honour.

VI. Craterus and Antipater, then, after getting this answer, were taking deliberate counsel about the whole situation, when Neoptolemus came to them after his flight, told them about the battle he had lost, and urged them to come to his aid, both of them if possible, but at any rate Craterus ; for the Macedonians longed for him exceedingly, and if they should only see his cap and hear his voice, they would come to him with a rush, arms and all. And indeed the name of Craterus was really great among them, and after the death of Alexander most of them had longed for him as their commander. They remem- bered that he had many times incurred the strong displeasure of Alexander himself in their behalf, by opposing his gradually increasing desire to adopt Persian customs, and by defending the manners of their country, which, thanks to the spread of luxury and pomp, were already being treated with contempt.

At the time of which I speak, then, Craterus sent els KiAtxiav aréotetrev, avdtos 5€ THs Suvdpews dvaraBav Tord pépos emt TOV Every peTa TOD Neomrodépou Tponyev, olopevos ov m poo Sex oper

Kal pera mpoodatoy vintny év atakia Kal Teph TOTOUS éXovTe THV Suva pu émumeceioBar. TO pev obv mpoatabéa bat thy Ehodov avtod Tov Edpevn Kal TpoTapacKevdaas Jat vnpovans dy TI mye HOvias, ov pny akpas Dein Seuvornros TO O€ pH
fLOvoV TOUS Tonepious a a pa KANOS elev aicbécbat Siaduyei, arra Kal Tous pet avTou oT paTevopévous aryvoobytas @ paXovvras T poeve elaat TO Kparep@ kal drroxptypas TOV avTiaTparnyor, 1Stov
OKEl TOUTOU Tou TYE HOVOS Epryov yevérOar. d1é-Scone pev ovv Norvyov Os Neomrodepos avbis émlos
Kat Hiypns, é EYOVTES immets kat Kataboxapv cal [laprayovev. vuKTos 66 avaledEat Bovrdpevos, elta catrabapbov dyuv eidev GAXCKOTOV. éd0KEL yap opav “AreEdvdpous Sto TmapacKevalouevous adNANAOLS paxea Oar, pias EKATEpOV Hryoupevov pa-Nayyos’ elta TO pev THY ‘AOnvav, To Oe Thy Anpytpav BonBoicav enbein, ryevopmevou dé ayo-VOS iaxupod KpatnOfvas TOV peTa THis "AOnvas, T@ O€ VIK@YTE oTAX VOD Spetropévny thy Anuntpav
oupmréKew aTépavov.
Avrobev pev ovv 77 Oyu elxatey elvat ™ pos
avo, paxouevou wept YAS. apiotns Kal ToTeE TONY Kal Karov éyovons év KANVKL ord:
dmaca yao Katéotaoto Kal wapeiyev eipnvy

1 Antipater, Craterus and Ptolemy had declared war against Perdiccas. The destruction of Perdiccas’ ally, Ku- menes, was a side issue. Perdiccas, taking with him Arrhi- daeus and Roxana and her infant son, had already invaded

Antipater into Cilicia,! while he himself with a large part of the forces advanced with Neoptolemus against Eumenes. He thought that he should fall upon him when he was off his guard, and when, after their recent victory, his soldiers were in revelry and dis- order. Now, that Eumenes should learn before- hand of his approach and get himself ready for it in advance, one might consider a mark of sober general- ship, though not of superlative ability; but that he should keep his enemies from getting any knowledge that would work him harm, and, besides this, that he should hurl his soldiers upon Craterus before they knew with whom they were fighting, and conceal from them the name of the opposing general, seems to me to have been an exploit peculiar to this com- mander. He gave out word, then, that Neoptolemus was once more coming against him, with Pigres, and that they had a force of Paphlagonian and Cap- padocian cavalry. One night he was planning to decamp and then fell asleep and had a strange vision. He dreamed, namely, that he saw two Alexanders ready to give each other battle, each at the head of a phalanx; then Athena came to help the one, and Demeter the other, and after a fierce struggle the one who had Athena for a helper was beaten, and Demeter, culling ears of grain, wove them into a wreath for the victor.

At once, then, he conjectured that the vision was in his favour, since he was fighting for a country that was most fertile and had at that time an abundance of fine young grain in the ear; for the land had everywhere been sown and bespoke a time of peace,

Egypt in an attempt to destroy Ptolemy. Antipater was hastening to the aid of Ptolemy.
95

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

mpérrovaay opty, dupirapas TOV TESIWVY KOMODV- TwY" paddov dé ereppwa On mTvO opevos cvvOnpa TOUS Tohepiors "AOnvay | kal "AdéFavdpov elvat. Anpuntpav 8) Kal avtos édidov ocuvOnpa Kal ’AréEavdpor, avadetcOat TE mavTas ExéXEVE KAL KaTacTepey Ta OTAa TOV oTaXVoY AawBavoyTas.

Opyncas dé ToAdaKes eEayopetoat Kal paca Tots Tept avrov Hryewoot Kal oTpaTnyois 7 pos Ov EweAXev O ary av ever Oat, Kab my Hovos év auT@ Dé pevos amroxpurpat kal Katacxe aTroppntTov ob Tas avaycatov, bos évépewe Tois Aoyta pois kal Sueriotevce TH yvapn Tov Kivduvor.
VII. “Avrérage dé Kpatepo Maxedover pep ovdéva, dvo 5é immapyias Eevirds, ov PapvdBalos 6 "ApraBalouv xal DoimE o Tevédsos jryodvto, Siakehevodpevos op Devray TOV Tone pov éhavvery Kara TAXOS kal oupmréKer Oat, Ty) diovtas a ava- oTpopny pnde poviy, pnde enpuka TET OMEVOY TPOoLEMEVOUS. ededies yap ioYUpas TOUS Make- Sovas, pH yepicavres TOV Kpatepov oixavras peTaBaropevor T pos EKELVOD. avTOS d€ TOUS eppwmevertarous UMTEts Tpraxoatous ets dyna cuvTagas Kat Tapedaaas éml TO beEtov EMENE Tois Tept Neo roAenov émixetpelv. ws dé Tov ev péow ogov bmepBarovtes ap Oncav ofelay Kat pe” OpLiS apodporépas Trovovpevor THY epodor, extrharyels 0) Kpatepos Kal ToAKa rodopncas TOV Neomrodenov os éEnratnpuévos tn’ avtod trept

THs TOV Maxedovav petaBorrns, éyxedevoadpevos avSpayabeiy trois wept avtTov nyepoow avreen-AACE.
Tevopevns 5& tis mpetns cuppdEews Bapeias

96

587

EUMENES

now that its plains were covered with a luxuriant growth ; and he was all the more strengthened in his belief when he learned that the enemy’s watchword was “ Athena and Alexander.” Accordingly, he too gave out a watchword, namely, “Demeter and Alexander,” and ordered all his men to crown them- selves and wreathe their arms with ears of grain. But though he often felt an impulse to speak out and tell his principal officers who it was against whom their struggle was to be, and not to keep hidden away in his own breast alone a secret so important, nevertheless he abode by his first resolution and made his judgment surety for the peril.

VII. However, he arrayed against Craterus not a single Macedonian, but two troops of foreign horse commanded by Pharnabazus the son of Artabazus and Phoenix of Tenedos, who had strict orders to charge at full speed when the enemy came into view and engage them at close quarters, without giving them a chance to withdraw or say anything, and without receiving any herald they might send. For he had strong fears that his Macedonians, if they recognized Craterus, would go over tohim. He himself, with a division of his best horsemen, three hundred in number, rode along to the right wing, where he purposed to attack Neoptolemus. When the forces of Eumenes had crossed the intervening hill and were seen coming on to the attack with a swift and impetuous dash, Craterus was dumbfounded and heaped much abuse upon Neoptolemus for having deceived him about the Macedonians changing sides ; but he exhorted his officers to act like brave men, and charged upon the enemy.
The first collision was severe, the spears were 97

VOL. VIII. H

\ A 4 \ Ul “ ‘
Kat TaY Sopatwy tayv auvTpiBévtwv, tod 6é ayavos év tois Eiheow Svtos, ov KaTaloxvvas Oo Kpatepos tov ‘ArdéEavdpov, ada TroAdovs pev
, , \ , \ >
KataBanrwv, TodAdKs 5€ TpEYrapevos TOUS ayTL-
4 lA \ \ e \ N >
TeTaypevous, Tédos O€ mAnyels bro Opaxos éx
TrayiwY MpoceAacavTos atreppvn TOU tmou,
4 \ > A e \ BA / b
TecovTa O€ AUTOV Ol Mev AAXOL TApPHAAaATAY ayvoobvtes, Topytas 6¢ trav Evjpévous otparnyav &yve Te Kal xataBas treptéotnce Ppovpav TO cwopaTt
KaKos Hon Staxetpévov Kal SvacPavarodvtos. év U4 oe \ N ar Ee / 4

touT@m S€ Kai Neomrorcuos Evpéver cvrvrjpyero.
le) by J 4 A 9 3 fo]
pucoovres yap aAAnAOUS mMddae Kal Ou’ Gpyts éyovtes év pev dbuclv dvactpodais ov Kxateidov, év &€ TH Tpitn YyvwpicavTes EvOIS HravvOD, omacdpevor TA éeyxetpiova Kal Boorvtes. TaV O
, S
intov é€& évavrias Bia cuptecovTwy woTep
,
Tpinpwv, TAS Hvias adévTes AAAHNAwY érredpd-Eavto Tais Yepol, Ta TE KPdvNn TEptoTr@VTES Kal mepippnyvuvtTes ex TaV éTwpidwy Tors Owpaxas.
mpos S€ TOY oTTapaypoy UrexdpapovTwoyv apa TOV immwyv, amoppvévtes eis yhv Kal mTepiTecovTes adAAnXoS ev ANaBais Hoav Kal Svewdratov. eta o pév Eipévns trod Neorrodéyou mpoc~aviorapévov
\ > 4 e , > \ > > N 4
THY tyviay vTéKxoev autos eis OpOov dOdcas
KatacThvat, o dé Neorrorepos eis Oatepov éperoa-
J
pevos yovu, Odrepov S€ memnpwpévos, nuvveto Heéev evpootas KaTwber, ob Oavacipous Sé TAN Yas e lA \ \ N 4 ”
Uropépwv, mANyels b€ Tapa TOV TPaXNAOD ETTECE
\ / a > / > b \

Kal qwapetOn. tod dé Evpévous de opynv xal

picos tadatov Tad Te SirAa TEpLoT@VTOS avTOU quickly shattered, and the fighting was done with the swords. Here Craterus did not disgrace Alexander, but slew many foes, and frequently routed the opposing arrays. At last, however, he was wounded by a Thracian who attacked him from the side, and fell from his horse. As he lay prostrate there all his enemies rode past him, not knowing who he was, except Gorgias, one of the officers of Eumenes; he recognized him, dismounted from his horse, and stood guard over his body, for he was now in an evil plight and struggling with death. In the meantime Neopto- lemus also was engaged with Eumenes. They had long hated one another with a deadly hatred, but in two onsets neither had caught sight of the other ; in the third, however, they recognized each other, and at once drew their swords and with loud cries rode to the attack. Their horses dashed together with the violence of colliding triremes, and dropping the reins they clutched one another with their hands, each trying to tear off the other's helmet and strip the breastplate from his 'shoulders. While they were struggling, their horses ran from under them and they fell to the ground, where they closed with one another and wrestled for the mastery. Then Eumenes, as Neoptolemus sought to rise first, gave him an undercut in the ham, and himself got to his feet before his adversary did; but Neoptolemus, support- ing himself on one knee, and wounded in the other, defended himself vigorously from underneath. He could not, however, inflict fatal wounds, but was himself wounded in the neck, fell to the ground, and lay there prostrate. His sword, however, he still retained, and while Eumenes, transported with rage and ancient hatred, was stripping off his armour and

Kal KaK@s Aéyovtos, ett TO Eihos Eywv Edabev uTO Tov Owpaka Tpwoas, 7 Tapéavce Tov BovBavos amoBas. 7 S€ TANY) parrov edoBycev
h Brave tov Etpévn, dv dobéverav apyvdpa ryevoeévn.
Lavrevoas bé Tov vexpow elye pev YareTras
Ud TpavpaTwoy pnpovs Kal Bpayiovas Siaxexop-
' Cd \ 93 \ > \ \ ivf 207
pévos, Guws 56 avaBArAnbeis ert tov immov édiwoxe
mpos Odrepov Képas, ws ett cuvertoTwV Tov ld ' \ \ "A A ToAEuiov. muOopevos Se THv Kpatepod TteXeuvTHv
kal mpoceAdoas, ws eldev éwrrvéovta Kai cuviéevta, KataBas ameddaxpuce Kal thy deEvav évéBare, Kal
TONAG pev eroLdopynae Tov NeowTorepov, TOAAA 5é éxelvov pév @KTicaTo TIS TUYNS, aUTOV Oé THS
avaykns, 8: hv avdpt dire cal curvnfer tadra TEeLTopuEvos 7 Opdawy suvnvéxOn.
VIII. Tavrnv rnv paynv Edpévns népars Séxa

aoyedov TL meTa THY MpoTépay evixnoe Kal d0kn
pev p0n péyas am’ avtis, os Ta pev codia, TA
dé dvdpeia Katepyacpévos, POovov dé mroduv éxxe
a e aA lA a /

Kal picos oars apd TE TOs TUUpaxols Kal

“A / e 4 > A N / 4
TOUS TOAELLOLS, WS ETNANUS avnp Kat EEevos OTOL
kal yepot Tov Maxedovwy Tov mpatov avroy Kai Soximw@ratov avnpnkws. aAr e pev €fOn Tlep-Sixcas muOopevos tHY Kpatepod tereutnv, ovK dy adAos érpwtevoe Maxeddvwrv: vuvi dé avnpnvA , \ 4 > 3 UA Py \
pévou Ilepdixxov Kata ordow év Aiyirt@ dvatv
NMEpALs TMpoTEpov Kev OvTOS O TrEepl THS payns 100
EUMENES

reviling him, Neoptolemus surpiiéed him with a wound
under the breastplate, where it,24ches the groin.
But the blow gave Eumenes more i than harm,
since lack of strength made it feeble.’ .
After stripping the dead body, weak as he was from wounds received in legs and arms, Eumeries nevertheless had himself put upon his horse and hastened to the other wing, supposing that the enemy were still resisting. But when he learned of the tafe. of Craterus and had ridden up to where he lay, and’ saw that he was still alive and conscious, he dismounted, a wept bitterly, clasped his hand, and had many words - of abuse for Neoptolemus, and many words of pity -.. for Craterus in his evil fortune, and for himself in — the necessity which had brought him into a conflict with a friend and comrade, where he must do or suffer this harm.!

VIII. This battle was won by Eumenes about ten days after the former.” It lifted his reputation high, and he was thought to have accomplished his task alike with wisdom and bravery ; but it got him much envy and hatred as well among his allies as among his enemies. They felt that he, an alien and a stranger, had used the arms and might of the Macedonians for slaying the foremost and most approved of them. Now, if Perdiccas could have learned in time of the death of Craterus, no one else would have had chief place among Macedonians ; but as it was, he was slain in a mutiny of his soldiers in Egypt? two days before this report of the battle

1 According to Nepos (Himenes, iv. 4), Eumenes gave Craterus worthy funeral rites, and sent his remains to his wife and children in Macedonia.
2 Cf. chapter v, 3. 3 See the note on chapter vi. 3.

Io!

€

bb

o

a 4
ce
PLUTARCH’S LIVES
Aoyos eis TO oxpiirimedor, Kab ™ pos opyny evO vs
ot Maxedoves Odvurov TOU Evpevous KaTéyvooay. daredeix On ae TOO TroNéu“ou TOU mpos avrov ’Avti-yovos peta’: ‘Aeron dz pov oTpaTnyos.
"Erret $é-Kdpevns TOUS Bacrricois immodpopBiors mept TV "Tdnv vewopevors EMLTUY@V Kal AaBov irmous towv éypnte Tots emipedntais THY ypapiy erreyithe, NéyeTas yerdoae TOV “Avtimart pov wal direiv OTL Javpdter Tov Evpéevn THS TT povoias, enigovta AOryov avrois am obec ew TOY Bacirtkav 4 Aneo Gat Tap aurav. Trepl dé Tas Ddpdecs
-,€Bovrero pev immoxpaTov O Edperns tois Av6éots
evayovicacbat mediow, aua Kal TH Krcomdtpg THY Suvapuy érdetEar prrorepoupevos: aurijs be éxelvns Sen Beions (epoBeiro yap aitiay twa AaBeiv v v6 TOY TreEpt TOV ’Avtimatpov) é€nXNacev els THY ave Ppvyiav Kal Stexeipater € ev KeXawvais: Orrou TOV pev mept Tov "AAKeTay xat TlovXéuwva
Kab Aoxtpov vrép nyepovias Siaprdortpmoupevov
7 pos avtov, “ Toiro Vy ébn, “0 heyopevor, ‘"OnEO pou & ovdeis oyos.’ ” tots dé oTpaTLaOTals UTOTXOMEVOS ev Tpioly Tue pas Tov peabov a amrodace émimpac kev avTois Tas Kara THY yYoOpav émavners Kal _ TETpaTTUpyias oopdrov Kat Boonn-pao yepovoas. o 8€ mptapevos TYE weOY Taypatos h Eevaryos 6 épyava cat pnxavas Tov Evpévous TapeXovTos eEerroAopKer Kai wWpos TOV apetdo-pevov pradov ot OT PATLOTAL SevewovTo TOV adtcKkopéevwoy Exactov. éx 6) TovTov mdr oO Evpévns nyarato: cat wote ypaupdatov évy TO otpatoTréέw gavévtwy & Siéppiay ot TOV TrONeE-JO?

