XII. When Philip was stealing into Euboea and bringing a force across from Macedonia and making the cities his own by means of tyrants, and when Plutarch the Eretrian called upon the Athenians and begged them to rescue the island from its occupation by the Macedonian, Phocion was sent out as general with a small force,' in the belief that the people of the island would rally readily to his aid. But he found the whole island full of traitors, disaffected, and honeycombed with bribery, and was therefore in a position of great peril. So he took possession of a crest of ground which was separated by a deep ravine from the plains about Tamynae, and on this assembled and held together the best fighting men of his force. To the disorderly and worthless triflers who ran away from the camp and made their way home he bade his officers give no heed, for in the camp their lack of discipline would make them use- less and harmful to the fighting men, while at home their accusing consciences would make them less liable to cry down their commander, and would keep them entirely from malicious accusations.

_ XIII. When the enemy came up against him, he ordered his men to remain quietly under arms until he should have finished sacrificing, and then waited a considerable time, either because the omens were bad, or because he wished to draw the enemy nearer. Therefore, to begin with, Plutarch, who

1 In 350 B.c. 171

Ps

2

a4

PLUTARCH’’S LIVES

Kal KQTOKVELY EXELvOV Spaye peta trav eévwv: érretta TOUTOY LOOVTES ot tamets OvK EkapTepnaay, GAN’ HAravvoy evVOUs eis TOUS TOAEpioUS aovYTA-KTOL Kal oTropddes €x TOD oTpaToTédou TpoahEpopevol. vorccopevery dé TeV TPOTOV AT AVTES éoKe-ddcOnoav Kal o TAovrapyos épuye: Kal TO Xapace m poo pi€avres Evol TOV TONE LLeOV €KKO-TEV em etp@VTO Kal Siacm av as amravTov Kekpa-THKOTES. ev TOUT@ S€ TOV Lep@Y yevopéevor, TOUS poev evOus éx TOU oTparom@édov mpooTecovTes ot “AOnvaior Tpémovat Kal cataBdaddovar Tous
TELE TOUS mepl Tois epupact devyovtas, o 5é Poxiwv ty pev Parayya wpocétakev ed edpevery dvadapBdvoveay apa Kal mpoo EXOMEDNY TOUS
év TH guyn ™ poTepov Siac mapevtas, avtos 6€ TOUS eTrUNEKTOUS EX ov éveBane Tous Tohepiors.
Kat paxns KapTEpas yevopévns TrayTes pev éxOvpos Hyovicayto kal apetdas, Odrros dé 0 Kuvéov Kat Praveos) Tlorvpndous qept ayrov TeTarype-vot TOY oT parhyov jpiarevoay. ov pny GNA Kal Kreoparns aE tov meio TOU Tapéaxev éautov év éxelvy Hh paxn. TOUS yap immrets AVAKANOUPEVOS ex THS TpOTHS kat Bow cat Staxehevopevos Kw-duvevovtt TO oT pPATHY® BonGeiv, émroinaey avaatpépavras émrupp@a at TO VIKNMA TOV OTTALTODV.
"Ex tTovrou Tov TE TTAovrapyxov efeBanrev ex THs "Epetpias, kat Zapnrpa ppovptov eo eT b-KaLlpoTaron, 7 padiora cuvehavveTat TO TAATOS eis Bpayv Sudlopa THS vig ov ohuyyopuerns éxa-Tepwbev tais OaXdooais, doous éda Bev aly wanre-TOUS “EXAnvas adie, poBndeis TOUS pytopas TOV "AOnvaiov, jut) 1 POS opynv te Budowvrat Tov Sjpoyv ayvwpovijcat TEept avTous.
172

thought that Phocion’s delay was due to cowardice, sallied forth with his mercenaries. Next, the horse-men, catching sight of Plutarch, could not restrain themselves, but rode at once into the enemy, hurry- ing out of the camp in a disorderly and scattered fashion. The foremost of them were conquered, and then all of them dispersed and Plutarch took to flight, while some of the enemy gained the ramparts and tried to cut them away and destroy them, sup- posing themselves to be entirely victorious. But at this point the sacrifices were completed, and the Athenians, bursting out of their camp, routed their assailants and slew most of them as they fled among the entrenchments. ‘Then Phocion ordered his phalanx to halt for the reception and support of the troops which had been scattered in the previous flight, while he himself with his picked men fell upon the main body of the enemy. A fierce battle ensued, in which all the Athenians fought with spirit and gallantry ; but Thallus the son of Cineas and Glaucus the son of Polymedes, whose post was at their general's side, bore away the palm. However, Cleophanes also did most valuable service in that battle. For, by calling back the cavalry from their flight and exhorting them with loud cries to succour their general in his peril, he made them turn back and confirm the victory of the men-at-arms.

After this, Phocion expelled Plutarch from Eretria, took possession of Zaretra, a fortress most advantagéously situated where the island is reduced to its narrowest width by the sea, which hems it in on both sides, and released all the Greeks whom he had taken prisoners. For he was afraid that the orators at Athens might drive the people, in some fit of anger, to treat them with cruelty.

173

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XIV. 'Evei 5€ tatdra Stampakdpevos amehd U \ \ > / e , Trevcev 0 Daoxiorv, rayv pév érroOnoay ot cup-payor THY XpnoToTnTa Kal Sixarocvvny auto, Tayv bé éyvwoav ot AOnvaio: thy éutretpiav Kal
@¢s a~ 3% & c € \ > 9» a > Aa 2 \ popmnv tov avdpos. o yap pet exeivov éXOwv ETL
\ 4 \ ef > 4 ed
Ta mpdypata Modogads obTws érrodéunoey WaTE
Kal Cov adros brroyeiptos yevésOas Tois TONELMLOLS.
3 A \ 4 a , A e '4
émrel O€ peydAa Tals éArrict Trepivow@y o PirsTrTos eis "EXAHowovTov HAGE pera Taans THS Suvapews, e , ? x» A \ t 4 \
a@s Xeppovyncoy év tavt@ Kai IlépwOov éEwv Kat Bulavriov, oppnpévorv Sé Tov' AOnvaiwy Bonbeiv of pyTopes Hywvicavto Tov Xdpyta otpatyyov amoctannvat, Kal mwrevaas éxeivos ovdéev aEtov
a / 4 2 Q\ e / 9Q/
Ths Suvdpews Empatrev, ovdé ai roves edéxoVTO
.' Ul > b] e¢ A An 9 A TOV oTOAOV, AAN VTOTTOS WY Trac EeTAVATO xenpatilopevos amo TOV cuppaywY Kal KaTadpovovpevos vrd THY TrodEpiov, O bé SHpuos VITO TOV pnTopey TrapoEvvopmeEvos NyavaKTEL Kal METEla A 4 / \ 4 >
voet Tois Bufavriows wéuras tHv Bondecav, ava-aotas 0 Doxiwv elev Sti Set py Tois atictovow opylter Oar Tay ovppdywyv, GAA TOls aTLTTOU-pévots TOV oTpatnyav: ‘‘OdroL yap bas Trotovat gpoBepovs Kai tois yopis vudv calerBat py Suvapevots.”

e A “A
Kun bels obv 0 Sipos 76 Tod AOyou Kal peTa-Teawy éKéAcvey avTov exeivoy érépav mpocda-Bovra Sivamw Bonbeiv trois cuppdyots eis TOV ‘EAX 4 A ? € \ > , N
nomovTov: 0 peyioTny pony émolinoe pos
174
748

PHOCION

XIV. After these things had been accomplished, Phocion sailed back home, and then the allies speedily felt the absence of his probity and justice, and speedily did the Athenians recognize the experience and vigour which had been shown by him. For his successor in command, Molossus, conducted the war in such a way as actually to fall alive into the hands of the enemy. And now Philip, cherishing great anticipations, went to the Hellespont with all his forces,! expecting to get the Chersonesus, and at the same time Perinthus and Byzantium, into his power. The Athenians were eager to give aid to their allies, but their orators strove successfully to have Chares sent out as commander, and he, after sailing thither, did nothing worthy of the force under his orders, nor would the cities even receive his armament into their harbours. On the contrary, he was held in suspicion by all of them, and wandered about exacting money from the allies and despised by the enemy, so that the people of Athens, instigated by their orators, were incensed at him, and repented of having sent aid to the Byzantians. Then Phocion rose in the assembly and declared that they must not be angry at their allies who showed distrust, but at their generals who were distrusted ; “ For these,” said he, “make you to be feared even by those who can be saved only by your help.”

Accordingly, moved by his words, the people changed their minds again and ordered him to take another force and go himself to the help of their allies on the Hellespont ;2 a commission which con- tributed more than anything else to the salvation of

1 In 340 B.c. 2 In 339 B.c.

4 70 owOhvar 7o Bufavriov. fv pev yap 757

peydrn Soka tod Paxiwvos: eet b€ nai Aéwr,} avnp Bufavtiwy mpa@tos apetn xal Te Poxiovs yeyovas ev "Axadnueia ouvyOns, avedé—ato tHv miatty UTép avTOD TpOS THY TONAL, OVK elacaY
é&w stpatotrededcat Bovropevor, adr’ avoiEavtes Tas muAas édéEavto Kal KatéwEay éavtois Tovs
"AOnvaious, ov povov aveykAnTous Tais Svaitrats Kal aoppovas, GAXa Kal mpoOvpotatous éy Tots ay@ou Sia THY TiatL Yyevomévous. odTH péV oO @idirmos é&érrece tov ‘EXXnotortov ToTE Kal cateppovndn, Sox@v amayos Tis elvat Kal dvavTayouotos, 60 6€ Daxiwv Kxai vads tivas elrev avrov Kal gdpovpovpévas Troves avérdaBe, Kat moAAayoh: Tis xYwpas atoBaces ToLlovpevos érop0e Kal Katétpexe, mEX pl OU Tpavpata AaBov vTo TaV TpoaBonOovvTwy améT eve.
XV. Tav 6 Meyapéwv érixaroupévwr xpvda, doBovpevos 6 Paxiwy tovs Bowwtovs un mpoaia-Oopevor POdowot tHv BonBeav, éxxdnotay cuv7-yayev éwOev, Kal mpocayyeiAas Ta Tapa TwV Meryapéwy tois "AOnvaiors, ws éreyrndicarto, TH canmiyyt onunvas evOvs amo THs éxxdAnoias Wyyev avtovs ta Oda AaBovtas. SeEapévwr 5é tov Meyapéwv mpodvpws thv te Nicaray érei-yice, Kal Sta pécou oxédrAn Svo mpos TO érrivetov
1 xa Aéwy Sintenis’ correction of the MSS. KAéwy ; Bekker has Aéwy, the correction of Wachsmuth.

1 See the Nicias, xxii. 3.

Byzantium. For already Phocion was held ih high repute there ; and when Leon? also, a man who was first among the Byzantians for virtue, and had been a familiar companion of Phocion in the Academy, went surety for him with the city, they would not suffer him to go into camp outside the city, as he wished, but threw open their gates and received the Athenians into close companionship with themselves. This mark of confidence caused the Athenians to be not only discreet and blameless in their general conduct, but also most spirited in the struggles for the city’s defence. In this way Philip was expelled from the Hellespont at this time and brought into contempt, although men had thought there was no fighting or contending with him at all; moreover, Phocion captured some of his ships and recovered cities which he had garrisoned. He also landed in many parts of Philip’s territory and plundered and overran it, until he was wounded by those who rallied to its defence, and sailed back home.

XV. The people of Megara once made a secret appeal to Athens for help,? and Phocion, fearing that the Boeotians might get early knowledge of the appeal and anticipate Athens in sending help, called an assembly early in the morning and an- nounced to the Athenians the message received from Megara. Then, as soon as the requisite decree had been passed, he ordered the trumpeter to give the signal and led them, under arms, directly from the assembly. The Megarians received him eagerly, and he enclosed Nisaea ? with a wall, built two long walls

2 Against a faction in the city which would have delivered it into the power of Philip. The date of these events is un- certain (perhaps 344-343 B.C.).

3 The sea-port of Megara, about a mile away.

J \ ~ be 4 \ A ~ , aro TOD dares eveBanre, Kal curvy we TH OaratTy
ca A ~ , 3 ,
THV TONY, WATE TOV KATA YHV TONEMLLWY OALYOY
, fol a 76n ppovrilovaay éEnptncOas Tav "APnvaiwr.
wv A ‘6
XVI. “Hén 6é wpos Didurrrov éxtreToA\cuwpe-YOV TAVTATAGL, Kal OTPATHY@VY avTOD MN Trap-OvTos éETEpwv emt TOY TOAELOY NONLEVOV, WS KATE-TAEVTEY ATO TOV VHTwY, TepaTov pev ErreOe TOY
A n A ,
Sjpov eipnuixas Exovtos tov Pirimov Kai go-
, ‘ , A
Bovpévov tov kivduvov iaxvpas déyecOar Tas
4 , a n
Siadvoels’ Kai TLVOS aYTLKpovaaVTOS aUT@ TAY
, a ,
etwPotwy xudwvbeicbar wept thy “Hdaiav cai

“A N > , “Se de a @ ouvkodavtTeiv, Kat evTrovTos, v 0€ TOALGS, w
A Doxiwv, atotpérayv *AOnvaiovs bn Ta Ora
dua yetpav Exovtas;” “"Eywye,’ ele, “ kai TavTa OG ee 4 \ v 2 AN “A ? 4 be elO@s OTL TrONé“OU peV OVTOS eyw God, ELpHUNS Oé
, A J A » 99 e é > 4 @
yevouerns ov éeuov ap—eas. ws 6 ovKk emreGer, 3 > e 4 bd] 4 rf e
GXr o AnpooBévns éexpate: KeXevwWY ws TrOPpw-
4 A 3 A , , \. 3 ,
Tato TAS ArTiKns OécOar paxyny tovs AOnvatous, 66 70 A 33 bY 4 ‘cc \ A , @ A Tay, én, “pn Tov paywopela cKoTaper,
a A GANA TAS ViKHTwWLEV. OUTW yap ~oTAaL paKpay
A \
O TOAELOS, NTTwWpmévots 5é Wav aei detvoy éyyvs mTdpectt. yevouerns 5€ THS ATTns! Kal Tov JopvBoToav Kai vewtepitotav év adorer® Tov
, fo] al
Xapidnuov érxovtwv ért To Bjwa Kal oTparnyeiv
A
aftovvray, épokynOncav ot Bértictoe Kal thy éF
b) , U \ ¥ > A 4 4
Apetov mayou BovAny éyovtes ev T@ SHu@ Se0-
1 sis fr7rns Bekker, with CF®: frrns.
2 év &ore: Coraés and Bekker have ray év &ore, after Stephanus.
178

down to the sea-port from Megara, and thus united the city with the sea, so that she need now pay little heed to enemies on land and could be in close connection with Athens by sea.

XVI. Presently! the relations between Athens and Philip were altogether hostile, and, in Phocion’s absence, other generals were chosen to conduct the war. But when Phocion returned with his fleet from the islands, to begin with, he tried to persuade the people, since Philip was peaceably inclined and greatly feared the peril of war, to accept the terms of settlement which he offered. And when one of those who haunted the law-courts in the capacity of public informer opposed him, and said, “ Canst thou dare, O Phocion, to divert the Athenians from war when they are already under arms?” ‘I can,” said he, “and that, too, though I know that while there is. war thou wilt be under my orders, but when peace has been made I shall be under thine.’ When, however, he could not prevail, but Demosthenes carried the day and was urging the Athenians to join battle with Philip as far from Attica as possible, “ My good Sir,” said Phocion, “let us not ask where we can fight, but how we shall be victorious. For in that case the war will be at a long remove; but wherever men are defeated every terror is close at hand.’ But when the defeat came,? and the turbulent and revolutionary spirits in the city dragged Chari- demus to the tribunal and demanded that he be made general, the best citizens were filled with fear ; and with the aid of the council of the Areiopagus in the assembly, by dint of entreaties and tears,

1 In 340 B.c.

2 In 338 B.c., at Chaeroneia, where Philip defeated the allied Greeks and put an end to their independence.

pevol Kat SaxpvovTes pmoAls Etretcay émiTpéyrat T@ Dwxiwve THY Tov.
‘O 86 tTHv peéev GAXnV Tod Dirdimmov wortetav cat diravOpwriav weto Seiv mpocdséxesOar: An-peddov 8é ypdwpavtos Strws 4 ToALS peTeXOL THS KOWAS ELpnYNnS KaL TOU avvedptov Tois “EAAnawy, ovuK ela TPO TOD Yyvavat Tiva PirdiTTos avTO yevéoBat Tapa Tay ‘EAAnvev akioce: kpatnOeis
dé tH yvoun b1a Tov Katpov, ws evOus Ewpa Tors
"AOnvaiovs petapeXopévous, Ott Kal Tpinpets Eder mapéyew TO Piditr@ xal inmeis, “ Tadta,” épn, “hoBovpevos nvavriovpny: érel 56 cuveé-Geade, det un Bapéws dépery unde advpeiy, peyvnfévous Ott Kal of Tpoyovor TroTé péy ApyovrTes, mote d€ apyopuevolt, Karas Sé audhotepa tadta TOLOUVTES KAL THY TOALY Eowaay Kal Tous “EX-Anvas.” Dirdiamouv Sé amoPavovtos evayyéNia Ovew tov Shwov ovK cla: Kal yap ayevves elvat emixaiperv, Kal THY év Xatpaveig mapatatawevny mpos avrovs Suvayiy évt ow@pate povoy éXdTTMw yevéo Oat.
XVII. Anpoobévous S€é NotdopobvtTos Tov ’AXé-Eavdpov 76 tpocdyovta tais OnBars Edn: “ SyeTre, Tir7 eOérers epeOCéuev dyptov avdpa cat do&ns peyarns opeyopuevov; 7) BovNer trupKaias THALKAUTNS OvoNS eyyUs pitticat? THY Tod;
1 Sirloa: Bryan’s correction of the MSS. fipa: (to hurl), which Coraés and Bekker retain.

1 The congress of Greek states summoned by Philip to meet at Corinth. It voted for war against Persia under the leadership of Philip.

they persuaded them at last to entrust the city to the guidance of Phocion.

In general, Phocion thought that the policy and kindly overtures of Philip should be accepted by the Athenians ; but when Demades brought in a motion that the city should participate with the Greeks in the common peace and in the congress,! Phocion would not favour it before they found out what demands Philip was going to make upon the Greeks. His opinion did not prevail, owing to the crisis, and yet as soon as he saw that the Athenians were re- penting of their course, because they were required to furnish Philip with triremes and horsemen, " This is what I feared," said he, " when I opposed your action ; but since you agreed upon it, you must not repine or be dejected, remembering that our an- cestors also were sometimes in command, and some- times under command, but by doing well in both these positions saved both their city and the Greeks.' And on the death of Philip,? he was opposed to the people's offering sacrifices of glad tidings; for it was an ignoble thing, he said, to rejoice thereat, and the force which had been arrayed against them at Chaeroneia was diminished by only one person.

XVII. Again, when Demosthenes was heaping abuse upon Alexander, who was already advancing against Thebes, Phocion said: "'Rash one, why dost thou seek to provoke a man who is savage,' 3 and is reaching out after great glory? Canst thou wish, when so great a conflagration is near, to fan the city into flame? But I, who am bearing

2 In 336 B.c. See the Demosthenes, chapter xxii.

* Odyssey, ix. 494, Odysseus, to a companion, of Polyphe- mus the Cyclops.

> a \ GNX nets ovdé Bovropévots atrodécOat TovTots émitpéirouev, of Sta TovTo oTpaTnyely vTrope-99 e 1 2? , € An \ ¢ vovtes. @s O€ amTwr@reLcav ai OABar nai o "AnréEavdpos éEnteito tous mept Anpuoobévny nai

le) € Avxotpyov Kati “Trrepeidny nat Xapidnpov, 7 dé éxxAnoia mpos éxeivoy améBreTrev, ovopacti
, , > sf \ a“ ‘é
ToNAaKls KadoUpEVOS avertn Kat ToOY diriov
é&va TapacTnodpevos, @ waddicTa ypwpevos dieTé-Net Kal wiaTevwv Kal dayarra@v, “Eis totaita,” ” ESN , e , o> » epy, “‘ THY TOALY OUTOL TAPAYNOKYactY WaT EyWYE, av Nixoxréa tts tovTov éEarrH, Sidovar Kedevow.
TO fev yap avTos UTép Dua@v ardvtTwv atroOavetv
> , A 9 na VA 9 “~ 439 = evTuyiay adv éuavtov Ocipnv. ére@ Sé,” elcrev, “avdpes “AOnvaiot, nai tovs é« OnBav Sevpo
, > a \ \ / 4 a
mepevyotas, apxer S€ Tas OnBas Kraiew ois
\ A BAAnoe. 610 Bérriov éotw brép auoty treiPew
Kal wapatteicOat Tovs KpatobovTas 7} paxerOas.”
To pév ody tmpatov Whdiopa éyerar Tov
> A a AnréEavépov, as édaBe, piyar nal duyeivy arro-
, \ VA N \ 4 IQ SK
otpadevta tovs mpéeaBes: to de Sevtepoy édé-Eato, coutcbev bd Pwxiwvos, Tav TpecButTépwr > lA ef / > 4 \ bd axovoyv ott Kat Didirmos eOavpale tov avdpa TovTOV’ Kal ov povoy THy évtevEw vrrépevev av-
A \ \ , > \ \ 4
Tov Kat THhv Sénow, adAa Kal cupBovrEvovToOS
BY 4 4 } e @ 4 > \ e nKovoe. cuveBovreve 8 0 Daxiwr, ei pev naov-
,
vias opéyetat, OécOar Tov Todepov: et dé S0Ens,
\ a petabécOat, mpos tovs BapBdpous amo tay ‘EX-
/ \ \ \
AnVwOY Tpatropevov. Kal Toda Kal mTpos THY 182 _
PHOCION

the burdens of command with this object in view, will not suffer these fellow citizens of mine to perish even if that is their desire.” And when Thebes had been destroyed! and Alexander was demanding the surrender of Demosthenes, Lycurgus, Hypereides, Charidemus, and others, and the assembly turned their eyes upon Phocion and called upon him many times by name, he rose up, and drawing to his side one of his friends, whom he always cherished, trusted, and loved most of all, he said: “These men have brought the city to such a pass that I, for my part, even if this Nicocles should be demanded, would urge you to give him up. For if I might die myself in behalf of you all, I should deem it a piece of good fortune for me. And I feel pity,” said he, “men of Athens, for those also who have fled hither from Thebes; but it is enough that the Greeks should have the fate of Thebes to mourn. Therefore it is better to supplicate and try to persuade the victors for both you and them, and not to fight.”

Well, then, we are told that when Alexander got the first decree which the Athenians passed, he cast it from him and ran with averted face from the envoys; the second, however, he accepted, because it was brought by Phocion, and because he heard from the older Macedonians that Philip also used to admire this man. And he not only consented to meet Phocion and hear his petition, but actually listened to his counsels. And Phocion counselled him, if he sought quiet, to make an end of the war ; but if glory, to transfer the war, and turn his arms away from Greece against the Barbarians. And

1 In 335 B.c.

\
’AreEdvipou dicey Kai BovAnow evo ToXws elTa@V S \ a otTw petréBare Kal Kxaterpdaivey avToy wore eireiy OTrws mpocéEovar Tov vodv "AOnvator Tots
/ 4 TpAayLAcL, WS, El TL yévoLTO TrEpl auUTOV, ExELVOLS
a \ / ,
dpyew mpoojxov. idia dé tov Pwxiwva toinaa-
e a / \ / 2 , 4
pevos avrod dirov xai Eévov, eis tocautny Eero
a 4
Tiny Bony elyov OdjLyot THY del cUVOYTMV. O
a a / /
youov Aovpis elpnxev ws péyas yevouevos Kal
a ca) a“ \ Aapetov xpatnoas ddeiie tov émicToN@Y TO

yaipe mrAnV ev Soa &ypade Paoxiwre> todTov dé povov, wotep ‘Avtitatpoy, weTa TOD yaipew mMpoonyopeve. TovTO dé Kal Xdpns ioropnke.
XVIII. To pévroe rep) Trav ypnedtwv oporoyoupevov é€otiv, Ott Swpeav avT@ Karétreprwev
e N 4 tf / ? ? VA
EXATOV TaNaAVTA. TOUTwWY KomLcbevTwY eis ’AO-
9 , e 4 \ / / /
vas, npetnoey 0 Paxiwv tovs dépovtas ti 87
Tote TONN@Y 6vTwVv AOnvaiwy aiT@ povm Tocav-
/
ta Sidwow *AréEavSpos. citrovtwy Sé éxeivwr, 7 “Ort oé xpive povov dvdpa Karov Kai ayabov,” ce O % % s. , @ e @ , sc? , \
vxovv, ‘eitev 0 Pwxiwv, “éacdtw pe Kal } A 2 A A 3 eo] 99 e \ bd oxely adel Kal elvat ToLodTov.” ws &€ aKxodov-
s A Onoavres els OlKoV AVT@ TOAAHY EWpwv EVTENELAY,
\ a THY pev yuvaixa pdtrovcay, 0 5€ Paxiwy avros
/ @ a avipnoas Ddwp éx Tod ppéatos atrevirrreto Tovs
, 4 A
jwodas, ETL paAdov eévéxewto Kal nyavaKtour,
9 f. A
Secvov elvat éyortes et diros Ov Tod Bacthéws
1 Of. the Alexunder, xiii. 2.

by saying many things that suited well with Alexander’s nature and desires he so far changed and softened his feelings that he advised the Athenians to give close attention to their affairs, since, if anything should happen to him, the leadership of Greece would properly fall to them.! In private, too, he made Phocion his friend and guest, and showed him greater honour than most of his constant associates enjoyed. At any rate, Duris writes that after Alexander had become great and had conquered Dareius, he dropped from his letters the word of salutation, “ chairein,’ except whenever he was writing to Phocion; him alone, like Antipater, he used to address with the word “chairein.” This is the testimony of Chares also.

XVIII. The story about the money, indeed, is generally admitted, namely, that Alexander sent him a present of a hundred talents.2. When this was brought to Athens, Phocion asked the bearers why in the world, when there were so many Athen- ians, Alexander offered such a sum to him alone. They replied : “ Because Alexander judges that thou alone art a man of honour and worth.” “In that case,” said Phocion, “let him suffer me to be and be thought such always.’’ But when the messengers accompanied him to his home and saw there a great simplicity,—his wife kneading bread, while Phocion with his own hands drew water from the well and washed his feet,—they were indignant, and pressed the money upon him still more urgently, declaring it an intolerable thing that he, though a friend ot

2 The talent was equivalent to about £235, or $1,200, with four or five times the purchasing power of modern money.

ao

obra SvarrnoeTas Topas. iSeov ovv oO Doxiov Twévnta mpeo BuTny &v TpiBevig puTap@ Topevo- pevor, nparncev el TOUTOU Xelpova vopitovary auTov. edpnpeiv 6é € exetvav Seopeven, “ Kai pny OUTOS,” elrren, _ an ear Tovey épod oH Kat dpxet- tat. To dé dArov BN XPOMEVOS, ebm, “ parqy ew TOC OUTOV xpuaiov, n GMEVOS é“auTov apa xaketvov d:aBar® T pos THV TOA. OTH peV émravinnoe Tdi TA YpHpata & "AOnvan, émrubei - favra Tots "EAAgat Tova LOT Epov tov didovTos Tocabra TOV py) Seopevov. émel O€ "Are£avdpos HyavaKTnoe Kal may éypawe T@ Poxiwr di- ous V7) voi fe Tous pnodev autod Seopuévous, xpmyara ev ovd & Daxiwrv éraBer, ddeP hvac nEiwoe TOV copia Thy “Exexparidyy Kal Tov "T uBprov ‘AOnvodwpov xat ‘Podtous duo, Anpa- parov Kal Lraptwva, TUVELANMLEVOUS én aitiass teat Kal xaderpypévous € év Yapbect. TovTouvs pev ovv evOus amehuoev) “AréEavépos, K parepov dé arog TEAM eis Maxedoviay éxéXevoe TETTAPODY movkewv év ‘Acta, age DepyiBov, MvAdowr, "Eralas, piav, iv adv aipiras, Tapabobvat TO Poxiovt, Siatervdpevos & €TL parrov OS Xarerravel

un NaBovtos. GND ouTe Doxiov éraBer, 6 TE
"AdeEav6pos TAXES améBavev. 1 5é& oixia Tod
Doxiwvos Erte viv ev Menritn Setxvurat, xaraais Neiot Kexoounuévn, Ta Se GAKA ATH xKal agers.

———————

1 In 324 B.c., when Craterus was commissioned to lead the veteran soldiers of Alexander back to Macedonia. See the Alexander, chapter 1xxi.

the king, should live in such poverty. Phocion, accordingly, seeing a poor old man walking the street in a dirty cloak, asked them if they considered him inferior to this man. “ Heaven forbid!” they cried. “And yet this man,’ said Phocion, “has less to live upon than I, and finds it sufficient. And, in a word,” said he, “if I make no use of this great sum of money, it will do me no good to have it; or, if I use it, I shall bring myself, and the king as well, under the calumnies of the citizens.’’ So the treasure went back again from Athens, after it had showed the Greeks that the man who did not want so great a sum was richer than the man who offered it. Alexander was vexed and wrote back to Phocion that he could not regard as his friends those who wanted nothing of him. But not even then would Phocion take the money; he did, however, ask for the release of Echecratides the sophist, Athenodorus of Imbros, and two men of Rhodes, Demaratus and Sparton, who had been arrested upon sundry charges and imprisoned in Sardis. These men, then, Alexander set free at once, and at a later time,! when he sent Craterus back into Macedonia, he ordered him to turn over to Phocion the revenues from whichever one of four cities in Asia he might select,—either Cius, Gergithus, Mylasa, or Elaea,—insisting still more strongly than before that he would be angry if Phocion did not take them. But Phocion would not take them, and very soon Alexander died. And even to the present day Phocion’s house is pointed out in Melité,? adorned with bronze disks, but otherwise plain and simple.

2 A deme, or ward, in the S.W. part of Athens. See the Themistocles, xxii. 2.

XIX. Tov dé yuvarkay as eynue, Tept THS
TpoTepas ovbev toTopetrau, TANv Ore Kn¢gico-SoTos Hv oO TATTHS aderpos auras, THs O€
SevTépas ovuK eAdTTOV € emt coppoo wy Kab adeheia
Noyos my Tapa Tois "AOnvaios 4 Pwxiwvos ert OTOTHTL. Kat TOTe Oewpévov KaLvous Tparyedous ‘AOnvaiwy, o O pe Tparypoos elovévar péALOV Baotnridos mpoowrov qree Kekoo pnpevas Todas

OT ad0US TONUTEADS TOV Xopnyov: Kab p1) Tape-Xovros Hyavaxte: Kal KaTeixe TO Oéatpov ov Bovdopevos mpoenGeiv. o 6é Xopmyos MeAdv@cos ada avTOV €lS TO péoov éBoa: s Thy Poxiwvos ovx opas yuvaixa mpoiodaay del META [Las Gepa-matvisos, aN” aralovevn Kal Stapdeipers THY YyUvaltK@viTiv; * ” éaxovarou dé THs pwvijs yevopévns edéEato KpoT@ TroAAW Kali BopvB@ To Oéatpov. avtn dé i] yur", Eévns Tivos "Teovers émiderEaperns Xpucovy Kal MOoxor.AnTov KO Lov
ev TAoxious al mepioepaios, sei "Epot Oé,” Ep,
- HOG 10S éott Dwxiwy eixootov Eros 45n oTpatnyav “AOnvaiwv.”
XX. Poxe 5é¢ T@ vie Bovropéeve ayovicacbas ava@nvaiors drroBdrny épjxev,! ovxt THiS viens Gperyouevos, ann’ Ores emtpedn Gets Kal aonnoas
TO copa Berrian é égolro" Kal yap Hy ahs gtdo-TOTNS kal ATAKTOS 0 vEeaVvio Kos. ViKTAYTOS dé
Kal TOAK@D aiToupevoy éoTiacae Ta viKNT NpLa, Tovs GAXous Doxiov TAparTna apevos évl rH prroripiay TAUTHY TUvEXWPNTEY. Os dé éXOav émt to Seitrvoy ddAAnv te coRapav éwpa trapa-1 dnp... BovrdAopévy... épixevy with Coraés, Sintenis?, and Bekker, after Fa; @anov... BovAdpuevov . .. apixev.

188

PHOCION

XIX. As for his wives, nothing is told us about the first, except that she was a sister of Cephisodotus the sculptor; but the reputation which the second had among the Athenians for sobriety and simplicity was not less than that of Phocion for probity. And once when the Athenians were witnessing an exhibition of new tragedies, the actor who was to take the part of a queen asked the choregus to furnish him with a great number of attendant women in expensive array; and when he could not get them, he was indignant, and kept the audience waiting by his refusal to come out. But the choregus, Melanthius, pushed him before the spectators, crying: ‘ Dost thou not see that Phocion’s wife always goes out with one maid-servant? Thy vanity will be the undoing of our women-folk.”’

His words were plainly heard by the audience, and were received with tumultuous applause. And this very wife, when an Ionian woman who was her guest displayed ornaments of gold and precious stones worked into collars and necklaces, said: “ My ornament is Phocion, who is now for the twentieth year a general of Athens.”

XX. When Phocus his son wished to compete at - the Panathenaic festival as a vaulting rider of horses, Phocion permitted it, not because he was ambitious for the victory, but in order that care and training of the body might make his son a better man; for in general the youth was fond of wine and irregular in his habits. The youth was victorious, and many asked him to their houses for the victor’s banquet ; but Phocion declined the other invitations and granted the coveted honour to one host only. And when he went to the banquet and saw the general

OKEUNY KaL TrodaviTTHpas olvov Ot apwuaTwv mpoadepopmevous Tots Elotovat, KaXécas Tov VioD, “Ov rravoes,” edn, “ Tov éTaipov, ® Daxe, diahUcipovra cov tHy vienv;” Bovdropevos Sé Kat xaQoXou peTacthicar TO pmetpaxtoy éx THs Stairns éxeivns, amnyayev eis Aaxedaipova cai xarépike TOUS AYOMEVOLS THY NEYOLEVHVY aya veavicKots. kat todto Tovs "AOnvaious éAvUTyTEV, WS UTEPopavTos Kat dTrepppovodvTos Ta oixeta TOD Paxiw-> 7 \ a s \ > fgg PV
vos. ettrovtos € tod Anpddou mpos avtov, “ Tt ov teiGoperv, @ Pwoxiwov, “APnvaiovs thv Aaxo-
A , a 9\ \
yuxnv mpocdéEacOar TrodTEiav; eav yap av Ke-Uf > A , \ , ef , >] 29
Aeuns, ey@ ypadew Kal Reyer EToLmos Ebpt, “Tldvu yoo,” Edn, “ mpéyrerey av cot pvpov tocovTov olovte Kai yAavida ToravtTyny PopodyTt oupBovrever “AOnvaiors trept giditiwv Kab Tov Avxodpyov érrawvetv.”

XXI. [pdyavros 5€ trod *AreEdvdpov epi
Tpinpwv, STs amooTEiAwotV aUT@, Kal TOV pN-Topwy évictapevwnv, THS 5é BovAns Tov Pwxiwva Xré x , “ce Aé / e a % éyely KxeNEvOvoNS, éyw Toivuy wpiv,” etrev, ‘9 tots SaAows Kpately } Tois KpatovdaL dpidous
® 99 \ \ 4 > f 4 A

elvas. ampos dé IIlu@éav apyouevov tote mparTov
évruyxavew “AOnvaiois, dn Sé Addov Svta Kal Opacvy, “Ov ciwomnoes,” Edn, “Kai TadTa vew-yntos @v T@ Snuw;” eet Sé “Apmados peta Xpnudtwv woNNe@v amodpas ’AréEavdpov ex THs
A a ,
"Acias tH Artix mpocéBanre, kat Tay ciwOoTwr 190
751

PHOCION

magnificence of the preparations, and particularly the foot-basins of spiced wine that were brought to the guests as they entered, he called his son and said: “ Phocus, do not let thy companion ruin thy victory.” Moreover, wishing to remove the young man entirely from that style of living, he took him off to Sparta and put him among the youths who were following the course of discipline called “agoge.’! This vexed the Athenians, who thought that Phocion despised and looked down upon the native customs. And once Demades said to him: “ Phocion, why shouldn't we try to persuade the Athenians to adopt the Spartan polity? For if thou sayest the word, I am ready to introduce and support the requisite law.” But Phocion replied: “ Indeed it would very well become thee, with so strong a scent of ointment upon thee, and wearing such a mantle as thine, to recommend to the Athenians the public mess-halls of the Spartans, and to extol Lycurgus.”’

XXI. When Alexander wrote asking the Athen- ians to send him triremes, and the orators opposed the request, and the council bade Phocion speak upon the matter, “I tell you, then,” he said, “ either to be superior in arms or to be friends with those who are superior.”” To Pytheas, who at that time was just beginning to address the Athenians, but was already loquacious and bold, Phocion said: “‘ Hold thy peace, thou who art but a newly bought slave of the people!’’ And when Harpalus, who had run away from Alexander out of Asia with great sums of money, landed in Attica,? and those who

1 See the A gestlaiis, i. 1.
2 See the Demosthenes, chapter xxv.
Ig!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

b 4 “ , / , @ \
ato tov Bnyatos xpnuarivecOar Spouos mv Kai bi , \ > 7 Ul \ > \
apuihra Pberpopévav pos avtov, TOVTOLS ev aTrO TOANOY wixpa Sereadlwv mponxato Kal dréppie,
» 6€ Doxi g dsd0vs é)
T@ 6€ Dwxiwve mpocéreue Sed0vs émtaxdora
TaXNavta, Kal TANNA TayTa, Kal peTa TaVTOV
éavTov éxeiva povm TwapaxatatiOéuevos. atro-xpwapévou 6€ tpaxéws TOD Pawxiwvos oipwkecOar ‘ a > N 4s , \
tov “Aptanov, eb pn tmavoeta Siadpbeipwr tiv
, , \ \ > , > 3 , ‘
TOALY, TUTE HEV TVTTANELS ATEGDTN, MET OALVOV bE
, > s e/ A A > Bovrevopévov *“AOnvaiwy éwpa tovs pév eidXnpotas Ta Ypnpata Tap avTov petaBaddopévous Kai Katnyopotvtas, iva pn pavepol yévevtas, Pwxiwva Sé tov pyndev AaBovta peta Tov Kowwod acuudépovtos dua Kal tHv éxeivou catnpiav &y
s 4 4 @ > \ > \ XN
tive NOy@ TLIOéuevov. Mads ovv évexOels emi TO Oepatrevety éxeivov, avTov pev ws Epupa tavtayobev dvddwtov bro Tod ypuciov Tepiodedwv
e7 , \ \ \ > A ,
éwpa, Xapixréa dé Tov yauBpov avtod trounod-/ \ U J A 56 A“
pevos cuvnOn nai pirov, averrAnoe OoEns Trovnpas, TAVTA TLOTEVOY KAL TAVTA YPWMEVOS eKELVO.
XXII. Kai $7 «cai Wudoviens tis éraipas atro-4 a J cd 2 A \ Oavovons, iv eityev 0” Apirados épav Kai Ouyatpiov twatnp é€& auThs yeyovel, puvnpetoy amo
f A > / @ 4 4
Xpneatwv ToNNWY eEmitTecoar VeAnoas mMpoceE-take T@ Xapexrel tHy emipérerav. ovoav dé THv bmoupyiay TavuTny ayevyh) MpooKaTHaxXvvEY oO
, if , , \ v A ?
Ttados avvtTedecOeis. Stapéver yap Ete viv ev
1 éxelvp with Coraés and Bekker : én’ éxelvy.

were wont to make merchandise of their influence
as orators came running to him at breakneck speed, to these men he dropped and scattered small morsels of his wealth by way of bait; but he sent to Phocion and offered him seven hundred talents, and everything else that he had, and put himself with all his possessions at the sole disposition of Phocion. But Phocion answered sharply that Harpalus would rue it if he did not cease trying to corrupt the city, and for the time being the traitor was abashed and desisted from his efforts.

After a little, however, when the Athenians were deliberating upon his case, he found that those who had taken money from him were changing sides and denouncing him, that they might not be discovered ;
while Phocion, who would take nothing, was now giving some consideration to the safety of Harpalus as well as to the public interests. Again, therefore, he was led to pay court to Phocion, but after all his efforts to bribe him found that he was impregnable on all sides like a fortress. Of Charicles, however, Phocion's son-in-law, Harpalus made an intimate associate and friend, trusting him in everything and using him in everything, and thus covered him with infamy.

XXII. For instance, on the death of Pythonicé the courtesan, who was the passionately loved mis- tress of Harpalus and had borne him a daughter, Harpalus resolved to build her a very expensive monument, and committed the care of the work to Charicles. This service was an ignoble one in itself, but it acquired additional disgrace from the com- pleted tomb. For this is still to be seen in Hermus,

'Epper,' % Badilouev €& adoteos eis 'EXevoiva,
pnodey Eywv TOV TpLdKovTa TadavTwY akiov, doa nae nA
T® Aptrdr AoyicOjvai hac eis TO Epyov vio
tov Xapixréovs. Kat pévtoe cal TerevTHoavTos aA A A A
avTov TO TaLdapLov UTO ToD XapixAéovs Kat Tov Dawxiwvos avaryndpbev éruyyave wacns emipenreias.
Kptvouévou pévtoe Too Xapixréovs est tois "Ap-manretos, Kal Seouevou Bonbetv avt@ tov Pwxiwva kal aouvercerbeiy eis TO Sixactiptov, ovn 70é-
> 2 "ce? ,) / > a
AnoEV, ELTTOV: Eyo ae, @ Xapterets, ETL TAGL

a / Tois dixatos yauBpov érrornodpny.”
4 fa)
IIpwrou d€ "A@nvaios ‘AckrAnmiddov tod ‘Ir-
Ul 4 ‘4 > /
mapyou TeOvavat mpocayyeiAavtos ‘AdXéEavdpor,
e
o pev Anuddns éxédeve un Tpocéxerv’ dda yap dv SrAnv oCerv vexpov THv oixovpévny: o b€ Paxiwv émnpuevoy op@ayv mpos TO vewtepiley Tov Srwov éretpato Tapnyopeiv Kal Katéyev. avaTnd@ovTwv oe Le) b] \ N nw : \ 4 > On € TWoNNwY emt TO Anya, cat Bowvtwy arnO7
\ 2 A b) lA \ lA N
tov AokAnmiddnv amayyéAXrew Kal teOvavar Tov AnreEavdpor, VKoUV, eElirev, ‘El onpEpoV TE-4, Ovnke, kal avpiov éorar Kal eis TpitHy TEOYnKOS, icf e aA 3 e J 4 “A be 9 WOTE NAS ev novxla BovrevoacBat, “adrov de peTa aodaneias.”
¢
XXIII. ‘Os 5€ hépwv evécercey 0 Acewobevns
Thv Todw eis Tov Aaptaxov® mrodepmov, Kal TOD
/ , A ,
Dwxiwvos dvcyepaivovtos npwta KaTayeAov TL
1 “Eoue: Bekker, after Coraés: ‘Epyely.
2 3¢ Bekker, after Coraés, corrects to xa. 3 Aauiaxdy Coraés and Bekker, after Xylander : ‘EAAnukdy.

1 See Pausanias, i. 37, 5, with Frazer’s notes. Pausanias speaks of it as ‘‘the best worth seeing of all ancient Greek: tombs.”
194

on the road from Athens to Eleusis, and it has nothing worthy of the large sum of thirty talents which Charicles is said to have charged Harpalus for the work.! And yet after the death of Harpalus him-self,? his daughter was taken up by Charicles and Phocion and educated with every care. However, when Charicles was brought to trial for his dealings with Harpalus, and begged Phocion to help him and go with him into the court-room, Phocion refused, saying: “I made thee my son-in-law, Charicles, for none but just purposes.”’ Asclepiades the son of Hipparchus was the first one to bring to the Athenians the tidings that Alexander was dead. Thereupon Demades urged them to pay no heed to the report, since, had it been true, the whole earth would long ago have been filled with the stench of the body. But Phocion, who saw that the people were bent on revolution, tried to dissuade them and restrain them. And when many of them sprang towards the bema, and shouted that the tidings brought by Asclepiades were true and that Alexander was dead, “ Well, then,” said Phocion, “if he is dead to-day, he will be dead to-morrow and the day after. Therefore we can deliberate in quiet, and with greater safety.”’

XXIII. Leosthenes, who had plunged the city into the Lamian war * much to Phocion’s displeasure, once asked him derisively what good he had done
2 Antipater demanded his surrender by the Athenians, and Harpalus fled to Crete, where he was assassinated.

3 323-322 B.c. So named because the confederate Greeks held Antipater and his forces for some time besieged in Lamia, a city of 8.E. Thessaly (§ 4).

mwetroinxey ayabov THv TONY éTH TOTADTA OTpA-TOYO, “Od puxpov,” py, “7d Tovs ToriTas év Tois iStoes pynpace OantecOar. trodrga bé Opa-ouvopévou Kal Koutralovtos év TO SHuw tod Acw-aBévous, 0 Pwxiwv, ‘Oi Aoyou cov,” eliev, “@ petpaxcov, éolKact KumapiTrous: peydrou yap dyTes Kal _dypnrot KapTovs ov pépovow.” as dé €TravacTas 0 ‘Trepetdys npwtnae, “ lore obv, @ Pwxiwv, cupBovrevcers worepueiv "AOnvaioss; ” “"Orav,” elie, “ Tous pev véovs ido thy Takw Bovdopévous purarreLy, Tous 6€ Touatous ela Pé-pewv, Tous 5€ pytopas améyecOar Tod KrNEwTELY TA Snpoota.”
@avyualovrwy dé ToAROv THY v7o tov AewaOévous curnypévny Svvaptv, Kai tod Paxiwvos

TuvOavowevov mas tet maperxevac Gat doxodow avTe, “ Kanés,” Epn, “ pds TO aTabuov" TOV dé Séduxov TOU ToAé pov poBotpat, pate Xprpara THS TOAEWS erepa prjre vas bate omhiTas exouons. 7 epapTuper dé avT@ Kal Ta epya. TT PG)TOV pev yap o Aewa Gévns Aaprpos pn Tais mpakeot, tov te Botwrav payn Kparnoas Kal TOV Avtina-Tpov eis Adpiav cuvenaoas: OTe Kat pace THV
pev TOMY ehmidos * peyanrns ryevowevny éoptatery
evayyedua TUVEX OS Kat Ovew Tots Geois, TOV dé Poxiova ™ pos TOUS éNeyxery aurov olopévous, kat truvOavopévous é: Tadra ovK dv nOedev AUTO mempaxOas, fy avy pev ov,” bn, = BeBovred-cOat dé éxeiva.” Kai wddwv adAXwv érr ado15 evayyertov ypadouévwv Kal gepopévwy aro 1 ads rt Bekker, after Coraés, corrects to mas. 2 éanlSos Bekker, after Coraés, corrects to én’ éArl5os.

the city during the many years in which he had been general. “No slight good,” said Phocion, “in that its citizens are buried in their own sepulchres.”’ Again, when Leosthenes was talking very boldlv and boastfully in the assembly, Phocion said: “ Thy speeches, young man, are like cypress-trees, which are large and towering, but bear no fruit.” And when Hypereides confronted him with the question, “When, then, O Phocion, wilt thou counsel thc
Athenians to go to war?’ “ Whenever,” said Phocion, “I see the young men willing to hold their places in the ranks, the rich to make contributions, and the orators to keep their thievish hands away from the public moneys.”
When many were admiring the force got together by Leosthenes, and were asking Phocion what he thought of the city’s preparations, “They are good,” said he, “for the short course ;! but it is the long course which I fear in the war, since the city has no other moneys, or ships, or men-at-arms.” And events justified his fear. For at first Leosthenes achieved brilliant successes, conquering the Boeotians in battle, and driving Antipater into Lamia. Then, too, they say that the city came to cherish high hopes, and was continuously holding festivals and making sacrifices of glad tidings. Phocion, however, when men thought to convict him of error and asked him if he would not have been glad to have performed these exploits, replied: “ By all means; but I am glad to have given the advice I did.”’ And again, when glad tidings came in quick succession by letter and messenger from the

1 The short course in the foot-races was straight away, the length of the stadium ; the long course was ten times back and forth.

/ 9 , otpatotédou, '"Ilote apa, hava, " ravoopeba VLKOVTES;
XXIV. 'Esrei 6€ trod Aewodévous atrobavovtos
' 4 '
ot poBovpevoe Tov Poxiwva, pn otpatnyos éx-\ U4 \ / " ,
Tweupbets Katarvon Tov TodEpOV, avOpwroy Tiva
A "" 4
TOV ovK émipavav év ExXKNHOLa TapEecKEevacay > 4 / cd lé A "~ , \ dvactavtTa Néeyev Ste hiros ov TOV Dakiwvos Kat cupTrepolTnk@s tapaier deidecBar Tov avdpos \ 4 e v7 vd 3 "
Kat dudaacelv, ws adAOY OmoLloV ovK ExOVTAS,
3 / \ 9 4 > AN \ Ul \ éxtréutrety 5é "Avtidirov éri TO otpatevpa, Kal
n a - \
tavta tots "AOnvaios acuvedoxet, tmrapedAOav o
/ # a Dwoxiwvy Edeye ponte cuptehoirynKévat ToTé TO : , v t
avopwir@ unte AdNAWS yeryovévat yuwpLLos } TUVN-
> "A A Ons» "Ada vov," elrev, "ato THS onMEPOV
, , A >] a a \
nuépas Kat dirXov ce TroLovpal Kai olKEioV: & yap @ > \ / , 39 nv é"ol cupdepovTa cvpPeBovrEvxas.
e / \ A b] , > \ \ Oppnpuévon b€ tov "A@nvatav éri tovs Boww-
, A a A
TOUS OTpaTEvELY TP@TOV peVv avTelye' Kal TOV v4 U A a dirov Aeyovtwv ws atoPaveitat TpocKpovw TOOLS
bf / A
A@nvaiots, "'Adixws," elev, "av Told TO oUL-/ A \ 4 4 bP] J \ bY dépoyvy dv 6€ tapaBaiva, dixaiws.” éret Oé€ e “ b] b / > \ a : ee A \ opav ovx avevtas, adda Bowvtas, exeNevoe TOV

a , \ ” , Knpuxa avetrety “AOnvaiwy rods aypt eEnxovtTa
b] ~ > > ef J e an 4 s érav ad nBns wévte huep@v oitia AaRovTas
b] ‘ 3 aA > N “~ >] / /
evOus axorovleiy ato THs éxxAnaotas, JopvBov TOAAOU yevouévou Kal TV TpeaBuTépwy BowvTav
A > \ Kal avarrndorvtav, “ Ovdév,” edn, “ dSeevovy eyo
f 4 4
yap 0 otparnyos oySonKooTov Exwy ETOS Evopat
a 4
peO tpov.” -cal Tote pev ovTwS KaTEeTaVCEDV \ é auTovs Kal meTé Bare.
198
.

PHOCION

camp, “ When, pray,’ said he, “will our victories cease?”
XXIV. But Leosthenes was killed, and then those who feared that Phocion, if he were sent out as general, would put a stop to the war, arranged with a certain obscure person to rise in the assembly and say that he was a friend and intimate associate of Phocion, and therefore advised the people to spare him and keep him in reserve, since they had none other like him, and to send out Antiphilus to the army. This course was approved by the Athenians, whereupon Phocion came forward and said that he had never been intimately associated with the per- son, nor in any way familiar or acquainted with him ; “‘ But now,’ said he, “ from this very day I make thee a friend and close companion, for thou hast counselled what was for my advantage.”

Again, when the Athenians were bent on making an expedition against the Boeotians, at first he opposed it; and when his friends told him that he would be put to death by the Athenians if he offended them, “ That will be unjust,” said he, “if I act for their advantage ; but if I play them false, it will be just.” Afterwards, however, seeing that they would not desist, but continued their clamour, he ordered the herald to make proclamation that every man in Athens under sixty years of age should take provisions for five days and follow him at once from the assembly. Thereupon a great tumult arose, the elderly men leaping to their feet and shouting their dissent. “It is no hardship,” said Phocion, “ for I who am to be your general am in my eightieth year.’ For the time being this checked them and changed their purpose.

199

XXV. HlopAoupévns S€é THs maparias vo Me-
a ,
xiwvos cuxvois Maxedoot kai prcbodopos aro-
a \ BeBnxotos eis ‘Papvodvta cal catatpéyovtos THhv 4 9
yopav, éEjryaye tovs ‘AOnvaiovs ém avTov. @s \ , ? Li ¥ ,
5é€ mpootpéxyovres adrayobev adros dtecTpaTn-
A \
youv kal auvveBovrevoy avtod Tov AOpov KaTaaA A VA A AaBetv, éxet wepitréurpar Tovs imméas, évTad0a
A e > mapepBaretv, “°O, “Hpdxrets,” elev, “ws ToA-AOVS OP® aTpaTnyous, Griyous 5é oTpaTLMTas.” érrel 5€ trapatdEaytos avtovd Tous omAitas els
\ \ A Mv na a , 9
TOV TPO TOV ANAwY m™ poner, celta d€icas avTi-
4 > \ 4 lA > \ /
otavros avépos todeulov maduw eis thy takev
b U4 ec? , 393 J ‘ce ? Qa aveywpnaoev, “QO, petpaxiov,’ elmrev, “ovK aid7 4 / BJ 4 > 4 e \ “~ dvo tafers amro\edorTTWS, iv eTaXOns vo Tov aA \ lA 779 A \ 54 b> ie) oTpaTnyou Kai radu éd’ hv ceavrTov étakas;” ép-\ A A 7 \ \ lA ,
Baroy d€ Tots ToNEuiots Kal KaTa KpadTos TpEYra-b a \ J \ \ v
pevos, autoyv Te Tov Mexiwva Kai ToAXOVS AAXOUS amexteve. TO 5é€ “EXANVIKOY év OeTTAXIa aTpa-Teva, cuppiFavtos ‘Avtimdtp@ Acovvatov Kat
A 3 > , / > 7 / \
tav é€& “Acias Maxedovar, évixa payopevov: Kal

/ a Aeovvdtos érecev, Hryoupévov THS pév hdrayyos
"Avtidirov, tav dé immévwv Tod Beccarod Mévwvos.
> / \ ed / a
XXVI. Oduye dé DaTepov Xpovp Kpartepod Dz a \ SsaBavtos é& “Acias peta moddns Suvapews Kai yevomevns madw év Kpavyavr tapatakews, 4TT7-7 Onaoav pév ot “EXAnves oUTE peyadny hrTav ovTE
a 4 \
TOAXaY TecovTwy, amretOeia Sé Tpos TOS apxov-Tas émueixels Kal véovs ovtas, Kal Gua Tas To-200

XXV. However, when their sea-coast was being devastated by Micion, who landed at Rhamnus with a horde of Macedonians and mercenaries and overran the adjacent territory, Phocion led the Athenians out against him. And as they marched, men would run up to their general from all sides and show him what to do. He was advised to seize a hill here, to send his horsemen around thither, or to make his attack upon the enemy there. “O Heracles,” said Phocion, “how many generals I see, and how few soldiers!’’ Again, after he had drawn up his men-at-arms, one of them went out far in advance of the rest, and then was stricken with fear when an enemy advanced to meet him, and went back again to his post. “Shame on thee, young man,” said Phocion, “for having abandoned two posts, the one which was given thee by thy general, and the one which thou didst give thyself.” However, he attacked the enemy, routed them utterly, and slew Micion himself together with many others. The Greek army in Thessaly, also, although Leonnatus and his Macedonians from Asia had joined Antipater, was victorious in battle, and Leonnatus fell ; the Greek men-at-arms were led by Antiphilus, their cavalry by Menon the Thessalian.

XXVI. But a short time afterwards Craterus ‘crossed from Asia with a large force,! and there was another pitched battle at Crannon. Here the Greeks were defeated. Their defeat was not severe, nor did many of them fall, but owing to their lack of obedience to their commanders, who were young and soft-hearted, and because at the same time 1 Cf. chapter xviii. 5.

20!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Aes avTa@v repovTos ‘Avtimarpov, Stappvévtes
¥ / \ , > \ 9
2 aloyicta mponxavto thy edevOepiav. evOvs odv b] A N\ > J 54 a > 4 A émt tas “A@nvas ayovros tod ‘Avtim@atpov THv dvvayuv ot pev rept Anuoobévnv cat ‘Trrepetdnv amrnd\raynoav éx THS ToAEws, Anuddns Sé, unOév pépos wv wpeare Ypnuatov él tais catabdixas
> a a or PS 4 e , a e \ éxticat TH Toda Suvapevos (jAwKEL yap érTa ypadas tmapavonwv Kat yeyovms atipos éEeip-yeTO TOU Aéyelv), AdEtay EvpopeEevos TOTE, ypadet Whdiopa éxtéutrev! mpos ‘Avritatpov obrép
bf 4 4 > / , \
3 eipyvns mpéoBers avToxpatopas. goBoupévou Sé tov Snwov Kal Kadovvtos Poxiwva, cal povy
, 2 7 , oc? > ov : , WloTEvELy EXELV@ ANEyovTOS, “ANA Ele erLTTEVO-
” 9 co 2 N / eon > A A unv,” elmev, “ éyo cuuBovrevov vpiv, ovK dv viv éBovrevopea Trepi TpayLaTwV TOLOUT@V. oUTw
a / 5é tod Whdicpatos éemixupwOévtos amectadn
4 A
mpos “Avtimatpov év tH Kadueta otpatoredev-ovTa Kal TapacKevalopuevoy evOus eis THY ’ATTEnv Badiferv. Kal todTo TpwTov HTEL, TO LévovTa
4 KaTa ywpav TroincacOar Tas diadvoes. Tod dé Kpatepod Aéyovtos ws ov dixata reife. Pwxiwv
Has, THY TOV cuupdyov Kai ditwv caOnpévous
YOpav KaKaS ToLety Suvapévous ex THIS TOV ToAcwiov apercicbat, AaBopevos avdrod THs SeEvas

e 3 , 6c , > i J “c 4 lA
o Avtitratpos, “ Aoréov, etre, “ Dwxiwre tavtTnv
A Ul ”? \ \ A #. > + > a
THY yap. epi d€ TOV AAXrAwWY exédevEY avTOIS
> / \ b , 4 > ,
émitpémey tors ‘AOnvaiovs, waomep ev Aapia AewaoOevns éxeivov.
1 éxwéurery with Doehner ; the MSS. have xa! réume:, which Bekker retains: wéure:v, after Coraés.

Antipater made tempting overtures to their several cities, their army melted away and most shamefully abandoned the cause of freedom. At once, there- fore, Antipater led his forces against Athens, and Demosthenes and Hypereides left the city. De- mades, however, though he was unable to pay any portion of the fines which had been imposed upon him by the city (he had been seven times convicted of introducing illegal measures, had lost his civic rights, and was therefore debarred from speaking in the assembly), obtained immunity at this time, and brought in a bill for sending to Antipater ambas- sadors plenipotentiary to treat for peace. But the people were fearful, and called upon Phocion, de- claring that he was the only man whom they could trust. “ But if I had been trusted,” said he, “ when I gave you counsel, we should not now be deliberat- ing on such matters.”” And when the bill had thus been passed, he was sent off to Antipater, who was encamped in the Cadmeia,! and was making prepara- tions to march into Attica at once. And this was the first request that Phocion made, namely, that Antipater should remain where he was and make the treaty. And when Craterus declared that it was not fair in Phocion to try to persuade them to remain in the territory of their friends and allies and ravage it, when they had it in their power to get booty from that of their enemies, Antipater took him by the hand and said : “ We must grant Phocion this favour.” But as for the other terms of the peace, he ordered the Athenians to leave them to the conquerors, just as, at Lamia, he had been ordered to do by Leosthenes.

1 The citadel of Thebes.

XXVITI. ‘Os odv érravprbev 0 Pwxiwy eis 76
” \ A 3 4 A 4 e >» 3 /
aotu Kal Tots “A@nvaios tabvta okey tn’ avay-Kens, avis eis OnBas éBadile peta TaV adv
mpéeaBewv, Revoxpatnv tov derocogov tav ’AOnvalwy Tpocedopévwy. ToaovTov yap Hv akiwpa
A A un /
THS apeTHs TOU Hevoxpatouvs xai d0Fa Kai royos Tapa Tac wate olecOar pnte UBpu elvar pre
, a @poTnta unre Oupov év avOpetrivn Wuyn pudpe-

* _— 4 I b] } > A > le!
vov, @ evoxpatous povov opGévros ovK av aidods
TL Kal TULAS éyyévotto mpos avTov. améBn Sé
> 4 b) 4 \ A / aA
Tovvavtiov dyvepootvy Twi Kal pucaryabia TOD
AvTiTaTpOV. TPWTOV pEev Yap OVK NOTdCGaTO TOV
= 4 \ ” } 4 Lee) t Elevoxpatnv tovs adAous SeFtwodapevos: ed @ ghacw eiteiy éxeivov ws Avtimatpos KaX@s Trowel povov avTov aliayuvouevos éf ols ayvapoveiv
/ \ \ 4 v , b] 4
peArNeL Trpos THY ToL ErretTa NEyev apEapeEvov
? e / > > 93 lA \ la OvX vVIropévwv, AN avtTixpovav Kal ducKoraivov éroincey atociwmjcat. tav dé Twept Tov Do-
, / > , J 4
Kiava StareyOevtwv amexpivato diriav EcecOar
tois A@nvaiow Kai cuppayiav éxdovor pev Tovs \ / \¢ / 4
mept AnpooBevnv cat “Trrepetiny, mrodttevopévots 4 dé THY TaTpLoY amo Tiunpmatos! qodTelav, deEa-/ \ \ 9 \ , 4 \
peévors 5€ dpovpav eis tHv Movvuyiav, err Se XpPHUaTa TOD ToAéuou Kal Enuiav mpocexticacw.
e \ LZ ¥ / b 4 e
Ou. pev ovv adrot tpecBets NyaTncay ws
nn
grravOpwtrous tas S:advces, ANY TOU Hevoxpa\ nw
Tous: édn yap ws pev SovAoLts peTpins Kexphabau
1 amd riuquaros Coraés and Bekker, with most MSS.: ard Tiunpdrov.

XXVII. Accordingly, Phocion. returned to Athens with these demands, and the Athenians acceeded to them, under the necessity that was upon them. Then Phocion went once more to Thebes, with the other ambassadors, to whom the Athenians had added Xenocrates the philosopher. For so high an es- timate was set upon the virtue of Xenocrates, and so great was his reputation and fame in the eyes of all, that it was supposed the human heart could harbour no insolence or cruelty or wrath which the mere sight of the man would not infuse with rever- ence and a desire to do him honour. But the result in this case was the opposite, owing to a certain ruthlessness and hatred of goodness in Antipater. For, in the first place, he would not salute Xeno- crates, although he greeted the other ambassadors ; at which Xenocrates is said to have remarked: ‘‘ Antipater does well to feel shame before me alone of his ruthless designs against our city.”” And again, when the philosopher began to speak, Antipater would not listen to him, but angrily contradicted him and forced him into silence. But when Phocion had made his plea, Antipater replied that the Athenians could be his friends and allies on con- dition that they delivered up Demosthenes and Hypereides, reverted to their earlier constitution with its basis of property qualification, received a garrison into Munychia,! and, in addition, paid the costs of the war and a fine.

The rest of the ambassadors were satisfied with these terms and considered them humane, with the exception of Xenocrates, who said that Antipater dealt with them moderately if he held them to be

1 The acropolis of Peiraeus.

tov Avtitratpov, ws b€ éAevOépors Bapéws. Tov
\
5é Dwxiwvos wapattoupévov tHv gdpovpay Kai
, Ul \ bd / b a cc*
deouévou AéyeTat Tov ‘Avtimatpoy etmety ‘OD,
A ,
Pwxiwv, jets mavta cor yapilerPar Bovropela
\ “ \ A b / \ e “A > e \ TAnY TOV Kal oé aToAOVVTMV Kal nuas.” ot 5é > ef 4 > \ b] fo! \ 3 , ovy ovTws daciv, adda EpwThicat Tov AvTi-TaTpov et THY Ppovpav avévtos avtod tois ’AOn-
/ a ’ a a
vatots 6 Pawxiwv éyyvatat THY TOALY Eupevely TH
eipnvn Kal pnOev ToAUTTpaypoVngELY? TLwWT@VTOS
\ 3 / \ / b] ,
dé éxeivou kat d:apédAovos, avaTrndnoavta Kad-AwédovtTa Tov KdpaBov, avipa Opacvy Kai piao-} 6] A ‘ce? \ be ka e 9 , nuov, evmety: “Kav b€ ovtos, ® ’AvTitaTpe,
A \ , \ J 4 A / drvapyn, cv miatevoets Kal ov mpakes a duéyuwKkas;”

XXVIII. Odtw pev edéEavto dpovpav Make-
/ ’ a \ / e / ~
Sovwv ’A@nvaio. cai Mévurrov ajyenova, tev emletK@Y Tia Kal TOD Pwxkiwvos eémitndeiwv.
> 4 \ e / \ , \ a éhavn 5é UTrepjdavoy TO TpdcTaypa, Kal waddov
/ e éEovcias UBper ypwpmevns éemriderkis 1) Tpaywatov évexa yiyvouevpn Katadn is. ov puxpov b€ TO wda0e. tpocéOnKev 0 KaLpos. eikadds yap 1) ppovpa Bondpout@vos etonyOn, pvotnpiwy dvtTwv, 7 \ Ww >] v ’ a 4 /

tov “laxyov é& doteos ’EXevoivade Twéutrovow, LA A a , b] /
WOTE THS TErAETHS TUyyVOEions avaroyilerOat
TOUS TrOANOLS Kal TA TpecBUTEepa ToV Ociwv Kai
\ a Ta Tpochata. Marat pev yap ev Tots apiotors } eEVTUXH MATL TAS puoTLKAas dels Kal dovas Tapa-1 Qpioros Bekker adopts G. Hermann’s conjecture of anlorots (ancredtble).
206
T54

slaves, but severely if he held them to be freemen. Phocion, however, besought Antipater to spare them the garrison, to which Antipater, as we are told, replied: ‘“‘O Phocion, we wish to gratify thee in all things, except those which will ruin thée and us.” But some tell a different story, and say that Antipater asked whether, in case he indulged the Athenians in the matter of the garrison, Phocion would go surety that his city would abide by the peace and stir up no trouble; and that when Phocion was silent and delayed his answer, Callimedon, surnamed Carabus,! an arrogant man and a hater of democracy, sprang to his feet and cried: “ But even if the fellow should prate such nonsense, Antipater, wilt thou trust him and give up what thou hast planned to do?”

XXVIII. Thus the Athenians were obliged to re- ceive a Macedonian garrison, which was under the command of Menyllus, an equitable man and a friend of Phocion. But the measure was held to be an arrogant one, and rather a display of power which delighted in insolence than an occupation due to stress of circumstance. And it came at a time which added not a little to the distress of the people. For the garrison was introduced on the twentieth of the month Boédromion, while the celebration of the mysteries was in progress, on the day when the god Iacchus is conducted from the city to Eleusis, so that the disturbance of the sacred rite led most men to reflect upon the attitude of the heavenly powers in earlier times and at the present day. For of old the mystic shapes and voices were vouchsafed to them in the midst of their most glorious successes,

1 Stag-beetle.

yever Oat ovv éxrrnée cal OapBer Tov Torepior, vov o€ Tols avTots lepols Ta Sucyepéotata abn THs 'EArdbos ericKoTety Tous Oeovs, Kal Kabv-BpilecOar Tov ayiwtatov Tod ypovov Kal Adsorov AUTOS, ETM@VULOV TOV LEYLOTOV KAKOV yEevomevon.
,
TpOTEpov pev OvV OAtlyoLs ETEaL Ypnaopov é&- e 5 is A , '7 ? t
veykav at Awdwvides TH TOdEL "TA aKpwTHpLa THs Aptéuisos hurAdooev," Stas aAXoL 1) Aa-
A
Boo tore 5é rept Tas Huepas éxetvas ai Tawviat pév, als eptedtTTovo. Tas. puoTLKAaS KOtTAaS, Bartopevat Oarypivov avti gowixod ypa@pa Kal
a a \ vexpaoes avnveyxay: 6 bé peifov hv, Ta TmapaBa-TTOMEVA TOV LOLATLKOY TAVTA TO TpoatKoV avOos
" 4 \ t / > /
gxxve. pvaoTny O€ NoVoVTAa yotpidtov év KavOape@
Aupeve KATOS ocuvérXaBe Kal Ta KaTw pépN TOD TWOMATOS Apt THS KotdLas KATETTLE, TPOOELKVUVTOS
avtTois tov Oeod mpodhavas ott Tav KdtTw Kal
N , / \ v /
mpos Oaracan otepnOevtes THY avw TOoALY Stadv-Aa€ovewv.
/
'H pev ovv dpovpa ba Mévuardov ovdév jnviace
Tovs avOpwrous: tav dé ato ndicbévTwy Tov TOMTEVMLATOS Sta Treviav UTép pupious Kal dioxe-Aious yEevouevwv of TE pévovTes EdoKOUY TYéETALA
a \ ,
Kal aTina mdcyew, of te Sua TOUTO THY ToALW
> U \ lA > , 3 4
éxdeTrovTes Kal peractavTes eis Opaxny, Avtimd-
1 See the Themistocles, xv. 1.
2 Artemis was the patron goddess of Munychia.
208

PHOCION

and brought consternation and affright upon their enemies ;! but now, while the same sacred cere- monies were in progress, the gods looked down with indifference upon the most grievous woes of Hellas, and the profanation of the season which had been most sweet and holy in their eyes made it for the future give its name to their greatest evils. Indeed, a few years before this the Athenians had received an oracle from Dodona bidding them “ guard the summits of Artemis,’? that strangers might not seize them ; and now, during the days of the festival, when the fillets with which they entwine the mystic chests were dyed, instead of purple they showed a sallow and deathly colour, and, what was more signi- ficant still, all the articles for common use which were dyed along with the fillets took the natural hue. Moreover, as a mystic initiate was washing a pig in the harbour of Cantharus,? a great fish seized the offering * which he held and devoured the lower parts of its body as far as the belly, by which Heaven clearly indicated to them in advance that they would be deprived of the lower parts of the city which adjoined the sea, but would retain the upper city. Now, the garrison, owing to the influence of Me- nyllus, did no harm to the inhabitants; but the citizens who were deprived of their franchise be- cause of their poverty numbered more than twelve thousand, and those of them who remained at home appeared to be suffering grievous and undeserved wrongs, while those who on this account forsook the city and migrated to Thrace, where Antipater

3 Part of the harbour of Peiraeus.
‘ Intended for Demeter, the chief divinity of the mysteries.
209
VOL. VII. P
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tpov ynv Kal woALY AUTOS TapacxXoVTOS, éKTreE-TOALOPKNMEVOLS E@KETAD.
XXIX. 'O 6€ Anpocdévous ev Kadaupia cai
‘Tarepeisov mpos Krewvais Oavatos, wept ov év Grows yéeypamrrat, povovovK épwta Kal mdo0oyv
"AOnvaios “AXeEdvdpov cat Pidrimrov tapiotn.
Kat TovtTo! Srep Vorepov, avatpeOdvtos * Avtiyovou kal TaV averdovTwr éexeivoy apEapévwyv Bid-CecOat cal AvTreEty TOs avOpweTrOUs, aVnp dy PoLKOS év Dpvyia xwptov opyTtwv Twudopévou Twos, “Ti motets; otevdtas, ‘“’Avtiyovoy,” eire, “ Enta:”
TovuTo! roAXNois emer Néyery Stauynwovevovar Tov éxelvav Tov Baciréwr Oupov, os TO péya Kal yevvaioyv evrrapairntov elyov, oy wamTep AvTi-TATpos LOL“wTOV TpocwT@ Kal davrAoTnTL YAa-pevdtou Kal Siaitns evTedeia KATELPwWVEVOMEVOS THY é£ouciav eax GeoTepos 7 Tots maoxouet KAKOS Seomorns kal TUpavvos. dSpuws 8 odv 0 Paxiwv kal muyns arnd\Aake Todos denBels rob ’Apti-TaTpov, Kal devyouct dverrpaEatro wn KaOdtrep ot Roetrot TOV peOroTapévav UTép TA Kepavvia dpn cat Tov Taivapov éxreceiv tis “EXXdébos, GAG ev TleXotrovvno Katotxetv, av cat ‘Ayvavidns jy o

acuKxopavTns. émipedopevos S€ TOY KaTa THY TOMY Tpaws Kal vouipws TOs wey doTeious Kal
Vapievtas év tais apyais del ouvetye, Tovs dé ToAuTpaypwovas Kal vewTEptoTds, AUT@ TO 1)
1 rovro retained in both places by Bekker; the first is deleted by Coraés, after Reiske; the second is corrected to tére by Sintenis'.
210

755

PHOCION

furnished them with land and a city, were like men driven from a captured city.

XXIX. Moreover, the death of Demosthenes in Calauria, and that of Hypereides at Cleonae, about which I have written elsewhere,! made the Athe- nians yearn almost passionately for Philip and Alex- ander. At a later time, after Antigonus had been slain,? and those who slew him began to oppress and vex the people, a peasant in Phrygia who was digging on his farm was asked by someone what he was doing, and answered: "I am looking for Antigonus."' So now many were moved to speak, as they called to mind how the greatness and generosity of those illustrious kings made their wrath easy to appease ; whereas Antipater, although he tried to conceal his power under the mask of a common man of mean attire and simple mode of life, was really a more burdensome tyrant and master to those who were in trouble. But nevertheless Phocion successfully pleaded with Antipater for the exemption of many from exile, and for those who went into exile he obtained the privilege of residing in Peloponnesus, instead of being driven out of Hellas beyond the Ceraunian mountains and the promontory of Taena- rum like other men in banishment. Of this number was Hagnonides the public informer. Furthermore, by managing the affairs of the city with mildness and according to the laws, he kept the men of edu- cation and culture always in office, while the busy- bodies and innovators, who withered into insignifi- cance from the very fact that they held no office and

1 See the Demosthenes, chapters xxvili.—xxx. 2 Antigonus was defeated by Seleucus and Lysimachus at Ipsus, in Phrygia, in 301 B.c., and fell in the battle.

211
p Q
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dpxew unde OopuBeiy atropapatwvopévous, edidake piroxywpety Kal ayarayv yewpyobvtas. opav dé
\ 4 fa) N V4 > 4
Tov Elevoxpatny teXovvTa TO peToixtoy éBovrETO lA lA e b A , > A ypayrat toditny: o 6é ameimre,-pyoas ovx av
n 4 A

peTacXely TAaUTNS THS ToNtTELas Tepl Hs emmpéoBevev iva pn yévntat.
XXX. Tot 5&€ MevidArgouv dwpeav ait@ kal
, , >] 4 4 9 > A b]
vpnuata didovtos, atexpivato unt éxetvov ‘AXe-Eavdpou BeAtiova eivat wnTe KpeLTTOVA THY aLTiaV
eh’ 4 Aneta viv oO ToTEe pn SeEdpevos. GANA Poxw ye TO Tatdl NaBetv Seopévov tod Mevva-Xx ce @® 4 lA 93 J ce 2\ \ ; ipl ou, wm pév, eéltev, “éay pev awdppovn petaBaropmevos, apkéoes Ta TOU TaTpos’ ws 8
V4 “A J \ e , > 39 > 4 \
Eyes viv, ovdey ixavov éotiw.’ "Avtitatp@ é 4 TpaXvTEpoy amexpivato PBovropévp te yeverBas
A A Q 4 3
ds avtov Tav pn mpeTvovtay: “Ov duvatat yap,” 8 ‘6c? 4 ee \ / \
ELTITED, AvtTimatpos apa pot Kali Pirm Kat
, a ” N \ > 4 J \ KoAaKke ypnoOar. tov dé “Avtimatpov avtov eimrety Aéyouow ws dveiy avT@ dirov ’AOnvnow 5) \ “ dvtav, Paxiwvos cai Anpddov, tov pev AaBetv
b , N \ A > > / \ ov meémeiKe, TOV dé Std0US OUK Eu“TréeTANKE. Kal pévtoe. Paxiwy pev ws apetnv éredetxvuTo THY
;
Teviav, év 7 TocavTaKs “AOnvaiwv otpatnyncas
a 4
Kail Baoirevor dirois yYpnoduevos éyxaTeyynpace, Anpadns 66 T@ TAOUT@ Kail Tapavopwrv éxadrw-
A cy mwiteto. vosov yap ovtos “AOnynot tote pH yopever E€vov 7) yiAlas atroTtivey Tov Yopnyor, dmavras eicayayov Eévovs Tovs yopevoytas
212

PHOCION

raised no uproars, were taught by him to be fond of home and to delight in tilling the soil. When he saw that Xenocrates paid the resident alien tax, he offered to enrol him as a citizen; but the philosopher refused, saying that he could not take part in an administration for the prevention of which he had served on an embassy.!

XXX. When Menyllus offered Phocion a gift of money, he replied that neither was Menyllus better than Alexander,? nor was there any stronger reason why the man who would not accept it then should take it now. Menyllus, however, begged him to take the money for his son Phocus at least, whereupon Phocion said: " For Phocus, should he be converted to sobriety of life, his patrimony will be enough ; but as he is now, nothing is sufficient." Again, when Antipater desired him to do something that was not seemly, he gave him a sharper answer, saying: " Anti- pater cannot have from me the services of friend and flatterer at once." And Antipater himself once said, as we are told, that he had two friends at Athens, Phocion and Demades; one he could never persuade to take anything, the other he could never satisfy with his gifts. And verily Phocion displayed as a virtue the poverty in which, though he had been so many times a general of Athens and had enjoyed the friendship of kings, he had come to old age ; whereas Demades made a great parade of his wealth, even though he was violating the laws to do so. For instance, there was a law of Athens at this time forbidding a choregus to have a foreigner in his chorus, under penalty of a thousand drachmas; but Demades presented a chorus of a hundred members

1 Cf. chapter xxvii. 2 Cf. chapter xviii.

ExaTOv dvTas cpa Kat THY onulay ava xirtas vmep éxdarou elarjvey Kev eis TO Jéatpov. Anpeg be 76 vi@ yuny aryopevos, " "Eyob per," elev,
'@ Tail, THY ONY UNTEPA. yapobvTos 0vde o yeltov ¥oBero tots b€ cots yapous Kat Baowrets Kat duvaotat cvyxopnyovaor.
"Evoxhow Tov be TO Doxiorr TOV 'AOnvatov 6TwS amarrakn THY ppoupav mwetoas Tov 'Avti-TaTpov, elTe wn TpocSoKay metoew elTE paiddov opay owppovobvra, TOV Sfjwov Kal 'TONTEVOpEVOY eUTAKTOS dua TOV PoBov, éxelyny HED det dmb ito THY mpeo Beiay, Ta O€ Ypynuata pn TparTew, aN pednewp Kal dvaBadrecbat Tov "Aprimatpov ETrELoE. petaBavtes ouv Anpaday Tapexdhovv.
o d€ mrpodvpas bt bran Kal TOV vioV eXov amrijpev eis Maxebdoviay, v7 Satpoves TLWOS;, Os couxev, els TOUTO KaLpov Kop Gels év & KATELXETO poev
'Avtimratpos nn yoo, Kdeav8pos bé Tay mpa-YUaTOV eyKPATNS yeryoves eUpev emLaToNay Anud-ov yeypampéevny T pos '"Avtiyovoy «is 'Actay, TapaKanrodyTos avTov emupavijvar TOUS Tept THY
"Edda, Kal Maxedoviay, ¢ eK Tada.od Kat cam pou
K pepapevors TT PLOVOS, TOV 'Avtimatpov ovT@

TKOpavTos. @s ovr eiSev auTov Gi try LEVOV 0 Kdaavépos, cuvehaBe, Kat TparTa fev TOV vito éyyus T pocaryaryev aréapager, Gare xatadefacOat Tots KOMTOLS TO alua TOV TmaTépa Kal Kata-TAnaOhvar Tou povou, peta Tadta bé ets ayapi-ortay avrov Kal m poboatav TOAAA AoLdopHaas kat xaOuBpicas améxrecvev.
214

all of whom were foreigners, and at the same time brought into the theatre his fine of a thousand drachmas for each one of them. Again, when he was bringing home a wife for his son Demeas, he said to him: “ When I married thy mother, my son, not even a neighbour noticed it; but to thy nuptials kings and potentates are contributing.”

When the Athenians importuned Phocion to go and persuade Antipater to remove the garrison, whether it was because he despaired of persuading him, or because he saw that the people were more sensible and conducted public affairs with more de- corum when they were thus under the influence of fear, he continually rejected that mission; he did, however, persuade Antipater not to exact the moneys due from the city, but to delay, and postpone their payment. The people, accordingly, transferred their importunities to Demades. He readily undertook the mission, and taking his son with him set out for Macedonia. He arrived there, as some heavenly power, doubtless, would have it, precisely at the time when Antipater was already afflicted with sick- ness, and when Cassander, who had assumed control - of affairs, had found a letter which Demades had written to Antigonus in Asia, beseeching him to present himself suddenly in Greece and Macedonia, which hung by an old and rotten thread, as he facetiously called Antipater. When, therefore, Cas- sander saw Demades after his arrival, he arrested him, and first slaughtered his son, whom he had brought so near that the folds of his father’s robe caught the blood of his murder and were filled with it, and then, after heaping much insult and abuse upon him for his ingratitude and treachery, slew the father too.

215

XXXI. "Ezret dé ’Avtimatpos atrobetEas IloAvom epXovTa oTpaTnyoy, Kdoavépov dé xiALapxov, éFédutrev, evOds Siavacras O Kdoavdpos Kal TpoxaTarapBaveov Ta Tpaypata Twéurer KaTa taxos Nexdvopa To Mewar» duddoxov Tis ppouvpapyxias, Tp éxdnrov TOV “Avturatpov Odavarov yevéa Pa Kedevoas THY Mouvuxiap mapa-AaBeiv. yevopevou S€ TouvTov, Kat pel nuépas

oriryas mudopeveov TOV "AOnvator 6 bru TeOunKev O
"Avtitatpos, é€v aitiais 0 Dwxiwy hv Kat Kaxas Tcovev @s tpoatcOopevos Kal KaTacLwTioas xapure tod _ Nuxavopos. o 6€ TOVTM@Y pév OvK eppoviter, € evTuyX avov dé T@ Nixdvope kal dva-Aeyouevos els TE Tada TOLs 'AOnvatous ™pGov
avTov Kal KeXapto uevov mapeixe, Kal prroripias Twas émetce kal datrdvas brootivat yevouevoy arywvoderny.
XXXII. "Ev tovr@ Sé Kal [lorvamrépxov, THY TOU Baciréws érripedevay eyav ud éauT@ Kat KAT ATOMTEVOMEVOS Tov Kacavépor, emeprpey émiaToANY Tos év doret YEYPALpEVND, @s TOU
Bac iréws amobibavros avrois THV Snwoxpatiav Kal ToNrLtTever Oat Kara Ta maT pla mavras "AOnvaious KeXevovTos. mV dé TOUTO Kara TOU Dooxio-v0s émtBouny. cvaKevalouevos yap eis éavtov, OS pix pov DaTepov éderEe Tots Epyats, 0 Ilodvorépyov THY TOMY, ovdev rrr e Tepatvery pa Tov Pwxiwvos éxmecovtos: éxmeceiaOar Se éxeivov

1 Not to be taken in its literal meaning of commander of a thousand, but in the general sense of lieutenant-general, second in command. Antipater vainly sought to deprive his son of the succession.

216

756

PHOCION

XXXII. And when Antipater died, after appointing Polysperchon general-in-chief, and Cassander chiliarch,! Cassander at once became rebellious, promptly took the government into his own hands, and sent Nicanor with all speed to relieve Menyllus from the command of the garrison at Athens, bidding him take over Munychia before Antipater's death became known. This was done, and when, after a few days, the Athenians learned that Antipater was dead,? they blamed Phocion severely, alleging that he had known about it before and had held his peace as a favour to Nicanor. Phocion, however, paid no heed to these charges, but by interviews and discussions with Nicanor rendered him in general mild and gracious to the Athenians, and, in particular, persuaded him to undertake sundry expensive exhibitions as director of games.

XXXII. In the meantime, too, Polysperchon, who had the king? in his own personal charge and was seeking to thwart the schemes of Cassander, sent a letter to the citizens of Athens, announcing that the king restored to them their democracy and ordered that all Athenians should take part in the administration of the city according to their earlier polity. This was a plot against Phocion. For Polysperchon was scheming (as he plainly showed a little later) to dispose the city in his own interests, and had no hope of succeeding unless Phocion was banished ; he was sure, however, that Phocion would be banished if the

3 In 319 B.c.

3 The imbecile Philip Arrhidaeus, half-brother of Alexan- der. The other king, the little son of Alexander by Roxana, was in Epeirus with Olympias, the mother of Alexander. See the Humenes, iii. 1 and 7, with the notes.

a a ? 4 bd f a dua tov atevndicpévoy ereyv0évtwv TH TWoN-
, / A Aa A /
Telg Kai wdadw To Biya dnuayoyav KaracxovTov
Kal TUKOPAVYTOV.
¢€ / \ \ A A b 4
Trroxtvovpéverv S€ pos tavbta tev 'AOnvaiwr,
/ > a > a) e 4 >
Bovropevos evtuxety avtois o Nixavwp, ev Ileepases BovArAns yevouévns, TapnrOe, TO Poxiworvi 9 , \ a Us Q c A > \ éumirtevoas To capa. Aepxvrrov oé Tov émi THS K@pas oTpaTnyod cudAAaBeEiv avTov émriye-
a / pnaoavtos, éxeivos pev mpoatcOopevos é&erndnce,
\ \ A\ 9 , \ n e
kal havepos Hv evOvs apuvovpevos THY TOALY, O
\ 4 > \ A 4 X wv \ \
5é¢ Dwxiwv eri T@ TpoécOar Tov avdpa Kai py KaTacxel éyxanrovpevos pn TioTEevey pev TO Nixavops: cai pndév an' adtov mpoadoxav Sevov:
ef O€ p11}, waAXrov eOérXeww AdsKotpevos 7 abieav ghavepos yevéecOar. Todto Sé€ brép avrod pev av Tit oKoTrovvTt SoKoin KadoKayabiKads NErAEXOat kal yevvaiws: o S€ ets tartpidos atroxivduvevwrv cuTnpiay, Kal tav'Ta otpatnyos Kal apyYwv, ovK
oda py peiCoy Te wapaBaiver nal mpecBvtepov

TO Tpos TOUS TroAiTas Sixatov. ode yap éxeEivo
” 3 a a 4 \ > ,
éotiy evtrety, Gtt hoRovpevos pev Els TToAEMOV 3 a N U e / b U fe)
éuParety thy wordt o DPwxiwyv amecyeto Tov Nixavopos, GAAws 5é mpovBadrrA€cTO THY TiaTLY kal To Sixatov, Strws aidovpevos exeivos novxiav
ayn cat pndév abdixn tovs ‘AOnvatovs: add’ dvtws Gotxev toxyupa Tis ad’t@ Tept Tov Nexavopos éy-
A / yevéoOat triatis, dv ye TOAN@Y TrpodtaBaddorTwY 218

disfranchised citizens overwhelmed the administration, and the tribunal was again at the mercy of demagogues and public informers.

Since the Athenians were somewhat stirred by these communications, Nicanor wished to address them,[1] and after a council had been convened in Peiraeus, he came before it, relying upon Phocion for the safety of his person. But Dercyllus, the Athenian general in command of the district, made an attempt to arrest him, whereupon Nicanor, who became aware of the attempt in time, dashed away, and was clearly about to inflict speedy punishment upon the city. Phocion, however, when assailed for letting Nicanor go and not detaining him, said that he had confidence in Nicanor and expected no evil at his hands; but in any case, he would rather be found suffering wrong than doing wrong. Now, such an utterance as this might seem honourable and noble in one who had regard to his own interests alone; but he who endangers his country’s safety, and that, too, when he is her commanding general, transgresses, I suspect, a larger and more venerable obligation of justice towards his fellow citizens. For it cannot even be said that it was the fear of plung- ing the city into war which made Phocion refrain from seizing Nicanor, but that he sought to excuse himself on other grounds by protestations of good faith and justice, in order that Nicanor might respect these obligations and keep the peace and do the Athenians no wrong; nay, it would seem that he really had too strong a confidence in Nicanor. For though many gave warning against that officer and

1 Nicanor, acting in the interests of Cassander, wished to expose to the Athenians the designs of Polysperchon.

219

Kal Katnyopouvtwv émitiOecOar Te Uetparet cat dtaBuBalew ets Tarapiva Eévous nal d:apOeipew tivas Tov év Ilespatet xatouxovvtwy, od tpoo7-
>
KATO TOV AOYoV ovo éeriotevaEV, GAAA Kal Pido-

/ a / 9.7 /
pnrov tov Aaumtpews Wydiopa ypawavtos
"A@nvaious arravtas év tots StXots elvat Kai TO atpatny@® Paxiww mpocéxe, nuernoev, aypt
e a ov mpocdyav o Nixavwp éx tHs Movuvuyias ta
ed \ A /
oma Tov Ileipara treptetadpevce.
XXXTII. Tparropévwy b€ tovtwv o pev Do-
4 b] A \ aA \ > ,
xiwv éGopuBetto xai cated poveito tous AOnvaious Ul 3 e /
éEdyew Bovropevos, AréEavdpos dé o Hovvorrép-
\
YovTos vies Ke weTa Suvduews, Noyo ueyv etl Tov
/ a 3 ¥ 4 4 \ ‘\
Nixdvopa tots év adotet BonOyjowyr, Epyo Sé tTHV
, > 4 / > \ e fo
Tod, €& SvvatTo, KaTAaAnYomevos avTHnY éauTA TepiT@EeTH yevouevnv. ot Te yap puyddes avTo auvetaBarovtes evOus Hoav év dotet, Kal TOV
/ A Eévov dua nal TOV aTipwv mpos avTovs etadpa-
/
hovrTwy éxxrAnoia Trappyns nOpoicOn Kat data-KTOS, é€v 4 TOV Pwxiwva THs apyfs atrodvoayTes étépous etNovTo oTpaTnyous. et b€ wy oUYL@D Ets
A \
Aoyous o ’Adé~Eavdpos tO Nexdvope povos Tapa
To Telyos WhOn, Kai TodTO ToLodYTES TrOAAaKLS
e / A b / f > N e uToviay tots "AOnvaiow trapéoyov, ovK av 7
/
woAts Ovepuye Tov Kivduvov. érret dé ‘Ayvavidns 0 pyTwp evOvs errehveTo Tos Trept TOV Poxiwva kal KaTnyopes Tpodocias, ot pev wept KarrLpe-
/ an A
Sovta kai Xapixréa hoByOévtes amHnrOov éx THs
, e \ , b 9 A a f-
Tronews, 0 66 Daxiwy cal pet avtov Tav dirov 220

accused him of hostile designs against the Peiraeus, in that he was sending mercenaries across to Salamis, and tampering with some of the residents in Peiraeus, Phocion would not give heed to the story nor believe it at all. Indeed, even after Philomelus of Lamptrae brought in a decree that all Athenians should stand under arms and await orders from Phocion their general, he paid no attention to the matter, until Nicanor led his troops forth from Munychia and began to run trenches around the Peiraeus.

XXXII. In this state of affairs, Phocion, who now wished to lead the Athenians forth to battle, was stormed at and held in derision, and Alexander the son of Polysperchon came with an armed force. His ostensible design was to bring aid to the citizens against Nicanor, but he really wished to seize the city, if he could, now that she was ruinously divided against herself. For the exiles who had burst into the country with him were at once in the city, strangers and disfranchised citizens ran in to join them, and a motley and turbulent assembly was gathered together, in which Phocion was deposed from his command and other generals were chosen. And had not Alexander been seen in close confer- ence with Nicanor near the walls, and had not their interview, which was often repeated, rendered the Athenians suspicious, the city would not have escaped its peril. Moreover, Hagnonides the orator! at once assailed Phocion and denounced him as a traitor, whereupon Callimedon and Charicles? took fright and left the city, while Phocion, and with him those

1 The same as the public informer of xxix. 3.

3 Prominent partisans of Antipater, who had transferred their allegiance to Cassander, the son of Antipater, rather than to Polysperchon, the succéssor of Antipater.

ot TrapapeivaytTes @yovTo pos IloAvaTépyovTa.
Kat avveEnrOov avrois yapitt ToD Dwxiwvos o TIvataseds Yorwv cat Acivapyos o Kopivdsos, émitndecot Tov IloAvomépyovtos eivat Soxodvtes
, aA
kat ovvndes. appwotia S& xpnoapévov tod 9 Aewapxou cvxvas juépas év "Enarela Ssérpuar, év als 'Ayvewvidou meicavtos, 'Apyeotpatou bé To Whdiopa yparpavtos, éreute mpecBetav o dSHuos KaTnyopjycovcay tov Daxiwvos. dua dé Kal cuvémstav aupotepor te IloAvorépyovte peta
tov Bacthéws Tropevopévw trepl Kony Twa TIS Dwxidos, Papvyas, Kespévnv b7ro To *AKpovpiov épos, 6 vov T'aXrarny Kadodour.
"Evradéa 89 Beis o Tlodvaortépywr tov ypucody oupavionov, Kal Kabicas it' av'T@ Tov Baciréa

\ A 4 N N 4 > A b
kat Tous girous, Tov péev Aeivapyov evOvs éx mpoodov AaPely ExéXevoe Kai otpeBX\WoarTas
> “A A \ b] 4 b] 4 S amoxteivat, tots 6€ AOnvaios amwédwxe Royov.
a@s 5¢€ OdpuBov Kai Kpavynv érotouy dvtiKatna 3 t 3 A 4 \
yopouvTes GAAHAwY ev TH auVEdpi~, Kal TpocEddav o ‘Ayvewvidns citev, “"Arraytas nas eis
, 5] J 4, > , b] /
piav éuBarovtes yaredypav ’AOnvaios avatrép-S e , 99 e \ A > VA
rate Noyov vpéfovtas, o pev Bactreus éye-Nacey, of dé TepreaT@Tes TH cuvedpim Maxedoves kai Eévoe oxoAny dyovtes éreOvpouy axovetv, Kal Tovs mpéaBets TapexdAouy amo vevpatos évTad0a qoteiobar tTHv KaTnyopiav. hv dé ovdév gov, GANA TO pey Poxiwvie TodrAdKis aytéxpovcev oO
J 4 / @ A ,
LloAvorépxwv Aeyovtt, méxpt ov TH Baxtnpia
222

PHOCION

of his friends who remained faithful, set out to go to Polysperchon. There went forth with them also, out of regard for Phocion, Solon of Plataea and Deinarchus of Corinth,! who were reputed to be intimate friends of Polysperchon. But Deinarchus fell sick, and the party therefore tarried many days in Elateia, during which time the people of Athens, in accordance with a decree brought in by Archestratus and supported by Hagnonides, sent an embassy to denounce Phocion. Both the parties fell in with Polysperchon at the same time, as he was marching with the king near Pharygae, a village of Phocis lying at the foot of Mount Acrurium, which is now called Galata.

Here, then, Polysperchon, after setting up the golden canopy and seating beneath it the king and his friends, as soon as Deinarchus came forward, ordered him to be seized, tortured, and put to death,? and then gave audience to the Athenians. But they raised a tumultuous shouting with their denuncia- tions of one another in the council, and at last Hag- nonides came forward and said: “ Throw us all into one cage and send us back to Athens to render an account.” At this, the king burst out laughing; but the Macedonians and foreigners who were gathered about the council, having nothing else to do, were eager to listen, and nodded to the ambassadors to make their denunciation there. But there was no fairness in the conduct of the case, since, when Phocion tried to speak, he was frequently interrupted by Polysperchon, and at last, smiting the ground with

1 Antipater’s chief agent in Peloponnesus, ? In order to maintain himself in power, Polysperchon was forced to treat Antipater’s friends as his own enemies, matatas Thy ynv améotn Kal KatTectwrnoev.

€ A A
Hynpovos 5€ dijcavtos Ste waptus aVTO THS POS
Tov Sipov evvoia;s TloAvorépywr éoti, kab Tov TloAvorépyovtos aroxpivayévov mpos opyny,
A N lA
“Tlatcat pou mpos tov Bactdéa Kxatarpevdo-b>] 3 & 4 e A a / pevos, avamrnoncas o Baatrevs wpunoe NOYXN
‘N ¢ 4 4 \ A A
tov Hyrova marafar. tayv dé rob lodvotrép-
, > N 4 Py , \ VovTos meptkaBovTos auTov ovTw dteXvOn TO ouvédptov.
4 > A
XXXIV. Tov d¢ Poxiwva kai tovs pet avtov puArakhs Tepieyovons, door Tv éTalpwv ETVYoV ouUK éyyus éoTa@TeEs, @S TOUTO eldov, éyxadudevo. kal Stadvyovtes eowOnoav. éxetvous dé
A fo) ,
Knreltros ets “AOnvas aviye AOyo pev KptOnoopme-vous, épyw o€ amobaveiy KataKxexpimévous. Kat Tpoonvy TO oXnwa TH KouldH Avtrnpov, ed’ apdktats couCopévwmv avta@v d:a tov Kepapecxov
\ a e mpos TO Oéatpov: éxel yap avTovs Tpocayayav o Kyeitos cuvetyev, a Y THy éxxAnotav érX7-vev, axpt ov THY éxKANolay éTA7
e A
pwoav ot apyovtes, od SovAov, ov Févov, ov« ATtwov aTrokpivayTes, AAAA TaGL Kal Tacals avaTeTTapévov TO Siua Kal To Oéatpov trapa-
t 3 \ \ a > 9» \ n 4
ayovTes. émet O€ T éemtoToAn Tod Bactréws aveyvacOn, Néyovtos avT@ pev éyv@abat mpodo-

¢
Tas yeyovévat Tovs avdpas, éxetvors dé dedovar
/
THv Kptow érevOépors -te 57 Kal avTOVOmOLS Ov~CL, kat tovs avdpas o Kyeitos eionyayev, ot pev
f a A > , A J
BérrTicTo. THY TodtT@Y odGEvTOs TOU PwxKiwvos
J 4 \ 4 7 3 4
évecadvwavto kal Kato Kuavtes eddxpvor, els 224

PHOCION

his staff, he retired and held his peace. Moreover, when Hegemon! said that Polysperchon could bear witness to his good will towards the people, and Polysperchon replied in wrath, “Cease telling lies against me in the presence of the king,” the king sprang to his feet and would have smitten Hegemon with a spear. But Polysperchon quickly threw his arms about the king, and thus the council was dissolved.

XXXIV. A guard was now placed about Phocion and his associates, and at sight of this all of his friends who were standing at some remove covered up their faces and sought safety in flight. Phocion and his party, however, were taken back to Athens by Cleitus, ostensibly to be tried, but really under sentence of death. And besides, the manner of their return to the city was shameful, for they were carried on waggons through the Cerameicus to the theatre. For thither Cleitus brought them and there he kept them, until the magistrates had made up an assembly, from which they excluded neither slave, foreigner, nor disfranchised person, but allowed all alike, both men and women, free access to theatre and tribunal. After the letter of the king had been read aloud, in which he said that according to his . judgement the men were traitors, but that their fellow citizens, who were freemen and self-govern- ing, should pronounce sentence upon them, Cleitus led the men in. Then the best of the citizens, at sight of Phocion, covered their faces, bent their heads, and wept. One of them, however, rose up

1 One of Phocion’s party, and, like him, under accusation of treachery, 3.e. of favouring Cassander rather than Poly- sperchon.

dé dvac ras eToApnoev elmrely Ott, _THMKAUTHY Kplow ey KEXELPLKOTOS T® See tov Bactréws, KarOS exer tovs Sovdous wat TOUS Eévous amren-
4 Oetv éx THiS exkAnatas. ovK GvATXOMEVOD | 6é TOV

TOAD, ann’ avaxpayovray Barrew TOUS OXL-Yapxecous Kal pa odnpous, adros peev ovdels vmép TOU Peoxiwvos émexelpnoey eitrety, autos 5é Nahe as Kat HOLS eEaxovobeis, “ Tlorepov,” elTrev, “ adixws q Sixaiws aTroKTeivat BovreoGe nas; drroxpwapevov 6€ Tver ore Oucalas, 758 “Kal tovto,” épn, “ Tas yuooerOe 7 akovoar-5 Tes; émel dé ovév padAXov irovov, éyyuTépw

a 6? A 4, ” 3 cc ? A e mpocedOav, “'Eyo pév, elirev, “ adtxety opo-Noyo, Kal Gavdrou TLLGMAL TA TETOALTEVLEVA

evauT@: Toutous 6é, avdpes "AOnvaior, bua TL AMTOKTEVELTE pLNoeV adixodvras; ° crroxpwapevov bé TONY, “Ore col Pirov elo, o pev Pw-Kiwy aTrooTas novxiav iyyer, 0 dé Ayvenidns
Whpiopa Yeypappevov EX ov aveyva, Kad & Tov SHpov edet Xetporovely Tept TOV avdpeav et doxov-ow ad.xety, tous 5é dvdpas, av KaTayetpoTovn-Oacuv, amroOuna Kew.
XXXV. ‘Avayvad Vévtos dé Tob Wn dio paros
nEtouv tives Tpocypaderv Srrws Kal aTpeBrwOeis Pooxiwr amroBavor, Kal Tov TPOXOV elo pepey Kat TOUS varnpetas canelv 7 pooeTaTT OV. o 6¢ “Aqve-vidns kal Tov Kyetrov opav Bvoyepaivorra Kal
TO mpary wa BapBaptxov elvat Kal p1apov nyou-pevos, “"Oray,” &bn, Kadrrpébovta tov pactt-1 In cases where the penalty was not fixed by law, the accuser proposed a penalty, and the accused had the right to and had the courage to say that, since the king had put a case of such importance into the hands of the people, it were well that slaves and foreigners should leave the assembly. This the multitude would not tolerate, but cried out to stone the oligarchs and haters of the people. Therefore no one else under- took to speak in behalf of Phocion, but he himself, with great difficulty, at last made himself heard, saying: “Do ye wish to put us to death unjustly or justly?” And when some answered, “Justly,” he said: “ And how will ye determine this without hearing me?” But they were not a whit more willing to hear him, and therefore, drawing nearer, he said: “I admit my own guilt, and I assign death as the penalty! for my political conduct; but these men with me, men of Athens, are not guilty at all, and why will ye put them to death?” “ Because they are thy friends,’ answered many, whereat Pho- cion retired and held his peace. But Hagnonides read aloud an edict which he had prepared, in ac- cordance with which the people were to vote by show of hands whether they thought the men to be guilty, and the men, if the show of hands was against them, were to be put to death.

XXXV. After the edict had been read aloud, some demanded an additional clause providing that Phocion should be tortured before he was put to death, and insisted that the rack should be brought in and the executioners summoned. But Hagnonides, who saw that Cleitus was displeased at this, and considered the measure abominable and barbarous, said : “ When. ever we catch that rascally Callimedon, men of Athens, propose a counter-penalty. The court then chose between the two penalties. Phocion waived all the advantage of this right, as Socrates, in a different way, had done.

yiav AdBoper, a avdpes “AOnvaior, otpeBdwaobev mept bé Deoxiwvos ovdey eyo ypapw rTotov-TOV. evraiba TOV em vereey TLS UTepwvncer “’Op0as ye av TOLD" dv yap Poxiwva Bacavi-TMpEV, TE ti TOLNTOMEY ; “ émixupwbevTos dé Tov vaio patos Kal Ths xetporovias arrodobeians, ovdeis Kab nuevos, Gra tavres éEavacravtes, ob
dé Treio Tou Kal arepavwodpevol, KATEXELPOTOvnocav avtav Oavatov. joav 56 avy Te Paxiworve Nixoxdijs, @ovdinros, ‘Hyjpov, Tlvdonrjs° Anpntpiou dé Tod Parnpéws Kal KadaArpedovtos Kat Xaptxréous Kal TMV GOV aToVTMY KaTeEWn-dicOn Oavatos.
XXXVI. ‘Os obdv dtadvcavtes THY éxKAnciav ipyov eis TO Seo parnplov TOUS dvdpas, ot pep adnot, TEpUT NEKOMEVOV TOV pirov auTois Kal oixeton, odupopevot Kal catabpnvobvtes eBdd.Cov, TO 5€ Dwxiwvos ™p0g wTrov olov Ste TT pPATHYOY an excAnotas I POUTréELTETO Brérovtes, édav-pavov THY amdaBevav Kal peyarouxiav TOU avopos. ob 6é ex pot KaK@s Edeyov TapaT pexXov-TES" els dé Kat 7 poo én Tua ev eevartias T poo ed-
Gov. Ore Kal TOY PDoxiova Aéyerar Brepavra T pos TOUS apxovras elmrely “Ov mavoe Tis do xnwovovrTa ToUTOV;” éret dé Oovdirrros év
T@ Sea paTnpi yevopevos Kal TO KevELov opa@v TptBdpevov nyavaKrel Kal KaTéxXae THY cUp-popar, @S OU TpognKovTws TO Poxiov TUvAT ON upevos, “ Kita ove ayardas,” elev, ‘Ste pera Poxiwvos amobvija Kets; ‘ epopevou bé TLVOS TOV
dirwv ef te mpos Paxov réyet Tov viov, “ Tdvu

we will put him to the torture ; but I cannot make any such motion in the case of Phocion.’”” Here some decent fellow called out in response: “Right thou art; for if we should torture Phocion, what would be left for us to do to thee?” So the form of the edict was approved, and when the show of hands was taken, no one keeping his seat, but all rising to their feet, and most of them wreathing themselves with garlands, they condemned the men to death.
Now, there were with Phocion, Nicocles, Thudippus, Hegemon, and Pythocles; and Demetrius of Pha-lerum, Callimedon, Charicles, and sundry others, were condemned to death zn absenitd.

XXXVI. When, accordingly, the assembly had been dissolved and the men were being led to the prison, the rest of them, as their friends and rela- tives clung about them, walked along lamenting and shedding tears; but the countenance of Phocion was the same as it used to be when he was escorted from the assembly as general, and when men saw it, they were amazed at the man’s calmness and at his grandeur of spirit. His enemies, however, ran along by his side and reviled him; and one of them actu- ally came up and spat in his face. At this, as we are told, Phocion looked towards the magistrates and said : “ Will not someone stop this fellow’s unseemly behaviour?”’ Again, when Thudippus, on entering the prison and seeing the executioner bruising the hemlock, grew angry and bewailed his hard fate, declaring it not fitting that he should perish with Phocion, “Is it no satisfaction to thee, then,” said Phocion, “that thou art put to death in company with Phocion?” And when one of his friends asked him if he had any message for his son Phocus, fev ovr,” edn: “Aéyo put) pyynorxaxeiv ’AOnvai-

os. tov dé Nexoxréous, bs Hv avT@ TLcTOTATOS Tov dhitwy, TapaKkaXdodvTos STrws avToY édon TO ddppaxov muciy mpotepov, “Bapv pév, elzrev, “& Nexoxdes, éuol To aitnua Kal AUTNpor, érret dé ovdé GAO OvdéTroTE GOL Tapa Tov Biov ovdéev nXaploTnca, Kal TOUTO GUYYwWPa. TETWKOTWY 5é 46n mdavreyv To dappuaxov érréNutTre, Kat 0 Snpoaos oun edn Tpixpe Erepov, ei uy NABot Swdexa Spaxpuds, dcov thy odKHy a@veirat. ypovou bé yevopevou Kal SiatpiBis 6 Pwxiwv Kadécas TiWa
tov dirwv, cal eirra@v ei unde aTroBaveiv ‘AOnvnet

Swpeay éotiv, éexédevoe TO avOpar@ Sodvat TO KEpUaTLov.
XXXVIT. "Hy S€ jpuépa pnvds Movyvyravos évatn én déxa, Kal t@ Aut thy ToT TéwTrovTeEs oi immeis TapeEnecay' Ov of pev adelrovTo Tovs orepavous, of 5é mpos tas Oipas Sedaxpupévot THs etpxTns dréBrevav. épavn Se tots py Tavramacw w@pois Kai SiePOappévors br' opyis kal POovou tHv Wuyry, avootwTaTov yeyovévas TO pnd erioxeiv tHv Huépav éxeivnv, pndé xadapedcat Snuociov dovov tHv Tod éoptatovcay. ov pny adr wdotrep évdcéatEepovy nywviapevots Tots éyOpois Soke nal To cHpa TOD Pwxiwvos éEopigat nal pndé wip éevadoat pndéva tmpos THY tagmy 'AOnvaiwy. b10 diros pev ovdeis erorpunoev apacOat tov cwpatos, Kovwriwr $€ Tis, vrroupyelty eOtopevos Ta ToradTa ptcbod, xouicbévTa 230
59

PHOCION

"' Certainly," said he; "my message is that he cherish no resentment against the Athenians." Again, when Nicocles, his most faithful friend, begged the privilege of drinking the drug first, "O Nicocles," he said, "thy request is grievous to me and painful; but since I have never in all my life denied thee any other favour, I grant thee this one also." But when all the rest had drunk of it, the drug ran short, and the executioner refused to bruise another portion unless he were paid twelve drachmas, which was the price of the weight required. However, after a delay of some length, Phocion called one of his friends, and, asking if a man could not even die at Athens without paying for the privilege, bade him give the executioner his money.

XXXVII. It was the nineteenth day of the month Munychion,! and the horsemen conducting the procession in honour of Zeus were passing by the prison. Some of them took off their garlands, and others gazed at the door of the prison with tears in their eyes. And it was thought by all those whose souls were not wholly savage and debauched by rage and jealousy, that an impious thing had been done in not waiting over that day, and so keeping the city pure from a public execution when it was holding festival. However, his enemies, as if their triumph were in- complete, got a decree passed that the body of Phocion should be carried beyond the boundary of the country, and that no Athenian should light a fire for his obsequies. Therefore no friend of his ventured to touch his body, but a certain Conopion, who was wont to perform such services for hire,

1 Karly in May, 318 B.c.
231
a

A

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOV vexpoy uTép tHv *EXevoiva, wip AaBav éx
TAS Meyapixijs, éxavaev. n be yuvn Tapodoa pera, TOY Geparraividwr & Eywoe prev avTohe youa Kevov Kal KATETTELTED, evenevn 6¢ T@ KONT@ 7: Ta ooTa Kal Kopicaca VUKT@p els THY olxiay KaTo-puke Tapa tHy éotiav, eitrovca: “Zoi, @ Pirn éotia, TapaxaTaTibepat TavTa avd pos ayabod eiypava: av 6€ avTa Tois TaTppors a7r060S nplots, Stav "A@nvaior coppovyowa..
XXXVIII. Kai PEVTOL \V povou Bpaxéos dva-“yevopevou, Kal TOV Tpaypnatwv OtdacKovTwv olov emlioTaThy Kal PurAaKA Twppocurns Kat Sixatog v-yns 0 bf] 10s amr@Xécev, avdpiavta pev avTov Xarxooy aver Tnaay, eayav dé Snpociors Téheot
Ta OoTa. ToV O€ KaTHYyOpwv ‘Ayvwvidny yey avTol Oavarov KaTAXELpoTOVHT aves am éxTewvay, "Ent-Koupov dé Kal Anpopirov dmodpavras € ex THS To-AEws dvev pov 0 TOV Dwxiwvos vids eTLMepnTato.
Tobrov ovTe TaAXA omoudatov dvdpa yevéo Oars
gaci, Kat mardiakns épavra mapa mropvoBorK@ Tpepoperns Kara TUYNY Geodapp TO abeep Tapa-yever Oar hovyov ey Auxei@ Staheyouerep TOLOUTOV'
as Ei TO pirov AvoacOat pn aiaxpov EoTLD, oude TO inp opolws: et be wn TO eraipon, ovoe TO éraipay” ” Oéuevov ovv éavt@ pos THY em Oupiay Tov AOYov as ev éxovta, AvaacOat TH éraipav.
"AAG Ta pev Tmepl Poxiova mpaxévra TOV mept Leoxparny mad avéwynoe TOUS "EAAqvas, WS omororarns exeivy THS dpaptias TtauTns Kal Svotuxias TH ToNEL yevopuevns.
1 Cf. chapter xix.

232

carried the body beyond Eleusis, took fire from the Megarian territory, and burned it. The wife of Phocion,! however, who was present with her maid-servants, heaped up a cenotaph on the spot and poured libations upon it; then, putting the bones in her bosom and carrying them by night to her dwelling, she buried them by the hearth, saying: “To thee, dear Hearth, I entrust these remains of a noble man; but do thou restore them to the sepulchre of his fathers, when the Athenians shall have come to their senses.”

XXXVIII. And indeed, after a short time had passed, and when the course of events was teaching them what a patron and guardian of moderation and justice the people had lost, they set up a statue of him in bronze, and gave his bones a public burial. Moreover, as regards his accusers, the people themselves condemned Hagnonides and put him to death; while Epicurus and Demophilus, who had run away from the city, were found out by Phocion’s son and visited with his vengeance.

This son of Phocion,? we are told, turned out to be a man of no worth in general, and once, being enamoured of a girl who was kept in a brothel, chanced to hear Theodorus the Atheist discourse in the Lyceium as follows: “If there is no disgrace in ransoming a man beloved, the same is true of a woman loved ; what is true of a comrade, is true also of a mistress.’ Accordingly, his passion leading him to think the argument sound, he ransomed his mistress.

But Phocion’s fate reminded the Greeks anew of that of Socrates;* they felt that the sin and misfortune of Athens were alike in both cases,

2 Cf. chapters xx. and xxx.]. 3 In 399 B.c.

KATON

I. Katou dé TO pev yévos px emipaveias érxaBe Kal S0Ens amo TOU ™pomammou Kdravos, avd pos év SoEn Kat Suvdpe padora, Popaiov ryevopevou dz) apernv, ws év Tois mept éxelvou yéypamras, KarereipOn 6¢ ryovewy oppavos per” aderpoi Kauriwvos! cat Io Klas aderdas. Av 5é Kal LepBirtia Kdrwvos OMOpLIT LOS aberoy.

Kal WAVTES ovrot Tapa AtBieo A povaw Tpopyy Kal Stavtav elxov, Geip peév GyTt TpOs LNT POS, dyovre O€ THY moheTelav TOTe’ Ka yap elTrety ServoTatos iv, Kal TaAXNa cadpwv avnp év Trois pddora, kat dpovnpatos ovdevi “Pwpaiwy Upcepevos.
Aéyerau dé Karo evd Us ex maidiov T) TE pwv"yn Kat T@ Tpooan Kal tals mepl Tas TraLduds Siar psBais Oos bropaivery at pen Tov xal an ades BeBacov évy Tracw. loxov Te yap elxov avTov Tap puctay TeXeTLOUpYOY al oppad, Kal TOUS KohaKevouct Tpaxus @v Kat Tpooavrns, ert parrov éxpates tav éxpoRovvrav. Av dé Kal
7 pos yehora Komeoy dvaKivnros, apt pecdud-HaTOs oTravies T@ Tporame Staxeopevos, Kat apos Gpynv ov Taxus ovde OrALTONpOS, GpytcDels dé Svotrapairntos.
1 Ka:wlevos with Coraés and Bekker: Kazlwvos.

2 xpds with Coraés and Bekker, after Xylander : ris

CATO THE YOUNGER

I. Cato’s family got its first lustre and fame from his great-grandfather Cato (a man whose virtue gained him the greatest reputation and influence among the Romans, as has been written in his Life), but the death of both parents left him an orphan, together with his brother Caepio and his sister Porcia. Cato had also a half-sister, Servilia, the daughter of his mother.! All these children were brought up in the home of Livius Drusus, their uncle on the mother’s side, who at that time was a leader in the conduct of public affairs; for he was a most powerful speaker, in general a man of the greatest discretion, and yielded to no Roman in dignity of purpose.

We are told that from his very childhood Cato displayed, in speech, in countenance, and in his childish sports, a nature that was inflexible, imper- turbable, and altogether steadfast. He set out to accomplish his purposes with a vigour beyond his years, and while he was harsh and repellent to those who would flatter him, he was still more masterful towards those who tried to frighten him. It was altogether difficult to make him laugh, although once in a while he relaxed his features so far as to smile; and he was not quickly nor easily moved to anger, though once angered he was inexorable.

1 By her second husband, Q. Servilius Caepio, who was also the father of Cato’s half-brother Caepio.

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘Os odv eis TO pavOdvew Ke, vwOpos Hv ava-AaBeiy Kal Bpadvs, dvadkaBov Sé Kdtoyos Kal
, A \ 4 ” A \
pevnpovexos. 6 dy nal mépuxev GAXwS, TOUS péV
EVPVELS AVaLVNTTLKOUS MAaAXOV Elvat, pYNMOVEKOUS 5é Tovs peta Trovou Kal TpaypuaTtelas Tapadeyopévous: yivetat yap oloy éyxavpa TIS Yuyns TOV pabnpatwv Exactov. éoixe b¢ cal To SvamTerotTov T@ Katou toeiv épywdeorépay thy padnow:
Tacxew yap Te TO pavOdvew atexvas éort, Kal
To weiOecOat Tayv Tos Arrov avrtéyey Suvapevors aupBéBnne. 810 weiOovtat parrov véot yepovtev Kal vocobvtes bytatvovtav, Kal drAws Ev ols 10 dmopoty acbevéotatov éott, paatoyv Td mpoaTiéuevov. TO méevtot Tatdaywy@ tov Kad-tava weiecOar pév Aéyouot Kal Troteiy atrav TO mMpocTtaTTopevoy, ExdoTtou O€ THY aitiay amraiTety
\ \ / 4 @ /
Kal ro dia Ti truvOdverOat. Kai yap Hv yapies
0 Tavaywyos avToD Kal Noyov éywv TOD KovdU-Nou mpoyerporepoy, Gvona LapTrndov.
II. "Ere &€ rracdds tod Kdtawvos évtos érpar-Tov ot cvUppayo TOV “Pwpaiwy Sires pebéEovct
a > € 4 , 4 /
ths év “Peon tordsteias’ Kat tis Tlopraidios a > \ N \ / 54 > g/
LiAAWY, AvP ToNEwLKOS Kal péytoTov Eywv aki-
“a \ 4 4 , +] b “A wpa, Tov 6€ Apovoov didos, xatéXuce Tap avT@ Wrelovas nuépas, ev als yeyovwms trois tratdioss
50 cov A 99 9 co? e \ e ” PY / ocuvynOnes, ye,” elev, “ Oras UTép nuav Sen-aeabe Tov Deiov auvaywvicacbar trepi Tis qoX-
, 99 e ‘ = , 4 3 ,
tetas. o pev ovv Karriwov diapedidoas ée-238
760

CATO THE YOUNGER

When, accordingly, he came to study, he was slug- gish of comprehension and slow, but what he comprehended he held fast in his memory. And this is generally the way of nature: those who are well endowed are more apt to recall things to mind, but those retain things in their memory who acquire them with toil and trouble ;! for everything they learn becomes branded, as it were, upon their minds. It would appear, too, that Cato's reluctance to be persuaded made his learning anything more labo- rious. For, to learn is simply to allow something to be done to you, and to be quickly persuaded is natural for those who are less able to offer resistance. Therefore young men are more easily persuaded than old men, and sick folk, than those who are well, and, in a word, where the power to raise objections is weakest, the act of submission is easiest. However, we are told that Cato was obedient to his tutor, and did everything that was enjoined upon him, although in each case he demanded the reason and wanted to know the why and wherefore. And, indeed, his tutor was a man of culture, and more ready to reason with a pupil than to thrash him. His name was Sarpedon.

II. While Cato was still a boy, the Italian allies of the Romans were making efforts to obtain Roman citizenship. One of their number, Pompaedius Silo,? aman of experience in war and of the highest po- sition, was a friend of Drusus, and lodged at his house for several days. During this time he became familiar with the children, and said to them once: "Come, beg your uncle to help us in our struggle for citizenship.'"' Caepio, accordingly, consented with a

1 Cf. Aristotle, De Mem. i. 1, 2, 24. ? Erroneously called Publius Silo in the Marius, xxxiii. 2.

a \ , Oe bd / \
vevoe, TOU 5€ Kdtwvos ovdéy aroxpiwapévov Kat Brémovtos eis Tous Eévous atevés Kat Brooupor, e Ul 8 66 D0 bé " * co fA @ /
0 Tloptraidcos, 'Xv 5é," etzrev, '' jpiv, @ veavia, TL A€yets; ov olos ef Tots Eévors cvANapBave-N \ a (c4 e 3 , 2? A Oat wpos Tov Oeiov, BaTrep 0 adeAPOs;" pwn POey, de A / > a a A \ A youevou o€ TOU Katwvos, ANNA TH GLWTH Kal TO mpocwT@ Soxovvtos amoréyecOat tiv dénow,
b) 4 bd N e '4 e \ , e apdauevos avtov o Llopmraidsos tbrép Oupidos ws 3 , e ra) > #f A 7 ww apnowy o-oroyew exedevey 7H pivrery ehacker,
A "A / a
dua TH TE povi TpaxXuvTépa Ypwpmevos Kal Tats \ > N\ A 4 \ fe}
NEepoly arnpTNuévoy TO THUA TrOAAGKES UITép THS
Oupidsos xpadaivwv. émel dé wodvv ypovov odtw Stexaptépnoey o Katav dvéxmdnktos cai adens,
, x A , e A \ \

_Katabéuevos avrov Toumaidios jyovyh mpos Tovs 6 dirous eitev: “Oloy evtvynpua ths ‘Iradias Ott

mais ovTos éotiv ef b€ avnp Hv, piay ovK ay olpat Wwipov juiv év Toe Snuw yiverOat.” Tlavuv 5€ cuyyevots tivos év yeveOdXLous Kanrécavtos émt Seirvov GAXous Te Traidas Kal Tovs mept Katava, oyorny ayovtes ev tive pépet THS oixias érafov avtot Kal éavtovs dvapeptypévot vewtepo. Kat mpecButepo, To Sé traclopevov Hv Sixat kal xatynyopiat Kal aywyai Tov adcKo-pévav. els ov TOV EaXwKOTWV Taidwy EvTTPETTIS Thy Ow bd mperButépov trados axGeis eis Te Swudtiovy Kal eipxGeis érexareito Tov Kdtawva.
Tax 57 TO yLvopevov auvels Heev emi tas Ovpas
0 Kadtoyv, cal Siwoduevos tovs wpoectatas Kat dtaxwrvovtas é€Enyaye TOV Traida: Kal pet opyns 240

smile, but Cato made no reply and gazed fixedly and fiercely upon the strangers. Then Pompaedius said : ‘But thou, young man, what sayest thou to us? Canst thou not take the part of the strangers with thy uncle, like thy brother?’’ And when Cato said not a word, but by his silence and the look on his face seemed to refuse the request, Pompaedius lifted him up through a window, as if he would cast him out, and ordered him to consent, or he would throw him down, at the same time making the tone of his voice harsher, and frequently shaking the boy as he held his body out at the window. But when Cato had endured this treatment for a long time without showing fright or fear, Pompaedius put him down, saying quietly to his friends: ‘“‘ What a piece of good fortune it is for Italy that he is a boy; for if he were a man, I do not think we could get a single vote among the people.” !

At another time a relation of his who was cele- brating a birthday, invited Cato and other boys to supper, and the company were diverting themselves at play in a separate part of the house, older and younger together, their play being actions at law, accusations, and the conducting of the condemned persons to prison. Accordingly, one of those thus condemned, a boy of comely looks, was led off by an older boy and shut into a chamber, where he called upon Cato for help. Then Cato, when he understood what was going on, quickly came to the door, pushed aside the boys who stood before it and tried to stop him, led forth the prisoner, and went

1 This incident must have happened, if at all, in 91 B.c., when Cato was four years old; but it need not be inferred that he had already formed an opinion on public affairs. The story is told also in Valerius Maximus, iii. 1, 2.

éywv amnrOev oixade, nal maides Erepoe cvvn-Korovbnaap.
III. Oita & hv repiBontos wot’, émredy DA-Aas THY Tadicny Kal lepav immodpopuiayv, Ay kadovot Tpotav, eri Oéa SidaoKxwv nal cuvayayav Tous evyevels taidas améderEev nyepovas dvo, Tov pev Erepov ot traides eéEavto dia THY pnrépa (MerérdrAns yap Ww vides, tis YaAra yuvarxos), Tov dé Erepov, adeAdtdobv dvra Tlopaniov, {éETov, ovK elwy ovbdée éBovAovTO peXeTav ove érrecOat, wuvOavopévov Sé Tov YUAAa Tiva
, / 10! ce , . a2
BovXowrTo, travtes éBonoay “ Kdtwva, Kai 6 ye LéETos avtos el~as wapixey ws KpeitToM Ti derorepiay.
"Eruye 6¢ xal piros dv o YvAAas tatpiKos
avTois, Kai TOTE Kal TpooNnyayerTo Kal TpoTwpi-ANGeEV, OdLiyols Tdvu véwor THY ToLA’THY ptdo-dpoowvny, dia Bdpos Kal OyKov HS elyey apyYs
Kal duvdpews. péya 69 Trotovpevos o Lapirndwv TOUTO T pos TopHY cpa Kat dopdneay, ipyev aomvacopevov Tov Kdtwva avveyas eis THY otkiav tou YvAAa, pndeyv TOTE Tpocdelvy aceBav yaopou Siapépovaar, bro ARGOS TaY ayopévay Kal otpeBAroupévov. Hv pev ovv Etos éxeivo TO Kdrwv trecoapecxaidéxatov: iiov 8 xeparas
eripavav avipav Neyouévoy éxxoptCopévas, Kat Kpuda Tous Tapovras ériotévovtas, npwTnaE TOV Tmatoaywyov 6 te 59 TOUTOY Tov AvOpwTroV ovbeEls arroxrivyuow. eitrovros 8é éxeivov, “ PoBovvrar yap auTOV, @ Trai, waAXOY, } ptocovat, “ Ti ody,” elev, “ ovx épuol Eigos euxas, iva avtov dvedav 242

761

CATO THE YOUNGER

off home with him in a passion, followed by other boys also.

III. He was so celebrated that, when Sulla was preparing for exhibition the sacred equestrian game for boys! which is called “Troja,’’ and, after assembling the boys of good birth, appointed two leaders for them, the boys accepted one of them for his mother’s sake (he was a son of Metella, Sulla’s wife), but would not tolerate the other (who was a nephew of Pompey, named Sextus), and refused to rehearse under him or obey him; and when Sulla asked them whom they would have, they all cried “Cato,” and Sextus himself gave way and yielded the honour to a confessed superior.

Now, Sulla was friendly to Cato and his brother ? on their father’s account, and sometimes actually asked them to see him and conversed with them, a kindness which he showed to very few, by reason of the weight and majesty of his authority and power. So Sarpedon, thinking that this conduced greatly to the honour and safety of his charge, was continually bringing Cato to wait upon Sulla at his house, which, at that time, looked exactly like an Inferno, owing to the multitude of those who were brought thither and put to torture. Now, Cato was in his fourteenth year ; and when he saw heads of men reputed to be eminent carried forth, and heard the smothered groans of the bystanders, he asked his tutor why no one slew this man. “Because, my child,” said the tutor, “men fear him more than they hate him.” “Why, then,” said Cato, “didst thou not give me a 1 Cf. Vergil, Aeneid, v. 553 ff.

2 Both here, and in i. 1, Plutarch carelessly speaks as ee Caepio were own brother, and not half-brother, of ato.

243
R 2
4

5

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

annrrata Sovdelas THV marpisa;” ToDTOV TOV Aoryov axovoas 0 Laprndov, & dpa 5é kal To Breupa Kal TO Tmpocwmov avTov ToT Nd wevov opyns Kal pévous KaTLoav, oTws eercev BaTE TO Aovrov non T poo exe axptBas Kal wapagpuratrew, “7 TL TokuHoD mapaBohwtepov.
“Ere pev ouv TaLoaptov @Y pKpoV, atrexpivato Tots EPWTACL Tiva pret partoTa, TOV adehgov-“wa Sevrepor, opotars TOV adedpor, Kal TplTov,

4 “Xpe ov TONAGKLS AeyovTos ameitev 0o EPWT OV.
ryEvopevos 5 év preci pardov éBeBaiou THY m™pos TOV adehpov ebvoway. érn yap elkoot yeyoves vwptis Karrriwvos ouK edeimynaer, OvK amredn-PNOEDV, ELS aryopap ov mponrve. pupov 8 exelvov
AapBavovros avT OS T apyTetTor Kal Tadha Ta Treph tHy siaitay jv axptBns Kal oUVTOVOS. O youv Kautriwy ért cwppoovry Kat peTpLoTnte Javpalouevos a@uodoryet TOLOUTOS elvac 7 pos TOUS addous éferalouevos, «°AXN Grav,” ep, * ‘Tapa Tov Kadtawvos Biov mapaBardrgw Tov éuov, ouder cuavt@ paivopar Lummiov Siapéperv,” Tov emi Tpudf Tia Kai paraxia TeptBonray o ovopacas.
IV. ‘O 6é Katav erred) THY lepwavuny éraBe TOU "ATOAVOS, peToLK Tas Kal VELMA [EVOS jLotpav TOV TatTppov éxarov elKool TANAVYTWY ‘yEVO-pevny, Thy pev Startav ett paddov ouvéer tether, ‘Avtimatpov dé Tu Upiov TOY amo THS oTOaS Ptdo-code poo eTarpra dpevos, Tots nOvKois padsora Kal TOMTLKOLS évep vero Soypact, jTept wacav joey aperiy domwep émimvoig Tit KaTdaxeros yeyovws, Stapopws Sé Tod Kadod To Teph Tip 244

CATO THE YOUNGER

sword, that I might slay him and set my country free from slavery ?’’ When Sarpedon heard this speech, and saw also the look on the boy’s face, which was full of rage and fury, he was so frightened that in future he kept him under close watch and ward, lest he should venture on some rash deed.

When he was still a little boy, and was asked whom he loved most, he answered, “ My brother”;
and to the question whom he loved next, likewise, ' © My brother ” ; and so a third time, until, after many such answers from him, his questioner desisted. And when he came to maturity, he maintained all the more firmly this affection for his brother. Indeed, when he was twenty years old, without Caepio he would not take supper, or make a journey, or go out into the forum. But when his brother used perfume, Cato would decline it; and in his habits generally he was severe and strict. At any rate, when Caepio was admired and praised for his discretion and moderation, he would admit that he had _ those qualities when tested by reference to most men; “ But when,’ he would say, “I compare my life with that of Cato, I seem to myself no better than Sippius,’—mentioning one of those who were cele- brated for luxury and effeminacy.

IV. After Cato had been made priest of Apollo, he took a house apart, accepted his share of the patrimony, which amounted to a hundred and twenty talents, and began to live yet more simply than be- fore. He made a close companion of Antipater the Tyrian, a Stoic philosopher, and devoted himself especially to ethical and political doctrines. He was possessed, as it were, with a kind of inspiration for the pursuit of every virtue; but, above all, that

245

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Suxavoovvny ateves, kal Akaptrrov eis érrveixerav
2% yap, vepnyarnkes. none 8 Kal tov épyavixov eis mwAHOn Royov, aEiav waTep ev TONEL peyaAn TH TortTiKH ptdrocodia Kal pd-Xiwov elval TL Tapatpepopuevov. ov pévTor pe érTépwv érroveiro Tas pereras, ovd HKpodoaTto NévyovTOsS ovdEis, GANA Kal Tpos TLVa TOV ETAipwr
eltrovta, " Méudovtai cov, Katoy, oi avO perro TY own, " Mévov," en, "un tov Biov. apEopat dé Aéyewv, Stay pw BeNNe Aéyeww akia cwwmhs."
V. 'H 6é Kahovpern Tlopxia Baoidxn Ton
TLKOY HV avdOnua Tov Twadaiod Kdtewvos. etwOores otv éxel ypnparive ot Shwapxot, Kal xiovos tots Sidpots éptrod@y elvat SoxodrTos, éyvacay udereiy avTov peTactioar. TovTO Kdrova mpatov eis ayopay axovra mponyayev' avrtéotn yap avtois, Kal teipav awa Tov AdyoU xal rod gpovnpatos Sovs eBavyacbn. Kal yap o AOyos vEeapov péev ovdey OVE KoprpoY Elyerv, GAN'
iv 6pOvos Kal repimrAnOns Kal tpaxvs. ov phy GANA Kal yd pis aywyos aKons eréTpEXE TH TPAXU-THTL TOV vonudtwv, Kat TO 7005 avTOD KaTaptyvupevoy nOovny tia Kal petdiayua TO cELV@ mapelyev ovx amravOpwrov. 4 dé pawvn peyéeder pev amoxpaca Kat Svapxns eis tooodTov é€tKe-abat Sipov, iaxdy 5é Kal Tovoy dppyerov etxe Kat 246

CATO THE YOUNGER

form of goodness which consists in rigid justice that will not bend to clemency or favour, was his great delight. He practised also the kind of speaking which is effective with a multitude, deeming it right that in political philosophy, as in a great city, a certain warlike element should also be maintained. However, he did not perform his exercises in company with others, nor did any one ever hear him rehearsing a speech. Indeed, to one of his companions who said, “Men find fault with thee, Cato, for thy silence,” he replied: “Only let them not blame my life. I will begin to speak when I am not going to say what were better left unsaid.”

V. The Basilica Porcia, as it was called, had been dedicated by the elder Cato while he was censor.! Here, then, the tribunes of the people were ac- customed to transact their business; and as one of the pillars was thought to be in the way of their seats, they determined to take it down or move it to another place. This brought Cato for the first time, and against his wishes, into the forum ; he opposed the tribunes, and was admired for the proof of elo- quence and high character which he gave. For his speech had nothing about it that was juvenile or affected, but was straightforward, full of matter, and harsh. However, a charm that captivated the ear was diffused over the harshness of his sentiments, and the mingling of his character with them gave their austerity a smiling graciousness that won men’s hearts. His voice was sufficiently loud and pene- trating to reach the ears of so large a multitude, and it had a strength and tension which could not dit puTov npépav yap OAnv eit@y TroAAdKIS OUK amrnyopevae.

1 Of. the Cato Major, xix. 2. This was in]82 B.c.

Tore S ov KpPATneas THS dixns mda éavtov els THY oor hy Kab THY aonnow cuvéctetre: Kal SueTrOvel TO oO pa. yunvaciors evepyois, eO.Couevos avéyecOat Kal KAU LATO. Kal vierov axarinre Kepanrg, Kal Babdive éy Tals odois Tacay wpav aTEp 8X7 HATS. TOV dé pirdov oi guvecdnpoodvres im Trous EXPaVTO, Kal TOAAaKLS ExadoT@ TrapéBad- rev O Karo € ev pépet m poo Stadeyopuevos, TepiTra- TOY auros dX oupevor. Oavpacrh b¢ Kab Tepl Tas vocous UTromovy; per’ éyxpareias ex pitro" TUPETTOV yap. HOvos. éh éavTov Sunuépeve pndeva TPOGtELEVOS, aX pe ov BéBarov aicBovro paotevny Kal petaBorHy Tov voonpatos.

VI. "Ev &€ tots Servors éxAnpobro Tmept TOV

pepidwy: et dé atrodXayxot, Tp@rov aipew TOY bi- |

Aw KEAEVOYTWY, Edeye pn Kadas exer, axovans THiS "Agpodirns. Kal Kat apyas pev drat ént- Tiw@y TO Seimvov avédue, mpotovre é TO Xpov padiora TpoaieTo TO tively, dare TONAGKES év

oive Sudryew eis OpOpov. aitiav $e Eeyou ot
pirou TovTOV THY ToT ELay Kal Ta Snpocta
T parypara, mpos ols Nas Tov Kdtova Tas npépas Syra, Kal @ NUVOMEVOV prroroyeiv, VUKT Op Kat
mapa TOTOV ovyyiver Bat TOUS prrocogors. 510
Kal Meppiov tevos év cudhoyp dynaavrTos Nas Tov Katova peDvanxer0at TAS VUKTAS, vrohaBav
o Kixépov, "'Exeivo 5é ov Aéyets," elarev, " dre Kal Tas Huépas Oras xuBever;"
Kadonrou 8€ trois tote Biows nal rots érurndev-

248

762

CATO THE YOUNGER

be broken or worn out; for he often spoke all day without getting tired.
At this time, then, after winning his case, he went back again to his silence and his discipline. He built up his body by vigorous exercises, accustoming himself to endure both heat and snow with uncovered head, and to journey on foot at all seasons, without a vehicle. Those of his friends who went abroad with him used horses, and Cato would often join each of them in turn and converse with him, although he walked and they rode. In sickness, he had wonderful patience, as well as self-control; for instance, if he had an ague, he would pass the day alone by himself, admitting no visitor, until he was conscious of lasting relief and the departure of the disease.

VI. At suppers, he would throw dice for the choice of portions; and if he lost, and his friends bade him choose first, he would say it was not right, since Venus! was unwilling. At first, also, he would drink once after supper and then leave the table; but as time went on he would allow himself to drink very generously, so that he often tarried at his wine till early morning. His friends used to say that the cause of this was his civic and public activities; he was occupied with these all day, and so prevented from literary pursuits, wherefore he would hold inter- course with the philosophers at night and over the cups. For this reason, too, when a certain Memmius remarked in company that Cato spent his entire nights in drinking, Cicero answered him by saying: 'Thou shouldst add that he spends his entire days in throwing dice."

And, in general, Cato thought he ought to take a

1 The highest throw at dice was called the '' Venus-throw," 249
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

pacw o Karov thy évaytiay 6ddv oldpevos Seip / e @ UA \-: A A Badifev, as ovat havros Kai peyarns Seopévors

peraBorrs, éret toppupay éwpa Thy KaTaKopas épvOpayv nal ofelay ayatapévnv, adtos édoper
\ A ; 4 b > A
Thy péAavav. oddXaKis & avuTodntos Kal axitwy eis TO Snuootoy mpones per’ Aptotov, ov d0Eav €« ravtns THs KawvoTnTtos Onpw@pevos, GAAA eOilwy éavtov emt toils aicypols aicyvverBat f “A \ ww» ? , a \ povos, Tov bé GAAwy abdEwv xatadpoveivy. Kal KAnpovoptav Sé avT@ Tpocyevopevny averiod Katwvos éxatov TaXavTwy eis apyvptov avvayayov tTapetyey avev toKwv ypjacOar T@ Seopévm
tav dirwy. évcoe € Kal ywpia Kal Oepdrovtas
> A , \ a e , \
avtov didovtos Kai BeBatobvtos vTébevto mpos
To Snootov.
VII. *Ezrei 5€ dpav @eto mpos yapov Exew, ov-Sed yuvanit auvednrv0es, jppocato Aeriday,
, \ 2 a“ , 4
mpotrepov pev éyyunbcioay Uxynriwy. Merérdr, Tote 5€ aTevTapévou TOU Yxnmiwvos Kai THs ey-yuns AvOeions cxorAalovcay.’ ov puny adda TPO TOU Yydmou petapeAnGeis maddy Oo Lentiov Kal
, , wv A f e \ 4
jwavTa troincas édaBe Thy Kopny. o S€ Katov Lae \ i) \ opodpa trapokuvbels cai Ssaxaels éreyelpnoe pev érreFeNOety Sia Sixns, ws 5é of hiror TodTO éxwXv-gav, opyn Kal veornre Tpéras EauTov eis tauPBous TOAANA TOV LKynTriwva KabvBpice, TO TLKP@ Tpoc-
, a 4 N \ > 4
ypnodpevos tov ’ApyiNoxou, TO S€ axoNac Tov
adels cal mradapi@des. eynue 5¢ Atiriav, Lep-pavov Ouvyatépa, cal TavTn mpa@Tov acvvydOev, ov 250

course directly opposed to the life and practices of the time, feeling that these were bad and in need of great change. For instance, when he saw that a purple which was excessively red and vivid was much in vogue, he himself would wear the dark shade. Again, he would often go out into the streets after breakfast without shoes or tunic. He was not hunting for notoriety by this strange practice, but accustoming himself to be ashamed only of what was really shameful, and to ignore men’s low opinion of other things. When an inheritance worth a hundred talents fell to him from his cousin Cato, he turned it into money, and allowed any friend who needed it to have the use of it without interest. And some of his friends actually pledged to the public treasury both lands and slaves which he offered for this purpose himself, and made good his offer.

VII. When he thought that he was old enough to marry,—and up to that time he had consorted with no woman,—he engaged himself to Lepida, who had formerly been betrothed to Metellus Scipio, but was now free, since Scipio had rejected her and the be- trothal had been broken. However, before the marriage Scipio changed his mind again, and by dint of every effort got the maid. Cato was greatly exasper- ated and inflamed by this, and attempted to go to law about it; but his friends prevented this, and so, in his rage and youthful fervour, he betook himself to iambic verse, and heaped much scornful abuse upon Scipio, adopting the bitter tone of Archilochus, but avoiding his license and puerility. And he married Atilia, a daughter of Serranus. She was the first woman with whom he consorted, but not the only povn 5é, caOatrep Aaidtos, 0 Xentiwvos éraipos:

GAN' evUTUXETTEpOS ExEtvos, ev TrOAXOIS ols éBiwce xpovoss piav ty &ynpev €& apxis yvovs yuvaixa.
VIII. Tot S€ SovrAccod woréu"ou auvertaros, Oy Lmraptaxeov éxddovy, TérrAgLos pev eortpartn-yet, Karwv d€ tis otpateias peteivey eBeXovTis, dia tov adedgov éxihidpyes yap 0 adeddos av-tod Kaitriwov. xal ypicac8ar pev eis dcov éBov-NeTO TH TpoOupia Kal doxynoe THs apeTAs ovy vanpeev avt@, Sia TO wn KAAwS TTPATHYyELCIaL TOV TrOAEwov' GAAWS Oé, Tapa TOAANY padaKiav
xal tpudnv trav éxel orpatevopevwy émiderxvupevos evtakiav Kal éyxpdteay cal 76 Oapparéov év waar xal Evverov, eddxer pnOev atrodeiv rod mwaratod Karwvos. o 5€ T'évdXtos dapioreia Kat Tuas avT@ Stampereis &yparypev, As éxeivos ovK ékaBev ovdé mpoonxato, dnoas akiov pnOéev eipydcOar tiynwv. &« tre 8) TovTwY AdXOKOTOS édcxet, Kal vouov ypadévtos Saws toils tapayyéAAovol eis apXnv dvowaToAoyor p47) Trapact, Xiktapyiay peti@y povos éeiOeTo TO vouw: Kal
5: attov womaduevos épyov aomdtecOar Kal Tpocayopevery Tovs évtuyydavortas, ovdé avTois averraXOns hv toils éraivovotw, Socov marXopv évo-Ouv TO KaNOov ov éerrerndeve, TO Svapintoy avTav Bapvvopévors.

1 In 73-71 B.c. Cf. the Crassus, viii. ff.

2 Lucius Gellius Publicola, consul in 72 B.c. with Cornelius Lentulus Clodianus. Both consuls were defeated by Spartacus.

252

163

CATO THE YOUNGER

one, as was true of Laelius, the friend of Scipio Africanus ; Laelius, indeed, was more fortunate, since in the course of his long life he knew but one woman, the wife of his youth.

VIII. When the servile war was in progress,! _ which was called the war of Spartacus, Gellius? was commander, while Cato took part in his campaign as a volunteer, for the sake of his brother; for his brother Caepio was a military tribune. Here he had not the opportunity to employ as much as he wished his zeal and discipline in virtue, because the war was not well conducted ; but notwithstanding, amidst the great effeminacy and luxury of those who took part in that campaign, he displayed such good discipline, self-control, courage in all emergencies, and sagacity, that men thought him not one whit inferior to the elder Cato. Moreover, Gellius assigned to him prizes of valour and distinguished honours; but Cato would not take them nor allow them, declaring that he had done nothing worthy of honours. And so, in consequence of this, he was thought to be a strange creature. For instance, a law was passed forbidding candidates for office to be attended by nomen- clators,? and in his canvass for the military tribune- ship he was the only one who obeyed the law. He made it his business to salute and address without help from others those who met him on his rounds, but he did not avoid giving offence even to those who praised his course; for the more clearly they saw the rectitude of his practice, the more distressed were they at the difficulty of imitating it.

3 Attendants whose duty it was to tell the candidate the names of those whom he was going to meet, that he might appear to be acquainted with them.

253

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

IX. "Arrodery Geis de XedLapxos eis Maxedoviay €1réLTTETO T pos ‘PouBprov TOV oTpAaTHyov. ev0a Oy) éyerar Tis yuvaceos axPopuens kal Saxpvov- ons eva TOV pirov tov Kdtwvos Movvdrvop é- mew “"O "Atidla, Odpoet TOUTOV éyo aot purago,” “ Tlavu pev oop, ” pavat TOV Kdrova, kal poe ovrav peas npépas odor, evOvs etzreiv pera TO Setmvor- "Arye, OTwS, @ Movvdree, TH "Aridta THY Dmoaxyerw éumedaaers,) pate mHEpas é4100 pajre VUKTOS aia Tapevos.” éx dé TovTou dv0 Kdivas els TAUTO Sw@partvov éxédeve tiBecat, kal tov Movupdriov odTws ae xadevdew peta macolas puraccopevov t UmTO TOU Kdravos.

Eitrovto 5é auT@ Tmevrexaidena, pep olxérat, bv0 dé ater ev epor, pirot dé Téa apes. ov dX OUpE-yov im-mous avros ael TEPLTATOY éxdoT@ TWapé-Barnev é év péper m poo diaheyopevos. émel be Kev elS TO OTPaToOTEsoOY, TELOVOY Tay LaTOY évT@D, évos dpxov aroderx Gels t vd TOU atparnyod, TIS peev idtas a aperis, pas ovens, pcx pov épryov Hryetro Kal ovK dvvatpov" THY emiderEev, aut@ oé ToLnoat TOUS apxouevous opotous padwora pidoripovpevos ov TOV oBov adeinre Tis, éEoucias, adda Tpooé-Onke tov Aovyou" @ met Dev Tmepl éxdoTov Kal Siddoxwy, é ETOMEVNS TUS Kal KoNaTEWS, Xarerov nV evretv TOTEpOV elpnvixovs HGAXNOV 7 -IToONeE-piKous Kal _Tmpoduporépous i) Siearotépous ma pe-oKEVATE TOUS dvdpas: ovTaS épaivovro poBepol pep Tots Trodeplots, Huepoe Se Tois Tuppdyots, ATOA-
1 éuwedéces Sintenis*®, after Cobet; éuweddons Sintenis!, Coraés, Bekker.
a Litota Sintenis' correction of the MSS. Baa:Arkdy (kingly), adopted by Bekker.
254

CATO THE YOUNGER

IX. Appointed military tribune,! he was sent to Macedonia, to serve under Rubrius the praetor. At this time, we are told, his wife being full of grief and in tears, one of Cato's friends, Munatius, said to her: ‘“‘ Take heart, Atilia; I will watch over thy husband." “ Certainly he will,' cried Cato, and after they had gone a day's journey on their way, immediately after supper, he said: "Come, Munatius, see that you keep your promise to Atilia, and forsake me neither by day nor by night." Then he gave orders that two couches be placed in the same chamber for them, and thus Munatius always slept—and that was the joke—watched over by Cato.

He had in his following fifteen slaves, two freed- men, and four friends. These rode on horses, while he himself always went a-foot ; and yet he would join each of them in turn and converse with him.2. And when he reached the camp, where there were several legions, and was appointed to the command of one of them by the general, he thought it a trifling and useless task to make a display of his own virtue, which was that of a single man, but was ambitious above all things to make the men under his command like unto himself. He did not, however, divest his power of the element which inspires fear, but called in the aid of reason ; with its help he persuaded and taught his men about everything, while rewards and punishments followed their acts. Consequently, it were hard to say whether he made his men more peaceful or more warlike, more zealous or more just ; to such a degree did they show themselves terrible to their enemies but gentle to their allies, without

1 About 67 B.c.
2 Cf. chapter v. 3.

poor S€ pos TO aduKeiv, heroTLpoe dé mpos Tovs bf , e \ @ 4 bd / "A 4 émraivous. ov dé hxtota Kdtwv érrepernOn, TovTo WrElo Tov UIApKYev avTO, Kal d0£a Kat ydpts Kal vmepSaddXrovea Tin Kal duroppocvvyn Tapa TeV
oTpaTiwtav. & yap étépots émétattev Exovciws
S:atrovay, kal orodny pév cal Siarray Kal Tropeiav éxeivous waAXov f) Tots apKYovacy opotovpevos, HOt 5é cal hpovipare nai Aoym TWdvtas UTepaipwv TOUS avTOKpaToOpas Kal TpaTHYOUS po ayopeuo-/ Py \ , ud \ \ e_N pévous, €Xabe dua ToVTwY aya THY Tpos avTov
5 ebvoltay évepyaadpevos Tots avopactww. apeTis yap
? ' > b 4 a A ? 4 A
arnOuvos ovn éeyyiveras Chros 7 8s axpas Tov jmapadtdovros evvoias Kal tins: ot 5é avev Tod
direivy érrawvovvtes tovs ayabods aidodyvras THv Sofav abtav, ov Oavydlovar 5 thy dpetnv ovde pupLovuv Tat.
X. Tv@opevos 5é "APnvodwpov, tov émixadov/ , rd ? a o a pevov Kopovariwva, peydrny é€wv ev tois Yrwixois Noyous Exovta, dtarpiPew epi Uépyapov, 457 - ynpatov dvta Kai tmdcats éppwpyevéotata Ttais
e "~ \ "A , Q , nryepovixats Kat Baotintxais cuvnbeiats Kal pir-
, 2>Q\ v , \ ,
aus Svapepaynpevov, ovdey wero méewTov Kal ypapov Tepaivery Tpds avTOV, GANA éxwy Tapa Tov vopov Sedopévny arrodnpiav Sveivy pnvev éwrevcev els THY "Aciay él tov dvdpa, wiotevwv Tois év a a" \ ? 4 nA wv /
2 aAUT@ KaXois pH aTUYXNTELW TIS aypas. cuyyeEvo-
4 b] pevos S€ xal Kataywvicdpevos Kai petactynaas éx THS Tpoatpecews AUTOV HKEv Aywv eis TO TTPATO-medov, Tepryapns Kal peyadoppovav, @s TL Kd)- courage to do wrong but ambitious to win praise. Moreover, that to which Cato gave least thought was his in greatest measure, namely, esteem, favour, sur- passing honour, and kindness, from his soldiers. For he willingly shared the tasks which he imposed upon others, and in his dress, way of living, and conduct on the march, made himself more like a soldier than a commander, while in character, dignity of purpose, and eloquence, he surpassed all those who bore the titles of Imperator and General. In this way, with- out knowing it, he produced in his men at the same time the feeling of good will towards himself. For a.. genuine desire to attain virtue' arises only in conse- quence of perfect good will and respect for him who displays virtue ; those, on the other hand, who praise good men without loving them may revere their reputation, but they do not admire their virtue or imitate it.

X. On learning that Athenodorus, surnamed Cor- dylion, who had a large acquaintance with the Stoic philosophy, was living at Pergamum, being now in his old age and having most sturdily resisted all intimacies and friendships with governors and kings, Cato thought it would be useless to send messengers or write letters to him. Instead of this, since he had a furlough of two months allowed him by law, he sailed to Asia to visit the man, relying upon his own good qualities to make him successful in the chase. He held converse with the philosopher, conquered his objections, drew him from his fixed purpose, and took him back to the camp with him. He was overjoyed and in high spirits, feeling that he had made a most noble capture,.and one more

MLoTOv npNKaS Kal AapTpoTepoy wv Lloptrnios TOTE Kal AevicoAXos eOvav kal Bactierov xateaTpépovto ou drrhous meptiovTes. .
XI. "Ete dé aurou mepl TV oTpareiay OVTOS 0 abedpos els THY "Agiav, BadiSer évoonce epi Opaeny é év Aivg. Kal ypdppata wey evdus hice 764
Tos , TOV Kartova: XELpavos 66 TOANOD KaTe-Novos THv Oddarrav Kal vews ixavis poeryeOe py Tapovans, els bixpay oAKaba povov dv0 pious Kal Theis oixétas avadaBov éx Beccadovixns Sih * Kal map' ovdev eOav catamovtTwOjvat,
TUN Tit Tapahoye cw0els apte TEOKOTOS Tov
Kaurriwvos, Eunabéarepor edofev } ptrocodo-TEpov éveyxely THY Tuppopar, ou povov chav ots Kat TepuTTy €OL TOU VvEeKpov Kal Bapurnte AUTAS, arra nal dardavn rept THY raphy Kat mpa-yuareiats Oupiaparov Kab ipatioy ToAVTEAOY guykataxaévtay Kal pynuatos Eectod AiOwv Baciwr amo Taddvrov 'OKT@ KataaKevacbévtos

€v TH Aivioy ayopa. TavTa yap évot eouKxopar-TOUY Tpos THY aN Aqv atugiay TOU Kadrvos, ov calopavres 6 daov ev TO 7 pos ndovas Kal poBous
kat Senoets a dvaraxuvTous ayvapnre Kat oTEPP® Tod avdpos TO Hl epov evi Kal diroaTopyov. eis
dé TavTa al TOAELS AUT@ Kal Suvde Tat TOMA
Kara TEmHY Tov TeOve@Tos eTeuTor, @y éKxetvos
Xpywara, pev Tap ovdevos edéFaro, Ouyuduata bé
Kal KOO LOV érduBave, THY Tony * dmodibovs Tots TEMTOUCL. Tis dé KAnpovouias els AUTOV TE xal
Ouyadtpiov tod Karriwvos nxovaons, ov0ev av 1 rhv tyuhv Bekker, after Reiske: riuhy.

illustrious than the nations and kingdoms which Pompey and Lucullus at that time were subduing with their marching armies.

XI. While Cato was still in military service, his brother, who was on his way to Asia, fell sick at Aenus in Thrace, and a letter came at once to Cato advising him of this. A heavy storm was raging at sea and no ship of sufficient size was at hand, but nevertheless, taking only two friends and three servants with him in a small trading-vessel, he put to sea from Thessalonica. He narrowly escaped drowning, and by some unaccountable good fortune came safe to land, but Caepio had just died. In bearing this affliction Cato was thought to have shown more passion than philosophy, considering not only his lamentations, his embracings of the dead, and the heaviness of hits grief, but also his expenditure upon the burial, and the pains that he took to have incense and costly raiment burned with the body, and a monument of polished Thasian marble costing eight talents constructed in the market-place of Aenus. For some people cavilled at these things as inconsistent with Cato's usual free- dom from ostentation, not observing how much—tenderness and affection was mingled with the man's inflexibility and firmness against pleasures, fears, and shameless entreaties. For the funeral rites, more- over, both cities and dynasts sent him many things for the honour of the dead, from none of whom would he accept money; he did, however, take incense and ornaments, and paid the value of them to the senders. Furthermore, when the inheritance fell to him and Caepio's young daughter, nothing

9 4 \ \ , 9 / 3 A 4
avadwoe TEept TOY Tahov amnTnaev ev TH veunoet.
(e) : ” e
Kal tabra mpaEavros avtod Kal TpdtTOVTOS, HY O
yparvras Ste kooxiva thv Téppav Tov vexpod perTeé-Bare nai dinOnce, ypvciov Snrav KataKxexav-
/ ¢ b aA / ‘ bd \ \

Hévov. ovTws ov To Eider povov, adrAa Kal
T@ ypadeiw TO dvuTevOuvoy Kal TO avuTrodiuoV €mrioTEVOED.
2 \ \ , ? e , “ XII. "Ewe 5€ tédos elyev 4 orpatela To Kdtovt, mpoetéupOn, ov« evyais, 6 xowov ear
ovd émaivots, adAa SdKpvot Kat meptBorais
: a e
amAnoTots, UToTiévTwy Ta iwatia Tois Toalv 7 Badifor.xnat xatadirovvtwy tas YXelpas, & ToV avTokpaTopwv dAtLyous ports émoiovy of Tore ‘Pwpaior. Bovrnbeis dé wpd Tod TodLTELa Trpoda iu \ P a > ¢ / a eNOeiy aua pév wravnOjvar Kal toropiav THs
"Actas kal yevéoOar Geatns O@v Kai Biwy Kat Suvdpews HS wept Exdotny érapytiay, dpa 6 ro
4 ee , N _ f \ / ,
Paddrn Aniorapp dua Feviay Kat pidtay Tatpway Seoevw impos avtov éNMey pn ayapiotiocat, Tov-
a / Tov TOV TpOTOY érroLEtTO THY aTroOnuiaVv. mpov-
>
TeuTrEV A uépa TOY apTOTrOLOY Kal TOV pdyELpoV
4 4 : ” e \ la
Svrov xatadvoew Enerrev. ot d€ wdyv Kooplas ‘ > oe , ’ , A > \ f kai we Hovyias etoeNOovtes av els THY TOY, bd \ 4 “A 4 , A > I eb pndels tuyor TO Kdtww didros dv avtoOs TATPOOS 7) yvwpipos, év Tavdoxeip THY LITObOKY HY
a A } auT@ Twapecnevalov, évoxdovvTes ovdevt: aavdoxeiov dé py dvtos, o}Tws mMpos ToOvs apxovTas Tpatropevor. Eeviay éAduBavov, ayara@vres tHv do0cicay. trodAdxKts 5€ amricTOUpEVvoL Kai TrEpLopw-260

CATO THE YOUNGER

that he had expended for the funeral was asked back by him in the distribution of the property.
And although such was his conduct then and afterwards, there was one! who wrote that he passed the ashes of the dead through a sieve, in search of the gold that had been melted down. So confidently did the writer attribute, not only to his sword, but also to his pen, freedom from accountability and punishment.

XII. When the time of Cato's military service came to an end, he was sent on his way, not with blessings, as is common, nor yet with praises, but with tears and insatiable embraces, the soldiers casting their mantles down for him to walk upon, and kissing his hands, things which the Romans of _that day rarely did, and only to a few of their im- perators. But before applying himself to public affairs he desired to travel about in a study of Asia, and to see with his own eyes the customs and lives and military strength of each province; at the same time he wished to gratify Deiotarus the Galatian, who had been a guest-friend of his father, and now solicited a visit from him. He therefore arranged his journey as follows. At daybreak, he would send forward his baker and his cook to the place where he intended to lodge. These would enter the city with great decorum and little stir, and if Cato had no family friend or acquaintance there, they would prepare a reception for him at an inn, without troubling anybody; or, in case there was no inn, they would apply to the magistrates for hospitality, and gladly accept wliat was given. But frequently they were distrusted and neglected, because they

1 Julius Caesar, in his ‘‘ Anti-Cato." See the Caesar, chapter liv. ve

a2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

pevot Sta 76 Ln FopuBo pnde amen TavTa mpaccew 1 pos TOUS adpxovras, UTO TOD Kdrtwvos ampaxrot katedapBavorto, Kal paidrov avTos opOels WALYWPELTO, Kal Tapeixev éml TOV poptioy oLwmh cabelopevos t Umrovotay avél pomrou TATELVOU Kal mepideods. ov pay arra Kal mpooKanou-[EVOS avTous etwOer Neyer? °° O, poxOnpoi, peTa-Bdarecbe tavrns tis kaxofevias. ov Tavres Upiy adifovras Kadrwves. apPr0uvare Tals prroppoauvais THY eEouciav TOV Seomevav Tpopacews, iva Bia AapBavocw, @S Tap éxovTwy py TUYXd-VOVTES.

XIII. 'Ev 6é¢ Lupia Kal yehotor Te éyerau
mabeiv. Babifwyv yap eis Avtidyetav cide rept Tas mudas &&o TAH OS avO pwrrav éxarépwoer,

THS ob0b TapaKexpl Lever, év ols &pnBot pev xepis év yAapvae! Kal maides érépwOev Koo Liws elaTHnKET aD, éaOjras dé kabapas é éveot Kal orepa-vous elon, Lepeis Gedy 6 OVTES 7) dpxovres. mavTay ouv Haddov oinBels 0 Karoyv auT@ TLva 7 partec Oat ToD kat deEiwow obo THs TONEWS, apyileTo pev Tots tpoTreuPUeion THY Ldiwy, WS LH

KwAvoaaly, exédevoe 5é KataBivat tovs didous, Kal meth pone per’ avT av. es 5 eyyus: HoaV, O wavTa Siaxoapiy é éxeiva Kal TOV dxAov els Tabi cabiotas, avnp mpeaButepos non, paBdov év TH
xetpt Kal orépavov KpaT@v, amrivrnce TO Kdrwve 7 po T@V GAXAwY, Kal pide doTrac auevos pera, mov Anpunrtptov amonehoiTac Kal myviKa. mapeaorat. Uloparniov Sé Hv yeyovms o Anpunrptos 1 yAautos MSS. and most editors: xAavlo: (mantles), after Cobet.
262

ps

65

CATO THE YOUNGER

raised no tumult and made no threats in their dealings with the magistrates. In such a case Cato would find their work not done when he arrived, and he himself would be more despised than his servants when men saw him, and would awaken suspicion, as he sat upon the baggage without saying a word, that he was a man of low condition and very timid. However, he would then call the magistrates to him and say: “ Ye miserable wretches, lay aside this in- hospitality. Not all men who come to you will be Catos. Blunt by your kind attentions the power of those who only want an excuse for taking by force what they do not get with men’s consent.”’

XIII. In Syria, too, as we are told, he had a laughable experience. As he was walking into Antioch, he saw at the gates outside a multitude of people drawn up on either side of the road, among whom stood, in one group, young men with military cloaks, and in another, boys with gala robes, while some had white raiment and crowns, being priests or magistrates. Cato, accordingly, thinking that this could only be some honourable reception which the city was preparing for him, was angry with his servants who had been sent on in advance, because they had not prevented it; but he ordered his friends to dismount, and went forward on foot with them. When, however, they were near the gate, he who was arranging all these ceremonies and marshalling the crowd, a man now well on in years, holding a wand and a crown in his hand, advanced to meet Cato, and without even greeting him asked where they had left Demetrius and when he would be there. Now, Demetrius had once been 263

PILUTARCH'S LIVES

3 , , \ 4 e 4 3 a > , oixéeTns: Tore O€ TavtTwy, ws eros elTetv, avOpo-
>] ian > 4 > 4
mov eis Tlouaniov aroBveTrovrwv, éOeparrevero
b / A nA.
map akiav, péeya Tap avT@ duvdpevos. Tois pev bd h a / / > * a ovv dirols tov Katwvos yéXws evetrece TOTOVTOS C4 > a € \ ? 29 7 fe) @atTe avadraBeiy éavtovs ovK édvvaytTo ba Tod mrn0ouvs dua Baditovtes, 0 S¢ Katwyv tote pev nw fo) >
ioxupas Statparreis, "0. tis KaKxodaipovos," bf
edn, "'morews, adro S€ ovdéev ePOéyEaTO, ypov@ \ @ 27 A \ 9 N > A , XN
dé darepoy eiw@Oer yerXav Kal avTos eri TOUT, Kal Sunyoupevos Kal v2movevov. ;
XIV. O8 pv adda Lloprrnios avros éréorpeve
Tovs avOpw@rous ovTwH TANEpEAOUVYTAS Eis TOV.
Kdtwva 50' dyvorav. ws yap eis "Edecov €-Mav ETOPEVETO TIPOS AUTOY aaTrTacOMEVOS TpEeaBuTEpoV
ébvta, Kal do—n wodv mponKxovta, kal Suvapewy
, *
TOTE peyioTwVv nyovpevoy, toov o [loparnios ovK
Ewewvev, ovde elace xabelouév mpocedOety, arr'
WS TLL TOY KpELTTOVWY avafopwY amHnYTNGE, Kat thy SeEvav évéBare. Kal worda pev evOds ev TO diroppovetcbat nal adomdlerOas trapovta, TAEiw dé Ts peractavtTos éyxwpma SunrOev avtov Tis apETHS, OTTE TavTas éeTiaTpepopmévous Kai Tpodé-
" A 4 4 Pb] Lg /
xovTas On TO Kdtov, Oavpater é€ ov mpotepov
a , A ,
kareppoveito, Kal mpgoTnTa Kat peyarowuxiay
"A '
avabewpeiy. xal yap % Tlopmantov orovdy crept avrov ovx éddvOave OepatrevovTos ovaa pAadXov 7 tNovvtos, AAN éeyvwoay Sti Oavpaler pev Trap-264

a slave of Pompey, but at this time, when all mankind, so to speak, had their eyes fixed upon Pompey, he was courted beyond his deserts, since he had great influence with Pompey. Cato's friends accordingly, were seized with such a fit of laughter that they could not recover themselves even when they were walking through the crowd; but Cato was greatly disturbed at the time, and said: "O the unhappy city!" and not a word besides. In after times, however, he was wont to laugh at the incident himself also, both when he told it and when he called it to mind.!

XIV. However, Pompey himself put to shame the men who were thus neglectful of Cato through ignorance. For when Cato came to Ephesus and was proceeding to pay his respects to Pompey as an older man, one who was greatly his superior* in reputation, and then in command of the greatest forces, Pompey caught sight of him and would not wait, nor would he suffer Cato to come to him as he sat, but sprang up as though to honour a superior, went to meet him, and gave him his hand. He also passed many encomiums upon his virtue even while he was present and receiving marks of kindness and affection, and still more after he had withdrawn. Therefore all men, being put to shame and now directing their attention to Cato, admired him for the traits which before had brought him scorn, and made a study of his mildness and magnanimity. And indeéd it was no secret that Pompey's attentions to him were due to self-interest rather than to friendship ; men knew that Pompey admired him when he was present, but was glad to have him go

1 This story is told also in the Pompey, xl. 1-3.

/

3 ovta, Yaipe: dé atepyopév@. Tovs yap aAXOUS véous, da0t Tap avtTov adixvobvto, dPtdoTipovpevos KaTeltye Kal TOOG@Y avT@ cuvetvat, Tov 5é

A > Katwvos ovdév éde79n rowodtTov, GAN @oTeEp OUK dvuTevOuvos apxywv éxeivov tapovtos é&éreurrev \ n ¢ dopevos, povm axedov éxeivm tav els “‘Papunv
\ a TAEOVTMOY TA TéxVA Kal THY yUVAaiKa TapaKxata-
A \ Oéuevos, AAXNWS AUTO TpodjKovTa Kal dia auy-ryéveray.
"Ex tovtou S0&a Kai omovdy Kai dutdra epi
3 A = A“ 4 \ a A vA 3 avTov nV TaV TOAEwWY Kal Selva Kal KXHoELS, eV \ /. b] / 4 b a” ‘ ,
ols Tous Pirous exeXeve TpOTEXELY AUT@, wn NAOy
, e
4 BeBatwoas tov Kovptwvos dAoyov. o yap Kov~ a a le f
piov axOopevos TO avatnp@ Tod Kdtwvos, didou Kal cuvnfous dvtos, npwrnoev avTov et tpoOupos
; a f_:
éoTt peTa THY otpateiavy yevéoBar tis “Acias
f) / 5 3 \ ’ ; ‘RS rE ” €aTnsS. TOU 0€ Kal Travu dnaarTos, “‘ Ku NEeyers, 3 e / “ 53/ \. 93 , Pen)
eltrev o Kovupiwv, “ ndiwv yap éravntas éxeibev
n 99 n
kal paGAXov Hwepos, ovTw Tas Kal TO pratt Vpn amevos.
XV. Aniotapos 5€ o Tantdrns petetéupato
\ \ , 4 A v
pev Tov Katrwva mpeoButepos dv nbn trapadécbar
A a 4 \
Tous maidas av’t@ BovAopevos Kal Tov olKov, éd-Oovrt 5é mpocdépwv Spa TravtobaTra Kal Tretpav
, @
Kat Seopevos TadVTa TpoTrOV OUTW TrTapwELVEY WoTE,
a ,
SetAns €XMovta Kal vuKtTepevoarta, TH voTEpaig
/ a \ a
2 wept Tpitnv @payv awapar. tmpoedOwv pévTor mas 266

; CATO THE YOUNGER

away. For all the other young men who came to him were retained by Pompey, who showed an eager longing for their companionship ; of Cato, on the contrary, he made no such request, but, as if he must render account of his command while Cato was there, he was glad to send him away. And yet Cato was almost the only person among those bound for Rome to whom Pompey commended his wife and children, although it is true that they were relatives ef his.

As a consequence of all this, the cities eagerly vied with one: another in showing Cato honour, and there were suppers and invitations, at which times he would urge his friends to keep close watch upon him, lest he should unawares confirm the saying of Curio. For Curio, annoyed at the severity of Cato, who was his intimate friend, had asked him whether he was desirous of seeing Asia after his _ term of service in the army. “Certainly I am,” said Cato. “That’s right,’ said Curio, “for you will come back from there a more agreeable man and more tame,’—that is about the meaning of the word he used.!

XV. But Deiotarus the Galatian sent for Cato, being now an old man, and desiring to commend to -his protection his children and his family. When Cato arrived, however, Deiotarus offered him gifts of every sort, and by tempting and entreating him in every way so exasperated him that, although he had arrived late in the day and merely spent the night, on the next day about the third hour he set off. . However, after proceeding a day’s journey, he found

1 Plutarch is seeking a Greek equivalent for the Latin ‘* mansuetior.”

e 4 QA @ b a , A nuépas odoy evpev ev Llecowvotvts mieiova Tov éxel Sopwov avlts adtoyv vropévovta, Kal ypap-pata tov T'adatou Seopévov, AaBetvy autos et A le a un mpoOuuos eotiv, GANA Tors didrous éacat, Tavrws pev akiovs ovtas eb trabeiv Su éxeivors oux dvtrav dé Tav iditwyv tov Kdtwvos tocovTov.
9 9 ION / > / e 4 ,
Grr’ ovdé rovTas evédwxey 0 Kadtwv, xaitep

> 2 a } 4 \ ¢
EvLOUS TOV dirtwy paXragcopevovs Kal UTOLEUgo/ ea b \ , ud a , pévous opav, adr\Aa gdyoas Ott Twaca Swpodoxia mpopacews av evtopyaeev, ot dé hirou peGéEouow ov dv éxn Karas Kat Sexaiws xTnodpevos,
’ / nw A A oS
amvrétremye ta S@pa wpos Tov Aniorapov.
> \ \ / b / > \ /
Emel 5€ wédXovtos arraipey eis to Bpevréovov
@ovto Sety of Piro Ta Aeipava Tov Kauriwvos
3 a 4 A ’ \ a a “
els Erepoy OéoGat mrolov, eit@y Ste THS WuyAs
/ a a 4 > 4 \ ,
peOnoetat padrAov 7 ToOvTaY, avnYOn. Kat pévToL
AéyeTat KaTAa TUYNHY emiaharéoTAaTa TEpacal, TOV
/
adAXwv petpiws copuCopeven.
XVI. ’EzavenrOav Sé eis “Pony tov pev adXov
, > 8 ’ , a Xpovoy Kat’ oixov "AOnvodepm suvev,’ 7 Kat ayopav ois giro waptotapevos SueTédecev.
é iB tAXr v de 7 A \ \ b \ mwiBddXovoay b€ avT@ THY TameUTLKnY apyYnv
9 , “ 4 , b
ov mpotepov peTHrAGey 4 TovS TE VYomoUS avayvavat Tous Tapevtixovs Kal diatrvOécOar Tav éuteipwov Exacta Kal tur@ til THS apxXhs THY Svvayiv trepirraBeiv. GOev evOds eis thy apxny KatacTas peydAny érroince petaBorAny Tav Tept
1 guvev supplied by Sintenis?.
268
766

CATO THE YOUNGER

at Pessinus more gifts again awaiting him than those he had left behind him, and a letter from the Galatian begging him, if he did not desire to take them himself, at least to permit his friends to do so, since they were in every way worthy to receive benefits on his account, and Cato’s private means would not reach so far. But not even to these solicitations did Cato yield, although he saw that some of his friends were beginning to weaken and were disposed to blame him; nay, he declared that every taking of gifts could find plenty of excuse, but that his friends should share in what he had acquired honourably and justly. Then he sent his gifts back to Deiotarus.

As he was about to set sail for Brundisium, his friends thought that the ashes of Caepio should be put aboard another vessel; but Cato declared that he would rather part with his life than with those ashes, and put to sea. And verily we are told that, as chance would have it, he had a very dangerous passage, although the rest made the journey with little trouble. :

XVI. After his return to Rome, he spent most of his time at home in the company of Athenodorus,! or in the forum assisting his friends. And though the office of quaestor was open to him, he would not become a candidate for it until he had read the laws relating to the quaestorship, learned all the details of the office from those who had had experience in it, and formed a general idea of its power and scope. Therefore, as soon as he had been instated in the office,? he made a great change in the assistants and

1 Cf. chapter x. 2 In 65 B.c.

”

TO Taptetov UTNpeTaV Kal ypaupatéwv, of dia vetpos ael Ta Snudota ypadupata Kal Tovs vopous ExovTes, Elta véous dpxYovTas TapadapBavovtes be' atreipiav kal ayvotay ateyvas SidacKddowv éré- pov cal tadaywyav Seopévous, ovx iievto THs J 4 9 4 b \ 2 ¥ b 4 éfovcias €xelvois, GAAA Hoav apxovTes avtoi, péxpt ov Kadtwv émiotas trois mpdypact veavi- KOS, OUK Svoua Kai Tiuny Eywy apYovTos, GANA kat voov Kal ppovnpa Kai NOyor, UINpéTais, STEP noav, nEiov xpjoBat toils ypaypatedot, Ta pev éFeXéyywv Kaxoupyobovtas avtovs, Ta 5€ duaptd- vovtas atreipia SiddoKkwv. ws 5é hoay itapol Kai \ ¥ b] 4 @ / > , A Tous adXous €Ow@mevoy vrotpéyovtes, éexeiva Se émroX€mouv, TOY ev TPOTOV avT@V KaTayvods wept miortw év KANpovopmia yeyovévat tovnpov amnrace Tod tTamsietov, Sevtépw Sé tive padiovp- yias mpovOnxe xpiow. & Kdrrdos Aoutatios o Teuntyns avéBn BonOjcwv, dvnp péya Oo TAS

apxns eéxwv dkiwpua, ro Oé THs aperis éxov!
péytotov, ws TavTwy Stxatocvrvn Kal cwdppootvy
€ , lA 9 \ N “A 4
Pwpaiwy duagépwv. jv b5€ nai tod Kadtevos
DJ , 4 XN \ , e Ld
émaiverns Kal auvvnOns dia tov Biov. ws ovv nTT@pmevos Tois Stxators eEnteito Pavepa@s Tov avOpwroyv, ovK ela tavtTa Tovey avTov o Kadrtov.
éru 6€ paAdAov mpocdttTrapodvTos, “ Aioxpor,” 9 “eo 9 4 \ ‘ A ‘ \ e ecmrev, “a Karnde, o€ Tov TintTny Kal Tous nmeE-4 , b / , e LY A e
Tépous Bious odeirovra Soxipalery bo TOV HyLeE-1 ¥xwy bracketed by Bekker, after Coraés.

clerks connected with the treasury. These were fully conversant with the public accounts and the - laws relative thereto, and so, when they received as their superior officers young men whose inexperience and ignorance made it really needful that others should teach and tutor them, they would not sur- render any power to such superiors, but were superiors themselves. Now, however, Cato applied himself with energy to the business, not having merely the name and honour of a superior official, but also intelligence and rational judgement. He thought it best to treat the clerks as assistants, which they really were, sometimes convicting them of their evil practices, and sometimes teaching them if they erred from inexperience. But they were bold fellows, and tried to ingratiate themselves with the other quaestors, while they waged war upon Cato. Therefore the chief among them, whom he found guilty of a breach of trust in the matter of an inheritance, was expelled from the treasury by him, and a second was brought to trial for fraud. This person Catulus Lutatius the censor came forward to defend, a man who had great authority from his office, but most of all from his virtue, being thought to surpass all Romans in justice and discretion; he also commended Cato’s way of living and was in- timate with him. Accordingly, when Catulus had lost his case on its merits and began to beg openly for the acquittal of his client, Cato tried to stop him from doing this. And when Catulus was all the more importunate, Cato said: “It would be a shameful thing, Catulus, if thou, who art the censor, and shouldst scrutinize our lives, wert put out of

Tépwv wirnpetav éxBddrAccOat.” rTavTnvy THY bs) > , A , e vA ,
govyv adpévtos tod Kadtrewvos, o KdtXos mpoce\ > ‘ e J s 9 \ 9 4
Bree pév avtrov ws aperropevos, eltre 5é ovdér, > bd ” e 9 ’ A w e b ’ 4 J ol GW’ elite bm’ opyns cite Un’ aicyvvys amnrOe

o.wmh Sintropnuévos. ov pny HrAw ye o avOpwTos, GAN’ éerrel ped Wndw tas adieicas vrepéBadXov
€ A , 4 /
at xa@atpodoa, Kat AodAXos Mapxos els, cvvap-
le) 4 @ \ 2) / > } “
yov tov Katwvos, to aobeveias amedédetTT0
ths Sixns, wéumet pos TovToOv o Kardos Seopevos BonOjaat t@ avOpwr@ Kaxeivos év hopei@ Kopt-obeis peta thy Sixny Eero Thy arrodvovcav.. ov pay éxypnoato ye TO ypappatet o Kdtwy, ovdé Tov pucOov arédwxev, ovbé Grws évdpiOpov tod AoAXlov tH Widov éryev.
XVII. Odtw Sé rovs ypaupartels Tatrewwoas
Kal Trowjoas UTroyxetpious, Kal Tots TPdypLaAcLY WS
> A >] 4 , > / , \
autos €BovreTO YpwpeEvos, OALYH Ypovw TO TA-petov awédecEe tod Bovreutnpiov cEpvorEpor, WS kal réyerv Kal dpovety atravtas bre Katwv vra-> gs A 4 ’ A \ relas afiopa Th Tapueia mepeOnne. mp@rov pep
yap etpwv ypéa taraa TH Snuooim TodXous 9 J wn \ , @ . A opetAovtas Kal moAXois TO Snuoctov, aya THY Tod éravoev adiKoupevny Kal adixovcay, TOUS
pev evtovas Kal atapaitntws amait@v, Tots 5¢ tayéws azrodsb0vs Kal mpoOvpws, doTe Tov Sjpov aideicOat Tovs pév olopévous atrootepnaety éxtivovtas opavta, tous 5é & pun mpoceddcxwy
avo\apBavovras. émeita ypaupara tToAA@Y ov Mpoonkovtws avadepovtwv, cal Soypata wWevd7 272

767

CATO THE YOUNGER

court by our bailiffs.’ When Cato had uttered these words, Catulus fixed his eyes upon him as if he would make reply ; he said nothing, however, but either from anger or from shame went off in silence, much perplexed. However, the man was not convicted, but when the votes for condemnation exceeded those for acquittal by a single ballot, and one Marcus Lollius, a colleague of Cato, was kept by sickness from attending the trial, Catulus sent to him and begged him to help the man. So Lollius was brought in a litter after the trial and cast the vote that acquitted.. Notwithstanding this, Cato would not employ the clerk, or give him his pay, or in any way take the vote of Lollius into the reckoning.

XVII. By thus humbling the clerks and making them submissive, and by managing the business as he himself desired, in a little while he brought the quaestorship into greater respect than the senate, so that all men said and thought that Cato had invested the quaestorship with the dignity of the consulship. For, in the first place, when he found that many persons were owing debts of long stand- ing to the public treasury and the treasury to many persons, he made an end at the same time of the state being wronged and wronging others; from its debtors he rigorously and inexorably demanded payment, and to its creditors he promptly and readily made payment, so that the people were filled with respect as they saw men making payments who thought to defraud the state, and men receiving payments which they had ceased to expect. In the next place, though many used improper methods to get writings filed with the quaestors, and though

UA 4 \ / a /
mapabexyec. Gat yapiTe wat dSenoer TY TPOTEpwY
> , 2 Oar oN , A .
elwOorav, ovdev avtov EXade ytvdpuevov toLovton,
> x e \ @ , / > 4 b] tA
GXN' Uirép évos TroTe SOypaTos evdotdaas et KUpLOV yéyove, TOAX@Y papTUpovYTMY OvK érriaTEUCE)D, ovdé xatrérake mpotepov 4 TOUS UTraTouUsS éTOpocat mapayevopméevous. dvtwv S€ moAdA@v ols LUAXas a " fol
éxeivos atroxteivact avdpas éx mpoypadis yépas
" 9 4 , , @
éSwxev ava pupias Sioytrias Spaypuds, aravtes
pev avtovs ws évaryeis Kal puapovs épicour, apivacbar S€ ovdels éroAwa, Kdtwv S€ mpoo-Kadovpevos Exactov Exovta Snudo.ov apyvptov LOL, ~2/ ef 0 A \ / N nA
adixas é&érpartev, dua Ouu@ Kal rNoy@ TO THs
A > 4 / > , e
mpakews avoovoy Kal Twapavopov ée€overdifwv. ot
n , > & } 4 ,
5é rodto Trafovres evOrs Hoav evoyor Pove, Kal TpOTov TLVa MponAWKOTES ATHYOVTO TPOsS TOUS
dtxaotas Kal Sixas .étivoy, ndouéevoyv Travtov Kal

vouCovTwv avveEarciperOar THY TOTE TUpavvida kal SvAXav avtov éepopav Koralopevor.
XVIII. “Hepee 5€ rovs rrodXovs ral 7d évderexes avTov Ths émipereias nal atputTov. ovTe yap mpotepos tis avéBn TOY oUvapyxoVTwY Eis TO taptctoy Katwvos olte torepos amndOev, €x-KAnoiav 5é cat Bovrny ovdepiav trapj«e, Sede Kai jwapaguAdtTwv Tovs ETOipws Kal Tpdos yap odrAnpatov cal TeXov dvécets 7 Sdcets ols Eruyev erindifopévous. émridecxvupevos S€ TO Tapetov 274

previous quaestors had been accustomed to receive false decrees at the request of those whom they wished to please, nothing of this sort could be done now without Cato finding it out. Indeed, on one occasion when he was doubtful whether a certain decree had actually passed the senate, though many testified to the fact, he would not believe them, nor would he file the decree away until the consuls had come and taken oath to its validity. Again, there were many persons whom the famous Sulla had rewarded for killing men under proscription, at the -rate of twelve thousand drachmas. All men hated them as accursed and polluted wretches, but no one had the courage to punish them. Cato, however, called each one of these to account for having public money in his possession by unjust means, and made him give it up, at the same time rebuking him with passionate eloquence for his illegal and unholy act. After this experience they were at once charged with murder, were brought before their judges con- demned beforehand, one might say, and were pun- ished. At this all men were delighted, and thought that with their deaths the tyranny of that former time was extinguished, and that Sulla himself was punished before men’s eyes.

XVIII. Moreover, the multitude were captivated by his continuous and unwearied attention to his duties. For no one of his colleagues came up to the treasury earlier than Cato, and none left it later. Besides, no session of assembly or senate would he fail to attend, since he feared and kept close watch on those who were ready to gratify people by voting remissions of debts and taxes, or promiscuous gifts. And so by exhibiting a treasury which was inacces-

275
T 2

v / A a \ ,
aBarov te kat kaBapov cuvxopavtTav, wAHpEs Fé
Npnuatwv, édiSacnev Ste TH Tore TrovTED
4 \ ’ ’ b] > \ \ “A éEeote wy abdixovon. Kat apxas 6€ Tov ocvvap-
’ > 7 ’ \ \ \ \ ¢
YovTwy eviots émrayOns nal yadeTros haves do-

n a a \ TEpov nyaTato, Tais éx Tod pH yapilecOar Ta
a A
Snpoora unde xpivery Kanes areyOeiats bTroT Els EavTOY avTi TdvTwv, Kal Tupéxywy atrodoyeraBat
mpos Tous deopuévous kal Bialopévous exeivous, ws
Ul
apunyavov éotiv, dkovtos Katwvos.
a \ oe a a / \ e \ / Tov dé nuepov TH TeXNcUVTALa oYEdOY Ui Trav-
A A > 3 v
TOY TOV TONTOY TpoTE“POEis Ets OlKOV, HKOUaev OTe MapKédAr@ ToAAG cuvyGers Kal Suvarot TpoomerovTes év TO Tamei@m Kal TepréyovTes exBialovrat ypdwar tiva Soow ypnudtwv odei-4
Lopevwy. Av 5€ 0 Madpxedros éx« Taidwy diros
A / ‘ ‘\ b , 4 LA
T® Katww, cai ovv éxeiv@ BérATLOTOS apxyor,
> AN \ > e A > 4 e > by “A wn autos 5€ Kaé’ avtov aya@yijmos Ur aidods Tois Seopévors, Kal KatdvTns pos Tacav Yap. eEvdus obv o Kdtov émiotpéyras xai rov MdpxedXov
e \ > , 4 \ 4 W
eupwv éxBeBiacpévoy ypawar thv Soow, nTnceE
\ / \ 9 , 9 n A
Tas SéXtovs Kai dmnrEWev, adToD TapecT@TOS ow Kat tovTo mpakas KaTHyayev avTov éx
n ,
Tov Tamweiov Kal Katéotycev els gixov, ovTE TOTE
4 ww a 3 > b , fo!
peprpdevoy ovte VaTtepov, AN eppeivavta TH
ournfeia Kai pidia péypt Tavtos.
Ov pny ovdé aradAayels HS Taptelas adjKe
a a A 9 /
THS Ppoupas Epnuov TO Taptefov, GAN olKérat

sible to public informers and free from their taint, but full of money, he taught men that a state can be rich without wronging its citizens. At first some of his colleagues thought him obnoxious and troublesome, but afterwards they were well pleased with him, since he took upon his own shoulders exclusively the burden of the hatreds arising from refusal to give away the public moneys or to make unjust decisions, and furnished them with a defence against people who tried to force requests upon them. They would say, namely, “It is impossible ; Cato will not consent.”

On the last day of his term of office, after he had been escorted to his house by almost the whole body of citizens, he heard that many friends of Marcellus and men of influence had closely beset him in the treasury, and were trying to force him to register some re- mission of moneys due. Now, Marcellus had been a friend of Cato from boyhood, and when associated with him had been a most excellent magistrate. - When acting by himself, however, he was led by a feeling of deference to be complaisant towards suppliants, and was inclined to grant every favour. At once, then, Cato turned back, and when he found that Marcellus had been forced to register the re- mission, he asked for the tablets and erased the entry, while Marcellus himself stood by and said nothing. After this had been done, Cato conducted Marcellus away from the treasury and brought him to his house, and Marcellus had no word of blame for him either then or afterwards, but continued his intimate friendship up to the end.

However, not even after he had laid down the quaestorship did Cato leave the treasury destitute of pep avrov Kal’ nuépav arroypapopevot TAS b100- :

KNOELS maphoay, AUTOS 5é BiPrLa Aayous Tepte-Xovra Snpoolay oLKOvOMLeDV amo TOV LAra
Xpovery els THY EavTOU Tapweiay UNO ALEVOS TEVTE TaravTov ael Sta YeLpos elev.
XIX. Kis &¢ ovyKhnTov Elones TE Tp@TOS Kat TEANEUTALOS aNNANETTETO® moNNaKs O€ TOY an-AwY TXONF cuvaryoueveny cabelouevos aveyiveo KEV NOVY, TO iatiov Tod BiBXiou Tpoiaxo-HEvOS. anednunoe dé ovd€érore BovrRs yevoperns.
émel 5é & ba Tepov ol qept Hopaniov ewpeov | aurov
év ols éorovdalov adikws apetatetotov Kal ducexBiac tov aéi, Sepnxavavro perixais Tit ournyopiass 0) Stairacs 7 i) T parypwareiacs efo Tmeptomap. cuvels ov Taxu THY émiBoudny am ettre Tact Kal maperafato Bourjjs aryomevns pn dev ao TpaTTeL. ouTe yap o&ns yapiy ovTe mreovefias obre avToMaTWS Kal Kara, TUYNY, domwep Erepoi TUES, eM TrET OV eis TO WPaTTEW Ta Tijs TONEWS, GAN ws idtov é Epyov avdpos ayabob
THY ToATELaV ENOpEVOS, faddov Geto deity T pooe-

Xew tois Kowois n To Knplp THY péeALT TAD, 6S ve
Kat Ta TOV eT apXLav mpaypara Kal Soyuata Kat Kpioets Kal mpakes Tas peyioras Epyov wemotinro bia, TOV éxactaxobe Eévav cai dirov wéprrecbar 7 pos avrov.
"Evotas 5é rote KiAwdio TO Snuaywy@ Kivodr-Tt Kal TapattovTe peyddov apyas VEWTEPLO [Lov cat S:aBddXovte mpos Tov O7jpov Lepets Kal tepeias, 1 éépwy Sintenis, with one Paris MS.; Coraés and Bekker have dpavres, with the other MSS.
278

his watchful care, but slaves of his were there every day copying the transactions, and he himself paid five talents for books containing accounts of the public business from the times of Sulla down to his own quaestorship, and always had them in hand.