588 came to his camp, and his Macedonians, in a rage, at once condemned Eumenes to death. Moreover, Antigonus was appointed to conduct the war against him, in conjunction with Antipater.

When Eumenes fell in with the royal herds of horse that were pasturing about Mount Ida, he took as many horses as he wanted and sent a written statement of the number to the overseers. At this, we are told, Antipater laughed and said that he admired Eumenes for his forethought, since he evidently expected to give an account of the royal properties to them, or to receive one from them. Because he was superior in cavalry, Eumenes wished to give battle in the plains of Lydia about Sardis, and at the same time he was ambitious to make a display of his forces before Cleopatra!; but at the request of that princess, who was afraid to give Antipater any cause for complaint, he marched away into upper Phrygia and wintered at Celaenae. Here Alcetas, Polemon, and Docimus strove emulously with him for the chief command, whereupon he said: “This bears out the saying, ‘Of perdition no account is made.’”» Moreover, having promised to give his soldiers their pay within three days, he sold them the homesteads and castles about the country, which were full of slaves and flocks. Then every captain in the phalanx or commander of mercenaries who had bought a place was supplied by Eumenes with implements and engines of war and took it by siege ; and thus every soldier received the pay that was due him, in a distribution of the captured properties. In consequence of this, Eumenes was again in high favour; and once when letters were found in his camp which the leaders of the enemy

1 See the note on chapter ii}. 5. 103

pov WYEHOVES, « ExaTov TdXavTa Kal TLLas OLdovTES Tp KTELVAVTL TOV Evpevn, apodpa mapotvvOnoar
au Maxkeédoves, Kal Sopa. movobvrae VuALOUS TOV
NYE LOVLK OV Tept avTov det Sopupopotvras elvat Kab purarrew év mepiodep Kal Tapavunrepevely.
ot be émetBovto, Kal TLS nyaT av jap avTov AapBavovres as ot iro Tapa TOV Baciréwv.
éEnv yap Evpéves cal Kavatas aroupyets Kal XAapvdas Stavéueww, ATs HY Swpead BacirKwTaTn Tapa Maxeédoor.

IX. To peév ody evTuxelV Kal TOUS pucer puxpovs cuvemixoupiler Tots ppovnpacty, date
paiver bai Te peyeOos mepl avtovs Kal OryKov
ex Tpayparov UmepexovTov amoPeopevous:
0 b€ arnOas peyaroppav Kat BéBatos év Tots oddApact wadXov Kal Tais duvonpeplass avadepav ylveTat xaTddnros, aomep Eodpévns. ampatov pev yap é ép ‘Opxuviors THS Karmasdoxias HTT Oels
UT 0 "ApTeyovov da Tpodoaias Kat SiwKopevos ov

Taphre TOV mpodorny ex THS puyns SvaTreceiv pos TOUS TOAEULOUS, ana curAdNaBov € expéuace.
hevryov S€ Thv évavtiav odov Tots SiwKovar pere-Bare AaHav, Kat maparhdtas, ws NAGev emt Tov TOTOV ov THY paynV cuveBn yevec Bau, kaTeoTpatoTrésevae, Kal cuvayayeov TOUS VEKPOUS Kal TOV év KUKX@ KOO {LOY Ta Jupwpata KaTaoxioas exavoev isi pev Tyyewovas, idta dé TOUS Todos, kal todvdvpta Yoras dninrbev, ote nal Tov
1 Karly in 320 bc.
2 Antigonus had corrupted Apollonides, commander of a division of cavalry under Eumenes, and he went over to the

had caused to be scattered there, wherein they offered a hundred talents and honours to any one who should kill Eumenes, his Macedonians were highly incensed and made a decree that a thousand of the leading soldiers should serve him continually as a body-guard, watching over him when he went abroad and spending the night at his door. These carried out the decree, and were delighted to receive from Eumenes such honours as kings bestow upon their friends. For he was empowered to distribute purple caps and military cloaks, and this was a special gift of royalty among Macedonians.

IX. Now, prosperity lifts even men of inferior natures to higher thoughts, so that they appear to be invested with a certain greatness and majesty as they look down from their lofty state; but the truly magnanimous and constant soul reveals itself rather in its behaviour under disasters and misfortunes. And so it was with Eumenes. For, to begin with, he was defeated by Antigonus! at Orcynii in Cappadocia through treachery,? and yet, though in flight, he did not suffer the traitor to make his escape out of the rout to the enemy, but seized and hanged him. Then, taking the opposite route in his flight to that of his pursuers, he changed his course before they knew it, and, passing along by them, came to the place where the battle had been fought. Here he encamped, collected the bodies of the dead, and burned them on pyres made from the doors of the neighbouring villages, which he had split into billets. He burned the bodies of the officers on one pyre, those of the common soldiers on another, heaped great mounds of earth over the ashes, and enemy in the midst of the battle, with his division. Cf. Diodorus, xviij. 40, 5-8, |

Aytiyovoy taTtepov éreNOovta Oavpatev To Odp-

oS avTov Kal THY evo Tabetav.
“Erect Tas amoaKevais tov ’Avtiyovou ‘Tept-Téecwv, Kal ra Beiv pasios Suvdpevos ToAdG pev érevOepa oopara, TONNHY 5é Oeparretav Kal TAOUTOV EK Toke nov TocovTwY Kal Aenhacvav
nO pots pevor, eee en caraTrAnabevtes aperetas Kal Lad vpav ot ou avT@ Bapeis yéveovTae 7 pos THY puyny, Ka paaxedrepor Tas mhavas v7r0-pévety Kal Tov Xpovov, éy @ padicra Tov jokewou Tas édrribas elyen, WS amoo Tpeyroy tov *Ayti-yovov. eel Sé dvtixpus yaderrov Hp arrotpeTety Maxedovas ypnuatov év efucTg TapovTov, € éxé-Nevo Jepanedoavtas autovs Kal Tols: larmous xedov éuBarovras obTw Babiferv é emt TOUS TONE-pious. autos Oe TE MTEL Kpua mpos Tov él
THS drrogKevis TOV Tohepiov Mevavépov, @S KndSopevos avTod pitrou yeyovotos Kal cuvndous, purafacbar TrApaway Kal avaxwpijcat THY TAaXLoT HY ex TOY emdpopay Kal TATELVOD T pos
THY eyyus UT@peLay abim Tov ovcav Kat KUKNO-TELS OUK éxoucay. Tou Oé Mevdydpov TAXU cup ppovnc avros TOV xivduvov Kal dvacKkevacapéevou, KATAGKOTOUS Emre wTrev O Kopevns pavepars, Kal
Tapnyyetre Tots OT PATLOT ALS omAifecOar Kat
Tous itdrous _eyXadwoty as mpoaakwv Tols
Tohepiors. TOV de KATACKOTTOY anayyedavrav 6Tt mavTdanacty o Mévavdpos adntrtos ein Kata-mepevryas els TOTOUS Narerrovs, ayer bar Tpoc-TOLOUMEVOS o Evpévns ariyye THY oTpartedy.
NévyeTae dé, Tou Mevdyopou Tatra papTupncavTos
mpos Tov "Avtiyovov, kal trav Maxeddver érat-106

589

EUMENES

departed, so that even Antigonus, when he came up later, admired his boldness and constancy.

Again, when he came upon the baggage of Antigonus, and could easily have captured many free- men, many slaves, and wealth amassed from so many wars and plunderings, he was afraid that his men, if loaded down with booty and spoils, would become too heavy for flight, and too luxurious to endure wander- ings and lapse of time. In lapse of time, however, he placed his chief hopes for ending the war, feeling that he could thus cause Antigonus to turn back. But since it was quite a difficult matter to deflect his Mace- donians from good things which were within their reach, he ordered them to refresh themselves and bait their horses before advancing upon the enemy. He himself, however, sent a secret message to Menander, who was in charge of the enemy's baggage, implying that he was concerned for him as an old time friend and comrade, and advising him to be on his guard and withdraw as quickly as possible from his low-lying and accessible position to the foot-hills near by, which could not be reached by cavalry or surrounded. Menander speedily comprehended his peril and decamped, and then Eumenes openly sent out scouts and ordered his soldiers to arm themselves and bridle their horses, as he was going to lead them against the enemy. But when the scouts brought word that Menander was altogether safe from capture now that he had taken refuge in a difficult region, Eumenes pretended to be vexed, and led his forces away. And it is said that when Menander bore witness of these things to Antigonus, and the Macedonians began to praise Eumenes and felt more vouvtwy tov Evpéevn cal giravOpwrrotepov dia-

TO évtwv, tt Kal mraidas avtév avdparrodicacbat

a "A 4 A

Kal yuvaixas aioxivat trapov épeicato Kal Trapn-

a b) /

kev, "ANN éxetvos ye, ddvas tov 'Avtiyovor,

ce > e "A > 4 50 A ' >]

ovy ULoV, @ paxapiot, KnSopevos TaphKev, GAN

ait@ hevyovte Sedias repiOcivar médas tocav-Tas."
X. Ex tovrov tAav@pevos o Evpévns cat
vrrohevywy Eretae TOUS TONNOUS TOV TTPATLWTOV 9 A w , > A 4 9 li amenOeiv, etre KnSopevos avTav cite épérxecOat
\ / 4 \ ce) 4
pn =Bovdropevos éXaTTOvas pév ToD payecOat,
, A / v \
Treiovas 5€ Tov AavOavey GvTas. KaTaduyov
a 4
dé eis Napa, ywpiov év peOopiw Aveaovias xal Kamrasdoxias, peta mevtaxociwy immévv Kal
, e A a "

dtakociwy omAttav, KavTedvbev adOis, Soot TaV
, A
dirwv edenOnoav adeOjvar Tod ywpiov THY yare-
s lol /

ToTnTa Kal THS Siaitns THY aVayKny ov hépovtTes, TavTas dotacdpevos Kal dtrodpovnbeis aré-Teuev. ows 6é éreNOwy o ’Avtiyovos eis NOYouS
avtov éxdder po THs ToALOpKias, aTreKxpivaTo ToAXovs elvat Tovs “Avtiyovov didous kal peta
, “~
"Avtiyovoy nyenovas, ay Sé avTos mpoTroAEpEl [47-9 4
Séva AetrecOar peT avTov: ounpous dé méurrecv
> / > , } \ , b) A , @ éxéXevoev, eb ypnter dia ANOywY avT@ yevecOar.

a \ 9 , 4 e , n
Tov O¢ AvTuyovou KENEVOVTOS WS KpELTTOVE NaNELD, “Oz Sé » 4 oc? a / , vdéva, eltev, “ éuavtTov KpeitTova vopilo,

/ a ® a / 4 39 ef be ,
expe av w tov Eihous Kuplos. oOpws oe TeEL-wavros tov ’Avtiyovou tov adeAgioody II ToXc-108
EUMENES

kindly towards him, because, when it was in his power to enslave their children and outrage their wives, he had spared them and let them go, Antigonus said: ‘‘ Nay, my good men, that fellow did not let them go out of regard for you, but because he was afraid to put such fetters on himself in his flight.”

X. After this,as he wandered about and sought to elude his enemies, Eumenes persuaded most of his soldiers to leave him,! either out of regard for them, or because he was unwilling to trail after him a body of men too small to give battle, and too large to escape the enemy’s notice. Moreover, after he had taken refuge in Nora, a stronghold on the confines of Lycaonia and Cappadocia, with five hundred horsemen and two hundred men-at-arms, even there again, whatsoever friends asked to be dismissed because they could not endure the asperities of the place and the constraint in diet, all these he sent away, after bestowing upon them tokens of affection and kind- ness. And when Antigonus came up and invited him to a conference before the siege began, he replied that the friends of Antigonus and officers to succeed Antigonus in command were many, whereas those in whose behalf he was fighting had no one left to command them after him; and he bade Antigonus to send hostages if he wanted to have a conference with him. Moreover, when Antigonus demanded to be addressed by him as a superior, Eumenes replied: “I regard no man as my superior so long as I am master of my sword.” Neverthe- less, after Antigonus had sent his nephew Ptolemy

1 Many deserted to Antigonus, according to Diodorus (xviii, 41, 1).

patov ets 70 Ywptov, @orep iEiwa ev 6 Evpevys, xaTeBn, Kal meptBarovres addjrous HowacavTo prricas kal OLKELWS, ATE 2) aGrAHAOLS KE pnpévor TONG kal suvnbets yeyovores. hoyov é yevopevov TONG Kat Tou Evpeévous ou”, vrép ao paelas pepvnpevou Kat Siarvcews, ara Kal Tas catparreias aEvovvTos avT@ BeBarotabat Kal Tas
Sw peds amobiboc ban, Gatipa TOUS mapovTas eixe
TO ppornua Kal THY evTOApLAY ayapévous. dua be TodNol TUVETPEXOV TOV Maxedover ieiv 6 dots éorl TOV _Evpevn mwoOouvtes* ov Yap érépou NOYos
qv ToaovTOS év TO TTPATD pera THY TOU Kpa-TEpod TENET HD. Seiaas dé o “Av Tiryovos omép avrob, pH Tt waOn PRiatov, T™ p@Tov pep amnyopeve pe T poovevat Boav, Kal Tots ALBors éBarnre TOUS emrupepopevous, TEAS dé Tals Xepat Tov _Ebpevn meptBadov Kal Tov by Aov aTrepvKav tois Sopugopors ports eis TO ao panes aTOKATETTHCE.
XI. Tovvredbev o pep TepiTerxioas Ta Napa Kal ppoupay KaTadiTro@v avelevéer Eopeévns be TONLOPKOUMEVOS eycpaTas, Tob Y@ pLov otrov Kat ddwp AaPPovoy cai aras Kal ddr pndev € EXOVTOS éd@6tp0v poe ovo pa IT pos TOV gitov, &x THY TapovT@y Gps Katea Kevate Tols TuvovcLY thapav
THY Siartay, € év peper TE TaparapPavev TAaVTAas emt THY. avrou tpametav, Kal TO cvociTioy omirig Xap éxovon Kat prroppootyny epndvver. my 5é xal TO eldos 700s, OU TOAEMLKG Kal TETPLULBLEVD b0’ 6rrrAwv eoLKes, anna yhadupos Kal veo peTrys, Kal tjav TO oa a dinpOpwpévos ws uo TEXYNS axptBas Tots pédeot OavpactHy ovppetplav Exov-Ilo

into the fortress, as Eumenes had demanded, Eumenes went down to meet him, and they embraced one another with greetings of friendship and affection, since they had formerly been close associates and intimate companions. <A long conference was held, in which Eumenes made no mention of his own safety or of peace, but actually demanded that he should be confirmed in the possession of his satrapies, and that what was his by gift should be restored to him. At this the bystanders were amazed, and they admired his lofty spirit and confidence. But mean- while many of the Macedonians came running to- gether in their eagerness to see what sort of a man Eumenes was; for no one else had been so much talked about in the army since the death of Craterus. Then Antigonus, afraid that Eumenes might suffer some violence, first loudly forbade the soldiers to ap- proach, and pelted with stones those who were hurry- ing up, but finally threw his arms about Eumenes and, keeping off the throng with his bodyguards, with much ado removed him to a place of safety. XI. After this, Antigonus built a wall round Nora, left troops to guard it, and retired ; Eumenes, however, although closely besieged in a stronghold which had grain, water in abundance, and salt, but no other edible, not even a relish to go with the grain, nevertheless, with what he had, managed to render the life of his associates cheerful, inviting them all by turns to his own table, and seasoning the meal thus shared with conversation which had charm and friendliness. For he had a pleasant face, not like that of a war-worn veteran, but delicate and youthful, and all his body had, as it were, artistic proportions, with limbs of astonishing symmetry ; and

Iit

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ow, evTreiy dé ov SEetvos, aimurXos 5é Kal TiOavos, @S €k TOV eTrLOTON@Y oupBdAXeELY éoTiv.
*"Eret 6é TOUS oUD auT@ ToALopKoUMEVvOUS 7 oTevoxXwpla padvora TAVTOV éBramren, év olKeypact pxpois Kal Tom@ dvoiv oradiouy é éXOvTt THY T€pt wet pov dvacrpepopévous, Tpopny d¢ aryupya-TOUS bev autos AapBavovras, apyois dé Tots irmous Tpoogéportas, ov povoy Tov GAUY aUToY
vo TIS anpagias _ MApaLvoueveon amahrhagfat
Bovdopevos, GANG Kal pos puyny, €& TapaTécot KaLpos, amas yé TOs ho KnpEvots xpnoacOar, 7 Tots pev avO pwr ols oikop, Os ay PeYLoTOS év TO Yopio, dexaTecoapwov TX GY To phros, améderke TeplTra-TOD, Kara put pov emuTetvery THV Kivngw Kevan, tov & inmmov Exactov puTipar peydrous eis THY opopiy avadedepevors vrolocas éx Tay mepl Tov avyéeva pEpav eneTewpute Kat Tapnyetpe bua
TpoxrAtas, @OTE TOS pev omioOiows oKENETLY emt
TAS vhs epeibeaBau, TOUS 6¢ eum poo Giors moow axpavuxous emupaver. od o avnpTnUEvous
ol immoKopor TAPET TOTES apa Tais Te Kpauyais Kal Tais pao ruby emnpeO Lov ot Oe Tomar Ad pEvor
Gupod Kal opyns tots pev omicbiots evn AAOVTO

Kat Sverkiptay oKEAEOL, tois Oe pETE@pots édie-[evo arnpiaacbat Kal KpoToovTes TO edagos KATETELVOVTO wav TO oo pa Kab mokvy nptecay iopara Kal oTadaypov, ovTe T pos TaXOS ouTE Mpos pony yupvatouevor KaKOS. Tas d€ xpiOas evéBaddov avrois enTig pevas, iva KatepyalwvrTal Garrov kat wétTTWOL Bédrov.
XII. “Hén S€ Tis modopKias ypovov Nap-

I1l2 <

590

EUMENES

though he was not a powerful speaker, still he was insinuating and persuasive, as one may gather from his letters.