XIX. He used to be the first to reach the senate and the last to leave it; and often, while the other senators were slowly assembling, he would sit and read quietly, holding his toga in front of the book. He never left the city when the senate was in session. But afterwards, when Pompey and his friends saw that he could never be prevailed upon or forced from his position in any unjust measures which they had at heart, they would contrive to draw him away by sundry legal advocacies for friends, or arbitrations, or business matters. Accordingly, Cato quickly perceived their design and refused all such applications, and made it a rule to have no other business on hand while the senate was in session. For it was neither for the sake of reputation, nor to gain riches, nor accidentally and by chance, like some others, that he threw himself into the management of civic affairs, but he chose a public career as the proper task for a good man, and thought that he ought to be more attentive to the common interests than the bee to its honey. And so he was careful to have the affairs of the provinces and decrees and trials and the most important measures sent to him by his connections and friends in every place. |

At one time he opposed Clodius the demagogue, who was raising agitation and confusion as a prelude to great changes, and was calumniating to the people priests and priestesses, among whom Fabia, a sister of

279

PLUTARCR'S LIVES

év ols cat DaBia Tepevrias aderpy, THs Kexeépevos YUVALKOs, cuwvdivevae, TOV peev Krwdcov alaxyuvn TEeptBarov nvayKacey UTEKoTHVaL THS modews, tov b€ Kixépwvos evyaptarodvtos, TH mone. Sety Exeww Epyn xdpwy avtov, was éxeivns EVEKA TAVTA TOLOY Kal TONLTEVOLMEVOS. €K TOU-Tov peyarn Soka epi avToyv Hv, w@oTE pyTOpA
pév, Sixn tivi paptupias puas hepopévns, eimeiv mpos Tous Sixactas ws Evi papTupodyTt 7 poce-yew, ovde Kdtwu, caras exer, woddovs Sé 75n wept TaV atriotwy Kal tapabo—wv, woTrep év Tapotula Twi, Neyety STL TOVTO pev OVdEe KaTwvos
Néyovtos WiOavov éott. poxOnpod &é avOpwrrov Kal moAvTEedNods Adyor év cuyKAnT@ SiaBeuévou
mpos euTéAetav Kal owdpoviopoy eTavactas
"Apvaios, “"O avOpwme," elme, “ris avéEetai cou Sevtvovvros pev ws AevKdddXov, oixobopovr-tos 5€ ws Kpdoaou, dSnunyopodvtos 5é jpivy ws Katevos;" cal tov adrwv 8€ tors havrous cal axoXdaotous, Tos Aoyots b€ Geuvovs Kal avorn-pous xAevdlovtes exaddouy Katrwvas.
XX. TloAA@y 5€é adrov emi Snuapyiav Kanrovv-TWV OUK WETO KANOS Eye peyarns éEoucias Kal apxiis, @omep loxupov papydxou, Suvapey éy mTpayuaci ovx dvayxaios é€avarooat. rat dpa, cxYorrs ovens tov Snuociwyv, waparaBov BiBrla nal dirocdgpouvs éBabdsev eis Aeveaviar, aypous avToOt Kextnwévos ExovTas ovK dvEedev-Gépovs SvarpiBas: elta Kab' odov toddXois Tice brrotuylois Kal oxevert Kal axodrovOots arravTncas kal muOdpuevos Nérwta Méteddop eis 'Pony émavépyecOar Snpapyiay uetiévar TwapecKeva-280

CATO THE YOUNGER

Cicero's wife Terentia, was in danger of conviction. But Cato put Clodius to such shame that he was forced to steal away from the city; and when Cicero thanked him, Cato told him he ought to be thankful to the city, since it was for her sake that all his public work was done. In consequence of this he was held in high repute, so that an orator, at a trial where the testimony of a single witness was introduced, told the jurors that it was not right to give heed toa single witness, not even if he were Cato ; and many already, when speaking of matters that were strange and in- credible, would say, as though using a proverb, “ This is not to be believed even though Cato says it.”” Again, when a corrupt and extravagant man was expatiating in the senate on frugality and self-restraint, Amnaeus sprang to his feet and said: “ Who can endure it, my man, when you sup like Lucullus, build like Crassus, and yet harangue us like Cato?”’! And other men also who were degraded and licentious in their lives, but lofty and severe in their speech, were mockingly called Catos.

XX. Though many invited him to become a tribune of the people he did not think it right to ex- pend the force of a great and powerful magistracy, any more than that of a strong medicine, on matters that did not require it. And at the same time, being at leisure from his public duties, he took books and philosophers with him and set out for Lucania, where he owned lands affording no mean sojourn. Then, meeting on the road many beasts of burden with baggage and attendants, and learning that Metellus Nepos was on his way back to Rome prepared to sue for the tribuneship, he stopped without a word, and

1 Cf. the Ducullus, xl. 3.

/ 9 4 A \ \ \ > ff ©
THEVOV, ETETTN LOT], KAL SiadiTrav pLxpov exe-ANevoey dvactpédery oTriaw TOUS éavTov. tay oé pidov Javpacdvrer, “QOux tote,” elwev, “Ott
kat xa? avtov vo éumAnkias hoBepos éote MéreAXos, kal viv é« rs Llopmrniov yvapns ap sry wEv0S els THY moMtTeLay éumeceitas Sixny
oKNTTOU TWavTa Tpaypara TapaTTay; OUK ouv TXOAS ovde aTroonmias KaLpos, anra bei Kpari-cat TOU av6pos, n KaOS arroBaveiv omep THs érevbepias arywrifouevov.” Gos dé Tav theov
| TapatvesdvTay adixeto 7 P@TOV els Ta xwpra Kat
Suet peypev ov jToXvy xXpovoy, elta émraviicev els
Tow. éomépas dé éXOwv evOus Ewbev els ayopay xatéBatve Snwapxiav peTLOY, as avritabopevos
7 pos TOV MéredAov. TO yap taxupov uy apXn m pos TO Keohvew éxel padDov i] 7 pos TO Tpar re’ Kav TavTES ol AOLTTOL Trap éva nbicwvras, Tou p71) O€XNoVTOS pnde é E@VTOS TO Kpatos éoti.
XI. To pep obv Tp@Tov orLryou Tepl TOV Kdrwva TOV pirov jj oav" havepas 6 THS yveoins avdrob YEVOMEDTS, dAdryou YpOovou TAVTES Ob xen oTol Kal yva@piwor a UveTpeXov Kal Ta,pexddouv Kal Taped dppuvov avrov, WS Ov AapBavovra

yapwy, GNA THY peyioTny didovTa TH mar piou Kal Tots emvetKer TAT OLS TOV TrOMLT OY, OTL TrOA-
Adis am parywoves ap&at mapov ou Jedjoas, yov
Umrép THS édevOepias Kal toXLTelas drycoveovpevos OUK AKLVoUVaS KaTELoL. RéyeTat Oé, Toa vmod omoudis kal tho poo buns @0oupeveor Tpos av-TOV, év cvduvp ryevopevos mores e&txéacBar did WAHOos eis THY ayopdv. amrodery Gels Sé Snpapyos 282

769

CATO THE YOUNGER

after waiting.a little while ordered his company to turn back. His friends were amazed at this, whereupon he said: “ Do ye not know that even of himself Metellus is to be feared by reason of his infatuation ? And now that he comes by the advice of Pompey he will fall upon the state like a thunderbolt and throw everything into confusion. It is no time, then, for a leisurely sojourn in the country, but we must overpower the man, or die honourably in a struggle for our liberties.”” Nevertheless, on the advice of his friends, he went first to his estates and tarried there a short time, and then returned to the city.! It was evening when he arrived, and as soon as day dawned he went down into the forum to sue for a tribuneship, that he might array himself against Metellus. For the strength of that office is negative rather than positive ; and if all the tribunes save one should vote for a measure, the power lies with the one who will not give his consent or permission.

XXI. At first, then, Cato had only a few of his friends about him; but when his purpose became known, in a little while all the men of worth and note flocked to him with exhortations and encourage- ments. They felt that he was not receiving a favour, but conferring the greatest favour on his country and the most reputable of his fellow citizens; for he had often refused the office when he could have had it without trouble, and now sued for it at his peril that he might contend for the liberties of the state. It is said, moreover, that he was in peril from the many who crowded upon him in their zeal and affection, and could hardly make his way through the crowd into the forum. He was declared

1 In 63 B.c.
283
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ou érépos, cal TO MerédArdm, Tas trartixds apyatpesias opav wvious ovcas, éteTtiinoe TO Syu@ Kal xatatravwv Tov AOyov éT@pmoTE TOU
Sovtos apyuptov, Sotis av 7, Katnyopnoeyv, &va N b
Leravov wmreEedomevos dt otxevoTnta. LepBrriav yap dbergpav Kdravos o teraves elye. 510 Tod-
N A 4 / 2997

Tov pev trapnxe, Aevecov 5€ Movpnvay édiwxerv
? / 4 ” \ “a
apyupio Sat paEdpevov apyovta meta TOD YtdNa-vod yevéoOar. vom dé tive Tov’ hevyovtos aet pvrAaka TO K ppm odo A n Aabe!i » KaTnyop@ Sidovtos, @oTe 7 AaOety
& ovvaye nat wapacKkevaletat wpos THY KaTN-UY e A K 4 5 @ \ e \ “A / yopiav, 0 T@ Katww dofeis vireo tov Movpnva A A , e es
jTapaxo\ovlav Kat tapapudXatTav, ws éwpa 4 pnbev emiBovrAws mpdttovTa pndé adixws, ara yevvaiws Te Kal hiravOpoTras atTAnY TWA TIS KaTnyoptas Kal Suxaiay oddv topevopevov, odTaS
? / Ne , ~ \ #4 a +) Cavpale to Ppovnua Kal To 7005 wate KaT
dyopav tpoci@v Kai hovtav emi Ovpas aruvOdveoOat tov Katwvos e¢ péddXee Te oNpEepoy mpa-
a / ypatevoacbar TOY Trepl THY KaTnyopiav: eb Sé py
pain, misTrevwv amrnet.
Ths Sé déens Aeyouévns o Kixépwv, daratos av
Tore Kal T@ Movpyva cuvd:ndv, Todda Sa Tov
Kdtwva tots 2twikods pidocopous Kai tadta 67
A , 4 o 4 \
Ta Twapdooka KaXovpeva Soypata xrevdlwv Kai Tapackantwv yékwTa Trapeiye Tots Stxactais.
284

CATO THE YOUNGER

' tribune with others! (including Metellus), and seeing that the consular elections were attended with bribery, he berated the people; and in concluding his speech he swore that he would prosecute the briber, whoever he might be, making an exception only of Silanus because of their relationship. For Silanus was the husband of Cato’s sister Servilia.
For this reason he let Silanus alone, but he prosecuted Lucius Murena on the charge of having secured his election to the consulship with Silanus by bribery.2, Now, there was a law by which the defendant could set a man to watch the prosecutor, in order that there might be no secret about the ~ material which he was collecting and preparing for the prosecution. Accordingly, the man appointed by Murena to watch Cato would follow him about and keep him under observation. When, however, he saw that Cato was doing nothing insidiously or unjustly, but was honourably and _ considerately following a straightforward and righteous course in the prosecution, he had such admiration for Cato’s lofty spirit and noble character that he would come up to him in the forum or go to his house and ask him whether he intended that day to attend to any matters connected with the prosecution; and if Cato said no, the man would take his wore and go away.

When the trial was held, Cicero, who was consul at that time and one of Murena’ s advocates, took advantage of Cato’s fondness for the Stoics to rail and jest at length about those philosophers and what were called their “ paradoxes,” thus making tov ov Kdtava hact Stapedsacavta mpos tous TapovTas elrreiy" e"Q) av6pes, as yehotov bma- Tov EXOMED.” anopuyav dé 0 Moupyvas ou movnpod wdBos ovde appovos émabev av parrov mpos tov Katwva: kai yap UTaTevov EXPHTO cupBovr TOV peyioron, Kal Taha TLUL@Y Ka Tig TEveY dveTéAEeD. aitvos 5é¢ wv o Katav av- TOS, émi Tov Bnpatos Kal rod ouvedpiov Xareros av Kal poBepos imép tov Sixaiwv, eita waow evvoiKas Kal pravd pores 7 poo pepopevos.

1 At this time the number of the popular tribunes was ten. 2 Silanus and Murena were consuls in 62 B.C.

XXII. IIply b¢ els Thy Snuapxiav xaliora- cGat, Kixépevos t UTaTtevovTos, adrows Te ToNNois ayaot THV apxny apOwcer avrov Kal Tais qepi Karidivay mpateae peyiotats Kal KadrLo Tas yevouevats TEAOS eméOnxev. autos péy yap o Karidivas on€O tov Te Kal TavTen} peraBodny errdryov Trois ‘Popaiov T paypace Kal ardoels opob Kat qoXéuous TAPATTOV eFereyx Gels bao TOU Kuxépovos eferere TIS TOAEWS, Aévtros dé xal KeOnyos Kal per’ aur ay Ere por cuxvol beEdpevor HV cuvaporiay, kal T@ Karidiva Secdiav Kal

puxpoAroyiay TOY Tonpn drop émuxanoovres, avrol devoobyTo THY wonky apdnv avatpeiv Tupl Kal THY yyepoviay eOvav ajoatTacect Kal ToEMoLs arog vrows dvatpéeren. pavepas dé Ths el a OKEUHS auTov ryevopevns, wat Kixépavos * ev
BovrAh yvapunv wpobévtos, o pev TpPATOS el TT @V Lravbs arepnvaro Soxeity avT@ Ta éoxara eee Xphvat tovs avdpas, oi Sé wer avtov ede-1 xal Kixépwvos so Sintenis? for the corrupt MSS. ds é& Tors wept Kixépwvos yéyparra:; Coraés and Bekker adopt the early anonymous correction wal Kixépwyos, as év rois wept éxeivou yéypawrat.
286

the jurors laugh. Cata, accordingly, as we are told, said with a smile to the bystanders: “My friends, what a droll fellow our consul is!” And after Murena had been acquitted, he did not feel towards Cato as a base or senseless man might have done; for during his consulship he asked his advice in the most important matters, and in other ways constantly showed him honour and trust. And Cato himself was responsible for this; on the tribunal and in the senate he was severe and terrible in his defence of justice, but afterwards his manner towards all men was benevolent and kindly.

XXII: Before he entered upon his tribuneship, and during the consulship of Cicero,! he maintained the authority of that magistrate in many conflicts, and above all in the measures relating to Catiline, which proved the most important and most glorious of all, he brought matters to a successful issue. Catiline himself, namely, who’ was trying to bring about a complete and destructive change in the Roman state, and was stirring up alike seditions and wars, was convicted by Cicero and fled the city; but Lentulus and Cethegus and many others with them took over the conspiracy, and, charging Catiline with cowardice and pettiness in his designs, were them- selves planning to destroy the city utterly with fire, and to subvert the empire with revolts of nations and foreign wars. But their schemes were dis- covered, and Cicero brought the matter before the senate for deliberation.? The first speaker, Silanus, expressed the opinion that the men ought to suffer the extremest fate, and those who followed him in

1 63 B.C.
* Cf. the Caesur, vii. 4-v ii. 2; and the Cicero, x. ff.
287

A “a \
4 Ens neorovOnoav, aypt Kaicapos. Kaicap 6é avaotds, ate 57 Kal Sewos eitrety Kai Tacay év a , \ \ / C4 ef
TH Torte. petaBoArAnv Kal KivnoLY WoTEp UANHV
? > A a , ” ; a
@v autos Stevocito BovrAopevos avery padrdov
a / a 9 \ N ‘ 770
i) oBevvupernv epiopav, érraywya Toda Kat
a / diravO pwira StareyGels atroxtetvar pevy akpiTous “ 4 oux ela Tovs avdpas, eipxOévtas Sé Typety éxe-5 Nevoev, otTw Sé Tas yvwOpas peETéoTNOE TIS
A , \ aA @ \
Bovrns, poBnGeians tov Shpov, Bote Kat L-N 4 3 \ / e #09 > AN ANavov &Eapvoy elvat Kai Aéyetv ws Od’ aUTOS
ry) , > \ e ‘ v ‘ > \
elrot Oavatov, ada eipypov: Exyatov yap avdpt ‘Pwpat@ TodTO KaKOY aTravTwv.
XXIIT. Tevopévns S€ troravrns THs Tpowhs Kat admdvtwv émt To mpaotepoy puévtTwv xai pidav-
‘
Opwrotepov, o Kdtwy pos Thy yvounyv avactas
A / A
evOus iero TO AOYD pet Opyns Kal wdOous, Tov te 2travov Kaxilwv THs petaBorjjs, Kal xaba“i A “A
mropevos TOD Kaicapos os oynuate dnyeTix®@ kal
2 Xo Davo pa } DALY a : y yo piravOpor@ thy Tod avatpétovTos, Kal
4 \ ‘ 9499 > A v
dedutTopevov THY BovAnv éf’ ols avtov Edeu de-duévat Kat ayaTav eb Tov yeyovdtwv aO@os aTadrAdéet Kal avuTroTrTos, oUTwS Trepipavas Kal
? “A
tTau“as Tous Kowous éEaprralwy trodeuious Kat \ > 2QO\ bf a“ > / /
THY Tap ovdev éXOovaay amorécOat Tratpiba
Uf \ a, e “ \ “ b] bd TOLAUTNY Kal TOTAUTHY OMoOAOYaV pn) EAEEtY, GAX
A ” \ , y “ 4 \
ods ede pn. yevéoOar unde hodvat Saxpiwv Kai avaKNaLopEvos, Eb hovwv peydrwv Kal xivdvvev

> / \ , ’ ,
aTadXafovat THY TOALY atTroPavorTes.
3 Tovtov povov dv Katwyr elite d:acwtecdai
288

turn were of the same mind, until it came to Caesar. _ Caesar now rose, and since he was a_ powerful speaker and wished to increase every change and commotion in the state as so much stuff for his own designs, rather than to allow them to be quenched, he urged many persuasive and humane arguments. He would not hear of the men being put to death without a trial, but favoured their being kept in close custody, and he wrought such a change in the opinions of the senate, which was in fear of the people, that even Silanus recanted and said that he too had not meant death, but imprisonment ; for to a Roman this was the “ extremest’’ of all evils.

XXIII. After such a change as this had been wrought and all the senators had hastened to adopt the milder and more humane penalty, Cato rose to give his opinion, and launched at once into a passionate and angry speech, abusing Silanus for his change of opinion, and assailing Caesar. Caesar, he said, under a popular pretext and with humane words, was trying to subvert the state; he was seeking to frighten the senate in a case where he himself had much to fear; and he might be well content if he should come off guiltless of what had been done and free from suspicion, since he was so openly and recklessly trying to rescue the common enemies, while for his country, which had been on the brink of ruin, and was so good and great, he confessed that he had no pity; and yet for men who ought not to have lived or been born even, he was shedding tears and lamenting, although by their deaths they would free the state from great slaughten and perils.
This is the only speech of Cato which has been

\ 4 / le e / ‘
dace tov Royov, Kixépwvos tov viatouv Tous Stadhépovtas ofvTnTt TAY ypadewy onpeia Tpode-
“a J la)

SdEavtos év puxpois kat Bpayéot TvIToLs TOANOY
, 4 Uy % Mv >
ypapydatwv éxovta Suvapiv, eita adXov adda-
/ A : / , > f
yooe tov BovdrevTnpiov oopddny éuBadovtos.
ovTw yap HoKxovv ovd éxéxTnvTO TOvs KadoupE-
\ , a VOUS ONpELoypahous, GAAG TOTE TpwToOY eis LyVvOS
A e
Tl KatTacThvat Aé€yovow. éexpatnae & ovv oO
Kadtov nal peréotynce Tas yvopas, @ote Oavatov
/ n > A katandicacbat Tav avdpav.
XXIV. Ei b€ det unde ta pixpa trav nOadv
a a , , a
onpeia tmapadirety @oTrEp ELKova rvuyns vTrO-
4 / , \ e? \
ypadopmevous, NEyeTal, TOTE TONANY autrAdXaVY Kal
a \ “~ péyav ayava mpos tov Kdtwva tod Kaicapos
a , A /
EyovTos Kal THS BovAts els exeivous avnptnuévns, SeAtdpiov te puxpov EEwOev eioxoutcOjvar TO
4 A
Kaicapt. tod dé Katwvos eis vrroyiay dyovtos
\ A N 4 ted U ‘
TO Tpaypna Kal dtaBadrXovTOS Elvai TLVas TOUS KLvoUpévous, Kal KeXNEVOVTOS avayiWocKELY Ta
yeypappéva, Tov Kaicapa te Kdtwu mpocdovvar
To OeATdpLov éyyus éot@Tt. Tov dé avayvorTa LepBirias THs adeAdHs emictoNov dKoXacTOV mpos Tov Kaicapa yeypappévov, épwons Kal
, e bd > A a , “A , dtehPappervns UT avtov, mpocpiai te 7@ Kat-\ > ow &é , l “99 \ / capt nai evmetv, ‘ Kpater, péOvoe,” cat warw, e > \ \ b] b] n , ,

oUTwS emt Tov €€ apyns Aoyov TpaTEc Oat.
Daiverac b€ GAws atvynua yevéoOar Tod Katwvos 1 yuvatxwvitis. attn pev yap emt preserved, we are told, and its preservation was due to Cicero the consul, who had previously given to those clerks who excelled in rapid writing instruc- tion in the use of signs, which, in small and short figures, comprised the force of many letters; these clerks he had then distributed in various parts of the senate-house. For up to that time the Romans did not employ or even possess what are called short- hand writers, but then for the first time, we are told, the first steps toward the practice -were taken. Be that as it may, Cato carried the day and changed the opinions of the senators, so that they condemned the men to death.

XXIV. Now, since we must not pass over even the slight tokens of character when we are de- lineating as it were a likeness of the soul, the story goes that on this occasion, when Caesar was eagerly engaged in a great struggle with Cato and the attention of the senate was fixed upon the two men, a little note was brought in from outside to Caesar. ‘Cato tried to fix suspicion upon the matter and alleged that it had something to do with the con- spiracy,! and bade him read the writing aloud. Then Caesar handed the note to Cato, who stood near him. But when Cato had read the note, which was an unchaste letter from his sister Servilia to Caesar, with whom she was passionately and guiltily in love, he threw it to Caesar, saying, “Take it, thou sot,”’ and then resumed his speech. :

But as regards the women of his household Cato appears to have been wholly unfortunate. For this

1 Plutarch’s ambiguous words here mugt be interpreted by comparison with the Brutus, v. 2 f., where the same story is told.

Kaicapt xax@s jeovoe ta Sé THs érépas Lep-Birias, aderdjns b€ Kadtwvos, aoynpovéctepa.
AevxorAr\o yap yaunbcioa, tmpwtevoavtt ‘Po-paiwy cata dofav dvdpi, nat texodoa tratdiov éEémece Tov oixov 6: dxoraciav. To b€ aloyt-oTov, ovd 7 yuvn Tod Kdtwvos ’Atidia To.ovT@V éxabapevoev aduaptnudtwy, ddArAa KaiTep é&F av-THs dvo tratdia Tetoinuévos avdyKknv éaxev éx-Bareiv acynpoyovoar.
XXV. Elta énue Ovyarépa Pidirmov, Map-xiav, emernn Soxovoav elvas yuvaixa, Tepl ts 0 TAEetoTOs Aoyos: Kai KaOatrep! ev Spdpate TH
Bim tovtTo TO pépos TpoBAnpaT@bes yéeyove Kal atropov. émpaxOn dé tovtTov Tov TpoToY, ws istopet Opacéas, ets Movvatiov, dvdpa Kdrwvos éraipov kal oupBiwtyy, avadépwv THY TioTev.

év tToAXois épactais Kal Oavpactais tov Ka-TwVvos oav érépwy Erepot uGAXrov ExdnrAoL Kat Siadavets, av nat Koivtos ‘Opryotos, avnp a&io-patos Te Aapmpod Kal Tov TpoTrov ériecKns.
émiOupov ody T@ Katou py auvnOns eivar pndé éTaipos movov, GAN apes yé Tas Eis OlKELOTHTA catapifat Kai KoLywviav TdvTa TOV OLKOY Kal TO yévos, emexeipnoe ovptrei\Oew Orws THY Ovyatépa Tlopxiav, BuBAw avvoixodcav nai wemoinpévny éxeivym 5v0 traidas, aiT@ Tad woTEp Eevyerty ywpayv evTexvocacbat trapacyn. do6&n péev yap avoporwy atoTov elvat TO ToLodTov, duce. dé KaNOV Kab TONTLKOY, EV Mpa Kal akph yuvaixa
unte apyely TO yovlmov atocBécacay, pte
1 «al xaddmwep the wal is supplied by Sintenis; Bekker has xa0anep yap, after Coraés, 292

~

CATO THE YOUNGER

sister was in ill repute for her relations with Caesar ; and the conduct of the other Servilla, also a sister of Cato, was still more unseemly. She was the wife of Lucullus, a man of the highest repute in Rome, and had borne him a child, and yet she was banished from his house for unchastity.1. And what was most disgraceful of all, even Cato’s wife Atilia was not free from such transgressions, but although he had two children by her, he was forced to put her away because of her unseemly behaviour.

XXV. Then he married a daughter of Philippus, Marcia, a woman of reputed excellence, about whom there was the most abundant talk ; and this part of Cato’s life, like a drama, has given rise to dispute and is hard to explain. However, the case was as follows, according to Thrasea, who refers to the authority of Munatius, Cato’s companion and intimate associate. Among the many lovers and admirers of Cato there were some who were more conspicuous and illustrious than others. One of these was Quintus Hortensius, aman of splendid reputation and excellent character. This man, then, desiring to be more than a mere associate and companion of Cato, and in some way or other to bring his whole family and line into community of kinship with him, attempted to persuade Cato, whose daughter Porcia was the’ wife of Bibulus and had borne him two sons, to give her in turn to him as noble soil for the production of children. According to the opinion of men, he argued, such a course was absurd, but according to the law of nature it was honourable and good for the state that a woman in the prime of youth and beauty should neither quench her productive power and lie idle, nor yet, by bear-

"1 See the Lucullua, xxxviii. 1.

4 A “~ A
TAELOVA TOV iKaVOY emitixToVaaV, evoyrEeiy Kal KaTtantTwyevery ovdev Seduevov,! Kowvovpévous 5é Tas dtadoxas akiows dvdpdat Thy Te apeTny adpOo-vov Toteiy Kai TroAvXUTOY Tos yéveot, Kal THY
/ a TOALY aUTHY TpOSs AUTHVY avaKepavvevat Tais ol-
, A KELoTNoUW. eb O€ TadVYTWS TEPLEXOLTO THS YyUVALKOS
e , ? , AN A 3 ,
0 BuPAos, atroba@cew evOds Texodoay, oiKELoTEpos J a , N 4 , /
avut@ te BuBdXw xai Kdtrow xowwvia traidov
; é
rYEVOMEVOS.
b] lA \ “A 4 e e ,

Arroxpwapévou 5€ tod Katwvos ws ‘Optyo.ov pev ayaTa Kat Soxipdfee Kxotvwvov otxerorntos,
” \ oe a a / \ 4
atotrov dé Hyeltat trotetaPat AOyov TWept yasov ‘ e h67f 4 \ b] a Ouyatpos érépm Sedopmévns, petaBarwv éxeivos
a“ \ a
ovK WKYNTEV ATrOKaAUWapEVos aiTteiy THY aAUTOV
aA "4 \ ‘\
yuvaixa Katwvos, véay pev ovoay Ett pos TO tixtev, éxovtos Sé€ tov Kdtwvos amoxpacay diadoynv. Kal ovn éotw Eltety WS TavTA ETpaT-
i ;
Tey edws ov mpocéyovta TH Mapxia tov Katwva:
\ ,
KvOVTaY yap aUTHVY TOTE TUYXdVELY Aéyouvd LY. OO

o] 4 , e a’ A ai c¢ , A 8 ovtv Katwv opav tnv tod ‘Optnaiou omovdiny
\ , ’ ’ a ’ > A \
Kal mpoOupiay ovK avteitrev, GAN Edy Seiv Kal
/ “A f A fo /
Ditirr@ tabta cuvdoEat T@ watpt THs Mapxias.
e 2 e / 9 \ v \ , @s obv o Pidurmos evtevxPeis Eyvo THhv cuyyo-
b M” 9 , \ , a

pnotv, ovk adrdAwWs eEveyyunoe THY Mapxiav 7
mapovtos Tov Kdtwvos avtod Kal cuveyyvavTos.
“a / e
TavTa pev ov, EL Kal YpovoLs VaTEpoy éeTpayOn,
aA a a 54
puna Oévte pol TO TOV yuvatka@v TporaBeiv edoke.
1 Seduevov Coraés supplies olxoy.
294 :

CATO THE YOUNGER

ing more offspring than enough, burden and impoverish a husband who does not want them. More-
- over, community in heirs among worthy men would make virtue abundant and widely diffused in their families, and the state would be closely cemented together by their family alliances. And if Bibulus were wholly devoted to his wife, Hortensius said he would give her back after she had borne him a child, and he would thus be more closely connected both with Bibulus himself and with Cato by a community of children.

Cato replied that he loved Hortensius and thought highly of a community of relationship with him, but considered it absurd for him to propose marriage with a daughter who had been given to another. Then Hortensius changed his tactics, threw off the mask, and boldly asked for the wife of Cato himself, since she was still young enough to bear children, and Cato had heirs enough. And it cannot be said that he did this because he knew that Cato neglected Marcia, for she was at that time with child by him, as we are told. However, seeing the earnestness and eager desire of Hortensius, Cato would not refuse, but said that Philippus also, Marcia’s father, must approve of this step. Accordingly, Philippus was consulted and expressed his consent, but he would not give Marcia in marriage until Cato himself was present and joined in giving the bride away.! This incident occurred at a later time,? it is true, but since I had taken up the topic of the women of Cato’s household I decided to anticipate it.

1 It is plain that Cato divorced Marcia; otherwise her father could not have given her in marriage to Hortensius.
2 Probably in 56 B.c.
295

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXVI. Tav é epi Tov Aevthov dvarpeOev-TWV, KAL TOU Kaicapos mept @v elonyyend Kal deBANOn aWpos THY obyKdyTov els TOV Sfjwov Katagduyovtos Kal Ta TOMA vooobvTa Kat
StepOappéva THS ToNTELas pepn TAPATTOVTOS

Kal TUvaryovTos 7 pos aUTOV, O Katwv poBnGeis émeroe ™HY Boudny avahaBeiv TOV amropov Kat avéuntov 6x Aov els TO oLTnpeccor, Gvarwparos
pev 6vTOs évavaiou yYidiwv Kal diaxociwy xal TEVTNKOVTA TANAVTOD, Tepipavas d€ TH prdav-Opwrria (TAUTD Kat YapeTe TiS ATELANS jexceivns
diaru elons. éured0ev eis THY Snuapyiav ép-Tec@v oO Mérehdos éxxAnoias te OopuvBodeas
TUVIYE, Kal | Popov éypanpe Toparnjiov Mdyvov
teva KaTa TAXOS META TOV Supdpewy ELS ‘Tradtav kal maparaSovra owtev THY TOMY, @S vUTr0 Katihiva Kevduvevovaay. mV bé TOUTO oyos eUT peTrns, epyov 5é Tov vomou Kal TédoS eyxetpt-oat Ta Tpay ware Toprnip Kat mapadsodvar THD myeHoviav. Syevoperns dé Bovis kal tov Ka-TOVOS ovy, Gomep elaben, TO Mgrédro apodpais EMT ET OVTOS, GNX’ ETTLELKT) Toa "cad pétpLa TapatvéravTos, TEROS dé Kai 7 pos denoers Tparro-peévou Kab THY Meréd dw oixtay ael yevouevny dpaToKpaTiKny errawwe avtos, ETL pandrov éfap-Geis Kat KaTadpovicas) MeredXos @s évdsddvTos
avTov Kal TTHNTTGOVTOS Ets Umepnpavors GTrELNAS kal rAoyous Opaceis eferecen, as Bia tavra TAS Bovxrjs diam pakopevos. oUTw on petaBarov 0
Kadtov «al ox Apa Kat dovnv Kat ovov, ETELTIOV
5€ waot Ttois aAdots Statetapévws Ste Ca@vtos 296

CATO THE YOUNGER

XXVI. Lentulus and his associates were executed, and Caesar, in view of the charges and accusations made against him to the senate, took refuge with the people and was stirring up and attaching to himself the numerous diseased and corrupted elements in the commonwealth. Cato was therefore alarmed and persuaded the senate to conciliate the poor and land- less multitude by including them in the distribution of grain, the annual expenditure for which was twelve hundred and fifty talents.!_ By this act of humanity and kindness the threatening danger was most successfully dissipated. Then Metellus, who hastened to take up the duties of his tribuneship, began to hold tumultuous assemblies of the people, and pro- posed a law that Pompey the Great should hasten with his forces to Italy ? and undertake the preserva- tion of the city, on the ground that it was imperilled by Catiline. Now, this was a specious proposition ; but the end and aim of the law was to put matters in the hands of Pompey and hand over to him the supreme power. The senate met, and Cato did not, as was his custom, attack Metellus with vehemence, but gave him much fitting and moderate advice, and finally, resorting to entreaties, actually praised the family of Metellus for having always been aristocratic in sympathy. Metellus was therefore all the more emboldened, and, despising Cato as a yielding and timorous opponent, broke out in extravagant threats and bold speeches, intending to carry everything through in spite of the senate. So, then, Cato changed his looks and voice and words, and con- cluded a vehement speech with the declaration

1 Cf. the Caesar, viii. 4.

2 Pompey had just finished his conquest of Mithridates and was on the way home from Asia (62 B.c.).

avtov Iloumnios ov mapéota: pel' GtrAwD Els THY TOALY, Exetvo TH BovAn TapéaTynoev, ws ovdéTEpOS
pev KabéotynKxev ovdE ypnTat Aoytopois aadaré-ow, ott O€ 7 pev MeréAAou TohuTela, pavia bu brepBorqy KaKias pepowern pos OreO pov Kal ouyXuoy andvrwv, n O€ Kdtwvos apeths évOou-Tag 105 UTép TOV KaXoV Kal dSixalwy aywrvitopévns.
XXVITI. 'Evel 5€ ray pipov Umép TOU vojou
pépety O Shuos EMENE, MeréAA@ pev Orda Kal Eévou Kal povoudyor Kal Oepdrovres. emt tH
ayopav TeTarymevot Taphoay, Kat TO Tododv petaBonijs erm oe Hopanjiov vIrHpXE TOD SHpov pépos ouK OAbyov, mV Oé peyarn Kal amro Kai-Tapos pon TTPATNYOUVTOS TOTE, Kdtou dé of TMp@ToL TOV Toker av cuynyavaxtouv Kal ouvn-Sixobvto paddov n ouvnyoviforTo, Tomy dé Ty oixiay avTod karnpea Kat hoBos eixev, Hore TOV pideov évious dairous StaypuTrvyja ae per dAAnXrwv év atropas dvTas UTrép avTOD Aoyto pots, Kal yuvaixa Kat ddeAdhas totviwmpévas Kal da-Kpvovoas. autos 8 does Kai Tedappnkoras evTUXOV maae Kat Tapnyopycas, Kal yevopevos Tept Seimrvov, & BoTep etw@0er, Kal VUKTEpEvTAS, U
évos TOV TUVApYOVTMY, Muvuxiov Oe€ppyov, Babéws Kadevowv emnyepOn Kal kaTéBnoay els aryopay, OAV pev avTovs mpoTeuTovTwv, jodkA@y dé amavT ave Kal purarredOas TApaKehevopevav.
@s ow émustas o Katwv kareive TOV VE@VY TOV
Avooxovpav Sirrdots TEPLEXOMEVOY Kab Tas ava Ba-TELS ppoupoupevas um povopaxwr, avrov 6é KaOnpevov avw peta Kaicapos tov Méreddop, that while he lived Pompey should not enter the city with an armed force. The senate was thus led to feel that neither man was in his right mind or using safe arguments, but that the policy of Metellus was madness, which, through excess of wickedness, was leading on to the destruction and confusion of all things, while that of Cato was a wild ebullition of virtue contending in behalf of right and justice.

XXVII. When the people were about to vote on the law, in favour of Metellus there were armed strangers and gladiators and servants drawn up in the forum, and that part of the people which longed for Pompey in their hope of a change was present in large numbers, and there was strong support also from Caesar, who was at that time praetor. In the case of Cato, however, the foremost citizens shared in his displeasure and sense of wrong more than they did in his struggle to resist, and great dejection and fear reigned in his household, so that some of his friends took no food and watched all night with one another in futile discussions on his behalf, while his wife and sisters wailed and wept. He himself, how- - ever, conversed fearlessly and confidently with all and comforted them, and after taking supper as usual and passing the night, was roused from a deep sleep by one of his colleagues, Minucius Thermus; and they went down into the forum, only few persons accompanying them, but many meeting them and ex- horting them to be on their guard. Accordingly, when Cato paused in the forum and saw the temple of Castor and Pollux surrounded by armed men and its steps guarded by gladiators, and Metellus himself sitting at the top with Caesar, he turned to his friends

emia peas 7 POs TOUS pirous, oO Opacéos," elmrev, " avO pwrrov Kat dethod, o os Kal" évos avo-ov Kal yupvov TOTOUTOUS eat patohoynaey." apa & evOvs éBadite pera TOU O€ppov. Kal duéorg ay avtois! of Tas avaBdcets KATEXOVTES, a&NXov be ovdéva Taphay, n pores emianmdaas THS yerpos o Katov TOV Movvadtiop a donyaye Kal BadiSeov ev us as elye Kcabiver pécov éuBadov
éavtov tod MeréAXov Kat TOU Kaicapos, OOTE Siaxopat THY Kowonoyian. KAKELVOL pev 5271 0-pnoay, ot dé Xapievtes Jeac dpevor Kal avpa-GavTes TO _TpoowToy Kat TO dpovnua xa 70
Oapoos tov Katawvos eyyutépo mpoonrOov, Kal Bon dvexeNeVoaVvTo TO pev Kadtove Gappeiv, péverv S€ GNI AOLS Kal cvaTpeped ba Kat yn mpodidovat Thy érevOepiav nal tov brép avdTis dry wviSopevov.

XXVIII. "EvOa or) TOU Uarnpérou Tov vowov
T poxerpioapévov, Tov 6€ Katwvos ovx éavtos avayiwadKew, Tov 6€ MeréAAou mTapadraPovtos aurov Kal avayWaarKOVTOS, o ev Karo eEnp-Tae TO BuBAtov, o Oe O€ppos dro TTOMATOS TOU
Meréddou TOV vopov emia Tapevou Kal AeyouTos
ETETNVE TH Yetpt To oTOMa Kab TH peony am é-KNELT EDs axpt ov, apayov opav ayova TOUS
dvdpas o O MéredXos ayovelopevous, | Kal TOV | Ofjpov
NT TO LEvov 7 pos TO oupépor Kal T PeTrOpLEvoy, éxéXNevoev dmobev" OTMITAS peTa poBou Kal Kpauyijs eTreT pexely. yevopevou 6e TOUTOU Kat wavrwv dsackedacbévtwy UroatdyTa povoy Tov
1 abrots followed in the MSS. by éxetvo:, which Coraés and Bekker delete ; Sintenis corrects to éxelvots.

2 wrodev Kaltwasser : ofcoBev (from his house).

and said: ‘ What a bold man, and what a coward, to levy such an army against a single unarmed and defenceless person!’’ At the same time he walked straight on with Thermus. Those who were oc- cupying the steps made way for them, but would allow no, one else to pass, except that Cato with difficulty drew Munatius along by the hand and brought him up; and walking straight onwards he threw himself just as he was into a seat between Metellus and Caesar, thus cutting off their communi- cation. Caesar and Metellus were disconcerted, but the better citizens, seeing and admiring the counte- nance, lofty bearing, and courage of Cato, came nearer, and with shouts exhorted him to be of good heart, while they urged one another to stay and band themselves together and not betray their liberty and the man who was striving to defend it. XXVIII. And now the clerk produced the law, but Cato would not suffer him to read it; and when Metellus took it and began to read it, Cato snatched the document away from him. Then Metellus, who knew the law by heart, began to recite it, but Thermus clapped a hand upon his mouth and shut off his speech. At last, seeing that the men were making a struggle which he could not resist, and that the people were giving way and turning towards the better course, Metellus ordered men-at-arms, who were standing at a distance, tu come running up with terrifying shouts. This was done, and all the people dispersed, leaving Cato standing his ground alone

Katova xal PBaddopevov Aas Kal EvrAos
Mv 3 a / e \ / N
dvwbev ov twepteid6e Movpnvas o thy dixcny duyov

‘e) ld aN
bm’ avtov kal xatynyopnbes, adda THY THREevvov Tpoiayopuevos Kal Body avacyeiv tois Baddovat, ages
Kal téXos autov tov Kdtwva reiOwv nai tept-
n 4
MTVITWV, ELS TOV VEDV TOV Atos Kobpov daripyaryev.

"Ezrel 66 xatetdev 0 MéteAXos épnuiav Tept TO

Bijua Kai duyny du dryopas TOV evavtioupévery, mavrdnact weobels Kpatety éxéXevoev atreévat

, \ e / \ \ id
Tadty Tovs oTAOPOpoUs, Kai TpocTEeNOwy Koo Mis

avros éTeyVelpel TWPATTELY TA TEPL TOV VOmOV. ot
, / a 5é évavtios Tayéws avadraBovtes éavtovs éx TIS

a / Tpomns émnecav ailis éuBoncavtes péya Kal Oapparéov, @ate Tois mept tov MéreAXov ép-

a“ \ \ , > , ee \
Tecely Tapaxny Kai Séos otopévors OTrX@V - TOBeY evtropyaavtas avtavs émipépecOar, cai pnOéva 4 > \ 4. ¢ ? \ “ /
pévery, Ada hevyew atTravtas atro Tov Bnyatos.
LA A , 9 4 A \ /
ovTw 67 aoxedacbévtwy éxeivwr, Tov 6é Kadtavos
x ’

mpoceAOovtos Kal Ta pev étrawéoavtos, Ta 6

2 , ai a vd ,

émippwacavtos Tov Shwov, ot TE TroANOL TapeTa-

\ , . “A N lA C4

Eavto travti TpoT@ Katadvoat Tov MeérteddXop, 7

Te auyKAnTos aOpocbeioa TapnyyeAey apxnOev

a A \ Bonbeiv rO Katou nat Siapdyecbar mpos Tov
4 n
YOMOV, @S oTdoW eTEeLcayovTa TH wee Kat ToAEuoVv EupvALov.
XXIX. ‘O dé Mereddos avTos Hep my arpem Tos
kat Opacds Ett, opa@v 5é€ Tovs Tepl avTov éxTewANyLévous Koon Tov Kadtwva xal vopmilovtas 302
173

and pelted with sticks and stones from above. Here Murena, who had been denounced and brought to trial by him,! came to his relief, and holding his toga before him, crying to those who were pelting him to stop, and finally persuading Cato himself and folding him in his arms, he led him away into the temple of Castor and Pollux.

When, however, Metellus saw the spaee about the tribunal? empty and his opponents in flight through the forum, being altogether persuaded that he had won the day, he ordered his armed men to go away again, and coming forward himself in orderly fashion attempted to have the law enacted. But his opponents, quickly recovering from their rout, ' advanced again upon him with loud and confident shouts, so that his partisans were overwhelmed with confusion and terror. They supposed that their enemies had provided themselves with arms from some place or other in order to assail them, and not a man stood his ground, but all fled away from the tribunal. So, then, when these had dispersed, and when Cato had come forward with commendation and encouragement for the people, the majority of them stood prepared to put down Metellus by any and every means, and the senate in full session announced anew that it would assist Cato and fight to the end against the law, convinced that it would introduce sedition and civil war into Rome.

XXIX. Metellus himself was still unyielding and bold, but since he saw that his followers were completely terrified before Cato and thought him utterly

1 Cf. chapter xxi. 3-6.
2 The steps of the temple of Castor led down to a platform, from which the people were often addressed.
393 dpayov kai dvacxBiactov, aidvidsov éEerndnoev

> \ > , \ \ \ a wv
eis THY ayopay, Kal auvayaywv Tov SHpov adrja
Te TOAAa rept Tod Kautawvos éridpOova binrOe,

Kat gevyelv tiv Tupavvida Boav Thy éxelvou Kal
Thv Kata Lloprniov cuvwpociay, éd’ } petavon-
Ew TAXU THY TOA aTiualovaav avdpa Toaod-Tov, @ppnoev evOvs ets “Aciav, ws Tav’Ta pos éxelvov KaTnyopnawy. nv ovv do€a peyadyn TOU Katwvos ay8os ov pixpov atecxevacpévov TIS Snpapyxias, Kat TpoTrov tiva THY Tloumniov dvva-py év MerédrXXr@ KaOnpnKotos. ere dé padrov eVdoxipinoe THY TUYKANTOV @p_uNnuevnV ATLMODY kat ato wndiverOar tov MéteAdXov ovK édoas, Grr évavtiwbeis Kal Tapattnodpevos. ot Te \ \ ld 9 “ ‘ ,
yap Tool diravOpwrias érrovodvTO Kai peETPLO-THTOS TO wy eTrEUBHVAL TO EXOP@ pwNdé evuBpioar
KATA KpaTOS TreEpiyevopmevov, Tois TE Ppoviposs ° fal ’ “ A opbas épatveto Kal cupdepovtws pn trapokivar Tour niov.
"Ex tovtrov AeveorXos érravedbav éx Tis
, e ” \ , N A , >
oTpateias, ns €b0€e TO TéXOS Kai THY SdEav adn-“~ Sun 9 7 = nw ‘
pnoOat Llopmrnios, ets xivdvvoy AOE Tod py nm mA ‘4
OptapBevoar, Tatou Mepptov xatacracidlovros avrov év TO SHuw xai Sixas émdyovtos, eis THY Tloparniov ydpw padrov 7 Kata éyOos idtov. o
A , ’ ’ / \ ? 2 A
5é€ Katwv, oixecotntos te mpos AevxoAXov avT@ yeyevnpeévns, Exovta LepBirLav tiv aderddny av-
an a \
Tov, Kal TO Tpayua Sevov nyoupevos, avtéctn
A / \ \ e , \
T® Meppiw, kat todas vireperve StaBoras Kat 304

invincible, he suddenly rushed off into the forum, assembled the people, and made a long and invidious speech against Cato; then, crying out that he was fleeing from Cato’s tyranny and the conspiracy against Pompey, for which the city would speedily repent in that it was dishonouring so great a man, he set out at once for Asia, intending to lay these accusations before Pompey. Accordingly, Cato was in high repute for having relieved the tribunate of a great burden, and for having in a manner overthrown the power of Pompey in the person of Metellus. But he won still more esteem by not allowing the senate to carry out its purpose of degrading Metellus and deposing him from his office, which course Cato opposed, and brought the senate over to his views. For the multitude considered it a token of humanity and moderation not to trample on his enemy or insult him after prevailing completely over him, and prudent men thought it right and advantageous not to irritate Pompey.

After this, Lucullus, having come back from his expedition,! the consummation and glory of which Pompey was thought to have taken away from him, was ‘in danger of losing his triumph, since Caius Memmius raised a successful faction against him among the people and brought legal accusations against him, more to gratify Pompey than out of private enmity. But Cato, being related to Lucullus, who had his sister Servilia to wife, and thinking the attempt a shameful one, opposed Memmius, and thereby exposed himself to many

1 He came back in 66 B.c., and had to wait three years before being allowed to celebrate a triumph. Cf. the Lucullus, XXXvil.

a oe /

4 xatnyopias. téros dé, THS apyns exBadropevos @s Tupavvidos, ToaovTOV éxpitnoevy WaTE TOV Méppuov avrov avayxaoat Tov Sixk@v aroaThvat n \ 6 “A 4 Ly duyeiy tov ayava. AevKorAXos pmeéev ovv OptapBevoas Ett waddov evedveto TH didia Tod , \ Kdtovos, éyov pupa cai mpoBAnpa péya mpos tnv Woprrniou Suva.

e : an , XXX. Tloprnios 5€ péyas aro THs oTpateias] 4 N a , \ , __ A érTravueov, Kal TH AamTpOTHTL Kal TpoOupia TIS Ag ol \ QA A \ 2 A umoboxns weTolWas ovdév dv denbels atroruxetvy a A a \ TOV TOMTO@V, TpovTEeuev akiav Tas UraTiKas ? / > ld \ 4 e A apyatpecias avaBanrécbat THY ovyKANTOY, ws av

2 autos tapwy Iletcwvt ocvvapyatpeoidon. TaV

\ 4 e , > \ > \ /
6€ mNeloT@V vTELKOVTwWY, ov THY avaBorAnY pEé-yotov o Kdtawv iyovuevos, adda THY Telpay amoxowat kat Thy éXrrida tov [lopaniou Bovrocpevos, avtTetme Kal petéatnce tHv Bovarnpv, ef bf , le) \ Pee >
DOTE anoynpicacbat. TOUTO TOV Topargiov ovx Hovxy duet apage: Kat vouilwv ov pipe mpoomraicev Te Katou wa hiro yevopery, peTeTreurato Mourdriov, éTaipov autov: Kai dvo Tod Kadtwvos adergpidas émiydpous Exovtos Aree THY pev TpecRutépay éavt@ yuvaira, Thy 56 vewTépav
3 TO Vid. Tives € hac ov TaY abeXPLOaV, AAG tav Ouvyatépwv thy pynoteiav yevéoOar. Tod Se Movvatiov tadta mpos tov Kdtwva xat tiv
a ‘ \ > \ / e \
yuvaixa Kat Tas adeAdas Ppdcavtos, ai pév UTEepnyadTnoay THY oiKELoTHTA Tpos TO péyeOos 306

slanderous accusations. Finally, however, though he was on the point of being ejected from his office on the ground that he exercised tyrannical power, he so far prevailed as to compel Memmius himself to desist from his accusations and shun the contest. Lucullus, accordingly, celebrated his triumph, and therefore clung still more closely to the friendship of Cato, finding in him a great bulwark of defence against the power of Pompey.

XXX. And now Pompey returned with great prestige from his expedition,! and since the splendour and warmth of his reception led him to believe that he could get whatever he wanted from his fellow citizens, he sent forward a demand that the senate postpone the consular elections, in order that he might be present in person and assist Piso in making his canvass. The majority of the senators were inclined to yield. Cato, however, who did not regard the postponement as the chief matter at issue, but wished to cut short the attempt and the | expectations of Pompey, opposed the measure and changed the opinions of the senators, so that they rejected it. This disturbed Pompey not a little, and considering that Cato would be a great stumbling- block in his way unless he were made a friend, he sent for Munatius, Cato’s companion, and asked the elder of Cato’s two marriageable nieces to wife for himself, and the younger for his son. Some say, however, that it was not for Cato’s nieces, but for his daughters, that the suit was made. When Munatius brought this proposal to Cato and his wife and sisters, the women were overjoyed at thought of the alliance, in view of the greatness and high repute of

1 In 62 B.C.

3°97
x 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kal TO afiopa Tod avopos, o b¢ Katwv ovr ért-oX@v ovte Bovrevaodpevos, GAN TAnyels evOus eltre> “ Babube, Mouvatte, Badbube, kal déye pos Iloparniov as Katwv ovx éort bia LTis yuvascoviTL6os ANWCLLOS, arnra THY pev evvotav ayamd, Kal Ta Sixava Tovovyre piriav ma peter Taons
La TOTEPAY oiKELoTNTOS, Gunpa dé ov mponcerat
TH Topaniov b0&n xaTa Tijs marpisos.”
‘El TOUTOLS iixGovro ev at yuvaixes, HTLBVTO 5é of pirou Tob Katwvos @S Gypotkov apa Kat bmepnpavov THY aTroKptaty. eita pévTo mpar-TOY Tet TeV pirov Umatetav O Tloparnios apyuptov ets Tas punras érreutre, Kat areptBonros 0 Sexacpos tv, év knTrous exeivou TOV Xpnwarav aprOpoupevery. elm OvTos ovv tov Kdtavos T pos Tas yuvaixas OTe TOLOUT@D my Kowwveiv Kal ava-wipmracOas T parywaTov avayKn Llopani ouva-poevra de’ oixeroTn TOs, @moAOyouv éxetvat Kadduov
auTov BeBovretobat Staxpovadpevov. el 6é det
Tpos Ta aupBavra Kpivery, Tov TAVTOS EotKev 0
Kdtov dpapteiv THY OLKELOTNTA [LI Sef dpevos, GND édaas 7 pos Kaioapa Tpam éa ae Kal yhpae
yd pov Os THD Tlopmniov Suvapuy Kal Kaica pos eis TavTO oUvEvEeyKOY oAtryou Ta pev ‘Pwpatwr avér pee mpaypara, THY dé TmoheTevay dveinen, Ov ovdev adv iows ouveémecev, et a) Kdtwv Ta puxpa tov [lopmrniou poBnbels apapThwara, TO péytotov Tepuetoev, auTov éTépm Svvayuv tpoo-ryevopevov.
XXXT. Taira pév odv Eyerrev Err, Aeuxor-ov 6€ tepi tav év Tlovtm dvatdEewy otacia-308

774

CATO THE YOUNGER

Pompey ; Cato, however, without pause or delibera- tion, but stung to the quick, said at once: “Go, '

Munatius, go, and tell Pompey that Cato is not to be captured by way of the women's apartments, although he highly prizes Pompey's good will, and if Pompey does justice will grant him a friendship more to be relied upon than any marriage connec- tion ; but he will not give hostages for the glory of Pompey to the detriment of his country.''

At these words the women were vexed, and Cato's friends blamed his answer as both rude and over- bearing. Afterwards, however, in trying to secure the consulship for one of his friends,| Pompey sent money to the tribes, and the bribery was notorious, since the sums for it were counted out in his gardens. Accordingly, when Cato' told the women that he must of necessity have shared in the disgrace of such transactions, had he been connected with Pompey by marriage, they admitted that he had taken better counsel in rejecting the alliance.2~ However, if we are to judge by the results, it would seem that Cato was wholly wrong in not accepting the marriage con- nection, instead of allowing Pompey to turn to Caesar | and contract a marriage which united the power of the two men, nearly overthrew the Roman state, and destroyed the constitution. None of these things perhaps would have happened, had not Cato been so afraid of the slight transgressions of Pompey as to allow him to commit the greatest of all, and add his power to that of another.

XXXI. These things, however, were still in the future. Meanwhile Lucullus got into a contention 1 Lucius Afranius, elected consul in 61 B.c. for the year 60 3s.c. Cf. the Pompey, xliv. 3. 2 Cf. the Pompey, xliv.

‘ lon gs \ > 4 cavros mpos Llopmrniov (n€iouy yap toxyve
e 4 \ e b] @ “A , \ s EXaTEpOS TA Up avTOU yevopyeva), Kat AevKO\A@ Kdrwvos adixouvpévp tepipavas mpocapmuvoytos, éXatroupevos 0 Iloumnios év cuyxAnt@ cal Snpaywyaov, emi vounvy yopas éxdder TO oTpaTLw-
, e \ > fe) l4 bd “ ll
2ttxov. ws 6€ xavtav0a Katwv évotdpevos
2¢e/ \ 4 ef 4 , éféxpovoe Tov vouov, ovtw Kdwédiouv te meptetce , A a YeTo, TOU ToTe OpacuTaTou TaY Snmaywyav, Kai
Kaicapa mpoonyeto, tpotrov twa Kdtwvos avtov
\ a, A
TapacxovTos apynv. o yap Kaicap amo tis év
"TPnpia otpatnyias éravykwv dua pév vrrateiav
wv
éBovrAeTO Trapayyédre, Gua 5é nre OpiayBov.

U
3 émel S€ xaTa vopoy eet TOVS pév ApXNV pETLOVTAS an \ \ A ? / f
Tapewvat, TOUS d€ weXAOVTAS ELoeAavvetY OpiauPBov
, , n na
&Ew Telyous viropéverv, nEiov mapa tis BovAgs
9 A a oJ e / > “A A > 4
avt@ SoOhvar bu’ -érépwv aitetoOar thy apyny.
a \ “ > lA e
Bovropévwy 5€ TodA@y avTérXeyev 0 Katwv: ws dé
/ A
naOero xaptlouevovs TH Kaicapi, Aéywv SAV Katavddwoe THY Nuépav Kal THY BoudnY ovTwS
3g / , La > 7 \ , e
4 €€éxpovce. ‘yaipey ovv éacas tov OpiauBov o Kaicap eicerOwv evOvs elyeto Loumrniouv cat ris
e / > \ \ a , >) 4
uTateias. atroderyOels 5é Urratos Thy te lovAiav > lA b] A \ 4 wv b > 4 éveyyUNoev aVT@, Kal avoTavTes ON eT GANT-
\ , e 4 a .'
Awv él THY TOA O peV EloéhEpE VYOLOUS ToS
: ,
mévnot KAnpovxiav Kal vouny yopas S.ddvTas, 6
aA “ / A
5 5€ mapnv tots vopots BonOav. ot Sé arepi Aev-/ 4 “n ¢ ry
_«odXov Kal Kixépwva BuBA@ TO éTép@ TAY UTTA-
\ , P)
Tov cuvtakavtes éavTovs avtTémpattov, wadtoTa

with Pompey over the arrangements in Pontus (each of them, namely, demanded that his own proceedings should be confirmed), Cato came to the aid of Lucullus, who was manifestly wronged, and Pompey, worsted in the senate and seeking popular favour, invited the soldiery to a distribution of land.!- But when Cato opposed him in this measure also, and frustrated the law, then Pompey attached himself to Clodius, at that time the boldest of the popular leaders, and won Caesar to his support, a result fer which Cato himself was in a way responsible. For Caesar, on returning from his praetorship in Spain,? desired to be a candi- date for the consulship, and at the same time asked for a triumph. But since by law candidates for a magistracy must be present in the city, while those who are going to celebrate a triumph must remain outside the walls, he asked permission from the senate to solicit the office by means of others. Many were willing to grant the request, but Cato opposed it; and when he saw that the senators were ready to gratify Caesar, he consumed the whole day in speaking and thus frustrated their desires. Accordingly, Caesar gave up his triumph, entered the city, and at once | attached himself to Pompey and sought the consul-

ship. After he had been elected consul, he gave his daughter Julia in marriage to Pompey, and now that the two were united with one another against the state, the one would bring in laws offering allotment and distribution of land to the poor, and the other | would be at hand with support for the laws. But the party of Lucullus and Cicero, ranging themselves with Bibulus, the other consul, opposed the measures,

1 Cf. the Lucullus, xlii. 6; Pompey, xlvi. 3 f. 2 In the summer of 60 B.c. 3 Cf. the Caesar, xiii. 1 f.

dé Kdrop, non pep Upopapevos THY Kaicapos xal Tloparniov diriav Kai cvotacw én ovdevt Sicaip ryervyernuerny, poBeto bar 6 packov ov TV vomny THS X@pas, arr' Ov avril TAUTNS aTrarTioouatl pabov oi Yaprtouevor Kal dehedlovres TO TAHOOs.
XXXII. Os dé tabra éyoor THY TE Bouvdny oporpnpov elye, Kal TOV EKTOS av para ovK odiryou TapiaTavTo dua xepaivovtes THY aToTriav Tob Kaicapos: & yap ot Gpacvrato Sr papxor
Kal dALy@poTaToL TpO0s xa pov | erro TEVOVTO TOV
TONY, TavTa an' éfoucias UTaTiKis, aiax pas Kal TATELVOS Umodvopevos Tov Shop, empatte poBnbevres oup éX@ pour dia Bias, Kal Tp@Tov
pév avT@ TO Buprg | cataBaivovre KOT piwv
éreakedaaOn Kopuvos, éretta Tots paRsovxors
7 poo Tes OvTES avTov Katéx\acay Tas paBsdous-Tédxos bé Kal Bedrov pepopever Kat TOMKOY TUVTLTPWTKOMEVOY Epuyov é& aryopas Spopep pe ot NoTrol mrdvTeEs, EcYaTOS Oé Kartwv a amnet Baddny, pera Tpepopevos Kal wapTupopevos) rovs tronditas.
OU MovoY ovY THY Lavopiyy exvpwa.ar, aAXa Kal mpoceyrnpiaavto THY a vyKANTOV Opocas Tracay
y} pny emBeBarocenv TOV vowov, Kal BonOncew av TLS Tavavtia TpaT7Tn, peyara Tagavres eT t-Tia KATA TOV 11) GUOTAVT@V. WpVUCay ovv aTrav-TES ef avdyKns, TO MeréAAov Tod Traha.od mdbos
ev v@ NapRavoytes, dv els vopov Guovov Omooas py Jednoavra meptetoey o OHpos extrecovtTa huyh
1 poprupduevos Bekker and Sintenis?, after Emperius ;
Coraés and Sintenis' adhere to the MSS. xarapdépevos (cursing). '
312

and above all Cato, who now suspected that the friendly alliance between Caesar and Pompey had been made for no just purpose, and declared that he was afraid, not of the distribution of land, but of the reward which would be paid for this to those who were enticing the people with such favours.

XXXII. By these utterances he brought the senate to unanimity, and many men outside the senate supported him out of displeasure at the strange con- duct of Caesar; for whatever political schemes the boldest and most arrogant tribunes were wont to practise to win the favour of the multitude, these Caesar used with the support of consular power, in disgraceful and humiliating attempts to ingratiate himself with the people.! Accordingly, the opponents of Cato were alarmed and had recourse to violence. To begin with, upon Bibulus himself, as he was going down into the forum, a basket of ordure was scattered ; then the crowd fell upon his lictors and broke their fasces ; and finally missiles flew and many persons were wounded.? All the other senators fled from the forum at a run, but Cato went off last of all at a walk, turning about and protesting to the citizens. Accordingly, not only was the law for the distribution of lands passed, but also a clause was added re- quiring the whole senate to swear solemnly that it would uphold the law, and give its aid in case any one should act contrary to it, and heavy penalties were pronounced against such as would not take the oath.? All took the oath, therefore, under compulsion, bearing in mind the fate of Metellus of old, whom the people suffered to be banished from Italy because

1 Cf. the Cacsar, xiv. 1. * Cf. the Pompey, xlviii. 1.

2 Cf. the Caesar, xiv. 2 f.

“ \ \
4 THs ‘Iradias. 610 nal tov Kdtova mova pév ai yuvaixes. oixot Saxpvovaoa Kxadixérevoy clEac Kal duocat, TOAAA 5é of hiroe Kal cuvyes. oo
dé uddiota cuptreicas Kal ayayov éml Tov SpKov nv Kexépwy o pytwp, twapawav nal diddoKwy ws Taya pév ovdé Sixarov é€ote Tois éyvwopéevots
a U ¥ a b a b] \ 3 , Kowwn povov olecOar, Sev amrecOeiv, év 5€ advvdt@
TO PETATTH Cal TL TOV yeyovoTwv adeoety éavTod
5 TavTdtTacw dvontov Kai pavixov: Eayatov 5é
A > >] ee , / J \ \
Kaxov, eb Ov iy atavra wpatTe. TONY adeis Kal Mpoém“evos Tois emiBovrAEvovaLY WoTEP ATMEVOS atadvrakerat TOV UTép a’THAS aywvev: Kal yap et yn Kadtov tis ‘Pouns, arr’ 7 ‘Poyn Setrat Katavos, Séovras dé Kal ot didor wavtes: ov e \ 9 a e / Mv 3

auTov elvat Tpwrov o Kixepwv éreyev, emtBov-Aevopevoy vO Krwdtov dia Snpapyias avte-
>» 9 >» N , e \ , A
6 xpus én’ avtov Badifovtos. bo tovTwyv daat kal totovtwyv tov Katwva droyov kai Senoewv paXraccopevoy oixot Kal Kat’ ayopav éxBiacOjvae porns, Kal mpocedeivy mpos Tov GpKov éxyaTov e / \ e oN , A , A amdavrwv mAnv évos Pawviov tav dirov kai cuvnbav.
a Vv
XXXIII. “EmapGeis ody o Kaicap ardov > Ff , \ / \ e elaépepe vopov, tv Kapraviay oxedov oAny
a ,
MpockaTavés“ovTa Tois amopos Kal Tévnaow. avT-
4 \ > \ \ a 4 \ a
éxeye O€ ovdEls ANY TOV Kdtwvos. Kal TovTOY
b) \ A / e ad > ,
ano tov Byuatos o Kaicap elrAxev eis Seo pwrn-
A 4 a
ptov, ovdéy Te paAXov vdtéevov THs Tappyoias, arr ev to Badifery dua epi Tov vopmov s&apa mep po
314

he would not swear to asimilar law.! For this reason, also, did the women of Cato’s family earnestly and with tears beseech him to yield and take the oath, earnestly, too, did his friends and intimates. But the one who was most successful in persuading and inducing him to take the oath was Cicero the orator, who advised and showed him that it was possibly even a wrong thing to think himself alone in duty bound to dis- obey the general will; and that his desperate con- duct, where it was impossible to make any change in what had been done, was altogether senseless and mad; moreover, it would be the greatest of evils if he should abandon the city in behalf of which all his efforts had been made, hand her over to her enemies, and so, apparently with -pleasure, get rid of his struggles in her defence; for even if Cato did not need Rome, still, Rome needed Cate, and so did all his friends; and among these Cicero said that he himself was foremost, since he was the object of the plots of Clodius, who was openly attacking him- by means of thetribuneship. By these and similar argu- ments and entreaties, we are told, both at home and in the forum, Cato was softened and at last prevailed upon. He came forward to take the oath last of all, except Favonius, one of his friends and intimates. : XXXIII. Elated by this success, Caesar introduced another law, which provided that almost the whole of Campania be divided among the poor and needy. No one spoke against the law except Cato, and him Caesar ordered to be dragged from the rostra to prison. Cato did not any the more remit his bold utterances, but as he walked along discoursed about

1 In 100 B.c. Cf. the Marius, xxix.

"a Ul
Neyouevov Kal Tapatvovvta TravoacOa ToLavTa
2 moAtTevopevovs. éemnxodrovber 5é 7 BovdAn peta

, \ a / ' 4 b]
KaTnpeias, cal tov Sdnyov to BéATLCTOY aryava-a a ef 4
KTobv alwmn Kal ayOopevov, OoTe Tov Kaicapa
Hy NavOdverv Bapéws hépovtas. GArAAG dtdAover-
a N a / K@v Kal Tepiuévoy Dro TOU Katwvos érixAnow
yevéoOat kat Sénaw mpohyev. érret dé exetvos Hv fol bd / a) e \ e \ d7Aos ode peAANTwWY TL TroLEtY, HTTNOELs LITO
aicxuvns kai adokias o Kaicap aités tia tev
, e a , ? , '\ ,
Snpapyov udnKe tretoas éEeNéoOar Tov Katova.
Tos pevToL vopots éxeivors Kal Talis ydpiot TLOa-
4 \ v7 > 4 , \
gevoartes Tov OxXAOY, erndicavto Kaicapi pév
a : \ Trvpr@v cat Taratias apynv amaons Kai téc-gapa Taypata oTpatias els TevtaeTiav, Tpo-
e / Aéeyovtos Kdtwvos ws ets axKpoTroNLY TOY TUpavvoY avtot tais éavtav Widois idpvovart, Tlomdsov Sé

/
Kr a@biov éx tmatpiximy ets SnuotiKods TapavopLes
4 petaotnoavtes atrédetEav Sypapyov, éri picd@

fel , > 4 4 N , > 4
Th Kexépwvos éEeAdoet tavra mpos ydpwv exeivots 4 ¢e / A U ,
TONLTEVOMEVOY, UTATOUS dé Teicwvad te Kand-
\ a / moupviov, ds Hy Twatnp THs Katcapos yuvatxos, kal TaBiviov Adrov, éx tev Tlopaniou nodrwv
e \ a"
dvO pwirov, @s pacw ot TOY TpoTTOV avToU Kal Tov Biov eiddres.

\ /
XXXIV. “AAAa Kattrep odTws Ta TPdypaTa KaTEIAnpotes eyxpaTas, Kal TO pev YapiTLe TIS
, \ A / / e > e \ 54
Toews, TO OE HOBw pépos Ud’ EavTods eyxovtTes, buws époBodvtTo tov Kdtwva. xal yap év ols
a “ / A
Tepijoav avtod TO ye YadeTas cal peta Tovar 316

the law and advised the people to put a stop to such legislation. Moreover, the senate followed him with downcast looks, as well as the best part of the people in silence, though they looked annoyed and troubled, so that Caesar could not fail to see that they were displeased ; but he was obstinate, and expected that Cato would resort to appeal or entreaty, and therefore had him led along. However, when it was clear that Cato did not so much as think of doing anything of the sort, Caesar was overcome by.the shame and in- famy of his course, and by his own secret persuasions induced one of the tribunes of the people to rescue Cato. Nevertheless, by these laws and by other favours Caesar's party so cajoled the people as to get a vote passed giving to Caesar the government of Illyria and all Gaul, with an army of four legions, for five years, although Cato warned the people that they them- selves by their own votes were establishing a tyrant in their citadel. They also unlawfully transferred Publius Clodius from patrician to plebeian rank and got him elected tribune of the people, a man who, in order to secure Cicero’s banishment as his reward, was using all his political influence for the gratification of the people. For consuls, too, they secured the elec- tion! of Calpurnius Piso, who was Caesar’s father- in-law, and Aulus Gabinius, a man from the lap of Pompey, as those say who knew his ways of life. XXXIV. But although they had in this way usurped the power, and although one part of the citizens was made submissive to them by gratitude and the other part by fear, nevertheless they were afraid of Cato. For even when they did prevail against him, it was with ditliculty and toil and not

1 For the year 58 B.c.
317

Kal un Ywpls aioyuvns, adr’ éXeyxopévous BratecOar poris aviapov Fw Kal mpdcavtes. oO 8é Kr.odi0s ode Kixépwva xatarvoev Armile Ka-TwWVOS Tapovtos, GAAa TOTO Staynyavapevos TPOTOV, WS ELS APXHY KATETTN, peTETEU“WATO TOV Kdtova Kal Noyous avT@ TpoanveyKev Ws TAVTOV
> a e 4 A e ld ry s : éxeivov nyovupevos avdpa Pwopaiwov xcabapa@tarov Epy@ Sidovat tiotw Erowuos éott’ ToANOVY Yap aitoupévay tHv él Kumpov xat U-rorepaitov apynv Kal deopévwv aroatadjvat povov aEvov éxeivov HyetcOar Kat Sidovae tHv ydpw Hdéws.

dvaxpayovros 6€ tov Kdtawvos as évédpa To Tpaywa Kal mpomnraKtopos, ov yadpis eatin, uTepnpavas 0 Krwdzi0s5 kal drduyopas, ‘‘ OvKodv,” elmev, “et py yapw exes, avimpevos mrEvoN,” Kat mpoceNOav evOus eis Tov Sjwov éxvpwce vou~@ Thy éxtrepapi tov Katewvos. é&sovte dé ov vadv, ov oTpaTLMTHY, OVY UInpérny ESmKE TANV Hh SvO YPapparels povov, OY O pev KNETTNS Kal Tapmovnpos, atepos 5€ KAwdiov meradtns. as dé puxpov épyov aut@ Kuapov xat Irodrepaiov avabeis, éte kat Bufavtiov duydbas xatayew mpocétake, PBovrAcpevos Ste WrEioTOv ypovov éxTrod@y apxovTos avtTov yevécOar tov Kutova.
XXXV. Tovavtyn 6 catarngdeis avayin Kerépov pév éXavvouevm Tapyvece 1) TTacltdcat pndé eis Orda Kal dhovovs THv Trodw éewBanreir, GAN vrexotavTra TO Kaip@ Tadwv yevérOas
318 |
776

without the shame of exposure that they forced their measures through at last, and this was annoying and vexatious to them. Clodius, too, could not even hope to overthrow Cicero while Cato was at Rome, but since he was scheming for this above all else, when he had come into office he sent for Cato and made proposals to him. He said that he regarded Cato as the purest man of all the Romans, and that he was ready to prove this by his acts. Therefore, though many were soliciting the commission to Cyprus and the court of Ptolemy! and begging to be sent upon it, he thought Cato alone worthy of it, and therefore gladly offered him this favour. But Cato cried out that the thing was‘a snare and an insult, not a favour, whereupon Clodius haughtily and contemptuously replied: ‘“ Well, then, if you don’t think it a favour, you shall make the voyage as a punishment,’ and going at once before the people _ he got an edict passed sending Cato on the mission. Moreover, when Cato set out, Clodius gave him neither ship, soldier, nor assistant, except two clerks, of whom one was a thief and a rascal, and the other a client of Clodius. And as if he had put a slight task upon him in the mission to Cyprus and Ptolemy, Clodius enjoined upon him besides the restoration of the exiles of Byzantium, being desirous that Cato should be out of his way as long as possible while he was tribune.

XXXV. Subjected to such constraint as this, Cato advised Cicero, whose enemies were trying to banish him, not to raise a faction or plunge the city into war and bloodshed, but to yield to the necessities of the times, and so to become again a saviour of his

1 A younger brother of Ptolemy Auletes the king of Egypt.
319

a “ , / A “a
cwTHpa tHS Tatpioos, Kavidsov b€ twa tev pirov mporrepypas els Kumpov émeOe tov Ironepaiov dvev payns ele, as ovTeE Xpnparov ouTe
Tops évdead Biwodpevov: lepwo vuny yap avT@
THs év Tldd@ Oeod dSwcew tov Shpov. avTos ry / y b e U s [ud \
duérpiBev év “Podm mapacKevalopevos apa Kal
/

TAS ATOKpiCELS AVapevwr,

"Ev 6€ trovt@ Utorepaios o Aliyurrov Bac-

A a \ evs Um opyyns Tivos Kal dSeadhopas mpos Tovs moXitas aroAeAoTras pev "AreEdvdpesav, eis 5é € , , e of \ , o
Popny trA€Ewv, as Wopmrniov cal Kaicapos adds avrov peta Suvapews xatakovtwy, évtuxeiv TO
/ A Kadtwve Bovrndeis mpooereprpev, érriCwv éxetvov
e > NX 54 e \ 4 >] / \ A @s avtov HEev. o 6€ Katav éruyyave wey dv
, \ 4 4 4 : \ \
TOTe Tept Kotdias KdOapoty, Kew dé tov IItoXe-
A 9 4 4 N 3 U e \
patov, ef BovAatTO, KeXEvVTasS pos auToV, ws 5é
& A > , ¥ e , > ?
WAGev, ovVTE aATTaYTHACasS ov’TE UTEEaVaTTUS, AAX
as éva TOY ériTUXOVTMOV acTracdpeEvos Kal Kabi-Gat KéXEVoAaS, TP@TOV avTois TovTOLs SeeTapake,
’ \ a

Oavydtovta mpos TO SnpotiKov Kal ALTOV avTOD
Ths KaTacKkeuns Thy UTrepoiay Kat Baputynta Tov
” ? \ \ \ / \ “ >]
nOous. emet 6€ nat SvaréyerOar wept tav Kad avrov apEdpevos nxpodcato NOywy voiy ToADY éYovT@V Kal Tappynoiav, émitiw@vTos avT@ TOD Katwvos cat duddcKovtos Gonv evdatmoviay aro
Aur@v Goats éavtTov vrroTiOnat RAaTpeiats Kal
Tovolts Kat dwpodoxiats Kal mreoveEiats tav év ‘Popyn Suvvatov, ods ports éEapyupicOetcav épu-wrjoev Aiyutrrov, cupBovrevovtos 5é mdeiv 320

CATO THE YOUNGER

country. He also sent Canidius, one of his friends, to Cyprus in advance,! and tried to persuade Ptolemy to yield his kingdom without fighting, promising that his future life should not be without wealth and honour, since the Romans would give him a priesthood of the goddess in Paphos. He himself, however, tarried at Rhodes, making his preparations and awaiting his answers.

Meanwhile Ptolemy the king of Egypt, who had quarrelled with the citizens of Alexandria and for- saken the city in wrath, and was now on his way to Rome in the hope that Pompey and Caesar would restore him again with an armed force, wished to have an interview with Cato, and sent a messenger to him, expecting that Cato would come to him. But Cato, as it chanced, was taking a course of medicine at the time, and bade Ptolemy come to him if he wished to see him. And when Ptolemy had come, Cato neither went to meet him nor rose from his seat, but greeted him as he would any ordinary visitor and bade him be seated. At first Ptolemy was confounded by the reception itself, and was amazed at the contrast between the haughtiness and severity of Cato's manners and the plainness and simplicity of his outfit. But after he had begun to converse with Cato about his own situation, words of great wisdom and boldness fell upon his ears. For Cato censured his course, and showed him what great happiness he had forsaken, and to how much servility and hardship he was subjecting himself in dealing with the corruption and rapacity of the chief men at Rome, whom Egypt could scarcely glut if it were all turned into money. Cato also advised him

1 Cf. the Brutus, iii. 1.
321
VOL. VIII. Y

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

oTiaw Kat dtadXaTTEcOat TOis TOALTALS, AUTOD be Kal oupTnely Kal cuvdiadarrery ETOLMOS EXOVTOS, olov €x pavias TLVOS 7) Tapaxon ys vIrO TOV NOyeov éuppav cabardpevos, Kat KATAVOOY THY arnOecav cat THY ouveow Tov avdpos, & Bpynce pev Xphabar rois éxetvou hoya pois, dvatpamets 5é wrro THY pidov abdus a dpa T@ wp@Tov év 'Poun yeverdar Kat Gupass EVOS apXovtos mpoaenGeip éoteve THY avToD KaKxoBovrar, as ovK avopos ayaGot rAoywv, Geod Sé pavreias xatadpovnoas.

XXXVI. 'O de é ev Kurpp I tonepaios euTuxig

Twi Tov Karavos éavtov happuaxos arexteuve.
TONED dé yonudtrov arronenei par Eeyouevon, autos pev éyvw wheiy eis Bufartious, mpos 5é THY Kumpov éEémeprpe TOV aderdudobv Bpodttov, ov WAVY TL TLTTEVOY TO Kandip. TOUS dé guyddas biadrd£as Kal KaTadiTe@v év opovoia TO _Bular-TLor, odTws els K vrrpov émevoev. avons Oé TOrATS Kal Bacwruxis év exTr@pact Kal Tpamelars kat ALGos Kal mopdvpais KaTacKevijs, ny eee mT pabetoay eEapyupia Ova, T avr, Bovdopevos eFax ptBoov Kal mavra Karateively els dx pay TLLHY xal Tac avros ‘Tapeivas Kal T poo aye TOV éaxarov exdoyia or, ovdé Tots eOdar THs aryopas emia Tevev, GNA t UTOVOOY opod mavTas, Uanperas, KnpUKas, @vntas, pirous, TEAOS auTos idta Tots @VOUPEVOLS Stareyopuevos Kal mpooBiBdtwv éxa-OTOV, OUTW TA TAELTTA TOV dryopac waTov €mwNEL.
5:0 Tois TE ad Xots dirors ws aria TeV ™ po é-Kpouce, Kal Tov cuvnféctatov amavtwv Movvd-322

17

f

CATO THE YOUNGER

to sail back and be reconciled with his people, holding himself ready also to sail with him and help effect the reconciliation. Then the king, as if brought to his senses by Cato’s words after a fit of madness or delirium, and recognizing the sincerity and sagacity of the speaker, determined to adopt his counsels; but he was turned back to his first purpose by his friends. However, as soon as he reached Rome and was approaching the door of a magistrate, he groaned over his own evil resolve, convinced that he had slighted, not the words of a good man, but the prophetic warning of a god.

XXXVI. But the Ptolemy in Cyprus, fortunately for Cato, poisoned himself to death. And since the king was said to have left much treasure, Cato deter- mined, while sailing himself to Byzantium, to send his nephew Brutus to Cyprus, since he did not altogether trust Canidius. Then, after reconciling the exiles and citizens of Byzantium and leaving the- ‘city in concord, he sailed to Cyprus. Now, there were many furnishings of a princely sort, such as beakers, tables, precious stones, and purple vest- ments, which had to be sold and turned into money. So Cato, wishing to treat everything with the greatest exactness, and to force everything up to a high price, and to attend to everything himself, and to use the utmost calculation, would not trust even those who were accustomed to the market, but, suspecting all alike, assistants, criers, buyers, and friends, and at last talking privately himself with the purchasers and encouraging each one to bid, he thus succeeded in selling most of the merchandize. For this reason he gave offence to most of his friends, who thought that he distrusted them, and Munatius, the most

TLov eis Gpyiyv Orjiyou Seiv avnKxertov yevouéevny > / Lf 4 , / \
evéBarev, aote kal Kaicaps ypadorte Aoyov Kata
Tov Kdtwvos mixpotatny rodTo TO pépos THS Katnyopias OvaTpiByny Trapacyeiv.
XXXVII. 'O pévtor Movvdtios ovx atiotia
" / PJ > 3 4 \ 3 / \
tov Kadtwvos, adr éxeivou peéev OrALYWPLA TPOS € t e wn / , \ N '4 avtov, avrov dé tive CnroTuTria pos TOV Kavidsoy iatopes yevéoOar thy opynv. Kal yap autos avyypaupa tmept tov Kdtwvos éFédwxev, @ pa-Mata Opacéas érnxorovOnae. Révyes 5é SaTEpos pev eis Kompov adixécOas nal AaBeiv mapnuednpéevny Eeviav, Pav Sé emi Ovpas atracbjvat, aKevwpovpévov Tt ToD Karwvos olxot avy TO
, , 4
Kavidio, peurrdpevos Sé petpiws ov peTpias
a b] , 4 4 \ , a)
TUXELY aTOKpLTEwWS, OTL KLVdUVEVEL TO ALaY Hireiv, e U v le) A /
as dnot Mcoppactos, aitiov Tod pucetv yiverOar modAdks: "'Eqei cal cv," davai, "T@ padsoTa
A v a7 A , lal
Pirely NTTOV oLopevos 7 TpotHKer TLLacIat Yare-
/ a maivers. Kavidio 5é xai bd: éumespiay ypapae
\ \ 4 ¢ Ul Lal b] b aA \ Kal Ota qiotTl éeTépwy padrov, €E apyjs pev
? / a \ / 99 el ,
adiypévy, kabap@ Sé hawopévm." Tadta pévTot a Ud
povov avT@ pove diarexOévta tov Katwva mpos
\ , : a ' ' * >A
tov Kavidsov éFeveyxetv. atadopevos ovv avtTos bd > a " a " 4 e
ovre éml Seimrvoy Ett hortav ovte atpBovros vrra-4 V4 ' A \ an VA
Kovely KaXovpmevos. atretdodvTos 5é ToD Katwvos,
(4 97 n > 4 > / : 4

@oTep ei@Pace Ta atreovyTwr, évéyupa A7-\ / 2 “ \ \ yrecfar, pndev dhpovticas éxTAeEIoaL Kal TroNUY intimate of them all, he threw into a rage that was well nigh incurable. Hence Caesar also, when he wrote a discourse against Cato,! dwelt most bitterly on this part of his denunciation.

XXXVII. Munatius, however, states that his anger arose, not from Cato’s distrust of him, but from his inconsiderate conduct towards him, and from a cer- tain jealousy which Munatius himself felt towards Canidius. For Munatius himself also published a treatise about Cato, which Thrasea chiefly followed. Munatius says that he came to Cyprus after the others, and found that no provision had been made for his entertainment; he says, too, that on going to Cato’s door he was repulsed, because Cato had some engagement inside with Canidius. He says, further, that his measured protest met with no measured reply, for Cato told him that excessive affection, according to Theophrastus, was likely to become a ground for hatred in many cases. “And so thou too,” said Cato, “by reason of thine especial affec- tion for me, art vexed to think thyself less honoured than is meet. Canidius I employ more than others both because I have made trial of him, and because I trust him; he came at the very first, and shows himself to be incorrupt.’’ This private conversation, however, between himself and Cato, Munatius says was reported by Cato to Canidius, and that therefore, when he heard of it, he would no longer go to Cato’s table, or visit him, or share his counsels, when he was invited. Further, Munatius says, when Cato threatened to take security from him, as the Romans do in the case of those who refuse to obey orders, he paid no attention to the threat, but sailed away,

1 See chapter xi. 4, and note.

4 ypovov év opyn Staterciy: eita tHS Mapsxtas (éte yap cuvexe TO Kdtow) SvarexGeions, tTuyxetv
A e XN B 4 , 3. ON 5 a 3
pev otro Bapxa Kexdrnpévous eri Setirvov, eicer-Oovra 5é batepov tov Kdtava, Tay GdAwV KaTa-Keiévav, épwrav Orrov KatakAOcin. tod 4é Bapxa KxeXevoavtos brrov Bovrerat, TepiBrEYra-pevop eitrety OTe Tapa Movvdtiov: Kal repieAOovta TAnalov avTov KatakNOnvar, mrAéov Sé pnOev 5 diroppovncacbat Tapa To Setrvov. adda Tad
“ , / \ \ 4 /

THS Mapxias dSeopévns tov péev Katwva ypavar
A \ \ Tpos aUTOV, ws évTUYely TL BovAdpLEVOY, avTOS be ¢ a ? AN 9 , N e N nA lé
Hey EwOev els THY Olxiav Kal vo THs Mapxias
KatacyeOjnvar méxpt TavtTes amTNnAXaynoay, OUTW \ ? ' \ / \ 4 \ dé eiceNOovta Tov Katwva xal weptBarovta tas
a ? ’ ’ / \ yetipas auhotépas aomdcacOa, Kai dtrodpoveloOat. Tadta peéev ody ody ATTOV olopevol TOV e , \ , pie 2 \ ”
vraibpwv kal peyadrov mpodktewy mpos eévderEv
’ \
nOous Kat Katavonow éyew tivda cadyverav eri awréov SinrOopev.
A \ , / \ 3
XXXVIII. T@ 6é Katove cuvnyOn pev apyu-
/ , > /
plov TdXavrTa pixkpoy értaxicytAtwy arrodéovTa, \ \ a a N a > a \ dedia@s S€ TOD TAOD TO pHKOS ayyela TOANG KaTA-
\
oKxevacas, way éxactov éywpe Svo tadavtTa Kat
\
dpaypas Tevtaxocias, Kadkwdiov ExaoT@ pakpov
a a , \ Tpoonprncev, ov TH apXh MpoceryeTo Heddos
b] 2 4 > e , \ A 4 } \ evpeyeOns, Smras, et payein TO TAOtOY, ExwV da
a \ / \ \
2 Bv@od To aptnua onpaivot Tov ToOTOV. Ta peEv ovv YpnpaTa TAY odiywv TLVdY aoparas diE-and for a long time continued to be angry with Cato. Then, Munatius says, Marcia, who was still living with Cato,! spoke with her husband about the matter; and when it chanced that both men were invited to supper by Barca, Cato, who came late and after the others had taken their places, asked where he should recline; and when Barca told him to recline where he pleased, Cato looked about the room and said: “I will take my place by Munatius.” So he went round and reclined by his side, but made no further show of friendship during the supper. Marcia, however, made a second request in the matter, Munatius says, and Cato wrote to him, saying that he wished to confer with him about something. So Munatius went to Cato’s house early in the morning, and was detained there by Marcia until all the other visitors had gone away. Then Cato came in, threw both arms about him, kissed him, and lavished kindness upon him. Such incidents, now, in my opinion, quite as much as deeds of greatness and publicity, shed considerable light upon the per- ception and manifestation of character, and I have therefore recounted them at greater length. XXXVIII. Cato got together nearly seven thou- sand talents of silver, and fearing the long voyage home, he had many coffers provided, each one of which would hold two talents and five hundred drachmas, and attached to each of them a long rope, to the end of which a huge piece of cork was fastened. This, he thought, in case the vessel were wrecked, would hold to its deep mooring and indicate the place where the treasure lay. Well, then, the money, except a very little, was safely transported ;

1 Cf. chapter xxv. 5,

ome

xoptaOn, Noyous Sé TavToyv av StwKnoe yeypap-

ba u Y ” ? \ wy, a ts 7P .
pevous éripedas Exyov év Svat BeBrAtLots ovdérEepov
” » \ “ \ ? 4 b) A ,
Egwoev, UANA TO ev aTrENEVOEPOS avTOD KOmilwY
bl 4 3 A“ > \ 3
ovona Diddpyvpos éx Keyxpeav avaydeis ave-TpaTN Kal cvvaTr@NecE TOs hopTials, TO Sé AUTOS
aype Kepxvpas durdtas év ayopa xatecxnvace Tov dé vavtay dia TO piyobv mupa TOoAAa KaLov-Twy THS vuxTos HdOnoav ai oKnval Kat to
/ > 4 \ A = > \ \
BiBrtov ndavicbn. Tovs pev ovv éexOpous Kai / b] a v e \
cuxopavtTas émiaTome Huedrov ot BacrKol Siorxntal mapovtes, aAAXws 6€ 7@ Katove To wpayya Snywov Hveyxev. ov yap eis miotev Umrép aUTOD TOUS AOYoUS, GAAA Tapdbeypa Tots v b] / b a 4 b arros axpiBetas eEeveyxely diroTipovpevos éve-peonOn.
XXXIX. ITleparwGeis 5€ trais vavaoiv ovx érabe tous ‘Pwpaious, addAdAa mavtTes pev ApxovTes Kal € a A \ ¢ , ‘\ A fe) , 4 iepets, Taca Sé 4 Bourn, ToAv dé Tov SHmou pé-pos amnvTwv Tpos TOY ToTapOV, BaTE Tas oxYOas
> 4 3 4 \ / A
apdotépas atoxexpudO0ar kat OpidpBov pyndév
dyer nal ptroTipta ReiwecOar Tov avarrovr auTov. KaiTot oxaLoy éviots TOUTO éedaiveto Kal

av0ades, tt THY UTdTwY Kal TOV GTPATHYOV
TapovTwv ovte améB8n mpos avtous ovte érrécye
TOV TAODY, GANA pobim THY GyOnv TrapeEEXavVOY
émi vews éEnpous Bacthixns odK avaKe TpoTEpoV kadoppioat Tov OTOXOY Eis TO VEewWpLOV. Ov pV GANA TOV XpnudTwY Tapakomlopmévwv St wyopas
5 te Shuos eOavpale To mAHO0s, H Te RBovrAn 328

78

CATO THE YOUNGER

but although he had the accounts of all his administration of the estate carefully written out in two books, neither of these was preserved. One of them a freedman of his, Philargyrus by name, had in charge, but after putting to sea from Cenchraeae he was capsized and lost it, together with his cargo; the other Cato himself had safely carried as far as Corcyra, where he pitched his tent in the market-place. But because it was so cold the sailors built many fires during the night, the tents caught fire, and the book disappeared. It is true that the royal stewards who were at hand were ready to stop the mouths of Cato's enemies and traducers, but nevertheless the matter gave him annoyance. For it was not as a proof of his own integrity, but as an example to others of scrupulous exactness that he was eager to produce his accounts, and he was therefore vexed.

XXXIX. The Romans did not fail to hear of his arrival! with his ships, and all the magistrates and priests, the whole senate, and a large part of the people went to the river to meet him, so that both banks of the stream were hidden from view, and his voyage up to the city had all the show and splendour of a triumph. Yet some thought it ungracious and stubborn that, although the consuls and _ praetors were at hand, he neither landed to greet them, nor checked his course, but on a royal galley of six banks of oars swept past the bank where they stood, and did not stop until he had brought his fleet to anchor in the dock-yard. However, when the treasure was carried through the forum, the people were amazed at the great amount of it, and the

1 In 56 B.c.

329

a |

cuvayxbcioa peta TOV TpeTTOVTMY éTraivarv éyrndicato T@ Katwu otpatnyiav éEaipetov S00Fvat
\ 4 b) ‘ b] 3 A 4 4
xal tas Oéas avrov év écOATL Twepitophip@ Oea-cac8at. tavta pev otv o Katwv trapytncato, Nexiay 5é Tov otxovopxov Trav Bactdtxay édevOepov
” \ \ 6 a , b /
érecce THY BovrANY adeivar, paptuphnaas émipé-Netavy Kal Tiotw. wUmdteve b€ PidiwTos oO
\ a \ / \ 2 gos
Tmatnp THs Mapxias, kai Tpotov Twa To akiopa Ths apyins Kal H Svvapis eis Katova epider,
) , a , > 9 \ A 9

oux éAdTTOvVa TOD auVdapyovTos bt’ aperny Hh Ot
>] U fe , aA 4 \
ouxecoTnta Tov Piditrmov TO Katove tipnv
m poot Oevtos.
XL. ’Ezrel 5¢ Kixépov ex rhs puyis, iv epuyev
uTo KAwdiov, catedOav cai Suvdpevos péya Tas Snuapxexas SéXTOus, as o KAwdsos EOnxev ava-
, > N , > J , \
ypavras ets to Kamitwdov, améeorrace Bia Kal xcabeitrxe TOD KrXwbiov py trapovtos, él rovtots 5é Bours aOporcBeions kal tod KdXwdiou xatnyopodvtos éAeye trapavonws TO Krwdio Tis Snuapylas yevopéevns ater kal dxupa Seiv elvat
Ta TOTe TWpaxOevTa Kal ypapEevTa, Tpocéxpova ev
6 Kdtwyv ait@ réyovTt, Kal TéXOS avacTtas Edy
Ths pev Krwdiov morsteias pndev tyes pnde
XpyoTov GAws vopilev, eb 5é dvatpet TLs doa
Snuapyav émpakev, avarpetcoPar macav avtod
\ /
Thv tept Kumpov wpaypateiay Kai pwn yeyovevar
‘
THY ATOTTOANY vops“ov aApXoVTOS TAapaVvouou

senate in special session voted, together with the appropriate praises, that an extraordinary praetorship should be given to Cato, and that when he witnessed the spectacles he might wear a purple-bordered robe. These honours, now, Cato declined, but he persuaded the senate to bestow freedom upon Nicias, the steward of the royal household, after bearing witness to his care and fidelity. Philippus, the father of Marcia, was consul at the time, and the dignity and power of his office devolved in a manner upon Cato; the colleague of Philippus, also, bestowed no less honour upon Cato for his virtue than Philippus did because of his relationship to him.

XL. But Cicero had now come back! from the exile into which he was driven by Clodius, and, relying on his great influence in the senate, had forcibly taken away and destroyed, in the absence of Clodius, the records of his tribuneship which Clodius had deposited on the Capitol. When the senate was convened to consider the matter, and Clodius made his denunciation, Cicero made a speech in which he said that, since Clodius had been made tribune illegally, all that had been done or recorded during his tribunate ought to be void and invalid. Cato contradicted Cicero while he was speaking, and finally rose and said that, although he was wholly of the opinion that there was nothing sound or good in the administration of Clodius, still, if everything which Clodius had done while tribune were to be rescinded, then all his own proceedings in Cyprus would be rescinded, and his mission there had not been legal, since an illegal magistrate had obtained it

1 In 57 B.c., after an absence of sixteen months. Cf. the Cicero, chapters xxx.-xxxiii.

chy

Wnpicapevov- T apavops pev ov | Onpapxov
aipeOnvat' tov KA.@dcoy éx TaTpiKloy peTa-OTAVTA vopov dudovto0s ets Snporuxcoy olKov, et b¢ pox Onpos, aoTep arnro, yeyovep dpxov, QuTov Cob ied TOV abuxioavta, pH AVELY THY ouvase-KnBeio av apxny elvat T poonKov. ex TOUTOV be opyiis) Kixépov eoxXe tov Kdtwva, xa pir YP@mevos ETAVTATO Ypovoy Troduy: EiTa pmévTOL dundAaynoav.
XLI. ’Ex ToUTOU Tloprnios Kat Kpdocos
brepBadorte Tas "AXrets Kaicap: ovyyEevopevot yropmny émrorna avTo KOU devTépav Umatetay
METLEVaL, Kal KATAOTEYTES Els AUTH Kaicape pev THS apXis adXov Tog OUTOV emipngiverbar xpo-vov, autos b¢ TOV emapxeav TAS peyloras Kal Xenpara Kat TTPATLWOTLKAS Suvdpets. orrep my em vepnoet THS Hyepwovias Kab KaTanrucer THS TOALTELAS cuvepod ia. TOANGY 5é nal ayabav avdpev pereevas THV apyiy TOTE _Tapacxevato-Hever, TOUS [ev addous opbevtes év tais mapary-yehiass am étpewar, povov dé Aevxtov Aopittov

Mopxta uvotkouvTa TH adeNGf Kdtov emeure pry exoTivar ynde ipéoOas, TOU ary @vos ov mept apxis 6VTOS, GNA Tmepl THS ‘Papatov édevbepias.
Kal peVTOL Kal Noyos exper 51a Tod ow povoby-TOS ére THs TOAEWS pépous, @S ov TEpLOTTEOY, Ets TaUTO THs Kpdocou Kat Toparniov Suva pews
uve Bovans, TavTanacw Um époyKov Kal Bapeiav THY apYXnY yevouevny, Ar’ adaipetéov adbris Tov
1 ev ob 3. afpebjvac Sintenis, after Schaefer, for the MSS. pev ody 8. alpeOjvac; Bekker has nev obv ph 5. aipedjvat.

for him; but it had not been illegal, he maintained, for Clodius to be elected tribune after a transfer from patrician to plebeian rank which the law allowed,! and if he had been a bad magistrate, like others, it was fitting to call to an account the man who had done wrong, and not to vitiate the office which had suffered from his wrong doing. In consequence of this speech Cicero was angry with Cato, and for a long time ceased friendly intercourse with him; afterwards, however, they were reconciled.”

XLI. After this, Pompey and Crassus had a meeting with Caesar,? who had come across the Alps, in which they laid a plan to canvass jointly for a second con- sulship, and, after they were established in the office, to get a vote passed giving to Caesar another term in his command, of the same duration as the first, and to themselves the largest provinces, money and mili- tary forces. This was a conspiracy for the division of the supreme power and the abolition of the constitu- tion. And although many honourable men were getting ready to canvass for the consulship at that time, they were all deterred by seeing Pompey and Crassus announce themselves as candidates, excepting only Lucius Domitius, the husband of Cato’s sister Porcia. Him Cato persuaded not to withdraw from the canvass or give way, since the struggle was not for office, but for the liberty of the Romans. And indeed it was currently said among those citizens who still retained their good sense, that the consular power must not be suffered to become altogether overweening and oppressive by the union of the in- fluence of Pompey and Crassus, but that one or the

1 Cf. chapter xxxiii. 3. 2 Cf. the Cicero, xxxiv. 3 At Luca, in 56 B.c. Cf. the Pompey, li.; the Caesar, xxi.

érepoy. Kal ocuviotavto tmpos Tov Aopitiov Tapopiavres Kat wapalappuvovtes avTtAauBa-

veoOau ToAXNOUS Yap AUT@ Kal TOY GLwTT@VTWY
\ , b a / ° ,
dua déos ev Tais yypos UTapEev.
r “A \ , e \ N 4a

Todro 6% detcavtes of rept tov Llopmniov
e a > £ “a s 4 4
upeicay evédpay T@ Aomtip KkataBatvorts dp-Opiov Ue Naptrddwv eis TO Tediov. Kal TP@TOS
pev o Tpopaivwy émictas T@ Aopttio amdnyels | Kat Tecw@y amréBave: peta dé TovTOV Hon Kal TOY
v / > 74 b) \
ahXwWy GUVYTITPWOKOLEVWY EyiveTO huyn WANY Kdtwvos cat Aouitiov. Kxatreiye yap avtov o Kdtov, xaimep autos eis Tov Bpayiova teTpw-MEVOS, KAL TWApEKEAEVETO pévety Kal un TPOALTELY, Ews éeumrvéwot, Tov uTrép THs éAevOEpias ayava Wpos TOvS TUpayvous, ol Tiva TpOTOY YpHooYTAL
a 3 nv “A \ UA +> , > 9 TH apxX7n Snrodae Sta THALKOVTWY adiKnuaTwDY éT autny Babdivovtes.
XLII. Ov~y vroordavtos 5€ tot Aopetiou To 4 b] > 3 \ > #f , € J

Setvov, aA eis THY oixiay KataduyovTos, npé-Onoav pev brratot Wloumnios cat Kpdoaos, ovx améxape 5€ 0 Kadtwv, ard avtos mpoedOav oTpatnyiav metner, Bovdopevos opunthpioy Exeww TOV Mpos éxeivous aywvav Kal mpos apyovTas
> , \ > , e \ A
avticabictacOat pn idssoTns. of 5€ Kati TovTo Seicavtes, ws THS oTpatnyias dktopdyou Sia
Kdtwva pos thy bTrateiay yevnoopévns, Tpa@ToV
\ > ’ a “a bd 4
pev éEaiguns cal trav TOANwY ayvoovyTwy Bov-Any guvayayovTes Evrnhicavto Tovs aipeHévTas 334

CATO THE YOUNGER

other of these men must be deprived of it. So they joined the party of Domitius, inciting and encouraging him to persist in his opposition ; for many,
they said, who now held their peace through fear,

would help him when it came to voting.
This was precisely what the partisans of Pompey feared, and so they set an ambush for Domitius as he was going down at early morning by torchlight into the Campus Martius. First of all the torch-bearer who stood in front of Domitius was smitten, fell, and died ; and after him the rest of the party were presently wounded, and all took to flight except Cato and Domitius. For Cato held Domitius back, although he himself had received a wound in the arm, and exhorted him to stand his ground, and not to abandon, while they had breath, the struggle in behalf of liberty which they were waging against the tyrants, who showed plainly how they would use the consular power by making their way to it through such crimes.

XLIT. But Domitius would not face the peril, and fled to his house for refuge, whereupon Pompey and Crassus were elected consuls.! Cato, however, would not give up the fight, but came forward himself as candidate for a praetorship, wishing to have a vantage- point for his struggles against the men, and not to be a private citizen when he was opposing magistrates. But Pompey and Crassus feared this also, feeling that Cato would make the praetorship a match for the consulship. In the first place, therefore, they suddenly, and without the knowledge of the majority, got the senate together, and had a vote passed that the praetors elect should enter upon their office at oTpaTyyous evOvs dpyew Kat pH Svademovras TOV VO pL pov xpovov, év @ Oixas Tots dexdoac' TOV pov hoav. éreta bia Tob Wndicpatos TO b.60- vat ‘ davuTrevOuvov KatacKevdoavres UTNpeTas aura Kat pirous emt TH oTpaTnyiay T potyyov, avTou pev didorTes apyuvpLor, aurol be Tals v7- pots Pepopevars epertares. WS bé Kal TOUT@V 4 Kdtevos dperi kai do€a mepinv, oT aidovs TaV TOAN@Y EV dew TON TU epevenv atroboa Gat Kaztwva tais Wwadors, OV KAANBS ElxeE m plac at TH TONEL oT parnyon,) TE TpPOTH KrOeica TaY puX@v exetvov am everken, eLaidvns 0 LTopmnios Bpovrijs dKntoevat yrevadmevos aloyiota diéhuce THY exe Anotar, eva weveov apoatovcbat Ta TOL- adTa Kal pndev émexupoov Svoonpias yevoperns. avOis 6é TOA XPNT apevor TO dexacu@, TOUS Bertiarous doavres éx tod mediov Bia Scverpa-

1 For the year 55 B.c.

Eavto Bativiov avi Karwvos aipeOivas oTpa-Tnyov. &vOa 51) Néyerat Tovs pev odTw Tapavopws Kai adixws Oeuévous THY pas evOs BaTrEp anodpavras oixer au, Tois 6€ AdXNOLS GUYLOTA-PEVOLS Kal ayavaxTovat Snudpxov TWOS avro™r TAaparXovTos éxxdnaotav KatacTavTa Tov Kdreva atavra bev @omep éx Oewv érimvouy Ta per-AovTAa 7H Tronet Tm poecTrety, Tapoppnoat 5é TOUS mwoNitas én Tlopmniov Kal Kpdocov as Tovavra guvelootas avTtois, xal ToLtavTns dmrTouevous TomuTelas bu iy éderoav Karova, pa oT pATHYOS aura mepiyevnTau. Tédos 6é amovTa eis. THY oixiay tpovTepe ANOS tTocodTOV Gaov ovdé 1 +d :5dvar Sintenis, after Schaefer, for the MSS. 7d d:5d6yar 5{xas ; Coraés and Bekker delete also d:ddvai.

once, without waiting for the time prescribed by law to elapse, during which time those who had bribed the people were liable to prosecution. In the next place, now that by this vote they had freed bribery from responsibility, they brought forward henchmen and friends of their own as candidates for the praetorship, themselves offering money for votes, and themselves standing by when the votes were cast. But even to these measures the virtue and fame of Cato were superior, since shame made most of the people think it a terrible thing to sell Cato by their votes, when the city might well buy him into the praetorship ; and therefore the first tribe called upon voted for him. Then on a sudden Pompey lyingly declared that he heard thunder, and most shamefully dissolved the assembly, since it was customary to regard such things as inauspicious, and not to ratify anything after a sign from heaven had been given. Then they re- sorted again to extensive bribery, ejected the best citizens from the Campus Martius, and so by force got Vatinius elected praetor instead of Cato. Then, indeed, it is said, those who had thus illegally and wrongfully cast their votes went off home at once like runaways, while the rest of the citizens, who were banding together and expressing their indig- nation, were formed into an assembly there by a tribune, and were addressed by Cato. As if inspired from heaven he foretold to the citizens all that would happen to their city, and tried to set them against Pompey and Crassus, who, he said, were privy to such a course and engaged in such a policy as made them afraid of Cato, lest, as praetor, he should get the better of them. And finally, when he went away home, he was escorted on his way by a greater cay

cuunTavTas aya Tors arodederypévous oTpa-

Tnyous.

XLII. Taiou dé _ TpeBoviov ypaypaytos vowov urep vounys emapxeav Tois UTaToLs, Gore TOV pev
‘I 8npiav éxovra kat AtBunv id avbt@, tov 4é
vplav Kal Alyurrop, ols Bovrouro ToNELELY Kat kaTaorpepea Oar VaUTLKaLS al meCiKais Suvd-pew emiovTas, ot mev Grow THY avrimpagev Kat
K@AVTW ATEYVMKOTES éFéhurrov Kal TO avrevmeiy, Katrove be avaBayte Tpo THS Yvnpopoptas émt TO Bijpa Kat Bovropevep Aéyev podas apav dveiy
Loyov éwxav. ws 6€ ToAAa Aeyon Kal biddoKav
Kat m podea mlScov KaTavadwoe Tov Xpovov, OUKETL eye avTov eiwy, GAN emipévovta KaTeoTrAC EY uTnpéTns TpoceNOw@v. ws O€ Kal KatwOev iorda-pevos €80a Kal Tovs axovovtas Kal avvayava-KTobvTas eixe, TaNALV o DINpETns émtraBopevos Kal deyaryov autov &&w THs dyopas KATETTHGE. Kat ovK EpOn 7 perrov apedeis, Kal 1wadw avacT peas
ieTo ™ pos TO Biya. peta Kpavyijs éyxehevdpevos Tots ToNiTars dwuverv. moAAdKis € TOUTOU ye vopévou Trepitrabav o TpeBwuvios éxéXevoev avdTov eis TO Seopwtypioy ayeoOat: Kal wAnOos érn-Kohovdet NEevyouTos cpa ouv Tp Badiferv aK pow-HEVvOY, WOTE beivavra TOV TpeBavior ageivac.
Kdxeivny pev odtw THY Tipe pav o Kdtwv xartavarwoe tais 8 épekis obs pev debi Edpevor TOV TOALTO@V, ods SE TVTKEVAT A [EVOL Xapiae Kal dwpo-Soxiats, éva dé Tov Snudpxeov "AKUNALOV Grrhoes elpfavtes éx Tov Boureutnpiou T poerOeiv, avrov 5é tov Kdtwva Bpovtny yeyovévas Boavta Tis 338

80

CATO THE YOUNGER

throng than accompanied all the elected praetors together.
XLII. And now Caius Trebonius proposed a law for the assignment of provinces to the consuls, where- by one of them was to have Spain and Africa under him, the other Syria and Egypt, and both were to wage war on whom they pleased, and attack and sub- due them with land and sea forces. The rest of the opposition were weary of their efforts to prevent such things, and forbore even to speak against the measure; but Cato mounted the rostra before the vote was taken, expressed a wish to speak, with difficulty gained permission, and spoke for two hours. After he had consumed this time in long arguments, expositions, and prophecies, he was not allowed to speak any longer, but an official went up to him as he sought to continue, and pulled him down from the rostra. But even from where he stood below the rostra he kept shouting, and found men to listen to him and share his indignation. So the official once more laid hands on him, led him away, and put him out of the forum. Then, the instant that he was re- leased, he turned back and strove to reach the rostra, shouting, and commanding the citizens to help him. This was repeated several times, until Trebonius, in a passion, ordered him to be led to prison; but a crowd followed listening to what he said as he went along, so that Trebonius took fright and let him go.

In this manner Cato consumed that day ; but during the days that followed his adversaries intimidated some of the citizens, won over others by bribes and favours, with armed men prevented one of the tribunes, Aquillius, from leaving the senate-chamber, cast Cato himself out of the forum when he cried out that there ayopas éxBaXovtes, ovK GAliyous S€ Tpwoartes, éviov 5é Kai Trecdvtwv, Bia Tov vowov éexvpwaar, @OTE TOANOVS GVaTpahEevTas opyn Tovs Lloumniou

Barrew aviptavtas. adda TovTO pév érredOwv oO Kdtov dexorAvce TO S¢ Kaiocape wadwv vopov ypadopeévov rept Tov éTrapyL@v Kal TOV OTpATOwédwv, ovxéTt mpos Tov Shpov o Kdtwv, adda Tpos avTov Tpatropuevos Ilopmrniov euaptupato Kat mpovreyey ws él TOY avTOD TpdyYnrov avarap-Bavov Kaioapa viv pév ov« older, dtav dé dpyntat BapiverOar Kai xpateioBas pyre atroBécOat Suvdpevos pnte héperv vtropévev, ets THY TWodw éumecettas ovv avtT@, Kal pepvnoetat TOTE TOV Kadtwvos tapawécewv, as ovdév HrTov év avtais
To Ilopmniov cupdépov evavy 7 TO Kadov kal Sixatov. TavTa qToANdKis axovwv o Lloumnios npérer Kai Tapéreutev amiotia this Kaicapos peTaBoAns Sia wiotw edtuxias THS éavTod Kal Suva pews.
XLIV. Eis 6€ ro é&js Eros aipeBels 0 Kdtwv atpatnyos ovdev &boke mpootiOévas TH apyn Toc-oUTOV cis GEeuvoTnTa Kai péyeOos adpywy Karas, doov adaipely Kal Kataroxyuvery avuTrddnros Kal aXiTwv TodNaKes él 76 Bia mpoepyopevos Kat Oavatixas Sdixas émipavav avipav ottw Spa-Bevwv. évioe 5€ hace cai per' apictov oivov mweTwKxoTa Ypnuativey: dNNA TOUTO peEVv OVK AAN-

Aas Néyerat. StapOerpopévou dé Tov Sypov rais dwpodoxiais Ud TaY dtrapyYouvtwy Kai xpwpé-340

CATO THE YOUNGER

had been thunder, and after a few of the citizens had been wounded and some actually slain, forced the passage of the law. Consequently, many banded to- gether and wrathfully pelted the statues of Pompey. But Cato came up and stopped this. However, when once more a law was introduced concerning Caesar's provinces and armies, Cato no longer addressed him- self to the people, but to Pompey himself, solemnly assuring and warning him that he was now, without knowing it, taking Caesar upon his own shoulders, and that when he began to feel the burden and to be overcome by it, he would neither have the power to put it away nor the strength to bear it longer, and would therefore precipitate himself, burden and all, upon the city; then he would call to mind the exhortations of Cato, and see that they had sought no less the interests of Pompey than honour and justice. Pompey heard these counsels repeatedly, but ignored and put them by; he did not believe that Caesar would change, because he trusted in his own good fortune and power.

XLIV. For the next year} Cato was elected praetor, but it was thought that he did not add so much majesty and dignity to the office by a good admini- stration as he took away from it by disgracing it. For he would often go forth to his tribunal without shoes or tunic, and in such attire would preside over capital cases involving prominent men. Some say, too, that even after fhe mid-day meal and when he had drunk wine, he would transact public business; but this is untruthfully said. However, seeing that the people were corrupted by the gifts which they received from men who were fond of office and plied the bribery of 34!

1 54 B.C.
|

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

vov TO dexalea Bat Kad drep épyacia ovvnber TOV TONAWY, Bovdcpevos éxxowpat TAaVTATAGL TO voo-npa TOUTO THis TONEWS, ETELoE Soya Géc bat THY cUyKnTOY Srws ot katacradevres dpxovres, rr pndéva KaTHYOpOV éxorev, avrol maptovres €& avdryens eis & évopKov SixaaTiploy evOuvas bidaou.
emt TOUT® Karen as pev EaYoV ot peTLovTes apxas, ere dé xademebrepov o picbapvev ox/ros. Ewbev ovp éTl TO Bia rod Katwvos mpoedOovtos a6 poor T poa'TEd OVTES éBowy, éBracdnpovy, éBarrop, dare pevryery amo Tov Biparos amavtas, avrov dé éxeitvov €Ewobévta TO Tr OE Kal mapadepo-pevov poms éridapécbar TOV éuBorwv. évredbev

dvacTas T@ pev iTap@ Kai Oappodvte Tis GWwews
evOus éxparnae Tob BopiBou Kal THY Kpavyny ETAVTEV, ELTOV bé Ta TpémovtTa Kal pe? Houxias dKoua Gels jTwavTaTact dvéhuge THY TAPAXiV. errawvovons dé THs Bovdijs avtov, ‘Kyo 0g,” elzrev, ‘ ‘Duds ou. eTaLva KxwwOuvevovTa oTpaTnyov éykaTadsrrovTas Kal py TpocapuvavTas.
Tov € petiovtwy apynv Exactos amop@ wdaber ouvetyeto, poBovpevos prev avTos Sexalev, poBov-pevos 5é érépov TovtTo mwpakavtTos éxteceiy THs apxis. eokev odv avrois els TAUTO cuveMoiat mapaBaréa as Spaxpmer € éxao Tov dpyuptov Sexa-dSvo Huov pupidoas, elTa peTiévar THY apXnv mavras opOas Kal Otxatws: tov dé mapaBdvra, Kal Xeno dpevov Sexaou@ oréperOas TOU dpyupiov. TavTa oporoyro artes aipodyras puhaxa Kab BpaBevrny Kat Hdptupa tov Katova Kal Ta XpHwata, pépovtes exeLvep mapeTiberto: Kal Tas auvOnkas éypaypayto mpos éxeivov, avtl Tav XpN-342

781

CATO THE YOUNGER

the masses as they would an ordinary business, he wished to eradicate altogether this disease from the state, and therefore persuaded the senate to make a decree that magistrates elect, in case they had no accuser, should be compelled of themselves to come before a sworn court and submit accounts of their election. At this the candidates for offices were sorely displeased, and still more sorely the hireling multitude. Early in the morning, therefore, when Cato had gone forth to his tribunal, crowds assailed him with shouts, abuse, and missiles, so that every- body fled from the tribunal, and Cato himself was pushed away from it and borne along by the throng, and with difficulty succeeded in laying hold of the rostra. There, rising to his feet, by the firmness and boldness of his demeanour he at once prevailed over the din, stopped the shouting, and after saying what was fitting and being listened to quietly, brought the disturbance completely to an end. When the senate was praising him for this, he said: “ But I cannot praise you for leaving an imperilled praetor in the lurch and not coming to his aid.”

Now, all the candidates for offices were at a loss what to do; each one was afraid to use bribes him- self, but was afraid of losing his office if another used them. They decided, therefore, to come together and deposit severally one hundred and twenty-five thousand drachmas in money, and that all should then sue for their offices in fair and just ways; the one who transgressed and practised bribery forfeiting his money. Having made this agreement, they chose Cato as depositary, umpire, and witness, and bringing their money, offered to deposit it with him; they even drew up their agreement in his presence. Cato

343

padtov eyyunTas AaBovra, Ta dé Xpnwara 1)
Sefdpevov. as 5é Aicev Kupla THs avabeifews, TapacTas oO Karey TO BpaBevovre Snuapye@ kat mapapuratas THD ior, éva TOY mapaBaro-pevov amrepyve Kaxoupyobvra Kal mpooéragev arrodotvat TOUS ad Xots TO apyvpiov. aXn’ EXELVOL bev eTTALveaaVTES avTou Thy opOornra Kal Javuacaves avetNov TO TPdTTLMOY. WS ieavny Stnv EXOvTES mapa Tob adixnoavros” TOUS bé ad ous érvrrnoev 0 Katwv xai hOdvov é eEaxev amo TOUTOU TELA TOV, WS Bours Kal Sixacrnplov Kal apyxov-tov dvvayw avT@ TeplTroNnTapevos.
Ovdemsas yap aperis Sofa Kab triotis emi Oo-vous Tout padrov 7H THS Stxatoovvys, Ste Kat Svvauis avTH Kal miotis Emetar paddiota Tapa
TOV TOAA@Y. OU yap TEMATL povor, @S TOUS av-Spetous, ovde Javpdlovew, @> TOvs hpovipous, adda Kat prrotor TOUS Suxatous cat Oappovow avrois Kai Tua Tevovaw. éxeiywv 6 TOUS wep poBodvras, Tots dé amiotovet' ™ pos dé TovToLS éxeivous pév olovrar dices Pad Dov 1) T@ Bovnre-oOaut Siapépery, avdpetav Kal hpovnoty, Tv pev
o€vTNTAa TWA, Tv Oo evpwariay puxiis TiO émevot, Sicaie dé & Umdpyovtos evdus elvau T@ Bovropev@ padiora, tiv adixiay os Kaxlay ampopdo.cTov ais xvvovran.
XLV. Aco Kal t® Kdtove maytes ot peydror
T pooe Toh Lov | OS éXeyxouevou: Lloparnios 5é cal
Katdhuaw Ths éauTov duvdpews TH éxelvou d0£av nyoupevos ael Tivas TpotéBaddev avTt@ AoLdopn-copevous, ay Kat KrAwdzsos Hv 0 Snpwaywryos, avOts ets Tloprniov urroppvuets cai KataBoay Tov Kato-344

took pledges for their money, but would not accept the money itself. When the day appointed for the election came, Cato took his stand by the side of the presiding tribune, and after watching the vote, declared that one of the depositors was playing false, and ordered him to pay his money over to the others. But these, after admiring and praising Cato’s upright- ness, cancelled the penalty, feeling that they already had sufficient satisfaction from the wrong-doer. In the rest of the citizens, however, this conduct of Cato caused more vexation and odium than anything else ; they felt that he was investing himself with the powers of senate, courts and magistrates.

For no virtue, by the fame and credit which it gives, creates more envy than justice, because both power and credit follow it chiefly among the common folk. These do not merely honour the just, as they do the brave, nor admire them merely, as they do the wise, but they actually love the just, and put confidence and trust in them. As for the brave and wise, however, they fear the one and distrust the other; and besides, they think that these excel by a natural gift rather than by their own volition, con- sidering bravery to be a certain intensity, and wisdom a certain vigour, of sou), whereas any one who wishes can be just forthwith, and the greatest disgrace is visited upon injustice, as being inexcusable baseness.

XLV. For this reason all the great men were hostile to Cato, feeling that they were put to shame by him; and Pompey, who considered Cato's high repute as a dissolution of his own power, was always egging certain persons on to abuse him, among whom was Clodius the demagogue especially, who had again drifted into Pompey's following. He vOS, WS TOAAG pev ex Kurrpou ypnpata vordioa-pévov, Tlopmniw Sé rodepodvtos amakiwoavtt ydapov avtovd Ouyatpds. o 5é Katawv édeyer ote Npnuata pev é« Kumpov tocaita Th ToAeE cuva-yayou ute inmov éva pnte otpatiwTyy AaBwv, daa [lopmnios é« Tmodéuwv TocovTev Kal Opidp-Bwv tHv oixoupévny Kuxnoas ovK aynveyKe, KN-Seaotny 5& pndétote mpoeréaOat Tloprniov, ovx avdaEvov nyovpevos, GAN' opav THv év TH ToALTELG Siagopav. " AvTos pev yap," én, "' didopévns fol peTa THY oTpaTnYylav érapyias aTréaTHY, ov-Tos O€ Tas pev ever AaBav, Tas bé Sidwawv érépots' vuvi d€ Kal rédos EEaxtoxXtALov oTduTaV Kaicaps xéxpncev eis Tadariav: 3 ob7' éxeivos ArnTE TAP Uuav ovTEe ovTOS edwxe pe" Kuav, adrAQ Suvapets THALKaDTAaL Kal OmdAa Kal imoL YXapiTés ELoLD

idtwT@v Kal avtidoces. Karovpevos 5é€ avTo-Kpatwp Kal otparnyos adAXoLs TA oTpAaTEvLaTA
Kal Tas émapyias rapadédaxev, avtos 5é TH TOdEL Tapaxdbnrat ordcets aywvobeTar ev Tais Tapayyeriats xal BopvBouvs pnxyavwpevos, ¢E ay ov NEANOe br' dvapyias povapyiav éavT@ pvnorevo-

pévos.” |
XLVI. Odtes pev nuivato Tov Tlopmniov. jv 5é Mdpxos Pawvios étaipos avtod nal tnrwrns, olos o Dadnpeds *"ArrorAddSwpos iatopettar tepi Lwxpdtnv yevécOat Tov taratov, éumans Kat
TAPAKEKLUNKWS TPOS TOV AOYOY, Ov ayédnv OvdE
TPaWs, GAN axpatov avTov Kadaapevov woTep

loudly denounced Cato for having appropriated much treasure from Cyprus, and for being hostile to Pompey because he had declined to marry his daughter. But Cato declared that, without taking a single horse or soldier, he had got together from Cyprus more treasure for the city than Pompey had brought back from all his wars and triumphs after stirring up the habitable world; and that he never chose Pompey for a marriage connection, not because he thought him unworthy of it, but because he saw the difference in their political tenets. “I, for my part,” said Cato, “when a province was offered me after my praetorship, declined it, but this Pompey took provinces, some of which he holds himself, and some he offers to others; and now he has actually lent Caesar a body of six thousand legionaries for use in Gaul. This force neither did Caesar ask from you, nor did Pompey give it with your consent, but armies of this great size and arms and horses are now the mutual gifts of private persons. And though he has the titles of general and imperator, he has handed over to others his armies and his provinces, while he himself takes up his post near the city, managing factions at the elections as though he were directing games, and contriving disturbances, from which, as we clearly see, by way of anarchy, he is seeking to win for himself a monarchy.”

XLVI. With such words did Cato defend himself against Pompey. But Marcus Favonius was a companion and ardent disciple of his, just as Apollodorus of Phalerum is said to have been of Socrates in olden time. Favonius was impulsive, and easily moved by argument, which did not affect him moderately or mildly, but like unmixed wine, and to the point of

2 olvov Kat paviKeTepov. OUTOS aryopavopiay per-LWY NTTATO, TULTTAPOY dé o Kate Tpoaéaxe
Tais déhroes peg xerpr Yeypappevars® Kat rnv 782
Kaxoupytiav eFereyEas TOTE per ET LKANC EL Snpdp-Xov éXuoe THY avdbeEtv, o Datepov 5é tod Dawviov kataorabévtos a aryopavopou Ta TE ada Ths apXns émepedetTo wal tas Oéas Sieirev ev TH
Jedrpe, dudous Kat Tots Oupedixois a repavous
3 ev ov Xpucods, aX’ woTrEp eV ‘Odupria oTivov, dopa 5é dyri TOV TOAUTEAOY TOES pev "EA-Anow tebTra Kal Opidaxas Kat pagpavidas «al

am-tous, Tois O€ ‘Pepators oivou Kepayita, Kal Kpéa Deva Kal avKa Kai oLxvous ral EvAwy aryKxanioas,
Ov THV evTeAELay ob pev éyéXwy, ot dé nO0dvTo TOU
Karevos TO avaTnpov Kal KATES TUL LEVOD opav-
4 TES NOUXT petaBarrov els Sidyvory. Téhos dé 0 Pawvi0s els Tov OY AOV euBarov € éavTov Kat Kade-Copevos év ois Jearais exporter tov Kdtova Kal did0vat Tots eUnpepodat Kat Tebay éBoa, Kat Tupmapexdne TOUS Jearas, OS éxelv tv éEovovav Tapasedwxws. éy 5€ TO ETEpep Ocadtp@
Koupiwv o Pawviov cuvdpywv exopmryet ToNv-TEAMS’ GAN’ éxetvov dmonet moves of avOpwrtrot peréBatvor evraida, Kal ouvérrattov T pod vums UTTOK pivopevep T@ Pawvie Tov itaTny Kal TO 5 Kdrove TOV dryavod erny. émTparre be tavra Sta-oupwv TO Tpayua, Kal biSdoKxwr bts mailovra det 7H Tada xpiie Pac Kat xapere TapaTréwTrety aripe padrov 7) Tapackevals Kat mohuTeneiars, eis Ta pondevos akia gpovtidas peyddas xal oTrovoas KataTiOépevov.
348

CATO THE YOUNGER

frenzy. He was being defeated in a candidacy for the aedileship, but Cato, who was present, noticed that the voting tablets were all inscribed in one hand; and having exposed the foul play, at the time he stopped the election by an appeal to the tribunes. Afterwards, when Favonius had been appointed aedile, Cato both discharged the other duties of the office and managed the spectacles in the theatre. He gave to the actors crowns, not of gold, but of wild olive, as was done at Olympia, and inexpensive gifts,—to the Greeks, beets, lettuce, radishes, and pears; and to the Romans, jars of wine, pork, figs, melons, and faggots of wood. At the practical simplicity of these gifts some laughed, but others conceived respect for Cato when they saw his severe and solemn manner gradually relaxing to pleasant good-humour.! And at last Favonius, plunging into the crowd and taking a seat among the spectators, applauded Cato and called to him in a loud voice to give presents to the successful performers and to honour them, and helped him to exhort the spectators, as though he had delegated his powers to Cato. Now, in the other theatre, Curio, the colleague of Favonius, was managing things with a lavish hand ; but the people left him and went over to the other place, and readily shared in a sport where Favonius was playing the part of a private citizen and Cato that of master of the games. But Cato did all this in disparagement of the usual practice, and with an effort to show that in sport one must adopt a sportive manner and conduct matters with unostentatious gladness rather than with elaborate and costly preparations, where one bestows upon trifling things great care and effort.

1 Cf. chapter i. 2.

XLVII. "Errel 5é, LanTiwvos Kal "Typaiov Kal Mirwvos t UTATELAY METEPYOMEVWY OU povov éxeivots Tots TUT popots 76n Kat TUL TOMTEVOMEVOLS adiKnpact, S@podoxiass kar dexac pois, GAN' avTicpus | be 6mAwY Kal povey ets éupurdcov TONE Lov w0ovpéveov TOMMY Kai atrovoia, Tlopmijiov TUVES nEtovy eTLaTHVaL Tals dpxatpeciass, TO pev Wp@ToVv aytelirey 0 Karo, ov Tous vopots €K Hopmntov papevos, ANN' éx TOV vOMev Lopmni Seip unep Xeuv THY ac parear, @s O€ ToNuy Xpovor ava xias avons xal T PLOY oTpaToT édcy THV aryopay oonpéepat TEplLeXOVT OY odLYyov am éhemev avetriaXeTov yeyovevar TO KAKOV, éyvo Ta Tpaypata To TIS eax ans GaVvayKns ets Toprijiov éxovci@ xapere THS Bours TEPLO THO At, Kal T) eT pieTAT TOV TApavounparav Xpns dpevos idpare THS TOV peyioTwV KATATTAS EWS THY povapxtay emayayér bau paArANov 1 mepuidety Thy oTaow eis povapxiav' TEMUTMT AY. eltrev ovp ep TH Bovdy yvepny Bv8nros oixetos av Kdrwvos, os xpN peovov éeheodar Toparnioy imatov: i yap &Feuv KaAXNOS Ta Mpayuara éxelvou KATATTHGAVTOS, a T? Kpatiore Sovdevoew THY TOMY. dvac Tas 6€ 6 0 Kdrwy ovdevos av Tpoodoxycartos € emqvece THY yvopunv Kal acuveBovreuce macav apXnv @S avapxias KpelTrova, Tloumrniov dé Kai mpoaSoKay dptota tois twapovor XpnoecOar Tpaypace Kai purdkew Starioctev0evta thy TOA.

XLVIII. Odt@ 8 amrodety Gels Umaros o Tlop-anios édenOn tod Karwvos é\deiy mpos avroy
1 povapyfay Sintenis' and Coraés, with the MSS.; Sintenis? and Bekker adopt the dvapxflay of Emperius.

XLVII. But presently Scipio, Hypsaeus, and Milo sought the consulship.) They not only used those illegal means which were now a familiar feature in political life, namely, the giving of gifts and bribes, but were openly pressing on, by the use of arms and murder, into civil war, with daring and madness. Some therefore demanded that Pompey should pre- side over the elections. Cato opposed this at first, saying that the laws ought not to derive their security from Pompey, but Pompey from the laws. However, when there had been no regular government for a long time,! and three armies were occupying the forum daily, and the evil had well-nigh become past checking, he decided that matters ought to be put into the hands of Pompey by the voluntary gift of the senate, before the extreme necessity for it came, and that by employing the most moderate of unconstitutional measures as a healing remedy for the conservation of the greatest interests, they should themselves introduce the monarchy, rather than allow faction to issue in monarchy. Accordingly, Bibulus, a kinsman of Cato, moved in the senate that Pompey should be chosen sole consul ; for either matters would be rectified by his settlement of them, or the state would be in subjection to its most power- ful citizen. Then Cato rose up and, to everyone's surprise, approved the measure, advising any govern- ment as better than no government at all, and saying that he expected Pompey would handle the present situation in the best manner possible, and would guard the state when it was entrusted to him.

XLVIII. After Pompey had in this way been ap- pointed consul, he begged Cato to come to him in the 1 For the year 52 B.c. Riots in Rome prevented any election. Cf. the Pompey, chapter liv.

eis TO mpodaoTteov. édAOdvTa Se dSeEdpevos ptdo-dpovws aacmacpois Kal SeEraoccot Kal yap Ou“oroynoas tmapexdder avpSovrovy avT@ Kal lol a € \ mapedpov ela. ths apxns. o S€ Katwr arre-
la) \ a
Kpivato pnTe Ta WpaTa mpos améyOerav ecirety
A \ b]
Tlopwrniov pnte tavta mwpos ydpw, arr emi
/ a / 20/7 \ 9
cupdépovts. mavra THs TWodews: idia péev ovv
? a“ A 4 4 /

avT@® TapakaroovTs svBovros EceaOat, Snwocia
/ A \ a 4 a \ ,
dé, xav un TapakaAnTat, TavTws épely TO hatvopevovy. Kat Tadta émpattey ws eElme. mMpwToVv pev yap émi rovs Sexdcavtas 8n tov Siow > 4 \ \ ld UA “A of.
€TlTipua Kawa Kab dixas peyadas Tov Lloutniov vowoOeTovvTos apercty éxéXevoe TOV YeyovoTwV Kal Tpocéxyew Tois péXdNOVTLY’ OTE yap Grou
“ t , OTHOETAL TO TA TponwapTnuéva Cnteiy opicat
padiov, édv Te vewtepa ypddntat Tov adiucnuatoy émutipia, Seva TeicecOas Tovs, Sv ov TapéBa.vov br’ ndixovy vopov, Kata TovTOv Koralopévous.
ETELTA TOAA@Y Kplvopévwy eTipavav avdpar, 2» / \ \ 4 le) of. \ >] / éviov bé Kal dirwv tov [loummniov Kai oixeiwr, cia > AN 9 5 50 74 A \ , op@v autov évdudovta év! TodXols Kal KapmTTopevov emetina opodpas Kai Siryerpev. érret dé vow tovs eiwOotas rAéyecOar Trepl TaY Kpivo-4 bY , ’ \ b] , / 4
evar eTraivous autos adeXwyv, Movvatiw IIXaynm
A 4
acuyypaas errawov éri tis Sixns edwxev, éme-
/ ® a / ¥ axouevos 0 Kdtwv ta @ta tais yepoiv (éTvyXe
\
yap ducdlwv) ex@rvev avaywooKxerOar THY pap-/ € \ A b , > NX ? la) tupiav. o 66 IIldkayxos amédeEev avtov éx Tav
1 é@v Coraés and Bekker, with most MSS.: rots, with M.
352
783

CATO THE YOUNGER

suburbs. And when Cato was come, Pompey gave him a friendly welcome with salutations and hand-clasps, acknowledged his obligations to him, and invited him to be his counsellor and associate in the government. But Cato replied that he had neither spoken as he did at first out of enmity to Pompey, nor as he afterwards did to win his favour, but in every case in the interests of the state; in private, therefore, upon his invitation, he would be his coun- sellor, but in public, even without his invitation, he would certainly say what he thought was best. And he did this, as he said he would. In the first place, for instance, when Pompey was proposing to fix by law fresh penalties and heavy punishments for those who had already bribed the people, Cato urged him to ignore the past and give his attention to the future; for, he said, it would not be easy to fix the point at which the investigation of past transgressions should stop, and if penalties should be fixed subsequent to the crimes, those would be outrageously dealt with who were punished in conformity with a law which they were not transgressing when they committed their crime. In the second place, when many promi- nent men were on trial, some of whom were friends and relations of Pompey, Cato saw that Pompey was giving in and yielding in many cases, and therefore rebuked him sharply and tried to spur him on. More- over, though Pompey himself had made illegal the customary panegyrics upon men under trial, he wrote a panegyric upon Munatius Plancus and handed it in at his trial; but Cato (who chanced to be one of the jurors) stopped his ears with his hands and pre- vented the reading of the testimony.! Plancus got

1 Cf. the Pompey, lv. 5.

Sixactav peta Tous Noyous, Kal ovdey Hrrov HrAw.
Kal SAws aTropoyv hv wpadyna Kal dvcpeTayeiptorov 0 Katwy tots devyouct, pnte Bovropévois avrov atronitreivy SixactHny pijte amoXEeyely TOA-HOoW. HAwoav yap ovK oAlyou TO Katova
a a > /
gevyey SoEavtes od Oappeiv ois Sixaiots €viors 5é kal mpovdepov oi AowdopodvtTes ws Gverdos péeya
To pn déEacIa Kpitnvy Kdrova mpotevopevov.
XLIX. 'Ered 5€ Kaicapos a'rod pév éuredv-KOTOS Tots oTpaTevpacw ev Tadatia Kal THV St-Aw éyopuevov, Swpois Sé Kal ypjpace kal dirous parsoTa pos THY év TH Wore Ypwpévou Svvamy, 46n pév ai Kdrwvos mpoayopetoess avépepov Tov Tloptrniov é« movrhs nbn THs wpocbev amiotias overpoTroAobvTa TO Sewov, ere bé Hv dKvov Kat PEAAHTEWS ATOAMOU TpPdS TO KWAVELY Kal émLXeEL-pety vtroTAEws, Opunoev o Kdtwv bratetay Tap/ e > 4 b] \ a eo . A ayyéArNew ws adatpnoopevos evOus Ta OTAA TOD Kaicapos thv émiBovanv éferéyEwv. of 8 dytTimapayyéAXovTes avT@ YapievTes péev Hoav b s , hy: \ \ A a dpupotepot, YovArmixios S€ Kal ToAAA THs TOD
Karavos év rh mode Sokns te Kal duvapews atro-AeAauKws: OU péeTpLOV OvY edoKEL TPaYpLA TroLety
0 b] , > A a , b] 4
ovd evxaploTov' ov pny O ye Katav évexdree
"Ti yap," Edn, " Davpacrev et 6 Tes vopiter TOV

9 A e \ / ” / \
ayabav péytotov évép@ pn Tapinot;” meicas dé \ \ , Q \ a \ >
thv BovrAny ndicacbar Tovs petiovtTas THYy ap-A ? \ 5 a A on > e ff A “nv avrous SeEtovcOar Tov Simo, de’ Erépou bé yy SetcOar pndé evtuyxdvew virép avTa@Y TepLLoVTOS, 354

him removed from the jury after the speeches were over, and was convicted none the less. And altogether Cato was a perplexing and unmanageable quantity for defendants; they neither wished to allow him to be a juror in their cases nor had the courage to challenge him. For not a few of them were convicted because their attempted rejection of Cato made it appear that they had no confidence in the justice of their cases; and some were bitterly assailed by their revilers for not accepting Cato as juror when he was proposed.

XLIX. But Caesar, though he devoted himself to his armies in Gaul and was busy with arms, nevertheless employed gifts, money, and above all friends, to increase his power in the city. Presently, therefore, the admonitions of Cato roused Pompey from the great incredulity which he had indulged in up to this time, so that he had forebodings of his peril. However, he was still given to hesitation and spirit- less delay in checking or attacking the threatening evil, and therefore Cato determined to stand for the consulship, that he might at once deprive Caesar of his armed forces, or convict him of his hostile designs. But his competitors were both acceptable men, and Sulpicius had actually derived much benefit from Cato’s repute and power in the city, and was there- fore thought to be acting in an improper and even thankless manner. But Cato had no fault to find with him. “Pray, what wonder is it,” said he, “if a man wil] not surrender to another what he regards as the greatest of all good things?” However, by persuading the senate to pass a decree that candidates for office should canvass the people in person, and not solicit nor confer with the citizens through the

355

Mv “A b S A 9 tA 9 A ‘ ért padrov €Enypiave tous avOpwrrous, et pn sovov TO AaBeiv picOov, ddrAdXrAa Kal TO Siddvae Yap
A ‘\

avrovs adnpnuévos Atropov Kal AtLpov ood Tov Sipov tretroinxe. mpos 5 TovT@ pHnTE AUTOS évTL-“A e \ e le) \ v b] % 9 wv \ “ vey vIréep avtou TiBavos MY, AAN ev 70EL TO TOU Biov padrov akiwwa BovAdcuevos duddccew 7
mpocraPely TO THS apYAs Trovovpevos Tas SeEww-TEs, pHTE TOUS pirous éaaas ols SyAOS GALoKETAL
Kat Oeparreverat troteiy, amrétuXE THS APKTS.
L. Dépovtos 5é tod mpdypatos ovK avtots po-
A > A >] A 4 > A
VOLS TOLS ATTOTUXOUCG LD, ana Kal pirous AUTWV
Kal oixelols avy aloxyuVy TLVi KaTHnpeLay Kal Trév-os ep’ yépas TOAAGS, OdTws HveyKe Padvpws TO N [4 > , N\ ? le! ld oupBeBnKos OoTe areipapevos pev évy TO Trediw
4 9 A 4 C4 ¥
adatpioa, pet’ aptotov dé Tddw, BoTrEp clOcoro, xkataBas eis dyopay dvuTobyntos nal dxitwv Tept-TaThnoat peta TOV cuvnOwv. aitidtar dé Kixépwv STL, TOV TpayLaTwWV ApKoVvToS ToLovToUv Seopévar,
b 9 4 A 3 N e fa) e / ovK émotncaTo oTrovdny ovde vmrndOev opmrtLa diravO poe tov Sipov, dAAa Kal pods TO NowTrOV éféxape kal amnyopevae, Kaito THY oTpAaTNHYLaAV
avs €& bmapyis weteNOov. EXeyev odv o Kdtwv OTL THS pev oTpaTHYyias ov KaTa yvopuny éFérece TOV TOAKOY, GANA BracGevtwv 7} StapOapévtwr, év 5€ tais UTratixais Whdos pndemtas Kaxoupyias yevopuevns yyw nal te Sy mpooKexpovews dia TOV aUTOU TpoTOY, bY oUTE pweTabéacDat Tpos éETEpov Yap ore Ypwpevoy opoim maddy Spora 784 madetv voor éxyovtos avdpds éore.
356
CATO THE YOUNGER

agency of another going about in their behalf, Cato still more exasperated the common folk, in that he deprived them, not only of getting money, but also of bestowing favour, and so made them at once poor and without honour. And besides this, he was not per- suasive himself in canvassing for himself, but wished to preserve in his manners the dignity of his life, rather than to acquire that of the consulship by making the customary salutations; neither would he permit his friends to do the things by which the multitude is courted and captivated. He therefore failed to obtain the office.

L. Though the matter brought, not only to the unsuccessful candidates themselves, but also to their friends and relatives, dejection and sorrow tinged with considerable shame for many days, Cato bore so easily what had happened that he anointed him- self and practised ball in the Campus Martius, and after the mid-day meal, again, as was his wont, went down into the forum without shoes or tunic and walked about there with his intimates. But Cicero finds fault with him because, when affairs demanded a man like him for office, he would not exert himself nor try to win the people by kindly intercourse with them, but for the future also ceased to make any effort and gave up the contest, although he had re- newed his candidacy for the praetorship. Cato replied, accordingly, that he had lost the praetorship, not because the majority wished it to be so, but because they were constrained or corrupted; whereas, since there had been no foul play in the consular elections, he saw clearly that he had given offence to the people by his manners. These, he said, no man of sense would change to please others, nor, keeping them unchanged, would he again suffer a like disaster.

357

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

LI. Tob 5é Katcapos éuBarovtos ets EON pa-
Xepeas Kat TapaBorws KpaTnoavTos, Deppavois b¢
Kal omrovdav yevopeveoy Soxodyros. éemieaOat Kal
KataPanetv TpldkovTa pupiadas, ol ev AADOL Tov
Sjpov neiovv evaryyéehua Qvev, o 5€ Kdtov éxé-Aevev éxdiSovae TOV Katcapa TOUS Tapavouneiar Kal pay Tperrewy els avToUS pnde avadexer Oar TO ayos eis THY ToAwW. "Ov pay arra Kal Tous Jeois," épn, " Ovmpev, éTt THS Tod otpatnyou pavias Kab aTrovoias THY Siny els TOUS OT aTLe-Tas ov TpéTovolv, ANG peldovras THS TOAEWS." ex TOUTOU Kaicap ema Tohny ypanras amréaTeELrNeV els THY oUyKANTOV as dé aveyvac On Brac dnpias Todas éxouca Kal karnyopias tov Kadtwvos, dvacras exeivos ovX um opyns oudé pudoverkias, GND' Gomep éx Loyia woo Kal TApacKEeyys TQ pev
els €avTov éykAnuatTa owopiars Kal TKO PAT LW Spota kal Tradiav Tia Kal Boporoxtar tod Kaicapos amederEev, axpdpevos dé Tav éxetvou Bov-Aeupatov an apxiis Kal waoay avrod THY budvo.ay, aTEp OUK exOpos, ara TUVOLOTNS Kat Kolv@vos, exkahvyas, Kal bidafas @s ov Teppavay ovdé Kertav maidas, adr' éxeivoy avtov, et sop povoiat, poBytéov éorlv avtois, ob ws éréotpevre xal mapwEvver @S TOUS pidous TOU Kat-capos peTavoein, 6Tt Thy ema toMy avaryvorres év
TH Bourn KaLpOV TO Kdrov Aoyov Sixaiov wal KaTnyoplay arnbav Taper Xov. exupoOn peev oop
ovdév, GAN' eréyOn povov bre Karas é exer d.ddoxov

Kaicapt Boda. tav o€ pirwv aFtovv Tov Kat Tloparniov é& tcou ta btrAa Katabécbat Kal atro-358

CATO THE YOUNGER

LI. After Caesar had fallen upon warlike nations and at great hazards conquered them, and when it was believed that he had attacked the Germans even during a truce! and slain three hundred thousand of them, there was a general demand at Rome that the people should offer sacrifices of good tidings, but Cato urged them to surrender Caesar to those whom he had wronged, and not to turn upon themselves, or allow to fall upon their city, the pollution of his crime. ‘“ However,” said he, “let us also sacrifice to the gods, because they do not turn the punishment for the general’s folly and madness upon his soldiers, but spare the city.” After this, Caesar wrote a letter and sent it to the senate; and when it was read, with its abundant insults and denunciations of Cato, Cato rose to his feet and showed, not in anger or conten- tiousness, but as if from calculation and due prepara- tion, that the accusations against him bore the marks of abuse and scoffing, and were childishness and vulgarity on Caesar’s part. Then, assailing Caesar’s plans from the outset and revealing clearly all his purpose, as if he were his fellow conspirator and partner and not his enemy, he declared that it was not the sons of Germans or Celts whom they must fear, but Caesar himself, if they were in their right minds, and so moved and incited his hearers that the friends of Caesar were sorry that by having the letter read in the senate they had given Cato an opportunity for just arguments and true denunciations. However, nothing was done, but it was merely said that it were well to give Caesar a successor.2, And when Caesar's friends demanded that Pompey also, as well as Caesar, should lay down his arms and give up his provinces,

1 Cf. Caesar, Bell. Gall. iv. 12-15; Plutarch, Caesar, xxii. 2 Cf. the Caesar, xxx.; the Pompey, lviii. 359

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a 4 ” ”
Sodvat ras érapyias 4 unde Katoapa, viv éxeiva
Boov o Kdrowv & mpotreyev avtois fre, Kat
, N ” @ b] hy nO a 5 s BialecOat tov avOpwrov avadavoov non TH duvapet Ypwpevov hv éxxev cEaTratav Kal pevarilov Thy Tod, é&w pev ovdev érrépatve, TOD Sypov
4 9% \
Pérovros aet tov Kaicapa péytotov elvat, tv 5é Ul % 4 \ / N
auyKAntov eiye TweOopéevny Kat poBovpevny tov O7jwov.
LIT. ‘Os 6€ ’Apipevov xareiAnrro Kai Kaioap KaTNyyéAXETO peTa oTpaTLas eXNavvELY err THY 4 ? “ \ 7 > 3 9 aA J lA id
ToAw, evtav0a bn mavrtes én’ éxeivoy apewpwr, ot Jae e / \ b] ’ “

Te TodAol Kal Ilopmnios, ws povoy pev €F apxijs jTpoatcOopevov, WpaTov 5é Pavepa@s mpoerTrovTa thv Kaicapos yvopnv. elmev ovv o Kdrov:
“7AXAG ef ye ols ey mpovAeyov det Kal ouve-4 > / e a ” vo> A a Bovrevov érreicOn Tis bpav, avdpes, oT dv Eva époBetobe viv ovre év évt tas Edzidas elyere.”
Tloumniov S€ eirrovtos pavtTix@tepa pév eipjabas Katou, diric@repa S¢ avt@ tmempayOar, cuve-lA e A ean f. \ 4
Bovrevey o Katov evi Hoprrnio ta mpdaypata
THY TVYKANTOV eyyELpicaL’ TOV yap avTaY elvat
Kal Totely Ta peyadAa Kaka Kal Tavelw. oO ev ® fee A / ” e / LA
ovv Lloprrnios ove Suvayuv Exwv Etotpuny ove ods
, , 4 Cc a 9 ‘ € 4
KarTéXeye ToTe TpoOvpous opwv é&éduTre THY ‘Popny, o 8é Kdtav érecbar cai cupdevyew éyvwxes
eA > /
Tov pev vewtepov viov ets Bpertious virekébeto
\ 4 \ \ U4 9 \
mpos Movvdriov, tov de mpecButepov eiye ovv
A A / A
éauT@. THS dé olxias Kal TOV OvyaTtépwv Knde-

or else that Caesar should not do so either, “ Now,” shouted Cato, “those things are come to pass which I foretold to you, and the man is at last resorting to open compulsion, using the forces which he got by deceiving and cheating the state.” Outside the senate-house, however, Cato could accomplish nothing, since the people wished all along that Caesar should have the chief power; and although Cato had the senate under his influence, it was afraid ot the people.

LILI. But when Ariminum was occupied! and Caesar was reported to be marching against the city with an army, then all eyes were turned upon Cato, both those of the common people and those of Pompey as well; they realised that he alone had from the out- set foreseen, and first openly foretold, the designs of Caesar. Cato therefore said: “ Nay, men, if any of you had heeded what I was ever foretelling and advising, ye would now neither be fearing a single man nor putting your hopes in a single man.” Pompey acknowledged that Cato had spoken more like a pro- phet, while he himself had acted too much like a friend. Cato then advised the senate to put affairs into the hands of Pompey alone; for the same men who caused great evils, he said, should put a stop to them. Pompey, however, who had no forces in readiness, and saw that those which he was then enrolling were without zeal, forsook Rome; and Cato, who had determined to follow him and share his exile, sent his younger son to Munatius in Bruttium for safe keeping, but kept his elder son with himself. And since his household and his daughters needed someone to 1 In 49 Bc. Cf. the Caesar, xxxii. fin.; the Pompey, lx. 1.

povos Seopévwv avédNaBe mad thv Mapkiav
4 b] \ lA aA e \ € 4 Ynpevovoay ETL YoHnpact ToANNois' o yap Opt7-otos OunoKxwy éxeivny amédtTre KANPOVOpOV. Ets 6 57) padtota NoLdopovpmevos 0 Kaicap r@ Katour
4 A / > a gtroTAovTiay mpopéper Kal pucOapviay eri TO
yao. Th yap ev tapaxwpelv Sedpevoy yuvai-KOS TL p71) Oeopevov avis avarayBavey, eb pn
/ 9 9 "~ e / A / € / \ déreap €£ apyins vpeiOn To ydvatov 'Optyci@ xat véeav éxpnoev, iva Tovciay aToAaBn; mpos péev ody TavTa peTpiws Ever TO Kvpumidecoy exetvo' TPOTOV ev OVV TAaPPHT ev appHToat yap
\ \ / l4 9 ¢ ,
THY onv vopitw Setriav, ® Hpaxres:
Gpotov yap éott TO "Hpaxret paraxiav overdivew
Kal KaTnyopeiy atoyponépderay Kdtwvos. et b€ GAN 1 pL) KANOS Témpaxtat TA TWepl TOV yapon, émiskeTrtéov. éyyunodpevos yap thy Mapxiav o Katev, cal tov oixov érmutpéwas éxeivn Kai Tas Ouyatépas, avtos édiwxe Topurijiov.
LITT. Am' éxeivns dé Aéyerat THs juépas pte ceparnpy ett Keipacar unre yévera pte orépavov émOéo Oat, 1évOous Sé Kal xatndelas cat Bapirn-Tos éml Tais cuupopais tHS TwaTpibos év oyApa
VIKOVT@OVY OMOlwWS Kal viKwWLévWY AyYpL TEEUTHS
SiadvrdEar. tote S€ KANpw AaxYoVv BKerLav SiéB8n pev eis Yupaxovoas, muOopevos Sé 'Aciv-viov IloAAiwva Tapa Tay Todepiov apiyOas peta

look after them, he took to wife again Marcia, now a widow with great wealth; for Hortensius, on his death,! had left her his heir. It was with reference to this that Caesar heaped most abuse upon Cato,? charg- ing him with avarice and with trafficking in marriage. “For why,” said Caesar, “should Cato give up his wife if he wanted her, or why, if he did not want her, should he take her back again? Unless it was true that the woman was at the first set as a bait for Hortensius, and lent by Cato when she was young that he might take her back when she was rich.” To these charges, however, the well-known verses of Euripides? apply very well :—

“ First, then, the things not to be named; for in that class

I reckon, Heracles, all cowardice in thee ;”
for to charge Cato with a sordid love of gain is like reproaching Heracles with cowardice. But whether on other grounds, perhaps, the marriage was improper, were matter for investigation. For no sooner had Cato espoused Marcia than he committed to her care his household and his daughters, and set out himself in pursuit of Pompey.

LILI. But from that day, as we are told, Cato neither cut his hair nor trimmed his beard nor put on a gar- land, but maintained the same mien of sorrow, de- jection, and heaviness of spirit in view of the calamities of his country, alike in victory and in defeat, until the end. At the time, however, having had Sicily allotted to him as a province, he crossed over to Sy- racuse, and on learning that Asinius Pollio had come

1 In 50 s.c. Cf. chapter xxv.

2 In his treatise entitled ‘‘ Anti-Cato.” Cf. chapter xi. 4. 3 Hercules Furens, 173 f. (Kirchhoff).

Suvapews ets Meoonvny éreue, Noyov atrattov

2 tap avtov THs StaBdoews. avtatraitnbelis Sé ANoyou Un’ éexeivouv Tis THY Tpaypatwv peTaBorRs, kal Tloprniov axovaas éxXNEXOLTIOTA TaVTENBS
"Iradiay é €v Avppaxio orparomedeveww, TONDY &bn meph Ta, Ocia ™dvOv elvat Kal acadesav, et Top-mniov év ols oyves ovdev ovdé Sixasov em patrev ANTTNTOV ryevopuevov vov, ote THV martpiba Bov-AetTat owlerv Kat THs édevdepias Umepyd ETAL,
3 Tporéehoure TO evTuyelp. "Acivutov pév ovv épn Suvatos elvat YKerias exBanreiv, adrns be pet-

Covos émrepxXopernys Suvdpews ov Bovrer ae THY pijoov EM TONE LOD amroNéoal, xwpetv 5é mpos TO Kpatoby kal cwlecbar Tapatvécas Yupaxovatots eérdevoev.
’Adsxopevos dé pos Toparniov Gael pev elyero
plas yvouns, XpovotprBeiv TOV moheuon, emia Siadvoets Kat pn Bovdopevos ev dry ave xelpe yevopevny THY TOA auTny ud’ aurijs malety Ta 4 érxara, oon pw Staxpietcav. ara 8€ rovTwv adehpa Tloprniov é eTreoe Kal TOUS guvedpous Wn-gicacbat, pnTe TwOALY UarjKoov ‘Pwpaiwy Siapmatew pare avdpa ‘Pepaior ee TapaTazews
d.vaupeiy a nal d0€ay qveyre Kat mpoanyaryeTo ToNNovs TH Toparniov pepios, THY émetKerav avTov Kal TO HMEpoV dom ac apevous.
LIV. "Exreug dels dé eis “Aciav, ws Tois Exel ouvayouat Troia kal oTpaTiay OpEd MOS yevorTo, LepBiriav emnyaryero THY adehpny kat to Aev-KovAnrou Tratdiov é& éxeivns yeyoves. nKorovOnae
364

to Messana with a force from the enemy, he sent and demanded a reason for his coming. But having been asked by Pollio in turn a reason for the con- vulsion in the state, and hearing that Pompey had abandoned Italy altogether, and was encamped at Dyrrhachium, he remarked that there was much inconsistency and obscurity in the divine government, since Pompey had been invincible while his course was neither sound nor just, but now, when he wished to save his country and was fighting in defence of liberty, he had been deserted by his good fortune. As for Asinius, indeed, Cato said he was able to drive him out of Sicily; but since another and a larger force was coming to his aid, he did not wish to ruin the island by involving it in war, and therefore, after advising the Syracusans to seek safety by joining the victorious party, he sailed away.

After he had come to Pompey, he was ever of one mind, namely, to protract the war; for he looked with hope to a settlement of the controversy, and did not wish that the state should be worsted in a struggle and suffer at its own hands the extreme of disaster, in having its fate decided by the sword. Other measures, too, akin to this, he persuaded Pompey and his council to adopt, namely, not to plunder a city that was subject to Rome, and not to put a Roman to death except on the field of battle. This brought to the party of Pompey a good repute, and induced many to join it; they were delighted with his reasonableness and mildness.

LIV. When Cato was dispatched to Asia, that he might help those who were collecting transports and soldiers there, he took with him Servilia his sister and her young child by Lucullus. For Servilia had

365

yap auT@ Xnpevouca, Kal ToAv TOV Els TO aKo-Aacrov auTns §:aBorov adetrev Urodvaa TV bro Kdreove ppoupay Kat mAdvnv Kat Stavray éxovaiws. GAN 6 ye Kaicap ovéé trav én’ éxeivy Brac dnc TOU Karovos épeicaro.
II pos pév odv Tanna, tov Kdtwvos ovdér, @S Goixev, edenOnaav oi Topmrniou oTpaTHyol, ‘Po-dtous dé reOoi Tporaryaryopevos Kal thy YepBe-Atay avToOt nal To Tatdtoy atroNTra@v éemavijnOe pos Topmrnior, Hon melixts Te Aapmpas Kal vauTixis duvapews Tepl avTov ovons. év0a 67) «al pddorTa THS yeuns KaTapapos édo£e yeyovévat Toparnios. Opunce pev yap. eyxXetpioas T® Karove THY TOV vEwY nryepoviav noav 5é TevTa-Kooiwy bev OUK ehaTrous at paxipor, UBupviKa dé xal KATAGKOT IKE Kat adpaxra Tapa rn Oi TaXy b¢ évvoncas 7 dbax Gels bie TOV pikwy
as & éott Kepddatov Kdtevt waons ToONTELAS
enevOepaoat THV marpioa, | Kav yevntar KUpLOS TNALKAUTNS Suvdpews, Hs ay jpépas KaTaryovi-oWVTAL Kaicapa, THS AUTHS exelyns afioces Kat Iloparniov Ta émrda katabecBar Kab Tots YOmors
erea Oa, peTéyva, Kaitrep nen Sierderypevos avrTa, Kat Burov arréderte vavapxov. ov pny noOero ye mapa TodT0 Tis mpoupias Tob Kdtwvos d Gp Brurtepas: avAra Kal AevyeT at Tpos Tia paynv
7 po TOU Auppaxiou avrod TE Tloumniou 7 apop-HOVTOS THY Suvapuy, Kal Tov GrAdwv ExacTov Tye woveov elTrety TL Kal mpotpewacbar KehevovTos, apyas Kal cuwrhH Tovs oTpatiwTtas dKovew, Kd-366

followed Cato, now that she was a widow, and had put an end to much of the evil report about her dissolute conduct! by submitting to Cato’s guardianship and sharing his wanderings and his ways of life of her own accord. But Caesar? did not spare abuse of Cato even on the score of his relations with Servilia.

Now, in other ways, as it would seem, Pompey's commanders in Asia had no need of Cato, and therefore, after persuading Rhodes into allegiance, he left Servilia and her child there, and returned to Pompey, who now had a splendid naval and military force assembled. Here, indeed, and most clearly, Pompey was thought to have made his opinion of Cato mani- fest. For he determined to put the command of his fleet into the hands of Cato, and there were no less than five hundred fighting ships, besides Liburnian craft, look-out ships, and open boats in great numbers. But he soon perceived, or was shown by his friends, that the one chief object of Cato's public services was the liberty of his country, and that if he should be made master of so large a force, the very day of Caesar's defeat would find Cato demanding that Pompey also lay down his arms and obey the laws. Pompey therefore changed his mind, although he had already conferred with Cato about the matter, and appointed Bibulus admiral. Notwithstanding, he did not find that in consequence of this the zeal of Cato was blunted; nay, it is even said that when Pompey himself was trying to incite his forces to a battle before Dyrrhachium, and bidding each of the other commanders to say something to inspire the men, the soldiers listened to them sluggishly and in silence;

1 Cf. chapter xxiv. 3.
2 In his '* Anti-Cato." Cf. chapter xi. 4.

tovos oé pera, mavras Goa Katpov elxe TOV ATO ptrocopias axovew Aeyouévoy wept érevOepias Kal apeTas Kal Oavarov Kal dofns deh ovros auton alas, Kat TENEVTOVTA TpEwavtos Tov Aoyov els Jed avaxdnolv, ws TapovT@y Kai epopevTor TOY vrep THIS TWATpLOOS aryava, THALKODTOV ana-Day mov yever Oar Kal TocobTov Kina THS oTpa-Tuas éerrapOeians aote TavTas EXTLOMY [ET TOUS emt Tov xivdvvor o opufoat Tous mYEHOVAS. Tperapévery 6é Kal Kpatnoavtay adeireTo THY TavTent viknv oO Kaicapos Saipwv, Th Topmrniou xpnod-HEvOS evhafeig Kal amiatia mept TO evTUX NLA.
Tara peev ovv ev Tobs wept Lloumniouv yeypamrrae.
Xatpovtev 5é mdvrwyv Kal peyahuvovT@v 70
epyov O Karo ameddxpve TV Tatpiba, Kal THv
dd€O prov Kal Kaxodaipova pirapxiav adupero, Toous Kal ayaovs op@v troditas UT" adAAnOV TETTWKOTAS.
LV. 'Exei dé Katcapa Si@Kwv Topmnios els
Ococanriav avelevyvve TONG KATANT OY TEpt Avppaxiov Omha Kab Xenwara Kal TopaTa ovy-yer Kat oixela, mavTov améderEev nyewova Kab duraxa Tov Katwva mevrexaibera ameipas ExovTa OT PATLUOT OD bia ior apa Kat poBov TOU av-5pos. HTTO MEV OD mer yap mavToov elvat BeBato-TATOV évopstev, et Se vuKgn, IT) émeTpewetv TapovTa xeyoacar Tois Wpdywacw ws TPONPNT al.

TodNol dé xal tov emupavanv avipav ameppibn-cay éy Avppa i@ peta Kadravos.
Tevopevns O€ THS Kara Papoarov 7} TTS OUTWS éoTn Tois Aoyto pois 0 Katwv ws, et pev TeOvyjKot 368

CATO THE YOUNGER

but that when Cato, after all the other speakers, had rehearsed with genuine emotion all the appropriate sentiments to be drawn from philosophy concerning freedom, virtue, death and fame, and finally passed into an invocation of the gods as eye-witnesses of their struggle in behalf of their country, there was such a shouting and so great a stir among the soldiers thus aroused that all the commanders were full of hope as they hastened to confront the peril. They overcame and routed their enemies, but were robbed of a complete and perfect victory by the good genius of Caesar, which took advantage of Pompey's caution and distrust of his good fortune. These details, how- ever, have been given in the Life of Pompey.! But while all the rest were rejoicing and magnifying their achievement, Cato was weeping for his country, and bewailing the love of power that had brought such misfortune and destruction, as he saw that many brave citizens had fallen by one another's hands.

LV. When Pompey, in pursuit of Caesar, was breaking camp to march into Thessaly, he left behind him at Dyrrhachium a great quantity of arms and stores, and many kindred and friends, and over all these he appointed Cato commander and guardian, with fifteen cohorts of soldiers, because he both trusted and feared him. For in case of defeat, he thought that Cato would be his surest support, but in case of a victory, that he would not, if present, permit him to manage matters as he chose. Many prominent men were also ignored by Pompey and left behind at Dyrrhachium with Cato.
When the defeat at Pharsalus came, Cato resolved that, if Pompey were dead, he would take over to 1 Chapter Ixv. Cf. the Caesar, xxxix.

| 369
VOL. VIII. a B B
PLUTARCRH'S LIVES

Iloprjios, eis "Itadiav tovs avy atT@ Tepaio-owv, autos S€ woppwratw THs Tupavvidos émi
A /
huyn Biwoopevos: et 5é cwlotto, Tavrws éxeiv@
StaduvrdEwy thy Sivauv. obttw 57 diaBadrov eis

Képxvpav, Strov To vavtixoy hy, éEiotato pév Kixépwvt THs apyns @S UTaTiK® oTpaTnyLKos, ov deEapévov b& Kixépwvos, aA atraipovtos es ‘Itariav, idov tov Topmrniov im’ av’Oadeias Kal
, 9 , , 4 ‘\
dpovnpatos axatpov BovANopevoy Kordfev Tous atroTAEovTas, mpwaT@ Sé pédXrAOVTA TO Keixépwvr mpoapépe Tas yeipas, évovbéTnoev idia Kal KaTempduvev, @aote TOV Kixépwva tepicdaat aadas
b] 4 \ A ” ” a
éx Oavdtou Kai Tots adds Adetay Tapacyxeiv.
LVI. Texparpopevos dé Tlopaniov Mdyvov eis Aiyurrov AtBunv StexrreccicOa. nal orevdov
\ >] aA > , \ 4 a "4 \
Mpos exeivoy avnyOn pev Exwv atrayTas, ewer Oé
a) > J \ \ ec / \ >
mpa@tov amtévat Sidovs Kal vrodcitecOas Tovs ov
4 / e , \
TpoOvpws svoTtpatevopevous. arrapevos Sé At-
, / b 4 / A
Bins nal tapatréwv éevtvyyaver LéET@ TO vew/ “a . / > li \ > 3
tép@ trav Iloutrniov traidwy ayyéAXovte THY ém Alyumrov Tov jTaTpos TeNeUTHV. TWaVvTES pEv OUV
/ A > \ \ Jo > ws
Bapéws fveyxav, ovdets S€ pera Toparniov n&tiou Kadtwvos mapovtos ovdé dxovery AdXov Hyepova.
N \ , ? 4 N > / wv
S10 kai Kdtwv aidovpevos kal oixteipwv avdpas
3 \ , lj ” b] \ 4
ayabous xal tictews Sedwxotas teipav émt Eévns épnmous Kal airopous atroNTeiv, UTéaTH TE THY apxnv kat wapndOev eis Kupnynv: édéEavto yap 37°
CATO THE YOUNGER

Italy those who were with him, but would himselt live in exile as far as possible from the tyranny of Caesar ; if, on the contrary, Pompey were alive, he would by all means keep his forces intact for him. Accordingly, having crossed over to Corcyra, where the fleet was, he offered to give up the command to Cicero, who was of consular rank, while he himself had been only a praetor. But Cicero would not accept the command, and set out for Italy. Then Cato, seeing that the younger Pompey! was led by his obstinacy and unseasonable pride into a desire to punish all those who were about to sail away, and was going to lay violent hands on Cicero first of all, admonished him in private and calmed him down, thus manifestly saving Cicero from death and pro- curing immunity for the rest.

LVI. Conjecturing, now, that Pompey the Great would make his escape into Egypt or Libya, and being eager to join him, Cato put to sea with all his com- pany and sailed away, after first giving those who had no eagerness for the expedition leave to depart and remain behind. After reaching Libya, and while sailing along its coast, he fell in with Sextus, the younger son of Pompey, who told him of his father's death in Egypt. All, of course, were deeply dis- tressed, but no one, now that Pompey was gone, would even listen to any other commander while Cato was at hand. For this reason also Cato, who had compassion on men who were brave and had given proof of fidelity, and was ashamed to leave them helpless and destitute in a foreign land, under- took the command, and went along the coast to Cyrene, the people of which received him kindly,

1 Gnaeus Pompey, the elder son of Pompey the Great. Cf. chapter lix. 5.

9 a 9, 7 e 4 4 b ,
Exetvov, OALyaLS Népats EuTrpodOEY aTroK\Eicay-
; / b a) 4 /
3 tes AaBinvov. évtav0a truvOavopevos YxnTriwva \ eh \ e \ oF 7 " 4
tov Iloumniov tev@epov vio 'loBa tov Baciréws averrAnpOat, cat Ovapov "Artiov, bs hv Uo Tlopoh Ul > A ¢€ , 9 \
amniov AtBuns atrodedevypévos Hyeuov, elvat avy
avtois peta Suvdpews, eEwpunoe meth Yetmavos @pa, ToAXovS pev vous Udwp Kopito v 787 pa, pe § VOWP KomLgovTas auvaya- 7F8i
, A) \ 4 b] / 4 \@ A
yov, ToAAnY Sé Aetay ELavvor, Ett SE Appata Kai
\ / 4 bd / OA 4
Tous KaNoupevous VudXous etayopevos, ol Ta TE Siypata Tav Onpiwv i@vTat Tots oTdopacw éd-KovTeS Tov tov, auvTa Te Ta Onpia Katemradovtes
> , \ A" e 4 A fa)
4 apBrvvovet Kail Knrovow. nuépas S€ suvEYas ETTA THS TWopeias yevouevns MpaTos Hynoaro pnte inne pyre bTrolvyio ypnodpevos. édeimver
dé KaOnpevos ad hs juépas THY Kata Pdpoarov HTTaY éyvw* Kal ToUTO TS AOLT@ mpocéOnxe Tév-
Jet, To wn KatakALOnvar wAHY Kabedvdwrv. év dé
AtBvn S:ayaywv rod yepmavos éEnyaye THY oTpa-Tidy' joav Sé pupiwy orjLyov atrodéovTes.
LVII. Ta d€ wpdypata xaxas elye Tois tepl

Lxntiova kat Ovapoy, éx Stapopas Kal ordcews wrrodvopévots nat Oeparrevovat tov “loRav, ovn avextov dvta Baputnte ppovnpatos Kal dyno bia TAOVTOY Kal Suvamy: bs ye Kdtwve mpatov év-Tuyyaver pédrwy péecov One Tov éavTov Opovov
2 Tov YKntiwvos kal Tod Katrwvos. o péevtot Katov

1 Now a partisan of Pompey, anda fugitive from Pharsalus. Cf. the Caesar, xxxiv. 2. 2 Cf. Herodotus, iv. 173.

although a few days before they had closed their gates against Labienus.! There he learned that Scipio, the father-in-law of Pompey, had been well received by Juba the king, and that Attius Varus, who had been appointed governor of Libya by Pompey, was with them at the head of an army. Cato therefore set out thither by land in the winter season, having got together a great number of asses to carry water, and driving along with him many cattle. Besides, he took with him chariots, and the people called Psylli.2 These cure the bites of serpents by sucking out the venom, and charm and deaden the serpents themselves by means of incantations. Though the march lasted for seven days consecutively, Cato led at the head of his force, without using either horse or beast of burden. Moreover, he used to sup ina sitting posture from the day when he learned of the defeat at Pharsalus; yes, this token of sorrow he added to others, and would not lie down except when sleeping. After finishing the winter in Libya, he led forth his army ;3 and it numbered nearly ten thousand.

LVII. But matters were in a bad way with Scipio and Varus. Their dissension and quarrelling led them to pay court to Juba in efforts to win his favour, and the king was unendurable for the severity of his temper and for the arrogance which his wealth and power gave him. When he was going to have an interview with Cato for the first time, he placed his own seat between that of Scipio and that of Cato. Cato, however, when he saw the arrangement, took

* The text of this sentence is uncertain: Sintenis an Bekker assume a lacuna. Libya means here the Koma province of Africa.

e % A N e a 4 9 A 4
ms eldev, Apas Tov éauvTod peTeOnxev eri Oartepa,
, Ul \ , 4 9 ‘
pécov AapBdvev Tov Yentiwva, Kaimep éyOpov
/
évTa Kai tt Kal BiBMov éxdedwxota Bracdnpias
éyov tov Kdrwvos. elta rotro pev eis oddéva
ld
TiPevtat Aoyov, et 5€ DirAdotparoyv év BKedrtta
A ,
pécov elye mepimatav éml tiny idocodgias, 9 a , >] 9 ‘ 97 7 Mv éyxanovot. Tote & ovv cal tov loBay éravoe povovovyl catpdtas temomnpéevov éavtod Tovs Tept Tov {KnTriwva, Kakeivous SunrAdakev. aksovv-Tov S¢ TavTwY apyew avToY, Kal TPwWTaV TOV
N / ‘ Ww b] N
Tept Yxntiwva Kat Ovapov éfiotapévwv xa
Tapaosoovray THY Hyepoviay, ovK epn KaTadAVoELY TOUS vOpOUS Tepl OY T@ KaTadVoVTL TOAELOVOLY, ovdé EavTov avtioTpaTnyov oyra trapovtos avbvu-
,
mwatov twpotatew. avOvTatos yap o Yxntriwv
? , \ , * e \ ”
amredédetxTo, Kal Odpaos elyov ot modXoi bua Tov-4 voua, KaTopOace apyovtos év AtBin UKnTiwvos.
LVIII. "Evel pévtoe trav apynv o Yknriev
\ b \ > / 7 /
TmaparaBov evOus éBovreto ‘loBa yapifopevos
’ , N > a :
Ituxaiouvs Bndov amoxtetvat Kal KataoKkdwat
‘ , e N la a“ 3 e , THY TOALY ws TA Kaicapos dpovotcar, ody treé-pewvey 0 Kdtwv, adrd paptupopevos Kal Kexpayas é A PS / \ @ x “ Xv. $2 aN A vy T@ ouvedpio nal GeoxruvTav pods eEeiAETO THs @LOTHTOS avT@Y Tovs avOpwrous: Kal TA per
>, A , \ ‘N A / ? A
autav Senbévrwr, Ta Sé TOD Lantiwvos aktobvvTos,
? / / \ / € , ”

avedéEato hpoupyoety THY TOL, WS NTE akovaa pntre éxodoa Kaicap: mpocyévoito. Kal yap hp 9 tu , 4
eis AtavTa TO Ywpioy wpértpov Kat SrapKés 374
CATO THE YOUNGER

up his own seat and moved it over to the other side, thus placing Scipio in the middle, although Scipio was an enemy, and had published a book which contained abuse of Cato. And yet there are those who give Cato no credit for this, although they censure him because, in Sicily, as he was walking about with Philostratus, he placed him in the middle, to show his respect for philosophy. But at the time of which I speak, Cato actually put a check upon Juba, who had all but made Scipio and Varus his satraps, and reconciled the two Romans. And though all thought it meet that he should have the command, especially Scipio and Varus, who resigned and tendered to him.the leadership, he refused to break the laws to support which they were waging war with one who broke them, nor, when a pro-consul was present, would he put himself, who was only a propraetor, above him. For Scipio had been made proconsul, and the greater part of the army were emboldened by his name; they thought that they would be successful if a Scipio had command in Africa.

LVIII. When Scipio, however, after assuming the command, straightway desired to gratify Juba by putting all the people of Utica to death and demol- ishing their city, on the ground that it favoured the cause of Caesar, Cato would not suffer it, but by ad- jurations and loud outcries in the council, and by invoking the gods, with difficulty rescued the people from this cruelty; and partly at the request of the people, and partly at the instance of Scipio, he undertook to watch over the city, that it might not, either willingly or unwillingly, attach itself to Caesar. For the place was in every way advantageous for

375

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

" 4 w \ lal e N a 4
Tois éyovow* éTt dé pGAXov UTO TOD Katwvos
9 , \ A > 4 e Ul
éppwaOn. xabyap citov eaonyayey UTrepBddAXovTa
mwAnGe Kal KatecKevate TA Tey TUpyous eTaLpo-

pevos Kal Tappous oxXupas Kal Yapax@pata po THs Twokews Baddopevos. “ItuKaiwv dé tovs pév nBovras év Tois Yapaxopacw érakev oixeiv, Ta
xg 56 > A \ \ es” b lo
StAa tapadovtas avT@, Tos 5é aArXous ev TH
TONEL TUVELYEV, loXUPaS EmLpEdOMEVOS Ln aOL-KeicOar unde Tadcyew Kaxas dO TOV ‘Popatov.
67rAa 5é ToAAa Kal ypnpata Kal citoy éFérepe Tots emi oTpatotédou, Kal Grws elye TOU TrOAguOU
\ 4 a A \ of UA
THY TOA Tasuetov. & dé Tloumnip cvveBovrAeve mpoTepov Kal ToTe Lenriwv, wy paxyecOar Tpos
” \ \ , ? a ,
dvipa Torguotny Kal Sevov, adda TO Ypovm NphoOat Tacay axunv Tupavyls icyver papatvovTt, TOUTwY O LKnTiwv vO avOadeias KaTe-
4 / A 4 / ’ ,
dpovers Kat mote TO Kdtwve derrAtay overdifwv Eyparpev, eb un povovy avTos ayamd Kxabnpevos év mode Kal TEeLyveotv, GANA pNde ETEpoUS ea TIPO
L Terxeouy, a pn épous €& pos Tov Katpov evdapoas xpncGat Tois Aoytopois.
\ aA e
mpos tavta o Kadtwv avréypawev ws Erotpos
> A.» 2A ’ / € , \
éativ ods Hyayev avTos ets AtBunv omditas Kal
imteis traparkaBov eis “Itadiav tmepaobv, Kal Kaicapa peOiotdvat wal tpémev ar’ éxetyvwv mpos auTov. ws b€ Kal tovTwy o YxnTiwv KaTe-yéra, mavu diros hv ayOopevos 6 Kdtov rH
4 a ’ a A
TAPAXWPHTE THS APXHS, @S OTE TH TOAEUO
a \ ,
KANGS TOY ZKNTiwva ypnoomevor, odte, dv Tapa-
/ > / , aA a
NOYHS EVTUXHTN, METPLOV EV TH KpaTeEty TpOS TOUS 374

788

CATO THE YOUNGER

those who held it, and fully capable of defence; and it was still further strengthened by Cato. For he brought in a great abundance of grain, and perfected the walls by building towers and by running formidable trenches and palisades in front of the city. To the men of Utica who were of military age he assigned the palisades for quarters, and made them give up their arms to him; the rest he kept together in the city, taking great pains that they should not be wronged or suffer harm at the hands of the Romans. Moreover, he sent out great quantities of arms and stores and grain to the Romans in their camp, and, in a word, made the city a store-house for the war. But as for the advice which he had given Pompey before and now gave Scipio, namely, not to give battle to a man who was versed in war and of for- midable ability, but to trust to time, which withers away all the vigour which is the strength of tyranny, —this advice Scipio, out of obstinate self-will, des- pised. And once he wrote to Cato reproaching him with cowardice, seeing that he was not only well content to sit quietly in a walled city himself, but would not even allow others to carry out their plans with boldness as opportunity offered. To this Cato wrote in reply that he was ready to take the legion- aries and the horsemen whom he himself had brought to Libya and cross the sea with them to Italy, thus forcing Caesar to change his plan of campaign, and turning him away from Scipio and Varus against himself. When Scipio mocked at this also, it was very clear that Cato was distressed at having declined the command, being convinced that Scipio would neither conduct the war well, nor, in case he should have unexpected good fortune behave with moder-

6 mroAtTas éoopevov. S10 Kal yvoOpunv elyev 6 Karov, N \ V4 4 b)
Kal mTpos Tous cuvynders Edeyev, OV ypnoTas pév bd / ” e “A / > 9 , édmidas éyey vrrép Tov ToAguou Sv arreipiay Kat OpacvTnta TeV Hyepmovwr, et S odv evTYYia TLS yévotto Kat KxatadvOein Kaicap, ov peveiv év ‘Paun, pevEerOar é thy yareTroTNTa Kal TeKpiaV
Tov YKnriwvos, 75n ToTe Sewas Kat brepndavous TOLOUJEVOU KATA TOAAQV ATPELAGS.
7 ‘AmwéBn 5€ padXrov 4 Tpocedoxa: Kai cept
e / a , 9 \ ,
éotrépay Babeiay Ke Tis amo aoTpatoTrédou Tpi-Talos ayyéANwy GTe payns peydAns pos Ode yevouerns SrépOaptrar tavtdtac. Ta wpdypara Kal xpatet Kaicap trav otpatorédov, Yxntriwv 5é «al “loBas adv drjiyos éexredpevyacu, % 5é
GAAn Svvayts aTrodAWDE.
LIX. Tovtrwy mpootrecovrwy 1 pev Tods, olov eixos ev vuKTl Kal TroAéu@, T pos TOLODTOV ayyeApa pxpov Sety Exppwv yevouévn ports éauTny évtos Tevyav Katetxyev, 0 6¢ Kdtov mpoeav tore pév,
@s éexaotos amnvtTa Stabéovar Kal Bowouv, éme-AapBavopevos Kal rrapauvOovpevos adnper tod déous TO TweplOauBes Kal rapayades, ws ov TN-
4, ” / 9 b “a ?

KovTwY tows yeyovoTwv, GANA éml petloyv aipopévav TO AOYO, Kal KaTéotnoe Tov BopuBov-uf \ , A a
2 dua 8 iuépa Tovs tpiaxoatous ols éxphro Bourg, ‘*P l4 \ 4 3 Oe A , / w@patous pev dvras, ev dé ArBin moayuatevope-

ation towards his fellow citizens in the hour of victory. Therefore Cato made up his mind, and said to his intimate friends, that there were no good hopes for the war owing to the inexperience and rashness of the commanders; but that if, then, by any good fortune, Caesar should be overthrown, he himself would not remain in Rome, but would fly from the harshness and cruelty of Scipio, who was even then making extravagant and dreadful threats against many.

But his fears were realized more fully than he ex- pected ; for late one evening there came a messenger from the camp who had been three days on the road, announcing that there had been a great battle at Thapsus, that their cause was utterly ruined, that Caesar was in possession of their camps,! that Scipio and Juba had escaped with a few followers, and that the rest of the force had perished.

LIX. These things coming suddenly upon the city, the people, as was natural at night and in time of war, were almost beside themselves at such tidings, and could with difficulty keep themselves within the walls. But Cato came forth, and for the present, whenever he met people running about and shouting, would lay hold of them one by one, and with en- couraging words would take away the excessive wild- ness and confusion of their fear, saying that perhaps the defeat was not so bad as reported, but had been magnified in the telling, and thus he allayed the tumult ; but as soon as it was day, he issued pro- clamation that the three hundred who made up his senate (they were Romans, and were doing business

1 Scipio had separated from his allies and was encamped apart. Cf. the Caesar, liii.

vous amo éumopias Kat Savero wav, els tepov Atds exnpUuTTE ouleva, Kal 6 boot raphoay amo ouy-KAHTOU, Kal tratdas avTav. étt dé oUAAEYOMEDO D exelvov mpoceNav aboptBas Kal Mera evoTa-Ocias, Gomep oudevos Kawvoo YeyOvOTOS, BuBrtov

éxov év rais Xepoty dveyivwokev. iv 6& avaypapn TOV Tos. TOV Toe {Lov opydvan, STrov, citov, tokwv, omduTov.! érrel dé ouvnrdor, apEdpevos amo TOV TpLaxog tov Kal behav 7r0-Nov Etratvoy THS mpodupias avuTav Kal THis Tia TeEws, iv éredetEavto Kal Xpnwace Kal coMaTt Kal BovXais Ope WOTaT ou rYyevOpmevot, mapexdret pn SiarvOhvat Tais édtmiow éxacTov avuT@ puyny iSiav 7 i) amodpaciv Twa moptlopevor. dv yap év TAUT@ CUPLPEVOOL, KAL TONEMOVYTMY ATTOV KaTA-gpovnoav Kaicapa, nai deicerOar parrov Se0-peveov. BovarevecOar & éxéXevev avrous bre QuTaV, ovdérepa HEprpopevos, GX’ et pev Tpé-TOWTO TH YVOuN TpOS THY TUXNY, THS avaryKns
Ono dpevos THY peraBorrv- loTapevov 5é mpos Ta
Seva Kat Sexopevov Tov UTrép THS edevOepias
KivOuvov, OvK émauves omevos Hovon, adda Kal Javpacopevos THY aperqy, Kat mapeEwv éau Tov dpxovra Kal cuvarywvilopevor, aX pt ov THV éaxd-Thy TUXNY THs TAT PLOOS eFeheyEwow, iy OUK
"I tdKeny ovee "Adpovpntov ovcap, adda, ‘Pouny, TONNGKLS EK YadEeTrWTépwV oparparev t UTO pmeryé-Jous avapéped Ban. TONY &° aUTOLS ELS owTN-piav nal aoddreav broxepévwv, Kal peryiotov
mpos avopa trodreuetvy et woAAa Tos Katpots 1 $xdtra@v bracketed by Bekker.

in Libya as merchants and money-lenders) should assemble in the temple of Jupiter, as well as all the senators from Rome who were present, with their children. And while they were still coming together, he advanced quietly and with a composed counte- nance, and as if nothing unusual had happened, with a book in his hands from which he was reading. This was a register of his military engines, arms, grain, and men-at-arms. After they had come together, begin- ning with the three hundred and commending at great length their zeal and fidelity, which they had manifested by making themselves most helpful with their means and persons and advice, he exhorted them not to ruin their good prospects by trying to procure for themselves severally some separate flight or escape. For if they should hold together, he said, Caesar would despise them less as foes, and show them more mercy as suppliants. Moreover, he urged them to deliberate upon their future course, declaring that he would have no fault to find with either de- cision which they might make. If they should turn their allegiance to the fortunate side, he would attribute their change to necessity; but if they should face the threatening evil and accept danger in defence of liberty, he would not only praise them, but would admire their valour and make himself their leader and fellow combatant, until they had fully tested the ultimate fortunes of their country; and this country was not Utica, nor Adrumetum, but Rome, and had many times by her greatness re- covered from more grievous disasters. Besides, he said, many things favoured their salvation and secur- ity, and chiefly the fact that they were waging war against a man who was drawn in many opposing 381

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

avberxopevov, Tnpias TE pos Topmniov ade-TTWONS TOV véor, auTns TE THS 'Popns ovTrw oe anQJeav Tavtdtact Sedeyperns TOV xarsvor, Garr' avakiorabovans Kat ouvelaviaTaperns pos Taoav peta Bory, ovde TOV xivduvov elvat deux téov, adr exeuv biddoKkarov TOV TONE [Lov apedotyta
Tis Wuxijs em tals peyiorass adixiats, ovx WoTEp cauTois eis TOV eUTUXETTATOV Biov Kat-opPovery 7) mraiovot els Tov evKAEéoTATOV Gdvarov THY adnrornta Tou TONE MOU TeNEUTaY.
ov pny GD' €XELVOUS ye dety épn Bovrever Oar.

Kal éavTous, TUVEVXOMEVOS avri THS «awpoabev apeTis Kat mpoOuuias avtois ta Sokavta ouve-veyKetv.
LX. To.adta Tov Karwvos el TTOVTOS, 70 av pep Oi Kal Tots ovyors aryO evo Tpos TO Oappeiv, ot
dé amdelotoe mpos TO abeés Kal yevvaiov avtov Kat pir.dv6 pwr ov ddiryou deity exAaGopevor TOV Ta.povTor, @S {ovo évTa, TOUTOV anTTnTOV Ye pova Kal TAaoNS KpeiTrova TUXNS, €d€0vTO xen Oat Kal Topacty aura Kal Xenpace Kat 7r-Rois, Gmrws avTos EyvwKxe: KpEtTTOV yap éxElv@ mecOomevous aToQavetv 1 awlecbat mpodévras aperhy TOTAUTHD.
Eimovros 5é TLvOS QS xpn Wndicacbat Sovhous edevOepiar, Kal TOV TET TOV cwvETraivEed dvTOV, ovK épn TovTO ToLnoew) Karov: ov yap elvat YO pt pov ovee Sixacon, QAUT@VY "EVTOL TOV Sea mora adévTov TOUS ép Wrst déverOau. YEVvOLEVOOV be TOAN@Y UTOTXETEDY Kedevoas dtroypabecOat Tov BovAdpevov amnAAdTTETO. Kal peTa puLKpOV 382

789

CATO THE YOUNGER

directions by the exigencies of the times. For Spain had gone over to the younger Pompey, and Rome herself had not yet altogether accepted the bit to which she was so unaccustomed, but was im- patient of her lot and ready to rise up unitedly at any change in the situation. Nor, he assured them, was danger a thing to be shunned, but they must learn a lesson from their enemy, who spared not his life in perpetrating the greatest wrongs, while in their own case, so different from his, the uncertainties of war would end in a most happy life, if they were successful, or in a most glorious death, if they failed. However, it was for them to deliberate by themselves, he said, and in return for their former bravery and zeal he joined them in praying that what they decided might be for their advantage.