But most of all detrimental to his forces thus be- sieged was their narrow quarters, since their movements were confined to small houses and a place only two furlongs in circumference, so that neither men nor horses could get exercise before eating or being fed. Therefore, wishing to remove the weakness and languor with which their inactivity afflicted them, and, more than that, to have them somehow or other in training for flight, if opportunity should offer, he assigned the men a house, the largest in the place, ’ fourteen cubits long, as a place to walk, ordering them little by little to increase their pace. And as for the horses, he had them all girt round the neck with great straps fastened to the roof, and raised them partly up into the air by means of pulleys, so that, while with their hind legs they rested firmly upon the ground, they just touched it with the tips of their fore hoofs. Then, while they were thus suspended, the grooms would stand at their sides and stir them up with shouts and strokes of the goad; and the horses, full of rage and fury, would dance and leap about on their hind legs, while with their swinging fore feet they would strike the ground and try to get a footing there, thus exerting their whole bodies and covering themselves with sweat and foam,—no bad exercise either for speed or strength.! Then their barley would be thrown to them boiled, that they might the sooner dispatch and the better digest it.

XII. But presently, as the siege dragged along,

1 This device of Eumenes is described also in Diodorus, xviii, 42, 3 f., and in Nepos, Humenes, v. 4 f.

Bavovons ‘Avtiyovos TeOvnxévat uv Oavopevos “Avtimat pov év Maxedovia, Kal TeTapax Ga Ta mpaypara Kacdvépou Kab Tlodvomépyovros dtapepopevorv, ovdey ET puKpov ermiton, aXna TH

youn TH dAnv meptBardopevos mryepoviay, éBov-Aero Tov Evpévn pidov éxew Kal auvepyoy éml
Tas mpafers. 520 mépapas ‘Tepdyupov éaTrévdeTo
TO Evpever, mporeivas 6 Spxop, ov o Evpévns dcop-Odcas émérpeyrev emexpivar Tois ToALopKovaLy
avTov Maxedoor, TOTEPOS Ein Sixasorepos. "Aptiyovos pev yap apociwaews Evexev ép apXh TOY Bactréov émipvnabets Tov owTrov Opxov eis €au-TOV Bpxeter, Evévns dé mperny bev évéypawpe Tous GpKows ‘Oduprredda per TOV aorheap, érevta Gpvvev ouK ‘ApTuyov peovoy evvoncew oud exelv TOV avTov éx0 pov éFew Kat pirov, GANA Kal ‘Oruparidy Kal tois Bactrebowy. av
SixacoTépwv pavevtor, ot Maxedoves Tadta opKi-TAVTES TOV Kuen THY TroMopKiay édvaav, Kal
T™pos TOV _Avtiryovoy améatedov, Straws Kal avros amroo@ TP Evpéver tov Gpxov.
"Ky tovt@ 6é Kvpevns 6 da0US elev év Nawpots TOY Kamradoxéy opnpous amedidov, AapBdavev
irmous Kal vrobiyta Kal oKxnvas Tapa Tov
Kopilopeveon, Kal cuviyye TOV OT PAT LOT OY boot
Lac mapevTes amo Tihs puyas | émTNava@vTo Kata
THY X@par, @oTE TEpl avToY barmets OMiy@ TOV
Niriwy atrodéovtas yevéoOar, pel’ wv éEeddoas
‘In 320 B.c. After the death of Perdiccas the supreme regency devolved upon Antipater, and he retired into Mace- donia with the two kings. On his death he left the regency

Antigonus learned that Antipater had died in Mace- donia,! and that matters were in confusion owing to the dissension between Cassander and Polysperchon. He therefore cherished no longer an inferior hope, but embraced the whole empire in his scheme, and desired to have Eumenes as friend and helper in his undertakings. Accordingly, he sent Hieronymus to make a treaty with Eumenes, and proposed an oath for him to take. This oath Eumenes corrected and then submitted it to the Macedonians who were besieging him, requesting them to decide which was the juster form. Antigonus, namely, for form’s sake, had mentioned the kings? at the beginning of the oath, and then had made the rest of it refer to him- self; but Eumenes wrote at.the head of the oath the names of Olympias and the kings,? and proposed to swear fealty, not to Antigonus alone, but also to Olympias and the kings, and to have the same enemies and friends as they. This was thought to be more just, and the Macedonians accordingly administered this oath to Eumenes, raised the siege, and sent to Antigonus, that he too, on his part, might take the oath to Eumenes.

Meanwhile, however, Eumenes gave back all the Cappadocian hostages whom he was holding in Nora, and received from those who came for them horses, beasts of burden, and tents. He also collected all the soldiers who had become scattered by his flight and were now wandering about the country, so that he had a force of almost a thousand horsemen. With to Polysperchon, a distinguished officer of Alexander, to the exclusion of his own son Cassander.

2 See the notes on chapter iii. 1 and 7. Olympias was the queen-mother, the widow of Philip, mother of Alexander.

115 12
3

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

epuyer, opO ds poBnbels tov 'Avtiyovov. ov yap povov EK ELVOV éxéheuoe ToNtopKelv avdis TeEptTet-YigavTas, GAAa Kal Tots Maxedoor TLKPWS aVTEypare deFapévors TOU GpKou TH d10pAwarv.
AITII. Pevyoure dé Edpéver ypappata Kopi-Cerat twapa trav év Maxedovia THY "Avtiyovou deSotxoTwv avfnow, "OrvpTiddos ev TapaKaovens édbovra TO "AreFdvépov Tatciovy TapahaBetv Kat Tpepery @S emBoudevopevor, TIoAv-omépyovtos 6¢ Kat Pirjimrov tod Baciréws KENEVOVYT OY "AvTuyove Tohepely THs év Kartra-Soxia Suvapéws dpxovta, Kat Tav év Kovivdoss
Xpnpdireov MEVTAKOTLA [Lev Tahavta AaBewv els
THY TaV Ldiwy émavopAwcty, eis be TOV Tohepov
OTTOG OLS Botrerae xpijoB as. mept O€ ToUTwY Kal
"Avtuyéver Kal Tevtapp TOUS TeV apyvpacmidewy
Hryoupévors eyeypapercav. émet O€ AaPovTes €xXElVOL TA ypappara TO pev ore prravd pworas ebéFavro Tov Evpevn, POdvov 8& Kal prdovercias
é aivovto peoTol, Sevrepevery amak.ouvres é exci, TOV ev pOovov O Kvpévns eGepamreve T@ Ta
NPHMATA pn ha Bei @s ovdey Seopevos, Tals dé piNoverkiats Kal pirapxiass QUT@Y [LTE ayetbat dvvapévwv ponte ErrecOar Bovropévay éerr7ye bevodarpoviar.
"Edn yap "Ad€Eavdpov avT@ Kata TOUS Dmvous gavivat, Kat betEat TWA cKNUHY _KaTec kevac pevay Bacitixas kai @povov év avtTh Kel [evov" ela ELTTELY WS evrabéa ouvedpevovar avrois Kat
Xpnpatifovow avtos Tapéotay Kal cuvedpdrpetar

1 Philip Arrhidaeus (see the note on chapter iii. 1).

these he set out in flight, being rightly in fear of Antigonus. For Antigonus not only ordered his Macedonians to wall him in again and besiege him, but also wrote back bitter reproaches to them for accepting the correction of the oath.

XIII. While Eumenes was in flight, letters were brought to him from those in Macedonia who feared the growing power of Antigonus. Olympias invited him to come and take charge of Alexander's little son and rear him, feeling that plots were laid against his life ; Polysperchon and Philip! the king ordered him, as commander of the forces in Cappadocia, to wage war upon Antigonus, to take five hundred talents of the treasure at Quinda? in reparation of his own losses, and to use as much of it as he wished for the war. They had also written concerning these matters to Antigenes and Teutamus, the commanders of the Silver-shields. These men, on receiving their letters, ostensibly treated Eumenes with friendliness, but were plainly full of envy and contentiousness, dis- daining to be second to him. Eumenes therefore allayed their envy by not taking the money, alleging that he had no need of it; while upon their love of contention and love of command, seeing that they were as unable to lead as they were unwilling to follow, he brought superstition to bear.

He said, namely, that Alexander had appeared to him in a dream, had shown him a tent arrayed in royal fashion with a throne standing in it, and had then said that if they held their councils and transacted their business there, he himself would be

2 Or Cyinda, better known as Anazarbus, a stronghold in Cilicia, whither Antigenes and Teutamus had brought the royal treasure from Susa.

Bovrrs TE maons Kat mpafews apxouevors an avrov. TavTa padios érecoe tov "Avtiyévn Kat Tov Tevrapov, ouUTE éxelvav Babifey Bovropévav mpos autor, ore avros akiay él Oupass éTépwv opacan. kal TUOévtes 08TH oKNvnY Baciruxny Kal Opovov "AdeEdvipo Karatredn pec pevov EKEL guveTropevorTo Bovrevopevor Tmepl TeV peyloTov. "Ere 5é Tpoiodaty avTois eis THY avw 'X@pay o Tevxéoras pera TOV GAXNwY CaTpaTaV aTnVYTNAE pidos ay Kal cuvepifarto TAS Suvdpes, mrnder ev OThov Kat Aapmpornte TapacKevijs émrép- pocav TOUS Maxedovas, avtol 5€ dvaywryor Tals efovatars Kat paraxol tais Suairacs ryeyovores

peta THY "ArcEdvdpou tereuTnv, cal ppoynpatra TUPAVYLKa Kal TeOpappeéva BapBapixais arabvovelass ert TavTo TuvEeveyKaLEvor, ™ pos pev GAANAOUS Bapeis % oav Kal duvodppocro., tous 8¢ Maxedovas KohacevovTes eXKEXULEVOS Kal KaTaxopnyourtes eis Seirva eal Ouaias ddbyou Xpovou TO oTpa-ToTredov dowtias maynyupifovens KAT Ary Cry LOV erroinoay Kal Snparyeryoupevov émt aipecet oT PATHYAY dyAop, BomeEp év Tais Snpwoxpatiats.
aiagOopevos dé o ar mare aAANAOY pev
KaTagpovouvTas, avrov poBoupevous Kat TAapAapurdTTovTas ign el yévouTo KaLpos, eoxmppato XPnMaTov detcOar Kal ouvebaveicaro TadavTa TOA Tapa TOV padiora prcobvTov
avrov, iva kal miotevwot Kal aréyovtat repli
Oo

1 In 317 B.c., against Antigonus, who was in Mesopotamia. He had received the satrapy of Susiana. 2 One of the most distinguished officers of Alexander, present and would assist them in every plan and enterprise which they undertook in his name. Eumenes easily convinced Antigenes and Teutamus that this was true. They were unwilling to go to him, and he himself thought it undignified to be seen at the doors of others. So they erected a royal tent, and a throne in it which they called the throne of Alexander, and there they met for deliberation on matters of highest importance.

And now, as they advanced into the interior of the country,! Peucestas,? who was a friend of Eumenes, met them with the other satraps, and they joined their forces, so that the number of their men and the splendour of their equipment raised the spirits of the Macedonians. But the leaders themselves had been made unmanageable by their exercise of power, and effeminate by their mode of life, after the death of Alexander, and they brought into collision spirits that were tyrannical and fed on barbaric arrogance, so that they were harsh towards one another and hard to reconcile. Moreover, by flattering the Macedonian soldiery extravagantly and _ lavishing money upon them for banquets and sacrifices, in a short time they made the camp a hostelry of festal prodigality, and the army a mob to be cajoled into the election of its generals, as in a democracy. Fumenes, however, perceiving that, while they despised one another, they feared him and were on the watch for an opportunity to kill him, pretended to be in need of money, and got together many talents by borrowing from those who hated him most, in order that they might put confidence in him and refrain from killing him out of regard for the money

who had been made satrap of Persia during Alexander's lifetime. ; 119
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tav Savetwv aryOvE@vTEs" OOTE cuveBy TOV adro-TpLov TANOUTOV avr@ puraa TOU TOLATOS éxelv, kal T@v aAXNwV ert cwrTnpia didovtwv, povov éx Tov ANaBetv etnoacbar THY acpanreav.
XIV. O08 pv adr ot Maxedoves adeias peev ovans épOeipovro mpos Tovs StdovTas, Kat Tas éxelvav Jupas eVeparevor, Sopupopoupeveor Kat OTPATHYLOVTMDV: émel dé "Avtiyovos avtois TapeoTpaToT deuce pera TOAMAS Suvdpews Kal Ta
T pay wara povny apevra TOV arnOwvov EKGNEL OTPATHYOV, ov povov ot oTpaTevopevot t@ Ev-pevet 7 poaetxoy, ada Kal TOY é€v elonvy ral TpUpH peyahov éxeivov Exaotos évédmxe Kal
mapeiyev éavTov CLwOTT THY do0cioay pudarrovTa Tab. wa yap Tot Tept Tov Uaceriypu ToT apov emixerpnoavTa dtaBaivew Tov 'Avtiyovoy Ot jev
dddor mapapuratrovres ovde Ha 0ov7o, povos 5é Edpevns vréoTN, Kal cuvarras paxny TOAANOUS pev katéBare ral vex pav eve noe TO pei@pov,
éhaBe 6é [TETPAKLTXUALOUS | aX WAdwTous. pa-Mota 5é ot Maxedoves rept THY cup Bacay ap-pooriay auT@ Katadavers éryévovTo TOUS pev dddous éoTiav NapTpe@s Kat mavnyupicery, ape bé Kal qoNeuety Ouvarov TYyOUpEVOL povov éxéivov.
O bev yap Tleveéoras év TH Tlepoids Aapmpas
avrous éotidoas Kal Kar dvSpa dtadovs Lepetov els Puc iav amber elvat péyLaros: OArtyats dé bo Tepov HMEpaLS TOV oTpATLOTODY ért TOUS TONE-pious Badilovreap, eTUyxavev o Evpévns é« vooov TLVOS emia parovs ev popeie Kopslopevos é&w Tob otTpatevpatos év naovyia Sia Tas aypuTVias.
I20

EUMENES

they had lent him. The consequence was that the wealth of others was his body-guard, and that, whereas men generally preserve their lives by giving, he alone won safety by receiving.

XIV. The Macedonians, however, while there was no danger, continued to take gifts from their corrupters, and hung about the doors of these men, who now had body-guards and wanted to be generals. But when Antigonus encamped near them with a large force and the situation called aloud for a real general, not only did the common soldiers attach themselves to Eumenes, but also those who were great only when peace and luxury prevailed, every man of them, gave in to him and consented without a murmur to hold the post which he gave them. And, indeed, when Antigonus tried to cross the river Pasitigris, none of the other commanders who were watching his movements was even aware of it, but Eumenes, and he alone, withstood him, joined battle with him, slew many of his men and filled the stream with dead bodies, and took four thousand prisoners. But most of all in connection with the sickness that befell him did the Macedonians make it clear that they considered the others able to feast them splendidly and hold high festival, but him alone capable of wielding command and waging war. For Peucestas, having feasted them splendidly in Persis, and having given every man a victim for sacrifice, was expecting to be chief in command; and a few days afterwards, as the soldiers were marching against the enemy, it chanced that Eumenes, in consequence of a dangerous illness, was being carried along in a litter outside the ranks, where it was quiet and his sleep would not be broken. But after they had puxpov dé mpoeAOovoy avrtois aveo ogous tiwas 592

vrepBaddovtes éfebarnoay ob TORE LOL, KaTa-Baivovtes eis To Trediov. ws ody ai TE TOY XpU-cay StAwWY avyal pos TOV HALov éFéNau Way aro TOV axpov Tob ay patos éy taker Topevopevary, Kal TOV Onpiov TOUS. mUpyous dives Kal Tas TOp-gupas elbov, domep tv adtois Kdapos eis paxny ayopevots, ETL THO AVTES ob mpwrot Thy qTopetav éBowyv Evpévn xareiv avtots, ov yap av mpoenOetv éxelvou pn orparayouvTos, Kal Ta OTA TWPOS THY yn épeioayres GdAgrots peévety SuexehevovTo, Kat Tots nryewoo ty nouxiay exer, eat apis Eupévous [T) payer Oar pnoe KuvOuvevely 1 POs TOUS Tone tous. akovoas 5é 0 Edpévns Hike pos avTous Spop TOUS xopivovras émiTaxuvas, Kat Tov popetou Tas éxatépwOev avraias avaKarn as mpouretve THY SeEvav yeynOas. of 8 as el ov, evOus donacduevor MaxeSouorl Th povn tds TE aomidas aveidovTo Kal tais capicats émBourr7-TaVTES nrdvatap, Tpokadovpevor TOUS TroNEpLous
@S TOU Tyewovos avrois TApovTos.
XV. "AvTiryovos dé Tape TOV adic Komeveay
GKOvU@Y TOV Evpévy vooetv Kab Kopiler Oat KAKOS
Staxeievov, ov péeya Epyov nyetto ouytpinrar
TOUS addous éxetvou vooouvTos. 646 Kal omev-

Sav € emt THY waxy T poo fyyev. @s 6€ TOY Trode-puleov els Tabu Kabla Tapevov Tapedacas Kateide
TO OKT pA kal THY Staxoounow, éxtraryels emeaTn TrELW /Xpovov- elra whOn 76 hopetov amo Oartépou KEpwS emi Oarepov diapepopevov. yerdoas
ody o ‘Avtiyovos, doTep cide, péeya, Kal pds 122

EUMENES

advanced a little way, suddenly the enemy were seen passing over some hills and descending into the plain. The gleams of their golden armour in the sun flashed down from the heights as they marched along in close formation, and on the backs of the elephants the towers and purple trappings were seen, which was their array when going into battle. Accordingly, the foremost Macedonians halted in their march and called with loud cries for Eumenes, declaring that they would not go forward unless he was in command of them ; and grounding their arms they passed word to one another to wait, and to their leaders to keep still, and without Eumenes not to give battle or run any hazard even with the enemy. When Eumenes heard of this, he quickened the pace of his bearers toa runand came to them, and lifting up the curtains of his litter on either side, stretched forth his hand in delight. And when the soldiers saw him, they hailed him at once in their Macedonian speech, caught up their shields, beat upon them with their spears, and raised their battle-cry, challenging the enemy to fight in the assurance that their leader was at hand.

XV. Now Antigonus, hearing from his prisoners that Eumenes was sick and in such wretched plight as to be borne along in a litter, thought it no great task to crush the other commanders if Eumenes was sick. He therefore hastened to lead his army to battle. But when, as the enemy were forming in battle order, he had ridden past their lines and observed their shape and disposition, he was amazed, and paused for some time; then the litter was seen as it was carried from one wing to the other. At this, Antigonus gave a loud laugh, as was his wont,

123

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tous girous ettrav, ‘‘Todro hv To opeiov, as EouKe, TO dvrTeTapaTarTopevov npiv, evOvs amrnye
Thy Suva 6 orto Kat KATE TpATOTEdEVCED.
Oi bé pexpov dvamveva avres avOis édnuayo-yoorTo, Kal TOLS Hrye“oo ey evtpupavres oyedov oAnv eis Ta Nerpdora Karrevel wavTo THY PaBnvev, dare TOUS eoxarous TOV T POTOY arroc xnvoby O“ov TL L Xedious oTabious. Tatra yvous o ’Apvri-ryovos Opunaev eEaipvns err’ avrous vmootpéyas varenny odov Kal dvu8pov, TUYTOMOY dé Kat Bpaxeiav, Exmrifwv, € Stea rappEevors emeTre gor Tepl Ta Netmaoua, pnd dv cuvedOeiv ért T6 TAI-

Gos padias els TO avo Tots oTparnyois. éuBa-NovTL 6 els yhv doixnroy avT@ Tvedpara TE dewa Kal pun peydra SeAupaivero TH TopeLay évoxroupévov Tov _OTPATEVLATOS. qv ovv avay-Kata BonBeva Tupa TOAAG Kale: bev ovK érade
TOUS Toneptous, adda TOV BapBdpwv ou Ta
Brétrovta mpos THY aoiKntov 6pn vewopevot
Savpacartes TO TOV Tmupav TrIHOOS érreprnpav immaarpiacs Kapnrols aryyéXOUS T pos Ileuxéorav.
6 8e OS Hxovcey, auros Te TAVTATAC LY Exppov
bao déous syevopevos Kal TOUS dddous opav Opotws éexovras pyro pevyery, avaornaas Tovs Kal' odov évTas avrois padiora TOV oTpAT LOT OY" Edpevns be THY Tapaxny aby pet Kat TOV poBov, UTLaxvoupevos em La T HO EW TOV TONE MLOY TO TAXOS, @oTe Tpioly boTepov Tpépaes y) ™poado-KovTa. Trapayevéo Gar. meta Gevrov é avrov apa pwev ayyérXous treptémepme Tas Suvapers &x 124

EUMENES

and after saying to his friends, " This litter, it would seem, is what is arrayed against us,' immediately retired with his forces and pitched his camp.! But the Macedonians opposed to him, after getting . a little respite, once more acted liked a capricious mob, and, mocking at their leaders, distributed them- selves in winter quarters over almost the whole of Gabene, so that the rear was separated from the van by almost a thousand furlongs. When Antigonus became aware of this, he set out suddenly against them, taking this time a road that was difficult and without water, but direct and short, hoping that, in case he fell upon them when they were scattered about in their winter quarters, it would no longer be easy for the mass of them to join their generals. But after he had entered an uninhabited country, dire winds and severe frosts gave trouble to his army and impeded their march. The only help, therefore, was to burn many fires, and this was what revealed his presence to the enemy. For the Barbarians living on the mountains which overlooked the uninhabited tract, amazed at the number of fires, sent messengers on dromedaries to Peucestas. And he, when he heard the news, being himself quite out of his mind with fear and seeing that the other officers were in a like state, set out to fly, after rousing up those of their soldiers especially who were quartered along the route. But Eumenes tried to put a stop to their confusion and panic fear, by promising so to check the speed of the enemy that they would come up three days later than they were expected. And when his hearers were persuaded, he sent round 1 These events are more fully and very differently described by Diodorus (xix, 24-32). 125

2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

TOY Xerpadion Ka TOUS dddous abpoivecOar Kata

TAXOS xehevor, dpa dé auras efum mac auevos
META TOV GAAWD HrYELOVOY, Kat TOTOv é& amomrou
KaTadavi Tots odevovct THY Epnuov meptBano-HEVOS Kal Stapetpycas, éxéXeve Tupa Toda
Kalew ép Lac Tipac Ly, @omep ot _otparorredev-ovTes. yevopevou dé TOUTOU kal Tov TUp@DV Tots qept Avtiryovov éx THS opewviis catadavertov, axOos é éoxe Kal Sua Oupia TOV ’Avtiryovov, olopevov
no Onpévous exTranau TOUS Toheptous aTravr ay.
iy ovv mn KaTaKoTros Kal TeT UMEVvOS éK Tropeias
dvarynatntar paxecbat 7 pos avOparous éToLpuous
Kal KaX@S KEXELMAKOTAS, TT Poe HEVOS THY o UY TOMOV
Arye Sia KO LOY Kal mwokewv, Kal’ novyiay ava-AapBdvev TO oTpateupa. pndevos Se éumroowy évTOS, Oomrep et@Oev avrixab never TONEMLWY, tov é TEpLX@pov AeyovTe@v oTpaTevpa pndev Opa, rrupov dé KeKaupeveoy pearov elvat Tov rotrov, naGero KATETT PATNYNMEVOS v0 Evpevous, Kal Baptas gépwov mpoonyey ws dhavepa paxyn xpiOnoopevos.
XVI. "Ep TouTm oe THs Suvapews rept TO Evpevn TO eto Tov nO pote peévov eGavpate THY ouvert avTov, Kal povov éxédXevev dpxetv" ep © AvTovpevor Kab pOovoivres ol TOV apyupacmiwy Hyyepoves, “Avreyerns Kat Tevtapos, émreBov-Aevov auT®, Kat TOUS THELT TOUS TOV TE TAT PAT AY
Kal TOV oT parnyav cuvaryaryovTes: éBovXevovto mote pn xal mas tov Kupévn SrapGeipar.
cvvdobay dé maou arroxpyaacbat Tpos THV paxyny are, peta S5é thv paxnv evOds avereiv 126

593

EUMENES

messengers with orders that the forces in winter quarters and elsewhere should assemble with all speed ; at the same time, too, he himself rode forth with the other commanders, took possession of a place which could be seen at a distance by such as traversed the desert, measured it off, and ordered many fires to be made at intervals, as in an encamp- ment. This was done, and when Antigonus saw these fires on the mountains, he was distressed and dis- heartened, supposing that his enemies had long been aware of his approach and were coming to meet him. In order, therefore, that he might not be forced to fight, when his men were worn and weary from their march, against those who had spent a comfortable winter and were ready for the conflict, he forsook the direct road and led his army through villages and cities, taking time to refresh it. But when no one tried to obstruct his progress, the thing which usually happens when enemies are facing one another, and when the people round about said they had seen no army, but that the place was full of lighted fires, Antigonus perceived that he had been outgeneraled by Eumenes, and in deep resentment led his forces forward to try the issue in open battle.

XVI. But meanwhile most of the forces with Eumenes had assembled, and, admiring his sagacity, demanded that he should be sole commander. At this, Antigenes and Teutamus, the leaders of the Silver-shields, were filled with vexation and jealousy, so that they plotted against the life of Eumenes, and, assembling most of the satrapsand generals, deliberated when and how they might put him out of the way. They were unanimous in the decision to make every use of him in the ensuing battle, and after the battle

Eiédapos 0 Tav edepavrov NYE LOY Kal Paidipos eFayyédAover Kpupa TO Evpever Ta Sedoypeva, bc eUvo.ay uev oddepiav % yapwy, evra Bovpevor dé un Tov XPnwar ov, a beSaveixeray auT@, orepnacu. Evpevns dé TOUTOUS bev em nvEerer, els be THY ony amehOav Kat mpos TOUS pirous
elTr@y @s év mavnyupet Onpiwv dvactpéporto, SiabyKcas éyparpe kat Ta ypappareta KATETX LTE
Kat drépOerper, ov Bovdopevos adtob TENEUT HO AV-
TOS €K TOV aTroppyT@v aitias Kal cvxodaytTnuata
Tots yparpace yevéoOar. tadTa Sdtorxnodpevos €Bovreveto THY viknv Trapeivat Tots évavTiots, f guyov dua Mydias Kat "Appevias éuBareiv els Kanmadoxiav. ovder dé Kupdoas TOV pirwy TapovTwr, GD émt TONE TH yvopn mroduTpoTrp mapa Tas TUXAS ovon unjoas aurov, eferarre Thy Svvamy, TOUS pep "EXdAnvas Kal Tous Bap-Bdpous Tapoppav, vo O€ Tis parayyos Kal tev apyupacrrisey AUTOS Tapakaovpevos Gappeiv, @s ov deFopévwv Tov TONE LIDDY. Kal yap joav ot m peo BuTarou TOY Tepl Didurrov Kal "AXE EavSpov, o domep aOdyTai TOhEWOV dij TNTOL Kal
amr eres eis exewvo xpovov, Tov\Aol pev éEBdoun-KovTa én yeryOVvOTEs, VEDTEPOS bé ovoeis éEn-KovTaeTous. 610 Kal Tots Tept TOV Avtiyovov em LovTes €Bowy: "Eni TOUS TaTépas dpaptavere, @ Karat Keparai" Kal per' opyns éurecovtes ohny ond THY parayya cuverpipar, ovdevos UTooTavTOS avToUs, TOY Sé€ TAELoTWY ev YeEpot diapOapévrwr.

to kill him at once. But Kudamus, the master of the elephants, and Phaedimus, secretly brought word to Eumenes of this decision ; not that they were moved by any goodwill or kindness, but because they were anxious not to lose the money they had lent him.} These men Kumenes commended, and then went off to his tent, where he said to his friends that he was living in a great herd of wild beasts. Then he made his will, and tore up and destroyed his papers ; he did not wish that after his death, in consequence ot the secrets contained in these documents, accusations and calumnies should be brought against his correspondents. After this business had been finished, he deliberated whether to give over the victory to the enemy, or to take flight through Media and Armenia and invade Cappadocia. He came to no decision while his friends were with him, but after considering many expedients with a mind which was as versatile as his fortunes were changeable, he proceeded to draw up his forces, urging on the Greeks and the Barbarians, and himself exhorted by the phalanx and the Silver-shields to be of good courage, since, as they felt sure, the enemy would not withstand their attack. And indeed they were the oldest soldiers of Philip and Alexander, war's athletes as it were, without a defeat or a fall up to that time, many of them now seventy years old, and not a man younger than sixty. And so, when they charged upon the forces of Antigonus, they shouted: “ It is against your _ fathers that ye sin, ye miscreants ;” and falling upon them in a rage they crushed their whole phalanx at once, not a man withstanding them, and most of their opponents being cut to pieces at close quarters.

1 Cf. chapter xiii. 6.

Tavry pev obv O "AvTiryovos TT GTO KATA
Kparos, Trois é immevat emex paren: TO0 b¢ Ilev-KéoTOU Tavrdmacty EKNEAUHEVOS kal aryevves arywvitapevov Kal THY amooKeuny éraBe wacar, avT@ Te ynpovTt XpNg dwevos Tapa Ta deuva Kat Tov Torov auvepyoivtos. axaves yap hv TO mediov, ote Babutepov obre aTrOK por ov rab
OTEPEOY, adnra Ouvardes Kal | beoTov ahpu pisos avyyunpas, i) TocOUT@Y peV lrmey TOCOUTwY dé avOparray Eatvopuévn Spopous t vo TOV THIS paxns Katpov eEnvOer Kovey @omep aoBeortov, atroNev-Kaivovoay TOV dépa Kal Tas dypels d:abonoicay.
4 Kal pedtov AaBorv o ’Avtiyovos Tis atrooKeuns TOV TONEMiCn éxpatnae.
XVII. Ilavoapévns Sé tis pays evus ol mept TOV Tevtapov émpea Bevovro TWepl THS atrooKEUTS. "Avtuyovou 6 Kal Taurny dmodwoew UmirXvoupevou Tous apyupaotiat Kal TaN
xpncerOar giravOperws, €& maparaBoe Tov Kvpévn, Bovrevpa Secvov ot dpyupaa Toes éBov-NevoaVTO, eyxetpioar cavra Tois Trohepioes Tov avdpa. Kat Tp@Tov peev dvuTrom Tas poo emTéAa-Cov avrg Kal TapepUAaTTor, Ol ev atroSupopevot
TEpt Tis aTroo Kevys, ot oé Jappetv WS VEVEKNKOTA KehevovTEs, ot dé TaY addov HYELOVOV KarnryopourTes. émevta, T POT TETOVTES éiptacay TO éryxerptovov avTOU Kal TH Sovn Tas Melpas amoor peavres eSnoav. érel S& vd “Avtuyovou Nixdvep éréupOn mapadnrouevos aurov, edeiTo oryou Tuyely aryopevos dia TOV Maxedovwr, OvUK els d€now q TApatTnaLy, arn aos Trept TOV EKELVOLS aupdepovrayv dSiareFopmevos.
130

O94

EUMENES

At this point, then, Antigonus was defeated over- whelmingly, but with his cavalry he got the upper hand; for Peucestas fought in a way that was al- together lax and ignoble, and Antigonus captured all the baggage. He was a man who kept cool in the presence of danger, and he was aided by the ground. For the plain were they fought was vast, and its soil was neither deep nor trodden hard, but sandy and full of a dry and saline substance, which, loosened up by the trampling of so many horses and. men during the battle, issued forth in a dust like lime, and this made the air all white and obscured the vision. Therefore it was easy for Antigonus to capture the enemy’s baggage unobserved.