LX. When Cato had thus spoken, there were some whom his words merely restored to confidence, but the majority, in view of his fearlessness, nobility, and generosity, almost forgot their present troubles in the conviction that he alone was an invincible leader and superior to every fortune, and they begged him to use their lives and property and arms as he himself judged best; for it was better to die as his willing followers than to save their lives by betraying such virtue as his. |
And now someone proposed that they should pass a vote giving freedom to the slaves, and the majority approved ; but Cato said he would not do this, since it was not lawful or right ; if, however, the masters ot their own accord gave up their slaves, those slaves who were of military age should be accepted. Many promises to do this were made, and after ordering a list to be made of all who were willing, Cato with-

HKev avT@ ypaupara Tapa "loBa Kal Lantriavos,
'loBa pev év Gpee KEK PUJLLEVOU per' dAiywv épw-TOVTOS 6 Tt mparrey déd0xtat T@ Kdtove Kal yap Trepimevety 'Trunny éxAuTrovTa Kal TroALopKou-pevep pera oTpatlas emtBonOnaev, Lenmiwvos dé pos axpq Tet vavhoxoivTos ov mroppw THs "ITv-KNS emt Tois avrois Kapadoxobrtos.
LXI. "Edofev obv TO Karove TOUS Pap paro-gopous emia xelv, adxpt ob BeBaroon Ta mapa TOV
| T pLaxoa tov. ot pev yap atro Bovrijs hoa 7 po-
Oupot, Kal TOUS oiKéTas ev Us adtevres éXevOépous amAlovy Tav Sé TpLaKociw?, ate on TOTLKOY
kal SaveraTixay avOparrav Kat TO Tela TOV ev Tots OLKETALS THS ovolas exovTon, ov TOAVY OL Kdtwvos oyou Xpovov éupetvavres eFeppunoar:
xabatrep yap TOV ToOMATOY Ta pava dexerar padios Thv Oeppotnta Kat mad pinot, Tod
mupos array dévros puxovpeva, Tapa Ano ios

ExeLvOUS O peV Kartov Opwpevos dvelwm vpet Kat
Sie Dépparver, avtous dé éavTois Aovyou didovras
0 Kaicapos hoBos éfexpovoe THS ™ pos Kdtova Kal TO Karov aidods. “ Tives yap, éhacar, “ OvTeEs, rive TO TpoaTacaopevov Tmovety anaftovpeD ; ouxt Kaioap bev ovTos els dv » ‘Pwpatov araca TE plea TNKEV loys ; nav sé Lucy Lov
ovdels ovde Ilopmrnios ovde Kdrov. arre év ols Katpois TAVTES avOpwrrot TaTELvOTEpa TOV T poo NKOVT OV bua poBov ppovotow, év TOUTOLS NMELS UTeppaxobyTes THs “Pwyaiwy édevOepias trodepoduev é& “Irvens & Kdrtov pera Tlopaniou Mayvou devywv idetro THs ‘Iradias; Kat dov-384

drew. After a little while there came to him letters from Juba and Scipio. Juba, who was hidden ona mountain with a few men, asked what Cato had de- cided to do; for if he abandoned Utica, Juba would wait for him, and if he underwent a siege, Juba would come to his aid with an army. Scipio, who was stationed with his fleet off a certain headland not far from Utica, awaited Cato’s decision in the same way. | LXI. Accordingly, Cato decided to detain the bearers of the letters until he felt sure of the at- titude of the three hundred. For the Romans of senatorial rank were eager in his cause, and after promptly manumitting their slaves, were arming them; but as for the three hundred, since they were men engaged in navigation and money-lending and had the greater part of their property in slaves, the words of Cato did not long abide in their minds, but lapsed away. For just as porous bodies readily re- ceive heat and as readily yield it up again and grow cold when the fire is removed, in like manner these men, when they saw Cato, were filled with warmth and kindled into flame ; but when they came to think matters over by themselves, their fear of Caesar drove away their regard for Cato and for honour. ‘“ Who, pray, are we,” they said, “and who is he whose commands we are refusing to obey? Is he not Caesar, upon whom the whole power of Rome has devolved ? And not one of us is a Scipio, or a Pompey, or a Cato. But at a time when all men are led by fear to think more humbly than they ought to think, at sucha time shall we fight in defence of the liberty of Rome, and wage war in Utica against a man before whom Cato, with Pompey the Great, fled and gave up Italy? And 385

a
a / > io
Nous eAevOepodpev xata Kaicapos, ols avrois
A 6) >]

éXevOepias, daov av éxeivos OérAn, méTETTLV ; ANN x w“ lA
Ere vov, @ poxOnpol, yvovTes EavTo’s TapalTo-
le) A - pea Tov Kpatodvta kal wéprypwopev tors den-oOjevous.
” e , “A : pea 4
Taira of peTpidTaToL THY TpLaKociwy Tapn-
e a a) “A
your: ot 6€ TWAElaoTOL TOs GUYKANTLKOIS E7rE-4 e bd / 4 e t
BovxXevorv, ws, EL ToVTOUVS TVANaBoLEV, LNaATOpMEVOL
THY Tpos avToUs opynv Tod Kaicapos.
LXII. ‘O 6€ Karawv trovodyv tiv petaBorAnv
OUK HAEYYE, TH pevTo. Vantiwv. cal t@ “loBa Ul 7 YX, : / ? B on 4 > ? ee ypawras améyecGar ths ‘ItTUKns amiotia TOV Tptaxooiwy éEérepre TOUS ypaupatopopouvs. TaY 5é immévv ot Ssaghuyovtes ard THs wayns, api wos ovuK evKatadppovntos, mpoceddoartes TH ‘ItvKY méumovat pos Tov Kdtwva tpeis avdpas ov thy QUTHY Youn amo TavTwY ExoVTAaS. ob Mev yap anvévat mpos “loBav, ot dé T@ Kdtwvt tpocyopetv @punvto, Tovs dé Kai déos elyev ets “ItuKnv Taptévat. tavta o Kadtwy axovoas Tots peév
, > / , Ul € ,
Tplakootows €KéXevoe Trpocexyey Mapxov “Pov- 790
Bptov, atpéua tas atroypadas Tov éXevOepovvTav
,
Sexouevoyv Kat m1 mpooBialopevov, avtos Sé Tovs
ouykAntixous avaraBav mponrev Ew ths “Itv-Kns, Kal Tols immdpyois évétruxe Seopevos fi / e 4 ” b) N A ,
apoécbar ‘Pwpaiwy avdpas amo BovAjs Ttocov-
\ 3 ‘ e , N > \ 4
tous unde loBav éXéc8at otpatnyov avti Kata-> N 4 fo) N 4 /
vos, dAAa owlerbat Kown Kat owlev, TapedOov-Tas els TOALY OUTE KATA KpaTOS arAwWoLpoV Ets 386 shall we give our slaves freedom in opposition to Caesar, we who ourselves have only as much freedom as he may wish to give us? Nay, before it is too late, poor wretches, let us know ourselves, crave the conqueror's grace, and send men to entreat him."

This was the course which the more moderate of the three hundred advised ; but, the majority of them were laying a plot against the men of senatorial rank, in the hope that by seizing these they might mitigate Caesar's wrath against themselves.

LXII. Cato suspected their change of heart, but would not tax them with it. However, he wrote to Scipio and Juba advising them to keep away from Utica, because the three hundred were not to be trusted, and sent away the letter-bearers. And now the horsemen who had escaped from the battle, in numbers quite considerable, rode up to Utica and sent three of their number to Cato. These men, how- ever, did not bring the same proposition from the whole body. For one party among them was bent on going off to Juba, another wanted to join Cato, while a third was prevented by fear from entering Utica. Onhearing their views, Cato ordered Marcus Rubrius to attend to the three hundred ; he was to accept quietly the lists of those who gave freedom to their slaves, and was to use no compulsion. But Cato himself took the men of senatorial rank and went forth outside of Utica. Here he conferred with the leaders of the horsemen, entreating them not to abandon so great a number of Roman senators, and not to choose Juba as their commander instead of Cato, but to save others as well as save themselves by coming into a city which could not be taken by storm, eTn TE TapToNa aitov Kat THY aXAnv TapaoKEUnV éxougay. TadTa bé Kal TOV TUYKANTLKOY deomevav Kal Saxpvovrov oi pev larmrapxoe Suede-yovtTo Tos inmevat, o 6€ Katov éri Xo paros

TIVOS Kabicas METAR TOV GUYKANTLKOVY avéepErveE
TAS arroxpic ets.
LXIII. "Ev dé rovr@ maphy o "PovBptos ou
opyn KATHYOPAY TOV TplaKooiov dxog piay TOX-Anv Kal BopuBor, WS aia rapeveov Kat dvata-parrovTay THv TOL. eg' ols ot ev GdGe TavraTacw aTroyVvorTEs EAUTOV eis baxpva Kal aduppous éferecor, 0 e Karo éxeivous te Oapouvey errerparo Kal 7 pos TOUS TpLaKog tous Emenev avapeivat Kedeveor. ot 6€ amo TOV immévwy HKOV ov méTpLa TpooTarTovTes' épacay yap ovre "loBa Seta Bat praGodoroivros ovTE Kaicapa poBeic bart Katovos avtév apxortos, Itucatous d¢, Pointe avOpwr ous evperaBonors, ouyxabeipyvuc bat Setvov elvau: Kal yap é viv atpepovdow, STav Kaiocap émin, ocvverrtOnoecOat xat mpodacerv.

elmep ovv Seitat TLs aUT@Y TULTONELOVYTMOV Kal
cuutapovrav, éxBarwv atavtas “ItyKxaiouvs 7
S:apGeipas, ottws eis Tod Kabapay TOhepov Kat BapBdpov Kaneito. TavTa o Karey arypta pev devas nryetto cal BapBapa, Tpaas 5é drrexpivaro Bovrevoec Oat pera, TOY Tptaxocion.
Kat mapenfav aibes eis THY TWOALY éveToryxave
Tois avdpdow ouKére oKinpers ode Tapayaryas
TAT TOUEVOLS Om’ aidods Tos autov, avtikpus 5é
Yareraivovory et tes avtovs Bialorro Tone perv Kaioape un dvvapévous undé Bovropévous. eveot 388 and had grain-and other requisite provision for very many years. In these entreaties the senators also joined, and with tears ; whereupon the leaders of the horsemen discussed the matter with the horsemen, while Cato sat down on a mound with the senators _ and awaited the answers.

LXIIL. At this juncture Rubrius came up, wrathfully denouncing the three hundred for great disorder and tumult, inasmuch as they were falling away and throwing the city into confusion. Thereupon the other Romans altogether despaired of their case and burst into tears and lamentations; but Cato tried to encourage them, and sent to the three hundred bidding them await his coming. And now the spokesmen of the horsemen came with immoderate demands. They said they neither wanted Juba for a_pay- master, nor feared Caesar if Cato were their leader, but that to be shut up with the people of Utica, a fickle Phoenician folk, was a fearful thing; for even though they were quiet now, whenever Caesar came up against them they would play the traitor and aid him in his attacks. If, therefore, any one wanted their aid in war and their presence, he must first drive out or destroy all the people of Utica, and then invite the horsemen into a city that was free from Barbarians and enemies. This proposal Cato regarded as ex- cessively barbarous and cruel, but he returned a mild answer, saying that he would advise with the three hundred.

So he went back into the city, where he found the men no longer manufacturing pretexts or evasions out of regard for him, but downright angry that any one should try to force them to war with Caesar when they were neither able nor willing. And some of

389

dé cal TrapepBeyyovto Tept TOV TVYKANTLKDY, @S xabextéov év Th wonet Kaicapos 1 pod LovTos.
andra TOUTO pev! ws obK axovoas 0 Katov map-AKe Kal yap. ay UToKxwporepos® OS 5é TUS avT@ mpoceNOaov arrnyyerre TOUS Lev irarets amvevat, hoBnOeis un Tavratacw ot TpLaxdctot Kara, TOV TUYKANTUROY drrovonOeatv, éBadile pera tov pidov efavacras: Kal Jearduevos non T™ poKexapnkoras i irmrov AaBov édiwKe pds avrous. ot 6é

iOovTes aopevot Tpogehavvovra. | Kat ebéfavro Kal mapexddovy owvecOar per' auTav. Tote Kal oa-Kpioas Tov Karova hac t vmép TOV TUYKANTLKOY
Seopevov Kal TpoTeivovTa Tas xeipas, éviav 6é Kat
TOUS birtrous dvaatpépovTa Kat TOV Orrhov avtt-AapBavopevov, EX pt ov KaTepydaaro THY yoov nuépav éxetyny em tpelvavTas aagary toils av-Space puyny Tapacxeiv.
LXIV. Os ovv EXOV avTOUS aixero wat TOUS pev ert tas mvAas KaTéaTyGE, Tots be THY axpav ated mapédwxer, éSevmav ot TpLaKoatot Tr)
veny Sact THS petaBorijs- Kal Tpos Tov Kdtova

TEUTOVTES édéovTo mdvtas adixéodar 7 pos au-Tous. ob b€ auyKAnTLKOL meptxvbevres OUK Elwv, ovoé épacay mponcea Bar TOV wndewova Kal oo-Tijpa Tots amictou Kal Tposorass. capeartarn
yap, @S EouKev, aiaOnots TOTE Tapéorn Kat m 000s Kat Oaijpa. Tis ToD Kateavos aperiis Tact Opa
AOS Tos ev TH "ItvKy ryevouevors, @s ovdéy apa
KiBdnrov | obdé amatnhov €"eu"tKTO TOs TpatTopévors UT' avTov.
mene 5é avOpwrros éavtov éyvaxwas avereiv

1 nev bracketed by Coraés and Bekker.

39°

CATO THE YOUNGER

them actually muttered that the men of senatorial rank ought to be detained in the city while Caesar was approaching. But this Cato let pass, as though he had not heard it (and indeed he was somewhat deaf) ; when, however, men came to him with tidings that the horsemen were going away, he was afraid that the three hundred might become altogether desperate in their hostility to the senators, and there- fore rose up and set out on foot with his friends ; and when he perceived that the horsemen had already gone on, he took a horse and hastened after them. The horsemen were glad when they saw him riding up, and greeted him, and exhorted him to save him- self with them. Then, it is said, Cato actually burst 'into tears as he begged with outstretched hands in behalf of the senators, even trying to turn back the horses of some of the horsemen and laying hold of their arms, until he prevailed upon them to remain there that day at least, and to make the flight of the senators safe.

LXIV. Accordingly, when he came to the city with them, stationed some of them at the gates, and committed the citadel to others to guard, the three hundred were afraid they might be punished for their change of allegiance, and sending to Cato they begged him by all means to come to them. But the senators crowded about him and would not let him go, de- claring that they would not give up their saviour and guardian to treacherous and faithless men. For by that time all the inhabitants of Utica alike most clearly perceived and fondly admired the virtuous qualities of Cato, convinced that nothing deceitful-or spurious entered into what he did.

But for a long time the man had determined to detvous movous em over Kal ppovTioas Kat adivas elev vrép dAAwY, OTS els aapanres KATAOTHOAS dmavras amarrd£arto Tov chy. ov yap iy adn-Ros 7) Wpos TOV Odvarov avTou popd, Kaimep ov

pda Kovtos. barijKovaev OUY TOTE TOES Tplaxoatols TrapapvOno dpevos TOUS TUYKANTLKOUS® Kab paves
KE TTPOS avTovs Xap Eve opohoyodvras Kat
Seopevous Ta pev ara pio Gas Kal TLOTEVELY, Eb dé Katwves ovK eloly ov é TO Katwvos Ppovnpa Xwpovory, olKn TEL pel THY aa Géverav aura: eyveo-KOTES 5 ov Kaicapos Seta bau Kal TEMTELY TOS auTov, Umrép exelvou padtoTa Kab TPMTOV TOLnoe-Oat dénow* é b¢ pn metOouev, ovd avrois 6160-peevnv béfeo Oar THY xapw, GX' aypt av éurrvéwot TOAEMNTELY UTEP éxeivou.
IIpés tadra o Karov emarveras THY edvoray
Epn Xphvar THS aut av cwTnpias &veka Téurewv Kata TAX OS, brép autou 6é€ uN deta Par: KeKpatnpevov yap elvat denow Kat adiKovvToV Tapat-THOW" avr os b¢ ov povoy aNTTNTOS yeyovevar Tapa Tava TOV Biov, GANA Kat vinay éf' Gcov
éBovreTo Kal Kpa.teiv Kaicapos Tos KAAOIS Kat Sixators® éxeivov & elvat Tov éahwxora. Kai vevi-Knuévov' & yap jpveiro 7 parTwv KaTa THS Ta-Tpioos TaXat, viv ebnréyxIac Kat mepwpaa bat.
LXV. Totairta diarex Geis TOUS Tplaxog tots amrnAdatreTo® Kat mud opevos Kaioapa Twacav

dryovta THY orpaTiay on Kad odov elvat, * Tla-mal, elev, ‘ ‘as én’ avdpas as éxetvos.” «al TPATTopEVvos Tpos TOUS TUYKANTLKOUS éxéXeve 7) pérrELY, GAN Ews Trapapévovoty of immets owte-392

791

CATO THE YOUNGER

destroy himself, and he was undergoing dreadful toils and suffering anxiety and pain in behalf of others, that he might put them all in the way of safety be- fore he took his leave of life. Indeed, there was no secret about his resolution to die, although he said nothing about it. Accordingly, after comforting the senators, he obeyed the call of the three hundred. He came alone to them, and they thanked him, and _ begged him in all other ways to trust and make use of them, but if they were not Catos and could not carry the large thoughts of Cato, to have pity on their weakness; and now that they had determined to send to Caesar and pray for his mercy, for Cato first of all they would make their prayers; and if they could not prevail with Caesar, they would not accept the grace which he might offer to them, but as long as they had breath would fight for Cato.

In reply to this, atter praising their good will, Cato said that to secure their own safety they ought to send to Caesar with all speed, but they must make no prayer for him; prayer belonged to the conquered, and the craving of grace to those who had done wrong; but for his part he had not only been unvan- quished all his life, but was actually a victor now as far as he chose to be, and a conqueror of Caesar in all. that was honourable and just ; Caesar was the one who was vanquished and taken ; for the hostile acts against his country which he had long denied, were now detected and proven.

LXV. After this discourse to the three hundred, he withdrew ; and on learning that Caesar with all his army was already on the march, “Aha!” he said, “he thinks we are men!’’ Then turning to the senators he bade them not delay, but save themselves

393

PLUTARCH’S LIVES |

@

Oat. Kal Tas pev adXas am éxeuoe Ovpas, pod dé TH 7 pos Odrvacoav depovan’ Ta Te TOA Tois vg’ éauTov Sréverpe kat Tafews mre eA ELTO, Tavov Tas adixias kai diadvwv Tovs DoptBous, kal TOUS aropas éXovras epodialonv. éret 56€ Madpxos
"‘OxrdBuos a ayov duo Taypara TANaiov KATEOT pO ToTredeuce at Te TTOV nEtou TOV Kdtova Tepe

apis Svopicacbar 7 POs avrov, exelvp bev ov0év amex pivato, T pos b€ TOUS pidous elev “ Kiva Javpuafopev draws dm ohwre Ta mpayyara, THY dirapyiay opavres mpiy év avT@ T@ OrCOp BeBnroat jrapapévovaay;”
"Ey tovr@ 6 TOUS vameis dKxovaas amvovTas
78n hépew Kal dyev Ta TOV ‘Irvcatwv Oamep
Aagupa, Sponm guvéererve Tpos autos Kal Tois
TPWTOLS EVTU av adypeito, Tov dé dAXNwv Exa-TOS épbave pimrov Kal KaTarbeuevos, TAVTES
b¢ tr aloyuvns LOTT Kat KATO Brérovtes amnecav. o bé Karov ets THY TON TOUS ‘Ttv- 7
Katovs cuvayayov éseito Tept THY TpLaKocion,
Th) rapofivar Kaicapa war avTav, adda Kal Koln THY owTNpiay _mparretv GNF OLS. eira, modu T PATTOpLEVOS ™ pos THY Oadnratrav é emeaKOTEL TOUS euPaivovras, Kal TOV pirov Kal Eeveov 6 cous emretoev notmatero Kal T pourreprre. TOV dé -viov OUK €7rELoeE NaBetv Toiov, ovde ETO dSety amor pé-TEL TEplex opEevor Tob Tat os. Ww 5é TUS 2Ta-TUAALOS, aVNP TH ev HAtKLa véos, iayupos bé TH
1 pepovon after this word one Paris MS. (C) has éxpijiro wpos EEodov (he used as an exit). Bekker adopts what other editors regard as a gloss, adding also cai; Sintenis? assumes a lacuna.

while the horsemen were still there. He also closed the other gates of the city, and stationing himself at the one leading to the sea, he assigned transports to those under his command, and tried to keep things in order, stopping deeds of wrong, quelling tumults, and supplying stores to those who were destitute. And when Marcus Octavius with two legions encamped near by and sent to Cato demanding that he come to terms with him about the command in the province, Cato would make no reply to him, but said to his friends: “Can we then wonder that our cause is lost, when we see that the love of command abides with us though we are standing on the brink of destruction ?”’

At this juncture, hearing that the horsemen, as they went away, were already plundering the people of Utica as though their property was booty, he ran to them as fast as he could; from ‘the first whom he met

he took away their plunder, but the rest, every man of them, made haste to lay down or throw away what they had, and all felt so ashamed that they went off in silence and with downcast looks. Then Cato, after calling the people of Utica together into the city, begged them not to embitter Caesar against the three hundred, but to unite with one another in securing safety for all. Next, he betook himself again to the sea and superintended the embarcation there, embracing and escorting on their way all the friends and acquaint- ances whom he could persuade to go. His son, how- ever, he could not persuade to take ship, nor did he think it his duty to try to turn the young man from his purpose of clinging to his father. But there was one Statyllius, a man who was young in years, but minded yvoun Bouvdopevos civar cat tov Katwvos atropi-5 petoOar tHhv amdQeav. tovtov nkiov wei Kai yap hv Katadhavns picoxaicap: ws dé ovK nOerev, "AtrorAdwvidn Te LUrwik@e Kai Anpn-

, a "A e ,
tpim te Ilepererarntin@ mpocBréas o Kdrtov,
"Tuétepov, eltev, "épyov oidodvTa TovTov pardkat Kal Katapticat mpos TO cupdépov." avros Sé€ Tous NouTrods cuvexTeuTroY Kal ypnpatitwrv tots Seopévors thy Te vinta SuétpiBe Trepi tadTa Kal THs emriovons Huépas TO TrEloTOY Epos.
LXVI. 'Emet d€ Aevxios Kaicap, otxetos pév
ay Kaicapos éxeivov, péddwv 6 mpea Reve vrrép TOY Tptaxociwy, Tapexddet Tov Kdtwva doyov auT@ avvuTrobécOar TiOavov @ XpHoEeTat wept
exeivwv, "umép cov pév yap avTov Kai yetpav €uol Kadov arpacOat Kxat yovace mpoomeceiv Kaicapos," ov« efa tabta trovety 0 Kadtwv avtov. 792 2 "'Kuot yap," elev, "ei cwleo8ar yapite Kai-aapos éBovArcuny, ait@ Badsoréov Av impos éxet-vov sovov. ov BovArAopar S€ T® TUpavYm YapLY éxew omép av Tapavopei. Tapavopel dé cwtov OS KUpLOS OY AUTO Searoter oudey mT poatixev.
61rwsS pévTOL TapaLTnoN TOvS TPLaKoGiovs KOLA
3 oxoma@pev, ef BovrAE." yevopuevos Sé pos TOUT@ pera ToD Aevxiou Tov viov auT@ cuvérTyce Kat Tous éTaipous dmiovtTt: Kal mpoTéuas éxeivov cal deEwwodpevos eravijdOev oixade, Kai Tov viov Kal tovs dhirous cuvayayov addda TE TOANA OLe-AEYOn Kal TorLTELas atrelrrev GrpacBat TH pelpa-cio: To pev yap akiws Kdtwvos odxéte TA tpd-

-

to be strong in purpose and to imitate Cato’s calmness. This man Cato insisted should take ship; for he was a notorious hater of Caesar. But when Statyllius would not consent, Cato turned his eyes upon Apollon- ides the Stoic and Demetrius the Peripatetic, saying : “It is your task to reduce this man’s swollen pride and restore him to conformity with his best interests.”’ He himself, however, continued to assist the rest in getting off, and to supply the needy with ways and means, and was thus engaged all through the night and the greater part of the following day.

LXVI. Lucius Caesar, a kinsman of the great Caesar, was about to go on an embassy to him in behalf of the three hundred, and requested Cato to suggest to him a convincing speech which he might employ in the case ; “ for,” said he, .“ in thine own behalf it were well for me to fall down at Caesar's knees and clasp his hands.” But Cato would not suffer him to do this. “ For if,” said he, “I were willing to be saved by grace of Caesar, I ought to go to him in person and see him alone ; but 1 am unwilling to be under obligations to the tyrant for his illegal acts. And he acts illegally in saving, as if their master, those over whom he has no right at all to be the lord. However, if it is thy wish, let us consider jointly how thou mayest obtain mercy for the three hundred.”’ After his conference with Lucius on this matter, he presented his son and his companions to him as he was going away ; and after escorting him on his way and bidding him farewell, he came back home, called together his son and his friends, and discoursed with them on many subjects. In particular, he forbade the young man to engage in political matters ; for to do so worthily of a Cato was no longer possible, as yara befac0an, TO be GANS aiox pov éivar. Kat Tept éomrépay Hn Tpémerat mpos TO Badavetov.

Ev 5é TO Aover Oat TOV YratvArov pna Geis Kal peya $eryEdpevos, - "BEéreupas,” elev, “@ ‘AroA@vidn, TOV 2 TaTUANOV aro TOU ppovn-patos éxelvou cabehav; kal TET ANEUKEV 0 avnp
pyndé aomacapevos NAS 5 ” «Tlo0ev;” eimev o “Atrohrwvidys: “ Kaitou TOAAG SuehExOnpev adAG dynos éoTt Kal aT peTTOS, Kab péveuv gnot Kat mparrew & Te ay ov mparrys. - _T pos TavTa pace TOV Kdrova pediacat kal eirety: “”’AXXA TOTO bev avtixa pavetrat.”
LXVIT. Aovo dpevos bé pera modnav edeirrver xaOnpevos, do mep el@Oer peta THY payne: ou
yap KaTexMan may xabevdorv ouvedeimvouy dé

TaVTES oi éraipot Kal TOV Truxaiwv ot apXovres.
Kal pera To Setmrvov o TOTOS eoxe povoav TONY Kat Xapw, adov én adXows Loyov piroc opar KUKNOUYTOD, aypt ov mepiirbev a) _Snrnots Ets Taira 8) Ta mapdsoka Kadovpeva TOV Yrwixor,
TO Hovov elvat TOV ayabov édevepor, Sovdous de TOUS pavrous avavras. évrad0a 5%, as eiKos, avttBavtos Tob Ileperrarntixod, opodpos éusreca@y
o Kdrov Kal TOVOY mpoaGels Kal TpaXUTnTa hovns arrérewe Toppwtata TOV ROYor, ary Ove Gavpacte XPNT apevos, woTe pndoeva AaOeiv Ste
Te Bip TEpas éyvoxev émiOeis atradratrec Oat TOV TapovTov. 510 Kal pera TOV AOYOY TLwIT IS Kal xatnpeias ryevomerns év waow, avarapuBdvov avTovs Kal am dycov THS wmowias O Kare addus umTép Tov Tapovrwy évéBarrAEy epwrypata Kat 398

things were going, and to do so otherwise would be disgraceful. And presently, towards evening, he betook himself to the bath.

But while he was bathing he bethought himself of Statyllius, and called out in loud tones, saying: “ Apollonides, didst thou send off Statyllius? And didst thou bring him down from that lofty purpose of his? And has the man set sail without even bidding me good-bye?” <“ By no means,” said Apollonides ; : ‘although we reasoned much with him; but he is lofty and unbending, and says he will remain and do what- ever thou doest.” At this, we are told, Cato smiled, and said : ‘“‘ Well, we shall see about that presently.”

LXVII. After his bath, he took supper with a large company, sitting at table, as was his wont after Pharsalus ; indeed, he lay down only when he slept ;} and there were at supper with him all his companions, and the magistrates of Utica. After supper, there was much literary and genial discourse over the wine, and one philosophical tenet after another made the rounds, until there came up the enquiry into what were called the “ paradoxes’ of the Stoics, namely, that the good man alone is free, and that the bad are all slaves. Here, as was to be expected, the Peripatetic made objections, whereupon Cato broke in with vehemence, and in loud and harsh tones maintained his argument at greatest length and with astonishing earnestness, so that everyone perceived that he had made up his mind to put an end to his life and free himself from his present troubles. Therefore, as all were dejected and silent after his discourse, Cato tried to revive their spirits and remove their suspicions by once more putting questions and expressing anxiety about what was going on, implying that he feared for those

1 Cf. chapter lvi. 4. | 399

, e \ \ e \ ~ ,
dpovridas, ws Sedios wey vrép Tav TrEovTWD,
“ e . dediw@s S€ brép TOV odevdvTwY eEpnuiav dvudpov kat BapBapov.
LXVIII. Odtw 5€ dtadrvoas ro cvvderTrvor, Kal wepimatnoas peta TaV hirtwv Tov cuvynOn
peta TO Seimrvoy Tepitratov, Kai Tois dpyovet TOV guraxwv & Katpos hv mpootdtas, amiwy eis TO Swudtioy dn, Tov te traida Kal Tov dirov ExaoTov. uadXov 7 TpoTEepoy eiwber Tpocayayo-pevos Kal drrodppovnbets, Tard Urowiay Tapéoye Tov péAXovTos. elaeNOwyv S€ nal KataxdyOeis
9 A A , , ‘
éxaBev eis yetpas tov IINdtwvos dtadoywy Tov N a“ \ \ “A , A nn
mepi wuyns Kat dueNOwv tod BuBALov To 7EtoTOV \ 3 / e A “A e 3 9 4 kai avaBréWas v7rép Keparrs, ws ovK elde KpEeud-
e a A
pevov TO Ethos (udypyto yap o mais éte Seurrvovv-ToS avTov), Kadéoas olKeTny HpwTnoEy BaTIS AdBot TO éyyetpisiov. aiwma@vtos Sé éxetvou
aA ld
Tad WY Tpos TO BiBAio Kal pixpov SiarLTrev,
4 9 / > \ > , 4 N
@oTEep ov amrevdwy ovedé érretyopevos, GANws 5é
70 Eidos emifnrav, éxérevce kopioa. SearpiBys dé yivouevns kai pndevos xopifovros, éEavayvous
N\ , a > / > o A bd A
To BiBAtov av&is éxdrer xa’ va Toev olKEeTaV
\ A > # \ \ \ ’ > a
Kab wadXov EeveTerve THY Pwvnv To Evhos aTraitwv:
évos 6€ nal mvE 7d otTopa Tratdéas juake THV
av’Tov Yelipa, xXadeTTaivwy Kai Boov dn péya TapadidocBat TO TrOAEHLIO YyUmVOS UO TOD TraLdos fo) la) “A e e
avTod Kal TOV OiKET@Y, AYpL OV KNaLwWY O Vids
aA 4
cic edpape peta TOY didwv Kal TeptTET@Y WOUPETO
€
kat Kabixérevev. o S¢ Katworv é€avactas évé-
” \
Brewé te Secvov cai “lore, elmrev, “éy@ xal

mov AéANOa trapavoias HAwKOS, STL SiddoKE pev 400

793

CATO THE YOUNGER

who were going away by sea, and feared, too, for those whose path lay through a barbarous and waterless desert.
LXVIII. Thus the supper came to an end, and after walking about with his friends as he usually did after supper, he gave the officers of the watch the proper orders, and then retired to his chamber, but not until he had embraced his son and each of his friends with more than his wonted kindness, and thus awakened anew their suspicions of what was to come. After entering his chamber and lying down, he took up Plato's dialogue "On the Soul,' ! and when he had gone through the greater part of the treatise, he looked up above his head, and not seeing his sword hanging there (for his son had taken it away while Cato was still at supper), called a servant and asked him who had taken the weapon. The servant made no answer, and Cato returned to his book ; and a little while after, as if in no haste or hurry, but merely looking for his sword, he bade the servant fetch it. But as there was some delay, and no one brought the weapon, he finished reading his book, and this time called his servants one by one and in louder tones demanded his sword. One of them he smote on the mouth with his fist, and bruised his own hand, angrily crying now in loud tones that his son and his servants were betraying him into the _ hands of the enemy without arms. At last his son ran in weeping, together with his friends, and after em- bracing him, betook himself to lamentations and entreaties. But Cato, rising to his feet, took on a solemn look, and said : "When and where, without my knowledge, have I been adjudged a madman, that no

1 The Phaedo.

40%
VOL, VII. DD
-PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ovdeis ovdé peraTreiOer rept wv S0K@ kaxas BeBou-NevoOar, KwAVOpaL 5é ypHaOaL Tots éuavtov
Roya pois Kal Tapomhilopat; ti & ovyt cat ouvocis, @ yevvaie, Tov watépa Kal Tas Yelpas
doar pépets, bey pe av éN wv Kaicap eUpy me 5 pndé apuvac bar uvdwevov; ov yap én éuavrov ye Séopar Eigous, brrov wal TO mvev pa Bpaxov \povov ema XOvTA Kal THY Keparny ama Tata-Eavra mpos Tov ToiYyov amoGaveiv € ever Tt.
LXIX, Taira NEVOVTOS avtoo TO pev peipdxtov éEnrOe pera, Kravd pov kal amdvtes ot Aovrroi: TQ
dé Anuntpio Kat T@ 'Atrod\Awvidy povots UTro-AerPGeiar 7 PZOTEPOV non har, "°H arov- «al

vpiv, ’ €67, s béboxrat Bia Karexew dvSpa Tocov-Tov nrKias éy 7® Bio Kal xanpevous avrTou
oLwT Tapapuhaa cet, 7 a} hovyov ieee Kopitovres |
@S OU Seuvov ovee aiaxpov cot amopobvTa corn pias _STépas Kdtova THY amo TOU Tmoheuiou
2 TEpLpevery; TL ovv ov heryere meiBovres npas
TAaUTAa Kat peradiddaxovtes, iva Tas 7 poTepas
Sofas éxetvas kal | doyous, ols oupBeBroxaper, éx Badovres kal Yevomevor dua Kaicapa TopwreEpot peilova Xapuw etd @pev AUTOS xaitot BeBovrAcupat
pev ovden & eyorye Trepl euautod: dei € pe Bovrev-3 odpevov elvat KUptov ols & éyvoxa xpHaOat. Bov-Nevropas dé TpoTrov Tia ped LOY, Bovdevopevos peta TaOV AOYywV ols kat vets prrocopovvtes xpija Ge. Sappodytes oby admire, Kat KEAEVETE TOV viov & wn Suvatat Tov maTépa meiOew pn Bid-CecOat.”
LXX. IIpés TavtTa pnOéev avrevtrovrTes ot trept tov Anpuntptov, adda daxpvoavtes vmeEnnOov.
402

one instructs or tries to convert me in matters wherein I am thought to have made bad decisions, but I am prevented from using my own judgement, and have my arms taken from me? Why, generous boy, dost thou not also tie thy father’s hands behind his back, that Caesar may find me unable to defend myself when he comes? Surely, to kill myself I have no need of asword, when I have only to hold my breath a little while, or dash my head against the wall, and death will come.”’

LXIX. As Cato said these words the young man went out sobbing, and all the rest also, except Demetrius and Apollonides. These alone remained, and _ with these Cato began to talk, now in gentler tones. ‘<I suppose,” said he, “that ye also have decided to detain in life by force a man as old as I am, and to sit by him in silence and keep watch of him: or are ye come with the plea that it is neither shameful nor dreadful for Cato, when he has no other way of salva- tion, to await salvation’ at the hands of his enemy? Why, then, do ye not speak persuasively and con- vert me to this doctrine, that we may cast away those good old opinions and arguments which have been part of our very lives, be made wiser through Caesar's efforts, and therefore be more grateful to hime And yet I, certainly, have come to no resolve about myself ; but when I have come to a resolve, I must be master of the course which I decide to take. And I shall come to a resolve with your aid, as I might say, since I shal] reach it with the aid of those doctrines which ye also adopt as philosophers. So go away with a good courage, and bid my son not to try force with his father when he cannot persuade him.”

LXX. Without making any reply to this, but burst- ing into tears, Demetrius and Apollonides slowly

| 493
pp 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

elo We UTETAL bé bua mratdiou putxpov 70 chara Kal raBeov €amdaato Kat KATEVONTED. dé eloev € éoTara TOV abépa Kat Thy away alien:
cay, eltrav, “ Nov é €[05 elt, TO pep Eidos EOnxe,
To 6€ BiBAXlov avOis aveyivwoxe, Kal NéyeTat dis
Ghov bieFer Geir. celta xoupnbels Umvov Badin, @ote Tous éxtos aicbécOan, rept péras vUKTAS
éxaret TOV amedev0épov — KrcavOnv Tov itaTpoy Kat Bovray, @ padiota T pos Tas TOMTLKAS mpagers eXprTo. Kat TovUTOY Bev emt Oddatrav erreprpen, dws oKeyauevos el TAVTES any pevoe TuyXavovat, ppacot ™ pos avtov: T@ 5é LaTpe THV
xetpa preypaivove ap vIrO THs mys iy erdnte TOV OLKETHY, énibijoas TAaperye. Kal TOUT émrotn-ev notous amavras, OS Swrixas é EXOVTOS autob.
per’ OALyov 5¢ raphy o Bovtas dmayyéd\Xwy TOUS
pev adXous aviny Gar, Kpdooov bé AetTrec Oat vie daxoMas Tivos, Gaov 5é obmp Kat TovTOV euBaivel, qoAvy Oé Xerava Kal peya mrvedpa KaTexewy THY OdratTav. TovTO aKxovaas o o Katwv ea revagev olKT TeV TAEOVTWY, Kat mary Grreprpe Tov Bovtay ént Oararray, el Tes apa. Tadwopouna as Sé0:T6 TLWOS TOV dvayKalwv, aTrayyeXovvTa TpOS avrov.
"Hdn bé Spies n00v, Kal pax pov avis KatnvexOn ™pos darvov. émaveOovtos be Tob Bovrta Kal ppdcaytos TONANY hovxiay Tept Tovs ALpevas elvat, mpooérager avT@ THY Oupav kreioan, Kal Kabijxer € éauTov eis TO KALviOwov @S TO AOLTTOV ere THS vuKTOS avaTravaopevos. é£eAOovTOs 5é tod Bovta oracapevos TO Ethos Ewoe pév UTT0 TO 404

CATO THE YOUNGER

withdrew. Then the sword was sent in, carried by a little child, and Cato took it, drew it from its sheath, and examined it. And when he saw that its point was keen and its edge still sharp, he said: ‘“‘ Now I am my own master.” Then he laid down the sword and resumed his book, and he is said to have read it _through twice. Afterwards he fell into so deep a sleep that those outside the chamber heard him. But about midnight he called two of his freedmen, Cleanthes the physician, and Butas, who was his chief agent in public matters. Butas he sent down to the sea, to find out whether all had set sail success- fully, and bring him word ; while to the physician he gave his hand to bandage, since it was inflamed by the blow that he had given the slave. This made everybody more cheerful, since they thought he had a mind to live. In a little while Butas came with tidings that all had set sail except Crassus, who was detained by some business or other, and he too was on the point of embarking; Butas reported also that a heavy storm and a high wind prevailed at sea. On hearing this, Cato groaned with pity for those in peril on the sea, and sent Butas down again, to find out whether anyone had been driven back by the “ray and wanted any necessaries, and to report to im.

And now the birds were already beginning to sing, when ‘he fell asleep again for a little while. And when Butas came and told him that the harbours were very quiet, he ordered him to close the door, throwing himself down upon his couch as if he were going to rest there for what still remained of the night. But when Butas had gone out, Cato drew his sword from its sheath and stabbed himself below

aTiOos, TH xerph KOUPOTEpov bua THY preywovny Npnaapevos ovK evOus annrrakev éautov, ana dva0avaTov eFéreae THS KAivns Kal ~rodov érot-Noe, cataBadov aBarvov TL TOV Yew peT piK@y TAapakel Levon, Gore TOUS Oeparrovras aia Bopévous avaBojjoat Kal tov viov avtixa Kral TOUS dirous
émrero en Oetv. iSovres 5é mepuppévov aipate Kat TOY éVTEPWY TA TOAAG TpoTETTTwWKOTA, CavTa Oo
avTov ére Kal Brérovra, devas pev dmavtes EoXov, O 6é i taTpos mpocedOav erretparo TOV év-TEpOv aT parTey Stapervavrwy Tata Te cabiaravat
Kal TO Tpavpa Stappamrewy. @S ooy avnveyKev O Karov kal Tuveppovynce, Tov pev iatpov amrewgato, Tais xepal é Ta évrepa omrapakas Kai To Tpavpa éemravappytas arr €Bavev.
LXXI. "Ey 4) b€ OUK GV TLS @ETO _Xpovp TOUS
KATH THV oixtay mavras no OjjBat TO 7 dos, eri Tais Ovpaus 7 Hoav ob Tplakoatot, Kat pox pov votepov) Shpos 70 potato TOV "ITuxatov, pad pov7
Tov evepyeTny Kal owTipa Kal povov érevOepov
Kal povov a ant Tntov KadouvTov. Kai TavTa empar-TOV dry YeXAopEvov mpoovéva Kaicapos: arn’ ore
poBos QUTOUS OUTE KOAaKEiA Tob KpaTovvTos ote
n Tm pos adAn hous Sradopa Kal otdots apFrurTé-pous éroinge THS 7 pos Kdtova TUmns. KOG [Ln-CAVTES 6 TO COpa NapT pas Kal Tommy émipavi Tapa xovTes Kal Oarpavres Tapa THD Oddaccay,

ob. viv avdpias épéatnner avrod Evprjpys, odTwWS €TpaTrovtTo mpos TO awMlELY EavTOUS Kal THY moALv.
LXXII. Kaicap 6é muvOavopevos Tapa TOY adixvoupéevoy vrranéeveey ev ‘ItvKn tov Kdtava unde hevyerv, GAAA Tovs AANOUS mMpoTéuTreLy, 406
794

CATO THE YOUNGER

the breast. His thrust, however, was somewhat feeble, owing to the inflammation in his hand, and so he did not at once dispatch himself, but in his death struggle fell from the couch and made a _loud noise by overturning a geometrical abacus that stood near. His servants heard the noise and cried out, and his son at once ran in, together with his friends. They saw that he was smeared with blood, and that most of his bowels were protruding, but that he still had his eyes open and was alive; and they were terribly shocked. But the physician went to him and tried to replace his bowels, which remained uninjured, and to sew up the wound. Accordingly, when Cato recovered and became aware of this, he pushed the physician away, tore his bowels with his hands, rent the wound still more, and so died.

LXXI. Before one would have thought that all in the house could learn of the event, the three hun- dred were at the door, and a little later the people of Utica had assembled. With one voice they called | Cato their saviour and benefactor, the only man who was free, the only one unvanquished. And this they continued to do even when word was brought that Caesar was approaching. But neither fear of the conqueror, nor a desire to flatter him, nor their mutual] strife and dissension, could blunt their desire to honour Cato. They decked his body in splendid fashion, gave it an illustrious escort, and buried it near the sea, where a statue of him now stands, sword in hand. Then they turned their thoughts to their own salvation and that of their city.

LXXII. When Caesar learned from people who came to him that Cato was remaining in Utica and not trying to escape, but that he was sending off the 407

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

> N \ \ \ e 4 \ N NX 9 A autoy 6€ Kal TOUS ETalpouvs Kal Tov vidV abEeas avactpépecOat, Svatéxpaptov nyetto THY yvOmnv Tov avdpos, ate b€ Tov mreioTov Oyov Eywv
, n “~
_éxetvou tpoonye peta Ths Suvdpews errevyopevos.
a@s 5€ HKovae TOV OdvaTov avTod, NéyeTAt TOTOD-

> We 66 70 K 4 0 a a 0 Ud ‘
TOV eLTrELY atv, P9ova cot tod Oavarou
\ \ \ “A A , , ,
Kal yap é“ol ov THs GavTOv cwTnpLas epPovnaas. °
T@ yap ovt. cwOnvar Kadtwv avacyopevos v7r0 Kaicapos ovx av ottw Soxet Katatoxovar thy avtov dofav, @ Koopioat tHv éexeivov, TO Sé
\ A ww 3 4 \ \ ,
mpaxOéev dv adnrov’ eixalerar 5€ Ta ypnoToTepa 4 mapa Kaicapos.
LXXIII. ’Ererevtnce 5€ Kadtwv érn dvetv 6€- ovta trevtnkovta BeBiwxws. o b€ vies avtod
e N a, \ 27OQV\ 3 , , \
vmo Kaicapos pév ovdév nouxnOn: réyetar Sé pabupos yevéerOat Kai rept yuvaixas ovK avert-AntTos. ev b€ Kamasdoxia Eévm tii yxenoa-pevos Mapdadatn trav Bacidixadv éyovtt yuvacov evTpeTrés, Kal TWAElova Tap avTois 7 KaXOS ElXe diatpiSwv Xpovov, éoxwmteto ToLav’Ta ypahovTwv elS aUTOV"
avptov Katoyv Badifer peta tptadxov0’ apmépas:

,

Kal,
, \
Tlopxvos nat Mapdaddrns, dvo pirdot, puxn pia.
\ a a WVuyn yap éxareito rod Mapdaéadtov To yuvacov.
Kal €Tt,
evyevns Kal Naputpos o Kdrwvy Bacidtuxny

pouyny Exee.

rest, while he himself, his companions, and his son, were fearlessly going up and down, he thought it diffi- cult to discern the purpose of the man, but since he made the greatest account of him, he came on with his army in all haste. When, however, he heard of his death, he said thus much only, as we are told: “O Cato, I begrudge thee thy death; for thou didst be- grudge me the sparing of thy life.” For, in reality, if Cato could have consented to have his life spared by Caesar, he would not be thought to have defiled his own fair fame, but rather to have adorned that of Caesar. However, what would have happened is uncertain ; though the milder course is to be con- jectured on the part of Caesar.

LXXIII. When Cato died,! he was forty-eight years old. His son received no harm at the hands of Caesar, but he was of an easy disposition, as we are told, and in his relations with women not blameless. In Cappadocia he enjoyed the hospitality of Marpha- dates, one of the royal family, who had a comely wife ; and since young Cato spent more time with them than was seemly, he was satirized in such writings as these :

“On the morrow Cato journeys,—after a good round thirty days ;’

and,

‘* Marphadates and Porcius, two friends with but a single Soul.”

For the wife of a was named Psyche (souw/).

And again:

“ Nobly born, iilustriaus, our Cato hath a royal Soul.”

1 In 46 B.c. A single letter of his to Cicero is extant (ad div. xv. 5): cf. chapter xxiii. 3.

*

3 ad\\a Waoadv ye THY ToLaUTHY eEn ere Kab npdvice T@® Oavato Svodeav. aryeovtlopevos yap év Bidiarrois T pos Kaicapa kal ’Avt@viov vTrép Ths érevdepias, Kal KALvopmévns THs panrary- yos oUTE puyelv ovte Aabeivy akiwoas, ara 7 po- KAaXOULEVOS TOUS TroNELLOUS EuTrpocOev EavToOV é-- davifwv rat cuvefoppav TOUS guppévovTas erEce, Jatpa THS ApETHS Tots EVAVTLOLS TapacXev.

4 “Ere de pai dov » Ovyadrnp tod Katrwvos ove awppoavvys ovte avdpeias arronerpbeioa (Bpovr@ yap CUVOKEL TO KTELVAYTL Kaicapa) auras TE THS gvv@pocias. peter é, kal T™ponKato tov Biov akiws THs evryevelas Kal apeTns, @s év Tois trept Bpovrov yéypam ra. LrarTvrduos éé pyoas pus- petcOat Kdtwva TOTE pev vTO TOV prroaopov exon Bovdopevos éauTov avenety, Dotepov b¢

TO Bpovte TLS TOTATOV €auTov Tapacyov Kal Xpnotwotarov év Didrimros areBavev.
410

CATO THE YOUNGER

But all such ill-report was blotted out and removed by the manner of his death. For he fought at Philippi against Caesar and Antony, in behalf of liberty ; and when his line of battle was giving way, he deigned not either to fly or to hide himself, but challenged the enemy, displayed himself in front of them, cheered on those who held their ground with him, and so fell, after amazing his foes by his valour.

And still more true is it that the daughter of Cato was deficient neither in prudence nor courage. She was the wife of the Brutus who slew Caesar, was privy to the conspiracy itself, and gave up her life in a manner worthy of her noble birth and her lofty character, as is told in the Life of Brutus.! Statyllius, too, who declared that he would follow Cato’s ex- ample,” was prevented at the time by the philosophers from destroying himself, as he wished to do, but afterwards gave most faithful and efficient service to Brutus, and died at Philippi.%

1 Chapters xiii. and liii. |? Cf. above, chapter Ixvi. 4.
2 Cf. the Brutus, li. 4.
A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES
A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF

PROPER

A

Adrumetum (or Hadrumetum), 381, a Phoenician sea-port on the coast of northern Africa, a few miles south of Carthage.
Afranius, 53, Lucius A., a warm

isan of pOmDey. and one of legates in Spain during the war with Sertorius, as well as in Asia during the Mithridatic war.

In 55 B.o. he was sent by Pompey with Petreius, to hold Spain for him. He was killed after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.0.).
Annius, 19, Caius A. Luscus, had served under Metellus Numidicus in the Jugurthine war (108 B.o.).

Antaeus, 25, a fabled Libyan giant and wrestler, son of Poseidon, whose strength was invincible as long as he remained in contact with his mother Earth. Heracles discovered his secret and slew him.

Antigonus, 5, 85, 211, 215, surnamed the One-eyed, a general of Alexander who received the provinces of Phrygia, Lycia and Pamphylia in the division of ‘Alexander’s empire, and _ succeeded in making himself king of all Asia. He fell in the battle of Ipsus (301 B.c.).
_ Antipater the Tyrian, 245, died shortly before 44 B.C., according to Cicero (de off. ii. 86).
Antipater, 87, 91-95, 145, 185, 197, 201-217, regent of Macedonia during Alexander’s absence in the East, and of Alexander’s empire after the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.O. He died in 319.
PLUT. VHT.

NAMES

Antiphilus, 199, 201, an Athenian general known only from these events of the Lamian war ‘Antonius, 78, known only from this incident.

Apollonides the Stoic, 397, 399, 403, known only from these incidents.
Aquinus, 37, known only from these cidente.

Archilochus, 161, 251, of Paros, one of the earliest Ionian lyric poets, flourishing In 650 B.o.
Ariminum, 361, an important city of Umbria, on the sea-coast, about nine miles south of the Rubicon.
Aristophon, 161, of the Athenian deme Colyttus, a® prominent orator and politician contemporary with Demosthenes.
Athenodorus (1), of Imbros, 187, an Athenian of Imbrian family, and a@ mercenary captain in the East, who attained political power in Thrace in 359 B.o. He was a supporter of Persia against Alexander, by whom he was captured at Sardis in 334.
Athenodorus (2), surnamed Cordylion, 257, 269, a Stoic philosopher, born at Tarsus. e was keeper of the library at Peramum, whence he removed to me in 70 B.0., and lived there with Cato.
B
21, $1, the southern district of Spain; traversed by the great river Baetis.
Barca, 327, not otherwise known.
415

Baetica,

_ DICTIONARY OF

Bibulus, 298, 295, 311, 318, 351, 367, Lucius Calpurnius B., aedile in 65 B.O., praetor in 62, and consul in 59, in each case a colleague of 5 ulius Caesar. He died in 48
Boédromion, 207, the Attic math corresponding to parts uf our

September and October. — Butas, 405, «+known also as an author from the Romulus. xv‘ 3.
Cc

Caepio (1), 7, Quintus ~c, vilius C., consul in 106 B.0., and pro-consul in Gallia Narbonensis for the following year. Ten years after his defeat by the Cimbri (Camillus, xix. 73 he was brought to trial for misconduct of the war, condemned, and thrown into prison.
Caepio (2), 237, 239, 243, 245, 253, uintus Servilius C., half-brother of Cato.
Caesar, 397, Lucius, not otherwise
known.

Callimedon, 221, 227, 229, surnamed
the Crab, one of the Athenian orators who favoured the Macedonian interest.
Canidius, 321-325, not otherwise

known.

Carbo, 15, 19, 61, Gnaeus Papirius
C., one of the leaders of the Marian party. After his flight to Libya (Sulla, xxix. 8) he was taken prisoner by FOmpsy. and cruelly put to death (Pompey, chapter x.).

Cardia, 79, 85, 87, one of the chief towns of the Thracian Chersonese.
Cassander, 215, 217, a son of Antipater the regent of Macedonia, to whom his father refused the succession. He was master of Athens from 318 to 307 B.0o., and .died in 297.

Castulo, 7, an important city in the southern part of Hispania Tarra-conensis, on the upper waters of the Baetis.
416

PROPER NAMES

Catiline, 287, Lucius Sergius, the famous conspirator in the consul-ship of Cicero (63 B.0.). See the Cicero, chapters x.-xxii.
Catulus, 271, 273, Quintus Lutatius
C., a leading aristocrat of the nobler sort, consul in 78 B.c., censor in 65, died in 60.
Cenchraeae, 329, the eastern harbour-town of Corinth.
Cephisodotus, 189, a celebrated Athenian sculptor. In 871 B.c, he executed for the Athenians a group of Peace holding Plutus
the god of riches in her arms.
Ceraunian Mountains, 211, sometimes called Acroceraunian, a range in the northern part of Epirus.
Chabrias, 157-161, an able and successful Athenian general, prominent from 392 B.o. till his allant death at the siege of hios in 357.
Chaeroneia, 181,
manding the entrance from Phocis into Boeotia, celebrated for the number of important battles fought in i neighbourhood.
Here Philip of Macedon defeated reeks in 338 B.o.

155, 175, a famous .

enian general, prominent
from 367 to 334 B.o.
Chares (2), 185, of Mitylene, court

chamberlain of Alexander, and author of an anecdotical history of Alexander’s campaigns.
Charicles, 193, 195, 221, 229,
known only from these incidents.
Charidemus, 5, 179, 183, an Athenian general and a roving soldier of fortune, prominent
from 867 to 349 B.o.
Cinna, 11-15, Lucius Cornelius C., leader of the Marian party during Sulla’s absence in the East (87-84 B.O.). He was consul in 87, 86, 85, and 84. He was slain in a mutiny of his soldiers at Brundisium, where he hoped to revent the landing of Sulla.

a town com-

the Pompey, v. 1.
Cleanthes, 405, known only from this passage,
DICTIONARY OF

Cleitus, 225, 227, successfully commanded the fleet of Antipater in the Lamian war (323 B.0.), and later (318) that of Polysperchon at Byzantium, but was surprised oy, Anblgonue, defeated, and 8 Clodius, 279, 281, 311, 315-319,
331, 333, 345. Publius Claudius (Clodius) Pulcher, youngest son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in the Sulla, xxix. 3. He helped to demoralise the soldiers of Lucullus (Lucullus, xxxiv.), and became a venomous foe of Cicero.
Corcyra, 329, 371, an island in the Ionian sea, opposite Epirus ; the modern Corfu.
Cotta, 31, possibly the Marcus

Aurelius Cotta who became consul with Lucullus in 74 B.c. now a legate under Caius Annius (pp. 19 f.).
Crassus, 405, not otherwise known.

Craterus, 91-95, 187, 201, 203, one of the ablest of Alexander's officers, and a man of noble character. He fell in battle against Eumenes in 321 B.C. See the Eumenes, v. ff.
, Ctesippus, 159, not otherwise known.
Curio, 267, 349, probably the Calus Scribonius Curio who was consul in 76 B.c. He was a steadfast opponent of Julius Caesar, and a friend of Cicero and Cato. He was pontifex maximus in 57, and died in 53.
Cyrene, 371, the most important Greek colony on the northern coast of Africa, almost directly south of Crete. It was founded in 631 B.c.
D

Deiotarus the Galatian, 261, 267, 269, tetrarch of Galatia in Asia Minor, and an old man in 54 B.c. (Crassus, xvii. 1 f.). He was a faithful friend of the Romans in their Aslatic wars, and in 63 was rewarded by the senate with the title of King. Caesar could never be brought to pardon him for siding with Pompey.

PROPER NAMES

Demades, 145, 181, 191, 195, 213, 215, an Athenian politician and orator of Macedonian sympathies, and bitterly hostile to mos-thenes.

Demetrius the Peripatetic, 397, 403,
not definitely known.
Demetrius of Phalerum, a _ celebrated rhetorician and orator (346-283 B.c.). He was regent of Athens for Cassander from 318
to 307.
perenne 233, not otherwise

own.

Didius, 7, Titus Didius, consul in 98 B.o. He fell in battle during the Marsic war (89 B.0o.).
Diopeithes, 161, an Athenian

eneral, father of the poet enander. He was arraigned by the Macedonian party at Athens, and was defended by Demosthenes in the _ extant oration ‘‘ On the Chersonese.” Dodona, 209, a town in Epirus, famous in earlier times for its oracle of Zeus, the influence of which among the Greek states was later assumed by the oracle of Apollo at Delphi.
Domitius (1), 31, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, known only from this defeat, in which he was killed.
Domitius (2), 333, 335, Lucius
Domnitius Ahenobarbus, consul in 54 B.C. He was one of the ablest supporters of the aristocratic party. He opposed both Pompey and Caesar until their quarrel, then sided with Pompey.
He met his death at Pharsalus.
Drusus, 237, 239, ‘Marcus Livius
D., at first an able and ardent supporter of the _ aristocratic party and the senate, but afterwards an agitator like the Gracchi. He was assassinated in 91 B.O.

Duris, 79, 153, 185, the Samian, a pupil of Theophrastus, historian and, for a time, tyrant of Samos, lived circa 350—280 B.C.

Dyrrhachium, 365-369, a city on the coast of Illyricum, opposite to Brundisium, known in Greek history as Epidamnus. It was a free state, and sided with the Romans consistently. :
E

Ebro (Iberus), 41, a large river the basin of which forms the northeastern part of the peninsula of Spain.

Echecratides the sophist, 187, not otherwise known.
Elateia, 223, a city of Phocis in a plain commanding passes into southern Greece.
Epicurus, 233, not otherwise known.

Eubulus, 161, a leading Athenian orator and statesman, highly successful as a minister of finance. He was of the party opposed to Demosthenes.
F

Favonius, 315, 347, 349, Marcus F., called the ‘‘ Ape of Cato,” was aedile in 52 B.c. and praetor in 49. He joined Pompey in the East, notwithstanding personal enmity towards him, and accompened him in his flight from harsalus (cf. the Pompey, 1xxiii. 6 f.). He was put to death by order of Octavius Caesar after the battle of Philippi (42 B.c.).

Fimbria, 65, Caius Flavius F., a partisan of Marius. He won important successes against Mithridates in 85°B.c., but was defeated and brought to death by Sulla in 84. See the Sulla, xxiii.-xxv.
Fufidius, 31, a creature of Sulla, mentioned also in the Sulla, xxxi. 3.

PROPER NAMES

G

Gabinius, 317, Aulus G., tribune of the people in 66 B.C., praetor in 61, consul with Piso in 58, the year during which Cicero was in exile. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking bribes, and exiled. He died in 48.
Glaucippus, 153, not otherwise known.
Gracinus, 69, not otherwise known,

H

Hagnonides (or Agnonides), 211, 221, 223, 227, 233, an Athenian sycophant and demagogue, whose tae is known mostly from this ife.

Harpalus, 191-195, the faithless treasurer of Alexander. Antipater demanded his surrender by the Athenians, who put him in prison. Thence he escaped and went to Crete, where he was assassinated.

Hegemon, 225, 229, a minor | Athenian orator of the time of Demosthenes, who supported the interests of Macedon.

Hephaestion, 29, 81, 83, officer and beloved friend of Alexander.

Hortensius, 293, 295, 363, the great oratorical rival of Cicero, a man of high character, brilliant parts, and great wealth. He died in 50 B.C.

Hypereides, 153, 161, 169, 183, 197, 203, 205, 211, a great Athenian orator, who stood with Demosthenes at the head of the anti-Macedonian party. .

Hypsaeus, 351, Publius Plautius H., tribune of the people in 54 B.C., and candidate for the consulship two years later. He was accused of corrupt practices, tried, and convicted. Pompey, whom he had devotedly served, forsook him in the hour of need.

DICTIONARY OF

I

Iberians, 69 and passim, a general name for the original peoples of . the Spanish peninsula.

Ios, 5, an island in the eastern Aegean sea, one of the Sporades, south of Naxos.

J

Juba (1), 373-379, 385-389, Juba I., ing of Numidia, and a supporter of Pompey, to whom he owed his throne. He _ followed Cato’s example and put an end to his own life.

Juba (2), 25, Juba II., king of Mauretania, son of the preceding. After his father’s death in 46 B.c., he was taken as a child to Rome by Caesar, where he was educated. He became a learned and voluminous writer, and among his works was a History of Rome.
L

Labienus, 373, though a trusted officer of Caesar in Gaul, he went over to Pompey in the Civil War, fled to Africa after the battle of Pharsalus, and after the battle oF Thapsus (46 B.c.) to Spain, where he was the immediate cause of the defeat of the Pompeians at Munda, and was slain (45 B.C.).
Laelius, 253, Caius L., a brilliant

- commander’ and _— statesman, whose deeds _ are inseparably interwoven with those of his friend and companion, the elder Scipio. He died about 170 B.o.
Laomedon, 3, a mythical king of Troy, the father of Priam.
Lauron, 49, a small town in the S.E. part of Spain, south of Valentia, near the sea.
Leonnatus, 85, 87, 201, one of Alexander’s most distinguished officers.
PROPER NAMES

Leosthenes, 161, 195-203, an Athenian, general of the league for expelling the Macedonians from Greece after the death of Alexander.

poms 2 273, Marcus L., not further

Lusitanians, 25-31, 69, the people of mer western district or province oO Lounge th, 191, the great Spartan lawgiver.
Lycurgus (2), 161, 167, 183, an able Athenian orator and a highly successful minister of finance (396-323 B.c.), one of the noblest specimens of old Attic integrity and virtue in a degenerate age.
M

Manlius (1), 33, Lucius M., pro-consul in Narbonese Gaul in 78 B.C. He was badly defeated by one of the generals of Ser-torius.
Manlius (2), 69, 71, 75, not other-wise known.
Marcellus, 277, perhaps the Caius Claudius Marcellus who was consul in 50 B.c., a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Caesar.
Marius, 15, an adopted son of the elder Marius. He became consul at the age of twenty-seven, and was as merciless and cruel as his father. His death by his own hands is noted in the Sulla, xxxii. 1.
Mellaria, 31, a small town on the southern coast of Spain.
Memmius (1), 55, Caius M., a brother-in-law of Pompey, and his pag? in Spain. f. the Pompey, xi.
Memmius (2), 305, 307, Caius M.-Gemellus, tribune of the people at this time (66 B.c.), and two years later an unsuccessful candidate for the consulship. He left Rome under impeachment for 419

DICTIONARY OF

corrupt practices, and spent the rest of his life in Mitylene.
Menestheus, 161, a son of the famous Athenian general Iphicrates by a Thracian princess. He was distinguished for his military skill, and was prominent with his father in the Social War (356 B.0.). Nothing is heard of him after 325 B.c.
Menon the _ Thessalian, 201, a citizen of Pharsalus, and a man of great influence and reputation. His cavalry bore themselves well in the battle of Crannon. In 321 he was defeated and slain by Polysperchon.
Mentor, 81, not further known.
Menyllus, 207, 209, 213, 217, known only from these passages.
Metellus (1), 5, 31-61, 73, Quintus Caecilius M. Pius, consul with Sulla in 80 B.o., and one of his most successful generals. After Sulla's death in 78 Metellus was sent to Spain as pro-consul to prosecute the war against Sertorius. He died about 63.
Metellus (2), 281-285, 297-305, Quintus M. Nepos, a partisan of Pompey, and for a time a violent opponent of Cicero. As consul, however, in 57 B.c., he did not oppose the recall of Cicero from exile. He died in 55.
Metellus (3), 313, Quintus Caecilius - M. Numidicus, victor over Jugurtha in 109 B.c., but supplanted by Marius. He was censor in 102, was unjustly expelled from the senate, and went into exile, from which he was recalled in 99 B.O., largely through the efforts of his son, Metellus Pius.

Micion, 201, known only from this peat.

Milo, 351, Titus Annius Papianus, a ruffian and swashbuckler, tribune of the people in 57 B.o., and from that time on involved in a flerce quarrel with Clodius, which ended with the murder of Clodius. Milo was impeached for the crime, defended by Cicero in an extant oration, condemned, and sent into exile. Attempting to en by force in 48, he was slain.

Mithridates, 11, 63-67, the sixth king of Pontfis bearing this . hame, commonly called the Great, 120-63 B.o., the most formidable enemy of the Romans in the East.
Molossus, 175, not otherwise known.

Munatius, 255, 293, 301, 307, 309, 323-327, 361, the bosom friend of Cato.
Murena, 285, 287, 3803, Lucius Licinius M., had served under Lucullus (Lucullus, xix. 7). On his trial he was defended by Hortensius and Cicero (in an extant oration), and acquitted.
N

Nearchus, 81, the able and trusted

admiral of Alexander.
Neoptolemus, 79, 89-101, an officer of Alexander.
New Carthage, 19, a famous colony of Carthage on the south-eastern coast of Spain.
Nicanor, 217-221, held the Peiraeus for Cassander, and afterwards served him successfully as naval commander in the Hellespont. but awakened his jealousy and was put to death by him.
Nicocles, 183, 229, 231, not otherwise known.
Norbanus, 15, Caius N., consul in 83 B.c. After his defeats by Sulla and Metellus, he fled to ‘ Rhodes, where he put an end to his own life.
O

Octavius (1), 11, 13, Gnaeus O., consul with Cinna in 87 B.0. His oan is described in the Marius, xiii.
DICTIONARY OF

Octavius (2), 395, Marcus O., consul in 54 B.C.,-and a supporter of Pompey in the Civil War. He fled to Africa in 47. He is last heard of as_ serving under rae fa at the battle of Actium Osca, 37, 69, a Roman colony in north-eastern Spain.
“ ?

Paccianus, 23, not otherwise known.
Pella, Fae the capital city of Macedonia.

Perdiccas, 79, 85, 89-93, the officer to whom the dying Alexander is said to have given his signet-ring, and regent for the royal successors of Alexander till 321 B.O.

Perpenna, 39, 41, 67-75, Marcus P.

ento, a leading partisan of Marius. On the death of Sulla (78 B.c.) he joined Lepidus in his attempt to win the supreme power, and failing here, retired to Spain and served under Sertorius.
Pessinus, 269, an important town in the west of Galatia, famous for its cult of Cybele.
Pharsalus, 369, 373, an ancient town in southern Thessaly, near which Caesar finally defeated Pompey.

Philip, 5, 79, Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander.
Philippi, 411, a city of Macedonia on the river Strymon, formerly called Crenides, but renamed by Philip IT.
Philippus, 293, 295, $31, Lucius Marcius P., consul in 56 B.o., and step-father of Octavius Caesar.
He remained neutral in the civil wars, and lived to see his step-son master of the world.
Philostratus, 375, the Aegyptian, a ag but degenerate fol-ower of the Academy, afterwards associated with Antony and Cleopatra (Antony, 1xxx. 2).
PROPER NAMES

Phocus, 189, 19], 213, 229, 238, the son of Phocion, not otherwise
known.
noe 95, an officer not otherwise

own.

Piso, 307, 817, Lucius Calpurnius P., father-in-law of Julius Caesar. He plundered his province of Macedonia shamelessly, and was recalled in 55 B.c. He is covered with invective in Cicero's oration de Province. Cons. He took no ~ part in the Civil War.

Pityussa, 19, the name of two islands (often spoken of as one) lying off the southern coast of Spain.

Plancus, 353, Titus Munatius P. Bursa, tribune of the people in 52 B.c. and largely responsible fer the riots of that year, for complicity in which he was tried and condemned. He was restored to civil rights by Julius Caesar, and served under Antony.

Plutarch the Eretrian, 171, 173, sought the aid of the Athenians age nst his rival, the tyrant of

Chalcis, who had allied himself with Philip of Macedon.

Pollio, 363, 365, Caius Asinius P. a famous orator, poet, and historian, 76 B.c.-4 A.D. He was an intimate friend of Julius Caesar, fought under him in Africa and Spain, and after Caesar's death supported Octavius Caesar. After 29, he devoted himself entirely to literature, and was a patron of Vergil and Horace. None of his works are extant.

Polyeuctus the Sphettiam, 165, an Athenian of the deme Sphettus, a political friend of Demosthenes, and an orator of some note.

Polysperchon, 217, 221-225, a distinguished officer of Alexander, appointed by Antipater to succeed him in the regency. He connived at some of the worst crimes of Cassander.
Pompeius (1), 371 (‘‘ the younger

- Pompey ’’), Gnaeus P., the elder son of the triumvir by his third wife, put to death by the troops of Caesar after the battle of Munda in Spain (45 B.c.).

Pompeius (2), 371, 383, Sextus P., the younger son of the triumvir by his third wife, escaped after the battle of Munda and was active against the triumvirate until his death in 35 B.c.
Porcia (1), 333, Cato’s own sister, died in 46 B.c., ten years after her husband.
Porcia (2), 293, 411, Cato’s daughter, married first to Bibulus, Caesar’s consular colleague, in 59 B.O. Bibulus died in 48, and in 45 Porcia married Brutus the conspirator.
Ptolemy (1), 81, 91, Ptolemy Lagus, the most far-sighted and successful of the officers of Alexander, afterwards Ptolemy I. of Egypt.
Ptolemy (2), 321, Ptolemy XI. of Egypt, commonly known as Ptolemy <Auletes. After many disappointments he was at last restored to his throne in 55 B.c., through the influence of Pompey, but never regained the goodwill of his people.
Ptolemy (3), 319, 321, younger brother of Ptolemy Auletes, and king of Cyprus. He incurred the enmity of Clodius, who, as tribune cf the Roman people, brought in a decree depriving him of his kingdom.

Pytheas, 191, an Athenian orator chiefly known for his unreasoning hatred of Demosthenes. He was a man of no fixed character, and in the Lamian War became a renegade from Athens. See the Demosthenes, xxxii.
Pythocles, 229, not otherwise known.
R

Rubrius (1), 255, known only from this allusion.
Rubrius (2), Marcus R., not otherwise known.
422

_,

S

Saguntum, 55, a rich commercial city on the east coast of Spain, near the sea.
Salinator, 19, Julius, not otherwise

own.

Scipio (1), 3, 253, Publius Cornelius S. Africanus Major (234-183 B.C.), the conqueror of Hannibal.
Scipio (2), 3, Publius Cornelius S. Aemilianus Africanus Minor (185-129 B.c.), the destroyer of Carthage.
Scipio (3), 15, 17, Lucius Cornelius S. Asiaticus, belonged to the Marian party in the civil wars, and was consul in 83 B.c., the year when Sulla returned from the East (cf. the Sulla, xxviii. 1-3). He was proscribed in 82, and fied to Massilia, where he died.

Scipio (4), 251, 351, 375-379, 385, 387, Publius Cornelius S. Nasica, adopted by Metellus Pius and therefore called Metellus Scipio, was made Pompey's colleague in the consulship late in the year 52 B.c., and became a determined foe of Caesar. He commanded Pompey's centre at Pharsalus, fled to Africa, and killed himself after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.c.). Though a Scipio by birth, a Metellus by adoption, and the father-in- law of Pompey, he was rapacious and profligate.
Serranus, 251, probably the Sextus Atilius S. Gavianus, who was quaestor in 63 B.c. and favoured by Cicero, but as tribune of the people in 57 opposed the recall of Cicero from exile.
Servilia (1), 285, 291, half-sister of Cato, and faithless wife of Silanus.
Servilia (2), 293, 305, 365 f., another half-sister of Cato, the faithless wife of Lucullus.
Silanus, 285-289, Decimus Junius S., consul in 64 and 62 B.c.
Silo, 239, 241, Pompaedius S., leader of the Marsi in the Social
DICTIONARY OF

War, and_ confederate. with Drusus. He _ displayed great military ability in the war, but was finally defeated by Metellus Pius in 88 B.C., and died in battle.

Statyllius, 395-399, 411, only from tHese passages.
Sucro, 51, a river in south-eastern Spain, between Valentia and Lauron.
Sulpicius, 355, Servius 8. Lemonfia Rufus, a friend and _ fellow-student of Cato, and a successful competitor against him for the consulship in 51 B.c. He supported the cause of Caesar, and died in 43.
known

T

Taenarum, 211, the promontory at the extreme south of Laconia.
Tagonius, 48, a tributary of the river Tagus, in south-western Spain.

Thapsus, 379, a maritime city of northern Africa, south of Carthage.
Theodorus the Atheist, 233, a philosopher of the Cyrenaic school, banished from his native city of Cyrene, and resident at Athens during the regency of Demetrius the Phalerian (318—-307 B.C.).
Theophrastus, 35, 325, the most famous pupil of Aristotle, and his successor as head of the Peripatetic school at Athens. He was born at Eresos in Lesbos, and died at Athens in 287 B.c., at the age of eighty-five.
Thermus, 299, 301, Minucius, not otherwise definitely known.
Thessalonica, 259, the capital of the Roman province of Macedonia, situated at the head of the Thermaic gulf.

Thoranius, 31, not known.
otherwise

PROPER NAMES

Thrasea, 293, 325, Publius T.
Paetus, a noble Roman who fell a victim to the hatred of Nero in 66 A.D. In his youth he was devoted to the Stoic philosophy, and wrote a study of the life of Cato the Younger.
ehodippue, 229, not otherwise

re)

wn.

Trebonius, 339, Caius T., tribune of the people in 55 B.c., and an instrument of the triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul, and was loaded with favours by him, but was one of the conspirators against his life.
Turia, 51, a small town near tho upper waters of the Sucro, in south-eastern Spain.
U

Utica, 375-407, a Phoenician colony
from Tyre, older than Carthage, on the northern coast of Africa twenty-seven miles north-west of Carthage.
V

Vaccaei, 59, an important people in the interior of Hispania Tarra-conensis, or north-eastern Spain.
Varus, 373-377, Publius Attius V., a zealous partisan of Pompey.
When Pompey forsook Italy in 49 B.c., Varus took possession of Africa, where he had formerly been pro-praetor. In conjunction with King Juba he crushed Curio, the legate of Caesar. He fell in the battie of Munda (45).

Vatinius, 337, Publius V., a leading partisan of Caesar, praetor in 55 B.c., after which he served Caesar as legate in Gaul, and in important commands during the igre War. He is last heard of n 43.

423

cr

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

x ; Z
Xenocrates, the philosopher, 205, Zeno, 155, probably the Stoic 218, a native of Chalcedon in philosopher is meant, who taught Bithynia, and a disciple at at Athens in the third century
' Athens of Aeschines the Socratic. B.c., and wrote on law and He lived 396-314 B.c. government. :
Peed

”

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY BR. CLAY AND SONS, LTD., BRUNSWICK STREET, STAMFORD STREET, 9.B. I, AND BUNGAY, SUFFOLK.

PLUTARCH’S
" LIVES
WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
- IX
DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY
PYRRHUS AND CAIUS MARIUS
LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN
NEW YORK : G. P. PUTNAM’S SONS
MCMXX
PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agree- ment between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any © important deviation from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the manuscripts of Piutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. Of the Lives presented in.thig Yolume, the last part of the Antony (from chapter lxxvii.), and the Pyrrhus and Marius are contained in the Codex Sanger- manensis (S*), but none in the Codex Seitenstet- tensis (S). These are the two oldest and most authoritative manuscripts. The readings of the excellent Paris manuscript No. 1676 (F*) are not accessible for any of them. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader inust be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846, 4 voll., 8vo', or to the new text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler, in the Teubner Library of Greek and Latin texts (now half published). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless other- wise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

The Siefert-Blass edition of the Pyrrhus, in the Teubner series of annotated Greek and Latin texts, has been of great service.
All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared and_ utilized, including those of the Antony and Marius by Professor Long.

B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.
June, 1920.

CONTENTS

PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE .....°.....0284. Vv
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION... Vili
TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES... . . ix
DEMETRIGS:. © 3 ae: 95 ct fae Sec BES Se AS ae de hd]
ANTONY 3d 24S Sa GS ee Oa ee ee & Bek 687
COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY 333
PYRBHUS <2 4 oc RR ee. oe ee OS
CAIUS MARIUS... .. 2... eee ee ee ee we)~=—- 463
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES 601

ORDER. OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VoutuME I.

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
{2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VouuME II.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder. .
~ Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus. .
Comparison.
VouumeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
Vo.tumE IV.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLuME V.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
vill

VoLumME VI.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius

Paulus.
Comparison.
Votum_E VII.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
Ql 7) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
VoLuME VIII.

(15) Sertorius and Kumenes.
Comparison.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
VoLuME IX.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
VOLUME X.

(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.

(10) Philopoemen and Flam.

ininus.
Comparison.
VotumE XI.
(24) Aratus.
(23) Artaxerxes
(25) Galhba.
(26) Otho.
THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Ciceru.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Artaxeraes.
(24) Aratus.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.

DEMETRIUS

VOL, IX.

AHMHTPIO2

a) a > /
T. Ot mp@tou tas téyvas éouxdvar Taig aicOn-
a \ ceow vTovaBovtes ovy HKtotd pot Soxovor THY J al a , @
Tept Tas Kpioets aAUT@V KaTavonoat Suvaml, 7
A / e ; , ,
ToV évavTimvy opolws év ExaTépm! yéver Tredu-
A \ > ”“
Kapev avtitiauBavecOar. tTovTo yap avrTais
, A \ A lA
Kotvov éote TH O€ TPOS TA TEAN TOY KpLVOLEVWD
bd aA / e \ \ ”

avaghopa diadratTovelw. péev yap aiaOnous ovdéy TL “aAXOY El NevKOY 7 pEerXavaY Siayvo-
A > Q\ , A A OV
GEL yéeyovev, ovOE YAUKEwWY f TIKpOY, ovde wada-a \ 02> 2 ry a \ 2? , 9 9
K@V Kal EixovT@V 7 okKANPOY Kal avTLTUTO@V, GAN
Epyov auTns éExdotols évTUyyavovcay vTo Tav-
a N A
Tov Te KivetcOar Kal KivoupévyY pos TO Ppovody
> , e la 3 e \ lA \ / avadépey ws wétmovOev. ai dé Téeyvat weTa Noyou
le) A , 4
TVVETTHCAL TPOS Aiperw Kal AAYLY oiKELOU TLVOS,
/ \ \ ?
ghuynv € xal Sudxpovoty addoTpiov, Ta pev ad
ea , \ Ve ey an ,
AaAUT@Y Tponyoupévas, TA Oé UTrép TOD dPvdaEad bar
la) \ \ 9 “A
Kata cupBeBnds éemiBewpovor Kal yap taTpiKy
\ a \ . , cid 4
TO vooepov Kal appmoviKH TO expedEeS, OTrMS EXEL,
a / \ \ /
oKxoTre cupBEBnKe Tpos THY TAY évavTioY aTrEp-6 a 4 la)
yaciav, at TE TATwY TEdELOTATAL TEXVOV, TWh-poovyyn Kal Stxaiocvyn Kai dpovnats, ov xadov 1 év éxarépp Coraes and Bekker, after Reiske: éxarépy.

DEMETRIUS-: :
I. Tose who first assumed that the arts are like the bodily senses, seem to me to have perceived very clearly the power of making distinctions whick, both possess, by which power we are enabled to apprehend opposites, as well in the one case as in the other.
For the arts and the senses have this power ‘ia-common; though in the use to which we put the | distinctions made, they differ. For our sense- ~ perception has no greater facility in distinguishing white objects than black, or sweet things than bitter, or soft and yielding substances than hard and resisting ones, but its function is to receive impressions from all objects alike, and having received them, to report the resulting sensation to the understanding.
The arts, on the other hand, which proceed by the use of reason to the selection and adoption of what is appropriate, and to the avoidance and rejection of what is alien to themselves, contemplate the one class of objects with direct intent and by preference, and yet incidentally contemplate the other class also,

and in order to avoid them. For instance, the art of healing has incidentally studied the nature of disease, and the art of harmony the nature of discord, in order to produce their opposites; and the most consummate arts of all, namely, temperance, justice, and wisdom, since their function is to distinguish, not only what is good and just 3
B 2
co

PLUTARCH'S: LIVES

poovov Kal dixaiwv wat Bherlper, GNA Kab Bra- 88
Bepav Kal aiay pay. Kal aotKov Kpioets oveat, THY arretpia. TOV Mi COD Kkaddoreloperny dxaxiay ovK emawoialy,. QXr' aBeXrepiav nyouvTat Kat ayvotay ov: partiora yeveoa ew TpoanKel TOUS 4 opO ds Bipeopévous. ot yey ovy madavol 2rap- TLATAL,TOUS cidwras € év Tals éopTais Tohvv avary- naboyres. givew & dixpatov elotyov els TA TULTOOLA, Tois- _véots olov éoTt TO peOvery émderxvovtes"

ueig- de THY pev éx diacrpopiis éTEp@V émavop-Oaciv ov mavu piravO pwrrov ovodé TOMTLRNY _ 5. yobpeba, Ttav oé KeX pnLevorv doKxemTOTEpOV auae "+ TOIS Kal yeyovoTwV ev éfouciars Kal Tpaypace
a peydrous emipavav ets KaKiav, ov Yeipov lows
" éotl cubuyiay play q 6vo mapepBareiv eis Ta
mapadely para TOV Bion, ouK ép 1dovh, pea Ata, wal rayon TOV evTUYXavovT@V TOUKLANOVTAS
6 THY ypadny, GAN wamTeEp "Topnvias 0 On Baios em Serkvopevos Tois pabnrais kal Tovs ev Kal TOUS KAKOS avAODVTas EiwOer NéyetV, "OBTAS aunely def," cat mars, $¢ Obras avAely ov ei," 0 8 'Avteyevioas Kal jdcov @ETO TOV aya dv dxpodicBas TOUS vVéOUS addytév éav Kal Tov pavhov Tetpay AapBavocw, ovUTw joe doxovpev Kal 7 [LETS mpoOuporepor TOV Bedriovey éceoOat kali Geatai Kat poyntal Biwv el unde TOV havrAwY Kal peyopuevav avec TopyT@s EXOLMED.
7 Tlepréfeu 57) TovTO TO BiBrLov TOV Anpntpiov i

TOU TloXopxntod Biov kat “Avtwviov Tod avTo-KpaTopos, javopay paMoTa 57) TO I\drove | paptupnodvTwy dtr Kal Kaxias peyddas, @oTrEp 4

DEMETRIUS

and expedient, but also what is bad and unjust and disgraceful, have no praises for a guilelessness which plumes itself on its inexperience of evil, nay, they consider it to be foolishness, and ignorance of what ought especially to be known by men who would live aright. Accordingly, the ancient Spartans would put compulsion upon their helots at the festivals to drink much unmixed wine, and would then bring them into the public messes, in order to show their young men what it was to be drunk. And though I do not think that the perverting of some to secure the setting right of others is very humane, or a good civil policy, still, when men have led reckless lives, and have become conspicuous, in the exercise of power or in great undertakings, for badness, perhaps it will not be much amiss for me to introduce a pair or two of them into my biographies, though not that I may merely divert and amuse my readers by giving variety to my writing. Ismenias the Theban used to exhibit both good and bad players to his pupils on the flute and say, “ you must play like this one,” or again, “you must not play like this one” ;.and Antigenidas used to think that young men would listen with more pleasure to good flute-players if they were given an experience of bad ones also. So, I think, we also shall be more eager to observe and imitate the better lives if we are not left without narratives of the blameworthy and the had. |

This book will therefore contain the Lives of Demetrius the City-besieger and Antony the Im-perator, men who bore most ample testimony to the truth of Plato’s saying! that great natures exhibit 1 It is uncertain what passage in Plato is meant.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

aperds, ai peyara pvaoes éxpépovar. EVO [EVOL 5 opoiws épwrexol, rotixol, oTpaTioTtKol, peya-
hodwpor, TonuTenets, Apical, | kal Tas Kare TUXxNY Opovorntas axorovbous Ea Xov. ov yap povov év TO NoiT@ Bie peyara pev catopboivres, peyara dé opadropevo1, Treiotwv O€ émixpa-ToUvTES, WAELaTA dé amoBddrovtes, am poo SoKjTes dé mraiovtes, avedTiaTws dé made avaépovTes dueTéhec ay, adda Kal katéatpeway, O pev adovs
vTo TOV TONE LLO, o O€ éyyiota Tov Taleciv TOUTO ‘yevopeEvos.
II. "Avtuyove Toivuy dveiy vidy ex =tparovi-Kkns TAS Kopparyou ryevopeveov, TOV pep éml Ta-Scho Anpntptov, TOV 5° ént TP Tatpb Pircrrov avopacey. ovTOs éoTLV O TOV TrAELTTOY ROYOS.

Evioe O€ TOV Anuntptov ovy viov, dAXr’ adeddrdobv ryevéc Bat Tov ‘Apteyovou Aéyouow" ert vytrio yap avTe Tavratract ToD TAT pos TEAEUTHTAYTOS, cite THIS PNT POS evOvs TO ‘Avriyove yapnbetons, viov exeivou vouso Ofvat. Tov Lev OvV Dirsrov OV TOANOLS ETETL TOD Anpntptov VEWTEPOV évTa cuveBn TENUTHTAL Anpatptos € peyeder pee nv TOU TAT pos eXdt TOV, KaiTrep av peyas, iSéq 6é Kal KaddXEL Tpooa)Tov Oavpacros Kat TEpLTTOS, @OTE TOY TraTTOVTOY Kal ypapovrwy pnbeva
THis OMOLOTHTOS epicea Oar, TO yap avrd xapev
Kal Bapos kal poBov Kal Bpay elxe, Kal TUVEKE-Kpato T® veap@ Kal Tape Suc pwiuntos jpoiry
TUS émipdvera Kat Bactrsxn cEMvoTnS. ott oé
TOS Kal 70 nOos emepuxel T pos cx bev ap-Opwrev dua Kal yapw. Hua 705 yap OV ouy-yeverOat, axordlov Te wept wotous Kal Tpudas great vices also, as well as great virtues. Both alike were amorous, bibulous, warlike, munificent, extravagant, and domineering, and they had corresponding resemblances in their fortunes. For not only were they all through their lives winning great successes, but meeting with great reverses ; making innumerable ‘conquests, but suffering innumerable losses ; unex- pectedly falling low, but unexpectedly recovering themselves again; but they also came to their end, the one in captivity to his enemies, and the other on the verge of this calamity.
6

II. To begin, then, Antigonus had two sons by Stratonicé the daughter of Corrhagus, one of whom he named Demetrius, after his brother, and the other Philip, after his father. This is what the majority of writers say. But some have it that Demetrius was not the son, but the nephew of Antigonus; for his own father died when the boy was quite young, and then his mother immediately married Antigonus, so that Demetrius was considered to be his son. Well then, Philip, who was a few years younger than Demetrius, died. Demetrius, the surviving son, had not the height of his father, though he was a tall man, but he had features of rare and astonishing beauty, so that no painter or sculptor ever achieved a likeness of him. They had at once grace and strength, dignity and beauty, and there was blended with their youthful eagerness a certain heroic look and a kingly majesty that were hard to imitate. And in like manner his disposition also was fitted to inspire in men both fear and favour. For while he was a most agreeable companion, and most dainty of princes in the leisure devoted to drinking and cat dtaitas dBpoBiwtatos Bactréwy, évepyoratov

q , 7 5 , \ \ ao 4
av wadw Kal cpodpotaroy To wept Tas mpakers

évderexes elye xal Spactiypiov' 4 Kal padiora w Ce) 9G / N , e , tav Oeav é€yrov tov Atovycov, ws ToNEL@ TE
aA ,
xphoGar Sewvoratov, eipyvnv te adOus éx TONEWOU
4 \ > 4 \ 4 ? 4
Tpéar pos evppocuvny Kal Kapev eupedeotarov.
IIT. "Hv pév ody cai girorrdatwp d:adepovtws:
TH 5é qwepl thy pntépa orovd7n Kal Tov Tratépa
Tiav éepaiveto de' ebvoray adnOwnv padrov 7
Gepatreiav THs Suvdyews. Kai tote mpeoBeia
\ a? ' , > \ gS e
Tit tod 'Avtuyovou ayordlovtos aro Onpas o Anpntptos éréotyn Kal mpoceNav TO TaTpl Kar dirnoas, womep elye TAS Boridas, éxdbice trap' > 4 e \ ? / 9 4 v \ , avtov. o d€ 'Aytiyovos amovtas 45n Tovs mpé-v \ J , , a oBes exovTas Tas aTroKxpices peyadn hor7a
i; ce } - aerns f cM XY } mpooayopevoas, " Kal tovro," elzrev, " @ avdpes, amayyéenreTE TEept Hudv, STL Tpds GAANAOVS Ov-Tas Eyopev, ws ioxuy Tia Tpaypdtwv Bacidt-
Kav kai Suvdpews éridecE otvcav THY mMpos vidv ouovolay Kal TiatTsv. odTws Apa TavTn SvoKoWwa-VNTOV 7 apxKXy, Kal peoTtov atLatias Kal dvavotas, @oTe ayaddrcobar Tov péytotov tav 'AreEdvdpou Siadoxyov cat mpecRvtatov Ste 1) hoReitat Tov viov, GANA Mpocierat THY AOYYNY ExovTA TOD
, , ? \ > \ , e
TWOUATOS TANGLOV. OV wHnY AAA Kal pLoVOS, ws eimely, 0 oiKos ovTOs éml mréiotas Siabdoxas TOY ToLOvTwY Kax@v éxabdpevce, padrov Sé els / aA > 99 / / 9 a er
povos Tov am Avtiyovouv PirstrTos avetrev viov, 8

§90

DEMETRIUS

luxurious ways of living, on the other hand he had a most energetic and eager persistency and efficiency in action. Wherefore he used to make Dionysus his pattern, more than any other deity, s®Mce this god was most terrible in waging war, and on the other hand most skilful, when war was over, in making peace minister to joy and pleasure.

III. Moreover, Demetrius was also exceedingly fond of his father; and from his devotion to his mother it was ‘apparent that he honoured his father also from genuine affection rather than -out of de- ference to his power. On one occasion, when Antigonus was busy with an embassy, Demetrius came home from hunting; he went up to his father and kissed him, and then sat down by his side just as he was, javelins in hand. Then Antigonus, as the ambassadors were now going away with their answers, called out to them in a loud voice and said: “O men, carry back this report also about us, that this is the way we feel towards one another,’ implying that no slight vigour in the royal estate and proof of its power were to be seen in his harmonious and trustful relations with his son. So utterly unsociable a thing, it seems, is empire, and so full of ill-will and distrust, that the oldest and greatest of the suc- cessors of Alexander could make it a thing to glory in that he was not afraid of his son, but allowed him near his person lance in hand. However, this house was almost the only one which kept itself pure from crimes of this nature for very many generations, or, to speak more definitely, Philip was the only one of the descendants of Antigonus who put a son to death.!

1 Philip V., King of Macedonia. Cf. the Aemilius Paulus, vill. 6, 9

4 aui dé dArat oxedov dmacas Siadoyai TOAA@Y per éyovet Taidor, TONKGY 5é pnrépav povous Kat yuvarn ay TO pev yap abedpovs avatpety, GoTep ot yewper par Ta aitipara hapBdvovowy, oUTH cuvexw@peito Kowoy TL voptCopevov aitnpa Kat Bacirtxdv & vmép doganeias.

IV. Tod PEVTOL Kat prravOpwmov pice. Kat prreraipov yeyovevar TOV Anpnt prov év apyn Tapa ELypLa TOLOUTOV éotwy elTreiy. - McOpidarns 0 ‘AptoBaptdvou mais éraipos Hv avtTod Kai Kad? nrtxiav 1 cuvnOns, eOepatreve Sé *Avriyovoy, ote @v ovte Sox@v trovnpos, éx &é épuTrviou TLVvOS 2 Drowpiay "Avteyove Tapéa ev. édoKel yap péya kal Kadov medtov é em voy 0 Avtiryovos viypd TL” puctov KaTao Tel pew" €& avrob be Tparov pev vTropver Gar Dépos xpucoby, oAiy@ S Dartepov érr- aveNOwy ideiv ovdév Ar 7 TET UN LEVNY Karhduny. AvToUpEvos be kat TepiT ab ev aKodaat TLVOY Aeyoutay @S dpa. M.Opisarns eis Ilovrov Ev- Eewoy oixerat, TO Ypucouv Dépos eFaunaapevos. 3 éx TOUTOV Svatapay Geis cat TOV viov opxwaas TLOT TEL, éppace tHv ov avT@, Kal STL Idv- TWS TOV avO pwrroy ex TroO@Y mroveia Oat Kat dapOciper é ENVOKED. dxovoas 5é o Anunrptos 7x0€- acOn apospa, Kal Tod veaviaKou, cabdmep etoGer, ryevosLevou Tap avT@ Kat cuvovtos ét TX ONS, pbey Ear bar peev ovK eTOAunao ev oude TH povi) Karevmety dua TOV GpKov, Dmaryayov bé Kata putx pov aro TOV pidov, OS eyeryover av povoe Kad avTovs, TH TTUpAKL THS AOYXNS KaTéypadey Ets

1 kal na@ HAclay Ziegler: nae' nAuclay Kai.
2 Wiiyuda re Ziegler: Whypari.
Io

DEMETRIUS

But almost all the other lines afford many examples of men who killed their sons, and of many who killed their mothers and wives; and as for men killing their brothers, just as geometricians assume their postulates, so this crime came to be a common and recognized postulate in the plans of princes to secure their own safety.

IV. In proof that in the beginning Demetrius was naturally humane and fond of his companions, the following illustration may be given. Mithridates the son of Ariobarzanes was a companion of his, and an intimate of the same age. He was one of the courtiers of Antigonus, and though he neither was nor was held to be a base fellow, still, in consequence of a dream, Antigonus conceived a suspicion of him. Antigonus dreamed, namely, that he was traversing a large and fair field and sowing gold-dust. From this, to begin with, there sprang up a golden crop, but when he came back after a little whilg, he could see nothing but stubble. In his vexation and dis- tress, he heard in his dream sundry voices saying that Mithridates had reaped the golden crop for himself and gone off to the Euxine Sea. Antigonus was much disturbed by this vision, and after he had put his son under oath of silence, told it to him, adding that he had fully determined to destroy Mithridates and put him out of the way. On hearing this, Demetrius was exceedingly distressed, and when the young man, as was his wont, came to share his diversions with him, though he did not venture to open his lips on the matter or to warn him orally, because of his oath, he gradually drew him away from his friends, and when they were by themselves, with the sharp butt of his lance he wrote on the

I!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Thv yv opavtos avrod, " Dedye, MiOpiddta."
N \ 3 a 9 4 \ > a,
cuvels 5é éxelvos amédpa vurtos eis Kamrrradoxiav.
A A) b) , 4 4 ad
kal taxyuv thy "Avtiyove yevoperny ori trap auT@ auveTédes TO YpEwV. TOAATS yap Kal arya-

Ons exparnoe xopas, cal To Tov Ilovtixay Baotéwy yévos aydon Tou diadoxy Tava dpevoy ure ‘Pwpaiov éxeivos TrapeaXe. TavTa pe ouv €v-dulas Seiypata tod Anuytpiov mpos érruetcetav Kal duxacocvvny.
V. ’Evel 5é, @omep ev trois ‘Eptredoxdéous
, SA \ “ \ \. / ”
atotyelos Sua TO velKos Kat THY didiav evertt Siahopa mpos aAAnAA Kal modEpos, wardov 6é a ? A e f \ 4 LA
Tois GAANA@Y aTTopevolts Kat TEAaCOVGLY, OVTw
“ A b Tov mwaot tois “AXeEdvdpou d:adoxoats pos aAX7-Aous OvTa cuVEYh TWOdELOV ai TOY TpayydTav kal TOV TOTwY ouVaderat mpos eviovs érrotouy bd / \ A Igo 7° @ > emipavéeatepov Kat pardov é€éxgov, womep Avtt-
, a / yov@ tote pos IItodepaiov, adros pév “Avtiryovos
3 , / “A >] 9 4 b
év Dpvyia SuérpsuBe, Ttodeuaiov & axovwv éx U4 4 A , ,
Kurpov d:aBdvra tropbeiv Supiav Kat Tas woAELs
b>) 4 \ 4 l4 A eN amayew kat BialecOar, xarétreprye tov viov Anpntptov, dv0 Kal eixoow étav dvTa Kal otpateias TOTE TPWTOV AUTOTEADS ET’ Wpadyyact peyaXots admropevov. ola dé véos Kal detpos avdpt cup-
n 9
qwecwv ex THs ‘AdeEdvdpou Tadaiotpas nOAnKOTE \ \ 4 > e_N b A 9 , ToANOUS Kal peyddovs Kal’ avTov ayovas, éodd-‘4
An twept wokw Tdlav nrrndets, oxtaxicytAtov
/
aXovTwv Kal TevtaxicxXtAiwy aToOavovtwv. arreé-12
891

DEMETRIUS

ground so that he could see it, “Fly, Mithridates.” Mithridates understood, and ran away by night to Cappadocia. And soon the vision of Antigonus was accomplished for him by fate. For Mithridates made himself master of a large and fair territory, and founded the line of Pontic kings, which, in the eighth generation, was brought to an end by the Romans. This, then, is an illustration of the strong natural bent of Demetrius towards kindness and justice.

V. But just as among the elements of the universe, according to Empedocles, love and .hate produce mutual dissension and war, particularly among those elements which touch or lie near one another, so the continuous wars which the successors of Alexander waged against one another were aggravated and more inflamed in some cases by the close proximity of interests and territories, as at this time in the case of Antigonus and Ptolemy. Antigonus himself was tarrying in Phrygia, and hearing there that Ptolemy had crossed over from Cyprus and was ravaging Syria and reducing or turning from their allegiance its cities, he sent against him his son Demetrius, who was only twenty-two years of age, and was then for the first time engaging with sole command in an expedition where great interests were at stake. But since he was young and inexperienced, and had for his adversary a man trained in the training-school of Alexander who had independently waged many great contests, he met with utter defeat near the city of Gaza,? where eight thousand of his men were taken prisoners and five thousand were slain. He

1 In 63 B.c., when Pompey conquered Mithridates VI. and dismembered his RIDEAOMM 3 In the spring of 312 B.c.

Bare S€é cal oxnyny cat ypnpata Kal ddws ovp-Tacav THy Tept TO c@pa Oepareiay. ara TATA
fev avT@ IItoANeuatos améreu we peta TOV dirov, evyvapova kai dirdvOpwrov averrav Noyov, ws ov qept mavTwyv apa, tept dSo—ns b€ Kai apyis / 9 \ > " , \ " Toveuntéoy éativ avtois. Anpunrptos bé de€awv a) a) \ Ld > , pevos edEato Tots Oeois un ToNdY Ypovoy oetré-
, 4 4 > \ l4
thv yevéoOar IItodewaim yapitosradrAa TAaXEwWsS apeipacbar Sia Tov opoiwy. Kal mdbos ov petpaxiov Tradev év apyn wpdkews avatpatrévTos, arr' éuBprOods otpatnyoo Keypnuévov mpayya-Tov petaBorais, avdpav TE TUAAOYHS Kal KaTAoxeuns OmAwy émepedcito Kal Tas trodes bua Netpos elye Kal Tovs AOpotCopévous éeyupvatev.
VI. 'Avriryovos 8 tHv waxnv uO opevos ItoXe-patov pev aryevetous verixnxota épn viv avlis Siaywvieiabar pds avdpas, Tod bé€ viod To dpo-vnua Kabenety Kal KoXovcat py Bouvdopevos ovK évéstn wad aitovpevm payecOar Kal" avrov, GX' adie. al, pet ov oA Xpovov adixto

KidAns, Lrodvepaiou otparnyos, meta Napmmpas Suvapews, ws ekeddoov Yvpias Anuyntpioyv amaons, T mponttncOa, Katadpovovpevov. o 8
? / ? \ > / /
éEaibuns émimecav ov mpoatcbopevy cal poBnoas éiaBev avt® otpatnyp To oTpatoTedov: Kat oTpatioTas pev émtaxioxidiovs Cavtas etre, Npnudtov Sé tapmoANwy éxupievoev. Exaipe dé vixnoas ovy ols ev, adr ols arrodwcer 14

lost also his tent, his money, and in a word, all his personal effects. But Ptolemy sent these back to him, together with his friends, accompanying them with the considerate and humane message that their warfare must not be waged for all things alike, but only for glory and dominion. Demetrius accepted the kindness, and prayed the gods that he might not long be indebted to Ptolemy for it, but might speedily make him a like return. And he took his disaster, not like a stripling thwarted at the outset of an undertaking, but like a sensible general acquainted with reverses of fortune, and busied himself with the levying of men and the preparation of arms, while he kept the cities well in hand and practised his new recruits.

VI. When Antigonus learned of the battle, he said that Ptolemy had conquered beardless youths, but must now fight with men;! however, not wishing to humble or curtail the spirit of his son, he did not . oppose his request that he might fight again on his own account, but suffered him to do it. And not long after, up came Cilles, a general of Ptolemy, with a splendid army, intending to drive Demetrius out of all Syria, and looking down upon him because of his previous defeat. But Demetrius fell upon him suddenly and took him by surprise, put him to rout, and captured his camp, general and all; he also took seven thousand of his soldiers prisoners, and made himself master of vast treasures. How- ever, he rejoiced to have won the day, not by reason of what he was going to have, but of what he could

1 The competitors at the great games were divided into three classes : boys, beardless youths, and men (Plato, Laws, 833 c).

Ewerre, Kal THs viens OV TOY WAOVTOV OUTwS OVSE
tHv Sofav, as THY SiddAvow Tod didavO pwrrev-3 patos éxeivou Kal Thy Yapw Hyadtnoev. ov pHV avtoyvapoves taita émpakev, adr éypawe TO matpi. Sovtos & éxeivou xa Kedevoavtos dv BovrAetat tact xpicacbas TpOTrov, AUTOV TE TOV Kidrnv cat pidrous avtov Swpnodpevos adOdvas amémeppe. todTo To mdOos Zupias é&nXace IIrovepnaiov, Avtiyovoy 5é xatnyayev ex Kerar-YOVv Yaipovta TH vitn nal twoOodvta Dedcacba TOV vioV.
VII. "Ex tovrov 5 trav “ApdBav tovs cadov-pévous NaBartaiovs tmayayécOar meudbels o Anpnrptos éxwvduvevoce pev eis TOTOUs avudpous éutecov, TO Sé py SvatapaxOnvar pnd éexarayivat katatrAnEdpevos Tors BapBdpous, réiav Te AaBeov worAAnY Kal KapynArovs éEwtaKoclas Tap, AUTOYV aveywpnoen.
2 Emel S€ LéXrevxos, éxtrecwv pev vo ’Avtuyovou
THs BaBvXwvias mpdtepov, daTepov 5 dvaraBov
Thv apyny bv avTod Kat Kpatav, avéBn peta Suvdpews, Ta’ auvopovvta ois “Ivdois eOvn «al.
tas wept Kavxacov émapyias mpocakopevos,
ehnigey Anya ptos épn ov evpyaew tHv Meao-Tora play Kal wepdoas apve TOV Evdparny els THY BaBvrwviav Tapera med wy epOn, Kat THs érépas akpas (S00 yap haoav) éxxpovoas THY TOD Ledevxou dpoupayv Kal Kpatnoas idious éyxat-
3 éoTnoev éemtaxicxytriovs avdpas. éx S€ THs

16

DEMETRIUS

' restore, and was delighted, not so much with the wealth and glory which his victory brought, as with the power it gave him to recompense the kindness and return the favour of Ptolemy. And yet he did not do this on his own responsibility, but first wrote to his father about it. And when his father gave him permission and bade him dispose of everything
as he liked, he sent back to Ptolemy both Cilles himself and his friends, after loading them with gifts. This reverse drove Ptolemy out of Syria, and brought Antigonus down from Celaenae ; he rejoiced at the victory and yearned to get sight of the son who had won it.

VII. After this, Demetrius was sent to bring into subjection the Arabs known as Nabataean, and incurred great peril by getting into regions which had no water; but he was neither terrified nor greatly disturbed, and his demeanour overawed the ° Barbarians, so that he took much booty and seven hundred camels from them and returned.

And now Seleucus, who had once been expelled from Babylonia by Antigonus, but had afterwards succeeded in recovering the realm and was now wielding the power there, went up with an army, designing to annex the tribes on the confines of -India and the provinces about Mount Caucasus. Demetrius, accordingly, expecting that he would find Mesopotamia unprotected, suddenly crossed the Euphrates and invaded Babylonia before Seleucus could stop him. He expelled from one of its citadels (there were two of them) the garrison left there by Seleucus, got it into his power and established in it seven thousand of his own men. But

xapas Soa dépev 7 aryew NOVVAVTO TOUS OTpA-TLOTAS apeneio bar kal AapBavew Kedevoas, emaviGev émt Oddacouy ReBasorépav Lerevucw THY dpxny GTOALTF OV efiaracbas "yap éd0xet TO xa.cody os pnxéts mpoonkovaoay avtois. IItone-paiouv pévrot TohtopKowvTos 'Adtcapvacoy oféws BonOnoas éEnprace thv Tod.

VIII. 'Evdd£ou S€ tis durotipias TavTns yevopévns, opun wapéotn Oavydatos avtots éXevOepody 89
\ ¢ , a _ \ , \ Thv 'EXXaba tacayv vTo Kacadvépou cai IItonepaiov KaTtadedovAM@péevnv. TovTOU TOAELOY OvOELS
? w a t , \ ,
émoNeunoe TOV Bactréwy KadXiw Kal dixatoTepov:
'as yap aya tovs BapBapous tarewvodvtes evrrold 4 > A A e XN > , pias ouvyyayov, ets Tovs "EXAnvas brép evdokias

kal Tihs avnAtcKov. ws O€ TpwToV eddoKeL TAELY 9 \ \ > , “A , 3 ld \ \
ért tas “AOnvas, Tov hidwv eimovtTos TUvds TpOS > \ b s (4 “A a, \ ,
Tov Avtiyovoy ote det Tavtny THY TOALY, dv EXwot, katéye 6: avtav, émiBdbpay tis “EAXAdbos5
@ > / e 9 , > b >
ovoav, ov mpoceayvev o Avtiryovos, aXN €7t-/ \ ” \ \ > 4 \ Bab pav peéev bn xarnv cal doddevtov elvat Thy _evvotay, Tas 6é’AOnvas, OoTEep axoTHY THS oiKOUpévns, Taxv tH S0—n Starrupcevey eis AravtTas 9 , \ 4 4 \ /
avOpwrous tas mpakes. érrer 5€ Anuytpios
éywv dpyuptov wevtaxioxiba TddavTa Kal otd-Nov vewv wevtynxovta Kal Staxociwy én tas
> 4 \ \ ” , “a /
A@nvas, To pév aotv Anpntpiov tod Parnpéws Kacavép@ dtotxoivtos, ev b€ TH Movvuxia ppovpas xabectwons. evtuyia 5€ dwa Kal tpovoia vpnoapmevos érepaivero T@ Iletpaved wéuarry

after ordering his soldiers to take and make booty of everything which they-could carry or drive from the country, he returned to the sea-coast, leaving Seleucus more confirmed than before in his possession of the realm; for by ravaging the country Demetrius was thought to admit that it no longer belonged to his father. However, while Ptolemy was besieging Halicarnassus, Demetrius came swiftly to the aid of the city and rescued it.

VIII. The glory won by this noble deed inspired father and son with a wonderful eagerness to give freedom to all Greece, which had been reduced to subjection by Cassander and Ptolemy. No nobler or juster war than this was waged by any one of the kings ; for the vast wealth which they together had amassed by subduing the Barbarians, was now lavishly spent upon the Greeks, to win glory and honour. As soon as father and son"had determined to sail against Athens, one of his friends said to Antigonus that they must keep that city, if they took it, in their own hands, since it was a gangway to Greece. But Antigonus would not hear of it; he said that the goodwill of a people was a noble gangway which no waves could shake, and that Athens, the beacon-tower of the whole world, would speedily flash the glory of their deeds to all man- kind. ~ So Demetrius sailed, with five thousand talents of money and a fleet of two hundred and fifty ships, against Athens, where Demetrius the Phalerean was administering the affairs of the city for Cassander and a garrison was set in Munychia. By virtue of forethought combined with good fortune, he appeared off Piraeus on the twenty-sixth of the 4 dbivovtos Mapyndavos, mpoatcOopevov pév ov-

, 3 \ \ " f- e , e-. ff Sevos, érrel 5€ BhON WANTioy 0 aTOAOS, amTdvT@V
e -~ \ \ a e , ws I[rodepaixas tas vais vrodéyec8at trapa-/ 2 \ , bd , e oxevalopévwy, oe supdpovncavres éBonGovv ot otpatnyol, cal BdpuvBos jv, olov eixos év ampoc-Soxnt@ Twodeulovs amroBaivovras avayxalopévay autvecOa. Tois yap oTopact TOY ALLEVMY
b / b \ e / \ , akreLoTos erituy@v o Anuntptos Kat dveEeXaoas évtos Hv non Katadavys tact, Kai dteonunvev amTdo THS vews aitnow ovyias Kal owris
5 yevouévov O€ TOVTOV KNpUKA TapacTnaodpEVOS
avettev Ott wéurpetey avTOY Oo TaTHp ayaOn TYXN \. 3 / 1 , \ \ \
tous A@nvaious! éXevOepwoovta Kai Thy ppovpav éxBarovvta Kat Tovs vosous avtois Kal THv TaTplov aTobwcovTa TOALTELAY.
IX. "AvappnOévrwy 5€ tovTwv of pév moddXot Tapaxyphya tas domidas Oémevor po THY TOOw@Y
dvexpotnoav Kat Bowvtes éxéXevoy atroBaivey — Tov Anunrplov, evepyérny kal owthpa wpocayopevovtes' of 5é mepi tov Dadnpéa twavTws pév — @ovto deiv déxec0at Tov KpatodvtTa, Kav pndéev Ov émrayyérAeTat médrdn BeBasody, Sus 5€ mpécBets Seopuévous® dméatetAay, ols o Anuntptos évtuyov diriavOpwrws cuvéteuye tap éavtod tev Ta-
, . A

2 tpwwv dirwy tov Midrnorov 'Aptotodnpov. tod 5é Darnpéws b1a THY petaBorAnv THs TortTelas aA \ la A A , } , HGXXov TOUS TOALTAS 7) TOUS TOAEmLLOUS SedaLKOTOS,
> > / e 4 > \ \ \ '
ove nuedryoev o Anuntptos, ava Kat tThv do€av

1 robs 'A@nvaiovs Sintenis and Ziegler : 'A@nvafous. 2 Seouévous Bekker has denaouévous, after Coraés.

month Thargelion.1 Nobody knew beforehand of his approach, but as soon as his fleet was seen in the vicinity, everybody thought that the ships belonged to Ptolemy and prepared to receive them. At last, however, the generals discovered their mistake and came to the rescue, and there was confusion, as is natural when men are compelled to defend themselves against enemies who are making an unexpected landing. For Demetrius, finding the entrances to the harbours open and sailing through them, was presently inside and in view of all, and signalled from his ship a demand for quiet and silence. When this was secured, he proclaimed by voice of herald at his side that he had been sent by his father on what he prayed might be a happy errand, to set Athens free, and to expel her garrison, and to restore to the people their laws and their ancient form of government.

IX. On hearing this proclamation, most of the people at once threw their shields down in front of them, and with clapping of hands and loud cries urged Demetrius to land, hailing him as_ their saviour and benefactor. The party of Demetrius the Phalerean also thought they must by all means receive the conqueror, even though he should con- firm none of his promises, but nevertheless sent ambassadors to supplicate his mercy. These Deme- trius met in a friendly spirit, and sent back with them one of his father’s friends, Aristodemus of Miletus. Now the Phalerean, owing to the change of government, was more afraid of his fellow-citizens than of the enemy. Demetrius, however, was not unmindful of him, but out of regard for the man’s aidea Bets Kal THD apeTny Tob avd pos eis @nBas avrov, dorep éBounero, pera aopanrelas ouvelémepnper. autos S€ thy pev TONY, OK ay Eby, Kaimrep em Oupan, iSeiy mpotepov 4 TavTatracw erevdepocat THIS poupas damaddd£as: ™ O¢ Mowvuxia Xapareopa Kat Tad pov mreprBadiov bua pécou, Meyapors émémNevoev bd Kaodvdpov ppoupovpevots.

1 May-June, 307 B.c.

Tv@opevos dé Thy ‘AreEdvdpov Tov IloAuméprOvTos yevomevnyv yuvaina Kpatnoitonu év Ila-Tpats d:atpiBoucay OvK ay anders yevéo Bat per’

avrov, meptBonrov ovcav éml KAAXNEL, KaTANLTO@V
THY. Svvapw € év TH Meyapinh Tm pon ev evlwvous TWAS EXov avy avT@. Kal TOUTM@Y TaN amrooT peyras ATETKNVOTE Xwpis brép Tov Aabety Thy yuvaixa cuverOovcav avt@. TovTO TLVEs aicBo-Hevot TOV ToAEuiwy éEaidvns KaTédpapov én avTov. o 6¢ PoBnbels Kal rAaBov xrapvdrov eVTENES Spoup pevyor eLepuyer, OXiryou dejoas aia xiarny ddwow é& axpacias aN@VvalL. THY be oKNVIV PETA TOY YPNUaTwY @myovTO AaBovTEs of TONEMLOL.
Tov dé Meyapwr ahovTa@v Kal TOV OT PATLWOT OV
éf” aptayny Tpamropeveov ‘AOnvaior TapyTyo Avro TOAAT Senoes ToVs Mervyapeis: cat THY ppoupav 0
Anpnr ptos éxBahov nrevdepwae THY TOMY. €TL 5é TovTO 7 paTTov TOU pirocogov 2TiAm@vos enya On, SoEav Eyovtos avdpos nonpévov TOS év novxia KataBiavac. peTaTeprpdapevos ouv av.
TOV NPWTA LH TLS eine TL Tap éxeivou. Kal o Lrikmev, “ Ovdeis,” elmrev: “ovdéva yap eidov émiatauav aopépovta. tav &é OepatovTwy 22

good reputation and excellence, sent him and his friends under safe conduct to Thebes, as he desired. As for himself, he declared that, although he desired to see the city, he would not do so before he had completed its liberation by ridding it of its garrison ; meanwhile, after running a trench and a palisade - round Munychia, he sailed against Megara, where a garrison had been stationed by Cassander.

But on learning that Cratesipolis, who had been the wife of Polyperchon’s son Alexander, was tarrying at Patrae, and would be very glad to make him a visit (and she was a famous beauty), he left his forces in the territory of Megara and set forth, taking a few light-arrhed attendants with him. And turning aside from these also, he pitched his tent apart, that the woman might pay her visit to him unobserved. Some of his enemies learned of this, and made a sudden descent upon him. Then, in a fright, he donned a shabby cloak and ran for his life and got away, narrowly escaping a most shameful capture in consequence of his rash ardour. His tent, together with his belongings, was carried off by his enemies.

Megara, however, was captured, and the soldiers would have plundered it had not the Athen- ians made strong intercession for its citizens; De- metrius also expelled its garrison and gave the city its freedom. While he was still engaged in this, he bethought himself of Stilpo the philosopher, who was famous for his election of a life of tranquillity. Accordingly, Demetrius summoned him and asked him whether any one had robbed him of anything. “No one,” said Stilpo, “for I saw nobody carrying away knowledge.” But nearly all the servants in \ e 4 / b] \ 4 bp) \ oyebov dtavtwv StakXNaTévtwr, eet Tadty avTov

o Anunrptos éptrodpovetro cal téXos arraddaT-Topevos elmer: “’EXevOépay buav, ® YriArror, aoXeiT wo THY modu, ‘’Opdas,” én, * Néyeus* ovdéva yap auav Sovrov dmonrehovmras.”
X. *Esrel 6€ wddw érraverOav mpos tHv Mov-_ vuylav Kal orpatotredevaas éFéxoe THY Ppoupav
, XN / C4 ¥ a“ 9
Kal Katéoxare TO hpovptoy, ovTws 7dn TAY’ AOn-vaiwy Seyopévar kat Kadovvtwyv TapeNOwv ets TO dotv Kat ouvayayov tov Sjpov amédwxe THv TaTplLov TONTELAY: Kal TpocUTécXETO TAPA TOU
matpos avtois abikecOat citov TevTexaidexa pupiddas pedimvov nal Edw vavIrnynoipev aA b] z \ lA b A \ > mAnOos ets ExaTov TpLApELs. A@nvaioe 5é atro-haBavres THY Onwoxpatiay eres mevTeKxardecaTy, TOV 6€ pécov Xpovov amo TOV Aapaxdy Kal THs
mwept Kpavvava payns dNOy@o pév orALyapyeKts, Epym O€ povapyiKns KaTacTacews yevopévns Sid \ a t Y ? \ ’
thv tov Dadnpéws Sivayy, ovTw AapTpov ev
Tais evepyeciaus Kal péyav havévta tov Anpn-Tpiov émayxO7n Kal Bapdy éroincayv trav Tinev
a 4 A Tais apetpliats as Endicavto. mpator péev yap av0porev amavrwv tov Anpyntpiov Kat ’Avria b , v b 4
yovov Bactreis avnyopevoay, ad\riws adhootovpevous Tovvoya, Kat TovTO! 8) povoy TaVv BaciN-

“a ” a KOv étt Tols amo Didimmov nal ’AreEdvSpou
meptetvas Soxody dOiKTov étépots Kal axoww@vntov:
1 «al rovro Coraés and Ziegler delete the xa; Bekker corrects to ws, after Schaefer.
24

the city were stolen away, and when Demetrius once more tried to deal kindly with the philosopher, and finally, on going away, said: “ Your city, Stilpo, I leave in freedom,’ “Thou sayest truly,’ replied Stilpo, “for thou hast not left a single one of our slaves.”

X. Coming back again to Munychia and encamp- ing before it, he drove out the garrison and demol- ished the fortress, and this accomplished, at last, on the urgent invitation of the Athenians, he made his entry into the upper city, where he assembled the people and gave them back their ancient form of government. He also promised that they should receive from his father a hundred and fifty thousand bushels of grain, and enough ship timber to build a hundred triremes. It was fourteen years since the Athenians had lost their democratic form of govern- ment, and during the period which followed the Lamian war and the battle at Crannon! their government had been administered, nominally as an oligarchy, but really as a monarchy, owing to the great influence of the Phalerean. And now that Demetrius had shown himself great and splendid in his benefactions, the Athenians rendered him odious and obnoxious by the extravagance of the honours which they voted him. For instance, they were the first people in the world to give Demetrius and Antigonus the title of King, although both had up to that time shrunk from using the word, and although this was the only royal prerogative still left to the descendants of Philip and Alexander which it was thought that others could not assume or share ;

1 323-322 B.c. See the Phocion, xxiii.; xxvi. 1.
. 2 5
é

, \ a > fs , \ _\. 9
povot 6€ cwrnpas avéyparyav Oeovs, Kal Tov érrw-yupLov Kal TaTpLOV apXoVTA KaTaTavoaVTES lEepea awTnpwv éyepotovovy Kal’ Exactov évavrov:
\ “A 9 \ “A , . \ “

Kal TOUTOY eT TOV WhdiopatwY Kat Tov cvuUBo-

, “A 4,

ANaiwy mpoéypaghov. évupaivecOar Se TO TéTA®

ve) cal \ ,

peta TOV Oe@v avTors endicayto: Kai TOY TO-

Tov Omov wpa@Ttov amréBn Tov appatos, Kabtepa-

\ \ 3 4 4

cavTes Kal Bopov émiOévtes Anuntpiov Karar-

Barou mpoonyopevoay: tais b€ dudais dv0 mpoceé-

\

Oecav, Anuntpidda Kat ‘Avtiyovida, cai thy

BovAnyv tTav TevTaxociwy mpoTepoy éFaKxociwv

éroinaav, ate 6) hudAns éxaotns TevTnKovTa Bovreutas Trapeyouevns.
\ A

XI. To 8 wwepdhvéctatov éevOvpnpua tod Ltparokréous (ovTos yap Rv o THY Godav Tov-TWY Kal TEPLTT@Y KaLvoupyos apeoKkevpaTw”), ¥ fad e U \ 4
eypawrey omws ol Teutopevot Kata Whhlopa
/ N b 4 aA J, b \
Snuocia mpos ‘Avtiryovoy 4 Anuntpiov avti mpe-“ 4 4 e w
aBevrav Oewpol réyouto0, xaOdtrep ot IIvO0t wai
3 4 \ , , e \ “ ,
Odvuptriate tas tratpiovs Oucias birép TaY To0-
2 7 3 ne ae a e
Aewy avayovtes ev Tais EAAnviKais Eoptats. Hv dé kal TaAAa TapdToApos Oo LtpatoKAys, Kat BeBiwxws acerxyas cal thy Tod madalod Kre@vos atroptpeicbat Soxav Bwporoxiay ral Bde-
/ a \ N A > / ” \ \

Auplay TH Wpos Tov Shwov evyepeia. Eaxe 5€é THY
e , , 9 , , > A
eTaipav PvuraKioy aveiknpws’ Kal OTE aUT@

—

1 Every fifth year, at the Panathenaic festival, a sacred robe was carried in solemn procession and deposited with

, 76

DEMETRIUS

moreover, the Athenians were the only people to give them the appellation of Saviour-gods, and they put a stop to the ancient custom of designating the year with the name of the annual archon, and elected every year a priest of the Saviour-gods, whose name they prefixed to their public edicts and private contracts. They also.decreed that the figures of Demetrius and Antigonus should be woven into the sacred robe,! along with those of the gods; and the spot where Demetrius first alighted from his chariot they consecrated and covered with an altar, which they styled the altar of Demetrius Alighter ; they also created two new tribes, Demetrias and Antigonis; and they increased the number of the senators, which had been five hundred, to six hundred, since each of the tribes must furnish fifty senators.

XI. But the most monstrous thing that came into the head of Stratocles (he it was who invented these elegant and clever bits of obsequiousness) was his motion that envoys sent by public decree and at public expense to Antigonus or Demetrius should be called sacred deputies, instead of ambassadors, like those who conducted to Delphi and Olympia the ancient sacrifices in behalf of the cities at the great Hellenic festivals. In all other ways also Stratocles was an audacious fellow ; he lived an abandoned life, and was thought to imitate the scurrility and buffoonery of the ancient Cleon in his familiarities with the people. He had taken up with a mistress named Phylacion ; and one day when she had bought the goddess Athena on the Acropolis. On it were represented the exploits of the goddess, particularly in the Battle of the Giants.

27

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ a 9 bd ” , b eed
mpos dettvov é€ ayopas wptapevns éyxepadous
\ / “ a) PP as Kat tpaxynrous, “Ilarai,” elie, “ Towatta ye

b] , 4 e ‘ 99
weavnkas ols odatpifowev of rodsTevopevot.
THs 5é€ mept Apopyov itTns Tov veav guuBdaons an 3 , , ee l
tots “A@nvaias, Pbdcas tovs amrayyéXXovTas elonracey éeatepavwpévos Sia Tov Kepaperxoi, Kal mpooayyeiAas STL vevixnxacw, evayyédta Ovew éypawe kal xpewdaiciay Twa Kata hurry étoinoev. orjg&y@ 8 totepov TaY Ta vavayla Ko-plovTwv amo THS maXnNsS Tapayevopévwv Kal Tov Syou pos opynv KadodvTos avTor, itauas bro0-otras Tov OopuBov, “Kita,” édy, ‘tt wemrovOate Sewov, ef Sv0 nyépas ndéws yeyovate;” ToravTy fev 4 TOU YTpaToKAé€ous OpacuTns.
XII. "Hv 6€ dpa Kai crupds érepar Gepporepa Kata tov ‘Apiotopavn. ypaper yap Tis adXos bmepBadropevos dvedeuBepig Tov Yrparokréa, SéxecOar Anuntptov, oodKis av adixnrat, Tois
Anuntpos xat Atovicov Eeviopois, TO 8 brrep- —

Baddopévp Raptpornte Kal ToArvTEACia THY
e \ b] 4 9 3 UA , 4
Urodoxnyv apytptov eis avdOnua Snpocia - 8ido-
, N lal “A \ ~
aOat. tédos b€ TOV TE pynvav Tov Movevyiwva Anpntptava cat Tov Huepav THY Evnv Kal véay
Anpntpidda tpoonyopevcar, kal TeV éopTav Ta Avovvcva petwvopacav Anpuntpia. érecnpnve dé Trois mAeloTos TO Ociov. o pev yap TérXos, @tep endicavto peta Tod Atos nal rhs “AOnvas mpocevudyvat Anunrpiov Kat ’Avtiyovov, trep-28 : 894

DEMETRI US”

in the market-place for his supper some brains and neck-bones, “Aha!” he cried, “thou hast bought just such delicacies for me as we statesmen used to play ball with.” Again, when the Athenians suffered their naval defeat near Amorgus,! before the tidings of the disaster could reach the city he put a garland on his head and drove through the Cerameicus, and after announcing that the Athenians were victorious, moved a sacrifice of glad tidings and made a generous distribution of meat to the people by tribes. Then, a little later, when the wrecks were brought home from the battle and the people in their wrath called him out, he faced the tumult recklessly and said: “What harm have I done you, pray, if for two days ye have been happy?” Such was the effrontery of Stratocles.

XII. But there are things hotter even than fire, as Aristophanes puts it.2 For some one else, out- doing Stratocles in servility, proposed that whenever Demetrius visited the city he should be received with the hospitable honours paid to Demeter and Dionysus, and that to the citizen who surpassed all others in the splendour and costliness of his reception, a sum of money should be granted from the public treasury for a dedicatory offering. And finally, they changed the name of the month Mounychion to Demetrion,. and that of the last day of a month, the “ Old and New,” to Demetrias, and to the festival called Dionysia they gave the new name of Demetria. Most of these innovations were marked with the divine displeasure. The sacred robe, for instance, in which they had decreed that the figures of Demetrius and Antigonus should be ‘woven along with those of Zeus and

1 In 322 B.c. A Macedonian fleet was victorious.

‘ :
Knights, 382. 29
PLUTARCH’S LIVES.

, \ wae a / 2 4 4
TOHEVOS bia roi Kepapercod pécos Eppayn Oven Ans eutrecovans Tept 5é Tos Bwmovs Tous Exelvow e&vOnoev) Yi KUKA@ TOAD K@VELOV, ANAWS
\ a a a .
pnde THS Ywopas ToAdaxod dudpmevovy TH 6é
A / \ nuepa 4 Ta TOV Atovyciwy éyiveto, THY TOmTHY
a C4
KaTéAvoay iayupav wdywv yevouévay Tap wpav.
/ ,
kal raxvns Badeias érttecovans ov povov apire-
a 4 a Nous Kal auKads atacas atréxavoé TO odxos,
9 \ \ a“ / N a 4
Gra Kal Tov citov Tov mWAEclotov KaTépOetpev
éy xdon. Sto wal Didsrridns éxOpos wv Tod
4 b] / N 2 A ? a LtpatoxrAéovs ey Kwpwdia mpos avTov eroince TAUTA’
2 a > 4 e , A bf 4
5: by amréxavoev 7) WAXY TAS’apTEXOUS,

“A e
5. bv aceBodvl’ o trétXos Eppayn pécos,
Tas TOV Oeav Tias TroLodVT’ avOpwrivas.
TavTa Katadvet Sjpov, ov Koppdoia.
"Hv & 6 Pirsrmidyns Avoimayou diros, Kat

modAa os avtov o Sihuos eb Erabey vo Tov

/ 907 \ \ \ A > a \ Bacitréws. éddxer 5€ Kai mpos mpakiv avT@ Kai
mpos atpateiay evavpuBoros amavrncas elvat kai opOeis. adrAws 5€ Kal dia TO HOS evdoxiper, \ b A ? 9 aA , b

pnOev évoxr@v pnd avrLKHs Tepiepylas ava-

4 A
Tiumrapevos. dirodpovovpévou Sé€ rote TOU Avotwpmdyou mrpos avtov Kal eitrovtos, “OQ. PidsTio l4 A 9 fe) a 99 ce , 99
mwion, Tivos aot TOY éuav petad@; ‘‘ Movop, 4 73 aA \ a 3 / ” an \ én, “ Bacired, un TMV aTroppHTwY. ToUTOY MEV 30

DEMETRIUS

Athena, as it was being carried in procession through the midst of the Cerameicus, was rent by a hurricane which smote it;! again, all around the altars of those Saviour-gods the soil teemed with hemlock, a plant which did not grow in many other parts of the country at all; and on the day for the celebration of the Dionysia, the sacred procession had to be omitted on account of severe cold weather that came out of season. And a heavy frost followed, which not only blasted all the vines and fig-trees with its cold, but also destroyed most of the grain in the blade. Therefore Philippides, who was an enemy of Stratocles, assailed him in a comedy with these verses * ;:— “ Through him it was that hoar-frost blasted all the vines,
Through his impiety the robe was rent in twain,
Because he gave the gods’ own honours unto men.

Such work undoes a people, not its comedy.” Philippides was a friend of Lysimachus, and for his sake the king bestowed many favours on the Athenian people. Moreover, when he was about to undertake anything or make an expedition, he thought it a good omen to meet or catch sight of Philippides. And in general the character of Philippides gave him a good repute, since he was no busybody, and had none of the officious ways of a courtier. On one occasion Lysimachus wished to do him a kindness, and said: “ Philippides, what have I that I can share with thee?” “O King,” said
Philippides, “ anything but one of thy state secrets.”
1 The ‘‘peplos” was spread like a sail on the mast of the sacred Panathenaic ship.

2 Cf. Kock, Com. Att. ‘Frag. iii. p. 308.
31

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

® 9 7 5 , / “A] ‘ a
ovv émitndes éxeiv@ trapeOnkapev, TO aTrO TOD Bnparos Tov amo ths Oupéerns.
XIII. “O 8 padtora tev Tiwav brreppves Fv Kat adXoxoToy, éypare Apopoxreidns 6 LPytreos eo A a ? / 3 / 3 \
imép THS TOV aoTridwyv avabécews eis Aeddovds
\ , A , >» A \
wapa Anpntpiov AaBeiv yonopov. avtnv Sé
/ \ A 3 A / 4
Tapaypayw Thy rNEEw ex TOV WndiopaTos oUTWS
éyovoay: “'Ayadn tixn. SedoxOar TO Shum
A \ A ov ws 1 ? ee Netpotovnca Tov Ojpov Eva avdpa e€ “AOnvator,
— OoTLs ALKGmEvos Tpds TOV DwTHpa Kal KadALEpn-Tapevos eTEepwTHoEt TOY YwTHpa Tas av evoeBé-oTaTa Kat KadNoTAa Kal THY TayioTHV oO SHpos THY aWOKaTadCTAGW TolncatTo TaVv avadnudtav:
6 1. 8 av xXphon, tadta wpdrrew tov Shpyov.”
OUT KATapwKewpeEvot TOD avOpwTrov TpocbsepOer-> f 2Q\ e I \ 4
pav avtov, o00é GAXAWS Dytaivovta THy Sudvotav.
XIV. "AAN’ ev ye tais "AOnvass tore oXOAALw
? 4 A 3 , 4 A

nyayeto xnpevovoav Evpudixny,) Merriddou peév @ 9 4 A : “ / de 9 UA 1
Hv aTrOyovos TOU TadaLod, cvvoixnoaca 5é Odéra
T@ Kupnyns apEavts peta THv exeivou TeXeUTHV
b) Vi 4 9 \ >] / e \ = adixeto wadw eis tas “AOnvas. ot péev ovv
"AOnvaioe Tov yapov TodTov eis ydpty EOevTo Kat
\ A / ” \ ¢ 4 b V4
Tin THS TOAEWS’ GAAwS dé 0 AnuntpLos Eevyepns
Tls Hv rept yauous, Kal moAXNais aa ovvav yuvakiv, wy akiwpa péyiotov elye nal - tiny Dira d¢ “Avtimatpov tov twatépa Kat dua TO mpocuvvexnkévat Kpatep@, T@ mAeioTHY evvoLaD
1 'OpéAag Ziegler, after Wilamowitz: *OpéAza.
32
895

DEMETRIUS

Such a man, then, I purposely compare with Stratocles, the man of the stage with the man of the bema.

XIII. But there was one honour proposed for Demetrius which was more strange and monstrous than any other. Dromocleides the Sphettian moved, when the dedication of certain shields at Delphi was in question, that the Athenians should get an oracle from Demetrius. And I will transcribe his very words from the decree ; they run thus: “ May it be for the best. Decreed by the people that the people ‘elect one man from the Athenians, who shall go to the Saviour-god, and, after a sacrifice with good omens, shall enquire of the Saviour-god in what most speedy, decorous, and reverent manner the people may accomplish the restoration to their places of the dedicatory offerings ; and that whatever . answer he shall give, the people shall act according thereunto.” With such mockery of adulation they finally perverted the man’s mind, which even before was not wholly sound.

XIV. Furthermore, while’ he lingered in Athens at this time, Demetrius took to’ wife Eurydicé, a widow. She was a descendant of the ancient Miltiades, had married Ophelas the ruler of Cyrené, and after his death had come back to Athens. The Athenians, accordingly, took this marriage as a graceful compliment to their city; but in general Demetrius made a rather light matter of marriages, and had many wives at the same time, of whom Phila enjoyed the greatest esteem and honour, both because of her father, Antipater, and because she had been the wife of Craterus, the one of all the successors of Alexander

1 A pious formula prefixed to important documents.

avTov mapa Maxedoor TOV "AreEavdpou Siadoyov GTONTOVTL. TAUTNY, WS EouKe, Kopeon véov évTa
Tov Anpuntpioy éretOev 0 TATHP, OVK OVTAY AUT@
Kae' par, ara ape Butépay, AaPeiv amrpo-Ovpas & éxovte A€yeTaL Wpos TO ovs TO Evperi-Secov evmrety"
67rov TO Képb0s, Tapa puowy yapnréop,+ opotomTwrTov Te TH SovrAeuTéoy evluppnuovycas.
TOLAUTH pev ouv Tus Hy TOU Anpntpiov Tem
Wpos TE Pirav Kal Tas addras yapetas woTe
ToAAats pev avédnv éraipas, moAXats Oe: édev-Gépats cuveivar yuvarkt, cat parsota b17 tept THY HOOVNY TAUTNY KaKwS akovca, THY ToTEe Bact-Newry.
XV. *Ezei 5é 0 TaTNp avTov éxanet Irorewaip
mepl Kurpov TONEMMTOVTA, mreiBea Bau pev qv avaryKaiov, ax Pouevos 5é OTL TOV brrép Ths "EXXados TONEHOD, évTa KaAXNI® Kal Nam porepov, amroneitret, tpocéteupe KXewvidyn TO LtoAepaiov
cTpaTny@ ppovpobyTe Siucvava Kah Kopi ov Xpnwara Tporeivoy, OOTE édevdépas adeivac Tas Torels. ov tpocdeEapévou 5é éxetvou, dia TaXéwy
avaxGeis Kal TpoohaBov Stvapiw émémdevae Kurpy. kal MevédXaov pen, aderpov IItorepaiou, pany cuvarbas ev0us € évinnoev™ avTov 6é IIroAe-patov peTa Suvdpews melixis dpa Kat VaUTLCAS peyadrns emipavevTos, éyevovTo pev aTELNaL TLVES kal Ssedroyou Kopmr@ders, TOD wey atrocity An-1 BAA eis 7d Képdos mapa puaw SovdAeuvtéov, Phoenissae, 396 (Kirchhoff).

who left behind him the most goodwill among the Macedonians. This woman, as it would appear, his father had persuaded Demetrius to marry when he was quite young, although she was not of his age, but older; and when his son was disinclined to the match, it is said that Antigonus whispered | in his ear the verse of Euripides:

“ Where there is gain, ‘gainst nature’s dictates must one wed,”

substituting off-hand “ must one wed ” for the similar inflection ‘‘ must one serve.”” However, so slight was the respect which Demetrius paid to Phila and to the rest of his wives, that he consorted freely with many courtesans, as well as with many women of free birth, and as regards this indulgence he had the worst re- putation of all the kings of his time.

XV. And now his father summoned him to wage war against Ptolemy for the possession of Cyprus. He must needs obey the summons, but was loth to abandon the war for the liberation of Greece, which was a nobler and more glorious war, and therefore sent to Cleonides, the general of Ptolemy who was occupying Sicyon and Corinth with a garrison, and offered him money to set the cities free. Cleonides, however, would not accept the bribe, and Demetrius therefore put to sea in haste, and taking additional forces, sailed against Cyprus.1 There he joined battle with Menelaiis, a brother of Ptolemy, and promptly defeated him ; but Ptolemy himself appeared on the scene with a large land and naval force combined, and there were sundry interchanges of threats and boasts, Ptolemy ordering Demetrius to 1 In 306 z.c.

pT ptov KéAEVOYTOS Mply Ure THS duvapews maons AbpoicGeians KaTaTaTnO nvat, Anpntptov
bé éxetvov apeivat dacKkovtos, av Oporoynon LuKvava Kal K opwOov aTranrracev THs ppoupas.
6 56 a dryanv ou jLovov avrots exeivors, AAXNG Kal Tots arrows atract duvdo ras TOANHY eixe mpog Soxiay THS eT LK pea weVTS adnrornTOs, WS ov Kurpov oude Lupiav, GNA TO péryearov evOvs elvat Tav-TOY TO KpAaTODVTL THS vixns TpoaTiWeEians.
XVI. AUTOs pev aUV Oo Hi todepaios EM EMTNEL TEV-THKOVTO Kai éxatov vats éyov, ex be Larapivos exéhevoe Mevédaov efjxovta vavoiv, OTav pa-Mora cvoTacw) dryeov ex, T poo pepopevov Tas Anpuntpiov Kxomreyv éEoricbev cat Stataparrew THY taki. Anpntptos S€ tais pev éEjKovra.
TAUTALS average béxa vais (rocabras yap i 7) pkouv oTEvov évTa TOU ALMEVOS enppatar Tov éxtrAov), autos dé To welov éxtakas Kal Tois avaTeivovaew

eis THY OdXacoay dxpwtnpiots TEeptXedpevos, ov-TOS aunyxn vavalv € éxaTov dySonKovTa: Tpoopikas be poun kai Bia TOM Kara KPaTOS eTpéyraTo
TOV Ttodepaiov, aro per, as évixnOn, dua TAX ECV puyovra, vavoly OKT@ povas (rocabras yap ék TAagaV mepterwOnaar, Tav 6€ aAXAwY at pev év TH vavpayia SuepIapnoay, éBSopunxovra dé jAwoay airavdpor), Tou 6€ év okKdot Tapoppobytos 8xdov Oepam ovray Kab pidov Kat yuvas-KV, eTL Oe OTM Kal Xpnpatrov Kal pnyavnudtov
amas ovdev ebepuye TOV Anpntptov, GaN' éraBe mavra Kal KaTnyayev els TO aTparomeco. éy b¢ TOUTOLS 1) meptBonros nv Aapia, TH pev apxny omovoacbeioa Sia thy Téyvny (edoKet yap avActy 36

sail away before the entire force should assemble and crush him, and Demetrius offering to let Ptolemy go if he would agree to withdraw his garrisons from Sicyon and Corinth. And not only Demetrius and Ptolemy themselves, but also all the other potentates, awaited with great expectancy the uncertain issue of the impending struggle ; they felt that not Cyprus, nor yet Syria, but the absolute supremacy would at once be the prize of the victor.

XVI. Well, then, Ptolemy himself sailed to the attack with a hundred and fifty ships, and ordered Menelaiis to put.out from Salamis with sixty ships, and when the struggle was fiercest, to assail the ships of Demetrius in the rear, and throw them into confusion. But to these sixty ships Demetrius opposed only ten ships (for that small number sufficed to block the narrow exit from the harbour), while he himself, after first drawing out his land forces and encompassing the headlarids that extended into the sea, put out to battle with a hundred and eighty ships. He made his onset with great impetus and force, and utterly routed Ptolemy. Ptolemy himself, after his defeat, fled swiftly with eight ships only (for that small number were left from his whole fleet; of the rest, some had been destroyed in the sea-fight, and seventy had been captured, crews and all), but of the throng of attendants, friends, and women which lay.in ships of burden close at hand, and further, of all Ptolemy's arms, money, and engines of war, absolutely nothing escaped Demetrius, but he took everything and brought it safely into his camp. Among this booty was the celebrated Lamia, originally held in esteem for her artistic skill (she was thought to play the flute quite admirably),

37

OuK evxaTappovytas), datepov 5€ Kal Tois épwrt-4 ols AauT pa ryevomenn. TOTE yoov non hipyouea, Ths Opas Kai TON VEWTE POV eau is AaBodca TOV

Anpit prov expaTnoe T™) xapere Kat KATETXED, Hore éxeiyns elvat wovns épactnv, Trav & adrAov épepevov yuvaiKay.
Mera dé THY vavpaxiav ouvdé Oo Mevédaos

avTeaXer, ara THY TE Zarapiva mapedwxe T@
Anuntpio | Kal Tas vavs Kal 70 meCov, ¢ lameis Te 896
xedious Kal dtaxocious Kal pupious Kai dioxXiALous Om ALTAS.
XVII. Obra dé apm pay Kal Kady THY viKNY yevomevny ETL pad ov eT KOT MOV 0 Anpntpios evyVopoo vy Kab prravd pwrrig TOUS vexpous TOV Tore pio EOarbe peyaho TpEeTaS Kab TOUS aly a AwTous abjcey: "AOnvaious 6€ xurAtias Kal da-koalas amo T@V Aapipov edwpijcato mavorrhias.
2 Avrayyedov &é TAS viKns TO Tatpb TOV Miryo Lov "Apiarodnpov emreprpe, mpwTevovTa Kohaxela, TOV AUNLKOV ATAVYTWY, Kal TOTE mapeoxevacpéevor,
OS Eouxe, TOV KOhaKeUpaTOV TO péyLatou emrevery-Kelty TOUS mpdywaccy. as yap emépacey ato THS Kurpov, T poo éxety [ev OUK elace TH Yn TO moior, aryKupas 6 a eivat Kedevoas kal KaTa vady exeuv
3 at pépa. mavras, avTos éuBas els TO épodxvov ef Oe povos Kal m1pos Tov "Avtiryovoy avéBarve, [eT éwpov évta Th mpoa Soxia THS pays «al Sraxeipevov ss eixos éote Staxciobau TOUS wept ™parywarov THALKOUTOY GYOVLOVTAS. - TOTE ye pny aKovaas EXELVOV Hucew ETL “adXov 7 TpoTEpov ErVE Tapawoas, Kal pores bev avrov oixou KaTELXED, aAXous 8 em adds Ereutev UTNpéTas Kal 38

DEMETRIUS

but afterwards becoming illustrious in the annals of love also. At this time, at any rate, although she was past her prime and found Demetrius much younger than herself, she so mastered and swayed him by her charms that he was a lover for her alone,
but a beloved for all other women.
After the sea-fight, Menelaiis also made no further resistance, but handed over Salamis to Demetrius, together with his fleet, and his land forces, which comprised twelve hundred horsemen and_ twelve thousand men-at-arms.

XVII. This victory, which was so fair and brilliant, Demetrius adorned still more by his humanity and kindness of heart. He gave the enemy's dead a magnificent burial, and set his captives free; moreover, upon the Athenians he bestowed twelve hundred suits of armour from the spoils.

As his special messenger to carry word of the victory to his father, Demetrius sent Aristodemus of Miletus, the arch-flatterer among all his courtiers, and ready now, as it would seem, to crown the achievement with the grossest of his flatteries. For when he had crossed over from Cyprus, he would not suffer his vessel to come to land, but ordered the crew to cast anchor and remain quietly on board, all of them, while he himself got into the ship's small boat, landed alone, and proceeded towards Antigonus, who was anxiously awaiting news of the battle, and was disposed as men are apt to be disposed who are struggling forso highastake. And now, indeed, when he heard that Aristodemus was coming, he was more disturbed than before, and, with difficulty keeping himself indoors, sent servants and friends,

39

4

an

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

pirovs mevaopévous Tov 'Apiotodnmou Tepi TeV YEYOVOTMY. ATOKpLVOLEVOU SE pndey AUTOD uNdevt, Badnv &€ xal cuveotate TH TpocwT@ peETAa MOAAHS TlLWTHS TMpodLovTos, éxmAaryels Kody Kab pnkéts Kaptepav o 'Avtiyovos émi tas Oupas aTrnvTnoe, TOAOU TapaTréTOVTOS On TOV 'Aptotodnuov SyAov Kat auvtpéyovtos emi TO Bacireov. ws ovyv éeyyils HAOev, extewvas THV defray aveBonoe peydrAn TH pov7 ' Xaipe, Bactrev 'Avtiyove, uxa@pmev Itodewatov vavpayia nat Kuzpov éxouev kal otpatioras aly wahwrous puptous é€axtoyxtAtous oxtakociovs. o b€ 'Avtiyovos, "Kai ov, vy Alia, yaipe, elmev " odTw dé nuas Bacavioas dixnv vdéees: Boddsiov yap atohy yn TO evayyeALtov." ;

XVIII. "Ex rovrov mpwtov dvedwvnoe TO wrAnGos ~Avtiyovov xat Anpyntpiov Bactréas. "Avtiyovoy pev ody evOus avédnoay ot didrot, Anpntpio dé 0 matnp ereuwe Suddnpa rat ypabov émuctoAnv Baciréa mpoceirev. of & ev Alyinrt@ TovtTwy dtayyedX\opévov cal avrot Baoiréa tov Titodepaiov davnyopevoav, as pn one after the other, to learn from Aristodemus what had happened. Aristodemus, however, would make no answer to anybody, but step by step and with a solemn face drew near in perfect silence. Antigonus, therefore, thoroughly frightened, and no longer able to restrain himself, came to the door to meet Aristodemus, who was now escorted by a large throng which was hurrying to the palace. Accordingly, when he had come near, he stretched out his hand and cried with a loud voice: “ Hail, King Antigonus, we have conquered Ptolemy in a sea-fight, and now hold Cyprus, with twelve thousand eight hundred soldiers as prisoners of war.” To this Antigonus replied : “ Hail to thee also, by Heaven! but for torturing us in this way, thou shalt undergo punishment; the reward for thy good tidings thou shalt be some time in getting.”

Soxeivy Tov dpovipatos bdiecIar dia THy Hrrav. emreveiuato 6€ o0Tws TO TPayua TO bnrAw TOUS Siaboyous. Kai yap Avaoipayos iipEato dopetv Siddnua, xal Yérevxos éevtuyydvev tois “EXXn- alv, eel Tots ye BapBdpots mpotepov ovTOS ws Baotnrevs éypnuatile. Kacavdpos dé, Trav dAXwY a’tov Bacihéa kai ypadovtwy xal Kadovvtov, autos, waTEp mpoTepov elwOeL, Tas éeMLTTOAAS éypade. |
40

XVIII. Upon this, the multitude for the first time saluted Antigonus and Demetrius as _ kings. Antigonus, accordingly, was immediately crowned by his friends, and Demetrius received a diadem from his father, with a letter in which he was addressed as King. The followers of Ptolemy in Egypt on their part also, when these things were reported to them, gave him the title of King, that they might not appear to lose spirit on account of their defeat. And thus their emulation carried the practice among the other successors of Alexander. For Lysimachus began to wear a diadem, and Seleucus also in his interviews. with the Greeks ; with the Barbarians he had before this dealt as king. Cassander, however, although the others gave him the royal title in their letters and addresses, wrote his letters in his own untitled name, as he had been wont to do.

41

3

Tobto dé ov TmpoaOyKny ¢ évéparos xa TX MATOS
éEadrayny ele plovov, adda Kab Ta ppovnpara TOV avd pe exinae Kal TAS yopmas émnpe Kat rots Biors Kal Tals opirtats aUTOV GyKov éveToinae cal Baputnta, xabarep tpayitxav bToxpiTOVv dua TH oKevn cuppetaBarrAovTwv Kal Badiopa Kal
gwvyv kal kataxdow Kal mpocayopevotv. éK 5é rourwy éyevovto Kat qTrept Tas Sixaracets Bacorepor, THY els TOANA mapéXxovoav avTous
edad porépous Kab padarwTépous Tois vmnNKooLs 7 pote pov elpavelay THS éfoucias adehortes. TO-oovTov loxuoe KONAKOS dovy pia Kal tocauTns éveTTANTE THY oloupevny petaBoris.
XIX. "AYTiYOVOS dé Trois TET pary WEVvOLS v6
Anpntpiou qept Kuzpov émrapbels ev0us éoTpa-Tevoev emi Irorepatov, avuTOS pev dry ween
THY Sivapuy, Anyntpiov be peydre OTOAM oUpL-Tapam NEovTOs. Ov O€ TpoTrov Ewedde xpivecOar Ta TpayLara, Myjox0s, "Avtuyovou piros, Oyruv elde Kata Tous Brrvovs. done yap auTov “Avtiryovov ayoviterOat pera THS oT paras amdans dtavdov EUPWOTWS Kal TAYXU TO T pao, cita Kata puck pov BbiSbvat THY Suvapuy adre: Kal TéEXOS, WS exaprper, acbevh "yevopevov Kal pear ov aaO pa-
TOS ov padios avadepev. auTOs TE obv evTuX@v
KaTa ynv troddais aropiass, xat Anpunrpiov Kerpwave peyar Kat Krydove KLVOUVEVTAYTOS
els TOTTOUS GNLpEVOUS Kat Xarerovs explpnvar, TOANAS d€ tav vewov atrodécartos, émavnAbev QM PAKTOS.
"Hy dé tore puxpov amoAcirroyta yeyovws eT

pusKep yeyovas érn

42

89

DEMETRIUS

Now, this practice did not mean the addition of a name or a change of fashion merely, but it stirred the spirits of the men, lifted their thoughts high, and introduced into their lives and dealings with others pomposity and ostentation, just as_ tragic actors adapt to their costumes their gait, voice, posture at table, and manner of addressing others. Consequently they became harsher in their judicial decisions also; they laid aside that dissemblance of power which formerly had often made them more lenient and gentle with their subjects. So great influence had a flatterer’s single word, and with so great a change did it fill the whole world.

XIX. Antigonus, elated by the achievements of Demetrius at Cyprus, at once! made an expedition against Ptolemy; he himself led his forces by land, while Demetrius with a great fleet coéperated with him by sea. How the enterprise was to issue, Medius, a friend of Antigonus, was warned by a vision in his sleep. He dreamed, namely, that Antigonus himself, with his whole army, was compéting in a race over the course and back ; he ran vigorously and swiftly at first, then, little by little, his strength failed him; and at last, after he had made the turn, he became weak, breathed heavily, and with difficulty made the finish. And conformably to the vision, Antigonus himself encountered many difficulties by land, and since Demetrius also encountered a great storm and a heavy sea and was cast upon a rough coast which had no harbours, losing many of his ships, he returned without accomplishing anything. ;
Antigonus was at this time almost eighty years

1 During the same year, namely, 306 B.C.

9 P) , l , be Y , , oyOonxovtTa,’ peyées 5é€ Kat BapuTnte cwpatos
a“ . n \
MaAXov 7 Sta TO yijpas éml Tas oTpareias yeyovws
wn A 2)
Svotapaxopmtotos éxphto T@ Tradl Kal di évtuxiay kai dv éwrepiay nbn Ta péytota Kaos n I Stoccoovtt, Tpupas O€ Kal ToAvTEXELas Kal TOTOUS
a U / \
avtod pn Bapvvopevos. eipnvns yap ovons adv-
“A n \
Bprtev eis taita Kat ayordlwv éxypito pos
Tas noovas avetmévas avT@ Kal KaTaKkopws, €v

\ a“ / e e / , v
5€ Tots TodEwors ws of Guoet swdpoves Evnhe.
AévyeTas 6€ THs Aapias avadavdov nbn Kpatovons, ‘ ’ , e.\N a , ; ,
tov ’Avtiyovoyv wire tod Anpntpiov Kxatadinov-pevov Hkovtos aro &Eévns eiveiv Gua yedrovTa, ‘‘Aoxeis Aapmav, ® Tai, katadiAciv.” madi dé
(a Tote WAelLovas Nuépas ev TOTOLS yevopuévou, Kal mpopaci A€yovTos ws pedua StoxAnoELEeY aUTOY,
/
“’KarvOouny,” ddavac tov Avriyovor, “ddXa TroTe-/ A wn > \ [re) 99 , \ pov @dcrov 4} Xiov jv to pedua;” muPopevos 8é
e P) wn ” b] N 9 ; , 9 ,
atOis dcbevas Eyew avtov éBadiSev ovropevos, Kal TOV KAA@Y Tie TEpl OUpas amrnYTNGEV EioEr\ \ \ lA 9 b ‘ (vd nw v
Owv 5é Kal KaOtoas tap avtov Hato THs KeELpos’
/ A éxeivou 5é eltovTos OTL viv oO TupETOS ATrOKEXapyncev, “’Apéret, tracdiov,” én, ‘Kal éuol viv mept Ovpas amiwv amnvTnke.” tata dé odtw ws édhepe tov A (ov Ola THY AAXr T Paws p nuntpiov dua thv aAAnv
a e \ \ , /
mpakw. ov pev yap YxvOae Tivovres cal peBv-
: a ?
oKouEevol TapawdrXovor Tas vevpas TaV Tokwr, olov éxAvopevoy vo THs HOovis avaxaNovpevor
1 6yd5ohxovra MSS. and most editors; trav dydohxoyra.
44

DEMETRIUS

old, and his great size and weight, even more than his old age, made it difficult for him to conduct expeditions. He therefore made use of his son in- stead, whose good fortune and experience now enabled him to conduct the greatest affairs success- fully, and whose luxuries, extravagances, and revelries gave his father no concern. For although in time of peace Demetrius plunged deep into these excesses and devoted his leisure to his pleasures without restraint and intemperately, yet in time of war he was as sober as those who were abstemious by nature. And we are told that once, after Lamia was known of all men to be in complete control of Demetrius, he came home from abroad and greeted his father with a kiss, whereupon Antigonus said with a laugh, “One would think, my son, that thou wert kissing Lamia.’’ Again, on another occasion, when De- metrius had been at his revels for several days, and excused his absence by saying that he was troubled with a flux, “So I learned,” said Antigonus, ‘but was it Thasian or Chian wine that flowed?’’ And again, learning that his son was sick, Antigonus was going to see him, and met a certain beauty at his door ; he went in, however, sat down by his son, and felt his pulse. “The fever has left me now,’ said Demetrius. “No doubt, my boy,” said Antigonus, “I met it just now at the door as it was going away.” These failings of Demetrius were treated with such lenity by his father because the young man was so efficient otherwise. The Scythians, in the midst of their drinking and carousing, twang their bow-strings, as though summoning back their courage when it is dissolved in pleasure; but

Tov Oupov, éxetvos 5é Ta pep O0V7 d:50us aT Mes
éavTov, ta 6€ omrovdj, Kal Odrepa TOD érépwv axpara perayerprlopevos, ovr HTTOV Hv Sewvos ev Tals TOU TONEHLOV mapacxevais.
XX. ’AAAG cal TapacKevacaa bat _Ovvapuy 7 xpncac ba. Bedtiov « edoxet TTPATHYOS elvat, mara pev ex meptovatas. Umdpxew Bovdopevos emi Tas vpeias, THS O€ Tepl Tas vavs Kal Ta pnXavnpara peyahoupyias kal Kal qdovny Teva Tov Gewpetv aTAHTTOS é Ov. evpuns yap Ov Kat Dewpntixos OUK Els Tau tas ovd els Siayoryas aX PHATOUS éTpewre TO prdorexvov, @oTEp addov Bacwnéis avdovvTes kal CoypadovvTes Kal TOpevovTeEs.
"Adpotros yap o Maxedeor tpanévia pxpa Kai Auxvidva TEKTOLVOMEVOS, omroTe axXordfor, Suijryev.
"Attanros 6€ 0 Prrountwp éxnmeve TAS pappa-KWOELS Bordvas, ou pLovov. vooKvapov Ka éXXE-Bopov, aXe Kal K@VvELOV Kal aKOVLTOY Kal Sopu-KvLoy, AUTOS ev Tots Bactretous omel pov Kab putevor, OTOUS TE Kal Ka prov AUT OV epyov Té-Toinpevos eidévat Kal KomilerIat Kal” @pay. ot
dé ITdp0ev Baatnreis evenvuvovTo Tas axivas TOV Bedav VapaTTovTes avrol Kat mapabnyovres.
anna, pny Anpntplov Kal To Bavavoov jj ay Baotre-KOv, Kab péyelos 7 1 pe0000s eixen, apa TO TEPLTT
Kal purorexvep TOV epyov Dypos Tt Siavoias Kab ppovnwaros cuvexpepovTan, Gare pa povov ya ns Kab Teptovaias, adda Kal _Xetpos aka dat-vera Baoitucgs. peyeder pep yap eben ntTe Kal TOUS pirous, xadnet dé Kal Tous ToAepious
Erepire. TouTO O€ ETL waNdOV eee 7 KoLOs

Demetrius, giving himself up completely, now to pleasure, and now to duty, and keeping the one completely separate from the other, was no less formidable in his preparations for war.

XX. Nay, he was actually thought to be a better general in preparing than in employing a force, for he wished everything to be at hand in abundance for his needs, and could never be satisfied with the largeness of his undertakings in building ships and engines of war, or in gazing at them with great delight. For he had good natural parts and was given to speculation, and did not apply his ingenuity to things that would afford useless pleasure or diversion, like other kings who played on the flute, or painted, or chased metals. Aeropus the Macedonian, for in- stance, used to spend his leisure time in making little tables or lamp-stands. And Attalus Philometor used to grow poisonous plants, not only henbane and hellebore, but also hemlock, aconite, and dorycnium, sowing and planting them himself in the royal gardens, and making it his business to know their juices and fruits, and to collect these at the proper season. And the kings of the Parthians used to take pride in notching and sharpening with their own hands the points of their missiles. But with Demetrius, even the work of his hands was kingly, and his method had grandeur about it, since what he produced displayed ‘loftiness of purpose and _ spirit combined with elegance and ingenuity, so that men thought it worthy, not only to be designed and paid for by a king, but actually to be wrought by his hand. For its magnitude terrified even his friends, and its beauty delighted even his enemies. And this has still more truth in it than elegance of

4 elpntar. nal tas pev éxxadexnpers avTod Kal
Tas TEVTEKALOEK TELS eOavpalov ETTOTES OL B98 TONE MLO Tapa THV viv avT@Vv Eos, ai oe éherrohers as Géapa Tots ToAopKoupEevoLs OAV, as avra, Ta mpaypara apTupel. Avoipaxos pev yap, éxOtaT0s av Anyntple TOV Bacthéwr Kal TONOpKOYTL Lorous Tors KiAcxiovs avrete-TaryHLEVOS, em eure Tmapakarev émrdeiEat Tas &N-
; xavas avT@ Kal tas vads TAEOVCAaS: emdeiEavTos

5 o€ Oavpdoas am7jrde. ‘“Podsor dé tmodvv xpovow vm’ avTov TromopxnGevtes, érret KATENUTAYTO TOV TOELOD, NTS avTO TOV pNXavev évias, OT ws vropynywa THS éxeivou Suvayews aya kal THS av-TOV avdpayabias é EXWOLY.

XXI. "Emondeunoe dé ‘Podious Irodepatov oUp-payors ovat, Kal THY meyloTHnV éXETrONLY Tots TELxeoe 7 poonyaryen, Hs edpa bev WY TETPaywvos, ExaoT gy éyouca Tov KaTW TTAatciou meupav
OKT® Kal Teg oapaKovTa TNX OY, ef dé Kal e&n-

KovTa (TIX OV infos elyen, els Kopupny ouvvevovca
2 tais ave Trev pais OTEVWTEPAY THS Bdcews. év-Sofev pév oby areas Sverréppakto Kal xwpars
Todas, TO Oe WTpos TOUS Tohepious QUTNS peToO-Tov ave@KTo Kal" éxdotny otéynv Oupiow, Kat bua TOUTWY eferume Bern TavTooaT a' perry yap 4 avopov payouevwy mac av idéav podyns. Kat
TO BN Kpada.vopevov auras pnoe KALVOMEVOY év Tats KWITETL, arr' opbov é €V espa Kal aoadAeuTon, icopporrws apa poily Kal TOV@ TOAND 7 pox@- pouy, Ga uBos aya Th Wun Kal Yapw Tiva TH Owes TOV Few peveov Tapetye.
3 IIpos d€ todToy Tov ToAEMov avT@ Kai Owpaxes

diction. His enemies would stand on shore and admire his galleys of fifteen or sixteen banks of oars as they sailed along past, and his " city-takers " were a spectacle to those whom he was besieging, as the actual facts testify. For Lysimachus, although he was the bitterest enemy Demetrius had among the kings, and had arrayed himself against him when he was besieging Soli in Cilicia, sent and asked Demetrius to show him his engines of war, and his ships in full career ; and when Demetrius had shown them, Lysimachus expressed his admiration and went away. The Rhodians also, after they had been for a long time besieged by Demetrius and had come to terms with him, asked him for some of his engines of war, that they might keep them as a reminder of his power as well as of their own bravery.

XXI. Now, he made war upon the Rhodians?} because they were allies of Ptolemy, and brought up against their walls his greatest ‘‘city-taker."' Its base was square, and each of its sides measured at the bottom forty-eight cubits. It rose to a height of sixty-six cubits, and tapered from base to summit. Within, it was divided off into many storeys and chambers, and the side of it which faced the enemy had windows opening out of every storey, and out through these issued missiles of every sort; for it was full of men who fought in every style of fighting. Moreover, it did not totter or lean when it moved, but remained firm and erect on its base, advancing evenly with much noise and great impetus, and this astounded the minds and at the same time greatly charmed the eyes of those who beheld it.

For his use in this war there were brought to 1 In 305-304 B.c. The siege lasted about a year.

éxopiaOnoav éx Kumpov dv0 otdnpoi, py@v odKTS éxadtepos teaoapdxovta. Svardbeav dé Kal popny avrav éridecxvupevos o Texvitns Zwiros éxé-

A \ ANevoev €F elxooe Bnudtwv adeivar catamreNTiKov
/
BéXos, o8 trpocmecovtTos appayns Siéuevev o Gi-Snpos, duuvxny dé pworss éoyvev awPreiay, obov azro
fe) \ ypaetov. TtovTov autos épope tov 5’ Erepov oY J 9 , b \ , ; “A AAkipuos 0 Hiretpwrns, avnp Todepixwtaros TOV
oUV avT@® Kal pwparewtatos, bs povos éeypHTo Sitaddvt@ TavoTAla, TOV ad\AWY XpwLEéVwOV TA-
4 ‘ \ 4 b e 4 \ \ 4
Aavtiaia’ Kai payopmevos év “Pod trepi 76 Oéatpov 4 errecev.
XXII. Etdpworws 5é xal trav ‘Podiwy apvvo-4 QA wv , . 4 e /
pévwov, ovdév akiov AOyou mpdatrwv o AnpuntpLos
4 ? / \ ? 4 4 , ”~
Guws eOvpopaye: mpos avtous, dtt, Piras Tis YUVALKOS AUTO ypdupata Kal oTpw@pata Kal ima-Tia Teprpdons, ANaBovtes TO THOLOY, WoTTEp ELXe, apos Irovenaiov améoterav, cal thy ’AOnvaiwv
’ ? / , A ,
oux éutunoavTo diravOpwriay, of Piritrov Tro-NEMOVYTOS aUTOLS ypappaTtohopous EArOVTES TAS
\ ” > « b / ‘ \ \ pév AdXrNaS avéyvwoay émictoAds, povny b€ THY
"Odupriddos ovK EAXvaaY, aA’, OoTEp BV KaTacEeonpacmévn, Wpos éxelvoy aTécTElAay. Ov pH 4 /
aNd, Kaltrep él TovT@ apddpa SnxOels o Anun-IAN
Tptos, evOus Trapacyovtas AaBnv oby Urépecver avTiAuijoat tous ‘Podious. éruxe yap avtois o
4 Kavvtos Upwtoyévns ypddwv thy rept rov ‘laXvcov Oudbeotv, Kai TOY Tivaka piKpov aTrodEiTOVTA
5°

DEMETRIUS

Demetrius from Cyprus two iron coats of mail, each of which weighed only forty pounds. Wishing to show their strength and power of resistance, Zoilus their maker gave orders that a catapult's missile should be shot at one of them from a distance of twenty paces, and in the place where it struck the iron remained intact, although it did get a faint scratch, such as might be made by a graver. This coat of mail Demetrius wore himself; the other was worn by Alcimus the Epeirot, the sturdiest and most warlike of all the men under him, and the only one whose suit of armour weighed a hundred pounds (the rest used suits of fifty pounds weight) ; he fell in battle at Rhodes near the theatre. |

XXII. But the Rhodians on their part made a vigorous resistance, and Demetrius, although he was accomplishing nothing worthy of mention, neverthe- less kept up the fight against them in a rage, because, when Phila his wife sent him letters, bedding, and clothing, the Rhodians had captured the vessel containing them, and had sent it, just as it was, to Ptolemy. In this they did not imitate the con- siderate kindness of the' Athenians, who, having . captured Philip's letter-carriers when he was making war upon them, read all the other letters, indeed, but one of them, which was from Olympias, they would not open; instead, they sent it back to the king with its seal unbroken. However, although Demetrius was exceedingly exasperated by this, when the Rhodians soon after gave him a chance 'to retaliate, he would not allow himself to do so. It happened, namely, that Protogenes the Caunian had been making a painting for them which illustrated the story of Ialysus, and this picture, nearly finished,

Tov Tédos Every Ev Tie TOV T™ poaaTelwy édaBev o
Anuntptos. TeuavTov dé Knpuka TOV "Podioy Kal Seopeveoy getcacbat cai pn dtapOetpar TO epyov, dmexpivato Tas Tod TaTpos elxovas ay 3 eum pio au pardov 7 n TEXYNS Tovov TOGOUTOV. énTa yap ETECL héyeTat TUVTERET AL THV ypagny 0 IIpw-Toyevns. Kai gnaw 0 'Arrehrfis obras exTT Aa ynvat Geacdpevos TO epryov Gore kai povnv ere Aemeiy auTov, Oe be elrrety ore "' Meéyas O TOvos Kat Javpacrov TO épyon, ov pay exe ye Xa petas ov as ovpavov pavew Ta UT avTou ypado-4 peva. TAUTNY ev OV THY ypadny ELS TavTo Tats adrats cuvwa Beicay év 'Pamun TO Top eTEvEL LATO.
tav dé 'Podiwy cateFaviaTapevov TOU TrOAELOV, 899
deo uevov | Tpopacews TOV Anpaytptov "AOnvaior Taparyevopuevot Oup\raEav € emt TO oumpaxely "Po-dtous "Avtiyova cat Anuntpio wry eri IroXepeatov.
XXIII. 'Exddrouv b€ rov Anpyrpiov ot *AQOnvaior Kacdvépov TO doTU TONLOpKOdVTOS.) bé vavolw érimdevoas TpLaKog Lats TpidKovTa Kal Toots OTALTALS, OU povov ef))Aace THS "ATTLKAS
tov Kdaavédpor, andra kal pevyovta pEX pL @cp-

MOTTUA@V diwEas Kat _TpeYrapevos, ‘Hpdketav éXaBev, éxouvciws auT@ poo Genevny, Kab TOV Maxedovey éEaxcoxidous peraBarouevous pos
2 avrov. emaviwy d€ TOUS evTds Tlvva@p * ‘EdAqvas nrevBépov, cal Botwrovds éroinocato cuppdyous, 1 When Strabo wrote, during the reign of Augustus, the painting was still at Rhodes, where it had been seen and admired by Cicero (Orat. 2, 5); when the elder Pliny wrote, had been captured by Demetrius in one of the suburbs of the city. The Rhodians sent a herald and begged Demetrius to spare and not destroy the work, whereupon he replied that he would rather burn the likenesses of his father than so great a labour of art. For we are told that it took Protogenes seven years to complete the painting. And Apelles says he was so smitten with amazement on beholding the work that his voice actually failed him, and that when at last he had recovered it, he cried, “ Great is the toil and astonishing the work,” remarking, however, that it had not the graces which made the fame of his own paintings touch the heavens. This painting, then, crowded into the same place with the rest at Rome the fire destroyed.1 As for the Rhodians, they continued their strenuous resistance in the war until Demetrius, who wanted a pretext for abandoning it, was induced to make terms with them by a deputation of Athenians, on condition that the Rhodians should be allies of Antigonus and Demetrius, except in a war against Ptolemy.

XXIII. And now the Athenians called upon Demetrius because Cassander was besieging their city. So Demetrius sailed to their help with three hundred and thirty ships and a great number of men-at-arms, and not only drove Cassander out of Attica, but actually pursued him in his headlong flight as far as Thermopylae, and then took Heracleia, which joined him of its own accord, and six thousand Macedonians, who also came over to him. On his return, he gave their freedom to the Greeks on this side of Thermopylae, made the Boeotians his allies, a generation or two later, it had been carried to Rome and placed in the temple of Peace (cf. Strabo, xiv. p. 652; Pliny, N.H, xxxv. 10, 36). és

Kal Keyxpéas elXe* Kab Dury Kal Ilavaxrovp, em iTeLXio waa, Ths CArtixijis t7r6 Kaodvdpov poupotpeva,, KaTaaTpeyrdpevos amedwxe Tots “AOnvaiors. ot O€ KaiTrep eX KEXUPEVOL 7 POTE POV Eis arov Kal KaTaKEey pnpuevol Tacay prot ipusay, eEebpov 6 Suws Kal TOTE mpoaparot Kal Katvot Tals KoNakelas havivat. Tov yap omc odopov Tov HapGevaivos dmréderEav avuT@ Katddvoww KaKet diartav eixe, Tis FAOnvas hevyouerns vmodexer Oat Kab Eevitew avrov, vu Tavu KOo [Lov Eévov ovee
WS mapbevep Tpaws érictad uevovra. KatTou TOV adehpov avTou DtrAurrov aia opevds TOTE 0 Tra-THp ev oiKig KaTadvovTa Tpets exovon véas yuvai-Kas, Tpos éxeivoy pev ovdev épbéyEato, mapovTos 5é éxeivou, TOV arab pwodorny peTatrepyapevos, “ Odtos,” elev, ‘ ‘oun éEdFers mou Tov viov éx Tis OTEVOYWpPLAS ;" XXIV. Anat ptos dé, THY “AOnvay avUT@ 7 poa-hKov, eb St aAAO pNdév, OS Ye Tm peo Butépay aderdny aia xuves Oat (robTo yap éBovreTo dé-yeoOat), TOTAUTHY UBpw eis traidas éhevd épous Kal yuvaixas aotas Kxatecxébace THS akpo-TOAEWS dare Soxeiy tote padtota KaBapeueev

Tov TOTrOV, STE X puaib. kal Aapia cat Anpot Kab "Avtexupa, Tais mopvats éxeivais, cuvaKo-Aacraivot.
Ta pev ody addAa cadas atrayyéAXEw ov TpeTrEt
dua THY TOAD, THY dé Anpoxéous apetny Kat Twp poo vny afvov €oTe pn mapenbeiv. EKELVOS yap Hy ért trais dvnBos, ovK habe Oé TOV Anpn-Tpiov Exwv THs evpopdias THy éTMVUmLLAY KAaTH-54

DEMETRIUS

and captured Cenchreae ; he also reduced Phyle and Panactum, fortresses of Attica in which Cassander had garrisons, and gave them back to the Athenians. And they, although before this they had used up and exhausted all the honours that could be bestowed upon him, nevertheless devised a way to show themselves then also the authors of new and _ fresh flatteries. For instance, they assigned him the rear chamber of the Parthenon for his quarters; and there he lived, and there it was said that Athena received and entertained him, although he was no very orderly guest.and did not occupy his quarters with the decorum due to a virgin.’ And yet on one occasion when his father understood that his brother Philip was quartered in a house occupied by three young women, he said not a word to Philip himself, but in his presence said to the quartermaster whom he had summoned, “See here, wilt thou not remove my son from his narrow quarters? ”’

XXIV. But Demetrius, who ought to have revered Athena, if for no other reason, at least because she was his elder sister (for this was what he liked to have her called), filled the acropolis with such wanton treatment of free-born youth and native Athenian women that the place was then thought to be particularly pure when he shared his dissolute life there with Chrysis and Lamia and Demo and Anticyra, the well-known prostitutes.
Now, to give all the particulars plainly would disgrace the fair fame of the city, but I may not pass over the modesty and virtue of Democles. He was still a young boy, and it did not escape the notice of Demetrius that he had a surname which indicated

1 Since the Athenians had made him a ‘‘ Saviour-god.”

55

qn

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yopov: éxanreito yap Anpwoxdjs o Karos. ws bé
TOAAG TetpwovtTav Kai Svovtwv Kal dhoRovvtwv
Um’ ovdEevds HALoKETO, TéAOS 5é hEevywy Tas Tra-Aalotpas Kal Td yupvdotoy eis te RBadaveiov isuwtixov éhoita Nova opmeEvos, emLTNPHTAS TOY Kas-pov o Anpunrptos émecondOev. adit@ pove. Kal o mais, @ cuvetde THY Tepl avTov épnuiav Kat THY dvayKnv, aperX@v TO TALA TOD YAaAKwpaTOS Els
téov bdwp évnrato cal SvépOerpev avrov, dvakia pev tradev, aka 5é THs Tatpidos Kal Tov KddXOUS
ppovncas, ovy ws Kreaivetos o KXeopuédorros, ds @dAnKoTe TE Tarpl dinny TevTnKOVTAa TaXdvTwOV adeOnvat Siamrpakdpevos Kal ypappata Tapa Anpntpiov Kopicas mpos tov Shyov ov povov éavTov KaTnoxuvev, GAAA Kal THY TOY GuUDE-tdpake. Tov pev yap Kreouddovta tis Siens apjxay, eypadyn Séwydiopa undéva tov ToALTOV émictoAny trapa Anpuntpiov Kxopitew. érrel dé axovaas éKetvos ovK jveyice peTpios, GX nya-VAKTNOE, Seicavres abbus ov povov TO Pipe pa xabeirov, GNA Kal TOV elo mynoapeveov Kal ouvel-TOVTWY TOUS fev ATEKTELVAD, TOUS 5é Epuyadevaa); ére O€ tmpocendicavto dSedoxOat TO SHuw TaV
"AOnvaiwy wav, 6 te dv o Bactrevs Anuntptos KeXevon, TOUTO Kal mpos Oeovs Sotov Kal pds
avOpwtous elvat Stxatov. eitrovtos 8€ Tivos TOY Karov kayadav dvipav paiverOar tov Xtpato-
Kréa TOLAVTA ypadovta, Anwoydpns 0 Aeveovoeds “Maivotto pévtav,” eltrev, “el pn paivotto.” 56
900

DEMETRIUS

his comeliness; for he was called Democles the Beautiful. But he yielded to none of the many who sought to win him by prayers or gifts or threats, and finally, shunning the palaestras and the gymnasium, used to go for his bath to a private bathing-room. Here Demetrius, who had watched his opportunity, came upon him when he was alone. And the boy, when he saw that he was quite alone and in dire straits, took off the lid of the cauldron and jumped into the boiling water, thus destroying himself, and suffering a fate that was unworthy of him, but show- ing a spirit that was worthy of his country and of his beauty. Notso Cleaenetus the son of Cleomedon, who, in order to obtain a letter from Demetrius to . the people and therewith to secure the remission of a fine of fifty talents which hgd been imposed upon his father, not only disgraced himself, but also got the city into trouble. For the people released Cleomedon from his sentence, but they passed an edict that no citizen should bring a letter from Demetrius before the assembly. However, when Demetrius heard of it and was beyond measure incensed thereat, they took fright again, and not only rescinded the decree, but actually put to death some of those who had introduced and spoken in favour of it, and drove others into exile; furthermore, they voted besides that it was the pleasure of the Athenian people that whatsoever King Demetrius should ordain in future, this should be held righteous towards the gods and just towards men. And when one of the better class of citizens declared that Stratocles was mad to introduce such a motion, Democharesof Leuconoé said: ‘“ He would indeed be mad nat to be

e “A “A
TOAAA yap O UTPATOKAHS MPerelro Sia THY KOAa-
, e \ , 2 \ , \
xeiav. o d€ Anuoxydpns émlt tovtm d:aBrnbels
? UA a 4 9 “A ehuyadevOn. Toradta érpattov ‘A@nvaio: dpov-
a ’ a, \ \ > , ”
pas amnr\rAdyGae cat thv édrevOepiav Exew So0-KOUVTES.
XXV. Anpntpios Sé taperOwv eis TWedorov-
? ‘\ e 4 A b / bd \ vnaov, ovdevos Uptatayévov TOY évayTiov, AAA hevyovTwy Kal Wpoiewévwv Tas WodEs, TpoTn-
/ , , ’ \ >? n
yayeto Tv Te KaXoupevnv “Axtnv cal ’Apxadiay, A id Vow \ > A : \
mAnv Mavtiveas, cat “Apyos nal 2tkumva Kat
\ “a KopiwOov édvoato tddavta Sovs éExatov ois
a A “ 4
ppovpovov. éy “Apyes pev ody THs TOY Hpaiwy EOPTHS xabnxovons,, aryavober av Kal ouptrayn‘yupiSov TOUS "Edrnow, é éynue THY Ataxidou Ouya-

Tépa, tod Modrottrav Baciréws, aderAdnv dé oe A : Ilvppov, Anidaperav. Xuxvwviovs 5é dycas Tapa
THV TWOALV OLKELY THY TOALY, ETELTEV OV VOV OLKODCL petotxicacOar: To Sé€ TOT Kal TovvoNa THY , nw >] \ A
Tok cuppetaBarovoav avtTl Xuxvavos Anpun-Tpiada tTpoonyopevoev. - ev 5é “IoPu@ Kowod cuvedpiou yevoyévou Kat ToAA@Y avOpwray auV-
; fo} € j erXOovtav, nryewwv avnyopevOn tis “EXXdOos, ws mportepov ot wept Pirermov cat "AréEavdpov: wv éxetvos ov Tapa puixpov évopiley éavrov elvas
/ A A “
Bertiova, TH TUX TH Tapovon Kal TH dSuvaper
TOV Tpaypdtwv eTratpopevos. ‘“AréEavdpos yoov
> / ~ ” 4 b] / “
ovdéva TaV aAAwY Baciéwv atrectépnoe THS
e 4 +Q\ e_eN ? a VA /
Omwvupias, ovde avTOV aveime Bacthéwy Bactréa, 58
DEMETRIUS

mad.” For Stratocles reaped much advantage from his flatteries. Democharés, however, was brought under accusation for this and sent into exile. So fared it with the Athenians, who imagined that because they were rid of their garrison they therefore had their freedom.

XXV. And now Demetrius proceeded into Pelo- ponnesus,! where not one of his enemies opposed him, but all abandoned their cities and fled. He received into allegiance Acte, as it is called, and Arcadia (except Mantineia), and freed Argos, Sicyon, and Corinth by paying their garrisons a hundred talents. At Argos, then, where there was a cele- bration of the festival of Hera, he presided at the games and attended the solemn assemblies with the Greeks, and married Deidameia,? the daughter of Aeacides king of the Molossians, and the sister of Pyrrhus. As for the Sicyonians, he told them their city was in the wrong place, and persuaded them to change its site to that which it now has; moreover, with the site he also changed the name of the city, calling it Demetrias instead of Sicyon. And at the Isthmus of Corinth, where a general assembly was held and throngs of people came together, he was proclaimed Commander-in-chief of the Greeks, as Philip and Alexander had been proclaimed before him; and to these he considered himself in no slight measure superior, lifted up as he was by the good fortune and power which he then enjoyed. And certainly King Alexander never refused to bestow the royal title upon other kings, nor did he proclaim himself King of ee although many

1 Karly in 303 B.c
? Although both Eurydice and Phila were still living.

Kaito ToAXOls TO KaXEicOat Kai evar Bactréas
> AN , b] la) \ , \ fe)
autos Sedwxas: éxeivos S€ yrevafwv Kal yedov
Tous GAXNov Tiva TANVY TOU TaTpOS Kal avTOD Baotréa tpocayopevovtas, HOéws HKOVE THY Tap
moTov émuyvces NapBavovtwoy Anuntpiov Bact-Aéws, Derevxou Oe erehavtapyou, [rorepatou Sé vavapyov, Avotpdyouv dé yatopvXaxos, "Ayabo-Kr€ous O€ TOU YKEALwTOU VnoLapxYoU. TovTwV Se
\ A a b / e \ ”
mpos Tovs Raatnrels exhepopevwy ot péev GAXOL Bactreis xateyéXov, Avaoipayos 8 nyavaxtes povos et aomddovta vopites Anpnrptos avtov:
émieck@s yap eiwmbercav evvovyous eye yato-gdvraxas. Hv 56 kal mavtwv arexyOéotatos o Avoipaxos avT@, kal rAodopav eis Tov épwra tHs Aaptas éXeye viv mp@Tov ewpaKxévat Topyny wa lol e
Tpoepyouevnv ex TpayiKhs axnyys: o dé Anuntptos
A , a éhn THY éavTOv TOpynV cwhpovertépay eEivat TIS éxeivou IInveXorns.
XXVI. Tote & obv avafevyviwr els tas *AOn-
4 e 4 / ’ \
vas éypawev Ste BovrAeTar Trapayevopevos evOvs
punOjvar Kal THY TerETHY AtTacay ato TeV pixp@v aypt ToV éToTTLKaY TapadaBeEly. TOTO
\ ’ \ 9 2O\ \ / ’ \
5é ov Oepitov jv ovdé yeyovos TpoTepov, addrAda Ta puxpa Tov ’AvOeotnpi@vos éteXodvTO, TA Sé peydra tov Bondpopiavos: ére@mrevov 5é Tov-AaYXLoTOV aTo TAY peyadXwv éviavTov dade TovTes. avayvwobévtwy 5é TOV ypappdtwev povos éTOr-
‘ a e A
noe avretrety Lv@0dwpos 0 Sadovyos, émépave

\ > , 9 \ Ul , >] a
dé ovdév: GANA Ltpatokr€ovs yvopnv eitrovTos
-60

kings received their position and title from him; whereas Demetrius used to rail and mock at those who gave the title of King to any one except his father and himself, and was well pleased to hear revellers pledge Demetrius as King, but Seleucus as _ Master of the Elephants, Ptolemy as Admiral, Lysimachus as Treasurer, and Agathocles as Island Governor of Sicily. When this was reported to these kings, they all laughed at Demetrius, except Lysimachus; he was incensed that Demetrius con- sidered him a eunuch (it was the general practice to have eunuchs for treasurers). And of all the kings Lysimachus had most hatred for Demetrius. He was once reviling the man's passion for Lamia, and said that this was the first time he had ever seen a harlot coming forward to play a great tragic part; Demetrius, however, declared that his own harlot was more chaste than the Penelope of Lysimachus. XXVI. But to resume the story, when Demetrius was getting ready to return to Athens, he wrote letters to the people saying that he wished to be initiated into the mysteries as soon as he arrived, and to pass through all the grades in the ceremony, from the lowest to the highest (the "epoptica''). Now, this was not lawful, and had not been done before, but the lesser rites were performed in the month Anthesterion, the great rites in Boédromion ; and the 'supreme rites (the "epoptica'') were celebrated after an interval of at least a year from the great rites. And yet when the letter of Demetrius was read, no one ventured to oppose the proposition except Pythodorus the Torch-bearer, and he accom- plished nothing; instead, on motion of Stratocles, it was voted to call the current month, which was ° 61

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

"AvOcotnpiava tov Movvvytava Wnydiocapévous
a \ , > 2 "A ; , A
Kanely Kal voller, eréeXovy TO Anuntrpiw Ta
\ " \ \ a , fe »
mpos Aypav: kal peta tavta madw e& <Av-Jestnpi@vos o Movvvyiwv yevousvos Bond popiwv 9Q7 \ \ / 4 \ \ ?
édéEato Thy NoLrny TereTHV, Gua Kal THY éTromreiav Tov Anuntpiov mpocemtAaBovtos. 610 Kat Diditmidns Tov Yrpatoxréa NoLdopav Erroinaer:
° e N a ?
0 TOY éviavTOV GUYTELWY Els LAV eva,
\ \ a 9 A A ,
Kat Tept THs év T@ LlapOevane xatacKnvadews:
e / "A '

0 THY axpoTrOALY TravooKeiov UTOAAaB@V
\ / a VA
kal Tas éTaipas cioayaywv TH Tapbévo.

XXVII. TlodAr@v S€ yevouévwy ev tH Tore TOTE TANMLMEANMLATOY Kal TapavoynuaTay éxeivo

, 4 a \ > , isd
partota AéyeTat AUTHGaL Tovs ‘AOnvatous, STL
Siaxooia Kal TevTHKOVTA TaXavTa Topica TaYd
Kal dSovvat tpoctayGév avtois Kal THs elompa-Eews cuvtovov Kal dmrapaitntou yevopévns, Lowy
b] , \ 9 4 > + , \ a nOpoicuévov TO apyvptov éxéXevoe Aapia Kal Tais Tept avTny ETaipats eis opHypa SoOhva. 1 yap aicyuvn THS Enuias Kal TO phya TOD Tpayparos
A b] , ‘ b] , »” \ Le)
PadXov nvaxrANGE TOUS avVOpwTrOUs. Evior 5é TOTO Betrarois, ovn "AOnvaios, vr avdtod cupBivat
/
Néyouot. yYwpis bé TovTwY av’Tn Kal’ éavTHY 1) Adama t@ Bactrhet trapacxevatovoa Setmvov
>] ld 4 \ ‘ “A 4
npyupoXoynoe moNAovs. Kat to detrvov ovTwS 62 °

901

DEMETRIUS

Munychion, Anthesterion, and so to regard it, and the lesser rites at Agra were performed for Demetrijus ; after which Munychion was again changed and became Boédromion instead of Anthesterion, De- metrius received the remaining rites of initiation, and at the same time was also admitted to the highest grade of “ epoptos.” Hence Philippides, in his abuse of Stratocles, wrote ! :—

“ Who abridged the whole year into a single month,” and with reference to the quartering of Demetrius in the Parthenon :—
‘‘ Who took the acropolis for a caravansery,
And introduced to its virgin goddess his courtesans.”
- XXVII. But among the many lawless and shocking things done by Demetrius in the city at this time, this is said to have given the Athenians most displeasure, namely, that after he had ordered them to procure speedily two hundred and fifty talents for his use, and after they had levied the money rigorously and inexorably, when he saw the sum that had been collected, he commanded that it should be given to Lamia and her fellow courtesans to buy soap with. For the shame they felt was more intolerable to the people than their loss, and the words which accompanied it than the deed itself. But some say that those who received this treatment were Thessalians, not Athenians. Apart from this incident, however, Lamia, when she was preparing a supper for the king, exacted money on her own account from many citizens. And the costliness

1 Part of the fragment cited at xii. 4.

mvOnoe TH So€n Sia THY TodUTEéAELAY WoTE LTO
Avyxéws Tod Yapiov avyyeypadOar. 810 nal Trav KwOpLKoY TIS ov davrtos THY Aduav 'EXérrodev arnOas wpoceime. Anuoxydpns & o YorLos tov
/ 9 A > + a > \ 2 A Anuntpiov avtov éxddet MiOov: eivar yap avto cai Adusav.
Ov povov dé tats yapetais, GAXA Kal Tois
diros tov Anpuntpiov Chrov xalt POovov evyfepovoa Kal otepyouévn tapetyer. adixovTo
yovv tives tap avtov Kata mpecBeiav ampos Avoipayor, ols éxeivos aywv ayornv émédeckev ev
Te TOLS Npois Kal Tois Bpaxioow wreras Babeias
ovuywv Reovteiwy: Kal Sunyeito THv yevowévnv
b] "~ , A \ / e A ? 4 auT@ paynv mpos TO Onpiov, bo '"AndeEdvdpou ovyxaberpyOévts ToD Bacidéws. ot S€ yerwvTes bY 4 \ « AN e fa) lA A , épacav cal Tov avTav Baciréa Sevod Anpiov
Snypata hépay év TO Tpaxnro, Aamtas. jy 5é Oavyactov Ste tTHS Diras év apyyn TO pn Kal" ye jj PX TO pry
e lé , is4 la \
nruxiav dSvaxepaivor, ATTnTo THs Aaptas, Kal TOTOUTOY i}pa Kpovoyv, Hn TapnKpakvias. Anpw yoov, 7» émuKadousévn Mavia, wapa Seimvov av-Aovons THs Aapias Kai Tod Anuntptov rvGopévov,
"Ti cot Soxel;" "pais," elev, "o Bactred."
madi dé TpaynuatTwoyv TapatebévTwy KaKeivou
\ > \ > 7 eee A " , Tpos autnv eimovtos, " Opds oca por Aama
wéutret; "IIdeiova," epn, " weupOnoetat coe Tapa THs éuns untpds, éav Oédns Kal per avTis cadevoev." atropyvnuovevetar 5é THs Aaptas Kal of this supper gave it so wide a renown that it was described in full by Lynceus the Samian. Hence also a comic poet not inaptly called Lamia "a veritable City-taker.""1 And Democharesof Soli called Demetrius himself ‘“ Fable,” because he too, like Fable, had a Lamia.?

And not only among the wives of Demetrius, but also among his friends, did the favour and affection which he bestowed on Lamia awaken envy and jealousy. At all events, some ambassadors from him once came to Lysimachus, and Lysimachus, in an hour of leisure, showed them on his thighs and shoulders deep scars of wounds made by a lion’s claws; he also told them about the battle he had fought against the beast, with which he had been caged by Alexander the king. Then they laughingly told him that their own king also carried, on his neck, the bites of a dreadful wild beast,—a Lamia. And it was astonishing that while in the beginning he was displeased at Phila’s disparity in years, he was vanquished by Lamia, and loved her so long, although she was already pasther prime. At all events, when Lamia was playing on the flute at a supper, and Demetrius asked Demo, surnamed Mania, what she thought of her, “O King,” said Mania, “I think her an old woman.” And at another time, when some sweetmeats were served up, and Demetrius said to Mania, “Dost thou see how many presents I get‘from Lamia?’’ “My mother,” said Mania, “will send thee more, if thou wilt make her also thy mistress.’’ And there is on record also Lamia’s
1 See chapter xx. 4.
* The name of a fabulous monster reputed to eat men’s flesh.

‘\ \ , , , b) , mpos THv NEyopévnv Boxywpews xpiow avTippn-
aw. érel yap tis épav év AiyiTrrTe@ ris évaipas
? a :
Owvidos nreito suyvoyv ypuciov, celta Kata TOUS
imvous Sofas avtH auyyevéoOar THs émiupias 9 4 , ” @ \ b) A la) s éravaato, dicny EXaxyey 7 Qwvis avT@ Tov wL00-
> , \ \ 4 e , > /
6 watos. axovoas 6€ Tov AOyov o Boxywprs éxé-

N Nd @ 9 / / >
Nevoe TOV aVOpwroyv dcov nTHOn Kpvaotov HpLOun-pévoyv ev TH ayyei@ Siadhépev Sedpo Kaxeioe TH xerpi, THY Sé éTaipay execOat THs oKLaS, ws THY Sofav tis adnOeias oxiavy ovoay. ovK @eTo TavTny elvas THY Kpiow 7 Adwa Stxaiav: ov yap amTréNuoev h oKLa THS éeTiOupias TOD apyupiou THY éTaipay, TO 6é dvap érraucev EpOYTa TOV vEeavioxKoD.
TavTa pev ovv Trept Aapias.
XXVIII. Try &é Senynow, dorep ex xwpixys TKNVIS, Taw eis TpayiKnY peTayovoty ai TUYaL kal at mpakews tov avdpos bv Sinyoupeda. Tav
\ ¥ , e / A
yap add\wv Baciiéwv atrdvtwy cuyioTapevov
éml tov ’Avtiyovov kal cupdepovtwy eis TavTo
4 9 A e / ? A € ,

Tas Suvdpes, amhpev o Anuntpios é« tis “EXXa-

\ a \ / 4 ?
dos, Kai T@ Tatpi cuppiEas diroTipovpévw Trap
e / \ \ / ” : A > \
NALKLAY POS TOV TrONEMOV, ETL ANNOY AUTOS
2 émeppwoOn. Kaitoe Soxet ye “Avtiyovos, ei pt-Kpov tivev udeito Kal THS ayav dirapytas éyd-Nae, péeype TravTos av avT@ SiadvAdkat Kaxetve
A N “A ° 4 \ \
KaTadiTrely TO TpwTov evar. guace dé Bapvs dv
Kal UTEpoTTns, Kal TOls NOYoLs OVY HTTOV Hh Tots TpayLact TpaXUsS, ToAAOUS Kal véouvs Kal duva-
v tous avopas éEnypiawe xal mapwkuve Kal thy 902 66
DEMETRIUS

comment on the famous judgment of Bocchoris.
There was, namely, a certain Egyptian who was in love with Thonis the courtesan, and offered a great sum of money for her favours; then he dreamed that he enjoyed those favours, and ceased from his desires. Thereupon Thonis brought an _ action against him for payment due, and Bocchoris, on hearing the case, ordered the man to bring into court in its coffer the sum total demanded of him,
and to move it hither and thither with his hand,

and the courtesan was to grasp its shadow, since the thing imagined is a shadow of the reality.
This judgment Lamia thought to be unjust; for though the dream put an end to the young man's passion, the shadow of the money did not set the courtesan free from her desire for it. So much, then, for Lamia.

XXVIII. But the fortunes and achievements of the man whose Life I am narrating, brings my narrative back, as it were, from the comic to the tragic stage. For all the other kings leagued themselves together against Antigonus and united their forces, and so Demetrius set forth from Greece,} and finding his father eager beyond his years for | the war, he was himself still more encouraged. And yet it would seem that if Antigonus had made some trifling concessions and had slackened his excessive passion for dominion, he might have always retained — the supremacy for himself and have left it to his son. But he was naturally stern and haughty, and was harsh in what he said no less than in what he did, and therefore exasperated and incited against him- self many young and powerful men; and their

1 Late in 302 B.c.

ye ToTe avoTaciy Kal Kowwviay avrav éNeyev @oTep opvidwy omepporoyav cvvdpouny évl rLO@
Kal rodeo cuvdiara pager.
"Hye dé melous pev ET TAaKLOpUpiwY TAéious, immets bé pupious, erépavras dé éBdounnovta, TEVTE, TOV evavti@y eXOVT OV meCous pev éEaxio-pupious Kal TeTpaxiaxtrLous, immets 6é trev-TA&KOCLOUS TOV éKxeivou mhelovas, éerepavras dé TETPAaKOTLOUS, Gppata dé éxaTov elkoat. yevopevep & éyyvs avtav TpoTny eaxev n Otavola TIS édmidos paddov h TIS Wwouns. tpn ros yap elvat Kal yaupos ew0as év Tois ary Got ral y~popevos pwvn Te peyary Kal Aoryous coBapots, TOANGKLS 88 kal T@ TapacKkayat TL Kal yeXoLov elTrely TOV TONE MOY év xepoty ovT@V emiderEa-PEvOS | evoT aBevav Kat Kata povnoty, TOTE ouv-vous éwpato Kal cum mnros Ta 'TONG, Kal Tov VioV anederfe T@ wAHO EL Kal TUvETTITE diddoyxor.
6 6€ pardtoTa TavTES eGavpacar, ev TH oKNVT
povos bie€ xn T pos aurov, ovK eiDiopevos & exetv ovoé mpos éxetvov drroppyrous KotvoXoyias, ana i6vos @v yvoun, elra TporTaTT ay pavepas Kat Npwpevos ols Bovrevoarto Kad EauUTOY. héyerae
ryouv perpaxvov ért Ovta tov Anunrtptov avrow mubécOar TOTE peédAovawy avalevryvue TO dé eLTrEty pos opyny: ““Aywuds py movos ov THS CAaNTTLYYOS OUK aKxovons;”

XXIX. Tore pévrou Kal onpeta ox Onpa KATE-SovdobTo TH yrepny avTay. Anyntptos poev yap édofe Kata TOUS Umvous "AdeEavdpov OT LG - pévov NauTpas épwradv orroioy Te ovvOnpua 81d0-68

DEMETRIUS

combination and partnership at this time he said he would scatter asunder with a single stone and a single shout, as if they were a flock of granivorous birds.

He took the field with more than seventy thousand infantry, ten thousand horse, and seventy-five elephants ; while his adversaries had _ sixty-four thousand infantry, five hundred more horse than he, four hundred elephants, and a hundred and twenty chariots. After he had drawn near them, the cast of his expectations rather than of his purposes underwent a change. For he was wont to be lofty and boastful as he engaged in his conflicts, making pompous speeches in a loud voice, and many times also by the utterance of a casual jest or joke when the enemy was close at hand he would show the firmness of his own spirit and his contempt for them; but now he was observed to be thoughtful and silent for the most part, and he presented his son to the army and pronounced him his successor. But what more than anything else astonished everybody was his conversing alone in his tent with his son, although it was not his custom to have secret conferences even with him; instead, he made his own plans, followed his own counsels, and then gave his orders openly. At all events, we are told that Demetrius, when he was still a stripling, asked his father when they were going to break camp ; and that Antigonus replied in anger: “ Art thou in distress lest thou alone shouldst not hear the trumpet ?”’ XXIX. At this time, moreover, bad omens also subdued their spirits. For Demetrius dreamed that Alexander, in brilliant array of armour, asked him what watchword they were going to give for the vat mTpos THY pwaynv péd\XAOvoLW: avTod Sé g7-cavtos, “‘Aia kal Nixnv” “Arrest totvuy,” ddvat,’ mpos tors évavtigus' éxeivor yap “pe

, ”» » ’ x
TaparapBavovow. ‘Avtiyovos S€ twapatatto-pévns 46n THS hadrayyos eEtov mpocérracer, @ore meoeww GrAws él otoua cat diateOjvar yareTTas avactas Sé Kal Tas yelpas avateivas
Mpos TOV Ovpavoy YTHGATO viKnY Tapa TaV Oeav } Oavatov avaicOnrov po Ths ATTNS.
Tevopévns 5€ ths payns év yepot Anpurjtptos
Exar Tos TAELoTOUS Kal KpaTioTOUS TY imréwv
’AvTioy@ TO YerevKov ouvétece, nal péypt TPOTHS TOV TOAELIWY AAMT PAS aywvicdpevos ev
a , a 4 \ \
TH Siwker coBapa Kal gdidoTiv~@ apa Katpov
N
yevouévn THY vicny SiépOecpev. avTos pev yap ovx éoxye Tddw avactpéas cuppit-ar ois
a a / A melois tay éAehavTwy ev péow yevouévwy, THY 5é darayya yupvny immέwy Kxatidovtes ot trept ZéXevcKov ov“ évéBarov pév, ws 56 éuBarodbvtes époSovy Kal mepinravvov, petaBadrcoPar du-Sovres avtoiss 5 Kal auvéBn. Tord yap pépos atroppayey éExovoiws peTey@pnoe pos EKxeivous, To &€ Noutrov €rTpdmrn. epopéevav 5é trorAXrA@Y ET tov Avtiryovov nat Tivos TOV Tept avTOY ELTrOVTOS, bs a > |
“Kart o& ovtor, Bactred, “ Tiva yap,’ elte, “arnv éuov ocxotroy éyovow; adda Anpuntptos
> 4 “~ 99 \ “ / AN
agi€erat Bonfav.” Kai tTovTo pexYpt TrayTos
, \ ” \ eN 4 wn
éxmitwy Kal wepicxoTa@yv Tov viov dua ToAN@V 7°

battle ; and when he replied, “Zeus and Victory,” Alexander said: “Then I will go away and join your adversaries; they surely will receive me.” } _ Moreover, Antigonus, when his phalanx was already forming and he was leaving his tent, stumbled and fell prone upon his face, injuring himself severely ; but he rose to his feet, and stretching out his hands towards heaven prayed that the gods would grant him victory, or a painless death before his defeat. After the armies had engaged,? Demetrius, with the largest and best part of the cavalry, clashed ' with Antiochus, the son of Seleucus; he fought brilliantly and routed his enemy, but by pursuing him too fiercely and eagerly he threw away the victory. For he himself was not able to turn back and rejoin his infantry, since the enemy's elephants were thrown in his way; and Seleucus, observing that his opponents' phalanx was unprotected by cavalry, took measures accordingly. He did not actually charge upon them, but kept them in fear of a charge by continually riding around them, thus giving them an opportunity to come over to his side. And this was what actually came to pass. For a large body of them, detached from the rest, came over to him of their own accord, and the rest were routed. Then, as throngs of his enemies bore down upon him and one of his followers said, "They are making at thee, O King," " Who else, pray, said Antigonus, "should be their mark ? But Demetrius will come to my aid.'' This was his hope to the last, and to the last he kept watching eagerly for his son; then a whole cloud of javelins

1The watchword should have been '' Alexander and Victory."
2 Near the village of Ipsus, in Phrygia, 301 B.c.

tb -

axovTicpatwv eis aurov adeOévtwry emece Kai TaVv adA\AwY aTroNLTOVYTwY oTradov Kal dirov povos Trapépewve TO vexp® Owpak o Aapiccaios.
XXX. Odrw Sé xpiOcions THs pdyns, ot pev verrxnkotes Baotreis thy wT' "Aytiyovm Kal Anpntpim wacav apynv @oTrep péya oopa KataxontovtTes éhapPavov pepidas, Kal mpocdie-veipavto Tas éxeivwv érapxias als elyov avrot apotepoy. Anpnrpsos 5é peta trevtaxioxtrcwv metov Kal TeTpaKLa yx LAL@Y inméwy ghevywv Kat cuvTovas éddaas eis "Edecov, oiouévav atravtwv atropobvTa xXpnpatav avrov ovK adéEecOar rod iepov, poBnOels tors oTparew@tas py TOOTO ToLN-awa, avéotn Sia tayéwy, Kal Tov mrodv én THs 'EXAados érroteiro, TOV NouTaV EeATribwY eV "A@nvaios éxwv tas peylotas. Kal yap Kal vais) éxel Kal ypnpata nal yuvaixa Aniddpecav éTuyxave KaTtanedourreas, Kal BeBatorépay ov« évopile Katapuynv elvar trois mpdypact Tihs "AOnvaiwy evvoias. SOev érret yevouévw rept tas KuxArddas atta mpéoBets 'AOnvaiwy amnv-Tnoav amréxecOar THS WoAEwS TapaKaNdodytes, as evyndiopénov tov Syyou pndéva béyer Oar Th woke. Tav Bactréwv, tTHhv 5é€ Anidapear eis Méyapa eféreurpay peta tins Kal troymrys wpe-movons, ToU KRaDeatnKOTOS éFéorn St opyny av-Tov, KaiTrep Evnvoyws paoTa THY aAXnV atvyiay

Kal yeyovas év ToravTn petaBorn mpayudTwv ov
TamTretvos ovd ayevyns. adda TO Tap édrrida Sievreta0ar trav 'AOnvaiwy Kal tv Soxodoav
ebvotay éEednreyxGat Tois mpadypace Kevnv Kal TeTAATMEVHY OVTAY GdUYNpOY HY AUTO.
1 «al vavs Ziegler, with all the MSS. but one: vais.

72

903

DEMETRIUS

were let fly at him and he fell. The rest of his friends and attendants abandoned him, and one only remained by his dead body, Thorax of Larissa. XXX. The battle having been decided in this manner, the victorious kings carved up the entire domain which had been subject to Antigonus and Demetrius, as if it had been a great carcass, and took each his portion, adding thus to the provinces which the victors already had, those of the vanquished kings. But Demetrius, with five thousand foot and four thousand horse, came in unbroken flight to Ephesus. Here everybody thought that his lack of resources would lead him to lay hands upon the temple!; but he, fearing lest his soldiers might do this, departed speedily, and sailed for Greece, putting his chief remaining hopes in Athens. For he had left ships there, and moneys, and his wife Deidameia, and he thought that in his evil plight no refuge could be more secure than the goodwill of Athens. Therefore when, as he drew near the Cyclades islands, an embassy from Athens met him with a request to keep away from the city, on the ground that the people had passed a vote to admit none of the kings, and informing him that Deidameia had been sent to Megara with fitting escort and honour, his wrath drove him beyond all proper bounds, although he had borne his other misfortunes very easily, and in so great a reversal of his situation had shown himself neither mean-spirited nor ignoble. But that the Athenians should disappoint -his hopes and play him false, and that their apparent good-will should prove on trial to be false and empty, was painful to him.

1 The rich temple of Artemis (Diana).
73
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

To yap havrctatov, ws eoixev, evvoias byw Baotnedot nal Svvdotats texpnptov éotiw vireEp-Bor timev, Hs év TH Mpoatpéce TV atrodLOOp-Tov éyovons TO Kadov ahaiper THY TioTW Oo hoBos ra yap avta cal Sedir0tes Andifovras Kal dtrovvres. Stomrep of voov exovTes ovUK Eis av-Spidvtas ovdé ypadas ovde amolewaes, adda PaAXov eis Ta Epya Kal Tas mpdkets tas éavTav aroBNérovtes 7) Miorevoval, WS TLiMLais, 7) aTE-TTOVLY, WS aVayKaLS: > of ye Shot TrOAAdKES éy avtais waddtora Tails Timais picovot Tovs apeé-Tpws Kal wirepoyxws Kal trap' axdvtayv AapBa-vovTas. |
XXXI. 'O yodv Anpnrpios rote Serva pév nryovpevos maayetv, advvatos Sé dv apvvacban, mpocéreuve tots "AOnvaios éyxarav perpios, akiav S€ ras vads atodaBeiv, év als Hv Kat. 1 Tpioxatdexnpns. Kxopicdpuevos Sé Tmapémreuvcev ets 'IoOpov, cal tov TpaypdtwY avT@ KaKOS éxovtwy (éFémimrov yap éxactaydbev at ppovpat kat peBiotato mwavtTa mpos TOUS TroAEpoUS) atohiTmay émlt tis "EXXabdos Lvppov atvtos adpas éml tHv Xeppovnoov émrevoe Kal Kaxas aya moav Avoipayov wpérer Kal ovvelye Thy Trept aurov Svvawmy, adpyopévnv avadapBavew Kal yi-veoOar madly ovK evKatadpovynrov. o de Avat-paxos U0 TOY GAAwY Baciréwv nuereiTO, wndev 74

DEMETRIUS

And verily the least cogent proof, as it would seem, of a people's goodwill towards a king or potentate is an extravagant bestowal of honours ; for the beauty of such honours lies in the purpose of those who bestow them, and fear robs them of their worth (for the same decrees may be passed out of fear and out of affection). Therefore men of sense look first of all at their own acts and achievements, and then estimate the value of the statues, paintings, or deifications offered to them, putting faith in these as genuine honours, or refusing to do so on the ground that they are compulsory; since it is certainly true that a people will often, in the very act of conferring its honours, have most hatred for those who accept such honours immoderately, ostentatiously, and from unwilling givers.

XXXI._ Be that as it may, in this case Demetrius thought himself grievously wronged ; but since he was unable to avenge himself, he sent a message to the Athenians in which he mildly expostulated with them, and asked that his ships be given back to him, among which was also the one having thirteen banks of oars. These he obtained, and then coasted along to the Isthmus, where he found his affairs in a sorry state. For his garrisons were everywhere being expelled, and there was a general defection to his enemies. He therefore left Pyrrhus in charge of Greece, while he himself put to sea and sailed to the Chersonesus.1 Here he ravaged the territory of Lysimachus, thereby enriching and holding together his own forces, which were beginning to recover their spirit and to ‘show themselves formidable again. Nor did the other kings try to help Lysimachus ;

1 The Thracian Chersonesus, the modern Gallipoli.

bJ 4 J 4 a“ 9? A \ A émrvetxéaTepos éxeivov Soxay elvat, T@ S€ pwadXov lboxyvew kai doBepwrepos.
Ov ToAA@ S€é Botepov YérevKos euvato trép\ / : t 4 y
mov thy Anpntpiov kal Piras Ouyatépa Utpa-/ ” \ 5 > , : a , eX
Tovixny, éxwv pev €E “Amrdapas tis Uepoidos viov
"Avtioyov, olduevos 5€ Ta tpdypata Kal dadovos aprely wreloot, Kal SetoOar THs pos éxeivov oixetoTntos, émel nal Avoipayov éwpa trav IIto-Nepatou Ovyatépwv thy pév éauT@, tHv bé "Aya-Goxret TH vid AapBdvovta. Anpnrpio 8 Fv avénniatos evtuyia Kndedoar Yerevew. Kal Thy Kopnv dvaraBev érde tats vavol mdoats eis
Lupiav, TH Te AAAH YR Tpocéywv avayxaiws Kal
”~ , e , , 9
THs Kedextas amropevos, jv Wnetotapyos eiyve
peta THY mpos Avtiyovoy payny éEaipetoy avT@ So0cicay vrd tav Bacthéwy Hy 5€ Kacdvdpou IInkeiorapyos adergds. adineicOar Sé tiv yopav avrod vopifwv bro Anuntpiov Kata tas atroBda-ces, Kal péurracbat Bovropevos tov YérevKov 6tt TH Kow@ StadddtreTat Trorepio Siya TeV
ar\Xrxwv Bactréwv, avéBn pos avrov.
XXXII. AtcOopevos S€ tovro Anuntptos awp-

> N 4 ? \ a“
Hnoev amo Baraoons éml Kuivdorvy xal tov
Xpnudtwv evpov ért AoiTa Yidtia Kal Staxdola Taddavta, TavTa ovoKevacdpuevos Kal dOdoas bf 4 BS / > 4 \ , éuBanréecbar Sia taxéwv avnyOn. Kal mapovons wv 4 A \ 2 eo) ve \ > 4 non Diras THs yuvateos avT@ wept ‘Pwooor annytnoe dédNevKos. Kat THv evrevEiv evOvs adorov Kal avutrortoy Kat Baoidixny étrotovvto, tTpo-76

they thought that he was no less objectionable than Demetrius, and that because he had more power he was even more to be feared.
Not long afterwards, however, Seleucus sent and asked the hand of Stratonicé, the daughter of Demetrius and Phila, in marriage. He had already, by Apama the Persian, a son Antiochus; but he thought that his realms would suftice for more successors than one, and that he needed this alliance with Demetrius, since he saw that Lysimachus also was taking one of Ptolemy’s daughters for himself, and the other for Agathocles his son. Now, to Demetrius, a marriage alliance with Seleucus was an unexpected piece of good fortune. So he took his daughter and sailed with his whole fleet to Syria. He was obliged to touch at several places along the coast, and made landings in Cilicia, which country had been allotted by the kings to Pleistarchus, after their battle with Antigonus, and was now held by him. Pleistarchus was a brother of Cassander. He thought his territories outraged by these descents of Demetrius upon them, and besides, he wished to upbraid Seleucus for making an alliance with the common enemy independently of the other kings. So he went up to see him.
XXXII. On learning of this, Demetrius set out from the sea-coast for the city of Quinda; and finding twelve hundred talents of its treasure still left, he packed them up, got them safely on board ship, and put to sea with all speed. His wife Phila was already with him, and at Rhosus he was met by Seleucus. Their intercourse was at once put on a royal footing, and knew neither guile nor 77

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tepoy pev YérevKos éotidaas él cxnvijs ev TO otpatoTrébm Anuntpiov, avOes 8€ Anpntptos éxeivov év TH TptaKxadexnpet SeEdpevos. joav 5é kat cyonal cal Kotvoroyiat Kal cuvdinpepevoes 9 4 \ 9 , wv @ 4 '
addpovpwv Kal dvotAwy, axypt ov LédevKos THY Lrtpatovicny avaraBov Aaumpas eis 'AvTtoyerav avéBn. Anunrptos 5€ Kidsxiav xarécye, nat Dirav tiv yuvaixa pos Kaoavdpov éreue tov 9 , 9 , \ /
adergor, atroAvaopevnv tas Ikecotdpyou xatnyopias. év dé rouTm Aniddpera trevoaca Tpos
> A 9 \ A e / A 4 ld avtov amo THs 'EAAdSos Kal ovyyevoméevn Ypovov ov ToAuy é€& appwoTias Tuvds éTEeNEUTNTE. 'yEvo-/ A N a A , ,
pévns 5& mpos Irovepatov d1a Lerevaou dtrias
avT@, @poroynOn Iitorepaida thy Irodeuaiov Ouyatépa NaBeiv adtov yuvaixa.
Kal tadta péev aorteia tod Serevxov. Kers-/ \ J A" 4 / ce)
kiay b€ aktov xpnuata NaBovta trapadodvat Anpntpiov, @s oun érreOe, Yoava xat Tupov aTALT@Y Wpos opyny édoKer Piatos elvat nal Seva move, et THY aw 'Ivydav aypt THS KaTa Yupiav Pardoons aracayv vd avT@ tretroinpévos obTwS
évoens dori éTt TpayLaTav Kal TTwWYOS WS UITrép Svety movAcwv avdpa Kyndeotny Kai petaSorr
TUYNS KEXpNMEvoy éAXaUVELY, NayTpav To ITAa-Twve paptupiay Sidouvs Staxedevopéevm pon THY
> / , A A 9 , aA 4
ovciav TWrEiw, THY 5é ATrANnOTIaY TroLeivy éAdoocw
4 a, e 9 la) 4 ig
Tov ye BovAopevov ws adnOas elvat mrovctoy, ws 6 ye py Tavoy diroTrAovTiay, ovTOS OUTE TEViaS oUTE aTropias amnANAKTAL.
78

suspicion. First, Seleucus entertained Demetrius at his tent in the camp, then Demetrius in his turn received Seleucus on board the ship with thirteen banks of oars. There were also amusements, long conferences with one another and whole days spent together, all without guards or arms; until at length Seleucus took Stratonicé and went up in great state to Antioch. But Demetrius took possession of Cilicia, and sent Phila his wife to Cassander, who was her brother, that she might bring to naught the denunciations of Pleistarchus. In the meantime, Deidameia came by sea from Greece to join Demetrius, and after being with him a short time, succumbed to some disease. Then, by the intervention of Seleucus, friendship was made between Demetrius and Ptolemy, and it was agreed that Demetrius should take to wife Ptolemais the daughter of Ptolemy.

So far all was courtesy on the part of Seleucus. But presently he asked Demetrius to cede Cilicia to him for a sum of money, and when Demetrius would not consent, angrily demanded Tyre and Sidon from him. It seemed a violent and outrageous proceeding that one who had possessed himself of the whole domain from India to the Syrian sea should be so needy still and so beggarly in spirit as for the sake of two cities to harass a man who was his relative by marriage and had suffered a reverse of fortune. Moreover, he bore splendid testimony to the wisdom of Plato! in urging the man who would be truly rich, not to make his possessions greater, but his inordinate desires fewer ; since he who puts no end to his greed, this man is never rid of poverty and want.

1 The passage cannot be determined.

XXXIII. OF pny vrérrn&e Anuntptos, ad\ra lA 9399 4 e A ’ oY 2 9
gdnoas ovd’ av pupiacis HTrTNOH waxas adras ev
Ww \ > , 9 A A lA
Two yau8pov ayanrncocew éri picO@ Léreveov, Tas pev Todes expativato dpoupais, avtos Sé
, / / b , 9
mv0opuevos Aayapn otacidlovaow A@Onvaiots ére-Oéwevoy tupavveiv, HrmibEe paciws émidavels d2-pe p » Hrmile padiws éemrihavels A \ , \ \ \ / > le)

WeoOat THY TOMY. Kal TO pev TréAAYOS aaharas
StetreparwOn peydd@ otorw, Tapa dé rny Ar-TUKNY TWapaTrAéwy exermacOn Kal Tas TrEioTAS
> / A a \ / (e) >
améBanre TOY veov, Kat cuvdrepOapn wrHO0S av-Opemey ovK OXLyov. abros 56 cwlels invato pév TLVOS TOAELOU TPOS TOUS ‘AOnvaious, as & ovdey émrépaive, méuas vautixov avOis aépotgcovtas avtos eis TleAorovyncov wapnrGe Kat Meconvny érondopKet. Kal mpoopayopevos Tots Telyeow exivduvevoe, KaTaTrEATLKOD BéXoUS Eis TO TpOTwWMOY AVT@ Kal TO oTopa Sua THs aLaryovos
3 , > N \ \ 4 \
éumecovtos. avarnpbels bé€ xai mores Ttivas ahectacas Tpocayayopnevos rdadw eis THY ’AT-\ > 7 \ fic. 8 - tTiuxny évéBare, Kat Kpatnoas EnXevoivos Kat ‘Papvodvtos épOerpe Thy yopav, Kai vadv tiva AaBav éyoveay cirov Kal ciaayovoay tois ’AOn-vatows éexpéuace Tov éutropov Kal rov KuBepynrny, Vv a ” bd / PS \ / ,
@aoTe TOY aAXwV arroTperopevwy Sa PoBov auv-Tovov ALtmov év date: yevéoOat, rpos 5é TH ALO kal tav aAAwY atropiay. adadv youv pédtyvov
avodvto TeTTApaKovTa Spaxpeov, o O€ THY TUPaV podtos w@vtos HV Tplakociwy. uKpav Sé Tois
"AOnvaios avarvony tapéoxoy éxatov TevTy-80
DEMETRIUS

XXXIII. Demetrius, however, was not cowed, but declared that not even if he should lose ten thousand battles like that at Ipsus would he consent to pay for the privilege of having Seleucus: as a son-in-law. Then he strengthened his cities with garrisons, while he himself, learning that Lachares had usurped sovereign power over the Athenians in consequence of their dissensions, thought to appear upon the scene and make an easy capture of the city. So he crossed the sea in safety with a great fleet,! but as he was sailing along the coast of Attica he encountered a storm in which most of his ships were lost and a great number of men perished with them. He himself, however, escaped alive, and began a petty war against the Athenians. But since he could accomplish nothing, he sent men to collect another fleet for him, while he himself passed on into Peloponnesus and laid siege to Messene. Here, in an attack upon the walls, he came near losing his life; for a missile from a catapult struck him in the face and passed through his jaw into his mouth. But he recovered, and after restoring to their allegiance certain cities which had revolted from him, he invaded Attica again, got Eleusis and Rhamnus into his power, and ravaged the country. He also seized a ship laden with grain for Athens, and hung its supercargo and its master. All other ships were thus frightened into turning back, and famine became acute in the city, where, besides lack of food, there was dearth also of other things. At any rate, a bushel of salt sold there for forty drachmas, and a peck of wheat was worth three hundred. A slight respite was afforded the Athenians

1 In 297 B.c.

Kovta vies haveioa mept Alywav, ds ereprpev émixoupous auvtois IlroAeuaios. elta Anyntpip TmoA\Na@v pev éx IleXorovyncov, woAXN@Y 5é amo Kumpov veav tapayevopévav, @oTe cuuTacas aOpotcOnvat tpiaxocias, Epuyov apayres ot Iro-Aeuaiov, cal Aaydpns 6 Tvpavvos amédpa mpoé-pevos THY TOALY.
XXXIV. Oi 5é€ "AOnvaio, Kxaimep >Whdiod-pevoe Odvatoy et pynoOein Tis eipnyns Kal dtar-Aayns mpos Anunrptov, evOds ave~yvucay tas éyyus mudAas Kal mpéoBers Emeptrov, ovdey pev
an' éxeivouv ypnaotov wpocboxavtes, éxBralouevns 5é THs atopias, év 7 Svayepav TOAXwY cUpETE-covT@Y NéyeTai TL Kal ToLOvTOY yevéoOaL TaTépa Kat viov év oiknuat. KabélecOar ta Kad' éavTovs atreyvaxortas, ek S€ THS OpodHs piv vexpov éxTeEaeiv, tous dé, ws eldov, dvarndjncavtas apudorté-povs StapdyecOat epi avdtov. ToTe Kai Tov dirocopov "Erixoupoy icropoict Siabpéwat Tovs auvnfers xuduous mpos apiOwoy pet avTav Stavepwopevov.
Oitws otv THs Werdews exovons eicedOwy oO Anpnrptos, Kat Kedevoas eis TO Oéatpoy aOpot-oOjvat wavtas, OTAOLS pev cuvéedpake THY aKNYHY
xat Sopupopors TO Noyetov trepiéraBev, avdTos 5é xataBas, ooTrep ot Tpay@ool, Sia TeV dvw Trapo-Swy, rt pwarrov éxrreTANypéevov Tav 'AOnvaiwv THhv apYnY TOD Aoyou Téepas errotnoato Tov déous avTov. Kal yap Ttovov gdavis Kal pnudtev 82 905

by the appearance off Aegina of a hundred and fifty ships which Ptolemy sent to assist them. Then
. numerous ships came to Demetrius from Peloponnesus,

and many from Cyprus, so that his entire assemblage numbered three hundred, in consequence of which the ships of Ptolemy put off to sea in flight, and Lachares the tyrant abandoned the city and ran away. 3

XXXIV. Then the Athenians, although they had decreed death to anyone who should so much as mention peace and reconciliation with Demetrius, straightway threw open the nearest gates and sent ambassadors to him. They did not expect any kindly treatment from him, but were driven to the step by their destitution, in which, among many other grievous things, the following also is said to have occurred. A father and a son were sitting in a room and had abandoned all hope. Then a dead mouse fell from the ceiling, and the two, when they saw it, sprang up and fought with one another for it. At this time also, we are told, the philosopher Epicurus sustained the lives of his associates with beans, which he counted out and distributed among them. .

Such, then, was the plight of the city when Demetrius made his entry and ordered all the people to assemble in the theatre. He fenced the stage- buildings round with armed men, and encompassed the stage itself with his body-guards, while he himself, like the tragic actors, came down into view through one of the. upper side-entrances. The Athenians were more than ever frightened now; but with the first words that he uttered Demetrius put an end to their fears. For avoiding all harshness of tone and mex pias pero apevos, édkagpas o€ Kal PtrALKs pe pay apevos autovs dnAXdacero, cal Séxa pu- peddas giTou pedipvor érédwxe, Kal KaTET TNE” apxas at padota ™@ On poo dineis Toav. ouvidev 5é Apopoxretdns 0 0 PHTwWP L716 xapas TOV Ojpov é év te pwvais évTa mavrodamais Kal TOUS amo tov Bnpatos étraivous Toy Snpayaryav eae Aapevov dmepBaréaGar, yvaunv eva © nen - tpl T@ Baotret Tov Tletpavé qwapacoO fjvau Kat THY Movvuyiav. émupndia evra dé TovTwY oO Anpnrptos autos éd’ éavTov mpocevéBanre dpov- pay ets TO Movaeiov, ws pa Wad dvaxauriaavra, TOV Sfjpov doxYodlas avT@ mpaypatwv étrépwv mapac yep.

XXXV. "EXopévav b€ TOY "AOnvav evOus érre-Bovreve tH Aaxedaipont. Kal mepl Marriveray
"ApyiSdpov Tov Baotréws dmavTnaavTos aur® vuKnoas pax Kal Tpepdpevos els THY Aaxwvicny éveBare. Kal Tos avTn TH Lmdorn Wad €K mapaTatews ed@v TEVTAKOGLOUS kal d:apOeipas Staxoaious, daov ovum THY TONY exery edoxet pexpe TOV Xpoverv éxelvwy avddwTov ovgay. GND'
v) TUX Wepi ovdéva TOV Bacthéwv ouxey ovr TpoTras AaBeiv peydras kal Taxeias, avd év érépots Tparypac TocauTaxis pupa Kal madey peyarn eat TATE pev éx Aap pas, loxupa, 6é
avdis € eK pavrns yevéoOar. 810 Kat pacwy avTov év tais Xetpoor peraBorais mpos thy TUXNVY avapbéyyerBar To Atoxunevov"
«

av TOL vaoas, ov pe KaTaiOey pou! Soxeis.
&
1 uot doxets Ziegler, with some MSS.: Boxers.

bitterness of speech, he merely chided them lightly — and in a friendly manner, and then declared himself reconciled, gave them besides a hyndred thousand bushels of grain, and estdblished the magistrates who were most acceptable to the people. So Dromocleides the orator, seeing that the people, in their joy, were shouting all sorts of proposals, and were eager to outdo the customary eulogies of the -public speakers on the bema, brought in a motion that Piraeus and Munychia should be handed over to Demetrius the king. This was voted, and Demetrius on his own account put a garrison into the Museium! also, that the people might not again shake off the yoke and give him further trouble.

XXXV. And now that he was in possession of Athens, he at once laid plans against Sparta. Near Mantineia, where Archidamus the king confronted him, he conquered and routed his foe, and then invaded Laconia. And after he had fought a second pitched battle hard by Sparta itself, where he captured five hundred men and slew two hundred, it was thought that he as good as had the city in his power, although up to this time it had never been taken. But with none of the kings does Fortune appear to have taken so great and sudden turns? and in the career of no other did she so many times show herself now small and now great, now resplendent and now abased, now insignificant and now all powerful. For this reason, too, we are told that in his worst reverses Demetrius would apostrophise POTNDE? in the words of Aeschylus :—

“ My flame thou fannest, indeed, and thou seemest to quench me, too.” 2

1 A hill S.W. of the Acropolis.

? Nauck, Trag, Graec, Frag.* p. 107 (w’ épveas). 85

3

Kal yap ToTE Tay TpaypaTayv ovUTwS eUTOpoL

avT@ pos apxny Kal Suvapey Emr tOLOOVT@V aryyeneras Avoipaxos bev wp@tos adnpnuévos AuTov Tas ev "Acia wondets, Kumpov Sé IIltoXepaios npNK@S avEev pmlas TONEWS Larapivos, év dé arapive TONLOPK@VY TOUS maidas avTov Kai THY pyTépa KATELANMBEVOUS. ou pay avra Kal 7 TU UP cab amep n Tap “ApXeroxp yur) TH pev iy wp epoper dodo ppovéovea xecpt, Th © érépn tip, setvois abtov obtw Kai oBepois dryyéhpacwy atootncaca Ths Aaxedaipovos, evOus étépas TPAYLATWV KALVOY Kal peyarov emnveyxev éXTridas €x ToLaUTNS aiTias.

XXXVI. Eset Kaocdvdpou terevtycavtos o mpecButTatas auto Tay taidwv Pidsrios ov moAuv xpovoy Bacirevoas Maxedovwv arébaver, oi Aovtrol Svo mpos addjrous éoraciatoy, Garépou 5é avutav “Avtumdtpou THY pyntépa Gecoahovinv povevoartos, aTEpOS exaret BonBous éx pev "Hireipou I1uppov, éx bé Tledorrovynou AnHapTpLov. EpOace Sé Iluppos ENO, Kab ToD pépos Maxedovias ATOTEMOMEVOS THS BonGeias picBov hoBepos ev Hy non TApouK@v *AreEdvipy Anpntpiou 5€, ws edéEaro Ta ypappara, pera THS Suvapews T POaLovTos, éTt paddov o veavias ToUTOv poBnbels ba TO akiwopa Kal rH boFav amnvrnoey avT@ tept Aiov, domalopevos pev Kal Pirogpovaiuenn, ovdev 5é dackwv er Tis éxeivou eioOat Ta Tpaypara Tapoucias. Ho av oop éx TOUTWY vrowpias T™ pos adANOUS autots, Kal Badilovte Anynr pip pos Seimvor t umd

Tov veavioxov TapaxexAnpEev@m pnvUer TIS éT4-86 906

DEMETRIUS

And so at this time, when events so generously favoured the increase of his dominion and power, word was brought to him, first, that Lysimachus had deprived him of his cities in Asia, and next, that Ptolemy had taken Cyprus, with the exception of the single city of Salamis, and had shut up in Salamis under siege his children and his mother. However, even Fortune, who, like the woman in Archilochus, "in one deceitful hand bore water, and in the other fire," ! while by tidings so dreadful and terrifying she drew him away from Sparta, at once inspired him with other hopes of new and great achievements, and on this wise.

XXXVI. After Cassander's death, the eldest of his sons, Philip, reigned for a short time over the Macedonians and then died, and the two remaining brothers quarrelled with one another over the succession. One of them, Antipater, murdered his mother, Thessalo- nicé, and the other, Alexander, summoned to his help Pyrrhus from Epeirus, and Demetrius from Peloponnesus. Pyrrhus was first to answer the summons, and after cutting off a large part of Macedonia as a reward for his assistance, was already a neighbour whom Alexander feared. But Demetrius, who, when he received Alexander's letters, had set out with his forces to join him, inspired the young man with still more fear because of his high position and reputation, and he therefore met Demetrius at Dium, and gave him a friendly welcome, but declared that the situation no longer demanded his presence. Owing to these circumstances, then, the men were suspicious of one another, and besides, as Demetrius was on his way to supper at the young man's invi-

1 Fragment 93 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, ii.4 p. 410).
87 PLUTARCH'S LIVES

, e b] > Led A 4 f > \
Bournyv, ws ev aUT@ THO TOTP peANOVT@Y aUTOV avereiv. 6 5é pndev StatapayOeis, GArAG pLxpov bets THS Topeias, exédNevoe TOUS pev HYyEWovas Ev a 4 ' \ " > 0 be
Tols SiAots THY oTpaTiay Exe, axodroVOous dé \ to ef N > \ ® ® de \ Kat traidas, doo. Trepi avTov jaoav (noav 5é modv mrelous tav 'AdeEdvdpov), cuvercedOeiv eis TOV advipava Kai trapapéverv aypt dv éEavacth. Tov-To detcavres ot mrept tov "AréEavdpov ovK éTorA-- pnoav émixyepyoat. Kai o pev Anunrpios ovK éyery avT@® TO owpa TroTLKaS oKyn WdpeEvos dia Taxéwv amnrOe 1H Se votepaia wept avaluyny elye, TpdyuaTa vewTepa mTpoomenTwKevar pa-Hevos aUT@, Kal TrapynTEtTo ouyyvepuny ExeLv TOV > Ul > 4 b) / , \

AréEavdpop, et tdyvov atraiper cvvécerOar yap AUT@ padrov arroTE TKXOAdLwY. Eyarpev odv oO
"AréEavdpos, ws ov mpos EyOpav, addr' Exouaiws Ex THS YOpas aTaipovtTos avTov, Kal wpoéteEptTev
" ® 4 > \ de 9 4 e
aypt @errarias. ere dé es Aadpiscav Kop, avOis GAANAOLS eTNyyeAXNOV éoTIdceElsS avTeETt-Bovrevovtes: 6 89 pddsota Tov, 'AréEavdpov e , b] , a 4 if viroxelploy érroince TS Anpntpio. gudrdrrecbas
\ A ww
"yap OKYOY, @> pH KaKElvoy avTibuvdNaTTecBaL
5:8dEn, Tadwv &pOace (Spav pérXovtos avtovd py diaguyeiy éxeivov) 5 éunyavato. KAnOels yap
> a émt Seltrvov AOE mpos Tov Anunrtpiov. ws dé
> a) > fe)
éxeivos éEavéotn petakd Seurvav, doBnOels o
> / A" Aré€avdpos ouveEavéotn nal nata rédas abT@
o

$8

DEMETRIUS

tation, some one told him of a plot to kill him in the very midst of the drinking. Demetrius was not at all disturbed, but delayed his coming a little, and ordered his offrcers to have their troops under arms, and all the attendants and servants in his train (and they were far more numerous than the retinue of Alex- ander) to go with him into the banqueting-hall and to remain there until he rose from the table. This frightened "Alexander, and he did not venture to attempt anything. Demetrius also made the excuse that he was not in condition to take wine, and went away very soon. On the following day he busied himself with preparations for departure, telling Alexander that unexpected troubles had arisen, which demanded his attention, asking his pardon for leaving so quickly, and assuring him that he would pay him a longer visit at another time when his affairs permitted it. Alexander was therefore well pleased, convinced that Demetrius was leaving his territories, not in hostility, but of his own free will, and escorted him on his way as far as Thessaly. But when they came to Larissa, once more invitations to entertain- ments passed between them, and each plotted against the life of the other. This, more than anything else, put Alexander into the power of Demetrius. For he hesitated to take measures of precaution, that he might not thereby teach Demetrius also to take counter-measures, and he was forestalled by meeting the doom he was himself devising (since he delayed measures to prevent the other from escaping out of his hands).1 And so, when Demetrius rose up from table before supper was over, Alexander, filled with fear, rose up also and followed close upon his heels

1 The Greek of the parenthesis is hopelessly corrupt.

6 mpos Tas Oipas cuvnKorovOe. ‘yevopevos odv oO

“

e

Anpyrptos mpos tais Ovpais nara tous éavTod Sopudopous Kat TovTo povov eitray;, “ Komre Tov émOmevov, autos pev UTeEnAG ED, o O€ ’AdXéEavdpos Um’ éxeivwv KaTexoTn Kal TaV dirwv ot ‘1pocBon-Oobvtes, av Eva Aéyovot ohattopevoy eiTrEety WS
npepa pa POdceev avtovs o Anunrptos.
XXXVII. “H pév odv vvF olov eixos OopuBov éxyev. dua dé huépa tapatropmévois tois Make-Sect xai hoBoupévois tHu ToD Anuntpiov Suva, @s émner pev ovdels hoBepos, o dé Anpunrpios éqeurre Bovropevos evtvyety Kxal Tept TaV TeE-mTpaypévwv arodoyjcacOa, Oappeity mapéotn kal déyecOat diravOpwoTras avtov. ws dé HrAOev, ov paxpov éénoev avT@ NOywr, GAAA TO puceiv pev tov ’Avtitatpov, dovéa pntpos dvra, Ber-tiovos 5é€ amopeiv, éxetvov avnyopevoay Bacthéa Maxeddvwrv, cai maparaBovtes evOds Kathyov ets Maxedoviav. nv dé Kat tots olkot. Maxedoow OUK dKovaLos 1) peTaBoArAr, pEeuvnpévots adel Kal pecovow & Kacavépos eis ’AdéEavdpov teOynxora Tapnvounoev. et Oé Tis Ett pvnpn -THS Avtita-Tpov Tov TWadalovd peTpLoTHTOS viEXEiTETO, Kal tavTnv Anpytpios éxaprrovtTo Pika cuvotxav cal tov €& éxetyns viov Exwv Ssadoxov THs apy, non TOTE pelpaxioy byTa Kal T@ TaTpl ovoTpa-TEVOMEVOD.
go

DEMETRIUS

towards the door. Demetrius, then, on reaching the door where his own body-guards stood, said merely, ‘«Smite any one who follows me,” and quietly went out himself; but Alexander was cut down by the guards, together with those of his friends who cathe to his aid. One of these, we are told, as he was smitten, said that Demetrius had got one day’s start of them.

XXXVII. That night, then, naturally, was full of tumult. But with the day the Macedonians, who were in confusion and afraid of the forces of Deme- trius, found that no enemy came against them, but that Demetrius sent to them a request for an interview and for an opportunity to explain what had been done. They therefore took heart and promised to receive him in a friendly spirit. When he came to them, there was no need of his making long speeches, but owing to their hatred of Anti- pater, who was a matricide, and to their lack of a better man, they proclaimed Demetrius king of the Macedonians, and at once went down with him into Macedonia.!_ Furthermore, to the Macedonians at home the change was not unwelcome, for they ever remembered with hatred the crimes which Cassander had committed against the posterity of Alexander the Great. And if there still remained any kindly memories of the elder Antipater’s moderation and justice, of these also Demetrius reaped the benefit, since he was the husband of Phila, Antipater’s daughter, and had a son by her to be his successor in the realm, a son who was already quite a youth, and was serving in the army under his father.

1 In 294 B.c.

¢ \ a , ’
XXXVITII. Odtw 6é Aapurpa Keypnuévos ev-
, 4 \ A a Tuyia tuvOaverat mev Tepl TY Téxvwvy Kal TIS pntpos ws peOetvrat, d@pa Kai Tyas ItoNepaiou mpocGévros avrois, muvOdverat Sé€ rept Tihs
, , \ ee.» 2 a Yerevew yaunPetons Ouvyarpos: ws ‘Avtioy@ TO Ledevaov cuvoixel kal Baciticoa tav dvw Bap-
U
Bdpwv avnyopevtat. acuvéByn yap, ws Eotxe, Tov
"Avtioyoy épacévra Tis Utpatovixns véas ovons, 70n 6€ tratdiov exovons éx Tod Lerevxou, Siaxei-Oat Kaxa@s Kal TOA TroLely TO Trader Stapayo-pevov, TéXOs 8 éauvTOU KaTayvovta Sewav pev ériOupetv, avnxesta Sé vooeiv, xexpatnobar 5é
A nw / b A A nw
TO AOYLT LO, TpoTov aTradAayHs tov Biou Cnteiv
\ ,) f \ / 9 >
kat Trapavew arpewa Kal Oepatreias apeherg

Kat Tpopys aroxXyn TO THp"a, vooEelv TLvVAa VvooOY oxnmTomevov. *“Epaciotpatoy S€ tov tatpov ai-cBécbat pev ov yareTTas épa@vTos auvTov, TO dé 2 , ee. , ae ? a“ , ouTivos épa duototactov dv éEaveupeiv Bovdo-pevoy det pev ev TO Swpatio Sunpepeverv, et é > 2 A 9 o , A a tts eloioe TOv ev dpa pelpaxiov 7 yuvaikav,
. aA ol , “ 4 \ N
éyxabopay Te T@ TpocwT@ Tov AvTioyou Kat Ta
a A /
cuuTacye padota TH WuxH TpeTOMEvy TrEdu-KOTQ Lepn Kal KLVHpaTa TOV TMpaATOS erLoKOTELD.
n e , A
@S OU TOV pev GANDY ElTLOVTWY Opmoiws ELYE, THS
> \ a Sé Xtpatovixcns nal cal” éavrny Kal peta rod
Ul , / > / \ ”~
Lerevxou orrwons Words eyiveto Ta THS
le) a a / Lamgovs éxeiva twept avtoy tavta, pwvas émi-
, A /
oxeots, epvlnua Tupades, dyrewy vTodeiets,
g2

XXXVIII. While Demetrius was enjoying a good fortune so illustrious as this, he had tidings con- cerning his children and his mother, namely, that they had been set free, and that Ptolemy had given them gifts and honours besides; he had tidings also concerning his daughter who was wedded to Seleucus, namely, that she was now the wife of Antiochus the son of Seleucus, and had the title of Queen of Upper Asia. For it came to pass, as it would seem, that Antiochus fell in love with Stratonicé, who was young, and was already mother of a little boy by Seleucus. Antiochus was distressed, and resorted to many means of fighting down his passion, but at last, condemning himself for his inordinate desires, for his incurable malady, and for the subjugation of his reason, he determined to seek a way of escape from life, and to destroy himself gradually by neglecting his person and abstaining from food, under pretence of having some disease. But Erasistratus, his physician, perceived quite easily that he was in love, and wish- ing to discover who was the object of his passion (a matter not so easy to decide), he would spend day after day in the young man’s chamber, and if any of the beauties of the court came in, male or female, he would study the countenance of Antiochus, and watch those parts and movements of his person which nature has made to sympathize most with the inclinations of the soul. Accordingly, when any one else came in, Antiochus showed no change; but whenever Stratonicé came to see him, as she often did, either alone, or with Seleucus, lo, those tell-tale signs of which Sappho sings ! were all there in him,— stammering speech, fiery flushes, darkened vision,

1 Fragment 2 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gracet, iii.+ pp. 88 ff.).
93
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

iSparres ofeis, atakia Kab Bopufos év tois o vypois, Téhos 6e THS Wuxis Kara KpaTos HTTHpEVNS?
amopia Kal AapBos Kal wypiacts, én TOUTOLS Tpoghoy.lopevoy TOV "Epaciatparov Kara TO €- KOs @s ovK av érépas pay Bactrtéws vids évexap-Téper TO cron ay expe Pavarou, Xanerov pev
Hyeta Oat TO ppac as Taira Kal Katevreiy, ov pay GAA Tietevovta TH T pos Tov viov evvoig TOU
ZedevKov mapaxwSuvebcat TOTE, kab evrrely @S Epws ev ein Tou veavioxow TO MdOos, & Epws dé advvatos Kal aviatos. ExT ayevTos dé éxeivou Kal Tmudopévov TOS aviatos, oo 'Ore vy Aia," pavae TOV "Epaciatparop, " épa Tis éuns yuvas-Kos. 'Elta ov« ay, elmrety TOV LérevKon, éndoins, "Epactotpare, TO Eup mavol piros Ov TOV yapov, Kal TavTa opay pas éml TOUT@ pove cahevovtas; i " vse yap dv av, " pdvau, " TOUTO TaTnp @v eroingas, éL Lrparoviens "Avtioxos emeBuunoe." eal Tov éAevxov "Kidde yap, eTaipe,' elmreiy, "Tayv peTaatpeyrat Tes énl TavTa Kat petaBanor Geav 7 avOpar wy TO Ta-Qos: ws éuol Kat THY Bactreiav adeivat xadov
"Avteoxou TEplEeXOMEVD.. TavTa éuTradas oho-Spa tov Yedevkov pera TONY Sax pov ré-YyOVTOS, éuBarovra THY beFtav avT@ Tov "EpaatoTpaTov ecmrety as ovdev "Epacvatpdrou d€orTo° Kat yap TATHP Ke Kal avnp Op Ke Kal Bacihevs auros
dua xal latpos ein THs. oixias dptotos. éK TOVTOU TOV LéhevKov exxAnolay abpoicavra mdvOnpov elTrety ort Bovrerat Kal Stéyvoxe TOY Gvw Tay-Tov toTwv 'Avtioyov arrodeiEar Baoitéa kal
1 yrrnpévns Ziegler, with two MSS.: #rrwpévns.
94
DEMETRIUS

sudden sweats, irregular palpitations of the heart, and finally, as his soul was taken by storm, help- . lessness, stupor, and pallor. And _ besides all this, Erasistratus reasoned further that in all probability the king's son, had he loved any other woman, would not have persisted to the death in refusing to speak about it. He thought it a difficult matter to explain the case fully to Seleucus, but nevertheless, relying on the father’s kindly feelings towards his son, he took the risk one day, and told him that love was the young man’s trouble, a love that could neither be satisfied nor cured. The king was amazed, and asked why his son’s love could not be satisfied. ‘* Because, indeed,” said Erasistratus, “he is in love with my wife.” ‘Then canst thou not, O Erasi- stratus,” said Seleucus, “since thou art my son’s friend, give him thy wife in addition to thy friend- ship, especially when thou seest that he is the only anchor of our storm-tossed house?’’ ‘“ Thou art his father,” said Erasistratus, “and yet thou wouldst not have done so if Antiochus had set his affections on Stratonicé.” “ My friend,” said Seleucus, “ would that someone in heaven or on earth might speedily convert and turn his passion in this direction ; since I would gladly let my kingdom also go, if I might keep Antiochus.” So spake Seleucus with deep emotion and many tears, whereupon Erasistratus clasped him by the hand and told him he had no need of Erasistratus; for as father, husband, and king, he was himself at the same time the best phy- sician also for his household. Consequently Seleucus called an assembly of the entire people and declared it to be his wish and purpose to make Antiochus king of all Upper Asia, and Stratonicé his queen,

>

Xtparovicny Bactrida, addAHrOLs GUVOLKODYTAS
” \ ‘ \ eN b / ¢ ,
olecOas Sé tov pev viov etOtopévoy atraytTa Tet-JecOat wal xatnkooy dvta pnbév avrepety avT@
Wpos TOV ydapov: ei & 1 yur TO py vevoutrpéevm SucKxoAaivot, Tapaxarely tous hirous Omrws bu-Sdoxwow avtny Kal retOwot xara Kat Sixata Ta Soxovvta Bacirel pera TOU cuppépovTos Hyeia Oat.
Tov wey ody ’Avtioxou Kat Ytpatovixns reer éx TotauTns yevéerOat Tpopacews heyoust.
XXXIX. Anuar ptos dé pera Maxedoviay xat
Octradiav Hv wapearAnpos. éEywv 5é cai Iledo-Tovyvnoov Ta wWAeloTa Kal Tav éxtos “IoOpod Méyapa xai ’AOnvas éri Botwrovs éorpdteuce.
Kal Wp@Tov pev éyévovtTo cupBaces péTpLat Tepl Vd \ bd) 4 4 4 A dirias mpos avrov: érerta KXewvipou tod Yrap-
, a“ TiadTov TapaBanrovTos eis @nBas peta orpatias, > / e , \ 4 @ fe)
érrapbevtes ot Botwrtot, xat Tltovdos aya rod @coméws, bs émpwrteve SoEn cai dSuvaper Tore, TULTApPOPLaVTOS auUTOUsS, améaTncav. ws 4é
tais O@nBats érrayayav tas pnyavas o Anpunrptos eTrodopKes Kal poByGels vrreERAOEV o KrAewvupos,

KkatatAayevtes ot Botwrol mapédwxav éavtovs. 0
5é tais modeow éuBarwv dpovpay Kal mpakd-Hevos TOAAG YXpHMaTa, Kal KaTaNITT@V avToOis emiperntny Kal appootny lepwvupov tov iotopt-
, ” b , a \ 4 \

xov, ed0kev nrriws Kexpno8a, nai pariora dia

\
Iliow. éX@v yap avtov ovdéy KaKxdv érroinoey,
G\Aad Kal wpocayopevoas nail dirodpovnbeis 96 908

DEMETRIUS

the two being husband and wife; he also declared it to be his opinion that his son, accustomed as he was to be submissive and obedient in all things, would not oppose his father in this marriage; and that if his wife were reluctant to take this extraordinary step, he called upon his friends to teach and persuade her to regard as just and honourable whatever seemed good to the king and conducive to the general welfare. On this wise, then, we are told, Antiochus and Stratonicé became husband and wife.

XX XIX. As for Demetrius, after Macedonia he became master of Thessaly also. And now that he had most of Peloponnesus, and, on this side the Isthmus, Megara and Athens, he turned his arms against the Boeotians. These at first made friendly agreements with him on reasonable terms; after- wards, however, when Cleonymus the Spartan made his way into Thebes with an army, the Boeotians were lifted up in spirit, and since at the same time Pisis of Thespiae, who was their leading man at this time in reputation and influence, added his in- stigations to the step, they revolted. But when Demetrius brought up his engines-of-war against Thebes and laid siege to the city, Cleonymus took fright and stole away, and the Boeotians, in terror, surrendered.! Demetrius put garrisons in their cities, exacted large sums of money from them, and left as their overseer and governor Hieronymus the historian, thereby getting a reputation for clemency, and particularly by his treatment of Pisis. For after capturing him Demetrius did him no harm, but actually greeted him, showed him kindness, and

1 In 293 B.c.

Tohewapyov év @comtais am eserkev. ov. TOAG dé 0 vo Tepov ahioKerat Avotpayos vo Apopeyai-Tov: Kal Tpos TovTO Anpntpiou | Kara, TAYXOS
éfopynaavros émrt Opgeny, OoTep épnua } KaTa-Anyopevou, jTwadw atéotncay oi Botwroi, Ka Avoipayos & apa Sverpevos amrnyyerrero. TAXES oop Kal T pos opyny dvactpewas o Anpntptos epev HTTNMEVOUS wrod TOU ma.dos *Avtiyovou paxn tovs Bowwtovs, cal tas @nBas adOes émroAopKet.
XL. Tldppov 5¢ @cocadiav KATATPEXOVTOS Kal EXPL Oeppotudhov mapapavertos, "Avtiryovov emt TIS mohsopKias ATrONLTIOV aT Os Gpyncev € én’ éxeivon. oFews dé puyovtos, év @cocania xata-oTnoas: puptous omAitas Kal Xertous immeis, avOis évéxetto Tais O7Bars Kal Tpooiye THY Aeyopevny EhErrohuy, TOAUTOVWS Kal KATA pL pov vo BpwOous Kal peyeous MoxXNevoperny, ws WOALS
év duct pat bv0 oradious mpoerdeiv. tov oé Bowwtav eppwmevens dpuvopeveov Kat Tov Anun-Tplov TONAGKLS prroverxias évexa faddov n “peas payer bas Kat cuvduvevetv TOUS oTpATLOT as dvaryxalovTos, op@v oO ‘AvTiyovos | TiMTOVTAS OUK odious Kat mepiTrab an, “Ti, @ qWatep, (edn, “‘ mapavadio Komevous ovK avayKaiws TovTOUS T EpLop@pen ; "0 bé mapotuvbeis, “Sv 6,” épn, “ri duo xepaivers; a Ord pet pov dpetrers Tots anobvnckovaw;’ " ov py adra Kal Bovdcpevos ye pn Soxeiy érépwy adedeiy povov, adda Kal 1 %onua Bekker adopts Reiske’s correction to edpnua (treasure-trove).

appointed him polemarch in Thespiae. Not long afterwards, however, Lysimachus was taken prisoner by Dromichaetes, and in view of this Demetrius set out with all speed for Thrace, thinking to occupy a region destitute of defenders. Thereupon the Boeotians revolted again, and at the same time word was brought that Lysimachus had been set free.

Quickly, therefore, and in wrath, Demetrius turned back, and finding that the Boeotians had been defeated in battle by his son Antigonus, once more laid siege to Thebes.

XL. But Pyrrhus now overran Thessaly and was seen as far south as Thermopylae ; Demetrius there- fore left Antigonus to conduct the siege of Thebes, and himself set out against this new foe. Pyrrhus, however, made a swift retreat, whereupon Demetrius stationed ten thousand men-at-arms and a thousand horsemen in Thessaly and once more devoted him- self to Thebes. Here he brought up against the city his famous City-taker,! but this was so laboriously and slowly propelled, owing to its weight and great size, that in the space of two months it hardly advanced two furlongs. Besides, the Boeotians made a stout resistance, and Demetrius many times, out of contumacy rather than from need, forced his soldiers to risk their lives in battle. Antigonus saw that they were falling in great numbers, and in great concern said: “Why, my father, should we suffer these lives to be squandered without any necessity for it?’ But Demetrius was incensed, and said: “ Why, pray, art thou disturbed at this? Are rations due from thee to the dead?”’ However, wishing not to be thought reckless of other lives

1 Cf. chapter xxi. 1.

, A / 4 \
auyKivouvevery Tois payopévors, SteNauveTaL TOV
, 9 a le \ v)
tpadynrov ofuPerct. xal devas pev Eoxev, ov pny avicev, GANA elrNe Tas OnBas wardey. Kal
,
mapedOwy avataciw pev Kal poBov ws ta detvo-
,
TATA Teicopévoars Tapécyer, avedwy 5é TpLioKal-Sexa Kal petactynaas Tivas adhe Tods adXovS.
a \ @ , Ww / 9 4
tais pev ov OnBars obrw Séxatov oixovpévars éros adNa@vas Sis év TO Ypov@ TOUT TUDETECE.
Tov dé TvOtwv xa€dnxovtwy mpaypya Kawvo-TaTov émréTpeev avT@ Trorety o Anunrpios. émrel yap AirwAol ta rept AeAdhovs oreva Katetyov, év AOnvats avtos Hye TOV ayOva Kal THY Tavy-yup, ws 67 mpochnKoy avToht pddtoTa Tiacbar Tov Oeov, ds Kal mwatp@ds éaTt Kal AéyeTas TOD
yévous apynyos. |

XLI. ’EvretOev éraverOav eis Maxedoviav xat unre avros ayev novyiay mepux@s Tovs Te dAXouvs opav ey tais otpateiais paddov avT@ mpocéyovTas, oxo 5€ Tapaxywders Kal ToNUTpa-

ypovas OvTas, éatpatevoey er AitwXous: Kal TY yopav Kaxwooas cai Ildvravyov év adti pépos éxovta THs Suvdpews ovK Griyov amoXLTT@V
> 4 oN b] , \ A > > 3 a évt Tlvppov autos éywpet nat Ilvppos én' éxetvor: GvArAnrov S€ Svapaprovtes, o pev éropber tH
e
"Harecpov, 0 Sé¢ Ilavravy@ mepirecav Kal paynv 4 9 AX. \ w" A A a cuvawas avroyv pev axpt Tov dSodvar Kal NaBeiv 1 In 290 B.c. The siege lasted nearly a year.

only, but also to share the perils of battle, he was pierced through the neck by 4: cetapult-bolt. And yet, sore wounded as he was, he 'did' not give up, but took Thebes again.! His entry ints the city filled the citizens with acute fear; théy:. thought they were to suffer the most dreadful punishments ; but he put to death only thirteen of them, 'banished a few, and pardoned the rest. And so it was-the fate of Thebes, which had been occupied less'than. ten years," to be captured twice during this time. .°°. '

Furthermore, the time for the Pythian games 'being now at hand, Demetrius ventured upon a most un... heard of proceeding. Since, namely, the Aetolians —

occupied the passes about Delphi, he conducted the' — games and the festival in person at Athens, declaring it to be especially fitting that Apollo should be honoured there, since he was a patron deity of the Athenians and was said to have been the founder of their race. _

XLI. From Athens Demetrius returned to Mace- donia, and since he was himself not prone by nature to keep quiet, and since he saw that his followers were more devoted to him when they were on a campaign, but at home were turbulent and meddle- some, he made an expedition against the Aetolians. After ravaging the country, he left Pantauchus there with a large part of his forces, while he himself moved against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus also moved against him, but they missed one another on the march. Demetrius therefore plundered Epeirus, but Pyrrhus fell upon Pantauchus, and after a battle in which the two commanders came to close quarters and

* Cassander began the restoration of the city (after its utter annihilation by Alexander in 335 B,c.) in 315 B.c.

jor

TAny HY év xEpor, 'ys wevov érpéyrato, tav dé

GANwv ToANoOUs. . pay ATEKTELVED, éCaypnoe é TEVTAKLEXtALAUS.” “wal TOUTO pddiora Anpijrptov exdnwoev’ Qu yap ota ponbeis 0 Iluppos ap’ Ov én pakev ‘tbs Jaupacbels 51a TO WrEloTa 7H
xeupl karepydcacbat, heya Te Kat ape pov EaYev “ATO Tis payns éxeiyns évopa mapa Tots Mawedéav Kai trodnois emrnet Aéyerv Tov Maxe-Sdvcau, ds ev povep TOUT@ TOV Baothéav elo ov éyopGr0 THS “Aref avdpov TOAMNS, ob 6 aNXot,
-. Kar padicta Anpirptos, @s ert TKNVIS TO Bapos
"4. broxpivowro kal Tov GyKov Tob avdpos. ny Oe oe bs GANOGs tpaypdia peyddn mept rov Anunrprov, cf

.
ov pLovov aurexyopevov Kal S:adovpevov TEPLTTAS Kavotats Stpir pous Kal Xpucorrapupors adoupyiow, GAA Kal wept tois tocly é« mopdupas ‘axparov . cumTentAn Levys xpucoBadeis We€TrOLNpévov éuBdoas. nV: 6é TUS Uparvopern Xraris
avrT@ modu xpovov, epyov Srrepypavor, elxacpa
Tov KOTMOU Kai TOV KaT ovpavov gaivopévwv 6
KarencipOn pe mpTenes év TH petaBonrg Tay Mpaywarer, ovdels bé éTohpnoev avr; Xprjoacat, Kxaitep OuK OAdry@V Dorepov év Maxedovia coPBapav YEvOMEVOY Bacirewr.
XLII. Ov povov Sé TOUTOLS Tols Jeapacw éXvu-

‘Wel TOUS avO parrous anbes dvtas, GNA Kal Tpu-a aie Kat Siavray €Bapvovto: Kal padiora 57 TO voopthov avrou Kal Svampocodov. 7 yap ov mapeixe KaLpov evruxeiy, 7 Xareros my oa TPAXVS evTvy dvovow. ‘AOnvatwv poev yap, wept ods é€omrovodKet pddtota tav ‘EAAnver, é éT7 duo 7 pe-oBeiav xatécxer ex Aanedaipovos 5¢ évos mpe-102
909

DEMETRIUS

wounded each other, routed him, took five thousand of his men prisoners, and slew many of the rest. This wrought the greatest harm to the cause of Demetrius. For Pyrrhus, who was not so much hated for what he had done as he was admired for making most of his conquests in person, acquired from this battle a great and splendid name among the Macedonians, and many of them were moved to say that in him alone of all the kings could they see an image of the great Alexander's daring; whereas the others, and particularly Demetrius, did but asseme Alexander's majesty and pomp, like actors on a stage. And there was in truth much of the theatrical about Demetrius, who not only had an extravagant array of cloakings and head-gear—double-mitred broad-brimmed hats and purple robes shot with gold, but also equipped his feet with gold-embroidered shoes of the richest purple felt. And there was one cloak which was long in the weaving for him, a magnificent work, on which was represented the world and the heavenly bodies ; this was left behind half-finished when the reversal of his fortunes came, and no succeeding king of Macedonia ventured to use it, although not a few of them were given to pomp and luxury.

XLIT. And not only by such displays did he vex his subjects, who were unused to them, but his luxurious ways of living were also offensive, and above all else the difficulty of getting access to him or conversing with him. For either he would give no audience at all, or he was stern and harsh with his auditors. For instance, he kept an embassy from the Athenians, for whose favour he was more solicitous than for that of any other Greeks, two years in waiting ; and when a single envoy came to him from aBevrod rapayevopévov Kxatadpoveiobar Soxav nyavaxTnoev,. aateiws pevtot kal Aaxwuinds

2. a > 7 > neg' Aye "
éxeivos, eirovtos avtou "Ti ov Aéyes ; va Aaxe-§ , Low > 6 yy 9
atpoviot mpeaBeutTny Erepryap ; Nai," eltrey, Ce 9 le) \ (4 99 60 &e b) a"
w Bacirev, Tpos eva, ofavtos 6€ avTov Tote Snuotixnw@tepov eFeXavvey, eal mpos évrevEev exer
ovUK andas, avvédpamov tives éyypadous afwwoets bd , , \ , A lol 4 avabibovtes. Se€apévou 5é rdcas cai TH YNapu-
, @ em \

84 aurraBovtos HoOncav oi avOpwrot Kai Twapn-KkodovGouv: ws b€ HAGEv eri thy Tov 'A€tod yé-gdupav, avartitas thy xNapvbda wdacas eis TOV \ 9ge7 N a N " > / motapov éFéppie. nai todto 6 devas jnviace tous Maxedovas vBpitecOar Soxodvras, od Bact-NeverOat, nat Diriwrov pvnuovevovtas,) TaV
pvnpovevovT@Y GKOVOVTAS, WS METPLOS TY TeEpl
TavTa Kal KoLvos. KaietroTe mpecBuTépov yuvatou
KOTTOVTOS aUTOV év Trapod@ Tivi Kal Seopévou
, 9 A Va \ lA 9
TovANaKkis axovaOjnvar, Pycas pn syVoNalew, éy-
, » 7 "<M? , 9 9

KpayovrTos é€xetvou Kat » Bacidreve’ eitrovtos, dnxXGels apodpa Kal mpos TovT@ yevomevos aveotpewev els THY olKiav, Kal TdaVvTAa TrOLNoOapEVOS votepa, Tols éevruyelvy BovNopevois, dpEdpevos aro
A 4 ? / o \ \ e ff
THs mpecButidos éxeiyns, emi woAANas Hmepas éoyvoNacev.
Ovdséev yap ottws Bacidel wpoajKov ws TO THS
Sixns épyov. “Apns pmev yap Tupavvos, os dyae Tipo0eos, vouos 5é mdvrwy Bactrevs cata Iliv-
s > \ a ‘4 9
Sapo éott Kal trovs Bactrets’ Ounpos dnow oux

Sparta, he thought himself despised, and was incensed. However, when he cried, “ What meanest thou? Have the Spartans sent but one envoy?” he got the neat and laconic reply, “ Yea, O king, to one man.” On one occasion, when he was thought to be riding abroad in a more affable mood than usual, and seemed to encounter his subjects without displeasure, there was a large concourse of people who presented him with written petitions. He received them all and folded them away in his cloak, whereupon the people were delighted and escorted him on his way; but when he came to the bridge over the Axius, he shook out the folds of his cloak and cast all the petitions into the river. This was a great vexation to the Macedonians, who thought themselves insulted, not ruled, and they called to mind, or listened to those who called to mind, how reasonable Philip used to be in such matters, and how accessible. An old woman once assailed Demetrius as he was passing by, and demanded many times that he give her a hearing. “I have no time,’ said Demetrius. “Then don’t be king,’ screamed the old woman. Demetrius was stung to the quick, and after thinking upon the matter, went back to his house, and postponing every thing else, for several days devoted himself entirely to those who wished audience of him, beginning with the old woman who had rebuked him.

And surely nothing so befits a king as the work of justice. For “Ares is tyrant,’ in the words of Timotheus,! but “ Law is king of all things,’ accord- ing to Pindar;? and Homer speaks of kings as

1 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, til. +p. 622. Cf. the Agesilaiis, xiv. 2, Bergk, op. cit. i.* p. 439.

éXeTTONELS OVde vas Narn pets, ava Géwirras Tapa TOU Atos NapBavovras prec Bar Kal purdc-OELV, KAL TOD Atos ov TOV TONE MLKOTATOV ovudé TOV
adixworarov Kal povinwratoy Tov Bactréwr, andra Tov StKaLoTaTOV O daptaTny Kal hadnt ny mpoonyo-peurev. adna Anyntptos EX ape tT@ Bactnret TOV Jed dvopovoTarny érey pao pevos T™ poo - yupiav' o pev yap Tlodevs Kal TloAsobyos, © 0 bé Tlodsopenrns: emixdnow eaxev. ovTws él Thy Tov KaXou x@pav TO aioy pov vTr0 Suvdpews a apa-Gods érenOov quvexcioae tH S0&n THY ad.Kxiay.
XLII. ‘O & ov Anuntptos emiagahegrara
voonoas ev IléXXn prxpod tote Maxedoviay a amé-Bane, KaTadpapovTos oF€ws Tldppou Kal ex pes
’Edéoons m poe Boros. dpa oe 7 Kouporepos
yevérOar wavy padios eFeddcas auTov erounoaro Tivas oporoyias, ov Bovdopevos éumroday ovrt ouvex.ds wpoomrTaiwv Kat TOTOMAX OV HT Tov elvat ™ pos ols Stevoeiro. Srevoetto Sé ovdev orion, GNAG maoay dvahapBaverv THY UTrO ™@ TwaTpl yevopevny apxny. Kal Tis earidos TauTns Kal THS emBoris OUK aTreNElTrETO Ta THS TapacKevis, aNANA oTpaTLas pwev HON ouveTréTaKto TECHS pwupLa-
bas déxa | Ouaxiriov avdpav amobeovcas, Kar
Nwpis imméas orLyo SioxAtcov Kat puptov éXat-Tous. oToAov 6é veav apa TEVTAKOG Lov KaTa-Rardopevos Tas pev éy Ilecpavet Tpotrets &BerTo, tas b€ épv Kopiv0e, Tas be éy Xarxibs, Tas dé Tept Ilenray, auras eT L@v exacTaxoce kal dcddoKOY a xPn Kal TVVTEXVW[EVOS, ex ANTTOPEVOY
amavTov ov Ta TANON Movov, GANA Kal TA peyeOn Tov epywv. ovdeis yap eldey avOpwrwy ovTeE 106

receiving from Zeus for protection and safe-keeping, not city-takers nor bronze-beaked ships, but “ ordinances of justice’’;! and he calls a disciple and *‘ confidant” of Zeus, not the most warlike or unjust or murderous of kings, but the most just.2, Demetrius, on the contrary, was delighted to receive a surname most unlike those given to the king of the gods; for Zeus is surnamed City-guardian, or. City-protector ; but Demetrius, City-besieger. Thus a power devoid of wisdom advances evil to the place of good, and makes injustice co-dweller with fame.

XLITI. But while Demetrius lay most dangerously sick at Pella, he almost lost Macedonia; for Pyrrhus swiftly overran it and advanced as far as Edessa. As soon, however, as Demetrius had somewhat recovered his strength he easily drove Pyrrhus out of the country, and then came to a kind of agreement with him, being unwilling that continual collisions and local conflicts with this opponent should defeat his set purpose. And his purpose was nothing less than the recovery of all the realm that had been subject to his father. Moreover, his preparations were fully com- ° mensurate with his hopes and undertakings. He had already gathered an army which numbered ninety- eight thousand foot, and besides, nearly twelve thousand horsemen. Atthe same time, moreover, he had laid the keels for a fleet of five hundred ships, some of which were in Piraeus, some at Corinth, some at Chalcis, and some at Pella. And he would visit all these places in person, showing what was to be done and aiding in the plans, while all men wondered, not only at the multitude, but also at the magnitude of the works. Up to this time no man had seen a ship of 1 Iliad, i. 238 f, 2 Minos, Odyssey, xix. 179.

TevTEKaLoEKHpN vavY TpoTEpov ovUTE Exxatdexnon,
? > @ 4 a e
aXX vorepoy teacapaxovTnpn IIroXepatos o Pi-AoTaTwp évauTNynaaTo, pHKos Staxociwy oydon-Kovta mnxa@v, Dros 5é &ws axpootodiov mevTHxovra Sveiv Seovtwv, vavtats dé ywpls éperav éEnprupevnv tetpaxociows, épérars bé€ Tetpaxic-
/ \ \ 4 e / / > /
xidLots, Kwpis dé ToUTwY omAitas Seyopéevny éri
Te TOY Tapddwy Kal Tod KaTaoTpwMpPATOS OALY@
/ > , > \ , 4 9° 3
TptaxXtNiwy amrodéovTas. aAAA Oéay povny éxeivn Tapéoxe Kat pxpov Scov Stadépovea Tay povipov oixodounuatwv, pavivat mpos éeriderEy, ov ypeiav, emioparas cat Sucépyws exivyOn. TaVv dé Anunrtpiou vedv ovK RY TO KaXOV avaywuvicTop, ovde TH WEPLTTO THS KaTacKevns atreatEepovvTo
A 4 9 \ \ f \ mw 9
THY XpELayv, ANNA TO TAaXOS Kal TO Epyov afiobea-TOTEpoV Tov peyeDous TapEtxor.
XLIV. Aipopuévns ody trocavrns duvduews eri

tnv ’Aciav bonv per "AréEavdpov ovdels Exe MpoTepov, oi TpEls cuveaTHaav él Tov Anurtprov, déreveos, roveuaios, Avoipayos éreta Kow?7
N , 9 4 > + > ,
apos Iluppov amroaretNavtes éxéXevov éEarrecOat Maxedovias nat py vouite orovdas als Anpun-TpLos ovK exeiv@ TO 7 TOAEMELTOaL SédwKeEV, GAN’ etAnghev Eavt@ 76 ToNepetv ols BovdrAEeTat TporeEpor.
SeEapévou S5¢ [lvppov modds mepiéotn modus
” } / ud \ \ \ ¢€
eT LENAOVTA Anpuntplov. aya yap thv pev ED-Nada WArEevoas oTOAM peyadrAw IIToNEpaios adiatn, Maxedoviav bé¢ Avoipayos éx @pdens, ex 5¢ 108
DEMETRIUS

fifteen or sixteen banks of oars. At a later time, it is true, Ptolemy Philopator built one of forty banks of oars, which had a length of two hundred and eighty cubits, and a height, to the top of her stern, of forty-eight; she was manned by four hundred sailors, who did no rowing, and by four thousand rowers, and besides these she had room, on her gang- ways and decks, for nearly three thousand men-at- arms. But this ship was merely for show; and since she differed little from a stationary edifice on land, being meant for exhibition and not for use, she was — moved only with difficulty and danger. However, in the ships of Demetrius their beauty did not mar their fighting qualities, nor did the magnificence of their equipment rob them of their usefulness, but they had a speed and effectiveness which was more remarkable than their great size.

XLIV. Accordingly, while this great force, the like of which no man had possessed since Alexander, was getting under way against Asia, the three kings, Seleucus, Ptolemy, and Lysimachus, formed a league against Demetrius. Next, they sent a Joint embassy to Pyrrhus, urging him to attack Macedonia, and not to regard a truce by which Demetrius had not given him the privilege of having no war made upon him, but had taken for himself the privilege of making war first on the enemy of his choice. Pyrrhus granted their requests, and a great war encompassed Demetrius before his preparations were completed. For at one and the same time! Ptolemy sailed to Greece with a great fleet and tried to bring it to revolt, while Lysimachus invaded Macedonia from ‘Thrace, and Pyrrhus from the neighbouring

- } In the spring of 287 B.c.
109
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

THS Opopou Ivppos _euBarortes éhenhdrour. 0
dé Tov pév viov émt Tis ‘EdAd605 KATEALTEV, AUTOS 56 Bondar Maxedovia Tp@rtov epyunoev emt Avoi-paxov. deyyéderas 5é auT@ IIvppos TPNKDS
TONY Bépocav. Kal TOU ovyou TAXEWS els TOUS
Maxedovas éumerovt.0s ovdev € ért TO Anyntpio

Kara Oo OV elyen, ¢ ANA Kab éSuppav cal oakpuwv Kal mpos éxeivoy opyns Kal Pracdnusay peoTov Hy TO oTpaTomesoy, Kal TUMMEVELY ovK 70¢dov, arn' aTrLevat, T@ peev oye pos Ta oixot,
TH dé adnBeia mpos Tov Avoipa ov. édofev ou
TO Anpntpio et eae pev amoaTivar qrop-porate, 7 pos 5é lvppov tpérecOar' tov pév yap opopunov elvas Kal ToNNOIS ouvidn és "Are£ar-Spov, énnduv dé cai Eévov avdpa Tov IIvppov ovuK dv avrov TpoTiwhaae Maxedovas. TOUTED pevTor TOAD Suepeva On TOV NOYLTUOV. Ss yap eyyus éfov T@ Tluppe TapeaT paTomresevaey, del pev auTov THY év Tots dm daLs hapmpornta Oaupa-Covtes, &« TE Tov TaXatotdTov Kai Baotiixa-TaTov elOta pévor vopiCerv TOV év Tois Smrots patio Tov, Tote 6€ Kal Tmpdws Kexpio Gar Tots ado Kopevors muvOavopevor, mavrws 5€ Kal mpos Erepov Kai Tpos TOUTOV amradXayhvat tov Anpn-Tplou Cntobvres, amex @pouv ra Opa Kat Kar oni-yous TO Ye mpatov, eita pavepars Gmav elxe Kivyow Kat Tapayny TO \oTparomeson, tédos 5€ TO Anpnt pio ToAmHTavTEs TUVES mpoaedOetv éxéAevov amvévat kal owtew avtov' amepnxévar yap Hn 4 «al BaoiAindmraroy Coraés and Sintenis, with the best MSS.; Bekker omits the raf.
IIo

"

DEMETRIUS

Epeirus, and both plundered the land. But Deme- trius left his son in charge of Greece, while he himself, hastening to the rescue of Macedonia, set out first against Lysimachus. But tidings came to him that Pyrrhus had taken Beroea. The report quickly came to the ears.of the Macedonians, and then Demetrius could no longer maintain discipline, but his camp was full of lamentations and tears, coupled with wrathful execrations against himself, and the soldiers would not hold together, but in- sisted on going away, ostensibly to their homes, but in reality to Lysimachus. Demetrius therefore de- termined to put as much distance as _ possible between himself and Lysimachus, and to turn his arms against Pyrrhus; for Lysimachus, as he thought, was a fellow-countryman and congenial to many of the Macedonians because of Alexander; while Pyrrhus was a new-comer and a foreigner, and would not be preferred by them before himself. In these calculations, however, he was greatly deceived. For he drew nigh and pitched his camp by that of Pyrrhus; but his soldiers had always admired that leader's brilliant exploits in arms, and from of old they had been wont to consider the man who was mightiest in arms as also the most kingly ; besides this, they now learned that Pyrrhus treated his prisoners of war with mildness, and since they were seeking to be rid of Demetrius whether it took them to Pyrrhus or to another, they kept deserting him, at first secretly and in small companies. Then the whole camp was in open agitation and disorder, and at last some of the soldiers ventured to go to Demetrius, bidding him to go away and save him- self; for the Macedonians, they said, were tired of

III

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Maxedovas t vmrép THS éxelvou Tpupys TOhEMODVTAS. 911 ovrot PETPLOTATOL TOV NOYwV éepaivovro TO. Anpuntpi ™ pos THY TOV adiwv TpAaXUTnT a: wal Tmap-eNOov er oKNU TD, @omrep ov Bactneus, GD UTrO-KpLTNS, peTapprevvutar xrapuda parav avrl THS Tpayichs éxeivns, cat dtarabov UmEexopnoey.
opynadvTov 5é TaY TAELTTAV EOS ep' apmayny
Kat wpos aAANAOUS Siapaxopevery Kal THY oKnUaY
StacTrovTw, emupavels O I1¥ppos expaTnaey av-ToBoet Kal KaTéaXe TO otpatoresor. Kal yiverat
7 pos Avaipaxov auT@ cULTATNS Maxedovias veunots, értaetiav UTo Anpunrpiov BeBaiws apy-Geions.
XLV. Otto be Tou Anynrtpiou : TOY TPaYWaTwV exTreTOvTOS Kat KaTapuyovtos els Kacdvdpeay, n yun Pira mepuTrabns yevouevn mpoa wWeiv pev
oux Urréwervev av0is idtorny nat gduydda Tov TANMOvEeD TATOV Bactréwy Anunrpror, drrevmawevn
b€ wacapv édrida Kal puonoaca THY TUXNY auTou BeBavorépar € €v Tots KaKOls OVaaY 7 TOLS aryabois, Tlovca papparov awéGave. Anpnrptos dé ert TaD ovum ay vavayiov exer Oa Seavonbels amrnpev ets THY "EXXdda Kai Tovs éxet aotTpatnyous Kal idous ouviryer.
"Hy obv) Loporheous MevéAaos etxova tais
auTov TYYaLs TapaTiOnaty, aX' ovpos ael TOT HOS éy tuxv@ Oeod

TPOXD KuKAEtTAL Kal peradrrdacer puay,

OaTrEp cEAnYNS © ois evgpovas * dvo

otivar Suvatr' dv ovtror ev popdh m4,

1 ebppdvas Sintenis with Nauck, after Brunck ; Coraés and Bekker retain the ebppdvais of the MSS, waging war in support of his luxurious way of living. Demetrius thought this very moderate language compared with the harshness of the rest ; so he went to his tent, and, as if he had been an actor and not a real king, put on a dark cloak in place of his stage-robes of royalty, and stole away unnoticed. Most of the soldiers at once fell to pillaging and tearing down his tent, and fought with one another for the spoils; but Pyrrhus came up, mastered the ‘camp without a blow, and took possession of it. And all Macedonia was divided between Pyrrhus and Lysimachus, after Demetrius had reigned over it securely for seven years.!

XLV. When Demetrius thus lost his power and fled for refuge to Cassandreia, his wife Phila was- full of grief and could not endure to see her husband, that most afflicted of kings, once more in private station and in exile; she gave up all hope, and in hatred of his fortune, which was more secure in adversity than in prosperity, she drank poison and died. But Demetrius, determined to cling still to what was left of his wrecked fortunes, went off to Greece, and tried to assemble his friends and generals who were there.

The Menelaiis of Sophocles? applies this simile to his own fortunes :—

“ But my fate on the swiftly turning wheel of God Goes whirling round forever and ever changes shape,
Just as the moon’s appearance for two kindly nights
Could never be identical and show no change,

1 From 394 to 287 B.c.

2 Nauck, T'rag. Graec. Frag.” p. 315. -

Gdn’ €£ adjrou mpatov Epyetat véa
TpocTwTAa KAAXUVOVGA Kal TWANPOVLEVN, VNOTAVTEP AUTHS evyeveotaTn havy,
maddy Siappel Kets TO pndey Epyxerat,

3 Tavtn paAXov av Tis atretxdcat Ta Anpntpiou a ee \ e ‘ , ou p /
Ul \ 9 >
Tpaywata Kat Tas Tept avTov avEnoes Kai pOioes KaL avaTTANPw@OELS KAaL TaTrELWOTNTAS, Ov YE Kal TOTe TavTdtractw aroXeiTey Kal KatacBe-“A b] th Ld e ? , vucbar Soxobvtos avédaputTrey adOis 7 apy, Kal
\
Suvdpets tives emippéovoat KaTa puKpov aveTAn-pouv tHv éAmrida. Kat TO ye! mpa@Ttov idiorns ‘Kal tov BaoiwwKav Kxoopiwv epnuos éredhoita Tais modeol, Kai Tis avTov év @nBais TotodTov Ocacdpevos expyiaato Tois Evpimidou ariyots ovK andas:
popdny apetras ex Geo Bpornciay
4 ? Ul > a) A > @ mapeate Aipens vapar’ lopnvod 0 ddwp.
XLVI. ’Enel 5€é dtraé dotrep eis obov Bacidcxny
Thy éATiba KaTéoTH Kal ouvicTaTO TdALW copa
Kal oxhwa wept autov apy7ns, O@nBaiors péev aré-Swxe THY ToNtTelav, AOnvaio: S€ aréotnoav av-Tov. Kati Tov te Aiduror, d¢ Rv lepevs TOV Yory-pov avayeypappévos, éx TOV éTwVUpwV ayveEtro)?, apxYovTas aipeiaOar mardw, woTEp BY TaTpLoy, Wndiodpevor, Tov te Iluppov €x« Maxedovias pere-as ae ye Sintenis : Coraés and Bekker retain the rére of the

But out of darkness first she comes forth young and new,
With face that ever grows more beautiful and full,

And when she reaches largest and most generous phase,
Again she vanisheth away and comes to naught.”

This simile might be better used of the fortunes of Demetrius, now waxing and now waning, now fullorbed and now diminished, since even at this time, when his power seemed to fail altogether and suffer extinction, it shot forth new rays of light, and sundry accessions of strength little by little filled out the measure of his hopes. At first he went about visiting the cities in the garb of a private man and without the insignia of a king, and one who saw him thus at Thebes applied to him, not inaptly, the verses of Euripides! :—

“Exchanging now the form of god for that of man, He visits Dirce’s rivulets and Ismenus’ flood.”’

XLVI. But as soon as he had entered upon the path of hope, as upon a royal highway, and had gathered about himself a body and form of sovereignty, he restored to the Thebans their ancient ‘form of government; the Athenians, however, revolted from him. ‘They voted to elect archons, as had been their custom of old, and took away from Diphilus, who had been appointed priest of the Saviour-gods, the privilege of giving his name to the current year;? and when they saw that Demetrius had more strength than they expected, they sum-1 Bacchae, 4 f., with adaptation from the first person.
2 See chapter x. 3.
115

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

A A , > 4 \
TépTrovtTo, WaANOV } Tpodedoxnoay laxyvovTa TOV ce aw (a A Anpntptov opavtes. 0 5€ opyn péev emnrAOev av-Tois Kal TodopKiay Tepl TO doTU GuUvETTHTATO
xaptepav, Kpdtntros dé tod didocopou rep-
, e \ A , N > a > \ 9 ,
hOEvtos UO TOD Sypou Tpos aUTov, avdpos évdoEou
kat dvvatod, Ta pev ols vrép tav *AOnvaiwv éSeito mewoOeis, Ta 5é €& wy édidacKe wept TaV éxelv@ ocupdepovtTwy vonoas éXVGE THY ToAOP-Kiav, Kal cuvayayev boat vies Hoav avT@, Kal oTpaTt@tas pupiovs Kal yxtdLovs oUY imredow éuBiBacas, émt tv ‘Aciav érra, Avotudyou Kapiay xait Avédiav atmootycey.
Aéyera, 5& adtov Evpudien wept Midrntor, aderXon Piras, ayovca tev avutTAs Kai IIToXe-paiov Ouyatépwy Urordeuaida xabwporoynnervnv éxeivm mwpotepov Sua LedevKov. TavTynv yapet
, b) , DJ 7 \ \ ‘\

Anpytptos Edpudixns éxdudovons. xat peta Tov ydapov evOus éml tas modes TpéreTat, TrOAA@Y \ e / @ s \ be ‘
pev Exovaotws TpooTiOeuévav, ToANAaS Oé Kai PBLatopevos. édaBe S€ nal Yapdeus- Kai tives Tav Avotudyou otpatnyav arexepnoay mpos avTov.

Npnpata Kal orpatiay Kopilovtes. étrEepyomévou dé "AyaboxXéovs tov Avoipadyou peta Suvduews avéBa.vev eis Dovyiay, éyvwxws, avirep "Appevias éminaBnrat, Mydiav xivety Kal Tov avw Tpaypid-

\
twv éyecOat, ToAAds éEwOoupévm Trepipuyas Kal > / 5 / € / \ 9 / avaxwpnoes éyovtwyv. émopévou 5€é ’Ayabonneous év Tals cupmdoKais trepinv, émsoiticpod Oe 116
912

DEMETRIUS

moned Pyrrhus to their aid from Macedonia. Demetrius came up against them in a rage, and began a strenuous siege of the city. But the people sent to him Crates the philosopher, a man of great repute and influence, and Demetrius, partly because he was induced to grant the ambassador's appeals in behalf of the Athenians, and partly because he was convinced when the philosopher showed him what would be an advantageous course, raised the siege, and after assembling all the ships he had,! and putting on board eleven thousand soldiers, together with his cavalry, he sailed for Asia, to wrest Caria and Lydia from Lysimachus.

He was met at Miletus by Eurydicé, a sister of Phila, who-brought with her one of her daughters by Ptolemy, Ptolemais, who had been betrothed to Demetrius before this? through the agency of Seleucus. Demetrius married her now, and Eurydicé gave the bride away. After the marriage Demetrius at once turned his arms against the cities, many of which, attached themselves to him of their own accord, and many also he forced into submission. He took Sardis also; and some of the generals of Lysimachus came over to him bringing money and troops. But when Agathocles, the son of Lysimachus, came against him with an army, Demetrius retired into Phrygia; he had determined, if once he could reach Armenia, to bring Media to revolt and attempt the upper provinces, which afforded an ejected commander many refuges and retreats. Agathocles followed him, and though Demetrius had the advantage in their engagements,

' See chapter xliii. 3.

2 As early as 301 B.c. Cf. chapter xxxii. 3.

2

Kal T povopdry eipyopevos HyTropetro, Kal Tois oT paTL@rars be" vrowpias Hv ws én’ Appeviay kal Mn diav extomitev. dpa oe paddov O cmos éré-tetve, kal Stapaptia Tis yevouévn Tept THY TOU Avxou diaBaow TrA00s av0poHTrwv aptracbev wd Tob pedparas aTorerev. duos be Tob oxa@mrety OvK ameixovTo" mpoypaer b¢ tts auto Tpo THS aKnyyns THY Tod Oiditrodos} apynv puuxpov Tapan-Ad€as:

TEKVOV Tuprov yépovtos “Avtuydvou: tivas yapous apiypeda ;

XLVII. Tédos &€ cai. vocou TO ALLO SUVETTLTL-Oepeuns, domep eleoBev, ent Bpwcess avaryKaias TPETFOMEDWY, TOUS TavTAS ovK eAdaaovas 6 OKTAKLO-XeMteov amr oBadov aviryev oTrlo TOUS RNottrovs: Kal caTaBas eis Tapooy éBovuXeTo pep améxer Oat THS X@pas, ovaons UT LedrevKw TOTE, Kal 7 po-pacw éxeive pn deuia Tapacxeir, as 6€ 7) HV apn-Navov, €v Tals eoxaraus OVTM@V ar opiass TOV oTpaTiwTay, Kat TOU Tavpou Tas wvuepBoXras “Ayabo«his aTrETELX LTE, paper T pos DéXevKov emia TONNY paKpov Twa THis avToo TUXNS oduppop, eita TmONdyy ikegtay Kal dénouw éxovoav avdpos oixetov NaBeiv oixtov, aEta Kai ToAepmlots cUVAar-ynjoat TremovOoros.

"Enrixdaa Bevros 5€ Tas Ledevxou, Kat ypa-aravtos Tois éxel otparnyois Oras aUT® TE TO Anyntpip yopnyiav Baowkueny Kal TH Suvdpet

tpopiy apBovoyv twapéywatr, ere Owyv Tatpoxrjs, 1 Sophocles, Oedipus Coloneus, 1 f. (’Avriyovn).

he was shut off from getting provisions and forage, and was in great straits; besides, his soldiers were suspicious that he was trying to make his way towards Armenia and Media. And not only did famine press them harder, but also some mistake was made in crossing the river Lycus, and a large number of men were carried away by the current and lost. But nevertheless they would have their pleasantries ; and one of them wrote up in front of the tent of Demetrius the opening words of the “ Oedipus,” slightly changed :—

“O child of blind and aged Antigonus, what are These regions whither we are come?”

XLVII. But at last sickness assailed them as well as famine, which is wont to happen when men have recourse to foods which they must eat to save their lives, and after losing no less than eight thousand men in all, Demetrius retraced his steps with the rest and came down to Tarsus. Here he would gladly have spared the country, which was then under Seleucus, and so have given its ruler no ground of complaint ; but this was impossible, for his soldiers were suffering extreme privations, and Agathocles had fortified the passes of the Taurus against him. He therefore wrote a very long letter to Seleucus, bewailing his own misfortunes, and then begging and beseeching him to take pity on a man who was allied to him by marriage, and had suffered enough to win sympathy even from his enemies.

Seleucus was somewhat softened by this appeal, and wrote to his generals in that province that they should furnish Demetrius himself with royal main- tenance, and his troops with abundant supplies. But

avip auvetos elvat Soxa@v cal Yerevew iros / 9 N A lA ” al 9
muaTos, ov TOTHS Satrdavns py TreloToy elvat tov Anpntpiov otpatiwTayv tpepopévwyv, adr éviiatpiBovta tH yopa Anpntptov ov Karas meplopay avTov, ds det BiaroraTos @y Kal peyadompayyovéertatos BactNéwy viv évy tUyats yéyovev at xal tous hivce: petpious éEdyovot ToApmay Kal adixeiv. éx tovTou trapokuvOels o DéXeuKos éEwp-
? / \ an 4 e
pnoev eis Kersxiav peta moddAns Suvadpews. 0

dé Anuntptos éxrrayels TH Ov GAlyou peraBorn
A 4 \ / e / A 9
Tov Lerevxou Kal poAnGeis, Uméa Terre Tois GyUpW-TatTois Tov Tavpou, cad Statreprropevos nEiouv pa-
ALoTa pév avTOY Treptidely TOY avTOVOLwWY TLVa
BapBdpev xrnodpevoy apxny, év } xataBi@ceras TAaYNS ‘Kal huyhs wavodpevos, et 5é py, TOY
yeywava Orabpéar thy Sivamy adToOL, Kal pn 4 ? la) \ ‘ b 4 N 4
mavtTwy évdea Kat yuuvov éEeXauvew ral mpoBar-NEY TOLS TroNEmLOLS.
XLVIII. *Ezrei dé Yérevxos tadta wavta- bro-
4 > Sf > 4 > 4 4 lol
TTEevov exéXevoey avTov, ci BovrA*ETaL, dUo pHvas év 77 Kataovia yemacat, Sovta tovs mpwTous
A 4 e 4 @ \ > , > ,
TaV diiwv ounpous, dua Sé Tas eis Lupiay arretetvivev uTepBodds, éyxAelopevos, Wamep Onpiov, o Anpntptos KuKd@ Kat meptBaddopevos, UT’ av-GYKNS TpéTETAL TPOS GAKHVY, Kal THY TE Ywpay KQTETPEXE KAL TO Lerevnw TpoaRadrdovts cup-) WAEKopEvOS ae mrAéoY Elye. Ka’ ToTe TOV Spe-Tavnpopwr ets avtov apelévtwy vroatas TpoTrny 120
913

DEMETRIUS

Patrocles, a man in repute for wisdom, and a trusted — friend of Seleucus, came to him and told him that the expense of maintaining the soldiers of De- metrius was a very small matter, but that it was unwise for him to allow Demetrius to remain in the country, since he had always been the most violent of the kings, and the most given to grand designs, and was now in a state of fortune where even natur- ally moderate men are led to commit deeds of daring and injustice. Incited by this advice, Seleucus marched into Cilicia with a large force. Then De- metrius, filled with amazement and alarm at the sudden change of attitude in Seleucus, withdrew to the strongest fastnesses of the Taurus, and sending messengers to Seleucus, asked that above all things he might be permitted to acquire a petty empire among the independent Barbarians, in which he might end his days without further wanderings and flights; but if this might not be, he begged him to give his troops food for the winter there, and not | to drive him forth, stripped and destitute of all things, and cast him into the hands of his enemies. XLVIII. But Seleucus was suspicious of all this, and. told Demetrius that he might, if he wished, spend two months in winter quarters in Cataonia, provided he gave the chief among his friends as hostages; and at the same time he fortified the passes into Syria against him. Then Demetrius, like a wild beast, hemmed in and attacked on all sides, was driven to defend himself; he overran the country, and when Seleucus attacked him, engaged with him and always had the advantage. Once in particular, _ when the scythe-bearing chariots were dashing down upon him, he avoided the charge, routed his émoijoato, Kal TOY eis. Lupiay vmrepBor@v TOUS arroretyifovras efeddoas ex paznce. Kat ddws erhipto TH youn, Kal TovS OTpaTLMOTAS avateOappykoras opa@v Tapea KevateTo Siayovicacbar 7 pos Tov Sérevrov et TOUS peyia Tous aPrors, nropnHévov non Kal avutov. amréaTpewe pep yap TY Tapa Avoipdxov Bondevay a aT LOT OV kal poBovpevos, autos bé€ Kal” éavTov @KvEL T@ Anynt pico cuvarpat, dedtas THY arrovouay avtToo Kal THY adel petaBorny é éx TOV €aXATWY ATOPLAY TAS peyioTas evTuylas em ipépovoay.

Oo0S pévTOL Bapeia TOV Ant puov ép TOUT@ xataraBoica TO Te TOA OELWas exdnwae wal Ta mpaypara TavTanact SepOerper. oi pev yap amex w@pno ay ™pos TOUS Toneptous, ot bé Steppvnoay avrob TOV TTPATLOT ED. Modus dé év nyuepacs Tecoapaxovra patoas | Kal Tous UrrohoiTous avaAaBary, Kal oppycas, Sa ov ideip Kab SoFdoas TOUS Toneptous, eq Kiduxias, eita YUKTOS avev odnTuyyos apas éml Gdrepa Kal TOV “Apavov UTrEpBarov erropbet THY KaTwW Yopay aypt THS KuppnoteKns.

XLIX. "Emepavertos dé Tob Ledevcou ral TroLousLevou Tas KaTaruaels eyyus, dvactHa as 0 Anuntptos TO oT paTevpa VUKTOS éBadeSev én avTov ayvoobyta, ey pt Toddod Kal KOLO [EOD aUTOMONOY 5€ TiwWep Taparyevopevov Kat dpaCavT@Y TOV Kivduvov,. ceTrayels Kal avarnonoas éxéXeuce€ oNMaLvery, apa Tas _kpnribas UmrodovHEvOS Kal Boay Mpos Tovs éTaipous OS Onpio derv@ TUMTETAEKTAL, Anuar pros be T® OopvBo TOV TOAELioV aicOopmevos OTL pmepnVUTaL, KATA

assailants, drove away those who were fortifying the passes into Syria, and made himself master of them. And now he was completely lifted up in spirit, and seeing that his soldiers had recovered their courage, he made ready to fight to the finish with Seleucus for the supreme prizes. Seleucus himself was already in perplexity. For he had refused the assistance offered by Lysimachus, whom he distrusted and feared ; and by himself he hesitated to join battle with Demetrius, fearing the man's desperation and the perpetual change which brought him from the extremest destitution to the greatest affluence. _

However, a grievous sickness seized Demetrius at this juncture ; it wrought terrible harm to his body, and utterly ruined his cause. For some of his soldiers went over to the enemy, and others dispersed. But at last, after forty days, he recovered strength, and taking the soldiers that remained, set out, so far as his enemies could see or conjecture, for Cilicia; then, in the night and without signal by trumpet, he set out in the opposite direction, crossed the range of Amanus, and plundered the lower country as far as Cyrrhestica.

XLIX. When Seleucus made his .appearance there and encamped near by, Demetrius set his army in motion by night and advanced against him. Seleucus was ignorant of his approach for a long time, and lay sleeping. But when some deserters came and told him of his peril, he was astounded, and leaping up ordered*the trumpets to be sounded, at the same time pulling on his boots and shouting to his companions that a terrible wild beast was upon them. But Demetrius, perceiving from the noise which his enemies made that they had been informed

2 taxos amnyev. aya 8 neepa mpoowerpevor Tov Leheveou, meppas TLVa TOV rept avrov émt Od-TeEpov Képas érroinaé Tiva Tpomiy TOV évayTiov. elta pévToe DéAEuKOS AUTOS adels Tov taTov Kal TO Kpdvos dtroPépevos Kat AaBov wéATHVY aTrnVTA Tots praOopopots, émridecxvvpevos avToyv Kal peTa-Baréc0at rapaxarov, dn woTé cuudpovncaytas bre devddpuevos exeivov, ov Anuntpiqu, xpovoy 3 woAvuy OtaTeTéNEKEV. €k TOUTOU TaYTEs aoTrato-pevot Kal Bactréa mpocayopevovtes peOioTavto. Anunrptos 6€ Todo peTaBorov aicPopevos éaxatny éxeivny HKeovoay én' avtov, éxxrLvas ém} Tas 'Apavidas Epvye muAas, cai KataBarov es - DAnv tia cuvnpedh peta girtwv Tiwev Kal aKoNovOwy oN ywv TavTaTractw GyTwY TpocéuEeveE THv vuKxta, Bouropevos, et Svvatto, THS émi Kad-vov od0v0 AaBecOar kal Stextrecety érl tHv Odrac-4 cav, o8 TOV vavoTabpoy evpnoew ATLCEY. ws

dé éyva pndé éxeivns THs nuépas epodvov Eyovras avtous, ér ddAXwv éyéveTo NoyiopaVv. clita pév-Tot Ywouyéyyns éemHdrAOev, ETaipos avTod, ypuvaous
TeTpaxocious urretwapmévos' Kal aro TOUT@Y éNTi-Covtes axpr Oardoons StayevnoeoOat, mpos Tas uTepBords éyxw@pouy oKoTaio. mupav 5é Katope-YOV pos avTais WoAreuliwy amoyvovTes exelyny THY Oddy avOis avex@pnoay eis TOV avTOV TOTFOD, ovte waves (éviot yap atrédpacav) ode opoiws
"6 ol TWapapévovtes mpoOvuot ToALHaavToS O€ TLVOS

ElTrely TL, WS YeXEVKM YXpy TO TOpa Trapadadvas

124

° | DEMETRIUS

of his approach, drew off his troops with all speed. When day came, however, Seleucus was pressing him hard, so he sent one of his officers to the other wing, and partially routed the enemy. But at this point Seleucus himself, quitting his horse, doffing his helmet, and taking a light shield, went to meet the mercenaries of Demetrius, showing them who he was, and exhorting them to come over to him, since they must for some time have been aware that his long forbearance had them in view, and not Demetrius. Consequently they all welcomed him, hailed him as king, and went over to him.

Then Demetrius, perceiving that the last of many reversals of fortune was now come upon him, left the field and fled to the passes of Amanus, where he plunged into a dense forest along with sundry friends and followers, few all told, and waited for the night. -He wished, if possible, to take the road to Caunus and make his way through to the sea, where he ex- pected to find his fleet. But when he learned that the party had not provisions enough even for the coming day, he tried to think of other plans. At this point, however, Sosigenes came up, a companion of his, with four hundred pieces of gold in his belt ; so hoping that with this money they could make their way through to the sea, the party set out to- wards the passes, in the darkness of night. In the passes, however, the enemy were burning fires, so the fugitives despaired of this road and once more returned to their place in the forest—not all of them, for some had run away; nor was the remnant as willing as before. And when one of them ventured to speak out boldly and say that Demetrius ought to

125

PLUTARCH'S LIVES — .

Anpnrpiov, @punoe pev to Ethos otracapevos
) aA e , e \ , 4 N
avereiv éavtov, of Sé girdoe wepiotavres Kat rmrapapuvOovpevor ouvéTeicay oUTw Trotnoat. Kal \ 9

Téumet pos YéAevKov emitpétav exeitve Ta Kad éauTov.
L. "Axovcas 5é Yérevcos ovK Epyn 7H Anuntptov
4 , 4 > \ lo e le) a Tuxyn cwlecGar Anunrpiov, aAAXa TH avVTOV, eT TOV GAAwWY KAaN@Y aUT@ dirtavOpwtias Kai XpnaoToTntos émiderew Std0ovcn. Kadrécas Sé TOUS

3 \ 4 4 ‘ > 7
ETLMEANTAS CKNVHV Te THYyVUVaL BaciNLKNY exe-Nevee, KAL TAAAA TavTa ToLeiy Kai TapacKevd-Cewv eis UTrodoynyv Kal Oepareiay peyadompEeTTras.
nv 5é tus "Arroddwridns Tapa TO Lerevaw, Tov Anpntpiov yeyovas suvnbns: todtov evOvs é&é-Teprpe TPOS AUTOV, BTrws HdlwY yévntat Kal Oap-
p@yv ws pos oixeiov avdpa Kal KndeotHy atravTav, Davepas Se tijs. yvouns avtod yevouevns dAtyou TO Tp@Tov, elta ol mAcioTOL TaV dirtwv éEeTHSOV
* \ \ , e , N 4
qapa tov Anuntptov, dusrr@pevoe Kat POdvovTes aAAHAOUS: HATivETO yap EVODs Tapa TO Dedevew péytotos évecOar.
Tovdro 6é éxeiv pev eis POovovy peréBare Tov
EXeor, Tos 6€ xaxonOeot Kal BacKdvos rapéoxev
? / “ \ / fo)
amvotpé wat kal dsapOeipar thy piravOpwriay tod
/ > / b] , e > > ?
Baciréws, éxpoByncaciv avtov, ws ovK cis ava-Bonds, GAN dpa TO Trp@tov ohOHvar tov avédpa, peyarov ecopevwv ev TH otTpatoTréd@ vewTEptc-pov. apte d7 Tod AzroAXwvidou pos Tov Anun-Tpiov adiypévou Teptyapods, Kal TOV aAXAwWD 126
914

DEMETRIUS

surrender himself to Seleucus, Demetrius drew his sword and would have killed himself; but his friends encompassed him, and with encouraging words per- ‘suaded him to do as the man had said. So he sent to Seleucus and put himself at his disposal.

L. When Seleucus heard of it, he declared that it was not the good fortune of Demetrius that brought him safety, but his own, which, in addition to her other blessings, gave him an opportunity to show generosity and kindness. Then he called his overseers and bade them pitch a royal tent, and to make all other arrangements and preparations for a magnificent reception and entertainment. There was also with Seleucus a certain Apollonides, who had been an intimate friend of Demetrius; this man was at once sent to him by Seleucus, to give him cheerfulness and confidence by reminders that he was coming into the presence of a man who was a friend and relative. When this purpose of Seleucus be-— came evident, first a few of his friends, then the greater part of them, went off hot foot to Demetrius, vying with one another in their efforts to reach him first; for 4t was expected that he would at once be a very great personage at the court of Seleucus.

“ But this behaviour of his friends turned the king’s pity into jealousy, and gave malicious and mischievous persons an opportunity to thwart and put an end to his generosity. They frightened him by their insin- uations that without any delay, but at the first sight of Demetrius, there would be a great revolution in the camp. And so it came to pass that at the very time when Apollonides had come to Demetrius with a joyful countenance, and while the other courtiers

eT EPX OMEVOV Kat oyous Gavpac tous dmaryyedovr wept Tov YedevKov, kal rob Anyntpiov pera THMKAUTNY dvaruxiav Kat KaKoT payiay, él ar TpOoTepov ed0xee THY ‘mapadoow Tou CDLATOS aliax pay meTrorhaOae, TOTE peteyvmnxotos b1a TO Jappeiv Kal mo TeveLy tals édmiow, MrOe | Ilavcavias EX@Y TTPATLATAS omov melous Kat imaeis Tept xedtous. Kab ToUTOLS TEpLaX@v tov Anpr- Tptov adve, | Tous 6€ adddous aTrorTHaas, Lehevicw pev aurov els Oyruy ov KaTeTTH TED, ets 6€ Xeppoynaov THY Lupraxny am nyaryer, Strov TO Aovrrov toxupas PUVAAKHS émarabetans Oeparreta pep Kev ixavn Tapa Lehevcou kal Xpnwata Kal diaita mapeocevateTo Kal’ nuépav ov peuTrTn, Spopoe dé Kal TWéepiTaroe Bactrexol Kat mapadetcot Onpas EYovTES anedeixOnoay: 7 qv dé xal tov didrov TOV cuppuyovT@DY T@® Bovdopevp ovvelvar, Kal Tap

avtov + tives Guws em port aves aro Tob DeXevKov HKov Kopitovres emveuxets Aoyous Kab Gappetv
Twapaxarobvres, ws, OTav mpatov Avtioxos adi-KNTAL OUV Lrpatovixn, dteO no opevov.
LI. ‘O 6éé Anprtptos év TH TOLAUTH TUX yeyoves emécTELAE TOIS mept TOV viov Kal Tois mept "A@nvas Kal KopwOov Hryemort Kat pirors ® pare ypappac wy avrod prjre opparyide TiS TEVELY, an domep TeOyNKOTOS "Avtiyov@ Tas modes Kal Ta Moura Tpayyara Stapudarrewy. "AvTtyovos
Sé Hv ToD TaTpos GVAAN WY TuOdpEvos Kal Bape-
1 wap aurdy Coraés and Bekker, with the MSS.; Sintenis corrects to wap’ abrov and deletes awd tov ZeAevcov.

2 rois. .. piAos Sintenis, with the best MSS. and Ste- phanus ; Corats and Bekker retain apos... plaous.

were coming: up and telling him wonderful tales about Seleucus and his generosity, and when Demetrius, after all his disasters and misfortunes, even if he had once thought his surrender a disgraceful act, had now changed his mind as a result of his courage and hopefulness, up came Pausanias at the head of a thousand soldiers, foot and horse together. With these he surrounded Demetrius on a sudden, and after sending off everybody else, conducted him, not into the presence of Seleucus, but away to the Syrian Chersonese. Here, for the rest of his life, a strong guard was set over him, a sufficient number of attendants came to him from Seleucus, while money and maintenance was provided for him day by day which was not to be despised, nay, royal courses for riding and walking, and parks with wild game in them, were set apart for his use; any friend also who shared his exile and wished to visit him could do so, and notwithstanding his captivity sundry people kept coming to him from Seleucus bringing kindly messages and exhorting him to be of good cheer, since as soon as Antiochus came with Stratonicé, he was to be set at liberty.

LI. Demetrius, however, finding himself in this plight, sent word to his son and the friends and commanders who were at Athens and Corinth, bid- ding them put no trust in letters or seal purporting to be his, but to treat him as dead, and to preserve for Antigonus his cities and the rest of his power. When Antigonus learned of his father’s capture, he

, :
ws éveykov kal mevOiunv avaraBov écbjta wpos
A“ \ \ > N

Te Tous dAAous Bacireis Eypawe Kal mpos avTov
A N aA
Léreuxoy, Seopevos, cal wav 6 te Nottrov Hy avtois
e 4 A Tapadioous, Kal TPO TrayTOS OpNpEvErv ETOLLOS VY
auTos Uumép tod Tatpos. Kal cuvedéovto Tabta \. UA modes Te TOAAaL Kal Suvacras TwANnY Avotpayou.
\ /
Avoipayos 5é kal xpynpata Toda TépTrOY UTLC-Cal , e A a yvetro Sedevew xteivavT. Anuyrpiov. o O€ éxei-
‘ ” A vov pev Kal adArAwS mpoRaddAopevos ETL paddoOV
\ A \ b] , érl ToUT@ papov nyetTo Kat BapBapov, ‘AvtTioy»
dé 7@ mwatdt cat XYrpatovicn pvdrdtrrav Anpn)- € 3 lj p 4 a me"
e fol
TpLoV, WS EKELYWY 1) YapLS yevoLTO, TapHye Tov ll
V povov.
e e A ‘ /
LIT. ‘O 6é€ Anpnrpios, ws év apyn Thy TUXNY
aA ~ s
TpooTrecovaay UTépelve, Kal Padov Hon Péperv eLOi-
a A Ul
CeTo TA TAPOVTA, TPWTOV MEV ALAS YE TWS Exivel
To capa, Onpas, éf’ doov Hy, Kal dpopwy atro-
N
Hevos, €TetTa KATA puLKpoV Gkvou TpOS auTa Kal
/
vwbeias éripmrrato, Kal dépwv éavtov ets TroToUs \ 4 4 \ fe) / \ a xat xuBovs KaTéBare Kat Tov ypovou Tov TAE«iaotov év tovras Sunyev, elite Tous ev TH vydhew avadoytopovs TOV TapovTwy aTrobiipacKeY Kal
a , TapaxaduTTomevos TH weOn THYv Stdvotay, elTe
\ A “A \
ovyyvous éavT®@ TovToy eivat Tov Biov, dv ExTranat Ae mY } 4 ” € > 9 , ‘ A
TOU@Y KAL OlWKwWY AANWS UT aVoLaS Kal KEVIS
, b , \ \ a \
SoEns émAdlero nal moddNa péev éavT@, TOAAA

\ e / a dé étépors mpdypata tapelxev, év Smrols Kal / le) oTOkOLS Kat otpatomédots TO ayabov lnTav, a le) b ? , \ a >
0 vUY €v atpaypLoovrn Kal oyoX\n Kal ayva-130

915

DEMETRIUS

was deeply distressed, put on mourning apparel, and wrote to the other kings and especially to Seleucus himself, supplicating him, and offering to surrender to him whatever was left of his own and his father's possessions, and above everything else volunteering to be a hostage himself for his father. Many cities ~ also and many rulers joined in these supplications. But Lysimachus did not; he sent to Seleucus the promise of a large sum of money if he killed De- metrius. But Seleucus, who had always had a feeling of aversion for Lysimachus, all the more for this proposal thought him abominable and barbarous, and continued to keep Demetrius under watch and ward for Antiochus his son and Stratonicé,, that the favour of his release might come from them.

LIT. But Demetrius, who in the beginning bore up under the misfortune that had come upon him, and presently grew accustomed to it and endured his situation with a better grace, at first, in one way or another, exercised his body, resorting to hunting, so far as he could, or riding; then, little by little, he came to have the greatest indifference and aversion to these sports, took eagerly to drinking and dice, and spent most of his time at these. This was either because he sought escape from the thoughts on his present condition which tormented him when he was sober, and tried to smother his reflections in drunk- enness; or because he had convinced himself that this was the real life, which he had long desired and striven to attain, but had foolishly missed it through folly and empty ambition, thereby bringing many troubles upon himself, and many upon others; he had sought in arms and fleets and armies to find the highest good, but now, to his surprise, had discovered

131
K 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 mavoe py TpocdoKknaas avevpnKe. Ti yap adXO TOV TOAGLOY Kal TOV KwvOvvov Tépas éoTl TOS
pavrous Bactrevor, KaKOS Kal avonras Staxespévors, ovx 6te povov Tpudiyy Kal ndovav avtt THS apeTns Kal tod Kadov Siwxovary, GX' OTe «pnde Hdec0ar pndé tpudav as adrAnOads ead,
'0 5° ovv Anpntptos éT0s Tpitov éy tH Xep-povnaw KabetpyLevos on dpyias Kal TANT HOVAS

Kal olvou voonoas am eBaver, ern Téaoapa meal
4 TEVTNKOVT A BeBroxds. Kal Lehevicos Heouce Te KAKOS Kal peTevonaey ov peTpios éy uTrowia Tov Anuntptov Oépevos TOTE, Kal pnde Apopuyairny, avépa Ba pBapov Opaxa, pina dpwevos ovTw puravOpwrrws Kal Bacihixds arovTe Avotpayw NPN apevov.
LITT. “Eoye peevroe Kal Ta mepl THD Tapny auTov Tparytecny Tiva Kal Jeatpreny ddequy. 0
yap vios ‘Avtiryovos, as qadeto Ta helyrava Kopilopeva, Tacats dvaxGels Tals vavoly emt ynowv ar nvTn ce kal deEdpevos ets THY peryi-oTny TOY vava.pxidov EOeto TH véplav Xpvan-2 Aarov ovoav. at dé Tore als mpoceixov, TovTO pep atepdvous émépepov TH vdpia, TovTo be dvipas év oynpate mrevOi pep owOdrpovras Kat cupmapaTeurpovTas daméaTedhov. eis 5é Kopw-Gov Tov oTOAOU KATATEOVTOS y) Te KANTS éx mpuyyns wepipavns éwpato Toppupa Bacthucy Kal Siadnpare KeKOo UNMEVN, Kal TAPELOTHKELTAY év
SrrAoLs veavioxot Sopupopodbvres. o 5é TY TOTE
AaUANTOV EhNOYLLWTATOS EevohavTos eyyvds Kafe
132

DEMETRIUS

it in idleness and leisure and repose. For what other end than this can worthless kings seek to attain by their wars and perils? Wicked and foolish indeed are they, not only because they seek after luxury and pleasure instead of virtue and honour, but also because they do not even know how to enjoy real pleasure or true luxury.
So, then, Demetrius, after an imprisonment of three years! in the Syrian Chersonese, through inactivity and surfeit of food and wine, fell sick and died, in the fifty-fifth year of his life. Seleucus was in ill repute for this, and repented him bitterly for having cherished such suspicions against Demetrius, and for allowing himself to be outdone even by Dromichaetes, a barbarous Thracian, who had given Lysimachus,” his captive, a treatment so humane and royal.
LIII. Moreover, there was something dramatic and theatrical even in the funeral ceremonies of Demetrius. For his son Antigonus, when he learned that his remains had been sent home, put to sea with his entire fleet and met them off the islands. They were given to him in a golden urn, and he placed them in the largest of his admiral's ships. Of the cities where the fleet touched in its passage, some brought garlands to adorn the urn, others sent men in funeral attire to assist in escorting it home and burying it. When the fleet put in at Corinth, the cinerary vase was conspicuous on the vessel's poop, adorned with royal purple anda king's diadem, and young men stood about it in arms as a body- guard. Moreover, the most celebrated flute-player then living, Xenophantus, sat near, and with the 1 From 386 to 383 B.c. 2 Cf. chapter xxxix. 3.

3 Copmevos mpoanunet TOV pedo TO lep@Tarov® Kab
T pos tovTo Ths elpeaias dvahepoperns pera, pud-pod TLvos, annvra ay Sk Gaorep éy KOTETO, tabs TOV avrnpatov Te pLo ous" Tov 5é awAeiotov oix-tov' Kal odopuppov avtos 6 "Avtiyovos Tots nO pous pévors éml Thy Gddacoay opbels Tameuvos Kat SeSaxpupevos Tapéa xev. érrevex Dera Gv dé TLLeoV Kal oTepavav meph KopivOov els Anuntpiaba kopioas éOnxe Ta Aetpava, TONY em @vupov éxeivou, auvoixtcOeioay éx pikpa@v TaY Tepl THY
"TwAKov TOMXvior.
4 "AmeéALTE dé yeveav O Anurfrpios "Avriyovoy
ev én Piras Kal Ztparovicny, dvo dé Anynrpi-ous, Tov ev Aerop, é§ "TrXupioos yuvatkos, TOV
dé apfavra Kupnvns éx IItorepaidos, € éx bé Ani-Sapeias 'Ar€Eavepop, OS ev Alyorrp cateRioce.
Aéyeras 6é Kal Koppayov viov €& Evpvdicns auT@ yeverGar. xatéBn O€ Tais diadoyais TO yév0s
avtov BactXevor eis Tlepoéa TeNeuTaiov, ed' ov
"Pwpatoe Maxedoviavr & UmnyayovTo.
Anyovicpevou dé tod Maxedovixod Spdapartos @pa To 'Pwpaixov émeccayayeiv.

most solemn melody upon his flute accompanied the rowers ; to this melody the oars kept perfect time, and their splashing, like funereal beatings of the breast, answered to the cadences of the flute-tones. But the most pity and lamentation among those who had come in throngs to the sea-shore was awakened by the sight of Antigonus himself, who was bowed down and in tears. After garlands and other honours had been bestowed upon the remains at Corinth, they were brought by Antigonus t6 Demetrias for burial, a city named after his father, who had settled it from the small villages about Iolcus.!

The children left by Demetrius were these:

Antigonus and Stratonicé, by Phila; two named Demetrius, one who was surnamed the Thin, by a woman of Illyria, and one who ruled Cyrené, by Ptolemais ; and, by Deidameia, Alexander, who lived and died in Egypt. It is said also that he had a son named Corrhagus, by Eurydicé. His line came down in a succession of kings to Perseus, the last, in whose reign the Romans subdued Macedonia.
And now that the Macedonian play has been performed, let us introduce the Roman.
1 Cf. chapter xxv. 2.

Digitized by Google

ANTONY

ANTQONIOZ

I. “Avteviou TATTOS pev nV oO pntop "AvTovL0S, Ov THS 2UANa ‘yevopevov aotacews Mdpios ATEKTELVE, TaTHp 5€ 0 Kpnrtixos - emucdn bets
"Avtevios, Ov oUTM® Zev evOoKt Hos ép Tois TONTLKOLS avnp ovee hapm pos, evryve pov 66 Kat Xpnaros, addws Te Kal Tpos Tas petadoces ehevd Epos, OS ag’ év0s ay TUs Epyov caTapdbor.
KEKTHMEVOS yap ov ToAAA Kai dia TOUTO Th puravOpwria xpioGac K@AUO[LEVOS vTo Tis yu-VaLKos, EME TLS adixeto TOY cuvndov mpos avTov apyupiou Sedpevos, dpyuptov pe OUK eixe, Tat-Sapiw dé mpocéraker eis dpyupoby oKupov vdwp euBanrovte Kopio at Kal kopicavos, as EvpecOat pENwY KxatéBpexe Ta yévera. Tov dé mavOapiov Kad éré pay mpopacw Ex TTOOWD YEvOpevov, Tov
pev oxvdoyv edwxe @ pire xphoGas Kehevoas, Entn sews dé TOANs €v Tois oixéracs ovens oper xarerraivovoay THD yuvaixa Kal Bovdopevny . Kal” éxactov ée&etdlery Mpmoroynoe, TUyyvapuny eExeu denBeis.
II. "Hv 6é avr@ yor ‘TovAta Tov Katcdpwv
olKoU, Tats apiarats TOTE Kal cmppovertatats évapthros. vo TAUTNS o vids ‘Avrwvios érpady
peTa THY TOU TraTpOS TEeAEUTHY Kopynrio AévTrA@ 138

ANTONY

I. Antony's grandfather was the orator Antonius, who joined the party of Sulla and was put to death . by Marius;! his father was Antonius surnamed Creticus, a man of no great repute in public life, nor illustrious, but kindly and honest, and particularly a liberal giver, as one may see from a single instance. He had not much property himself, and therefore was prevented by his wife from indulging his kindly feelings. When, accordingly, one of his intimates came to him with a request for money, money he had not, but he ordered a young slave to put water into a silver bowl and bring it to him, and when it was brought, he moistened his chin, as though about to shave. The slave was then sent away on another errand improvised for the occasion, whereupon Antonius gave the bowl to his friend and bade him dispose of it. Later, when a careful search was made for it among the slaves, seeing that his wife was angry and proposed to put them to the torture one by one, Antonius confessed what he had done, and by his entreaties gained her pardon.

Il. His wife was Julia, of the house of the Caesars, and she could vie with the noblest and most discreet women of her time. By this mother her son Antony was reared, after the death of whose father she married Cornelius Lentulus, whom Cicero

1 Cf. the Marius, xliv. 1-4.

yapunOetons, bv Kixépov amex Tewve tav Katiriva TVVOMLOTODV yevopevov. aitn Soxet ris shodpas ex Opas "AvTwvi@ Tpos Kixépova mpopacis Kal apy?) eyevéa Bau. dnaol yoov "AvT@VLOS ovee TOV vex pov avTois amrobob vat Tov Aévrhou T pOTepov THS yuvateos tod Kixépwvos tHy pytépa SenOhvat. TobTo fev ovv opodoyoupevars webbdos éoriy: ovdels yap elpxn Tapas TOV TOTE xoracbévrwy bm6 Tou Kirépavos: "Avtwvio &é Aapmp@p Kad’ @pav yevomevep TH Koupiavos pudiav Kal cuvndear oi domep Twa Kipa TpoaTe-oct Aéyouarn, avtod Te TWEpl TAS ndovas aTraidev-TOU yevopevou, Kat TOV ‘AvTo@vtop, @S paddov ein yverponOns, ets woTous Kal yuvata Kal dSaravas qoAuTeENEls Kal axohda Tous euBadrovtos. é& ov dpAnua Bapv Kal Tap mB MeKtav avT@ ovvyxOn TEVTKOVTA Kal Stakootoy TANAYTOD. TOUTO Tay éyryunoapéevov TOU Koupiwvos o O TATNHp aicdopevos éEnXace TOV “AVT@VLOY éx TIS otKias. o Se

Bpaxvy pev Tiva Xpovov TH Knwdiov tot Opacv-TaTOU Kal Adehupwrdrou TOV TOTE Onmaryory av pop mavra Ta mpaypara TapaTrovan T poo €- pagev éavTov' TAXY dé TIS éxelvou pavias peaTos YEVvOLEVOS, Kai poBnbels TOUS TUVLTTALEVOUS emi TOV Krwdvov, amhpev €K TAS. 'Itarias els THY
'EdAd6a, Kal dueTpeBe TO TE copa, yupvatov 7 pOs
TOUS TTPATLOTLKOUS ayavas Kat Néryerv peer ov.
EXphTo bé TO Kahoupevep ev "Acta opp TOV
hoya, avOovvrt padiora Kat exetvov Tov Xpovoy, EXOvTL dé ToANay omotornta 7 pos TOV Biov auto, Kopmwdy Kat ppvaypariav évTa Kal Kevod yavpidpatos Kal drroTipias dvwpdarov peorop, 140

put to death for joining the conspiracy of Catiline.' This would seem to have been the origin and ground of the violent hatred which Antony felt towards Cicero, At any rate, Antony says that not even the dead body of Lentulus was given up to them until his mother had begged it from the wife of Cicero. This, however, is admittedly false; for no one of those who were punished at that time by Cicero was deprived of burial. Antony gave brilliant promise in his youth, they say, until his intimate friendship with Curio fell upon him like a pest. For Curio himself was unrestrained in his pleasures, and in order to make Antony more manageable, engaged him in drinking bouts, and with women, and in immoderate and extravagant expenditures. This involved Antony in a heavy debt and one that was excessive for his years—a debt of two hundred and fifty talents.2, For this whole sum Curio went surety, but his father heard of it and banished Antony from his house. Then Antony allied himself for a short time with Clodius, the most audacious and low-lived demagogue of his time, in the violent courses which were convulsing the state ; but he soon became sated with that miscreant's madness, and fearing the party which was forming against him, left Italy for Greece, where he spent some time in military exercises and the study of oratory. He adopted what was called the Asiatic style of oratory, which was at the height — of its popularity: in those days and bore a strong resemblance to his own life, which was swashbuckling and boastful, full of empty exultation and distorted ambition.

1 Cf. the Cicero, xxii.

2 An equivalent, roughly, of £60,000, or $300,000, with four or five times the purchasing power of modern money.

III. 'Evet S€ TaBivios dvnp wtmatixos eis Supiav wréwv avéreOev avtov opunoar mpos THY

/ b) a A b) A ” an oTpatelay, iOiwTns pev ovK av Epyn ovveEedOeiv, aTrobeyOeis 5€ THY irmévwy ApYwY cUvETTpaTEvE.
\ A \ > 9 9 St b] 4 kal mpatov pev én ‘AptatoBovrov ‘lovdaious
b , ‘\ > AN \ > 2 a ,
agiotavra tweupbeis avtos pev eéBn TOU peyt-OTOU THY Epu“dTwY TpPATOS, éxeivoy 6€ TaVYTwY
DJ 4 3 4 , \ , eEnNacey’ eita paynv ovvaas Kal Tpeirapevos
~, 7 a“ ‘ e Ha ‘\ ? , /
oALyOLS TOLS TUV AUT®@ TOUS EexelvoU TONNATAAaCL-b4 9 / \ > , ef > N
ous OVTaS ATEKTELVE TANY OALywV ATravTas’ AUTOS 5é peta Tod Tratdos "AptoToBovdos Aw.
\ “~ / > N , ,
Mera tavta TaPivioyv emi puptos tadXavtos
IItovepaiouv meiOovtos eis Alyutrtoy apa ovvep-Bareiv atte xai thv Bacireiav avadaBeiv, ot
fev TAEioTOL TV HyE“OVOY NHvaVTLODYTO, Kat TaBivov 5é dxvos tis elye Tod modéyou, Kaitrep éEnvdpatrodic wévov Kopud7 Tois puptots TAAAVTOLS,
b 4 \ \ / 4] , \
Avte@vios ¢ kai wpatewy peyddov édséevos Kat
T® IItoAcuaim yapilouevos Seopévp cvvérretce
pev xal ovveEwpunoey emi thy otpateiav Tov TaBinor, évet 5é tod qroXéwou padrrov epoBovvTo
\
thv ert TO Indovctoy odor, ate 57 Sid Wdappov
, \ > 4 \ \ em” \
BaGetas nai dvvdpouv tapa To “Expnypa cal ra
“A / ; a A
THS LepBuwvidos Ey yevouevns avtois Tis wopelas, a “ \ b \ > 7+ a a
as Tudavos pev éexmrvoas Atyvmriot kadodat, Tis
2) > “ A
& épvOpas Oardoons brovocrnats eivat Soxei
N 4 . e ’ /
kat dunOnors, 4 Bpaxutatry Siopiferar mpos THv > \ @dadxr ? 0 A @ \ \ a e €VTOS acaav toOuo, Teudleis peta TOV LT-142
91

(

III. When Gabinius, a man ot consular dignity, was sailing for Syria, he tried to persuade Antony to join the expedition. Antony refused to go out with him in a private capacity, but on being appointed commander of the horse, accompanied him on the campaign.1. And first, having been sent against Aristobulus, who was bringing the Jews to a revolt,? he was himself the first man to mount the highest of the fortifications, and drove Aristobulus from all of them; then he joined battle with him, routed. his many times more numerous forces with his own small band, and slew all but a few of them. Aristobulus . himself was captured, together with his son.

After this, Ptolemy tried to persuade Gabinius by a bribe of ten thousand talents to join him in an invasion of Egypt and recover the kingdom for him.' But the greater part of the officers were opposed to the plan, and Gabinius himself felt a certain dread of the war, although he was completely captivated by the ten thousand talents. Antony, however, who was ambitious of great exploits and eager to gratify the request of Ptolemy, joined the king in persuading' and inciting Gabinius to the expedition. But more than the war the march to Pelusium was feared, since their route lay through deep sand, where there was no water, as far as the Ecregma and the Serbonian marshes. These the Egyptians call the blasts of Typhon,' although they appear to be a residual arm of the Red Sea, helped by infiltration, where the isthmus between them and the Medi- terranean is at its narrowest. Antony was therefore

1 In 58 B.c. 2 Cf. the Pompey, xxxix. 2.

* Cf. the Cato Minor, xxxv.; the Pompey, xlix. 5 ff.

4 The evil deity of the Egyptians, buried under the Nerbonian marshes (Herodotus, iii. 5).

wéeav o Avt@vios ov povoy Ta oTEVa KaTETYED, arrAa Kai [Indovotoy éXwv, TOALY peyarnV, Kal Tov év avTn Ppovpeav Kpatnoas, dua Kal THY ean ' lol A 4 \ \ 3 4
odov acdady T@ oTpatrevpatt Kal tH édrrida THs viens eroince TO oTpaTHny@ BéRaiov. arré-Aavaav S€ THS hiroTipias avtod kal ot worémor.
IIroNeuaiov yap dua To wapedOeiv eis To IInrovgiov wm opyns Kal picous wpyunuévov doveverv
\ > , > / \ , > \
tous Aiyumtious évéotn cal Stexwdrvoev. ev O€ Tais padyas Kal Tots dy@ou peyddous Kal cvyvois ryevopuévars TWOAAG Kal TOALNS épya Kal qTpovoias Hyeuovexns atroderEdpevos, éudhavéctata bé T@

4 \ a“ 4 ‘
cuxd\@oacbat Kai weptBanrelv KaTOTLY TOUS TONE-pious THY viKnv Tois KaTa oTOMAa Tapacywn, dptotela Kal tepas EraBe mpetrovoas. ov d:é-Aabe Sé Tovs ToAAOUs ovdEe 4 mpds “Apyédaov avtov teOvnxota diravOpwria yeyovas yap avt@ auvnOns Kai Eévos érrodéwet pev avayKaiws Cavrt, TO dé c@pa Tweoovtos ékevpwy Kal Koopycas Bacttixas éexndevoev. emi tovtots ’AdeFav-Spevot Te mrEloTov avTovU AOyoy KaTédITTE, Kal € , aA , b] N wv
Pwyaiwy tois otpatevopévors avnp edoke Aap-MpOTAaTOS élvat.
IV. Ilpoohy 5é cai popdijs érevOépiov akiwpa,
Kal TwyoV TLs OK ayevyns Kal WAAaTOS pET@TrOU
Kal ypuTrotns puKthpos edoxe: Tois ypadopévors
Kai mraTTOMEvats ‘HpaxAréous rpocwrros éuepes
4 \ > 4 2 \ \ “ \ éyeww TO appevwrrov. mv Sé Kal Noyos maXdatos sent with the cavalry, and he not only occupied the narrow pass, but actually took Pelusium, a large city, and got its garrison into his power, thus rendering its march safer for the main army and giving its general assured hope of victory. And even the enemy reaped advantage from Antony’s love of distinction. For Ptolemy, as soon as he entered Pelusium, was led by wrath and hatred to institute a massacre of the Egyptians; but Antony intervened and prevented him. Moreover, in the ensuing battles and contests, which were many and great, he displayed many deeds of daring and sagacious leadership, the most conspicuous of which was his rendering the van ot the army victorious by outflanking the enemy and enveloping them from the rear. For all thjs he received rewards of valour and fitting honours. Nor did the multitude fail to observe his humane treat-ment of the dead Archelaiis,! for after waging war upon him of necessity while he was living, although he had been a comrade and friend, when he had fallen, Antony found his body and gave it royal adornment and burial. Thus he left among the people of Alexandria a very high reputation, and was thought by the Romans on the expedition to be a most illustrious man.

_ IV. He had also a noble dignity of form; and a shapely beard, a broad forehead, and an aquiline ose were thought to show the virile qualities pe to the portraits and statues of Heracles.
Moreover, there was an ancient tradition that the 1 The pretended son of Mithridates, who had married Berenicé, daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, and queen of Egypt after the expulsion of her father. His death occurred in DO B.C.

‘Hpaxreidas elvar tovs "Avtwvious, av “Avrwvos,
2 tmatdos Hpaxdéous, yeyovotas. Kat trodtov weto TOY AOyov TH TE MopdH TOU TwpmaTos, Wowep elpntalt, Kal TH oToAnH BeBatoiv. adel yap, ote pédAoL WAEloow opacbal, yuTaVa «is pnpov elwaro, Kal paxatpa pmeyahy TmapnpTyTo, Kal
oaryos TEpLEKELTO TOV OTEPEDY. OV NV anna, Kal Ta TOs aAXOLS poptixa Soxovvra, peyadauyia kal oxoppa Kal KwoOwv éeudarns xai xabioar mapa tov éabiovta Kat dayeivy emiotdvta Tpa-métn otpatiwtixn, Oavpactov bcov edvoias Kal qo0ouv mpos avTov éveTroiet TOs OTPAaTLWOTALS. HV Sé fou xal Td épwrixdv ov dvadpoditov, adAa
Kal TOUT@ TOANOUS EONMaAywWYEL, TUULTTPATTWY TE Tos €p@oL KaL-oxwMTopEvos OvK aNdas Els TOUS idtovs Epwtas.
‘H & énevOepsorns nat ro pnddv drLyn yeupi.
pndé gerdopévn yapilecOar otpatiwrais Kat dirows apyijy re AapTpay él TO toyvery avT@ mapéaxe, Kal peyadou yevouévou thy Svvapuv émt waAelov émfpev, ex pupiwy adArAwY dpapTn-pdtwov avatpeTrouevny., év dé Te Tov peyaXodwpou jmapaserypa Sinynoouat. tav dirwv tivi pupid-Sas éxéXevoe mévte Kat elxoot So0nvat' tovTo ‘Pwpaios Sexins Kadovat. tov & émitpomov Oav-pacavtos Kai iva Sei—En TO TAROOS avT@ KaTa-Barovtos ev péom TO apyvpiov, npwarnce Taptov
6 te bn TovTo ein. tov & émirpoTou dycavtos ws

Antonii were Heracleidae, being descendants of Anton, a son of Heracles. And this tradition Antony thought that he confirmed, both by the shape of his body, as has been said, and by his attire. For whenever he was going to be seen by ma people, he always wore his tunic girt up to his thigh, a large sword hung at his side, and a heavy cloak enveloped him. However, even what others thought offensive, namely, his jesting and boastfulness, his drinking-horn in evidence,.his sitting by a comrade who was eating, or his standing to eat at a soldier's table,—it is astonishing how much goodwill and affection for him all this produced in his soldiers. And somehow even his conduct in the field of love was not without its charm, nay, it actually won for him the favour of many; for he assisted them in their love affairs, and submitted pleasantly to their jests upon his own amours.

‘Further, his liberality, and his bestowal of favours upon friends and soldiers with no scant or sparing *hand, laid a splendid foundation for his growing strength, and when he had become great, lifted his power to yet greater heights, although it was hindered by countless faults besides. One illustra- tion of his lavish giving I will relate. To one of his friends he ordered that two hundred and _ fifty thousand drachmas should be given (a sum which the Romans call “decies”). His steward was — amazed, and in order to show Antony the magnitude of the sum, deposited the money in full view. Antony, passing by, asked what that was; and when

1 That is ten times 100,000 sesterces, or 250,000 denarii. For the Roman denarius Plutarch regularly uses the nearly equivalent Greek drachma (which had about the value of the French franc).

PLUTARCH’S LIVES :

5 xeXevoete SoOjvar, cvpBarwv adtov Thy KaKon-
¢ A v v
Gecav o “Avravios, “’Eyo mAgciov @pny,” épn,
“ 4 Lf
“ro Sexins elvat’ tovTo bé pixpov éeotiy’ wate

Vv: , >) a A 99
ado mpoabes avT@ TocovTOv.
-V. Tatra péev obv torepov: éret é ta “Po-patoyv mpaypara SiéoTn, TOY péev ApioTOKpAaTLK@Y Tlopant@ mapovte rpocbepévwv, tev 5é Synporekav Kaicapa xcadrovwtwv é« Taratias év tots ef v , «? / lé bd S7rAas Gvra, Kouptwyv o Avtwviou diros éx peta-Bors Oeparevwv ta Kaicapos 'Avrdviov rpocn-ydyeTo, Kal peydAnv pev aro TOD Aéyelv ev Tois qwoNNots exov ioxur, Xp@pevos dé Kal Samdvacs aperdars ad’ av Kaicap exopmryet, Snpapxov a aTreé-SecEe tov "Avtrwvioy, elra trav én otwvois epéwy, obs Auryoupas Kadodow. 0 dé evOus eis THY apyny mapedOw@y ov pixpov nv dpedros Tois ToXLTEVO-pévors brrép Kaicapos. adda mpa@tov pev Map-Ui nA ¢ 4 oh 4

KéAXov Tov vTratov Iloumnio rovs te cuvetreypévous On OTpAaTLWTAaS TrapeyyUa@VTOS Kal KaTa-Aéyery Erépous SiddvT0s eurrodav éorn, Siataypya yparas Orws 7 pev HOpotcpévn Svvapis eis Luptav wAén cal BUBAw BonOH woreuodvre Mdp-Bots, obs Sé Tloprrnios xaradéyet, un mpocéxwow
avt@ Sevtepov 5é tas Kaicapos émictonds ov Tpocteévwv ovdé ewvTwv dvaywooKecOar TaV
TUYKANTLKOY, AUTOS LaXvwV Sia TO ApYey avéeyva, Kal ToAAous petéeoTycE TH yvwun, Etxata Kal
, / ’ aA 3939 @ » ,
pétpta Katioapos aftoby ad’ av éyparve Sofavtos.
TéXos b€ Suey Eepwrncewy ev TH BovAy yevouevon, 148

91€

ANTONY -

his steward told him it was the gift which he had ordered, he divined the man’s malice and said: “I thought the decies was more; this is a trifle ; therefore add as much more to it.”’ |

V. This, however, was at a later time. But when matters at Rome came to a crisis, the aristocratic party attaching itself to Pompey, who was in the city, and the popular party summoning Caesar from Gaul, where he was in arms, then Curio, the friend of Antony, who had changed sides and was now favouring the cause of Caesar, brought Antony over to it. Curio had great influence with the multitude from his eloquence, and made lavish use of money. supplied by Caesar, and so got Antony elected tribune of the people,! and afterwards one of the priests, called augurs, who observe the flight of birds. As soon as Antony entered upon his office he was of great assistance to those who were managing affairs in the interests of Caesar. In the first place, when Marcellus the consul proposed to put under Pompey’s control the soldiers already collected, and to give him power to levy others, Antony opposed him by introducing a decree that the forces already assembled should sail for Syria and give aid to Bibulus, who was carrying on war with the Parthians, and that the troops which Pompey was then levying should not belong to him. In the second place, when the senate would not receive Caesar's letters nor allow them to be read, Antony, whose office gave him power, read them himself, and thereby changed the opinion of many, who judged from Caesar's letters that he was making only reasonable and just demands, And finally, when two questions were

1 Tn 50 Bc.
149
PILUTARCH'S LIVES

nw \ >] "A Foe 9 a \ 4 THs pev et doxet Ilopmrniov adeivar ta otpatevpata, THs S€ ef Kaioapa, cai Tloprniov pév
9 / \@o@ , 4 \ ,
OAriywv Ta Stra nataGécBa, Katcapa S€ mavtwv
b »,/ , bd 7 \ > ,
Tap oAlyous KedeVOYTWY, avactas -AVTWVLOS
nparnoev e¢ Soxet cal Llopmniov ood cai Kai-
\ a 4 N \ 4
capa ta ora Katabécba Kai tas Suvdpets 9 a 4 2Q 7 a \ ,
adeivat. tavTny édéEavto AauTpas THY yvouny
@ \ \ "A 3 "a N > ,
ANTTAVTES, KAL {ETA Bons ETTALVOUVTES TOV AvT@viop -
, / ' "
névouv émipndifecOar. pn Bovropévwy dé tav
e 4 q e , e , , ow vratov, avOis érépas ot Kaicapos diror mpoi-
"rewav émecxeis elvat Soxovaas afiwoets, als 6 Te Kdtev avréminte cai AévtXos trratevwr &FéBare a a f \ \ THs Bours tov "Avr@mov. o d€ TroAXNa ev av-
a 3 \ > , \ \ 4
tois é€iwv émnpacato, AaBov sé OEepdtrovtos
? a \ 4 \ / of.
éc Ona Kat pwicOwodpevos peta Kaociov Koivtov ra) 9 N , \ ,
Cedryos, eEwpunoe mpos Katcapa: xal xateBowv > \ ' , e) , , w" A DJ
evOus odOévtes ws ovdeva Koopov Ett Tov év
'Poun mpaypatov éxovTav, dte pwndé Snudpyous qappynaias pérectiv, GAX éedAavveTat Kal KiWdvvever TAS oO PUeyEduEvos UTrép TOY Sikaiwv.
b] \ "n
VI. Ex trovtov AaBav tnv otpatiay o Kaicap

> “a eis “Itadiav évéBare. 81d kal Kexépwv ev rots Didimmixois Eypawre tod pév Tpwixod rroréuov
¢ A 4 \
tiv ‘EXévnv, tod & éudvariov tov Avtwviov apynv
4 a 4 > N a
2 yevéoOar, Trepipavas vrevdouevos. ov yap ovTws
\ 9 a . A a evxyepns jv ovdé padios Um Opyns éextecely TaV Noytopav Ddios Kaicap wate, ei wn TadTa wdaAae Eyvworo TpdTTEW, oUTWS av éml KaLpov TOV KaTa

before the senate, one, whether Pompey should dismiss his forces, and the other, whether Caesar should do so, and only a few were for having Pompey lay down his arms, and all but a few were for having Caesar do so, then Antony rose and asked whether it was the opinion of the senate that Pompey and Caesar alike should lay down their arms and dismiss their forces. This proposal all accepted with alacrity, and with shouts of praise for Antony they demanded that the question be put to vote. But the consuls would not consent to this, and again the friends of Caesar put forward fresh demands which were thought to be reasonable. These Cato opposed, and Lentulus, in his capacity of consul, drove Antony from the senate. Antony went forth heaping many impreca- tions upon them, and putting on the dress of a slave, and hiring a car in company with Quintus Cassius, he set out to join Caesar. As soon as they came into Caesar’s presence they cried loudly that everything was now at loose ends in Rome, since even tribunes of the people had no freedom of speech, but everyone who raised his voice in behalf of justice was persecuted and ran risk.of his life.!

VI. Upon this, Caesar took his army and invaded Italy. Therefore Cicero, in his “ Philippics,’’ wrote that as Helen was the cause of the Trojan war, so Antony was the cause of the civil war.? But this is manifestly false. For Caius Caesar was not a pliable man, nor easily led by anger to act on impulse. Therefore, had he not long ago determined upon his course, he would not thus, on the spur of the moment,

1 For the events narrated in this chapter, cf. also the Pompey, lviii. f.; the Caesar, xxx. f.
2 Phil. ii, 22, 55: ut Helena Trojanis, sic iste huic rei publicae belli causa, causa pestis atque exitii fuit.

THS mar pisos éfeveynety Tohepnor, 5Tt pavhws nudtecpevoy eldev *Avtwvioy Kat Kado atop éml Cevryous pa Otou mepevyoras Tpos avon, adda tavta wdadaL Seamer Tpopacews ox hye Kal oryov eum peTri} Tov TroNépmou Tapéaxev. ipye de avtov ént mavras avOpeérovs a Kal 7 poTepov

’Ar€£avdpov Kab Tanase Kipop, € Epws arrapnyopn-TOS apxXns Kal TEplwavns émOupia Tou ™p@rov elvau Kal péyiotov: @y tuxeiv ovK hy un Iopmnlov KcaTarvOevros.
‘Os & obv éredOav exparnae THS ‘Pouns Kat
Topmniov éEnrxace THS ItaXtas Kal ™ pos Tas év
TBnpig Toumntov duvdpecs emia Tpepewv éyva
7 poTEpor, elta ovTwS Tapackevac duevos oTONOV
émt Tloparniov dtaBatve, Aetrid@ ev oT parnyoovTt THY ‘Popny, “Avtovip dé Snwapxoivre Ta oTpaTevpaTa Kat thy “Iradtav emérperpev. o o€ Tos mev oTpaTLorats evOus poo purns Vv ouy-yupvatopevos Kai ouvdrart @pevos Ta TOAAA Kal Sw povpevos ex TOV TWAapoVvTor, Tots oe aot énaxOns. Kat yap aSixoupevav v0 _peOupias aduyaper, cal Tmpos opyny nKpoG.to TOV évruy-NavovTeov Kal KAKOS émt yuvartiv ardor piawy NKOVE. cal dAws THY Kaicapos apy, TavrTa paiddov Tupavvida 60’ avrov éxetvov paveicay, ot pido b1éBandov, av *AvTevios an eFovaias peylarns dpapravew péytota Sokas thy wrelo THY aitiav éhaBev.
VII. Ov pay aNd” etraveOwv o Kaicap éx Tis "T8npias TQ ev eyeAjpara mapeidey avrod, pos dé TO TONELOY ws évepy@ Kat aydpeiw Kat ne "0- 919 152

have made war upon his country, just because he saw that Antony, meanly clad, with Cassius, on a hired car, had come in flight to him; nay, this merely afforded a cloak and a specious reason for war to a man who had long wanted a pretext for it. And that which led him to war against all mankind, as it had led Alexander before him, and Cyrus of old, was an insatiable love of power and a mad desire to be first and greatest; this he could not achieve if Pompey were not put down.

And so he came up against Rome and got it into his power, and drove Pompey out of Italy; and determining first to turn his efforts against the forces of Pompey which were in Spain, and afterwards, when he had got ready a fleet, to cross the sea against Pompey himself, he entrusted Rome to Lepidus, who was praetor, and Italy and the troops to Antony, who was tribune of the people. Antony at once gained the favour of the soldiers by sharing their exercises, living with them for the most part, and making them presents as generously as he could ; but to everybody else he was odious. For his easy disposition led him to neglect the wronged, he listened angrily to those who consulted him, and he was in ill repute for his relations with other men’s wives. In a word, Caesar’s power, which proved to be anything rather than a tyranny so far as his own course was concerned, was brought into odium by his friends; and of these Antony, who had the greatest power and was thought to be the greatest transgressor, incurred the most blame.

VII. However, when Caesar came back from Spain, he ignored the charges against Antony, and since in the war he found him energetic, brave, and a vK@ Xpwpevos ovoa Ly Sunpaprev. AUTOS [ev ovv per odiyeov- amo Bpevteciov Stavepdcas TOV "Toviov em eurpev OTlo@ Ta Toia, Tafwip Kat “Avto@vig TAS Suvapets éuBiBalew nal meparovy Kara TAXOS els Maxedoviav emia Teihas. Pafi- viov 5é pos Toy wAodY xarer ov ovTa Xelpervos wpa KaTaceALdaavTos Kat mech paxpay oOov TEpLaryovTOos TOV oTparon, "AvtT@vios vmép Kat- oa.pos év Toros ATPELAN LMEVOV Tonepiors po8n- eis AtBova pev epoppouvra T@ oTopate TOU ALpLEVvOS _amexpovaato, TOANG TOY NeTTOY aka- TiMV TALS TPLNPETLY AVTOV TreptaTHaas, éuBLBacas 5é tals vavoly ines oxTaKoatous rat Sic wupious omAtTas avnx9n. Kal yevowevos Karapavns Tots moAepmions Kal SwwKopevos TOV pev Ex TOUT@D xivduvov dtéduye, Aap pod VOTOU Kopa péeya Kab KoiAnv OaratTav Tais Tpinpeo wv aura Te ptar- TAVTOS, expepopevos dé Tals vavat wpds kpnuvous Kal papayyas ayx-Babeis ovdepiay enmiba TwTN- pias eixen. ave 5é ‘Tod KONTrOV TONY éxTrvev- TavTOs AiBa, ral TOU KAVdwVvOS aTO THS ris els TO TrEdaryOS Sraxeopevon, petaBaropevos amo THS ys Kat TEOV coBapas opa vavaryiov Tept- TEWY TOV aiytanrov. évradda yap eféBare TO mvevpa Tas Stwxovaas avTov Tpunpers, Kat dvepOa- pnoav OUK Oriya Kal TwpaTov TOAA@Y Kal Xpnparov expaTnoev ‘AVvT@vLos, kal Atocov elne, Kat perya. Kaicape Tapéoxe Odpaos év Kalp@ peta TNALKAUTNS APLKOMEVOS Suvapews.

VITTI. Hoda be yivouevov Kat ouvex av ayo- Vwv ev TACL meV Hy Stamper ys, dis dé evryovTas mpotpoTdony tovs Katicapos amavtnaas avé-154

ANTONY

capable leader, he made no mistake. Caesar himself, then, after crossing the Ionian sea trom Brundisium with a few soldiers,! sent back his transports with orders to Gabinius and Antony to embark their forces and come with all speed into Macedonia. But Gabinius was afraid to make the voyage, which was difficult in the winter time, and started to lead his army a long way round by land. Antony, therefore, fearing for Caesar, who was hemmed in among numerous enemies, beat off Libo, who was blockading the harbour of Brundisium, by surrounding his galleys with a great number of small skiffs, and then, embarking eight hundred horsemen and twenty thousand legionaries, put to sea. Being discovered by the enemy and pursued, he escaped the danger from them, since a violent south wind brought a heavy swell and put their galleys in the trough of the sea; but he was carried with his own ships towards a precipitous and craggy shore, and had no hope of escape. Suddenly, however, there blew from the bay a strong south-west wind, and the swell began to run from the land out to sea, so that he was able to reverse his course, and, as he sailed gallantly along, he saw the shore covered with wrecks. For there the wind had cast up the galleys which were in pursuit of him, and many of them had been destroyed. Antony took many prisoners and much booty, captured Lissus, and inspired Caesar with great confidence by arriving in the nick of time with so large a force.

VIII. The struggles which followed were many and continuous, and in all of them Antony distinguished himself. Twice, when Caesar’s men were

1 Early in 48 B.c. Cf. the Cuesar, xxxvii. 2.

155

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

oTpee Kal oTHvat Kat oupBareiv avis Tots Stw-

Koval avayKkdaas é évixnoey. ‘WY ovv avrou pera Kaicapa Teta Tos év TO oTpatoTedep aryos: éb7-age dé Kaicap 7 iy xoe rept avrob dofav. érret yap Ewedre THY TehevTaiay Kal Ta dha kpivacay
ev Papadryp paxnv paxec Ga, TO pev befcov auTos elye Képas, TOU e EUMVUJLOV THY myewoviay “Avtavig mapeowKer, QS TONEMLLKWTAT@ TOV U eave. pera 5é THY viKnY Sictdtwp avaryopev Bets autos pev édtwxe Toprniop, “Avr@vioy dé in-Tmapxov ENO MEVOS eis “Popny erreprpev. Erte 5€ 7 apy devtépa Tob Sixt aTopos TApovTos: dv Sé py Taph, T POTN kat m“ovn oxedov" v) yap Snpapxia tapévet, Tas 5€ AXXNaS KaTadAvoveLr Tdaas SiKTa-TOpOS aipeévros.
IX. Ov pny anna TOTE Snpapxav Aodoferras, veos avnp Kat véwy mparyparov Gperyopevos, elonyeiTo Xpeay arroxoTds, Kal Tov ‘Avraveov avT@ TE pidov dvTa Kal Bovdopevov det TOLS Tro ois apéaKey érreOe cupmparreL Kal KoLveveiy Tob TOMTEDLATOS. ‘Aowiov bé Kal TpeBeddiov TavavTia TapaKarovvT ov Umrovoum Sev) KaTA TUXNY T@ “Avravicp ™pooéTerev @S abucouperp Tepl TOV yapov v6 Tov AodoBérra. Kat TO ™ pary ja Bapéws eveyKav THY Te yuvaika Tijs oixias ef
Nacev aveyroav ovaayv auTov (Ouyarnp yap Hv Taiov “Avtoviou Tov Kixépwuve TUVUTATEVTAYTOS), kat tous tept ’Acivov beEdpevos emohe pet TO AoroBerrg. xaTédaBe yap THV aryopav exeivos as Bia xvpwowv Tov vO"ov. Avr@vios OE, Kat ths Bours Wndicapevns Sar hov Seiy émt ray 156

ANTONY

in headlong flight, he met them, turned them back, forced them to stand and engage again their pur- suers, and won the victory. Accordingly, next to Caesar, he was the man most talked about in the camp. And Caesar showed plainly what opinion he had of him. For when he was about to fight the last and all-decisive battle at Pharsalus, he himself took the right wing, but he gave the command of the left to Antony, as the most capable officer -under him. And after the victory, when he had been proclaimed dictator, he himself pursued Pompey, but he chose Antony as his Master of Horse and sent him to Rome. This office is second in rank — when the dictator is in the city; but when he is absent, it is the first and almost the only one. For only the tribuneship continues when a dictator has been chosen ; all the other offices are abolished. IX. However, Dolabella, who was tribune at this time—a newcomer in politics who aimed at a new — order of things, introduced a law for the abolition of debts, and tried to persuade Antony, who was his friend and always sought to please the multitude, to take common action with him in the measure. But . Asinius and Trebellius advised Antony to the con- trary, and, as chance would have it, a dire suspicion fell upon him that he was wronged as a husband by Dolabella. Antony took the matter much to heart, drove his wife from his house (she was his cousin, being a daughter of the Caius Antonius who was Cicero's colleague in the consulship), made common cause with Asinius and Trebellius, and waged war upon Dolabella. For Dolabella had occupied the forum in order to force the passage of his law ; so Antony, after the senate had voted that arms

~

Ul ,
AoroBérxXay, erredOwv Kal padxnv cuvarpas arre-KTELVE TE TLVAS TOV exeivou Kal TaV idiwy arré-
A N @ aA ¢ 9 ,
Bare. Tots pev ody TroAXois éx ToUTwWY amnxOd-a A vad \ , \ \ ”
veto, Tots d€ YpnaTois Kal cwhpoct dia TOV AXXOV
, ’ e) , e ’ , ’ ’
Biov ovn jv apeotos, ws Kixépwv dnaoiv, adr
? “ , Le) / 774
éutcetto, BdeAuTrouévay abrov wéBas awpous Kal
A ,
Samdvas émayGeis nai xvrwdnoes év yuvaioss, 9
kat wel repay pév Uarvous Kal Tepitatous adv-OVTOS Kal KpatTaN@vTos, vuKTwp 5€ Kwpmous Kal
\
Oéatpa xai dtatpiBas év ydpots pipwv rai yedro-ToTOL@V. A€yeTat your, ws év ‘Imariouv troTé Tov
, , Sf
pio yapuos éotiadels Kal wimy dia vuKtos, elta
A. “~ a
Tpwt ToD Onpov KaNovVTOS Eis ayopay tTpocdOav
54 “ a
Ere TpodTs peaTos éuécete, TOV hirtwv TLVOS UITO0-
, ed a aXOVTOS TO iudtiov. Av b€ Kal Yépytos o pipos
a , > le!
TOV péeyLoTOY Trap avT@ dSuvvapevov, Kal KvOnpis
\ A aA
a0 THS AVTHS TAaXaLOTpPAS YUVALOY ayaTTw@pEVOD, 0 6 Kal Tas TroAES emiwy ev dope }

ue $ Toes ETLwY EV HopEeilw TrepiLNnyeETo,
a 6 , A \ A \
Kal TO hopetov ov EXATTOUS 7 TO THS MNTpPOS av-
Tov eplétovTes yKoXOVOoUY. éAUTTOVY dé Kal
Npvc@y exTrWUaTwY @oTeEp ev ToumTais Tais aTro-
‘
Snpiars Stadepopévwn Srres, Kal otdoets evodzot oxnvev, Kal mpos aAgeot Kal TWoTapois apiotwv
a“ / \ / ¢ e
ToAuTEeA@Y Stabécets, Kal Néovtes Appacw we-
/ A A Cevyuévor, cat cadpovwv avdpav Kat yuvaikav
>
OlKiar yapatTUTrats Kal cauPuKotpiats émicTad-
/ \ “ \
pevopevat. Sevoy yap érovovvto Kaicapa pev o AN 4 A 9 / a \ 4
avtov é&w ris “Iradias Oupavrety, Ta TreptovTa 158
9

0

ANTONY

must be employed against Dolabella, came up against him, joined battle, slew some of his men, and lost some of hisown. This course naturally made him odious to the multitude, and to men of worth and uprightness he was not acceptable because of his life in general, as Cicero says,' nay, he was hated by them,-. They loathed his ill-timed drunkenness, his (heavy expenditures, his debauches with women, his / spending the days in sleep or in wandering about with crazed and aching head, the nights in revelry or at shows, or in attendance at the nuptial feasts of mimes and jesters. We are told, at any rate, that he once feasted at the nuptials of Hippias the mime, drank all night, and then, early in the morning, when the people summoned him to the forum, came before them still surfeited with food and vomited into his toga, which one of his friends held at his* BIB service. Sergius the mime also was one of those who had the greatest influence with him, and Cytheris, a woman from the same school of acting, a great favourite, whom he took about with him in a litter on his visits to the cities, and her litter*was followed by as many attendants as that of his mother. Moreover, people were vexed at the sight of golden beakers borne about on his excursions from the city as in sacred processions, at the pitching of tents when he travelled, at the laying out of costly repasts near groves and rivers, at chariots drawn by lions, and at the use of honest men and women’s houses as quarters for harlots and psaltery-players. For it was thought a monstrous thing that, while Caesar himself was lodging under the skies outside of Italy

1 The second Philippic pictures Antony’s excesses.

159

Le 4 4 4 ?
TOU TrOAgmoU peyddous qovots Kal xivdvvols avaxabarpopevor, € érépous 5€ dz' éxeivov Tpupav TOUS qmoXtTats évuBpivovras.
X. Tadta cal thv ordow avfijcat Soxel xal TO otpatiwtixoy eis DBpes Seevas xal wrAcovekias
> a \ A ? \ ,
aveivat. 610 Kal Kaicap éravedOwv AodroBédXr.a TE ouyyvopuny Edwxe, Kai TO TpiTov aipeDels drra-tos ovx Avt@viov, adda Aémidov eiretTo cuvap-
A \ f. 4, > ?»

2 yovta. thy Sé€ Tloumniov mwdovpévny oixiav
avncato pev 'Avtwvos, atartoupevos 8& tHV Tiny nyavaKrers Kal mynow autos da TodTO py petacyeiy Kaicape tijs ets AtBinv otpareias, éml Tois mpotépars KaTtopOwpacww ov TUX@Y apol-Bis. Eouxe pévtoe To trod THs GBEeATEptas avTod
\ 3 / 9 a" e a ? b , Kal dowtias adereivy o Kaicap, ovx dvaicOnras
N / , 2 \ \

3 Ta TAnppeAnuaTta SeEduevos. atradraryels yap éxeivou Tow Biov yao TpoceaXe, PovdrBiav dryaryopevos thy KrAwdio ™@ Snuayors ovvoLKn-saga, ob radaciay obdé oixoupiav ppovoov yu-yatov, ovdé avdpos idi@tov Kpateiy aktobv, ard' apxovTos apyew Kal orpatnyoovtos otpatnyety
?
BovAopevoy, date KXeotrdtpav didacxddia Povd-Bia tis "Avtwviou yuvatcoxpatias odeirey, wavy yverponOn kat wenadaywynpevov am apyns axpoa-oOat yuvatcav TapadaBodaav avtov.
4 O08 pny GddG Kaxeivny éeretpato Tpocraivwry

/ Aa e
Kal metpaxrevomevos thapwrTépay toteity o "AvTa-vos' olov 6te, Kaicaps 1odX@y adraytwvTey peta
A 3 >] ? , \ > \ Ifen 9
Thv év "1Bnpta vinny, Kal autos é&ndOev. elra

and clearing away the remnants of the war at great toil and peril, his adherents, by virtue of his efforts, should revel in luxury and mock at their fellow citizens.

X. These things are also thought to have augmented the discord, and to have incited the soldiery to deeds of violence and rapacity.. For this reason, too, when Caesar came back, he pardoned Dolabella, and, on being chosen consul for the third time, selected: Lepidus as his colleague, and not Antony. The house of Pompey, when put up for sale, was bought by Antony; but when he was asked to pay the price for it, he was indignant. And he says himself that this was the reason why he did not go with Caesar on his African campaign, since he got no recompense for his previous successes. However, it would seem that Caesar cured him of most of his prodigality and folly by not allowing his errors to pass unnoticed. For Antony put away his reprehensible way of living, and turned his thoughts to marriage, taking to wife Fulvia, the widow of Clodius the demagogue. She was a woman who took nothought for spinning or housekeeping, nor would she deign to bear sway over a man of private station, but she wished to rule a ruler and command a commander. Therefore Cleopatra was indebted to Fulvia for teaching Antony to endure a woman's sway, since she took him over quite tamed, and schooled at the outset to obey women.

However, Antony tried, by sportive ways and youthful sallies, to make even Fulvia more lighthearted. For instance, when many were going out to meet Caesar after his victory in Spain, Antony himself went forth. Then, on a sudden, a report ave Pnyns ets THY ‘Itadiap é émtrerovons as err iacw ot TONE [LOL Kaicapos TeOvnKoTos, avérTpeE‘pev els ‘Popny. Aa Pov dé Geparrovtos éa0jra VUKT@OP emt THY oixiay AOE, Kal pynoas emia TONY PovrPia map *Avtwviov _ kopitery elanxOn 7 pos avTny eyxexaruppévos. elta 7 pev éxTradns ovea, mpl 7 Ta ypappata AaBeiv pana Ev et oF O

"Avtavios: 0 66 THY emLaToAny cLwmh jwpotelvas
apfapevny Ave Kal dvayiwecKkev TreptBadrov KaTepihnae.
. Tatra peév ovv odiya ToANwY dvTwV Evera Seiy-PATOS efevnvoyaper.
XI. "Ex dé ‘[8npias emaviovTe Kaicape TavTes pev ot TpATOL TOG 7 MEp@V o60v aT VTOY, éripnOn b€ ‘Apraveos € ERT PETOS UT auTod. KOpe-Copevos yap emt Cevryous dua THS "Tradias Avto-viov elye pe” éEavtod TUVOXOU[EVOY, om. Bev Oe Bpotroy “AABivoy Kal tov tis aberpidjs viov ‘Oxraoviavor, 6 Os peta TaiTa Kaicap avouda On Kal ‘Popaioy npke wheiarov _Xpovov. émret S€ TO T EMT TOV atredetyOn Kaicap traros, TpooetAeTo
pev evd vs cuvapxovTa tov ’Avt@ov, éBovreTo dé THY apxny aT ELT A BEVOS AodoBerr@ maperyyujcas Kal TovUTO pos TV ovyKAnTOV é&7-VeyKED. ‘Avtoviou 5é Tpayéws avTuTEecoVTOS Kal ToNAa ev elTrovTOs Kana AodoBérrap, ouK éAaT Tova bé d aKovcayTos, TOTE Lev aloxuvdeis THY aKxoopiay oO Kajoap amnrrayn. peta S€ TavTAa
7 poehOa@v dvaryopevaat tov AodroPéAdapy, *Av-TWViOU TOUS oiwvovs évavtiovabat Bowyvtos, ele kat mponxato AodoBéAXAay axOopuevov. eddxer 162

921

ANTONY

burst upon Italy that Caesar was dead and his enemies advancing upon the country, and Antony turned back to Rome. He took the dress of a slave and came by night to his house, and on saying that he was the bearer of a letter to Fulvia from Antony, |
was admitted to her presence, his face all muffled.
Then Fulvia, in great distress, before taking the -letter, asked ‘whether Antony was still alive; and he, after handing her the letter without a word, as she began to open and read it, threw his arms about her and kissed her. .
These few details, then, out of many, I have adduced by way of illustration.
XI. When Caesar returned from Spain,’ all the principal men went many days’ journey to meet him, but it was Antony who was conspicuously honoured - by him. For as he journeyed through Italy he had Antony in the same car with himself, but behind him Brutus Albinus, and Octavius, his niece's son, who was afterwards named Caesar and ruled Rome for a very long time. Moreover, when Caesar had for the fifth time been appointed consul, he immediately chose Antony as his colleague. It was his purpose also to resign his own office and make it over to Dolabella ; and he proposed this to the senate. But since Antony vehemently opposed the plan, heaped much abuse upon Dolabella, and received as much in return, for the time being Caesar desisted, being ashamed of their unseemly conduct. And after- wards, when Caesar came before the people to pro- claim Dolabella, Antony shouted that the omens were opposed. Caesar therefore yielded, and gave up Dolabella, who was much annoyed. And it

1 In 45 B.c.

dé xdxeivey ovdev HT TOv tov 'Avtwviov B8ervr-recOat. NéyeTat yap OS, apporépous TLVOS opod
d:aBdddovtos 1 pos aurov, €LTrol, un dedtévar TOUS
maxets TOUVTOUS Kal Kountas, ANAG TOUS OX pous Kat demos éxeivous, Bpobtov kat Kdaootov aTrodetxvvpevos,' vd' wv euerrev émeBovarcvbeis avatpetoOat.
XII. Kaxeivors dé THY eum perred TAT HY Tpo-pacw aKOv Taper xev " AVT@VLOS. vy pev yap 7 tav Aveaiwv éoptn 'Popains, F hy Aovmepkadia kahovat, Kaicap 6é KEKOG HN MEVOS eoOFre Gptap-Bucy Kai KaOnpevos vrép Bnyatos év ayopa TOUS Siabéovras eearo- d:abéovar dé Tov ebryevdv
véot mronnol kat TOY apyYoVTOD, GAnAtUPEVOL Aima, oKUTESL Aac iors Kadixvovpevot peta T atdias TOY evTuyXavovTwv. ° ev TovTOLS o 'Avrovi0§ diabéwy Ta pev TaTpla. Natpewv clace, Siddqua 5é dddvns oTepavey mepredi€as Tpocédpape TO Byatt, xai auvekapOeis bo Tov ourbedv Tov éméOnne TH kepary Tod Kaicapos, as 67) Bactreverv avT@ TpoonKov. éxelvov dé OpuTrtopévou Kal Siaxdivovtos naGeis o OAmos dveKpo-Thoe Kal TddLY Oo "AvT@vios em Tye, Kal mahuv éxetvos amet piBero. Kal Tokvy xpovoy ovTw dtapayopéevov Avtovio pep OrLyoL TOV pirov Bialopeve, Kaicapr be apvoupevep TAS o Ofjpos émexpotet peta Bons: 6 Kal Oavuaotoy jv, tt Tois Epyous Ta TOV Bacirevopéevwv iropévorTes
Toivoua tov Baciiéws ws KaTadAvoL THS édEv-

1 anodexvduevos Coraés and Sintenis, after the Aldine edition ; Bekker omits, with the MSS. In the Morals, p. 206 F, Plutarch has deltas.
164.

would seem that Caesar abominated Dolabella also no less than he did Antony. For we are told that when a certain man was accusing both of them to him, he said he had no fear of those fat and long-haired fellows, but rather of those pale and thin ones, indicating Brutus and Cassius, by whom he was to be conspired against and slain.?

XII. And it was Antony who also unwittingly supplied the conspirators with' their most specious pretext. For at: the festival of the Lycaea, which the Romans call' Lupercalia, Caesar, arrayed in a triumphal robe and seated in the forum upon the rostra, was viewing the runners to and fro. Now, the runners to and fro are many noble youths and many of the magistrates, anointed with oil, and with leathern thongs they strike in sport those whom they meet. Antony was one of these runners, but he gave the ancient usages the go-by, and twining a wreath of laurel round a diadem, he ran with it to the rostra, where he was lifted on high by his fellow runners and put it on the head of Caesar, thus intimating that he ought to be king. When Caesar with affected modesty declined the diadem, the people were delighted and clapped their hands. Again Antony tried to put the diadem on Caesar's head, and again Caesar pushed it away. This con- test went on for some time, a few of Antony's friends applauding his efforts to force the diadem upon Caesar, but all the people applauding with loud cries when Caesar refused it. And this was strange, too, that while the people were willing to conduct themselves like the subjects of a king, they shunned the name of king as though it meant the abolition of 1 Cf. the Caesar, lxii. 5; the Brutus, viii. 1.

165

4 Oepias édevyov. avéotn péev ody o Kaicap > 6 ;, re ee a , \ ‘ ¢ + ayGecbeis amo tov Bnyatos, cal To ipatiov
9 4 9 \ A / ”~ ,
andadyov amo Tov tpaxndov te Bovropéve
, A \ 5 4 ‘ A A ey
Tapéxew thy ahaynv éBoa. tov 5é ctépavov évi
Tov aviptdvtwy avtod TepiTeOévta Sypapyol Ties
e aA A Katéorracay, ods o SHwos eddnuay peTa KpoTou mapeiteto, Kaicap é tis apyis améotyoev.
XIII. Taira tovs rept Bpotrov cat Kdoovoy
A 4 : ;

éméppwoe’ Kal Tov dirwv Tos TicTOUs KaTa-Néyovres ert thy mpakw éoxémrovto mTmepl
7A / a de ¥ , \ ¥ 6
VTWVLOU. TMV O€ ANAWY TPOTLELEVwWV TOV aVvOpA
TpeBavios dvteimev’ ébn yap vd’ ov Ypovoy
> / 9 ? , > , , A
annvrwv é€& IBnpias éravovte Kaicapt, tov
"Avtwviov avaKxnvotytos avtT@ Kai cuvodevorTos,
a 3
dipacOa: tis yveuns atpéua mos Kai pet
a . \ evraBeias, rov d€ vojoar pév, ov déEacBar dé thy
n 4 : a Téipayv, ov pnv ovdé mpos Kaicapa xarereiv,
’ \ ” a ‘\ 4 ?
2 ad\r\d TWisTwas KaTacLwHfjcat TOV Royo. €K
UA 4 9 4 a 4
‘TovToU mdaAtv éBovArevovto Kaicapa xteivaytes
> 4 ? 4 > , \ “~ éemiogpatteyv “Avtwvov: éxwrvce Sé Bpodtos,
3 “ A w“ ,
akiav thv bmép tov voywy Kat tav SiKaiwv
, A > a \ \ J
ToApopéevny mpakiw eiixpiy Kat xaOapay adxias elvat. ghoBovpevoe. 5é THY TE pwpnv ToD
"Avtwviou Kat To THS apyns akiwpa, TaTTOVELY én’ avtov éviouvs TaV éx THiS TUYwWpOCIas, STAs, rd ? a \ \ dtav eain Kaicap eis thy BovAnv Kat pédAdn é a @ \ ” ” 5 , , pacba. to épyov, é&w Siareyopevot te nal omovdalovtes KaTéYWo LV AUTOV.
166
ANTONY

their freedom. At last Caesar rose from the rostra in displeasure, and pulling back the toga from his throat cried out that any one who pleased might smite him there. The wreath, which had been hung upon one of his statues, certain tribunes of the people tore down. These men the people greeted with favouring cries and clapping of hands; but Caesar deprived them of their office.!
XIII. This incident strengthened the party of Brutus and Cassius; and when they were taking count of the friends whom they could trust for their enterprise, they raised a question about Antony. The rest were for making him one of them, but Trebonius ‘opposed it. For, he said, while people were going out to meet Caesar on his return from Spain, Antony had travelled with him and shared his tent, and he had sounded him quietly and cautiously ; Antony had understood him, he said, but had not responded to his advances ; Antony had not, however, reported the conversation to Caesar, but had faith- fully kept silence about it. Upon this, the con- spirators again took counsel to kill Antony after they had slain Caesar; but Brutus prevented this, urging that the deed adventured in behalf of law and justice must be pure and free from injustice. But the con- spirators were afraid of Antony’s strength, and of the consideration which his office gave him, and there- fore appointed some of their number to look out for him, in order that, when Caesar entered the senate- chamber and their deed was about to be done, they might engage Antony outside in conversation about some urgent matter and detain him there.

1 Cf. the Caesar, cha; ter Ixi.

XIV. Toure dé T par Tomeveoy @s auverédn, Kal TET OVTOS év tH BovrAn rod Kaicapos, evOvs per O "AVT@VLOS éoOiira Depdzrovros petahaBoy expurpev avrov. as 5° éyvw Ttovs avdpas emuxetpotvtas ev ovdent, cvvnd potapévous dé eis TO Kamitwruop, é em euae wataBivac AaBovras Gunpov Tap’ avTov tov viovr Kai Kadootov peév auTos édeiTrvice, Bootrov bé Aéni6os. cuvayayov oé Bournv auros pev UT Ep apynotias elre Kal
Sravopijs € emapXav Tous Tept Kdootov Kal _Bpov-Tov, 7 O€ ovyKAnTos éxvpooe TAUTA Kal TOV LTO
Kaicapos yeyovoTay eyndicarto pendev adXNAT-TEL. eEnet dé Tihs Bovrjjs Aamir poraros dvOpoérev
) "AvT@vos, avnpnxévat Soxdv éuch VALOV Toh eHOV
Kal Tpdypace SucKxoAias Exovot kal tapayas ov
Tas TUXoVTAS éuppoveotata KexpncOar xat TOMTLKMTATA.
Toure pEVTOL TAaXD TOV OyLC wav éFécecev
avTOY 7 Tapa TOV oxo 50£a, a 7 p@Tov emicavra BeBaiws éceo Oat Bpovtou KaTarvievtos. ETUXE pep oy éxxopeCopevou Kaicapos, _@orep éGos jv, ev ayopa SeEov eye@piov- ope dé tov Ofjpov vireppuas ayouevov Kal an ovpevov eve mite Tots ematvous OLKTOV Gea Kal Seiya emt TO madet, Kal TO NOYO TENEUTOVTE * TOUS TE YLTOvio Kous TOU re ynKoros nparyLevous Kab Sraxexoppévous ToIs Eipeowy avaceiwy, Kal Tovs eipyac-
pevous TavTa Kad@v Tadapvaiovs Kab | dvdpodovous,

TOG OUTOV opyns eveBare Tols avOpwrrots WOTE TO - lag Adyp redevravr: Sintenis, after Bryan; redevray Bekker, with the MSS., bracketing r¢@ Adyq ; Kal Trav Adywr tedevrov Coraés ; nal rg rbyy. TeAevtay Te Tobs xiTwvloKovs «rd. Stephanus, 168

bo
Lo
ANTONY

_ XIV. This was done as planned, and Caesar fell in the senate-chamber. At once, then, Antony put on the dress of a slave and hid himself. But when he learned that the conspirators were laying hands upon nobody, but were merely assembled together on the Capitol, he persuaded them to come down by giving them his son as hostage; moreover, he himself entertained Cassius, and Lepidus entertained Brutus. Besides, he called the senate together and spoke in favour of amnesty and a distribution of provinces among Brutus and Cassius and their partisans, and the senate ratified this proposal, and voted that no change should be made in what Caesar had done.! So Antony went out of the senate the most illustrious of men; for he was thought to have put an end to civil war, and to have handled matters involving great difficulty and extraordinary confusion in a most prudent and statesmanlike manner.

From such considerations as these, however, he was soon shaken by the repute in which he stood with the multitude, and he had hopes that he would surely be first in the state if Brutus were overthrown. Now, it happened that when Caesar's body was carried forth for burial, Antony pronounced the customary eulogy over it in the forum. And when he saw that the people were mightily swayed and charmed by his words, he mingled with his praises sorrow and indignation over the dreadful deed, and at the close of his speech shook on high the garments of the dead, all bloody and tattered by the swords as they were, called those who had wrought such work villains and murderers, and inspired his hearers with

} Of. the Caesar, Ixvii, 4; the Brutus, xix. 3.

169

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

fev copa Tob Katcapos éy aryopa kabayioat, TuveveyKapevous Ta _ Babpa Kal Tas Tpamelas, aprrdlovtas dé TOUS aT THS mupas dadous eri Tas ovxias Oeiy TOV aTEKTOVOTwY Kal TporpuaxeaGar, XV. Ata taita TOD mrepl Bpodrov EK THS
TOAEWS amrenGovtav ot TE pirou TOD Kaicapos cuvioTavTo qWpos TOV 'AvT@viov, 4 Te yuvn

Kadzroupvia TUT TEVO A.0 O. TOV XpnudTov Ta
TrEeloTa KatéOero mpos avtov éx TAS oixias, es Ayo Ta cupmayta, TETPAKLTXtML@Y Tahdvrv. éraBe d€ Kal Ta BiBrLa Tou Kaicapos, év ols Uropynwata Tay KEK PL LEVOV Kat Sedoypever 7 Hy avaryeypappeva Kal TOUTOLS mapeyypddeav obs éBovrero, ToAXous ev apxovras arredeixvue, ToAXovs O€ Bovreutds, évious d€ xal Kariyye Tepuyadeupevous Kal Kcaderpypevous Edvev, WS on TavTa TO Kaicape bofavta. 816 rTovrous
aTavTas €MtoK@TTOVTES Ob ‘Pawpaior Xapwviras
éx dour: eheyxXopuevor yap els TOUS Tov vexpov Katepevyov UTOMYNLATLC WOUS. Kal TaN 6é
EMPATTEV AUVTOKPATOPLKAS O "AvT@MV08, aT OS pev UTatevan, Tous 6é \adedpovs EXwov cuvdpxovtas, Taiov pev otpatnyov, Aevxcov Oe Snpapxov.
XVI. ’Evravéa S€ trav mpayyatav syTov O
véos aixvetras Kaicap «is ‘Pony, aderpudijs pev OY TOU TeOYNKOTOS vi0S, @S elpnTat,
KAN Povo Los dé THS ovcias ATONE ELL BEVOS, ev “ATroAovig dé Svat piper bp’ dv xpovov avnpnto Kaicap. ovtos evdus “Avtwrior, ws 7 TaTp@ov dirov, do Tac devos TOY TapaxaTabnkay éuépYyTO. Kal yap apetre Penaeus éxdoT@ Spaypas 170

ANTONY

such rage that they heaped together benches and tables and burned Caesar’s body in the forum, and then, snatching the blazing faggots from the pyre, ran to the houses of the assassins and assaulted them.

XV. On account of these things Brutus and his associates left the city, the friends of Caesar united in support of Antony, and Caesar’s wife, Calpurnia, putting confidence in Antony, took most of the treasure from Caesar's house and put it in his charge; it amounted in all to four thousand talents. Antony received also the papers of Caesar, in which there were written memoranda of his decisions and decrees ; and making insertions in these, he appointed many magistrates and many senators according to his own wishes. He also brought some men back from exile, and released others from prison, as though Caesar had decided upon all this. Wherefore the Romans in mockery called all such men Charonitae ;?

for when put to the test they appealed to the memoranda of the dead. And Antony managed everything else in autocratic fashion, being consul himself,
and having his brothers .in office at the same time, Caius as praetor, and Lucius as tribune of the people.

XVI. At this state of affairs the young Caesar came to Rome, a son of the dead Caesar's niece, as has been said,' who had been left heir to his property. He had been staying at Apollonia when Caesar was assassinated. The young man greeted Antony as his father's friend, and reminded him of the moneys deposited with him. For he was under obligation to 1 Cf. the Cicero, xlii. 2 ff.; the Brutus, xx. 3.

2 In Latin, Orcini, from Orcus, the god of the lower world,

to whom the Greek Charon is made to correspond. |
3- Chapter xi. 1.
171.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES ..

e , , , a , : b a éBdounxovta mévte dodvat, Katoapos év tats
, , ' , \ \ \
Siabnxars ypaypavtos. 'Avtwyios 5é TO pep
"" a a" :
TPOTOV WS petpaxiov Katadpovav Edeyev ovyx
e 4 > ' > A \ fa! 9 Ga ' Uytaivery avtTov, addAa Kal dpevav ayabav Kai diroy épnpuov dvta poptiov adBactaxtov aipec bat
A , / \ , \
tyv Kaicapos Sitadoyyv: pr meopevov dé
, bd b] > a \ 4 \
TOUTOLS, GAN aTraLtTOVYTOS TA KpnpaTa, TOAAGa
\ , N C4 b "A \ 4 , Kal Néywv pos DBpiv avrovd cai mpadtrwy dvetéret.
yt, , = Snpapxiav te yap évéotn petiovtTe, Kai didpov
le) A ef
Ypucody TOD TaTpos, WaTTEp erndiaTo, TLOEVTOS
b] li' > A "9 , > \ , nreiAnoev eis hudrakny amdaFev, et 7 TWavoatto
A ' e
Snuaywyav. éret péevtoe Kixépwve Sovs éavtov o
4 \ an 4 (4 \ b] a - veavias Kat Tois adAAots boot Tov “AvTw@vor éuicouv, bu éxet ey wKELoD nv BovAy

i , Os éxeivav péev @xevodto thy BovAny, > A \ N a > , ae \
avros 5é€ tov Sjpov avedduBave Kai Tovs otpa-TIWTAS aTO TOY KaTOLKLaOY GuVAye, Seicas oO
"Avr@vios eis NOyous avT@ auvndOev dv Kamt-TOMO, Kal SienrArAdynaoav.
be a b] la nw N wv 3 Elita xowpwpevos exeivns THs vueTos Ow elder
” e 3 , 29 7 A e a A : \ atotov o Avrwvios, doce: yap avTod thv Seklav
a a a \ > e 4
yeipa BeBAncOar Kepavv@. Kat pel npuépas oAiyas évétreve NOYos ws émtBovrAevar Kaicap 3 n a) \. 3 la) / 3 w” ll
avT@. Kaioap dé aredoyeito pév, ov Erebe Sé Kal madwv hy éevepyos 4» exOpa, cat twepiOéovtes |

> , A 9 ‘4 \ \ e , bd nm

apdotepoe thy “Itadiav To péev idpupévoy ev Tats

Katotkiats dn TOU aoTpaTiwTiKoD peydadots
, ; a \ avictacay pucbois, To & év StrAaLS ETL TETAY EVO

e 4 > 4 ,

vropOdvovtes GAAHAOUS TpoTHyoVrTo.

172

923

ANTONY

give every Roman seventy-five drachmas, according to the terms of Caesar’s will. But Antony, at first despising him as a mere stripling, told him he was out of his senses, and that in his utter lack of good judgment and of friends he was taking up a crushing burden in the succession of Caesar. Aud when the ‘ young man refused to listen to this, and demanded the moneys, Antony kept saying and doing many things to insult him. For instance, he opposed him in his canvass for a tribuneship, and when he attempted to dedicate a golden chair in honour of his father by adoption, according to a decree of the senate, Antony threatened to hale him off to prison unless he stopped trying to win popular favour. When, however, the young man made common cause with Cicero and all the other haters of Antony, and with their aid won the support of the senate, while he himself got the goodwill of the people and assembled the soldiers of Caesar from their colonies, then Antony was struck with fear and came to a conference with him on the Capitol, and they were reconciled.

Afterwards, as he lay asleep that night, Antony had a strange vision. He thought, namely, that his right hand was smitten by a thunder-bolt. And after a few days a report fell upon his ears that the young Caesar was plotting against him. Caesar tried to make explanations, but did not succeed in convincing Antony. So once more their hatred was in full career, and both were hurrying about Italy trying to bring into the field by large pay that part of the soldiery which was already settled in their colonies, and to get the start of one another in winning the support of that part which was still arrayed in arms.