XVII. After the battle was over, Teutamus at once sent an embassy to treat for the baggage. And when Antigonus promised not only to give this back to the Silver-shields but also to treat them kindly in other ways, provided they would deliver up Eumenes to him, the Silver-shields formed a dire design to put the man alive into the hands of his enemies. So, to begin with, they drew near him, without awakening his suspicions, and kept him in ward, some making complaints about their baggage, others bidding him to be of good courage, since he was victorious, and others still denouncing the other commanders. Then they fell upon him, snatched his sword away from him, and tied his hands fast with his girdle. And when Nicanor had been sent by Antigonus to receive him and he was being led along through the Macedonians, he begged for leave to speak to them, not with a view to supplication or entreaty, but in order to set forth what was for their advantage.

Tevopuévns 8€ ciwmijs év tnara@ tut Kataoctas
a A ’
kal tas yelpas Sedeuévas mpoteivas, ‘“ Iotov,
i cc 2 4 6 / 4 >
eltrev, ““@ Kaxtoto. Maxedovwy, tpoTatov ‘Avtt-b] 4 A y > e¢ A ¢e A yovos €ernaas av éotnce Kal” vp, oloy vues Kad avT@v aviotate TOV OTpAaTHYOV aiypdrwTov éxdsdovtes; ovx apa Sewov hv xpatodvras buds
e 3 A \ \ ? U e > nttav é€oporoyercOasr Sia Tas AtTroaKEUS, WS eV
ToiS XpHnpacw, ovK év Tois OTAOLS TOU KpaTetY OVTOS, GAAG Kab TOY HYyE“ova TéuTrETE AVTPOV THS
ATOCKEUHS. €yYW Lev OVY ANTTNTOS AyOmal, VLKO@V TOUS TTOAEMLOUS, UTO TOV TULULAYwV ATOANUMEVOS” vpeis dé, mpos Atos otpatiov kal Dewy opxior, évrav0da pe Se avtav xteivate. mdavtTas KaKel
4 KTEWOomevos UméTEepov Epyov eiul. péurerar 5é
9 A a

ovdev Avtiryovos: vexpod yap Eipévous Seitas nai bf io > \ 4 A a 9 /
ov Cavros. eb b€ heidecbe THY YeL_paV, apKéceEt
A > A ee f/f a “A \ 9 \ Tov éuav n ETEpa AVOEioa TpaEaL TO Epryov. eb OE bd , 4 , ¢e / a , ov mateveTe poe Eidos, UTroppivate tots Onpioss dedepévov. Kali tadta mpdkavtas byas adinut THs én’ éuol Sixns ws avdpas oowwtatovs Kal Sixaco-TATOUS TEPL TOY AUT@Y OTPaTNYOV yevopévous.”
XVIII. Tatra tod Evpévous Néyovtos To pev
A A Gro WAHGos ayGer KaTeiyeTo Kal KrNaVOMOS Hy,
e \ ? 4 ” > 4 \ A
ot 5€ apyupaomtides ayev éBowy Kat pn pdva-poovtt mpocéyew* ov yap elvat Sevov et Xeppo-/ 4 yvncitns OdreOpos otpwkerar pvpiows yupvacas
qonrénois Maxedovas, avr ef tav ’AdeEavdpou kat Pirimrmov otpatiwtav oi KpatiaTot ToTaiTa 132
EUMENES

Silence was made, and standing on an eminence he stretched forth his hands, bound as they were, and said: “ What trophy, O ye basest of Macedonians, could Antigonus have so much desired to set up over your defeat, as this which ye yourselves are now erecting by delivering up your general as a prisoner? It is not a dreadful thing, then, that in the hour of your victory ye should acknowledge yourselves defeated for the sake of your baggage, implying that victory lies in your possessions and not in your arms, but ye must also send your leader as a ransom for that baggage. As for me, then, ye lead me away undefeated, a victor over my enemies, a victim of my fellow-soldiers; but as for you, by Zeus the god of armies and by the gods who hallow oaths, I bid you slay me here with your own hands. Even should I be slain yonder, it will be wholly your work. Nor will Antigonus find any fault; for he wants a dead and not a living Eumenes. And if ye would spare your own hands, one of mine, if released, will suffice to do the business. And if ‘ ye cannot trust me with a sword, cast me to the wild beasts, all bound as Iam. If ye do this, I will absolve you from your guilt towards me, holding that ye have shown yourselves most just and righteous in your dealings with your own general.”

XVIII. As Eumenes said this, the rest of the throng was overwhelmed with sorrow, and some _ wept, but the Silver-shields shouted to lead him along and pay no attention to his babbling; for it was not so dreadful a thing, they said, that a pest from the Chersonesus should come to grief for having harassed Macedonians with infinite wars, as that the best of the soldiers of Philip and Alexander,

133

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

KajLovTes ev ype oTEpovTat TOV emdOhov Kal Tpopny Tap ere pov Lap Bavovowy, at 5é yuvaiKes avuTav on TpiTny vuKTA Tots Tohepioes ouyKa-Gevdovo.v. dpa dé > iyo auTov émiTaXvvovTES.
“Avtiryovos 5é deiaas Tov byAov (arredeipOn yap ovdels év T@ aTpatorTedy) déxa TOUS KpaTLaTEv-ovTas _edepavtas eerreprpe Kal Noyxopopous suxXvous Mydous Kal _Tlap@vatous 61axpovao-HEvOUS TO TAHOOs. eit’ auTos pep Seip OuX UTeé-pewve Tov Evpévn dia tHv 7 poryeryev nwevny prdiav Kat curndecay, muvOavopevov 5é Tov Tmaperrngo-
TOY TO CHUA TAS huAd~ovoL, “OdTws,” etzer, “@s éXéhavta 7 ws A€ovtTa.” peta puxpov Oé cvpTradns ryevOMEVOS TOV te deap“av TOUS Bapeis éxéNevoev aheneiv kal maida mapadeacbar TOV
cuvnbwr, 6 Sirws adeiypatto, ral TOV pidov eprne
T@ Bovrdopév@ ouvdunpepever Kal cowiterv Ta emer pdeca. Bovrevopevos dé mrept avrob Trelovas nuepas ™ po eto Kal oyous Kal UmoaxErets, Nedpyouv te Tod Kpnros Kat Anuntpiou Tow viov
prdoripoupeveoy TOV Evpevn caoaL, Tov O€ adddov O“ov TL TaVTwY évoTapévary Kal KeXEVOVTWY aVvarpety.
Aeyerat dé tov Evpévy Tob puddacovtos av-TOV ‘Ovopdpxou Tub écOar ti dnote AVTiyOvOS
é Opov av6pa Kal TONE LLOV AaBov broxelptov OUTE aATOKTLYYVOL TAXEDS OuUTE EVYEVOS adinge:
tou 6¢€ ‘Ovoudpxou mpos UBpw ELTTOVTOS as ov vov, AX él Tis paxns éder ‘Tpos Gavatov é eyeuv evPapaas, ne Nat pa tov Aia,” pavar tov Evyevn, ‘Kat TOTE elyov epod dé TOUS Els Xetpas édGov-
Tas GAN ovdevl KpeitTove Tpoatuyav olba. Kal 134

EKUMENES

after all their toils, should in their old age be robbed of their rewards and get their support from others, and that their wives should be spending the third night now in the arms of their enemies. At the same time they led him along at a quickened pace.

But Antigonus, fearing their multitude (since no one had been left behind in the camp), sent out ten of his strongest elephants and a great number of Median and Parthian spearmen to drive away the throng. He himself could not endure to see Eumenes, by reason of their former intimate friendship, and when those who had received him asked how they should guard his person, he said: “ Just as ye would an elephant or a lion.’’ But after a little while he became compassionate and ordered the keepers to remove the prisoner's heavy fetters and admit one of his personal servants to anoint him, and permitted any one of his friends who wished to spend the day with him and bring him what he needed. Then he deliberated many days what to do with him, and considered various arguments and suggestions, Demetrius his son and Nearchus the Cretan being eager to save the life of Eumenes, while the rest, almost all of them, were insistent in urging that he be put to death.

We are told, also, that Eumenes asked his keeper, Onomarchus, why in the world Antigonus, now that he had got a hated enemy in his hands, neither killed him speedily nor generously set him free; and when Onomarchus insolently told him it was not now, but on the field of battle, that he should have faced death boldly, “ Yea, by Zeus,’ said Eumenes, “then, too, I did so; ask the men who fought with me; I know that none I met was a

Tov ‘Ovouapxor, “ Ovxodv én érrel vov, pdvat, ss TOV KpeiTTova eUpnKas, TL OvK avapevets TOV éKeivou Katpov;”

XIX. Os 5 owv eboke TP ’Avtuyov tov Evbev?) KTeLvELY, éxéhevo ev avTov THY Tpodny aperely. Kal dvo pev neépas q Tpels aoLtTos oUT@ T poonyeTo Tpos THY TENCUTID. aipvidsov 8é avacuyiis ryevoxevns elo TEU AVTES av0 pwtrov aTroapatrovaw autov. To S€ copa ois pirors mapadous 7) AvTiryovos emeT pewre Kavoat Kal Ta Neirava auvdevras els dpryupav vépiav Kop Cer’, amoboOnaopeva TH yuvaiki Kal Tots TALoLD. Obre dé amoBavovros Evpevous OUK éT arp Tul THY Ti@piay émolnoTato TOV TpooovT@y avTOV aryewover Kal OTPATLWTH@V TO Satpoviov, are AUTOS "Avtiyovos mpoBarNropuevos ws aceBels rai

Onpradders TOUS dpyupdomdas TrapéeowKe LBupriy
T@ S:otxobyte THY "Apaxwotar, mavra, T poTrov ext pinpat Kal katapGeipas KEAEVTAS, OTWS padeis avtay eis Maxedoviav ameiot pydé oweras TH “EAAnviKny OdraTTaV.
SEPTOPIOY KAI EYMENOYS SYTKPISIS

I. Tadra éotw & mepl Kupévous Kal Septwpiou ponens afta Taperhn paper. év O€ Th cuyKpices KOLWOV Lev duo épors Umdpxet To Eévous Kal aAdobatovs xai puydéas évtas €Ovav te TavTo-1 According to Nepos (Eumenes, xii. 4), Eumenes was better man.” ‘ Well, then,” said Onomarchus, ‘*since now thou hast found thy better, why canst thou not bide his time?”

XIX. When, then, Antigonus had decided to kill Eumenes, he gave orders to deprive him of food.
And so, after two or three days of fasting, the prisoner began to draw nigh his end. But camp was suddenly broken and a man was sent to dispatch him.! His body, however, was delivered to his friends by Antigonus, who permitted them to burn it and collect the ashes and place them in a silver urn, that they might be returned to his wife and children.
Eumenes thus slain, on no other man than Antigonus did Heaven devolve the punishment of the soldiers and commanders who betrayed him, but he himself, regarding the Silver-shields as impious and bestial men, put them into the service of Sibyrtius
the governor of Arachosia, ordering him to wear them out and destroy them in every possible way, that not a man of them might ever return to Macedonia or behold the Grecian sea.
COMPARISON OF SERTORIUS AND
EUMENES
I. Sucn are the memorable things in the careers of Eumenes and Sertorius which have come down to us. And now, as we compare the men, we find this common to both, that although they were strangers, aliens, and exiles, they were continually strangled by his keepers, without the knowledge of Antigonus.

137

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Satay Kai oTpatevpdtwv payipwv Te Kal peyauNwv! Hyoupevous Statereiv, idcov dé Yeptwpio pev TO Tapa TavTMY TOV cuupayorv Sedouévny exe
\ \N 3 ge \ > , > + \ \ a 51a TO akiwpa Thy apynv, Evpéver 5é TO ToNdN@Y
fe) 4
Siadepopévwv epi THs NyEu"ovias Wpos avToOP Ex
A \ a A \
Tov Tpakewy AapRavey TO Tpwreiov' Kai TO pev
y , , or nA §\
dpyec0at Bovropuevor Sixaiws eitrovto, T@ 5é ap-
. \
yew pn Suvapevor mpos TO oupdépov UmNKOVOY.
\ \ e \ >] 4 \ A ¢€ a Kat yap o pev "[Bynpwv cat Avottavav Powpaios,
€ \ / / a ? e \
o 6¢ Xeppovnoitns Maxedovor ipyev, @v ov per 4 ¢e / b 4 e \ , , éxtranar Pwpatous édovrevov, of dé TOTE TaVTAasS
b] 4 b] A \ , \ > \ avOpwrovs édovrodvTo. Kal Septwpios pev ato
'BovrAns nal otpatnyias Oavpafopevos, Evpévns 9
Sé dua THVY ypaypateiav Katadppovovpmevos &p
A ,
Hyepoviay mpondOev. ov povoy Toivuy érdTTOGL
\ \ b) \ b] a ? \ \ , \
Mpos THY apyny adoppais, adrAa Kal pelCocet pos
THv av&now éxpnoato Kwrvpaow Evpevns. Kat
\ v yap avTixpus Tovs évicTapévous Kal Kpuda TOUS
> / 9% 4 b] a "
emeBouXNevovtTas elye ToAXOUS, OVX WaTED TH e / "A \ > / , \ o \ eTéepw havepas péev ovdeis, AXaMpa Oé HaTeEpov Kal la la A
ON yoL TOY oUpLpayYwy érravéotncav. 610 TO pmev
, "a n /

HY TWEPAS TOD KLVOUVEVELY TO VLKAY TOUS TrOAELLOUS, T@ O€ €x TOD WiKav Oo KivduVvos UT TOY POovovYTAD.
IT. Ta peév ody xata thv otpatnyiay épapirra Kat TApaAANAa® TW 5€ GAAW THOT PiAoTFOAELOS
pev o Kvpeévns cai gidovetxos, yovyias b€ Kal ‘ > al e 4 e \ 4 ?
TPAOTHTUS oLKELOS O LEpTwpLOS. Oo peV yap, dopa-
1 neyadwy with Bekker : peydAwy duvapewy.

in command of all sorts of peoples and of armies that were large and warlike; but it was peculiar to Sertorius that he held a command which was given him by all his confederates because of his reputation, and to Eumenes that many contended with him for the leadership, and yet he took the highest place in consequence of his achievements. [urthermore, the one was followed by those who wished to be under a just command ; while the other was obeyed by those who were incapable of command and sought their own advantage. For the one, a Roman, com- manded Iberians and Lusitanians, who had long been in subjection to Rome; the other, a Chersonesian, commanded Macedonians, who at that time were holding the whole world in subjection. Besides, Sertorius rose to leadership when a career in senate and field had brought him admiration ; but Eumenes when his post as secretary had brought him con- tempt. Eumenes, therefore, not only had fewer advantages at the outset, but also greater hindrances as he advanced in his career. For there were many who directly opposed him and secretly plotted against him ; whereas Sertorius was openly opposed by no one, and secretly only in the latter part of his career, when a few of his confederates rose up against him. For this reason Sertorius could put an end to his peril by a victory over his enemies: while Eumenes, in consequence of his victories, was in peril at the hands of those who envied him.