XVII. Tov & év tH more Kinépov péytorov Suvdpevos, Kal mapokvvar emt tov ’Avtwviov dmavras avOparous, TéXos eémetce THY BovrAnv Exeivov ev TONE MLOV YnpicacBan, Kaicape dé paBSovyiav Tey av Kat oTpaTAyiKa Kooua, IIdvoap bé Kab "Tpteov mooted ew efedavras ‘Avrevioy é éx THs "Itadtas. obtoe dé Hoav vratot ToTe’ Kal cvpBarovres ‘Avtavie Tept moMty Mutivyy, Katcapos TapovTos Kal TUMPAXopLEvor, TOUS pev Trohepious EVLKWV, AUTOL be at éQavov. pevyovTe de "Avtovio TONAG OUVETLTTE TOV amopwv, 6 Oe Atpos aTropwTarov. annra pice Tapa Tas KaxoT paryias eyivero Bérr1oTOs € éavob Kal va TuXar OMOLOTATOS 7 ny arabe, Kowov pev | GvTOS TOU aiaGavecbar THIS aperiis ToIs be amopiay Tia aparropevors, ov pay andavrwyv & onrotor prpeta Oa Kal devyetv a L dua'xepaivovery eppopévery év Tats petaBorais, anna Kat adov éviwy Tots éOecw evdtOovT@Yv v7rd daGevelas Kab Opavopever Tov _ Noryea Mov. o 8 obp “AVT@VLOS TOTE Oavpactov Hy mapaderypa Tois oTpATLOT acs, amo Tpupys TooavTns Kal ToduTEAELas vdwp Te mivev StepOappévor evKoAws, Kal KapTrous ayplous Kab pitas Tpoo Pepopevos. éBpwbn dé Kat protos, @S héyeTat, kat Cdwv ayevoTwv mpoTEpov ppavto Tas “Adrets tepBadrovtes.

XVIII. "Hv be open Tots eméxetva oTparev-pact evtuxely, ov Aémidos _WPXE diros elvas Soxay ‘Avtwviou Kal TOMNe THs Katoapos grrias amoNeNauKcévae dt’ avtov. eM wy dé Kal TapaaoTpatotredevoas mwAnciov, ws ovlev amnrvta 174

ANTONY

XVII. But Cicero, who was the most influential man in the city, and was trying to incite everybody against Antony, persuaded the senate to vote him a public enemy, to send to Caesar the fasces and other insignia of a praetor, and to dispatch Pansa and Hirtius to drive Antony out of Italy. These men were consuls at that time, and in an engagement with Antony near the city of Mutina, at which Octavius Caesar was present and fought on their side, they conquered the enemy, but fell themselves.!_ Many difficulties befell Antony in his flight, the greatest of which was famine. But it was his nature to rise to his highest level when in an evil plight, and he was most like a good and true man when he was unfortunate. For it is a common trait in those whom some difficulty has laid low, that they perceive plainly what virtue is, but all have not the strength amid reverses to imitate what they admire and shun what they hate, nay, some are then even more prone to yield to their habits through weakness, and to let their judgment be shattered. Antony, however, was at this time an amazing example to his soldiers, after such a life of luxury and extravagance as he had led drinking foul water contentedly and eating wild fruits and roots. Bark also was eaten, we are told, and animals never tasted before were food for them as they crossed the Alps.

XVIII. They were eager to fall in with the troops in those parts which Lepidus commanded, for he was thonght to be a friend of Antony, and through him had reaped much advantage from Caesar’s friendship. But when Antony came and encamped near by, he met with no tokens of friendliness, and therefore de-

1 In 43 B.c. Cf. the Crcero, xlv. 3.
175
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

diravOpwrov, éyvw tapaBarécbar. Kal Koun pev arnuedns Kab Babds Trayov peta THY HTTav evs Hv avT@ Kabeipévos, AaBwv Sé gatov
iudrvov eyyes mpoonye TH Yapaxt tod Aeridou Kat rAéyew npEato. ToAN@Y dé Kal mpos THY Oypuv emikAwpevov Kal Tols Aoyols ayopévwy, Seioas Oo Aémidos tas oddtuyyas éxéXevce ouvnyovoas aperéoOat To KataxovecOar Tov "Avtw@mov. ot 5é otpaTi@tat padXov @OxTEetpay Kai SvedeyorTo xpvpa, Aaidtov Kal Kndwdvoy amootetNavtes mpos avtov, éoOnras AaBovtas éTatpevopéevov yuvaixav, of Tov ‘AvTw@vioy éxédevov emuyerperv

Oappotvta T@ yapake: TroAXOUs yap elvar Se£o-pevous! Kal tov Aémidov, ef BovrotTO, KTEvoovTas.
"Avra@vios 5é Aemidou pév ovx elacev dyracbat, pe" jmépav O€ TOV oTpaToY éxwV aTrEeTTELPATO TOD ToTapod. Kal Tp@TOS AUTOS. éuBas émropevero mpos THY avtitépas byOnv, opav dn TOAXOVS tov Aetridov otpatiwtav Tds Te YElpas opéyorTas av'T@ xal Tov ydpaxa Siaora@vtas. eicvedOav be Kal Kpatnoas atravtTav npepwtata AeTid mpoo-nvexOn. jwatépa yap Tpoanyopevaey avTov aoTacapevos' Kal T@ pev Epy@ TavTwv avTos
qv KvpLos, éxeiv@ 8 dvoua Kal Tiny avToKpaTopos SuetéXes huvAdTT@v. TodTo Kal IAdyxov avtTe@ Mouvdtiov émoinoe trpocbécBar, KaOnpevov ov mpocw peta suxris Suvdpews. ottw dé péyas apbels adOis trepéBare tas "Adres, eis THY
"IraXiay dyov érraxaideca Tédn TeCOV OY AUTO
Kal pupious immeiss ywpis 5¢ ppovpay Tadarias
1 sobs Sefouévous Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: defopévous with the MSS.
176

termined upon a bold stroke. His hair was unkempt, and his beard had been allowed to grow long ever Since his defeat, and putting on a dark garment he came up to the camp of Lepidus and began to speak. Many of the soldiers were melted at his appearance and moved by his words, so that Lepidus was alarmed and ordered the trumpets to sound all at once in order to prevent Antony from being heard. But the soldiers felt all the more pity for Antony, and held a secret parley with him, sending Laelius and Clodius to him in the garb of women of the camp. These urged Antony to attack their camp boldly ; for there were many, they said, who would welcome him and kill Lepidus, if he wished. But An- tony would not permit them to lay hands on Lepidus, and next day began to cross the river with his army. He himself was first to plunge in, and made his way towards the opposite bank, seeing already that many of the soldiers of Lepidus were stretching out their hands to him and tearing down their ramparts. After entering the camp and making himself master of everything, he treated Lepidus with the greatest kindness. Indeed, he embraced him and called him father; and though in fact he was in full control him- self, still he did not cease to preserve for Lepidus the name and the honour of imperator. This induced Munacius Plancus also to join him, who was encamped at no great distance with a considerable force. Thus raised again to great. power, he crossed the Alps and led into Italy with him seventeen legions of infantry and ten thousand horse. And besides these, he left to

177 é& tdyuwata DeXoimret peta Ovdapiov twos Tor auvnBwv Kal ouptrotav, by KotuAwva tpocnyopevov. :

XIX. Kaioap dé Kexépwur pév obxéte mrpocetye, THS édevOepias opa@v mepteyouevov, Avtwvov dé mpovxanreito dia TaV pirwy eis Siarvocis. Kal avvenOovtes ot Tpeis Els vnotda ToTAaLe@ TrEpLppEo-pévnv érrl Tpels uépas auryndpevaayv. Kat Tada pev eTrLetK@S @podoyelTo, Kal StevelpavTo THY cUpTacay apxnv @oTrep ovciay TaTpway adX7-hors, 9 S€ Tepl TeV aTroAOUpEenwv avdpav audiaBnrnows avtois wrelota Tpdyuata Tape-axe, TOUS pev eyOpovrs avedeiv ExdoToV, THcaL 5é tovs mpoonkovtas aktodvtos. TédAos S€ TH Tpos TOvS pLaoupévous Gpyh Kal cuyyevav Tiny kal dirtwv evvotavy mpoéwevor, Kixépwvos ev
"Avtwovio Kaicap ébéorn, tovtT@ 5é ‘Avrwvios Aevxiov Katoapos, os Hv Oetos adt@ impos pntpos é500n dé xait Aemido Tlatdov avery tov aderdov: ot S€ hacw éxkorhvat tov TlavxXov Tov Aémidov éxeivots atroBaveiy avtov aitnoapévots.
ovdey WpOTEpOV OVSE aypLwTepoy THs Stapeirrews TavTns Sox® yevéoOat. dhovwv yap avTiKaTtan-Aacaopuevor Hovovs opoiws pev ols éXNauBavov avnpovy ovs édidocav, adixwtepos Sé TEpt TOUS dirous jaoav, ods atrextivvucay unde piocodvtes.
XX. "Est & ody tais SuaddXayais tavtats of OTpaTwwTat TepiotavTes nkiovy Kai yao Tove 178
924 guard Gaul six legions with Varius, one of his intimates and boon companions, who was surnamed Cotylon.

XIX. Now, Octavius Caesar no longer held with Cicero, because he saw that Cicero was devoted to liberty, and he sent his friends to Antony with an invitation to come to terms. So the three men came together on a small island in the midst of a river,! and there held conference for three days. All other matters were easily agreed upon,

and they divided up the whole empire among themselves as though it were an ancestral inheritance; but the dispute about the men who were to be put to death gave them the greatest trouble. Each demanded the privilege of slaying his enemies and saving his kinsmen. But at last their wrath against' those whom they hated led them to abandon both the honour due to their kinsmen and the goodwill due to their friends, and Caesar gave up Cicero to Antony, while Antony gave up to him Lucius Caesar, who was Antony's uncle on the mother's side. Lepidus also was permitted to put to death Paulus his brother; although some say that Lepidus gave up Paulus to Antony and Caesar, who demanded his death. Nothing, in my opinion, could be more savage or cruel than this exchange. For by this barter of murder for murder they put to death those whom they surrendered just as truly as those whom they seized; but their injustice was greater towards their friends, whom they slew without so much as hating them.

XX. To complete this reconciliation, then, the soldiers surrounded them and demanded that Caesar

1 Cf. the Cicero, xlvi. 3.

Thv didtiavy ouvaryar Kaicapa, AaBovta tH PovrAPias tis "Avtwviov yuvaikos Ouyatépa Krwotav. oporoynbévtos &€ xal tovtov Tpia-Kootot pay ex tTpoypadyns eOavat@Oncayv ba avutav' Kixépwvos 5¢ opayévtos éxédevoev Av-TWVLOS THY TE KEpAAHY aToKOTVaL Kal THY XeEipa «nv deEvav, 4 Tovs Kat avToD Aoyous éypae. Kal Koptobévtwyv eOcato yeynOws Kal avaxay-vdtwv oo yYapds moAdNaKis: Elta éutAnobels éxéXevoev vrép Tov Aypatos év ayopa TeOjva, xaOarrep eis Tov vexpov UBpivwv, ovy avTov évuBpifovra Th TUxn Kalb KaTaLtoyivovTa THY éfovatav émiderxvipevos. 0 5é Oeios avtod Kaicap Cntovpevos Kal SiwKxopevos Katépuye mpos THY aderpnv. 7 S€, Tov oshayéwv éetictavTwv Kal talopevwr ets TO Swpdtiov avTis, év Tats Ovpats otdoa Kal dtacxyovca Tas Yelpas é8oa TOAANGaKIS "Ove aoxtevetre Kaicapa Aevxiov, éav pn

MpOTEpov ewe aToKTElvNnTE THY TOV a’TOKPaTOpa Texovaav. éxelyn pev ovv TolavTn yevomervn duéxrewe xal Stéswoe Tov aderdov.
XXI. "Hy 8€ cai ta TOAAG ‘Pwpaiows~e7raxOns
n TOV TPLOV.apKXn Kal TO reiaTov o "AvT@Vvios THS aitias elye, mpeaBuTepos pev wv Kaicapos, Aemridou 66 ea ets 6€ Tov Biov éxeivoy
av0is tov nduTa0hH Kal akoNacTOV, @> TpeTOV AVEXALTLTE TOV TpaypaTov, éxKEeXupEvoS. Tpoc-qv 8€ TH Kown xaxodokia to Sia TH oixiay od puKpov picos, jv @xet, Tlopaniov rod Meyddou ryevouevny, avdpos ovx Hrtov eri cwdhpoctvyn Kat
T@ TeTaypéevws cal Snuotixas Ssartacba. Gav-
~

’ should also cement the friendship by a marriage, and should take to wife Clodia, a daighter of Antony’s wife Fulvia. After this also had been agreed upon, three hundred men were proscribed and put to death by them; moreover, after Cicero had been butchered, Antony ordered his head to be cut off, and that right hand with which Cicero had written the speeches against him.! When they were brought to him, he gazed upon them exultantly, laughing aloud for joy many times; then, when he was sated, he ordered them to be placed on the rostra in the forum, just as though he were putting insult upon the dead, and not rather making a display of his own insolence in good fortune and abuse of power. His uncle, Lucius Caesar, being sought for and pursued, took refuge with his sister. She, when the execu- tioners were at hand and trying to force their way into her chamber, stood in the doorway, spread out her arms, and cried repeatedly: “Ye shall not slay Lucius Caesar unless ye first slay me, the mother of your imperator.”” By such behaviour, then, she got her brother out of the way and saved his life.

XXI. Now, for the most part, the government of the triumvirate was odious to the Romans; and Antony bore most of the blame, since he was older than Caesar, more powerful than Lepidus, and threw himself once more into his old life of pleasure and dissipation as soon as he had shaken off some of his troubles. And to his general ill-repute there was added the great hatred caused by the house in which he dwelt. It had been that of Pompey the Great, a man no less admired for sobriety and for the orderly and democratic disposition of his life than because of 1 Cf. the Cicero, xlviii. 4.

pac bevros a] bia TOUS. T pets O pid Bous. AX Oovro yap opa@yres auTHY Ta Toh KexNeto méevny ev Wryewooe wal oTpatnyois Kal tpéo Seow, adov-pévols T pos bBpiv atro TOV Jupav, peathy Oe pipov Kal Javpatorot@v Kal KoAdKwv Kpattra-AovTor, els ods Ta Thetora KaTaynnis KeTo TOY

Xpnwarav TO Bravorare Kal adeTOTAT ED TpoT@ TopuSopeveny. ov yap povov ET@AOUY ovaias To povevopevr, emit uKopavroovtes oixelous Kat yuvaixas aura, ovodé TEA@Y TAY Exivnoav yévos, a\Aa Kal mapa ais ‘Eottace mud opevor map-Oévots TapaxataOyxas Tivas Keio Oar Kal Eéveov Kal TOMT@Y éhaBov érreNOovtes. ws dé ovdey 7 iv
ixavov "AvTovig, Kaicap ngiwoe veipac Gar Ta Xpnwara pos auToOv. évelwavTo Kal Tov
TTparov, él Bpodrov kat Kdootoy es Maxe-Soviay Alicia aphotepot, Aerido dé THv “Pounv émeTpeyap
XXIT. ‘Os pévror Sta Bavres ippavro Tohépou Kal Tapeatpatonédevaay Tois TrodXepiors, AvtTovi-ov pep ayTut eT aypéevov Kacciy, Bpovr@ dé Kai-Tapos, ovbeév epryov épavn peya TOU Kaioapos, GNX "AVT@VLOS my O viKay TaVvTa Kal xaTop0an.
TH pév ¥¢ mpoTépa payy Kaicap v7r0 Bpotrou
Kara, KpaToS arrndels atéBare TO oTparorredop, Kal juke pov epOn TOUS SudKovTas vmexpuyav" @S dé auros év Tots Uropyypace Y éypage, TOV pidov tuvos dvap idovtos aveywpnoe 7 po THS paxns.
‘AVT@VLOS 5é Kdoouoy évienoe Kaitou yeypadacw EvLoe p21) maparyevéaOac TH payn Tov "AVTWVLOD, aNAa Tpoayevér Oat peta THD paxnv dn dt0-182 his three triumphs. Men were distressed, therefore, to see the house closed for the most part against commanders, magistrates, and ambassadors, who were thrust with insolence from its doors, and filled instead with mimes, jugglers,.and drunken flatterers, on whom were squandered the greater part of the moneys got in the most violent and cruel manner.

For the triumvirate not only sold the properties of those whom they slew, bringing false charges against their wives and kindred, while they set on foot every kind of taxation, but learning that there were deposits with the Vestal Virgins made by both strangers and citizens, they went and took them.

And since nothing was sufficient for Antony, Caesar demanded to share the moneys with him. They shared the army also, and both led their forces into Macedonia against Brutus and Cassius, entrusting Rome to Lepidus.

XXII. However, after they had crossed the sea, taken up war, and encamped near the enemy, Antony being opposed to Cassius, and Caesar to Brutus, ‘no great achievements were performed by Caesar, but it was Antony who was everywhere victorious and successful. In the first battle, at least, Caesar was overwhelmingly defeated by Brutus, lost his camp, and narrowly escaped his pursuers by secret flight; although he himself says in his Memoirs that he withdrew before the battle in consequence of a friend’s dream. But Antony conquered Cassius ; although some write that Antony was not present in the battle, but came up after the battle when his

tu

KOUCL. Kdootov dé TlivSapos TOD TLoTOV TUS GTreE-AevOEpwov avtob Seopévou Kal KedevovTos éopafev" ov yap éyvw VEVLKNKOTO, Bpodrov. OMryeoY 5é Hyepav Stayevopéveov maw eMaxetavto Kat Bpodtos pev nrrGels éauTov aveinev, “AvT@vtos dé THS viKns nveyKarto tn S0& TO TreEtoTOV, ATE
5 Kal vooovvtos Tov Kaicapos. ema Tas dé T@
Bpovrov vexp@ purxpa pev aveidicev virép Tis Daiov TOU adeh pod TENEUTHS (avnpynet yap éKxel vov 0 Bpovtos év Maxedovia Kuxépove TLULWPOY), pycas 5é wadXov ‘Oprijcvov 7 n Bpobrov aitiacbat THS TOD adehpod ohayijs ‘Optactov pev exédevoev
-ervopakar T@ PY LATL, Bpovre dé 7H avTou

owiKioa ToNNGY XPnparov afiav ovoav ém éppipe, Kal TOV amedevd epwv TUL TOV EavTOU 7 poo-étake THs tapas emipednO hvac. TOUTOV votepov yous ov ouyKaTaKavaayTa, THY howtxioa

T@ vEexpO Kal TOAAa THS eis THY Tadny Samdvns Upnpnuevov GTEKTELVED.

XXIII. ’Ex TOUTOU Kaioap pev eis ‘Popny exopifero, Sona ou meptécer Bar TONY Xpovov ex Tis dppwatias, "Avtwuos bé Tas ™ pos &w wacas érTrapxXias apyuporoyiowv | b1éBawvev eis THY ‘EX-

Adba, TONANY oTpatiay ayov: Umer ynpevot yap éxdot@ otpatiatyn Spaypyas TEVTAKLTX ALAS édéovTo cuvroverépov Xpnwatia pov Kal dag poXo-ylas. Tots pev ovy “EAAgow OUK ATOTTOS ovee popTeKos guvnvex On TO ye Tp@TOV, GNAA Kal TO mailov avrod mpos axpodoets Prrohoyeov Kal Beas dyavev wal MUnoeEts étpere, Kal mept Tas Kpioess Hv emrvetkns, Kal PirerArAnv axkovwv Eyaspev, Ete dé
184

men were already in pursuit. Cassius, at his own request and command, was killed by Pindar, one ot his trusty freedmen; for Cassius was not aware that Brutus was victorious. After a few days had inter- vened, a second battle was fought, and Brutus, being defeated, slew himself; but Antony won the greater credit for the victory, since, indeed, Caesar was sick. And as he stood beside the dead body of Brutus, Antony chided him a little for the death of his brother Caius, whom Brutus had executed in Mace- donia to avenge Cicero, and declaring that Hortensius was more to blame than Brutus for his brother's " murder, he ordered Hortensius to be slaughtered on his brother’s tomb; but over Brutus he cast his own purple cloak, which was of great value, and ordered one of his own freedmen to see to the burial of the body. And learning afterwards that this fellow had not burned the purple cloak with the body of Brutus, and had purloined much of what had been devoted to the burial, he put him to death.

XXIII. After this, Caesar repaired to Rome, since it was thought that he would not live long in consequence of his illness; but Antony, that he might levy money in all the eastern provinces, made his way into Greece with a large army ; for since the - triumvirate had promised every one of their soldiers five hundred drachmas, they required a more vigorous policy in raising money and collecting tributes. Toward the Greeks, then, Antony conducted himself without rudeness or offence, at least in the beginning, nay, he indulged his fondness for amusement by listening to literary discussions and by witnessing games and religious rites. In his judicial decisions also he was reasonable, and delighted to be called a

185

BaAXov dirabrvaros mpocayopevopevos, Kal TH

3 TOAet TAELaTAS Swpeds Ebwxe. Bovdropéver SE Tt cat Meyapéwv xadov avtetidei~EacOar tais ’AOnvats Kal to BovAevTyptoy ideiy avtov aktwodvTov avaBas xalt Qeacdpevos, ws émuvOavovto ti bo-coin, “ Mixpov pév,” &pn, “campo é.” Kal Tov tod IIvO@iov vewv xatepétpnocev ws ovvTedéowv TOUTO yap UTéTYETO TPOS THY TUYKANTOD.

XXIV. ’Emel 6€ Aetxiov Knvowpivov émi tis “EAXados Katadura@v eis "Aciav &éB8n Kal tov éxei tAOUT@Y FAbato, Kal Bactreis emi Bvpas édoitwy Kai Baciiéwv yuvaixes apiAropevat dbo-peais ampos aAAnAas Kal KaddrAXcoLY éedO¢ipovToO
mpos autov, ev ‘Papn b€ Kaicapos ordcect Kal TONELOLS ATTOTPUYOLEVOU TOAATY AUTOS AywV oXO-
Any Kal elonvnv avexvkAEiTo Tos abecww Eis TOV
2 cuvnOn Biov, ’Avaknvopes S¢ xeBOap@bot cai Bod-Got yopatrar Kai Mntpddwpos tis opynotns Kal TolovTos addos ‘Aciavav dxpoauatav Oiacos, uTepBadrAopévwv Napuupia kal Bwporoyig Tas amo THs Itadias Kjpas, eiceppin Kal Si@xer THY ad-
Anv, ovdév Hv avextov, eis TadTa popoupévon
3 amdvreav. yap Acia maca, cabdrep 7) Xopo- 926 KAELOsS Exeivn TroALs, OMov pev OvpiapaTorv Eyeper,

omov O€ TaLdvaV TE Kal OTEVAYLATODV.

> a WIN > , b “ a \ > eis youv "Edecoy eiatovtos avTod yuvaixes pev eis f Ld a Baxyas, avdpes 5€ nat twaides eis Zatipous Kat

186

ANTONY

Philhellene, and still more to be addressed as Phil-athenian, and he gave the city very many gifts. But when the Megarians wished to show him something fine to rival Athens, and thought that he ought to see their senate-house, he went up and took a view of it; and when they asked him what he thought of it, “It is small,” he said, “but rotten.” He also had measurements taken of the temple of Pythian Apollo, with the purpose of completing it; indeed,
he promised as much to the senate.
XXIV. But presently he left Lucius Censorinus in charge of Greece, and crossing over into Asia! laid hands on the wealth that was there. Kings would come often to his doors, and wives of kings, vying with one another in their gifts and their beauty, would yield up their honour for his pleasure; and while at Rome Caesar was wearing himself out in civil strifes and wars, Antony himself was enjoying abundant peace and leisure, and was swept back by his passions into his wonted mode of life. Lute-players like Anaxenor, flute-players like Xanthus, one Metrodorus, a dancer, and such other rabble of Asiatic performers, who surpassed in impudence and effrontery the pests from Italy, poured like a flood into his quarters and held sway there. It was past all endurance that everything was devoted to these extravagances. For all Asia, like the famous city of Sophocles,? " was filled alike with incense-offerings, Alike with paeans, too, and voice of heavy groans."

At any rate, when Antony made his entry into Ephesus, women arrayed like Bacchus, and men and 1 In 41 B.c. * Thebes, in the Oedipus Rez, 4.
187

Ilavas jyobvto Ssuecxevacpévor, Kitrov bé Kal Oup-pee , \ , 9 A e
cov Kat adNtnpiwy Kal cupiyyov Kal adrov 7
, 4 , / 9_N 9 ,
Tors nv mea, Atovvcov avTov avakaXoupevov xapidoTny kal petrixytov. tv yap auéret ToLovTOS éviows, Tots S€é moAXols wpnoTHS Kal ayptwvios.
adnpetro yap evyeveis avOpwTrous Ta dvTa pacTiyiats kal xoraks yapilouevos. trodAda@v 5é xal
s Covrwv ws TeOvnKOTaV aitnoapmevoi TiVvEes ovoias ExaBov. dvédpos 5€ Madyvntos oixov édwpncato payetpm tept é&v, ws AéyeTat, Seirvov evdonipn-cavtt. Tédos bé, Tais Toreot SevTEepov émuBar-AovTos Popov, éToApNoev 'TBpéas brrép THs Acias Aéywv eltrety ayopaiws pév éxeiva Kal Tpos Tov
'"Avtwviov Chrov ote andas, "Ei Stvacar Sls AaBeiv évos éviavtod dopov, Svvacat cal dis Hyiv moijnoacbas Bépos Kai Sis o1wpay," mpaxTiKas Sé Kai TapaBorws cuvayaywy ote pupsabas elxoct taravrav 7 Acia bébwxe, "tadta," elmev, "et \ > J , N Led , ?
pep ovK elAnhas, atraires Tapa tov AaRovTwv: ei

5é AaBwv ovn eyes, aToAw@Aapev. éTpéraTo
, a \. 9 , ? / - A \ \
TouT@ dewwas Tov Avtwviov’ nYyvoEl yap TA TOAAG TOV yiyvounevav, ovy ovTw padbupos wy, ws OL
f a
GNNOTHTA Tle TEVWY TOLS TEpl AUTOV.
3 A @ , lal wv \ ” A Eviv yap amdorns Te Oe Kai Bpadeia pev
aic@notws, aicbavopévm S€ THY dpapTavopéver ioxupa petavoia Kal mpos avtovs éEoporoynots \ 9 , Tous ayvapovnbévtas, péyeOos S€ Kal qepl ras

boys like Satyrs and Pans, led the way before him, and the city was full of ivy and thyrsus-wands and harps and pipes and flutes, the people hailing him as Dionysus Giver of Joy and Beneficent. For he was such, undoubtedly, to some; but to the greater part he was Dionysus Carnivorous and Savage. For he took their property from well-born men and bestowed it on flatterers and scoundrels. From many, too, who were actually alive, mén got their property by asking him for it on the plea that the owners were dead. The house of a man of Magnesia he gave to a cook, who, as we are told, had won reputation by a single supper. But finally, when he was imposing a second contribution on the cities, Hybreas, speaking in behalf of Asia, plucked up courage to say this: “Tf thou canst take a contribution twice in one year, thou hast power also to make summer for us twice, and harvest-time twice.” These words were rhe- - torical, it is true, and not unpleasant for the high spirit of Antony ; but the speaker added in plain and bold words that Asia had given him two hundred thousand talents; “If,” said he, “thou hast not received this money, demand it from those who took it; but if thou didst receive it, and hast it not, we are undone.” This speech made a powerful im- pression upon Antony ; for he was ignorant of most that was going on, not so much because he was of an easy disposition, as because he was simple enough to trust those about him.

For there was simplicity in his nature, and slow- ness of perception, though when he did perceive his errors he showed keen repentance, and made full acknowledgement to the very men who had been unfairly dealt with, and there was largeness both in bd \ \ N \ , a , \ aporBas Kai Trept Tas Tiwpias. padroV ye HY

éSoxer yaptlopuevos rorabwv trepBarreuw TO pé-Tplov. 7 O€ TEpt Tas Tablas Kal Tas émLoKMWets LA > ec A ‘ , 3 A dBpis év aitH To ddppaxov elyev. dvticxa yar
yap é&fv Kal avOvBpicat, ral yeropevos ovx 7T-

Tov yerov éxatpe. Kal todTo SveXupnvato Ta TOANG TOY TpayuaTwVv. Tous yap év To traileww mappnatatouevous ovx dv oinbels omovdatovtas
, 9 \ e , 4 / e \ fa) > ,
KONAKEVELY AUTOV NALTKETO Padiws LITO THY é7rai-VOV, Ayvowy OTL THY TappNnoiay Ties WS UTTOTTUis4 “ f 4 9 /
gov Aovopa TH Kodaxeia TrapamyvivTes apypouv
N , A 4 J, XN
TO TANT MLOY, TH Tapa THY KVALKA OpacUTHTL Kal
Nada Svaunyavopevor THY ert TOY TpaypaTov
\ e igeow Kal ovyxatrdleow pn mwpos Yap opu-NovvT@V, GAAA TH hpovely Hrrwpévwv paiver Oar.
XXV. Totovte 8 ody dvti tay hicw ’Avtovie
a Ul
TeXeutaiov Kkaxov 0 Kdeomdtpas épws érriyevo-pevos, Kal TOAAGa Tov ért KpUTTTOMéevMY ev AUTO Kat atpepovvtayv Taba éyeipas al avaBaxyevgas, el TL XpnoTov i) cwTnptoy Suws ayTetyer, 29 7 \ 141Q ey 7 be a npavice Kai tpocdiepOeipev. arjioxetat 5é Tov-Tov TOY TpOTTOV. aTmTo“Evos Tod IlapOLKod Tronépov émepryre pos auTny, KeNevov eis Kedrcxiav aTravTnaat Noyov bdéEovcay wv éevexareito Tots mept Kdacowov Sobtvat woAda Kal cupBaréobae
\ ;
mpbos Tov moXeuov. o S€ Tweudbels AéAXLos, OS
\ " a ede THY Ow Kal Katéuabe thy év Tois AOyoLS
‘
Sewornta Kai travovpyiav, evOds aicOopuevos Ste

his restitution to the wronged and in his punishment of the wrong-doers. Yet he was thought to exceed due bounds more in conferring favours than in in- flicting punishments. And his wantonness in mirth and jest carried its own remedy with ih For a man might pay back his jests and insolénce, and he delighted in being laughed at no less than in laughing at others, And this vitiated most of his undertakings. For he could not believe that those who used _ bold speech in jest could flatter him in earnest, and so was easily captivated by their praises, not knowing that some men would mingle bold speech, like a piquant sauce, with flattery, and thus would take away from flattery its cloying character. Such men would use their bold babbling over the cups to make their submissive yielding in matters of business seem to be the way, not of those who associate with a man merely to please him, but of those who are vanquished by superior wisdom.

XXV. Such, then, was the nature of Antony, where now as a crowning evil his love for Cleopatra supervened, roused and drove to frenzy many - of the passions that were still hidden and quiescent in him, and dissipated and destroyed whatever good and saving qualities still offered resistance. And he was taken captive in this manner. As he was getting ready for the Parthian war, he sent to Cleopatra, ordering her to meet him in Cilicia in order to make answer to the charges made against her of raising and giving to Cassius much money for the war. But Dellius, Antony's messenger, when he saw how Cleopatra looked, and noticed her subtlety and cleverness in conversation, at once
1QI

a KO pev ovde peddrjoet Tt Trovei yuvaina Tovau-THY "AvTavios, é Extat Oé peyiorn Tap auT@, Tpé-METAL TPOS TO Geparrevewv Kat TpoTpeTrEr a THY Aiyurtiav, TOUTO 57) To Opnpixor, érXOeiv eis Kidcxiav ed éevtivacay & aitny Kal wn poBetcOa tov "Avrw@vor, 76va Tov nYyEHOvOV dvTa Kal pur-avOpwnoratov. n O€ Kal Acrrio mevabeioa, Kal TOUS T pos Kaicapa Kal Tvaiov Tov Tloprniov
jwaida wpoTepov aura ryevopevors ag’ apas oup-Bodators TeKUaLpoMeVn, pdov 7 HpAmbev vmafea bat
TOV “AvT@voy. éxeivou pev yap aur ay ere Kopny
Kal Tpary WaT ov diretpov éyvocay, T pos: 5é Tovrov
EwedAe poitncey év o padiora Karpov yuvaiKes Gpav TE Naympordrny éxoucr kat TO dpoveiv
axudtovat. 610 TOAAG peey cwvEerKevacaro da@pa
Kal Xpnwara Kal Koopov olov eixos HV a0 mpary-(pata peyddov Kal Bacireias evdaipovos Kopi-Ceuv, Tas 6€ TAeloTAS ev éavtH Kal Tots Tept auTny paryyavevpact Kal hirrpots érribas Oenevn TAperyeveTo.
XXVI. Tova &é Kal Tap avrov Kat Tapa
TOV pidov Sexopevn ypdppara KahovvTo, obTw KaTeppovnce kal KaTeyéhace Tov avdpos DOTE whet ava TOV Kudvov ToT aWov év mopO pet \ pu-TOTTpPULYe, TOV ev totioy adoupyav exTETTETACpévev, TAS dé eipecias a dpyupais KOTEALS avapepo- —

peévns T pos avrov dpa ovpuyes Kat «rBdpats ouv-Tppoc pevor. autn oé KATEKELTO pev v0 oxide pvootacT@ KeKOo UNMevy ypapiras Gaomep Agpodirn, maides dé tois ypadixois “Epwouy el-Kacpeévot map éxatepov Ext ates EppimiCov. opoiws
a

192

9

7

ANTONY

perceived that Antony would not so much as think of doing such a woman any harm, but that she would have the greatest influence with him. He therefore resorted to flattery and tried to induce the Egyptian to go to Cilicia “ decked out in fine array ’’} (as Homer would say), and not to be afraid | of Antony, who was the most agreeable and humane of commanders. She was persuaded by Dellius, and judging by the proofs which she had had before this of the effect of her beauty upon Caius Caesar and Gnaeus the son of Pompey, she had hopes that she would more easily bring Antony to her feet. - For Caesar and Pompey had known her when she was still a girl and inexperienced in affairs, but she was going to visit Antony at the very time when women have most brilliant beauty and are at the acme of intellectual power. Therefore she provided herself with many gifts, much money, and such ornaments as her high position and prosperous kingdom made it natural for her to take; but she went putting her greatest confidence in herself, and in the charms and sorceries of her own person. |

XXVI. Though she received many letters of summons both from Antony himself and from his friends, she so despised and laughed the man to scorn as to sail up the river Cydnus in a barge with gilded poop, its sails spread purple, its rowers urging it on with silver oars to the sound of the flute blended with pipes and lutes. She herself reclined beneath a canopy spangled with gold, adorned like Venus in a painting, while boys like Loves in paintings stood on either side and fanned her. Likewise also the 1 Iliad, xiv. 162, of Hera, decking herself for a meeting with Zeus.

5é cal Oepatravides ai Kaddotevovca Nypnidwv éyovca kal Xapitwv crodras, ai pev pos oiakiw, at 5€ mpos Kado Foav. odpal bé Oavyactal Tas 6yOas amo Ovplauadtwy moAXA@V KaTeEiyov.
3 tov dé dvOperwy ot pév evOds ard Tov TroTapLod

Tapwydaptouy éExatépwlev, ot 5é ard THS TodEWS
xatéBawov émt thv Oéav. éxyeopevov Sé tov Kata THY uyopay dyAoy TédOS aUTOS Oo AvT@VLOS
él Bnyatos KabeComevos amredeihOn povos. Kat Tis Aoyos éywpe: dua wavtav was 7» ‘Adpodity kwpato. wapa tov Avucov én’ aya0@ Tis
*"Acias.
"ErrepwWe pev ody KaXa@v adtiy él 7o Setmrvov:
n S€ padrrXov éxeivoy HnEiov ampos éauTny Hee.
4 evOus ovv tivda BovArAopmevos evKoNlayv émideixvu-cat xal diroppoovvny virjxouce kal HAGEV. évtvxov 5é mapacKeun Aoyou KpeitTOVL WaMaTA TOY gotav To TAOS éEeTAGyH. Tocaita yap Aé-yetat xabiecOat Kai dvagaiverBar Tavtaydbev dpa, Kat toravtats mpos GAAnNa KAlcect Kal Gécect Staxexoopnpéva Kal cuvtetaypeva TraL-ciwy Kal he as nd TPOT@, BETE TOV ev OdLyOLS akiobedtav nal Kkarav éxeivny yevéer Oar THY Ove.
XXVII. TH & botepaia radu avOeotiav av-
Thy éptroTinOn yey vTEepBarécOat THY NawT po-TnTa Kal Thy eupérerav, ado Sé AetTropevos, Kat Kparovpevos év avTois exeivots, TP@TOS ETKWmTTEv els AVXpov Kal aypoiKiay Ta Trap avTe.
qwoduv 6€ 4 Kreorrdtpa cat tois ox@ppact ToD
"Avtwviov Tov otpatiaTny évopdaa xal Bavavaop, EYpHTO Kal TOUT@ TpPOS aUTOV avEmevWs HON Kal
2 xatateBappynKotws. Kal yap jv, wos Aé€youawy, 194

ANTONY

fairest of her serving-maidens, attired like Nereids and Graces, were stationed, some at the rudder-sweeps, and . others at the reefing-ropes. Wondrous odours from countless incense-offerings diffused themselves along the river-banks.. Of the inhabitants, some accom- panied her on either bank of the river from its very mouth, while others went down from the city to be- hold the sight. The throng in the market-place gradually streamed away, until at last Antony him- self, seated on his tribunal, was left alone. And a rumour spread on every hand that Venus was come to revel with Bacchus for the good of Asia.

Antony sent, therefore, and invited her to supper ; but she thought it meet that he should rather come to her. At once, then, wishing to display his com- placency and friendly feelings, Antony obeyed and went. He found there a preparation that beggared description, but was most amazed at the multitude of lights. For, as we are told, so many of these were let down and displayed on all sides at once, and they were arranged and ordered with so many inclinations and adjustments to each other in the form of rect- angles and circles, that few sights were so beautiful or so worthy to be seen as this.

XXVII. On the following day Antony feasted her in his turn, and was ambitious to surpass her splendour and elegance, but in both regards he was left behind, and vanquished in these very points, and was first to rail at the meagreness and rusticity of his own arrange- ments, Cleopatra observed in the jests of Antony much of the soldier and the common man, and adopted this manner also towards him, without re- straint now, and boldly. For her beauty, as we are

> \ \ 0d e_ AN \ / > A > 4 \ avTo pev Kal' avTo TO KadXOS auTns ov Tavu SvoTrapaBrntov, ovee oloy exTrrHEae TOUS idovras, apny & elev y ovvd.aitnats aPvKTOY, Fj TE Hopi peTa THS ev T@ diareyea Gas midavorntos Kat Tob mepiOeovTos & dua jaws mepl THY outriav WOous ave-pepe TL KEVT POV. noovn O€ Kal POeyyoperns € emhy
TO 7X@" kal Thy yrOrray, Oaomep Spyavov TT ToAUXopoor, EVTTETOS Tpémovaa Kal? jv Bovdorro
dudex ov Ohiyots Tavrdmact be EpUNvEDS | éve-TUYyXaveE BapBapas, Tots bé TwrELsTOLS auTH ou
auras amedioov Tas amoxpicets, olov Aion, Tpwyrodurass, 'EBpaiots, "Apaypt, Lvpors, M»n-Sats, TapOvaioss. ToAN@V Oé Aeyerau kal GAXNov éxpabeiy yAwrras, TOY po auTis Baciréwv ovdeé THY Aiyumtiav avac YoMéeveov mapanraBeiv Sudrextov, éviwy 5&€ Kal To paxedovilery éxd-TOVTODY.
XXVIII. Otro & ovv tov 'AvT@vioy hptracev
OTE, TorEpovans pep év 'Poeun Kaicape Povr-Bias THS yuvatkos vmrép T@V éxeivou Tpayuara, aiwpoupevns dé TapOcxhs aTpartas mepl Tv Meao-ToTapiay, Hs AaBtnvov oi Bacthéws oTparyyor TapOucov dvaryopevcavTes avuToKpatopa uplas 9

émtBatevoew éweAAor, oixer as pepopmevov un avrijs els 'AnreEdvdpesay, € exe' O€ perpakiov oXohny aryovTos SiatpiBais Kal maouais Xpwmevov ava-MaKe cal wadnouTrabeiv TO TOAUTENETTATOD, as 'Avripav eltrev, dvddwpa, TOY Kpovoy. Hy yap
TLS avrois guvodos apiunto Blov Neyouevn Kat
Kal nwépav elo TiOV GNA AOUS, drtarov Tlva ToLoupevol TMV avadicKopevwY apeTpiav. din-196

9)

od

8

ANTONY

told, was in itself not altogether incomparable, nor such as to strike those who saw her; but converse with her had an irresistible charm, and her presence, combined with the persuasiveness of her discourse and the character which was somehow diffused about her behaviour towards others, had something stimu- lating about it. There was sweetness also in the tones of her voice ; and her tongue, like an instrument of many strings, she could readily turn to what- ever language she pleased, so that in her interviews with Barbarians she very seldom had need of an interpreter, but made her replies to most of them: herself and unassisted, whether they were Ethiopians, Troglodytes, Hebrews, Arabians, Syrians, Medes or Parthians. Nay, it is said that she knew the speech of many other peoples also, although the kings of Egypt before her had not even made an effort to learn the native language, and some actually gave up their Macedonian dialect.

XXVIII. Accordingly, she made such booty of Antony that, while Fulvia his wife was carrying on war at Rome with Caesar in defence of her husband’s interests, and while a Parthian army was hovering about Mesopotamia (over this country the generals of the king had appointed Labienus Parthian com- mander-in-chief, and were about to invade Syria), he suffered her to hurry him off to Alexandria. There, indulging in the sports and diversions of a young man of leisure, he squandered and spent upon plea- sures that which Antiphon calls the most costly out- lay, namely, time. For they had an association called The Inimitable Livers, and every day they feasted one another, making their expenditures of incredible profusion. At any rate, Philotas, the 197

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yetto you nuav T@ wanT® Aapmpia Pirwtas o
> \ > \ 9 2 b | 4
Apiocers ear poy eluate pev io Anrefavdpeig
Tore, pavOdver thy TéexYnY, yevomevos SE TUE TOV Bacittxay ootro@y cuvnOns avatretcOjvat véos dy um avtod tHv moAdvTédeay Kal THY TTrapaaxeuny Tov Seitvou Oedcacbat. trapecayels odv
els TOUTTAVELOY, WS Ta TE AXA TapTOAXA éEWpa Kal ads aypious om@Twpévous oKT@, Oavpacat TO TAHVos Tav SetrvotvTwV. Tov 5é dYroTroLoy yEAG‘gat Kal eitreiv Ste TroANOL pev OvK eioly ot Set-mvoovtes, ANXA Tepl Sadexa: Sei & anny Eyer TOY TapaTiOepnévwy ExacTov, iy axapés Wpas pa-

paive. xal yap avtixa yévot av >Avtwvov
Seimrvou SenOjvar nai peta puxpov, av O€ ovTw
TUX], Tapayayeiv aitncavta ToTnpLoy 7} Noyou Twos éumecovtos. SOev ovy Ev, adrAA TOAAAM, davai, Seimva cuvrétaxtar Succtoyaatos yap o Katpos. TavtTa ovv o Pirwras édeye, cal ypovov mpoiovros év tois Oepamrevovat yevécOat Tov Tpe-aoBvratov tav Avrwviou trraidwv, dv éx PovrABias elye, kal cuvdeirveiy Tap avT@ pEeTa TOV GA\XNWY éraipwy émetnas, omdte yy SevTvoin peta Tov TaTpOS. tatpoyv ovv tote Opacuvopevoy Kat Tmpa-yeata TOAAa Trapéyovta Setrvodew auTois éreaTopica, TolovT® codicpate “T@ Tws TupeTtovtt Sotéov vuxpov: mas dé 0 TupéTTMY TAS TUpPETTEL’ TrAVYTL Apa TupeTTovrTe Sotéov vuypov.” mAnyévtos 5é Tov avOpwrov Kal otwrnoavTos, 198
ANTONY

physician of Amphissa, used to tell my grandfather, Lamprias, that he was in Alexandria at this time, studying his profession, and that having got well acquainted with one of the royal cooks, he was easily persuaded by him (young man that he was) to take a view of the extravagant preparations for a royal supper. Accordingly, he was introduced into the kitchen, and when he saw all the other provisions in great abundance, and eight wild boars a-roasting, he expressed his amazement at what must be the number of the guests. But the cook burst out laugh- ing and said: “ The guests are not many, only about twelve ; but everything that is set before them must be at perfection, and this an instant of time reduces. For it might happen that Antony would ask for supper immediately, and after a little while, perhaps, would postpone it and call for a cup of wine, or en- gage in conversation with some one. Wherefore,’ he said, “not one, but many suppers are arranged ; for the precise time is hard to hit.” This tale, then, Philotas used to tell; and he said also that as time went on he became one of the medical attendants of Antony’s oldest son, whom he had of Fulvia, and that he usually supped with him at his house in com- pany with the rest of his comrades, when the young man did not sup with his father. Accordingly, on one occasion, as a physician was making too bold and giving much annoyance to them as they supped, Philotas stopped his mouth with some such sophism as this: “To the patient who is somewhat feverish cold water must be given; but everyone who has a fever is somewhat feverish; therefore to everyone who has a fever cold water should be given.” The fellow was confounded and put to silence, whereat

199

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

noOevTa tov Ttatda yeAdoat Kal etrretv, “ Tatra,
,
® Diora, yapifopat mavta aot,” detEavra Trod-NOV TLVaY Kal peyddov ExTOLATwY pEcTHY TPA-

9 fe) \ AS \ , >
metav. avtTov € thy pev wpoOumiay atrodcE~a+ ce) 9
pévou, Troppw & ovtTos Tov vopuivey éEovaiay elvat UA “A le
TaLol THALKOUT® SwpEeic Oat TOTadTA, META [LKPOV
ayrdpevov tiva Tov Traidwy év ayyeio Ta éexTo-pata mpocdpépev Kal onunvacbar KerXeverv. adovou 6€ avTov Kal SedotxoTos AaBeww, ‘Ti gtoupévouv O€ auTov Kai dSedotxotos AaBPei, 5
° , ” , \ ” «2? a. 9°
® wovnpe, pavat tov avOpwrrov, “ oxveis ; ovK 9 e e \ > 4 a > et “ oldas ws 0 btd0vs ‘Avtwviov trais éaotiv, @ Toaad-Ta Tdpeott yYpvoa yYapicacGar; éyol pévTor
\ “
mevOopnevos mravtTa Sudpenpar mpos apyupicy Hpiv:
e wn
laws yap ay cal moOnceev o Tatnp gia TOV Tadaav dvta Kal orroviatopevwy Kata THY TEX-99 A wn e
pny Epywv. TavTA pEev OdY Huty EXeyev oO TATTOS
¢ 2 a \ , :
éxaotote OunyetoOar tov Pirwrav.
XXIX. “H 6¢ KAeorratpa thy Kxodaxeiay ovy;
e / A fel .
@otrep o IlAdtwy pyoi, teTpayy, moddayyn be SueAodaa, Kal orovdns amtopéev@ cat mabias aei
A
Twa Kawny noovnv émupépovoa Kal ydpwv, Sdte-
\
qmaaywye. Tov "AvT@vLoy OUTE VUKTOS OUTE T)ME-pas aveioca. Kal yap avvexvBeve cai ouvérive 4 \ , 9 i b] a
Kal ouveOrpeve Kal yupvalopevov év Srrros Oea-
To, Kal vuKTwp TpoctcTapév@ Ouvpats Kal Oupicr
a \ as
OnmoTtav Kal oxwmtovtt Tovs évdov auveTrAAVaTO
, \ ‘
kal cuvndrve Oeparratvidiov otoAny ANauRavovaa.
Kal yap éxetvos oUTws éretpato oKxevadley EauTor.
4 > N a lA ‘ \ n
S0ev adel ckoppatwv, trodddKis b€ Kal TAnyOV 200

Antony’s son was delighted and said with a laugh: « All this 1 bestow upon thee, Philotas,” pointing to a table covered with a great many large beakers. Philotas acknowleded his good intentions, but was far from supposing that a boy so young had the power to give away so much. After a little while, however, one of the slaves brought the beakers to him in a sack, and bade him put his seal upon it. And when Philotas protested and was afraid to take them, “You miserable man,” said the fellow, “ why hesi- tate? Don’t you know that the giver is the son of Antony, and that he has the right to bestow so many golden vessels? However, take my advice and ex- change them all with us for money ; since perchance the boy’s father might miss some of the vessels, which are of ancient workmanship and highly valued for their art.”” Such details, then, my grandfather used to tell me, Philotas would recount at every opportunity. XXIX. But Cleopatra, distributing her flattery, not into the four forms of which Plato speaks,! but into many, and ever contributing some fresh delight and charm to Antony’s hours of seriousness or mirth, kept him in constant tutelage, and released him neither night nor day. She played at dice with him, drank with him, hunted with him, and watched him as he exercised himself in arms; and when by night he would station himself at the doors or windows of the common folk and scoff at those within, she would go with him on his round of mad follies, wearing the garb of a serving maiden, For Antony also would try to array himself like a servant. Therefore he always reaped a harvest of abuse, and often of blows, before coming back

1 Gorgias, p. 464.

amohavaas éeravnpyeto: Tois 5é mAEtaToLs HY Se UTovolas. ov pny dAXA Tpocéyalpoy avTOD TH Bwporoyxia cal ouvéralov ovx appvOpws ovde dpovows Ot AreEavdpeis, ayatravres Kal NéyorTes as TO TpayiK@ ™pos TOUS ‘Papaious NphtTas Tt poc~ OTTO, 7 5é dope ™pos abrous.
Ta pév ovv TOAAA ToaY Un’ avTod Tratlopévar
SinyetaOat trodrvs av en prvapos: erel Sé ddcevwv Tote Kal ducaypav nxXGeTo mapovens TAS Kreomrd-> + AY e a e , Ul

Tpas, éxéXevoe TOUS aALELS brrovnEapévous pupa
T@ ayKiaTpy mepicadam rey ixGis TOV Tm poeadwo-KoTwv, kat dis 7 tpls dvacmacas ovx édAade THY Aiyurtiayv. mpoomotouvpevn S€ Oavpafey tots dirous Sunyeiro, Kai Tapenade, TH VaoTEpaia yevecOai Geatas. éuBavrwv dé ToAXNOY eis Tas adLG-das xal.tovd ’Avtwviov thy opusav xalévtos, éxéXevoe Tiva TOY aUTHAS bTopOdacavta Kal Tpoc-ynfapevoyv TO ayxiotpe@ wepitretpar Llovtiwoy tapixos. ws 5é éxeww Teabels o Avt@vos avetdxe,

/ z > , : 4 rT} 10 ec oA ” yéAWTOS, Olov eLKos, yevouevou, “ Ilapados nuiv,
wv ‘ \ / 9 , A 4
ébn, “ Tov Kddapov, avToKpatop, Tois Papitais kal KavwBirais adedouv") 4 5é on Onpa worets
etal Kat Baciretar Kat HTeLpoL.
XXX. Toradra Anpodvta Kal petpaxtevopevov tov "Avtw@viov ayyeriat Sv0 cataXapBavovour, 7 ‘ 5) xv ¢ , 4 \ 9 \ > A A ‘pev atro ‘Popns, Aevxcov tov aderdov avtod ral PovrABiav thv yuvaixa mpO@tov aAXAnNOLS TTacta-
/ a 9
cavtas, elra Kaicaps troveunoartas, aTroBeBXn-1 arcetow Bekker, after Hiillman : BacsAciow, home; though most people suspected who he was. However, the Alexandrians took delight in his coarse wit, and joined in his amusements in their graceful and cultivated way; they liked him, and said that he used the tragic mask with the Romans, but the comic mask with them.

Now, to recount the greater part of his boyish pranks would be great nonsense. One instance will suffice. He was fishing once, and had bad luck, and was vexed at it because Cleopatra was there to see. He therefore ordered his fishermen to dive down and secretly fasten to his hook some fish that had been previously caught, and pulled up two or three of them. But the Egyptian saw through the trick, and pretending to admire her lover’s skill, told her friends about it, and invited them to be spectators of it on the following day. So great numbers of them got into the fishing boats, and when Antony had let down his line, she ordered one of her own attendants to get the start of him by swimming to his hook and fastening on it a salted Pontic herring. Antony thought he had caught something, and pulled it up, whereupon there was great laughter, as was natural, and Cleopatra said: “Imperator, hand over thy fishing-rod to the fishermen of Pharos and Canopus; thy sport is the hunting of cities, realms, and continents.”

XXX. While Antony was indulging in such triles and youthful follies, he was surprised by reports from two quarters: one from Rome, that Lucius his brother and Fulvia his wife had _ first quarrelled with one another, and then had waged war with Octavius Caesar, but had lost their cause 203

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘Kevau Ta Tpaywara Kal pevyetv é& ‘IraXas, érépa dé tavrns ouder emerkerTépa, AaBinvoy emdyovTa Tldp8ous Tv an Ev¢pdrov kal Lupias aype Avdias wal "Iwvias ‘Aciay xata- orpeperbar. pods ody @ormep éEurvicbels Kab amokpaimadnaas adpynce pev TlapOos évi- oracOat Kal péxpe Powixns mponnroe, PovaBias dé ypaupara _Fpniver peora TEWTOVINS e7ré- oTpepev els THY ‘IraAay, & ayov vais Staxoctas. avaraBav dé Kata trovy Tov pirav TOUS Tepevyoras émuvO avero TOD TOE HOU thv Dovr- Biav aitiay yeyovevat, duce pev ovoayv ToAv- mpaypova Kal Opaceiav, éhmrifovcay be THS KyXeotrdtpas arakew tov “Avt@moy et te yévotto Kivnua mept tHv ‘Iradiav. cup Pacver be amo Tuyns Kal | PovrBiav Wéovcay Tos avrov év LuKvave vor TENEUTHO AL’ 610 Kal padrov at T pos Kaicapa Siadrayal _kaupov Eaxov. WS yap Tpooe ute 77 ‘Itadia Kai Kaicap mv avepos exeivp pev ovGev éyearaon, avTos 8 ov evexaretTo Tas aitias TH PovdBia mpoa TptBopevos, OUK ELwY efedeyxeuv oi dirou THY mpopacw, adda buéAvov appor epous a tnpouv THY nyepoviar, Spov TOLOUMEVOL TOV "Lovtoy, Kal Ta pev E@a véporTes Avtavig, Ta & om épua Kaicapt, “Aémidov 8é AtBiny every e@vTes, Dmarevery bé ra€avtes, bre pn Sokevey avtois, dirdovs exatépwy Tapa pépos.
XXXI. Taira exeuv Karas Soxobvra TLTTEWS edeiTo cpodpotépas, 7, iy nh TvyN Tapes Xev. "Ox- Taovia yap mv aderdn Cera vire pév, OVX opo-204

ANTONY

and were in flight from Italy; and another, not a whit more agreeable than this, that Labienus at the head of the Parthians was subduing Asia from the Euphrates and Syria as far as Lydia and Ionia. At last, then, like a man roused from sleep after a deep debauch, he set out to oppose the Par- thians, and advanced as far as Phoenicia;! but on receiving from Fulvia a letter full of lamentations, he turned his course towards Italy, at the head of two hundred ships. On the voyage, however, he picked up his friends who were in flight from Italy, and learned from them that Fulvia had been to blame for the war, being naturally a meddlesome and headstrong woman, and hoping to draw Antony away from Cleopatra in case there should be a dis- turbance in Italy. It happened, too, that Fulvia, who was sailing to meet him, fell sick and died at Sicyon. Therefore there was even more opportunity for a reconciliation with Caesar. For when Antony reached Italy, and Caesar manifestly intended to make no charges against him, and Antony himself was ready to put upon Fulvia the blame for whatever: was charged against himself, the friends of the two men would not permit any examination of the proffered excuse, but reconciled them, and divided up the em- pire, making the Ionian sea a boundary, and assigning the East to Antony, and the West to Caesar; they also permitted Lepidus to have Africa, and arranged that, when they did not wish for the office themselves, the friends of each should have the consulship by turns. XXXI. These arrangements were thought to be fair, but they needed a stronger security, and this security Fortune offered. Octavia was a sister of Caesar, older than he, though not by the same

1 Towards the end of the year. 40 B.c.

pntpia dé Kaicapu: eryeyover yap e& "Ayxaptas, 6 6é tatepov €§ "Arias. éorepye 5° breppuas THY aderdyp, Xpy pa. Javpacrtov, ws AéyeTat, yuvarros yevoperny. arn, Taiov Mapxédnovu TOU YI MAaVTOS - avTny ov mada teOvnKoTOS, eX pever. edoxet b€ Kal Povdfias aTrotxouerns Xnpeverv ‘AvT@vLOS, exetv pev OUK dpvovpevos Kneordrpay, yape dé

oux opohoya, GAn’ étt TO oye Tepi ye TOUTOU 7 ps Tov épwra HS Aiyurtias PaXouevos.
TOUTOV aTavres eLanyoovTo Tov yapor, éxmrifovtes
THY ‘Oxraoviay emi KaNAEL TOTOUT® ceuvornta
Kal voov Exoveay, eis TaUTOY TO “Avtovi Taparyevouerny Kat orepxGeicar, Qs eLKOS TOLaU- THY Yyuvaixa, TaVvTOY T paryuarov avTois TwTnpiav

écecOat Kai cu Kpac Ly. @S ouV édofev apporepots, dvaBavtes Ets ‘Pony emer éNouy Tov Oxraovias ydmov, OUK é@vTOS péeyv vopou 7 po

Séca pnvev avdpos TENET IO AVTOS yapeio Oar, Tis Se cuyKArjrouv Soypate Tov xpovov éxelvols avei-ons.

XXXII. LéFrou Sé Tloparniov Xuxediav pev EXOvTOS, ‘Irahiav 6é sropOoivros, Anetpict dé vaval TodNais, Ov Mnvas 0 TeipaTys Kat Meve-Kparns TPXOV, admXouv tTHv OdNacoay TWETOLNKOTOS,
"Avravio 6é Kexpio Oat Soxobvros prravbpomas (wredéEato yap avTov THY pntépa Th Povr Bia ouverTrecovoav), edoke Kal Tm pos ToUTOY Siadv-Ojvat. Kat ouvt Pov els TavTov KaTa THY év Meonvois axpav Kal To Xo pear, Tlopant fev Tov
oTONOV TapoppLOUYToOS, “Avrovig be Kat Kaicape TOV melov Tapakexpipevor. éret 6¢ cuvéberto Tlopmrniov é exovTa Lapoova Kal Yrerlav cabapay 206

o

930

ANTONY

mother; for shé was the child of Ancharia, but he, by a later marriage, of Atia. Caesar was exceed- ingly fond of his sister,“-who was, as the saying is, a wonder of a woman. Her husband, Caius Mar- cellus, had died a short time before, and she was a widow. Antony, too, now that Fulvia was gone, was held to be a widower, although he did not deny his relations with Cleopatra; he would not admit, however, that she was his wife, and in this ~matter his reason was still battling with his love for the Egyptian. Everybody tried to bring about this marriage. For they hoped that Octavia, who, besides her great beauty, had intelligence and dignity, when united to Antony and beloved by him, as such a woman naturally must be, would restore harmony and be their complete salvation. Accordingly, when both men were agreed, they went up to Rome and cele- brated Octavia’s marriage, although the law did not permit a woman to marry before her husband had been dead ten months. In this case, however, the senate passed a decree remitting the restriction in time.

XXXII. Now, Sextus Pompeius was holding Sicily, was ravaging Italy, and, with his numerous piratical ships under the command of Menas the corsair and Menecrates, had made the sea unsafe for sailors. But he was thought to be kindly disposed towards Antony, since he had given refuge to Antony's mother when she fled from Rome with Fulvia, and so it was decided to make terms with him. The men met at the promontory and mole of Misenum, near which Pompey's fleet lay at anchor and the forces of Antony and Caesar were drawn up. After it had been agreed that Pompey should have 207

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Te AnoTHpiov TapexeLy THY Oddarray kal citov TL TETAYMEVOV amootéAXrew els "Pounv, éedrouv ent deimrvov addnrous. kAnpoupevov dé TP@TOS éoreay avtovs éhaye Toprrios. épopévou bé auTov "Avtwviou, Tow deumynaovaty, - "Evratéa," a beiEas TH otparnyiba vabv ovoav efnpy

' TaTp@os yap olxos abtn Hopmnip AeevrraL." tavTa 5é ets TOV 'AvT@viov overdiSoov éneyen, € émel THY Tloprniov rob TAT POS ryevomeévny oixiay exel- vos elyev. oppioas &é THV vavy err' _ ayKupav Kal didBaciv Twa yepupwaas ard THIS axpas avendp- Bavev avTous mpoOupos. axpalovons dé Ths guvovatas Kal Tov els Kycoratpay ral "Avraviov avOovyTwv TKOULATOY, Mnvas O TeLparns TO Hoparnio mpocehO wv as pa KaTaKovel Exelvous, . Bovneu," dat, 'Tras ayxvpas THIS VEWS UTOTE LO Kal Troinow oe By ZuKedias Kat 2a pdovos, anna Tis Popator KUpLov Hyepovias ; " 0 6€ Tloumrnios axovoas Kal T pos avuT@ yevopievos Bpaxdy 0- vov, "Eder oe, pyatr, « e Mnva, TOUTO €4L0b pr, mpoevréyra Tounoa port 6é Ta TapovTa orép- youe" em vopKety yap ouK euov." ovToS HEV ouv wad avOectiabeis Um audotépwv eis THY LKE- Nay arémevcev.
XX XIII. "AvTe@vtos dé pera Tas Starvoes Ovevtidvoy pev ets "Aciapv mpouTremtre Tapas éumrodany eo opevov TOU Tpoow wpeiy, autos 6é€ Kaicape xapilopevos lepevs are el On Tov Wpo- Tépov Kaicapos: nal Tara OWES Kat PrruKas év Tots TONTLKOIS Kal peylaTous émpartov. ai oe mept Tas Tatdsds GtArXat Tov "AvTw@vioy éXvroUV
208

Sardinia and Sicily, should keep the sea clear of robbers, and should send up to Rome a stipulated amount of grain, they invited one another to supper. Lots were cast, and it was the lot of Pompey to entertain the others first. And when Antony asked him where the supper would be held, “ There,’ said he, pointing to his admiral’s ship with its six banks of oars, “for this is the ancestral house that is left to Pompey.”’ This he said by way of reproach to An- tony, who was now occupying the house which had belonged to the elder Pompey. So he brought his ship to anchor, made a sort of bridge on which to cross to it from the-headland, and gave his guests a hearty welcome on board. When their good fellow- ship was at its height and the jokes about Antony and Cleopatra were in full career, Menas the pirate came up to Pompey and said, so that the others could not hear, “Shall I cut the ship’s cables and make thee master, not of Sicily and Sardinia, but of the whole Roman empire?’’ Pompey, on hearing this, communed with himself a little while, and then said: ‘ Menas, you ought to have done this without speaking to me about it beforehand ; but now let us be satisfied with things as they are ; for perjury is not my way.” Pompey, then, after being feasted in his turn by Antony and Caesar, sailed back to Sicily. XXXIII. After this settlement, Antony sent Ven- tidius on ahead into Asia to oppose the further progress of the Parthians, while he himself, as a favour to Caesar, was appointed to the priesthood of the elder Caesar ;1 everything else also of the most important political nature they transacted together and in a friendly spirit. But their competitive diversions gave

1 That is, he was made Pontifex Maximus.

2 ae Tob Kaicapos ENaTTOv pepopevor. qv yap
TOs avnp ovv auTe PavTLKos an Alyorrou TOV
Tas yevérers eTLTKOTIOVYT OY, Os elTe KAcorarpg xapulouevos elTE Xpwpevos arn Geta Tos Tov
Avt@viov emappnotatero, Aeyov THY TUXND aurov AapTrpoTAaTHY ovaav Kal peyloTny vTo THs Kai.
capos apavpoba Gat, kal cuveBovreve TOppwoTarw Tov veavioxou Trotely éautov. “‘O yap aos," épn, “Saipov TOV TOUTOU poBetrar Kal yaupos av Kal iypndos éTay i cal? €éauTov, um’ éxelvov yiveTat TATELVOTEPOS eyyicavtos Kal ayevvéote-3 pos.” Kal pévroi Ta yevopeva TO Aiyurrtip

paptupelv edoxet. Aéyerau yap bre _KANpoUpevary peta tabias ép’ Tw TUX OLED éxda rote Kal xuBevovrov éXatrov éywv o ’AvTwvos amr net.
TONAGKIS b¢ cupBarovtav GdexT pvovas, TONAG-
Kus 6é Paxipous optuyas, évixwv ot Kaicapos.
Eg’ ols av lerpevos adios 0 “AVTOVLOS cal

paddov Tl TP AiyuTrig Tpoaexwr, arrijpev ex tis “ItaXas, eyxerploas Kaicape Ta oiKxeta THY dé ‘Oxraoviay axe Tis "EAXabos éernyero Ou-4 yatpiov yeyovoros aurois. Staxeruafovre 6é aut@ tept’ A@nvas arraryyédheTar Ta mpara TOV Ovevtdiov Katopapdarov, 6 OTe pax tous Ilap-
Gous KpaThaas AaBenvov airexTovot Kal Papva-TwaTny TYE MOVLK@TATOV TeV ‘Tpadou Bactréws oTparnyay. érl Tovrois eioTtia TOUS "EAAnvas, 931 eyupvacidpyxer dé "AOnvaioss, xal Ta THS nyepovias Tapacnpa, KATA TOD oiKou pera TOV yupvaciap-Xena paBdwv év iparrte kal hatxaciow mponer cat SarapBdvev rovs veavioxous érpaynrbev.
ANTONY

Antony annoyance, because he always came off with less than Caesar. Now, there was with him a seer from Egypt, one of those who cast nativities. This man, either as a favour to Cleopatra, or dealing truly with Antony, used frank language with him, saying that his fortune, though most great and splendid,
was obscured by that of Caesar; and he advised Antony to put as much distance as possible between himself and that young man. “For thy guardian genius,” said he, “is afraid of his; and though it has a spirited and lofty mien when it is by itself, when his comes near, thine is cowed and humbled by it.” And indeed events seemed to testify in favour of the Egyptian. For we are told that whenever, by way of diversion, lots were cast or dice thrown to decide matters in which they were engaged, Antony came off worsted. They would often match cocks, and often fighting quails, and Caesar's would always be victorious.
At all this Antony was annoyed, though he did not show it, and giving rather more heed now to the Egyptian, he departed from Italy, after putting his private affairs in the hands of Caesar; and he took Octavia with him as far as Greece (she had borne him a daughter). It was while he was spending the winter at Athens that word was brought to him of the first successes of Ventidius, who had conquered the Parthians in battle and slain Labienus, as well as Pharnapates, the most capable general of King Hyrodes. To celebrate this victory Antony feasted the Greeks, and acted as gymnasiarch for the Athen- ians. He left at home the insignia of his command, and went forth carrying the wands of a gymnasiarch, in a Greek robe and white shoes, and he would take the young combatants by the neck and part them.

2u1
p 2

XXXIV. ’E&sévas 5é wérArXwv él tov rodepov
A A /
aro THS Lepas éXatas orépavov édaPe, Kal kata TL AOyLoy amo THS KAeYvdpas Udaros éumAnod-prevos ayyetov éxopstev. év tovrm Sé Idx«opov tov Bactdéws traida, peydrw otpat@ Idpbav avOis eat Supiav édXav’vovta, cupmrecwmv OQuvev-
, DJ “a A , N ,
tidtos év TH Kuppnotixy tpétetat, cai dvadOerper
, ,
jTapuTodXous, év mpwtors LIlaxdpou ecovtos.
TOUTO TO Epyov év ToiS doLdtuwTAaTOLS yEevomevor
¢€ “A : Pwpaios te tav cata Kpdooov atuynpdtov
54 \ / \ , 9 ¥
ExtrAcw Trowny Tapecye, Kal IldpOous avOes ciow
Mndias xat Meoorotapias ovvéoretre, tpl
4 > “A \ 4 e , %- /
payass edeEns Kata xpadtos Hrtnuévous. Ovévti-5:05 b¢ TlapOovs wév mpocwtépw Si@xey aréyvo,
4. b] , / \ \ 9 ”
dOovov ‘Avrwviov deicas, tTovs b€ adectatas
3 N , \ ‘ N\ b | é
eriav Kateotpepeto Kal tov Kopupaynvov ‘Avttoxov év TodEL Dapoodrors érroALopKet. SEeopévov \ li 4 le) ‘ a b] 4 N
dé ytALa Tadavta Sodvar Kai Troveiy ‘AvTwVi@ TO
Ul
TpocTaTTo-eEvoy, exéXeve TrEwTrELY TrPOS AVTWVLOV.
” Ne Nd ee Ge . _\ ’ , > non yap éyyus Hy éwi@v, kal Tov Ovevtidvov ove ela otrévdeoOa. TO ’Avtioy@, Bovropevos Ev ye TOUTO TaV Epyav émMvupOY avTOD yevéoOaL Kal pH
/ \ 3 , le) A \ mwavra Sa Ovdevtidiov xatropOoicbar. rhs 5é
moALopKias pcos NapBavovons Kal TOV Evdov, WS
, /
aTréyvwoav tas Siadvoets, Tpos aAKTY TpaTrope-
,
VOV, TpaTTwY ovdEér, év aicyvyn bé Kal peTayvo-
f A / /
GEL YEVOMEVOS, AyaTNTaS emt TpiaKociots o7réevde-
ANTONY

XXXIV. When he was about to go forth to the war, he took a wreath from the sacred olive-tree,! and, in: obedience to a certain oracle, filled a vessel with water from the Clepsydra? and carried it with him. In the meantime Pacorus, the king’s son, advanced again with a large army of Parthians against Syria; but Ventidius engaged and routed him in Cyrrhestica, and slew great numbers of his men.’ Pacorus fell among the first. This exploit, which became one of the most celebrated, gave the Romans full satisfaction for the disaster under Crassus, and shut the Parthians up again within the bounds of Media and Mesopotamia, after they had been utterly defeated in three successive battles. Ven- tidius, however, decided not to pursue the Parth- ians further, because he feared the jealousy of Antony; but he attacked and subdued the peoples which had revolted from Rome, and besieged Antio- chus of Commagené in the city of Samosata. When Antiochus proposed to pay a thousand talents and obey the behests of Antony, Ventidius ordered him to send his proposal to Antony, who had now advanced into the neighbourhood, and would not permit Ven- tidius to make peace with Antiochus. He insisted that this one exploit at least should bear his own name, and that not all the successes should be due to Ventidius. But the siege was protracted, and the — besieged, since they despaired of coming to terms, betook themselves to a vigorous defence. Antony could therefore accomplish nothing, and feeling ashamed arid repentant, was glad to make peace with

1 In the Erechtheium, on the Acropolis.

2 A sacred spring just below the ancient portal of the Acropolis (Pausanias, i. 28, 4).
8 In 38 B.c. See the Crassus, xxxiii. 5, with the note.

Tal TANGYTOLS Trpos TOV “Avtioyor" Kat PLiKpa TOV
éy Yupia xatactnodpevos ets AOnvas éravnnrbe, kat tov Ovevridiov ols Emperre Tiunoas ereprpev él tov OpiauBov.
5 Odtos dro IldpOwv ayps Sedpo reOpcayBevKe HOvos, avnp yévet pev adpavys, atroravaas Sé TIS
"Avtowviou didias 7O AaBelv adopyas mpakewv peydrwv, als xadAdoTa ypnodpevos éBeBaiwce tov mepi Avtwviou Neyouevov cat Kaicapos oyov, @ evTuyéoTepor St Erépwv Hoav 7 Sv abrav
6 otparnyev. Kal yap Yoootos "Avtwviov otpa-TnYyos €v Yupia TWoAAa Sverrpatreto, cat Kavidsos atrorehbels vr’ avrovd Tepi Appeviav Tovtous TE vixav Kal tous IBypwv cai ’AXBavav Baciréas
aypt tov Kavedcov mpondOev. ad’ dv ev rois BapRapos dvopa nat xr€os nbEeto tis "Avrwviou
Suvdpes. |
XXXV. Adtos S€ wadiy & tivwv S:aBor.ov mapotuvlels mpos Kaicapa vavol tpiaxocias

érdet mpos THY “Itadiav: od SeEauévwv 88 trav Bpevrecivav rov orodop eis Tdpavta weptmppicev.
évtadda tv ‘Oxtaoviay (cuvérrer yap amo THs “EAXdSb0s avt@) SenPeicay amoméumet mpos Tov
aberpor, &yxvov péev ovoav, dn 5é cat dSevTepov 2 €£ avrov Ouyatpioy Exovoav. 17 Sé amavrncaca xa’ odov Kaicapt, cai wmaparaBovoa trav éxeivou
gditov “Aypimmayv cat Mauxnvav, éveriyxave TOANG TOTVLMpEVH Kal TOAAA Seomévyn pi TeEpti-Sety avtnv éx paxapiwtarns yuvatkos aOM\wra-THY yevonevnv. vov pev yap atravras avOpwrrous cis avtny admoBvérey av’toxpatopwy Svely, tov
3 pev yuvaixa, ToD b€ adeAdny ovcav: “ei Sé ta

Antiochus on his payment of three hundred talents.
After settling some trivial matters in Syria, he returned to Athens, and sent Ventidius home, with becoming honours, to enjoy his triumph.
Ventidius is the only man up to the present time who ever celebrated a triumph over the Parthians.
He was a man of lowly birth, but his friendship with Antony bore fruit for him in opportunities to perform great deeds. Of these opportunities he made the best use, and so confirmed what was generally said of Antony and Caesar, namely, that they were more successful in campaigns conducted by others than by themselves. For Sossius, Antony's general, effected much in Syria, and Canidius, who was left by Antony in Armenia, conquered that people, as well as the kings of the Iberians and Albanians, and advanced as far as the Caucasus. Consequently the name and fame of Antony’s power waxed great among the Barbarians.

XXXV. But Antony himself, once more irritated against Caesar by certain calumnies, sailed with three hundred ships for Italy; and when the people of Brundisium would not receive his armament, he coasted along to Tarentum. Here he sent Octavia, who had sailed with him from Greece, at her own request, to her brother. She was with child, and had already borne Antony two daughters. Octavia met Caesar on the way, and after winning over his friends Agrippa and Maecenas, urged him with many prayers and many entreaties not to permit her, after being a most happy, to become a most wretched woman. For now, she said, the eyes of all men were drawn to her as the wife of one imperator and the sister of another: “ But if,’’ she said, “the worse xelpeo KpaTnoecer, Epn, “ nal yévorTo TONEHOS, Umav pev adnrov 6 OT@ Kparety 7 kpateiabat Té-TpwrTat, Ta ema 5 duporépas Orta.” TovTots émuxhacdels o 0 Kaioap HEV elpnuiKas eis Tdpav-Ta, Kal Géapa KadMor ov ot Tapovres eJewvro, TONUY pev ex yHs oT parov nouxatovra, Todas

5é vads arpéya ™ pos Tols airyeanois éxoveas, av-TOY b¢ Kab pidov aTrAVvT TELS Kal piroppocvvas.
etatia 6€ “AvT@vios T pOTEpos, Kal ToUTO TH adedon Kaioapos Sovros. érrei bé @poroynTo Kai-capa pev "Avtavig Sobvas dv0 Tdyuata mpos TOV TlapOcxov TONELOD, "Avroviov 5é Kaicapt XaNK-enBorous ExaTOv, 'Oxraovia TOV Gpororynmeveny Xwpis iTHTaTo TH per adeAg@ Tapa rob _avdpos elkoot pvomrdpwvas, TO S dvdph Tapa TOU aoed-gov oTPATLATAS xXurious. ovtTw 6é adhrAnrov Stax pibevres o pev evdds elyeTo Tov T pos TlopmHiov TONE HOU, Lixehias eprepevos, ‘AvTovios be "Oxtaoviay pera TOV é& éxeivns xal TOUS ex Dovafias maidas avT@ Tapaxatabéuevos eis THY
"Aciav atrerépacev.
XXXVI. Eédoveoa & n dev cuppopa Xpovov
TONUY, o KnXeordtpas épas, Soxa@v Kxatevvdobat Kat KaTaxexnrijo Gat tois BeAtioct Aoyio pots, ates avédaprre Kal ave dppev Lupia WwANGLG-Covros avTov. Kal TENOS, @oTTEp nat 6 TWAdtov 70 SvoTreOés Kal axoXacTov THs puxiis vmotv-ytov, amoNaKtioas TA Kaka Kal cwTHpLla TavrTa Karitwva Dovrniov emeprpev afovra KAcomdtpav els Zupiav. ErXOovan 5é xapiver at Kal mT poo Ti-Onot puxpov oddev od8 ominnaM arrAa PDowirny, 216

should prevail and there should be war between you, one of you, it is uncertain which, is destined to conquer, and one to be conquered, but my lot in either case will be one of misery.”” Caesar was overcome by these words, and came in a peaceful manner to Tarentum. Then the inhabitants beheld a most noble spectacle—a large army on land inactive, and many ships lying quietly off shore, while the commanders and their friends met one another with friendly greetings. Antony entertained Caesar first, who consented to it for his sister's sake. And after it had been agreed that Caesar should give to Antony two legions for his Parthian war, and Antony to Caesar one hundred bronze-beaked galleys, Octavia, independently of this agreement, obtained twenty light sailing craft from her husband for her brother, and one thousand soldiers from her brother for her husband. Thus they separated, and Caesar at once engaged in the war against Pompey, being ambitious to get Sicily, while Antony, after putting Octavia in Caesar's charge, together with his children by her and Fulvia, crossed over into Asia.

XXXVI. But the dire evil which had been slumber- ing for along time, namely, his passion for Cleopatra, which men thought had been charmed away and lulled to rest by better considerations, blazed up again with renewed power as he drew near to Syria. And finally, like the stubborn and unmanageable beast of the soul, of which Plato speaks,! he spurned away all saving and noble counsels and sent Fontéius Capito to bring Cledpatra to Syria. And when she was come, he made her a present of no slight or insignificant addition to her dominions, namely,

1 Cf. Phaedrus, 254 a,

KoiAnv Xupiav, Kumpov, Kirsxias woddyjv: ete
dé tHs te "lovdaiwy tiv rd Badrocapov dépovcay Q A , 9 a 4 \ \ 3 \
kat ths NaBatatwy ApaBias don pds tTHv éxTOS
9 , , e / e ,
atrokAtvet Odracoav. adtar paddtota 'Pwpaious |
nviacav at Swpeai. Kaitot TroAdols éexapifero
, \ 4 A 6 ? ,
TeTpapxias Kat Bactreias eOvav peyarov, id10-Tats ovot, ToAdovs 8 adnpeitro Bacirelias, os
"Avtiyovov tov 'lovdatov, by xal mpoayayov bf / > \ s e. / f €TENEKLTEV, OUOEVOS TWpoTEpoy éTépov Racirews
e , 5) \ \ ' \ = a
ovTw KoNacOévToS. AANA TO alaxpov HY Tov
KyXeorrdatpas tuay aviapotatov. nienoe Sé tH
StaBornv tatdas é& adtis Sidvpuous avedopevos, 4 \ ' > / \ \
kal mpocayopevcas tov pev AréEavdpov, thv Sé KyXeordtpay, érixrnoww Sé tov pev" HrLov, rHv 5é Lernvynv. ov pny GAN ayabos av éyxadrAwmTI-cacOat tois aicypois édXeye THS pev "Popaiwv Hryepovias ov dk av AapBavovow, Grr ev ols yapitovra: paiverOar 7d péyeOos- Siadoyais dé
' ¢ A , /

Kal Texv@oECL TOAN@Y Bactiéwy TwraTUVEDOaL
\ > / 4 A e,r¢ ,
Tas evyeveias. oTw yoov vd ‘Hpaxdéous texva-a \ e a , 9 2 A : \
Ofvar Tov attod mpdoyovov, ode év mug yaotpl Gepévov tHv Staboyny ovdé vopous YoAwvetous Kai kunaews evOuvas SedotxoTos, adda TH Hvoe
\ A b] \ \ \ 3 “A
ToAAaS yEevrav apyas Kal xataBoXras azroNTretv
epyéevros. |
XXXVII. ’Emel 5¢ Ppadrov xreivavtos ‘Tpo-Snv tov watépa Kai tHhv Bacideiavy KatacyYovTos
arro te lldpOwv aredidpackov ovK orjiyot, cai Movaions, avnp émipavns cat Suvatos, Axe pev-

Phoenicia, Coele Syria, Cyprus, and a large part of Cilicia ; and still further, the balsam-producing part of Judaea, and all that part of Arabia Nabataea which slopes toward the outer sea. These gifts particularly annoyed the Romans. And yet he made presents to many private persons of tetrarchies and realms of great peoples, and he deprived many monarchs of their kingdoms, as, for instance, Anti-_gonus the Jew, whom he brought forth and beheaded, though no other king before him had been so punished. But the shamefulness of the honours conferred upon Cleopatra gave most offence. And he heightened the scandal by acknowledging his two children by her, and calling one Alexander and the other Cleopatra, with the surname for the first of Sun, and for the other of Moon. However, since he was an adept at putting a good face upon shameful deeds, he used to say that the greatness of the Roman empire was made manifest, not by what the Romans received, but by what they bestowed ; and that noble families were extended by the successive begettings of many kings. In_ this way, at any rate, he said, his own progenitor was ' begotten by Heracles, who did not confine his succession to a single womb, nor stand in awe of laws like Solon’s for the regulation of conception, but gave free course to nature, and left behind him the beginnings and foundations of many families.

XXXVII. And now Phraates put Hyrodes his father to death and took possession of his kingdom,} other Parthians ran away in great numbers, and par- ticularly Monaeses, a man of distinction and power, 1In 36 B.c. Cf. the Crasaus, xxxiii. 5.

yov mpos 'Avtwvor, Tas pev éxeivou TUYas Tais Wepuictoxréous eixadcas, Tepiovoiav bé THY éav-Tov Kal peyarodppocvvny tots Ilepcav Bacirevor TapaBarav, ébwpyjoato Tpeis wodes avT@, Ad-piccav Kxat 'ApéGovcay Kai 'Tepav oduv, ty BapBvnnv mpotepov éxarouvv. tod bé Wdpbwv Baotréws t@ Movaion SeEiav xataréppartos, da pevos avrov amréatetrev o AvtTwvios, éEarratav pev éyvaxas tov Ppadrny, ws eipnvyns éaopévns, akvav 5é tas addovoas eri Kpdooouv onpaias Kat Tov avopov aovaBely Tovs TwepiovTas. autos dé Krcomdtpav es Aiyurrov datoméupas éxope 8:
"Apafias cai 'Appevias, d7rov avveNOovons avT@ THs Suvapews Kal TOV cuppaywv Baoiréwy (Tap-qodAo. O€ Hoav ovTaL, wéyioTos 5é TWaVTwY oO TIS "Appevias "Apraovacsins, éEaxioytrtous. imreis cal metovs EmTaKrax tedious Tapéywv) éEjtace Tov otpatov. joav dé 'Pwpaiwoy pev adtav éEaxic-
"puptot melol xal tro '"Pwpaiors oUVTETaY LeEvOY inmixov, "1Bypwv xat Kertrav pupio, tov Se Gd\rwv COvav éyévovto tpeis pupiddes ovv itredolv omov Kal Werois.: Tocavtny pévtot tapacKevny Kal dSvvapty, 4) kal tous wépav Bdxtpwv 'lvdovs époBnce xat Tacav éxpddave tTHv "Aciav, avovntov avT@ da Kvreorrdarpayv yevéoOar Aéyovot. omevdovta yap éxeivn ovvdiayepdoat, Tov wodepov é£eveyxeiv Mpo Kalpod Kal Taot ypnoacbat reTapaypévos, ovK dvTa TOV éEaUTOD AOYLTUOY, GAN ws UIT!
hapuaxov tiwav i yonteias Tamrtaivovta mpos 05 . 1 ws bxd Naber : ind.

who came in flight to Antony. Antony likened the fortunes of the fugitive to those of Themistocles,! compared his own abundant resources and magnan- imity to those of the Persian kings, and gave him three cities, Larissa, Arethusa, and Hierapolis, which -used to be called Bambycé. But when the Parthian king made an offer of friendship to Monaeses, Antony gladly sent Monaeses back to him, determined to deceive Phraates with a prospect of peace, and de- manding back the standards captured in the campaign of Crassus, together with such of his men as still survived. Antony himself, however, after sending Cleopatra back to Egypt, proceeded through Arabia and Armenia to the place where his forces were assembled, together with those of the allied kings. These kings were very many in number, but the greatest of them all was Artavasdes, king of Armenia, who furnished six thousand horse and seven thousand foot. Here Antony reviewed his army. There were, of the Romans themselves, sixty thousand foot- soldiers, together with the cavalry classed as Roman, namely, ten thousand Iberians and Celts; of the other nations there were thirty thousand, counting alike horsemen and light-armed troops.

And yet we are told that all this preparation and power, which terrified even the Indians beyond Bactria and made all Asia quiver, was made of no avail to Antony by reason of Cleopatra. For so eager was he to spend the winter with her that he began the war before the proper time, and managed every- thing confusedly. He was not master of his own faculties, but, as if he were under the influence of certain drugs or of magic rites, was ever looking

1 See the T’hemistocles, xxix. 7.

cxelvny dei, Kai m™ pos TO TaXLOV éTraveNOety wadrov
i Tpos TO KpaTioat TOV Tone pico rYevopevov.
XXXVIII. [Ipétov péev ody adrod Séov eév
"Appevig Staxerpacar kal Stavatratoat Tov oTparoy, oKTaKtoxiNay oTadiov droreT pupevov mopeia, Kal mplvy 7) Kiely ex TaY YeLpadiov IldpOovs éapos apyhn Mydiay xatarafelv, ovK nvéxXeTO TOV Xpovov, GAN’ EvOds Hryev ev aproTepa rAaBov “Appeviav, cal tis “Atpotratnvis dypd-pevos émropOer THY yopav. éerrevta pnKXavnuatov avT@ mMpos TrohopKiay dvayKaiwy TplaKociass apakais Tapa emmopeverr, év ols xat KpLos Hv oySonKkovTa TrooM@Y pijKos, &v ovdév évexwper StadOapev eri xatpod mari yevéoOar Sia ro THY dvw ywpay wav Evrov ayevves eis pos Kar panrOaxov éexdhéperv, errevyouevos ws éurrddsa ToD - Tayvvew améditre, PuvdAaKnY Tiva Kal YTaTLavo nYyewova Tov apakov émictnoas, autos 66: @Ppadtra peyadnv tod, év 7 Kal téxva Kal yuvaixes Hoav Tov tis Myédias Bactréws, €ro-ALopKet. THS 5é ypElas evOLs Boov HwapTe Tas enyavas atodTav éFeheyyovons, opoce Yopav Exou Tpos THY TOMY YO"UA TYOAH Kal ToAVTOVWS

dvictapevov. év tovtp 5é xataBaivwv otpatia peyarn DPpadrns, ws HKovee THY drrohenpu TOV pnxavopopwv apnatan, erreur e TOV lIrmTéwy TOA-Novus em auras, bp oy mepurnpbeis o Lrarvavos amroOvnoxe: pev avtos, atoOvnaxovot Sé€ puptot Tav pet avtov. tas S€ pnyavas édovTes ot 222 eagerly towards her, and thinking more of his speedy return than of conquering the enemy.

XXXVIII. In the first place, then, though he . ought to have spent the winter in Armenia and to have given his army rest, worn out as it was by a march of eight thousand furlongs, and to have occu- pied Media at the opening of spring, before the Parthians had left their winter quarters, he could not hold out that length of time, but led his army on, taking Armenia on his left, and skirting Atro- patené, which country he ravaged. Secondly, his engines necessary for siege operations were carried along on three hundred waggons, and among them was a battering ram eighty feet long. Not one of these, if destroyed, could be replaced in time to be of use, because the upper country produced only wood of insufficient length and hardness. Neverthe- less, in his haste, he left these behind him, on the ’ ground that they retarded his speed, setting a con- siderable guard under the command of Statianus over the waggons, while he himself laid siege to Phraata, a large city, in which were the wives and children of the:king of Media. But the exigencies of the case at once proved what a mistake he had made in leaving behind him his engines, and coming to close quarters he began to build a mound against the city, which rose slowly and with much labour. In the meantime, however, Phraates came down with a great army, and when he heard that the waggons carrying the engines had been left behind, he sent a large number of his horsemen against them. By these Statianus was surrounded and slain himself, and ten thousand of his men were slain with him. Moreover, the Barbarians captured the engines and

223

BapBapor SiépOetpav. elrov 5é wapmoddAovs, év
ols xat TloXguwv Hv o Bactrevs. |
XXXIX. Toito wdvras pév, @S EiKos, Hviace Tous mepl “Avta@vioy avedtriotws év apxXh m7-yévtas: o 8€ "Appévios "Apraovaadns amroyvous Ta ‘Pwpaiwy @xeTO THY avTOD oTpaTLay avada-Bev, kaitep aitiétatos Tod Trodéwov yevopevos.
érupavévtwy Sé AapTpPas Tots TodOpKOvaL TAY

TladpOwv cal ypwpévwv arerais mpos bBpuv, ov Bovdopevos ’Avtovi0s javydlovTe TO TTPAT@ TO SucOupoiv Kal KatatremAnypévoy éupéevery Kal avfeoOat, Séxa taywata dAaBov Kai pels otTpatnyloas aomreipas omdTa@V, Tous 8 cvmraels admavras, é€&nyaye mpos ottoAoyiay, olopevos ovtas av émicrracbévtwy padioTa TOV TOAEMIOV éx tapatdfews pdynv yevérOa. mpoedOwv é plas oddov nuépas, ws éwpa tovs IldpBous KuKrw Tepuyeomevous Kal mpooteceiy Kal’ odcyv avT@ Cntovvtas, &EéOnxe pev TO THs mayns cvpBodrov éy TO oTpatoTédo, Kaderov Sé Tas aKNVAS ws OV paynoopmevos, GAN amrdEwv, tapnuciBeto ToV BapBdpwv thy takw otoav pnvoedy, Kedevoas, 6Tav of MpO@ToL Tois oWALTaLs év épixT@ Sox@ory clvat, Tovs immeis éevaytious eicedavvely. TOS 5é [dp8ors mapaxexpipévors AOyou Kpeittoy 1 Takis édaivetro tov ‘Pwpatwrv, cal xatebedyto mapeflovtas év Stactnpacw loos abopvBws Kat aiwmTn Tovs vacovls Kpadaivovtas. ws 5é TO onuetov 1p0n Kat mpocepepovto peta Kpavyis 224
ANTONY

destroyed them. They also took a great number of prisoners, among whom was Polemon the king. XXXIX. This calamity naturally distressed all the followers of Antony, for they had received an unexpected blow at the outset; besides, Artavasdes, the king of Armenia, despairing of the Roman cause, took his own forces and went off, although he had been the chief cause of the war. And now the Parthians presented themselves to the besiegers in brilliant array, and threatened them _insultingly. Antony, therefore, not wishing that the inactivity of his army should confirm and increase among them consternation and dejection, took ten legions and three praetorian cohorts of men-at-arms, together with all his cavalry, and led them out to forage, thinking that in this way the enemy would best be drawn into a pitched battle. After advancing a single day’s march, he saw that the Parthians were enveloping him and seeking to attack him on the march. He therefore displayed the signal for battle in his camp, and after taking down his tents, as though his purpose was not to fight but to withdraw, he marched along past the line of the Barbarians, which was crescent-shaped. But he had given orders that when the first ranks of the enemy should appear to be within reach of his legionaries, the cavalry should charge upon them. To the Parthians in their parallel array, the discipline of the Romans seemed to beggar description, and they watched them marching past at equal distances from one another, without confusion, and in silence, brandish- ing their javelins. But when the signal was given, and the Roman horsemen wheeled about and rode down

2 2 5
VOL. 1X, ° \y ;
fy |

eMLaT peWavTes ot tmrrets, TOUTOUS bev NuvVOVTO deEduevor, Kaimep evOus évtos TofevpaTos ryevo-pévous, TOY b€ oTNLTOV TUVATTOVTOY Gua Bo7
Kat Taraye TOY OTAWV, Ot Té inarot TOUS
Ta pOots éfiaTavto TapRovvtes Kal avtol mpi ets Xetipas eNOeiy Epevyov.
‘O &é ‘AvT@VLOS eveKELTO rf Simkar, Kal peydras ely ev édmidas @S TOU TOAEMOU TO oUpTray) 70 TELA TOV ExElVN TH paxn diame pay-[EVOS.. emel 66 Tis SiaEews YEvouerns Tots Bev mebois em TEVTHKOVTG, ordoua, tows O€ immedou
él Tpls TOTAUTA, TOUS TETTWKOTAS TOV TONELLWD Kal TovS HAwWKOTAS émLoKOTODYTES EvpoY alx-pardrous pev TpudKovTa, vexpous 6é dySonKovta povous, amopia Kal dvcOuuia Tact mapéoTn, devvoy elvat oyeFopevors el VUK@VTES yey ovTWS odiryous KTELVOVOLY, NTT LEVvoL oe oTEpHTOVTAL Too OUTP dcous dméBanrov mept Tals apakats.
Th S vorEpaig cur Kevac dpevot Ty emi Dpadror
Kal Tob atpatonédou mporyyov. EVTUXOVTES dé Kara THY OdOV Tp@Tov jeev OriyoLs TOV TOhELLov, erecta, TAEiocl, TéAOS O€é TAGLY Gomwep ANTTHTOLS
Kal veareot 7 poxadoupevots Kat m™poaAdddovet Tav7ax bev, poxOnpas Kat TOAUTFOVUS amrecwOncav els TO oTpatomesoy. Tay de Mydov éxSpomnv TWA TOUnaapevov éml To youa Kal
TOUS Tpopaxopévous poBnaavrer, opyicbecis o
VT@VLOS éXpyoato TH NEeyouevy dexateia pos
TOUS amroberhtdcavtas. biehov yap eis Sexddas
TO TAGS ag’ exdaTns éva TOV Aaxovta KANPD SrepOerpe, Tots d€ AddOLs ayTl wupav éKxédeveE xptOas petpeta bat.
226

upon them with loud shouts, they did indeed receive their onset and repel them, although their foes were at once too close for them to use their arrows ; when, however, the legionaries joined in the charge, with shouts and clashing of weapons, the horses of the Parthians took fright and gave way, and the Parthians fled without coming to close quarters.

Antony pressed hard upon them in pursuit, and had great hopes that he had finished the whole war, or the greater part of it, in that one battle. His infantry kept up the pursuit for fifty furlongs, and his cavalry for thrice that distance; and yet when he took count of those of the enemy who had fallen or had been captured, he found only thirty prisoners and eighty dead bodies. Despondency and despair therefore fell upon all; they thought it a terrible thing that when victorious they had killed so few, and when vanquished they were to be robbed of so many men as they had lost at the waggons. On the following day they packed up and started on the road to Phraata and their camp. As they marched they met, first a few of the enemy, then more: of them, and finally the whole body, which, as though unconquered and fresh, challenged and attacked them from every side; but at last, with difficulty and much labour, they got safely to their camp. Then the Medes made a sally against their mound and put its defenders to flight. At this Antony was enraged, and visited those who had played the coward with what is called decimation. That is, he divided the whole number of them into tens, and put to death that one from each ten | upon whom the lot fell.1 For the rest he ordered rations of barley instead.of wheat.

1 See the Crassus, x. 2. 227

Q 2

PEUTARCHS LIVES

XL. Xaneros bé ie ere nV Oo TohELOS, Kal TO péeAAOY avTOU poBepwrepor, “Avrovic pep mpoa Soxavre Atuwove oUKETL Yap HY avev Tpavpatov Kal vexpov TOAA@Y emiaitiaacbat: Ppad-A dé ‘Tous TdpOous CEMLOTAMEVOS -TAVTA LaNKOV 7) Xetposvos &Ew TpooTadrarT wpe Kar upavnreiv Suvapévovs, egpoBeiro pa) TOV Popaiwr eyxaptepovvTwy Kat TApapevovT ov ATOMTWGLY aUTOD, 75n Tob aépos UVLO TALEVOU peta POtvoTrwpevny tonpepiav. odor ouv cvyTiOnar TOLOVOE. [lapAov ot yWepiwdTaror Tept Tas auTohoyias Kal Tas

advXas arravT noes pahaKorepov Tots ‘Popaiots mpoaep€epovTo, _ dap Bavery TE TapLerTes avTots évia Kal THY apeTHV éTralvodVTEsS WS TrOAELLKO-tatwov avdpov Kal Oavpalouéevwy wo Tov adeTépov Bacthews Sucaiws. éx 6€. ToVTOU mMpocerAavvovtes eyyuTépw Kal TOUS immous aT péwa tapaSdaddovtes éNotSopouv Tov “AvT@vLOD, Ste Bovropeve Dpadrn Siadrayhvat Kat peicac0at TOLOUT@Y avdpav Kal ToooUTwY adoppny ov dldwow, adra TOUS Narerous Kat _Heydhous KaOnrar Tohe pious dvapeveor, ALpov Kal Xetpova, du” ov épyov éott Kal T POTTELTOMEVOUS uae TldpGov arropevyety. ToAA@v b€ Ta’Ta 7 pos TOV
"AvTw@viov dvapepovTor, paracaopevos v7 THS
édmidos 6 Guws oU TpoTEpoy eTreKNpUKEVTATO Tpos TOV Ilap0ov 7 mu érOau TOV prroppovovpevay éxeivoy BapBapev él Tov Baoidéws tabta dpovouvTos SiaréyouTo. pacKovTov dé xal mapa-Kadovvtwy pn Sedtévar pndé amtoteiv, Errepé
Tivas Tov éTAaipwy Tadiv Tas onpaias akiov 228

ANTONY

XL. The war was full of hardship for both sides, and its future course was still more to be dreaded. Antony expected a famine; for it was no longer possible to get provisions without having many men wounded and killed. Phraates, too, knew that his Parthians were able to do anything rather than to undergo hardships and encamp in the open during winter, and -he was afraid that if the Romans persisted and remained, his men would desert him, since already the air was getting sharp after the summer equinox. He therefore contrived the fol- lowing stratagem. Those of the Parthians who were most acquainted with the Romans attacked them less vigorously in their forays for provisions and other encounters, allowing them to take some things, prais- ing their valour, and declaring that they were capital fighting men and justly admired by their own king. After this, they would ride up nearer, and quietly putting their horses alongside the Romans, would revile Antony because, when Phraates wished to ‘come to terms and spare so many and such excellent men, Antony would not give him an opportunity, but sat there awaiting those grievous and powerful en- emies, famine and winter, which would make it difficult for them to escape even though the Par- thians should escort them on their way. Many per- sons reported this to Antony, but though his hope inclined him to yield, he did not send heralds to the Parthians until he had inquired of the Barbarians who were showing such kindness whether what they said represented the mind of their king. They assured him that it did, and urged him to have no fear or dis- trust, whereupon he sent some of his companions with a renewed demand for the return of the standards

229.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

amro\aBeiv Kal tovs aixparwrous, ws 67 p71
jqavraracw ayarav To cwOnva Kal Svadvyety
, A \ , fe \ 3A
voutcbein. tod dé Ilapfov tattra pev éav
a 3 , \ 3 \ > / > ,
KeNevovTos, amrrovTe bé EevOUS Etpnynv Kal aodd-
‘ t Nevay elvat dyoavtos, oArAlyals jmepats TvaKEva-
\
odpevos avelevyvuer. dv 6é€ Kal Shum miOavos
“a > évruxeiy Kal orparov ayev dia Aoyou map
ovtivoby tay ToTEe TepuKws, éFéAUTEY avTOS
A“ \
aicxuvyn Kat Katndeia TO tapadappivar To wrAHOo0s, Aopitiov 5¢’AnvoBapBov éxédXeve TodTO TOMjoal. Kai TiVES ev HYAVaKTYHOAY OS UTrEpopa-
\ \ a“ b] 4 \ ,
pevot, TO b€ TAEia TOV eTrEKAATON Kal cUvEedpovndeE
\ > 7 \ \ a“ w A b) a THhYv aitiay’ 610 Kal waAXov @ovto Seiv avtadet-Oat xai TreiPec8at TO oTpaTHnye.
XLI. MéAdovtos S€ avtod tHv avTny odor ¥ bd , N bd 9 7 A aye oTriow trediuvny Kal adevdpov ovoayv, avip
T@ yéver Madpoos, moAda tots IlapOwv HOeorv 9 , Ww ve / N > “a 4
evo@pirAnnas, 75n dé ‘Pwpatois miotos év TH ayy Th Tept Tas pnyavas yeyoves, “Avtwviw mpoc-eXOwv éxédreve gevyev ev SeEia TaY opav
5 , \ A \ e , \
émiuhaBomevov, Kal pn oTpaTov omditTnv Kal Bapvv év Spopots yupvots Kal avatreTtapévois
€ A v4 4 \ , A \
uToBanely imam tocavtTn Kal tokevpacw, 0 87 Teyvopevoy TOV Ppadtny advaothaa. THS ToALop-
/ > \ € _ , ¥ \
Kias avTOY Oporoyials hiravOpwroas ~cecOar Sé
> AN e \ ¢ a , \ “a autos Hyeu@v od00 BpayvtTépas Kai padrov evTropiay Tay émitndetwv exovons.
230

and the captives,! that he might not be thought altogether satisfied with an escape in safety. But the Parthian told him not to urge this matter, and assured him of peace and safety as soon as he started to go away; whereupon, within a few days Antony packed up his baggage and broke camp. But though he was persuasive in addressing a popular audience and was better endowed by nature than any man of his time for leading an army by force of eloquence, he could not prevail upon himself, for shame and de- jection of spirits, to make the usual speech of en- couragement to the army, but ordered Domitius Ahenobarbus to do it. Some of the soldiers were incensed at this, and felt that he had held them in contempt; but the majority of them were moved to the heart as they comprehended the reason. There- fore they thought they ought to show all the more respect and obedience to their commander.

XLI. As he was about to lead his army back by the road over which it had come, which ran through a level country without trees, a man of the Mardian race, who had great familiarity with the Parthian habits, and had already shown himself faithful to the Romans in the battle over the engines of war,? came to Antony and urged him in his flight to keep close to the hills upon his right, and not to expose an encumbered army of legionaries to so large a force of mounted archers, in bare and extended tracts ; this was the very thing, he said, which Phraates had designed when he induced him by friendly conferences to raise the siege; he himself, he said, would conduct the army by a way that was shorter and furnished a greater abundance of provisions.

1 See chapter xxxvii. 2, 2 See chapter xxxviii. 3.

ce) e 9 .
Tatra axovoas o Avta@ios éBoudeveto, Kat
/ A a“
TlapOors pev ov éBovreto Soxeiv amioteivy peta
/ ~ e n 5)
omovdds, THY dé TvYTOULAY THS Odod Kal TO Tapa Kopas olxoupevas écecOat THY Tropeiay érratvav
, v \ M A 5 . ¢ be oF a miotw ret Tov Mdpdov.' o dé Shoat trapetyev
.
avTov adxpt ov KaTacTHon Tov oTpaTov eis ’Ap-
7 \ \ e “A , @ A > @ peviay, kat SeBels nryetto dv0 juépas Kal’ jovyt-av. 1H 8€ Tpitn mwavtaract tovs IldpOous ate-
4 ? / \ / b) \
yvoxotos Avtewviou cat Babifovros avetpévas. dia
“a ‘ e 4 “A
To Oappeiv, idwy o Madpdos aroywow éuBoris
A 4 a

ToTaLov vewoTl SveoTrTacpmEéevny Kal TO pedpa. TOAD
A , n
Tpos THY OOOY, 7} TOpEUTEOY HY, EXYEOMEVOY, TUVTe A , ” ¥ A ld kev Ott Tov IlapAwy Epyov ein tovto SuvcKonias .
éveca kal SvarpiBis éumrodmy avtois Tov ToTapov bd | ae)
TWemevwv, Kat tov ‘AvT@vov opav éxédeve Kat
A ,
TPOTEXELV, WS TOV Torepiwv eyyus GvTwv. ape
\ 3 A / > , \ ef \ 9
dé avTot Kaliotaytos eis Tae Ta OTAAa Kal Su
avT@Y Tos akovTtaTais Kal odevdovytats éxdpopny emt Tous TodEptovs TrapacKevaloyTos, érepa-ynoav ot [ldpOo nat repinravvov as KUKAwWOO-
‘
pevot Kal cuvtapdtovtes wavtayolev Tov oTpaTov.
a a \ exdpapovtwy 5€ TaVv Yirav ém avTovs, Todas
\ 4 > \ , > 4, A aA
pev SLd0vtes ato ToEwv, ovK éXaTTOVas bé Tats poruBbios kal Tots axovtiots WAN YAS NapwBavovTes avey@pouv: celta émiyov avis, axypt ob avaTpéraves oi KeXtot tous tamovs évéBanrov Kal dte-Ll me ;
axédacav avtovs ovKéeTe THS Nuépas exeivyns Ur0-Seywa yevopevous.
232
ANTONY

On hearing this, Antony took counsel with himself. _ Hedid not wish to have the appearance of distrusting the Parthians, now that a truce had been made, but since he approved of the shorter road and of having their march take them past inhabited villages, he asked the Mardian for a pledge of his good faith. The Mardian offered to let himself be put in fetters until he should bring the army safely into Armenia, and he was put in fetters, and led them for two days without their encountering trouble. But on the third day, when Antony had put the Parthians en- tirely out of his thoughts, and was marching along in loose order because of his confidence, the Mardian noticed that a dike of the river had been recently torn away, and that the stream was flowing out in great volume towards the road over which their | march must be made. He comprehended that this. was the work of the Parthians, throwing the river in their way to obstruct and delay the Roman march, and urged Antony to look out and be on his guard, as the enemy were near. And just as Antony was setting his legionaries in array and arranging to have his javelineers and slingers make a sally through them against the enemy, the Parthians came into view and began to ride around the army in order to envelope and throw it into confusion on all sides. Whenever the Roman light-armed troops sallied out against them, the Parthians would inflict many wounds with their arrows, but sustain yet more from the leaden bullets and javelins of the Romans, and therefore withdraw. Then they would come up again, until the Celts, massing their horses together, made a charge upon them and scattered them, so that they showed themselves no more that day.

XLII. 'Ex« rovrov padov 0 'AvTavLos 0 moveiv édet, moAnois dKxovTir ais Kal opevdoviracs ou pLovov THV ovparyiar, arra Kal TAS ™ eupas éxarTe-pas CTOMOTAS év WAaLci@ TOY oTpaTOY aye, kal TOUS immoTals elpnto m poo BddAovTas Tpemea Ban, Tpevrayévous S€ pn Toppw SiwKewv, WoTE TOvS IlapOous tas eheEns tréacapas npépas ovbev mréov Spdcavtas a mabovras auPSduTEpous ryeyovevat Kal Tov Yeiuova ToLoupevous mpopaci amevat SiavociaBat,
Th 6€ méumtn Praovios T'addXos, avip trode-pikes Kat dpactnpios é€ Hryewovias Teraypévos, atnoev "Avrwviov mpoceOav mretovas rtNovs am oupas, Kal T@Y aro TOU oTOpmaToOS imTéwV TIVaS WS Méeya Kat opha pa TOLTwY. Sovros bé poo Bdddovtas dvéxonre TOUS Tonejiious, Ovx, as Tporepoy, t brary apa 7 pos TOUS omAiTas Kal avaxwpor, avnra ipurTapevos Kal oupT hexopevos mapaBohwrepov. opavTes S€ avTov ot THS oupa.- ylas tiyewoves aTroppnyvipevov éxdouy 1€LTrOVtes: 0 6€ ovw emreiOeTo. Titsov 5€ dace Tov Top av Kal TOV onpatay émthaBopevov or pépew omriow Kal owopelv tov 'd\Xov ws atroANUVYTA TOA-ous Kat aryaous avdpas. avtihoSopobytos be éxelvou wal Staxedevopevou Tots Tept QUTOV pé-VEL, 0 per Tittos d amex ape' tov 6¢ TdAAov wOovjLevoV els TOUS KaTa& otona NavOdvovat TroddOL TEpLa-XOVTES éx TOV omiaev, Barropevos 5é mTavTax olev exddet mépmroy dporyiy. ot dé TOUS omTAiTas &yovTEs, WV Kal Kavidsios 7 WV, avinp Tapa
"Avrwviw dSuvapuevos péyiorov, ov pixpa SoKxovct Siapapteiv. Séov yap aOpoay émiotpéyar thy 936
234

XLII. Having thus learned what he ought to do, Antony covered not only his rear, but also both his flanks, with numerous javelineers and slingers, led his army in the form of a hollow square, and gave orders to his horsemen to rout the enemy when they at- tacked, but after routing them not to pursue them further. Consequently the Parthians, during four successive days, suffered greater loss than they in- flicted, became less eager, and made the winter an excuse for thoughts of going away.

On the fifth day, however, Flavius Gallus, an effi- cient and able soldier in high command, came to Antony and asked him for more light-armed troops from the rear, and for some of the horsemen from the van, confident that he would achieve a great success. Antony gave him the troops, and when the enemy attacked, Gallus beat them back, not withdrawing and leading them on towards the legionaries, as before, but resisting and engaging them more hazard- ously. The leaders of the rear guard, seeing that he was being cut off from them, sent and called him back ; but he would not listen to them. Then, they say, Titius the quaestor laid hold of his standards and tried to turn them back, abusing Gallus for throwing away the lives of so many brave men. But Gallus . gave back the abuse and exhorted his men to stand firm, whereupon Titius withdrew. Then Gallus forced his way among the enemy in front of him, without noticing that great numbers of them were enveloping him in the rear. But when missiles began to fall upon him from all sides, he sent and asked for help. Then the leaders of the legionaries, among whom was Canidius, a man of the greatest influence with Antony, are thought to have made no slight mistake. For when darayya, réurrovtes KaT' GrjLyous ertBonOovvras, kal Tad nTTw@Léevwvy TovVTwY ETépovs aTrOTTEN-AovTes, EXaOoy oriryou Seely HrTns Kal dvyjs Srov dvaTAnoavTEes TO OTpAaTOTEdOY, Ei TAaXY pev

autos "Avrwvios peta TOV OTAWY ATO TOV OTO-patos hKev UTavtTialwov, Tay bé TO TpiTOY Taypha 51a trav hevyovtwpy él tos ToAepious w@adpevov éxye TOD Tpdow Siw@Keuv.
XLII. 'AwéOavoy 5é tpioyxiAiwy ov édatTOvs, éxopicOnoay Sé éri oxnvas tpavyatiat Tevra-Kioxiroe Kat T'adXos Hv év tovtos, TéTTApoww évavtiow SiaTreTrappevos Tokevpacw. adr ovTOS bev éx TOV Tpavudtwv ovK avnveyKe, Tors 8
adXous treptiov o Avtwmos érecxore: Kal Tape-Odppuve Sedaxpupévos Kat tepitabarv. of Sé gaidpot ths SeEtas avtov AauBavopevot Trapexd-Aouv amiovra Oeparrevewy avTov Kal mi) KaKoTra-Ociv, av'toxpadtopa Kadodbvtes, nal cwlecOar réyovtes av éxetvos bytaivn. Kxadorgov pev yap oT ankals ote UTomovais olTE NALKia NAT POTEpOV aAXos avTOKpaTwp oTpaToy éxeivou SoKel cUvayayelv év Tots TOTE Xpovots: 1) dé TPdS avTOV aidas Tov nyewova Kal TweOapyia pet edvoias, Kal To mavTas oparas, évdoEous, adokous, dapyovras, ididtas, THY Tapa “Avtwviou Tiny Te Kal ydpur padXov aipeioOar THs cwtnpias Kal THs drda-NeLas, OSE Tots Taras ‘Pwpaiors dmédTrEV UVirEp-Bornv. rovrov Sé€ aitiat mdeloves oav, ws MpocipnKapev' evyévera, Aoyou Suvayuts, aTAOTNS; 236

ANTONY
- @
they ought to have wheeled their entire line against the enemy, they sent only a few men at a time to help Gallus, and again, when one detachment had been overcome, sent out others, and so, before they were aware of it, they came near plunging the whole army into defeat and flight. But Antony himself speedily came with his legionaries from the van to confront the fugitives, and the third legion speedily pushed its way through them against the enemy and checked his further pursuit.

XLIII. There fell no fewer than three thousand, and there were carried to their tents five thousand wounded men, among whom was Gallus, who was pierced in front by four arrows. Gallus, indeed, did not recover from his wounds, but Antony went to see all the others and tried to encourage them, with tears of sympathy in his eyes. The wounded men, however, with cheerful faces, seized his hand and exhorted him to go away and take care of himself, and not to be distressed. They called him Imperator, and said that they were safe if only he were un- harmed. For, to put it briefly, no other imperator of that day appears to have assembled an army more conspicuous for prowess, endurance, or youthful vigour. Nay, the respect which his soldiers felt for him as their leader, their obedience and goodwill, and the degree to which all of them alike—men of . good repute or men of no repute, commanders ‘or private soldiers—preferred honour and favour from Antony to life and safety, left even the ancient Romans nothing to surpass. And the reasons for this were many, as I have said before: his high birth, his eloquence, his simplicity of manners, his love of

eo —

oe

237

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

e .
\
TO PLAGOwpov Kal peyarodwpov, 7) Tept Tas Tat-\ A A e , > / , be A

dias Kal Tas oOpiAtas EevTpamreAia. TOTE OE Kab cuLTovaY Kal auvanyav Tois KaxoTrabovct, Kal petadsoous ov tis Senbein, mwpoOupotépovs Tav
a ,
éppwuévoy Tovs voorovvTas Kal TEeTPwWpLEVOUS
érroinae.
XLIV. Tovs pévros trodepiovs atrayopevovtas
A / 76n Kal xapvovtas ottTws émjpev 1) vinn Kal
A A / TocovTov TaVv Pwuaiwy KaTeppovnoay adore Kal
vukTos éravNicacIa, tO otpatoTrédw, mpocdo-
a , :
K@VTAS AUTLKA pada oKNVAS épnuous Kal ypPN-pata Siaptdacey arodidpackovrwy. dua & hepa \ / > / \ 4
moAu TrAeioves émnOpotlovto, Kal éyovTar TeE-
,
Tpaktapupiov ovK éAdtToves immoTar yevécOaL, Bactréws Kal rovs wept avTov del TeTaypévous
e > \ a \ , / la ws emt cael cat BeBaim xatopPwpati Tréurav-
A \ a 4 /
TOS’ avTos pév yap ovdemla payn tmapétuyen,
> 4 \ A \
Avtovios S5é BovAdmEevos Wpocayopevaat Tos
, \
TTPATLOTAS NTNTE Palov ipaTLov, WS OiKTPOTEPOS
? , aA \ / >, , ’ a
op0ein. tav dé dirtov evavtiabdvtay ev TH
A ,
oTpaTnyiKy powixids mpoedOwy ednunyopnce, TOUS
, n
bev vevixnkotas éTraivarv, overdifwy bé tors duy/ fa) “
ovtas. Tov S€ ot pwéev TapexedXevovTo Oappeir, oi 5é drrodoyovpevor abas avtovs mapetyov, elite
BovroTto Sexatevev, elite ANAM TPOTH KoAdLELY:
“A povoy travoacbar dvogopodvta Kal AvTrOvpmEVvoY
, \ A \ A
édéovTo. mpos TatTa Tas Yelpas avateivas érev-Eato tots Oeois, et tis Apa véweots tas TpocOer
, “~ A A
EVTUXLAS AUTOV péTELOLY, Els avTOV éNOciv, TO SO

A /
ANNM TTPATO@ cwTnpiav Sdovat Kat vinnv.
238 |
ANTONY

giving and the largeness of his giving, his complaisance in affairs of pleasure or social intercourse. And so at this time, by sharing in the toils and distresses of the unfortunate and bestowing upon them whatever they wanted, he made the sick and wounded more eager in his service than the well and strong.

XLIV. The enemy, however, who had been already worn out and inclined to abandon their task, were so elated by their victory, and so despised the Romans, | that they even bivouacked for the night near their camp, expecting very soon to be plundering the empty tents and the baggage of runaways. At day- break, too, they gathered for attack in far greater numbers, and there are said to have been no fewer than forty thousand horsemen, since their king had sent even those who were always arrayed about his person, assured that it was to manifest and assured success; for the king himself was never present at a battle. Then Antony, wishing to harangue his soldiers, called for a dark robe, that he might be more pitiful in their eyes. But his friends opposed him in this, and he therefore came forward in -the purple robe of a general and made his harangue, praising those who had been victorious, and reproach- ing those who had fled. The former exhorted him to be of good courage, and the latter, by way of apology for their conduct, offered themselves to him for decimation, if he wished, or for any other kind of punishment ; only they begged him to cease being © distressed and vexed. In reply, Antony lifted up his hands and prayed the gods that if, then, any re- tribution were to follow his former successes, it might fall upon him alone, and that the rest of the army . might be granted victory and safety.

1 See chapter xxxix. 7.

239

PLOTARCH’S LIVES

; A A / 4
XLV. TH S€ vortepaia ppakdpevor BértLOV
a“ \ a / > a * \ mponyov: Kal trois Idp8os émeyerpotat toAvs
, >)
amnvTa Wapaddoyos. olopevor yap ep aptrayny
Kal Nenraciay, ov payny, édhavverv, elta TOANOIS
Béreow évtuyyavovtes, éppwpuévous b€ Kai veareis
“a e A
tais mpoOvyiats opavtes, avis eEéxapvov. érret
: a /, a“
dé kataBaivovow avtois aro Nopwv Tie émt-Krwov érébevto at Bpadéws bteEdyovtas EBan-
,
Nov, ériotpéeiravtes ot Oupeodpopor cuvéxrercav

v “a Lad \ uA BJ \ A / claw TaV GTAwWY TOUS Yidovs, avTol dé KalévTeEsS
? / b] , \ A e \ mM
eis yovu mpovBdarovTo Tovs Oupeots: ot 5é daricOev UTEepécVov avTay Ta SirAa KaKElvwV OpoLws ETEpOL.
\ \ aA , > 7 , 4
To 8€ oxjpa TapatAnotov épéetres yevopevov OrYruv
te Oeatpixny Tapéyet, Kal Tov TpoBAnLAaTwV TTEYAVWTATOV ETTL TPOS TOUS diaToUS aTroALGOai-
. \ , a vovtas. ot péevtot Ildp0oe tv eis youu KALowW
a € £ , ,
tav ‘Pwpaiwyv amrayopevol Hyovmevo, Kal Ka-4 patov eivat, Ta pev ToEa KatéOevTo, Tovs 5é Kov-2 , 4 ¢€
tous dtaraBovtes éyyds mpocéuEav. ot dé Pw-a , b > fF \
paiou cuvaradatavres éEaldvns avéPopov, Kat
Tois Vaools malovTes €x yELpos ExTELVaY TE TOUS WPWTOUS Kai TpoTIY CEevTO THY GANwY aTrdvTOY,
/ a A éyivero 5€ tadTa Kal tais Adrals Huépats ert puLKpOV avuoVT@Y THS Odod.
\ \ a A a
Kai \upos Hateto Tod otpatod airov Te Bpayov
\ \ : a kat va payns troptfouévou nai tev pos aAEToV TKEVOVY OVK EVTOPOUVTOS. TA Yap TrOAAa KaTE-
‘4 a
NelTrETO, TOV pev aToOvncKovTay wrotuyioD, 937

“A \ \ “a
tav o€ TO’S vorovyTas Kal TpavpaTias hepovTaV..
240

ANTONY

XLV. On the following day they went forward under better protection ; and the Parthians met with a great surprise when they attacked thém. For they - thought they were riding up for plunder and booty, ‘not battle, and when they encountered many missiles and saw that the Romans were fresh and vigorous and eager for the fray, they were once more tired of the struggle. However, as the Romans were descend- ing some steep hills, the Parthians attacked them and shot at them as they slowly moved along. Then the shield-bearers wheeled about, enclosing the lighter armed troops within their. ranks, while they themselves dropped on one knee and held their shields out before them. The second rank held their shields out over the heads of the first, and the next rank likewise. The resulting appear- ance is very like that of a roof,! affords a striking spectacle, and is the most effective of protections against arrows, which glide off from it. The Par- thians, however, thinking that the Romans dropping on one knee was a sign of fatigue and exhaustion, laid aside their bows, grasped their spears by the middle and came to close quarters. But the Romans, with a full battle cry, suddenly sprang up, and thrusting with. their javelins slew the foremost of the Parthians and put all the rest to rout. This hap- pened also on the following days as the Romans, little by little, proceeded on their way.

Famine also attacked the army, which could pro- vide itself with little grain even by fighting, and was not well furnished with implements for grinding. These had been abandoned, for the most part, since some of the beasts of burden died, and the others

1 [t was the testudo, described in Dio Cassius, xlix. 3.

NEeyeT aL bé yoimE "Artix Tupav TEVTHKOVT, dpax may GvL0s ryeveaOau: tous 5€ KxpiBivous dp-TOUS 7 pOs dpryiptov iordvres amredLoovTo. Tparro-pevor 5é T™ pos AdyYava Kal pitas orLyoLs per évervyXavov TOV ournov, dvaryxalouevor 5é weepacbar Kal TOV AYEVTTWOY TpOoTEpov ipavro TLVOS
moas émi Odvarov dua pavias ayovans. 0 yap payor ovodev é eméuvnto TOV ANNWV OVE é eyivecken, ev 5 épyov eixe, Kiev Kal or pepe mwavra rior, Os TL peyarns amovdns a£vov Sua patTopuevos.
Wy 5é pectov TO Tedtov Kexugotoy yauate Kal
Tous AiOous TEpLopuTTOVT@DY ral peOiatavrov: TEAOS dé xoray enobvTes €OvnoKkov, émel Kal TO povoy avrimraes, oivos, efedurre. pO etpopevav dé
TOAA@Y Kal TOV TapOwv OUK adiata ever TON-NAKLS avapbeyEacbar TOV "AvT@viov Eig TOpGR ar, «°C, puptot," Oavpalovta Tous peta Hevodpartos, éTt Kal wAclova KataBaivovtes odov x THS BaBvu-Awvias Kal ToAAaTAaCIONs wayopevot TrOAELLOLS atrecwOnaav.
XLVI. Ot &é€ TlapOor StamréEat pév od duvafevoL TOV oTparov ovee Stactacas THY Tak, H6n
6 TOMNEKLS HTT HMEVOL kal Tepevyores, avis
ELPNVLKOS avepiryvuvto Tots emt Kirov he otTov
T poEpXopevors, kal Tov Tok@y Tas veupas émiet-KVUYTES dverwevas, EXeyov @S avrot pev aniacty

oTiaw Kal TOUTO TrOLODVTAL Tépas apuvns, oALyot
dé Mydav axorovbncovow ett pias 7 deutépas o6ov npépas ovdev mapevoxobves, arAa Tas aT wTépw Kopas purarrovres. TOUTOLS TOLS Ao-yous domacpot Te Kal diroppocvvat Tpocjaayr, 242

ANTONY

had to carry the sick and wounded. It is said that one attic choenix! of wheat brought fifty drachmas ; and loayes of barley bread were sold for their weight in silver. Resorting, therefore, to vegetables and roots, they could find few to which they were accus- tomed, and were compelled to make trial of some never tasted before. Thus it was that they partook of an herb which produced madness, and then death. He who ate of it had no memory, and no thought for anything else than the one task of moving or turning every stone, as if he were accomplishing something of great importance. The plain was. full of men stooping to the ground and digging around the stones or removing them; and finally they would vomit bile and die, since the only remedy, wine, was not to be had. Many perished thus, and the Parthians would not desist, and Antony, as we are told, would often cry: “O the Ten Thousand!” thereby expressing his admiration of Xenophon’s army, which made an even longer march to the sea from Babylon, and fought with many times as many enemies, and yet came off safe. XLVI. And now the Parthians, unable to throw the army into confusion or break up its array, but many times already defeated and put to flight, began once more to mingle peaceably with the men who went out in search of fodder or grain, and pointing to their unstrung bows would say that they them- selves were going back, and that this was the end of their retaliation, although a few Medes would still follow the Romans one or two days’ march, not molest- ing them at all, but merely protecting the more outlying villages. To these words they added greetings and acts of friendliness, so that once more

1 About a quart.
243
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

CA a wate Tadwy Tous ‘Pwapaious evOapcets yevécbat \ \ * , 9 4 “ , ? ld
kal tov “Avt@viovy axovoavta Tov Tediwv édie-Oat warXov, dvudpou Aeyouevns eivat THs Sid TOV
s A @ de a) / 2 > \ > \ OpwVv. OUTW movely £eXNOVTOS NKEV aVNP ETL
\ a
TO OTpaTOTEOOY Ex THY ToAELioy dvoua Mibpi-5 / ? \ M , A > "A ld atns, avetrtos Movaicov tov tap VTWOVL® yevopeévou Kal Tas Tpeis Toes Swpeav AaBEvTos.
néiov 6€ a’t@ mpocedMeciv tia tov Tapbsori diarexOjvar Svvapéevwv 7 Yupiocti. Kat mpoced-

Oovtos ’AreEdvdpov tod ’Avtioyéws, ds Fv Av-ld , e \ aA ” N , \ Twovi@ suvnOns, vrevT@v Os ein, Kal Movaton tiv
, bd , > , ‘ ? LU } bd , Vapi avartov, npwrnae Tov AreEavdpov et Xo-a \ ¢ A fc a , t
gous cuvexeis cal IYrynrovs opd mpdcwbev. h7-LC A gg 2 > 2 > » Pr
cavtos 5é opav, “ “Tr éxeivous, é&pn “ TavoTtpa-
A , A e “A \ \ 4
tia IIdp@or rAoy@ow tas. Ta yap peydra
, nw , 4 b , \
media TOV Nopwy TouTay éEnpTHTAaL, Kal Tpodbo-
a a“ / > A A
Kaow vuas éEnratnmévous UT avTav évTadba
/ \ \ a 2 A > , ? /
tpéirec Oar, THY Sia THY Gp@v aTroNLTrOVTas. éxeivn \ 9 ” ju \ / e a 0 a, fev ov éxet Oinvos Kal Tovov Upiv cuvnOn, TavTy dé yopav ’Avtovos iota tas Kpdooou tiyas avrov éxdeyopévas.”
XLVII. ‘O pév odtw dpacas arnrOev: ’Avtoyios 6€ akovaas Kal SiatapayOeis ouvexdret TOUS
“A € A
dirous xal Tov nyenova THS 0600 Mdpbov ovdé
2 \ ” a \ \ A / auTOV aXAWS PpovovvTa. Kal yap avev TrodEuLwv
a2 \ \ A , ’ , ’
éyivwore Tas bia TOY Tediwv avodtas Kal TAdvas yareTras kal Svotexpdptous ovcas, THY Sé Tpaa J / yOe wv } \ aA “A xeiav amrépaivey ovdéy adro duvay Epes fH pas 244

938

ANTONY

the Romans became full of courage, and Antony, when he heard about it, was more inclined to seek the plains, since the way through the mountains was said to be waterless. But as he was about to do this, there came a man to the camp from the enemy, Mithridates by name, a cousin of the Monaeses who had been with Antony and had received the three cities as a gift! Mithridates asked that someone should come to him who could speak the Parthian or Syrian language. So Alexander of Antioch came to him, being a close friend of Antony, whereupon Mithridates, after explaining who he was, and attri- buting to -Monaeses the favour now to be shown, asked Alexander if he saw a range of lofty hills on beyond.

Alexander said he did see them. ‘“ Under those hills,” said Mithridates, “the Parthians with all their forces are lying in ambush for you. For the great plains adjoin these hills, and they expect that you will be beguiled by them into turning in that direction and leaving the road through the mountains. That road, it is true, involves thirst and hard labour, to which you are now accustomed; but if Antony proceeds by way of the plains, let him know that the fate of Crassus awaits him.”

XLVII. After giving this information the man went away, and Antony, who was much troubled by what he now heard, called together his friends and his Mardian guide, who was himself of the same opinion as their visitor. For he knew that even were there no enemy the lack of roads through the plains would involve them in blind and grievous wanderings, and he showed them that the rough road through the mountains had no other annoyance

1 Cf. chapter xxxvii. 1,

e 7 ? , ov e \: : ,

2 uépas avudpiay éyovocav. odtw 61) TpaTropevos
4 , Cd b) eee 4
TauTyy Hye vuxtos, Vdwp éemipépecOar Kedrevoas.
’ a \ © b) 4 al A \ N \
ayyeiwv Sé Av atropia Tots woNXots: 610 Kal Ta Kpavn miyumravtes UdaTos exopurlov, ot 5é dupG-
€ ,
pats vroNapBavortes.
"Hdn S€ mpoxwpav ayyérreTat Tots TdpGoes \ \ ‘ J N ” A 3Q7 ey / N
Kal Tapa TO ELWOOs ETL VUKTOS Ediwxov. HAtou 5é aT XYOVTOS HwrtTovto TOY €axYaTwY aypuTVia Kal TOV® KAKOS StaxelpévwOV? TEToAaPaKOVTA yap Kat Staxocious év TH vuKti oradiovs KaTnVUKELcaY’
Kal TO pn TpocdoK@aty odTwW TaxXéws emedOew
3 Tous TroAeulous aOupiav Twapelye. Kal to Sivos eTETELVEY 0 GY@V" AuUvopEVaL yap Awa Tporyov.
“ 4 A oi 8€ mpa@toe Badilovtes évTuyydvovet TOoTAaL@
N \ 4 \ 4 e \ \
wuypoyv yey ExovTs Kai Stavyés, adpupdv é Kal pappaxaddes Bdwp, 6 wodev edvOds odvvas éEdko-
“A “A ,
péevns THS Kolrias Kal Tod Sipous dvaddeyopévouv

map xe. Kal tadta tov Mdpdou mporéyovTos xO\ 2 3 4 \ b) , M” ovdev Arrov éxBialopevor tovs dveipyovtas Eruvov.
b) , \ ow \ b a \ ? : ”~
4 "Avtovios 5é treptioy édeito Bpaydy éyxaprephaas
‘
ypovov’ EtEpoy yap ov Toppw TroTamov elvat To0-
2 ra
Tuov, Elta THY NOLTHY adiTTOY Kal TpaxXetar,
[4 4 >. 4 A ,
@oTe TavTaTac atTrootpéewacGat Touvs Trohepi-
ous. dua 6€ Kal trols payopuévous avexadeito
\ 4 ? / e a a 4
Kal catatevéw éonpaivev, ws oKlLas your “eTaAa-Botev ot orpatiorat.
246

than lack of water for a single.day. Accordingly, Antony took this route and led his army along by night, after ordering his men to carry water with them. The greater part of them, however, had no vessels, and therefore some actually filled their helmets with water and carried them, while others took it in skins.

But word was at once brought to the Parthians that Antony was advancing, and contrary to their custom they set out in pursuit while it was yet night. Just as the sun was rising they came up with the rear-guard of the Romans, which was foredone with sleeplessness and toil; for they had accomplished two hundred and forty furlongs in the night. More- over, they did not expect that the enemy would come upon them so quickly, and were therefore disheart- ened. Besides, their contest intensified their thirst ; for they had to ward off the enemy and make their way forward at the same time. Those who marched in the van came to a river, the water of which was clear and cold, but had a salty taste and was poison- ous. This water, as soon as one drank it, caused pains, accompanied by cramping of the bowels and an inflammation of one’s thirst. Of this too the Mardian had warned them, but none the less the soldiers forced aside those who tried to turn them back, and drank. Antony went round and begged the men to hold out a little while; for not far ahead, he said, there was another river which was potable, and then the rest of the way was too rough for cavalry, so that the enemy must certainly turn back. At the same time, too, he called his men back from fighting and gave the signal fer pitching the tents, that the soldiers might at least enjoy the shade a little.

247

o

XLVIII. Un yvupévor oby trav oxnvarv, Kai TOV

TlapOwv evOus, dorep eiwbercay, dtraddraTToOpé-
e a vov, nKev avis o MiOpidarns, Kal trod "ArdeEdv-
/ ,
Spov mpocerPovTos trapyver pixpov navyacavTa
N
TOY oTpaToy daviotavar Kal orrevdery emt Tov
, e > / , ¥ \
TwotTapov, ws ov SsaBnoopévoy WdpOwv, dype 5é
a“ \ éxeivou StwkovTwv. TavTa amayyeiias pos
9 4 9 / > Ul b > aA “~
“Avreoviov AréEavdpos éxpépes tap’ avtov ypvca
4 4 \ 4 2 > a 4
ToTnpla TapuToNAa Kat hiaras, wy ExElvos, Oca
a“ 3 A , \ N b) ,
tH éoOnte Kataxpuvat duvatos hv, NaB@v amrn-
” \ e¢ 4 wv >? 4 >
Aauvev. Ete 5 Huépas ovans avalevEavtes érro-
A 4
PEVOVTO, TMV TroAELioV Ov TapEevoXAOVVYTMD, avTol
~ a 4
d€ éavTois vuKTAa YahEeTwWTAaTHY TAaca@Y EKELynv
\
kat ghoRepwratny adepyacdpevot. tovs yap ¥ 4
EYovTas apyvploy 7) ypvoiov atoxtivvurTes, eov-
\ A
wv Kal Ta YpnuaTa TaY UToluyiwy adnprraloy’ Tédos 6€ Tois “Avtwviov oxevoddposs émeyerpr-cavtes éxTr@pata Kal tpaTélas woAvTeAcis KaTE-KOTTTOV Kal Steve wovTo.
@opuBov Sé wood Kal wAAVOU TO OTPaTEVLA
“A / A way éméyovtos (@ovTo yap eTiTETTWKOTOV TOV
, :
TOAELioY TpoT)Y yeyovevat Kal Siacracpov) ’Av-
, a
T@viOs Eva Kadécas TaV SopupopovyTwY avToV
€
amerevbépwv, dvopa “Pdpuvov, @pKxwcev, . dtav
\ aA a
Kerevan, TO Eidos avTov Sreivar Kal Thy Keharny J a , “A “ aTTOTEMEL, WS UNnTE ALON Cov UTd TOV TrOAELLOY

, a pente yvooOein teOvnkas. éxdaxpvodvtwy dé TaV
4 e dirwy o Mdpdos éOdppuve tov “Avta@vor, ws > ‘\ v lel le)
éyyus OvTos Tov moTamov: Kal yap apa tis

XLVIII. Accordingly, the Romans went to pitching their tents, and the Parthians, as_ their custom was, at once began to withdraw. At this point Mithridates came again, and. after Alexander had joined him he advised Antony to let the army rest only a little while, and then to get it under way and hasten to the river, assuring him that the Parthians would not cross it, but would continue the pursuit until they reached it. This message was carried to Antony by Alexander, who then brought out from Antony golden drinking-cups in great numbers, as well as bowls. Mithridates took as many of these as he could hide in his garments and rode off. Then, while it was still day, they broke camp and proceeded on their march. The enemy did not molest them, but they themselves made that night of all other nights the most grievous and fearful for themselves, For those who had gold or silver were slain and robbed of it, and the goods were plundered from the beasts of burden; and finally the baggage-carriers of Antony were attacked, and beakers and costly tables were cut to pieces or distributed about.

And now, since ‘there was great confusion and straggling throughout the whole army (for they thought that the enemy had fallen upon them and routed and dispersed them), Antony called one of the freedmen in his body-guard, Rhamnus by name, and made him take oath that, at the word of command, he would thrust his sword through him and cut off his head, that he might neither be taken alive by the enemy nor recognized when he was dead. Antony’s friends burst into tears, but the Mardian tried to encourage him, declaring that the river was near;

> / wn
aTroppéovea voTepa Kal uypoTEpos anp aTravTav

aches
nolo THY avamvonv éroie, Kal Tov ypovov épn
a ,
THS TopEelas oUTW TUUTEpaivery TO MéTPOV" OVKETL
\ * A A , “A , bud 3
yap Hv ToXU TO NELTTOMEVOY THS VUKTOS. Apa 8
b) , ¢ A / ? a \ e annyyerXov Erepot Tov OopuBov ex THs pos av-Tovs dduxias Kal mreovetias elvat. 810 Kal Kataa \ A bd 4 b a 4 N
otTnoat TO TAROOS eis TaEw ex THS WraVNS Kal tov dtaotracpov BovAopmevos éxéXevce onpatvery xcataltevEw. .
” le) XLIX. "Hén & dbrédaptrev jyépa, cal tod oTpatTov Koomov apyYouévouv tTiva AauBave Kal novxiay mpocéminte Tos TeXeUTAiols TA TOV
, 4 \ , A wae
lldp0wv rofedpata, cal payns onpetov €d00n
aA wn e \ e nn , e , Tous wWirots. ot S€ omAiTat TadLVY Opoiws KaTe-
, J V4 “a “ e 4 \
péyravtes adXdHAOUS Tois Oupeocis véuevov Tovs BarXovtas éyyls ov TorApavras auvedOety.
UTayovtTwy 5€ KaTa pLKpPOV OUTaS TOV TPATwY
0 TroTamos épavn Kal tods tmmets er abT@
A ,
mapatatas ‘Avtwvios évavtiovs Tots TroNEuiots
dieBiBale tovs daGeveis wpptovs. dn && Kal Tots paAXOpMEevols Adela Kal pacT@vn TOU Tey HV, @s yap eloov of IldpOo. toy aorapov, tds Te veupas avnxav Kal Oappobvtas éxédXevov Siatrepav tous ‘Pwpatous, ToAXa THY apEeTHVY avTaV éyKo-pudlovres. StaBavtes ody xa? jovyiayv avrovs dverapBavov, eira @devorv, ov Tavu Te Tois 4 Uf ¢ 3 e 4 \ \
IlapGous meorevovtes. extn & Hepa peta tHv
7 4 > A ‘ ’ 4 \ K
TedeuTAlay payny emi Tov ApakEny trotamov Kop, opiCovra Mydiav nai ’Appeviav. épdavn Sé Kat 250
939

ANTONY

‘for a breeze blowing from it was moist, and a cooler air in their faces made their breathing pleasanter. He said also that the time during which they had been marching made his estimate of the distance conclusive ; for little of the night was now left. At the same time, too, others brought word that the tumult was a result of their own iniquitous and rapacious treatment of one another. Therefore, wishing to bring the throng into order after their wandering and distraction, Antony ordered the signal to be given for encampment.

XL1X. Day was already dawning, and the army was beginning to assume a certain order and tranquillity, when the arrows of the Parthians fell upon the rear ranks, and the light-armed troops were ordered by signal to engage. The men-at-arms, too, again covered each other over with their shields, as they had done before, and so withstood their assailants, who did not venture to come to close quarters. The front ranks advanced little by little in this manner, and the river came in sight. On its bank Antony drew up his horsemen to confront the enemy, and set his sick and disabled soldiers across first. And presently even those who were fighting had a chance to drink at their ease ; for when the Parthians saw the river, they unstrung their bows and bade the Romans cross over with gocd courage, bestowing much praise also upon their valour. So they crossed without being disturbed and recruited themselves, and then resumed their march, putting no confidence at all in the Parthians. And on the sixth day after their last battle with them they came to the river Araxes, which forms the boundary be- tween Media and Armenia. Its depth and violence

Baber cat TpayXUTnTe Xareros: Kat Novos &ndAOev évedpevovtas avTobt TOUS ‘Torepious err OncecOat SiaBaivovow avrois. émet dé arpanres StatrepacavTes éemeBnoay THS A ppevias, Gomep apt. yhv exelvny isovres éx meddyous, 7 poo eKUvouv Ka ™ pos Sdxpva Kai teptBoras ahha ov UT xapas eTpémrovro. mpoiovTes dé 61a yopas evdatpovos Kal Xpwmevor Taotw avédnv ex TONANS aropias, wSepixois Kat KotdaKois TepléeMiMTOY appwotnpact.

L. "Evtata TOLno 4pLeVvOsS eferacwy avUTOV | “AvTavios evpe dtc wupious melous Kat TeTpaKicXertous iT Tels amokwdoTas, ov TAVTAS m6 TOV TONE LLOYD, ann Umép jploes VOT HT AVTAS. ddevoay pev ouv amr} Ppadrev npepas ENTA KAL elKoot, paxass dé oxTa Kal béKa IIap@ovs évixnoav, ai 5é vixat Kparos ovK elxov ovde

BeBarornta piKpas ToLoupMéevwv Kat areneis Tas dt@Eets. ® Kal pddiota KaTadnros np “Aptaovdadns 6 0 "A puévios “Avra@veov éxeivou TOU ToNe-fou TO TENS apehopevos. él yap ovs annyarye
éx Mndias LT ITELS éFaxvaxtdtous Kat pupious Taphray, Eo KEVAC LEVOL Tapamrna ws Tldp0ous Kal cunders payerBat 7 pos avTous, ‘Po pateov pev TOUS payopévous TpeTromeveny, éxetvav 5é Tous pevyovTas aipovTov, ovK av vmnpeev avrois HTTOMEVOLS dvadépety Kat avatonpav TooauTakes.
amavres ovv opyn mapwEvvov emi THY TLuLwpiav Tov “Appeviou TOV "AvTw@veov. o 6€ oyro wp XpPNT apevos ovTe éuéuato THY mpodociay ovTe ageire THs auvynfovs dirodppocvvns Kat Tits 252

made it seem difficult of passage; and a report was rife that the enemy were lying in ambush there and would attack them as they tried to cross. But after they were safely on the other side and had set foot in Armenia, as if they had just caught sight of that land from the sea, they saluted it and fell to weeping and embracing one another for joy. But as they advanced through the country, which was pros- perous, and enjoyed all things in abundance after great scarcity, they fell sick with dropsies and dysenteries.

L. There Antony held a review of his troops and found that twenty thousand of the infantry and four thousand of the cavalry had perished, not all at the hands of the enemy, but more than half by disease. They had, indeed, marched twenty-seven days from Phraata, and had defeated the Parthians in eighteen battles, but their victories were not complete or lasting because the pursuits which they made were short and ineffectual. And this more than all else made it plain that it was Artavasdes the Armenian who had robbed Antony of the power to bring that war to an end. For if the sixteen thousand horsemen who were led back from Media -by him had been on hand, equipped as they were like the Parthians and accustomed to fighting with them, and if they, when the Romans routed the fighting enemy, had taken off the fugitives, it would not have been in the enemy’s power to recover themselves from defeat and to venture again so often. Accordingly, all the army, in their anger, tried to incite Antony to take vengeance on the Armenian. But Antony, as a measure of prudence, neither reproached him with his treachery nor abated the friendliness and respect usually shown to him,

253

mpos autov, acbevns TO oTpaT@ Kali aTropos yeyoues. Da tepov plev Toe madwy éuBarwv eis
A ppeviar, Kal Todas Umocxerert Kal ampo-KANT ETL meloas avTov ebeiv EUS Xetpas, cuvéraBe, kai déoptov Karayayav Ets “AreEav-Spevav, eO pidBevoev. d padiota “Pwpatious éXuTN GED, @S TA KANA Kal cEeuVa TIS mat pidos Aiyumrioss dia KXeordtpav xaptlopevos. tavta peév ovv bo Tepop émpayOn.

LI. Tore bé dua TOAD XELpervos non Kat vigeTov atavoTov eTTELyOMEVOS oKTaKLaXtALOUS améBane Kad? o6ov. avTos d€ kataBas 6ALYOOTOS
emt Oaraccav éy Yopio tivi perakv Byputot KELMEV ED Kat Lavos, Avan KON Kadelrat,
Kr<comdtpav Te pLepeve’ Kal Bpadvvovens aodn-Hovey HaAve, TAaXv pev els TO Tivev Kat peOv-oxecOas d:500s éavrTov, ov KapTepav dé Kara
KELLEvOS, anrra peTage TLVOVT OY avi TApLEVvOS
Kab avanndav TONXAKLS emia KoTrely, éws éxelvn KaTéem hevaey, éoOijra TORN Kat Npnwara Kop fovea, Tots OTPATLUTALS. etal dé ot Aéyovres 6 bre THY Mev ecOhira Tap excels AaBov, TO 6 dprytptov éx tav idiwyv éauvtod, Sdréverpev as éxeivns dido0vens.
LIT. Te 6€ Baotre? TOV Mydov yivetat
Siadopa 7 POs Ppacpray tov IlapGoy, apEauevn per, QS pace, Virép TOV ‘Popaikar Ladupov, Umovoray 5é TO Moo Kal poBov adarpécews TIS dpxijs TapacXobca. 5:0 Kal wéurrewv éxdret TOV
"AVT@VMOY, etraryyedd opevos oupTohepno ety pera
THS EAUVTOD SuVapEWS. yEevopxevos ovY ém’ éXTriOOS 254

940

ANTONY

being now weak in numbers and in want of supplies.
But afterwards, when he once more invaded Armenia,!
and by many invitations and promises induced Artavasdes to come to him, Antony seized him, and took him in chains down to Alexandria, where he celebrated a triumph. And herein particularly did he give offence to the Romans, since he bestowed
the honourable and solemn rites of his native country upon the -Egyptians for Cleopatra’s sake. This, however, took place at a later time.
LI. But now, hastening on through much wintry weather, which was already at hand, and incessant snow-storms, he lost eight thousand men on the march. He himself, however, went down with a small company to the sea, and in a little place between Berytus and Sidon, called White Village, he waited for Cleopatra to come; and since she was slow in coming he was beside himself with distress, promptly resorting to drinking and intoxication, although he could not hold out long at table, but in the midst of the drinking would often rise or spring up to look out, until she put into port, bringing an abundance of clothing and money for the soldiers. There are some, however, who say that he received the clothing from Cleopatra, but took the money from his own private funds, and distributed it as a gift from her.

LIT. And now the king of the Medes had. a quarrel with Phraortes the Parthian; it arose, as they say, over the Roman spoils, but it made the Mede suspicious and fearful that his dominion would be taken away from him. For this reason he sent and invited Antony to come, promising to join him in the war with hisown forces. Antony, accordingly,

1 In 343.c. Cf. chapter liii. 6, peyarns o 'Avravues (6 yap édoxer hove Tou Katerpyac Gas Ilap@ous atronstrety, immévv TON-

Nev Kal TofoT ay évdens éAOw@v, tovToO _ capa
T poarytvopevov auto Naprlomevep paddov 7 deo-HEV®) mapecxevdtero &e "A ppevias ads ava-Baivew Kat TVYYEVOMEVOS ™@ Md trepi, ToTtapov
"Apa€&nv obt@ xivety Tov ToAELOV.
LIT]. "Ev éd€ 'Popuy Bovropevns 'Oxraovias Thedoat ™ pos 'AvTa@viov, emer pewe Kaicap, WS
ob MTANELOUS NYOUGLY, OVK éxeivy yvaptlopevos, aD
Omrws TmeptuBpto beioa Kat KaTapednJeioa 1 p0s
TO TONE Lov aitiay evmpeTry Tapacxoe. ryevo-pévn dé év AOnvats édéFato ypappata Tapa
"Avtoviov KeXevovTos avToOL T poo wevetv Kal Ta mept Tv avdBacw dnhowvtos. 7 86, kaiTrep axOopévn Kal voodoa THY Tpopacty, us eypanpe muvdavopern moi Kenevel TEeupOnvar Ta Kop-Comeva ampos avrov. exouete 5é TOMMY pev
eoO fra TT PATLOTLENY, TOA 6é broluyia Kal Xpnpara Kal dapa Tots wept aurov HryEHoo Kat pirous: exTOS dé TovTwY oTPATLATAS €mrtNEKTOUS Sia xudtous els TTPATHYLKAS omeipas KEKOT [LNpévous exmpeTreat TavoTTrALAts. Tatra. Néypos TLS
"Avtoviou piros arog taneis Tap auris edpate, kat mpocetiOe. tovs akiovs Kal mpérovtas émaivovs.
AicBopévn, dé 7 _Kneorarpa THY 'Oxraoviav
OMoce Xwpotcav AUTH, Kal poPnbeioa pi) TOU TpomTou TH cepvornte kat tH Katoapos Suvdpuer

mpoocxTnoapevn TO Kal’ Sovny optrelv cab 256

ANTONY

was in high hopes. For the one thing which he thought had prevented his subjugation of the Parthians, namely, his lack of a large number of horsemen and archers on his expedition, this he now saw supplied for him, and he would be granting and not asking a favour. He therefore made preparations to go up again through Armenia, effect a junction with the Mede at the river Araxes, and then prosecute the war.

LIIT. But at Rome Octavia was desirous of sailing to. Antony, and Caesar gave her permission to do so, as the majority say, not as a favour to her, but in order that, in case she were neglected and treated with scorn, he might have plausible ground for war. When Octavia arrived at Athens,! she received letters from Antony in which he bade her remain there and told her of his expedition. Octavia, although she saw through the pretext and was dis- tressed, nevertheless wrote to Antony asking whither he would have the things sent which she was bringing to him. For she was bringing a great quantity of clothing for his soldiers, many beasts of burden, and money and gifts for the officers and friends about him; and besides this, two thousand picked soldiers equipped as praetorian cohorts with splendid armour. These things were announced to Antony by a certain Niger, a friend of his who had been sent from Octavia, and he added such praises of her as was fitting and deserved.

But Cleopatra perceived that Octavia was coming into a contest at close quarters with her, and feared lest, if she added to the dignity of her character and the power of Caesar her pleasurable society and

1 In 35 B.c.
257
VOL, IX. 8

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Geparrevew "Avra@veov dpaxos yevnrat Kat KpaTHO TavrTanact Tov avdpos, é épav avr T poceWovettTo ToD ‘Avtwviou, Kat TO copa Aerrrais Kadnpet daira TO b¢ Brénpa TpoatovTos exTreTAny MEVOV, aTrepyopévou dé TKO pevov Kal TATEWOUMEVOY vrrepaivero. T paywarevomern bé TOANGKLS od Ofjvas Sax pvovea Taxv tav daxpvav adn pet Kal dméxpumrev, as 87) Bovdopevy Aavddvel éxeivov. émpatreto 0€ TAaUTA HédNovTos TOU avdpos éx upias avaBaiverv mpos Tov M76or. of 5€ KoAaKkes orrovddloytes virép avTns édot-

Sopouy Tov ’Avr@viov ws oxAnpov Kai aTrabh Kal Tapato\AuvTa yUVvaLov Eis éva Kal fLovoy éxeivov aunpTnwevov. ’"Oxtaoviay pev yap T paryudrov Evexa Sia tov aderAdov’ cuvedOciv Kai TO THs
yameThs dvopua caprovaGat- Kreorrdtpay dé TtocouTwv davOpwrwr Bactrevoveay epwopevny
"Aytwviov KareicOat, Kal Tovvopa ToUTO pn
pevryerv pnd amatobv, Ews opav exeivov éFeote Kal avn: amrehavvopevny 6€ TOUTOU bn) ‘Tept-Biwcec Oat. TENS & ovp OUT TOV dvOpwmov ébérnEav Kal ameOnhuvay, Gore deicavTa pn KnrXeotratpa mpontas tov Biov, eis “AdeEdvdperav évraveN bet, TOV bé M7Sor els @pay Etous ava-Baréo Bau, KaiTrEp €y OTAGEL TOV HapOicav Elvat Aeyouevan. vv pny adda TOUTOV pev dvaBas avds eis pidiav mpoonyayero, Kal daBov évt tov ex Kyeorratpas viav yuvaira “play avrou tav Ovyatépwyv tt puxpay ovoay eyyunoas éravnrGev, non mpos Tov éeupvdAcoy TroAELOY TET PAf[LLEVOS.
258

ANTONY

her assiduous attentions to Antony, she would become invincible and get complete control over her husband. She therefore pretended to be passionately in love with Antony herself, and reduced her body by slender diet; she put on a look of rapture when Antony drew near, and one of faintness and melancholy when he went away. She would contrive to be often seen in tears, and then would quickly wipe the tears away and try to hide them, as if she would not have Antony notice them. And _ she practised these arts while Antony was intending to go up from Syria to join the Mede. Heer flatterers, too, were industrious in her behalf, and used to revile Antony as hard-hearted and unfeeling, and as the destroyer of a mistress who was devoted to him and him alone. For Octavia, they said, had married him as a matter of public policy and for the sake of her brother, and enjoyed the name of wedded wife ; but Cleopatra, who was queen of so many people, was called Antony’s beloved, and she did not shun this name nor disdain it, as long © as she could see him and live with him; but if she were driven away from him she would not survive it. At last, then, they so melted and enervated the man that he became fearful lest Cleopatra should throw away her life, and went back to Alexandria, putting off the Mede until the summer season, although Parthia. was said to be suffering from internal dissensions. However, he went up and brought the king once more into friendly relations, and after betrothing to one of his sons by Cleopatra one of the king's daughters who was still small, he returned, his thoughts being now directed towards the civil war.

LIV. 'Oxtaoviay $€ Kaicap bBpicbat doxov-TAY, @S émaviOev AOnvav, éxéXevoe al?
éautTny oixeiv. 1 5é ovK pn Tov olKov atroneirety
la) ? 4 > \ 9 A > a > A > e lA Tov avodpos, GXAG KaKeElvoY auToY, Et yy du' ETEPAS aitias éyvwmKe Todeuety AvTwvio, Tapexanrer TA
> e \ IA e > \ > a , >] nw :
xa cathy €av, ws ode axovoat KaXop, éL Toy peyioTov auToKpaTopwy o pev Os épwra yuvaiKos, o 6é da Sndorumiay els €udvrArov trodepnov 'Pw-paious -xatéotnce. Tavta b€ Néyouca padXov
9 , 5 > } \ Ld \ > 7
éBeBaiov &: épywv. Kal yap @xet THY oixiap, wn s > "
omep avtTov mapovTos éxeivov, kal Tav téxvwv
"A n 9 \ \ A
ov povov Tav €& cauTAS, adda Kal ToY é« Dovdr-
, n~ nw
Bias yeyovoTwv, KaXa@s Kal peyaXorpeTas érre-
a \ A perelTo* Kal TOUS TeuTOMEvOUS Eri apYas TiVaS
a > 4
h wpaypata tov Avtwviov dirwv vrodeyouevn
\ "
ouvérpatrev ay Tapa Kaicapos dSenOciev. dxovca ed PS) \ 4 "A , > A \ Sé Batre d1a TovTwy 'Avtwyov: éutceiro yap
"A "~ 4

adtK@v: yuvaixa TorauTny. éutonOn dé cal dia
, , a
tnv Stavéunow tv éromoato toils téxvois év
"AX PS 4 \ \ e , t
eEavopela, Tpayixny Kat viepndavoy Ka
pucoppwyatov daveicav. eumdnoas yap dxAou
TO yupvdotov Kat Oéwevos ert Bnywatos apyupod
“ N “A
Sv0 Opovovs xpvaots, Tov pev éavT@, Tov bé KyXeorratpa, Kat tois matow étépouvs tatre-
a \ > A
4 voTépous, mpatov pev atépnve Knreorartpav
Bacittocav Aiyittov cal Kvrpou nat AtBuns
\ , / 7 3 “a
Kal KoiAns Yupias, cvupBaoirevovtos avtny Kar-
, b , 207 a ,
TAaplLwyos, os éx Katcapos édoxer tov TpOTEpou - yeyovévat Kyeotratpay éyxvovy Katanstrovtos:

260

941

ANTONY

LIV. As for Octavia, she was thought to have been treated with scorn, and when she came back from Athens Caesar ordered her to dwell in her own house. But she refused to leave the house of her husband, nay, she even entreated Caesar himself, un- less on other grounds he had determined to make war upon Antony, to ignore Antony's treatment of her, since it was an infamous thing even to have it said that the two greatest imperators in the world plunged the Romans into civil war, the one out of passion for, and the other out of resentment in behalf of, a woman. These were her words, and she confirmed them by her deeds. For she dwelt in her husband’s house, just as if he were at home, and she cared for his children, not only those whom she her- self, but also those whom Fulvia had borne him, in a noble and magnificent manner; she also received such friends of Antony as were sent to Rome in quest of office or on business, and helped them to obtain from Caesar what they wanted. Without mean- ing it, however, she was damaging Antony by this conduct of hers; for he was hated for wronging such a woman. He was hated, too, for the distribution which he made to his children in Alexandria ; it was seen to be theatrical and arrogant, and to evince hatred of Rome. For after filling the gymnasium with a throng and placing on a tribunal of silver two thrones of gold, one for himself and the other for Cleopatra, and other lower thrones for his sons, in the first place he declared Cleopatra Queen of Egypt, Cyprus, Libya, and Coele Syria, and she was to share her throne with Caesarion. Caesarion was believed to be a son of the former Caesar, by whom Cleopatra was left

261

Sevtrepov 8 tous é& abtod wal KXeorarpas viovs a“ , b) , XA , \
Bacirets Bacthewy avaryopevaas Andefavopy peep Appeviav atrévetrpe nat Mndiay nai ra Tlapdwv,
e e , , \ , \
étav vrayaynrat, Utovepai@o 8€ Dowixny kal Ss V4 \ 4 oe be i V4 “A Lupiav cai Kirsxiav. dua b€ cal mponyaye Tov maidwv “AréEavdpov pév éoOqte Mndexy tedpav kat Kitapw opOnv éxovon, IroAveuaioy 5é KpnTice
\ / , ,
Kal xravids Kal Kavoia Stadnpatodop@ KeKoo p17-
, ee \ @ AY a 3 + i) ,
pévov. altn yap Hy oxevn Tov am ‘AdXeEdvdpou
, ? / be 10 \ > /
Baciréwv, éxeivn 0€ Mndwv xat Appeviowr.
a \ ‘ “a
aoTtacapévay S€ TOV Traidwy TOUS yoveEts, TOV [ev
"Appevioy puraxn treptictato, Tov dé Maxedover.
Kreor arpa ev yap Kal Tote Kal tov dAXov xpovor eis TAGs éEtotca oToAny iepay “Tovdos éxaduBave cal véa "lous éypnparite.
LV. Tatra 8€ es cvyKdnTov éxpépwv Kaicap
“A / a
Kal TOAAdKLS ev TO ONU@ KaTHYOpaV TapwtUVE
' ‘ a > > dA. , ” \ \ 9
To TAHOoS er’ “Avt@uov. émeutre dé eat ’Av-TWOVLOS aVTEyKAA@Y Exeivo. péylota & Fv Ov.
? f a f cf af oh > /
évexdrel, Tpatrov pév, Ott Uoprrniov YxKeriav aderopevos ovK evetme pépos AVT@ THs vyoou:
Sevtepov, OTL Xpnodpevos vais tap’ avtod pds TOV TON pOV aTeaTépnoe? TpiTOY, 6TL TOY TUVdp-yovta Aémidov éxBarov tis apyns Kal tmoimjoas ATimov avTos Exel OTPATOV Kal XKMpaV Kal TPOGO-
Sous Tas éxeiv mpocveunbeioas: eri maou, Ste
Tois avToU aotpatiwTats Aatacav orjiyou Seiv
9 , , \ \ a Iradtav KataxexXnpovy ke, pndévy NuTr@V Tots éxetvov. pos tadta Kaiaap azrenXoyeira Aémudov 262

pregnant. In the second place, he proclaimed his own sons by Cleopatra Kings of Kings, and to Alexander he allotted Armenia, Media and Parthia (when he should have subdued it), to Ptolemy Phoenicia, Syria, and Cilicia. At the same time he also produced his sons, Alexander arrayed in Median garb, which included a tiara and upright head-dress, Ptolemy in boots, short cloak, and broad-brimmed hat surmounted by a diadem. For the latter was the dress of the kings who followed Alexander, the former that of Medes and Armenians. And when the boys had embraced their parents, one was given a bodyguard of Armenians, the other of Macedonians. Cleopatra, indeed, both then and at other times when she ap- peared in public, assumed a robe sacred to Isis, and was addressed as the New Isis.

LV. By reporting these things to the senate and by frequent denunciations before the people Caesar tried to inflame the multitude against Antony. Antony, too, kept sending counter-accusations against Caesar. The chief accusations which he made were, in the first place, that after taking Sicily away from Pompey, Caesar had not assigned a part of the island to him; in the second place, that after borrowing ships from him for the war he had kept them for himself; thirdly, that after ejecting his colleague Lepidus from office and degrading him, he was keeping for himself the army, the territory, and the revenues which had been assigned to Lepidus: finally that he had distributed almost all Italy in allotments, to his own soldiers, and had left nothing for the soldiers of Antony. To these charges Caesar replied by saying that he had deposed Lepidus from office

bev UBpifovta Kataraioa THs apxns, & Sé EoXNKE Trodkeunoas, veunoeoOat pos Avtwviov 6tav Kdxeivos "Appeviav mpos avtov' tots bé otpatiotais "Iradias pwn petelvary Mndiay yap éyew xal IlapOiav avrovs, as mpocextncavto
'Pwpaios Karas aywviodpevot peTa Tov. avTO-KpaTopos.
LVI. Tadra év 'Appevia dtatpiBov *Avtovos
neovoe Kal Kavidsoy ev0us éxérevcev exxaidexa Tern AaBovTa xataBaivey émt POaratrav. avTos
dé KXcomdtpav avaraBov eis "Edecov hee. Kai TO vauTiKOV éxet ouVnEer TravTaydOeVv, OxTAKOCLAL ou oAKaot vies, @v Kdeotrdtpa mapetye Siakooias Kal tddavta diopvpia Kal tpodiyy TO oTpaT@ tavti mpos Tov moéAcuov. "Avtewvios Sé mevabels vo Appitiov Kai Tiwwv addXwv éxédevE KAcordrtpav wrelv em' Aiyvrrou xaxei dtaxapa-Soxeivy tov moAcuov. % 5é hoBoupévn ras de
"Oxraovias mad avtod Stadvoes Eretce TON-Nois Kavidscov xonpacw 'Avtwvig diarexOjvas
Tept avTys, ws ovTe Sixatoy ameravverOat Tod

ToNEuou yuvaixa cuuBoras THALKAUTAS Stdo0dCa)D, ovte aupdépov abuporépous Troteity Tovs Atyutr-TiOUS péya pépos THs vauTLKHAS Suvapews OvTas:
Grrws bé unde opav obtivos TAY TUaGTpAaTEVOYTOV Bactéwv atonreitrotto to hpovetv KXeoratpa, jwonvy pev xpovoy & abtas xuBepvdca PBact-ANelav TocavTnv, ToAvY 5é éxeiym auvotca Kal pavOavovoa ypncOat rpdypact peyaros. TadTa (de yap eis Kaicapa mavta tepiedOeiv) évixa' kal avyiovoay tov duvapewyv revaavTes es 264

because he was abusing it, and as for what be had acquired in war, he would share it with Antony whenever Antony, on his part, should share Armenia with him ; and Antony's soldiers had no claim upon Italy, since they had Media and Parthia, which countries they had added to the Roman dominion by their noble struggles under their imperator.

LVI. Antony heard of this while he was tarrying in Armenia; and at once he ordered Canidius to take sixteen legions and go down to the sea. But he himself took Cleopatra with him and came to Ephesus. It was there that his naval force was coming to- gether from all quarters, eight hundred ships of war with merchant vessels, of which Cleopatra furnished two hundred, besides twenty thousand talents, and supplies for the whole army during the war. But Antony, listening to the advice of Domitius and sundry others, ordered Cleopatra to sail to Egypt and there await the result of the war. Cleopatra, however, fearing that Octavia would again succeed in putting a stop to the war, persuaded Canidius by large bribes to plead her cause with Antony, and to say that it was neither just to drive away from the war a woman whose contributions to it were so large, nor was it for the interest of Antony to dispirit the Egyptians, who formed a large part of his naval force; and besides, it was not easy to see how Cleo- patra was inferior in intelligence to anyone of the princes who took part in the expedition, she who for a long time had governed so large a kingdom by herself, and by long association with Antony had learned to manage large affairs. These arguments (since it was destined that everything should come into Caesar's hands) prevailed ; and with united forces

4 Lapov év evrabeiass Foav. dotep yap Bact-

Nevot Kal Suvdorais Kal retpdpyais EOveci re
Kal qwodect doa Tais peraklY Xvupias Kal Mawwrtidos cat’ Appevias xai "TAAupi@v mrpoeipnro méutrev Kal xoustley Tas els TOV TOAEMOY Tapa-oKeuads, oUTW Waa Tois Tepi tov Atovucov Te-xvirars emadvaryKes HY eis Yapov atavray’ Kai THS ey KUKAM oxedoY aTracNs oiKoUpEévNs TreEpt-Opnvovpévns Kal tepiotevalomevns, pia vioos ep
nuépas ToAAas KaTnVAEiTO Kal KaTeYrddXETO mAnpoupevwy Oeatpwv Kal yopav aywulopéevov.
5 ouveOve 5é€ Kal mods Taca Boty Téurovea, Kat Baotnreis SunsAX@vt0 Talis UTroboxais Kat Swpeais
mpos G@AAnAOUS. wate Kal Aoyos SineEt, TiveEs écovtat KpaTnoavres év Tots émwwikiots ot TOU TONELOU TAS TAPATKEVAS OUTW TOAUTEADS EoPTA-Sovtes.
LVII. Tevopuevos 5¢ aro tovTwy tots wey rept tov Arovucoy texyvitats Ipinvny edwxev otxn-tnptov, autos dé mAevoas eis "AOnvas mad év
matdtais Hv Kal Oedtpow. nroTvTovca Sé Knreotatpa tas ’Oxraovias év TH Tove Tipds (nyanrnOn yap oo tav ’"AOnvaiwy 4 ’Oxraovia padiota) woAdais avedauBave didrotipiats TOV 2 Sipov. ot dé Tyas avTA ndiodpevor Tm péa Bets érreurpav er THy oixiay TO Wwodtopa KopiCovtas, ov els qv ’Avtwvios, ws 89 wodirns "AOnvaiwr: kal 6) Kataotas éw avtTns AOyov Umep THS morews dicEnHrAOev. eis Sé “Pwopny Erreur we tovs 3 "Oxtaoviay éx THs oixias éexBadovytas. amredOetv dé dacw avtiv ta pev téxva mdvta ‘AvtTwviov pe? Eautiis Eyovoay avev tov mpeoButratov TAY

they sailed to Samos and there made merry. For just as all the kings, dynasts, tetrarchs, nations, and cities between Syria, the Maeotic Lake, Armenia, and Illyria had been ordered to send or bring their equipment for the war, so all the dramatic artists were compelled to put in an appearance at Samos; and while almost all the world around was filled with groans and lamentations, a single island for many _days resounded with flutes and stringed instruments ; theatres there were filled, and choral bands were competing with one another. Every city also sent an ox for the general sacrifice, and kings vied with one another in their mutual entertainments and gifts. And so men everywhere began to ask : “ How will the conquerors celebrate their victories if their prepara- tions for the war are marked by festivals so costly?”

LVII. When these festivities were over, Antony gave the dramatic artists Priene as a place for them to dwell, and sailed himself to Athens, where sports and theatres again engaged him. Cleopatra, too, jealous of Octavia's honours in the city (for Octavia was especially beloved by the Athenians), tried by many splendid gifts to win the favour of the people. So the people voted honours to her, and sent a depu- tation to her house carrying the vote, of whom An- tony was one, for was he not a citizen of Athens? And standing in her presence he delivered a speech in behalf of the city. To Rome, however, he sent men who had orders to eject Octavia from his house. And we are told that she left it taking all his chil- dren with her except his eldest son by Fulvia, who

e

a

;

ex DovrBias (exelvos yap wv mapa TO warp), Kdatovoay 5é kal dvadopodcay et So€et pia TOV ait iay Tou TORE Lov Kat avrn ryeryovevan. "Pwpaios

dé @KTELpOV OUK éxelvny, ar 'AvT@voy, Kae PadXov ot Krcomatpav E@PAKOTES ovTe KdANeEL +
THs Oxraovias ove dpa Siadépovoay.
LVIII. Kaicap e 70 TAXOS KQL TO péyeDos
THS Tapacxeviis axovaoas é€OopuvBnOn, pn ToD Oépous éxeivou SvaTrohepeiy avayxacOn. Kat yap évedet TONG, xal tous avOpw@mous éXUTrouY ai TOY NaTwV elom pagers" dvaryxalopevor yap ot pev AAXoL TA TéTapTa TOV KapTr Oy, oi bé eFedev-Depuxol TOV KTNATOV avTa@Y TAS oySoas amro-Pépery cateBowv avroo, kal Tapaxal KaTelyov eK TOUTOY dmacav thy "IraXiav. o0ev éy Tots peylarors a papT Hpac ty "AvTw@viov Thv avaBornv TOU qoNémou TiPevTar. Kat yap wapackevdcacbat Xpovov éwxe Kaiocaps xai tas Tapaxas TOV avOpwrwyv é€éduce. T par Topevol yap nyptacvOVTO, m pax Déevres dé Kal dovtes novxacor. Ti-TLos 6€ Kal IIddyxos, "Avtwviou piroe TOV UTA-TLKOYD, vo KyXeoratpas mpoTrnraKtlouevor (arNeEt-oTa yap jvavtieaOnaay avrTn Tept TOU cvoTpa-TEVELV) _amoopayres @YOVTO 7 pos Kaicapa, Kal Tepl TOV 'Avtoviov diaOnav éyévovTo pnvur a, Ta yeypappéva ouveootes. amréxewto 8 avrat
qapa tais 'Eoridot trapbévois, nat Katoapos aitovvtos ovx édwxav: et 6 BovrotTo AapBavew, éenbety auTov exédevon. ExaBev ovv erOoy: Kal TP@TOV Lev ares idia Ta yeypappmeva duprGe,

Kal Tapeonunvato TOToUs TLVas EvKaTHYOpHTOUS' 943
268

ANTONY

was with his father; she was in tears of distress that she herself also would be regarded as one of the causes of the war. But the Romans felt pity for Antony, not for her, and especially those .who had seen Cleopatra and knew that neither in youthful- ness nor beauty was she superior to Octavia.

LVIII. When Caesar heard of the rapidity and extent of Antony's preparations, he was much dis- turbed, fearing lest he should be forced to settle the issue of the war during that summer.! For he was lacking in many things, and people were vexed by the exactions of taxes. The citizens generally were compelled to pay one fourth of their income, and the freedmen one eighth of their property, and both classes cried out against Caesar, and disturbances arising from these causes prevailed throughout all Italy. Wherefore, among the greatest mistakes of Antony men reckon his postponement of the war. For it gave Caesar time to make preparations and put an end to the disturbances among the people. For while money was being exacted from them, they were angry, but when it had been exacted and they had paid it, they were calm. Moreover, Titius and Plancus, friends of Antony and men of consular rank, being abused by Cleopatra (for they had been most opposed to her accompanying the expedition) ran away to Caesar, and they gave him information about Antony's will, the contents of which they knew. This will was on deposit with the Vestal Virgins, and when Caesar asked for it, they would not give it to him; but if he wanted to take it, they told him to come and do so. So he went and took it; and to begin with, he read its contents through by himself, and marked certain reprehensible passages; then

1 The summer of 32 B.c.

269

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Gretta THY Bovdny aOpoicas dveyivwoke, TOV

4 ThELa TOV anoas éxovTwv. ad AoKoTov yap édofev elvat cal dewvov, evOuvas Twa didova Cavra mept av éBovryOn yever Oar pera THY TedevTHV. eTeveto 6é TAY Yeypappevev uddaTa TE Trept Tis tadis. éxédeve yap avrob TO copa, Kav év
'Popun TENEUTION, du ayopas mopmevdev els
'AreEdvSpevav WS Kyeomatpav arocrahiva.
5 Kandoviatos 5é Kaicapos éraipos ért kal tavTa tav eis Kyeordtpay eyehnpatov "AvTovip mpoupepe: Xapicacbar pev aura ras é« lep-

YyajLov BiBrroOnKas, év als elxoot pupiddes
BuBrALov amrhav Hoav: év 5é ouvdeirve TOAN@Y TapovTw@y dvactavra TpiBecv auTns TOUS m00as éx TLVOS optapod Kab cuvdnkns ryevowevns” "Ege-aious dé avacyérbat TapovTos avtou Kupiay Thy 6 Kyeordrpav domagapévous" Sicadfovta b€é ToA-AaKUS TeTpapxals Kab Bacihedow émt Anpatos deATapia TOV EpwT LK ovvxiva ral KpvoTad\Auwva
dexer Iau map" avTAS | Kal avaryivad Key’ Poupviov Oé€ AéyovTos, Os Hv aErapatos peyddou Kat dewvoTatos elarety ‘Popaiwr, THY pev Kyeomatpav
év opeip Sia ris ayopas Kopiler Oat, Tov bé
"AvT@VLOV, @S elev, avannojcavTa THY pep
dixnv aronumeiy, éxxpewavyupevoy S€ TOU popetov WapatréwTrew éxelyny.
LIX. ’AAAa TovTwY pév edoxet Ta WrEloTa
katanpevoea Gar Karoviovos- ot b¢ trot Tob ‘Avteviov TmepriovTes éy ‘Pwyn tov Shpmov ixé-Tevov, eva dé é& avTay érreupay Tepiviov deopuevor tov "Avrwviou pn meptidety abtov arrorndia Bévra 270

ANTONY

he assembled the senate and read it aloud to them, although most of them were displeased to hear him do so. For they thought it a strange and grievous matter that a man should be called to account while alive for what he wished to have done after his death. Caesar laid most stress on the clause in the will re- lating to Antony’s burial. For it directed that An- tony’s body, even if he should die in Rome, should be borne in state through the forum and then sent away to Cleopatra in Egypt. Again, Calvisius, who was a companion of Caesar, brought forward against Antony the following charges also regarding his behaviour towards Cleopatra: he had bestowed upon her the ‘libraries from Pergamum in which there were two hundred thousand volumes; at a banquet where there were many guests he had stood up and rubbed her feet, in compliance with some agreement and compact which they had made; he had consented to have the Ephesians in his presence salute Cleopatra . as mistress; many times, while he was seated on his tribunal and dispensing justice to tetrarchs and kings, he would receive love-billets from her in tablets of onyx or crystal, and read them; and once when Furnius was speaking, a man of great worth and the ablest orator in Rome, Cleopatra was carried through the forum on a litter, and Antony, when he saw her, sprang up from his tribunal and forsook the trial, and hanging on to Cleopatra's litter escorted her on her way.

LIX. However, most of the charges thus brought by Calvisius were thought to be falsehoods; but the friends of Antony went about in Rome beseeching the people in his behalf, and they sent one of their number, Geminius, with entreaties that Antony

THS apxns Kal TorewLov Pwpatwy avayopevOévra, Tepivios 6€ rrevoas els tTHhv "EXAdba KXeomdtpa bev Hv Oromtos, ws UTép Oxtaovias wpdtTov, oxwmrTopevos 5€ Tapa Setmvov ae Kali KrArciats ATiMOLS TpOTTNAAKLEOMEVOS NVELYETO KALPOV évTEv-
> / \ N / 74? (s4
Eews avapévov: xerevobels dé rAéyewv ed' ols hres
\ N "A \ \ v " /
Tapa To OEixvoyv, THY pev adANV Edn vIdovTos
3 ¢ a \ ' , bd 4 \
elvas Oidreky, Ev 5€ Kat vidwv ériotacba Kai
4 (ed A 4 , 4 >]
peOvav, Ste Karas E€et mavta Kreomdtpas eis Alyurtov amadXayeions. mpos rovTo Tov 'Av-Twviov yarernvavtos 7 KAeordtpa ' Kanda," y PP , ° , \ », 7 "
ébn, "erroinxas, © Vepine, tnv adnOerav avev Bacdvev éEoporoynadpevos." Tepivios pev ovv peT OAdLyaS nuépas atrodpas els "Pwunv wyero.
moAAous 6€ Kal TOY GAXwv dirwy ot KreoTrdtpas xoraxes €&éBadov Tas trapovias cal Boporoxias ovx UTropévovtas, ov Kal Mapxos hy Xwravos Kai
v] e ¢@ , r @ \ \ a , AédrALos 0 tatopiKos. "ovTos 5é Kal detoai dnow émuBovrnv éx Kreordtpas, [AavKov tod iatpov ppdcavtos avT@. mpocéxpovae de Knreordtpa mapa Seimvov eimav avtois pev o€ivnv éyyeio@at,
, \ 2 9 ¢ , na € Q
Lappuevtov oé€ miverv ev "Pwopyn Parepivov. o dé Ldppuevtos Hv tov Kaicapos maryviwv waiddpuoy, ry , e a a

& dndixta ‘Pwpaio: carovorv.
LX. ’Ezet 5€ wapecxevacto Kaicap ixavas,
Wngiferar Kreordtpa trodepueiv, adperécOar bé Ths «apyns “Avr@mov hs éFéorn yuvatki. Kal mpocereime Kaicap ws Avtwvios péev rd pap-4 A nw nA
pakwy ovdé avTOU KpaToin, TroNEpLovGL 8 avTois 272

ANTONY

would not suffer himself to be voted out of his office and proclaimed an enemy of Rome. But Geminius, after his voyage to Greece, was an object of suspicion to Cleopatra, who thought that he was acting in the interests of Octavia; he was always put upon with jokes at supper and insulted with places of no honour | at table, but he endured all this and waited for an opportunity to confer with Antony. Once, however, at a supper, being bidden to tell the reasons for hi’ coming, he replied that the rest of his communica- tion required a sober head, but one thing he knew, whether he was drunk or sober, and that was that all would be well if Cleopatra was sent off to Egypt. At this, Antony was wroth, and Cleopatra said: ‘“‘ Thou hast done well, Geminius, to confess the truth with- out being put to the torture.” Geminius, accordingly, after a few days, ran away to Rome. And Cleopatra’s_ flatterers drove away many of the other friends of Antony also who could not endure their drunken tricks and scurrilities. Among these were Marcus Silanus and Dellius the historian. And Dellius says that he was also afraid of a plot against him by Cleopatra, of which Glaucus the physician had told him. For he had offended Cleopatra at supper by saying that while sour wine was served to them, Sarmentus, at Rome, was drinking Falernian. Now, Sarmentus was one of the youthful favourites of Caesar, such as the Romans call “ deliciae.”’

LX. When Caesar had made sufficient preparations, a vote was passed to wage war against Cleopatra, and to take away from Antony the authority which he had surrendered to a woman. And Caesar said in addition that Antony had been drugged and was not even master of himself, and that the Romans 273
VOL. IX. T
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Mapdiwv o evvoiyos cat [lofeves cal Hipas
e 4 4 \ , @ > 2
n. KXeomrdtpas xoupevtpia. cat Xaputov, vp ov Ta peyltota Storxei Tar THS Hryepovias.
> ww be N A / 10. , @

neta S€ po Tov ToAépov Tade yevéoOar
4 Aéyerar. Letcavpa pév, "Avtwviov mods KdNpovxia, wxicpévn Tapa tov 'Adpiav, yaopdtov

e / / a \ \ wv
UroppayévTwy KxateTtoOn. trav bé epi “AASav
” / / ? / e.N ¢ \ ? /
Avtoviov AUOivev avdptavtwv évds idpws averti-Svev Huépas odds, aTopaTTOvT@Y TeV ov
/ a mavopevos. év 5é€ Ildtpais dsatpiBovros avtov Kepavvois éverpnaOn TO “Hpdxreovy nal ris
"AOnynos yeyavtopaxyias UTd mvevpaTtwv o ALo-yuoos éxcetabels eis TO Oéatpov KxatnvéxOn:
: / \ ¢ . 9 , ¢ ~ \
mpooweiou d€ éautov "Avtwvios “Hpaxret cata
/ \ , \ \ A , A
yéevos xat Atovvom xara tov tov PBiov CHrov,
U
@otrep elpntat, Atovucos véos Tmpocayopevopevos.
» 6€ aut OveAAa Kal Tovs. Evpevots Kal
> 4 \ > 4 bf
AttdXov Kodoocous emiyeypaypevovs Avtovetous AOnunow éumecovaoa povovs éx ToAAOY avétpewre. 1 5€ KrXeomrdrpas vavapyis éxaretto
? a pev “Avtwvids, onpetov 5é amept avtny Sewvov
épavn: xXedboves yap uo THY ™ pupvay éveoT-Tevoay’ érepat 6é émehOodcat kal tavtas é£1j-Nacay Kal TA veoTTLA drep Getpav.
LXI. Luviovrey dé Tpos Tov ToAenov Avravi@ poev joav ai pax wor Vijes OvK ehaT Tous TevTa-xociwy, év als OKT APES moAnral Kal Sexnpers KeKoo unpévar coBapos Kal TaVvNnyUpPLK@S, OT PATO 274

944

ANTONY

were carrying on war with Mardion the eunuch, and Potheinus, and Iras, and the tire-woman of Cleopatra, and Charmion, by whom the principal affairs of the government were managed.

The following signs are said to have been given before the war. Pisaurum, a city colonized by An- tony situated near the Adriatic, was swallowed up by chasms in the earth. From one of the marble statues of Antony near Alba sweat oozed for many days, and though it was wiped away it did not cease. In Patrae, while Antony was staying there, the He- racleium was destroyed by lightning; and at Athens the Dionysus in the Battle of the Giants! was dis- lodged by the winds and carried down into the theatre. Now, Antony associated himself with Hera- cles in lineage, and with Dionysus in the mode of life which he adopted, as I have said," and he was called the New Dionysus. The same tempest fell upon the colossal figures of Eumenes and Attalus at Athens, on which the name of Antony had been inscribed, and prostrated them, and them alone out of many. Moreover the admiral's ship of Cleopatra was called Antonius, and a dire sign was given with regard to it. Some swallows, namely, made their nest under its stern ; but other swallows attacked these, drove them out and destroyed their nestlings.

LXI. When the forces came together for the war, Antony had no fewer than five hundred fighting ships, among which were many vessels of eight and ten banks of oars, arrayed in, pompous and

1 One of the groups of figures at the south wall of the Acropolis dedicated by Attalus I. of Pergamum. See Pausanias, i. 25, 2, with Frazer's notes.

2 Chapters iv. 1 f. and xxiv. 3.

3 As Cleopatra was called the New Isis (liv. 6).

dé wupiddes dea, Sir Xidwoe 5 immeis emi pupiors.
Bacireis 6é UTNKOOL ouveudXouv Boxyos 0
AtBiwv kal Tapeovdnpos o THs avo Ker«xias, cat Kamzasdoxias pev "Apyédraos, Haddayovias
dé DirAdderdos, Koppaynviis dé Mc8piddrns, Ladaras dé Opaxns. obroe pev avrot Taphnoay, éx 6é€ Tovrov ITodépeov oTpatov emeutre, Kat Manxos é& 'ApaBias Kal 'Hpwdns 0 'Tovdaios, ére Oe "Apuvtas 0 Aveaovwvy xal Tadatov Baotnevs: ay dé cal trapa tov Mydov Bactréas dmreaTahpevy Bondeua. Kaicap dé viajes oav
T pos anny TEVTHKOVTA kal dtaxoc.at, otparod
5€ OKT@ pupidées, immeis 6€ WapamrAnoLoe TO THOS Tots TONEMLOLS. npxov oe AvToveos pev
THs ar Evdparou kat Appevias Hex pe ™pos TOV
"Toviov «al TAuptous, Kaicap 8€ aa' Ddupi@y
Tis emt TOV éoméptov a@Keavov Kadnkovans Kal
THS at w@Keavod TdadLv él TO Tuppnvexov Kal
DLKEALKOV TELaYOS. AtBuns dé tay "Itadta Kat Tararig Kab TBnpia péy pe orn hav 'Hpaxhelov

avTimapnico voav ele Kaicap: Ta, 66 amo Kupnyns péxpis AOcorias ‘AVT@VLOS.
LXII. Odrw 6é dpa mT poo Onkn THS yuvarros mV DOTE T@ mel@ TOD Stag épwv éBovreTo TOU vau-TLKOU TO Kpatos elvat 61a KXcoratpar, Kal Tatra
TANpPw aT ov arropia cvvaprratopévous op@v vTrO
TOV TpinpapXav ex Tis TONKA On TAAGTNHS
7 ‘EAAd805 odoumopous, ovnddras, Jeptatas, ep7j-

Rous, Kal 0vdé odTw TAnpoupevas Tas vads, GAda
Tas TreloTas arrodecis Kat poxOnpas TAEoVeas.
Kaicap &é ob mpos trros ov8é Syxov erBerxtixas 276

ANTONY

festal fashion; he also had one hundred thousand infantry soldiers and twelve thousand horsemen. Of subject kings who fought with him, there were Bocchus the king of Libya, Tarcondemus the king of Upper Cilicia, Archelaiis of Cappadocia, Philadelphus of Paphlagonia, Mithridates of Commagene, and Sadalas of Thrace. These were with him, while from Pontus Polemon sent an army, and Malchus from Arabia, and Herod the Jew, besides Amyntas the king of Lycaonia and Galatia; the king of the Medes also sent an auxiliary force. Caesar had two hundred and fifty ships of war, eighty thousand infantry, and about as many horsemen as his enemies. Antony’s authority extended ,over the country from the Euphrates and Armenia to the Ionian sea and Illyria; Caesar’s over the country reaching from Illyria to the Western Ocean and from the ocean back to the Tuscan’ and Sicilian seas. Of Libya, the part extending opposite to Italy, Gaul, and Iberia as far as the pillars of Hercules, belonged to Caesar; the part extending from Cyrene as far as Armenia, to Antony.

LXII. But to such an extent, now, was Antony an appendage of the woman that although he was far superior on land, he wished the decision to rest with his navy, to please Cleopatra, and that too when he saw that for lack of crews his trierarchs were haling together out of long-suffering Greece wayfarers, mule-drivers, harvesters, and ephebi,! and that even then their ships were not fully manned, but most of them were deficient and sailed wretchedly. Caesar’s fleet, on the other hand, was perfectly equipped, and

1 Young men approaching full military age, enrolled for preliminary training and service.

277

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TeTrnyvLaLs vavoiv, edorpddors dé xal Taxelacs
Kat TeTANpwpévats axptBas éEnptupévov éy
Tépavre Kal Bpevtecip TEX OV TO VaUTLKOD, ET EMTEE Tpos "Avr@vioy akiav p17 Stat piBeu TOV Xpovor, GAN Epxer Oar PETA TOV Suvdpewy:
AUTOS be TO pev aoTOAw TrapéEey 6 dppous aKwnv-TOUS Kal dupévas, bmoxwpyoew bé 7@ elo Ths maparias” iarmou Spopov ams Oaddttns, expt dv acdandas atroBy Kal oTpaTomedevonTat. TOv-TOLS avtixopmagov "AvTa@vtos aurov pev els povopaxiay Tm povkaneiro, xaitep av Tm peo Bu-TEpOS" eb 5€ pevyor TOTO, mept Papoanov n&tou Tots TTPATEVLATLY, as mddat Kaicap nai Topmnios, Siaywvicac bat. pOdver 5é Kaicap, "Avto-viov mept To “Axtiov OpmovvTos, év @ TOT@ viv 7 NixomroXts iSputas, SiaBaraov rov “Iévov at THS "Hareipov xwplov 0 Topuvy KarelTar KaTaoXev" JopuBoupevey dé Trav Tept Tov "Avr@viov (va reper yap o trelos avrois) v) pev Krcomdtpa oxontovaa, “Ti dewvov,” Erevyer, “eb Kaicap émi Topuvn KdOnra: ” LXIIL. "Avtwvios 8é, a apa mMepa TOV Tohepiov eruTeovTa, poBnbets Bn TOV emtBatav € ép7pous EXwot Tas vais, TOUS meV épéTas omhioas emi TOV KATAOTPOLATOV mapéragev drpews évena, TOUS be Tapoous TOY vEdy éyetpas Kal TTEPWTAS éxarepober é év TO oT opaTe Tept To “AKTLov a avTiTp@pous cuvEetyev, WS évnpEts Kal Taper Kevac weévas avverOat. Kal Kaicap bev 00TH Kataatparnyndels amexwpnoev. &doke 5é Kal Td Bdwp edunyavas 1 wapadlas Xylander’s correction of the MSS. ’IraAlas, adopted by both Sintenis and Bekker.
278

945°

ANTONY

consisted of ships which had not been built for a display “of height or mass, but were easily steered, swift, and fully manned. This fleet Caesar kept assembled at Tarentum and Brundisium, and he sent to Antony a demand to waste no time, but to come with his forces; Caesar himself would furnish his armament with unobstructed roadsteads and harbours, and would withdraw with his land forces a day’s journey for a horseman from the sea-shore, until Antony should have safely landed and fixed his camp. This boastful language Antony matched by challeng- ing Caesar to single combat, although he was an older man than Caesar; and if Caesar declined this, Antony demanded that they should fight out the issue at Pharsalus, as Caesar and Pompey had once done. But while Antony was lying at anchor off Actium, where now Nicopolis stands, Caesar got the start of him by crossing the Ionian sea and occupying a place in Epeirus called Toruné (that is, ladle); and when Antony and his friends were disturbed by this, since their infantry forces were belated, Cleopatra, jesting, said: “ What is there dreadful in Caesar’s sitting at a ladle?”

LXIII. But Antony, when the enemy sailed against him at daybreak, was afraid lest they should capture his ships while they had no fighting crews, and there- fore armed the rowers and drew them up on the decks so as to make a show; then he grouped his ships at the mouth of the gulf near Actium, their ranks of oars on either side lifted and poised for the stroke, and their prows towards the enemy, as if they were fully manned and prepared to fight. Caesar, thus outwitted and deceived, withdrew. Antony was also thought to have shown great skill in enclosing

épvpact TLoOW eumepthaBav aerer bar TOUS TOAEULOUS, TOY ev KUKL@ X@piov ddryov Kal Tovnpov €YovTwv. evryva pores dé xat Aopurion mpoanvexOn Tapa TV ‘Krcomatpas woepny.
érel yap éxeivos n0n TUPET TOV Els peux pov éuBas axdtvov pos Kaicapa peTeoTn, Bapéws € éveyKov 0 “AVT@VLOS bos Taoay auT@ THY aTrooKeuvny pera TOV piiov cal TOV Ocpamovrav am eTenyye.
«al Aopirios HED, domep ért TO py AaOeW THY am.iatiav avtod Kal tpodociav weTaBarropevos, evOus éreXevTYCEV.
’"Eyévovto 5€ cal BactNewv atroctacets, “Apuy-tov xat Aniotdpov, mpos Kaicapa. to 6é vauTixoyv év travtt dvampayouv Kal mpos a&tracav barepivov BonGeav avdis invdynate T@ TWEC@ TpoaexeLy tov "Avrwviov. éaxe Sé Kal Kavidiov
Tov apyovTa tov melov peTaPorr yrouns mapa
7a, Sewvd kal cuveBovreve Kvcomatpav pev
ATOTELT ELD, dvaxwpnoavta dé els Opaenv 1 Maxedoviay melouaxia Kpiva. Kal yap Arxouns
o Terav Bacthets UTLOXVELTO TONG oTpatig BonOjoew: OvK elvat bé aicKpov et Kaicapt yeyuuvacuév@ .trepi Tov DLxeeNLKOv TONE MOV exoTHo OvTaL THIS Gardcons, adda, Sewvov eb TOY

mela aryoveov epTELpoTaros av “AvT@vLOS ov XpHoeTat pomp Kal TapacKevyy TOC OUTWY omhe-TOV, eis vads Stavéuov Kal KaTavadickwv THY Suvapty.
Ov pny drda eEevinnae Kyeordrpa dua TOY veo xpiOjvas Tov TOAEHOV, 75n ™ pos puyny opaca, Kai tiOcwevn ta Kal? éavtny, ody Omou mpds 280

ANTONY

the potable water within certain barriers and thus de- priving the enemy of it, since the places round about afforded little, and that of bad quality. He also be- haved with magnanimity towards Domitius, contrary to the judgment of Cleopatra. For when Domitius, who was already in a fever, got into a small boat and went over to Caesar, Antony, though deeply chagrined, nevertheless, sent off to him all his bag- gage, together with his friends and servants. And Domitius, as if repenting when his faithlessness and treachery became known, straightway died.

There were also defections among the kings, and Amyntas and Deiotarus went over to Caesar. Besides, since his navy was unlucky in everything and always too late to be of any. assistance, Antony was again compelled to turn his attention to his land forces. Canidius also, the commander of the land forces, changed his mind in presence of the danger, and advised Antony to send Cleopatra away, to withdraw into Thrace or Macedonia, and there to decide the issue by a land battle. For Dicomes the king of the Getae promised to come to their aid with a large force ; and it would be no disgrace, Canidius urged, for them to give up the sea to Caesar, who had practised himself there in the Sicilian war; but it would be a strange thing for Antony, who was most experienced in land conflicts, not to avail himself of the strength and equipment of his numerous legionary soldiers, but to distribute his forces among ships and so fritter them away.

However, Cleopatra prevailed with her opinion that the war should be decided by the ships, although she was already contemplating flight, and was dis- posing her own forces, not where they would be

281

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TO viKaV éora XPHTLWL0s, arr’ bOev arrest pgora TOV TpayLatTwv aTrohhupEever. nv oe papa oKEAN KaTarelvovTa 1 pos Tov vavotaOmov THs aTparoTredeias, 52’ av o “AYTOVLOS etw@det Taptevar
6 pndev Upopaipevos. oixérou o€ Kaicapr dpd-TAVTOS WS Suvarov ein KaTlovTa dua TOV oKEX@V ovrAapely avrov, emepure TOUS évedpevoortas.
ot O€ Tapa TocobTov nrAOov date cuvapT dca TOV
T ponyoupevov auTov Roce evarmaunes: autos 6é

Spopm porss vreFepuyev.
LXIV. 1Os dé vavpaxeiy &é8oxro, Tas pep addas évétr pnoe vais TwANV éEjcovra TOV AlyuTrTiov, Tas 5é€ dpictas xal peyiotas aro Tpinpous HEX pe Sexnpouvs éarAnpov, Stopuptious éuBiBalwv omrj(tas Kal duoytrious toforas.
év0a melouayov avdpa TOV Taftapy ev héyouat, TALTOAXOUS ny@vig pevov ayavas “AvTo@vie Kal KQTOTET PLL LEvOY TO capa, Tob "AvT@viou Tapt-
2 oVvTos dvaxhavoad Gat Kab elTreiy “"Q, av’to-KpaTop, Tl TOV Tpavpatov TOUTO@Y uv tou Eihous KaTayvous ev Evrous Tmovnpois Evers Tas EATIOAS ; Airybmrvot Kal Doivixes € év Oardoon paxées Owoar, npiy oé& yh bos, ep nS elaBapev EgT@TES aTro-Ouija Kew 7 vexdy TOUS TrohEpious. pos TavTa
pndev a ATFOK PLVALEVOS, GANG TH XEepe Lxal T@ mpoo-OT @ povov olov éyweevodpevos Tov av pa Gap-pety, mapirbev, ov Xpneras EXov éxridas, ds ¥e Kal TOUS cuBepynras Ta lotia BovAopévous aronurrety nvayKacev éuBarecdar Kal Kopitern, Aéywor Ste Set pndéva hevyovta TeV TodEepiov diaduyeiy.
282

ANTONY

helpful in winning the victory, but where they could most easily get away if the cause was lost. Moreover, there were two long walls extending down to the naval station from the camp, and between these Antony was wont to pass without suspecting any danger. But a slave told Caesar that it was possible to seize Antony as he went down between the walls, and Caesar sent men to lie in ambush for him. These men came near accomplishing their purpose, but seized only the man who was advancing in front of Antony, since they sprang up too soon; Antony himself escaped with difficulty by running.

LXIV. When it had been decided to deliver a sea battle, Antony burned all the Egyptian ships except sixty ; but the largest and best, from those having three to those having ten banks of oars, he manned, putting on board twenty thousand heavy-armed soldiers and two thousand archers. It was on this occasion, we are told, that an infantry centurion, a man who had fought many a battle for Antony and was covered with scars, burst into laments as Antony was passing by, and said: ‘ Imperator, why dost thou distrust these wounds and this sword and put thy hopes in miserable logs of wood? Let Egyptians and Phoenicians do their fighting at sea, but give us land, on which we are accustomed to stand and either conquer our enemies or die.” To this Antony made no reply, but merely encouraged the man by a gesture and a look to be of good heart, and passed on. And he.had no good hopes himself, since, when the masters of his ships wished to leave their sails behind, he compelled them to put them on board and carry them, saying that not one fugitive of the enemy should be allowed to make his escape.

, A
LXV. 'Exeivny pév obv thy jpépay Kal Tpets
\ *~
Tas épeEns peydro mvevpate Kupavlév to Té-\ , 9? , , \ ,
Naryos THY MaXNY éweaXe, TMEuTTD be vqvenias Kal yaAdnvns axdvoTOU yevopévns cuvnecar, 'Av-t \ N } N la bY 4 \ 4
Twvios pev TO SeEvoy Képas éxwv kat [lomdexoXas;,
4 e A N > A 9 , \ 4
Kointos 8€ ro evwvupor, év péow Sé Mapxos 9 és a % OxrdBios nat Mapxos 'Ivornios. Kaicap 8 éri tov evwvupov tafas '"Aypimmav avTo Td
deEiov xatédiTre. tov dé mwelav tov pev *Apvla , \ A , A > y
twviov Kavidios, tov- 6¢ Katoapos Taipos én
ths Oardtrns wapard~avtes novyalov. attav
a 4
dé Trav nyepovwy "Avrw@vios pev éredoita Tavra-NOTE KOTTHPEL, TOVS TTPaTLwWTAS TapaKadwY Tro
A nw ef aA
Bpidovs tev veav watrep ex ys Edpaiovs payea0at, tots 5é KuBepyntats StaxedXevopevos WaTeEp oppovaats atpéua tais vavol SéyerOar Tas
9 N "a 4 \ \ 4
éwBoras TOV TOAGLwY, THY Tepl TO oTOMa buCld 4 4 be é Q
xYopiay durdtrovras. Katcape dé NEyeTaLt pev
4 A a o
€TL GKOTOUS ATO THS TKNVAS KUKA@ 'TrEepLioVTL
mpos Tas vads avO pwrros éNavvwv 6vov aTavThaat, mulopéve Sé Tovvopa yvwpicas avToy eiTreiv.
a \ ,
"'Ryot pev Kitvyos dvoua, TO 5é dvm Nixov." 610 Kal tots éuBoros Tov TOTOY KoTpaV UVaTEpoV
»" A v \ " 3 N . értnae YarKovv dvov cat avOpwrov. ériday &é
A " / 9 4 N \ } N
THY aXANnY TapaTakiy, év wWNOLW pos TO dEeELov
Kopicbels COavpacev atpesovvras év Tots aTEVOIS

TOUS ToNemous: » yap ous HY TOV veav ér
b 4 e A a / nn
ayKupats opphovoa@y. Kal TovTo pméxpt TodXOU
/ na a
TETELTHEVOS AvElYe TAS éaUTOU TrEpl OKT@ TTAbLA 284

946

ANTONY

LXV. During that day, then, and the three follow- ing days the sea was tossed up by a strong wind and prevented the battle ; but on the fifth,! the weather becoming fine and the sea calm, they came to an engagement. Antony had the right wing, with Publicola, Coelius the left, and in the centre were Marcus Octavius and Marcus Insteius. Caesar posted Agrippa on the left, and reserved the right wing for himself. Of the land forces, that of Antony was com- manded by Canidius, that of Caesar by Taurus, who drew them up along the sea and remained quiet. As for the leaders themselves, Antony visited all his ships in a row-boat, exhorting the soldiers, owing to the weight of their ships, to fight without changing their position, as if they were on land; he also ordered the masters of the ships to receive the attacks of the enemy as if their ships were lying quietly at anchor, and to maintain their position at the mouth of the gulf, which was narrow and difficult. Caesar, we are told, who had left his tent while it was yet dark and was going round to visit his ships, was met by a man driving an ass. Caesar asked the man his name, and he, recognizing Caesar, replied: “ My name is Prosper, and my ass’s name is Victor.”” Therefore, when Caesar afterwards decorated the place with the beaks of ships, he set up bronze figures of an ass and a man. After surveying the rest of his line of battle, he was carried in a small boat to his right wing, and there was astonished to see the enemy lying motionless in the narrows ; indeed, their ships had the appearance of riding at anchor. For a long time he was con- vinced that this was really the case, and kept his own ships at a distance of about eight furlongs from the

1 Sept. 2, 31 B.c.
285
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TaV évaytTiov adecta@aas. Extn Sé Hv dpa, cal
TVEVLATOS alpopévov Teraylov SucavacyeToovTeEs
ot Avtwviou mpos thy SiarpiBnv, Kal Tois Br Weot Kat peyéecs TOV oixeiwy vedy TeTroiOoTes ws ampoopaxols, TO evwvupoy exivncay: idav é Kaicap fjc8n nai rpvpvav éxpovoato To deka, Bovropevos ert pGAXov éx Tov KoATOUV Kal Tov atevav é€w Tovs TroAEmious éTioTracacbat, Kut TEepiTAEWY EUnpEeat GKAadEcL TOIs éavTOD oULmTréKETOaL TrpdS Vads UT’ OyKoU Kal TANpwpaToV OrLYOTNTOS apyas Kal Bpadeias.
LXVI. ’Apyopévou dé tov ayavos ev yepoly

elvat, éuPoral ev ovx joav ovdé avappntes veav, Tov pev “Avtwviov d:a Bdpos piynv ovK éyouga@v, 4) padtoTa Tole Tas TeV éuBorov TAnyas évepyous, Tov 6€ Kaicapos ov povoy avtt-Tpepwv cuuhépecbar mpos YadkwopaTta oTEeped Kal tpaxéa pvraccopévwv, arAdAa pnde KaTa mAeupav éuBoras Sidovar Oappovaodrv. ameOpavovto yap Ta EuPora padiws 4 mpoomécore oKd-geo TeTpaywvorv Evrov peyddrov oldnpw ocuvnppocpévov mpos GAAnAa Sebepévors. Hv ovv meCouaxig Tpoapepns 0 ayer TO dé arnBéarepov evmely, Terxouayia. TpEls yap apa Kal Técoapes Tept pilav tav ‘AvTwviov auvetyorTo, yEppots kat dopact Kal KovTois ypwpmevwy Kal mupoBoXous" ot &€ ’"Avtwviov cal xataréXtass ato EvXivov mupywv éBarxrov.
"Aypi 5€ Oartepov Ké is KUKAwWOoLD

ypimmou dé Epov Képas els KU éxteivovtos, avtavdyew TlomdKorXas avayxato-Hevos atreppyyvuTO TaV pécwv. OopuBoupévwn dé 286

enemy. But it was now the sixth hour, and since a wind was rising from the sea, the soldiers of Antony became impatient at the delay, and, relying on the height and size of their own ships as making them unassailable, they put their left wing in motion. When Caesar saw this he was delighted, and ordered his right wing to row backwards, wishing to draw the enemy still farther out from the gulf and the narrows, and then to surround them with his own agile vessels and come to close quarters with ships which, owing to their great size and the smallness of their crews, were slow and ineffective.

LXVI. Though the struggle was beginning to be at close range, the ships did not ram or crush one another at all, since Antony’s, owing to their weight, had no impetus, which chiefly gives effect to the blows of the beaks, while Caesar’s not only avoided dashing front to front against rough and hard bronze armour, but did not even venture to ram the enemy’s ships in the side. For their beaks would easily have been broken off by impact against vessels constructed of huge square timbers fastened together with iron. The struggle was therefore like a land battle; or, to speak more truly, like the storming of a walled town. For three or four of

Caesar's vessels were engaged at the same time about one of Antony’s, and the crews fought with wicker shields and spears and punting-poles and fiery missiles; the soldiers of Antony also shot with catapults from wooden towers.
And now, as Agrippa was extending the left wing with a view to encircling the enemy, Publicola was forced to advance against him, and so was separated from the centre. The centre falling into confusion

TOUT@Y Kal TUpTAEKOMEVOY Tots Trept Tov Appovy-TLov, axpttou 6€ Kab Kowijs Ere THS vaUpaxias cuve-oe aipvidsov at Kreomatpas efnxovra vijes op) noav aipopevat T pos amon Novy Ta iotia Kal bua pécou pevyovoat TOV paxopeveoy™ qoav yap oTiTw TETAYHEVAL TOV peyarwv, Kat Srextrinr-Tovoal Tapayny émrotouv. ot O€ évayTiou Oavpa-Covres eGeavro, T@ TVEVLATL Xpopevas Op@vres Kat emexovoas TOs THY TleXorovvngor. éva 67) pavepov avrov "AvT@Vos eTrointey OUTE ApYovTOS OuUTE avépos ore brAws Lolo. Aoyea pois dcocovpevor, GAN’ Omrep TU Taisen elie, THY puxiy
TOU Ep@VTOS év ardor pip cwpate Cry, ENKOMEVOS UTO THS yuvatKos aorep TUMLTEPYKDS kal oUppeTadepopevos. ov yap EPOn Thy eKxeiVvns idev vaov amom ova ay, Kal TavTOV exabopevos Kal mpodous Kab arroépas TOUS brrép avrTov Haxopevous Kat Ounoxovras, els TEevTNPN HeTeu Bas, "Areka
Tov Xvpov. Kal LKehdALov povev avT@ UvEp-Bavrov, edimxe THY amokwrexviay 4Sn cal
TpogamoXovg ay avrov.
LXVII. ‘Exeivn dé Wopicaca onpetov amo
THS vEews avéc e Kal TpoaevexOels ott Kal avarnpdets exelvny Mev ouTe eldev ouTe when, mapeav dé Lovos els mpppav éf’ éav Tou Kalijato
oLWTH, TALS XEpalv appotépars exOpLev0s TNS
Keparns. ev TOUT dé AuBupvides dp Onoav SumKovaat mapa Kaicapos:) be avtim pppov ema pepetv Tv vavv Kehevoas Tas bev anras aveaTELrey, Evpuenijs oo AdKov eveKeLTO go-Bapas, AOyyNY TiVa xpadaivey amo Tov KaTa-

and engaging with Arruntius,! although the sea-fight was still undecided and equally favourable to both sides, suddenly the sixty ships of Cleopatra were seen hoisting their. sails for flight and making off through the midst of the combatants; for they had been posted in the rear of the large vessels, and threw them into confusion as they plunged through. The enemy looked on with amazement, seeing that they took advantage of the wind and made for Pelo- ponnesus. Here, indeed, Antony made it clear to all the world that he was swayed by the sentiments neither of a commander nor of a brave man, nor even by his own, but, as someone in pleasantry said that the soul of the lover dwells in another's body, he was dragged along by the woman as if he had become incorporate with her and must go where she did. For no sooner did he see her ship sailing off than he forgot everything else, betrayed and ran away from those who were fighting and dying in his cause, got into a five-oared galley, where Alexas the Syrian and Scellius were his only companions, and hastened — after the woman who had already ruined him and would make his ruin still more complete.

LXVII. Cleopatra recognized him and raised a signal on her ship; so Antony came up and was taken on board, but he neither saw her nor was seen by her. Instead, he went forward alone to the prow and sat down by himself in silence, holding his head in both hands. At this point, Liburnian ships were seen pursuing them from Caesar's fleet; but Antony ordered the ship's prow turned to face them, and so kept them all off, except the ship of Eurycles the Laconian, who attacked vigorously, and brandished a

1 The commander of Caesar's centre, as Plutarch should have stated at Ixv. 1. 289

oTpHpAaTOS WS adnowy eT avUTOV. eItTTAVTOS dé 7H mpe@pa tov 'Avtwviov nai "Tis obtos," elmrovtos, "o Stwoxwov "Avtwvov;" "'Eyo," ceimrev, " Kvpuxrns o Aaydpovs, TH Katoapos TUYN Tov TOU TaTpos éxdic@v Odvarov." Oo Oé Aaydpns im' *Avtwviov Anoteias aitia Tept-meow érercKiaOn. amrnv ov« évéBarev o- Evpu-KAns eis THY "Avtwviov vaiv, adda THY éETépav Tov vavapyidwv (dv0 yap joav) TO Yarkopuate matakas wepteppouPnoe, Kal Tavtny Te TAaYiaY Tepimecovcay elke cal ToY GAAwY piav, ev 7 qToAXuTeEnNEls oKEVAL T@V Tepl Siaitav Hoayv. aTrar-Nayévtos 5é trovTov wad oO "Avt@vios els TO avTO oxipa -xabels éavtov aaouxiay frye Kal tpeis fuepas Kal' éavtov év apwpa Svartneis, ei?
im opyns, elt aidovpevos eéxetvnv, Tatvap@

mTpocéayev. evravéa 8 avrovs ai auvnbes yuyaikes Tp@Tov pev els Adyous aAANXNOLS TUY-yayov, eita ouvderTrvely Kal cuyxabevoey Errercav.
"Hd b€é cal trav otpoyyvAwy TWrOiwY ovK ddirya Kal tov dirwy. tives ex TIS TpoTHAS HOpoifovTo pos avTous, ayyéAAovtTes ATOAWAEVAaL TO VaUTI-Kov, ovecOat 6€ TO Telov auvectdvat. *“AvT@VLOS 5é mpos péev Kavidsov dyyéXous éreprev, ava-yopety 51a Maxedovias eis "Aciay To otpaT@ KaTa Tdyos KeXEvwY, adTos dé pédArAwWY aro Ta:vdpov mpos thv AtBinv si:aipew, odrdgKdda piav, TOAY pev Voutopa, ToAdAod Sé akias év apyup@ Kal ypvo@ KatacKevas tov BaciuKav xopivovaav, é&eAopevos Tois giros érédwxe Koh, velwacOar nat owlew éavtous xedevoas.
apvovpévouvs S€ Kal KAaiovTas evpevas Tavu 290

spear on the deck as though he would cast it at Antony. And when Antony, standing at the prow, asked, “Who is this that pursues Antony?” the answer was, “Iam Eurycles the son of Lachares, whom the fortune of Caesar enables to avenge the death of ,his father.”” Now, Lachares had been beheaded by Antony because he was involved in a charge of robbery. However, Eurycles did not hit Antony’s ship, but smote the other admiral’s ship (for there were two of them) with his bronze beak and whirled her round, and as she swung round sideways he captured her, and one of the other ships also, which contained costly: equipment for household use. When Eurycles was gone, Antony threw himself down again in the same posture and did not stir. He spent three days by himself at the prow, either because he was angry with Cleopatra, or ashamed to see her, and then put in at Taenarum. Here the women in Cleopatra's company at first brought them into a parley, and then persuaded them to eat and sleep together.

Presently not a few of their heavy transport ships and some of their friends began tu gather about them after the defeat, bringing word that the fleet was destroyed, but that, in their opinion, the land forces still held together. So Antony sent messengers to Canidius, ordering him to retire with his army as fast as he could through Macedonia into Asia ; he himself, however, since he purposed to cross from Taenarum to

Libya, selected one of the transport ships which carried much coined money and very valuable royal utensils in silver and gold, and madea present of it to his friends, bidding them divide up the treasure and look out for their own safety. They refused his gift

291
u 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kat prroppoves TapapvOnadpevos Kat _5en-

7 Geis amréotenre, ypaypas T pos @eodurov Tov év
Kopivép Stovent hy d1as ac ddevav exTropion
Kal atroxpiwn Tous dvdpas ay pt dv indcacOau Kaicapa SuvnP dow. OUTOS TY Oedprros 'I7rmdpxov maTnp Tob Tela TOV mapa 'Avravicp Suvnfévtos, mpwtov 5& awpos Katcapa TOY aTre-hevdépeov petaBaropévou Kal KatoiknoayvTos vaotepov év KopivOo.
LXVIII. Tatra pev ovv Ta KATA TOV 'AyT@- yiov. ev "Axtio bé TONY 0 oTOXOS avTLaX@y Kaioape xpavov, cat peyearov Bra Bels UTO TOU KAVOWVOS vypnrov . KaTa Tmpapav ioTapevon, pores pas Sexatns areime. Kat vexpol fev ov WAeious éyévovTo MEVTAKLTXIALODY, Edrwoav 6é TplLaKoo Lat
2 wipes, @S AUTOS aveyparpe Kaioap. naOovro dé ov TONAL mepeuryoros 'Avtevion, Kat Tots mvu0opévors TO 7 parTOV amtaros my O oyos, et déxa Kal évvea TAY paTa, melav anTTATOV Kal Sia yuALous emt pupiors im mets aromtmav olyerat, Kabdmep ov TONAEKLS én dpporepa T) TUX KEY PNMLEVOS oude pupiov - GYaveOV Kat TONE LOY peta Boras
3 eyyeryunvas pevos. ot 6¢ oTpanarar Kal moO ov Tia Kal poo doxiap elyov as avtixa oev emipavnaouevou: Kal TogauTny émredeiEavto miotiw Kal dperny Gare Kal THs puyiis avTou pavepas yevouerns npépas entra TuppElvat, TrEpLto-pavres émiTrpeo Bevopevov avrors Kaicapa. réXos 948
bé, Tov oTpaTHyoU Kavdtov YUKTWP drrodpavtos Kat KATANIT OVTOS TO atparomesov, yevopevor Tav-Tov épnuot kal mpodobévtes rd TaV apxYoVTwr, T@ KpaTouvTL TpoTEywpnoay.
292

ANTONY

and were in tears, but he comforted them and be- sought them with great kindness and affection, and finally sent them away, after writing to Theophilus, his steward in Corinth, that he should keep the men in safe hiding until they could make their peace with Caesar. This Theophilus was the father of Hipparchus, who had the greatest influence with Antony, was the first of Antony's freedmen to go over to Caesar, and afterwards lived in Corinth.

LXVIII. This, then, was the situation of Antony. But at Actium his fleet held out for a long time against Caesar, and only after it had been most severely damaged by the high sea which rose against it did it reluctantly, and at the tenth hour, give up the struggle. There were not more than five thousand dead, but three hundred ships were captured, as Caesar himself has written. Only a few were aware that Antony had fled, and to those who heard of it the story was at first an incredible one, that he had gone off and left nineteen legions of undefeated men-at-arms and twelve thousand horsemen, as if he had not many times experienced both kinds of for- tune and were not exercised by the reverses of countless wars and fightings. His soldiers, too, had a great longing for him, and expected that he would presently make his appearance from some quarter or other; and they displayed so much fidelity and bravery that even after his flight had become evident they held together for seven days, paying no heed to the messages which Caesar sent them. But at last, - after Canidius their general had. run away by night and forsaken the camp, being now destitute of all things and betrayed by their commanders, they went over to the conqueror.

"Ex tovtov Kaicap pev én' "AOnvas émrdeuce, cai Siadrrayels Tots "EXAnot Tov TweptovTa oirov
éx TOU TONE WOV Suéverpe Tats TOAETL TpAaTTOvG ALS
aOriws Kal TEpLKEKoppevars XPnpearav, avdpamo-Swv, brrofuyiwy. o yoov mporan Tos nya Ni-Kkapyos Sunyetro Tovs ToAttas amavtas avayKd-CecOat trois mmo KaTtapépery péTpnua mrupav TeTaypevoy émi tHv mpos "Avtixupay Oddraccap, UNTO pacTiywy émitaXuvomevous: Kal piav pev otTw hopay éveyxeiv, thy 5é Sevrépav 4dn pepe-Tpnpévots Kab pédAovow alpecOar vevixnpévov
"Ayt@viov ayyeAnval, Kal TovTo dStacwoat TT?
T ayyeAnvat, rue
Tow: evOus yap Tav 'Avtwviov Suatkntav xal

° "~ , "a TTpAT LOT ay guyovtwy Staveiacbat Tov aitov avTous.
LXIX. "AVT@MOS dé AiBins "dvpdsevos ral
Kyeordtpav ets Aiyumrov éx Ilapattoviou mpo-

4 > AN b) 4 9 / > , \
mwéppas avtos améAavev épnuias adOovov, .cw dual dirors ddvwv cal trAava@pevos,”"EAAnve pev
a ¢
"Apiotoxpates pntoptx@, Pwpuato dé Aoveirrio¢, ‘ e > e¢ 7 / ¢ > ,

mepi ov du érépwv yeypadpapev ws ev Pirjirrois, umép Tov Staduyeity Bpodrov, avtos avtov, ws 87
Bpodtos ov, eveyeipioe Tois Suwxovat, Kai d:acw-Gels tr’ ’Avtwviov d:a TodTO, TLaTOS avT@ Kal BéRBavos axpt Tav éoydTwv Kaipwv Trapépetver.
3 \ \ \ \ > / 4 e
éret 6¢ xal thv év AtBin Svvau o Temiotevpévos aréatnoev, oppnoas éautoyv avedey xal StaxorvGels Uo Tav dirwv Kai Kxoptcbels eis
"AreEduSpecav ecbpe Kvreotratpayv émitodkpacay 294

ANTONY

In consequence of this, Caesar sailed to Athens, and after making a settlement with the Greeks, he distributed the grain which remained over after the war among their cities; these were in a wretched plight, and had been stripped of money, slaves, and beasts of burden. At any rate, my great-grandfather Nicarchus used to tell how all his fellow-citizens were compelled to carry on their shoulders a stipu- lated measure of wheat down to the sea at Anticyra, and how their pace was quickened by the whip; they had carried one load in this way, he said, the second was already measured out, and they were just about to set forth, when word was brought that Antony had been defeated, and this was the salvation of the city; for immediately the Stewards and soldiers of Antony took to flight, and the citizens divided the grain among themselves.

LXIX. After Antony had reached the coast of Libya and sent Cleopatra forward into Egypt from Paraetonium, he, had the benefit of solitude without end, roaming and wandering about with two friends, one a Greek, Aristocrates a rhetorician, and the other a Roman, Lucilius, about whom I have told a story elsewhere.! He was at Philippi, and in order that Brutus might make his escape, pretended to be Bru- tus and surrendered himself to his pursuers. His life was spared by Antony on this account, and he remained faithful. to him and steadfast up to the last crucial times. When the general to whom his forces in Libya had been entrusted brought about their defection, Antony tried to kill himself, but was pre- vented by his friends and brought to Alexandria. Here he found Cleopatra venturing upon a hazardous

1 See the Brutus, chapter 1.
295
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

” , \ j , a \ v

Epy@ tapaRorX Kal peyado. Tov yap eipyovTos icO nov tHhv épvOpay aro Ths nat’ AiyuTrrov Oa-Adoons Kal Soxobvtos Aciav nat AiBunv opifery,
4 opiyyerat pddtota Tols meAadyeot Kal Bpayv-TaTOs Epos €oTL, TplaKOTiwy aTadiwy dvTwP, éveyeipnoev Apaca Tov oTOXOY UTEpvewWAKT CAL, Kal kaleica tas vais eis Tov ’ApaBixoy KoXTOV peTa Ypnuatwv tod\Aav Kal duvduews Ew KaTtoxely, atropuyovoa Sovrciay Kal mroAeuov. émret 5d Tas TpWTAS avEeXKopéevas TOV vewv ot Tept THv ITé-
” D v 9 ay \
tpav “Apafes xatéxavaay, étt 5é ‘“Avtw@vios Tov
éy ’Axti@m orTpatov geto ouppéverv, emavoato, \ \ 3 \ bd UA b] 4 \
kal tas éuBoras édvrattev. “Avtavios dé tTHV TOALY éxALT@V Kal Tas peTa TOV didrwv Sia-
, el
TpuBas, olxnow evarXov Katecxevaley avT@ rept
\ > a tThv Ddpor, eis tHv Odraccay Kapa TpoBarov:
\ a > 7 \ ’ , 1.9
kal Stiyev avtob. gduvyas avOp@rev, Kal tov Tipwvos ayarav kal Cnrovv Biov épacker, ws
\ \ @ \ \ > A 9 N e \
69 wetrovOas Gola’ Kal yap avTos abixnGeis Ure girwv Kal ayaptotnOeis, dia TovTO Kal TaoL avopwrroas atiote Kal duayepaiverv. ,
e A
LXX. ‘O 6€ Tipov Rv 'AOnvaios, cal yéyovev € , 4 \ \ ,
n\tkia padoTa kata Tov IleXorovvnotaxov 1o-Aepov, ws ex TaV ‘Aptotodavous Kal IIXdtwvos Spapdteav rAaBeiv ott. xopmdettar yap év éxei-vows ws duopevns Kal procavOpwros: éxkrjL(vov dé
\
kal StwOovpevos adrracay évrevEw, "AdXxiBuddnpy,
,
véov dvta nal Opacuv, nomdleto Kal xatediret 4 mpoOvpws. ‘Amnudytou 5€ Gavpdoavtos Kal mv-296

ANTONY

and great undertaking. The isthmus, namely, which separates the Red Sea! from the Mediterranean Sea off Egypt and is considered to be the boundary be- tween Asia and Libya, in the part where it is most constricted by the two seas and has the least' width, measures three hundred furlongs. Here Cleopatra undertook to raise her fleet out of water and drag the ships across, and after launching them in the Arabian Gulf} with much money and a large force, to settle in parts outside of Egypt, thus escaping war and servitude. But since the Arabians about Petra burned the first ships that were drawn up, and An- tony still thought that his land forces at Actium were holding together, she desisted, and guarded the ap- proaches to the country. And now Antony forsook the city and the society of his friends, and built for himself a dwelling in the sea at Pharos, by throwing a mole out into the water. Here he lived an exile from men, and declared that he was contentedly imitating the life of Timon, since, indeed, his exper- iences had been like Timon's; for he himself also had been wronged and treated with ingratitude by his friends, and therefore hated and distrusted all mankind.

LXX. Now, Timon was an Athenian, and lived about the time of the Peloponnesian War, as may be gathered from the plays of Aristophanes and Plato. For he is represented in their comedies as peevish and misanthropical ; but though he avoided and re- pelled all intercourse with men, he was glad to see Alcibiades, who was then young and headstrong, and showered kisses upon him. And when Apemantus

1 By Red Sea Plutarch here means the upper part of the Arabian Gulf.

~
]

/ N 9 #7 "A " \ ,
Oouévov THY aitiav, directv Epn Tov. veavioxoy
29 \ 0 a? , a v "
eldws Ste ToAA@Y AOnvalots Kax@v aitios évotTo.
' \ 93 4 ¥ , e nd b] "~ \ tov d¢€ 'AmnpavTov jovov ws Gmotoy avT@ Kal le) \ ined Ww id , /
tnroovTa THY Oiattav Eat Ste TMpocieTo: Kai mote THS TV Xo@y ovans éoptHs eiaotiavTo Kal' e 4 NY re ad. , , "ce
auTous ol dvo, TOV 0 ~Amnuavtou dncavtos, " Os
, @ lA A Ul e "A b> (e9 ¥ Kadov, w» Tipwrv, To cuptrociov nuov, "* Kirye
, \ A ? ,
av, ébn, "un wapis." Réyerar 5é "AOnvaiwv b / 9 \ ? \ a ol
éxxAnotatovtwav avaBas éml ro Bua tomoar
\ \
clwmny Kat wpoadoKiay peydAnv 1a TO Tapa-9 9 a co" N 9 ,

dofov: eita eitreiv: “““Kore poe utKpov otKxomredor,
bs 2 5A bd a \ A b 9 ” , @ avopes "A@nvaio, Kal avn tis év avT@ Te-
b] ? ” \ “ “ 9 4
guxerv, €& As HON cuXvol TOV TOALTOY amrnyEaVTO.
, @ >] w AN “4 ,

péAXY oOvY oOtKOdomEty TOY ToTrov éBovrANnOnv
, a / f
Snpocia mpoetetv, tva, av dpa tives €OéX\wow
A a A A b) 99

ULV, ply exKkoTHVAaL THY TUKHY, aTrayEwvTat.
, \ 9 A \ 4 € A
TeXeuTnoavtos S€ avTov Kal tadévtos “Adfjot
\ \ a jTapa tiv Odraccav wordtcb_e Ta TpovyovTa Tov
> a) \ N a \ ” \
aiysadXov, Kal To Kidpa mrepleNOov aBatov Kai
/
ampooTéxaotov gvOpwr@ memoinxe tov Ttdadov.
nv © érruryeypappévov:
b] 7&9 / , a

ev0ad’ atroppntas yuxynv Bapudaipova xeipat.

wv A

Tovvoua & ov mevoecbe, Kaxol 5é KaK@s aToroa Oe.

\ A \ > N ” a ,
Kat TovTO Mev AuUTOV €ETt Sovra TETTOLNKEVAL 298

949

ANTONY

was amazed at this and asked the reason for it, Timon said he loved the youth because he knew that he would be a cause of many ills to Athens. This Apemantus alone of all men Timon would sometimes admit into . his company, since Apemantus was like him and tried sometimes to imitate his mode of life; and once, at the festival of The Pitchers,! the two were feasting by themselves, and Apemantus said: “Timon, what a fine symposium ours is!” “It would be,’ said Timon, “if thou wert not here.” We are told also that once when the Athenians were holding an as- sembly, he ascended the bema, and the strangeness of the thing caused deep silence and great expectancy ; then he said: “I have a small building lot, men of Athens, and a fig-tree is growing in it, from which many of my fellow citizens have already hanged themselves. Accordingly, as I intend to build a house there, I wanted to give public notice to that effect, in order that all of you who desire to do so may hang yourselves before the fig-tree is cut down.” After he had died and been buried at Halae near the sea, the shore in front of the tomb slipped away, and the water surrounded it and made it com- pletely inaccessible to man. The inscription on the tomb was :

“ Here, after snapping the thread of a wretched life,
I lie. ;
Ye shall not learn my name, but my curses shall follow you.”
This inscription he is said to have composed

1 Choes-day, the second day of the great festival in honour of Dionysus called Anthesteria. It was a day of libations to the dead,

Aéyouct, To Sé tepipepopevov Karrdipayerov
éoTe" |
Tipewv proavOpwios évoixéw. GAA Twapedbe, 9 , ” \ 4 (
oipeter elas ToAXa TapedOe povov.
LXXI. Taira pév wept Tipwvos amo toddov
9 4 fel \ 9 4 / , “A > Oriya. To 5é€° Avtwvim Kavidids te THs ato-Bors tov év’Axtip duvdpewy avtayyeros HrG¢, kat Tov lovdaiov Hpwénv éxovtd tiva taypata Kal 4 omeipas jKovoe Katoaps wpooxeywpynkéva, nal
A LA e / , 9 / \
Tous adAXous opoiws duvdotas adiotacbat Kat pndev Ere cuppévery Tov extos. ov pv Srerapaké 4 > , b) \ a ww \ > ,
TL TOUTMV AUTOV, AANA WoTTED AT MEVOS TO EATL-
Ce aroteOermévos, iva Kal to dpovtigeyv, tHv \ ” b , , , b) ,
bev évarov éxeivny Siartav, ivy Tywvercov wvo-
4 \ A
pater, éFérurrev, avarndels 5é€ bro THs Kyeo-
\ a mwatpas eis Ta Bacirea mpos Setrva Kal métous

\ \ Mv \ 4 b £ \ b kal Stavopas Etpee THY TrOdLY, Eyypapaw pev eis épnBSovs tov KXeordtpas maida nal Kaicapos, \ \ > / > Y 4 e 4 »] UA
TO 6€ atroppupov Kat TédXeLov twatioy ‘AvTVAA@
na 9 , , 93? / \
T@ €x DovrAPRtas TwepiTiOets, ep ols Huépas ToNAaS
4 A “A A , \ b] 4
cuptoota Kal Kk@pot kat Oarias trhv ‘“AreEdrdpevay Katetyov. avtol dé THY pev TOV aptbun-
4 b] , 4 A e - \
ToBiwy éxeivnv auvodoyv Katédvaay, Erépav Sé 4 cuvetafay ovdév Te Nectropéevny exetvns aBpornte
N A
kat tpudais kal TrodvTedeias, vy suvvatrobavou-
, 9 4 9 4 \ e +
péevwv exaNovv. ateypadovtTo yap oi diroe ouv-atroBavoupévous éavTovs, Kal dSefyov evradobvtes
? 5 4 U , \
év Oeitvav mepiodois. Kreoratpa 5é dap-300

ANTONY
himself, but that in general circulation.is by Callimachus :
‘‘ Timon, hater of men, dwells here ; so pass along ;
Heap many curses on me, if thou wilt, only pass along.’
LXXI. These are a few things out of many con- cerning Timon. As for Antony, Canidius in person brought him word of the loss of his forces at Actium, and he heard that Herod the Jew, with sundry legions and cohorts, had gone over to Caesar, and that the other dynasts in like manner were deserting him and nothing longer remained of his power out- side of Egypt. However, none of these things greatly disturbed him, but, as if he gladly laid aside his hopes, that so he might lay aside his anxieties also, he forsook that dwelling of his in the sea, which he called Timoneum, and after he had been received into the palace by Cleopatra, turned the city to the enjoyment of suppers and drinking-bouts and distri- butions of gifts, inscribing in the list of ephebi! the son of Cleopatra and Caesar, and bestowing upon Antyllus the son of Fulvia the toga virilis without purple hem, in celebration of which, for many days, banquets and revels and feastings occupied Alex- andria. Cleopatra and Antony now dissolved their famous society of Inimitable Livers,? and founded another, not at all inferior to that in daintiness and luxury and extravagant outlay, which they called the society of Partners in Death. For their friends en- rolled themselves as those who would die together, and passed the time delightfully in a round of suppers. Moreover, Cleopatra was getting together collections

1 See the note on lxii. 1. Caesarion was to be educated as a Greek, Antyllus as a Roman. 2 Cf. chapter xxviii. 2.

Z 301

a

CS)

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pdiccov Gavacipar ovVHye eleveeSimeis duvapess, Ov exdorns TO. avw@duvov édNeyxoura mpouBarnre
Tots emi Oavato@ Ppoupoupevors. érret 5€ EWpA TAS ev @KULOpoUS THY ofvTnTa Tob Savdrou 6’ aduv7s emipepovoas, Tas dé 7 PQOTEpas TAXOS | OUK exouaas, TOV Onpiwv a AMET ELPATO, Few pevns abriis érepov évTép@ Tpoa PepovTwv. émrovet dé _TovTO Kad Tmépay" Kal a xedov év Tract povov eUptoKe
TO Ofrypa THS aomidos dvev ora nod Kal ortevayou Kapov vTvadn Kal Katapopay epeduopevor, LOp@Te parax@ Tov mpoowmou, Kal TOV aia On-TNpiov dpavpocer Tapadvopevev padios kal dua xepatvovT wv ™ pos tas é€eyépoets Kal avaknrtoELS, domep oi Babéws cabevdorres.
LX XII. “Apa dé Kal ™ pos Kaicapa mpéa Bees
Emre jTroV. ELS ‘Agiay, v per aitoupévn tHv év Aiyorre@ TOS mato apyny, 0 6é a&iav AOnvnouw, él pn Soxotn meph Alyumrop, idearns cataSravar.
pirav 6€ a arropia, Kal amiotia bia Tas avtopondias
0 TOY TraidwD ‘Bi8dowaos eméuhOn mpea Bevav Ev¢povios. kal yap Arekas o Aaobdixets, yvopraGels pep év ‘Pon bia Teparyévous Kal wAELo TOV Eddijvev durmbeis, ryevopLevos dé TOV Krcordtpas én "Avr@viov opyavav To Bratorarov Kal TOV vmép ‘Oxraovias tora peverv év avT@ Aoyec perv dvatpomevs, € emeupOn pev “Hp@dny TOV Bacthéa THs peTaBonijs epefor, avtoo oé kaTapeivas Kal
Tm podous "Avt@vov éroApnoev els Oyu eGeiv Kaicapos, ‘Hpwdy meTroOws. aynce 5é avtov ovdév ‘Hpwdns, adr’ evs eipyOels cal xopiabets 302

2"

950

of all sorts of deadly poisons, and she tested the painless working of each of them by giving them to prisoners under sentence of death. But when she saw that the speedy poisons enhanced the sharpness of death by the pain they caused, while the milder poisons were not quick, she made trial of venomous animals, watching with her own eyes as they were set one upon another. She did this daily, and tried them almost all; and she found that the bite of the asp alone induced a sleepy torpor and sinking, where there was no spasm or groan, but a gentle perspira- tion on the face, while the perceptive faculties were easily relaxed and dimmed, and resisted all attempts to rouse and restore them, as is the case with those who are soundly asleep.

LXXII. At the same time they also sent an em- bassy to Caesar in Asia, Cleopatra asking the realm of Egypt for her children, and Antony . requesting that he might live as a private person at Athens, if he could not do so in Egypt. But owing to their lack of friends and the distrust which they felt on account of desertions, Euphronius, the teacher of the children, was sent on the embassy. For Alexas the Laodicean, who had been made known to Antony in Rome through Timagenes and had more influence with him than any other Greek, who had also been Cleopatra’s most effective instrument against Antony and had overthrown the considerations arising in his mind in favour of Octavia, had been sent to keep Herod the king from apostasy ; but after remaining there and betraying Antony he had the audacity to come into Caesar's presence, relying on Herod. Herod, however, could not help him, but the traitor was at once confined and carried in fetters to his own

b] \ e le) 4 , 9 A , els THY éavTov TwaTpida Séoptos éxet Katoapos
a, b A 4 \ b “ 4 KeXevoavTos avypéOn. TtoravTnv pev Areas ett
la) , fo
Cavre Stxny Avrwovie Ths amiotias é€étice.
LXXIIT. Kaicap &€ rovs pév trép ’Avrwviov’ NOyous ovK Hvéc KETO, KACoTaTpay O€ aTreKpivaTo pndevos aduaprncecOar Tov éTietK@Y avedovcaD
"Avraviov éxBarotdoav. auvérweue 5€é xKal
Tap avtov Twa TaV atedevOépwv Ovpaor, ovK 9 ‘ ” b) \ b] 4 A] b e
avontov avOpwrov ovbé amiOdvas av ad nye\ wn
povos véou SiarexPévta mpos yuvaixa coBapav \ N id >] N A nw
kat Oavuacrov doov émi KadrAe dpovovcav.
e ‘ Z

ovTOS evTUyYaV@V avTH MaKpoTepa TOV arAwWD
4 a ? ,
Kal Tim@pevos Stahepovtws UTovotav TO AvTwvio
mapéoxe, Kal cvAAaBwv avTov éuactiywcer, cita
> A \ , / e 2 a N
agjxe pos Kaicapa ypawas ws évtpudav Kat
n S Tepippovav tapokvverey avrov, evapoEvytov vTro
a ” “2y de > \ / \ a 99
KAK@V OVTA. v 0€ eb UN Phepers TO TPaypa, en, . peTpios, EVELS ELOV amehevOepov’ ‘Immapxov.
4 ToUTOY Kpewacas pacrirywcor, iva ioov EXcopen. - éx Tovtou KXeorratpa pev atrodvopevn Tas aitias
kat wutrovoias éGepatevey avtov mepitTas: Kal Thy éauTns yeveOdLov TaTrevas dSiayayovoa Kat
“a 4 ”
Tals TUYALS TIPETOVTWS, THY ExelvOU TAGAD UTTEpP-Badronevn NaprpoTnta Kal TodvTédEtay Ewp-
A , TATEV, WOTE TOAAOUS TOV KEKANpEVwY éTL TO wn , , 9 nA tA
Setrvov méevntas éAOovtas amedOeivy twrovotous.
U \ 3 , > ” 4 > N
Kaicapa 6¢ ’Aypimmas avexaneito ToNAaKLS aro ‘Pouns ypadwv as TOV éxEel TpayyaTeY THY
A 4
jTapovoiay autov toGouvTwy.
304

ANTONY

country, where he was put to death by Caesar's orders. Such was the penalty for his treachery which Alexas paid to Antony while Antony was yet alive.

LXXIII. Caesar would not listen to the proposals for Antony, but he sent back word to Cleopatra that she would receive all reasonable treatment if she either put Antony to death or cast him out. - He also sent with the messengers one of his own freedmen, Thyrsus, a man of nomean parts, and one who would persuasively convey messages from a young general to a woman who was haughty and astonishingly proud in the matter of beauty. This man had longer inter- views with Cleopatra than the rest, and was conspicuously honoured by her, so that he roused suspicion in Antony, who seized him and gave him a flogging, and then sent him back to Caesar with a written message stating that Thyrsus, by his insolent and haughty airs, had irritated him, at a time when misfortunes made him easily irritated. “ But if thou dost not like the thing,” he said, “thou hast my freedman Hipparchus!; hang him up and give him a flogging, and we shall be quits.” After this, Cleo- patra tried to dissipate his causes of complaint and his suspicions by paying extravagant court to him ; her own birthday she kept modestly and in a manner becoming to her circumstances, but she celebrated his with an excess of all kinds of splendour and costliness, so that many of those who were bidden to the supper came poor and went away rich. Meanwhile Caesar was being called home by Agrippa, who frequently wrote him from Rome that matters there greatly needed his presence.

1 See chapter Ixvii. 7.
; 305
VOL, IX, X
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

LXXIV. “Eayev ovv avaBornv o TOE HOS TOTE
tol dé XELELaVvOS Taped OovTos avs em net dua Suptas, ot dé oTpatnyol 61a AuBuns. adrovtos Se IInAovatou NOyos 7 evdobvar LéNevKov ovK axovans tijs Kyrcordtpas. m O€ éxelvou pév yuvaixa Kal maidas “AvTovig KTelvas Tapelxer, avutn 5€ OnKas éxouca Kal punpara KateoKEevac méeva TEPLTT OS els Te KdAXOS Kal Dypos, &
T POT @KOOOMLNTE TH vag THs “lowdos, évtadda Tav Baoihucav ouvepopet Ta WAELOTNS aka omovons, Xpuaor, dpyupov, opaparySov, papyapiTny, éBevon, éreparta, KLvd peo wor’ émt mact 6€ bgba _TONHY Kat OTUTTTELOV, adore deicavra Tepl taY XpN-parov Kaicapa, p17 Tpamopevy 7 pos aTOYVOCtY
yun) diapdeion Kat Karapreen Tov TwOUTOD, dei Twas eXmidas avri piravOparous ™ pod - Te LTrELY dua Tw oTpaTe _Topevopevov éml Thy TON. iS pv évtos dé avrou mepl TOV immodpopov,
"AvT@VLOS eneFehOov Hyeviaaro Aapmpas Kau Tpomny TOV Katcapos immévwy émoince, Kal Karedi@ber axpt Tov oT paToTEedou. peyaduvopevos d€ TH viKn maphrev els Ta Bacinea, Kal
THY Kreomdrpav Karepirnaev ev Tous SirAols, Kab TOV nyovia wévov mpobupotara Tay OT PATLOTAY cuverThoED. 7 5€ aptotetoy auT@ Jwpaxa x pucovv Kxal Kxpavos édaxev. éxelvos pev ouv oO av0 pwrros AaBav tadta Sia vuKros nvTomoAnce wpos Kaicapa.
LXXV. Hadw 8 “Avtwros emeuTre Kaicapa povouaxfoat Tpokahovpevos. drroKpLva,peévou dé €KELVOU TTOAAAS Obovs "AvTwvig wapeivat Oavatwv, 306

LXXIV. Accordingly, the war was suspended for the time being; but when the winter was over, Caesar again marched against his enemy through Syria, and his generals through Libya. When Pelu- sium was taken there was a rumour that Seleucus ~ had given it up, and not without the consent of — Cleopatra; but Cleopatra allowed Antony to put to death the wife and children of Seleucus, and she herself, now that she had a tomb and monument built surpassingly lofty and beautiful, which she had erected near the temple of Isis, collected there the most valuable of the royal treasures, gold, silver, emeralds, pearls, ebony, ivory, and cinnamon; and besides all this she put there great quantities of torch-wood and tow, so that Caesar was anxious about the treasure, and fearing lest the woman might become desperate and burn up and destroy this wealth, kept sending on to her vague hopes of kindly treatment from him, at the same time that he ad- vanced with his army against the city. But when Caesar had taken up position near the hippodrome, Antony sallied forth against hith and fought brilliantly and routed his cavalry, and pursued them as far as their camp. Then, exalted by his victory, he went into the palace, kissed Cleopatra, all armed as he was, and presented to her the one of his soldiers who had fought most spiritedly. Cleopatra gave the man as a reward of valour a golden breastplate and a helmet. The man took them, of course,—and in the night deserted to Caesar.

LXXV. And now Antony once more sent Caesar
a challenge to single combat.!_ But Caesar answered that Antony had many ways of dying. Then Antony, 1 Cf. chapter lxii. 3.
397
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 id “ 4 > ” b] fo!
cuudpovncas Ott ToD dia pays ovK EoTLY avT@
BeAtiov Oavatos, éyvw Kal Kata ynv apa Kal Odratrav émiyepeiy. Kal wapa Seimvov, as NeyeTal, TOUS oiKéTas EéKxéXevoev HTroxEly Kal
‘4 “A ,
mpoOupotepoy evwxety avTov: addnrov yap, e TOUTO Toinopvow avpiov 7) Seatrorais éErépols
UmnpeTncovatv, avTos 5é KeloeTat oKEAETOS Kal
N \ (‘\ \ , > N ,
TO pndev ryevopevos. Tous 5é Pirous eri TovToLs ec on \ ane
daxpvovras opav épy pon mpoakew em) tHv paynr, > e ean , 9 a a a , cE 5 aUT@ Gavatov EevKAEA PaddAOV 7} TwTNpiaVv tnreiy Kal vienv.
b] , a \ UA 4 60
Ev ravtn TH vucti rEeyeTaL, wecovans axedor,
a / \ /
éy novxia Kal xatndeia tis Todews dtd PoBov

\ , a VA Ww > 4 kal mpocdoxiay Tod pérXOVTOS ovaNS, alidvidiov
le) a \ opydvev Te TavTodaTa@v éuperets tivas dwvas axovaOnvar kat Bony dyNov peta evacpav Kal
“A ¢ .
THONTEWY TATUPLKa@Y, wWotrep Otacov Tivos OvK
9 U4 >] 7 J \ \ e A e “ aBHopvBws éEeXavvovtos: eivas dé THY Opunv opod
\ A ’ ?; > \ ‘ y) ” \
Te Ota THS Todews Eons El THY TUAHY EEW THY 4 TETPAUpLevNVY TMPOS TOUS TrOAELLOUS, Kal TAUTH TOV
OopuBov éxmeceiv mreiaTov yevopevov. édoKxet O€
Tois avanroyilouévoits TO onmEetov aTroAEiTTELY O Qeos “Avtwviov, @ paddtota aovveEopotmv Kat TUVOLKEL@Y EaUTOV StEeTEAETED.
io \ ¢@ / N \ x A > \ LXXVI."Apa 6€ nuépa tov wefov avros émt
A \ a / / € 4 b a \
TOV TPO THS TOAEWS AOhwY Ldpvaas eGEadTO Tas
A A fa) 4
vaus aynyuévas Kal Tals TOV ToAELiWY Trpog peEpo-
, > a Hévas: Kal treptuévwv Epyov te Tap’ éxetywy Loety navyatev. ot dé ws éyyvs éyévovto, Tais KwTraLs 308

951

ANTONY

conscious that there was no better death for him than that by battle, determined to attack by land and sea at once. And at supper, we are told, he bade the slaves pour out for him and feast him more - generously; for it was uncertain, he said, whether they would be doing this on the morrow, or whether they would be serving other masters, while he him- self would be lying dead, a munimy and a nothing. Then, seeing that his friends were weeping at these words, he declared that he would not lead them out to battle, since from it he sought an honourable death for himself rather than safety and victory.

During this night, it is said, about the middle of it, while the city was quiet and depressed through fear and expectation of what was coming, suddenly certain harmonious sounds from all sorts of instruments were heard, and the shouting of a throng, accompanied by cries of Bacchic revelry and_satyric leapings, as if a troop of revellers, making a great tumult, were going forth from the city; and their course seemed to lie about through the middle of the city toward the outer gate which faced the enemy, at which point the tumult became loudest and then dashed out. Those who sought the meaning of the sign were of the opinion that the god to whom Antony always most likened and attached himself was now deserting him.

LXXVI. At daybreak,! Antony in person posted his infantry on the hills in front of the city, and | watched his ships as they put out and attacked those of the enemy; and as he expected to see something great accomplished by them, he remained quiet. But the crews of his ships, as soon as they were near,

nomacavTo TOUS Kaicapos, é éxetvav TE avTacTacapeéveov peteBadovto, Kal Tacals ipa Tals vavoly 0 a TONS els YEVvopevos €TréTNEL TPOS Thy TOALY GYTITP@POS. ToUTO "AVTO@VLOS iO@v arre-AEeihOn ev EVOVS Ud TOV bart éwy peTaBaropevor, nr7neis dé Tots mrelois aveywpnoen eis THY Ton, uTr0 Kyeordtpas mT podedéaba Boay ols du' éxeivny emoneunoen. nH O€ TH opyny avTov poPnGeica
Kal TH arrovovay els TOV Ta pov Katépuye Kal
TOUS KaTappaKTas adie KretO pots Kal Hoxots KapTEpous évTas" ampos 6¢ AvT@viov alas Gk TOUS anayyehobvras Ste TeOvnke. TuaTevaas 6€ eKElvos Kal elroy pos avrov, "Te ére pmérXeus,
"AvTovie; THY poVnY n TVYN Kal NoLTTAY adi pnke TOU prrowpuxeiv mpopacty," elonrGev ets 70
Swparvov, eat Tov Owpara Taparvev kal dStactéArwy, "*°O 'Krcomdrpa," elrrey, "ov dx Popat gov oTEPOUPLEVOS" auTixa yap eis TavTov apifopat GNX' OTe yuvarnos 0 THMLKODTOS auTo-Kpatwp evpuxia mepapapat Nett opevos."
y &é Tis oiKérns adTod ToTds "Epws dvopa.
TOUTOV ex TOAAOD TAPAKEKANKOS, El denoeser, averely avTov, amyret THY UTogXEow. 0 be onmaodpevos TO Eidos aveaxe pev os Taio wv exeivon, aoa péeyras 6é TO 7 poo wmov EQAUTOV GATEKTELVE.
'TET OVTOS dé avrod pos TOUS Todas o O "AvTavios
"« Kove," elrrey, ' '@" Epos, Ste pon Suvnbels adros ewe troteiv 5 Set StddoKxes'" Kal mraicas Sta TIS

KotALas éavTov adjKey eis TO Kdividzov. Hv Oe ovK evOv@dvatos 4 wANYyH. 810 Kal THs popas ToD aipatos, émel KatexriOn, mavoaperns, 310

ANTONY

saluted Caesar's crews with their oars, and on their returning the salute changed sides, and so all the ships, now united into one fleet, sailed up towards the city prows on. No sooner had Antony seen this than he was deserted by his cavalry, which went over to the enemy, and after being defeated with his infantry he retired into the city, crying out that he had been betrayed by Cleopatra to those with whom he waged war for her sake. But she, fearing his anger and his madness, fled for refuge into her tomb and let fall the drop-doors, which were made strong with bolts and bars; then she sent messengers to tell Antony that she was dead. Antony believed the message, and saying to himself, “Why dost thou. longer delay, Antony? Fortune has taken away thy sole remaining excuse for clinging to life,’ he went into his chamber. Here, as he unfastened his breast- plate and laid it aside, he said ; ‘‘O Cleopatra, I am not grieved to be bereft of thee, for I shall straight- way join thee; but I am grieved that such an imper- ator as I am has been found to be inferior to a woman in courage.”

Now, Antony had a trusty slave named Eros. Him Antony had long before engaged, in case of need, to kill him, and now demanded the fulfilment of his promise. So Eros drew his sword and held it up as though he would smite his master, but then turned his face away and slew himself. And as he fell at his master’s feet Antony said : “Well done, Eros! though thou wast not able to do it thyself, thou teachest me what I must do”; and running himself through the belly he dropped upon the couch. But the wound did not bring a speedy death. Therefore, as the blood ceased flowing after he had lain down, he

311

-

“

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dvahaBov éeito Tov mapovtay emioparrey
adr ov. ot Oé Epevyov ex TOU Seopatiov Boavrtos
Kat cpadatovtos, a ay pt ov Tapa Kreorrdtpas Ke Aroundns o O ypampateds, Koutley avTOV ws exelyny eis Tov Tahov Kerevaeis.
LXXVII. Tvous ouv ort Cn, mpodupas éxé-
Nevoev Apacbat Tots DIN pET ALS TO copa, Kal bua Xerpev mpoceropian tais Ovpats Tov OLK NAT OS.
" O€ Krcoratpa Tas pev Ovpas. oux avéméev, éx 33 Oupidwy tiav daveica ceipas Kat Kanodua
aie. Kat rovtos évardvtwy tov ’Avtw@viov avetAKev avtn Kal dvo yuvaixes, as pwovas ébéEaTo pe” aurhs els TOV Tapov. oveev éxeivou Aéyouow ole poTepov yeveOar ot Taparyevopevot Oéapa.

TEPUPLEVOS yap aipare Kat dva8avarév ethxeTo,
TAS xelpas opeyav els éxetyny Kal Trapace pou-HEvOS. ov yap hv yuvacki padsov TO Epyov, adda, ports 4 Kycordtpa Taw Xeporv euTrepucvia Kat KATATELVOMEVY T® TporaT® Tov Secpov averap-Bavev, ET LKENEVOMEVOY TOV catwbev auTh Kal TUVAYOVLOVTOD. deEapévn Oe avrov ovTwWS Kal KaTaxdvaca mepreppyéato Te TOUS TETAOUS er’
auT@, KaL Ta oréepva TUTTTOMEDN | Kal orapattovaa
Tais xepat, Kal T@ Tporane Tob aipatos dvapar-TOMEVN), Seomorny éxdnrer Kal dvbpa kal avTo-Kpatopa: Kal px pow dety émth€Ana To TOV QuTAS KaKQv oiKT@ TOV éxelvou. KaTaTavoas b¢ Tov Op7-vov QUTHS “AvT@vios 7} NTNGE TLE OLVOD, ElTE Supa, el Te TUVTOMMTE POV edmri Sov aronv joer Oat. Tay dé Trapyverev auth Ta pev éautis, av 7 “May per aiaxuvns, catnpia TiWecOat, padwora, Tov Katcapos étaipwv Upoxdnio miatevovcar, avtov 312 came to himself and besought the bystanders to give him the finishing stroke. But they fled from the chamber, and he lay writhing and crying out, until Diomedes the secretary came from Cleopatra with orders to bring him to her in the tomb.

LXXVII. Having learned, then, that Cleopatra was alive, Antony eagerly ordered his servants to raise him up, and he was carried in their arms to the doors of her tomb. Cleopatra, however, would not open the doors, but showed herself at a window, from which she let down ropes and cords. To these Antony was fastened, and she drew him up herself, with the aid of the two women whom alone she had admitted with her into the tomb. Never, as those who were present tell us, was there a more piteous sight. Smeared with blood and struggling with death he was drawn up, stretching out his hands to her even as he dangled in the air. For the task was not an easy one for women, and scarcely could Cleo- patra, with clinging hands and strained face, pull up the rope, while those below called out encourage- ment to her and shared her agony. And when she had thus got him in and laid him down, she rent her garments over him, beat and tore her breasts with her hands, wiped off some of his blood upon her face, and called him master, husband, and imperator ; indeed, she almost forgot her own-ills in her pity for his. But Antony stopped her lamentations and asked for a drink of wine,either because he was thirsty, or in the hope of a speedier release. When he had drunk, he advised her to consult her own safety, if she could do it without disgrace, and among all the companions of Caesar to put most confidence in

be \ a 9 AN a e , a é pn Opnveiv eri tais votdtas petaPorais, GAA paxapilew wv éruxe KadOv, emipavértatos avOpotav yevouevos Kal mreioTov icxvcas Kal vov ovk ayevvas “Pwpaios td ‘Pwpaiou xpa-TnOeis.
LXXVIII. “Ocoy &€ dtrodurévtos avtod Tpofw \ / > N \ e A KAnios Axe tapa Kaicapos. émel yap éavrTov
, e 69 4 W \ VA
mwataéas o ‘Avtwvios @yeTo mpos KXeordtpav
koptComevos, Aepxetaios tis Tov Sopudopwr AaBov \ b / b) aA. \ b 4 e A
TO éyyerpidiov avdtod Kal amoxpipas veFRNOe, kat Spaye@v mpos Kaicapa mparos Hyyetke tH
"A , 4 \ \ , £5 €
vrwviov TerevTHV, Kal TO Eidos Eakev nuaypévov. o b€ ws HKovaev, évdoTépw THS oKNVTS
atroagTas amedaxpucev avdpa KndeaTHy yEevowevov Kal cuvapyovTa Kal TOAA@Y ayovev Kal mpay-
, 4 td \ b \ \ \
HaTwY KOLVMVOY. ElTa Tas eTLaTOAAS AaBwv Kal
Tous didous Karéocas dveyivwcKey OS EvyVapmova ypapovtos avtod Kai dixata goptixos Hv Kat umepndavos ae tepl Tas atroKpicets éxeivos. éK \ , N Bos ” 4 A 5é rovrov tov Ipoxdniov Ereuryre xerevoas, Hv dvvnta, pddota tHS KrXeotrdtpas Seons Kpati-ca Kai yap éfoPeito mept Tov ypnudtar, Kal péeya mpos Sofav nyetto Tov OptduBov Katayayety. éxeivnv. els pev ody yapas TO IIpoxAnio a ? ns 2° \ , a auvenGeiy ovx nOéAncev’ éyitvovto b€ AOYOL TO
> , , wv” > A \ ,
olKnuatt.mpoceOovtos EEwOev avtod Kata Oupas €mimTedous, aToKeKAELmévas pev oXUPaS, Pavy dé / b] v4 / e \ 5]
dvéEodov éyovoas. Kal dvehéxOnoay 7 pév aitov-314

Proculeius, and not to lament him for his last reverses, but to count him happy for the good things that had been his, since he had become most illustrious of men, had won greatest power, and now had been not ignobly conquered, a Roman by a Roman.

LXXVIII. Scarcely was he dead, when Proculeius came from Caesar. For after Antony had smitten himself and while he was being carried to Cleopatra, Dercetaeus, one of his body-guard, seized Antony's sword, concealed it, and stole away with it; and running to Caesar, he was the first to tell him of » Antony's death, and showed him the sword all smeared with blood. When Caesar heard these tidings, he retired within his tent and wept for aman 'who had been his relation by marriage, his colleague in office and command, and his partner in many undertakings and struggles. Then he took the letters which had passed between them, called in his friends, and read the letters aloud, showing how reasonably and justly he had written, and how rude and over- bearing Antony had always been in his replies. After this, he sent Proculeius, bidding him, if possible, above all things to get Cleopatra into his power alive ; for he was fearful about the treasures in her funeral pyre, and he thought it would add greatly to the glory of his triumph if she were led in the procession. Into the hands of Proculeius, however, Cleopatra would not put herself; but she conferred with him after he had come close to the tomb and stationed himself outside at a door which was on a level with the ground. The door was strongly fastened with bolts and bars, but allowed a passage for the voice. So they conversed, Cleopatra pévn Tois Tatot THY Bactrelav, o 5é Oappety Kai wavTa miotevery Kaicapt Kerevov.

°

LXXIX. 'Os 6¢ KaTiO@v TOV TOTOY dariyryethe Kaicapt, T'adros per €réuhOn mdr, évrev£o- HEVvos auTh Kai T pos: TAS Oupas éNav émitndes éunxuve TOV AOyov. év TOUT@ dé IIpoKAnios «d- paKxos mpoctebeions bia THs Oupidos eianrAOev 7 tov "Avtwviov ai yuvaixes edé€avto. Kat pos Tas Oupas avtas! evOus, als 4) KXeomatpa rape- oTHKEL T poo éXoua a. T@ PddX, catéBacvev vanpe- Tas exon dvo peO" avtov. tap bé cuycabecpry- pévov Th KyXcordtpa yuvaicav THs érépas ava- Kpayouons, "Tddawa Kyeordtpa, Corypei," peTa- otpaeica kal Geacapévn Tov IIpoxdniov & Gpunoe peev auTny mataéal' 1 apelwa evn yap eruyxave Tt Tey AnoTpixepy Evpidiwv- poo Spapyev é Taxy

Kab TEPLTXOV avTny Tais Xepoty _tuporepass O
II poxdnios, a “Aduxeis,” elev, ““@ Krcordrpa, Kai weauTHy Kal Kaicapa, peyadyy agharpoupéevy
XpnaToTHTOS émiderEw avrod, Kal S:ahdddovea
TOV TpgoraTov TYE HOveDY OS amiarov Kai adian-Aaktov.” dua dé Kal TO Eihos avtis TapeireTo, Kat thv écOATa, wn KpuTrTOL T pdppaxor, é€e-cetcev. éméudhOn 5é Kal Tapa Kaicapos TOV amrehevd épov "Erragpooitos, ¢ o T Poo eTETAKTO oa cay avrny purdrrewy t Laxupas eT yeh operon, Tan-Aa dé" apds TO paotov évdidovat Kal Hour rov.
LXXX. Avros dé Kaicap eLonNauvev eis THY moruy, ‘Apeiw TO prrocope T POT Oia eyouevos Kal THhv oes évdedwxas, iva evOvs év tois Tonri-avras bracketed by Bekker.
2 raAAa Se Bekker, after Solanus: 7dAAa.

asking that her children might have her kingdom, and Proculeius bidding her be of good cheer and trust Caesar in everything.

LXXIX. After Proculeius had surveyed the place, -he brought back word to Caesar, and Gallus was sent to have another interview with the queen; and com- ing up to the door he purposely prolonged the conversation. Meanwhile Proculeius applied a ladder and went in through the window by which the women had taken Antony inside. Then he went down at once to the very door at which Cleopatra was standing and listening to Gallus, and he had two servants with him. One of the woinen imprisoned with Cleopatra cried out, “‘ Wretched Cleopatra, thou art taken alive,’ whereupon the queen turned about, saw Proculeius, and tried to stab herself ; for she had at her girdle a dagger such as robbers wear. But Proculeius ran swiftly to her, threw both his arms about her, and said: “O Cleopatra, thou art wrong- ing both thyself and Caesar, by trying to rob him of an opportunity to show great kindness, and by fix- ing upon the gentlest of commanders the stigma of faithlessness and implacability.”’’’ At the same time he took away her weapon, and shook out her clothing, to see whether she was concealing any poison. And there was also sent from Caesar one of his freedmen, Epaphroditus, with injunctions to keep the queen alive by the strictest vigilance, but otherwise to make any concession that would promote her ease and pleasure.

LXXX. And now Caesar himself drove into the city, and he was conversing with Areius the philosopher, to whom he had given his right hand, in order that Areius might at once be conspicuous among the citizens, and

Tats meptBremros ein Kat Javpalouto TLL@{LEVOS
Um avTou Sram peT as. eis 6€ TO yusvdotor EioeXOav Kat avaBas ert Biya TL TrETOLNMLEVOD, EK.
TETANY KEVOV ume Séous TOV avO parr wv Kal T™poo-Ti TOVTOY, avac That KENEVTAS eon Taos ai-—

Tlas Tov SHwov adtévat, mpa@Ttov pev dua TOV
KTLOTHY “AnreFavdpov devTEpov dé THs TONEWS
Gavpatov TO Kaos Kal TO péyeBos: Tpitov oé
A pet | TO éraipo xapilopevos. TAUTNS 61 TAS
TULAS ETuXe Tapa Kaicapos _ Apetos, Kal TOV
adNwv efnTna ato _ouxpous: ov mv Kal Prdo-OTpaToOs, avnp eimrety pev €F emidpouns TOV TH-TOTE copia Tey iKav@TaTOS, elotrotav O€ 11) Tpoc-NKOVTMS EQUTOV TH "Anabnpeta. 610 Kal Kaioap avtTov Bdedurropevos TOV Tpomrov ov mpoaieTo TAs denoers. o 6€ Toyova, moAov Kabels Kat paov ipateov TeptBaropevos efor Gev "Apeim trapn-Kodovbet, ToVTOV del TOV aTixoy dvadleyyopevos:
cool copors calovowv, dv mow codot.

mvO6pevos dé Kaicap, cai tov d0ovov padrov “Apeov 4} Toi déovs Didootpatov amadrd£at Bovdopevos, dujKe.
LXXXI. Tév &€ ’Avtwviov raidwy o pév éx PovdBias "AvtvAXos ve Geodapov TOU maibayeoryou Tmapabobeis am éOave- Kat THY Kepaday av-TOU TOY oTpATLOTaD amorepovTay, O mardayaryos aderwv Sv epwper TEpl TO TpAXnep TONUTLILO-Tatov ALBov els Thy Covnv Katéppayer dapynadpevos 6€ Kal popadeis averTaupabn. Ta 6é Krcoratpas Tatoia , Ppoupovpeva, PETAR TOV TPEghovtwv édevOépiov eiyve Siartav. Katcapiwva dé 318

953

ANTONY

be admired because of the marked honour shown him by Caesar. After he had entered the gymnasium and ascended a tribunal there made for him, the people were beside themselves with fear and _ prostrated themselves before him, but he bade them rise up, and said that he acquitted the people of all blame, first, because of Alexander, their founder ; second, because he admired the great size and beauty of the city ; and third, to gratify his companion, Areius. This honour Caesar bestowed upon Areius, and pardoned many other persons also at his request. Among these was Philostratus, a man more competent to speak extempore than any sophist that ever lived, but he improperly represented himself as belonging to the school of the Academy. Therefore Caesar, abominating his ways, would not listen to his entrea- ties. So Philostratus, having a long white beard and wearing a dark robe, would follow behind Areius, ever declaiming this verse :—

‘¢ A wise man will a wise man save, if wise he be.” !

When Caesar learned of this, he pardoned him, wishing rather to free Areius from odium than Philostratus from fear.

LXXXI. As for the eiiidben of Antony, Antyllus, his son by Fulvia, was betrayed by Theodorus his tutor and put to death; and after the soldiers had cut off his head, his tutor took away the exceeding precious stone which the boy wore about his neck and sewed it into his own girdle; and though he denied the deed, he was convicted of it and crucified. Cleopatra's children, together with their attendants, were kept under guard and had generous treatment.

1 An iambic trimeter from an unknown poet (Nauck, Trag. Graec. Frag.” p. 921).

TOV ék Kaicapos yeyovevar Aeyouevov n pep pyTnp éFérrepre pera xen MATWV TOAKOD Ets THY Tyvdcxnv dc Ai@tomrias, Erepos 5€ rradaywyds Gpotos Bco-Sapo ‘Podwv avérercev érraveOeiv, as Kaicapos > AN J / Le) ,
autov él Bactreiav Kandovvtos. PBovAEevopevov 5é Kaicapos “Apetov ettreivy Aéyouow:
3 > \ 4 1
ovux ayabov TroAvKatcapin.

LXXXII. TPodrov pév ody dotepov aéxrtewve peta tHV KXeomrdtpas teXeut nv. Avrwviov O€ Trod-NOY aitouséver Parra Kal Bactréwv Kai otpatn-yov, ovx adetreTo KXeordtpas to capa Kaicap, ara éOarreto Tals éxelyns YEpal TwoduTEeAws Kal Bacidces, maow QS éBouneTo xpiic Pac AaBovons.
éx 6€ AvTIS apa ToTaUTNS Kat oduvns (avepreyp-nve yap auTis Ta orepya TUTTOMEDNS Kat HpAKw@TO) TUpET OV émudaBovrov nyannae THY Tpopacty, OS adeEouern Tpopijs dua TOUTO Kal Tapahvoovaa tov Cnv axwrvTWS EQUIV. nv oe tat pos aura auvnOns “Oduprros, @ ppacaca Tarnes eXpijto cupPovre Kat ocuvepyp Ths cabatpécews, @S av-

TOS) “Oduprros elpnrev laToptay Tuva TOV Tpaypare TOUT@Y exdedwKas. vrrovonaas dé Kaicap arrethas pév Tivas auth Kal hoBous rept TOY TEKVODV mpoaeBarnev, ols éxeivn cabdmep eNnXavnpace Umnpeimero Kal tapedidov To capa Oepamevelv Kal Tpédery ToLs xpnvovew.
LXXXIII. ‘Hee 6é Kal auros Lepas odiyas SiadiTrav evr evEopLevos avTn Kat TApHyopnawv.
n 68 étvye ev ev attBade KaTaKeLwevn TATELVOS, 1 An adaptation of oix ayabby woAukotpayin (the rule of many), Iliad, ii. 204.

But Caesarion, who was said to be Cléopatra’s son by Julius Caesar, was sent by his mother, with much treasure, into India, by way of Ethiopia. There Rhodon, another tutor like Theodorus, persuaded him to go back, on the ground that Caesar invited him to take the kingdom. But while Caesar was deliberating on the matter, we are told that Areius said :—
“ Not a good thing were a Caesar too many.”
LXXXII. As for Caesarion, then; he was afterwards put to death by Caesar,—after the death of Cleopatra; but as for Antony, though many generals and kings asked for his body that they might give it burial, Caesar would not take it away from Cleopatra, and it was buried by her hands in sumptuous and royal fashion, such things being granted her for the purpose as she desired. But in consequence of so much grief as well as pain (for her breasts were wounded and inflamed by the blows she gave them)
a fever assailed her, and she welcomed it as an excuse for abstaining from food and so releasing herself from life without hindrance. Moreover, there was a physician in her company of intimates, Olympus, to whom she told the truth, and she had his counsel and assistance in compassing her death, as Olympus himself testifies in a history of these events which he published. But Caesar was suspicious, and plied her with threats and fears regarding her ¢éhildren, by which she was laid low, as by engines of war, and surrendered her body for such care and nourishment

as was desired. .
-LXXXIIL. After a few days Caesar himself came to talk with her and give her comfort. She was lying on a mean pallet-bed, clad only in her tunic, 321
VOL. IX. Y

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

elo Love 8 aite povoxitor dvanndng ac a, Tpoominret, Sewvdss pev eEnypropevy Kcepariy Kal TpoewTor, Dror popos é Th povy Kal oUVTE-Thxvia Tals byrerwv. jv 8€ ToAAa Kal THs Tepi
TO oTEpvov aixias _Katapaviy kal bdrAws ovbev
2 edoxet TO capa Ths uxiis exetv Bedteov. y pévtoe Yapts éxelvy Kai TO THs. Gpas irapov ov KatecBeoto tTavrataciv, adda KaiTep OUTS
Svaxerpevns évdo0ev qm o0ev éfehaurre Kat cuvenepaiveTo Tois Kivnpact TOU mMpoowToV. KEnEvcavtos 6é Tob Kaicapos auTny KaTaxriO ivan Kat wANoiov auTod xabiaavos, Jinparo pev TLVOS Sixatoroyias Els avaryKny Kal poBov “Avt@viou Ta TET pary weve. TpeTrOvaTNS, évistapeévou Oé ™pos exag Tov auTH Tov Kaicoapos éfedey one Tayv
7 pos olKTOV peOnppocaro Kal denow, « @s 67 TLS av
3 padiota TOU chy TEpleXoperT). TéhoS dé TOU wAnOous TOV XPnpareov avaypagny é éxoura ™ pocedwxev aro ZeevKov 5é Tivos Tov emit poTr@V EASY KOVTOS @s évia xpuTTovaay Kal OraKdeTTovcay, avanndijcaca Kal rev TpLXav avTod haBo-4 pévn trodAas evepopet TO poo wma mryyas. TOU 95} dé Kaicapos perdevTos ea KaTaTavovTos aurHy, “"AXX ov Sewovr,” eirev, “@ Kaioap, eb av pev nkiwaas adixécBat mpos ua Kal mpocetrety 00TH TpaTTovaay, oi dé SovAGL pou KaTHYyopovery et TL TOV yuvatkelwy amcOéuny, ovK euauTH SyrovOev,
n Tdadawa, koa por, arn S7res ‘Oxraovia Kai AtBia rH of puxpa Sovoa bu éxeivav thew oou 5 TUX OLE Kal mpgorépou;” ” ToUTOLS 0 Kaicap Hoero, mavTaT acu aQuT hy prropuxeiv olopevos. elr@y
oy 6tt Kal Tadta émitpéeTer Kal TANNA Taos 322
ANTONY

but sprang up as he entered and threw herself at his feet ; her hair and face were in terrible disarray, her voice trembled, and her eyes weresunken. There were also visible many marks of the cruel blows upon her bosom; in a word, her body seemed to be no better off than her spirit. Nevertheless, the charm for which she was famous and the boldness of her beauty were not altogether extinguished, but, although she was in such a sorry plight, they shone forth from within and made themselves manifest in the play of her features. After Caesar had bidden her to lie down and had seated himself near her, she began a sort of justification of her course, ascribing it to necessity and fear of Antony; but as Caesar opposed and refuted her on every point, she quickly changed her tone and sought to move his pity by prayers, as one who above all things clung to life. And finally she gave him a list which she had of all her treasures ; and when Seleucus, one of her stew- ards, showed conclusively that she was stealing away and hiding some of them, she sprang up, seized him by the hair, and showered blows upon his face. And when Caesar, with a smile, stopped her, she said : ‘But is it not a monstrous thing, O Caesar, that when thou hast deigned to come to me and speak to me though I am in this wretched plight, my slaves . denounce me for reserving some women’s adornments, —not for myself, indeed, unhappy woman that I am, —but that I may make trifling gifts to Octavia and thy Livia, and through their intercession find thee merciful and more gentle?’ Caesar was pleased with this speech, being altogether of the opinion that she desired to live. He told her, therefore, that he left these matters for her to manage, and that in all

, 2 A / ia Ww
éxridos aven xpnoetas NapmpoTepoy, @yeTO aniov, éEnrrarnkévar pev ovopevos, €Enratnpévos
—~6€ waAXov.
LXXXIV. "Hv 6€ Kopyynrtos .AodoBéAXas
eripavis veavicxos év tots Kaioapos étaiposs.
ovTos elye mpos THY KXcordtpay ovK dndas: Kal rote yapilouevos auth denbeion Kpuda mépipas éEnyyerrev ws autos pev 0 Kaicap avalevyvvat meth Sia upias, exetvqy b€ pera T@V TéXVOY GTOGTEXNELY ELS TpiTny muépay éyvaxev. 1 O€
aKxovoaca TavTa ™ p@rov pev eden On Kaicapos.
Srws avTny é€don Yoas érreveyxeity "Avtwviw Kat auyxepyaavtos émri Tov Ttapoyv Komucbecioa cal TepiTEecTovTa TH TOPH peTAa TOV aGuVnOwY yuval-Kor, “"O, dire "Avr@ve,” eitrev, “ amtov pév oe mpeony étt xepaiv erXevOépats, amrévdw O€ viv aiy-pdrwTos ovaa, Kal Ppovpovpévn pute KoTrETOtS
pnte Opnvos aixicacOat To SovAOV ToOvUTO Cama Kat Tnpovpevov él tovs Kata cov OptauBovs.
Gdrras b€ py mpoadéxou timas Yodss GAN
_avtai aou teédrevtaiat Krcomdtpas ayopmévns.
“A \ \ e ~ AN 3 / /
CavrTas pev yap nuas ovlév adrANAWY StéoTHCE,

, \ A / , A
xivduvevopev 58 TO Oavdt@ Stapeiipacbat tovs TOToUs' ov pev 0 ‘Pwpaios évtavba xeipevos, eyo &§ 4 dvatnvos év “Itadia, TocovTo THs os
: “A , , 9 bf > , a petaraBovoa ywpas povov. adr et On TiS TOV
b] A “ 3 sy N 4 e \ :9 Le) éxel Oe@v arxn Kal Svvapis (ot yap évTavda mpovdowKav nuas), un wpon Saoav Thy ceavTov yuvaixa, pnd év épot treptidns OpiapBevopevoy 324

other ways he would give her more splendid treatment than she could possibly expect. Then he went off, supposing that he had deceived her, but the rather deceived by her.
LXXXIV, Now, there.was a young man of rank among Caesar’s companions, named Cornelius Dola- * bella. This man was not without a certain tenderness

for Cleopatra; and so now, in response to her request, he secretly sent word to her that Caesar himself was preparing to march with his land forces through Syria, and had resolved to send off her and her. children within three days. After Cleopatra had heard this, in the first place, she begged Caesar that she might be permitted to pour libations for Antony ; and when the request was granted, she had herself carried to the tomb, and embracing the urn which held his ashes, in company with the women usually about her, she said: “Dear Antony, I buried thee but lately with hands still free; now, however, I pour libations for thee as a captive, and so carefully guarded that I cannot either with blows or tears dis- figure this body of mine, which is a slave's body, and closely watched that it may grace the triumph over thee. Do not expect other honours or libations ; these are the last that Cleopatra can bring thee. For though in life nothing could part us from each other, in death we are likely to change places; thou, the Roman, lying buried here, while I, the hapless woman, lie in Italy, and get only so much of thy country as my portion. But if indeed there is any might or power in the gods of that country (for the gods of this country have betrayed us), do not aban- don thine own wife while she lives, nor permit a |

325

GEavTov, GA évtavOd pe Kpuov peta ceavTod kal cvvOawov, ws éuol pupioy Kaxav dvtwv ovdéev
odTw péya nal Sewov eoti ws 0 Bpayvs ovdros Xpovos by cod ywpls EnKa.”
LXXXV. Totadta orodupapévn Kai oréyraca
Kal Katacracapévn tTHv copoy éxéXevoev AUTH

Noutpov yevéoOar. Rovoapevn Sé€ Kal Kata-KX\Ocioa Naptpov apiotoy npiata. Kai TIS KEV at’ aypov Kiotny tiva Kopilov: tav S€ pudAdKwv
C4 , 4 > , \ > \ \
6 tt hépoe truvOavopévwv avoi~as Kai adedrov ra Opia cixwv étimrewy TO ayyeiov GbetEe. Oavpa-
4 N N a ‘ \ 4
cavrwy bé TO KaXXOS Kal TO péyeBos petdsiadoas
4 n e \ 4 9 ,
Tmapexare. NaBetv of S€ mictevoavtes exédXevoV eloeveyxetv. eta d5€ TO aptatov 7 Kreomdrpa SéXrov Eyovoa yeypaypévny Kai Katacernpac-
, > 4 \ / \ A
péevny atréatetAe pos Kaicapa, cal rovs addous EXTOO@Y Tolncauéevn mAnVY Tav Suely exeivav yuvatkav tas Oupas Exdrewce.
Kaicap 5é Avoas THhv SéXTOV, ws evérvxXe ALTAIS

\ 9 A V4 >’ \ \ 9 l4
kal droduppois Seopévns adtny adv >Avtwvie Oaypar, Tay cuviKe TO TeTpaywevoY. Kal TPGTOV pev avtos wppnoe BonOetv, éretta tovs aKeo-" / , ” 9 , > DgN\ \
pévous Kata Taxos Erreprev. éeyeyover 8 o£v. 70
mabos. Spoum yap éMovtes Kal tovs pev pudrat-IQN bd 4 , \ \
tovtas ovdév yoOnpuévous KatadaBovtes, Tas 5é Oupas avoikavtes, etpov avtny TeOvnkviav év ypvoH KaTakeméevny KAivn, KEexoopnuévnv BacidtKas.
tay dé yuvatcav 7 pev Eipas Neyouévn mpos rots Tool améOvnoxev, 7 5€ Xappiov Hdn ohadrrgopevn triumph to be celebrated over thyself in my person, but hide and bury me here with thyself, since out of all my innumerable ills not one is so great and dreadful as this short time that I have lived apart from thee.”’

LXXXV. After such lamentations, she wreathed . and kissed the urn, and then ordered a bath to be prepared for herself. After her bath, she reclined at table and was making a sumptuous meal. And there came a man from the country carrying a basket ; and when the guards asked him what he was bringing there, he opened the basket, took away the leaves, and showed them that the dish inside was full of figs. The guards were amazed at the great size and beauty of the figs, whereupon the man smiled and asked them to take some ; so they felt no mistrust and bade him take themin. After her meal, however, Cleopatra took a tablet which was already written upon and sealed, and sent it to Caesar, and then, sending away all the rest of the company except her two faithful women, she closed the doors.

But Caesar opened the tablet, and when he found there lamentations and supplications of one who begged that he would bury her with Antony, he quickly knew what had happened. At first he was minded to go himself and give aid; then he ordered messengers to go with all speed and investigate. But the mischief had been swift. For though his mes- sengers came on the run and found the guards as yet aware of nothing, when they opened the doors they found Cleopatra lying dead upon a golden couch, arrayed in royal state. And of her two women, the one called Iras was dying at her feet, while Char- mion, already tottering and heavy-headed, was

Kat xapnBapoica KQTEKOG pel To Siddnua to epi THY Kepadiy auThs. etmovtos 5é TLVOS opyn «Kaka tadra, Xdppwov: m,n Kadota pep ob," épn, "Kat TpeTovTa TH TOT OUT@Y atroryove Bacirewv." 1 N€OV S88 obday elrrev, GAN avrov Tapa tiv KAivyny érrece.
LXXXVI. Aéyerau dé THY domida KoutaOnvat
GUY TOS TUKOLS éxeivous Kat Tois Opiows avwbev émixarudpbeioay, ovT@ yap THY KXcomdtpay
Kenevoal, nse avTns émeaTaperns TO TOpaTe
7 poo Trea ety TO Onpiov: @s 6é adaipodoa TOV cuKwv eldev, eitrety: '"'Evtav0a Fv dpa TovTo" Kat Tov Bpaxtova Tapacxeiy TH Onyware yunvocacav. ot oé Thpela Bar pev év vépia THY aoTida Kaberpywevny pdoKovalp, prakary b¢
TUE Ypuch THs Krcomdtpas éXKANOUHEVNS avrhy
Kat Svaypratvovans oppncacav eupivar 7 Bpaxiovt. TO dé arGes ovdels oldev: érret Kat pappaxov adrny ehex On popelv év Kunoribu Kotha, thy dé xvnorioa KpuTTEW TH (oun TAHY OUTE xynrls €EnvOnce Tot c@patos ovTEe AXXO happaKou onpeiov. ov pny oveé TO Onpiov évtos @ On, cuppous O€ TLVvas avrob Tapa Odraccav, 7 TO Swpartov apewpa kat Oupides 7 joav, iSeiv Epacon.
éviot bé Kal TOV Bpaxiova Tis Kreoratpas opOhvar dv0 poy was éxovTa NeTTTAS Kal apudpds:
ols éorxe Tiotevoa Kal oO Kaicap. év yap TO GprauPey Tijs Krcordtpas aurijs eldwAov éxopitero Kat TAS domidos éumeduxuias. TadTa pev ouV OUTw éyEeTat ryevéa Oar.

Kaicap 6é, KaiTrep axJeaeis emi TH TedeuTh
Ths. yuvatxos, Cavpace tHv evyéveray auTiis:
328

95 ind

o

ANTONY

trying to arrange the diadem which encircled the queen's brow. Then somebody said in anger: "A fine deed, this, Charmion!"' "It is indeed most fine,' she said, "and befitting the descendant of so many kings." Not a word more did she speak, but fell there by the side of the couch.

LXXXVI. It is said that the asp was brought with those figs and leaves and lay hidden beneath them, for thus Cleopatra had given orders, that the reptile might fasten itself upon her body without her being aware of it. But when she took away some of the figs and saw it, she said: "There it is, you see,' and baring her arm she held it out for the bite. But others say that the asp was kept carefully shut upin a water jar, and that while Cleopatra was stirring it up and irritating it with a golden distaff it sprang and fastened itself upon her arm. But the truth of the matter no one knows; for it was also said that she carried about poison in a hollow comb and kept the comb hidden in her hair; and yet neither spot nor other sign of poisofi broke out upon her body. More- over, not even was the reptile seen within the chamber, though people said they saw some traces of it near the sea, where the chamber looked out upon it with its windows. And some also say that Cleo- patra's arm was seen to have two slight and indis- tinct punctures; and this Caesar also seems to have believed. For in his triumph an image of Cleopatra herself with the asp clinging to her was carried in the procession. These, then, are the various accounts of what happened.

But Caesar, although vexed at the death of the — woman, admired her lofty spirit ; and he gave orders

329

cu

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kat tadjvar tO cOua ovv 'Avtaviw AauTpas kat Baoitixas éxédevoev. evtipov Sé Kal ta yuvata xKnoeias etvyev avTod mpoortatayTos.
érexeutnoe O€ Knreordtpa pev évos Séovta Tecoapaxovra érn Biwcaca, cai tovTwv dvo Kal elxoat Bacikevoaca, cuvdptaca &é "Avtovio

Trciw Tov Sexatecodpwrv. *Avtwvioy Sé ot pév &&, ot b€ tptot Ta TevtnKovta bTepBarelv hacw.
ai pév ovv Avtwviov xabnpéOncav eixoves, ai &é KyXeotatpas xata xwpav Eyewav, ’ApytBiov
TLVOS TOV pirwv avTis Sioxidva TdXavTa Kaicape
Sovtos, va wn TO avTo rais ’Avtwviou wabwowy.
LXXXVII. ’Avtwviov &€ yevedy atrodTrovTos
€x TPLOV yuvalKay érta Traidas, 0 TpecBUTaTOS “AvtuAXros vmod Kaicapos avnpéOn poves: tous Nostrovs dé ‘Oxtaovia traparaBoica peta trav é& éautis EOpewe. xal Kreotrdtpav pev thy éx KxXeorrdtpas “lo8a Oo Yapiectdt@ PBacthéwv TUVPKLTEY, "Avro@viov 88 TOV ék PovaBias obt@ péyav erroincey Mote THY TpwTHY Tapa Kaicapt
tuny ’Aypirmou, tiv dé devtépavy trav ArBias Taidwv éxovtTwy, tpitov elvat Kat doxety
"Avrovov. é« 5 Mapxérdou Sveiv adtA Ouya-Tépwv ovaoay, evos 5é€ viod Mapxéddov, rodTov
pev apa traida nal yapBpov éroncato Kaicap, Tov dé Ovyatépwv ’Aypimma thy érépav dwxev.
émel 5€ Madpxerros éererevTnoe Kopidh veoyapos kai Katoape yauBpov éyovta miotw ovK edrropov nv €x TOV addoV dhirtwov éErA€cAaL, AOYOV 1
"Oxraovia mpoojveyxeyv ws xp THY Kaicapos

Ouyatépa NaBeiv Aypinmay, apévta thy éavTijs.
lA na
meva0evros b€ Kaicapos rp@rtov, elta ’Aypintou, 33°

that her body should be buried with that of Antony in splendid and regal fashion. Her women also received honourable interment by his orders. When Cleopatra died she was forty years of age save one, had been queen for two and twenty of these, and had shared her power with Antony more than fourteen. Antony was fifty-six years of age, according to some, according to others, fifty-three. Now, the statues of Antony were torn down, but those of Cleopatra were left standing, because Archibius, one of her friends, gave Caesar two thousand talents, in order that they might not suffer the same fate as Antony’s.
LXXXVII. Antony left seven children by his three wives, of whom Antyllus, the eldest, was the only one who was put to death by Caesar ; the rest were taken up by Octavia and reared with her own chil-. dren. Cleopatra, the daughter of Cleopatra, Octavia gave in marriage to Juba, the most accomplished of kings, and Antony, the son of Fulvia, she raised so high that, while Agrippa held the first place in Caesar's estimation, and the sons of Livia the second, Antony was thought to be and really was third. By Marcellus Octavia had two daughters, and one son, Marcellus, whom Caesar made both his son and his son-in-law, and he gave one of the daughters to Agrippa. But since Marcellus died very soon after his marriage and it was not easy for Caesar to select from among his other friends a son-in-law whom he could trust, Octavia proposed that Agrippa should take Caesar’s daughter to wife, and put away her own. First Caesar was persuaded by her, then Agrippa, where-

331

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

THY bev auTiis arroraBodca TUV@KLTED “Avrovig, THY dé Kaicapos “Aypimtas eynpev. aTONELTFO-pévav é TOY ‘Avtwviov kat "Oxtaovias Sdveiv Ouyarépov THV pev Aopittos "AnvoBapBos éraBe, THY dé coppoovvy Kal Kadnet meptBonrov
"Avtwviav Apoiicos, O AtBias vies, mWpoyovos dé
Kaicapos. é« tovtwv éyévero Teppavixos Kat Knravétos: wv Kravédzios HEV Darepov Hpte, Tav
bé Deppavixod Taidov [dios pév apfas ETLPAVAS ou ToNUY “povov avnpé 7 META TEKVOU Kal
UVALKOS, “Aypiniva de viov é& *"AnvoBdapBou
Kedeson Aopirtov éxouea Kravdie Kaicape
TUVHKNTE. Kal Gépevos TOV viov avTAS Knravdzios Né épwva Teppavixoy Tpogovopuacen. OUTOS dpfas ep’ nudv améxrewe THY. pyTépa Kal pupov édénoev vTrd eu An ELas Kat Tapadpoawns “ dvatpeyrat THY “Pwpaiwv Hryewovian, T ELT TOS
amd "Avtwviov cat apiOpov Sradoyhs yevopevos.
AHMHTPIOY KAI ANTONIOY 2YTKPISIS

I. ’Esret rotvuy peryarar rept apupotépous yeryoyact petaBonrai, 7 paTov Ta Ths Suvdpews ral Tis émipaveias TKOTG LEV, dT TO pev Hy TAT ppa Kab TPOKATELPYAT LeVa., peyeaTov laxvoavtos “Avte-yovov TOV Siadoxov Kal mwpo TOU Anyntptov év nrLKia yever ar Ta Wrelota. THS "Acias émren-Aovros Kal KPATNOAVTOS" ‘AvTwvtos dé Xaptevros per dAXos, dTrohe wou dé Kaul peya pndev els b0fav avT@ KATANLTOVTOS yevomEVvoS TraTpOs, éeml THY 332

956

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

upon she took back her own daughter and married — -her to young Antony, while Agrippa married Caesar's daughter. Antony left two daughters by Octavia, of whom one was taken to wife by Domitius Aheno- barbus, and the other, Antonia, famous for her beauty and discretion, was married to Drusus, who was the son of Livia and the step-son of Caesar. From this marriage sprang Germanicus and Claudius ; of these, Claudius afterwards came to the throne, and of the children of Germanicus, Caius reigned with distinction, ‘but for a short time only, and was then put to death with his wife and child, and Agrippina, who had a son by Ahenobarbus, Lucius Domitius, became the wife of Claudius Caesar. And Claudius, having adopted Agrippina’s son, gave him the name of Nero Ger- manicus. This Nero came to the throne'in my time. He killed his mother, and by his folly and madness came near subverting the Roman empire. He was the fifth in descent from Antony.

a

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

I. Since, then, both these men experienced great reversals of fortune, let us first observe, with regard to their power and fame, that in the one case these were acquired for him by his father and inherited, since Antigonus became the strongest of Alexander’s successors, and before Demetrius came of age had attacked and mastered the greater part of Asia; ‘Antony, on the contrary, was the son of a man who, though otherwise gifted, was yet no warrior, and -could leave him no great legacy of reputation ; and

Kaicapos eTOAMNTEY apXTY, ovdey auT® Kata ryévos TpogjKovaay, nein, Kal ToIS éxeiv@ TTpo-TeTTOVNLEVOLS avTos éauTov eloevroinae Srddoxov.
kal TocovTov iaxucer, Kx Hovey TOV mept auTov UTapYovTwv OPLa[UEvos, Gore dv0 poipas 7a
CUMTAVTA TOLNTALEVOS THY ‘érépav éréoOar Kal AaPeiv THY émupavertépay, a atra@v S€ AUTOS vrn-péerars Te Kal UmootparHyots IldpOous te vixjoa ToAAdKs Kal Ta Tept Kavxacov é6vn BadpSapa
héxpe THs Kaorias dcacar Oar ons. map-TUpta 5é Tod peyeBous aUT@ kal be a, KAKOS aKovel. Anpuntpio pev yap 0 TaTnp nyamnoe THD ‘Avtumdtpou Dirav ws KpelTTova TUvOLK Ta aL
Tap nruKiay, ‘Avtovip dé o KnXeoratpas ya pos dvedos Hv, yuvarkos bmepBadoperns Suvdper Kal Aapmpornte TavTas mY /Apodxov TOUS Kad? abrny Bactreis. GX ovTAS eroinre peryay éauvtov wate Tois aAXots petlovey 7 éBovreETO Soxety aftos.
II. ‘H pévTor ™poaiperts, ad’ 4s EXTHTAVTO THY apxXny, apeptrros él! rob Anunrpiov, xpatety kal Baotrevew av pwrev elOto pevonv KpateiaOac

Kal BactheverOar Entovvtos, 7 & ‘AvTo@viou Xare-Tn Kal Tupavyenn, caTadoudoupevov Tov “Pwpatov
Sjpuov a dpre Suaguyovta THY v0 Kaicape povap-Xiav. O68 ovv péyloTov avT@ Kal Nam porarov coTL TOY EipyacpEvar, Oo Tpos Kdootov kal Bpodrov TOAELOS, ert 7? Thv TaTpiba Kal TovsS
WoNLTAS adpereoOar THY édevOepiav émronennOn.
Anuntptos dé, al? piv eis tUXas éOEty avay-
1 éw) Bekker reads 4, with a single MS.
2 xal deleted by Bekker, after Schaefer.

yet Antony had the courage to seek the power of Caesar, to which his birth gave him no claim, and to all that Caesar had wrought out before him he made himself the rightful successor. And so great strength did he attain, in reliance upon his own resources alone, that, after forcing a division of the empire into two parts, he chose one, and took the more splendid one of the two; and though absent himself, through his assistants and lieutenant-generals he defeated the Parthians many times, and drove the barbarous tribes about the Caucasus as far as the Caspian Sea. Moreover, even the things that brought him ill-repute bear witness to his greatness. For Antigonus was well pleased to have his son Demetrius marry Phila, the daughter of Antipater, in spite of her disparity in years, because he thought her a greater personage ; whereas Antony’s marriage to Cleopatra was a dis- grace to him, although she was a woman who surpassed in power and splendour all the royalties of her time except Arsaces. But he made himself so great that men thought him worthy of greater things than he desired. ,

II. As regards their resolution to win empire, this was blameless in the case of Demetrius, who sought to subdue and reign as king over men who were accustomed to subjection and kings; but in the case of Antony it was harsh and tyrannical, since he tried to enslave the Roman people when it had just escaped from the sole rule of Caesar. Moreover, as regards the greatest and most brilliant of his achievements, namely, the war against Cassius and Brutus, it was to deprive his country and his fellow citizens of their liberty that the war was waged. But Demetrius, even. before he felt the constraints of adversity, kept on

Kaias, ehevdeparv Thy “EAXaba Kal tov TONEWY éfehauver TAS ppoupas dreTtéXEcev, oux, @oTreEp
"AVT@ONOS, OTL TOUS éeevdepaoartas thv ‘“Papny améxtevev év Maxedovia, ceuvuvopevos.. év Tot-yuv é€otl TOV ET ALVOUPLEVOY | ’Avtoviou, 76 prro-Swpov Kal peyarodwpoy, év @ TocovTov Umepaiper
Anpytpvos dare xapicacbar Tots Toheious éaa TOUS pirous ovx Edwxev “AvT@vios. KatTot Taphvat ye Kal mepiotadjvat Kerevoas Bpovrov éxeivos evdokipnaev ovTOS b€ Kal Tos amTroPavorTas TAY ToAeiwy mavras éxndevoe Kal Tovs aAoVTAS

IItoveuaim peta ypnudtwv Kail Swpedv arré-Trew YeD.
III. ‘TBpioral pev edtuxodvres dpporepot, Kab ™ pos Tpudas averpevor Kal ¢rohatcess. OvK av el7rot bé TIS WS Anpntptov év evTrabetas Kat
ouvovatals évta mpakewv Katpos eFepuyer, GNA Hh meptovota THIS TXOATS emreLa tye TAS bovas, kal thy Adprav domep THY puOeenv aTEXVOS
mat Sev kal yuoTavov éToLetTo Svayaryiy. év O€ Tais ToD TONE MOV mapas Kevais ouK elyev avTou
To Sopu KiTTOv, ovde _bopev abodes 70 Kpdvos, ovde yeyavapevos Kal avOnpos éml Tas paxas éx THS yuvarcoviteoos T ponel, Koupilov dé TOUS Otacous Kal Ta BaxxXeta KaTATTAUMDY auditrodos “Apeos avtepou, KATA TOV Evpuriéyy, € éryiveTo, Kat du ndovny 4 padupiay oudev ATAWS em Tatoev.
"Avroviov 86, Gomep éy tais ypadats op@pev TOU “Hpaxdéous Thy "Opdarny upatpovoav — TO pomranov Kat THY NEovTHY dmodvovaay, ovTwH modAaKs KXeowatpa tapowAicaca Kal Kxata-336

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

liberating Greece and expelling their garrisons from her cities, unlike Antony, whose boast was that he had slain in Macedonia the men who had given liberty to Rome. And besides, as regards their love of giving and the largeness of their gifts, one of the things for which Antony is lauded, Demetrius far surpassed in this, and bestowed more, upon his enemies than Antony ever gave to his friends. It is true that for ordering the body of Brutus to be robed and buried Antony won a good name ; but Deme- trius gave obsequies to all hisenemy’s dead, and sent his prisoners back to Ptolemy with money and gifts.}

III. Both were insolent in prosperity, and abandoned themselves to luxury and enjoyment. But it cannot be said that Demetrius, for all his pleasures and amours, ever let slip the time for action, nay, it was only when his leisure was abundant that he introduced his pleasures; and his Lamia, like the creature of fable, he made his pastime only when he was sportive or drowsy. But when he got ready for war, his spear was not tipped with ivy, nor did his helmet smell of myrrh, nor did he go forth to his battles from the women’s chamber, sleek and blooming, but quieting down and stopping the revels and orgies of Bacchus, he became, in the words of Euripides,? a “minister of unhallowed Ares,” and got not a single slip or fall because of his indolence or pleasures.

Antony, on the contrary, like Heracles in paintings where Omphalé is seen taking away his club and stripping off his lion’s skin, was often disarmed by Cleopatra, subdued by her spells, and persuaded to 1 See the Demetrius, xvii. 1.

2 Nauck, Trag. Graec. Frag.* p. 679.

Oérfaca oUvETrELaeD apévra peydhas mpaters én
TOV YELPa@v Kal oTPATELAS avayKaias € €y Tais Tepl Kav Bov kal Tagooupw axrais advew Kal Tat-Gew HET QUTAS. TEXOS 8é, as o Ildpus, éx TAS paxyns atrodpas els TOUS éxelyns KaTedueTo KOn-mous’ maddov 5é 0 pev Ilapes nrrnOeis epuyev els TOV Oddapov, "AVT@VLOS be Knreorratpav dvaKxwv epuye kat 7 ponKkato THY ving.

IV. "Ere Anpntpvos pév, ov KEK@AUHEVOD, ann’
avo Purimmov cai "AdreEdvdpov yeyovos év Ce Tois Maxedover Bacvretory, ery a wet ydpous qhet-ovas, @onTrep Avaipaxos cat IItonepaios, € éaxe dé bia TUBS écas ey npev® "AVT@VLOS my: Tp@Tov
pev onod dv0 yuvainas nyayero, mparyya pndevi ‘Pwpaiw teTroApnpevov, erecta Hv aorny Kal Sicatas yapndeicar éfnrace Th févg Kal pn Kata vOHOUS cuvoven Xapulopevos: dOev éx ydpou T@ pev ovdév, Te O€ TA péytoTa TOV KaK@Y aTHy-TNOEV.

"AoéBnua MéeVvTOL TogovTor bu ao ehyevay ovév Tals ‘Avt@viou mpateow 6oov tals Anpntptov ™ poorer Tw. ot pev yap ioTo tKol dace Kal TiS axpoTrovews GANS elpyer Oat Tas Kuvas, dia 70 THY pike eupavi amore, tovTo TroteiaOat TO Seovo 6€ év auT@ TO Tapbevart Tals Te Tmopvats ouviy eal. TOY aoTav KaTETPOpVEvTE Todas Kal ov TLS ay Herre Tas ToLavTas Tpudas al amtro-Aavoets oloLTo peTexeLv KaKov, THS WLOTNTOS, TOUTO éveote Th Anyntpiov prndovia, meptidovros,

padrov dé avayxaoavTos, oiKT PAS amoOavety Tov Kado Tov kal cwdpovéotatov ‘AOnvaiov, pev-yovta To KabuBpicOivar. cuverovre dé evtrety, 338

-_—sz

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY -

drop from his hands great undertakings and necessary campaigns, only to roam about and play with her on the sea-shores by Canopus and Taphosiris. And at last, like Paris, he ran away from the battle and sank upon her bosom; although, more truly stated, Paris ran away to Helen’s chamber after he had been de- feated; but Antony ran away in chase of Cleopatra, and thereby threw away the victory.

IV. Further, Demetrius, in making several mar- riages, did not do what was prohibited, but what had been made customary for the kings of Macedonia by Philip and Alexander ; he did just what Lysimachus and Ptolemy did, and held all his wives in honour. Antony, on the contrary, in marrying two wives at once, in the first place did what no Roman had ever dared to do; and in the second place, he drove away his Roman and lawfufly wedded wife, in order to gratify the foreigner, with whom he was living con- trary to law. Hence marriage brought no harm to Demetrius, but to Antony the greatest of his evils.

. On the other hand, the lascivious practices of An- tony are marked by no such sacrilege as are those of Demetrius. For historians tell us that dogs are excluded from the entire acropolis, because these animals couple without the least concealment; but the very Parthenon itself saw Demetrius cohabit- ing with harlots and debauching many Athenian women. And that vice which one would think least associated with such wanton enjoyments, namely, the vice of cruelty, this enters into Demetrius’ pursuit of pleasure, since he suffered, or rather compelled, the lamentable death of the most beautiful and the most _ chaste of Athenians, who thus sought to escape his shameful treatment. In a word, Antony wronged

339

Zz 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"Avr@vios pev éavtov 1a THY axpaciav, Anpy-Tpuos dé ddXous noixnoe.
V. IIpos pevroe yoveis dpepmrov éauTov eis avavra Tapeaxev 0 Anpntptos: "AvTa@vtos 5é tov adehgov THS JT pos efedcoxev emt 7 Kixépova arroxreivas, mparypa Kab Kad éavTo ptapov Kab @UOV, QS HOS av "Avtoviov én avT@ ovyyvouns TUyYElV, Eb cwTNpias Tod Oeiou pia0os 7 Hy 0 Kexépavos avatos.
“A toivup _emL@pxngay auporepor Kat 7 apeorovonoay, O pep “AprdBalov cudraBwv, 0 | be “AréEavdpov atroxteivas, "AvTwvig pmey exer THY wl dota Oporoyouuerny™ arrenei hy yap .év Mydos bro “ApraBalov Kal mpoesa0n Anpn-Tptov 5é€ ToAXol A€youat pevbets aitias, éd’ ols édpace, TWAacdpevov Katnyopeiy abixnOévra, ovK adixnoavTa auvvacbat.

IIddev 5€ trav pev KatopOwydtav avToupyos o Anpntptos yéyove: Kat tovvavriov o “AvtTwvios, év ols ob tapi, Kadroras Kal peyioras ba TOV oTparnyav avn petro vixas.
VI. "EEémecov b¢ TOV T pay WaT CoV ap orepot fev Se avtouvs, ov pny Gpoiws, GAN’ Oo pev éyxaTa-AetpOeis, améaTnoay yap avTou Maxedaves, O
bé éyxatradirer, epuye yap TOUS rep avrob xivduvevovTas: dore TOU pev éyxAnwa elvat TO duc peveis obTw ™ pos auTov amepyacacGas TOUS paxouevous, tov dé 16 TapecKxevacpéevny cdvotav ToLavTny Kal TiaTLW éycatahureiy.
Tov de Odvarov ovderépov pev éotev émaivéoat, wextos 5é 0 Anuntpiov paGANov. UANWTOS TE yap iméueve yevérOat, Kat par he nydmrnaev 340

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

himself by his excesses, while Demetrius wronged others.
V. Again, towards his parents Demetrius was in al] respects blameless; whereas Antony surrendered his mother’s brother for the privilege of killing Cicero, a deed in itself so abominable and cruel that Antony ' would hardly have been forgiven had Cicero’s death been the price of his uncle’s safety.

Further, as regards violations of oaths and treaties by both, in the seizure of Artabazus by the one, and the killing of Alexander by the other, for Antony
there is the excuse which men admit to be valid, namely, that he had been deserted in Media by Artabazus and betrayed; but Demetrius, as many say, invented false accusations, upon which he acted,
and denounced one who had been wronged by him ;
the murder was not retaliation for wrongs done
to him.
And again, Demetrius was himself the author of his suceesses; Antony, on the contrary, won his greatest and fairest victories through his generals, on fields where he was not present.

VI. But the downfall of both was due to themselves, though the manner of it differed. Demetrius was deserted by others, for the Macedonians went away from him; whereas Antony deserted others, ‘for he ran away from those who were risking their lives for him. Demetrius may therefore be blamed for making his soldiers so hostile to him, and Antony for abandoning a goodwill and confidence which was so much in evidence.
As for their deaths, neither is to be commended, but that of Demetrius is the more to be censured. For he suffered himself to be taken prisoner, and émixepOavat Tptetiav, olyp Kai yaotpt xa0atrep

A , U ? 4 ‘ a
Ta faa xetponOns yevouevos. "Avtwuos 5€é Setras
> “ \ > , > A 3 “A 4
pey kal oixtp@s Kal atipws, ov py GAA TPO ye Tov KUptoyv yevéoOar TOY ToAEmLOY TOU TwpaTOS
éautov éEnyaryev.

was well content to add to his life three years of imprisonment. He was tamed, like a wild beast, by way of his belly and by wine. Whereas Antony took himself off,—in a cowardly, pitiful, and ignoble way, it is true, but at least before his enemy became master of his person.

Digitized by Google

ITYPPO2

E Georpwrav kal Moroocwy peta Tov KataKAvo pov iaropodar Daébovra Baotredoas 7 paTOD, éva TOV pera TleXaoyod Taparyevoueveov els

THY “Hrretpov éviot O€ Acvxariova xat Ilvppav elo apevous TO Tept Awderny i tepov avtToOt xaTotxetv €v Modoacois. Xpove dé Uarepov Neorro-Aepos 0 AX eArEws Aaov ayaywv avtros Te THY X@pav KaTerXe Kal Sradoyny Bacthéov ad’ au-Tou Kaede, ITuppisas emixadovpevous: Kal yap avt@ Ilvppos jy maruxov eTr@vupmcon, Kal TOV
yvnotov Taidev ex Aavdcons Tips Kreodaiou Tob “TAXov ‘YevopEveoy éva Ivppov avopacer. éx TOUTOU dé cal “Ayirrevs év "Hreipo Timas toobeous éaxen, “Aametos emixmple povi mpocayopevopevos. peta b€ TOUS ™pP@TOUS, TOY bia pécou Baciréwv éxBapBapwiévtwv Kal yevopevov TH TE Suvaper «al trois Bious apaupoTépwy, SappuTray ™p@Tov ta ropovoty “ErAnuKots ect Kal ypdppact Kal vowots piravOparrots dtaxoopyoavra TAS TONELS ovopac Tov yevéo Bat. @appumov o¢ "AdKétas vies Hv, "AXxéta 8 “ApuBas, “A pvBou dé xal Tp@doos Aiaxiéns. ovtos éynpe thv Mévawvos tov Beccarov Ouyarépa Doiap, avdpos ebdoxipov qept Tov Aapranoy TONE WOv yevouévou kal péytotov akiopya TOY cuppaxyor 346

383

PYRRHUS

I. Historians tell us that the first king of the Thesprotians and Molossians after the flood was Phaethon, one of those who came into Epeirus with Pelasgus ; but some say that Deucalion and Pyrrha . _ established the sanctuary at Dodona and dwelt there among the Molossians. In after time, however, Neoptolemus the son of Achilles, bringing a people with him, got possession of the country for himself, and left a line of kings descending from him. These were called after him Pyrrhidae ; for he had the surname of Pyrrhus in his boyhood, and of his legiti- mate children by Lanassa, the daughter .of Cleo- daeus the son of Hyllus, one was named by him Pyrrhus. Consequently Achilles also obtained divine honours in Epeirus, under the native name of Aspetus. But the kings who followed in this line soon lapsed into barbarism and became quite ob- scure, both in their power and in their lives, and it was Tharrhypas, historians say, who first introduced Greek customs and letters and regulated his cities by humane laws, thereby acquiring for himself a name. Alcetas was a son of Tharrhypas, Arybas of Alcetas, and of Arybas and Troas, Aeacides. He married Phthia, the daughter of Menon the Thes- salian, a man who won high repute at the time of the Lamian war! and acquired: the highest authority

1 323-322 B.c. See the Demosthenes, xxvii. 1.
347
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

peta Aewabévnv AaBovtos.. ex 5€ Tis PDOias
T@ Alaxidy yivovTas Ouyatépes Aniddpyea cai Tpeas, vios Oé I] uppos.
. II. ‘Evel 6é oTacdoavres ot Mohdocaol Kal tov Alaxidny éxBarovtes érrnyayovto tovs Neo-MTOAG“ou Taloas, of pev iro TOU Alaxidou dsepOapnaav cararnpbertes, TOV dé Ivppov ére vaTuoV évTa Kal CnTovpevov vmod TOY Trohepiov exxdepravTes ol Tept "Avpornetdnv. Kat “ AyyeXov epevyor, oixéras dALyous Kal yovata TLOnvovpeva
TO Ta.dtov dvaryKaiws epehcopevot. Kat Sua
ToUTO THS puyhs avtois yevomevns ducépyou Kal Bpadetas KaTahapBavouevor TO pev mavdtov éyxerpilovary "Avdpoxhetove cal Iarmia cat Nedv-Spe, veavic Kors ovat motos Kal poparéors, ava Kpdtos pevyew Kai Meydpov éxerOat xwpiov Maxedovixod mpootatavres, auTot 5€ Ta pep deopevot, Ta bé aTopa omevor ToIs Siaxovow éprrod@v Hoav axpe detAns oypias. aTroT pam opévey 5€ worss éxeivov peréOeov TOUS TOV Il vppov Kopivovtas. non O€ TOU ALOU KaTadebuKoros
eyyus yevopevot THS énridos eaidvns aTreKko-THoaY, evTUXOVTES TD Tapa THY Tok TapappéovTe TOTALO, XaAETS pep op Ojvar Kal aypip, TEcpeopevous dé Sia Baivey travtdtacw aTropwTa-
T@. TOU TE yap efemumrre pedpa al Oodepov 6uBpav éruyevopevor, Kal To TKOTOS emotes wavra poBepwrepa. xa’ avtous ev ovv ibaa émexetpely qa.oiov Pepopevor Kat yuvara Ta T povra TO mrasdtov, aiaBopevor dé TOY emtx@plov Tivds év TO Tépav Ext@tas edéovTo cuddraBécOar 384 348

PYRRHUS

among the confederates after Leosthenes. Phthia bore to Aeacides two daughters, Deidameia and Troas, and a son, Pyrrhus.
II. But factions arose among the Molossians, and expelling Aeacides they brought into power the sons of Neoptolemus.! The friends of Aeacides were then seized and put to death, but Pyrrhus, who was still a babe and was sought for by the enemy, was stolen away by Androcleides and Angelus, who took to flight. However, they were obliged to take along with them a few servants, and women for the nursing of the child, and on this account their flight — was laborious and slow and they were overtaken. They therefore entrusted the child to Androcleion, Hippias, and Neander, sturdy and trusty young men, with orders to fty with all their might and make for Megara, a Macedonian town ; while they themselves, partly by entreaties and’ partly by fighting, stayed the course of the pursuers until late in the evening. After these had at last been driven back, they hastened to join the men who were carrying Pyrrhus. The sun had already set anf they were near their hoped-for refuge, when suddenly they found them- selves cut off from it by the river which flowed past the city. This had a forbidding and savage look, and when they tried to cross it, proved altogether im- passable. For its current was greatly swollen and violent from rains that had fallen, and the darkness made everything more formidable. Accordingly, they gave up trying to cross unaided, since they were carryihg the child and the women who cared for the child ; and perceiving some of the people of the country standing on the further bank, they

_A brother of Arybas, and therefore uncle of Aeacides.

mpos tTHy SiaBacw, Kal Tov Iluppov avedeinvucav
Bo@vtes nat ixetevovtes. ot 5€ ov KaTHKOVOY dia TpaxuTntTa Kal wdtayov Tov pevpaTtos, AAA’ HV
d:atpiBn TaY pév Bowvtwv, tav Sé wn cuviévTar,
wv] , ‘ ‘ \ \
axypt tis évvonoas Kal tepieAwv Spvos pAocov évéypawe twoptn ypappata ppdlovta tHy TE
4, A 7
Npelay Kal THY TUXNY TOD TaLdOs, Eira ALOM TOV
\ 4
gprovov arepredhiEas xal ypnodpevos olov éppate
fo A 9 nn > N V4 54 , ths Bodrhs adijxev eis TO tépav Evtor 5é hace
la
cauvi wepirntavtas axovticat Tov droLov. ws & ovv avéyvwcav of wépay Ta ypdupata Kal
a) \ bd UA A A i 4
auveldov thy GEvTHTA TOD Katpod, KOTTOVTES EVAG
\ \ ” A 2: a
Kat Mpos aAANAA ouvdéovTes ErrEepatodyTO. Kal
KaTa TUXNY O TPwTOs avTaY Trepatwbels "Ayir-
A Nevs TOUVoO“a Tov IIlvppov édéEaTo: Tovs 5é GAXOVS
a
as Etuxov aAXot SrexopuCov.
\
Ill. Otto b€ owévtes cai POdcavres thv Siwkw eis "INAvpovs trapeyévovto mpos Taveiav bY J \ 4 _@ 4 WwW
tov Bacihéa: xal KxadeCouevov eipovres olxos
META THS yuvarKos ev péow TO TraLdioy emi THs

A 47] e de ® b) A , , & yns Kateecav. o 0€ HV ei yvapns, Kaoavdpov N > N ” A 9 s cy Y
dedotxws €xOpov dyvta tov Aiaxidou, cai ciomny Z \ 4 , b] 4 \
elye ToAvy xpovoy Bovrcvopevos. éy TovT@ dé @e 7 A 9 c o Ilvppos am’ avtopatov mpoceptricas Kati NaBo-HEVOS TOU iuaTiou Tals yepol Kal mpoce~avactas
\ \ 4 A “a
mpos Ta yovata tov TAavxiou yéAwTa mpaorTor, 2 ed
eitTa OlKTOVY Tapéoyev, WoTrEp TIS iKéTNS eXO-35°
PYRRHUS

besought their help in crossing, and showed them Pyrrhus, with loud cries and supplications. But the _ people on the otber side could not hear them for the turbulence and splashing of the stream, and so there was delay, one party shouting what the other could not understand, until some one bethought himself of a better way. He stripped off a piece of bark from a tree and wrote thereon with a buckle-pin a message telling their need and the fortune of the child; then he wrapped the bark about a stone, which he used to give force to his cast, and threw it to the other side. Some say, however, that it was a javelin about which he wrapped the bark, and that he shot it across. Accordingly, when those on the other side had read the message and saw that no time was to be lost, they cut down trees, lashed them together, and made their way across. As chance would have it, the first of them to make his way across was named Achilles ; he took Pyrrhus in his arms, and the rest of the fugitives were conveyed across by others in one way or another.

IfI. Having thus outstripped their pursuers and reached a place of safety, the fugitives betook them- selves to Glaucias the king of the Illyrians; and finding him sitting at home with his wife, they put the little child down on the floor before them. Then the king began to reflect. He was in fear of Cassander, who was an enemy of Aeacides, and held his peace along time as he took counsel with himself. Meanwhile Pyrrhus, of his own accord, crept along the floor, clutched the king’s robe, and pulled himself on to his feet at the knees of Glaucias, who was moved at first to laughter, then to pity, as he saw the child clinging to his knees and weeping like a formal

Hevos xal Saxptwv. ior Sé gacw ov Te
4 a) an A [Aaveia mpooteccty avtov, ddAa Bopov Dear
: 4
Mpocarrapevov éotavar pos avTov weptBadovTa

na. xX \ “A A tA n
Tas xYeipas, kal TO mpaypa TO Draveig Geiov
A \ 7 >]
gavnvat. 610 nai twapavtixa tov Ilvppov éve-
, fe) A
VElplLae TH yuvaiki, KedAevVoas Apa Tois TéKVOLS V4 \ \ A
tpépecOat, kal puxpov Daotepoy eEattoupéevwrv TOV
EME Kacavéd 66 kat dsaKo 4
TONEMLWY, Kacavopou 0€ Kal dlaxoclta TaXavTa
,
d:d0vtas, ov« e&éSmxev, AAXA Kal yevoyevov Svola A Kaideca éT@Y KaTayayov eis THY "Haretpov pera duvapyews Baciiéa xatéctyoev.
3 be e 4, “~ N A? “A an Hv dé o [Ivppos rH pev id€a Tod Tpocwrrov hoBepwrepoy Exwv 7 ceuvotepov To BactidtKov, qodXovs S€ ddovtas ovK elyev, GAN’ Ev. doTéoV auvexyes Hv avwOev, olov NetTais apvyais Tas
\ 4 “A b A
dtadvas UToyeypappévoy Tav odovtwy. ois dé
a Tw m= ’ ’ , omAnuacw édoxer Bonbeiv, arextpvova Ovwv
4 A n
AevKOY, UIrtiwy Te KaTaxepevov TO SeEL@ Todi
, > / sy , ¥ \ \ @ meéCwy atTpéua TO aomdayyvov. ovdels 5é Fv mévns ov6€ adofos ottws Bote pi) TUXEV TIS
’ 4
iatpetas Senbeis. éradpBave dé Kal tov anre-4 4 \ vn
xtpvova Ovoas, Kai TO yépas TovTO HdtaToV HY avuT@. Néyetas 5é Tov trodes exeivou Tov petfova
\
Sdxturoy éxew Svvayw Oeiav, @oTe peTa THY TeAEuTHY TOD AOLTOD TWMATOS KATAKAEVTOS
anata kai GOtktov bo tod mupos ebpeOfvat.
TAUTAa MeV OvV VaTEpoV.
IV. Tevopévm 5 wept értaxaibexa i gat
fe) \ ,
Soxobvts thy apyny éxew BeBaiws arrodnpia Tis 352

PYRRHUS

suppliant. Some say, however, that the child did not supplicate Glaucias, but caught hold of an altar of the gods and stood there with his arms thrown round it, and that Glaucias thought this a sign from Heaven. Therefore he at once put Pyrrhus in the arms of his wife,' bidding her rear him along with their children; and a little while after, when the child's enemies demanded his surrender, and Cassander offered two hundred talents for him, Glaucias would not give him up, but after he had reached the age of twelve years, actually conducted him back into Epeirus with an armed force and set him upon the throne there.

In the aspect of his countenance Pyrrhus had more of the terror than of the majesty of kingly power. He had not many teeth, but his upper jaw was one continuous bone, on which the usual intervals between the teeth were indicated by slight de- pressions. People of a splenetic habit believed that he cured their ailment; he would sacrifice a white cock, and, while the patient lay flat upon his back, would press gently with his right foot against the spleen. Nor was any one so obscure or poor as not to get this healing service from him if he asked it. The king would also accept the cock after he had ' sacrificed it, and this honorarium was most pleasing to him. It is said, further, that the great toe of his right foot had a divine virtue, so that after the rest of his body had been consumed, this was found to be untouched and unharmed by the fire. These things, however, belong to a later period.

IV. When he had reached the age of seventeen years! and was thought to be firmly seated on his

1 In 302 B.c.

ouvéruye, TOV TAXavxiov Traidwy évos, ols cvverté-Oparrto, yuvaika AapBdvovtos. mdadw ovv oi Modortol ovaotdytes €&éBarov tovs didrous avtov
Kal Ta Xpnuata Sinptacav Kat Neomroréup
TmapédwKkav éavtovs. o 6 Ilvppos ovtw -THv
\ \ ,
apxnv amoBarov Kat yevouevos tmavtwv épnpos
/ a 9 4
Anpntpio t@ 'Avtiyovou mpocémkev éavTor,
4 le) «
EyovT, thy aberdny avtod Aniddpeav, iy ert

A @ 4 9 4 b lA A
Hey ovoay Kxopnv a@voyatov *AreEdvdpou tov
€ a el
PwEdvns yuvaina, trav 5é Kat’ éxeivous dvatuxn-Oévrwy dpav Exoveay adtny éynuev 6 Anurrtptos.
lo) \ UA , b 9 lo , e Ths Sé peyadns payns ty év “IW@ waves ot
Baowreis nywvicavto, tapwv o Ilvppos tots sepl Anprjtpiov cuppetelye petpaxtoy dv ért, Kal Tovs
> e \ b] 4 \ , \ 9
Kal’ éavtov etpérato, Kal Srepdvn Naptrpos ev
Tois payopévats. mraicavra 5 Anuntptov ovK éyxatéduTrev, GAX@ Kal Tas év tH ‘EXAdSL TOAES muatevlels diepvdAake, xal acuuBdoewv avT@
, \ “a ” 3 ¥
yevouevwy mpos IlroNepatoyv errevoev eis Aiyum@Tov opnpevowv. Kal IItodepaim pev ev Te Onpats kal yupvacios ériderEw aris Kal xap-Tepias Tapetye, THY 5é Bepevixny opav péytorov
Suvayévny Kal mpwtevovaay apetn kal hpovnce
A , Le) 3 4 7
tav IIrovepatev yuvarxav, eBepamreve pddorta:
\ ‘\ A e a 39 9 , ‘ /
kat Sewvos @y varedOeiv er whedreia tovs Kpeit-Tovas, @oTrEp UTEpoTTNS TOY TaTELVOTEpw)Y,
, \ \ , \ , b] A
Koopuos 6€ Kat cwdpwv trepi Siattav, ex TOANOV 354

385

PYRRHUS

throne, it came to pass that he went on a journey, when one of the sons of Glaucias, with whom he had been reared, was married. Once more, then, the Molossians banded together, drove. out his friends, | plundered his property, and put themselves under Neoptolemus.! Pyrrhus, thus stripped of his realm and rendered destitute of all things, joined himself to Demetrius the son of Antigonus, who had his sister Deidameia to wife. She, while she was still a girl, had been nominally given in marriage to Alexander, Roxana’s son ; but their affairs miscarried, and when she was of age Demetrius married her.? In the great battle which all the kings fought at Ipsus® Pyrrhus was present, and took part with Demetrius, though still a stripling. He routed the enemy opposed to him, and made a brilliant display of valour among the combatants. Moreover, though Demetrius lost the day, Pyrrhus did not abandon him, but kept guard over his cities in Greece which were entrusted to him,‘ and when Demetrius made peace with Ptolemy, sailed to Egypt as hostage for him. Here, both in hunting and in bodily exercises, he gave Ptolemy proof of his prowess and endurance, and seeing that among the wives of Ptolemy it was Berenicé who had the greatest influence and was foremost in virtue and ‘understanding, he paid especial court to her. He was adept at turning to his own advantage the favour of his superiors, just as he was inclined to look down upon his inferiors, and since he was orderly and restrained in his ways of living, he was selected from among many young

1 A grandson of the Neoptolemus mentioned in chapter ii. 1.

2 See the Demetrius, xxv. 2.

3 In 301 B.c.* Cf. the Demetrius, chapters xxviii. f.
4 Cf. the Demetrius, xxxi. 2.

vey TY EMOVLK@Y mpoexpiOn haPeiv | “Avtuyouny
yuvaixka Tov _Bepeviens Ouyatépwv, 7} iy Eoyev éx Dirimrov m piv q Ironkepate ouvoiKely,
V. Meta 5é-TOv ydayov todTov éTt parddov evdoKi wav, Kal yuvatkos ayabas Tips "Avtuyovns mept auTov ovons, Stepafaro XpHwara ra Rov Kat dvvapw eis “H tretpov emt THY Baotretav amooTtaAdhvat. Kal Taphy OUK aKkOoVat TOS TOA-dois! dua THY amex Gevav tov NeomroAépuou Narerras Kal Biaiows apXovTos. TAY adArd deiaas LN Tpos Twa TaV ad\d\wv Baciréov 0 NeomroAepos Tpdmnrau, diarucers éOero Kal pudtay 7 pos auTov ert Kowevia THS apxijs.
2 Xpovov bé Tpoiavtos Hoav ot -mapoktvovres aUTOUS xpupa Kal Kat’ GNA OV éurrocobvTes Drowias.
pmeévTot padiota Kujcaca tov Ilvppov aitia Déyerau TOLAUTHY apynv AaBeiv.
E:@bevcav ot Bactreis év Haccapan, Xeopio
TAS Mohortibos, “Apeio Ait Oucavres 6 opKwporeiy
Tots ‘Harewporacs Kal opxicer, avrol peev apfew
KATA TOUS vopous, éxeivous dé THY. Bactrelay
3 dsadvrd£ev Kata Tos vomous. TavT ovdv édpato auporépov TOY Bactréwv jTapovTwy, Kal ouvioay GANAS peta Tov didrwv, Sapa TOANa TA peEV didovres, 7a dé AapBavorres. évtadda bn Tédovr, avnp TLoTOS NeomToA€uq, defiwadpevos pidodpovws Tov Tuppov edwpraato Bow apoTnpav dual Gevryerc. tavta Muprtidros o emt Tov olvou

Tmapav nret Tov ILvppov' éxelvou dé pe) 6:60vT0s, arn’ eTEpy, YaNneTras éveryeov o Muprtiros ovK
4 @abe tov TVédwva. xadrécas ov avtov émi

1 rots moAAots With Coraés and Blass: woAAois.

princes as a husband for Antigone, one of the daughters of Berenicé, whom she had by Phikp?
before her marriage with Ptolemy.
V. After this marriage he was held in still greater esteem, and since Antigone was an excellent wife to him, he brought it to pass that he was sent into Epeirus with money and an army to regain his king- dom. Most people there were glad to see him come, owing to their hatred of Neoptolemus, who was a stern and arbitrary ruler. However, fearing lest Neoptolemus should have recourse to one of the other kings, he came to terms and made friendship with him on the basis of a joint exercise of the royal power. But as time went on there were people who secretly exasperated them against one another and filled them with mutual suspicions. The chief ground, however, for action on the part of Pyrrhus is said to have had its origin as follows.

It was customary for the kings, after sacrificing to Zeus Areius at Passaro, a place in the Molossian land, to exchange solemn oaths with the Epeirots, the kings swearing to rule according to the laws, and the people to maintain the kingdom according to the laws. Accordingly, this was now done; both the kings were present, and associated with one another, together with their friends, and many gifts were interchanged. Here Gelon, a man devoted to Neoptolemus, greeted Pyrrhus in a friendly manner and made him a present of two yoke of oxen for ploughing. Pyrrhus was asked for these by Myrtilus, his cup-bearer; and when Pyrrhus would not give them to him, but gave them to another, Myrtilus was deeply resentful. This did not escape the notice of 1 An obscure Macedonian.

Seirrvov, @S bé gacw evo, cat XPNTapEvos Tap
olvov Bpay EyovTt, hoyous Tpoa7veyKe ‘Tapa-Kadav érécOar ra Tou Neomrohépou Kab pap-paKols SrapFeipas TOV Tuppov. o 6é Muprinros édéEaro wey THY TELpaY WS eTAaLWaV Kal oUpTe-TELT LEVOS, éunvuce bé T@ Ilv pe” Kai Kedev-gavtTos éxeivou TOV adpxvotvox oor “AreEtcparny T@ Térouvr cuvérTncED, @S én peeEovra THS

mpagews avrois éBovreTo yap év Wreiouty o Tuppos TOV EXeyXov yeveo Oat Tov adixnparos. oUTw be tov TéXwvos eLarratwpévou ovvetaTraTofevos oO Neorronepos, Kal THDv emBournv 05@ Badifeuv olopevos ov Kateixer, aD’ uTro Yapas ebepepe pos TOUS pirous. Kad OTe Kopao as mapa Thy adergnv Kadueiav EXpHTO Aaa mepl TOUTWY, ovdéva cuvaxovely olopevos* oddels yap
Hy mAna tov addos y Paivapéry yun Ldpwvos
Tov Ta Totuvia Kal Ta, Bovxoda TP Neomrorép@ Stotxobvros, arn b¢ dmreaT paypevn 1 pos TOV TOL-xov} em Krivns TLVOS edoxer cadevderv. vv KOS 6é mavTwy ryevopern Kat Naovca pel npepav KE
T pos” "Avtuyovny THY Tuppou yuvaixa, Kal TavTa KaTeimev dca tod Neowto\euou mpos THY adehpny nKxovae AeyovTos. mudopevos 5é€ oO I1uppos Exel pev nouxiay nryev, ev Oé€ Ouaia Kadéoas etl detmvov Tov NeomroAepov aT EK TELVED, aia Aopevos tov ’Hrretpwrav tovs Kpatiorous mpocéxovTas auT@, Kal Tapacehevopévous amrarhayhvas Tov
"Neomrovépou, Kal pI) pepioa pexpav éyovTa
Baotnetas ayaTayv, adda TH guce vpnoacbat
1 roy rocxov with Coraés, Blass, and C: rotxov.

358

386

PYRRHUS

Gelon, who therefore invited Myrtilus to supper, and even, as some say, enjoyed his youthful beauty as they drank ; then he reasoned with him and urged him to become an adherent of Neoptolemus and to destroy Pyrrhus by poison. Myrtilus accepted the proposal, pretending to approve of it and to be persuaded, but informed Pyrrhus. He also, by the king’s orders, presented Alexicrates, the king’s chief cup-bearer, to Gelon, assuring him that he would take part in their enterprise; for Pyrrhus wished to have several persons who could testify to the intended crime. Thus Gelon was thoroughly deceived, and Neoptolemus as well, and as thoroughly, who, supposing that the plot was duly progressing, could not keep it to himself, but in his joy would talk about it to his friends. Once, in particular, after a revel at the house of his sister Cadmeia, he fell to prattling about the matter, supposing that no one would hear the conversation but themselves ; for no one else was near except Phaenarete, the wife of Samon, a man who managed the flocks and herds of Neoptolemus, and Phaenarete was lying on a couch with her face to the wall and seemed to be asleep. But she heard everything, and next day went unobserved to Antigone the wife of Pyrrhus, and told her all that she had heard Neoptolemus say to his sister. When Pyrrhus learned of it, he kept quiet for a time, but on a day of sacrifice invited Neoptolemus to supper and killed him. For he was aware that the chief men among the Epeirots were devoted to himself and were eager to see him rid himself of Neoptolemus; also that they wished him not to content himself with having a small share of the kingdom, but to follow his natural bent and

359

Va

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

petCovoy Tpaypatov avriiauBavopevor, Kal TLVOS UToWias Gua mpoacyevouévns tov Neomrodrepov hOdaas! avereiv.
VI. Mepynpévos 5é€ Bepevinns cal UWrodepatou mas6iov pev avT@ 'yevomevov ef "Avreyouns I ronepaiov @vopacev, oikiaas 5é Tod év Th XEppovna ep TAS "Hrreipou Bepovixibda T poanyopevoey. éx O€ TOUTOU TOAAG ev Tepivomy Kat peydra TH
yvoun, tais 5é éAmiot padiota Kal 7 P@T OV avriiauBavopevos THY WANatov, evpev eudhovar
tois Maxedcvwv mpdypacw éx toidodé Tivos Tpopacews. .
Tov Kacdvdpov TatSer o o m pea Butepos "Avti-TATPOS THY TE pntépa @eroarovinny avethe Kab TOV abeddov "AréEav6 pov HAaUYEV. 0 b¢ T pos TE Anpnt prov émepie Seouevos Bondeiv cat Ivppor
ex anet. Anpunrtpiov d€ wird aa XOnay Bpadv-VOVTOS éme Ooo o Tuppos HTNTE paOov THS
TULpAXias THY TE Lruppaiav Kal TV Tapavatay
THs Makedovias, cal Trav eT LK THT OV éOvav "Ap Bpaxiav, 'Akapvaviay, "Apdiroyiar. 1 pOepLevou dé Tov veavioKov TadTa mév avros elye ppoupais cataraBov, ta 6€ Roa KT@LEVOS éxelvep mepléxomrre Tov 'Avtimartpov. Avoipaxos dé o / Baotreds avtos pév Hv év aayorlats mpoOvmov-pevos 'Avtitrdtp@ Bonbeiv, etdms 5é Tov I vppov
ovoev axaprorety oveée dpveicbar Irorepaip Bovropevov émreprpre TrAaoTaA ypaupata Tpos
AUTOV, WS Itodepatov KehEvOVTOS amanda rec Gar THS oTpateias TpLAKooLa Tahara Tapa TOU
"Avtimatpov AaBovta. dAvGas Oé THY éiTTOAHY
1 p@doas Coraés and Blass, with most MSS.: ¢@dca:.
360 |
PYRRHUS

attempt greater things, and, now that some suspicion had added its weight to other motives for the deed, to anticipate Neoptolemus by taking him off first.

VI. And now, in honour of Berenicé and Ptolemy, he gave the name of Ptolemy to his infant son by Antigone, and called the city which he had built on the peninsula of Epeirus, Berenicis. After this, he began to revolve many large projects in his mind; but his hopes were fixed first and more especially on undertakings close at hand, and he found a way to take direct part in Macedonian affairs, on grounds something like the following.

Of Cassander's sons, the elder, Antipater, killed his mother Thessalonicé and drove away his brother Alexander.! Alexander sent to Demetrius begging for help, and also called upon Pyrrhus. Demetrius was delayed by matters that he had in hand; but Pyrrhus came, and deinanded as a reward for his alliance Stymphaea and Parauaea in Macedonia, and, of the countries won by the allies, Ambracia, Acar- nania, and Amphilochia. The youthful Alexander gave way to his demands, and Pyrrhus took possession of these countries and held them for himself with garrisons ; he also proceeded to strip from Antipater the remaining parts of his kingdom and turn them over to Alexander. Now Lysimachus the king, who was eager to give aid to Antipater, was fully occupied himself and could not come in person; but knowing that Pyrrhus was desirous to do Ptolemy every favour and refuse him nothing, he sent a forged letter to him which stated that Ptolemy urged him to give up his expedition on payment of three hundred talents from Antipater. As soon as Pyrrhus opened the 6 IIvppos etOuvs To padiovpynua tod Avoiwpdyov ouveloev? ovde yap Av 7H auvnOns yeypaypévn mpocayopevots, "'O wratnp To vie xalipev:" avrd, ' Baotreds I tovepatos Baciret Ivppo yaipev. Rosdopjoas Se tov Avatpaxov dus érroveito THY eipnvnv, Kal ouvyecay @s KaTa odhayiwy opkwmpotncovTes. émet S€ Tavpouv Kai Kam@pov Kal xptod mpocayOévtos 0 KpLos avTopatos améBave, Tols ev GAXots yeAav ernHet, TOV 5é Ilvppov o pdvtis Beodotos opocat duexoruvee, dnoas TO Sarpovioy évi wpoonpaivey Tov TpLOVv Baciréwv Odvatov. o pev ov Iluppos obras ANETTN THS ELpnVNS.

1 Cf, the Demetrius, xxxvi. 1 f.

\

VIL. Te 5é "ArcEdvSpm tav mpaypdtov 76n

KaTactaclv éxovtTwy Sums o Anuntpios adixerto:
kal SnrAos péev Hv evVOds Hxewv py Seopévw, Kal
foBov tapeixer, orjyas & Huépas ovyyevopevor &:’ amiatias émeBovrevcav adrAXHAOLS appoTeEpor.
Katp@ 6 ypnoapevos Kai POdoas atroxtivyveL o
Anpntptos TO pwetpadxcov, kat BactrEvs avnyopevOn Makedovias. Rv pév ody Kal mpotepov avT@ mpos Tov Iluppov éyxAnpata, Kal catadpopat THs @cocarias éyeyovecay wn’ eéxeivov, Kal Td
ovpdutov voonua tais duvacteiats, 1) mAcovetia, Thy yerTviaow avTois eémridoBov Kal amirtoy
Tapetye, Kal waAXov Ere peta THY THS Anidapeias
TedevTHV. rel S€ Kal KaTaayovTes auporepot Makedovias cuvémimtov eis TO avTO Kat petlovas édapBave mpopacas 7 Stadopa, Anuntptos pév letter he perceived the fraud of Lysimachus; for the letter did not have the customary address, “ The father, to the son, health and happiness,”’ but instead, “King Ptolemy, to King Pyrrhus, health and happiness.” Pyrrhus reviled Lysimachus for the fraud, but nevertheless made the desired peace, and they all met to ratify it with sacrificial oaths. However, after a bull, a boar, and a ram had been brought up for sacrifice, of its own accord the ram fell down dead. The rest of, the spectators were moved to laughter, but Theodotus the seer prevented Pyrrhus from taking the oath by declaring that Heaven thus betokened in advance the death of one of the three kings. In this way, then, Pyrrhus was led to renounce the peace.

VII. Thus Alexander’s affairs were already settled with the help of Pyrrhus, but nevertheless Demetrius came to him; and as soon as he arrived it was plain that he was not wanted, and he inspired only fear ; and after they had been together a few days their mutual distrust led them to plot against each other. But Demetrius, taking advantage of his opportunity, got beforehand with the young prince and slew him, and was proclaimed king of Macedonia.! Now, even before this there had been differences between him and Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus had overrun Thessaly ; ? and greed for power, the natural disease of dynasties, made them formidable and suspicious neighbours, and all the more after the death of Deidameia. And now that both of them had occupied part of Mace- donia, they came into collision, and their quarrel was furnished with stronger grounds. Demetrius there-

1 Cf. the Demetrius, xxxvi. 2-6, xxxvii.
2 Cf. the Demetrius, xl. i ém’ AitwAous oT pateva dpevos Kal Kparnoas, Tavravyov avToOt peta ToAATS Suvdpuews KaTA-MeTrov avTOS éBadulev él Hvppov, kal Iluppos

ém’ éxelvov, ws taGero. yevonevns Sé Stapaptias Kal? oOov adAnous mapnddafav- Kab Anuntpios
pev éuBarov eis “Harevpov éXenrarel, Huppos, bé Hlavravyy repitec@y eis wayyy Katéorn. Kal TOY OT PATLOT OY TUpTrET ovT@V Setvos nv kal péyas ayov, uaddLoTAa KaTa TOUS myewovas. 6 TE yap Hdvravyos avépeia Kal xeupt Kal pawn
TW"UATOS aptoTosS MV Omohoryoupeveas Tey mepl Anpnt prov oT pATHYyaD, Kal Papaos éxov Kat ppovnya, TpovKanreito TOV Tuppov els xeipas, 6
TE Lvppos ovdevi TOV Bactréov Up réwevos adKijs Kal TONS, Kal THY “AXtAAEwS bofav auT@ bv apeTnv paddov n kata yevos UvoLKeLouv Bovnépevos, €vayTios exwper dia TOV T pomaxeov émt TOV Hadvravyor. iy dé Soparic pos TO _™paroy, celta év Xepoty YEvopevor peta TEXYNS dpa Kab Bias
expavto Tois Eidect. aBov be o Ilv¥ppos év Tpatpa, Sous dé dv0, TO pev Els TOV pnpov, TO bé
Tapa TOV Tpaynrov, éTpewato Kai KatéBare Tov
Ildvravxov ov pny aveidev, avnprrayn yap v v6
TOY pirov. ot 6€ “Hrrep@tar tH vikn Tod Baatrews érrapOévres Kal Javpdcartes Th
apeTnv éBideavTo kal duéxowav THhv parayya TOV Maxedovwr, Kal dhevyovtas SiwKovtes amréxtewvay
TE TOAXNOUS Kal mevrakiaxhious Covras elAov.
VIII. ‘O &€ a aryov GUTOS ov Tog obTov opyiis QV Eradov ovdé picouvs évérAnoe tovs Maxedovas mpos tov Iluppov, donv S0€av avtod cai Oadpa 364

fore made an expedition against the Aetolians and conquered them, and then, leaving Pantauchus there with a large force, he himself moved against Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus, when he heard of it, against him. Owing to a mistake in the way, however, they passed by one another, and Demetrius, throwing his forces into Epeirus, plundered the country, while Pyrrhus, encountering Pantauchus, joined battle with him.! There was a sharp and terrible conflict between the soldiers who engaged, and especially also between the leaders. For Pantattchus, who was confessedly the best of the generals of Demetrius for bravery, dexterity, and vigour of body, and had both courage and a lofty spirit, challenged Pyrrhus to a hand-to-hand combat; and Pyrrhus, who yielded to none of the kingsin daring and prowess, and wished that the glory of Achilles should belong to him by right of valour rather than of blood alone, advanced through the foremost fighters to confront Pantauchus. At first they hurled their spears, then, coming to close quarters, they plied their swords with might and skill. Pyrrhus got one wound, but gave Pantauchus two, one in the thigh, and one along the neck, and put him to flight and overthrew him; he did not kill him, however, for his friends haled lini away. Then the Epeirots, exalted by the victory of their king and admiring his valour, overwhelmed and cut to pieces the phalanx of the Macedonians, pursued them as they fled, slew many of them, and took five thou- sand of them alive."

VIII. This conflict did not fill the Macedonians with wrath and hate towards Pyrrhus for their losses, rather it led those who beheld his exploits

1 Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 1 f. 2 Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 2

THS apeThs Kal Noyov évetpydoato Tos iOovat Ta Epya Kal cvvevexGeiot kata THY maxny. Kai yap ¥ bd \ 4 ? / \ , a Gpiv @ovto Kal Tdyos écotxévat Kal Kivnua Tois
b 4 fe) A ,
AreEdvdpov, cal tis popds éxeivov cal Bias
Tapa TOUS ayavas év TOUTH oKLdS TLVAS OpacBaL \ / fo \ Ld / bd
Kal plunpata, TOV wey AAXKwWY Baciréwy Ev Trop-
Ul
dupais kai Sopygopors Kal Kroes TpaxYnAov Kai a he } rE @ 4 oe Iv a T@ petvov dtaréyeoOar, povov dé Ilvppov ois id } A oF) b 5 / \ OmAots Kal Tais Yep Em LOEeLKVU{LEVOU TOV
"AréEavdpov. .
This 5€ rept takes nal otpatnyias émiotHnmns
avtov kal Sewvorntos éveots Seiypata NaBelv ex TOV Yypappatwy & wept TovTwY aTroOAéAOLTTE.
/ \ 9 , /

Néyeras b€ Kal 'Avtiyovos épwrnels Tis dpirtos

A A bd)
TOV -oTpaTnyav, pavat, “‘Ilvppos, av ynpaon,’
\ a : Tept Tov Kad’ avTov odTws aTopNVapeEvos povov.
? , \ A A
AvviBas 6 cuptavtay anépnve THY oTpaTNyaV
al \ > / \ , /
Tp@Tov ev eutretpia Kat Sewotnte Tvppov,
/ A 4 e \ \ / b]
Lentiwva Sé Sevtepov, éavtov S& tpitov, ws év Tots wept Yxnmiwvos yéypamtat. Kal brws TovTO pereT@v Eotxe Kal dirocopa@v del dvaterev o
/ e , , \ \

Iluppos, @s paOnpatwv Bactdtxwtatov, tas 6é

/ e adras yAaduptas év ovdevl Noy TiWecOar. é-\ U yeTal yap ws epwrnbeis Ev tive TOT@, TrOTEPOV
a 4 4
avT@ daiverat Ilv@wv avrAnTns apetvov 7} Ka-guotas, ettreitvy Gtt Wodtvorépywv otpatnyos, as Tavita T® Bacirei Enrety uova xal ywooKev
T poonKov.
366

and engaged him in the battle to esteem him highly and admire his bravery and talk much about him. For they likened his aspect and his swiftness and all his motions to those of the great Alexander, and thought they saw in him shadows, as it were, and imitations of that leader’s impetuosity and might in conflicts.1_ The other kings, they said, represented Alexander with their purple robes, their body-guards, the inclination of their necks,? and their louder tones insconversation; but Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus alone, in.arms and action.

Of his knowledge and ability in the field of mili- tary tactics and leadership one may get proofs from the writings on these subjects which he left. It is said also that Antigonus, when asked who was the best general, replied, “ Pyrrhus, if he lives to be old.” This verdict of Antigonus applied only to his contemporaries. Hannibal, however, declared that the foremost of all generals in experience and ability was Pyrrhus, that Scipio was second, and he himself third, as I have written in my Life of Scipio.® And in a word, Pyrrhus would seem to have been always and continually studying and meditating upon this one subject, regarding it as the most kingly branch of learning; the rest he regarded as mere accomplishments and held them in no esteem. For instance, we are told that when he was asked at a drinking-party whether he thought Python or Caphisias the better flute-player, he replied that Polysperchon was a good general, implying that it became a king to investigate and understand such matters only.

1 Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 3. 2 See the Alexander, iv. 1. 3 The ‘‘ book” containing the Lives of Epaminondas and Scipio Africanus the Elder has been lost,

3 de \ ‘ \ / : \ \ Hy 6€ «ai mpos tovs cvvyiOes émiexns Kat ampaos opynv, apodpos 5é Kai mpoOuvpos év tais yaptow. *Aepotrov yobv amobavovtos ovK jnveyKe
, ra)
petpiws, éxeivov pev avOpwmiva terrovOévat

4 e€ \ \ ‘ \ A 4
dacKkev, éavtov 5€ peuhopevos Kal xaxilwv OTe
, > \ \ , / > 3 lA
HéAXwY det Kal Bpadvvwy yapiv ovK amédwoxev avT@. Ta pev yap xXpéa Kal KANpovopols éeoTiv arodoivar Tav Savecavtwr, ai dé TAY Xapitwv ‘ 9 nw
aporBai pn yevopevat pos ataPavomevous avioct TOV otov Kxat Sixarov. év b€ "ApuBpaxia xpn , pBpaxie
4 bY N 4 wv -9
KakoNoyov tiva Kai Bracdnpov avOpwrov oto-pévov Seiy petaotica, tov Ilvppov ‘ Avtod Y 9° ce “ € A b) 9 , Aa wow
pévov, edn, “ “adrov Nuas ev OALYOLS 7 TrEpLioV mpos atavtas avOpwrovs Kaxas NeyéTW.” Kai Tous map olvoy avtov AoidopHnaavtas, elta édEey-
3 le)

Yomévous HpwTycev et Tavta elmov' arroxKptva-
/ A An , e 7 6 aA @ nA
pévou b€ TOY veavioxwy évos, “Tadta, @ Bactred:

? > A wv 4 ? 4, > ,
mreiova 8 adv étt TOVTwY ElpnKElpEV, EL TrAELOV A n bd A
jTapHy oivos nuiv, yedaoas adie.
IX. Tuvaicas 5€ wpayudtwv évexa cai duvapews TAEiovas éynue peta THyv “Avtiyovns Te-
, Aa
NeuTHV. Kal yap Avtoréovtos tot Llasover
4 Bactrtéws édaBe Ouyatépa, cai Bipxévvay thv
4 fe) A
BapdvaAros tod “TAAupidv, nai Aavacoay tH
? le) A
AyafoxrXéous tod Yvpaxovaiov, mpotxa mpoc-
4 > A \ a pepomevny avt@ THY Kepxupatwy rod nrwxviav
e \ 6 /
uo ‘“Aya@oxdéous. ex pev ov “Avtuyorns 368

He was also kind towards his familiar friends, and mild in temper, but eager and impetuous in returning favours. At any rate, when Aeropus died, he was distressed beyond measure, declaring that Aeropus had indeed only suffered what was common to human- ity, but that he blamed and reviled himself because he had always delayed and moved slowly in the matter and so had not returned his friend’s favour. For the debts due to one’s creditors can be paid back to their heirs ; but if the favours received from friends are not returned while those friends can be sensible of the act, it is an affliction to a just and good man. Again, in Ambracia there was a fellow who denounced and reviled him, and people thought that. Pyrrhus ought to banish him. “ Let him remain here,” said Pyrrhus, “and speak ill of us among a few, rather than carry his slanders round to all mankind.” And again, some young fellows indulged in abuse of him over their cups, and were brought to task for it. Pyrrhus asked them if they had said such things, and when one of them replied, “ We did, O King ; and we should have said still more than this if we had had more wine.’’ Pyrrhus laughed and dismissed them.}

IX. In order to enlarge his interests and power he married several wives after the death of Antigone. He took to wife, namely, a daughter of Autoleon, king of the Paeonians; Bircenna, the daughter of Bar- dyllis the Illyrian; and Lanassa, the daughter of Agathocles of Syracuse, who brought him as her — dowry the city of Corcyra, which had been captured by Agathocles. By Antigone he had a son Ptolemy,

1 The story is found also in Plutarch’s Morals, p. 184d, and in Val. Max. 5, 1, ext. 3.

I rohepatov uLov erxev, éx Oé Aavdoons ”AXe-Eavdpor, ' ‘Erevov dé TOV VEWTATOV EX Bipxévyns.
2 Kal TavTas dryaBous éV TOUS OmrAots EOpépato Kal 388
Siamrupous, evOus éx yeveT As él TOUTO Onyouevous |
ie avroD. heyerau yap ws épwtnbels vd’ év0s
QUT@Y éTL TaLoos OvTOS, | Tit Katanetrper THY
Baciréiar, elmreiy, ate ‘Qs av tov thy paxatpav akutdrny* exn. TOUTO dé ovdév arodet tis TPAyYLKTS apas éxetyns: Onxre aioynpw Sapa
Siadayeiv’ . TOUS aderpous. OUTWS APLKTOS EoTL
Kal.Anpiwdns 7 THS. mreovetias bro0eats.
X. Mera 6€ tH paxny TAUT HD 0 Tvppos
emravenOow olxade apm pos | v6 dokns Kai dpovn-HaTos eXaupe: kal ’Aeros v0 Tov "Hiretpwr av
TT po ary OpEevofLevos, “AY vas,” édeyev, ‘ ‘ deTos
Ely? TAS yap ou pedro, Tous DueTEpous 6m ous Gamep @KUTTEpols eTaLpouevos;” oriyw Oe botepov muOopevos vooeiy Tov Anurrptov e7rt-oparsas évéBare pev eaiduns eis Maxedoviav
@S em Opouny TLva Kab Aenhaciav TOLNTOMEVOS,
2 Tap OdyoU 6 7re TAVTOV onod KPATHoaL Kat ra Bev apayel THY Bactretar, éXacas axpe
"Edéacons pndevos apuvvopévov, tmodA@v 6e Kal
T port eweveov Kal ovo QaTevovT@y. avTov Te 87 Tov Anpyt prov 0 xivduv0s efaveotyce mapa
Svvaper, ot Te giro. Kai Tyyepoves Ory YpOVve TOAAOUS a6 poicavtes Epp@mevans Kal m pod vpas éml Tov TIvppov Bpynoav. o &é AnoTpiKwTepov
a uy mevos ovK émervev, ara hevywy pépos Te THS oTpaTias amTéBare nal’ odov éeriOepévwr TaVv Maxedover.
1 dturdrny with Blass: dgurépay.

37°

PYRRHUS

Alexander-by Lanassa, and Helenus, his youngest son, by Bircenna. He brought them all up to be brave in arms and fiery, and he whetted them for this from their very birth. It is said, for instance, that when he was asked by one of them, who was still a boy, to whom he would leave his kingdom, he replied: “To that one of you who keeps his sword the sharpest.”

This, however, meant nothing less than the famous curse of Oedipus in the tragedy ;! that “ with whetted sword,” and not by lot, the brothers should « divide the house.” So savage and ferocious is the nature of rapacity. ee

X. After this battle Pyrrhus returned to his home rejoicing in the splendour which his fame and lofty spirit had brought him; and when he was given the surname of “ Eagle”’ by the Epeirots, “Through you,” he said, ‘‘am I an eagle; why, pray, should I not be? It is by your arms that I am borne aloft as by swift pinions.” But a little while after, learning that Demetrius was dangerously sick, he suddenly threw an army into Macedonia, intending merely to overrun and plunder some parts of it. Yet he came within a little of mastering the whole country and getting the kingdom without a battle; for he marched on as far as Edessa without opposition from anyone, and many actually joined his forces and shared his expedition. And now Demetrius himself was roused by the peril to act beyond his strength, while his friends and commanders in a short time collected many soldiers and set out with zea] and vigour against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus, however, had come more for plunder than anything else, and would not stand his ground, but fled, losing a part of his army on the march, under the attacks of the Macedonians. eae

Euripides, Phoenzssae, 68. 371

BB 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ov pry ote padiws Kal tayvd tov Tvppov ébéBare THs ywpas o Anpnrptos nwérnoer, éyvaxws b€ peyddwv tmpayudtev avtTiNapBaveoOat Kal Thy TaTpwav apynv avaxtacbat Séxa pupidot otpatod Kal vavol mevtaxociais ovK éBovreto +@ Ilupp@ mpoomtaicar, ovdé arroNerrety Maxedoot mapoixov épywdn Kal yaderov, GAN’, érrel pn eaxorale rroAepely mpds avrov, Starvbels xal Oéwevos eipnvyv ottws emi Tovs GAXrovs Bacireis tparrécOar. yevouévwy bé dea TAUTA TOV OmoAoYLaV, Kal THS yvouns apa TO

peyeOer THS TapacKeuhs éexpavetons tov Anun-tpiov, poyOévtes ot Bacircis Sreméutrovto pos Tov Ilvppov ayyéXovs Kal ypappata, Oavpdleev pdcKovtes et TOV avTOU TpoemEVOS KaLpoV, ev TO Anuntpiov toteunoa, treptpéver, nal Suvdpevos
Maxedovias éxBareiy avtov moda mTpdtTovTa Kal TapaTTopevoy, exdéxetas Kal ayordlovte Kal
peyar@ yevouevm trept Tov év Mondogaois tepav Kai tapwv dtaywvicacbar, cai tadtra Képxupav évayxos adnpnpévos vm' avTov peta THS yuvat-Kos. 1 yap Aavacoa pepyapuevn tov Iluppov
@s "adrov mpocéexovta tais BapBapous yuvarkiv eis Képxupav dmeywpnoe, nai Seopévn yadpov Bacitixav éxdrer Anpunrpiov, érictapévn pa-MoTa TOV Bactréwn EvKOAWS EYOVTA T POS Ya{LOUS
yuvarxov. éxeivos dé Wrevoas TH Te Aavaoon cuvnrOe kal ppoupav év TH Troe KATEALTTE.
372

However, because Demetrius had easilyand speedily driven Pyrrhus out of the country, he did not leave him to his own devices, but now that he had deter- mined to undertake a great enterprise and to recover his father's realm with a hundred thousand soldiers and: five hundred ships, he-did not wish to have collisions with Pyrrhus, nor yet to leave behind in him an enterprising and troublesome neighbour for the "Macedonians. He wished, rather, since he had no time to wage war against Pyrrhus, to come to terms and make peace with him, and then turn his arms against the other kings. But after an agreement had been made between them for these reasons, the pur- pose of Demetrius became apparent, as well as the magnitude of his preparations, and the kings, in alarm, kept sending to Pyrrhus messengers and let- ters,! expressing their amazement that he should let slip his own opportunity for making war and wait for Demetrius to seize his; and that when he was able to drive Demetrius out of Macedonia, since he was now much occupied and disturbed, he should await the time when his adversary, at his leisure and after he had become great, could wage a decisive struggle with him for the sanctuaries and tombs of the Molos- sian land, an adversary who-had just robbed him of Corcyra, and his wife besides. For Lanassa, who found fault with Pyrrhus for being more devoted to his barbarian wives than to her, had retired to Cor- cyra, whither, since she desired a royal marriage, she invited Demetrius, understanding that he, of all the kings, was most readily disposed to marry wives. So Demetrius sailed thither, married Lanassa, and left a garrison in the city. os

. 1 Cf, the Demetrius, xliv. 1. —

373

XI. Taira wpos tov Tlvppov ot Bacireis ypa-
9 wn
govres agua nal ds éavt@y éte pédAXOvTA Kal Tmapackevatopevov Tov Anuntpsov éxivovy. IIro-ANeuatos ey yap emimdevoas pmeydr@ TOAD TAS
4 4
‘EAAnvidas adiorn mores, Avoipayos 5& Hv
dvw Makedoviay é« @paxyns éuBarov éropbe.
7 \ 4 (4 N 9 \ 4
IIvppos € rovrows dpa ovveEavactas émi Béporav nrAavve, tpocdsoxav, Strep auvéBn, Anpunrtpiov ttravtiabovta Avowudyw thy KdTw Ywpay atro-
, bY) 9 , \ A QA ”
Neirpery Epnuov. éxeivns 5é€ THs vuKros eboke
\ \ 4 e \ 9 , a A
Kata tous Umrvous vo AdeEavdpov xaretabat Tod peydXou, kal Tapayevouevos KALWNpN pev avToV 9 a , \ wn“ A“ \ ‘4
ideiv, Noywv S€ YpnoTa@v Tuyeiv Kal Prrodpoav-yns émayyeAXopévov tpobvpws BonOnoew. avtov , lal A A d€ ToAuNnoarTos eltrety, ‘‘ Kal ras dv, @ Bactred, A \ oY) b] \ nA 99 3 A V4 A voowv duvaros eins éuot BonOetv;” avdte davat TO ovopatt, Kal weptBavta Nicaiov immov nyeto bat.
Tavrny idov tiv dw éreppwacOn: taxes 5é Xpnoapevos Kal Stadpapwv ta petrakd Kata-
, \ A \ \ A 9 v
AapBaver Thy Bépotay: Kat TO wrEtoTOV avTobe
THS oTpaTias LOpvaas Ta AOLTA TpoanyeTo Sia
Tov aotpatnyav. o 5€ Anuntpios érel tadta nKovoe Kal Tovnpov év TH otTpatroTédm OopuBov naOetTo Tav Maxedover, ederce troppwrépw mpo-
A \ 7 ‘ , ,
ayayeiv, un TwAnaLoV yevopuevot Bactréws Maxedo-\ 2 vos xal doFav éxovtos petaBdrwvtae pos avTov.
50 9 VA > A N 4 9 e lA
OGev emiatperas emi tov Iluppov nyev ws Eévov
\ “
Kat picovpevov wtTro Tav Maxedovwyv. érret dé Tapectpatomedevoey aVTOOL, TOAXAOL TOV eK TIS 374

XI. Such letters the kings kept sending to Pyr- rhus, and at the same time on their own part they assailed Demetrius while he was still waiting to com- plete his preparations. Ptolemy sailed up with a great fleet and tried to bring the Greek cities to revolt, while Lysimachus invaded upper Macedonia from Thrace and ravaged the country. So Pyrrhus, taking the field at the same time with these, marched against Beroea, expecting, as proved to be the case, that Demetrius would go to confront Lysimachus, and thus leave the lower country unprotected. That night Pyrrhus dreamed that he was called by Alex- ander the Great, and that when he answered the call he found the king lying on a couch, but met with kindly speech and friendly treatment from him, and received a promise of his ready aid and help. " And how, O King," Pyrrhus ventured to ask, " when thou art sick, canst thou give me aid and help?" " My name itself will give it," said the king, and mounting a Nisaean horse he led the way.

This vision gave Pyrrhus great assurance, and leading his army with all speed through the inter- - vening districts he took possession of Beroea; then, stationing the greater part of his forces there, he proceeded to subdue the rest of the country through his generals. When Demetrius heard of this, and became aware of a pernicious uproar in his camp on the part of the Macedonians, he was afraid to lead them farther on, lest on coming into the neigh- bourhood of a Macedonian king of great renown they should go over to him. Therefore he turned back and led them against Pyrrhus, with the idea that he was a foreigner and hated by the Macedonians. But after he had pitched his camp over against Pyrrhus, many

we

Bepoias adixvoupevor TOV Ilvppov éveroomiator, OS dua ov pev év tots 6trAaLs Kal apn pov dvipa, mTpaws O€ Kai diravOpwrrws Tots HrwKoct Xpopevov. hoav oé€ TUVES ods avTos oO Tluppos
éyxabier T POT TOLOV{LEVOUS elvar Maxedovas, Kal AeyovTas Ore viv Katpos éote THs Anpntpiou
Bapirntos aTadrayivat, pos avdpa OnportKov Kal prdoot patiorny petaBadopevous TOV Iuppov.
ex TOUTOU TO THELaTOV avnpeLaTO THS oTpATLAS, cal tov Ivppov elyroup TEpia KoTOUVTES. éruxe
yap apypnpevos TO kpavos, axpt ov cupppovncas Kat qari TeptBépevos eyvaaOn 7 TE ogo Stamrpérovte Kal Tois TpaytKois Képacwy, dare tous Maxedovas ouvOnpwa TpooTpeXovTas aireiv, addous dé Kr.dbous Spvos dvaarépecOar dia TO Kal TOUS Tmepl éxeivov eo TepavaHevous Opa" 707
6é Kal mpos avrov TLVES ETON MOV eyew TOV

Anpntptoy ws UTexaTas Kal Tpoémevos Ta mpary-para, Kaos dofer BeBovretoGau. TOUTOLS TOIS Aoyors Spooy op@y TO Kivynua TOD oTpatoTédou kal hoBnOels xpvda dueEerrece, Kavoig Tul Kab
TO Xra puydie mepiarethas éauTov. érrenOooy be 0 Tl¥ppos dpaxel TmapéhaBe TO OTpaToTredov Kal Bactreus avnyopevOn Maxedover.
XII. "Emigavévros 5é Avowpaxov Kat Kowvov
Epryov auoiv TOLOUMEVOU THY Anpntpiov KaTa-Avow Kal véwer Oat THY Bactnreiav afvodvtos,
OUT@ Tavu BeBatws TOLS Maxedoor TLOTEUWY O
Iuppos, add apupiBoros @p ev avrois ébéEato
tov Avotmayou thy TOK NIGP, Kai dveveipavTo
- 1 Before mepideuevos, with Blass: mdéAw ovugporheas.

Beroeans came thither with loud praises of Pyrrhus ; they said he was invincible in arms and a brilliant hero, and treated his captives with mildness and humanity. There were some also whom Pyrrhus himself sent into the camp; they pretended to be Macedonians, and said that now was the favourable time to rid themselves of Demetrius and his severity, by going over to Pyrrhus, a man who was gracious to the common folk and fond of his soldiers. In con- sequence of this, the greater part of the army was all excitement, and went about looking for Pyrrhus ; for it chanced that he had taken off his helmet, and he was not recognised until he bethought himself and put it on again, when its towering crest and its goat's horns made him known to all. Some of the Macedonians therefore ran to him and asked him for his watchword, and others put garlands of oaken boughs about their heads because they saw the soldiers about him garlanded. And presently even to Demetrius himself certain persons ventured to say that if he quietly withdrew and renounced his under- takings men would think that he had taken wise counse]. He saw that this advice tallied with the agitation in the camp, and was frightened, and secretly stole away, after putting on a broad-brimmed hat and a simple soldier’s cloak. So Pyrrhus came up, took the camp without a blow,-and was proclaimed king of Macedonia.

XII. But now Lysimachus made his appearance, claimed that the overthrow of Demetrius had been the joint work of both, and demanded a division of the kingdom. So Pyrrhus, who did not yét feel en- tire confidence in the Macedonians, but was still ~ doubtful about them, accepted. the proposition of Tas odes Kal THY Ywpay mpos GAAHAOUS.

ToUTO 5€ wvNoeE ev Ev TO TrApOVTL Kal KaTéTmrAUGE
TOV TOANEMOY AUTOS, GrAIy@ 5é VaTEpoy éyvwoap

oux amadraynvy &xOpas, GAN éeyerAnpaTwv Kal Stahopas apynv teroinuévor thv véunorv. ols yap ov TéXNayos, OUK Gpos, OvK aoixynTos épnuia 4 > \ , -3Q9 e le) +) , mépas éotl mreovetias, od’ ot Statpodvtes Evpoanv Kat Actay téppoves opifovar tas émiOupias, Le A e / \ U4 > lA > TOS av amrTouevot Kal \ravovTes GAAHAWY ATpeEpotey év Tois Tapovot pn adsKobvTes, OvK EoTLW bd a 9 \ fe) \ > / \ 9 4 evTrelv, AANA TroNEMOvGL meV aéi, TO ETT1BouvrEvELY
kat POoveiy Eudutov exovtes, dveiv 5é dvoydror, @OOTEP VOpLoU“aTwY, TOAg“ov Kal eipnYyys, TO
, A
TWAPATUXOVTL YPWVTAL TPOS TO TUUpéepov, OV pds
\ , > \ , : a e rol
TO Sixasov, Emel BeXTioUS rye TrodELEtY OpoNOYOUV-
i. ? A n ’ , \ 9 a \ , Tés elolv 7} THS abtkias TO apyodv Kal ayoddlov duxarocvvny Kai dirdiav ovopalovtes. edynrdwoe Se € aA b \ \ > , a 4
o IIvppos: éurrod@v yap avfoudve To Anpuntpio
TAMMY lLOTAMEVOS, KAL KMAVOY THY SUVapLY OaTeEp ES » / / > , ? s e& appworias peyddyns avarapBSdvovaar, éBonbe tots “EdAnoe cal tapnrOev eis tas *AOjvas.
> \ \ 3 \ > / \ , a a avaBas 6€ es THY axpoTrodkly Kai Ovaas TH Oe@
Kat kataBas avOnpepov ayarav pev Epnoe rod Synuou THY Wpos avToVv edvotav Kai Tioti, av pévtoL cawppovact pndéva tav Baciréwv Ett
, >A ’ \ ! \ a y,
TAPNTELY AVTOUS ELS THY TOALY pNdée TAS TUAAS
avoitews éx TovTov Kai mpos Anuntpiov eipnyny éroujoaTo, Kal per ortyov xpovoyv, ets "Aciay 390

Lysimachus, and they -divided the cities and the territory with one another. This availed for the present, and prevented war between them, but shortly afterward they perceived that the distribution which they had made did not put an end to their ‘enmity, but gave occasion for complaints and quarrels. “For how men to whose rapacity neither sea nor ‘ mountain nor uninhabitable desert sets a limit, men to whose inordinate desires the boundaries which separate Europe and Asia put no stop, can remain content with what they have and do one another no wrong when they are in close touch, it is impossible to say.’ Nay, they are perpetually. at war, because plots and jealousies are parts of their natures, and | they treat the two words, war and peace, like cur- rent coins, using whichever happens to be for their advantage, regardless of justice; for surely they are better men when they wage war openly than when they give the names of justice and friendship to the | times of inactivity and leisure which interrupt their work of injustice. And Pyrrhus made this plain; for, setting himself to hinder the growing power of Demetrius, and trying to prevent its recovery, so to speak, from a serious illness, he went to the help of the Greeks and entered Athens. Here he went up to the acropolis and sacrificed to the goddess, then came down again on the same day, and told the people he was well pleased with the confidence and goodwill which they had shown him, but that in future, if they were wise, they would not admit any one of the kings into their city nor open their gates to him. After this, he actually made peace with De- metrius, but in a little while, when Demetrius had 379

bo |

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

b] Ul b aA 4 ‘ € \ ,
am dpavtos avrov, Tadw Teabeis bd Avotpayou @ertariav adiorn Kal tais “EAAnuxais ppovpais mpooeTrorepet, BeATiocs Ypwpevos Tots Maxeddar oTpatevopevols 7) oxXOAaLOVaL, Kal GrAwWS aUTOS ouUK ev pos Novylay. TEpuKUs.
Va
Téros 5é Anpunrpiov -KatatroXeunOévtos év
/ , ’ , .
Lupia Avoipayos én’ adeias yevopevos Kal axo-
\ > AN \ 4 e
Adlwy evOvs emi tov Ilvppov @punoe. Kal cadnpévov rept THY “Edecoav avtov tais ayopais Kopelopévars éerimecov xal Kpatnoas amopiav
TPOTOV aVT@ TepltéoTnoev, eiTa yodupact Kal
U VA \ , A ,
Aovyors StépOetpe tovs mpwrovs tov Maxedovor, 9 ld 9 J ” \ / > A overditwy et Eévov avopa Kai mpoyovwv ael dedov-4 “ , € , \ Aevxotwv Maxedoor. Seotorny édopevor ToUs
"AreEdvdpov didrovs Kat ouvnbets amwbodor
, a e

Maxedovias. avarreOopévor 5é TordAOY Seicas Oo
Iluppos amrnddayn peta tHS "Hreipwtixys cal
A 4 ’ N , ct
cuppayikns Suvayews, atoBarwv Maxedoviay @
, 4 fd »>Q)> > a \
Tpomw tapédaBev. d0ev ovd aitiadcOat Tous:
\ v e a 4
jodXous éXovow ot Bactreis petaTiPepevous
mpos TO cuudépov’ éxeivous yap avTous TavTa pimovvTaL ToLtovuvTEs, amLoTIas Kai mmpodoctas
d:6acKarous évtas, Kal wrEeicTa vouilovtas wde-NeloOat Tov eAdyLoTA TO Sikaiw ypw@pevov.
XIII. Tore & ovv eis “Hrrecpov éexrecovrt te
/ \ : , 4 e \ ,
IIlvppw kai mpoeuevm Maxedoviay 7 pev tuyn
Tapetye XpHoOat Tois Tapovow aTpayyovws Kat 380

PYRRHUS

set out for Asia, he once more took the advice of Lysimachus and tried to bring Thessaly to revolt, besides waging war upon the garrisons of Demetrius in the Greek cities. For he found that the Macedonians were better disposed when they were on a campaign than when they were unoccupied, and he himself was by nature entirely averse to keeping uiet.

‘ But at last, after Demetrius had been wholly over- thrown in Syria,! Lysimachus, who now felt himself secure, and had nothing on his hands, at once set out against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus was in camp at Edessa, where Lysimachus fell upon his provision trains and mastered them, thus bringing him to straits; then, by letters and conferences he corrupted the leading Macedonians, upbraiding them because they had chosen as lord and master a man who wasa foreigner, whose ancestors had always been subject to Macedonia, and were thrusting the friends and familiars of Alexander out of the country. After many had thus been won over, Pyrrhus took alarm and departed with his Epeirots and allied forces, thus losing Macedonia precisely as he got it.2~ Whence we see that kings have no reason to find fault with popular bodies for changing sides as suits their inter- ests; for in doing this they are but imitating the kings themselves, who are their teachers in unfaith- fulness and treachery, and think him most advantaged who least observes justice.

XIII. At this time, then, when Pyrrhus had been driven back into Epeirus and had given up Mace- donia, Fortune put it into his power to enjoy what he had without molestation, to live in peace, and to 1 At the battle of Ipsus, 301 B.c. Cf. the Demetrius, chapter xliv. 2 Cf. chapter xi.

ony ev elonyy Bactrevovta Tow oixeiov" O be TO pH mapéxew € érépois Kaka pnde evel vp éTépwv
duv TLVA vauTew@on vopitwv, womep o AxedrrEvs OUK Edepe THY oxo, GNA POivvberKe pidov Kip
avO. pévwv, ToOéecKe & avTHY TE TTOAELOV TE.
Seduevos 8 ody EXaBe mpayuaTov Kaivov Tolav-THY vm obeow. ‘Peopaior Tapaytivots éTrohewouy:
of O€ pnre pé perv TOV Ode HOV Suvapevoe pnre Oéc8ar Opacvtyntt Kal Hox Onpia dnpaywyav, éBourevorTo Tmoveto Oat Tuppov nryeHova. Kat Kanreiv émt Tov TONE MOV as axon aryovTa TrELTTHY TOV Bactréov Kal oT parnyov évTa deworarov. TOV be mpeo Butepav Kal vovv ex ov Toy TONTOY ot ev avr ixpus evioT dpevot
7 pos THY yVoOunv efemumrov v0 Kpavyns Kat Bias TOV TOMELOT OLA, of O€ TavTa opavres
dm éXeuTov Tas exxdyatas. els 6€ Tis avnyp émecxns, Métwv dvopa, tis uépas éexeivns ev
) TO Soyua Kupody Ewedrov evotdons Kal Tov
dypou Kaelouévov, AaRov orédavoy TaV éEOXMV
Kal Aapmasiov, OoTep ob peOvovtes, avrnTpidos Upyyouperys AUT@ Tpos THY exchyoiay exopater.
ola, bé € év oxy onpoxpatias Oo Lov OUK €xovons Ol ev éxporouv idavres, ot dé eyehoor, exodve dé ovoels, aAXNa Kal 70 ryuvatoy aunetv KaKeivov adew éxéXevon Ets peoov * mpoedOovra® Kal TOUTO Tomnowy émidoeos jv. yevopéevns 5€ olwmTris
1 ¢is uéoov with Blass and most MSS : péoov.
xpoeAOdyra Blass, after Reiske: wpocedO@dyta.

reign over his own people. But he thought it tedious to the point of nausea if he were not inflicting mischief on others or suffering it at others’ hands, and like Achilles could not endure idleness,

“but ate his heart away Remaining there, and pined for war-cry and battle.” }

Filled with such desires, then, he found ground for fresh undertakings in the following circumstances. The Romans were at war with the people of Taren- tum, who, being able neither to carry on the war, nor yet, owing to the rashness and villainy of their pop- ular leaders, to put an end to it, wished to make Pyrrhus their leader and summon him to the war, believing him to be most at leisure of all the kings, and a most formidable general. Of the elderly and sensible citizens, some who were directly opposed to this plan were overborne by the clamour and vio- lence of the war party, and others, seeing this, ab- sented themselves from the assembly. But there was a certain worthy man, Meton by name, who, when the day on which the decree was to be ratified was at hand and the people were taking their seats in the assembly, took a withered garland and a torch, after the way of revellers, and came dancing in behind a flute-girl! who led the way for him. Then, as will happen in a throng of free people not given to decorum, some clapped their hands at sight of him, and others laughed, but none tried to stop him; nay, they bade the woman play on her flute and called upon Meton to come forward and give them a song; and it was expected that he would do so. But when silence had been made,

1 Tlad, i. 491 f.

«"Avdpes, én, " Tapavivor, Kadws 7roletTe matte Kal Kwpalery, Ews éFeotl, TOS Bovdopévors pn POovovvres. éav b€ cwdpovite, nai jTavTes amoNavoete Ett THS edevOEpias, ws ETEpA Tpaypata Kat Biov cai dtartav Ekovtes Stay Iluppos eis thy tTodW Trapayévyntat." TavTa pnQévta tovs todXouvs Eretce Tov Tapartiver, kat Opovs Sédpape tis exxAnoias ws ev Aeyopévov. ot 5é Tovs 'Pwpaiouvs SedsoTes, 7H yevopévns elpyvns éx500@o1, Tov TE Sjpov édo.Sopour et pépet T paws err ex wpa.lopevos oUTWS aoenyas Kal Trapowvovupevos, Tov Te Métrwva ovotpadévtes é&éBanov.
Odtw Sé tod Soyparos Kupiov revo peévov T pé-
o Bers émep yay els "Haretpov, ovy avtTa@v povov, andra Kal TOV 'Tradorar, ddpa to Ivppe@
Kopilovras Kal Aéyovras @s Hyenovos Euhpovos
Séovtar Kal Sofav EXOVTOS, Suvapes Sé avrobev UmapEovot. peydratr Trapa TE Aeveavay Kat
écoaTriov al avverav Kal 'Tapavtivey ets
Sia pupious imrrets, melo dé opod TEVTE Kal TpldKovTa upiadas. tadra ov povov avTov émnjpe tov Ilvppov, ddAdrAa Kal tois "Hrrecpw@ras mpoOupiayv évéBare Kat opuny THs oTpaTeias.
XIV. "Hp 6€ tes Kweéas, Geccands dviip, TO pev ppovetv Soxday iKxavos elvat, Anpoabevous 58
Tou pyTopos aKNKODS edoxer povos ev paMora :

T@v ToTe AEyovTwY oloy év eEixove THS EéxEivoU
Suvayews Kal Sewornros avapimvyoKev Tous
1 udvos ed uddiora Sintenis, with S&; Bekker corrects e@ .

to 4 (alone or most), after Bryan and Reiske, and is followed by Blass ; AC have padtora eb udvos.

384

391

he said: “Men of Tarentum, ye do well not to frown upon those who wish to sport and revel, while they can. And if ye are wise, ye will all also get some enjoyment still out of your freedom, assured that ye will have other business and a different life and diet when Pyrrhus has come into the city.”
These words brought conviction to most of the Tarentines, and a murmur of applause ran through the assembly. But those who were afraid that if peace were made they would be given up to the Romans, reviled the people for tamely submitting to such shameless treatment from a drunken reveller, and banding together they cast Meton out:}
And so the decree was ratified, and the people sent ambassadors to Pyrrhus,? not only from their own number, but also from the Italian Greeks. These brought gifts to Pyrrhus, and told him they wanted a leader of reputation and prudence, and that he would find there large forces gathered from Lucania, Messapia, Samnium, and Tarentum, amounting to twenty thousand horse and three hundred and fifty thousand foot all told. This not only exalted Pyrrhus himself, but also inspired the Epeirots with eagerness to undertake the expedition.

XIV. Now, there was a certain Cineas, a man of Thessaly, with a reputation for great wisdom, who had been a pupil of Demosthenes the orator, and . was quite the only public speaker of his day who was thought to remind his hearers, as a statue might, of that great orator’s power and ability. Associating

1 Cf. Dionysius Hal., Excerpta ex lib. xiz., 8.
2 In the summer of 281 B.c.
385

a axovovTas. ouvay dé TO Tlvppe Kal qwewTo-pevos él tas woras éBeBaiov to Evpirisecov,} dtu “‘mav éEatpei NoYos

A \ , , 4 v 99
0 Kal aiOnpos TroAEpiov Spdceey av.
0 yobv II vppos éNeye qXELovas Tones vo Kuvéou Tois Novos 7) Tots Sm dots vp’ éavTou mpoonyGar:
Kar dteTédNer TO dvdpa TLMGD év Tos padiora Kal XPwmevos. ovTos ovv TOV I1vppov @PHNMEVOY TOTE
opav éri tyv “Itadiay eis Royous emnyayeTo TOLOUTOUS, tO@v oxoddlovra. fs TloAeweorat ev,
@ Tluppe, | “Pw patos AéyovTas Kat ToAAa@v ebvav
Haxi pov dpxovres: et dé Soin Geos Tmepuyever Gar TOV avopav, TL pnoopeba Th vicn; Kato Iluppos, ‘ ‘'Epords, eltrep, ‘ ‘o Kuéa, mpayya pavopevov" ouTE BapBapos jpiv €xet ods ovUTE “EAAnvis afvopaxos “Peopatov Kcparndevto, XX’ eo mev evd bs "Itariav amacay, nS péyebos Kat dperny Kat dvvapep ane Tou Tut padrov aryvoeiv ool TpoonKer. "3 px pov ov eTLaX@V Oo Kuvéas,
’ ‘Iradav dé,” elmren, “a Bacthei, AaBortes, Tt monoouev;' kat o Ilvppos otrw THY dudvoray avTou cabopav, «"Eyyus,” elrrev, ‘ ‘9 DKerLa xelpas opeyet, VHRooS evdai mov Kal L wokvavOpwrros, arava é paora ordaus yap, ® Kivéa, wavta vov éxelva Kat dvapxia Todewyv Kal dSnuaywyav d£vrns ‘Ayadoxr€ous exdeouT TOS.” “ Eixora,” én, réyers,” o Kivéas: “add 4 TobTO Tépas nity THS oTpateias, NaBelvy SeKediav;” “ @eds,” - wav yap éfaipe: Adyos
8 kal olSnpos roAeulwy dpdoesev Kv.
(Phoenissae, 517 f., Kirchhoff.)

himself with Pyrrhus, and sent by him as ambassador to the cities, he confirmed the saying of Euripides, to wit, “all can be won by eloquence That even the sword of warring enemies might gain.”
At any rate, Pyrrhus used to say that more cities had been won for him by the eloquence of Cineas than by his own arms; and he continued to hold Cineas in especial] honour and to demand his services. It was this Cineas, then, who, seeing that Pyrrhus was eagerly preparing an expedition at this time to Italy, and finding him at leisure for the moment, drew him into the following discourse. “ The Romans, O Pyrrhus, are said to be good fighters, and to be rulers of many warlike nations; if, then, Heaven should permit us to conquer these men, how should we use our victory?" And Pyrrhus said: "Thy question, O Cineas, really needs no answer; the Romans once conquered, there is neither bar- barian nor Greek city there which is a match for us, but we shall at once possess all Italy, the great size and richness and importance of which no man should know better than thyself." After a little pause, then, Cineas said: "And after taking Italy, O King, what are we to do?"' And Pyrrhus, not yet perceiving his intention, replied: 'Sicily is near, and holds out her hands to us, an island abounding in wealth and men, and very easy to capture, for all is faction there, her cities have no government, and demagogues are rampant now that Agathocles is gone." '" What thou sayest," replied Cineas, " is probably true ; but will our expedition stop with the taking of Sicily ?"' " Heaven grant us,' said Pyrrhus,

387
cc 2
cI
:
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

épn o IIvppos, "windy S:d0n Kal xatopOobv Tovtoss 5&€ mpodywour ypnooueba mpaypaTtov
, s A b 4 4 N
peydrdwov. Tis yap av amooxoto AtBins Kat Kapyndovos ev épuxt@ yevopuevns, iy 'AyaborAjs atrodpas éx Yupaxoveayv xpida Kal mepdoas \ ~~, 7 a > IQA a ud \
vavoly Orjyats AaBeiv trap ovdev 7HAOEv; Ste dé
TOUTWY KpAaTHoAacL Hiv ovdEels GYTLATHOETAL TOV
A e 4 4 V4 , >
viv wBpilovtwy morepiwy, Ti av réyou TIS;
" Ovdév," o Kuvéas cie: " dAXov yap Ste Kal Maxedoviay avadaBeiv xai tis "EXAdbos apyetv
e€ 4 / > \ 4 Ul
urap—e BeBaiws amo tyrtKavTns Suvdpews.
yevouevmv 5€ travtwv vd' Huiv, TL ToLncopev;"
cat o Ilupposériyerdoas, "Xyornv," én,
" aEouevy TrorAAnY, Kal KoOwY, @ paxaple, xa0n-\ " \ \ 4 U 9 UA
pepwwos Eotat, Kai da NOywv cuvovTEs GAANAOUS evdpavoipev." évtadda 81 Tav AOywv KaTATTHOAS tov IIvppov o Kuvéas, "Eiza," ébn, "ti viv 5] , 9 eC A A , A éutrodwy eat nuiv Bovropévors KoOOwYL ypHaBat
y > >» , ? a]
kal oxyorale per adAANAWY, EL TAVTA EXOMEV
Ww 4 3 4 >. > 4
76 Kal Tapeotiy ampaypoves ed' a ds aipatos

\ , 4 \ 4 , ? ,
kal Tovey peyadov kat xivdvvev pérXopEv adi-Eec@at, toda xal Spacavtes éEtépovs Kaxa Kal mabovres;”
Tovrows Tots Adyots Hviacwe waddOv 7H peTéeOnKe tov IIvppov o Kuvéas, vojncavra pev bony arére 06 av, my be wpé us €XTTiO
iTev evdarmoviav, my dé wpéyeto Tas éATridas ageivar un Suvdpmevov.
XV. Iperov pév obv déotetne tov Kivéav tois Tapavtivos otpatio@tas ayovta Tpicyidious: 388

PYRRHUS

“ victory and success so far; and we will make these contests but the preliminaries of great enterprises. For who could keep his hands off Libya, or Carthage, when that city got within his reach, a city which Agathocles, slipping stealthily out of Syracuse and crossing the sea with a few ships, narrowly missed taking? And when we have become masters here, no one of the enemies who now treat us with scorn will offer further resistance; there is no need of saying that.” “None whatever,’ said Cineas, “ for it is plain that with so great a power we shall be able to recover Macedonia and rule Greece securely. But when we have got everything subject to us, what are we going to do?”’ Then Pyrrhus smiled upon him and said: ‘We shall be much at ease, and we'll drink bumpers, my good man, every day, and we'll gladden one another’s hearts with confi- dential talks.” And now that Cineas had brought Pyrrhus to this point in the argument, he said: “Then what stands in our way now if we want to drink bumpers and while away the time with one another P Surely this privilege is ours already, and we have at hand, without taking any trouble, those things to which we hope to attain by bloodshed and great toils and perils, after doing much harm to others and suffering much ourselves.”