II. In their capacities as commanders, then, they were very much alike; but in their general dis- positions Eumenes was fond of war and fond of strife, while Sertorius was a lover of peace and tran- quillity. For the one, though it was in his power to

ia \ \ fe) “A 3G 3 \ / AOS Kal weTAa Tihs Brody éEov extrod@v yevopeva
a ,
TOS MpwTOLS, paYXowevos Kal Kivduvetwv SieTE-Nece, TO O€ OvOeYV Seopévw Tpayudtov bTrép aALTHS nw fel / \ a
THS TOD cw@puaTos dodadeias Tpos OUK EeoVTAS
> 4 ” La € / > 4 \ \
eipnvnv dye Hv 0 TroAeuos. Etpéver pev yap

"Avtiyovos éxotavt, TOV UTép TOU mpwrevey
ayovev ndéws av eyphto Thy pet aUTOV aya-a 4 > , de e \ II fu Oe
TovtTe tTakiv, Veptwpio dé ot wept Ulopumrniov ovde Chv ampayyoves émétpetrov. 610 TO peév ExovTi cuvéBatve trodeyely er' apxh, TO 5é axovoiws
a / dpxew Sia To TorepeicOat. gedoTrorEepos pev
nw \ / A
owv 0 THS aodadrcias THY TrEOveFLaY TpoTiMaV, Q \ e a / , \ b /
TOAELLKOS OE O TO TOAEUM KTWpEVOS THY acda-NElav.
\ \ a : , la! \ 9
Kail pny Oaveiv ye cuveBn TO pev ov mpoataBo-
/ a \ \ / \ pévm, TH Se Kal mpoadexopév@m THY TEAEUTHY, OV
/
TO pev emvetKeias, hirous yap edoKEL Tea TEVELY, TO
/ a 5é aaOeveias, Bovdopevos yap huyeiy cuvernpOn.
Kal TOU pév ov KaTHaoxXuVve TOV Biov o OdvaTos, TATXOVTOS VITO TOV cULpaYoV & TOV TOM pPLOY
Pp] N bd N P] / ¢€ \ UA \ N
avtov ovdels émoincev: o 5é hevyety pev mpd atyparwaias pn Suvnbets, Cav S€ pet alyparo-
" \
ciav BovrAnOeis, ote épurdEato nadws THY TE-
\ a NeuTnv OVO' irrépervev, GANA TpocdLTAapaY Kal
/ A A A
Seduevos TOU T@pmaTOS poVvoU KpaTtety SoxodYTA TOV TONEMLOY Kal THS Wruy7ys avTod KvpLov érroingen.
140

live in safety and with honour if he kept out of the way of the leading Macedonians, was continually fighting them at the risk of his life; whereas the other, though he craved no participation in affairs, had to wage war for his very life against those who would not suffer him to be at peace. For if Eumenes had stood aside from the struggles for the primacy and been satisfied with the second place, Antigonus would gladly have given him that; whereas Ser- torius could not get permission from Pompey to live, even though in retirement. Therefore the one was ever waging war of his own accord for the sake of power;

while the other held power against his wishes because war was waged upon him. Now, that man is fond of war who sets greed above safety ; but that man is warlike who by war wins safety.

And further, the one met his death when he had no anticipation of it, the other when he was expecting the end. In the one case, death resulted from the man’s goodness of heart, since he appeared to trust his friends; in the other, from weakness, since he wished to fly, but was arrested. Moreover, death brought no stain upon the life of Sertorius, since he suffered at the hands of confederates what none of his enemies could inflict upon him ; Eumenes, however, who was unable to fly before being taken prisoner, but was willing to live after being taken prisoner, neither took good precautions against death, nor faced it well, but by supplicating and entreating the foe who was known to have power over his body only, he made him lord and master of his spirit also.
141

PHOCION

POKION

I. Anpddns o 0 pijt@p icyvev pev év Tais “AOnvais 54a TO ™ pos yap TodtTever Oar Maxedover Ka L “Avtemdtpov, TOANG dé ypagetv Kal Aéyeu ivaynatipevos Tapa TO akioma THS Todews Kal TO 700s, EXeye ouyyveapuns Aévos elvat TodLTEVOHEvos Ta vavayia THs Toews. TouUTO 6€ € Kal 7@ PNTOpt Opacutepor elpyTas, Sofevev a av arn Ges elvat perevex ev emt THY Peoxiwvos TOMLTELAD. Anpdéns pév yap avros my vavarylov Tis Toews, oUTMS doenyas Bocas Kal TohsTevg aMeEVvOS OOTE Avtitrat pov eimety em avrov, yépovtos 5n yeyovoros, ore caddmep tepetou Seamrem parypévov yAOooa Kal Kotha povov GATONELTETAL THY d€ Dwxiwvos a aperny, WoTEp avTayoviarh Ba el Kat Brain Karp@ ovdAaxovcay, au TUXGL THS EAAaSos dpavpay Kal drdaprh ™ pos dofav emoinaay. ov Yap Lopokhel ye Mpooextéov agGevi) trovovvTt Thy apeTnv év ols hyo }
"AAN ov yap, avag, ovd Os av Braorn peéver vous Tos KaK@s mpdEacw, adr’ éFloratac:

Toc oUToOv dé TH TUXN doréov avr iTaTTomery T pos

TOUS ayabous avépas t loxvely, oop avti Tis akias

TiLAS Kal yapttos éviots Ypoyous Trovypovs Kat
1 Antigone, 563 f. (od yap wor', vat, KTA.).
144

=~T

to

PHOCION

I. Demapes the orator, who was powerful at Athens because he conducted affairs so as to please Antipater and the Macedonians, and was forced to propose and favour many measures which were at variance with the dignity and character of the city, used to say that he was excusable because he was in command of a shipwrecked state. This may have been too hardy an utterance for the orator, but it would seem to be true when transferred to the-administration of Phocion. Demades, indeed, was himself but wreckage of the state, since his life and administration were so outrageous that Antipater said of him, when he was now grown old, that he was like a victim when the sacrifice was over—nothing left but tongue and guts. But the fame of Phocion's virtue, which may be said to have found an antagonist in a grievous and violent time, the fortunes of Greece rendered obscure and dim. Surely we must not follow Sophocles in making virtue weak, as when he says :—
"Indeed, O King, what reason nature may have given Abides not with the unfortunate, but goes astray";
yet thus much power must be granted to Fortune in her conflicts with good men: instead of the honour and gratitude which are their due, she brings base

| 145
VOL, VIII. L
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ b] / \ / ' /

dtaBoras eripépoveav thy tiactiv dabevertépar
TOLELY THS UpPETHS.
II. Katroe Soxodow of Shor padXov eis TOUS
b] \ > , o > A e ‘
ayadous éEuSpiley otav evtuyoow, bro mpa-yuaTov peydrwv Kal Suvduews eTarpopevor’ aupm-
/ ? / €
Baiver 5€ Tovvavtiov. ai yap ouppopal mixpa
\ \ »” \ / \ b] A \ pev Ta nOn Kat pLxpoduTra Kal aKpoodarh pos opyas motovat, SvaKxorov Sé THY aKony Kal Tpa-yelav, bo TayTos NOyou Kal pyyaTtos Tovovy EYovTos évoxAoupévny: o O€ émiTema@v Tots é€a-
\
paptavouevors é€overdivery ta dvaoTvynuata
2 doxel, kal natadpoveiy 0 tappnotalopevos. Kal
-cadatrep TO MéAL AUTEL TA TETPWLEVA Kal HAKW-péva pépn TOD cwpatos, oUTwWS TOAAAKIS OL arnOivot Kai vodv éyovtes Aoyor Sdxvovat Kai
, a \ mapofvvovet Tovs KaK@S TpaTTOVTas, €ayv pN
a e/

Tpoonvers Wat Kal GUVELKOVTES, DOTTED ApeNEl TO nou ‘‘ mevoetnes” 0 TrOLNTHS KEXANKEV, WS TO nooméevm THS uyis vmeixov Kal pn waxopevoy
3 pnd aytituTovv. Kal yap oupa preypaivoy iy 4 a a \ ? , > ,
nOtora ToIs oKLEPO’S Kal GrAapTréowW evdiaTpLBer Vpwopact, Ta 6€ avyny ExovTa Kal PWS aTTOCTPE-etal, kat ToS ev TUXAaLs aBoUANTOLS YyevouEevn } \ \ , ? 5 3 ? @ 4 ’ / yropodecs Kal tpudepov eote Os acleveray uveyeoOat tappnoias, Ste padsoTa SeitaL, TAY Tpa-
’ ‘4
yuaTov avapopay apyaptnuatos ovK éxovTmv.
5:0 wavtTn opadepov 7 ToLavTN TroNTELa’ cUD-146

PHOCION

censure and calumny upon some, and so weakens the world’s confidence in their virtue.
II. And yet it is commonly held that a people is more apt to wreak its insolence upon good men when it is prosperous, being then lifted up by grandeur and power; but the reverse is often the ease. For calamities make men’s dispositions bitter, irritable, and prone to wrath, so that no one can say anything to please or soften them, but they are an- noyed by every speech or word that has vigour. He who censures them for their transgressions is thought to abuse them for their misfortunes, and he who is outspoken with them, to despise them. And just as honey irritates wounded and ulcerated parts of the body, so often words of truth and soberness sting and exasperate those who are in an evil plight, unless uttered with kindness and complaisance ; and therefore, doubtless, the poet calls that which is pleasant “ menoeikes,” on the ground that it yields to that part of the soul which experiences pleasure, and does not fight with it or resist it.1 An eye that is inflamed dwells most gratefully on colours which are dark and lustreless, but shuns those which are radiaut and bright; and so a city that has fallen on desperate fortunes is made by its weakness too sensitive and delicate to endure frank speaking, and that at a time when it needs it most of all, since the situation allows no shifting of the blame for the mis- takes that have been made. Therefore the conduct of affairs in such a city is altogether dangerous; for 1 As often, Plutarch’s etymology is amiably wrong. Homer uses ‘‘ pevoesxés” as a stock epithet of good things in such abundance as to be apirit-suiting, or satisfying.

aToAAVal yap TOV TpOS Kapiv AéyovTa Kal TpoamodAvat Tov un yapCopmevov.
“Oomep obv Tov HArALov of paOnpatixol Aé€éyouct LTE THY AUTIY TO ovpave hepopuevov hopav pyre avTinpus évaytiav nal avtiBatixnv, addr\ja OED Kal tjapeyxexdipév@m Topelas oXnpaTe Ypwpevov iypav Kal evKayTrh Kal tepiediTTOuéevny edLKa mov, 7 owlerat twavTa Kal AapBaver THY apioTny Kpadowy, ovTws apa THS ToALTElas oO pev dpOtos ayav Kal mpos aravta tots Snpoctors !
avtiBaivwv Toves aTnuns Kal oxANpos, WaTeEp av Tadd émuchares Kal KaTavTes TO auvepEednopevov ols Guaptavovatw ot ToAAol Kal cuveTippétrov, 1) 6¢ avOuTretxovea Trevopevots Kai dtdovoa TO Tpos Yapw, Elta aTatToVaAa TO GUuépon érre-atacia Kal KuBépynots avOpworev ToAAa TPaws Kal Xpnoi“ws vTrovpyouvT@v, Ee wn Tavta Sde-OTOTLKOS Kal Biaiws AyouvTo, TwTHpLOS, Epywodns
dé xal yareTTn Kal TO ceuvoY Eyovaa TH errverKel Svopixtov: éav 5é wyOH, TovTO éoTLY 4 TdvT@D
pev pO nov, Tacay 6é apyoviay éupereotaty Kal
fovaltKWTaTH Kpao.s, 7 Kal TOV KOcpOV Oo Oeds rNéyeras Stoixetiv, ob Bralopevos, dAAA TeOot Kai

NOY@ Tapdyov Thy avayKny.
III. Tadra 5€ cai Katou te vév ovvéByn.
Kal yap ovros ov riWavov éoyev ovd€ Tpoadires
dyAw TO HO0S, OVSE BVOncTEY ev TH TrodLTELQ TpOS
1 §yuociots Bekker has dfyors, after Coraés.

she brings to ruin with herself the man who speaks but to win her favour, and she brings to ruin before herself the man who will not court her favour.

Now, the sun, as mathematicians tell us, has neither the same moticn as the heavens, nor one that is directly opposite and contrary, but takes a slanting course with a slight inclination,' and de- scribes a winding spiral of soft and gentle curves, thus preserving all things and giving them the best temperature. And so in the administration of a city, the course which is too straight, and opposed in all things to the popular desires, is harsh and cruel, just as, on the other hand, it is highly danger- ous to tolerate or yield perforce to the mistakes of the populace. But that wise guidance and govern- ment of men which yields to them in return for their obedience and grants them what will please them, and then demands from them in payment what will advantage the state,—and men will give docile and profitable service in many ways, provided they are not treated despotically and harshly all the time,—conduces to safety, although it is laborious and difficult and must have that mixture of austerity and reasonableness which is so hard to attain. But if the mixture be attained, that is the most con- cordant and musical blending of all rhythms and all harmonies; and this is the way, we are told, in which God regulates the universe, not using com- pulsion, but making persuasion and reason introduce that which must be.

III. These principles found an illustration in Cato the Younger also. For his manners were not winning, nor pleasing to the populace, nor was he eminent in 1 «4.¢, to the plane of the ecliptic.

yap adr' o pév Kixépwv dyoiv avtov warep
év tH Udadte@vos rrodteia Kai ovx ev TH Pwptrov TONTEVOLEVOY UTOT TAO UN THS UTaTtelas exec ety, éuot dé tavTo Soxei mrabeiv toils pn Kal' wpav exhavelot Kaptrois. ws yap éxeivous Hdéws Opav-res Kai Oavyalovtes ov ypa@vtat, ottws 7 Kdtovos apyatoTpoTria 1d YpdveEY TOAKMY ETruyevOMEVH Biots SvehOopooe nat tovnpois Gear So€av pev elye peyadnv nal Kré€os, ovK évnppoce S€ Tals xpetats Oud Bapos ral péyeBos THs apeTas aovp-petpov toils Kabectaat Katpois. Kal yap avTos ov KEexrALpevns pev HON THS TaTpidos, ®omwep o
Powxkiwv, modu é yetwava Kal sdrov éxyovans,

Soov iotiwy Kat Kkddwv éemiriaBécOar Kai Trapa-oTHvar Tois mAéov Suvapévots TroALTEVodpEVOS, oiaxay € Kai kuBepyncews atrwoDets, Suws péyav ayava TH TUXy TWeptéoTncev. eElrXe pey yap Kal xaTéBare Thv TodtTetay Ot' AdAovsS, morALs Sé Kat Bpadéws Kal ypovm ToAA@ Kal Tapa puKpov EMovoav tepiyevécOa. Sa Katwva al thy Kdtovos apetnv' 4 trapaBdAdopev thy Poxiovos, OU KATA KoLVas OpmoLoTNTAsS, ws ayabaV Kat TOMTLK@Y avdpav' ExTL yap apéAEL Kai avdpeias Stadopa mpos avopeiav, as THs AdKtBiadov pos thy Erapewovdov, cai ppovycews mpos ppovnrm nr ee —

1 Cicero, ud Att. ii. 1, 8, where, however, there is no allusion to Cato's loss of the consulship. Dicit enim his public career for popularity. Indeed, Cicero says it was because he acted as if he lived in Plato's commonwealth, and not among the dregs of Romulus, that he was defeated when he stood for the consulship;! but I think he fared just as fruits do which make their appearance out of season. For, as we look upon these with delight and admiration, but do not use them, so the old-fashioned character of Cato, which, after a long lapse of time, made its appearance among lives that were corrupted and customs that were debased, enjoyed great repute and fame, but was not suited to the needs of men because of the weight and grandeur of its virtue, which were out of all proportion to the immediate times. For his native city was not already prostrate, like that of Phocion, but struggling with great tempest and surge, and though he could only serve her by putting hand to sails and ropes and by supporting men of greater influence, but was repulsed from rudder- sweeps and pilotage, he nevertheless gave Fortune a hard contest. She did, indeed, seize and over- throw the commonwealth by means of other men, but with difficulty, slowly, after a long time, and when it had almost won the day through Cato and the virtue of Cato. And with this virtue we com- pare that of Phocion, though not for their general resemblances, but on the ground that both were good men and devoted to the state. For there is surely a difference between the bravery of one man and that of another, as, for instance, between that of Alcibiades and that of Epaminondas; between the wisdom of one man and that of another, as,

tamquam in Platonis woArrefa, non tamquam in Romuli faece, sententiam.
151

ou, @S THS Beproroxdréous mpos tHhv Aptoteisou, Kat Sixavocvvns 7 pos Sixavocvyny, as THS Nopé.
™ pos THY ’Aqnovdaov. ToUT@V O€ Tov avdpav ai aperal pexX pe TOV TehevTalov Kal aTopov diapopav éva XapaxThpa Kal popdny Kal Npopa KOLVOV nOous ery KEK papevoy expépovown, @orep
lo@ Het PD Hepiyuevou Mpos TO avaTnpov Tob grravOperov Kab T pos TO acpanes Tou av6peiov, Kal THs vmeép addov pev ndenovias, vIrép aAUT@V
dé agoBias, . Kal pos per TO aiax pov evraPeias, 7 pos dé To dixatoy evTovias oUVNpLoG Wévns opvoiws: Hore Nem Tou mavu doyou Sei Oa xabaep opydvou mpos Staxptow Kkal avevpeciv TOY Siahepovter.
IV. To pev ovv Kdtevos @LONOYNTAL yévos ex
AapT pay Draper, as hex Ono eras Poxiova dé
TEKMLALPOMAL Ln TAVTAT ALD eivar syévous ari pov Kat KATAMENTOKOTOS. él yap 7 Ys OS pyow "Td0-peveus, Soducorrotod TAT OS, ovK dv év T@ oye Pravaimros 6 O “Tarepetdou pupia oUvELhoY@s Kal
ELONKOS Kat avTov KaTa THY Suaryevevav waph-Kev, ovd av odTws ehevBepiou Biov Kat owppovos mavdeias peTéaxev Bare THs T1Adtevos ¢ ere pmeupa-KLov @v, VaTepov 5€ THS Eevoxpatous Siar prijs, év ‘Axadnpetg peTacyelv, Kal TOV apiotwy é& apxXns émurmbevpdrav nharns ryeverOau. Doxiwva yap oUTEe yeNaoavTa Tos ovTe KNavoayTa padiws ‘AOnvaioy elev, odd év Baraveto dnpoot-evovTt , Nova dpevon, WS toropnke Aoiprs, ovee ExTOS éxovta THY YElpa THS TmepiBorns, 6 Ore TUYOL mepuSeBAnuévos. émrel KaTa ye THY X@pav Kal 152