By this reasoning of Cineas Pyrrhus was more troubled than he was converted; he saw plainly what great happiness he was leaving behind him, but was unablé to renounce his hopes of what he eagerly desired. |
XV. First, then, he sent Cineas to Tarentum with three thousand soldiers; next, after numerous — 389

*
4
4
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

éretta ToAXov inanyoav Kal Katappaxtev ral TmopOpeiwy travtodatrav éx Tdpavtos Koutcbévtwv

DJ 4 > 4 v l4
éveBiBalev éd€havras elxkoot Kal Tptoyxidious irmets, qmevovs Sé Sicpupiovs Kal dsrytdLous tofotas xal odevdovnras mevtaxocious. yevo-pévov S€ mavtwv éroipwv avayOels Emre nal
pécov Exwv tov ‘Idvioy dpmaveta: Bopéa avéuo Tap w@pav éxpayévtt. Kat BracGels avtos peév apety Kat mpobupia vavte@y Kal xvBepyntav
éEavédepe Kal Mpocavynye TH YH ToAUTTOVMS Kat ‘ 4 A \ ms , lA jmapaBorws, Tov dé adXoV oTOAOV ovyxvOévTOS kal Tov vewav oxedacbeicay ai pév atroodaréiaat fo! b] , 9 , >] \ \ A THs ‘Itadias é€ewoOnoay eis to AtBuKov Kat
> \ I \ be e x ~ \ txedtKOv WéNayos, Tas dé v7epBarely pH
b
SuvnBeicas axpav ‘lamvyiay vuF te KatedauBave, kal jwodAn Kal yareTT) Oddacca Talovca Tpds
xwpia Sicoppa nal Tupra racas bépOerpe AHV THs Bactdtxns. atrn 6é mrayiou! pe Ere dvTos Tov KUpatos nuvveto Kal diépevye peyéber Kal es \ > \ fel 4 > \
poun tas émiBoras THs Badrdoons: erel dé mepierOov amo ys amrnvtTa TO mvedpa Kal n o
xivduvoy etyev 4) vads avTimp@pos ioTtapévn pds KAvowva ToALY Stappaynvat, To bé edévTas aves nyptwpéev@ merddyet Kal mvevpaTt TpoTras Aap-Bavovtt travtodaras déper Oar hoBepwrepov éedpai-
A A e 4
VeTO TOY TapoVTwY KaKaY, dpas o IIvppos avTov apdjnxey eis OddAaccay, Kai TOV dilwv Kal Tov
4 > \ 9 a A 4
Sopupopwv ev0vs Fv auidrta kal mpodvpia LU fe)
mepl avtov. 7 S€ vvE Kal TO Kdpa pera 4 “ aropou peydXov Kal Tpaxelas dvaxoThs Yaderny
la
érroies Thv BonOerav, @aoTE pods Hmepas HON
1 xAaylov with Sintenis', Blass, and the MSS.: weAaylou.
39°

cavalry-transports, decked vessels, and passage-boats of every sort had been brought over from Tarentum, he put on board of them twenty elephants and three thousand horse, twenty thousand foot, two thousand archers, and five hundred slingers. When all was ready, he put out and set sail ; but when he was half way across the Ionian sea he was swept away by a north wind that burst forth out of all season. In spite of its violence he himself, through the bravery and ardour of his seamen and captains, held out and made the land, though with great toil and danger ; but the rest of the fleet was thrown into confusion and the ships were scattered. Some of them missed Italy and were driven off into the Libyan and Sicilian sea; others, unable to round the Iapygian promontory, were overtaken by night, and a heavy and violent sea, which drove them upon harbourless and uncertain shores, and destroyed them all except the royal galley. She, as long as the waves drove upon her side, held her own, and was saved by her great size and strength from the blows of the water ; but soon the wind veered round and met her from the shore, and the ship was in danger of being crushed by the heavy surges if she stood prow on against them. However, to allow her again to be tossed about by an angry open sea and by blasts of wind that came from all directions, was thought to be more fearful than their present straits. Pyrrhus therefore sprang up and threw himself into the sea, and his friends and bodyguards were at once emulously eager to help him. But night and the billows with their heavy crashing and violent receil made assistance difficult, so that it was not until day

papatvomevouv Tov mvevpatos exteceivy avToy ert THY YhV, TO ev CMOpaTL TaytTaTaciw advvaTtas éyovTa, TOAMY O€ Kal pwun THS Wuyys avTaipovTa Tpos THY atropiay. apa dé ot te Meoodmion, cal” obs é&e8padc8n, cvvébcov BonOodvtes ex trav mapovTwy mwpodvpws, Kal mpocepépovto Tav cwlopéevoy Eviat vewv, év als joav immeis pev OAiyo. TravTamact, Tefol 5é Stoxtdiwv éAdtToUs, érehavtes 5é dvo.
XVI. Tovtovs avarkaBav o Ilvppos éBaditev eis Tdpayta. Kal tod Kuwvéov rpoayayortos eis andaviTnow, was no0eTo, TOVS TTpATLwWTAS, TApEA-Oav ovdév dxovtwy ovdé mpos Biav érparte Tav
Tapavtivoy, Ews averwOnoav ai vies éx THs Oaratrns Kal curnrOev 4 TrEloTH THS SUVdpews. tnuixadta 8€ op@v To ARGOS avev peydrns avaykns pnte colecbar Suvapevov pnte cote, adn’ olov éxeivou mpoTroAemouvTos oiKxor KabnaOat mept AovTpa Kal auvOVEtas yevomevor, aTrEKXELT E pev Ta yupvdowa Kal tovs mepitrdtous, év ols advovTEs UTrép TOY TpaypaTav AOy@ SiecTpaTN-youv, Totous 5é Kal K@pmovs Kat Oadias axaipous

avetnev, exadre. Sé pds Ta Ora, Kal Tepl Tovs KaTaXoyous TOY aTpaTevouéevwy atrapaiTnTos
jv xal AvITNpOS, Wate ToAXOUS ex THs TOAEwWS ateNeciv anbeia tov apxecOar Sovrciav Td pH mpos nOovny Chv KaXovvTas.
"Evel 5€ AatBivos o Tav ‘Pwpaiwy iratos
NYYVEAAETO TOAATH oOTpAaTLA Ywpelv én alTov dua 392

PYRRHUS

had already come and the wind was dying away that he succeeded in gaining the shore, in body altogether powerless, but with boldness and strength of spirit still making head against his distress. The Messapians, among whom he had been cast forth, ran together with eager offers to assist as well as they could, and at the same time some of his ships that had escaped the storm came up; in these there were but a few horsemen all told, less than two thousand footmen, and two elephants. ’ XVI. With these Pyrrhus set out for Tarentum, where Cineas, on learning of his approach, led out his soldiers to meet him. Entering the city, he did nothing that was against the wishes of the Tarentines, nor did he put any compulsion upon them, until his ships came back in safety from the sea and the greater part of his forces were assembled. Then, however, seeing that the multitude were incapable, unless under strong constraint, of either saving themselves or saving others, but were inclined to let him do their fighting for them while they remained at home in the enjoyment of their baths and social festivities, he closed up the gymnasia and the public walks, where, as they strolled about, they fought out their country’s battles in talk; he also put a stop to drinking-bouts, revels, and festivals, as un- seasonable, called the men to arms, and was stern and inexorable in his enrolment of them for military: service. Many therefore left the city, since they were not accustomed to being under orders, and called it servitude not to live as they pleased.

And now word was brought to pymhas that Laevinus the Roman consul was coming against him 393

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ , . A 2Q/ \ e , tiv Aevxaviav’ dtarropOav, ovdéra pey ot cup-
a a \ ayo. Tapnoav aut@, Sevoy dé rocovpevos os a“ o
avacxyécOat Kai weptidety Tovs TodEpLoUS eyyu-Tépw mpoiovtas é&nAOe peta THs Suvapews, Tpo-
, ? ‘ A e , > f
Téprpas Knpuka mpos Tovs ‘Pwpaious, et pidov éotiy avtois 1po ToAémou Sixas AaRely Tapa TaV
b “A b] A A \ A

Iradwwtar, avT@ SixactH Kal drarr\anTH Xpnoapévous. aroxptvapévouv S€ tov AaBivou pte
A , e A e / 4
dtadrAanTHv ITvppov aipeta0ar “Pwpaious pnre dedouxévat odéutov, mpoeNwv Katectpato-
, b A \ , l4 ,
médevoev ev TH peTakv rrediw Ilavdocias movews
e e kat ‘Hpaxrelas. aruOopuevos 5€ Tots ‘Pwpaious éyyus elvat kal wépav Tod Liptos toTapyov KataoTpaToTedevely, Mpocimmevoe TH ToTau@ Oéas Evexa® kal xatidav tafiw te Kat dudraKxas Kal
Koopov avTay Kal TO oXHuUA THS oTpaTOTEdElasS 4 “~ .
€Oavpace, Kal tav dirtwy mpocayopevoas TOV
b / 66 4 39 2 oc 2? 4
eyyutato, “Takis pev, elmev, “wo Meyaxrrers, of a , > / \ \
aitn tav RBapBapwy ov BdpBapos, To dé épyov elcoucOa. xat dia dpovtidos éywv dn TO HéAXOV Eyvw ToOvS TUppaYoUS avapévetv, ToIs bé ‘Pwpaiots, av mpotepov éemiyepaot StaBaivewy, éméstnce dvAaKny wvimép Tov moTayod THY elpEovaav. ot 5€, dep exeivos éyvm Tepiméevery, POjvat atrevoovtes, evexeipovy TH SiaRdoet, cata mopov pev of melot, moddayobey 5é of imnets dieEeXavvovtes TOV ToTapmov, WaTE SetaavTas THY KUKAwWoLW avaxywpey Tors “EXAnvas, aicOopuevov 5é tov Tvppov xai StatapayOévta ois pev
4 A fe) A
nryepwoot Tov metov trapeyyvav evOds eis Take
4 A
KkaSictacbar nat trepipévery év Tots OTAOLS, AVTOV 394

393

PYRRHUS

with a large army and plundering Lucania as he came. Pyrrhus had not yet been joined by his allies, but thinking it an intolerable thing to hold back and suffer his enemies to advance any nearer, he took the field with his forces, having first sent a herald to the Romans with the enquiry whether it was their pleasure, before waging war, to receive satisfaction ~ from the Italian Greeks, employing him as arbiter and mediator. But Laevinus made answer that the Romans neither chose Pyrrhus as a mediator nor feared him as a foe. Pyrrhus therefore went for- ward and pitched his camp in the plain between the cities of Pandosia and Heracleia. When he learned that the Romans were near and lay encamped on the further side of the river Siris, he rode up to the river to get a view of them; and when he had observed their discipline, the appointment of their watches, their order, and the general arrangement of their camp, he was amazed, and said to the friend who was nearest him: “The discipline of these Barbarians is not barbarous; but the result will show us what it amounts to.”’ He was now less. confident of the issue, and determined to wait for his allies; but he stationed a guard on the bank of the river to check the Romans if, in the meantime, they should attempt to cross it. The Romans, however, anxious to anticipate the coming of the forces which Pyrrhus had decided to await, attempted the passage, their infantry crossing the river by a ford, and their cavalry ' dashing through the water at many points, so that the Greeks on guard, fearing that they would be surrounded, withdrew. When Pyrrhus saw this, he was greatly disturbed, and charging his infantry officers to form in line of battle at once and stand

“a aA ,
5é€ tois immetot twapeFeAadoat TpioxLALots ovow,
, S éxritovta diaBaivovtas éte kal Sveotracpuévous
, 2
atdxtous AyecOat tors ‘“Pwpaiovs. ered 5 er 4 A e , “A
éwpa Oupeovs TE ToANOUS VIrEeppatvopmevous TOU ToTapmov Kab TOUS immmets eTEeNavvoVTas év TakeL, aovotpéwas évéBare mpatos, avTobev Te TEpioT TOS
“A bid 4 \ , ,
Q@v oTK@Y Kade KAL NALTIPOTNTL KEKOTPNLEVOYV
TEPLTTOS, Kal THY SoEav ériderxvdpeEvos Epyols OvK amodéoveay avTov Ths apeTHs? padsota O€ GT TAS Netpas Kal TO copa TapexwY TH ayavt Kai TOUS
xa? avTov duvvopevos Eppwpévas ov acuveyetto TOV AOyLapov OVSe Tov dpoveivy eEEmuTTEV, aAN
@ ? “ 4 N U
aotep EEwSev ehopav dsexvBépva Tov trodEmop, autos petabéwy éxactayooe nal trapaBonOav tois éxBiatecOas Soxodarv.
"EvOa 5% Aeovydros o Maxedwv avépa xatidov
5) \ ne A a , \ < er
Itadov émréyovta t@ Iluppm Kat tov mov avtitrapeEdyovra Kal cuppeOrotapevov ae Kal 4 co ¢ a 99 ° co (e) \ auyxivoupevov, ‘ Opds, elmev, a Bactred, Tov
A e
BapBapov éxeivor, dv 6 péXas irmos 0 NEVKOTTOUS

4 , / \ \ 4 4
pepe; péya te Bovrevopéevm Kai Setvoyv Gporos €oTt, ool yap évopa Kat mpos oé TétaTae
/ ‘\ A a \ \ Tvevpatos mectos av Kal Avpod, Tovs dé AAXOUS
é@ yaipev. arrAa od hvdAdtrov tov avdpa.” N e , > , ce A \ e 4 2
kat o Iluppos arexpivato, “To peév elpappévov, @
Aeovvate, Staduyety advvatov: yaipwy 5 ovte La vw ” 9 A 9 a e¢ a ovTos our adXdos Tis Itadk@v eis yeElpas Hiv
4 a cuveiow. Tt Tavita mpocdtareyouevwv oO
9 N
Itaros StaraBeav ro dopv Kal cvotpéas Tov 396

PYRRHUS

under arms, he himself rode out with his three thousand horsemen, hoping to come upon the Romans while they were still crossing, and to find them scattered and in disorder. But when he saw a multitude of shields gleaming on the bank of the river and the cavalry advancing upon him in good order, he formed his men in close array and led them to the attack. He was conspicuous at once for the beauty and splendour of his richly ornamented armour, and showed by his deeds that his valour did not belie his fame; and this most of all because, while actively participating in the fight and vigorously repelling his assailants, he did not become confused in his calculations nor lose his presence of mind, but directed the battle as if he were surveying it from a distance, darting hither and thither himself and bringing aid to those whom he thought to be overwhelmed.

Here Leonnatus the Macedonian, observing that an Italian was intent upon Pyrrhus, and was riding out against him and following him in every movement from place to place, said: ‘Seest thou, O King, that Barbarian yonder, riding the black horse with white feet? He looks like a man who has some great and terrible design in mind. For he keeps his eyes fixed upon thee, and is intent to reach thee with all his might and main, and pays no heed to anybody else. So be on thy guard against the man.” To him Pyrrhus made reply: ‘ What is fated,O Leonnatus, it is impossible to escape ; but. with impunity neither he nor any other Italian shall come to close quarters with me.” While they were still conversing thus, the Italian levelled his spear, wheeled his horse, and

10 larmov Hpynaev émrt TOV T1uppov. celta pa Tales pev avros 7? Sopare TOU Bacthéws Tov imrrov, maiet S€ TOY éxEivouv TapaBadov O Aeovvdros.
aupotépwv Se Tov immreov mea ovTov TOV ev Iuppov ot piror TEpiaYovTEs dvnpracay, TOV dé
"IraXov pay opevov dtepOerpav. Hv dé TO yévet Ppevravos, ins Hnyepov, "Omhaxos 6 Gvopa.
XVII. Todto dé edidafe TOV TIvppov paddov purarredBar: Kal Tous immeis opay évdidovras peter éwmeTo Thy ddrayya Kal TapeTarrer, av-TOS 6 THY Vrapmvea Kal Ta Stra Tapacous évt
TeV éTaipwv Meyaxnei, trois 5é éxeivou Tpomrov TWa KaTraxpiyas éavTov emnye Tots ‘Pepaiors.
defapevey 6é exervov Kat cup PBarovray Xpovov
TE ToADy elo TH KEL Ta THS PaXns dx pita, Kal
TPOTAS émTA REvETAaL pevyovtav avatradw Kal
2 Su@xovTeov yever Oa, Kab yap 7] Orders TO) SirrAwy év Kalp@ 0¢ GwTNpiay avTOv yeyouvia
Tou Bactréws ONLY OV edénaev avatpéeyat Ta Tedywata Kat drab Jeipar THY viKny. TOAN@Y yap épiepéevav tov Meyaxnéovs, o 0 Tp@Tos TaTafas Kal cataBadwv avrov, évopa Aec£oos, apapmaoas TO Kpavos Kal THY xrapvea T AatBive ™pooimmeva ev avadecvowy a apa «al Body avnpn-
3 xévas Tov ILvppov. Hy ou Tapa Tas takers TOV
Aad vpwv Tapadepopevoy Kal avaderxvupevov Tots TE “Pewpators Xapa per’ drararypod Kal Tots
if "EAAgow aOupia Kal catamhngts, a aype ov b paar 0 Iluppos 70 ry-voevov , Tapydauve YURY@ “T@ 394
TpoowmTe thy Te deEvay opéryov TOUS paxopevors Kat tT) dovy onpaivwy éavtov. tédos S€ TAY 398

charged upon Pyrrhus. Then at the same instant the Barbarian’s spear smote the king’s horse, and his own horse was smitten by the spear of Leonnatus. Both horses fell, but while Pyrrhus was seized and rescued by his friends, the Italian, fighting to the last, was killed. He was a Frentanian by race, captain of a troop of horse, Oplax by name.!

XVII. This taught Pyrrhus to be more on his guard ; and seeing that his cavalry were giving way, he called up his phalanx and put it in array, while he himself, after giving his cloak and armour to one of his companions, Megacles, and hiding himself after a fashion behind his men, charged with them upon the Romans. But they received and engaged him, and for a long time the issue of the battle remained undecided ; it is said that there were seven turns of fortune, as each side either fled back or pursued. And indeed the exchange of armour which the king ‘had made, although it was opportune for the safety of his person, came near overthrowing his cause and losing him the victory. For many of the enemy assailed Megacles, and the foremost of them, Dexoiis by name, smote him and laid him low, and then, snatching away his helmet and cloak, rode up to Laevinus, displaying them, and shouting as he did so that he had killed Pyrrhus. Accordingly, as the spoils were carried along the ranks and displayed, there was joy and shoufing among the Romans, and among the Greeks consternation and dejection, until Pyrrhus, learning what was the matter, rode along his line with his face bare, stretching out his hand to the combatants and giving them to know him by his voice. At last, when the Romans were more than 1 Cf. Dionysius Hal., Hxcerpta ex lib. xix., 12.

Onpiwv éxBralopévoy pddora tous ‘Pwpaious,
Kat TOY imtwv, TpW eyyus yevecBa, ducavacyxe-TOUVTM@Y Kal TapapepovTov TOUS éemiBaras, € eT ayayov THY Gerrarsany i immov avTols Tapacoo-pévous eTpeparo TOG Ova.
Atoviatos Mev OvV OrjiY@ TOV TEVTAKLTXIALOY
Kab puptov éAdooovas mec eiv taropel ‘Popaiov, ‘lepdvupos be povous ETTAKLO LAious, Tav 6é mepl T1vppov o o pev Acovictos Mupious Kab TpLoxerious, o de ‘Tepdvupos éXarrovas TOV TeTpaKi-- XrLeov KpaTloToL 6€ Hoay ovTo" Kal TOV pirwy
0 IIvppos nai trav oTpATHyOv ols padiota Xpopevos Oceréhee kal mictevwov améBadev. ov pny ara Kal TO oTparomedoy éXaBe TeV ‘Popaiwy exArmovTav, Kal TONELS cuppayioas avuTav ™ poo - NyayeTo, Kal xwpav TOANIY SteropOyc¢, Kal
7 pon Oev Soov pn) TWAéov aTadiwy TplaKxoola@v amoaxeiv Tis ‘Pouns. adixovTo 6 auT@ Aev-Kavay TE TOANOL Kab Zavvirév pera, THY payny, obs euepaparo pev voTepyoavTas, ny oé. dios 7)80pL€V05 Kal péya povey ort povors Tots per’ avtod xat Tapavtivows éxpatnoe Tis PEND ‘Popaiwv Suvd pews.
XVIII. ‘Po patos bé AaiBivov pév ovK amnr-Aafav THS apxiis. KaiTOL AéyeTat Taiov Pafpi-Ktov evTrety as OUK ‘Hresporat ‘Popaious, anna Tuppos vevixnKot AaBwov, olopevov ov THS duvapews, aNNG TIS oTpaThyias yeyovevar THY qTTayv avar hnpobvtes dé Tas rages Kal TWWTATTOVTES érépas Tpodvpes, kat Noyous abeeis Kal coRapovs mept TOU ToNé“oU héyovres, Exar Ew TO [upp@ Tapetyov. conte OvY aAUT@ TéeuavTe TpoTEpoY 400

‘PYRRHUS

ever crowded back by the elephants, and their horses, before they got near the animals, were terrified and ran away with their riders, Pyrrhus brought his Thessalian cavalry upon them while they were in confusion and routed them with great slaughter.

Dionysius states that nearly fifteen thousand of the Romans fell, but Hieronymus says only seven thousand ; on the side of Pyrrhus, thirteen thousand fell, according to Dionysius, but according to Hieronymus less than four thousand. These, however, were his best troops; and besides, Pyrrhus lost the friends and generals whom he always used and trusted most. However, he took the camp of the Romans after they had abandoned it, and won over to his side some of their allied cities; he also wasted much territory, and advanced until he was within three hundred furlongs’ distance from Rome. And now, after the battle, there came to him many of the Lucanians and Samnites. These he censured for being late, but it was clear that he was pleased and proud because with his own troops and the Tarantines alone he had conquered the great force of the Romans.

XVIII. The Romans did not depose Laevinus from his consular office; and yet we are told that Caius Fabricius declared that it was not the Epeirots who had conquered the Romans, but Pyrrhus who had conquered Laevinus, Fabricius being of the opinion that the Roman defeat was not due to their army, but to its general; but they lost no time in filling up their depleted legions and raising others, used fearless and vehement language about the war, and thus filled Pyrrhus with consternation. He decided, therefore, to send to them first and find out whether they were

Sidmrevpay AaBeiv TOY avdpav, el cupBatiKds
exover, Tryouper TO per Enel THY Tov Kal KpaTijoas Tavramact ov pipov epyov ovee TAS Tapovens Suvd pews elvat, THY dé piriay Kal Tas dradruvoers KadALoTa é EXE 7 pos bokav avuT@ pera, vixny. treuhOels ovv o Kuvéas eveToyXave TOIS vvarois, Kal ddpa Tato avt@yv Kal yuvackiv emeurpe mapa Tou Bactréws. éraBe dé ovdeis, GNX dmrexpivayTo TUVTES Kal maoae étt Synpocia

oTovoay yevouéveay Kal Ta Tap avrav bmdpker ™po0upa, T@ Baciret Kal KeXaplopéva. 7 pos be THY TUYKANTOY éraywya TOU Kuvéov TOA Kal
prravOpwra stareyOévros, dopevor pev ovdev ovee éToLwcs édéyorTo, Kattrep dvdpas TE TOUS AwKoTas év TH “ayn dina AUTpwY adiévTos av-tots tov Iluppov Kai ovyxatepydcacBar (Tay
"Iradday emayyeAAouevov, girjiav dé avr TOUT@Y EaUT@ Kai Tots Tapavrivots aberar, Erepov 8é
pndev aiToupevov. dfrob rye bay hoav évdtdovTes Ot qwornot pos THY Elpnvny, TT NWEVOL Te peyarn
paxn Kal poo doxayres érépay amo petSovos duvapews, TOY "IradtKav TO Tuppe mT poaryeryove-TOV. évba 67 Knravduos "Anmtos, avnp emipavns, vo dé Y7PHS dpa Kal TIpwTEws Oppatoy amet-PNKWS TpOS THY ToNtTeLav Kal TET AUUEVOS, amraryyedoueveov TOTE TOV mapa tov Bactréws Kal NOyou KaTaTXOvTOS WS perret Wwngpiserbar TAS Siarvoers) OUYKANTOS, OUK exapTEepnaer, adra TOUS Geparrovras dpacBat Kehevoas auTov exopi-cero pos TO Bovreutnpiov ev popeip be ayopas.
‘yevouevov dé pos Tais Oupats OL pev matdes a Gua Tois yapBpois wmovtaBovtes Kai teptoxovTes 402

disposed to come to terms, for he regarded the cap- ture of their city and their complete conquest as a large task and one that. was beyond his present force, whereas a friendly settlement with them after a victory would greatly enhance his reputation. Accor- dingly, Cineas was sent to Rome, where he had con- ferences with the men in authority, and sent their wives and children gifts in the name of his king. No one, however, would accept the gifts, but all re- plied, men and women alike, that if a peace were publicly concluded they also, on their part, would show goodwill and kindness to the king. Moreover, though Cineas made many kind and alluring proposals to the senate, not one of them was received there with alacrity or pleasure, although Pyrrhus offered to - restore without a ransom their men who had been captured in the battle, and promised to assist them in the subjugation of Italy, and in return for these favours asked only friendship for himself, immunity for the Tarentines, and nothing else. Nevertheless, most of the senators were plainly inclined towards peace, since they had been defeated in one great battle, and expected another with a larger army, now that the Italian Greeks had joined Pyrrhus. At this point Appius Claudius, a man of distinction, but one whom old age and blindness had forced to give up all public activities, now that the message from the king had come and a report was rife that the senate was going to vote for the proposed cessation of hostilities, could not restrain himself, but ordered his attendants to take him up and had _ himself carried on a litter through the forum to the senate- house. When he had reached the door, his sons and sons-in-law took him up in their arms and brought

eLotyov, 4 5é BovAy oLwomny aidoupévn tov avdpa PETA TLLAS EoxeD.
XIX. ‘O 6& avdtodev xataotas, “ Iporepov
, 99 66 ‘ \ a bd a ? a)
pév,” épn, “Tyv tepl Ta Gupata TYYNY aNapas Epepov, @ ‘Pwpaior, viv b€ axyOouat mpos TP
Tupr0os eivas pn Kal Kwpos wy, aA’ axovwv 9 \ a N a e A 9 /
aiaxypa Bovrevpata Kai Soypata buoy avatpéqovta THS ‘Pans TO KNEOS. Tov yap bpav o N td > 4 4 > 4
mpos &travras avOpwrrous OpuNovpevos del NOxos,
e ’ a > a ? b] 4 e , > Va
@S, €t Traphy éxetvos ets Itadtay o péyas “AXe-EavSpos nal cuvnvéxOn véows piv Kai Tots Tatpa-ow nav axpuatovow, ovK av vpveito viv avi-KNTOS, GAN huyov av 7} Tov Twecwv éevtav0a
a \ e 4 b] 4 b) 4 fa) /
thv ‘Pwpunv évdokotépay atréditre; Tavita pévTot \ >? 4 \ Ul b] J , kevyv adraloveiav Kal Kxoptrov amodcixvute, Xdovas Kal Modoaaots, tHv adel Maxedovwr deiar, Sedsotes, nal tpéuovtes ILvppov, bs tav *Ade-Eavdpov Sopudopwv eva your aei Treptérrwy Kal Gepatrevwy Swaterédrexe, Kai viv ov BonOav ois évtav0a parrov “EdAnow 7) devywv tovs éxet
joNepious TAavaTat Trept THY ITadiav, émayyer-AOmEVOS uly THY HYyEeKOoViay ato TavTNS TIS Ls A / \ be) , b Suvapews 7) pépos pixpov avt@ Makedovias ov« Ww 4 \ la)
npkece StadvAdéar. pn TovTov otv atradda£ev vouilere Tromnodpevot pirov, aAAG exeivous érd-Eeadat xatadppovncavtas vuav ws Taow ev-Katepyaotwy, et Iluppos atretot un Sovs Sinny av 404 him inside, and the senators, out of regard for the man, kept respectful silence.

_ XIX. Then Appius raised himself up where he was and said: “Up to this time, O Romans, I have regarded the misfortune to my eyes as an atiiction, but it now distresses me that I am not deaf as well as blind, that I might not hear the shameful resolutions and decrees of yours which bring low the glory of Rome. For what becomes of the words that ye are ever reiterating to all the world, namely, that if the great Alexander of renown had come to Italy and had come into conflict with us, when we were young men, and with our fathers, when they were in their prime, he would not now be celebrated as invincible, but would either have fled, or, perhaps, have fallen there, and so have left Rome more glorious still? Surely ye are proving that this was boasting and empty bluster, since ye are afraid of Chaonians and Molossians, who were ever the prey of the Macedonians, and ye tremble before Pyrrhus, who has ever been a minister and servitor to one at least of Alexander’s bodyguards,! and. now comes wandering over Italy, not so much to help the Greeks who dwell here, as to escape his enemies at home, promising to win for us the supre- macy here with that army which could not avail to preserve for him a small portion of Macedonia. Do not suppose that ye will rid yourselves of this fellow by making him your friend ; nay, ye will bring against you others, and they will despise you as men whom anybody can easily subdue, if Pyrrhus goes away without having been punished for his insults, but

1 Referring paroneuiealy to his relations with Ptolemy and Demetrius.

UBpicev, dAdrAa Kal TpocrkaBov pucbov 1To} érey-
, ¢€ , T , \ >, , 9
yeraoas ‘Pwpyators Tapavtivouvs cat Lavviras.
A A : /
Totadta Tod ‘Ammiov dvarexOévtos opun tapé-OTN Mpos Tov TOAELOY avTois, Kal Tov Kivéay
amoméutovaw atroxpivapevot Ilvppov é&eOovra
A > / ef > , \ , \
THs ‘Itadas, odTws, et dSéorT0, Tept dirdias Kal
‘ouppaytas SraréyerOar, péypt 66 ob tdpectiy év StrAols, Tore“noELY avT@ Pwpaiovs Kata KpaTos, av pupiovs ett AatBivous tpéyntrat payopevos.
Aéyerat 5é Kivéav, €v © tavta émpattev, apa Tolnoapevov Epyov Kal omovddacavtTa TaV Te Biwv
yeveoOat Oeatnv Kal TiS TodtTElas THY apEeTHV Katavonoat, Kal da AOyov €AOovTa Tots apioTots
, AXNa A Il 4 , N 9 a e e Ta TE a T@ Iluppw Ppacat, Kai evtretvy ws 7 4 x A J a / avykAnTos avT@ Bacidtéwv Trod\dOv auvédptov
, \ \ A 4 4 A /

gavein, tept dé Tod TANnOovs Sedsévat, un TWPds twa pavoct Aepvaiay vdpav payopevoe Sirda-
, \ a A
cious yap On TO UdT@ TOV TapaTeTaypéevor mpotepov nOpoicOat, Kai mrodAaKis elvat Tocov-
” a ¢ / ¢ / /
Tous éTt TOY Pwyaiwy dTrAa hépew Suvapevous.
xx "E , 4 > / \ a . Ee tovtov mpécBers adixovto tept tov aixyparwtwv ot rept 'aiov PaBpixtov, ob mrei-
‘¥ € / , ” € / ¢
atov én Pwpaiovs dNoyov éyew o Kivéas ws avdpos ayaGod Kal troveuiKod, mévntos bé iayu-A A ® e v4 9Q7/ 4
pas. tovtov ovv o Ivppos iota dirodpovovpevos
” a , » 9 b \ a ? A évretDe NaBeiv ypvaiov, én’ oddevi SHOev aicype,
, A
pirias O€ Te Kal Eevias érrovopalov todto cup-
? / \ a , , \
Borov. amwoapévov 6é tod PaBpixiov rote péev
1 +d with Blass: roi,

actually rewarded for them in having enabled Tarantines and Samnites to mock at Romans.”
After Appius. had thus spoken, his hearers were seized with eagerness to prosecute the war, and Cineas was sent back with the reply that Pyrrhus must first depart out of Italy, and then, if he wished, the Romans would talk about friendship and alliance ; but as long as he was there in arms, they would fight him with all their might, even though he should rout in battle ten thousand men like Laevinus. It is said, too, that Cineas, while he was on this mission, made it his earnest business at the same time to observe the life and manners of the Romans,- and to understand the excellences of their form of government ; he also conversed with their best men, and had many things to tell Pyrrhus, among which was the declaration that the senate impressed him as a council of many kings, and that, as for the people, he was afraid it might prove to be a Lernaean hydra for them to fight against, since the consul already had twice as many soldiers collected as those who faced their enemies before, and there were many times as many Romans still who were capable of bearing arms.

XX. After this, an embassy came from the Romans to treat about the prisoners that had been taken. The embassy was headed by Caius Fabricius, who, as Cineas reported, was held in highest esteem at Rome as an honourable man and good soldier, but was inordinately poor. To this man, then, Pyrrhus privately showed kindness and tried to induce him to accept gold, not for any base purpose, indeed, but calling it a mark of friendship and hospitality. But Fabricius rejected the gold, and for that day Pyrrhus

NOUVKACE, TH 5 votepaia BovXopevos auTov eK-THEA pyTe Jeatny erégavros ryeyevnpévor, éxéhevoe TOV Onpiceov TO peyiorop eLoria dev avTots Twapactno at KOWONYOUMEVOLS, avratav TapareivavTas. éyéveo $9 TavTa: Kat onpeLov d00évros 7 jpev avrata mapnxon, TO b¢ Onptov adve tHv TE Tpovopaiay dpdpevov UTEpeT XE Ths Keparns Tov PaBprciov Kal hovny adnre poRepav kal Tpayeiav. o e npewa peraatpadels Kab dra perdudo-as 7 pos TOV Tluppov elev: : Oure xOés pe TO xpuatov exivnoev oUTe onpepov TO Onpiov.”
év 6€ TO Seine Aoryov mavrodaT ov rYevopevo, Trelorav b¢ TWEpl THS ‘EdAdbos Kal TOV ptroao-povvTwy, eTUXe Tos oO Kwvéas émipynabels Tob
"Enrexovpou, Kal Ouirev a a Aéyouat wept Oewv Kat jontTeLas Kal TéXoUS, 70 pev ev ndov7} Te Epevor, ToATElav be pevyovres WS BraBnv ral ouyyvow
Tob paxapion, To 6€ QOetov arwTara Xapetos
Kal opyiis Kat TOU pérewy Tpeov els amrpaypova Biov eal pea Tov evmaberdv arrouxitovres. ett dé avrov AEyovTOS avaxpayav) PaBpixcos, ee?) ‘Hpdknes,” eltre, “ Iluppp Ta doypata pErOL TavTa kal Yavvirats, €ws TWodewovat pos Hpas.”
Oita én Javpdcas TO ppovnpa TOU avdpos Kat
To 4005 oO Ilvppos eTL paddov apeyero pirtav aytt _TWOREWOV T pos THY TOALY aiT@ ryeveo Bau:
Kaxelvov idia mapekdanet Touno dpevov tas d0a-Avoels EreaBau Kal aula per’ avtod, mpaTov dvTa TAVTOV TOV éTaipov Kal TOV OTPATHYOV. O dé navy AéyeTat wWpos auTov eitreiv, “’AAN ovdée 408

let him alone; on the following day, however, wishing to frighten a man who had not yet seen an elephant, he ordered the largest of these animals to be stationed behind a hanging in front of which they stood conversing together. This was done; and at a given signal the hanging was drawn aside, and the animal suddenly raised his trunk, held it over the head of Fabricius, and emitted a harsh and frightful cry. But Fabricius calmly turned and said with a smile to Pyrrhus: ‘ Your gold made no impression on me yesterday, neither does your beast to-day.” Again, at supper, where all sorts of topics were discussed, and particularly that of Greece and her philosophers, Cineas happened somehow to mention Epicurus, and set forth the doctrines of that school concerning the gods, civil government, and the highest good, explaining that they made pleasure the highest good, but would have nothing to do with civil government on the ground that it was injurious and the ruin of felicity, and that they removed the Deity as far as possible from feelings of kindness or anger or concern for us, into a life that knew no care and was filled with ease and comfort. But before Cineas was done, Fabricius cried out and said: “O Hercules, may Pyrrhus and the Samnites cherish these doc- trines, as long as they are at war with us.”

Thus Pyrrhus was led to admire the high spirit and character of the man, and was all the more eager to have friendship with his city instead of waging war against it; he even privately invited him, in case he brought about the settlement, to follow his fortunes and share his life as the first and foremost of all his ‘companions and generals. But Fabricius, as we are told, said quietly to him: “Nay, O King, this

~

aot tovTo, Bacired, AvotTEAES EoTLY? AVTOL yap ot viv ce Tima@vtes Kal Oavudlovtes, av épov meipay AdBwow, bw éuov padrXrov eGerncovery 7 cov BactrevecOau” Ttovodtos pev 0 DaBpixtos.
o 5€ IIuppos ob mpos dpynv ovdé tupavutKas edéEato Tov Noyov, GANA Kal Tois Hirots amnyyetke ToD DaBpixiov tv peyarodpocvrny, nal TOUS aliyparwrous éxeivm pore Setiorevoeyr, étrws, et wn ndicatto THv eipnvnv 1%) cvyKANTOS, aomTacdmevol TOS mpoonkovTas Kal ta Kpovia ducoptdcavtes atroTreupUeiev maddy pos avTov.
Kat atreTréupOnoay peTa THY EopTHY, TO UrodEL-Pbévtt THs Bours Cnpiay Odvatroyv Wyndicapévys.
XXI. Mera tadra tod PaSpixiov tHv apyny TaparaBovTos HKev anp eis TO OTPATOTESOY TPOS
avrov émictoAny Kopivwv, iv éyparev oO Tov Bactréws iatpos éeTrayyeAAopevos happaxots avatpyoew tov Iluppov, et ydapis av’T@ wap éxeivoy oporoynOein AVoavTL TOV TOAELOY aKiWdUVwS. © dé DaBpixios Sucxepdvas mpos THY adiKiav Tod avOpwrov, kal Tov auvapyovta Siadeis opoiws, émepe ypaupata mpos tov IIlvppov xata tayos gurdtrecOar thv émuBourny Kerevwv. elxye dé
ovTws TA yeypaypeva: “I'dios DaBpixios Kal

.Koivtos Alpidtos tmaroe ‘Pwpaiwy Ilvpp@ Bacthet yatpew. obte pidwv evtuy7s Eolxas élvat xpttns oUTE TroAEuioY. yvwon Sé THY TEpL-Pbcicav Hpiv émictorAny avayvous, drt ypnoTtois would not be to thy advantage ; for the very men who now admire and honour thee, if they should become acquainted with me, would prefer to have me as their king rather than thee.” Such a man was Fabricius. And Pyrrhus did not receive the speech with anger or like a tyrant, but actually reported to his friends the magnanimity of Fabricius, and entrusted his prisoners of war to him alone, on condition that, in case the senate should not vote for the peace, they should be sent back again to him, though they might first greet their relatives and celebrate the festival of Saturn. And they were so sent back after the festival, the senate having voted a penalty of death for any that stayed behind.

XXI. After this, and when Fabricius had assumed the consulship,! a man came into his camp with a letter for him. The letter had been written by the physician of Pyrrhus, who promised that he would take the king off by poison, provided that the Romans would agree to reward him for putting an end to the war without further hazard on their part. But Fabricius, who was indignant at the iniquity of. the man, and had disposed his colleague to feel likewise, sent a letter to Pyrrhus with all speed urging him to be on his guard against the plot. The letter ran as follows: “Caius Fabricius and Quintus . Aemilius, consuls of Rome, to King Pyrrhus, health -and happiness. It would appear that thou art a good judge neither of friends nor of enemies. Thou wilt see, when thou hast read the letter which we send, that the men with whom thou art at war are

1 The chronology of the story is at fault here. Fabricius and Aemilius were consuls in 278, the year after the battle at Asculum described in §§ 5 ff. |

kat Stxaios avdpdot tmorepeis, adixas Sé Kat KaKots miotevers. ovdeé yap tadTa of VapeTe
, >] oe A A Q\ 4 e A nvuopev, GAN GTas wn TO cov dO mip
StaBornv évéyrn Kai dorm doEwpev, as apeTn pH
Suvapevot, Katepydcacbar Tov modepov.” év-TUX@Y TOUTAS TOS ypdupactw Oo Ilvppos Kal THY éemtBovrAny é&eréyEas rov pév latpov éxoXace, DaBpirim dé Kai “Pwpaiors aporBnv édwpetro a “ > , 4 Mv .Y
TPOlKa TOUS aiyparwTous, Kal dru erepre Tov
Kuvéay S:arpakopevov ait trhv eipnvyv. of 8é ‘Pwpator, unte eb yapts éotl mapa TrodEemiov, unTe et ptoOos Tod py adixnOjvat, NaReiv Tpotka Tovs

w 9 4 v b 4 > ray avdpas akwwaoavres toous arédvoay avt@ Tapar-
, fa) \ \ , b 4
rivev Kal Yavvitav, Twept 5é ptrdcas Kal eipyvns ovdev elwy dtaréyeoOar mplv apdpevos Ta Sra kal tov aotpatrov é& ‘Itadias als 7dAOe vavoly anothevon tad. ets “Harespov.
9 4 la Mv fe) , 9 la)
Ex tovrov payns adAxS TOY TPAypLAaTwY avT@ Seomévwv avaraBov tiv otpatiay éywpe, Kat wept” AokXov Tod Tois ‘Pwpatos cuvaryas xal Bialopevos mpos xwpia dvourTa Kal totapoy trwdn Kal tpayvv, Epodov tev Onpiwy ob NaBov-Tov woTe Tpocpi-at TH Parayyt, TpauvpaTev TOAAQY yevopevay Kal vEXpa@V TETOVTWY, TOTE
pev SrexptOn péypt vuxros aywuoapevos. tH 8 voTepaia otpatnyav Ou’ ouarod THY udynv DécOau
N A , 9 A ed ‘4 A
Kal tous édepavtas év Tois StrNoLs yevéoOar Tav
4i2
\

honourable and just, but that those whom thou trustest are unjust and base. And indeed we do not give thee this information out of regard for thee, but in order that thy ruin may not bring infamy upon us, and that men may not say of us that we brought the war to an end by treachery because we were unable to do so by valour.” When Pyrrhus had read this letter and got proof of the plot against his life, he punished the physician, and as a requital to Fabricius and the Romans made them a present of his prisoners of war, and once more sent Cineas to negotiate a peace for him. But the Romans would not consent to receive the men for nothing, either as a favour from an enemy, or as a reward for not committing iniquity against him, and therefore released for Pyrrhus an equal number of Tarentines and Samnites whom they had taken; on the subject of friendship and peace, however, they declared they would allow nothing to be said until Pyrrhus had taken his arms and his army out of Italy and sailed back to Epeirus on the ships that brought him.

Consequently, Pyrrhus found himself obliged to fight another battle, and after recuperating his army he marched to the city of Asculum, where he engaged the Romans. Here, however, he was forced into regions where his cavalry could not operate, and upon a river with swift current and wooded banks, so that his elephants could not charge and engage the enemy’s phalanx. Therefore, after many had been wounded and slain, for the time being the struggle was ended by the coming of night. But on the next day, designing to fight the battle on level ground, and to bring his elephants to bear upon the ranks of the enemy, Pyrrhus occupied betimes the

TONE LLOYD, Tm poéhaPBe TAS duvaxwpias pudach, Kat TONAG catapitas dxovtiapara Kal rofevpata tois Onpiots emhrye pEeTa pouns Kal Bias TUKYHY «al OUVTETAYMEVNY THY Suvapu. ot de ‘Pwpatos
TAS Seaxhioers Kal Tas avTiuTaparyoryas TAS 7 po-TEPOV OUK EXovTes, €& émrimédou suvepéepov7o Kata oTOpa Kal omevoovres aoac at TOUS om Aitas
mpl emeBivar Ta Onpia, Secvous trept Tas capicas TaY Expav ayavas elyov, aedoivres é éauTov Kat
TO Tpwcat Kal cataBanreiv op@vres, TO 5é maGetv els ovder Te Emevo. Xpove dé TOAAP NeveTae pep apxn Tponijs Kar’ avuTov yeverBar Tov I vppov émepeioavra Tots aVvTITET ary MEVOLS, To 6é hela Tov aXKn Kat Big TOV éhed avTowv wateipydaato, xphoacbas TH apeTh m pos THY paxny TOV ‘Popalwy pay Suvapéver, aD olov épod@ xvpaTtos 7 cera nob KATEPELTOVTOS oiopevev detv eEiatrac8at, pndé vropéve aT paKxTous amoOvnaKkey, év T@ pndey wadereiv wavta Tadoxovtas Ta yadeTTo-TaTa.
This dé guyis ov pax pas els TO otpatonedov
yevopuerns éLaxurxthious drroBavetv gnat Tov ‘Pwpaiwy ‘Lepavupos, tov 5é epi Iluppoy év rois Baowdtxois brropynpacw avevexOjvar Tpirxedtous
TEVTAKOTLOUS Kal mwevte teOvnKotas. oO pévTot Atovuctos ote duo mepl “AcKkdov paxas ote omohoyouperny TTav laTOpet yever Bar ‘Popaiwy, drat dé péexpe dua pay ALOU paxerapevous pois
amadraynvat, TOU Tuppou Tpabevtos voo@ Tov Bpaxiova nal thy damooxevny dua Aavviwv?
1 Aavviwy with Blass, in agreement with Dionys. Hal. xx.
3: Zapmrar,
414

397

unfavourable parts of the field with a detachment of his troops; then he put great numbers of slingers and archers in the spaces between the elephants and led his forces to the attack in dense array and witha mighty impetus. So the Romans, having no oppor- tunity for sidelong shifts and counter-movements, as on the previous day, were obliged to engage on level - ground and front to front ; and being anxious to repulse the enemy’s men-at-arms before their elephants came up, they fought fiercely with their swords against the Macedonian spears, reckless of their lives and thinking only of wounding and slaying, while caring naught for what they suffered. After a long time, however, as we are told, they began to be driven back at the point where Pyrrhus himself was pressing hard upon his opponents ; but the greatest havoc was wrought by the furious strength of the elephants, since the valour of the Romans was of no avail in fighting them, but they felt that they must yield before them as before an onrushing billow or a crashing earthquake, and not stand their ground only to die in vain, or suffer all that is most ‘grievous without doing any good at all.

After a short flight the Romans reached their camp, with a loss of six thousand men, according to Hierony- mus, who also says that on the side of Pyrrhus, according to the king’s own commentaries, thirty- five hundred and five were killed. Dionysius, however, makes no mention of two battles at Asculum, nor of an admitted defeat of the Romans, but says that the two armies fought once for all until sunset and then at last separated ; Pyrrhus, he says, was wounded in the arm by a javelin, and also had his baggage

Stapracdvrwv, amoOaveiy 5é xal Ilvppov xat ‘Pwpaiwy avdpas vrép pupiovs tmevtaxtoxeAtous exatépwv.
ArervOnoay 5é dudoteporr wat réyeTat Tov
Ilvppov etzretv pos twa tov cuvndopévwy avTe, ““Av éte plav paxynv ‘Pwpaiovs wxenowpev, atro-10 AovpeOa TravTEeAws.” Tord pey yap aTrwrONXeEL pépos Hs ayewv hxe Suvduews, piror 6€ Kal otpa-THYyOl TANY OAiywy Atravtes, peTaTréuTrecOas Sé ovx joav Etepolt, Kal Tovs avToOs ouppctyous auBrutépous éwpa, Tots 5é ‘Pwpaiots wotep éx anyns olxobev émtppeovaons avamAnpovpevov EvTropws Kal taxv TO otpatomedov, Kal Tails ATTALs ovx atroBdAXovtas TO Oappeiv, GAAA Kai pwunv Kal dirovetkiay U7’ opyns él Toy TroNEMOY Tpoc-NapBavovtas.
XXII. ‘Ev rovavrars 58 dy atropias ets éXrridas av Tadw Kawwas évétrece Kal Tpaypata SvyooTa-ciay €YovTa THS yvouns. Gua yap Hrov x peév Lucerias avdpes "Axpdyavra xat Yvpaxovoas Kat Aeovtivous éyyetptfovres adte@, ral Seopevor Kap-yndovious te auvexBareiv Kal TaY TUpdvvwY atradrra£~at THY vncov, éx dé THS ‘EAXdOos ayyér-rovres ws IItovcuatos o Kepavyos arorwr€ cuutecov Taddrats peta THs Suvapews, Kal viv

av év xaip@ partaota Seopévors Baoiréws Maxe-2 S00 mapayévorto. trodXa On THY TUYNY wEeprrdpevos OTL Tpdkewv peyadwv vroléces els eva 416
9

*

PYRRHUS

plundered by the Daunians;! and there fell, on the side of Pyrrhus and on that of the Romans, over fifteen thousand men. _
The two armies separated ; and we are told that Pyrrhus said to one who was congratulating him on his victory, “If we are victorious in one more battle with the Romans, we shall be utterly ruined.” For he had lost a great part of the forces with which he came, and all his friends and generals except a few ; moreover, he had no others whom he could summon from home, and he saw that his allies in Italy were becoming indifferent, while the army of the Romans, as if from a fountain gushing forth indoors, was easily and speedily filled up again, and they did not lose courage in defeat, nay, their wrath gave them all the more vigour and determination for the war.

XXII. But while he was involved in such perplexities, new hopes once more inspired him, and projects which divided his purposes. For at one and the same time there came to him from Sicily men who offered to put into his hands the cities of Agrigentum, Syracuse, and Leontini, and begged him to help them to drive out the Carthaginians and rid the island of its tyrants; and from Greece, men with tidings that Ptolemy Ceraunus? with his army had perished at the hands of the Gauls, and that now was the time of all times for him to be in Macedonia, where they wanted a king. Pyrrhus rated Fortune soundly because occasions for two great undertakings had come to him at one time,
1 Auxiliaries of the Romans from Arpinum in Apulia. .

2 The son of Ptolemy I. of Egypt. In 280 B.c. he had basely assassinated Seleucus, and made himself king of Macedonia.

KaLpov auT@ ouniveyKe, Kat woultavie @S auporépev

DrapyxovT ov amodAuvat Oarepov, SinvexOn TOUS Aoyispois ToAVY Xpovor. elTa Tois YuKedcKois perCovav UmroxeiaGat Tpaywatov Soxovvrwp, At-3 Buns eyyus elvat Soxovons, emt taita tpévas Kivéav prev evO0s eFerrepape mpodiare£opevor, daTrep elw0er, Tais ToAEaLW, avTOS Oé ToS Tap-avTivols dvcavacyxerobow éuBarev ppoupay, ral afiovow 7H n Ta pexey éd' ols Hike, cupTrodepobyTa
'Papatous, n Thy Xwpay 7 poe wevov auTOV amr o-Aetrety TH TOoAW Olav TapéAaBe, pnoev é eTLelKes droxpwapevos, GNA mpooratas nouxiav ayetv Kat Tepipevelv TOV éavTod KaLpov, eFérrAevoev.
4 'Awapévy 8¢ adr Zexehias & peév ipdmioev ev0ds amrnvTa RéBaa, Kab Tapetyov Qi qToXeEs éautTas mpodupes, TOV dé ary @VOS kat Bias ben-Oévrwv ovder d avretye TO TPATOV, GAA , Tpta wuptoes metots Kal Seoxedions mevTaKoa tots immevat Kal Siaxogiats vavoly émi@y Tous TE Poivixas ej per Kal KaTEaTpepeTo THY eT LK PGTELAD avTav. tovd
"Epucos éexupwtarov TOV Xwpicov dvTos Kal TOn-ous dmuvopevous EXOVTOS éyvey Bidber Oar 7 pos 5 Ta TELYN. Kal Tis otpatias yevouerns éToiuns évedvoato THY TavoTr diay, Kat mpoeOary * ebEaro T@ 'Hpaxhei TroLno ew ayava Kal Ouciav a dpiateiov, 398 dp Tob yévous Kal Tov UTapXOVT@Y a€vov ayouaTnv autov atrodeiEn Tots 2ucedav oikovaw
"EAAnae: TH SeoddTiyyt onunvas Kal Tots Bédect
TOUS BapBapous avacKedacas Kat Tas KAipaKas
6 mpodayaywyv wpwtos ém@éBn TOU TElLyous. avTt-

1 xpoeAOcy with Blass: xpooeAOuy.

and thinking that the presence of both meant the loss of one, he wavered in his calculations for a long time. Then Sicily appeared to offer opportunities for greater achievements, since Libya was felt to be near, and he turned in this direction, and forth- with sent out Cineas to hold preliminary conferences with the cities, as was his wont, while he himself threw a garrison into Tarentum. The Tarentines were much displeased at this, and demanded that he either apply himself to the task for which he had come, namely to help them in their war with Rome, or else abandon their territory and leave them their city as he had found it. To this demand he made no very gracious reply, but ordering them to keep quiet and await his convenience, he sailed off.

On reaching Sicily,! his hopes were at once realized securely; the cities readily gave themselves up to him, and wherever force and conflict were necessary nothing held out against him at first, but advancing with thirty thousand foot, twenty-five hundred horse, and two hundred ships, he put the Phoenicians to rout and subdued the territory under their control. Then he determined to storm the walls of Eryx, which was the strongest of their fortresses and had numerous defenders. So when ' his army was ready, he put on his armour, went out to battle, and made a vow to Heracles that he would institute games and a sacrifice in his honour, if the god would render him in the sight of the Sicilian Greeks an antagonist worthy of his lineage and resources ; then he ordered the trumpets to sound, scattered ‘the Barbarians with his missiles, br ought up his scaling-ladders, and was the first to mount

' Early in the year 278 B.c.

4 \ nA >] U \ A bd A otavtwy O€ TOAA@Y auuvopmevos TOUS pev eFéwoe
A , > > 9 , \ . 4 4
TOU TELYOUS ETT appotrepa Kal KaTeBanre, WrEl-atous 5é Trept avTov TO Ether Ypwpevos éowpevoe a, wv \ > \ 9 a >] N \
vexpous. émade 5é avtos ovdév, GANA Kal Tpoc-
A \ 9 ’ A 4, \ \
wWety Seuvos ehavn Tots modrepiows, Kal Tov “O $y bd Aa \ \ b] ,] pnpov ederEev opOas Kal peta éeurretpias azro-daivovta Tov apEeT@y povnv THY avdpeiay hopas modAradkis évOovorwders Kal pavixas pEepopévny.
drovons Sé THs WOAEwS EOUGE TE TH De@ peyaro-mpeTr@s Kat Oéas dyevev TavTodbaTa@v tTapéc xe.
XXIII. Tov dé wept Meconvny BapBdpwv, Maupeptivwrv &¢ xadoupévwv, trodda Tois “EAAD-aw évoxrovvTwr, évious 5é Kai hopou TreTompevwn UToTENEIS, TOAA@Y 5é Kal payipov dvTwv, 516 Kal > oo A mpoonyopevOnaav ‘Aprios yAwoon Th Aativor,
N \ , \ b] 4 b]
Tous pev hoporoyous auvAdAaBov aéxtewev, av-
\ \ 4 , \ “A la
tovs b€ wKnoas pdyn Toda TeV PpoupiWwY éFéxoye. Kapynédoviows 5¢ cvpBatixas éxovot, Kat xpnpata BovAopévots TerEiv, Eb yévorTo pidia,
N A 3 lA > , 4 9 ,
Kal vads atroaTéAXELy, aTrexpivaTo TAELOVwWD epte-

, 9 lA \ l4 \ > 4
pevos piay elvar dudAvaow Kal dircav pos avTous,
3 A ? , 4 @ A A
él Tacav éexdiTrovTEs BexeALav Opw yp@vTo TH At-
A , \ \ Cf > / \
Bunn Pardoon mpos tovs”"EXAnvas. evTUXia de
i a4 A ’ , \ 4,
Kal p@un TOV TapovTwY éTratpopevos, Kal diwxwv
la A
Tas érTridbas ép als am dpxyns érdevce, TPWTNS
4 nm
5é AtBuns épi€uevos cai vads éywv TWoddas TAD-420

the wall. Many were the foes against whom he strove ; some of them he pushed from the wall on either side and hurled them to the ground, but most he laid dead in heaps about him with the strokes of his sword.’ He himself suffered no harm, but was a terrible sight for his enemies to look upon, and proved that Hom as right and fully justified in saying that valour, alone of the virtues, often displays transports due to divine possession and frenzy. After the capture of the city, he sacrificed to the god in magnificent fashion and furnished spectacles of all sorts of contests.

XXIII. The Barbarians about Messana, called Mamertines, were giving much annoyance to the Greeks, and had even laid some of them under con- tribution. They were numerous and warlike, and therefore had been given a name which, in the Latin tongue, signifies martial. Pyrrhus seized their collectors of tribute and put them to death, then conquered the people themselves in battle and de- stroyed many of their strongholds. Moreover, when the Carthaginians were inclined to come to terms and were willing to pay him money and send him ships in case friendly relations were established, he replied to them (his heart being set upon greater things) that there could be no settlement or friendship between himself and them unless they abandoned all Sicily and made the Libyan Sea a boundary between themselves and the Greeks. But now, lifted up by his good fortune and by the strength of his resources, and pursuing the hopes with which he had sailed from home in the beginning, he set his heart upon Libya first ; and since many of the ships

1 As in Iliad, v. 185; vi. 101; ix. 238.

, >] de la) # 9 , : b 9 la’

pwpatwv émidecis Tryerpev épéras, ovK émrlEeLKas
9 ‘ a evtuyydvwy ovdé mpdws tais modeow, aA
A“ \ ? 4 e
SeoTroTiK@s Kal mpos Opynv Bialopevos Kat Kora-
? Or A yy F) 9 a a oe) \
Cov, ove evOus wv ovde ev apy ToLovTOS, ANAA \ lal e , . A N 4 e aA \
Kal MadXOY ETEPWY TH TPOS YKaptv omtrEiy Kal
TavTa TioTevew Kal pnodev upOoVAELy UTaryoevos, 9 ‘ nm 7
elta ytvopevos ex Snuaywyod TUpavvos axaptotias
A ‘ A b } , 4
™T XareTroTHnTL Kal amloTias tTpocwhALoKave d0Fav. ‘
Ov pny adda TATA MEV. WS avayKaia auUVEYo-
, n 9 \ \ 4 \
pouy, xaitrep Suadhopovytes: eézret dé Qoivwva Kal Lwoatatpatov, avdpas nyen“ovixous év Supaxovoais, ra) “~ \ b N 9 “A ¥ b , ot Tpa@Toe péev avTov édAOety érretcay eis YuKedlay,
N / \ ,
EXGovre 5é tTHv TorAw evOds evexeipicav Kal TAELTTA TVYKATELPYATAVTO TOV UKEALKOY, “NTE
” ‘ e a 4 > , a 9
ayelv avy avT@ pnte atroneitrety BovAopevos év
,
uTrowiais elye, Kal Ywototpatos pév aréaty
\ \ a pokes, Boivwva S€ Ta avTa dPpoveiv aitiaca-
N
HEVOS GTréKTELVEV, OV KATA pLKpOV Ovde Ka” ep auT@ peSiotato ToY TpayudTav, adXrAa Sevod
A A
TLVOS pLoous eyyevouevou Tais TroAETL TPOS AUTOV
e N 4, J e N > 4
at mev TpoceTiOevto Kapynoovioss, ai dé érnryovto
@€ A : Mauweptivovs. daiootdces 5é opav adrayta Kal vewTEepiapovs Kal avaTacL tayupayv éd’ avror, édéEato ypdupata Lavrov cai Tapavtiver lA wn 4 A \ AN
pods avTeXovTwY Tals TodEoLY AUTAis Tpos TOV

that he had were insufficiently manned, he began to collect oarsmen, not dealing with the cities in an acceptable or gentle manner, but in a lordly way, angrily putting compulsion and penalties upon them. He had not behaved in this way at the very beginning, but had even gone beyond others in trying to win _men's hearts by gracious intercourse with them, by trusting everybody, and by doing nobody any harm. But now he ceased to be a popular leader and be- came a tyrant, and added to his name for severity a name for ingratitude and faithlessness. Nevertheless the Sicilians put up with these things as necessary, although they were exasper- ated; but then came his dealings with Thoenon and Sosistratus. These were leading men in Syra- cuse, and had been first to persuade Pyrrhus to come into Sicily. Moreover, after he had come, they immediately put their city into his hands and assisted him in most of what he had accomplished in Sicily. And yet he was willing neither to take them with him nor to leave them behind, and held them in suspicion. Sosistratus took the alarm and withdrew ; but Thoenon was accused by Pyrrhus of complicity with Sosistratus and put to death.! With this, the situation of Pyrrhus was suddenly and entirely changed. A terrible hatred arose against him in the cities, some of which joined the Car- thaginians, while others called in the Mamertines. And now, as he saw everywhere secessions and revolutionary designs and a strong faction opposed to him, he received letters from the Samnites and Tarentines, who had been excluded from all their territories, could with difficulty maintain the war

1 Cf. Dionysius Hal., Hxcerpta ex lib. xx., 8.

, a
ToXEpoV, eipyouéevwv S€ THS Y@pas amrdaans Kat Seouevov Bonbeiv. todto Sé hv evmpérmeta py ghuyny elvat nde aroyywow Tov atroTAovy TOV
> , , \ \ > \ b] 4,
avToO. wpaypdtwv: to dé adnOés od Suvapevos
a 4 @ N , > >
Kpatety YwuKedias @oTEp vEews TapaxGeions, arr éxBaow Cnrov, avis epprypev € éautov els "Itadiav.
Aéyerar & dara Topevos Hon Tpos THY Vhoov amid@v elmeiv tois qept avtov: " Olav atrodei-= , , v,e¢ ,
Topev, @ phiror, Kapynooviots cat "Pwpaiors tran-aistpav." Kal todTo pév, Womep eixacOn, pet ov ToXUY Ypovoy eyéveTo.
XXIV. Tav d¢ BapBapwv cvoravtwy én avtov atromrAéovta, Kapynooviots pév €v TO TopO ww vavpaynoas améBare TaV vedy TOAXGS, Tais &
+] a adArXats Katépuye mpos tHv Itadtav, Mapeptivos
,
dé pupiwv ov éXaTTOvs WpodiaBavres avtitata-

\ 9 / 9 \ a ld
cBar pev éepoBnOncay, év dé tais dvaxwpiats émutiOéuevot Kal wpoomimtovres Atav TO oTpa-Teva ouvetdpakay, émece Sé dvo Onpia xal auxvol Tav omtcbopvrAaKovvtwy dréOvnoKov.
QUTOS OY ATO TOD GTOMATOS TrapEeAadaas NuUvVETO
Kal dvexcvduveve mrpos avdpas noxnpévous payec-Oar nal Ovpoedets. adryyels bé THY Keharny Eider
Kal puxpov €k TOV payopévav atroaTas ETL UaNAOV
€mnpe TOUS TroAcuious. els 6€ Kal TOAD TPO TOY GArXwv eridpapov, avnp TO TE TOMATL péeyas Kal
“A 54 ‘ b] nA _ Rn A iA
Tots OwAoLs AauTrpOS, EXpTO TH Pwvy Opacutépa
\ a 39 7 >" 9 wa \
Kal mpoeNOety exéXevev autor, ev Cn. wapotuvOeis
5é o Iluppos éméctpepe Bia tav bTacTICTOAY, Kal 424

399

PYRRHUS

even in their cities, and begged for his assist- ance. This gave him a fair pretext for his sailing away, without its being called a flight or despair of his cause in the island; but in truth -it was because he could not master Sicily, which was like a storm-tossed ship, but desired to get out of her, that he once more threw himself into Italy. And it is said that at the time of his departure he looked back at the island and said to those about him: “ My friends, what a wrestling ground for Carthaginians and Romans we are leaving behind us!” And this conjecture of his was soon afterwards confirmed. XXIV. But the Barbarians combined against him as he was setting sail. With the Carthaginians he fought a sea-fight in the strait and lost many of his ships, but escaped with the rest to Italy; and here the Mamertines, more than ten thousand of whom had crossed in advance of him, though they were afraid to match forces with him, yet threw his whole army into confusion by setting upon him and assailing him in difficult regions. Two of his elephants fell, and great numbers of his rearguard were slain. Accordingly, riding up in person from the van, he sought to ward off the enemy, and ran great risks in contending with men who were trained to fight and were inspired with high courage. And when he was wounded on the head with a sword and withdrew a little from the com- batants, the enemy were all the more elated. One of them ran forth far in advance of the rest, a man who was huge in body and resplendent in armour, and in a bold voice challenged Pyrrhus- to come out, if he were still alive. This angered Pyrrhus, and wheeling round in spite of his guards, he pushed

425

‘_

PLUTARCH’S LIVES ‘

3 9 n ¢ , A \ > A
HET Opyns aipatt weduppévos Kat devvos 6POjvar
TO TpogwTov w@odpevos St avtav Kai dOdacas Tov BapBapov émdnke cata tis Kxeparis to Eider
; a \ a a
TANYHY pon TE THS KELtpos Gua cat Badijs aperH
Tov atdnpov péeXpt TOV KATH Stadpapoicar, waTE e s a e / / a évl ypovm mepiTecciy éxatTépwoe TA pépyn TOD
cwopatos StyotounPevros. todTo Tous BapBapous ETETVE TOD TPOTW YwpPELV, OS TWA TAY KPELTTO- - vov Bavpdcaytas Kal xatatrayévtas Tov Tup-pov. o d€ THY GAAnV oddoy adeds SieFeAD@v rev
ets Tapavta, ducpupious melovs Kai tpiaytAtous
e a 4 > N \ A 4
immets Kxopilwov. avaraBov oé tav Tapartivev TovVS Kpatiatous, evOds érri “Pwpaious Hyev ev TH
—Savuvitids otpatotedevovtas.
XXV. Tov 5 Savutayv rd Te wpdypata S.E-pOapto, Kal tod dpovnpatos vdeivro, Kexpatn-

, , a“ e \ “ e , 7 A pevot paxats TodXais vio TAY Popatwy. éviv

a \ dé te Kat mpos tov Ilvppov opyns bia tov els

LuxeXtay mwrovv GOev ov ToAAOL TOUTWY a’TO

A Ul \ 4 , \ \ >

auvndOov. tavtas 5€ veisas diya Tovs pév eis \ , ”) , “A ees
thnv Aevxaviav Ereprpev avtirnwopevous Tod érépov Tay viratwv, as py BonOoin, tovs bé iyev > \ > \ 4 / \ ? \ avros emt Maviov Kovpuov trepi trod Beveovevrov
idpupévoy év dodandel Kal trepipévovta TH ex THS Aeveavias Bonfecav: éott & Ore Kal pwavTewy av-
a . a ,
TOV Olwvots Kal lepois amoTperrovTwy naovyate.
, e e / ’ / , \
omevowy ovv o IIuppos émsBécOas rovtots, mpiv

€xeivous érredOeiv, dvdpas te ToUs KpaTtiatous Kal 426)
PYRRHUS

his way through them—full of wrath, smeared with blood, and with a countenance terrible to look upon, and before the Barbarian could strike dealt him such a blow on the head with his sword that, what with the might of his arm and the excellent temper of his steel, it cleaved its way down through, so that at one instant the parts of the sundered body fell to either side. This checked the Barbarians from any further advance, for they were amazed and confounded at Pyrrhus, and thought him some superior being. So he accomplished the rest of his march unmolested and came to Tarentum,! bringing twenty thousand foot and three thousand horse. Then, adding to his force the best troops of the Tarentines, he forthwith led them against the Romans, who were encamped in the country of the Samnites.

XXV. But the power of the Samnites had been shattered, and their spirits were broken, in con- sequence of many defeats at the hands of the Romans. They also cherished considerable resent- ment against Pyrrhus because of his expedition to Sicily ; hence not many of them came to join him. Pyrrhus, however, divided his army into two parts, sent one of them into Lucania to attack the other consul, that he might not come to the help of his colleague, and led the other part himself against Manius Curius, who was safely encamped near the city of Beneventum and was awaiting assistance from Lucania ; in part also it was because his sooth- sayers had dissuaded him with unfavourable omens and sacrifices that he kept quiet. Pyrrhus, accord- ingly, hastening to attack this consul before the other one came up, took his best men and his most

1 Jn the autumn of 276 B.c.
427
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOV Onpiwv Ta waXiwwTara Aa Bev VUKTOS @ppn-oev emt TO otpatorresov. mrepriove bé auT® paKpay cal Saceiav bras odov OuK dvreaxe Ta para, Kal TAdvaL Tous OT PATLWOTALS _guveTU yoy" Kat trept
TavTa ryevowerns Sra peBis 7 iy TE vue éméhutre ral KaTapavys 7 ny Gp’ pEPD TOLS TrONEMLOLS em epxo-fevos amo TOV akpov, aote OopuBov morvv rai Kino w mapacxetv.
Ou pany GAA TOV iepoav TO Maviw yevopevwr, Kal Tov Katpov Bonbeiv avayxdtovtos, éFeA Dav
évéBane Tots TPWTOLS Kat TpeYrapevos epoRyce TaVvTAS, WOTE kal METELVY OUK OAL'yoUS Kal TOY
édepavTov TLvas arava katarepbévras. avTn Tov Manov y viKN KaThyarye paxoupevov els TO medtov’ Kat cupBarwv é €x mT podj ov TO fev eT peérato Tov ‘TonEpion, & eore 8 ni BvacBels bro TOV Onpiwy cal avaotanrels T pos TO arpatoredoy TOUS puranas éxdet cuxvous eperTaras T@ Yapakt

pera TOV Omhov Kat _axpiras. ot O€ émepavertes
éx TOMMY ox Upav Kal Ta Onpia Baddovres nvay-Kacav amoatpépes Oat Kat puyn YwpovvtTa bua
Tay TUMMAXOV OTT Tapayny arrepyacacbas Kal ouyXualy, v) 70 vin wa. Tapédwxe Tots ‘Pwpatots, Gia, 6é Kal TO KpaTos Ths myepovias. Kal yap ppovnpua Kab Suvapmuy Kat dofav @s dpaxoe mpoohaBovres éx THiS apeThs exelvns Kal TOV
ary @vev "Tradiav pev evOus, ordiyw Sé dotepov Dicedtav KaTETXOV.
XXVI. Odtw pev é&étrece TOV ‘Tradicav Kat DLKEALK@V O o IIvppos eAridwn, efaerh V povov ava-NWTAS Trepl TOUS Exel TOAE“OUS, Kal TOis! IMpdy-1 rots Coraés and Bekker have rots nev, after Muretus.

warlike elephants and set out by night against his camp. But since he took a long circuit through a densely wooded country, his lights did not hold out, and his soldiers lost their way and straggled. This caused delay, so that the night passed, and at day-break he was in full view of the enemy as he advanced upon them from the heights, and caused much tumult and agitation among them.

Manius, however, since the sacrifices were pro- pitious and the crisis forced action upon him, led his forces out and attacked the foremost of the enemy, and after routing these, put their whole army to flight, so that many of them fell and some of their elephants were left behind and captured. This victory brought Manius down into the plain to give battle ; here, after an engagement in the open, he routed the enemy at some points, but at one was, overwhelmed by the elephants and driven back upon his camp, where he was obliged to call upon the guards, who were standing on the parapets in great numbers, all in arms, and full of fresh vigour. Down they came from their strong places, and hurling their javelins at the elephants compelled them to wheel about and run back through the ranks of their own men, thus causing disorder and confusion there. This gave the victory to the Romans, and at the same time the advantage also ‘in the struggle for supremacy. For having acquired high courage and power and a reputation for invinci- ' bility from their valour in these struggles, they at once got control of Italy, and soon afterwards of Sicily.

XXVI. Thus Pyrrhus was excluded from his hopes of Italy and Sicily, after squandering six years’ time in his wars there, and after being worsted in his

, \ be 9 o > o 3
pacw édXaTTwOHeis, TO 5é€ avdpetov avixnrov év tais ATTats StadvAdéEas: Kat voyuicbels éuTrerpia ais Hrras Siaguddtas: «al vomabels éurerpig
HEV TOAEMLLKY KAL YELPL KaL TOALN TOAY TIPWTOS
9 a ? ¢€ \ A A \ A 4
eivat Tav Kal’ avrov Bacidéwv, & Oé tais mpdake-ov éxTaTo Tais EXtrigLY ATroANUVAL, bu EpwTa TOV atrovtwy ovdev eis 6 Set OécOat Tov bTapYovToV fOdcas. dO0ev ameixaleyv avtov o ‘Avtiyovos
xuBevtn moda Bdaddovtt wal Kadrd, ypjoBar é OvUK émioTapéve@ TOS TrEeTovCL.
Kopioas 5€ eis "Hrretpov oxtaxiaxtdLous treCovs Kal jwevtakootous imeis, ypnuata 69 ovK exov
>] VA ‘ e J N 4 4
etntes TroAewov @ Opéwet TO oTpdTevpa. Kat tiwov Varatov avTe rpooyevopévav évéBarev eis Maxedoviav Avtiyovov tov Anuntpiov Bactrev-OVTOS WS apTayn Kal Aenracia Ypnoopmevos. érrel 5é kal trodes éAdpBave cvyvas Kal otpati@TaL
4 Siryirsoe petéoTnTay WS avTOD, éXTricas TL WAéov-
: \
apunoev ert rov’Avtiyovoy Kat nept Ta oteva Tpootec@myv auvetdpake THY oTpaTiay atracav.
ot O€ eri ths ovpayias Tov Avtiyovou TeTaypmévot Tardta, svyvol to wARGos dvres, UTéotncav
EUPWOTWS* Kal KAPTEPAS MAYS yevopévns TOVTWY
Mev Of TAGioTOL KaTEKOTTNO AY, Of 5é TaV éXEepar-Tov nryemoves éyxatadapBavouevo. tapédwxay —
e A A v4 , A \ e
EauvTovs Kat Ta Onpia mavta. mpocraBwv 6é o
Ilvppos tydtxadta, Kal TH TUYN paddrov H Tots Noytopois ypwpmevos, emriye TH adrayye TOY
Makedovwv avarremAno névn Tapayns Kal poBov PS) a A 50 PD] xn N wv ‘ ta thy HTTav. dev éuBorys pév Exyovto Kat 430 undertakings, but he kept his brave spirit uncon- quered in the midst of his defeats; and men believed that in military experience, personal prowess, and daring, he was by far the first of the kings of his time, but that what he won by his exploits he lost by indulging in vain hopes, since through passionate desire for what he had not he always failed to establish securely what he had. For this reason Antigonus used to liken him to a player with dice who makes many fine throws but does not under- stand how to use them when they are made.

He returned to Epeirus! with eight thousand foot and five hundred horse, and since he had no money he sought for a war by which he could maintain his army. Some Gauls joined him, and he thereupon made an incursion into Macedonia, where Antigonus the son of Demetrius was reigning, designing to strip and plunder the country. But after he had taken a great number of cities and two thousand Macedonian soldiers had come over to him, he began to hope for greater things, and set out to attack Antigonus, and falling upon him in a narrow pass, threw his whole army into confusion. The Gauls who formed the rearguard of Antigonus, a numerous body, made a sturdy resistance ; but after a fierce battle most of these were cut to pieces, while those who had charge of the elephants were hemmed in and surrendered themselves and all their animals. Then Pyrrhus, thus greatly strengthened, and consulting his good fortune rather than his judgment, advanced upon the phalanx of the Macedonians, which was filled with confusion and fear because of their previous defeat. For this pans mpos aurop, Thy é deEeay ™ poTelvov Kal oTpPATHYOUS Kal TaELdpxous dvaKahoupevos, amav- Tas Mares ame TNO TOUS mECous TOU , Avtuyovov. KAKELVOS pev bmopevyov Gpwagepy. im éav dAdtyors * TOY mapadiov TLVas TONEWY KatéoXev, 6 0 dé IIvp- pos év evTUX NHAC TOT OVTOLS peyrtov auT@ 7 pos d0fav olopevos Siavren pax Oar To mept tous Ta- AadTAS, TA Kaddora, Kal Aan porara, TOV Napv- pov aveOnrev els TO lepov TH Itwvidos 'AOnvas, TOE TO EAEyElov éemLyparpas:

1 Late in the year 274 B.c.

Tovs Oupeods o 0 Modoaoes oI Ta@vioe Sapov A bdva Tluppos a amo Opacéwy € éxpéuacev Tararav, mavta tov Avtuyovouv KabeXwy aTparov: ov péya

Oadpa:
?. \ \ A N 4 bd / @xXentat cai viv cai wapos Ataxida.
pera, THY paynv dé evdus dvedapBave TAS TONELS.
TOV 66 Atyatev KpaTnaas Td Te adda Naren es expngaro TOUS avO parrots, Kal ppoupav Tanratixcny év TH TONE KaTtéXLTre TOY per avTOU oTpaTevo-ever. of dé Tanatat yévos aTANTTOTATOV xpn-faTwVY OVTES eméBevto TOV Bactrhéwv avToOe Kexndevpevav TOUS Tapous opuTTew, Kal Ta meV XP LATA Sinptacay, Ta 0€ ooTa T pos bBpuw btépperpar. TOUTO Koupas coke Kal oALywpws everyxety
o I1¥ppos, nH ov daxonas TLWas UmepFépevos 7 n mapels Sdws Sta hoBov Td KoAdoar Tous BapBap-ous: OOev Heovce Kaxas wre Tov Maxedovor.
ove Sé TaY TpayunaTwv avT@ BeBaoTnTa Kal TVUTTACL EYXOVTMV OVLMOV, NwPELTO TH Yyvapuy
1 ray inwéwy oAlyos supplied by Blass, in conformity with the translation of Amyot: dua ray waparlwy.

reason they refrained from engagement or battle with him, whereupon Pyrrhus, stretching out his right hand and calling upon the generals and captains, brought over to him all the infantry of Antigonus in a body. So Antigonus took to flight with a few of his horsemen, and occupied some of the seaboard cities; while Pyrrhus, thinking that amid so many successes his achievement against the Gauls con- duced most to his glory, dedicated the most beautiful and splendid of the spoils in the temple of Athena Itonis, with the following elegiac inscription :

“These shields, now suspended here as a gift to Athena Itonis, Pyrrhus the Molossian took from valiant Gauls, after defeating the entire army of Antigonus; which is no great wonder ;
for now, as well as in olden time, the Aeacidae are brave spearmen.”’

After the battle, however, he at once proceeded to occupy the cities. And after getting Aegae into his power, besides other severities exercised upon its in- habitants he left as a garrison in the city some of the Gauls who were making the campaign with him. But the Gauls, a race insatiable of wealth, set themselves to digging up the tombs of the kings who had been buried there ; the treasure they plundered, the bones they insolently cast to the four winds. This outrage Pyrrhus treated with lightness and indifference, as it was thought; he either postponed punishment because he had some business on hand, or remitted it altogether because he was afraid to chastise the Barbarians ; and on this account he was censured by the Macedonians. Moreover, before his affairs were securely and firmly established, his thoughts swung

433
VOL, 1X. F F
10

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘ e , , \ \ ‘ 3 ,
may pos érépas éAtridas. nal Tov pev “Avtiyovov épuBpilwv avaiayurtoy éxdret 1) NaBavovtTa
e / bd > \ 4 a Goiwariov, adr Ett THY Twopdvpayv dopovvta.
Knrewvipou 5é rod {raptidtov Tapayevopévou Kat
KaXovvTos avtov eri tHv Aaxedaipova mpobvpws UIFNKOVGED.
‘O 5€ KrAew@vupos Fv pév yévous Baciduxod, Soxay 5é Biatos eivar cal povapytKos obT’ evvorav oUTe Tiatw elyev, GAN “Apevs éBacinreve. Kal ToUTO pep Ev HY KoLWoY EyxAnpa Kal mpeoBuTEpov avT@ Tpos TOUS ToAtTas’ yuvaixa 5é KaNyV Kal yévous Bacirixod Xirwvida tyv Aewtvyidov
/ a ” e A € \ mpecButepos av éynuev 0 Krewvupos. 7 5é
"Axpotat@ TO “Apews émipaveioa, pepaxio Kad”
” > , \ x A A 4
@pav axuatovtTt, AvINnpov epavTe TO Krewvvuyow
€ a a kal adoEov opod trapeiye TOV yauov- ovdéva yap éxdvOave XTaptiatav Katadpovovpevos vO THs

yuvatcos. ottTw Sé tTav KaT olKov duiapav Tois TOALTLKOLS Tpoayevoumevwvy UT opyns Kal Bapv-Oupias éaiye tH YBraptn tov Iluppov, éyovta
Sic puptous Kal TmevTaKioXthious melous, Sta xtdious & imeis, er€pavras 5é elxootTécoapas, QOTE TO peyedes THs TapacKeuns evs elvar KaTtadnrov ov KrXewvipo tiv Lardptny, adda Thv Wedorov-vncov éavT@ KTwpeEvor, éTrel TO ye NOY Kal pos
b) \ ” ® \ 4 V4
autous éEapvos Hv tous Aaxedatpoviovs mpeaBev-
>] , , ¥ \ ? 4

cavtas eis MeyaAnv modu. ébn yap érevbepacwv
tas bt ’Avtiyovm mores adixGa, nal vy Aia 434
401

»

again towards new hopes. He railed at Antigonus and called him a shameless man for not laying aside the purple and wearing a common robe ; and when Cleonymus the Spartan came and invited him to come to Lacedaemon, he readily listened to him. Now, Cleonymus was of royal lineage, but because he was thought to be of a violent and arbitrary temper, he enjoyed neither goodwill nor confidence at home, but Areus was king there. This was one general ground of complaint which he had against his fellow citizens, and it was of long standing. Besides, Cleonymus in his later years had married Chilonis the daughter of Leotychides, a beautiful woman of royal lineage; but she had fallen desper- ately in love with Acrotatus the son of Areus, a young man in the flower of his age, and thus rendered his marriage distressing to Cleonymus, since he loved her, and at the same time disgraceful ; for every Spartan was well aware that the husband was despised by his wife. Thus his domestic vexations added themselves to his political disappointment, and in indignation and wrath he brought Pyrrhus against Sparta.! Pyrrhus had twenty-five thousand foot and two thousand hogse, besides twenty-four elephants, so that the magnitude of his preparations made it clear at once that he was not aiming to acquire Sparta for Cleonymus, but the Peloponnesus for himself. And yet his professions were all to the ' contrary, and particularly those which he made to the Lacedaemonian ambassadors themselves when they met him at Megalopolis. He told them he had come to set free the cities which were sub- ject to Antigonus, yes, and that he was going to “1 In 272 poo.

\ / a TOUS vewTépous Tatidas eis Lwdptyny, et pn TEL
7 A b / a a
KwNvEL, TED evTpadya opévous Tols AakwvtKols
4 ° a
EJeawv, ws ToUT@ Tréov Exotey HSN TOY TaVTOY
4 a Bacitewv, tadta mraTTUpEVOS Kal TApaywY TOUS
>] A A
évTuyxavovtas avT@ Kal’ oddv, ws mpaTov IrpaTo le! nm Ld \ “A THs Aakovixns aptrayny éoeito Kal Nendaciay:
> / A éyxadourtwy 5é€ Tov mpécBewv, StL pwn KaTAay-/ 4 /

yelXNas trodepov éEevnvoye mpos avtous, “’AXX’ 2Q9 ©¢ A 97>
oud’ was, edn, “ To’s Saaptidtas topev 6 tT av
/ a) ° A PéAANTE Trovety ETépots Mpor€eyovTas.” els dé TaV
qmapovtwy, dvowa Mavédpoxreidas, eire TH hova Naxovitwv: “Ai pev éoot TU ye Geos, ovdev py
4 9 9 A ’ > Ww ”
mabwpev’ ov yap abdixeduev’ ai & avOpwrros, éo-aeTat Kal TeD Kappwv AAXos.”
>? / /
XXVII. ’Ex rovtouv xatéBawev éri thy Aaxe-Py , \ A , 7 ? aimovas Kat tov Krewviyou xerevovtos &&
al e épodou mpocBareciv poBnbeis o Ilvppos, ws reé-yeTal, un StapTdowotl Of oTpaTI@Tat THY TOALY éy vuxtl mpoomecovTes, ETeTXEV, ELTT@Y STL TAUTO
\
Toincovat ped nucpay. avToL TE yap Hoay oALyot
\ 3 / N 9 / @ ” >
Kal dtrapdoKevot Sta TO aidvidsov, 6 Te Apeus ovK
9 , , ? >] b / /
éruyyave trapwv, adyX ev Kpntn Topruviors
, “a ‘ fe) \ 4 ‘
ToXenoupevots Bonfav: kat todto 87 padiota
\ 4 ww > 9 , \ 3 4
THY Tod éowoe Su Epnuiav Kai daoBEeveray KaTa-
A e A N II 4 0 / “ @ hpovneicav. o pev yap Iluppos ovdeva payxeic Bar
, / A \ 4 \
vopitwy KaTnudicato, Tod dé KrAewvupou tHy > JS A 4 N fi > 4
oixiav of Te Piro Kai elAwTes oUTWS ExoTpUNoAY

send his younger sons to Sparta, if nothing prevented, to be brought up in the Lacedaemonian customs, that so they might presently have the advantage over all other princes. With these fictions he beguiled those who came to meet him on his march, but as soon as he reached Laconian territory he began to ravage and plunder it. And when the Spartan ambassadors upbraided him for making war upon them without previous declaration, he said :

“Yet we know that you Spartans also do not tell others beforehand what you are going to do.”” Whereupon one of those who were present, Mandrocleidas
by name, said to him in the broad Spartan dialect :
‘If thou art a god, we shall suffer no harm at thy hands; for we have done thee no wrong; but if a man, another will be found who is even stronger.
than thou.”
XXVII. After this, he marched down against the city of Sparta. Cleonymus urged him to make the assault as soon as he arrived, but Pyrrhus was afraid, as we are told, that his soldiers would plunder the city if they fell upon it at night, and therefore re- strained them, saying that they would accomplish just as much by day. For there were but few men in the city, and they were unprepared, owing to the suddenness of the peril; and Areus was not at home, but in Crete, whither he was bringing military aid for the Gortynians. And this, indeed, more than anything else, proved the salvation of the city, which its weakness and lack of defenders caused to be despised. For Pyrrhus, thinking that no one would give him battle, bivouacked for the night, and the friends and Helot slaves of Cleonymus adorned and furnished his house in the expectation

Kal Tapecxevacay ws Setrvncovtos tov Iuppou Tap avT@.
Tevopévns 5é vuxtos ot Aaxedatpoviote mpw@rov pev €BovrAevoavto Tas yuvaixas eis Kpntny arooréAAey, at S€ avtéctncav. ‘Apytdapia Sé nal Eipos Exouca mpos THY yepouaiay 7AGEV eynadoidca Tois avopaaw vumép TOY yuvaiKkarv, eb Env avtas akiover THs Ywraptns amovopévns. Ererta TO OTPATOTED@ TOV TOAEMLWY TAPAaAANAOY éyvwoaVv
éuBarovtes tadpov évOev cai évev adtas srjaat Tas apatas, wéypte Tov pécov TaY TpOYaV KaTaA-yooavtes, Straws Edpav éyoucar dvoexBiactov éumod@y @at ToIs Onpiots. apxopmévots b€ TadTa MpPaTTELW HKOV AUTOS TOV TrapHEevwY Kal yuVaLKaY
ai pev ev ipatio, catalwoapevar Tovs YiTwvi-GKOUS, al dé povoyiTwres, TUvVEpyacopmEvaL TOS mpecBurépois. Tous dé wayecOas pédXrovTas exé-Nevoy Hovydle, eal NaBodoat pétpov aital Kal’ autas éFerpydoavro THs Tappouv TO TpiToV pépos.
hv S& TO pev WAdTOS avTHS mHxYewv EE, TO Se BaOos tettapwv, To dé pHKos oKTdTreOpor, ws iaotopes DvrAapxos, ws 5 “Iepw@vupos, EXatTov.

dua 8° huépa Kivoupévwv Tav Todepiov TA Ota ‘Tois véols Opéyoucar Kai wapadidotca, THY Ttadpov apvver kal pudrdttrey éxédevov, ws dV
pev vay év dp0arpois ris martpidos, evKrEés 5é Ounoxew ev yepot pntépwr Kal yuvatxav akiws THs Sadptns tmecovtas. n 5é Xtdwvis, éxtrodov ovca Kal’ éavtny, Bpoyov eixev evn pévoV, OTTWS emt TO Krcovipm pn yevoito Tis TONEWS anovons.
438

402

PYRRHUS

that Pyrrhus would take supper there with its owner.
When night had come, the Lacedaemonians at first took counsel to send their women off to Crete, but the women were opposed to this; and Archidamia came with a sword in her hand to the senators and upbraided them in behalf of the women for thinking it meet that they should live after Sparta had perished. Next, it was decided to run a trench parallel with the camp of the enemy, and at either end of it to set their waggons, sinking them to the wheel-hubs in the ground, in order that, thus firmly planted, they might impede the advance of the elephants. When they began to carry out this project, there came to them the women and maidens, some of them in their robes, with tunics girt close, and others in their tunics only, to help the elderly men in the = ~ work. The men who were going to do the fighting the women ordered to keep quiet, and assuming their share of the task they completed with their own hands a third of the trench. The width of the trench was six cubits, its depth four, and its length eight hundred feet, according to Phylarchus ; according to Hieronymus, less than this. When day came and the enemy were putting themselves in motion, these women handed the young men their armour, put the trench in their charge, and told them to guard and defend it, assured that it was sweet to conquer before the eyes of their fatherland, and glorious to die in the arms of their mothers and wives, after a fall that was worthy of Sparta. As for Chilonis, she withdrew from the rest, and kept a halter about her neck, that she might not come into the power of Cleonymus if the city were taken. |

439

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXVIII. Autos pev ovv 0 IT dppos éBudtero
KaTAa oTOMNa Tous omAitats 1 pos aarribas TOdAaS TOV 271g priatav avTiTrapaTeTaypLEevas, Kal Tap pov ov TepaTny ovde Baow aapary Tois paxopevots Tapéxovaay vo Xavvornros. o 6é mais TI roAe-patos, Exwv Sioxedious Tadartas Kat Xaovev Aoydabas, eer Eas TV fa te €TELPATO Kara Tas

apatas vrepBaivev. a o€ bm Babous Kal TTuK-VOTNTOS OU [LOVOV TOUTOLS THY epodor, arra Kal Tots Aaxedarpoviots Stcepyov émoiovvy tHv BonOeav.
avaotevtwy 56 tav Tadatav tovs Tpoxous Kat UTocupovrwy Tas auakas eis TOV TOTapMOY, KaTi-Swv tov Kivduvov o veavias "AKpoTaTos Kat THY Todt Swabpapov pera _Tplaxoaicv mepinr de TOV Ilrodepaior, ov TUVOPwLEVOS on' avrod dud TWAS cuykhuvias, éws mpooéBare ToIs eaxdrous Kat peraBanrovtas qwarynace paxec Bau 7 pOs EauTov, aoupevous vr adn ov els TE THY Tadpov Kat TEpt Tats apakaus wimTovTas, AYpt ov pove TON-
Ao pores avexonnaay. éOedvro 5é of Te Tm pea Burepor Kal TOV yUuvaLK@V TO TAO 0s apiaTevovta tov Axpotatov. érrel dé ane madi dia THs
TONEWS ETL THY AUTOD TakW, AaipwaTos KATATAEWS Kal yadpos, Urd THs viens emnppévos, Kai peitov éboke yeyovévar nat KadXiwv tais Aaxaivats, cal THv Xidovida Tov épwros eCnrovv. trav dé mpec-Butépav TLves émnxonovbouy Bowvres: " Olve, | "Axporate, kal oide Tay Xirwvidas povov Bs ayabous Ta LrapTa Tole.
Kara S& top Ilvppov avrov taxXupas payns cuverTwONS AdrOL TE AaTIPAS HywVvilovTo, Kal 440

PYRRHUS

XXVIII. Pyrrhus himself, then, with his men-at- arms, tried to force his way directly against the many shields of the Spartans which confronted him, and over a trench which was impassable and afforded his soldiers no firm footing owing to the freshly turned earth. But his son Ptolemy, with two thousand Gauls and picked Chaonians, went round the trench and tried to force a passage where the waggons were. These, however, being so deeply planted in the earth and so close together, made not only his onset, but also the counter-efforts of the Lacedaemonians, a difficult matter. The Gauls pulled the wheels up and were dragging the waggons down into the river ; but the young Acrotatus saw the danger, and run- ning through the city with three hundred men got round behind Ptolemy without being seen by him, owing to some depressions in the ground, and at last fell upon his rear ranks and forced them to turn about and fight with him. And now the Barbarians crowded one another into the trench and fell among the waggons, and finally, after great slaughter, were successfully driven back. The elderly men and the host of women watched the brilliant exploit of Acrotatus. And when he went back again through the city to his allotted post, covered with blood and triumphant, elated with his victory, the Spartan women thought that he had become taller and more beautiful than ever, and envied Chilonis her lover. Moreover, some of the elderly men accompanied him on his way, crying: "Go, Acrotatus, and take to thyself Chilonis; only, see that thou begettest brave sons for Sparta."'

A fierce battle was also waged where Pyrrhus himself led, and many Spartans made a splendid 441

PLUTARCRH'S LIVES

PurANos emi mrEioTOv avTicyov Kal TeEicroUS aTroxteivas TaVv Bialopévov, ws oOeTo Tpavpatov TwANnOE TWapadvopevoy EavToOV, EXoTAS TLVE
TOY eTiTeTAaypeVvaY THS yopas Erecev EvTOS TOY
StAwY, Bote wn yeverOar Tov ti UmoO TOL TONE MLOLS.
XXIX. Nuxtos 6€ 7 uayn Sveepibry Kat Kot-
Ld
pepevos 6 Ilvppos dw elde toravTnv. éddxee
4 a e 69 ? a \ /
BadXrcq8at Kepavvois br' abtod thy Aaxedaipova
\ 4 " > A \ 4 e \ \
Kal préyecOar tracav, avrov 6é yaipev. wo b€ THS Yapas éEeypopevos Tovs TE HryEewovas Exédevev
év TapacKevy Tov otpatov Eye, Kal Tols Pirots
a A /
Sunyeito Tov Gvetpov ws AnYropevos KATA KpaTOS
\ 4 e \ 9 w: , b] 4
THY TOALY. OL Lev OV AAXOL Oaupaciws erreiOovTo, Avotpay@ 8€é ov« jpecnev 7 OYrts, ANN pn Sedz€- vat pn, xabatep Ta Baddopeva Tois KEepauvois avéuBata péver ywpia, cal To Lvpp@ mpoonpaivy 70 Ociov aveicodov écecOar tH ody. o 5é ILvp-pos elrrwy Ste Tav'Ta pév éott TuAaiKhS oYAAa-
, \ 9 , 4 4 J " \ "
yorylas Kal acodiav éxyovta Todd, éxetvo Sé Set Ta OTe Sia Yetpav Exovtas UroBdAXew éavtois, Els olwvos adpiotos apvvecOar wepi uvppou,

A > \ /
éEavéotn Kal mpoonyev du nuépa TOV oTparov.
"Hpdvovto 6€ mpodupia cat dpetn Tapa diva pivovro dé mpobupig nal dperh mapa divap
e \ fol e Ca) ' ,
ot Aaxedatpovior' Kal Tapnoay ai yuvaixes opéy-442

PYRRHUS

fight, but particularly Phyllius, who surpassed all in the tenacity of his resistance and the numbers of the on-rushing enemy whom he slew ; and when he perceived that his powers were failing from the multitude of the wounds he had received, he made way for one of his comrades in the line, and fell inside the ranks, that his dead body might not come into the hands of the enemy.

XXIX. Night put an end to the battle; and Pyrrhus, as he slept, had the following vision. He dreamed that Sparta was smitten with thunderbolts from his hand and was all ablaze, and that he was filled with joy. His joy waked him from sleep, and he commanded his officers to get the army ready for action, and narrated his dream to his friends, convinced that he was going to take the city by storm. Most of them, then, were fully persuaded that he was right, but Lysimachus was not pleased with the vision; he said he was afraid lest, as places smitten by thunderbolts are kept free from the tread of men, the Deity might be indicating in advance to Pyrrhus also that the city was not to be entered by him. But Pyrrhus declared that this was nonsense intended for the crowd, and great folly, and calling upon his hearers to take their arms in their hands and act upon the belief that rose up, and at day-break led forth his army.

“One is the best of all omens, to fight in defence of Pyrrhus,’’}

But the Lacedaemonians defended themselves with an alacrity and bravery beyond their strength; the 1 An adaptation of Iliad, xii. 243, by substituting ‘‘ Pyr- rhus” for ‘‘ one’s country ” (Mvppov for wdrpys).

+ Y , 4 \ a /
ovcat BédXn, Kal ortia Kal totov Tois Seopévots mpoopepoveat, cal avarayBdvovoat Tovs TITPw- aKopévous. Thy Te Ttadpov ot Maxedoves yoov b] ce) \ lel (4 € 9? ETELP@VTO, TOAATNY GUpudopodvTes DANY, Up Hs 6TAa Kal TMpATAa VvEXpaV ETLYEoLeVNS ATrEKPU- N “ a , TTETO. Kal pos TovTO TaY AaKedatpoviwy Bon- Oovvtwv OPOn Twapa tHv Tadpov kal Tas apakas o Ilvppos tmmr@ Bralopevos eis THY TOMY. KpavyHS 5é€ TaY KaTa TOUTO TETAYyHéVWV yEevomerns Kat dpo t oOAON D TO DV, Hon pouwov Kal dAoAUVYypLOD TeV yuvatKav, On dtEk-eravvovte TO Ilvppw Kal mpooKerpév@ tois Kata mpoowtov é&nAato Kpnrix@ Béder mAnyels o immos vio THY yaoTépa, Kal KatéBare ducbava-tav tov IIuppov ets tomous ortcOnpovs Kal xkatavrets. OopvBovpévwy S€ rept TovTovy Tav

e a

éTaipov érédpapov ot Xraptiatar, al ypw@pevor tots Bédcow éFéwoay dravtas. é« d€ TovTOU Kai Thv adAnY paxny Eravev, oidpevos evdwcetv & tous Aaxedatpoviouvs axedov amdavrwy Katate-TpwuévwV avTois, TeTTMKOTAY 5é TOoAAOY. 78
ayabn TUXN THS TONES, ETE TELpaY apETHS Aap-Bavovoa tav avipov, ei0’ éauths, Banu év atropoats
v 4 b) , “~ \ Ww
éyer Suvamy, amroderEwy Sid0vca, poxOnpas 45n
” , 9 , \ 4 9
tav Aaxedatpovioy éyovtwv Tas édTridas "Apecy-iav te Dwxéa, tav *Avtuyovou atpatnyav, éx
,
Koptv6ov BonOnoovra rapeonyaye peta Edvov,
Kat Tovtov apte Sedeypévwv o Baorirevs avtois Apeuvs Heev ex Kpnrns dioxytdiouvs otpatiotas
/ wn
Kopitwv. ai te O12 yuvaixes evOUs emi Tas otxias 444

403

PYRRHUS

women, too, were at hand, proffering missiles, dis- tributing food and drink to those who needed them, and taking up the wounded. The Macedonians tried to fill up the trench, collecting and throwing into it great quantities of materials, beneath which the arms and dead bodies were hidden away. And when the Lacedaemonians tried to put a ‘stop to this, Pyrrhus was seen forcing his way on horseback past the trench and the waggons into the city. But the men stationed at this point raised a shout, and there was a concourse and shrieking of the women, and just as Pyrrhus was riding through the waggons and attacking the men in front of him, his horse was wounded in the belly by a Cretan javelin and leaped to one side, and in his death agony threw Pyrrhus upon steep and slippery ground. His companions were thrown into confusion around him, and the Spartans, running upon them and making good use ot their missiles, drove them all off. After this, Pyrrhus brought the fighting to a stop at other points also, thinking that the Spartans would make some con- cessions, now that almost all of them were wounded and many had fallen. But now the good fortune of the city, either because she was satisfied with the bravery of its men, or because she would show forth the great power which she herself has in desperate crises, brought to their aid from Corinth, when the hopes of the Spartans were already sorry, Ameinias the Phocian, one of the generals of Antigonus, with mercenary troops; and no sooner had he been re- ceived into the city than Areus the Spartan king came from Crete, bringing with him two thousand soldiers. So the women at once dispersed to their

éoxedaaOna ar, ovdév Ett ToAUTIPAy LOVELY UEtovaaL
T@V TONMLKOY, Kal TOUS Tap ALKiay év Tots Sardots UT' avayKns yevopevous adhévtes abtovs em?
Thy paxyny étafav.
XXX. Tov &€ Tvppov éoye pév tis aden Kal dirotiwia padrov Ska Tovs mpooyeyovetas Kpa-THoaL THS TOAEws: ws Sé ovdey érrépaive, TWANYAaS AaBov anéotn Kat Thy Ywpav érropOe S:avoov-pevos avToOt xYeipdoat. TO Sé ypewv Fw apuKtov. év yap "Apyet otdots hv Aptotéouv mpos Apiotitr-tov. éeme dé 0 Apiotimmos edoxe ypjncOar hiro
T® "Avtiyove, POdacas o 'Aptotéas éxdder Tov IIvppov eis to" Apyos. o 8é éArridas é& eAtridwy del xudrivdwr, nal tais peéev evtuyiass én' adXasS Npwpevos apoppais, & bé Emracev Erépors Bovro-pevos avatAnpody mpdypacw, obte Hrrav ove vixny pov émoveito Tov TtapatrTecOat Kal Tapar-Tetv. evOvs ovv aveCevyvver emi to "Apyos. o &é
"Apeus évédpas te trodXdas vdels xal eataraBov
Ta YadeTwTaTa THS od00 TepltexoTTTe Tos Ta-Aadtas Kai Tovs Modrogaods omic PodvAaxodvtas.
To Sé Ilvppe wpoeipnto per ex THY iep@v adoBwv yevouéeva Ud TOD pavTews amoBoAn Tivos TOV
dvayxaiwv, wapa 6€ tov Katpov Tote TH OopvBo Kal T@ Kivnpatt Tov Aoytopov exKpovabels éxé-Nevo Tov viov IItoNEpaiov AaBovta Tovs éEraipous mapaBonOeiv, avtos b€ Oattov éx TeV aTEevoV épeXKopuevos THY oTpatiay UmHyev. ofetas 6é Tept homes, since they no longer thought it meet to busy themselves with the work of war, and the men, after dismissing from their ranks those of unmilitary age whom necessity had brought there, arrayed themselves for battle.

XXX. Pyrrhus, too, was more than ever possessed by a fierce ambition to become master of the city, now that reinforcements had come to it; but since he could accomplish nothing, and met with fresh losses, he went away, and fell to ravaging the country, purposing to spend the winter there. But Fate was not to be escaped. For at Argos there was a feud between Aristeas and Aristippus; and since Aris- tippus was thought to enjoy the friendship of Anti- gonus, Aristeas hastened to invite Pyrrhus into Argos. Pyrrhus was always entertaining one hope after another, and since he made one success but the starting point for a new one, while he was deter- mined to make good each disaster by a fresh undertaking, he suffered neither defeat nor victory to put.a limit to his troubling himself and troubling others. At once, therefore, he broke camp and set out for Argos. But Areus, by setting frequent ambushes and occupying the most diffi- cult points on the march, kept cutting off the Gauls and Mobossians who brought up the rear for Pyrrhus.

Now, it had been foretold to Pyrrhus by his seer, in consequence of sacrifices where no liver could be found, that he was to lose one of his kindred; but here, unhappily, owing to the agitation and tumult among his rear-guard, he forgot himself, and ordered his son Ptolemy with his comrades to go to the rescue, while he himself drew his army more quickly out of the narrow pass and led them forward. A tov Illroveuatov paxns yevouevns, Kal T@V éTe-Aéxtwov Aaxedatpoviov, av KiadKxos yetto, Tots payouévors mpo avtodD cuuTrEKopévwv, avip TANKTHS Kai Spapeiv o€vs, "Opvacos dvopa, Kpns

"Amtepaios, €x mAayiov tTapadpayov aywrvitopevov éxOvpws TOV veavioxov ématake kal Katé-Bare. wecovtos Sé éxeivov Kal Tpomwns yevomévns
T@V Tept avTov, of Aaxedaipovuo SimKovtes Kat
Kpatoovres €dabov eis To Tediov cuveuBarovTes
Kat aroAnp0évtes UO TAY oTFALT@V, ef ods O
Illvppos apts tov Oavarov tod tados axnKxows
Kal mepirabav éméotpefre tovs immeis Tov Modoccav. Kal mpwtos eiceddoas éverripTAATO te tav Aaxedatpoviwy, del pév TIS dwaxos Kat elvos év TOs OTAOLs Hatvopevos, TOTE 5é UTEp-BadXwv rorAun Kat Bia Tovs mpotépous ayavas.
érrel 6¢ érréBare tra EvddKxw tov ior, o pev éx wrayiov Tapactas pexpov édénoe TO Eiher THv éml THs vias yeipa Staxdyat tod IIvppou, rhv 8é
nviav matakas améxowev. 0 8€ Ilvppos apa TH TANYH TOU Sopatos Suedacas Exeivoy atreppuNn TOD
larmov, kat wetos on mavtas él To Evdadno paxopévous améxteive TOUS Noydbas. Kal péya TOUTO TH LwapTn Tapavarwpa Tov Todéuou Wé-pas Exovtos émoince 1) prdotiia Tay apxovTwv.

XXXI. ‘O &€ Ilvppos dorep évaytopov tiva
T® Tradl TEeAéoas Kal AapuTpOY emiTadtoy aywut-TAMEVOS, KAL TOAD THS AUTNS Ev TH Mpos TOVS Todepnious adels Oup@, mponyev emt ro “Apryos.
kat tov *Avtiyovoy 45n muvOavopevos én Tav axpwv rep Tov mrediou KaOjcbat, wept tTHv Nav-448

fierce battle raged where Ptolemy was, and while a band of picked Spartans under the command of Evalcus engaged the soldiers who were fighting in front of him, a man of stout arm and swift foot, Oryssus by name, of Aptera in Crete, ran up on one side of the young prince as he was fighting spiritedly, smote him, and laid him low. Upon Ptolemy’s fall and the rout of his company, the Spartans pursued, carrying all .before them, and before they were aware of it had dashed out into the plain and were cut off by the infantry of Pyrrhus. Against this band of Spartans Pyrrhus, who had just heard of the death of his son and was in 4nguish, turned his Molossian horsemen. He himself charged at their head, and sated himself with Spartan blood. He had always shown himself invincible and terrible in arms, but now his daring and might surpassed all previous displays. When he set his horse upon Evalcus, the Spartan stepped aside and had almost cut off with his sword the bridle-hand of Pyrrhus ; as it was he hit the rein and severed it. Pyrrhus transfixed the Spartan with a thrust of his spear, and at the same instant fell off his horse, and fighting on foot, at once proceeded to slay all the picked band which was fighting over the body of Evalcus. This great additional loss to Sparta when the war was already at an end was due to the ambition of the commanders.

XXXI. So Pyrrhus, after accomplishing as it were an expiation for his son and celebrating his obsequies with a brilliant contest, having also vented much of his grief in his fury against the enemy, led his army on towards Argos. And when he learned that Antigonus was already posted on the heights commALav éaTpatomedeuce. ™ 8 batepaig KnpuKa

7 pos TOV "Avtiryovov érrepmrpe, AUME@VAa TE KAX@Y Kat TPOKANOVLEVOS els TO Tredvov kataBdvra diayovicac bat Tepl THS Bacrrelas. o 6 a amexpivaro THY pev avTov oTparnyiay ovxX OmAwr Haddov v7] Katpov elvat, T@ O€ Tluppe TOANas od0us avew-yévat T pos Oavaroy, et Sv pa oxonaber. pos dé Guporépous Tpéa Bets Hcov e& “Apyous, amadXartea0at deoevor Kal TH Tod éav pnder épov ryevoperny, evvouv b€ ovoav dpxporépots. O pev oop
"AvTiryovos éemeiBero Kal tov viov édidou Tots
"A pyetous & Gpunpov, .0 9 be Tlvppos @pohoryet ev amran-Naynoes Oar, un Tapéywv S€ Tioctiv UTromWTOTEpOS
nV.
Piverac dé onpeiov avT@ Te 7H Tvppe péya, TOV yap Body TeOupevoy ai kepada) Keiwevat Vo-pis 7On Tas TE yorTas apOnaav ™poBdddoveat Kal TEPiAtX Ww MEVvat TO EQUTOV pévor, éy TE TH mode tav ‘Apyeiwy 1 Tov Auxeiov Tpophres
"ATOANWVOS eFedpape Boca vEKp@V opay Kai povov KATATTNEW THY TONY, TOV & Getov emt Tov ayova xwpodvta, eita povoop elvat.
XXXII. ZKorous bé WoAAOD TpoamiEas o o Il vp-pos Tots TelXect, Kal mUdnY eUpov Hy Acapmrepés Kadoboty avemy wevny vmO TOU "Apioréou avrois, ax pu pev Tov mapera mec eiv tovs Taddtas tovs Tap’ avtov Kal THY dryopay cataraBeiv ehavOave-THs be mUANS TOUS éerépavras ov dexopmerns Kal dia ToUTO TOUS TUpyous avTav aatpovvrwr, elra mad éy oxotet Kal JopuBp mepitevteov Kal ‘yevoperns dat prBis, ov “Apyeior cuvaraGopevor mpos tHv ’Aotida Kal Tovs oXUpovs ToTOUS 450

manding the plain, he pitched his camp near Nauplia. On the following day he sent a herald to Antigonus, calling him a robber, and challenging him to come down into the plain and fight with him for the kingdom. But Antigonus replied that in conducting a campaign he relied more upon opportunities than upon arms, and that many roads to death lay open to Pyrrhus if he was tired of life. And now to both kings came ambassadors from Argos, entreating them to go away and allow the city to be neutral, but well-disposed towards both. Antigonus, accord- ingly, consented, and gave his son to the Argives as a hostage ; Pyrrhus also agreed to go away, but since he gave no pledge, he remained under suspicion.

Moreover, Pyrrhus himself had a significant portent;
for the heads of his sacrificed cattle, though they already lay apart from the bodies, were seen to put out their tongues and lick up their own gore. And besides this, in the city of Argos the priestess of Apollo Lyceius ran forth from the temple crying that she saw the city full of corpses and slaughter, and that the eagle which visited the scene of combat presently vanished away.

XXXII. At dead of night Pyrrhus came up to the walls of the city, and finding that the gate called Diamperes had been thrown open for them by Aristeas, was undiscovered long enough for his Gauls to enter the city and take possession of the market- place. But the gate would not admit his elephants, and therefore the towers had to be taken off their backs and put on again when the animals were inside, in darkness and confusion. This caused delay, and the Argives, taking the alarm, ran up to the Aspis and other strong places of the city, and sending

> 7 N N 9 , ,) , Ul
avéOeov, kai toy Avtiyovoy éxdXouv wéutrovtes.
e \ > AN \ 9 \ , .] v4 AY
o O€ aUTOS péev eyyUS TpoceAdaas éprydpeve, TOUS 5é atpatnyous Kal Tov viov eioérempe ouxXvnY
, SA Ad \ Voy ” Bonbeay ayovras. mre 5é cai “Apeus éxor yxI-
, A \ , LY 3 14
rious Kpiras nat Yaraptidtas tous éXadppotdrous.
Kal mavres Gua tots Tadatats mpooBadortes ets \ g S > y id \ Y
qwoXrvuv GopuBov Katéotncay avtous. o 6é Iluppos eioi@y pet adadaypnov Kal Bons Tapa Thy KvAdpaBuv, as ot Tadrdrac tots mrepi avtov avTn-
, 5) 9 Y IAN “y Y)
AdAak~ay ovK ttapoy ovdé Bapparéov, cixace TapaTTopéevwy eivar THY dwvyv Kat TrovovyTwY. ériyev otv OatTov, @®Oav Tovs TmpOo avTOD TaV
inwéwv dvcododvtas ev Tos OYETOIS, WY 7 TOALS €oTt peoTH, Kal KtvduvEvoYTas. HY O€ Kal acddea

TOAAN TaV SpwLéevav Kat TapayyeNNOmevon ev vVUK-
a Topayia, Kal TAAVaL kat Sitaoracpuot rept Tous
\
OTEVWTTOUS, KaL OTpaTHYLas OvdeV Epyor UTO TKO-
A A > ay \ , 9 \ S
Tous Kat Bons axpitov Kal otevotntos, aAAa dtéww , 9 , \ Cd 4
TptBov adrws TreptmévovTes auportepoe THY Nuépav.
"Hdn 6€ Staraurovtos 4H te ’Aotis STAY mepitAews Tovepiwv odVeica tov Ivppov de-tapake, nai THs ayopas évy TodXois avabnpact
A aA A
KaTLow@y AVKOY YaXKOUY Kai Tavpov olop Eis "aYNY +) t , 9 , g N
adrnrLs cuviovtas eEeTNAYN, KYPNO Lov TLVva TT POS
\ a“ A éauTOV aveveyK@V Tandalov, ws atodaveiy avT@
a S wempwpuevoy Stay AvKov ibn TaYPW payopeEvoD.
travta be Apyeiot mdfous viropynpata tada.od 452

to Antigonus called upon him for help. Antigonus marched up close to the city, and lying in wait there himself, sent his generals and his son inside with a considerable relief-force. Areus also came, with a thousand Cretans and Spartans (the most lightly armed). All these troops united in an assault upon the Gauls and threw them into great confusion. And Pyrrhus, who now entered the city with shouts and cries by way of Cylarabis,! noticed that the Gauls did not answer his men with any vigour or courage, and therefore conjectured that their response was that of men confounded and in distress. Accordingly, he led on faster, pushing along the horsemen in front of him, who were making their way with difficulty among the water-conduits, of which the city is full, and were in peril of their lives from them. And now, in this night-battle, there was great uncertainty as to what commands were given and how the commands were carried out; men straggled and lost their way among the narrow streets, and generalship was of no avail owing to the darkness, confused shouting, and confined spaces; both parties therefore were unable to accomplish anything and waited for the day.

But when at last it began to grow light, the sight of the Aspis filled with armed enemies greatly disturbed Pyrrhus; moreover, among the numerous votive-offerings in the market- place he caught sight -of a wolf and bull in bronze, represented as closing with one another in battle, and he was dumbfounded, for he called to mind an ancient oracle regarding himself which declared that it was fated for him to die when he saw a wolf fighting with a bull. Now, the Argives say that these figures were set up in 1 A gymnasium just outside the city towards the East.

a ? 9 a Va af ev
yevevqoOa tap avtois Néyovot. Aava@ yap, ote mpatov éTméBn THS Ywpas Kata Ta Ilupapwia tijs
" a @vpedtidos, ets" Apyos tropevopeve AVKov havijvar
, \ \
Tavpw payopuevov: Oéuevov S€ tov Aavacoy ws o NUKOS ein POS AUTO (Eévov yap dvTa Tols éyKo-/ ? cf / > 7] a \ plots émitiOecOar xabdtep avtov), épopav tH
paxynv, cal Tod AVKOV KpaTnoayvTos "ATOAN@VI AvKeig mpocevEdpevov éemiyepjoat Kat Teptyevér Oat, orace: Veddvopos, ds Tote Tov "Apyetwy éBacirevev, éxtrecovTos. TO peév ovv avdOnua TovTov elye TOY AOYov.

XXXIII. pos 5€ thy dyev o [lvppos dua Kat

A be Aa wv] -~ aé aA > ,
T@ pnoev wv nrATibe' mpoywpeiv aGupav avacT pé-dev Svevoeito: tas dé wvdNas oTevds ovcas po-
, " \ \ CN of \ "A Bovpevos Eee mpos tov viov" EXevov peta TIS
TOAAHS Ouvapews Ew KaTaredetupméevov, KeNEV@V
Tov Tetyous SiacKkdmrey Kat SéyerOar Tous éxTris-TovTAas, GV EVOYABMGLY Ol TOAEULOL. TTrOVSH Sé Kai GopuBo Tov weupOévros ovdév capes atrayyédXov-
\ , a ,
ToS, AAA Kal dvapaptias yevouevns, Ta Onpiwy Ta
NLT KaLoTpaTLOTas dvadaBov TOS KpaTioToOUS
0 veavioKos clow Sia TOV TUAGDY Exwpet TO TraTpl
4 " \, e¢ 4 > , 4 \
BonOnowv. érvye dé 0 Ilvppos avactpépwv Hon. Kat MEX pl ev 7) Ayopa Trapetyev UreEdyovTL Ywpav Kal paxoueveo, ex petaBor(ANs nuvvero Tovs éemipepo-pévous: ere -6€ THS ayopas els TOV oTEVwTTOV éEwobeis Tov emi THY WUANY avnKOVTAa CUVEeTITTTE
tois émtBonOovow &€& évavtias mpocdpepopéevors, ot 1 #ami(e Coraés, Bekker, and Blass, with the MSS.: #amee.

their market-place as memorials of an ancient event. Namely, when Danaiis first landed in the country, near Pyramia in the district of Thyreatis, and was on his way to Argos, he saw a wolf fighting with a-bull ; and conceiving that he himself was represented by the wolf (since both were strangers and were attacking the natives), he watched the battle to its end, and when the wolf had prevailed, paid his vows to Apollo Lyceius (the wolf-god), attacked the city, and was victorious, after Gelanor, who was at that time king of Argos, had been driven out by a faction. This, then, was the significance of the dedication.!

XXXIII. Dejected at this sight, as well as because none of his hopes were being realized, Pyrrhus purposed to retreat; but fearing the narrowness of the gates he sent to his son Helenus, who had been left outside the city with the greater part of the forces, ordering him to tear down part of the wall and succour those who rushed out through the breach, in case the enemy molested them. Owing to the haste and tumult, however, the messenger brought no clear orders, but actually made a mistake, and the young prince, taking the rest of the elephants and the best of his soldiers, marched through the gate into the city to help his father. But Pyrrhus was already on the retreat. And as long as the market- place afforded him room for withdrawing and fighting, he would turn and repel his assailants; but after he had been driven out of the market-place into the narrow street which led up to the gate, and en- countered those who were rushing to his aid from the opposite direction, some of these could not hear

1 Cf. Pausanias, ii. 19, 3.

\ 9 e , e ra) A 9 a Q fev ovY vIrnkovoy UTroywpety BowyTos avTod, TOUS
dé xal mavu mpoPupous dvtas eipyov ot KaToTLV
\ ” e ATO THS TUANS EMLYEouEevolt. Kal yap oO péytoTOS
‘ > a“ 4 , ‘ \
edehas €v TH WUAN WAayLOS Tapatrecwy Kat Bov-

Yapevos éuTodwv ExetTo Tis aTOTpETTOMEVOLS, Kal
“A , 4 4 4 @
TOV mpoeisehnrvOorav ETEpOS; ¢ ® Nixwyv dvopa jv, aTroppvevTa Tov émrtaTaTny VITO Tpavpdrav Cntav avaraBeiv Kal Pepopevos ™mpos TovvavTiov Tots umeEayovowy, avéurte hirouvs o“ov Kal qoAEuLous @Ooupévous br avTod: Kal TeptémuTToV dAAHAOLS, Ews eupmy vexpov avetreTo TH TpoBooKic:, Kat
A 9 ce) b 4 e \ > - Tots ddovc apdorépos vrokaBav avéotpede
/
Tad OoTep é“pavnys, avatpéTron Kal drapOelpwv
Tous évtuyydvovtas. ovTw 5é OrArBouévwv xal
/ \ J f > \ 3 OA e@ A TULTLAOUPLEVOY POS AAAAOVS OVdELS OvdSEeY EAUTO
. 9 a \ ¢ 1 \? A

Kad éva yxpnobar duvatos Rv, aAN woTrep Ev

“a / A N a aA cHua ouyyeyoudwpmevoy éavt@® To wav tAHGs éNapBave roAXNas arokNaes Kal petaBords én’ 3 4 dupotepa. Kal payat pev Hoav orAuyaL TPOS TOUS
la) ,
évaTro\apBavopmévous ael TMV TOAELLWY 7) TpOT-Ketmévous omicbev, mrciota b€ EéauTovs cipya-Covto kakd. omacapevoyv yap To Ethos 7) KAivavTa NOYXNY ove Hv avaraBeiv ovdé catabécOar Tarxy,
9 % 9 a 9 ? 4 \ “~ , \
GAN’ éywper Ou’ wy Eruye TH TOLavTAa TTavTa, Kal
, > 4, ”
TepiTimTovTes GAANnAOLS EOvyTKoD.
“A \
XXXIV. ‘O dé Ilvppos éfopay tov weptéxovra Yetuava cal Krvdwva, THY wev aoTepavny, 7) Sud-@ X. , 9 \ 64 / fe) e s onpov hv TO Kpavos, aherov EdwKé Tive TOV ETAi-pov, avros 5€ To imm@ tetoOas els ToOvs 456

PYRRHUS

him when he called out to them to withdraw, and those who did, even though they were very ready to obey him, were kept from doing so by those who were pouring in behind them from the gate. For the largest of the elephants had fallen athwart the gate- way ! and lay there roaring, in the way of those who would have turned back; and another elephant, one of those which had gone on into the city, Nicon by name, seeking to recover his rider, who had fallen from his back in consequence of wounds, and dashing in the face of those who were trying to get out, crowded friends and foes alike together in a pro- miscuous throng, until, having found the body of his master, he took it up with his proboscis, laid it across his two tusks, and turned back as if crazed, over- throwing and killing those who came in his way. Thus crushed and matted together not a man of them could act at all for himself, but the whole multitude, bolted together, as it were, into one body, kept rolling and swaying this way: and that. Little fighting could be done against those of the enemy who were continually being caught up into their ranks or attacking them from the rear, and they wrought most harm to themselves. For when a man had drawn his sword or poised his spear, he could not recover or sheathe his weapon again, but it would pass through those who stood in its way, and so they died from one another's blows.

XXXIV. But Pyrrhus, seeing the stormy sea that surged about him, took off the coronal, with which his helmet was distinguished, and gave it to one of his companions ; then, relying on his horse, he plunged in among the enemy who were pursuing

1 «De travers tout au beau milieu de la porte " (Amyot).

ET OMEVOUS TOV. TONEMLOY évéBare, Kat Sopare mnyels 51a Tov Owpaxos ov Katpiay wnynY ovde peyadny emeaT pewe KaTa TOU mardtavros, 6 OS Hy "A pryeios, ov Tay eTrLepaver, adda Teviypas Kal mpeaButépas vids yuvairos. airy TOTE Jew- evn THY payny domep at Routrat yuvaires a6 Tou TEYOUS, WS em eyven cuver TATA 7@ Lvpp@ tov viov, exTradns 'yevopevn pos Tov Kivduvor, apaca Kepapioa Tais Yepotv auporEepais apnev emt TOV Ilvppov. eumecovans dé T7 Kepanij KATA TOU xpavous, Kal TOV cpovdurwv 7 pos Tv Baow Tov TpaX7rov curt pBevTor, ai Te dypets cuvexvOnoav autov Kal 7 ponkavTo Tas jvias at Xetpes. aurTos b¢ KATEVE Geis Tapa TOV Tov _Acxupviou oNKOV Emeoev VITO TMV TOO dryvooupevos. Zur upos 5é TEs TOV Tapa "Avtuyov@ oT paTevopEevo" Kal Sv0 7) Tpeis ETE pot pod Spa.movTes kat KaTavon- TayTeEs els tiva* Oupa@va TapelAKvoay auTov ap- Xopevov EK THS TANYHS avapeper Oar. TTATApLEVvov 686 «TOD Lom vpov" paxarpav "TAdupenny OS THY Keharny atroTEewovvtos évéBrewe devvor, dare Tov

Zamupov mepipoBov ryevouevor, Kal Ta pev Tpefovra Tais xepst, Ta bé € emixerpoovTa, PopvBou dé Kal Tapaxiis plea TOV ovta, pay xat op0ov, drdXr.a mapa TO cron kal TO syeverov aTrOoTeuvovTa Bpadéws Kai pores amoon da at THY Keparnv. dn dé a uvdndov Hv TO ‘yeyoves WhEloct, Kal mpoc Spay o’AXxvoveds nTNoE THY ceparny as ay KaTavorcwy. AaBov be apinmevoe MT pos TOV TaTépa, Kal KcabeConévep pera TOV pirwv 7 poo éBare. Jeaca-pevos 6€ Kal yvovs o ’Avtiyovos tov pév viov
“

458

406

PYRRHUS

him. Here he was wounded by a spear which pierced his breastplate—not a mortal, nor even a severe wound—and turned upon the man who had struck ° him, who was an Argive, not of illustrious birth, but the son of a poor old woman. His mother, like the rest of the women, was at this moment watching the battle from the house-top, and when she saw that her son was engaged in conflict with Pyrrhus, she was filled with distress in view of the danger to him, and lifting up a tile with both her hands threw it at Pyrrhus. It fell upon his head below his helmet and crushed the vertebrae at the base of his neck, so that his sight was blurred and his hands dropped the reins. Then he sank down from his horse and fell near the tomb of Licymnius,! unrecognised by most who saw him. But a certain Zopyrus, who was serving under Antigonus, and two or three others, ran up to him, saw who he was, and dragged him into a door-way just as he was beginning to recover from the blow. And when Zopyrus drew an Illyrian short-sword with which to cut off his head, Pyrrhus gave him a terrible look, so that Zopyrus was frightened ; his hands trembled, and yet he essayed the deed; but being full of alarm and confusion his blow did not fall true, but along the mouth and chin, so that it was only slowly and with difficulty that he severed the head. Presently what had happened was known to many, and Alcyoneus, running to the spot, asked for the head as if he would See whose it was. But when he had got it he rode away to his father, and cast it down before him as he sat among his friends. Antigonus, however, when he saw and recognised the head, drove his son

1 Cf. Pausanias, ii. 22, 8.

459

ce

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

? , a 4 4 ‘ “ ; ol

amnrace TH Baxtynpia Traiwy Kat Kadov évayn
\ 4 > AN A \ U 4
xai BapBapoy, avtos bY THY XAapmvda TpODEpLEVOS
: “ b) “
Tois Oupaci édaxpvoev, Avtiyovou Tov TamTrov
pvnobels Kal Anuntpiov tov matpos, oixeiwy wapaderypatwy eis TUXYNS peTABOANY.
Q fo) “~
5 Thy pév ody xeharnv nal to capa Tod Ivppou
9 a xoopnoas éxavoevy émei S€ 6 ‘Adxvoveds TO ‘EXr€v@ Tepituy@y TaTrewv@ Kal YAapmvdsoy ALTO dpmreyopéevp diravOpwrws évetvye kat TO TaTpi
, e
mpoanyuyev, av o Avtiyovos “ BeXtiova pep,” cimev, “@ Tat, TAUTAa THY TpoTépwY,' aX’ OvdE pov op0as TO hn TWeptereiv THv ec OHTA TavTHY, 7} padXov nas KaTaloyuUveEL TOUS KpaTety SoxodvTas.” 6 éx TovTov diroppovnadpevos Kal KoopHnoas TOV
” > >” ek A , ExXevov ameéorerrev evs “Harecpov, nai tots didors tov Ilvppov mpaws eveT UY XY avE Tov oTpatomédou Kal THs Suvdpews aos KUpLOS yevopeEvos.
1 xporépwy Bekker adopts the wxpdérepov of Muretus.

away, smiting him with his staff and calling him impious and barbarous ; then, covering his face with his cloak he burst into tears, calling to mind Antigonus his grandfather and Demetrius his father, who were examples in his own family of a reversal of fortune.

The head’and body of Pyrrhus, then, Antigonus caused to be adorned for burial and burned; and when Alcyoneus found Helenus in an abject state and wearing a paltry cloak, and spoke to him kindly ‘and brought him into the presence of his father, Antigonus was pleased with his conduct, and said: “‘ This is better, my son, than what thou didst before ; but not even now hast thou done well in allowing this clothing to remain, which is a disgrace the rather to us who are held to be the victors.’ Then, after showing kindness to Helemus and adorning his person, he sent him back to Epeirus, and he dealt mildly with the friends of Pyrrhus when he became - master of their camp and of their whole force.

.S

Digitized by Google

CAIUS MARIUS

rAIOZ MAPIOZ

I. Tatov Mapiov tpirov ovx EXomeY EvTTELY
ovopa, xabamep ovdé Koivrou Leptwpiov TOU KATATXOVTOS "T8npiar, ovde Aevxiov Moppiou
-od Kopuvdov éhovTos") yap "Ayaixos TouT@ ye THS Tpakews _emr@vupov yeyovev, ws 0 “Adpicavos Lenriwve cai o Maxedovixds MerérAw. e£ ob Kal padiora Tlocerdm@vios EdEyYeLV oleras TOUS TO TpiToy | ovopua ‘Popaiors KUpLoV elvat vopitovTas,
olov tov Kapthrov Kal TOV Mdpxedaov Kal Tov Karwva: yiverOar yap ay avovupous 1 tous amo Hovey TOV Sueiv 7 poo aryopevopevous. Aavdaver
b€ é éautov ott TOUT® TO NOYO TAAL avros aveyujmous Totel” Tas yuvaixas: oddemed yap yuvackd Tier au TOV ovopar ov TO mporon, éirep olerat Kuplos dvopa. ‘Popaiors Umapxew) Tocedavios.
Tov dé adAwy To pev KOLVOV GTO ouryyeveias, TOUS Topmnious kai tous Maddious Kal TOUS Kopyna-tous (Borep a av ‘Hpakreidas Tes elmo Kal Tedomidas), TovTO b¢ T poo nyopLeov ef émBérov pos Tas duces iH) TAS mpates i Ta TOU TH UATOS edn
Kal ™aOn Tie Ga, TOV Maxpivov eal TOV Toup-KovaTov Kal tov YvAXayv (olov éotiv o Myynpov 7
o I‘purros o KadnXivxos). eis pev ody Tatra
1 dy a dvwydpous Ziegler, after Schaefer : d&vwvupous. * wovet Bekker and Ziegler, after Coraés: mocetra:.

CAIUS MARIUS

I. Or a third name for Caius Marius we are ignorant, as we are in the case of Quintus Sertorius the subduer of Spain, and of Lucius Mummius the captor of Corinth ; for Mummius received the surname of Achaicus from his great exploit, as Scipio received that of Africanus, and Metellus that of Macedonicus. From this circumstance particularly Poseidonius thinks to confute those who hold that the third name is the Roman proper name, as, for instance; Camillus, Marcellus, or Cato; for if that were so, he says, then those with only two names would have had no proper name at all. But it escapes his notice that his own line of reasoning, if extended to women, robs them of their proper names; for no woman is given the first name, which Poseidonius thinks was the proper name among the Romans. Moreover, of the other two names, one was common to the whole family, as in the case of the Pompeii, the Manlii, or the Cornelii

(just as a Greek might speak of the Heracleidae or the Pelopidae), and the other was a cognomen or epithet, given with reference to their natures or their actions, or to their bodily appearances or defects, Macrinus, for example, or Torquatus, or Sulla (like the Greek Mnemon, Grypus, or Callinicus).!_ However,

1 The full name of a Roman citizen consisted of a praeno- men (the ‘‘ given,” or ‘‘ proper” name), a nomen designating his family or gens, and a cognomen, which was also heredi-ditary. Women rarely had a praenomen, or ‘‘ proper” name, but bore the family name only.

jmoAnras dSidwawy éemiyetpnoes 1) THS TuVNOetas avopata.
II. Tis 8€ dyrews tHs Maptouv ALOiwny etxova
4 3 ¢€ / A V4 ’ ,
ketpevnv év “PaBévvn tis Tadarias eeopcda
s = Y
wdvu Th Aeyouevyn Trepi TO 00s atpudvornts Kat
Tixpia mpeTovcayv. avdpwdns yap gdvcer Kai TONEMLKOS YEVOMEVOS, KAL OTPATLWTLKAS [LaAXOV 7)
TOALTLKHS Traldelas petadaBov, axpatov év tais
3 , \ \ Mv , \ 4 7
é£ouciais Tov Oupov oye. A€éyeTat SE wnTE ypadp-nie mand ® / , \ \
para pabeiy ‘EXAnvica pte yA@TTyH TpOS pNndev
e 4 a a A > V4 e
FAAnvids ypjcOar tov atrovdis eXouevwnv, ws
“A , 4 e e /
yeAolov ypaupata pavOavey wv ov diddcKxarot SovrAcvorev Evépors: peta 5é tov Sevtepov Opiap-
>. \ “A , , € \ Bov émi vaot twos Kabtepwmoe Oéas “EXAnviKas
4 b] \ , > \ \ , ,
TapexXwy, els TO Oéatpoy EAOwv Kai povoy KaSicas evOUs aTadXaynvat. WoTrep ovv Fevoxpate: TO
, 4 A \ 9 s
dirocopa cxvOpwtotépp Soxodvte TO HO0s eivat
modraKs elober Neyer o TIdatwv, “°O. paxdpre Elevoxpates, Ove rais Xapiow, obtws el tis Errecce Mdpiov Ovew tais “EXAnuixais Movoats kal
Xdpiow, ov‘ av éexmpeTrectatars oTpaTnyrass Kal
ToATelals apoppotatnyv éméOnne xopwvida, vd

Ovpov Kai dirapxias awpou Kal reoveEL@v arra-PNYOPHTwWY Els @poTaTOY Kal aypLwTaTOV yapas éEoxeiNas. TadTa peév ovdv eri TaY Tpakewy avTaY eVOvs Oewpeicbw.
III. Tevopevos 5€ yovéwy mavtatraci Bbokwr, avToupyav 5€ Kal TeviTwY, TATPOS MeV OMwVUpOU, 407

pntpos 6¢ Povrxuvias, owe tote. Twodw elde Kal in these matters the irregularity of custom furnishes many topics for discussion.

II. As for the personal appearance of Marius, we have seen a marble statue of him at Ravenna in Gaul, and it very well portrays the harshness and bitter- ness of character which are ascribed to him. For since he was naturally virile and fond of war, and since he received a training in military rather than in civil life, his temper was fierce when he came to exercise authority. Moreover, we are told that he never studied Greek literature, and never used the Greek language for any matter of real importance, thinking it ridiculous to study a literature the teachers of which were the subjects of another people ; and when, after his second triumph and at the consecration of some temple, he furnished the public with Greek spectacles, though he came into the theatre, he merely sat down, and at once went away. Accordingly, just as Plato was wont to say often to Xenocrates the philosopher, who had the reputation of being rather morose in his disposition, ‘‘ My good Xenocrates, sacrifice to the Graces,” so if Marius could have been persuaded to sacrifice to the Greek Muses and Graces, he would not have put the ugliest possible crown upon a most illustrious career in field and forum, nor have been driven by the blasts of passion, ill-timed ambition, and insatiable greed upon the shore of a most cruel and savage old age. However, his actual career shall at once bring this into clear view.

III. Born of parents who were altogether obscure —poor people who lived by the labour of their own hands (Marius was his father’s name, Fulcinia that of his mother), it was not till late that he saw the city

HH 2
fr

Tay év mode dtatptBav éyevoato, Tov dé adXov
, ra) ,
Ypovoy ev x@un Kippardtwou this Aprivns dtarrav
a) ,
elye, 1rpos tv doretov Kal yAadupov Biov aypor-

, , \ \ A 14 € ,
KoTépav, c@dpova dé Kai tais mandat ‘Popaiov
Tpopais éorxviavy. mpwrny é oTpateiay oTpa-
\ , >
Tevodpevos emt Kerti8npas, Ste Sxnriwv ’Adpt-
,
xavos Nopavtiay érodopKet, TOY oTpAaTHYOV OvK éXavOavev avdpeia THY adr véewy Stadépwr Kai
N \ A 4 e N A \
Thy petaBornv THs Svaitys, tv vio Tpydhs Kat TmoduTeAcias SuepOappévois ETirye Tois oTparev-pacw Oo LKnTiwv, evKor\wTaTAa mpoa bey ouevos.
Néyeras S€ Kal Tod€ptov avdpa avaoTas Kata-
“ 9 CY “ na \ n wv
Bane ev der tov atpatnyov. d10 Tals Te AAAAaLS
TponyeTo Tiwais UT’ avTOU, Kai ToTEe Aoyou peTa
A , “ A
Seirrvov éumecovTos umép atpatnyav, Kal Tay jTapovtwy évos elite GAnO@sS SiaTropynaavTos eEtTe Tpos noovny épomevov Tov Lentiwva iva 67
A b] n~
TotovTov EFer pet Exeivov nyewova Kal Tpoatdtny
n a“ a
0 ‘Pwpaiwy Shpuos, virepxataxetpévov tov Mapiou
“A ‘ e ,
TH Yelp TOY @mov npéua tratd~as o XKntiwv, ome Se aA » 8 ef >p rN @ © A Taya 6€ TrovTov, eimrev. ovTws evpuns Tv o pep.
J, “~ e A >) “A
éx perpaxiov davynvar péyas, o 5€ amo THs apyns
TO TEAOS VOCAL.
IV. Tov & otv Mapiov iro tavrns Aéyerae
4, A A (4 e ‘ , : 4
padtota THS hwvis, @owep UTO Oeias KANSOVOS,
A “A N
érrapOévra Tais éXtricly OpenoaLt TpPOS THY TrOALi" lA
Telav, Kal Tuxety Snwapyias Kextrliov MetédXov 468

CAIUS MARIUS

or got a taste of city ways. Inthe meantime he lived at Cirrhaeaton,} a village in the territory of Arpinum, in a manner that was quite rude when compared with the polished life of a city, but temperate, and in harmony with the rearing which the ancient Romans gave their. children. His first service as a soldier was in a campaign against the Celtiberians, when Scipio Africanus was besieging Numantia,? and he attracted the notice of his general’ by excelling the other young men in bravery, and by his very. cheerful acceptance of the changed regimen which | Scipio introduced into his army when it was spoiled by luxury and extravagance. It is said, too, that he -encountered‘and laid low an enemy in the sight of his general. Therefore he was advanced by his commander to’ many honours; and once, when the talk after supper had to do with generals, and one of the company (either because he really wished to know or merely sought to please) asked Scipio where the Roman people would find any such chieftain and leader to follow him, Scipio, gently tapping Marius on the shoulder as he reclined next him, said : “Here, perhaps.” So gifted by nature were both men ; the one in showing himself great while still a young man, and the other in discerning the end from the beginning.

IV. So, then, Marius, filled with high hopes, we are told, by this speech of Scipio in particular, as if . it were a divine utterance in prophecy, set out upon a political career, and’ was made tribune of the people? with the assistance of Caecilius Metellus, of 1 Probably a corruption for Cereatae.

2 134-133 B.C.
7 In 119 B.c., at the age of thirty-eight.

oTrovoaTaVTOS, OV TOV oixov €& a apxijs Kat TAT po-Dev eOeparrevev. év 0€ TH Snuapxia vomoV Tia Tept Yndodpopias ypadovros avTov Soxodvra TOV
wat ay aparpetaOau THY qept Tas Kpioes ioxuy, EVLT TAMEVOS Korras 6 0 UTraToS TUVETTELTE tTnv Bov-
ANY TO Lev vom paxesBau, Tov dé Mdpvoy Kanetv
Noryov udéEovta. Kal Tob Soypiaros ToUTOU ypa-PevTos eioeAOwy exeivos ov ETrabe veov Taos a amo pndevos AaptTrpovd mpoeAnrAVOOTOS ApTL Mpos THY “qontTelav, adr’ éaut@ SLd0vs Hon hpoveivy HrALKov ai meTéTrerta mpagets édwxar, yreirnoe tov Kor-Tav amr ake els TO Seo wor nptov, éb 7) Stayparpere
TO Soypa. tov 5é€ mpos MéteAdov | TpaTropevov Kat
qepnv EpwTavTos, MéreAXos pev dvaoras oupnyopel T@ UTrdTo, Mapuos dé TOV vmNpeTNY peta.
meuwdpevos ewbev exédevev amdyev avtov Tov MérteAXov eis TO Seo wT npLov. éxeivou O€ Tovs adXovs €7LKANOUMEVOU Onpapxous éBonBet pev ovdeis, 7 n 6€ obyKANTOS eiEaca Tponkaro TO) Soya.
kal Nautpos éEeXdaas o Mapuos eis to TAHROOS
éxupwoe tov vopov, Sofas akapumros péev elvat ™ pos poBor, atpemros 6€ um aidsods, decvos Sé
KATA THS Bovhijs aviotacbat xa pere TOD Toho Onpaywyov. ou iy adda TAUTHY jpev TAYEDS

petéa tha ev éTEp@ TOMTEU WATE thy do€av. vopov yap eadepopévov Tept ciTov Svavopiis Tots TOM TaLs evavtiabels éppwueveotata Kat Kparyaas, els TO loov éavTov Kxatéotynoe TH TU Tos app orépous @S pnoeTépors Tapa To ovpdépov

Xapelopevos.
V. Mera 6é€ thy Snpuapxiav aryopavopiay THY peitova trapnyyetre. Svo ydp eiot takes aryo-470 whose house he had always been an hereditary adherent. While serving as tribune he introduced a --~ law concerning the mode of voting, which, as it was' thought, would lessen the power of the nobles in judicial cases; whereupon Cotta the consul opposed him and persuaded the senate to contest the law, and to summon Marius before it to explain his pro- _ cedure. The senate voted to do this, and Marius appeared before it. He did not, however, behave like a young man who had just entered political life without any brilliant services behind him, but assumed at once the assurance which his subsequent achievements gave him, and threatened to hale Cotta off to prison unless he had the vote rescinded. Cotta then turned to Metellus and asked him to express his opinion, and Metellus, rising in his 'place, concurred with the consul; but Marius called in the officer and ordered him to conduct Metellus himself to prison. Metellus appealed to the other tribunes, but none of them came to his support, so the senate gave way and rescinded its vote. Marius therefore came forth in triumph to the people and got them to ratify his law. Men now thought him superior to fear, unmoved by respect of persons, and a formidable champion of the people in opposition to the senate. However, this opinion was quickly modified by another political procedure of his. For when a law was introduced providing for the distribution of grain to the citizens, he opposed it most strenuously and carried the day, thereby winning for himself an equal place in the esteem of both parties as a man who favoured neither at the expense of the general good.

V. After his tribuneship, he became a candidate for the higher aedileship, For there are two classes pavouiav, 7 péev ato Tav didpwy tav ayKu-

,
NoTrodwy, ef @yv KabeCouevoe ypnpartilovor,

A a b]
éyovoa Tovvopa TIS apyns, THY 8 Umodeectépav Snpwotixny Kkarovow. Grav dé Tovs évTipoTépous
A , \ A
EXwvTal Tept TMV ETENwWY TAY THY Hdov Aap-° \ 4 Bavovowv. was otv o Mapios havepos hv Nectropevos év éxeivyn, TaXU peTacTas avdis Aree THY éTépav.
’ \ 2: \ 2 > 4 \
Sofas b€ Opacus eivat kai avOddns amétuye Kat \ > e , a AY 9 J A Suow év nuépa pad wepimecwv arrotevéectv, 6
” wv > \ \ e / “ pndels Erradev Ardross, oV5E pixpov UdHKato TOD ppovnpatos, totepov 5é ov TOAA@ oTpaTnyiay
‘ > / 7 2 a ” \
peTeAOwy Oriyov édénoev éxtrecciv, Exyatos bé Tavrwv avayopevbels Sinn Exye Sexac pov.
é ,
Mandiora dé broiav mapéoxye Kacotov Xa-
, > 7 > A\ > A A ,
Baxwvos otKérns ofOels évtos tav Spuddxtay
a / \ , e DS
avapepsywéevos Tots pépovar Tas wndous’ oO yap
A a“ /
LaBaxwv jv éraipos év trois padtota Mapiov.
\ S a e \ a A ” A \ KrANOels odv OUTOS UO ToY SixacTaY Epyn Sta TO n , e \ > A N N
Kkabpa Sipnoas bdwp uypov aitjoat Kat Tov
/ a oixérny éxovTa ToTnplov eizedAOeivy pos avTor, 9 9 3 \ v , t N 9 e \
eit evOUS olyecOat TLovTos. ovTOS peVv OdVY UTFO
“A \ A a a a“
TOV peTa TAVTA Tinta e&érEecve THS BovA‘s,
? , 3 aA na 4 A A AY
émuTnoetos elvar traQety tovTo Sofas 7 Sta THY 4, A N \ > , 9 AY \ \
Wevdouaptupiav 7 Sta THY dxpaciav: émi 5é Tov Mapuov cai Mdios “Epéviios paptus eiaaxPeis ovn
épn TdaTploy civat KaTapapTupely TEAAT@V, d\AA TOV vosov adiévat tavTns THS avayKns TOUS Tat pwvas (oUTwWS yap ot ‘Pwuaios Tovs TpooTaTas 472

of aediles, one taking its name of " curule"' from the chairs with curving feet on which the magistrates sit in the exercise of their functions, the other, and the inferior, being called " plebeian.'' When the superior aediles have been elected, the people cast a second vote for the others. Accordingly, when it was clear that Marius was losing his election to the higher office, he immediately changed his tactics and applied for the other. But men thought him bold and obstinate, and he was defeated ; nevertheless, al- though he had met with two failures in one day,a thing which had never happened to any candidate before, he did not lower his assurance in the least, but not long afterwards becante a candidate for the praetorship + and narrowly missed defeat; he was returned last of all, and was prosecuted for bribery. Suspicion was chiefly aroused by the sight of a ser- vant of Cassius Sabaco inside the palings among the voters ; for Sabaco was an especial friend of Marius. Sabaco was therefore summoned before the court, and testified that the heat had made him so thirsty that he had called for cold water, and that his servant had come in to him with a cup, and had then at once gone away after his master had drunk. Sabaco, how- ever, was expelled from the senate by the censors of the next year, and it was thought that he deserved this punishment, either because he had given false testimony, or because of his intemperance. But Caius Herennius also was brought in as a witness against Marius, and pleaded that it was contrary to estab- lished usage for patrons (the Roman term for our representatives at law) to bear witness against clients, and that the law relieved them of this necessity ; and

1 In 115 B.c.

Kanovct), Tov © 'Epevviov oikou TOUS Mapiou
yoveis kat Madpuov avrov é& axis yeyovevar mehadTas. amrodeEapevwv 5é THY aTroppna tv THS papTtupias TOV Sicacrey avTos a avreimev O Mdpuos Wpos Tov 'Epévviov @s, OTE TpPWTOY adpxov avn-yopevn, Tov mwedxatnv éxBeRnxws: Srep Hv ov TavTanacw anrnbes. dpxn yap ov Taoca TOV ve wel mpooTarny aTaANGO TEL TOUS TuxXovTas avTOUS kal yévos, GND' a TOV dyxuroroba Oippov 0 vO [10S didwatv. ov pny addra Tals Tporass 7 pe pats €v TH dixn KAKOS TOdTTWV Oo Mapvos wal Xarerrois XPwpevos TOUS dixactais, TH TeAEUTALa Taparoyws amépuyey iowy tav >Andwy yevo-pévov.

VI. "Ep pev ow TH orpatnyia HET pis err auvoupevov éauTov Taper xe. peta, é Tv oT patnylay KANP@ AaBov THY exTOS TAnplav eyerau xabapar AnaTnpiov THY érrapyiav av7}wepov ovoav ére Tois Otc pois Kal Onpisdn, Kal TO Ano reverv ovme TOTE trav "lBnpwv ouxt nadia Tov myou-weve. év &¢ Th ToALTELa YEvopevos ovK elyev

ouTe TOUTOV ovTe Aovyov, ols 7 MYOV | ol TOTE padiora
Tepe wevoL TOV Ofpov. auTHy dé THY avdtaow Tov Ppovnwaros Kal TO Tepl ToUs movous évdehexes auTov Kai TO) SnworiKov THs Staitns év tet omToven TiBenéevwv TOY TrOAT@Y NUEdVETO TH TLL Tpos
duvapiv, Bote Kal ydpov yhyas AapTpov oixias émipavods THs Katodpov ‘lovAlav, Hs mv aden-gidods Kaicap o Xpavous DaTepov ‘Po paior pérye-TOS YEVOMEVOS Kal TL Kar’ olKelornTa fnrt\ooas Mdpuop, ws év Tots epi éxeivou yéypamrat.
474

not only the parents of Marius but Marius himself had originally ‘been clients of the house of the Herennii. The jurors accepted this plea in avoidance of testimony, but Marius himself contradicted Herennius, declaring that as soon as he had been elected to his magistracy he had ceased to be a client; which was not altogether true. For it is not every magistracy that frees its occupants {as well as their posterity) from their relations to a patron, but only that to which the law assigns the curule chair. However, although during the first days of the trial Marius fared badly and found the jurors severe towards him, on the last day, contrary to all expectation, there was a tie vote and he was acquitted.

VI. Well, then, for his praetorship Marius got only moderate commendation, After his praetorship, however, the province of Farther Spain was allotted to him, and here he is said to have cleared away the robbers, although the province was still uncivilized in its customs and in a savage state, and robbery was at that time still considered a most honourable occu- pation by the Spaniards. But when he returned to political life, he had neither wealth nor eloquence, with which the magnates of the time used to influence the people. Still, the very intensity of his assurance, his indefatigable labours, and his plain and simple way of living, won him a certain popularity among his fellow citizens, and his honours brought him increasing\influence, so that he married into the illustrious family of the Caesars and became the husband of Julia, who was the aunt of that Caesar who in after times became greatest among the Romans, and in some degree, because of his relationship, made Marius his example, as I have stated in his Life.!

1 See the Caesar, v. 1 f.
475

3 Te dé Mapio cal cwdpocivny paptupoicr Kai
4 a \ \ \ ,
Kaptepiav, Hs Seiya Kal TO TeEpl THY YEeLpoupyiav
éotiv. i€tav yap, ws Eorxe, peyddXwy avarrews
\
dudw Ta GKéAn yeyovws Kal THY dpop-
Ta N ~
gdiav ducyepaivwy éyvw tapacyel éavtov TO

iatp@’ Kal twapéoyey adetos Oatepov oKéXos, + O\ \ + QA 4 > \ “ “ ovdev xivnbeis ovdé otevdEas, Adda KabecTaTL TO TpocwnT@ Kal peta aiwmrns vrepBorus Tivas
” A A 2
dryndovwy év Tais Touats avacyopuevros. tov §
A 4
taTpov peTiovTos emit Oarepov ovKéte Tapécye, dycas ‘opayv to émavopOwpa Ths adryndovos ovK
a€vov.
VII. ’Enet 5€ Kextdsos Méreddros arrodery eis 409 \ 9
emt tov kata louyoupOa todepov itratos otpa-N > tA > 4 \ 4
tnyos ets AuBunv émnyayeto tpecBeuvtnvy Mapuov, évrav0a mpdkewv peydrwy kai AauTpaV ayovwy
\ , .
émidaBopevos TO wev avéery Tov MéteAXOv, WotrEp
.Y 4 n~ ot AoLTrol, Kal TroNtTEvVedOaL Trpos éxeivoV claceE
yaipev: uaktav dé ovy ro MerédXov KexaArjo bas
4 N a mpeaBevtns, uTo o€ THS TUXNS Els EdpUéaTAaTOY
‘ ¢ A : Kalpov opov Kal péytoTov eiadyecOat mpakewy
4 A
2 Oéatpov, éemedetxvuTo Tacay avdpayabiav. Kai
\ a / A a
TOAAG TOU TrOAéuou SucyepH HépovTos ovTE TAV
\ , e a A
eyadwv TiVa TOVwWY VIroTpécas OUTE TAY LLiKPaDV
’ , > \ N N ¢ , > ,
atraEiwaas, GNA TOUS MeV OmoTipmous evBouMa \ i a : , e , kal mpovog Tod cuppépovtos vmepBadrAopevos,
N \ , e \ ,
mpos S€ TOUS oTpaTLwTas UTép eEvTEAELAS Kal
, 6 , v7 v7 \
KapTEplas OlaptdrAwmEevos EUVOLaAY eae TrOAAHY
> “A oe A
3 Tap a@uTois. OAWS Ev yap EoLKE TOU KapveLY
476

CAIUS MARIUS

There is testimony both to the temperance of Marius, and also to his fortitude, of which his be- haviour under a surgical operation is a proof. He was afflicted in both legs, as it would appear, with varicose veins, and as he disliked the deformity, he resolved to put himself into the physician's hands. Refusing to be bound, he presented to him one leg, and then, without a motion or a groan, but with a steadfast countenance and in silence, endured incred- ible pain under the knife. When, however, the physician was proceeding to treat the other leg, Marius would suffer him no further, declaring that he saw the cure to be not worth the pain.

. VIE. When Caecilius Metellus the. consul was ap- pointed commander-in-chief for the war against Jugurtha,! he took Marius with him to Africa in the capacity of legate. Here, in essaying great exploits and brilliant struggles, Marius was not careful, like the rest, to enhance the glory of Metellus and conduct himself in his interests; and deeming that he had not so much been called by Metellus to the office of legate as he was being introduced by Fortune into a most favourable opportunity as well as a most spacious theatre for exploits, he made a display of every sort of bravery. And though the war brought many hardships, he neither shunned any great labour, nor disdained any that were small, but surpassed the officers of his own rank in giving good counsel and foreseeing what was advantageous, and vied with the common soldiers in frugality and endurance, thereby winning much goodwill among them. For as a general thing it would seem that every man finds

1 In 109 B.c.

e ,
EXAaCTO TapapvOia TO-cUyKapVOY Exovaiws elvat: Soxei yap adarpeivy thy avayknv: 'Adtotov be
e , Pwpaio Béaya otpatiatn otpatnyos éobiwy év
N " l4
Owes KoLvoY apTtov 7 KaTaKeipevos él attBdados
a \ EVTEAOUS 7 TeEpL Tadpeiav TiVa Kal yapdKwoLv
/ \ n
Epyou cuveparTouevos. ov yap oUTws TOUS TLLAS
4
Kal ypnudtov peradidovras as Tous Tovouv kal KLVOUVOU peTahapBavovras 1 nryepwovas Oavpdlovow, ava Haddov ayaT act TaY pabupety ET lT peTrov-Twv TOUS supTovel EOéXoOVTAS,
T A , aA € M 4 \ } a ,
4 QUTQA TAVTA TOLWY O Maplos KaL OLA TOUTwWY
Tovs aTpaTiwotas Snpaywyav Tay mev évérrrANTE
\ y \ \ \ ¢h' > 7 \
Thv AtBonv, tayo dé THv 'Pwpny, ovopatos Kal
d0€ns, THY amo aTpatotrédou Tois oiKot ypadov-

TOV WS OUK éEaTL TEpas OVSE aTradXaAyN TOU TpdS tov BapBapov troréuou wn diov Maprov éXopévors vTatov.
VIII. ’Ed@’ ofs 4X0 Hv o MéteAXos ayOopevos.
4 \ b \ > 7f XN \ b | /
padiata € avtov nviace TO Tepi ToupmiAduoy.
oUTOS yap 0 avnp AY pev ex Tratépwy Eévos TO MeréAA@ Kal ToTe THY eri TOY TeExTOVwWY ExwV
apxynv cuvertpatreve: gpovpav 6é Bayav, modu peyadArnv, kal TO pndev adixety TOs évoiKovrTas, G\rAa paws Kal diravOparws avtois mpocpépecOar mia tevor, Erabev btroyxeiptos Tots TrONE-
b] 4
pots yevouevos. trapedéEavto yap Tov louvyoupbay,
A a
tov 6€ Toupmidrtov ovdey noixnoav, ad\rAa oT@ov
2 éEartnodpevon Sinjxav. éEoxev ovv aitiay mpo-
, \ \ e 4 n , 4
Socias: xai trapwv o Madpios TH xpioes cUpBouros 478

CAIUS MARIUS

solace for his labours in seeing another voluntarily share those labours; this seems to take away the element of compulsion; and it is a most agreeable spectacle for a Roman soldier when he sees a general eating common bread in public, or sleeping on a simple pallet, or taking a hand in the construction of some trench or palisade. For they have not so much admiration for those leaders who share honour and riches with them as for those who take part in their toils and dangers, but have more affection for those who are willing to join in their toils than for those who permit them to ead an easy life.

By doing all these things and thereby winning the hearts of the soldiers, Marius soon filled Africa, and soon filled Rome, with his name and fame, and men in the camp wrote to those at home that there would be no end or cessation of the war against the Barbarian unless they chose Caius Marius consul.

VIII. At all this Metellus was evidently displeased. But it was the affair of Turpillius that most vexed him. This Turpillius was an hereditary guest-friend of Metellus, and at this time was serving in his army as chief of engineers. But he was put in charge of Vaga, a large city, and because he relied for safety on his doing the inhabitants no wrong, but rather treating them with kindness and humanity, he un- awares came into the power of the enemy; for they admitted Jugurtha into their city. Still, they did Turpillius no harm, but obtained his release and sent him away safe and sound. Accordingly, a charge of treachery was brought against him; and Marius, who was a member of the council which tried the case,

> » , e \ a \ A ” ,

auTOS TE Ol TrLKpOS RY Kal TOY GAXwV TrapwEUVE ‘ , C4 A \ 4
TOUS wWwAELoTOUS, WaTEe aKkovTa Tov Meérerdov
b] A / , a exBiracOnvar kal xataWndicacbat Oavatov tod bd , > %wH 7 \ A > #0 a avO porrrov. per’ Odtyov dé THs altias peudois paveions, ol ev GAXoL guvnxGovto T@ Merédrw Bapéws pépovre, Mdptos be Xaipov Kal TOLOUMEVOS idtov TO Epryov ovK NIXVVETO Déryerv meptioy @S auros ein TpoaTeTpLupevos GXaoTopa T@ MerérAXr@ FevoxTovov.
"Ex TovTov pavepas arnxGavorto Kab Aéyerat MOTE TOU Mapiov mapovtos olov epuBpilov) MéreAAos elTreiy, < ay 5) KaTahiTray LAS, @ yevvaie, meiv em oixou davon Kal maparyyendew UTaTElav; ov yap aya ng ets, dv TOMB Ta.
TOUT@ TUVUTATEVTNS ; ap be O mais TOTE Tou MeréAXov mavtdract petpaxtov. ov pny adda tod Mapiov oTrovdalovtos adeOfvat, Todas avaBoras Tong dpevos, ert Swdexa ReutTropéevwy npepav eTl THY TaV UIraTtwy avabe—iv, adynKev

> , e \ \ b \ / \ > A avTov. oO bé TOMMY G76 oTpatomédov Thy él Odraccav eis "“Itvaeny o60n 7) ‘Hépas duct Kal (ua vuKth TUVENOY é0ve T™ po Tov mob. Kal heyeTa Tov "wave ELITELY OS dmriaTous Tivas TO peyeOos Kat KpelTTovas édridos amrdons evrpakias ™ po-gaivot ™@ Mapio to Sarpoviov. o &€ TOUTOLS érrapbels avnxOn. kal TO TENaYOS TETAPTALOS oUpi@ TrvEvpPAaTL mepda'as avrtiKa, TE TO. Sn T0-Pewvos Oh9n, Kal mpoayGels U UTrO TLVOS TOV Snudp-

NOV Els TO TAHGOS emt Todas kara Too Meréahou 6a Borats NTELTO THY apxny, Umea xvoupevos
n xtevetv CaovTa AnecOat Tov ‘Jouvyoupbav.
480

410

CAIUS MARIUS

was himself bitter, and exasperated most of the others against the accused, so that Metellus was reluctantly forced to pass sentence of death upon him. After a short time, however, the charge was found to be false, and almost everybody sympathized with Metellus in his grief; but Marius, full of joy and claiming the condemnation as his own work, was not ashamed to go about saying that he had fastened upon the path of Metellus a daemon who ‘would avenge the murder of a guest-friend.

In consequence of this there was open enmity be- tween the two men; and we are told that on one occasion when Marius was present Metellus said to him as if in mockery: ‘“ Dost thou purpose to leave us, my good Sir, and sail for home, and stand for the consulship? Pray will it not satisfy thee to be fellow-consul with this my son?’’ Now the son of Metellus was at this time a mere stripling. However, Marius was eager to be dismissed, and so, after making many postponements, and when only twelve days re- mained before the election of consuls, Metellus dis- missed him. Marius accomplished the long journey from the camp to Utica and the sea in two days and one night, and offered sacrifice before he sailed. And the seer is said to have told him that the Deity revealed for Marius successes that were of incredible magnitude and beyond his every expectation. Elated by this prophecy he put to sea. In three days he crossed the sea with a favouring wind, and was at once welcomed gladly by the populace,and after being introduced to the assembly by one of the tribunes, he first made many slanderous charges against Metellus, and then asked for the consulship, promising that he would either kill Jugurtha or take him alive.

481
VOL. IX. II
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

IX. "AvayopevOeis S€ Aapmrpas evOvs éotpa-TOAOYEL, TAP TOV VOLOY Kal THY cUYnOELaY TrONDY Tov arropov kal pavrov'! Kataypaday, TaV Tpoalev nyepovey ov tpocbexopévwy Tovs ToLovTOUS,
ann, domep AXXO TL TOV Kariv, Ta OTAa here TUmhis Tots akios vEewovTar, evexupov THY ovciay:
éxadotou TiOévat Soxobyros. ov pnv tavTd ye udrdota StéBare tov Madpiov, adr’ of Rovyos

“A v e , \ oo ‘\ ,
Opaceis OvTES bmepowig Kal bBpet TOUS mpw@rous
A “A “A e
éXvtrovy, axvAGY Te Bo@VTOS aUTOU THY UTTaTELaV

n aA n , ,
héper Oar Tis TOV EvyEevOY Kal TAOVOLWY padakias, Kal Tpavpacwy oiKelots Tpds TOV SHwov, ov pynpacL vexp@v ovdé addXoTpials eixoot veavieverOat.
ToAAaKis 6€ Kal ToUs atuynoavtas év ALtBun
A A \ , A \ 9
oTpatnyous, TovTo wéev Bnotiav, tovTo && ’AA-Bivov, avOp@Trous oixwr pev érripaver, avtors Sé
4 , b / A > b] 4
TUYn odparévtas, atrodéuous Kal 8: aetpiav TraicavtTas ovopatwv, érurOaveto TOV TapoVYTwY el fy) KaL TOUS exEi\vwY OlovTaL TpOoyOVOUS avT@ “ WW , > , b]
faAXop av cvEacOat TapamAncious exyovous aTro-ALTrety, Gre dn unde avTous be’ evyéverav, AAN OT apeTns Kal Karov Epywv éevdokous yevopévous.
Tavita 5é ov Kevas ovde aralovixads ErXeyev ovde patny amexyOdavecOar tois dSuvatois Bovdopevos, 9 2 e a > 7 eg , A a GAN’ 0 OHpos avTov, nOopEevos Te TH BoVAH Tpo-
, / / A
moraxitopevn kai Noyou KopTr~@ BeTpaw ael ppo-vnpatos péyeOos, eEexovdite, cal cvveEdppa Hn 1 gatdoy van Herwerden: So0vAop.

IX. He was triumphantly elected,! and at once began to levy troops. Contrary to law and custom ° he enlisted many a poor and insignificant man, al- though former commanders had not accepted such persons, but bestowed arms, just as they would any other honour, only on those whose property assessment made them worthy to receive these, each-soldier being supposed to put his substance in pledge to the state. It was not this, however, that brought most odium upon Marius, but the boldly insolent and arrogant speeches with which he vexed the nobles, crying out that he had carried off the consulship as spoil from the effeminacy of the rich and well-born, and that he . had wounds upon his own person with which to vaunt himself before the people, not monuments of the dead nor likenesses of other men. Often, too, he would mention by name the generals in Africa who had been unsuccessful, now Bestia, and now Albinus, men of illustrious houses indeed, but unfortunate themselves, and unwarlike, who had met with disaster through lack of experience; and he would ask his audience if they did not think that the ancestors of these men would have much preferred to leave de- scendants like himself, since they themselves had been made illustrious, not by their noble birth, but by their valour and noble deeds. Such talk was not mere empty boasting, nor was his desire to make himself hated by the nobility without purpose ; indeed the people, who were delighted to have the senate insulted and always measured the greatness of a man's spirit by the boastfulness of his speech, encouraged him, and incited him not to spare

1 For the year 107 B.c., at the age of fifty.

peideoOar trav akioroywv, yapilopevov ois "ToANots.
X. 'Os b€ SeémrAevcev els AtBunv, MéreAXos
pev HTT@OY TOU pOovov Yevopevos, Kal meprTabay
OTL, KATELPYAGHEVOD ° TOV TONE MOV avrov Kai pndev Umrohovtrov i) TO cpa Tob "louyoupOa AaBeiy EXOVTOS, cee Mapuos em Tov orepavov kal Tov
OpiauBor, é éx Tips pos. éxetvov axapratias nugn-HEvos, ovy Uméuetvey eis TO AUTO ouvenbeiv, GNX' aUuTos pev umelexapnce, "PouvtiAsos bé Td or pa-Tevpa T@ Mapio Tapedwxe, peo Bevtis yeyovas tov MeréAAov. «al TEpLyrnGE TLS VEMETUS ev Te TENEL TOY mpakewy Mapvov: agnpcOn yap TO Zura THY Tou Kat opOdparos Sofav, @s UT' éxetvou Méteddos: Sv TpoTrov dé, adnynaopar Bpaxéos, emel Ta Kal' éxactov padrXov ey Tots Tmept Lwrra yéypanrat.
OKYOS 0 TOY aVw BapBépov Bacirevs 7 ty Tev-Pepds 'lovyovp0a, nat ToNELOYTL pév ov Tavu Te ovAhap avery edoxet, mpoBarropevos avrov THY amariay, Kat TI abinaw Sedouxas: émrel 5é hev-yov kal wAavopeEvos exelvov un' avaryKns eVero TOV énmridcov TedevTatov Kal KaTipe 7 pos auron, aicyivn pmadXov as iMéTny Hn Ov edvotav vrro-deEduevos dua XeLpos elye, pavepas per Uméep
avrod TAPALTOULEVOS Mapuov Kal ypadwv @S OUK
av éxdon Kai mappyoralopevos, xkpuda bé€ Bov-Aevov mt podociay eq auT@, wal ET OLTFEMTEOLEVOS Aevxcov LwAXav, Tapiav ev ovta Mapiou, xpr-aipov Oé TO Bony yevEVTLEVOV emt oTpareias.
as 5& mictevcas avéBn mpos avTov 6 SvAXas, 484

men of high repute if he wished to please the multitude.

X. When he had crossed to Africa, Metellus, now become a victim of jealousy, and vexed because, after he had brought the war to an end and had nothing further to do except to-seize the person of Jugurtha, Marius was coming to enjoy the crown and the triumph,—a man whose ingratitude towards his benefactor had raised him to power,—would not consent to meet him, but privately left the country while Rutilius, who had become his legate, handed over the army to Marius. And in the end a retribution fell upon Marius; for Sulla robbed him of the glory of his success, as Marius had robbed Metellus. How this came to pass, I will narrate briefly, since the details are given more at length in my Life of Sulla.!

Bocchus, the king of the Barbarians in the interior, was a son-in-law of Jugurtha, and apparently gave him little or no assistance in his war, alleging his faithlessness as an excuse, and fearing the growth of his power. But when Jugurtha in his flight and ‘wandering felt compelled to make him his last hope and sought haven with him, Bocchus received him, more out of regard for his position as a suppliant than from goodwill, and kept him in his hands. So far as his open acts were concerned, Bocchus entreated Marius in behalf of his father-in- law, writing that he would not give him up and assuming a bold tone; but secretly he planned to betray him, and sent for Lucius Sulla, who was quaestor for Marius and had been of some service to Bocchus during the campaign. But when Sulla had come to him in all confidence,

1 Chapter iii.

e

éoxe pep TLS Tpom yveouns Kar peTavora TOV BapBapoyr, npepas TE TUXVAS SunvéxOn T@ hoya uP, Bovrevopevos 7) mapa odvat TOV ‘lovyoupGay i) pn dé Tov {vAAaY apeivar: TéXos 5€ THY TrpoTépay Kupecas mpodociay, évexeipice TH LUAAG CovTA ‘Tov ‘louyoupOav.

| Kai TOUTO ™pw@Tov Umipgev autos oréppwa THS _aynnéotou Kal xahenijs exeivns TTATEWS, 7) ptK-pov édénaev avatpeyat TY “Pony. WOAXOL yap éBovXovto Tob Lwrra TO Epyov elvat TO Mapip — POovobvtes, autos TE 2wAdas oppayioa Tong d-

HEVOS epoper yrugnpy é exovcay éyxerpelopevor U vo
Tob Boxyou TOV ‘lovyoupOav EavT@. Ka TAUTH
XPwmevos adel SueTéder Prdorepov avdpa cal mpos
Kowwoviay S0Ens aryvaova Kat dvcepty épebifor TOV Mapuor, é evaryovT@v padiata TOY éxOpav TOV éxelvon, Kal Ta pep mpoTa Tov Tohé wou eat peytora ™@ MerédA@, Ta 8 éoyata Kal TO Tépas avTov {vANa mpootiBevtwn, QS TavaaiTo Gavpavwv xal mpocéywv exeivp padiota TavT@V oO d7uos.
XI. Taxd pévtoe tov POovov tovTov Kat Ta pion Kal TAS d:aBodas aed Kebace TOU Mapiou Kal peTéaTnoev 0 KATATXOY THD Iradlav GTO THS
éomrépas Kivduvos, & dpa T@ Tparov év y pela peyddou oTparnyod D yevéo Oar Kai TeptaxéacOa THY TONY @ Xpwmevn xuBepyntn drapev§éras KAvSwva TOAEpov TocoUToP, ovdevos dvacxopevov TOY a0 ryévous peydAwpy 7 mhovaiwy OlKw@D emt TAS vTa-TLKAS KATLOVTOV apxarpecias, ard QTOVTa TOV Mdpuop a avaryopeva dvTwv. aptt yap gibi he avtots THs ‘lovyoup8a curd ews ai epi
. 486

41)

CAIUS MARIUS

the Barbarian experienced a change of heart and felt repentant, and for many days wavered in his plans, deliberating whether to surrender Jugurtha or to hold Sulla also a prisoner. Finally however, he decided upon his first plan of treachery, and put Jugurtha alive into the hands of Sulla.

This was the first seed of that bitter and incurable ‘hatred between Marius and Sulla, which nearly brought Rome to ruin. For many wished Sulla to have the glory of the affair because they hated Mar- ius, and Sulla himself had aseal-ring made, which he used to wear, on which was engraved the surrender — of Jugurtha to him by Bocchus. By constantly using this ring Sulla provoked Marius, who was an ambitious man, loath to share his glory with another, and quarrelsome. And the enemies of Marius gave Sulla most encouragement, by attributing the first and greatest successes of the war to Metellus, but the last, and the termination of it, to Sulla, that so the people might cease admiring Marius and givipg him their chief allegiance.

XI. Soon, however, all this envy and hatred and slander of Marius was removed and dissipated by the peril which threatened Italy from the west, as soon as the state felt the need of a great general and looked about for a helmsman whom she might employ to save her from so great a deluge of war. Then the people would have nothing to do with any- one of high birth or of a wealthy house who offered himself at the consular elections, but proclaimed Marius consul! in spite of his-absence from the city. -For no sooner had word been brought to the people of the capture of J ugurtha than the

1 For the year 104 B.c.

TOVOV Kal KipBpov Pijpat TPOTEMLTTOV, ATLOTLAY
pev €v apxX7 mapac Xovo at TraBous TE Kal pouns TOY eTEepYo“evwy oTpaTwv, VaTEpoy Oé THs adn-Oeias Urodcéotepar paveicar. pupiddes peéev yap
ai waXLwor TPLdKovTAa GUY STAOLs EexwpoUY, SyAOL 5é traidwy Kai yuvatcay €dyYovTO TOAA@ TAEioUS ouprreprayer Oa, yns xpnovres) Opérres toaod-Tov TAHGos, Kai TroAewy ev als idpvOévTes Bi@cov-
Tat, Kabdtep mpo avtav éruvOavovto KeXrrtovs
Ths “Itadias THY apiorny Katacxeiy Tuppyvav 9 / b \ \ \ > J A a° apehopevovs. avToL pev yap apekig Th mpos ETEpoUS, pNKEL TE YWPAS HY EeTHNOOD, HYyVvooUVTO, tives dvtes avOpwrwy 7 ToOEv opunOévtes HoTEp végos éwrécotev Varatia cai' Iradia. cal udduora
pev eixalovto Veppavixa yévn Trav KaOnKovtov émt Tov Popetov w@keavov eivar Tois- weyéBect TaV
TWMATWOV KALTH KapoTOTHTL TOV OppaTov, cal Ore
KiwBpous érovoudafover Teppavol tovs AnoTas.
Eiot Sé of trav KeAtixny da Babos yepas Kal péyeOos aro THs €Ew Oardoons Kal Tov bTapKTiov KAuLaTwOY Tpos HALoY dvicyovTa KaTa THY
Maariv émiatpéhovoav antecbat ths Tlovrixys ZaxvOias A€youvct, KaxeiOev ta yévn peputyOa.
tovtous éEavacravtas ovK éx plas opps ovde TUVEXOS, ANAG ETOUs WOpa Kal' Exactov éviavTov
eis ToUptpocOev del YwpodvTas Trodé“M Kpovots ToAXois eredOciv tiv Hetpov. 510 Kali moddds
KATA wépos éeTiKANHoELS eyovTwv Kon Kertooxd-Gas Tov otpatov wvopuator.
488 :

reports about the Teutones and Cimbri fell upon their ears. What these reports said about the num- bers and strength of the invading hosts was dis- believed at first, but afterwards it was found to be short of the truth. For three hundred thousand armed fighting men were advancing, and much larger hordes of women and children were said to accompany them, in quest of land to support so vast a multitude, and of cities in which to settle and live, just as the Gauls before them, as they learned, had wrested the best part of Italy from the Tyrrhenians and now occupied it. They themselves, indeed, had not had intercourse with other peoples, and had traversed a great stretch of country, so that it could not be ascertained what people it was nor whence they had set out, thus to descend upon Gaul and Italy like a cloud. The most prevalent. conjecture was that they were some of the German peoples which extended as far as the northern ocean, a conjecture based on their great stature, their light-blue eyes, and the fact that the Germans call robbers Cimbri.

But there are some who say that Gaul was wide and large enough to reach from the outer sea and the subarctic regions to the Maeotic Lake on the east, where it bordered on Pontic Scythia, and that from that point on Gauls and Scythians were mingled. These mixed Gauls and Scythians had left their homes and moved westward, not in a single march, nor even continuously, but with each recurring spring they had gone forward, fighting their way, and in the course of time had crossed the continent. Therefore, while they had many names for different detachments, they called their whole army by the general name of Galloscythians.
489

"Addo 5é pact Kipupeptov rd peD mpw@Tov vd
‘EAAqv@y | TOV mada yuoadev ov peya syeveo Bar
Tov TavTos poptov, GAAd puyny q ordat TLva Biacbeicay tro XKv0av eis ‘Agiay an6 Tis Mauwridos SiaTepicat Avyddpuos iryoupevon, TO bé aheéto Tov aut ay Kat pax WOTaToV em éaydrots olxoby ‘mapa Thy €&o Oddaccay viv pev vewer Oar
avoKwov Kal UVAwWON Kal Suan ALov TavTn d1a Babos Kab TUKVOTHTA Spupay, obs HEX pL Tov ‘Epxuviwv cio dunxecy, ovpavod dé eiAnyévar Kae? 0 doxel peya AauBavev o O TONOS éFappa dua THV eyo TOV Tapardnrwv OAdryou dmronei Tew TOU Kara Kopup ny ioTapévou onpetov 7 pos THY olknow, at TE Lépat Bpaxurnre Kal nket Tpos Tas vUKTAS ioat KAT avewer at Tov xpovor 510 Kal THY evTopiay Tov pvdetpatos ‘Ounp@ yeveo bau I pos THY vexviay. évev obp Thy épodov elvas TOV Bap-Bdpav TOUT@Y él tH | ‘Iradav, Kippeptov pev &&
apyiis, Tore dé KinBpov OuK amo ‘TpoTou Tpoca-

‘Yo pevopeveoy. anra TavTa fev ELKATU@ PbaAXOV
n Kata BéBacov t ioroptay NéyeTat.
To 8 TAOS ouK éXarTop, adda, mNéov elvat TOU NE Jévros t vo TONN@Y toropyTac. Oupov be Kal TOhpay dvuToorarot Kat eLpav Epya mapa Tas payas ofvrnTe cal Bia Tupos eoukores ém né-cap, ovdevos AVTEXOVTOS QuTo@V T pos THY édodon, GdrA TaVTwV Lev, OaouS éTAADOY, ev NOY@ Elias ayopevov Kal pepopevar, Toho 6€ kal peydhov ‘Pwpaixav oTpaTom ew Kal TTpATH Yay, boot mpoexdOnyto THS exTOS "Adem Taxarias, : avnp-TacLevav akrews? of Kal pardtoTa THY hopav 490

412

CAIUS MARIUS

Others, however, say that the Cimmerians who - were first known to the ancient Greeks were not a large part of the entire people, but merely a body of exiles or a faction which was driven away by the Scythians and passed from the Maeotic Lake into Asia under the lead of Lygdamis; whereas the largest and most warlike part of the people dwelt at the confines of the earth along the outer sea, oc- cupying a land that is shaded, wooded, and wholly sunless by reason of the height and thickness of the trees, which reach inland as far as the Hercynii; and as regards the heavens, they are under that portion of them where the pole gets a great elevation by ‘reason of the declination of the parallels, and appears to have a position not far removed from the spectator’s zenith, and a day and a night divide the year into two equal parts; which was of advantage to Homer in his story of Odysseus consulting the shades of the dead.1 From these regions, then, these Barbarians sallied forth against Italy, being called at first Cimmerians, and then, not inappropriately, Cimbri. But all this is based on conjecture rather than on sure historical evidence.

Their numbers, however, are given by many writers as not less, but more, than the figure mentioned above. Moreover, their courage and daring made them irresistible, and when they en- ‘gaged in battle they came on with the swiftness and force of fire, so that no one could withstand their onset, but all who came in their way became their prey and booty, and even many large Roman armies, with their commanders, who had been stationed to protect. Transalpine Gaul, were destroyed ingloriously; indeed,

1 Odyssey, Book XI. See vv. 14 ff., describing the Cim-merians, 49!
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

auTaY KaK@s aywvicdpevoe Kata THS “Pwouns
émeaTacavTo. vixnoavrTes yap ols évéruyov, cai XPNMATWVY TONY KpaTHCAYTES, Eyvoray wndapod ys Eavtovs iSpvev, rpiv dvatpéyrwo thy ‘Pony

\ 4 \ b] ,
cat ScatropOjowat tTHv Lradiav.
XII. Taira ‘Pwpaios ruvOavopevor torArNaXo-Bev, éxdrovv Mapiov eri rHhv otpatnyiav. Kai To Sevtepoy diratos dedetyOn, tod pév voyou KwAVOYTOS aTrovTa Kat wn SvadtTovTa ‘Xpovoy e lA @ e al “A \ , \ a@ptopévoy avlus aipetcBar, tov dé Sypov rovs
> , > ‘ e “ \ wv
avtTiéyovtas éxBaXdovtos. nyotvto yap ovTeE
vov mpartov elEew TH TUuhepovTe Toy vomov, OVTE
adroywtépav elvat thy Tapovoay aitiav éxeivns 5c’ iv tov Yenriwva Tapa tovs vopovs Umatov amrédetEav, ov hoBovpevor THY éavTav atroRaneip, arya thy Kapynooviwy émriBvpobvtes avendeiv.
tavta édofe: Kal Maptos éx ArBins peta rod
4 b) A 4
atpatevpatos Staxopicbels adtais Kanravédats
"Tavovapiais, fy érovs apynyv ayovat “Pwpaio.,
4 e 4 > / \ N 4 b 4
THY Te UTaTeiav avéraBe Kai Tov OpiauBov eion-Aacev, amictov émidetEdpevos Béaya “Pwpaiors 9 4 > 4 k 9 a“ 10 a lovyovpSav atypuddwtov, ov Cavros ovd ay els AMLTE TOAELL@Y KpAaTHaat' oUTW TLS Hv TroLKinrOS
a , a avyp TUXat oOpmAnoaL Kal tavoupyla ToAAT 4 ” \ , 9 > ye7
peptypevov Exwv TO Oupoedés. arr eEeotn ye
—d.

-

1 See chapter xi. 1. Marius was still in Africa.

by their feeble resistance they were mainly instrumental in drawing the on-rushing Barbarians down upon Rome. For when the invaders had conquered those who opposed them, and had got abundance of booty, they determined not to settle themselves anywhere until they had destroyed Rome and ravaged Italy.

XII. Learning of these things from many quarters, the Romans summoned Marius to the command. And he was appointed consul for the second time,! although the law forbade that a man in his absence and before the lapse of a specified time should be elected again; still, the people would not listen to those who opposed the election. For they considered that this would not be the first time that the law had given way before the demands -of the general good, and that the present occasion demanded it no less imperatively than when they had made Scipio consul contrary to the laws,? although at that time they were not fearful of losing their own city, but desirous of destroying that of the Carthaginians. This course was adopted, Marius came across the sea from Africa with his army, and on the very Calends of January, which with the Romans is the first day of the year, assumed the consulship and celebrated his triumph, exhibiting to the Romans Jugurtha in chains. This was a sight which they had despaired of beholding, nor could any one have expected, while Jugurtha was alive, to conquer the enemy ; so versatile was he in adapting himself to the turns of fortune, and so great craft did he combine with his courage. But we are told that when he had —

2 In 147 B.c., when Sqipio had not reached the age required by law.

fs

mopumevOeis, Os Aéyouat, ToTe TOU gpovety* Kal meTa Tov OpiapBov eis TO Seo pao} piov éumecor, @S ol pev avTod Bia meptéppnEav Tov XeT@vicKor, oi S¢ amevdovTes dgereaOar Bia to xpuaoby éX-AoBrov Gua TO roRov ouvatréppntar, acdels 8e yupvos eis TO Bapabpov xcateBrNOn, pearos @v Tapays kal Sdtaceonpas, “ ‘Hpdxvers,” elrrev, ‘os Puxpor t UL@V TO Baraveiov.” anna roUTov HED eg npé pars Cuyouaxnoavta TO Mep— Kat MEX pt TNS eoxarns adpas éxxpepacOevta THs TOU Hy emOupias elyev aia dixn ToY aceBnpatov.
"Ep dé 7? 3 Bondy Be copia Ofvac héyouat Xpuaod pev émta Kal Tpio tras Aitpas, apyupov oé aonpou TEVTAKLTXLALAS émraxootas éBSouncovta TEVTE, vopia Lat os 5é Spaxpas em naNHEXINAGs én pupidow oxTe Kat elxoat.
Mera be THY WORTHY oO Madpuos obyKAnTov nO porcev ép Karerwrin Kal mapirbe bev ete habav auTop elite TH TUYN Xpapevos drypouxaTepov éy TH OptapRicn KatacKevy, TAXD bé tHv Boudnv ay GeaGeiaar ais Odpevos eEavéotn Kal peradaBov Th TepiTroppupov avis rev.

XIII. ’Ev 6€ 1H orpateia thy Sivamuw Sverrover kal’ 68ov eEacKav Spopors TE Tavrodamois Kal paxpais odorrropiats, é EaUTO be axJogopeiv a avay-Kalov ral avToupyety Ta mpos THD Siarrav, @aTe Kal peta Tatra TOUS ptrorrovous Kal olor péeT evKoALas Ta Tpoo Taco opeva TmovobvTas iuudvous Mapravous Kaneio Gat. Kaito. TLVves atTiav érépav
TOU NOYoOU TOUTOU Vouitovel. Lxnriwvos yap, OTE Nopavtiay érontopxet, BovrnOévtos érridety pi) 494

CAIUS MARIUS

been led in triumph he lost his reason; and that. when, after the triumph, he was cast into prison, where some tore his tunic from his body, and others were so eager to snatch away his golden ear-ring that they tore off with it the lobe of his ear, and

’ when he had been thrust down naked into the dungeon pit, in utter bewilderment and with a grin on his lips he said: “Hercules! How cold this Roman bath is!” But the wretch, after struggling with hunger for six days and up to the last moment clinging to the desire of life, paid the penalty which his crimes deserved.

In the triumphal procession there were carried, we are told, three thousand and seven pounds of gold, of uncoined silver five thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and in coined money two hundred and eighty-seven thousand drachmas.

After the procession was over, Marius called the senate into session on the Capitol, and made his entry, either through inadvertence or with a vulgar display of his good fortune, in his triumphal robes ; but perceiving quickly that the senators were offended at this, he rose and went out, changed to the usual robe with purple border, and then came back.

XIII. Setting out on the expedition, he laboured to perfect his army as it went along, practising the men in all kinds of running and in long marches, and compelling them to carry their own baggage and to prepare their own food. Hence, in after times, men who were fond of toil and did whatever was en- joined upon them contentedly and without a murmur, were called Marian mules. Some, however, think that this name had a different origin. Namely, when Scipio was besieging Numantia,! he wished to inspect

1 Cf. chapter iii. 2.

-

povov Ta oma pndeé TOUS immrous, ada Kal TOUS
opeis Kal TAs dapatas, 6 ST WS exdarous eEnoxhpéva Kal Tapeakevacpeva TUyXavot, mpoayayety Tov Mdpuov im-mov TE KaAMoTa Tel papevov vr auTou Kal 7)LLovov evelia Kab WpaoTntt Kat poun Stapepovta Todv TaY adrdrAwy HabEvTos
ovv Tov oTparnyou ‘Tots TOU Mapiov Opéupace Kal TONNAKES aura puna devros, ovTwS apa
TOUS TKOT TOVTAS éy émaive Tov evdedexi) Kat TA nova, Kat gtroTovoy Mapiavor nuiovov mpocaryopeverv.
XIV. Evruynpa de doxet 7 Mapio peya ryever Oa. Tay yap BapBapev Garep TLva Tanip-potay Tijs opus AaBovtoy Kal pvévT@y TpoTEepov ert THY "IBnpiav, Xpovor éaxe Kal Ta copara yupvdoat Tov avOpav Kat Ta ppovipara T™pos TO Oappety avappaaat, To dé peyeoror, AUTOS olos 7 my catavonOjvac. TO yap é év apyn oxvOpwrov avrovd Kat ‘tepl Tas Tipwpias Suc peide ov eO.abeice pndev apaptdavew pndé aeeiv Gua 1a. dixaio
wT HpLov épaivero, THY TE TOU Oupod apodpotnta Kal To Tpaxy Ths Pwvas Kal aypeamov ToD ‘po-OWTOU ocuvTpepopevoy KATA piKpov OvX avTois évouitov elva poBepor, andra Tots TONE "LOLS.
pasar bé 7 mepl Tas Kpicess ép8arns avrov
Tots OTPATLWTALS NpEeTKeV’ Hs Kal ToLOVdE TL Setypa Neyeras.
D'dios Aovatos ade gidois avTou TETAYHEVOS
ep’ myepovias éaTparevero, Tarra pev avnp ov Soxa elvat Tovnpos, iTre@v be petpaxiay KaN@D.
OUTOS pa vEeavioKou THY UP AUTO oTpatTevomevey, 496

not only the arms and the horses, but also the mules and the waggons, that every man might have them in readiness and good order. Marius, accordingly, brought out for inspection both a horse that had been most excellently taken care of by him, and a mule that for health, docility, and strength far surpassed all the rest. The commanding officer was naturally well pleased with the beasts of Marius and often spoke about them, so that in time those who wanted to bestow facetious praise on a persevering, patient, laborious man would call him a Marian mule.

XIV. And now, as it would seem, a great piece of good fortune befell Marius. For the Barbarians had a reflux, as it were, in their course, and streamed first into Spain. This gave Marius time to exercise the bodies of his men, to raise their spirits to a sturdier courage, and, what was most important of all, to let them find out what sort of a man he was. For his sternness in the exercise of authority and his inflexibility in the infliction of punishment appeared to them, when they became accustomed to obedience and good behaviour, salutary as well as just, and they regarded the fierceness of his temper, the harshness of his voice, and that ferocity of his countenance which gradually became familiar, as fearful to their enemies rather than to themselves. But it was above all things the uprightness of his judicial decisions that pleased the soldiers; and of this the following illustration is given.

Caius Lusius, a nephew of his, had a command under him in the army. In other respects he was a man of good reputation, but he had a weakness for beautiful youths. This officer was enamoured of one of the young men who served under him, by name

dvona TpeBwviov, Kai trodAdKIs TEeLp@Y OvK
,
4 éruyyave: tédos O€¢ vUKTWp banpeTnY aTrocTEi Nas peterréumreto tov TpeBwmov- o dé vegvias Ke
, ra A
Hév, avtettrety yap ove éERv KadXovpevor, eicay-
‘ a A
els S€ b1ro THY TKNVYHY POS adTov émiyepopyTa BiafeoOar orracapuevos 76 Eihos atéextewe. TadTA
> , a , \ LU b \
émpayxOn trod Mapiov uy tapovros: éravedOov
5 dé mpovOnKxe TO TpcBwvi xpiciv. eet Sé TOANOY KaTnyopovvTwy, ovdevos b€ surnyopodyTos, avTos evlapoas Kataotas Sunynoato TO Tpaypa Kal paprupas Exyev Ott Tetp@vTL TOANGKLS aVTELTTE
“A ; \ 4 4 > % > ‘
T@ Aovaoiwm Kai peydrAwv Sibopévay én’ ovdeve mponkato TO capa, Oavpacas o Mdpios Kal noOels éxéNevoe TOV TaTpLOV eri Tais apioTetats Ul “A \ \ > A > /
atépavoy xomcOjvat, Kal NaBwv avdtos éeotepa-
\ , e 4 ” 9 A vooe Tov TpeBwvioyv ws KaNLoTOV Epyor ev KaLp@ Tapaderyuatwv Seopéevw Karov atrodedery péevov.
nv J ‘ e 4 9 \ > 4

6 Tovdto eis thy ‘Paunv arayyerOey ovy RKiota
7T@ Mapio avvérpake thy rpitny iratelay. apa
\ a“ lA ” C4 ;
5é xai tav BapBdpwv érovs dpa tmpogdokipwr é 5 A \ 5 \ v “A
yrwv EBovNovTo peta pndevos aAXNOU oTpPATHYOU KLVOUVEDTAL IPOS AUTOUS. OV [NV KOV WS Tpoc-edoxavro Taxews, ara rari SiArOe TH Mapi
e “A “n
7 oTHs brateias Ypovos. évictapévwr b€ THY ap-Yatpectav Kal TOD auvdpyovTos avTov TedeuvTNcavTos, aToduT@v émt tav dsuvayewr Maviov
"AkvAALOY adTos Heev els ‘Pounv. peTiovtay é
To\N@Y Kal aya0av tiv wtatetav, AovKios 498
e

Trebonius, and had often made unsuccessful attempts to seduce him. But finally, at night, he sent a servant with a summons for Trebonius. The young man came, since he could not refuse to obey a summons, but when he had been introduced into the tent and Caius attempted violence upon him, he drew his sword and slew him. Marius was not with the .

army when this happened; but on his return he brought Trebonius to trial. Here there were many accusers, but not a single advocate, wherefore Tre- bonius himself courageously took the stand and told all about the matter, bringing witnesses to show that he had often refused the solicitations of Lusius and that in spite of large offers he had never prostituted himself to anyone. Then Marius, filled with delight and admiration, ordered the customary crown for brave exploits to be brought, and with his own hands placed it on the head of Trebonius, declaring that at a time which called for noble examples he had displayed most noble conduct.

Tidings of this were brought to Rome and helped in nosmall degree to secure for Marius his third consul- ship ;! at the same time, too, the Barbarians were expected in the spring, and the Romans were un- willing to risk battle with them under any other general. However, the Barbarians did not come as soon as they were expected, and once more the period of Marius’s consulship expired. As the consular elections were at hand, and as his colleague in the office had died, Marius left Manius Aquillius in charge of the forces and came himself to Rome. Here many men of great merit were candidates for the consulship, but Lucius Saturninus, who had more

1 For the year 103 B.c.
499
K K 2

Laropvivos o padora tav Snuapyov aywy 70
Trios, urd TOD Mapiov TeDepamrevpevos é6n-pnyoper, xeXevwv éxeivor Dmarov aipetoOas.
6 pumropévov 5é€ Tov Mapiou Kal mapatteioBat
THY ap mv pacKortos ws 57 pn Seopevov, 7 po-Sotny avrov o Laropvivos aren ane THS matpisos év Kevduvep ToToUT® pevyovta 76 atpatnyeiv. Kal pavepos prev my andvas CUYUTFOK PLYOMEVOS TO TpooTroinpa T@ Mapi Tov € Kaupov opa@vTes ot mono Tis éxeivou beadrnros dpa Kal TUXNS Seopevov eynpicavro THY TeTapTHy vmaretay, Kal cuvapxovra Karhov auT@ Aoutattoy KaTégThoay, dvdpa Kal TL@LEVOY UTO TOY apioTt@v Kal Tots WoNNols OUK énax 07.
XV. Tluvavépevos dé TOUS TONE MLOUS o Mdpuos.

éryryus elvac bua TAX EDD uTepeBare tas “AXtrets:
Kal Tetxlaas oT paToredov mapa T® ‘Podave
TOTaL@ TUViyev els auTo xopnytay apOovov, ws pndeTrote Tapa TOV TOU TUE PoVTOS Aoyio pov
éx Brac Bein 5: évdeiay TOV dvaryxatov els ayn KaTaoThvar. ig 6¢ KouLony av édeu! T® oTpa-Tevparte paxpayv Kal TohuTeAy ‘TpoTepov odcay
T pos THY Oddaccap, autos elpyaoaro padiav. wal Taxetay. Ta yap oropata tov ‘Podavod, T pos Tas avakoTas THS Oardrrns, ivy TE TOAANV hap-Bavovta Kai Giva 1nrd\@ Babet oupmTeT An Mevyy
umo TOU KrUdavos, Xaherov Kal émimovov Kat Bpadvropov TOUS orTaywryors emrotet TOV élomrNouD.
o 5é Tpepas évrav@a Tov oTpaTov oxordlovra Tad pov peyadnv éveBanre, Kal TAUTD TOAU pépos
TOU TOTAaLOV pEeTATTHOAS TEpLNyayeY cis ETrUTH-

1 %e: Coraés, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Reiske; é8¢iro.

influence with the people than any other tribune,
was won over by the flattering attentions of Marius,
and in his harangues urged the people to elect Marius consul, Marius affected to decline the office and declared that he did not want it, but Saturninus called him a traitor to his country for refusing to command her armies at a time of so great peril. Now, it was clear that Saturninus was playing his part at the instigation of Marius, and playing it badly, too, but the multitude, seeing that the occasion required the ability as well as the good fortune of Marius, voted for his fourth consulship,! and made Catulus Lutatius his colleague, a man who was esteemed by the nobility and not disliked by the common people.:

XV. Learning that the enemy were near, Marius rapidly crossed the Alps, and built a fortified camp along the river Rhone. Into this he brought to- gether an abundance of stores, that he might never be forced by lack of provisions to give battle contrary to his better judgment. ~The conveyance of what was needful tor his army, which had previously been a long and costly process where it was by sea, he rendered easy and speedy. That is, the mouths of the Rhone, encountering the sea, took up great quantities of mud and sand packed close with clay by the action of the billows, and made the entrance of the river difficult, laborious, and slow for vessels carrying supplies. So Marius brought his army to the place, since the men had nothing else to do, and ran a great canal. Into this he diverted a great part of the river and brought it round to a suitable place

1 102 B.c.
§o1
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

decoy airyvadrov, Badu pév cab vavol peydrats érro-yov, Netov 5é€ kal axAvoTOV cTOLa AaRovaay ITpos Thy OdrXacoayv. avtn pev ovv étt am' éxeivou Thy émovupiay murdtTE.
Tap dé BapBdpov dueAovTwy adhas avTous bixa
KiuSpot pev értayov 8a Nopixov dvwbev éri KatXov ywpeiv cal tHv mapodov éxetyny Bidteoat, Tevtoves 5€ cat "ApBpeves da Acyvwv eri Madptov rapa Odratrav. cal KipBpots pév eyivero wrciwov 7 StatpiByn Kat pérAXnats, TevToves 5é Kal
"ApBpoves apavtes evOds cai StedOovres tHv év

U 4 bd , / " N
becom Yopav édaivovto mwrAnOet Te aTreipor Kat Svompocorro: ta eldn, POoyyov te Kat OopvBov ovyx éTEpois Gwotor. treptBanropevor Sé Tod mrediov péya pépos! Kal otpatomedevoavtes mpovKa-_ hodvTO TOV Mdpuov els waxny.

XVI. 'O &€ rovTwr pev OUK eppovriter, € év d€
T® YXapaxe Tovs _OTpaTworas auvetxe, eal Kabn-

TTETO TIKPOS TOV Opacuvoméevwy, Kal TOUS po-mimrovtas 87d Oupod Kal pdyerOat Bovdopevous MpoooTas aTrEKarEL THIS tra pibos. ov yap dmép OprapBov TV prroripiay elvat Kal TpoTraiay,
GAN Srrws vehos ToToUTOY TroAEpou Kal aoKNnTTOV @odpevot Stacwcover Thy ‘ITadiav. tadta pev idia mpos Tovs Hyenovas Kal TOUS OpoTipous EXeye, tous 5€ otpatiotas brép Tov yYapaKxos toTas ava pepos Kal OedcBar Kerevwv clOle tiv popdyy
avéxerOat THY TOkELLoV Kal THY Pwovny Uromévery
1 uéya wépos Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: yéya.

on the coast,a deep bay where large ships could float, and where the water could flow out smoothly and without waves to the sea. This canal, indeed, still bears the name of Marius.!
The Barbarians divided themselves into two bands, and it fell to the lot of the Cimbri to proceed through Noricum in the interior of the country against Catulus, and force a passage there, while the Teutones and Ambrones were to march through Liguria along the sea-coast against Marius. On the part of the Cimbri there was considerable delay and loss of time, but the Teutones and Ambrones set out at once, passed through the intervening country, and made their appearance before Marius. Their numbers were limitless, they were hideous in their aspect,
and their speech and cries were unlike those of other peoples. They covered a large part of the plain, and after pitching their camp challenged Marius to battle.
XVI. Marius, however, paid no heed to them, but kept his soldiers inside their fortifications, bitterly rebuking those who would have made a display of their courage, and calling those whose high spirit made them wish to rush forth and give battle traitors to their country. For it was not, he said, triumphs or trophies that should now be the object of their ambition, but how they might ward off so great a cloud and thunder-bolt of war and secure the safety of Italy. This was his language in private to his officers and equals ; but he would station his soldiers on the fortifications by detachments, bidding them to observe the enemy, and in this way accustomed them not to fear their shape or dread their cries,

1 Cf. Strabo, iv. 8 (p. 183).

dXws ovcav adXcKoTOv Kat Onpiwdn, oxeuny re Kai xivnow avTav KkatapavOdvey, dua TH Ypovp Ta pawvopeva Seva trovoupévous TH Stavoia yerponOn
“A w a) ,
Sid Tis Oyews: Hryeito yap ToANa pev emirpev-SecOar THY ov TpocdvT@Y THY KaLVdTNTA Tots dhoBepois, év dé TH ouvnbeia Kal TA TH hice Seva “~ 4
thy éxmrAnkiy aroBdadd\ev. tav dé ov povoy 7 cal’ nuépav ous adnper te TOD OauBous, adAd \ \ \ > \ “” 4 ; \ kat mpos tas areiras tTav BapBapwv Kai Tov KOuTrOV OvK avexTov dvTa Ovpos avTOis TraptoTa-pevos é&cOépuaive Kal dvépreye tas wuyds, ov
povoy ayovtwy kal depovrwv ta mépe amavtTa
TOV TOAEMLWV, GAAA Kal TO Yapakt Trovoupévwv
\ \ “A 9 / \ 4
mpoaBoras peta TorANS ageryelas Kal Opacu-TnT0S, @aTe dwvas Kal Stayavaxtynoces TOY
A \ \ / b] lA ce 4
oTpatiwta@v mpos tov Mdpiov éxdépecOat. “ Tiva 59 Katayvous avavdpiay nuav Mdpuos eipyer HaXNS BoTEp yuvaixas b1r6 KAEtol Kal Ouvpwpois;
Ul 4 9 ~ , , > ,
dhépe, wadovres avdpav maos édevOépwv épwpueda TWoTepov GAXNovs avapevet paxovpevous brép THs
> , ¢ on a ,
Iradtas, nyiv dé Nevroupyois ypynoetar Sia qraptos, Stav Séntrat tadpous dpvccew Kal mnrov éxxabaipey xal Totapmovs Tivas Tapatperety; emt TavTa yap, ws EoLKeV, HaoKEL Tots TONNOLS TrOVOES
nas, Kal Tabta Tov UTaTEeLav atrodeaEdmevos
4 A Epya rots mwodtTals émdvacw. Ta KdpBwvos
b] \ a \ / > J e
avtov poBet nat Kaurriwvos, obs évixnaay ot 4 “ TOAEMLOL, TOAV fev aUTOUS THS Mapiou Sons Kal

which were altogether strange and ferocious; and to make themselves acquainted with their equipment and movements,. thus in course of time rendering what was only apparently formidable familiar to their minds from observation. For he considered that their novelty falsely imparts to terrifying objects many qualities which they do not possess, but that with familiarity even those things which are really dreadful lose their power to affright. And so in the case of his soldiers, not only did the daily sight of the enemy lessen somewhat their amazement at them, but also, when they heard the threats and the intolerable boasting of the Barbarians, their anger rose and warmed and set on fire their spirits ; for the enemy were ravaging and plundering all the country round, and besides, often attacked the Roman fortifications with great temerity and shamelessness, so that indignant speeches of his soldiers reached the ears of Marius. ‘ What cowardice, pray, has Marius discovered in us that he keeps us out of battle like women under lock and key? Come, let us act like freemen and ask him if heis waiting for other soldiers to fight in defence of Italy, and will use us as workmen all the time, whenever there is need of digging ditches and clearing out mud. and diverting a river or two. For it was to this end, as it would seem, that he exercised us in those many toils,! and these are the achievements of his consulships which he will exhibit to his fellow-citizens on his return to Rome. Or does he fear the fate of Carbo and Caepio, whom the enemy defeated ?? But they were far behind Marius in reputation and excellence, and

1 Cf. chapter xiii. 1.

2 Carbo in 113 B.c., Caepio in 105 B.c. See the Dictionary of Proper Names. —

9 A 9 ‘ ‘ \ S N
apeTns atrodeovtas, TovAv 5é xYelpova oTpaTov
w 9 \ \ a a e bd “A ayovras; ada cal Tabet te Spavras, ws éxeivot, Ul a fo , A Ul
Kaddov 7 Kabjcba TopPovpEevay TAY TULMLaYeV Oeatas.”
XVII. Tait’ axovwv o Madptos Ser, cai care-fw 9 \ e ? J 4 td " Le) b) >
MT PAUVEV AUTOUS WS OUK EXELVOLS GTLATOYV, GANA’ Ex
TLVwY NOYiwY TOY THs viKns Gua KaLpov Kal TOTFOV

9 / \ 4 UA A Ul
éxdexouevos. Kal yap twa Lvpav yuvaica, Map-
” 4 U 9 ld
Oav dvopa, pavreverOat A\eyouevnv év opeio
/ A 4 ,
KATAKELMEVNY TELVaS TrEepinyeTo, Kat Ovaias EOvev
> , , 4 \ J 4
éxelvns KEeNEVOVENS. 1Y TpOTEpOV wey aTHnAATED
) avyKAnTos évruyely wep TovT@v BovrAoLévny
\ \ / / > \ \ \
Kai Ta pédAXOVTA TpolcaTifovaay, ere 5é mTpos
\ a 9 “a , 307 4
Tas yuvaixas elotovoa Sidtretpay édidou Kal pars-
a , , \ /
ora TH Mapiou tapaxadifovea Tapa Tous Todas
TOV povoudyov eTLTUYaS Tponyopeve TOV pMéA-NovTa viKav, avaTewdbeicoa mpos Mapiov tr éxeiuns COauyalero. Kal Ta ToANG ey ev hopeiw mapexopitero, mpos dé Tas Oucias Karner os-
/ A 9 ; / >
vixida Surry éutmetropirnuevyn Kal AOyyny avase-Sepevny Tawiats Kal oTrepavwpaci pépovaa. TODTO bev ovv TO papa TroAXois adic BnrnoL Tapetyer, elre Tremevapevos ws GANnOas elite TWAATTOMEVOS Kal
” ;
cuvuTroKpLvomevos emedeixvuTat THY AVO pwTroV.
To 6€ wept tous yitras Bavpatos aéiov ’AXé-€ 4 ef 4 \ b ,
Favdpos o Muvédios iatdpnxe. Ovo yap épatvovto
Tpo TOV KaTopOwudTwy ael Tepl Tas oTpaTEias 506
419

CAIUS MARIUS

led an army that was far inferior to his. Surely it is better to do something, even if we perish as_ they did, rather than to sit here and enjoy the spectacle of our allies being plundered.”
XVII. Marius was delighted to hear of such expressions, and tried to calm the soldiers down by telling them that he did not distrust them, but in _ consequence of certain oracles was awaiting a fit time and place for his victory. And indeed he used to carry about ceremoniously in a litter a certain Syrian woman, named Martha, who was said to have the gift of prophecy, and he would make sacrifices at her bidding. She had previously been rejected by the ’ senate when she wished to appear before them with reference to these matters and predicted fature events. Then she got audience of the women and gave them proofs of her skill, and particularly the wife of Marius, at whose feet she sat when some gladiators were fighting and successfully foretold which one was going to be victorious. In consequence of this she was sent to Marius by his wife, and was admired by him. As a general thing she was carried along with the army in a litter, but she attended the sacrifices clothed in a double purple robe that was fastened with a clasp, and carrying a spear that was wreathed with fillets and chaplets. Such a performance as this caused many to doubt whether Marius, in exhibiting the woman, really believed in her, or was pretending to do so and merely acted a part with her.

The affair of the vultures, however, which Alex- ander of Myndus relates, is certainly wonderful. Two vultures were always seen hovering about the armies of Marius before their victories, and accompanied

Kal mapncorovdovy yw prlouevor Yadois Tmepide-paiows: tavta 5é ot OTPATLOTAL cvdhdaBovres avTovs Tepin wav, elta ad iar éx 8€ tovTou yraopifovres nomagovro avTous ob oTpaTi@rat) Kat pavertov émi tats éEodots éxarpov ws ayabov Tl mpagovTes.
TloArA@v Se onpeloy Tpopaivopever Ta pev ara NapaxThpa xowvoy eiyev, éx dé Apepias wal Tovdéptov, Tohewy "Tradixov, amnyyenOn YUKTOS apOas KaTa TOV ovpavov aixpds Te hroyoebets Kal Oupeous Stapepouevous TO Tp@Tov, elta oup-mimrovTas, ANANAOLS Kat oxXnmaTa Kal Kwnpata AapBdvovtas ola, rytveTaL paxouevov avdpar, TEAOS dé Tay pev évd.SovTov, TOV 6 eT LpEepopuevov, TavTas él duopas p pufvar. meph TouTov O€ Tas
Tov Xpovov adbinero Kal Bardxns € ex Heacwoivros
0 THs peyanns pT pos tepeus, amraryyehov @S y
Geos € éx TOV dvaxTopav epdeyEato avuT@ vinny Kat Kpdros Trokéuou "Papatous _Umdpxew. THS be TUYKAHTOU TpogEepEvns Kal TH Oe@ vaov emrevixtov isptoacbat Vapucapevns, TOV Batdeny els TOV Onpov mpoerOovta kal tadTa Bovdopevov elmrety éxwAuce Snpapx.aov Addos Hopanios, aryupTny
'aTroKahav Kal '7 pos vBpw ameavvey tod Bnpatos. 0 On Kal padiota TO ae Tow avOpamou
wioTw Taper Xev. ou yap | EPO THS éexxArHolas
dvOeions o AvAos els olKov éemavenbeip, Kar mupetos e&nvOncer avT@ TOO OUTOS dare Tact Karapavi) ryevoplevov Kal teptBonrov évros éR80-Bens Huépas atrodaveiv.

1 gbrovs of orpari@ra: with Reiske: robs orpariéras, which Bekker and Ziegler bracket.

508
CAIUS MARIUS

them on their journeys, being recognized by bronze rings on their necks; for the soldiers had caught them, put these rings on, and let them go again; and after this, on recognizing the birds, the soldiers greeted them, and they were glad to see them when they set out upon a march, feeling sure in such eases that they would be successful.

Many signs also appeared, most of which were or the ordinary kind ; but from Ameria and Tuder, cities of Italy, it was reported that at night there had been seen in the heavens flaming spears, and shields which at first moved in different directions, and then clashed together, assuming the formations and movements of men in battle, and finally some of them would give way, while others pressed on in pursuit, and all streamed away to the westward. Moreover, about this time Bataces, the priest of the Great Mother,! came from Pessinus announcing that the goddess had declared to him from her shrine that the Romans were to be victorious and triumphant in war. The senate gave credence to the story and voted that a temple should be built for the goddess in commemoration of the victory ; but when Bataces came before the assembly and desired to tell the story, Aulus Pompeius, a tribune of the people, prevented him, calling him an impostor, and driving -him with insults from the rostra. And lo, this did more than anything else to gain credence for the man’s story. For hardly had Aulus gone back to his house after the assembly was dissolved, when he broke out with so violent a fever that he died within a week, and everybody anew and talked about it.

1 Cybelé, Mother of the Gods.
5°9
2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XVIII. Of 8 Tedroves éreyeipnoay pev navxatovtos Tod Mapiov moXdtopKeivy TO oTpaTo-mecov, Bédeoe 5 ToAXois evTUXOVTES aro TOU xaparos pepopevors Kat twas ¢€€ avTav atro-Barovtes &yvwoav eis TovptpocOev yYwpety ws vmepBadovvres adea@s Tas “AXreis: Kal cuvcKeEv-acdmevor TapnuerBov ro otparoTredov tav ‘Pa-paiwy, Tore 87) pddtcTa TrapTAnGeis pneer Kal xporm THS wapodov davevtes’ uepais yap &F NEyorTas Tov Yadpaxa Tov Mapiov tapapeiya-cat cuvexas odevovtes. érropevovto dé éyyus, muvOavopmevo, TOV Pwpaiwy peta yédAwTos el TL

mpos Tas yuvaixas émioté AXolev? auvTol yap
, 9 > a ,] N \ / ‘
EcecOas taxéws Tap avtais. eet 5é mapnrAda-ay ot BapBapot Kai mponecav, apas cal avros én-4 A b] \ A J 9 bf \
KorovOer ayédnv, éyyus pev del Kal trap’ avTovs Exeivous tOpuopevos, Oyupais O€ Yp@pmevos oTparo-medelals Kal Ywpia KapTepa TpoRadrAopEVos, OoTE
“A «of
éy acdanrel vuxtepevey. odtw 57 mpoiovres
éyevovTo mpos Tols KaXoupevors Bdace YeETiors, ef ” , > \ COX 2 a 60ev eee tropevOevtas ov qoAAnY odov ev Tais
“Adreow elvat. 616 bn .cal Mdpwos évraiéa
4 4 \ , a mapeoxevateto pdayecOar, nal xatéhaBe TO / , > \ UA e \ ” oTpatoréde ToTov taxupov pév, Ddwp 5¢ apOovov
oux éxovra, Bovdropevos, Os act, Kal TovT@ mapokivat TovUs aTpatiwtas. WoAA@VY Ye TOL dua xepatvovTar Kat dSipnoerv Neyovtov, SeiEas TH
XElpl ToTapoy Tia péovTa TAnciov Tod Bap-Bapixotd xdpaxos, éxeiPev avtois Edpnoev elvar 510

416

CAIUS MARIUS

XVIII. But the Teutones, since Marius kept quiet, attempted to take his camp by storm ; many missiles, however, were hurled against them from the forti- fications, and they lost some of their men. They therefore decided to march forward, expecting to cross the Alps without molestation. ‘So they packed up their baggage and began to march past the camp of the Romans. Then, indeed, the im- mensity of their numbers was made specially evident by the length of their line and the time required for their passage; for it is said they were six days in passing the fortifications of Marius, although they moved continuously. And they marched close to the camp, inquiring with laughter whether the Romans had any messages for their wives ; “for,” said they, ‘‘we shall soon be with them.” But when the Barbarians had passed by and were going on their way, Marius also broke camp and followed close upon them, always halting near by and at their very side, but strongly fortifying his camps and keeping strong positions in his front, so that he could pass the night in safety. Thus the two armies went on until they eame to the place called Aquae Sextiae, from which they had to march only a short distance and they would be in the Alps. For this reason, indeed, Marius made preparations to give battle here, and he occupied for his camp a position that was strong, but poorly supplied with water, wishing, as they say, by this circumstance also to incite his soldiers to fight. At any rate, when many of them were dissatisfied and said they would be thirsty there, he pointed to a river that ran near the barbarian fortifications, and told them they could get water there, but the

5 i

TOTOV wvtovy aipatos. ‘Ti ody,” épacay, “‘ ovK
"Or @e A Mv > bd 3 4 a e N \ evOus- nas ayes err auTtous, ws Uypoy TO alua
> n A fol
Exouev; ' KaKelvos npéua-TH hovn, “ Iporepov,” elrev, “ OyUpwTéov Huivy TO oTpaToTeEsoV.” XIX. Ot peév oty orpati@rat Knaitep aoyar-Novtes ereiOovto: THs. Sé Gepareias TO WAROOS
w 9 > \ N 50” € ¥, / ” b) / oUT avtol toTov ov0” btrotuyios Exovtes aO poor t ? \ / e \ > gos 2 \
kaTéBawov eri Tov ToTapmoy, oi pev akivas, ot dé
4 ” \ \ l4 \ ; buf ”~
Teréxels, Evia Se Kat Eipn nal Noyxas aya Tots
e / 9 4 e \ \ 4 e 4
Udpiots avadaBovTes, ws Kal dia payns vdpevoo-Mevol. TOUTOLS TO TPHTOV OrjLYOL TpOTELAaYoOVTO TOV TOAELiOY: ETUXOY yap apLloTw@VTES Oi TONAL
A / e 4 ¢ / b /
peTa NouTpor, ot 5é ENoVOYTO. PHyvUcL yap avToOt vapatov Oeppav mnyas 0 Y@pos' Kal pépos Tt jwept taita tovs BapBapouvs evtabotvtas Kat mavnyupivovtas noovn xal Oavuatt tod toTou
, ee a \ \ \ \
ckatérxaBov ot “Pwpaiot. mpos dé THY Kpavynv TAELOvaY oUYTpEYoYTwY T@ TE Mapip yarerov Hy éTL TOUS OTpaTLWTAS éTioxXelyY TEPl THY OLKET@Y dedcoras, cal Ta@VY TokEeulwoy TO paytuwTaToD
, e 7? ® , ¢ A \
pépos, uh ov mponttnvtTo Pwpator pera Mad-Aiov kab Kausriwvos mpotepov (""“AuBpwves wvopavtovto Kal wAnOos virép Tptapupious avTol Kad” éavtovs joav), aval€avtes eri tas mavoTXias éy@pouv. Ta ev ov cwpata TANG MOVH BeBapn-A ce) /
pévot, Tots 6€ Ppovnpact yavpor cal draxexupévot
Mpos Tov AKpaTov, OVK ATdKTOLS OvSE paviwbeat U , > \ v > \ er
depopevor Spopors ovde avapOpov adadaypov tev-

TES, GAA KpovovTes puOu@ Ta Girra Kal ouvad-512

CAIUS MARIUS

_ price of it was blood. “ Why, then,” they said, “dost thou not lead us at once against the enemy, ° while our blood is still moist?” To which Marius calmly replied: “We must first make our camp strong.”
XIX. His soldiers, accordingly, though reluctant, obeyed ; but the throng of camp-servants, who had no water either for themselves or their beasts, went down in a body to the river, some taking hatchets, some axes, and some also swords and lances along with their water-jars, determined to get water even if they had to fight for it. With these only a few of the enemy at first engaged, since the main body were taking their meal after bathing, and some were still bathing. For streams of warm water burst from the ground in this place, and at these the Romans surprised a number of the Barbarians, who were enjoying themselves and making merry in this wonderfully pleasant place. Their cries brought more of the Barbarians to the spot, and Marius had difficulty in longer restraining his soldiers, since they had fears now for their servants. Besides, the most warlike division of the enemy, by whom at an earlier time the Romans under Manlius and Caepio had been defeated ! (they were called Ambrones and _ of themselves numbered more than thirty thousand), had sprung up from their meal and were running to get their arms. However, though their bodies were surfeited and weighed down with food and their spirits excited and disordered with strong wine, they did not rush on in a disorderly or frantic course, nor raise an inarticulate battle-cry, but rhythmically clashing their arms and leaping to the sound they

1 Cf. chapter xvi. 5.
513
VOL. IX. LL

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

_ Aopevor TWAVTES dua THY avTav epeyyovro
” IOANUEKLS ™poonyopiav "ApBpoves, elre ava-Kanrovpevot opas avrous, elTeE TOUS TONE Lous TH
mpodnracet m poexpoBobvres. TOY dé "Traducdy TpOTOL cataBaivovtes ér autovs Atyues, as ieove ap Bowvtay Kai cuvixay, dvtepavouy Kal avrot MA maT ptov emixAnow avrTav eivary opas yap aurous odTws KATA YEVOS évopdtovar Adyves.
WUKYOKL ovY Kal TapadAnrov avrnxer mpl ets
Xelpas ouvedbeiy TO dvadwvnua: Kal TOY TTPATOV ExaTépos avd pépos cuvava ery youeveav Kat prdoTipmoupEvery Tp@Tovy addAndOUS TP poeryedes
TAS Bons vmrepBaréea Oar, mapwetuve cat Sinpebrbe
TOV Oupov 9 n Kpavy7.

Tovs Hep ovv "ApBpavas diéoTrace 70 petO pov:
ov yap épPacay ets TaEW KaTacTHVaL diaBarres, ahha Tots mparors evOvs pera Spopou rav Acyvov T pooTed ovTwy éy Xepaly Wy 7 paXn Tots dé Atyver TOV ‘Pepatov emiBonOovvtwv Kat pepopevery avolev é éml TOUS BapBapous Brac bév-Tes €TpdTrovTo. Kal Theta rot pe avrov Tept 70 petOpov @Oovpevor Kat’ aA AwY emaiovTo Kal KareTTi“T\acay povov Kal vex pav TOV TOTapov, tous O€ Sia Raves ot ‘Peopator By TOAMavTaS ava-orpéedev Extewov axXpt Tov oTpatoTrébou Kal TAY apatev pevyovtas. évraida, 5€ al yuvaixes atr-avTacaL pera Echav Kal TreAEKEWY Sewvov TET pt-yuiae Kat mepiOupov 7 LVVOVTO TOUS pevryovtas opolos Kal TOUS StwKOVTAS, TOUS LEV WS mpodoras, TOUS dé ws ToAepious, avarreduppévat paxomevors
Kat Xepal yupvais tovs te Oupeovs TaV “Poopator 514

CAIUS MARIUS

would frequently shout out all together their tribal name Ambrones, either to encourage one another, or to terrify their enemies in advance by the declaration. The first of the Italians to go down against them were the Ligurians, and when they heard and understood what the Barbarians were shouting, they themselves shouted back the word, claiming it as their own an- cestral appellation ; for ‘the Ligurians call themselves Ambrones by descent. Often, then, did the shout echo and reecho from either side before they came to close quarters; and since the hosts back of each party took up the cry by turns and strove each to outdo the other first in the magnitude of their shout, their cries roused and fired the spirit of the com- — batants.

Well, then, the Ambrones became separated by the stream; for they did not all succeed in getting across and forming an array, but upon the foremost of them the Ligurians at once fell with a rush, and the fighting was hand-to-hand. Then the Romans came to the aid of the Ligurians, and charging down from the heights upon the Barbarians overwhelmed and turned them back. Most of the Ambrones were cut down there in the stream where they were all crowded together, and the river was filled with their blood and their dead bodies; the rest, after the Romans had crossed, did not dare to face about, and the Romans kept slaying them until they came in their flight to their camp and waggons. Here the women met them, swords and axes in their hands, and with hideous shrieks of rage tried to drive back fugitives and pursuers alike, the fugitives as traitors, and the pursuers as foes; they mixed them- selves up with the combatants, with bare hands tore

515

LL 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

aTrooTaca Kai trav Evbav émiiapBavopevat, cal Tpavpata Kat Staxomas TopaTov UTropévoucat, péxpe TEAEUT IIS anTTNTOL Tots Oupois. THY pev ou TapaTroT dpov payny odTw Kata TUYNY Uar-Nov youn Tob oTpaTayou yevéoOat deyovary.
XX. "Evel 6é ToAAoUS Ta "ApBpavev. ot
‘Peopaior StapOeipartes dvexepnaay orice Kat
TKOTOS éméaxen, ovx, domep én evTUXn HATE TOTOUTH Tov oTpatoy édéFayTo TraLaves émwvixtot car TOTOL Kara oKnvas Kal pedroppocvvar epi detrrva Kal TO TavTOV ndvarov dvdpdow EUTUX OS
pepaxnpevoss, dirvos Hrvos, GAN éxeiyny pamorTa THY vuRTO poRepay at Tapaxwon Senryayov. wy per yap avtots aYapacwtov TO otparoredop Kas ateixiaTov, amehelTrovTo 1 $é Tov BapBapov é ere modal pupiddes anrTntot, Kal CUpLpeLiry Levey TovTots Soot SiaTrepevyerav tov ‘ApBpeover, aduppos Hv da VUKTOS, ov KAavO ois ovde orevarypois avOpwrrav é coLKws, GANA Onpopeyns TUS opyyn Kal Bpvynua pre pesry wévov amethais Kal Opryvors avarre [iT OWevov x mnBous TOTOUTOU Td TE mépug épn eal Ta KotNa TOU TOT ALOU Teprepovet. Kal Kateixe dpixwdns Yos TO Tediov, Tovs 5é ‘Popatous dé0s, avrov te tov Mapuov éxtrdnees a-KO Ov Twa Kal _Tapaxadn VUKTOMAX LAY ™poo-Sexouevov. ou pny émnrOov obre VUKTOS ovTe THS émLovens npépas, GANA cuYTaTroVTEs EavTOUS Kas Tapac evalopevot SteréXoup.
"Ep TOUT® dé Mdptos, joav yap éx Kepahis
tav BapBdpwv vdtrar Twepixrivels Kal KaTaoKsos
1 gwredclwovro, Bekker adopts Coraés’ correction to dweAel-ToyvTo, 516

41%

CAIUS MARIUS

away the shields of the Romans or grasped their swords, and endured wounds and mutilations, their fierce spirits unvanquished to the end. So, then, as we are told, the battle at the river was brought on by accident rather than by the intention of the commander. |

XX. After destroying many of the Ambrones the Romans withdrew and night came on; but in spite of so great a success the army did: not indulge in paeans of victory, or drinking in the tents, or friendly converse over suppers, or that sweetest of all delights for men who have fought and won a battle, gentle sléep, but that night more than any other was spent in fears and commotions. For their camp was still without palisade or wall, and there were still left many myriads of the Barbarians who had met with no defeat. These had been joined by all the Am- brones who survived the battle, and there was lamentation among them all night long, not like the wailings and groans of men, but howlings and bellow- ' ings with a strain of the wild beast in them, mingled with threats and cries of grief, went up from this vast multitude and echceed among the surrounding hills and over the river valley. The whole plain was filled with an awful din, the Romans - with fear, and even Marius himself with consternation as he awaited some disorderly and confused night- battle. However, the Barbarians made. no attack either during that night or the following day, but spent the time in marshalling their forces and making preparations.

Meanwhile, since the position of the Barbarians was commanded by sloping glens and ravines that were

‘Spupois avraves, evtradda Kravdsov Mapxedrrov €xTéumel peta TploxtALwv omrALTaY, évedpedoat Kerevoas Kpvpa Kal payopuévors, éEoTricbev émepavivat. tovs 5€ ddXrous Sertvncavtas év dpa \ t o> es , \ a eal Kouunéevras au’ quepa cuvératte mpo Tod
Napaxos ayayov, cal mpocEémepte TOUS lirTeas 9 \ id 4 <A e , ? els TO Tedtov. Oeacayuevor 5é of Tevroves ov nvésxyovto xataBaivovtas avtots é€ tcov dia-4 Q \ ‘Pp , b a \ 4 AN yovitesVar Tous Pwpatous, aXvAa@ ouv TayYel Kal
9 9? a e , A / , e du’ opyis omAtodpevot TS AOHM TpocéBarov. oO 5é Mdpus éxactayod Staréurav tovs jyepovas écTaval Kal KapTepeiy TapeKare, TeAacavTwv Oé eis eduxtrov éEaxovricat tovs vacous, elta xph-Oat Tais paxaipais Kal Tots Oupeots avtepeicar-
a / a tas BidlecOau Trav yap ToTeY émucharov ovTOY
\
éxeivous ovTE Tovoy eew Tas TANYAS OTE pon TOY cuvacTiCMOY, ev TeptTpoTH Kal cad@ Tov cwpatov dvrov dia THY avopariay. TadTa dua mapnve. Kal Spav éwpato mpwTos: ovdevos yap HOKNTO YElpov TO GMa, Kal wavTas ToAV TH

, / ;
TOALN TrapnANATTED.
XXI. ‘Os otv avtictaytes avtois ot “Pwpator
” /
Kal ouptecovtes éxyov avw depopevous, éexOr«- Bopevor kata pixpov wrexy@povy ets to Trediov
Kal Tov TpeTwY Hon KaOtoTapévwr eis Takiv ev
A x \
Tots émumédors Bon Kat Stactacpos Hv tept Tovs
v e \ \ > \ ,
omtaev. 0 yap Katpos ovn EXaGe Tov Mapxerrdon, GANA THS Kpavyhs Urép Tovs Nopous avw depo-
> wn
pévns avaoctncas Tovs pet avTod Spoym Kal

shaded by trees, Marius sent Claudius Marcellus thither with three thousand men-at-arms, under orders. to lie concealed in ambush until the battle was on, and then to show themselves in the enemy’s rear. The rest of his soldiers, who had taken supper in good season and then got a night’s sleep, he led out at day-break and drew up in front of the camp, and sent out his cavalry into the plain. The Teutones, seeing this, could not wait for the Romans to come down and fight with them on equal terms, but quickly and wrathfully armed themselves and charged up the hill. But Marius, sending his officers to all parts of the line, exhorted the soldiers to stand firmly in their lines, and when the enemy had got within reach to hurl their javelins, then take to their swords and crowd the Barbarians back with their shields; for since the enemy were. on precarious ground their blows would have no force and the locking of their shields no strength, but the uneven- ness of the ground would keep them turning and tossing about. This was the advice he gave his men, ‘and they saw that he was first to act accordingly; — for he was in better training than any of them, and in daring far surpassed them all.

_ XXI. Accordingly, the Romans awaited the enemy's onset, then closed with them and checked their upward rush, and at last, crowding them back little by little, forced them into the plain. Here, while the Barbarians in front were at last forming in line on level ground, there was shouting and commotion in their rear. For Marcellus had watched his opportunity, and when the cries of battle were borne | up over the hills he put his men upon the run and

J “a , , 4 \
GNANAYU@ TPOTETIMTE KATA VWTOU, KTELVOY TOUS
éxyatous. of 5é Tovs Wpo avTaY état w@pevot
TAXU TaY TO OTpaTevpa Tapayns évérANoav, ov ToNUY TE Ypovoy nvécyovTo Tratopevor Sty oOen,

9 \ \ 4 4, w e Ve al
adry.a Thy Tak AVoavTeEs Efevyov. of 5é ‘Pwpaior St@xovtes avtav pev UTrép Séxa pupiadas 7 Covras
a / a“ \ \ ¢ a \
etkov 7 KatéBarov, oxnvev 5€ xai apakov Kai Yenuatwv kpatnoavres, doa wy dtexramn, Maptov rAaBeiv epndicavto. Kat Swpeads TavTns NaptTpo-
D2
TaTns Tuy@v ovdev akiov exew @v éotpatTHynoev evoyicOn Sia TO Tov KLVdUVOU péyeOos.
7 \ “A aA a 4 b
Erepot dé rept tis Swpeas Tov ANadvpwv ovy OMoroyovaLV, OVdSE Tept TOU TANOOUS TeV TETOD-
tov. Maocarinras pmévtot rA€youvet Tois GoTéoLs TweplOptyx@oat Tovs autredA@vas, THY 6 YyhV, TOV
A \ A
vexpov Katavarwlevtwv ev avtTh Kat Sia Yetmavos ouBpov émrimecovtwy, obtws éxdTravOnvar Kat
/ \ 4 / fol ‘
yevéerOar da Bd0ous wepitrAew TIS anmeddvos évovons @aTeE KapT ay brepBadrov cis @pas
mr os eEeveyKety Kat Haptupioat TO “ApXiroyp eyourt Tiaiveo Oat Trpos Tov ToLOvTOU Tas apoUpas. érucixas 5€ Tails peyddais pdyats éEatcious veTovs émixatappnyvucOat Aéyovow, elte Sat-poviov Tivos THY yhv KaBapois Kal Stimeréow ayvitovtos béact Kal KataxruUlovtos, elite Tov
a ee
gdovov xal THs aontedovos éEavieions bypay Kal Bapeiav avadupiaci, * Tov aépa ovviornow eUTpemTov OdvTa Kal paditov peraBdArew aro
P / > N A Pe 3 a TMLKPOTATNS ETL WAELTTOV apyYyNs.
520

fell with loud shouts upon the enemy’s rear, where he cut down the hindmost of them. Those in the rear forced along those who were in front of them,
and quickly plunged the whole army into confusion,
and under this double attack they could not hold out long, but broke ranks and fled. The Romans pursued them and either slew or took alive over a hundred thousand of them, besides making themselves masters of their tents, waggons, and property, all of which, with the exception of what was pilfered, was given to Marius by vote of the soldiers. And though the gift that he received was so splendid, it was thought to be wholly unworthy of his services in the campaign, where the danger that threatened had been so great.

There are some writers, however, who give a different account of the division of the spoils, and also of the number of the slain. Nevertheless, it is*said that the people of Massalia fenced their vineyards round with the bones of the fallen, and that the soil, after the bodies had wasted away in it and the rains had fallen all winter upon it, grew so rich and be- came so full to its depths of the putrefied matter that sank into it, that it produced an exceeding great harvest in after years, and confirmed the saying of Archilochus! that “fields are fattened”’ by such a process. And it is said that extraordinary rains generally dash down after great battles, whether it is that some divine power drenches and hallows the ground with purifying waters from Heaven, or that the blood and putrefying matter send up a moist and heavy vapour which condenses the air, this being easily moved and readily changed to the highest degree by the slightest cause.

1 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graecs, ii.4 pp. 428 f.

XXII. Mera &é THY pany O _Maptos TOV BapBapicav Om ov Kat Aad upwv Ta pev EXT PETA kal odkoKANpa Kal Tow LK AY Oyu T@ OprduBe Suvdpeva Tapacyxetv éréne£e, TOD dé adXNwv esl mupas meyarns KaTacwpevcas TO TrIIOS éOuce Ouaiav peyaron perry. Kai Tov oTpaTov Tape- TTATOS ey Srrdos ea repavepevov TreptSwadpevos autos, domep GOos éativ, avahaBav THY TepuTrop- g@upov Kat AaBov dada KaLomevny Kal be apudorepav TeV Xe~pav dvacxeov Tos TOV ovpavov ewer Aev vpnoev 7H Tupa: «al TpogedavvovTes iarmous EwpOVTO pirou OUD Taxet Tos autor, dare Tomy yevér Gat oeomny Kal mpocdoxiay amdvtwy. eet dé éeyyls hoav, atorndncaytes edeEtodvro TOV Mapuor, evaryyeMtCopevor TO WéuTr- Tov aurov dmratov nphoba., Kat ypappata Trept TOUT@Y arrédoaap. _beyadns ov Xapas trois ET LVLKLOLS T poaryevoperns 6 Te oTpaTos ud’ ndoviis evo ip Twi KPOT@ Kat TaTay@ ovvndrddakay, Kal TOV HyEHOvey TOV Mépvov avis avadovyt oy Sadyns arepadvots évnwe tiv Twupav Kal thy vata éreTeNeiwcer.

XXII. ‘H dé ponder éaoa TOV peyddov €U-TUXNLATODV AKPAaTov Ets noovny Kal caapor, arra pifer KaKaV xal ayabav Toixihhovca, TOV av0 par-TLvov Biov 7 uy tTUyn Te 7 veweots n T parywaT ov dvayKata puous ov TrohAais UoTEepov nuépaus emnyarye @ Mapiy THy mept KdtaAov Tob oupdpxovtos aryyedav, GoTep év evdia Kat yarn
vemos, avtis & Erepov gpoBov rat yetwava Th Popun TEeploTnaaca. o yap 5 Kadtdos dvrixadnpevos tots KiuBpos tas pev brepBords tov “AXrewy 522

CAIUS MARIUS

XXII. After the battle, Marius collected such of the arms and spoils of the Barbarians as were hand- some, entire, and fitted to make a show in his triumphal procession ; all the rest he heaped up on a huge pyre and set on foot a magnificent sacrifice. The soldiers had taken their stand about the pyre in arms, with chaplets on their heads, and Marius himself, having put on his purple-bordered robe and girt it about him, as the custom was, had taken a lighted torch, held it up towards heaven with both hands, and was just about to set fire to the pyre, when some friends were seen riding swiftly towards him, and there was deep silence and expectancy on the part of all. But when the horsemen were near, they leaped to the ground and greeted Marius, bringing him the glad news that he had been elected consul for the fifth time,! and giving him letters to that effect. This great cause for rejoicing having been added to the celebration of their victory, the soldiers, transported with delight, sent forth a universal shout, accompanied by the clash and clatter of their arms, and after his officers had crowned Marius afresh with wreaths of bay, he set fire to the pyre and completed the sacrifice.

XXIII. However, that power which permits no great successes to bring a pure and unmixed enjoy- ment, but diversifies human life with a blending of evil and of good—be it Fortune, or Nemesis, or Inevit- able Necessity, within a few days brought to Marius tidings of his colleague Catulus, which, like a cloud in a calm and serene sky, involved Rome in another tempest of fear. For Catulus, who was facing the Cimbri, gave up trying to guard the passes of the 1 For the year 101 B.o.

§23
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

arréyuw puraoce, 17) KATA TONKA THY SUVA
pépn Seaipeiv avayxalopevos aabevns yévotto, xataBas & evdus eis tHv "Itadiav Kal rov ’Attcava TOT apov NaBov po avTov Kai ppafdpevos ™ pos tas diaBadcers éxatépwber i tayupots Xapa-KO LAT LY, éleufe TOV Topoy, as émrtBonbety ein Tots

mépav, el _ pos Ta ppovpra Budlowro Sia ray OTEVOY Ob BdpRapor. Tots dé TocovTov Tmepthy vrepowpias Kai Opacous Kata TOY Trohepdery dove
popny Kat TOhmay em erxvupevor paddov 7 mpar-TovTés TL TOY avaryKatov yupvol pep nvelXovTo vicpopevot cai 51a maywv Kal yvovos Badeias Tots aK pots mpoaéBawwor, avo bev dé Tous Oupeovs :
wrateis Drorievres Tois cdpacty, elra aduévtes aurous Umepepovro Kata Kpnpvav orducOnpata kal ALoaddas dyaveis eX OvTe@v. ws de TapaoTparomesevaavres eyyus cai kaTaoKeyapevor TOV Topov ipEavro Xovv, Kal Tous qépue Aogous avappnyvuvres, @orep ot yiyartes, apa bevdpa mpoppita Kal Kpnpvav amapdyparta Kal ys
KOM@VOUS épopouy els TOY TOTAMOP, éxOri Bovres
TO pevpa Kal Tois épetSovar Ta Cevypata BaOpors erévres Bapyn peydra cupopeva, Kata poov xal TlWaTTovTa tails mrnyais THY yepupay, amrobes-Mdoartes Ol TAELOTOL TOD TTPATLOT OY é&éNstrov
TO péya oTpaToTredov Kal dvex@povv.
"Ev0a 57 Kdrios éderEev éauvTov, waomTrep
TO | arya ov Kal TéXelov apyovrTa, THY avTov dokav éy Daren TOV TOT OY a. Déuevov. érrel yap ove éretOe TovS oTpatim@tas péverv, AXX' éwpa Tept-Ses avatevyvivtas, dpacOat Kedevoas Tov aeTov 41!
524

CAIUS MARIUS

Alps, lest he shopld be weakened by the necessity of dividing his forces into many parts, and at once descended into the plains of Italy. Here he put the river Atiso between himself and the enemy, built strong fortifications on both banks of it to prevent their crossing, and threw a bridge across the stream, that he might be able to go to the help of the people on the other side in case the Barbarians made their way through the passes and attacked the fortresses. But these Barbarians were so contemptuous and bold in following their enemies that, more by way of displaying their strength and daring than because it was necessary at all, they endured the snow-storms without any clothing, made their way through ice and deep snow to the summits, and from there, putting their broad shields under them and then let- ting themselves go, slid down the smooth and deeply fissured cliffs. After they had encamped near the , stream and examined the passage, they began to dam it up, tearing away the neigbouring hills, like the giants of old, carrying into the river whole trees with their roots, fragments of cliffs, and mounds of earth, and crowding the current out of its course; they also sent whirling down the stream against the piles of the bridge heavy masses which made the bridge quiver with their blows, until at last the greater part of the Roman soldiers played the coward, abandoned their main camp, and began to retreat.

And now Catulus, like a consummately good com- mander, showed that he had less regard for his own reputation than for that of his countrymen. For finding that he could not persuade his soldiers to re- main, and seeing that they were making off in terror, he ordered his standard to be taken up, ran to the 535

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ss TOUS TPWTOUS TAY ATEpYoLEeVWY Opunoe Spdpw Kal patos nyeito, BovAopevos avTov TO atoxpoy,
b) 'N ' fo] 4 / \ a A adra py THS TaTpidos yevéoOar, kai Soxety pr dhevyovtas, dvr érropévous TH OTPAaTHY@ Trovet\ bd , e de 4 \ \
aOat thy atroxwpnot. ot dé BapBapor ro pév mépav Tov Aricavos ppouvplov éredOovtes EXaBop, Kal tovs autToGr 'Pwyaious avipav Kxpatiotous yevouevous Kat mpoxiwoduvevoavtas akiws Tis matpioos OGavydacavtes vToomTovdous adjxay, OpocavTes TOY YaXKodY Tadpor, dv DaTEpoy dXovTA
\ \ , bf A 4. > 2
peta thy paynv ets tHy KdtArov dacly oixiay @omep axpoinov Tihs vixens KoptcOjvat. thy Sé yaepay Eonuov Bonletas émiyvbévtes émopOouv.
XXIV. 'Esi tovros éeareito Mdptos eis thy
'Poynv: cal mapayevopevos, wavtTw@v avTov oio-
, , " a a
pévav OptapBevoew nal tis BovrAts mpoOvpws Wndicapévns, oun nEiwoey, cite TOUS oTpaTLWTAS kal auvayovicTas amootepjoat THS PiAroTLLLias pu) BovAdpevos, eltre mpos Ta Tapovta Bappvvwy TO TAHOOS, @S TH TUYN THS TWoAEWS TAapaKaTaTt-Oéwevos THY TOV TpeTwY KaTOpOwpdToy So-ay év tois Sevtépots Aaprpotrépay arrodoOncopevny.
SiarexOeis 5€ Ta wpéTovTa TH Katp@ Kal mpos
tov KdtXov éEopunoas, tovTov te tapeOdppuve kal Tovs avuTod peTeméuTeTo oTpatiwtas éx Tanatias. ws 8€ adixovto, SiaBas tov Hpsdavov elpyery éretpato THs évTds 'Itadias tovs Bap-
, e \ / b 4
Bapovs. ot d€ tovs Tevtovas éxdéyerOat . Kal 526

CAIUS MARIUS

foremost of the retiring troops, and put himself at their head, wishing that the disgrace should attach to himself and not to his country, and that his soldiers, in making their retreat, should not appear to be running away, but following their general. The Barbarians attacked and captured the fortress on the further side of the Atiso, and they so much admired the Romans there, who showed themselves bravest of men and fought worthily of their country, that they let them go on parole, making them take oath upon the bronze bull. This was subsequently captured, after the battle, and was carried, we are told, to the house of Catulus as the chief prize of the victory. But the country was now destitute of defenders, and the Barbarians inundated and ravaged it.

XXIV. In view of these things Marius was sum- moned to Rome. When he had arrived there, it was the general expectation that he would celebrate the triumph which, the senate had readily voted him. But he refused to do so, either because he did not wish to deprive his soldiers and comrades-in-arms of their due honours, or because he would encourage the multitude in view of the present crisis by en- trusting the glory of his first success to the fortune . of the state, in the hope that it would be returned to him enhanced by a second: Having said what was suitable to the occasion, he set out to join Catulus, whom he tried to encourage, while at the same time he summoned his own soldiers from Gaul. When these had come, he crossed the Po and tried to keep the Barbarians out of the part of Italy lying this side of the river. But the Barbarians declined battle, alleging that they were waiting for

Oavydlew ws Bpadvvovtwv pacKovtes aveBar-NovTo Thy payny, elite ayvoobvTes SvTwWS THY 9 , , w , "A 9 "
exetvwv POopav, elte Bovromevor Soxety arioreiv.
9 , > A , A
wal yap Tous ayyéAXovTas nKiSovTo Seas, Kal Tov Mdpiov nrovy méuWaytes éavrois Kal Tois aberpois ywpay nal modes ixavas évotxetv. épopévov
"~ la \ , \ "~ 9 nw
5é rod Mapiou rovs mpécBers mept Tav adeXdor, KaKelvVOY ovopacdvtTwy tous TevTovas, of pmeév ado dvtes éyéAacay, o 5€ Maptos éoxwwev
> 2 cE , \ 9 / ¥ A
eirr@v: "Kate tolvuy tous adergous: Exovor yap yn éxeivot kat Ota tmavtos E€ovot wap jmav AaBovtes." ot b¢ rpéc Bees THY Elpwveiav cuvevTeEs

éXoLdopouy avrov ws dicny upéfovtra, KipSpoes
\ > , 4 \ @ S, 66
bev avtixa, Tevroos dé Stay rrapayévwvtar. “ Kal \ / ”» e / “) ’ o
pny mdapeow, ébn o Maptos, “Kali ovy ees
A e a 9 na 4 a ‘ 9
KAANOS Luly aTadAayhvat TpoTEpov 7) TOUS adEA-govs adomdcacba.” Kal Tavita citrwv éxédevce TOUS Bacireis tov Tevtovev mpoaxOjvat dedepévous: édiwoav yap év tais “AXtrect pevyovres vmTo YnKovavov.
XXV. ‘Os S€ aanyyérXOn tadta Tois KipSpors,
* 3 9 fa) b] , > \ \ 4 e€ 4
avlis €E apyis éxwpouy éti tov Mapioy novya-
\ 4 \ Ud 4
Covra xal dsahvAdttovtra To otpatotresov. NEyeT at dé eis éxetyny thy payny mpatov bo Mapiou
a \ \ KatvorounOnvas TO Tept TOS VaaoUs. TO yap Ets
\ U v A 4 a \
Tov aidnpov éuBAYpa Tod EvrAou mpoTepov peév Hv
a \
Svol mepovars KaTetAnppévov aidypais, Tote Sé oO
4 Mdpuos rnv per, dorrep elyev, elace, THY 8 évépav éFexov EvAwov roy evOpavotoy avt avtis 528

their brethren the Teutones and wondered why they were so long in coming; this was either because they were really ignorant of their destruction, or because they wished to have the appearance of disbelieving it. For they terribly mishandled those who brought tidings of it, and sent to Marius de- manding territory for themselves and their brethren and enough cities for them to dwell in. When Marius asked their ambassadors whom they meant by their brethren, they said they meant the Teutones. At this, all the other Romans who heard them burst out laughing, and Marius scoffingly said : « Then don’t trouble yourselves about your brethren, for they have land, and they will have it forever— land which we have given them.” The ambassadors understood his sarcasm and fell to abusing him, declaring that he should be punished for. it, by the Cimbri at once, and by the Teutonés when they came. “ Verily,” said Marius, “they are here, and it will not be right for you to go away before you have. . embraced your brethren.” Saying this, he ordered the kings of the Teutones to be produced in fetters ; for they had been captured among the Alps, where they were fugitives, by the Sequani.

XXV. When these things had been reported to the Cimbri, they once more advanced against Marius, who kept quiet and carefully guarded his camp. And it is said that it was in preparation for this battle that

Marius introduced an innovation in the structure of the javelin. Up to this time, it seems, that part of the shaft which was let into the iron head was fastened there by two iron nails; but now, leaving one of these as, it was, Marius removed the other, and put in its place a wooden pin that could easily

° 66 , ' \ e \ A
2 evéBare, Teyvalwy tpoomecovtTa Tov vacoyv TO Oupe@ Tod ToAEuiou pun pévetv opOov, adda TOU
o / (4 \ / \
EuXtvov xracbévtos Nov Kaprny yiverOa. Tept
' , \ / \ , A A
Tov aidnpov Kai mapédXKecOat To Sopu, &a THv
oTpeBAOTHTA THS aiypns eveyopevov. |

BosapeF 5é 0 tav KipBpwv Bacrrevs orLyooros
Tpocimmevaas TH oTpaToTédw@ MpovKanreito Tov ¢ td "~
Madpuoy, nuépav opicavta Kat Torrov, mpoeAOeiv
xat StaywricacBa epi THs xwpas. Tod bé Mapiov dycavtos ovdérote "Pwpaious supBov-rots KexpHoOat Trepi paxns Tois TroAEuioLs, Ov LHV
> \ "A A , e , \
adda Kal yaptetcOat rodTO Kip Spots, nuépav pev EOevto Thy am éxeivns tpitnv, yopav é TO 7re-
, \ } e ld \ b 4
Stov 76 wept BepxédXXas, Pwpaiors pev émitydecov évinnacacbar, trav 5€ avadyvow TO TAHOE Tapacyely.
Typycavtes ovy Tov wpiopevoy Xpovoy avTt-mapetdaaovto, KdtXos pev Exywv dtcpupious Kal Tptaxoctous atpatiatas, ot dé Mapiou dsoxidsoe
pev ent tpropupions éyévovTo, teptéaxov 5é Tov Kdrdov év péow veunbévtes eis éexatepov Képas,
e , ? ; > 7 \ /
@> LwaAdAas, Hywvicpévos exeivnv Thy payny,

Ul , ' M 4 x , a yéypabe. Kai dnot tov Mdptoy éAtricavta ois dxpows padtota Kal KaTa Képas cuptreceiy Tas ddrayyas, Srrws iSios 4 inn Tov éxeivou otpa-TLWTOY YyevolTo Kal pn METAaTYXOL TOU aywVOS Oo
a 4

KatnXos nde mpocpi€ese Tots TroAeuiols, KOATOMA
TOV pécov, WaTrep clwOev ev peydrols pEeTwTrOLS, NapBavovtwv, odtw Svacthoa: Tas duvdpers.
53°

4

0

CAIUS MARIUS

be broken. His design was that the javelin, after striking the enemy's shield, should not stand straight out, but that the wooden peg should break, thus allowing the shaft to bend in the iron head and trail along the ground, being held fast by the twist at the point of the weapon.

And now Boeorix the king of the Cimbri, with a small retinue, rode up towards the camp and challenged Marius to set a day and a place and come out and fight for the ownership of the country. Marius replied that the Romans never allowed their enemies to give them advice about fighting, but that he would nevertheless gratify the Cimbri in this matter. Accordingly, they decided that the day should be the third following, and the place the plain of Vercellae, which was suitable for the operations of the Roman cavalry, and would give the Cimbri room to deploy their numbers.

When, therefore, the appointed time had come, the Romans drew up their forces for battle. Catulus had twenty thousand three hundred soldiers, while those of Marius amounted to thirty-two thousand, which were divided between both wings and had Catulus between them in the centre, as Sulla, who fought in this battle, has stated.1_ He says also that Marius hoped that the two lines would engage at their extremities chiefly and on the wings, in order that his soldiers might have the whole credit for the victory and that Catulus might not participate in the struggle nor even engage the enemy (since the centre, as is usual in battle-fronts of great extent, would be folded back) ; and therefore arranged the

1 In his Memoirs; cf. the Sulla, iv. 3.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dpora 5€é eal Toy KdtAov avtov atrovoyelcOac trepi
TovTwY iotopovat, ToAANY KaTNYyopourTa Tov Mapiou xaxonOecav mpos autov.
Tots 5¢ KiwSpors ro yey relov ex TaV épupata@v

xa’ novyiay mpone, Babos icov TO peToT@
ToLovpevoyv. Exaorn yap éréaye TWAEUPA oTAdioUS TpiaxovtTa THs tapatakews: ot dé imeis puvptot nal tevraxioyidto. To TAHOoS dvtes e€)jNacav Naptrpol, xpavn pev eixacpéva Onpiwy PoBepaov xdopact Kal mpotopais tScopoppois éxovtes, as eTraLpopevot ANOHoLs TrEpwTois Eis Orvos EhatvovTo peivous, Owpaks Sé xexoounpévor ctdnpois, Oupeois
d€ NevKois oTiABovtTes. dKovticpa Se Wy éexdoT@
S:Borjia: cuptrecovtes b€ peyddas eypavtTo Kat
Bapeiass paxatpats. |
XXVI. Tore d€ ovxl cata otopa Tpocepépovro tots ‘Pwpaiots, AX’ éxxAvovtes él Seva brHyov avTovS KaTa pixpov, éuBdrXovtes eis TO pécoV auT@y Te Kal Tav melav éF apiotepas TapaTteTay-Hévov. Kal cuvetooy pev of Trav ‘Popaiwy orparn-yot tov Sorov, émicyety 5€ tods orpatiwras oun EpOnaav, adr’ évds exBonaoavtos Sti hevyouow ot Todéutot, TavTes Opunoay Sioxew. Kal
To welov ev ToUT@ TaV BapRapwv émne Kaddtrep TéAaryos ayaves Kivovpevov. eévTad0a vinpdpevos
o Mdpios tas yelpas Kal mpos Tov ovpavoy avaoxyev evEato Tos Geois kata éExatouBns. evEaTo Sé xal Katnos opoiws dvacyav tas yelpas xatepace THY TUX NY THS Nwépas exeivns. Tov dé Mapiov cal Ovcavra éyerat TOY Lep@v avT@ dry Pevtav péya POeyEduevoy cirety “Kun 7 9 ViKN.
532

CAIUS MARIUS

forces in thismanner. And we are told that Catulus himself also made a similar statement in defence of his conduct in the battle, and accused Marius of great malice in his treatment of him.
As for the Cimbri, their foot-soldiers advanced slowly from their defences, with a depth equal to their front, for each side of their formation had an extent of thirty furlongs; and their horsemen, fifteen thousand strong, rode out in splendid style,
with helmets made to resemble the maws of frightful wild beasts or the heads of strange animals, which,
with their towering crests of feathers, made their wearers appear taller than they really were; they were also equipped with breastplates of iron, and carried gleaming white shields. For hurling, each man had two lances; and at close quarters they used large, heavy swords.

XXVI. At this time, however, they did not charge directly upon the Romans, but swerved to the right and tried to draw them along gradually until they got them between themselves and their infantry, which was drawn up on their left. The Roman commanders perceived the crafty design, but did not succeed in holding their soldiers back; for one ot them shouted that the enemy was taking to flight, and then all set out to pursue them. Meanwhile the infantry of the Barbarians came on to the attack like a vast sea in motion. Then Marius, after washing his hands, lifted them to heaven and vowed a hecatomb to the gods; Catulus also in like manner lifted his hands and vowed that he would consecrate the fortune of that day. It is said, too, that Marius offered sacrifice, and that when the victims had been shown to him, he cried with a loud voice: “ Mine is the victory.”
| 533

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tevouévns 6€ rhs épodov mpaypua veyeonrov maeiy tov Mdpiov of wep YvAXrav loTtopodcs. xovtoptod yap apbévtos, olov eixos, dmA€éTOU Kal TOV OTPATOTéOWY ATrOKEKPULpLEVOY, EKElVOV ED, @$ TO TP@TOY WpyNnoe pos THY Siwkw, émioTa- odmevov Thy SivauLy aoTOXnoaL TOV ToAELIOV kal tapeveyOevta THs pPdrayyos év TO Tediv SiahépecPar trodvv xpovov, T@ 5&€ Katr@ Tovs BapBdpovs amo tuyns cuppayhva, Kai yevérbar TOV ay@va KaT éxeivov Kal TOUS exéivou padLoTA otpatiotas, év ols avdtos o YwAAas TeTdyPar gnci: cuvaywvicacba: 5é tots ‘Pwpuaios Td Kadpa Kal TOV HALO avTtAdpTrovTa Tois KipBpais. dewol yap Gvres wmopetvas xpvn, Kal Toros évteOpappévor oxrepois, ws NéAEKTAL, Kal Wruypois, avetpérovro mpos To OdAros, idp@ta Te peTa

adoOuatos Twodvy éx TOV CMpaTwY adlévTes Kal Tovs Oupeovs mpoBarXropmevot pO TOV TpoTwTaY, ate 5) kai peta tpotras Oépous THs payns yevopévns, as dyovot ‘Pwpaiot mpd tpiav uepav THS vouunvias Tod vov pév Avyovotou, Tote dé
LeETvALov pnvos. a@vynoe 5é Kal wpdos TO Oappelv
0 KOVLOpTOS aTroKpUvas TOUS TroAEpioUsS. Ov yap
KaTeloov €k TOAKOD TO TAOS, GAAa Spouw Tots Kat avtovs Exacto. Tpocpitartes ev YEpaiv joay, bd THS Brews py TpoexpoRnOévtes. otto & Hoav SiaTrovet Ta a@pata Kal KkatnOAnKoTes as pntTe \OpodvTa tiva pte doOpaivovta ‘Powpaiwv opOjnvat S:a Tviyous Tocovrov Kat peta Spopov 534

CAIUS MARIUS

After the attack had begun, however, an ex- perience befell Marius which signified the divine displeasure, according to Sulla. For an immense cloud of dust was raised, as was to be expected, and the two armies were hidden from one another by it, so that Marius, when he first led his forces to’ the attack, missed the enemy, passed by their lines of battle, and moved aimlessly up and down the plain for some time. Meanwhile, as chance would have it, the Barbarians engaged fiercely with Catulus, and he and his soldiers, among whom Sulla says he himself was posted, bore the brunt of the struggle. The Romans were favoured in the struggle, Sulla says, by the heat, and by the sun, which shone in the faces of the Cimbri. For the Barbarians were well able to endure cold, and had been brought up in shady and chilly regions, as I have said.1 They were’ therefore un- done by the heat; they sweated profusely, breathed with difficulty, and were forced to hold their shields before their faces. For the battle was fought after the summer solstice, which falls, by Roman reckoning, three days before the new moon of the month now called ‘August,? but then Sextilis. Moreover, the dust, by hiding the enemy, helped to encourage the Romans. For they could not see from afar the great numbers of the foe, but each one of them fell at a run upon the man just over against him, and fought him hand to hand, without having been terrified by the sight of the rest of the host. And their bodies were so inured to toil and so thoroughly trained that not a Roman was observed to sweat or pant, in spite of the great heat and the run with which they

1 Chapter xi. 5 f.
2 a.d. III. Kalendas Augusti.
535

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

THS cuppatews YEVOMEDNS, @S TOV KadrXov aurov 421 toTopety Aéyouor peyaduvovta TOUS oTpaTiOTas.
XXVIII. To pev ovv m)helarov pépos Kal paxeparrarov TOV ToAE Mio avTov KaTeKOTN” Kab oe Hoav urép Tov BT Stacraaba THY réku ot

Tpopaxor paxpais advoeot pos AGAANAOUS ouveE-NOpevor Sua TeV Swati pov avadedeuevais: Tous S€
pevyovtas OoavTes ™pos TO Naparcopa Tpaytka-TaToLS éveTuyxavov mafecw. at yap yuvaires ETL TOV apatov peravelpoves epec Taras TOUS TE pevyovtas & ExTELvon, at Hey avdpas, al : O€ aderpous, ai S€ Tarépas, eal Ta vinta, TOV TEKVOY andy-Xoveat Tais Xepoly éppimrouy x) TOUS TpoXoUS
Kat TOUS m0oas TOV vrro luton, auras dé anéo pat-_ TOV. piav 5é pact é& axpov pupov kpepapevny Ta TaLdia TOV AUTHS opupav adnupéeva Spoxors éxatépw bev Hpria Gat: Tous 6€ avdpas arropig devdpav Tois Képact TOV Body, tous 8é Tots oKéhert ™ poo deiv TOUS avUTOV Tpaxnrous, celta Kévtpa Tpoo pepovTas eFaddopevov TOV Bow epehxopevous Kal TATOULEVOUS atroAAva Oat. my Kaimep OUTS avr ay Stapapevror, éddwoay virép
&& pupiddas: ai 5€ TaY TecovTwY éXéyoVvTO Sis TogavTat ryever Oar.
Ta pev ou Xpipara Sinprracay ot Mapiov oTpaTiaran, Ta be hapupa Kat Tas onpatas Kai Tas cadTuyyas Els TO Kdrhov’ otpatoTedoy a ave-veyOnvat Aeyoug wy" @ Kat padiora Tex unpip xpra Gar TOV Kdrhov ¢ @S Kat auTov My vin yevorTo.
Kal pévtoe Kal Tois oTpaTLWTaLs, WS EoLKEV, EuTreEaovons éptdos, npéOncay olov diartntai mpéo Bets 536

CAIUS MARIUS

came to theencounter. This is what Catulus himself is said to have written! in extolling his soldiers. XXVII. The greatest number and the best fighters of the enemy were cut to pieces on the spot; for to prevent their ranks from being broken, those who fought in front were bound fast to one another with long chains which were passed through their belts. The fugitives, however, were driven back to their entrenchments, where the Romans beheld a most tragic spectacle. The women, in black gar- ments, stood at the waggons and slew the fugitives —their husbands or brothers or fathers, then strangled their little children and cast them be- neath the wheels of the waggons or the feet of the cattle, and then cut their own throats. It is said that one woman hung dangling from the tip of a waggon-pole, with her children tied to either ankle; while the men, for lack of trees, fastened. them- selves by the neck to the horns of the cattle, or to their legs, then plied the goad, and were dragged or trampled to death as the cattle dashed away. Nevertheless, in spite of such self-destruction, more than sixty thousand were taken prisoners ; and those who fell were said to have been twice that number. Now, the enemy’s property became the booty of the soldiers of Marius, but the spoils of battle, the standards, and the trumpets, were brought, we are told, to the camp of. Catulus; and Catulus relied chiefly upon this as a proof that the victory was won by hismen. Furthermore,.a dispute for the honour of the victory arose among the soldiers, as was natural, and the members of an embassy from Parma were

1 Catulus wrote a history of his consulship, of which Cicero speaks in terms of high praise (Brutus, 35, 132 ff.).

Uappttav mapovres, obs of KatdXov Sa Tov
TOAEMLWY VEKpwV ayovTEs éredcixvUYTO ToOiS Eéav-TaYV Vooots StatreTTappévous: yv@ptpot 8 Haoav Uo ypaypatwv, Tovvoua Tov KatrXov grapa to EvXov
5 auT@y éyyapdEavtos. ov pay adddr\a To Mapio mpooeTiOeTo aUuTaV TO Epyov H TE TpoTépa VviKN kal TO Tpocynua Tihs apyYns. parttota Hé ot TOAXOL KTiotTHY Te Pwpns TpiTOV éxelvoy aYNyopevoy, ws ovx ATTOva Tov KeAtixod TovTOV a7reo)- opévov Tov Kivduvov, evOupovpevoi TE "ETA TALdwV Kai yuvaikov Exacto. Kat olkov dua Tots Oeois cat Mapio Seimvov nat AuBAs amaynpxYovTo, Kat OprapBevev povov nEiovy audorépous Tovs Opiadp-6 Bous. ov pny eOpiduBevoey obtws, GAA pera tov Kadtvov, pérpiov éml tThrAtKavTas evTUYtats Bovdomevos trapéxye éavtov: Eats S€ 6 Te Kai Tovs otpatiatas hoBnOels mapateraypevous, et Kdtvos dreipyorto THs TLhs, undé exeivov éav OprapBeverv.
XXVIII. Wéuarrny pev ody tratetav Sdcetrrerhs 6 Exrns ws ovdé els mpwrtns wpéyero, Oepa-melas Tov Sipov avadapBdvev Kal mpos Xapty évdid0vs Tois ToAXois, OV movov Tapa TOV SyKoV
kal TO Kowvov akiwpa Tihs apXTs, AAA Kal Tapa THY avToD dvaw bypos tis elvat BovdAopevos Kal
2 Snuorixos, Yxtrta ToLovTos TepuKws. GAN Hp, @$ A€yovet, Mpos ToALTElay Kal Tovs év OXAOLS
1 Marius was consul still, while Catulus had not been re-elected, and was only pro-consul.

chosen to act as arbitrators. These men the soldiers of Catulus conducted among the dead bodies of the enemy, which were clearly seen to have been pierced by their javelins ; for these could be known by the name of Catulus which had been cut into the shaft. However, the entire success was attributed to Marius, both on account of his former victory and of his superior rank.1 Above all, the people hailed him as the third founder of Rome,' on the ground that the peril which he had averted from the city was not less than that of the Gallic invasion ; and all of them, as they made merry at home with their wives and children, would bring ceremonial offerings of food and libations of wine to Marius as well as to the gods, and they were insistent that he alone should celebrate both triumphs. Marius, however, would not do this, but celebrated his triumph with Catulus, wishing to show himself a man of moderation after a course of so great good fortune. Perhaps, too, he was afraid of the soldiers, who were drawn up and ready, in case Catulus were deprived of his honour, to prevent Marius also from celebrating a triumph. . XXVIII. Thus, then, his fifth consulship was coming to an end; but he was as eager for a sixth as another would have been for his first. He tried to win over the people by obsequious attentions, and yielded to the multitude in order to gain its favour, thus doing violence, not only to the dignity and majesty of his high office, but also to his own nature, since he wished to be a compliant man of the people when he was naturally at farthest remove from this. In confronting a political crisis or the tumultuous

2 With Romulus and Camillus. See the Camillus, xxxi. 2.

PopvBous id girodokias atodporatos, Kai TO mapa Tas pdyas avéxm@AnKtovy Kal oTactpov
> a b 4 9 lA 9 N € N le) €vy Tals ExXkAnOLaLS aTrédXELTTEY AUTOV UTTO TOV
TUXOVT@VY éTaivwy Kal wWoywv éfoTdpevov.
/ 4 , v e " J
xaitot réyerat Kapepivwv davdpas opovd ytALovs
a le! 4
StampeTras aywvicapévovs év T@ TrOAEL SwpTodpevos TrodTela, SoxodvTOS Elva TOVTOU Trapa-vosou Kal Tiwv éyxaXovvTwv, eimety Ste TOU
, \ N " cd , > 4
vouou O1a Tov TOY STAY roo ov KaTaKovVoELEY.
: \ A
ov pny ANAG padAov eouxey ExTrAHTCEDOaL Kal
Sedtévar THv év Talis exKANclats Kpavynv. év pév
A ad > a \ , A \ ye Tots GrrAos akiwua cai Sivamy elye Sia THv ypetav, év S€ TH TWodtTELa TEpiKOTTTOMEVOS TA aA ' \ le) nw
Tpwteia KaTépevyey ert THY TOV TOAAOY edvOLAY
LY 4 e \ fe) , , \ VE
Kal yapl, VIréep TOU péeyLaTOS yeverBat TO BédoJ fal
Tia TOS Elvat TrPOiEMEVOS. Traot Lev OUV TpOTEeKpOvE

Tois apioToKpatiKols, padtota Sé dppwdav Tov MéredAov nrYaptatynpévoy UT’ avtod Kal dioe Sv apeTny arnOh TodenovvTa Tois ov Kata TO Béd-e 5 , \ » Wi)) \ ‘5 \
TLoTOY UTrodvopevors TA TANON Kal mpds Hdoviy
“ 9 , nn ‘ 9 A
Snpaywryovo, emeBovreve THS Trodews exBareiv
\ v \ \ “ la LY
Tov avopa. Kai mpos rovto T'Aavxiay xal Yarop-wn , nw
vivov, avOpatrous OpacuTatous Kal WAGs atopov
: N > a_
cat OopuBotrocov br avrois ExovTAs, OLKELWaGLEVOS
, A
eloépepe vouous S82 avta@v’ Kal TO oTpaTLWTLKOY émapas KaTepiryvue Tais exxdAnoLals Kal KaTEoTA-
\ € A ciate tov Mérerrov. ws dé Poutirsos taropel, 540

"bo
to
CAIUS MARIUS

throng, we are told, his ambition made him most timorous, and that undaunted firmness which he showed in battle forsook him when he faced the popular assemblies, so that he was disconcerted by the most ordinary praise or blame. And yet we are told that when he had bestowed citizenship upon as many as a thousand men of Camerinum for conspicuous - bravery in the war, the act was held to be illegal and was impeached by some ; to whom he replied that the clash of arms had. prevented his hearing the voice of the law. However, he appeared to be in greater fear and terror of the shouting in the popular assemblies. At any rate, while in war he had authority and power because his services were needed, yet in civil life his leadership was more abridged, and he therefore had recourse to the goodwill and favour of the multitude, not caring to be the best man if only he could be the greatest. The consequence was that he came into collision with all the aristocrats. It was Metellus, however, whom he especially feared, a man who had experienced his ingratitude, and one whose genuine excellence made him the natural enemy of those who tried to insinuate themselves by devious methods into popular favour and sought to control the masses by pleasing them. Accordingly, he schemed to banish Metellus from the city. For this purpose he allied himself with Saturninus and Glaucia, men of the greatest effrontery, who had a rabble of needy and noisy fellows at their beck and call, and with their assistance would introduce laws. He also stirred up the soldiery, got them to mingle with the citizens in the assemblies, and thus con- ‘trolled a faction which could overpower Metellus. Then, according to Rutilius, who is generally a lover 541.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ta pev adda htradrnOns avnp cal xXpnotos, idia
5¢ 7@ Mapiw mpocKexpovews, kal tis éxTNS éruyey UTateias apyUplov els Tas duAaS KaTAaBa-N@Y TOU Kal mptapevos TO MéreAXOV éxxpodoatr Ths apxyns, Ovardrgprov b€ PrAdKKxov banpétnv padXOY 7 GuVadpxyovTa THS bmateias AaBeiv.
3 4 “ \ > ~ ‘ 4 lj
ovdevi pévTor TOY TPO AUTO TAY wovm KopBive
— Ovadr€pi@ tocavtas irartetas Eaxev o Sijpos,
> ? > ld \ ? N wn , 3 ‘
aXX €xeww@ Mev ATO THS TPwWTNS ELS TY TEAEU-Talay érn mévte Kal teacapaxovta yevéeoOat Aéyouot, Maptos 5é peta THy TpwTHY Tas TévTE
puun ped tuys dvédpape.
XXIX. Kal padtota wept tHv Tedevtaiav

5] A \ 4 “ N \
EpOovetto, ToANA cuveEapapTavwy Tois TEpi Tov Ss n Co 9 1, © , , a b)
Latopvivoyv. av nv kat 6 Nwviou dovos, dv dvti-
/ 4 > 4 e
mapayyédNovTa Snuapyiay atéopakey 0 Latopvivos. eta Onmapyav émiye Tov TEpl THs yYwopas VOMOV, @ Tpoteyéypamrto THY GUYKANTOY OfocaL
mpoaeMovaar, 7) unv éupevety ols av o Shpos Wnpicatto Kai mpos pndey tbrevavtiocecOa.
TOUTO TOU VOMOV TO Epos TpoaTroLOvmEVvOS ev TH
Bovarn Sv@axev o Maptos ovn épn SéFeoOar! tov
4 7Q\ YW v A \ \ SpKov, o0dé AdXXov olecOat Gwhpovodyta’ Kai yap ei 1) “OXOnpos Tv Oo vopuos, DBpuw elvar Ta ToLavTa thv BovrAnv d:dovac Bralopévnv, dAAAa py TeLOoi pnodé Exodaav. Tradra dé ovy obrws dpoven Edeyev, aNrNa-TH MeréerArAM amrdtny TepitiOeis AhveToy.
1 Séfec8a: Coraés, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Reiske 5éfac Gat. ,
542

CAIUS MARIUS

of truth and an honest man, but had a private quarrel with Marius, he actually got his sixth consulship by paying down large sums of money among the tribes, and by buying votes made Metellus lose his election to the office, and obtained as his colleague in the consulship Valerius Flaccus, who was more a servant than a colleague. -And yet the people had never bestowed so many consulships upon any other man except Corvinus Valerius. In the case of Corvinus, however, forty-five years are said to have elapsed between his first and his last consulship; whereas Marius, after his first consulship, ran through the other five without a break.

XXIX. In this last consulship! particularly did Marius make himself hated, because he took part with Saturninus in many of his misdeeds. One of these was the murder of Nonius, whom Saturninus slew because he was a rival candidate for the tribuneship. Then, as tribune, Saturninus introduced his agrarian law, to which was added a clause providing that the senators should come forward and take oath that they would abide by whatsoever the people might vote and make no opposition to it. In the senate Marius made pretence of opposing this part of the law, and declared that he would not take the oath, and that he thought no other sensible man would ; for even if the law were not a bad one, it was an insult to the senate that it should be compelled to make such concessions, instead of making them under persuasion and of its own free will. He said this, however, not because it was his real mind, but that he might catch Metellus in the toils of - fatal

3 avros pev yap eis apeTis Kal Sewvotntos pepida 70
, , ’ 207 a \ \
Wevoacbat TUépevos Noyou ovdéva TAY TPOS THY
4 € A (4 "4 ‘ A
avyKAnTOVY w@pmoroynpeévoy Ebew Euedre, Tov dé MérteAXov eidas BéBasov avdpa cal tHv “ arnOerav apyny meyarys apetas ” cara Livdapov ryovpevov éBovreTo TH Tpos THY GUYKANTOY apyncer TpoANfbévra nal yy SeEdpevov Tov dpKov eis avnxertov 9 a \ ‘\ on v A \ a éuBanreiv pos tov Sjpov EyGpav. 0 Kat cvvEeBn.
4 Tov yap MeréAXou dyoavtos pn opocey, ToTE
pev 4» Bovan dvedv@n, peta 5é yuépas oAiyas Tov Latopvivov mpos TO Bhpa tovs auyKANTLKOUS avaxanXoupévou Kat tov Gpkov ouview davaryKa-Covtos o Mapuos trapeay, yevouévns ciwirys Kat TavTwv els Exelvoy avnpTnmévwv, waxpa Yaipery dpacas tots év TH Bout veavievOetowy aro pov, 3 ad \ v “ \ 4 e ovY oUTw TAaTLY Edn hopeiv Tov TpdyNrOV ws
mpoatopaiverOar xabdrrak eis wpayua tHALKOd-Tov, GAN opeicOar Kal TH voww meOapxnceay, elmep éote vopos’ Kal yap TtovTo mpocéOnKe 7d
5 codoy woTEp TapaKddAvppa THs aioxyuvys. oO Mev
' otv SHyos jabeis opocavtos dvexpotnae Kal

KaTeudnpnoe, Tors b€ apiatous Katyndea Sewv7

Kat picos éxye Tov Mapiov rhs petaBorj7s.

v > a4 > A U \ fol

@uvucav ovv amavtes édeEns Sedstotes Tov SHwov

dypt Merérrou: Méteddos 5é, eaimep avttBodour-tov Kai deopévwv TOV hirwv opocat Kal pn TreEpt-

Barely éavrov émitipiows avnkéatots, & KaTa TOV

pn Gpvuovtayv 6 Yaropvivos eiaédepev, ovy vp7-

544

CAIUS MARIUS

trick. For he himself regarded lying as part of a man's excellence and ability, made no account of his agreements with the senators, and did not intend to keep them; whereas he knew that Metellus was a steadfast man, who thought with Pindar that " truth is the foundation of great excellence,'! and he therefore wished to bind him beforehand by a state- ment to the senate that he would not take the oath, and then have his refusal to do so plunge him into a hatred on the part of the people that could never be removed. And this was what came to pass.

_ For Metellus declared that he would not take the oath, and the senate broke up for a while; but after a few days Saturninus summoned the senators to the rostra and tried to force them to take the oath. When Marius came forward there was silence, and the eyes of all were fastened upon him. Then, bidding a long farewell to all his boastful and insincere ex- pressions in the senate, he said his throat was not broad enough to pronounce an opinion once for all upon so important a matter, but that he would take the oath, and obey the law, if it was a law; adding this bit of sophistry as a cloak for his shame. The people, then, delighted at his taking the oath, - clapped their hands in applause, but the nobles were terribly dejected and hated Marius for his change of front. Accordingly, all the senators took the oath in order, through fear of the people, until the turn of Metellus came; but Metellus, although his friends earnestly entreated him to take the oath and not subject himself to the irreparable punishments which Saturninus proposed for those who should

_) Fragment 221 (Boeckh).

fe) / aS ” ? > 9 4
6 Kato Tov dpovnpatos ovdé wpmocev, AAX éupevav Oe kat wav tradew Secvov emt TO pnOev aloxpiy épyacac@at- Tapeakevac peévos amipbev ex THS ayopas, Stareyouevos Tois _Treph avrtov as TO Kaxov TL paar pavrov cin, TO dé Kahov pen, dxwvduvers dé, KoLvon, Lovov bé avdpos ayabod TO pera KwdUvav Ta KaAA TpacoELV. eK TOUTOV
papiverat Zaropvivos emexnpvtar Tous Vrdrous
U
d7rws Tupos kal ddatos Kal areyns elpyntar MéreAXos' Kal TO pavdorarov avrois TOU 7 a)- Gous Taphy ETOLMOY ATOKTLVYUVaL Tov avdpa. Tav
493

5é Berria tw mepiTaouvTey Kat TUVTPEXOVTODY

T pos TOV Mérehdov ovK ¢éla oTactd few du autor, anrra amnrlev € Ex THS TOAEWS Eup pove oyte LO Xpno apevos. TA yap apewovay, ébn, “ av TparyuaTov yevouevayv kal Tov Srjpou HET avory-TAVTOS adifopat Tapakaoupevos, v7) HEVOVT OV opotay amnrrax Gas KpaTia Tov. anAra yap bans pev améhavoev evvoias mapa THY puyny Kal TEAS MéreAnos, Sv dé Tpomov év ‘Pod prrocopar Sent 9n, BéXriov év rots Tept éxeivov ypagopévors elpnoeTa.
XXX. Maptos dé Tov Lar opvivov avtt Ths vroupyias TAUTNS éml may wpoiovTa ToApNS Kal Suva pwews Teptopav dvaryKalopevos, éradev OUK GVEXTOY amrepyacdpevos KaKoV, GAN avTiKpUS drrA0s Kal odhayais emt tupavvida Kal TodTEias dvarpotny mopevouevov. aidovuevos dé Tovs Kpa-TLaTOUS, Geparrevov b¢ Tous TOAXOUS, épyov ave-AevOe pov eax dros UTE MELVE kal TaripBorov.
€XMovtwv yap ws avToyv UO vUKTa TOV TPOTwY 546

CAIUS MARIUS

refuse, would not swerve from his purpose or take the oath, but, adhering to his principles and prepared to suffer any evil rather than do a shameful deed, he left the forum, saying to those about him that to do a wrong thing was mean, and to do the right thing when there was no danger was any man’s way, but that to act honourably when it involved dangers was peculiarly the part of a good and true man. Upon this, Saturninus got a vote passed that the consuls should proclaim Metellus interdicted from fire, water, and shelter; and the meanest part of the populace supported them and was ready to put the man to death. The best citizens, however, sympathised with Metellus and crowded hastily about him, but he would not allow a faction to be raised on his account, and departed from the city, following the dictates of prudence. “ For,’ said he, “either matters will mend and the people will change their minds and I shall return at their invitation, or, if matters remain as they are, it is best that I should be away.’’ But what great goodwill and esteem Metellus enjoyed during his exile, and how he spent his time in philosophical studies at Rhodes, will be better told in his Life.}

XXX. And now Marius, who was forced, in return for this assistance, to look on quietly while Saturninus ran to extremes of daring and power, brought about unawares a mischief that was not to be cured, but made its way by arms and slaughter directly towards tyranny and subversion of the government. And since he stood in awe of the nobles, while he courted the favour of the multitude, he was led to commit an act of the utmost meanness and duplicity. For when the leading men had come to him by night

1 No such Life is extant. 547

r

NN 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

J ” ‘ , > A N a)
avopav Kal tapaxadovyter éxi tov Yatopvivor, érépats Ovpats éexeivoy wiredéEato TovTwY ayvo-
, % , , \ ’ LA
ovvTw@y. eElTa Tpopaciy rNEeywY Tpos appoTépous xothias Sudppotay, vov pév @S ToUTOUS, viV dé ws éxeivov éml THs olKias ava pépos Statpéyov
. 4 \ ‘ > \ 9 a
guvéxpove Kal Tapweuvev. ov pv adda Kal TIS BovAns Kat TOY iTTéwy ovvictapéevov Kal ayavaxtovyvtwy é&nveyxev eis ayopay Ta Stda, Kal
4 > \ 3 N ,
kataduwxGévtas avrovs eis TO Karrer@dtov elre jt \ \ ? \ J J e + 9
ines Tovs yap oxeTous atréxoer, ot 8 atret-qovres é€xeivoy éxddovy Kal tapédwxayv odds
: A fol U
avtous Sa THS AEyouévns Snpocias TicTews.
érrel 5€ TavTotos yevouevos UIrép TOD GHaat TOUS
v 2Q\ bod J \ , 2 > \ dvdpas ovdev wynoev, GAXa KaTLOVTES Els ayopay avnpeOnaay, éx tovtov tois te Suvatois dua Kal
a , 4

TO SNUO TWPOTKEKPOUVKAS, TLULNTELAS TApaTredoU-
? / A > a“ b] b] ” e / ons émidoEos ay ov peTHAOev, addr elacev ETEpouS
e / e A ‘ > a :
vrobeea Tépous aipeOjnvat, Sediws arrotuxeiy. AAAWS 5é avros éxadrAwriketo TodXois wn Oédevy atrex-
4 \ , > al \ oY 4 nm
OaverOar rors Biovs adta@v Kal ta On TiKpas
3 Ul
éferalwv.
XXXII. Adypatos 5é€ eiodepopévou MétedAXOv
a a a \ \
amo THS huyhs avaxareioPar, wodda Kat da
/ \ > ¥ , b] \ } Aoyor nat d.’ Epywv parnv éevavttwOeis TéXOS
a \ 4 le} 4
ameite: Kat SeEapévov tHv yvounv rod dypou
: Ja rad
mpodupws,. ovxy wTropévwy KaTepyopevoy érmidety Jf
tov Méreddov é&émrevoev eis Katrrasoxiav cai Taratiav, \oy@ pev atrodwcwv as evEato TH
548

CAIUS MARIUS

and were trying to incite him against Saturninus, without their knowledge he introduced Saturninus into the house by another door ; then, pretending to both parties that he had a diarrhoea, he would run backwards and forwards in the house, now to the nobles and now to Saturninus, trying to irritate and bring them into collision. However, when the senate and the knights began to combine and give utterance to their indignation, he led his soldiers into the forum, forced the insurgents to take refuge on the Capitol, and compelled them to surrender for lack of water. For he cut off the water-conduits; whereupon they gave up_ the struggle, called Marius, and surrendered themselves on what was called the public faith. Marius did all he could to save the men, but it was of no avail, and when -they came down into the forum they were put to death. This affair made Marius obnoxious alike to the nobles and to the people, and when the time for electing censors came he did not present himself as a candidate, although everyone expected that he would, but allowed other and inferior men to be elected, for fear that he would be defeated. However, he tried to put a good face upon his conduct by saying that he was unwilling to incur the hatred of many citizens by a severe examination into their lives and manners.

XXXI. When a decree was introduced recalling Metellus from exile, Marius opposed it strongly both by word and deed, but finding his efforts vain, at last desisted; and after the people had adopted the measure with alacrity, unable to endure the sight of Metellus returning, he set sail for Cappadocia and Galatia,! ostensibly to make the sacrifices which he

1
549
71

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ry n A la [ed \ "A ? la

pntpl tov Oeav Ovaias, érépay 5é THS atrodnpias

2 éywr Uroecv NavOavovaay Tos TOAAOUS. abunsS yap @v pos eipnvnv Kal dtroNTevTos, nvEnWEévos 5¢ toils woNéuots, Elta Kata pixpov avis wird apyias cal jovytas atropapaivecOar thy Suvapmey avTrov Kal tnv Sokav otopevos, é&ntres Kxatvav , b) 4 " \ "a mMpayudtwv apxyas. nrAmice yap tovs Bactrels cuvrapdtas Kai MiOpiddarnv éridoEoy dvra trodepnoew avactnoas Kal tupokuvas, evOvs er' avtov nyEH@v aipcOncecOar Kai véewy pev THY TOAD Op.auBov, oxvrAQov bé€ Ilovtexav Kai mdovTov 3 Bactdtxod Tov olxov éuTrAnoev. 560 kat M26-pidarou tacn Xpnoapévov Oeparreia al Tey mpos avrov ov Kaudbels odbé UTreiEas, adr' eitrwv, "*H na 2 le) A 4 € 7 a petlov, @ Bactred, teip® Svvacbat Pwopaior, 7 Tole alwrh TO Tpootaccopevoy, ée&émAnkev avTOV, BS hwvis pev ToANAaKLS, Tappnatas Sé ToOTE WTp@Tov axovoavta Pwpaixys.

XXXII. 'EmavenrOav 8é eis 'Pwyny oixiay édei-Hato THS ayopas TANaIOV, ElTe, WS aUTOS rere, tous OeparrevovTas avTov évoxrciobat wn Bovro- 424

pevos paxpav Badilovtas, cite TodTo aittov oto-
3 a \ ‘4 v >» \ ,
pevos elvat ToD pn TAELoVaS AAAwY ETL Dupas
b) a a \ b ? ® 4 A 9 >
autod gdortav. 10 5 ovK hv apa TolovTov: adr
Opidias ydpite Kal ToAtTiKais yxpelats étépwv
NevTropevos WaTrep Spyavoy ToAEptKoy em’ ecipT-
2 vns Wapnpedeiro. Kal Tois pev aAXOLS HTTOV
¥ 4 4 \ > AN > /
HxXGeTo Trapevdonipovpevos, shodpa Sé avTov nvia
/ b A \ b A 9 , /

LwAXras ex TOU pos exetvov avkavouevos POovov

55°

CAIUS MARIUS

had vowed to the Mother of the Gods, but really having another reason for his journey which the people did not suspect. He had, that is, no natural aptitude for peace or civil life, but had reached his eminence by arms. And now, thinking that his influence and reputation were gradually fading away - because of his inactivity and quietude, he sought occasions for new enterprises. For he hoped that if he stirred up the kings of Asia and incited Mithri- dates to action, who was expected to make war upon Rome, he would at once be chosen to lead the Roman armies against him, and would fill the city with new triumphs, and his own house with Pontic spoils and royal wealth. For this reason, though Mithridates treated him with all deference and respect, he would not bend or yield, but said: “O King, either strive to be stronger than Rome, or do her bidding without a word.” This speech startled the king, who had often heard the Roman speech, but then for the first time in all its boldness. . XXXIT. On returning to Rome, he built a house for himself near the forum, either, as he himself said, because he was unwilling that those who paid their respects to him should have the trouble of coming a long distance, or because he thought that distance was the reason why he did not have larger crowds at his door than others. The reason, however, was not of this nature ; it was rather his inferiority to others in the graces of intercourse and in political helpful- ness, which caused him to be neglected, like an in- strument of war in time of peace. Of all those who eclipsed him in popular esteem he was most vexed and annoyed by Sulla, whose rise to power was due to the jealousy which the nobles felt towards Marius, 55!

Lf

I]

PLUTA RCH’S LIVES

TOV duvaT@v Kal TAS T pos éxeivov diapopas

apynv TONTELAS TOLOUMEVOS. émrel dé Kat Boxxos
0 Nopas TULMLAKOS ‘Popaiov aVAYEY PAU MeEvOs
éoTnoer év Karretworip Nixas TpoTraropopous Kal Tap avrais ev elkooe Vpucais "Touyoup0av érya UmTo avTov YAAa, TovTO éFéotnoev opyh Kal Prrovereia Mépuor, as DvANa Tepe-om @YTOS eis EauTov Ta Epya, Kal maper kevalero Bia Ta avabnpata cataBannrery. dvredtdoveixer
b¢ LAAas, Kal TH ordow dcop obTw Pepomevnv Els peor éméo Xev 0 TUMMAYLKOS : TONE [OS éfat-guns eri THY TON dvappayels. Ta yap payee TaTa, Ttav Iraduxov eOvav Kal movavi pwmoTata KaTa THs ‘Pons cuver TNT ay Kal “MK pov edénoay ouyxeae THD nryepoviav, ov movov O7rAoLs eppapeva Kal c@uaciy, adhe Kal TOAMmaLS TT PATH YOY Kat Sewotno. ypnodpweva Oavpactais Kat ayvti-TANOLS.
XXXIII. Odros) TONELOS Tois mdOect TOLKi-.
Aos yevouevos Kal Tais TUXaLS TOAUTPOTWTATOS
Scov ZVAAa mpocéOynxe SoEns Kai duvdpews,
TOC OUTOY dpeire Mapiov. Bpados yap epavy
Tals éniPorais, é Gxvov TE mept TaVTa Kal peAAN-Tews UromAEws, ele Tob ynpws TO Spactyptov exeivo Kal Pepmov év aur@ catac Bevvivros (€&n-Koo TOV yap 760 Kal TE um TOV €TOS bmepéBadrev), elite, Qs autos éderye, Tept veupa yeyovas voowdns Kal Tomar! Svcepyos Ov Um epeve Tapa Sdvapey

alaxuvn TAS oTpateias. ov piv AAA Kal TOTE paxn TE peyary VLKNOAaS éFaxvaxidMous aveine TOV TOAEuioV, Kal AABnY ovdauA Trapéoyev av-552

CAIUS MARIUS

and who was making his quarrels with Marius the basis of his political activity. And when Bocchus the Numidian, who had been designated an ally of the Romans, set up trophy-bearing Victories on the Capitol, and by their side gilded figures representing Jugurtha surrendered by him to Sulla, Marius was transported with rage and fury to see Sulla thus appropriating to himself the glory of his achievements, and was making preparations to tear down the votive offerings. But Sulla too was furious, and civil dissension was just on the point of breaking out, when it was stopped by the Social War, which suddenly burst upon the city.1 That is, the most warlike and most numerous of the Italian peoples combined against Rome, and came within a little of destroying her supremacy, since they were not only strong in arms and men, but also had generals whose daring and ability were amazing and made them a match for the Romans.

XXXIII. This war, which was varied in its events and most changeful in its fortunes, added much to Sulla's reputation and power, but took away as much from Marius. For he was slow in making his attacks, and always given to hesitation and delay, whether it was that old age had quenched his wonted energy and fire (for he was now past his sixty-sixth year), or that, as he himself said, a feeling of shame led him to go beyond his powers in trying to endure the hardships of the campaign when his nerves were diseased and his body unfit for work. However, even then he won a great victory in which he slew six thousand of the enemy; and he never allowed them to get a grip upon him, but even when he was

1 90-89 B.c. See the Sulla, vi. 1 f.

ad > \ \ 4 > / N
Tos, GANA KaL TepiTadpevopevos NvecyeTO Kal
yvAevalopevos wal xarovpevos ov tapwkivbn.
Aéyerat dé Tlowdlov Sirwvos, bs péytotov elxe
TOV Tonepiov akiwmpa Kal Sivapwy, elrovTos 7 pos
9 é 66 Ez lA z ' ® M c Py c avtov, "Ki péyas ef aotpatnyos, @ Mapre, diayo-7.9 3 / 66 > \ \ 9 > vicat xataBas, atoxpivacbat, U pév OUY, EL péyas el oTpaTnyos, avayKxacoy pe Siaywovicacbar \ a 9 / UU "~ \
pn BovAopmevoy. mad 5€ Tote TOY peVv TOdEpiwy KaLtpov emuyerpnoews TrapacovTwy, Tav Sé
'Pwopaiwy atobeuacavtwv, os aveywopnoay ap-PoTepol, cvvayayaov els exKANTLAY TOUS TTPATLO-tas, "'Amopa," dyat, " woTepov elm TOUS TrOAE-4 a) a povs avavdpotépous 7 Upas: obTE yap Exetvoe TOV VYOTOV UUdV OUTE UpeEts exelywY TO iviov Ldely édv-/ " I \ b] fol \ , e vnOnre." Ttéros bé adjxe THY oTpaTnyiay ws
9 A A , A 9 4
éEaduvatav TO copuarte Sia THy acbevaar.
XXXIV. 'Evei 66 76n tev "ItadKa@v éyKexX-

’ 9 , \ \ rN \
KOT@Y évnoTevoYTO ToL TOY MiOpidaTtexov
‘ 9 € , \ A A
modenov ev “Pwoun da trav Snuaywyov, Trapa
Aa b , , / > A
Twacayv érrida YovArrrixuos Snuapyos, avnp OpaguTatos, Tapayaywv Mdpioy amedeixvvey avOv-
e ~ Tatov otpatnyov éwt MiOpidatnv. Kai o dipos duéoTn, TOV pév aipovpévwv ta Mapiov, trav dé
\
SvAAav KaXdovvTwy Kat Tov Madpuov emi Oeppa
\ “A KeXevovtwv eis Baias Badifew Kal To capa
Oepatrevety UO TE YHPwWS Kal PevLaTwY aTreLpN-
/ ¢ > \ 4 \ \ * ? a \

KQS, WS AUTOS EXeye. Kal yap Hv exet wept Mion-vovs T@® Mapi@ trodvTEANS oixia, TepUpas Eyovca

hemmed about with trenches bided his time, and was not unduly irritated by their insults and challenges. We are told that Publius Silo,! who had the greatest authority and power among the enemy, once said to him, “If thou art a great general, Marius, come down and fight it out with us”; to which Marius answered, ‘‘ Nay, but do thou, if thou art a great general, force me to fight it out with you against my will.’ And at another time, when the enemy had given him an opportunity to attack them, but the Romans had played the coward, and both sides had withdrawn, he called an assembly of his soldiers and said to them: ‘I do not know whether to call the enemy or ‘you the greater cowards; for they were not able to see your backs, nor you their napes.’’ At last, however, he gave up his command, on the ground that his infirmities made him quite incapable of exercising it.

XXXIV. But when the Italians had at last made their submission, and many persons at Rome were suing for the command in the Mithridatic war, with the aid of the popular leaders, contrary to all expectation the tribune Sulpicius, a most audacious man, brought Marius forward and proposed to make him pro-consul in command against Mithridates. The people were divided in opinion, some preferring Marius, and others calling for Sulla and bidding Marius go to the warm baths at Baiae and look out for his health, since he was worn out with old age and vheums, as he himself said. For at Baiae, near Cape Misenum, Marius owned an expensive house, which had appointments more luxurious and effeminate

1 Pompaedius Silo, leader of the Marsi. Cf. the Cato Minor, ii. 1-4.

Or

cal diairas Ondurépas Kat' dvdpa Todemov TocouTav Kal oTpaTer@y avroupyov. TauTny ré-yeTaL pupddov émra, jpiaous Kopvnvdia mpt-acbat: Xpovev 5 ou mdvu Toddov yevouéevov Aevxtos AevKodnos avetra pupiddov TEVTNKOVTA Kat diaxoctwv: ovTws TAX EWS avédpapev TONU-TéNELA Kat TOTaUTHY émidoaty Ta Tpdrypata pos Tpupny éraBev. ov pny addr\a Mapios prroripas mau wal perparodés amor ptBopevos TO Yijpas eal THv ao Géverav oonwepar KkatéBatvev eis TO wediov, Kal peta TOV veavicKav yupvalopuevos €medelLKVUE TO THUG Kodpov pep S7Xots, émoxXov dé Tats immaciacs, Kaimep ovK evoTarns yeyovas év ¥Npe Tov GyKov, aAXr Eis odpka mepiTrAnO7 Kat Bapeiav evdedwnas.

"Evtoes pev ovv pea Ke TavTa TPaTTOV, Kal KaTuovTes COe@vTO THY prrdorimiay avrod wal Tas dpidras, tois Oe Bertioros op@aty oixTetpety émnet THY wreovebiav Kat THY prrodofiar, ort TAOVTLOTATOS ex TEVNTOS Kat péytatos éx puxpod yeyovas 6 pov OUK oldev evTUXLaS, ouoe Gavpalope-vos ayarg Kal aTTONAVOD év ovxXia Tov Tap-OvTMD, GND domep EvdENS am dvray els Kar7ra-Soxiay Kai Tov Kvgewvor [lovtov a apas éx OpiduBov kal do&ns éxpéper toaovTov yijpas, "Apxerdeo Kab Neorrroréup Trois MiOpiddrov TaTpaTaLs d1apa-Novpevos. ai dé 7 pos TavTa TOU Maptov Suxae-oNoytat TavTaT acw épaivovro Anpaders: épn Yap éOédery Tov vidv doxjoa. Tapwy avtos emt oTpaTeias.

XXXV. Taira THD TohLy ék TOAAQY Ypovev imovhoy yeyevnuévnv Kat vocodaav avéppnéev,

than became a man who had taken active part in so many wars and campaigns. This house, we are told, Cornelia bought for seventy-five thousand drachmas ; and not long afterwards Lucius Lucullus purchased it for two million five hundred thousand. So quickly did lavish expenditure spring up, and so great an increase in luxury did life in the city take on. Marius, however, showing a spirit of keen emulation that might have characterized a youth, shook off old age and infirmity and went down daily into the Campus Martius, where he exercised himself with the young men and showed that he was still agile in arms and capable of featsof horsemanship, although his bulk was not well set up in his old age, but ran to corpulence and weight. | .

Some, then, were pleased to have him thus en- gaged, and would go down into the Campus and witness his emulation in competitive contests; but the better part were moved to pity at the sight of his greed and ambition, because, though he had risen from poverty to the greatest wealth and from obscurity to the highest place, he knew not how to set bounds to his good fortune, and was not content to be admired and enjoy quietly what he had, but as if in need of all things, and after winning triumphs and fame, was setting out, with all his. years upon him, for Cappa- docia and the Euxine sea, to fight it out with Archelaiisand Neoptolemus, the satrapsof Mithridates. And the justification for this which Marius: offered was thought to be altogether silly ; he said, namely, that he wished to take part personally in the cam- paign in order to give his son a military training.

XXXV. These things brought to a head the secret disease from which the state had long been suffering,

+ , e , w , \ ‘\
eugdveotatoy evpovros opyavov Maptov mpos Tov
xowvov OdeOpov TO YovAmixiov Opacos, bs Sea Tada Tavra Oavpdlwv cal Snrav tov Yatopvivov aToAplay émrexddeL TOS TOALTEvLACTLW AaUTOD Kal pédAXdgnow. avtos dé un péd\Xrov éEEaxocious pep elye Tepl avTov Tay immiKav olov Sopydopous, \ a b] Uf b) , b \ \
Kal TOUTOUS aVTLcUYKANTOV w@vopater, éTEeAOav Sé
> @ > J a e , nm QA
pel StrrX@v exxrAnotalevalt Tos UTaTOLS TOD péev eof , 3 ? A \ eX b N

eTepou duyovTos €& ayopas Tov viov éyxaTadaBov améoghake, YwAdras 6€ Tapa THY oiKiay TOD
,
Mapiouv diwxopevos, ovdevos dv mpocdoxncavtos, elaémece’ Kal rods pev Sioxovtas dade Spopw / ee. 63 > ce) \ , /
TmapevexOevtas, bw autod dé Mapiou réyeras
Kata Oupas étépas dodardas arrorepdhbels Suextrece els TO oTpaToredov. autos dé LvAXaS ev
Tois UTopynuacw od dnot KaTaduyeiy Tmpos TOV Mdpioy, adr’ amadrdAaxOjvat Bovrevodpevos
e e a ? , 9 \ y¥

trép av Lovrmixuos nvaycatev avtov adxovra

, \ b 4 , n

Wndicacbat, repicyav év KvKr@ Evheot yupvots
, \ ‘ / ” z
Kal ovveNdoas mpos tov Madpiov, aypt od mpoed-

Gav éxeidev eis ayopav, ws néiouv éxcivor, Tas

> , / ; \ 4 0
anpafias éAvoe. yevopévwv 5é TovTwv 6 Te Yovatixios On KpaTav emeyeporovyse TO Mapi@ thy otpatnyiav, 6 te Madptos ev rapa-a fol 9g/ / \ 4 vA
axevy THs éEodou KaberoTnKer, Kai Svo yLALap-yous eLerreurype-traparnopevous TO SUAAA oTpa-558

- CAIUS MARIUS

and Marius found a most suitable instrument for the destruction of the commonwealth in the audacity of Sulpicius, who was in all things an admirer and an imitator of Saturninus, except that he charged him with timidity and hesitation in his political measures. Sulpicius himself was not a man of hesitatién, but kept six hundred of the Knights about him as a body-guard, which he called his anti-senate; he also made an attack with armed men upon the consuls as they were holding an as- sembly, and when one of them fled from the forum, Sulpicius seized his son and butchered him; Sulla, however, the other consul, as he was being pursued past the house of Marius, did what no one would have expected and burst into the house. His pur- suers ran past the house and therefore missed him, and it is said that Marius himself sent him off safely by another door so that he came in haste to his camp. But Sulla himself, in his Memoirs, says he did not. fly for refuge to the house of Marius, but withdrew thither in order to consult with Marius about the step which Sulpicius was trying to force him to take (by surrounding him with drawn swords and driving him to the house of Marius), and that finally he went from there to the forum and rescinded the consular decree for the suspension of public business, as Sulpicius and his party demanded.! When this had been done, Sulpicius, who was now master of the situation, got the command conferred upon Marius by vote of the people ; and Marius, who was making his preparations for departure, sent out two military tribunes to take over the command of Sulla's army.

1 These proceedings are much more clearly narrated in the Sulla, chapter viii. Cf. also Appian, Bell. Civ, i. 55.

i \ \ , ,
Tevpa. SvAAas b€ Tovs TTPATLOTAS mapofuvas (hoav dé Tpiapuploy Kat _TEVTAKLOXLALOY ov petous omhirat) ™ porjryaryev érl thy 'Papnv. rovs bé XLALdpxous, obs érremepape Mdputos, mpoa7re-GOVTES Ob OT PATLOTAL b1épOerpay.
Toddous de Kat Madpuos éy 'Pon TOY Ua
pirov dupe, cai SovrAos éhevOepiay € exnpurT rev emt TUppaxia" Aéyovrat 5é Tpeis povoe 7 poaryeve-o8at. puxpa & avtictas eiceddoavtt TO LUANG Kat Taxéws exBiacbels epuye. Tov dé wepl avTor,
@S |TpOTOV eFerece THS TONEWS, SiacTapévtav, aKoTous bvTOS els TL TOV erraurov avtov YoXwviov KaTepuye. KaLTov pev vio erreprper e ek TOV Movxiov Tod TrevOepod Xeopiov ov paKpav ovT@V Ta emery dea Anypopevov, autos 6é kataBas ELS 'Qeriav, irov TLVOS Novpepiov Toiov avT@ TapacKevd-TAVTOS, OUK avaweivas Tov VLOV, Ord I'paviov
EX@V pe? avrod tov 7 poryovov eférhevoey. o 66
veavias, @S 7AGev eis TA Xepia Tob Mouxiov, AapBavev TL Kal oxevalopevos nuépas KaTada-Bovons ov travtatmact Tous TrodEmious édaler, 9 > * e "A ? 4 > , > AN
arr 70 ov imaets EAaUVOVTES Kal vrrovotay ért TOV TOTTOV' OS 0 TOV ary pay emripehntys m poido-HEvos expuvpe TOV Mdptov ev apaky kudpous aryovrn, Kat Boos vrovevEas d annvra TOUS immeda ww eis TOALY EXaUYOY THY GuaEav. ovTw bé Tpos THY Oixiay THS yuvatcos o Madptos Staxopicbels Kat AaBov dcwv ébeito vuKtos émi Odracoay HKE Kal
ves ériBas eis AtBinv mreovons aren épacev.
XXXVI. 'O 8 mpea Burns Mdpuos os avixOn,

mvevpaTe Pop@ xoutlopuevos mapa tHv ‘itadiav 560

Sulla, however, called upon his soldiers (who were no fewer than thirty-five thousand legionaries) to resent this, and Jed them forth against Rome. His soldiers also fell upon the tribunes whom Marius had sent and slew them.

Marius, too, put to death many of Sulla’s friends in Rome, and proclaimed freedom to the slaves if they would fight on his side. It is said, however, that only three of them joined his ranks, and after a feeble resistance to Sulla’s entry into the city he was speedily driven: out and took to flight.1_ As soon as he had made his escape from the city his companions were scattered, and since it was dark, he took refuge at one of his farmsteads, called Solonium. He also sent his son to get provisions from the estate of his father-in-law, Mucius, which was not far off, while he himself went down to the coast at Ostia, where a friend of his, Numerius, had provided a vessel for him. Then, without waiting for his son, but taking his step-son Granius with him, he set sail. The younger Marius reached the estate of Mucius, but as he was getting supplies and packing them up, day overtook him and he did not altogether escape the vigilance of his enemies ; for some horsemen came riding towards the place, moved by suspicion. When the overseer of the farm saw them coming, he hid Marius in a waggon loaded with beans, yoked up his oxen, and met the horsemen as he was driving the waggon to the city. In this way young Marius was conveyed to the house of his wife, where he got what he wanted, and then by night came to the sea, boarded a ship that was bound for Africa, and crossed over.

XXXVI. The elder Marius, after putting to sea, was borne by a favouring wind along the coast of

1 Cf. the Sulla, chapter ix. 561

7 / ~ €po81j0n Vepinoy tiva tay év Tappaxivy duvatav éyOpov avrod, xal tails vavTats mpoeitev eipye-a e bd , \ > n
a0at Tappaxivyns. ot dé éBovrovTo pev avT@
A A lA
yapilerOat, Tov O€ TvEvpaTOS Els TreddyLov pEOtoTapévou Kal KAvOwWVAa KATAYOVTOS TrOADY OTE TO

al , , “A
mopOpeiov édoxe: meptxrAuomevoy avOékev, Tov TE Mapiov dvcdopoivtos Kai Kax@s ExyovTos vie , od n ‘
vautTias mOALS avTLAauBdvovTat TOV Tept TO
A a) A /
Kipxatov aiyradov. tov 5é yeuadvos avEavopevov
A 4
Kal TOY oLTioy émiNELTTOVTMWDY exBayres érAAlovTO
\ 3 / / ? b / ~
mpos ovdéva aoxoTrov, GAX ola oupBaivet tais
peydAas atropiats del hevyev éx Tod TapovTos @> Yanerwratov Kal tas édAmidas Exel ev Tots 3 / b 4 \ b / e a , adnrols. Eel TONEMLA MEV EXELVOLS 17) YH, TOAEMLLA dé 7 Oddaoaca, hoBepov 5é Hv avOpwrrots Tept-
a \ \ nA > “A
Twecev, hoBepov Sé x tepitreceiv Ou Evderav TaV
? 4 > N > b J A iol
dvaykaiwv. ov pyv arr ove tov Botnpow driryous evTuyydvovawy, ot Sodvar pév ovdév EoxXoV
A ,
avtois Seopévors, yuwpicavtes Sé€ tov Maptoy
2 + > , \ , b] 4
éxé€Nevov avradraTTecIar THY TaXiaTHVY’ OdLYyOD
, \ nw
yap éumpocBev avTobs kata Cntnow avtod avx-
A e / 3 na 4 > \
vous imméas obOjnvat SieEeXavvovtas. év tayri
\ A b] , , \ / ~
57) yeyovws dropias, padvoa b¢ moreia tev
TEP AVTOV ATAYOPEVOYTOY, TOTE MEV EXTPATOMEVOS
A e A A \ e \ 3 a a THS 000 Kal KataBadwv éavTov eis BAnV Babeiav
b , , A »,¢ , emreTrovas OvevuKtépevoe. TH O vaTEepaia ouvny-U e > 9» , \ A , \ bd tA fevos uT evdelas Kal T@ ow@paTe Tpiv exrAEAVTOAaL
,
Twavramrac. ypnoacbar BovrAopevos eywper Tapa
\ 9 /
TOV altylanov,ériPapovverv Tors éETropévous Kal 562

CAIUS MARIUS

Italy ; but since he was afraid of one Geminius, who was a powerful man in Terracina and an enemy of his, he told his sailors to keep clear of Terracina. The sailors were willing enough to do as he wished, but the wind veered round and blew towards the shore, bringing in a heavy surge, and it was thought that the vessel would not hold out against the beating of the waves ; besides, Marius was in a wretched plight from sea-sickness, and therefore they made their way, though with difficulty, to the coast near Circeii. Then, as the storm was increasing and their provisions were failing, they landed from the vessel and wandered about. They had no definite object in view, but, as is usual in cases of great perplexity, sought always to escape the present evil as the most grievous, and fixed their hopes on the unknown future. For the land was their enemy, and the sea an enemy as well; they were afraid they might fall in with men, and they were afraid they might not fallin with men because they had no provisions. However, late in the day they came upon a few herdsmen ; these had nothing to give them in their need, but they recognized Marius and bade him go away as fast as he could; for a little while before numerous horse- men had been seen riding about there in search of him. Thus at his wits' end, and, what was worst of all, his companions fainting with hunger, he turned aside for the while from the road, plunged into a deep forest, and there spent the night in great distress. But the next day, compelled by want, and wishing to make use of his strength before it failed him altogether, he wandered along the shore, trying to encourage his companions, and begging them not to

Seomevos 4 TpoaTroKamvEeLMTHS TeAXEUTALaS EArridos, ed Av éauTov pudarret pavrevpact madatois TLaTEvoY. veos yap ay étt TAVTEADS kal dzarpi-Bov Kar drypov brobeEacBat TO imation xatadepoperny aerou VEOTTLAV ema veoTTous EYoucay' (Sovtas dé Tous yoveis Kat alr by Seta OavecOar tav pavTev: TOUS 6 elrrety Oo eT tpavérTaros avOparrav é EgouTo Kal THY peytotrny myewoviay Kal apxyny éwrdxis avtov AaBeiv avayxaiov ein.
"

Tatra ot pev arn) as To Mapi cuyTuxelp ovTw Aéyovow: ot Oé TOUS TOTE Kal Tapa THY anv puyny axovoavTas avTod Kal micTevoap-Tas dvaypayras mparyya Koulon pd ddes. GETOS yap OU TUKTEL TELOY TOV dveiy, aNAG Kai Movcaiov éyreda Oat Néyoucwy eitrovTa wept TOU aETOU, OS

Tpia pev rites, S00 8 éxrérret, dv 8 areytfer.}

TO pévroe TONAGKLS EV TH puyn Kal Tais eoxdtars arropiats Mdptop eiveiv ws axes éBSouns wra-TEeLas T poELaw, OpoNoyoupevov éeoTiv.
XXXVII. "H6y dé Mwrtouprns, TOAEWS Ira-MrKijs, 6oov elxoot otadiov dm éxovres opaauw
ima éwv ihqy mpoawev éXavvovrTas én avrous Kal
Kara, TUYnY orKddas bv0 pepopevas. @s ouv ExacTos TOO@Y ElXeE Kal pans katadpapovres ert THY Qaraccav Kai cataBanoves éavTous ™ pocevnj}yovTo Tals vavot. "kal AaBopevor THS érépas ot mrept tov [pdmov aemépacay eis tHv
1*Os rpia ev xrdA., as cited in Aristotle, Hist. An. vi. 6 (p. 5638, 17).
564

CAIUS MARIUS

give up the struggle before his last hope could be realized, for which he was still reserving himself in reliance on ancient prophecies. When, that is, he was quite young and living in the country, he had caught in his cloak a falling eagle’s nest, which had seven young ones in it; at sight of this, his parents were amazed, and made enquiries of the seers, who told them that their son would be most illustrious of men, and was destined to receive the highest command and power seven times.

Some say that this really happened to Marius; but others say that those who heard the story from him at this time and during the rest of his flight, believed it, and recorded it, though it was wholly fabulous. For, they say, an eagle does not lay more than two eggs at one time, and Musaeus also was wrong when, speaking of the eagle, he says:

“Three indeed she layeth, and two hatcheth, but one only doth shé feed.’’!
However, that Marius, during his flight and in his ex- tremest difficulties, often said that he should attain to a seventh consulship, is generally admitted. XXXVII. But presently, when they were about twenty furlongs distant from Minturnae, an Italian city, they saw from afar a troop of horsemen riding towards them, and also, as it chanced, two merchant vessels sailing along. Accordingly, with all the speed and strength they had, they ran down to the sea, threw themselves into the water, and began to swim to the ships. Granius and his party reached one of the ships and crossed over to the opposite mexgiient 21 (Kinkel, Hp. Graec. Frag., p. 229).

505
PLUTARCRH’S LIVES

2 avtixpus vncov: <Aivapia Kadeitar avtrov Sé Mapuov Bapvy 6vtra TO cwpatt Kai dvopetayxetptorov oixérat Svo ports Kal Yadrerras UTép TIS Jararrns: éfdpavres eis THD eTépav éSevto vad», non TOV tTTéwy eperToTav Kal Staxehevopeveoy amo ys Tols vavTais Kat dryely TO TAotov n TOV Madpiov éxBadovtas aUTOVS amom het 61 XpH-Gouev. ixetevovTos b€ Tob Mapiov Kat SaxpvovTos, ot KUpLot THS ohKdbos @s éy odiye ToAas én auporepa THS yeouns TpoTas NaBovtes Guws amexpivavto Tois immebat wz) mpoeabar TOV Mdpvov. éxeivav S&€ mpos dpynv atredacdyTwy avdus ETE pov YEvopevor oyta peav KarepépovTo pos THY yqv: «al jwept tas éxBodas TOD Aiptos ToTapov dudyvow Arpvody AapBavortos a ayKtpas Baropevor Tapexddouv avrov éxByvat nat Tpodny emt vas, raBeiv Kal TO Tapa Jepanebo as KeKaKO-pévov, ax pi ov popa yevntat: yiryverOas dé THY etwOviav Gpay Tov qTeéXayiov paparvopevov Kat TOV EX@V avpay avabioovTwy émieKas SvapKy. Tavita tetabeis o Mépuwos emparre: Kal TOV vav-TOV éFehopevov avrov émrh THY yay KaTaxhivels év Tit Toa ToppwTaTw TOU HENAOVTOS elXe THY Sudvoray. ot b€ EvOs ériBavtes ert THY vabv Kal Tas ayKvpas avadraBovtes Epevyov, @S ovTE KaXov exdobvat TOV Mapuov avrois ovTe awlery ao panes. ovTw 69 wavrTev Epnp10s dronerp Gets TONUY meV Ypovov dvavéos emt Tis aris EXELTO, pores dé Tas dvaraBov € éauTov em OpevETO Tahal TOPWS avodtais Kal bteEeMO av &xn Babéa al Tadpous bdaros Kal ™nrod yenovoas emiTuyx aver KarvBn ALuvoupyod yépovTos, bv TeEpiTrec@V iKéisland, Aenaria by name; Marius himself, who was heavy and unwieldy, two slaves with toil and difficulty held above water and put into the other ship, the horsemen being now at hand and calling out from the shore to the sailors either to bring the vessel to shore or to throw Marius overboard and sail whither they pleased. But since Marius supplicated them with tears in his eyes, the masters of the vessel, after changing their minds often in a short time, nevertheless replied to the horsemen that they would not surrender Marius. The horsemen rode away in a rage, and the sailors, changing their plan again, put in towards the shore; and after casting anchor at the mouth of the Liris, where the river expands into a lake, they advised Marius to leave the vessel, take some food ashore with him, and recruit his strength after his hardships until a good wind for sailing should arise; this usually arose, they said, when the wind from the sea died away and a tolerably strong breeze blew from the marshes. Marius was persuaded to follow their advice ; so the sailors carried him ashore, and he lay down in some grass, without the slightest thought of what was to come. Then the sailors at once boarded their vessel, hoisted anchor, and took to flight, feeling that it was neither honourable for them to surrender Marius nor safe to rescue him. Thus, forsaken of all men, he lay a long time speechless on the shore, but recovered himself at last and tried to walk along, the lack of any path making his progress laborious. He made his way through deep marshes and ditches full of mud and water, until he came to the hut of an old man who got his living from the water. At his feet Marius fell

TEUVE yever Bar cwTipa kat BonOov avdpos, et Stapvyor Ta Ta,povTa, petCovas éhariBeov aporBas adrrodwcovtos. 0 de dvO pws, elTe WANA ytv@- oKkwv elTe POs THY ope @S KpelT rove, Javpacas, avarravaad bat poev eon deomevyp TO oKnvudprov eFapxeiv, el b€ Tevas dropevyov wAdLorTO Kpoypety avTov év TOT@ pahhov nouxtay EX Ove. Tob be Mapiov Send évros TOUTO TroLety, aryaryov avrov Els
TO Edos Hau wT Eat Kerevoas ev Ywopio Koii@
Tapa Tov ToTa pov éméBare Tav TE _weadd prov TOANNOUS Kal THS AdAANS emrihépwv DANS don Kovgn kal jwepitéccev aBraBas duvapevn.
XXXVITI. Xpovov dé ov TOAD Ssaryevopévov

opos auT@ Kal OopuBos a are THS KadvBns T pooémrecev. 0 yap. Tepivios éx Tappaxivns émreprpe TOAAOUS éml TH Siwkey, Ov évtot Kata TUXNY excel mpoa éenfovtes eEepoBour Kal xateBowy Tod
YEpovTos WS Umrodedey Levov Kab ataxpuBovtos |
ToAéutov 'Pwpaiwv. eEavacras obp O Mdpuos Kat dmrobuadpevos xabiixev éauTov eis THY AiuYnV vdwp TAaXD kal TEApAT ADEs éxovaar. d0ev ov
dréXabe Tovs Entouvras, GX' avacraabeis Bop-Bopov KATATE NEWS yupvos Els Muvtovpvas avnxOn
Kat mapedodn Tois dpxovow. Hv yap els amracav
On Trodw éFevnveypevov mapdryyedpa. mept TOU Mapiov Snpocia, di@xetv Kal KTeLvelv Tous a-Bovras. Buws 88 Bovrevoacbat ™poTEpov édoxet Tots dpxovac: Kat cataribevtat TOV Mapuov ets oixiay Pavvias yuvarKos ovx evpevas Soxovans éyewv pos avtov €& aitias TaXatas.

down and besought him to save and help a man who, in case he escaped his present perils, would recompense him beyond all his hopes. Then the man, who either knew Marius from of old or saw that in his face which won the regard due to superior rank, told him that if he merely wanted to rest, the cabin would suffice, but that if he was wandering about trying to escape pursuers, he could be hidden in a place that was more quiet. Marius begged that this might be done, and the man took him to the marsh, bade him crouch down in a hollow place by the side of the river, and threw over him a mass of reeds and other material which was light enough to cover without injuring him. |

XXXVIII. Not much time had elapsed, however, when a din and tumult at the hut fell upon the ears of Marius. For Geminius had sent a number of men from Terracina in pursuit of him, some of whom had chanced to come to the old man's hut, and were frightening and berating him for having received and hidden an enemy of Rome. Marius therefore rose from his hiding-place, stripped off his clothes, and threw himself into the thick and muddy water of the marsh. Here he could not elude the men who were in search of him, but they dragged him out all covered with slime, led him naked to Minturnae, and handed him over to the magistrates there. Now, word had already been sent to every city that Marius was to be pursued by the authorities and killed by his captors. But nevertheless, the magistrates de- cided to deliberate on the matter first; so they put Marius for safe-keeping in the house of a woman named Fannia, who was thought to be hostile to him on account of an ancient grievance. o

a , ,
"Hy yap avnp 7H Pavvia Tetivvios: tovtou d:aa \ \ ) / MN ° e \ oTaca THY phepvyv amrnte: AauTpay ovaav. oO Oé potyeiay évexdde' Kat yiverat Mapios bratevwv
\ @ / > \ A " , ,
To €xtov duxaorys. émrel dé THs Sixns Aeyouevns 2 , \ \ , > / , épaiveto kat tv Pavviay axoNacToy yeyovévat
\ 'N v 4 2*Q 7 " \
Kat Tov avdpa TolauTny evdota AaPeEly Kal ovp-Bi@cat trodvy xpovov, audorépovs Sucyepavas \ \ v N \ > + 3 fe)
Tov pev avdpa tv dhepynv éxédrevoev atrododvat, ~ \ N b 4 ig ~ 4
THs O€ yuvatKos aTipias Evexa TH KaTAadiKn yanr-.

Kovs Tégcapas TpoceTipnoev.

Ov pny 7 ye Pavvia rote wados yuvatkos novenuéevns EraBev, adr ws elde tov Mapror, ToppwTdTw yevouéevn TOU pvnoLKaKelVv, ex TOV
TAapovTwy ETEMENELTO Kat TrapeOdppuveY aUTOV. oO 5é Kaxeivny emnver Kal Oappeiv Epacne: onpetov yap auT@ yeyovévat ypnatov. Hv dé rosodrov.
‘Og ayopevos mpos TH oixia tis Pavvias éyeyovet, Tov Oupav avoryPercav vos évdo0ev eyaper Spou@, Tuopevos amrd Kpnvns eyyus aroppeovons:
mpoo Breas 5¢ 76 Mapio Aapvpov Tt Kal yeyn-Oo; éorn mwpatov évavtiov, eita gavnv adiKe AapTrpay Kal Tapeckiptnoe Tap avTov Ud yav-potntos. é& oF cupBadrav o Madpios packer ws dia Oadacans avT@ wadXAov 7h bia ys btrodeinvuct cwTnpiav TO datpovov' Tov yap dvov ov mTpocéxyovra TH Enpad tpodn mpos tO Bdwp am’ avtod
TpatécOat. |
Tavta diareyOels tH Davvia cal’ abrov dve-57°
4

8

CAIUS MARIUS

Fannia, that is, had been married to Titinnius; but she had separated herself from him and demanded back her dowry, which was considerable. Her husband, however, had accused her of adultery; and Marius, who was serving in his sixth consulship, had presided over the trial. When the case was pleaded, and it appeared that Fannia had been a dissolute woman, and that her husband had known this and yet had taken her to wife and lived with her a long time, Marius was disgusted with both of them, and decreed that the husband should pay back his wife's dowry, while at the same time he imposed upon the woman, as a mark of infamy, a fine of four coppers.
However, at the time of which I speak, Fannia did not act like a woman who had been wronged, but when she saw Marius, she put far from her all resentment, cared for him as well as she could, and tried to encourage him. Marius commended her, and said he was of good courage; for an excellent sign had been given him. And this sign was as follows.

When, as he was led along, he had come to the house of, Fannia, the door flew open and an.ass ran out, in order to get a drink at a spring that flowed hard by; with a saucy and exultant look at Marius the animal at first stopped in front of him, and then, giving a magnificent bray, went frisking past him triumphantly. From this Marius drew an omen and concluded that the Deity was indicating a way of escape for him by sea rather than by land; for the ass made no account of its dry fodder, but turned from that to the water.

After explaining this to Fannia, Marius lay down vy on maveto, tv Ovpav tov Swpyatiov mpocbetvar KeAevoas.

XXXIX. Bovrevopevors dé Tots dpxovat Kat guvEedpors TOV Mwrtoupyncioy édo0Fe pn pédrew, anna Siaxpycacbar TOV dvdpa. _ kat TOV peev TOALTOV ovdels bméoTN TO Epryov, LTTTTEVS bé Tardrns To yévos y) KiuBpos (auporepas yap ioTopetrat) AaBov Eidos errata AOev auT@. Tob dé otk Mar os év @ eTuxe péper KATAKELUEVOS ov wavu apm pov $s EXOVTOS, GNN dvTos émtoxiou, NeyeTaL Ta pev o Cupata Tov Mapiov prAoya ToA-An éxBadXovta T@ TTPATLOTY pavijvar, hovnv 5é peyarnv ex Tov TtadtcKiov ryevéa Bar, «Zu bn TOAMGS, avO pwrre, [Tdiov Mapuov dveneip ; 3° ebAh-Jev ov evdds o BapBapos puyn, Kal TO Eidos év péow xataBarov € eX@pe bua Oupav, TOUTO povov Boa, " Ov dvvapar Tdiov Mdptov amroKreivat, WavTas ovv éxTrAngss € EaXeV, elTa olin Tos Kat peTa-vola THS yvouns Kal KaTapeprpes eauTav @S Bovheupa BeBourevnoror a avo Lov Kat ayapltorov a én avdpl corp THiS 'Tradias, @ LN BonOijcat Sewov Av. "'Itw 8 ovv darn xpnter puyas, ava-

TANT O{LEVOS arraxodt TO peHoppevov. nets dé ebx@puela pn vewer haat Geovs Mdptoy dm opov Kal yupvov éx Tis TOAEWS éxBarovow. w76 TOLOUTE@V ANoyiaua@Vv elotreaovTes AOpoor Kal mTepioyovTes
_autov é&fyov ért tTyv OdAaocav. addov dé aX Te 7 podvpers UmrnpeTovyTos Kat omevdovTay am av-TOY éryiveto TpBn Tou Xpovov. TO yap Ths Nexyopens Mapixas ddrcos, 6 céBovtar nat Tapagduratrovor pnOev éxeiOev exxopusrcOjvas Tav 572 to rest alone, after ordering the door of the apartment to be closed.

XXXIX. Upon deliberation, the magistrates and councillors of Minturnae decided not to delay, but to put Marius todeath. Noone of the citizens, how- ever, would undertake the task, so a horseman, either a Gaul or a Cimbrian (for the story is told both ways), took a sword and went into to the room where Marius was. Now, that part of the room where Marius happened to be lying had not a very good light, but was gloomy, and we are told that to the soldier the eyes of Marius seemed to shoot out a strong flame, and that a loud voice issued from the shadows saying : " Man, dost thou date to slay Caius Marius?" At once, then, the Barbarian fled from the room, threw his sword down on the ground, and dashed out of doors, with this one cry: "I cannot kill Caius Marius." Consternation reigned, of course, and then came pity, a change of heart, and self-reproach. for having come to so unlawful and ungrateful a decision against a man who had been the saviour ot Italy, and who ought in all decency to be helped. '"'So, then," the talk ran, "let him go where he will as an exile, to suffer elsewhere his allotted fate. And let us pray that the gods may not visit us with their displeasure for casting Marius out of our city in poverty and rags.'"" Moved by such considerations, they rushed into his room in a body, surrounded him, and began to lead him forth to the sea. But although this one and that one were eager to do him some service and all made what haste they could, still there was delay. For the grove of Marica, as it was called, which was held in veneration, and from which nothing was permitted to be carried out that had ever

573

ela koua dev ran, éprrodav ny THs émt Oddacaav 0508, Kal KUKA@ TepliovTas edbEL Bpadvvery, a t ov TOV mpec Burépav TUS éxBonaas épn pndeuiav aBatov pnd amropeutov o60v elvat ou' Hs owleras Mdptos. Kal mp@tos autos AaBwv Te TOV Kop-Copévay ert vadv Sa Tov TOTO SueE ANG €.
XL, Tovavty mpobupig TAaXU TAVTWY oUp-
Topia Berra Kal ByAaiou TLVOS vadv T@ Mapio TAPATXOVTOS, OS UaTepov mivana TOV mpdkewy

éxetvov ypaypapevos aveOnrev es 76 tepov b0ev éuBas tr) Mapuos avnyOn, Te TVEUpATL épov rt @MEVOS epepero TOs Kata TUXNY Tpos Atvapiav
THY vioov, OT@rou Tov T'paviov kal TOUS aAXNOUS dirous evpav ret per' aura él AtBins. vdatos 5é émiAtTravTos aurous dvaryKatos LuKedta Kara THY "Epvnivyy ™pocéaXov. éruye O€ qepl TOUS TOTFOUS éxeivous 0 'Pepatov Tapas TapagvAdcowr, Kal peKpod fev avtov atroBavTa TOV Mapuov elrev, dméxrewe 5é Teph EXKQLOEKA TOV
Udpevoueveor. Mapuos 5é xara amovdny avay Geis Kat StaTepacas TO TédAYOS T pos Myjeyya THY vijcov, évravba Siar uvOaverar Tp@TOv @>S 0 Tais
avrod Stacéaworat peta KeOnyou nal ropevovtat Tpos tov Bacidéa Tov Nopddov Tdpapay, den-Co OMEVOL BonOeiv. ep ols ex pov avamvevoas éOdppnoev amo THS vHoov Tpos THY Kapynooviay
m poo Baneiv.
'Eo tparayet be THs AtBons TOTE LeFrinuos, avnp 'Pwpaios, ote pairov ovdev obre xpnorov
éx Mapiov Tpoerrnpas, arn' daov an olkToU Tt TpoaSoKapevos a@bernoev. aptt dé avTod per 574

4

9

CAIUS MARIUS

been carried in, lay between them and the sea as they were going, and if they went round it they must needs lose time. At last, however, one of the older men cried out and said that no path could forbid men's steps and passage if it were the path of safety for Marius. And the speaker himself was the first to . take some of the things that were being carried to the ship and pass through the holy place.

XL. Everything was speedily provided through such readiness as this, and a certain Belaeus furnished . a ship for Marius. Belaeus afterwards had a painting made representing these scenes, and dedicated it in the temple at the spot where Marius embarked and put to sea. Favoured by the wind he was borne along by chance to the island of Aenaria, where he found Granius and the rest of his friends, and set sail with them for Africa, But their supply of fresh water failed, and they were compelled to touch at Erycina in Sicily. In thisneighbourhood,as it chanced, the Roman quaestor was on the watch, and almost captured Marius himself as he landed; he did kill about sixteen of his men who came ashore for water. Marius therefore put out to sea with all speed and crossed to the island of Meninx, where he first learned that his son had come off safely with Cethegus, and that they were on their way to Iampsas the king of Numidia, intending to ask his aid. At this news Marius was a little refreshed, and made bold to push on from the island to the neighbourhood of Carthage.

The Roman governor of Africa at this time was Sextilius, a man wlio had received neither good nor ill at the hands of Marius, but whom, as it was expected, pity alone would move to give him aid. Hardly, however, had Marius landed with a few companions,

575

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

oAlyov aroBeBnKoTos umNpeTns atTavTnaas Kat KATAG TAS évavtiov eltrev, " A traryopever ool mek-TUALOS 0 TTpATHYOS, @ Mapte, AtBunsériBaivery' el dé un, pnaoly a apuveiv Tots THS Bovnijs Soypaow, @S 'Popaiwy Tone pi pepevos. Tavta axovcavra TOV Mdpiov vo AumNS Kal Bapvdupias amopia Loyeov éoxe, Kal TONY Ypovov nouxiay
TYE Sevov els TOV UmnpeTny arroPheTrav. €popevou 6é € éxeivou Ti ppater Kab Ti héyet pos TOV OTpaTN-yor, amexpivaro pera. orevatas, "Ayryedne ToLvuv
67. [dio Mapuov éy TOUS Kapyndovos epermr cous puydda xabelonevov cides," ov KAKOS apa, THY TE TIS TONEDS éxeivns TUYNY Kal THY éavTod peTa-Bonny € ev mapadeiryparos doy Oépevos.
"Ev tovt@ 5é° Taprpas o O Bactrevs TOV Nopader érapporepitov Tots Noryla oes év TUL pev Arye TOUS mep TOV vEov Mdpwov, amvevat oe Bov-Nopévous ex TLVOS adel Tpopdcews KATELXE, - Kat djAOS Hv é én ovdevi XpnoT@ TOLOUMEVOS THY ava-Borgy. ov pny adr oupBatver TL TOV elcOT ov avrois T pos cwTnplay. 0 yap VEOS Mdptos eUTTpe-TS OV THY Oxi jvia TLva, TOV Tarranidary rou Bactréas Tap afiay TpatTTov 6 b¢ olxros ovTOS apn Kat mpopaces 7 TV EpWTOS. TO ev ouv TT P@TOV amet piBero Thy dv porov: os be ovTe guys évépav odor € ewpa, Kal Ta Tap éxeivns oTovdato-TEpov 7 T™pos noovny aKodacTov duet patrrerto, beEduevos THV pidogppoa vyay Kal cuvectreupbeis om auras amrédpa pera TOV pirov Kal Suepurye mpos tov Mdpuov. érrel dé adMHAOUS HOT aT avTO, Topevouevor Tapa, THY Oahacaav evTuyxavovat oKopTriots paxopévors' Kal TO onpetov epdvn TO 576

CAIUS MARIUS

when an official met him, stood directly in front of him, and said : “ Sextilius the governor forbids thee, Marius, to set foot in Africa; and if thou disobeyest, he declares that he will uphold the decrees of the senate and treat thee as an enemy of Rome.” When he heard this, Marius was rendered speechless by grief and indignation, and for a long time kept quiet, looking sternly at the official. Then, when asked by him what he had to say, and what answer he would make to the governor, he answered with a deep groan: “Tell him, then, that thou hast seen Caius Marius a fugitive, seated amid the ruins of Carthage.” And it was not inaptly that he compared the fate of that city with his own reversal of fortune. Meanwhile Iampsas the king of Numidia, hesitating which course to take, did indeed treat the younger Marius and his party with respect, but always had some excuse for detaining them when they wished to go away, and clearly had no good end in view in thus postponing their departure. However, something occurred which, though not at all extraordinary, led to their escape. The younger Marius, that is, being a handsome fellow, one of the concubines of the king - was pained to see him treated unworthily, and this feeling of compassion ripened into love. At first, then, Marius repelled the woman’s advances; but when he saw that there was no other way of escape for him and his friends, and that her behaviour was based on a genuine affection, he accepted her favours ; whereupon she helped him in getting off, and he ran away with his friends and made his escape to his father. After father and son had embraced one another, they walked along the sea-shore, and there they saw some scorpions fighting, which the elder

7 Mapip movnpov. evus ou ad1abos emt Barres Els Keépxwvav Sterrépwv, vijgov am éXxoucay ov Wor) THIS nyretpou- Kal toaouTov EpOacay Gaov avrrypéevov auTa@v immeis opac bat Tapa Tou Baatrhéws éXavvovtas él tov torov Sbev avn Onoav. TouTov oudevos éAdtTova Kivduvoy eEdokev expuyety o Mapuos.
XL. "Ev 6€ ‘Peépn YWaAAas pay nKOvETO Tots McOpidarou Tohepely oTpPATHYOLS Trept Bowwtiav, ot oe trator oTacidcavTes eXapour eis Omha.
Kat pans ryevowevns ‘OxraBros pep xpath as é€éBare Kivvay € émixerpoivra TUPAVYLK@TEPOY ap-yew, Kal KATETTNOED avr’ avrou Kopv7Acop
MepovAAav Urator, o 6€ Kivvas é« tis adXAnS
IraMas cuvaryayav Suvapuey avOis Sretroréwec
2 mpos avrous. tabra 7H Mapi@o mruvdavoperep mhevoat THY TAXLOTHY epaiveto: gh waparaBey
ex THS AuBuns Mavpovoiwr Twas immotas Kat TOV amo THS ‘Irahias TLVaS Katapepopevarn, ouvapporépouvs ov mAEiovas xXLALwY yevouevous,

avnx9n. mpooBarov 6é1 Terxanau tis Tup-pyvias Kal amoBas éxnpuTte Sovrous édevdepiav:
Kal TOV avroo. Yyewpyouvrov Kal VE LOVvT@Y édeu-Gépwv xata bofay avrob TVYTpEXOVT@Y em THY Oaraccay avaTeiOwv tovs axpatoTatous ev nmépais oAtyats Xetpa peyaAnv nOpoice Kal TeocapakovTa vas emAjpwcer.
3 Eddas dé tov pev "OxtdBrov a dpea rov avdpa Kal TO SixacoTarey TpoTe Bovdopevov dpyew, Tov &é
Kivvay drromrov Te TO LANA Kal TOAELODYTA TH
1 avhxOn. wpooBadrdwy 8 with Coraés: pel dv dvhxOn, npooBadov.
578

CAIUS MARIUS

Marius regarded as a bad omen. At once, therefore, they boarded a fishing-boat and crossed over to the island of Cercina, which was not far distant from the mainland; and scarcely had they put out from land when horsemen sent by the king were seen riding towards the spot whence they had sailed. It would seem that Marius never escaped a greater peril than this.

XLI. But in Rome, Sulla was heard of as waging war with the generals of Mithridates in Boeotia, and the consuls quarrelled and were resorting to arms. A battle took place, Octavius won the day, cast out Cinna, who was trying to be too arbitrary in his rule, and put Cornelius Merula in his place as consul ; whereupon Cinna assembled a force from the other parts of Italy and made war anew upon Octavius and his colleague. When Marius heard of these things, he thought best to sail thither as fast as he could; so taking with him from Africa some Moorish horse- men, and some Italians who had wandered thither, the number of both together not exceeding a thousand, he put to sea. Putting in at Telamon in Tyrrhenia, and landing there, he proclaimed freedom to the slaves ; he also won over the sturdiest of the free farmers and herdsmen of the neighbourhood, who came flocking down to the sea attracted by his fame, and in a few days had assembled a large force and manned forty ships. |

And now, knowing that Octavius was a most excellent man and wished to rule in the justest way, but that Cinna was distrusted by Sulla and was making

579

PP 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES ~

xadectwan TohsTELa, TOVT@ TMpoovépew EéavTOV

eyvm peTa THS Ouvapews. Emreurrev ody erayyer-NOmEvos WS UTdT@ TaVTa TroLnoELY TA TpoTTAaccoueva. OeFapévov 6€ tod Kivva xai mpocayopevoavtos avtov avOutatov, paBdous bé Kal Tada Tapdonpa THs apYns atoaTetAavTos, ovK Egy TpeTELy aUTOD Tais TUYaLS TOV KOTMOV, GAN
éaOnre pavrAn Kexpnuévos Kal Kopav ad' fs Epuyey nmepas, uTép EBSounKxovta yeyovws érn Babyy mpoanet, BovAropevos pev édeewvos elvat, TO dé OLKT@ TUPLMEMLKTO TO OiKEloOY THS O\vews aUTOD
mwréov TO hoPepov, Kai Stéhaivev 4 KatTnhea TOV Oupov ov TeTaTrEetvMpéevov, Ar eEnyptopévov UTrd THs peTaBorNs.
XLII. 'Acrwacdpevos 5€ rov Kivvay nai roils oTpaTiwta evTvxX@v EvOus eixeTo TOD Epyou Kal peyadAnv petaBorAnv Tov TpaynaToY étroince.
TPOTOV Lev yap Tals vavol Ta GLTNYA TEPLKOTT TOV
Kal Tous éumopous AniCopevos expaTnae THS ayopas, érerta Tas Tapadtous TroNes eriTréwY Hpel.
rérXos b€ THY OQotiav adTny XaBov é« mpodocias
Ta Te Xpnpata OinpTrace Kal TOV arOpwrwy TOUS ToAXous atéxteve, Kal yepupwoas TOV ToTapoV atréxowe Kouioyn Tas é€x Oardoans evrropias TaV qoreuiov. dapas 6 T@ oTpaT@ mpos THY TOoALW éywper Kal To KaXovpevov 'lavodeXov pos KateéoXEV, ov ToTovTOY aireipia Tod "OxtaBiov Ta mpaypata BXdtTovtos, dcov axpiBeia Tov Sixat-@V Tpoig"evov Ta YpELwdn Tapa TO GUEéepor, Os 580
430

CAIUS MARIUS

war upon the established constitution, he determined to join Cinna with his forces. Accordingly he sent to Cinna and offered to obey him in everything as consul. Cinna accepted his offer, named him pro-consul, and sent him the fasces and other insignia of the office. Marius, however, declared that these decorations were not suited to his fortunes, and in
-mean attire, his hair uncut since the day of his flight, being now over seventy years of age, came with slow step$ to meet the consul. For he wished that men should pity him; but with his appeal for compassion
there was mingled the look that was natural to him and now more terrifying than ever, and through his downcast mien there flashed a spirit which had been, not humbled, but made savage by his reverses.

XLII. After greeting Cinna and presenting him-. self to Cinna's soldiers, he at once began his work and greatly changed the posture of affairs. In the first place, by cutting off the grain-ships with his fleet and plundering the merchants, he made himself master of the city's supplies ; next, he sailed to the maritime cities and took them ; and finally, he seized Ostia itself, which was treacherously surrendered to him, plundering the property there and killing most of its inhabitants, and by throwing a bridge across the river completely cut off the enemy from such stores as might come by sea. «lhen he set out and marched with his army towards the city, and occupied the hill called Janiculum. Octavius damaged his own cause, not so much through lack of skill, as by a too scrupulous observance of the laws, wherein he unwisely neglected the needs of the hour. For though many urged him to call the slaves to arms

,

A 9 a
YE TONA@Y KeAEVOVTwY avTOV em EXEeVOepia KaXeElD
Tous olKéras ovx édn SovroLs peTadwce TIS matpioos, 5 Tdiov Madpiov elpye: rots vopmots apvuvwov. eet d€ MéredAXos vids MerédXou tov
4 . 3 4 \ 4 J
atpatnynoavtos év AtBun nal 81a Madproy éxrre-covtos Kev els 'Pwuny cat wodv tov 'OxtaBiou TTPATHYLKWTEPOS EpaiveTo, KATANLTOVTES OL OTPA-~
Tatar Tov 'OxtdBiov eov ws éxelvov apyeL
Seouevor Kal owlew Thy Tok Ev yap aywvtel-4
cOat Kai Kkpatnoev eurepov nyesnova Kat Spa-aoTnptov AaBovTes. ayavaxtnoavtos 5é ToD MeréA-
\
Nov Kal KeAevovTOS amLévat pos TOV UaTov, @XOVTO TpOS TOUS ToNEpious. wUiekéoTn Sé Kal
4 MéreAXos arroyvous THY TOALY.
"OxtdBiov d€ Xarééator. cai Odtai ties Kat
\ , b e , , e otBurAmorTal metcavtes ev 'Paun Katécyov, as @ , e \ 3 ' t 5 a" @ EV YEVNTOMEVWVY. 0 YAP AVNP OUTOS OOKEL, TANG
'Pwpatwy evyvwpovérTaros yevopuevos Kal uddLoTa

57) TO mpdoxnpa THS Umratelas adxoNdKevTop emt
TOV TaTpiwy eOav Kal vouwy woTep Siaypap-
4 3 / , b] , “~
patwov apetaBorwv dtapvrdtas, appwotia TH
mepl tTavta ypnoacIat, TrElova aUVa@Y ypoVvoY ayuprats Kal pdvrTecv f TroALTLKOIS Kal TrONEMEKOLS avipdol. ovTos péev om mplW cicedOciv Tov
a / “A Mapuoy, tro tev wpotrenpOévTmv aro TOD Bnwatos kataotacbels eopatteto: Kat Néyeras Sidypaypa
o A , “A Xardaixov év trois Korres avtod dovevévtos
e “A \ \ “A N b] a 3
evpeOjvat. Kal TO Tpayua TOAAHY adoyiay Eiye,
TO dvely Hyeuovov émipaveotdtov Madpiov pev 582 ste pepe nr, ———— ey ee ee

CAIUS MARIUS

under promise of freedom, he said he would not make bondmen members of the state from which he was trying to exclude Marius in obedience to the laws. Moreover, when Metellus(son of the Metellus who had commanded in Africa and had been banished through the intrigues of Marius) came to Rome, it was thought that he was far superior to Octavius as a general, and the soldiers forsook Octavius and came to him, entreating him to take the command and save the city ; for they would make a good fight, they said, and win the victory if they got a tried and efficient leader. Metellus, however, was indignant at them and bade them go back to the consul ;. whereupon they went off to the enemy. Metellus also left the city, despairing of its safety.

But Octavius was persuaded by certain Chaldaeans, sacrificers, and interpreters of the Sibylline books to remain in the city, on the assurance that matters would turn out well. For it would seem that this man, although he was in other ways the most sensible man in Rome, and most careful to maintain the dignity of the consular office free from undue in- fluence in accordance with the customs of the country and its laws, which he regarded as unchangeable ordinances, had a weakness in this direction, since he spent more time with charlatans and seers than with men who were statesmen and soldiers. This man, then, before Marius entered the city, was dragged down from the rostra by men who had been sent on before, and butchered ; and we are told that a Chaldaean chart was found in his bosom after he had been slain. Now, it seems very unaccountable that, of two most illustrious commanders, Marius

583

i av]
.
_

a

i

|

opbacar TO hn KaTadpovncar pavTixis, OxraBoov
5€ atonéoat.
XLITI. Odtw 67 trav TpaywaTov EXOVTMV a Boudry suveJovca mpea Reus éFéreue mpos
Kivvay cat Mdpuop, elo vévar Kal peider Oar Seomevy
TaV TodT@Y. Kivvas pev ovv as drratos emt Tod Sidpou Kal jpevos expnparite Kal ptravOparrous aTrokpices é Ke TOUS peo Rect, Maptos 6é TO Sibp@ TapelaTHKEL POeyyopevos pev ovder, t vTrooni@v 5é del Th Bapornte Tou Tporwrrov Kal TH
TTUYVOTHTE Tov Bréupatos ws evdus €u“TAHT OY
2 hover THY mou. évrel 6€ avactavtes éBab.lov, Kiwas pev elo yet Sopupopoupevos, Mapuos be Tapa Tais muAals & UroaTas elpmveveTo Ipos opyny, gduyas elvau Aéyoou Kal THIS marpidos elpyeoOar Kara TOV vopoy, el O€ xpntor Tes avrou TapovTos, érépa vide AuTéOV Elvat THY éxBdddovcay, WS
7) vomtmos Tis OV avnp Kal KATLOV Ets TOMY

3 énevbépay. exdnet én TO WAGs ets aryopay' Kal 43] po Tov TpEis i) TéeTTApAS pudas: éveyxely THY Wiov adels TO mide wa, Kal THY puyadcany
-€K ELV NV bixarohoyiay KaTNEL, Sopudopous EXeov
Noydbas ex TAY T poaTEeporTnKoT ov dovAw?, ods Bapdvaious mpoanyopevaer. ovToL TodAovs pev amo pws, ToAXOUs dé a7ro VEU MATOS avnpouv T pOoTaG aOVTOS avrob: kal Téhos "AyXaptoy, avdpa Bovreuthy Kat TT PATHYLKOY, évtuyXavovra T@ Mapip kai py _mpocaryopevOevra cataBanovat eum poo Gev avroo Tais paxaipacs TUTTOV-4 TES. éx 6€ TovTouv Kal TOY a\XNwv Gaous aoTa-TApévous 7) Mpocayopevoete wNde dvTAGTde alto, TOUTO avTO cUuBoAroY HY atroadaTrTew EevOds ev 584 should succeed by regarding divinations, but Octavius should be ruined. |

XLIII. Matters being at this pass, the senate met and sent a deputation to Cinna and Marius, begging them to enter the city and spare the citizens. Cinna, accordingly, as consul, seated on his chair of office, received the embassy and gave them a kindly answer ; but Marius, standing by the consul's chair without speaking a word, made it clear all the while, by the heaviness of his countenance and the gloominess of his look, that he would at once fill the city with slaughter. After the conference was over they moved on towards the city. Cinna entered it with a body- guard, but Marius halted at the gates and angrily dissembled, saying that he was an exile and was excluded from the country by the law, and if his presence there was desired, the vote which cast-him out must be rescinded by another vote, since, indeed, he was a law-abiding man and was returning to a free city. So the people were summoned to the forum; and before three or four of the tribes had cast their votes, he threw aside his feigning and all that petty talk about being an exile, and entered the city, having as his body-guard a picked band of the slaves who had flocked to his standard, to whom he had given the name of Bardyaei. These fellows killed many of the citizens at a word of command from him, many, too, at a mere nod; and at last, when Ancharius, a man of senatorial and praetorial dignity, met Marius and got no salutation from him, they struck him down with their swords before the face of their master. After this, whenever anybody else greeted Marius and got no salutation or greeting in return, this of itself was a signal for the man's

a A A /
Talis od0ts, WoTe Kal TOY dirwv ExacToY aywvias
¢ "A peoTov elvat Kat Ppixns ooadKis aoTacdmevot TO Mapio werdboev' xrewopmévor dé ToAXr@Y Kivvas \ b) \ a \ '\ " ce ,
pev auBrAvs Hv Kal perros 75n Tod doveveup, Mdpuos 5é nal' éxdorny nuépay axpalovte TO Oup@ cal Sipavre da ravrav éyaper TOV OTTWa-
" 9 e / t A A N e , ouv év bmowig yeyovorwv. Kal aca pev 060s,
"A Y "a \ a
waca Sé modus Tav SwwKovTwy Kal KUynyeTouVTm@V Tous wropevyovtas Kal Kexpuppévous éyepuev.
nreyyeto 5é wal Eevias cal dirrias miotis oddév
v \ x V4 / 7 \
éyouca tapa tas tuyas BéBatov' orLyor yap eYEVOVTO TAVTATACLY Ob [42) TPOCOVTES AUTOIS TOUS
a / " @ bd
Tapa opas xatapuyovtas. atv ody ayacba
kat Oavydoat Tovs Tov Kopvovrou Sepamrovtas, ot Tov SeotroTny atroxpuravres olxot, vexpov Oé TLVa

TOV TOANAGY avapTioavTes Ex TOD TpaXHAOU Kal
mepllévres avT@ ypucody Saxrurov érredeixvvov tots Mapiouv Sopvdopois nal xoopycavtes as 9 a » A 4 e s \ b] / bd >) éxeivov avrov Gbarrov. wrevonae bé ovdeis, AAX oe \ e le) e \ a b) a 9
otw AaOav o Kopvodtos bro TaY oiKxeTaV Eis
Tanartiav dvexopic6n. |
XLIV. Xpynor@ 5 wat Mdpxos ‘Avtavios o pntwp Pirim ypnodpevos HTVYNTEV. O yap aD-
/
Opwrros Hy pev trévns Kat Snuotexos, UTobeEdpEVOS
\ A wv € / \ 0
5é mpatov dvdpa ‘Pwopaiwy cal drrodppovovpevos
éx TOV TApOVTMD, OLKETHY ErreprApe TPOS TLVA TOV
:
éyyus Karndov AnYropevoy olvov. Siaryevopévou dé émipedéotepov Kal BeAtiova peTphoat KEeNEvOr- .
ToS npwTnoey Oo KaTrndoS 6 TL TAOaY ov! Tov

slaughter in the very street, so that even the friends of Marius, to a man, were full of anguish and horror whenever they drew near to greet him. So many were slain that at last Cinna’s appetite for murder was dulled and sated; but Marius, whose anger increased day by day and thirsted for blood, kept on killing all whom he held in any suspicion whatsoever. Every road and every city was filled with men pur- suing and hunting down those who sought to escape or had hidden themselves. Moreover, the trust men placed in the ties of hospitality and friendship was found to be no security against the strokes of Fortune; for few there were, all told, who did not betray to the murderers those who had taken refuge with them. All the more worthy of praise and admiration, then, was the behaviour of the slaves of Cornutus. They concealed their master in his house ; then they hung up by the neck one of the many dead bodies that lay about, put a gold ring on its finger, and showed it to the guards of Marius, after which they decked it out as if it were their master’s body and gave it burial. Nobody suspected the ruse, and thus Cornutus escaped notice and was conveyed by his slaves into Galatia.

XLIV. Marcus Antonius also, the orator, found a faithful friend, but it did not save him. For this friend, who was a poor plebeian and had received into his house a leading man of Rome, whom he wished to entertain as well as he could, sent a slave toa neighbouring innkeeper to get some wine. As the slave tasted the wine more carefully than usual and ordered some of better quality, the innkeeper asked ‘ him what was the reason that he did not buy the

véov, wamrep etwbev, wvettar Kal Snuotixov, adXrAa Tov oTovdaiov Kal ToAuUTENOUS. aTAds Sé TwsS
éxeivou ppdaavros as mpos auvnOn Kal yvoptpon, 6tt Mdpxov ’Avtwuov o Searrotns éotiad trap avT@® KpuTTouevov, aceBns Kal puapos ay oO KaTNNOS awa TO Tov olKérnv arerOcivy avros cuvéretve pos Mdptov 75n trept Setrvov évra, Kat mpocaxlels @poroynoe Trapad@cev at’T@ Tov
"AVT@VLOV. GKOVGAaS OvY ExElvosS ExxpayelVy NéyETAL
péya cal tais yepoly bd Hdovis avaxporhaar Kal puxpovd pev edenoev €Eavactas avtos éml Tov totrov depecOa, Tov O€ ditwv KaTacyovTwv ”Avviov repre Kal oTpaTiwTas pet avTOD KErEvCaS KaTa TaYoS THY KEeharny Tod AvtTwviov KoptCev.
@S ovv HKov él THY oixiav, o pev Avvtos birécTy mapa Tas Oupas, ot dé otpati@tar bia KALLAaKOV avaBavtes eis TO Swpuadtiov Kal Peacdpevoe Tov
"Avtrwvov addAos GAXOV eri THY shaynv avl’ éavToU TrapeKdnrer Kai mpovBadrr.cTO. TotavTn dé TLS WV, @S EoLKe, TOU avdpos 7 TOV AOYV aELpNY kal ydpis, ote ap~apévou Aéyev Kal Trapaitei-cOat tov Oavatov Gyacba pév ovdels éTOAUNoEV
ovdé avTiBrear, xdtw 5é Kvvpavtes eddxpvor drravtes. SvatpiBys §€ yevonerns avaBas o” Avvios opa tov pev ‘Avtwvov diareyopuevov, tors fe oTpatiotas éxmeTANyLEevous Kal KaTAKEKNANpE-vous Um avTov'. Kakioas ody éxeivous Kal Tpos-Spapov avros amrorémver THY Kepadnp.
KdtiXos 56¢ Aovtdtios Mapio avvdpEas kai 588
CAIUS MARIUS

new and ordinary wine as usual, instead of wanting some that was choice and expensive. The slave, in his great simplicity, conscious that he was dealing with an old acquaintance, told him that his master was entertaining Marcus Antonius, who was concealed at his house. As soon as the slave had gone home, the innkeeper, who was an impious and pestilent fellow, hastened in person to find Marius, who was already at supper, and on being introduced, promised to betray Antonius to him. When Marius heard this, as we are told, a loud cry burst from his lips and he clapped his hands for joy; he actually came near springing from his seat and hurrying to the place himself, but his friends restrained him; so he sent Annius and some soldiers with him, ordering them to bring him the head of Antonius with all speed. Accordingly, when they were come to the house, Annius stopped at the door, while the soldiers .climbed the stairs and entered the room. But when they beheld Antonius, every man began to urge and push forward a companion to do the murder instead of himself. So indescribable, however, as it would seem, was the grace and charm of his words, that when Antonius began to speak and pray for his life, not a soldier had the hardihood to lay hands on him or even to look him in the face, but they all bent their heads down and wept. Perceiving that there was some delay, Annius went upstairs, and saw that Antonius was pleading and: that the soldiers were abashed and enchanted by his words; so he cursed his men, and running up to Antonius, with his own hands cut off his head.

Again, the friends of Catulus Lutatius, who had been a colleague of Marius in the consulship, and

589

a

f

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

aovvOpiauBevoas amo KiuSpwv, éret mpos rovs Seouévous Umrép avtob Kal mapatroupévous o Madp-los TocovTov povov elmev, "'Amofaveiy Sei,"
a, > v \ \ "
KATAKNELTApEVOS Els OLANMA Kal TrONANOUS avOpaKas éxCwmupnoas arremviryn.
/ a ee
"Purroupéevoy 5€ TOV cwpaTwY axedarov Kal 432
"a e a
TaToupévwv €v tais odois éXeos OUK HY, GANA
pixn Kal tpopos amrdvrwy mpos thy iv. nvia 5é puddtota Tov Shyov 7 THY Kadoupévov Bapdvaiwy doérxyea. Tous yap Seororas év tais oixiats aoddtrovTes yoXuvoy pev avTav Taidas, éuiyvurto 6é Bia tais Serrroivats, axatdoyxerot Sé Hhoav aptalovTes Kat puapovoivtes, Ews ot trepl
Kivvay xat Yeptr@ptov suphpovyncavtes éméPevto
KOLMLOLEevols AUTOS ev TH oTpaToTédw Kal KaTN-KovTioay aTavTas.
XLV. 'Ev tovtrm 6€ domep 'tpotraias Tivos
3 U4 , Mv 4 e
apetBovons époitwy ayyedo. travtayoley as
, \ \ \ , \
ywvAAas cuvnpnKas Tov MiOpidatixov Trodepov Kat
Tas éTapxias averngas errimdéor meTa TOANTS
Suvdpews. cal todto Bpayeiay érriayeciy éroince
A "A 9 4 3 4 n e " kal wavAav oriyny addtov Kaxav, Gcov ovTTH TOV TrONEMOV HKeLV em' aUTOUs Oloméevwv. HraTos pev ody amredeixOn To EBdSon0v Mdpios, nal mpo-\ b A 4 , 4 " > A

eXOav adtais Kardvdats lavovapiass, érous apy7, LéErov tia Aovuxivoy xatexpnuvicev’ 0 KaxKeivots Kal TH TodE Tov avOis eddKEr KaK@V Yyeyovéevas
ONMELOV MéeyLoTOV. |
59°

CAIUS MARIUS

with him had celebrated a triumph over the Cimbri, interceded for him and begged Marius to spare his life ; but the only answer they could get was: “He must die.’’ Catulus therefore shut himself up in a room, lighted up a great quantity of charcoal, and was suffocated. :

But headless trunks thrown into the streets and trampled under foot excited no pity, though everybody trembled and shuddered at the sight. The people were most distressed, however, by the wanton licence of the Bardyaei, as they were called, who butchered fathers of families in their houses, outraged their children, violated their wives, and could not be checked in their career of rapine and murder until Cinna and Sertorius, after taking counsel together, fell upon them as they were asleep in their camp, and transfixed them all with javelins.}

XLV. Meanwhile, as if a change of wind were coming on, messengers arrived from all quarters with reports that Sulla had finished the war with Mithridates, had recovered the provinces, and was sailing for home with a large force. This gave a brief stay and a slight cessation to the city’s unspeakable evils, since men supposed that the war was all but upon them. Accordingly, Marius was elected consul for the seventh time, and assuming office on the very Calends of January,? which is the first day of the year, he had a certain Sextus Lucinus thrown down the Tarpeian rock. This was thought to be a most significant portent of the evils that were once more to fall both upon the partisans of Marius and upon the city.

1 Cf. the Sertorius, v. 5. 2 86 B.C.

59!

(2

Autos 5é 75 Tois Te Tovots aTretpNnKaS Kal TaAis
/
dpovtiow oloy brépavtAos Oy Kal KaTatrovos, THY
A A
uxnv mpos Tocavtny aiOis érrivovay véov Trode-pov Kal Kawav aydvev Kai poBwy bro éurretpias

davav Kal Kauarou Tpé“ovoay OvK avédepe, NOYE-

Comevos ws ov mpos OxraBiov odd MepovaAdrav

, e , Ul WwW
avyKAvOos opirov Kal ctacimdous dyAOU oTpAaTN\ e / ” UA \ > “ v
yous 0 kivduvos Evotto, SVANas b€ éxetivos Erretouy

£ ~ - > \ bd , 3 / A \

0 THS Tatpioos avtov é€eAdoas dda, viv 4é

MiOpidatnv cuvecrarxas eis tov KvEevoy Iov-

Tov. wv7ro ToLlouTwy Opavopevos NOYLa MOV, Kab THV
\ ” ¢e A XN \ # \
Hakpav adnv avtod kal duyas Kal Kxiwwddvous bia ys xat Oaratrns éXavvopéevov NauBdvwv po

b] A“

opOarpav, ets aTropias évérimte Seas Kal vuK-
\ /
Tepiva Seiata Kal Tapaxy@dets Gveipous, del TLVOS

> A

axovew POeyyouévou Soxav

: ia ; ,
dewval yap Koirar Kal arrovyopévoto AéovTos.
pariota bé rdavtav hoBovpevos Tas aypuTrvias évéBanrev eis trotous éauvTov Kal pébas aw@pous Kai map nAkiav, dowep aTodpacw Tav ppovTidwy Tov dmvov pnyaveapevos. Tédros 5é ws Ke TIS atrayyéAAwv aro Oadacons, véot WpoomimrovTes avt@ doBor, ta pev Séee Tod péAXovTOS, Ta Se @omrep ayOer Kal Kop@ TOV TrapoVTaY, pons Bpa-Nelas eTuyevowévns els vooov KaTNvéxOn TrEupiTey, ws totopet Locerdauvios 6 pidrocodos, avtos eiaed-592

‘But Marius himself, now worn out with toils, deluged, as it were, with anxieties, and wearied, could not sustain his spirits, which shook within him as he again faced the overpowering thought of a new war, of fresh struggles, of terrors known by experience to be dreadful; and of utter weariness. He reflected, too, that it was not Octavius or Merula in command of a promiscuous throng and a seditious rabble against whom he was now to run the hazard of war, but that the famous Sulla was coming against him, the man who had once ejected him from the country, and had now shut Mithridates up to the shores of the Euxine Sea. Tortured by such reflections, and bringing into review his long wandering, his flights, and his perils, as he was driven over land and sea, he fell into a state of dreadful despair, and was a prey to nightly terrors and harassing dreams, wherein he would ever seem to hear a voice saying :— “Dreadful, indeed, is the lion’s lair, even though it be empty.” !
And since above all things he drealed the sleepless nights, he gave himself up to drinking-bouts and drunkenness at unseasonable hours and in a man- ner unsuited to his years, trying thus to induce sleep as a way of escape from his anxious thoughts, And finally, when one came with tidings from the sea, fresh terrors fell upon him, partly because he feared the future, and partly because he was wearied to satiety by the present, so that it needed only a slight impulse to throw him into a pleurisy, as Poseidonius the philosopher relates, who says that he

1 A hexameter verse of unknown authorship.

Oeivy cai StarexOjvar epi av éempéoBevev 7dn vooovvTt dackwy ait. Taios dé tis Teton,
A QA
advnp toropixds, tatopet tov Madptov amo. deimvouv
A fal ‘ /
TepiTaATOOVTA peTa TOV dirwv ev Noyots yevér Oat
a) \ ‘)
Twept Tov Kal éavtov mpaypatov, avwlev apta-\ \ > 9 9 , , \
pevov: Kai Tas ém’ audotepa TroAXaKs peTaBoras wn n ¥ adnynaapevoy eitrety ws ovK.éaTL vouv ExoVTOS
avdpos ET TH TUX WiaTevey EavTtov: éx O€ ToUv-TOV TOUS TapovTas dowacduevoy Kal KaTAaKNe-Oévra auvexas nuépas ErTa TeXEUTHTAL. TLVvES OE la A fo! S
Thy pirotipiav avtov hacw ev TH voow wavta-Tacw amroKarudlcicav eis atotov é€oKxetNar Tapakomny, olopévov tov MiOpidarixoy otparn-
A > A “A yety woAeuov, celta, WoTrep em avTov Ei\wber TAY
ayovwv, oxXnpata wavTodaTa Kal Kivnpata TWOMATOS PETA GUVTOVOU Kpavyns Kal TuUKVOY bd 4 b , ed \ b) *
addarayydtwv amobidovTos. ovTws dSeuvos avT@
\ , 3 J \ /
kal dvatrapapvOntos éx pirapyias Kai CnrotuTias
A vA A tA
Epws évtetnxes TaV mpdkewy exeitvwv. 610 ETN
N e , / ed N fa)
pev EBSounKxovta BeBtwxas, brratos 86 mpwros avOparev émtaxis avnyopevpévos, olxov TE Kal la! 3 “~ : , e A n
TNOUTOV apKovvTa PBacireiats opov moAXais
KEKTNMLEVOS, WOUPETO THY EavTOD TUXNY ws évdenS 433
> ‘ Ld 9 4 ,
Kal arerns av érobe: wpoaTroOvicKav.
XLVI. [Adtav pév odv 46n mpos TO TerAeuTaV
4 \ n ,
yevojevos Duvet Tov avTOD Saipova Kal THY TYYND, 4 A \ v 3 ad 9 ,
Ste wp@toy pev avOpwmos, eita” EXXny, od Bapan tA tA \
Bapos ovéé aXNoyov TH hvaet Onpiov yévorto, mWpos

fay J 5é rovTors, OTL Tois ZWKpaToUs Ypovols aTHYTNGEV
594

CAIUS MARIUS

went in personally and conversed with Marius on the subjects of his embassy after Marius had fallen ill. But a certain Caius Piso, an historian, relates that Marius, while walking about with his friends after supper, fell to talking about the events of his life, beginning with his earliest days, and after recounting his frequent reversals of fortune, from good to bad. and from bad to good, said that it was not the part of a man of sense to trust himself to Fortune any longer; and after this utterance bade his friends farewell, kept his bed for seven days consecutively, and so died. Some, however, say that his ambitious nature was completely revealed during his illness by his being swept into a strange delusion. He thought that he had the command in the Mithridatic war, and then, just as he used todo in his actual struggles, he would indulge in all sorts of attitudes and gestures, accompanying them with shrill cries and frequent calls to battle. So fierce and inexorable was the passion for directing that war which had been in- stilled into him by his envy and lust of power. And therefore, though he had lived to be seventy years old, and was the first man to be elected consul for the seventh time, and was possessed of a house and wealth which would have sufficed for many kingdoms at once, he lamented his fortune, in that he was dying before he had satisfied and completed his desires.

XLVI. Plato, however, when he was now at the point of death, lauded his guardian genius and Fortune because, to begin with, he had been born a man and not an irrational animal; again, because he was a Greek and not a Barbarian ; and still again, because his birth had fallen in the times of Socrates.

595

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

e 4 > A \ \ / \ / 4
n yéveotsavTov. Kai vn Aia tov Tapoéa Aéyoucw 9 , e , e N \ \ > AVTLTATPOV WOAVTWS VITO THY TEXEUTHY avadotp! ? 4 , \ A > 9 4
yiCopevoy ov TUYOL paKapiov pndé THs ets AOnvas olxofev evtrAoias émirabécOa, Kxaddrep dido-YpHaTou Tis TUXNS amacay Soow eis peyadrnv yap TWépevov Kat owlovta TH uvnun Sua TédOUS, hs ovdéy éeotiv avOpwor@ Tapteiov ayadav Be-Baotepov. Ttovs d5€ auvnuovas Kal avontous
a A 4
UTEKpEL TA Yiyvopeva peTa TOV Ypovou: do wnOev oTeyovTes unde Statnpobvtes ael Kevol pev ayabar,
\
mAnpers d€ é€Amidwy mpos TO péAAOV aTrOBXEoe \

jouvol, TO Tapoy Tpoiéuevor. Kaito. TO péev av e 4 A , \ \ 9? f 4 >
n TUXN KwWrdCaL SUVaLTO, TO b€ dvadhaipeTov éoTLW:
GAN pws TodTO THs TUXNS @s GAXOTPLOV éxBar-
Novres exeivo TO AONAOY GVELPWTTOVALY, ELKOTA TaaKovTes. ply yap éx Noyou Kai Trardeias Edpav vroBarés0at Kal xpnirida tois &EwOev ayabois, GuvayovTes avTa Kal cuugopobytTes EuTAHoAL THS
an /
wouyijs ov Svvavtat TO axopec Tov.
/
"Arobvnckxe 8 ovv Mdpios 7 1épas emtaxaideca
“A e 60 e / > 4 l / 4 Ths eBoouns UTratelas eTtAaBwv. Kal peya eave
e€ , 4
Tapautixa THY “Pwouny xdpua Kai Oapoos ws
a ‘6 ? / 9 7 de
vaheris Tupavyicos amndAaypevny’ odiyats O€
>
fpépats naoOovto véov avTnd\\aypévot Kal axpa-
4 e Covta avtl mpecRutov Seamotny: toaavTny o
eN > “a / b] / \ , ? & , vios avtov Maptos wpotnta Kal mixpiav aTredet-Faro, Tovs apiatous Kal Soxipmwrdtous avatpov.
/ bd
Sofas 5é kal toAuntrns Kal dtdroKivduvos eivat 596

CAIUS MARIUS

And indeed they say that Antipater of Tarsus, when he was in like manner near his end and was enumerating the blessings of his life, did not forget to mention his prosperous voyage from home to Athens, just as théugh he thought that every gift of a benevolent Fortune called for great gratitude, and kept it to the last in his memory, which is the most secure storehouse of blessings for a man. Unmindful and thoughtless persons, on the contrary, let all that happens to them slip away as time goes on ; therefore, since they do not hold or keep anything, they are always empty of blessings, but full of hopes, and are looking away to the future while they neglect the present. And yet the future may be prevented by Fortune, while the present cannot be taken away ; nevertheless these men cast aside the present gift of Fortune as something alien to them, while they dream of the future and its uncertainties. And this is natural. For they assemble and heap together the external blessings of life before reason and educa- tion have enabled them to build any foundation and basement for these things, and therefore they cannot satisfy the insatiable appetite of their souls.

So, then, Marius died, seventeen days after enter- ing upon his seventh consulship. And immediately Rome was filled with great rejoicing and a confident hope that she was rid of a grievous tyranny; but in a few days the people perceived that they had got a new and vigorous master in exchange for the old one; such bitterness and cruelty did the younger Marius display, putting to death the best and most esteemed citizens. He got the reputation of being bold and fond of danger in fighting his enemies, and

Mpos Tous ToAEulovs ev apy Tats "Apeos wvopa-Cero, tayv dé Tois Epyous édeyyoperos avOis
b] , en ? " / N Adpoditns vies éxaretto. Téros bé Kataxrerabets eis paweorov bo YUAAa Kal, ToAAA dhiroWv-XNTAS MATHY, OF HY ApvKTa Ths woAEws arALTKO-MEVNS, AUTOS AUTOV ATEKTELVED.
598

in the beginning was called a son of Mars; but his deeds soon showed what he really was, and he was called instead a son of Venus. And finally he was shut up in Praeneste by Sulla, and after many vain attempts to save his life, when the city was captured and he could not escape, he slew himself.1

1 See the Sulla, xxxii. 1.

Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES
Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES
A

Actium, 279, 293, 297, a promontory of Acarnania in northern Greece, at. the entrance of the Ambraciot gulf.

Aeacides, 59, 347, king of Epeirus and father of Pyrrhus. He was driven from his kingdom in 317 B.c., and recalled in 313, during which year he was defeated and slain by the forces of Cassander.

Aegae, 433, a town in central Macedonia, the burial place of the royal line.
Aemilius, 411, Quintus Aemilius
Papus, consul in 282 and 278 B.c, and censor in 275. In all these offices he had Caius Fabricius as colleague.
Aéropus, the Macedonian, 47, 369,
not otherwise known.
Agathocles (1), 61, 369, 387 f., tyrant of Syracuse, 210-289 B.c.
He also assumed the title of King of Sicily.
Agathocles (2), 77, 117 f., a son of:

Lysimachus the king of Thrace, sent against Demetrius in 287 B.c. murdered in 284.
Agrippa, 215, 285 f., 305, 331 f., arcus Vipsanius A., fellow-student of Octavius Caesar at Apollonia, and an_ intimate friend. He was one of the leading men of the Augustan age.
He lived 63-12 B.0.
Agrippina, 333, Agrippina the Younger, daughter of Germanicus PLUT, IX.

and grand-daughter of Agrippa.
In 28 A.D. she married Domitius Ahenobarbus, who died in 40. In 49 she married her uncle, the emperor Claudius.
Ahenobarbus, 333, see Domitius (3).

Albinus, 483, Spurius Postumius A., was consul in 110 B.C. and conducted the war against Jugurtha unsuccessfully. He was condemned for treasonable relations with Jugurtha. é Alcyoneus, 459 f., a son of Antigonus Gonatas, not otherwise mentioned.

Alexander (1), 355, Roxana's son by Alexander the Great, born 323 B.O., and taken to Macedonia by Antipater in 320. On the death of Antipater in 319, Roxana fled with her son to Epeirus, where he was betrothed to Deidameia, the daughter of King Aeacides. After his restoration to Macedonia by Aeacides in 317, he was imprisoned with his mother by Cassander, and both were murdered in 311.

Alexander (2), 87-91, 341, 361f., 381, a son of Cassander by Thessalonicé, the sister of Alexander the Great.

Alexander (3), 371, a son‘of Pyrrhus and lLanassa, not otherwise mentioned.

Alexander (4), 135, a son of Demetrius and Deidameia, not otherwise known.

Alexander (5), 23, son of Polysperchon, was sent by his father in 603

318 B.C. to wrest Athens from the power of Cassander (see .the Phocion, xxxiii.). He was assassinated at Sicyon in 314.

Alexander (6), 219, 263, son of Antony and Cleopatra, graced the triumph of Octavius Caesar at Rome, and was there reared by pcan (see the Antony, 1xxxvii.

).

Alexander (7), 245, 249, of Antioch, a friend of Antony, not otherwise known.
Alexander of Myndus (in Caria), 507, a Greek writer on zoology, of uncertain date.
Alexas the Laodicean, 303 f., not otherwise known.
Alexas the Syrian, 289, not otherwise known.
Amanus, 132 f., a range of mountains between Cilicia and Syria, at the head of the gulf of Issus.
Amorgus, 29, an island in the Aegean Sea, south-east of Naxos.
Amphiasa, 199, the chief town of the Ozolian Locrians, about seven miles west of Delphi.
Ancharia, 207, first wife of Caius Octavius. Plutarch erroneously identifies her daughter Octavia with the Octavia who was the daughter of Atia.
Anthesterion, 61 f., the eighth month of the Attic calendar, answering to parts of February and March.
Anticyra, 295, a town in Phocis, on a bay of the Corinthian gulf.
Antigenidas, 5, a celebrated Theban flute-player and poet in the times of Alexander the Great.
Antigone, 357 f., 369, daughter of Berenicé and first wife of Pyrrhus.
Antigonus (1), 7—77, 333 f., 367, 431, surnamed the One-eyed, king of Asia, father of Demetrius Poliorcertes. He fell in the battle of Ipsus (301 B.C.).
Antigonus (2), 99, 111, 129, 133 f., 431 ff., 445 f., 449 f., 459 f., son of Demetrius Poliorcetes, king of Macedonia 283-239 B.c., Antigonus Gonatas.

Antigonus the Jew, 219, king of Judaea. His rival, Herod, was made king of Judaea by the Roman _ senate, through the influence of Antony. Antigonus was then defeated and captured by Herod (with the assistance of the Roman general Sosius), and delivered over to Antony, who had him executed (37 B.0.).

Antiochus (1), 71, 77, 93-97, 129 f., Antiochus I., son of Seleucus and king of Syria, killed in battle with the Gauls 261 B.c.
Antiochus (2), of Commagené, 213 f., established in power by Pompey (64 B.c.), and a supporter of Pompey against Caesar. He died shortly before 31 B.c.
Antipater (1), 33, 91, 335, regent of Macedonia during Alexander's absence in the East, and of Alexander's empire after the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.c. He died in 319.
Antipater (2), 87, 91, 361, son of Cassander by Thessalonicé the sister of Alexander the Great. After the death of his brother Alexander, Antipater fled for refuge to Lysimachus, who had him put to death.
Antipater of Tarsus, 597, a Stoic philosopher who was flourishing in 144 B.o.
Antiphon, 197. It is uncertain which of the many men of this name is meant.
Antonia (1), 333, elder daughter of Antony and Octavia. Her son by Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus Cneius Domitius, was the father of Nero.

Antonia (2), 333, younger daughter of Antony and Octavia. She lived to see her grandson Caligula emperor in 37 A.D.

Antonius (1), 587 f., Marcus Antonius the orator, grandfather of the triumvir, 143-87 B.c. He was consul in 99, censor in 97, and a partisan of Sulla. Cicero often speaks of him as one of the greatest of Roman orators.

Antonius (2), 139, Marcus Antoninus Creticus, father of the triumvir.

DICTIONARY OF

In 74 B.C. he was given command of the Roman fleet in order to clear the Mediterranean of pirates but he failed ignominiously and was defeated in an attack upon Crete. His surname was given him in derision. He was avaricious and rapacious.

Antonius (3), 157, Caius Antonius, uncle of the _ triumvir. He served under Sulla in the Mithridatic war, and was expelled from the senate for plundering the allies. He was Cicero's colleague in the consulship in 63 B.C., and in 59 was convicted of extortion in his province of Macedonia, in spite of the defence of his conduct by Cicero.

Antonius (4), 171, 185, Caius Antonius, elder brother of the triumvir. After his praetorship he received the province of Macedonia, where he was put to death in 42 B.c. See the Brutus, XAV.—-XXViii.

Antonius (5), 171, 203, Lucius

Antonius, younger brother of the triumvir. He was _ consul in 41 B.O., and was besieged by Octavius Caesar in Perusia, and compelled to surrender. His life was spared, however, and he was even given command in Spain. Nothing more is heard of him.

Antonius (6), 331, 338, Julius Antonius, younger son of the triumvir by Fulvia. He received great favours from Augustus, and was consul in 10 B.c. But in consequence of an intrigue with Julia, the daughter of Augustus, he was condemned to death in 2 B.c., and took his own life.

Antyllus, 301, 319, 331 (cf. 199 f.), a name given by Greek writers to Marcus Antonius, the elder son of the triumvir by Fulvia. The name is probably a corruption of the diminutive Antonillus. According to Dion Cassius (li. 8, 4), Antony sent Antyllus to appease