PHOCION

between that of Themistocles and that of Aristides; between the justice of one man and that of another, as, between that of Numa and that of Agesilaiis. But the virtues of these men, even down to their ultimate and minute differences, show that their natures had one and the same stamp, shape, and general colour; they -were an equal blend, so to speak, of severity and kindness, of caution and bravery, of solicitude for others and fearlessness for themselves, of the careful avoidance

of baseness and, in like degree, the eager pursuit of justice. Therefore we shall need a very subtle instrument of reasoning, as it were, for the discovery and determination of their differences.
IV. That Cato's lineage, then, was illustrious, is generally admitted, as will be said later; but Phocion's, as I judge, was not altogether ignoble or lowly. For had he been the son of a pestle- maker, as Idomeneus says, then Glaucippus the son of Hypereides, in the speech wherein he collected -countless evil things to say against him, would not have omitted his mean birth; nor would Phocion have lived on so high a plane or enjoyed so sound an education as to have been a pupil of Plato when he was still a stripling, and later a pupil of Xenocrates, in the Academy, and to have cultivated the noblest behaviour from the very beginning. For hardly any Athenian ever saw Phocion in laughter or in tears, or making use of a public bath, as Duris tells us, or holding his hand outside his cloak,—when he wore a cloak. Since in the country, at least, and on his

Tas oTpatelas avuToontos ael Kal yupvos éBabiter, eb pn oyos vmepBaddov ein kal ducKap-TEPNTOV, WATE Kal mailovras On TOUS oT paTevopéevovs avpBordov peydrou TroveicOar yewpavos évdedupévov Paoxiwva.
V. To &é ner T PoonVverTaTOs ay Kat dirav-Opwmoraros amo TOU Tpoawmov dua Eup Boros
epaivero Kat oxvpwrds, | OTE UN padtws ay Twa
jLovov évruxeiv auT@ TOV dovnbov. 610 Kal Xdpnti tote mpos Tas odpis avtod AeyouTs TOV
"AOnvaiwy emuyehovTor, ae Ovdev," elrren, " arn
Upas NehvrrnKer 7 op pus: o 6€ TovUTwY yews TOAAA KAavaaL THY modty TeTrolNKeD. " Opmotws
dé mas Tod Pooxiavos kal o NOyos HY eri xen-oTOUS eUTUX IMATE Kal Sravonpace TWTNPLOS, TPOoTAKTLKHY Twa Kal avotnpav Kal avSvvTov
EXov Bpaxvroyiay. | @S yap o Znveov éreyev ott
dei TOV pidoaopoy els vooy anoBanrovra 7 pogepesdar Thy NéEW, oTwS O Poxiwvos ayos TreioToV ev édaxXiory refer voov elye. Kal mpos TOUTO Eounev ambav J Lp rLos TlovAvevetos elmeiy STL pHTwP ev dpiaros ein Anpoabevns, elmety d€ dewortatos O Pooxiov. as yap 4 Tov
vopic WaTos afia TELOTHY €v OyK@ Bpaxvtatp Stvapmi é EXEL, ote Noryou devvorns edoxer TOA onpaivery am' odiywov. Kal EVTOL Kai avrov WOTE TOV Dooxiovd pact TANpovpevou TOD Gea-

Tpov TepiTrateiy vmro oKNUTY avToyv dvTa Tpos EaUT@O THY Stavoay' ELT OVTOS dé Tevos THY pirwv, ZKET TOME, Poxiov, corKas," "Nal pa tov
Aia," davaz, " TKETTOMAL el Te Suvapas Tov do-you agerciy by pédArAw A€yerv pds "AOnvatovs." 154

campaigns, he always walked without shoes or outer garment, unless the cold was excessive and hard to bear, so that presently his soldiers used to say in jest that it was a sign of severe winter when Phocion wore a cloak.

V. Though his nature was most gentle and most kind, his countenance made him seem forbidding and sullen, so that hardly any one of those who were not on intimate terms cared to converse with him alone. Therefore, when Chares once made the Athenians laugh by speaking of Phocion's frowning brows, " No harm,' said Phocion, "has come to you from this brow of mine; but these men's laughter has cost the city many a tear.'' And in like manner Phocion's language, also, was salutary in its excellent inventions and happy conceits, although it had a brevity which was rather imperious, severe, and un- pleasant. For, as Zeno used to say that a philosopher should immerse his words in meaning before he utters them, so Phocion's language had most mean- ing in fewest words. And this is probably what Polyeuctus the Sphettian had in mind when he said that Demosthenes was a most excellent orator, but Phocion a most powerful speaker. For, as a valuable coin has greatest worth in smallest bulk, so effective speech would seem to indicate much with few words. Indeed, it is said that once upon a time, when the theatre was filling up with people, Phocion himself was walking about behind the scenes lost in thought, and that when one of his friends remarked: " You seem to be considering, Phocion," he replied : " Yes, indeed, I am considering whether I can shorten the speech which I am to deliver to the Athenians."' And

dé Anpoobevns TOV pev adAAwv Katedpovet TON pntope, avig Tapevou dé PDaxiwvos et@det
eve aTpeua T POs TOUS pirovs, «"H TOD emev Aoyou Kors maperTiy." Gdra TOUTO pep lows
7 pos To 9005 avototéov: émel Kal pha Kal veopa
jLOvov avdpos ayabod pupiors évOvuunuact Kat TEPLoooLs av Tippotrov éxet TioTLD.
VI. Néos be « ov XaBpia mpoa eter éauTov T@ oTpaTnyp Kal mapelmero, TOAAG per ets eprrespiay TOV TORE MLK OY apehovpevos, € €ote O€ ep ols érravopOovpevos THVY éKeivou puow dveparov

ovaav Kal axpatov. vwlpos yap av o XaBpias Kal SuaKivntos arArXws év avtois Tois dry eo w
apya kat duerrupovTo TH Oup@ Kat ouvekerim re Tous Opacutarous mrapaBorwrepor, Oa TEp apénet at KaTéoTpeve TOV Biov é éy Xiw TPATOS elo eddcas TH Tpinper Kal _Bralopevos Tos THY am o-Baowv. aapanrns obv dua Kat dSpactnptos o
Pwxiov parvopevos THY TE peXM OLD dvebeppatve TOU XaBpiou, Kat Wad. apnper THY aKALpov ofvTnTa TAS oppiis. o0ev EUpEVT)S ov 0 XaBpias Kat XPNTTOS, nyama Kal T poryev avrTov eml mpd-Eeus Kal yyepovias, yy @ptwov Tovey TOUS "Eddnot, Kal Ta TELTTNS abva aTouoys éxeivep XP@MEVOS.
KaK THS wept Na€ov vaupayias évoma Kal dofay ov puxpay Dwxiwrt TepleTroinae Tov yap evvupou KEpwS am edwnev avT@ THY myepovian, Kad’ 0 Kal THY paxnv ofelay elyev O aryov Kal Kplotv
évroinge Tayelav. mpwTny ody éxeivny vavpaxiav

1 Cf. the Demosthenes, x. d.

Demosthenes, who held the other orators in great contempt, when Phocion rose to speak, was wont to say quietly to his friends: “ Here comes the pruning- knife of my speeches.” ! But perhaps this must be referred to Phocion’s character; since a word or a nod merely from a good man is of more convincing weight than any number of elaborate periods.

VI. When he was a young man, Phocion attached himself to Chabrias the general as a close follower, profiting much thereby in military experience, and sometimes also rectifying that general’s temperament, which was uneven and violent. For though Chabrias was sluggish and hard to move at othe: times, in actual battle his spirit was excited and all on fire, and he would rush on with the boldest at too great a hazard, just as, without doubt, he actually threw away his life at Chios? by being the first to drive his trireme to shore and trying to force a landing. So then Phocion, who showed himself at once safe and active, would put ardour into Chabrias when he delayed, and again would take away the unseasonable intensity of his efforts. Wherefore Chabrias, who was a good-natured and worthy man, made much of him and advanced him to enterprises and commands, making him known to the Greeks, and employing him in most affairs of moment. Especially in the sea-fight off Naxos® he conferred no little name and fame upon Phocion; for he gave him command of the left wing, and here the battle raged hotly and the issue was speedily decided. Accordingly, as this was the first sea-fight which the

2 In 357 B.c. Chios, Rhodes, and Byzantium had revolted from Athens.

8 In 376 B.c. The Athenians defeated the Lacedaemonian fleet and regained the mastery of the sea.

TONS avTH OL aUTHS ayovoapevn THis" EAA noe
peta THY Gdwow, Kal KaTaTVYOvGAa, Tov Te Xa-Bpiav vrepnyamrnoe kai ToD Pwxiwvos ws avdpos nYyEMoviKOD Aoyov Eaxev. evixwy O€ peydroLs pvoTnpioiss Kat Trapetyev oivoyonua Xapias
"AOnvators xa' Exacrov émavtov tH Extn emi déxa Tov Bondpopmtavos.
VII. 'Ex tovtou Aéyetas mwéutrovtos avtov émi
TAS VnoLwTiKas cuvTdeets TOU XaBpiov Kal vads elxoot StddvTos Eelreiy, EL MEV WS TOAELNOOY TEL-jwo.To, peifovos Sety dSuvdpews, eb 5€ @S Tpos TULUAYOUS, -apKely vaiy pilav' Kal TEVTAVTA TH
avtod tpinpe cai SuareyOévta tais modeot Kal
ovyyEVvOpEVvoY TOIS ApYovaty eTLELKaS Kal AapEdas KATATAEVTAL META TOAXWY VEOV, aS aTéaTELAaY of oUmpayot Ta xXpHpwata Tos "AOnvaious Komtfovcas. ov povov o€ Cavta tov XaPpiay Oepa-Tevmv OLETENEL KAL TLUL@V, GANG Kal TENEUTNTAVTOS
aUuTOvU THY TpOTHKOVTWY Kars érrEepedeiTO, Kal Tov maida Krnowirov éBovreto wev avdpa trovety aya0ov, éumAnkrov Sé op@v Kal avaywyov duos ouK amettreyv émravopOovpevos Kal aTroKpUTTTMY TA alayn. wry arak NéyeTat, TapevoxrodvTos ev oTpaTela Til TOU veavioKoU Kal KOTTOVTOS avTOV
épwtnuacw axaipos Kal cvpPovriass oloy érav-opJovpévov Kal mapactpatnyovrtos, elteiv
"?1) XaBpia, XaBpia, peydrdnv yé cou yapev éxtive THs hidias bropévwv cov Tov viov."

Athenians had fought with the Greeks on their own account since the capture of their city,! and as it had succeeded, they made exceeding much of Chabrias, and came to look upon Phocion as a man fit for command, 'They won the victory during the celebration of the great mysteries; and therefore Chabrias used to furnish the Athenians with wine for the festival every year on the sixteenth of the month Boédromion.

VII. Afterwards, we are told, when Chabrias sent him to get their contributions from the islanders and offered him twenty ships, Phocion said that if he was sent to wage war, he needed a larger force, but if to confer with allies, one ship was enough; and after sailing out with his own trireme and discussing matters with the cities and dealing with the magis- trates considerately and in a straightforward manner, he returned with many ships, which the allies sent off with money for the Athenians. And not only while Chabrias was alive did Phocion continue to show him attention and honour, but also after his death he took good care of his relatives, and es- pecially of his son Ctesippus, whom he wished to make a good man; and although he saw that the youth was capricious and intractable, he nevertheless persisted in correcting and covering up his disgrace- tul conduct. Once, however, we are told, when the young man was troublesome to him on an expedi- tion, and plied him with unseasonable questions and advice, like one making corrections and sharing in the command, he cried: “O Chabrias, Chabrias, surely I make thee a large return for thy friendship in enduring thy son.”

1 At the close of the Peloponnesian war (404 B.c.).

3

PLUTARCH’S ee

‘Opa be TOUS Ta KOLWa ™ pac cov: as TOTE » O'nee BOOTED amo KANpov TO o7 par nyLov Kat 0 Biya, Kat TOUS pep héyovras ev 7 byu@ Kai ypddovras pLovop, ov EvBovndos hv Kat "Apia topav kal Anpoobévns Kat AvKodpyos Kal ‘Trrepeidys, AvotreiOny &é Kat Mevecdea kat NewoOevny kai Xdpyra T@ otpatnyel Kal Tohepety avlovras éavTous, éBovreTo THY Tlepuxd€ous Kat A pio ret-Sou Kal Lorwvos ToAtreiav @oOTEP odGKANpOV Kal Sinppooperny € ev apdotv avaraeiv Kat amrodovvar. Kal yap TOV avopay éxeivwv EXATTOS épaiveto KaTa TOV "Apytroyon,!
"Apdortepor, Oeparrwv pev ’Evvadioto Oeoio, kai Movoéwv epatay dapov émiatapevos:
Kal THY Oeov éwpa TONE LY Te Gua Kal TONLTE-Knv ovcav Kal T pocaryopevouerny.
VIII. Otte be cuvTdéas éavrov émrohiTeveTo fev adel mpos eipnyny Kat nouxiay, eo TpaTHYNTE
dé Treia ras ov pLovov TOY Kal EQUTOV, GANA Kal TOV ™ po QUuTOU TTpATHYIAS, ov TapayyéAAwY OvdE
pETLor, Grn’ ovde pevyov ovoe arrobibpac Kav THs TONES Kahovons. om“oroyelTas yap StL WévTe Kal TecoapaKkovta otpatnyias ékaBev ovd’ arak apKatperiots TApaTUxX oY, GAN amrovta, peTamep-

>
Topevwv AvTOV del Kab NELpoTOvOULTwD, dare
Oavyaley tovs ovK ev hpovovvtas Tov Ofjpov Ort, TrELTTA Tod Paxiwvos GVTLKPOVOYTOS AUTO Kal pndev el@OvTos TOTOTE pode mpatavTos mpos yapw, @oTrep aktovat Tovs Bactreis Tois KoNaEL
1 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, ii.4, p. 383 (eiul 8 @ym Oepdarwy

. €pardy).

160

745

PHOCION

He saw that the public men of his day had dis- tributed among themselves as if by lot the work of the general and the orator. Some of them merely spoke before the people and introduced measures,— men like Eubulus, Aristophon, Demosthenes, Ly- curgus, and Hypereides; while such men as Dio- peithes, Menestheus, Leosthenes, and Chabrias advanced themselves by holding the office of general and waging war. He therefore wished to resume and restore the public service rendered by Pericles, Aristides, and Solon, which was equally apportioned in both fields of action. For each of those men showed himself to be, in the words of Archilochus,

“ As well a squire of Enyalius god of war,
As versed in the lovely Muses’ gifts.”
He also saw that the goddess Athena was a goddess of war as well as of statecraft, and was so addressed.

VIII. Having taken this stand, his civil policies were always in favour of peace and quiet; and yet he held the office of general more frequently than any man, and I speak not only of the men of his own time, but also of those who came before him. He did not seek the office or canvass for it; nor, on the other hand, did he flee or run away when his city called him. It is generally admitted, indeed, that he held the office of general forty-five times, although he was not even once present at the election, but was always absent when the people summoned and chose him. Therefore men of little understanding are amazed at the conduct of the Athenian people. For Phocion opposed them more than anybody else, and never said or did anything to win their favour; and yet, just as kings are

161
VOL. VII. M
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

~ : \ ” 2
xpjnocbat pera TO KaTa xELpos Vowp, éxpHTO ovTOS Tos wey Koprvorépots Kat trapots ev Trasdias pépet
n \ N

Snpaywyots, émi 5é Tas dpyas ael vndwv Kal aomovoatwy Tov avaTnpoTaToy Kal PpoviwrTatov éxadvet TOV TOMT@Y Kal povoy 4 padXov Tais
n a /
BovAnceciwv avtTod Kai oppais avtTiraccopevor.
~ \ \ ? a > 4 ve
Vpnopov pev yap ex AcAhay dvayvwobévTos Ott,
A bi > 4 ig 4 J \
TaV adXdov 'APnvaiwy opodpovovytwr, els avnp
4 a / évavtia dpovoin TH ode, TwapedOwv o Paxiwv
’ a > ff e > _\ A ¢ / aperely exeXevoEev, WS AUTOS WY Oo CnTOUMEVOS' ove yap avT@ pndev apéckey TOY TpaTTOMEeVvwn.
érrel 5€ Néywr TroTé yuwpNnv mpos Tov Shpuov ev-Soxiper Kal TdvTas OMarws EWpa TOY AOYoV a7ro-Seyopévous, émeatpadels mpdos Tovs hirous eltrev:
“ Ov bn mov Tt Kaxov A€éyou éwauTov AéANGa ;”
IX. IIpos 8€ Ouciavy tia trav “AOnvaiwy ai-

4 b] J \ al w > v
TOUVTWY ETLOOCELS, KAL TOV AAAwY ETLOLOOVTOY, KAnOels TodrAdKs pn: .“ Tovtous aiteite Tovs
, J \ \ > , 5A b] 4 \
Trovatous éyw 5é aicyuvoimnv av, Et TOUT@ py
amrod.bovs byiv émidoinv,” detEas Kaddcxdréa tov Savetatnv. ws & ovK émavovto Kexpayortes Kai a 4 ed > Cal aA cc? \
KkataRowvtes, Noyov elev avtots ToUTOV' “’Avnp
Secdos emi moreuov éEner, POeyEapévwv Sé xopa\ bd \ e 4 : ed ? \
Kkwv Ta Ora Geis novyalev’ cita avadaBov
addis éEne, Kal POeyyopévwv wWarw bTréctn, Kal TéXos eltrev: ‘ “Tyeis xexpdkecOe pev péytotov ws supposed to listen to their flatterers after dinner has begun, so the Athenians made use of their more elegant and sprightly leaders by way of diversion, but when they wanted a commander they were always sober and serious, and called upon the severest and most sensible citizen, one who alone, or more than the rest, arrayed himself against their desires and impulses. Indeed, when an oracle from Delphi was read out in the assembly, declaring that when the rest of the Athenians were of like mind, one man had a mind at variance with the city, Phocion came forward and bade them seek no further, since he himself was the man in question ; for there was no one but he who disliked everything they did. And when, as he was once delivering an opinion to the people, he met with their approval, and saw that all alike accepted his argument, he turned to his friends and said: “Can it possibly be that I am making a bad argument without knowing it?” IX. The Athenians were once asking contribu- tions! for a public sacrifice, and the rest were con- tributing, but Phocion, after being many times asked to give, said: “ Ask from these rich men; for I should be ashamed to make a contribution to you before 1 have paid my debt to this man here,” pointing to Callicles the money-lender. And once when his audience would not cease shouting and crying him down, he told them this fable. “A coward was going forth to war, but when some ravens croaked, he laid down his arms and kept quiet ; then he picked them up and was going forth again, and when the ravens croaked once more, he stopped, and said at last: ‘You may croak with all

1 Cf, the Alcibiades, x. 1.

U 9 a“ \ 5] 4 999 Ul 4
Suvaroy, é€wov O€é ov yevoedOe. Tar. é€ TrOTE
A , a trav "AOnvaiwv éEayayety autov émi tovs TroXe-
‘\
pious KeXNEVOVTY, ws & ovK éBovrAETO, Setdov Kal
wv > a, (<3 # e a 9 9
dvavdpov amoxadovvtav, “Ovte wpeis, elrrer, ss 28 Si f) a 6 t ” 2» \ ff 4
éue Ouvace Troincat Oapoanréov ote éyw Upas detdovs. ov pny GAN iopev GAAnAOUs.” ev Sé Kaipois émiopanréot tpayuvopévou tod Snpou mpos avTov apodpa Kal THs otpatnyias evOvvas dma.toovros, “ XwOeinte, elev, “@ paxaptot, TpO@TOV. E7TEL OE TTONELOUYTES eV HOaY TaTreLVol
Kat tepioecis, yevoméevns Sé eipnvns eOpacuvoyto Kal KkateBowv Tod Dwxiwvos ws adnpnpévou THv
vinnv autov, “ Evruyeite,” elmev, “ éxovtes \ PINE e aA ? \ 4 ? , oTparnyov eidoTa vas: eel madar dv aTwro-bf a n a nerte. Tois 5€ Botwrois ov Bovropévwv avTtav
/ a A
duxalecOar epi THs Xwpas, AAA TrodEpeElD,
4 \ A
auveBovreve bia THV Adywr, ev ols eiot KpEiTTOUS, py Sta THY StrrwD, év ols ciowv Arrous, wayecOar.
Aéyovta Oé avrov ov Tpoctepévwy OvdSE UTopeEvor-
’ , ? sy ¢ fA \ ,

twy axovev, “ Eye,’ elev, ‘upets & pn Bov-Aopat Trovety Bidoacbar Svvacbe, rAéyew Se & py
ef Tapa yvounv ovx avayKdcete.” tav Sé aVTLTONTEVOLEVWY avT@® pyTopwv Anpoabévous
A > 4 “? a _s ’ aA
pev evrrovtos, “’Amroxrevodoi ae AOnvaia, Pw-4 A A 9 ed 66 \ bé A A ”
Kiwov, dv pavoow, elie “dé dé, Av cwhpovace
TIloAvevatov dé tov Xdyttiov opay év Kavpatt
4 a ? , a \
oupBovrevovta tots ‘AOnvaiots rodepety mmpos Pirurov, celta vm’ doOpatos ToANOD Kal idpo-Tos, ate 57 Kal Uméptayuy dvta, WoANaKIs erip-144
46

PHOCION

your might, but you shall not get a taste of me.’”’ And at another time, when the Athenians urged him to lead forth against the enemy, and called him an unmanly coward because he did not wish to do so, he said:  Ye cannot make me bold, nor can I make you cowards. However, we know one another.” And again, in a time of peril, when the people were behaving very harshly towards him and demanding that he render up accounts of his generalship, “ My good friends,” said he, “ make sure of your safety first.” Again, when they had been humble and timorous during a war, but then, after peace had been made, were getting bold and denouncing Phocion on the ground that he had robbed them of the victory, “Ye are fortunate,” said he, “in having a general who knows you; since otherwise ye had long ago perished.” Once, too, when the people were unwilling to adjudicate with the Boeo- tians a question of territory, but wanted to go to war about it, he counselled them to fight with words, in which they were superior, and not with arms, in which they were inferior. Again, when he was speaking and they would not heed or even consent to hear him, he said: “Ye can force me to act against my wishes, but ye shall not compel me to speak against my judgement.” And when Demos- thenes, one of the orators in opposition to him, said to him, “The Athenians will kill thee, Phocion, should they go crazy,’ he replied: “ But they will kill thee, should they come to their senses.” Again, when he saw Polyeuctus the Sphettian, on a hot day, counselling the Athenians to go to war with Philip, and then, from much panting and sweating, since he was really very corpulent, frequently gulp-

165

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

popowvra tov vdatos ““A€wov,” &dy, “ TrovT@
4 e a , \ ‘ mic revoavtas vas YndicacBar Tov Todepor, Sv ti oleaOe trounce ev TO Owpant nal TH aoTrid, TOV TOAELLODV eyyUS OVTMV, OTE AEyOU POS Upas

& éoxerrrat xivduvever mrviynvat;” tod 6¢ Auxovp-you tjoA\a BAadodnua mpos avtov elmovtos év éxkrnoia, Kal mpos aac Ott, Séxa TOV TOALtav éEartouvtos ‘AXeEdvdpov, cuveBovrevev éx-Sodvat, eime: “ TloAXNa eym cuuBeBovrevKa xara
N la 7 6) b b) 4 ld ”
Kai cupdépovta TovTols, GAN ov TreiMovTai pot.
X."Hv 8€ tis “ApytBiadns émixadrovpevos Aaxouorns, me@yovd te Kaberpévos vrepdhuh
, / wn 9 N ,
peyéeOet Kal TpiBwva hopav dei cat cxv0pwralov:
a) b] “A 4 e , 9
tovtov év BovrAn OopuRovpevos 0 Pwxiwy érre-“ a / , bu \ 4 e
KarelTo TH AOYO wdpTuY dua Kai BonBov. as dé
. a \ a
dvaoTas éxeivos & pos xYdpiv jv tots ‘AOnvaiors 4 e 4 > a a / oct
auvveRovreverv, arapevos avtov Tav yeveiwv: ‘°O,
"A 10 ” 9 66 , @ > 9 / ri pxeBiddn, elie, “tL ody oUK arrEKEtpu;
’"Aptotoyeitovos 5€ Tov auKopavTov TodEpLKOU
pev dvtos év tais éxxAnotias Kal twapokvvovtos
9 \ \ , \ a ? \ a ,
émt tas mpakes tov Shpov, ev 5€ TO KaTadoyo 4 > \ / \ 4
mpoceNOovtos émi Baxtnpia Tw oKEedXn KaTade-Seuévov, ToppwHev avTov amd Tov Bnpatos towy
e / > /f oc 4 \ ? 4 0 Dwxiwy avexpaye ‘‘Ipade cat Apiotoyeitova
A , 99 @ 4 @ \
yodov Kal Tovnpov. aote Oavydlew Straws Kal
omobey Tpayvs odTws avnp Kal oxvOpwros éxT1-ATO THY TOD KpnoTov Tpocnyopiav.
4
“Bore 5é, ola, yaretrov, od pay advvaror,

ing down water, Phocion said: “It is meet that ye should be persuaded by this man to go to war; for what do ye think he would do under breastplate and shield, when the enemy were near, if, in making you a premeditated speech, he is in danger of choking to death?” At another time Lycurgus heaped much abuse upon him in the assembly, and above all because, when Alexander demanded ten of the citizens of Athens,! Phocion counselled their surrender ; Phocion, however, merely said: “I have given this people much good and profitable counsel, but they will not listen to me.”

X. There was a certain Archibiades, nicknamed Laconistes, because, in imitation of the Spartans, he let his beard grow to an extravagant size, always wore a short cloak, and had a scowl on his face. Phocion was once stormily interrupted in the council, and called upon this man for testimony and support in what he said. But when the man rose up and gave such counsel as was pleasing to the Athenians, Phocion seized him by the beard and said: “O Archibiades, why, then, didst thou not shave thyself?” Again, when Aristogeiton the public informer, who was always warlike in the assemblies and tried to urge the people on to action, came to the place of muster leaning on a staff and with both legs bandaged, Phocion spied him from the tribunal when he was afar off, and cried out: “ Put down Aristogeiton, too, as lame and worthless.” So that one might wonder how and why a man so harsh and stern got the surname of The Good.

But though it is difficult, it is not impossible, I

1 Cf. chapter xvii. 2 f.

Ld 9 \ » \ > A eg e
@omrep olvov, Kal avOpwrov Tov avToy ndvy dua
\ > \ 4 4 lé
kal avotnpop elvat: Kaatrep Erepo Wary, hawo-
” Ul A
pevor yAvKeis, andéotatot Tois xpwpévors eiol \ , , ‘ e la
kat BraRepwrator. Kattoe daciv ‘Trepetdnv
a \ nA a
Wore eiteiv mpos Tov Shpov, ““Avdpes *AOnvaior,
A a a 4 ? “A
[1] OKOTELTE LOVOY EL TLKPOS, GAN EL TPOiKG Elpt sf “A / la aA

TLKpOS, WoTEp TH WrEoveELa povoy éTrayOeis Kal ANumNpovs GvTas, ovXl pmaAXOY, Boot pos DBpiv
f a ? \ A / \ a“ cat POovov 4h opynv 7 piroverxiay twa ypavrat
a lA Ud / \ /
T@ Svvacbai, rovtovs SedtoTwy Kal mpoBarrope-
A A /
vov TOY TOMMY. PwxKiwy towvy ExOpa peév
A aA “” 4
OVSEVA TOV TONTOAV KAKS ETroincev, OVOE EVvO-
> 4 ? >@ 4 , A 3 4
putev éxOpov' add’ Soov de povoy TaV EenoTtapeé-
a ,
vov ols émpartrev uTép THS Tatpidos KareEava-
A 4
oTnvat tpaxvs ov Kal ducexBiactos Kal amapai-TNTOS, ELS TOY AAXOV Biov evpevn Tact Kal KoLVOV
kat gdtravOpwrov éavToy mapeixev, WoTE Kal mraicact BonOeiv cat xuvduvevovot ovvetetate-
a a] 4
aOat Trois Suaghopors. éeyxaXovvtwy dé Tav didwv OTL TOVNnP@ TLL KpLVOMeV@ GUvElTE, TOUS XPN-
‘ ” \ a , ? 4
atous edn un Seta Bar BonBeias. “Aptoroyeitovos 5é€ Tov cuxoddvrou peta THY KaTadiKkny Tréppay-
4 a ,
Tos Kal denBevros éNOeiv mpos avTOY, UTaKOvaas
3 , > \ 4 > > 7 \ A
éBadifev cig To Seaopwryplov: ovK ewvTwy O€ TAV
: 73 9 4 9 9 66 @ , “A A
dirwv, “’Edaoate, elmev, “ @ paxdpioe tod yap
” 4 9 4 / ”?
dv tts HOtov Apiotoyeitove cupBarou;
XI. Kal pny of ye cvppayor Kat o1 vyowmras 4 tous "AOnvndev amoatodous éTépov pev ex7rdEov-
A / 4
TOS OTpAaTHYOU TrOAEuioUs vouiCovTes EppayvuVTO

think, for the same man, like the same wine, to be at once pleasant and austere; just as others, on the contrary, appear to be sweet, but are most un- pleasant to those who use them, and most injurious. And yet we are told that Hypereides once said to the people: “Do not ask, men of Athens, merely whether I am bitter, but whether I am paid for being bitter,” as if the multitude were led by their avarice to fear and attack those only who are troublesome and vexatious, and not rather all who use their power to gratify their insolence or envy or wrath or contentiousness. Phocion, then, wrought no injury to any one of his fellow citizens out of enmity, nor did he regard any one of them as his enemy ; but he was harsh, obstinate, and inexorable only so far as was necessary to struggle successfully against those who opposed his efforts in behalf of the country, and in other relations of life showed himself well-disposed to all, accessible, and humane, so that he even gave aid to his adversaries when they were in trouble or in danger of being brought to account. When his friends chided him for plead- ing the cause of some worthless man, he said that good men needed no aid. Again, when Aristogeiton the public informer, who was under condemnation, sent and asked him to come to him, he obeyed the summons and set out for the prison; and when his friends sought to prevent him, he said: ‘“ Let me go, my good men; for where could one take greater pleasure in meeting Aristogeiton ?”’

XI. And certainly the allies and the islanders regarded envoys from Athens under the conduct of any other general as enemies, barricading their 169

aff

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Teiyn Kal ALpévas aTrexwvyvaay Kal KareKoptCov
aTo THS Ywpas eis TAs TONES BooKkhpata Kal
avdparoda Kal yuvaixas Kal raiéas: et 8€ Daxiov Hyoito, Toppw vavoly idiars atavt@vtes éotehavwpévor nal Yaipovtes ws avTOvS KaTHYOD.
XII. Tlapadvopévov Sé es tHv EvRorav tod
Dirimrov Kal Siva éx Makedovias d:aBiBa-Covros Kal Tas ToAELs OiKEeLoupévou Ota TUpavYwr, TIAourdpyou Sé tod ‘Eperptéws xadodvtos Tovs
"AOnvaious Kal Seouévou tyv vijcov ékeréoOae KatadapBavoyerny vo Tod Maxedovos, arecta-
An TTpATHYOS Oo Poxiwy Eyov Sdvapuv ov TONAIY,
¢ “A 3 a e b
OS TOY éxel TUaTHGOLEVOY ETOLLWS TPOS AUTO.
evpwy 5é mpodotayv aravta pecta Kai vocodvTa cat Siopwpuvypéva Swpodoxiais ets xivduvoy peyav KatéoTn Kai tia AOhov yapadpa Babeia tavV
mep) tas Tapivas émimédoy amoxpuTTopevov KataraBov ovveiyev év TOVT@ Kal TUVEKpaTEL TO paxiuweotaroy THs Suvdpews. tov 5é atdKTov Kal Addwv Kal Trovnpov SiadidpacKkovtwy ex Tov
oTpatovédov Kal arroxwpovvTwy éxéXevcey ape-Ney TOUS Hyemovasy Kal yap évtadOa duaxpyorous wire atakias écecBar nai BraBepovs Tots paxopuevots, KaKkel ToLavTa auveldotas avtois Hrtov avtov KataBoncecOat Kal pn wavy cuKo-pavTnoery.

XIII. ‘Os 8 errnecav ot moréusot, KeXevoas év tots Sols atpeuety axpt Av abros ohayiaonta, Treio SétpeBe xpovov Svorepo@v 7 BovAopevos éyyuTépw Tovs oAveulous eéemaondcacbar. S10 mpa@tov pev 6 Ildovrapxos oldpevos azrodereay 170

747

PHOCION

gates, obstructing their harbours, and bringing into their cities from the country their herds, slaves, women and children; but whenever Phocion was the leader, they went far out to meet him in their own ships, wearing garlands and rejoicing, and conducted him to their homes themselves.

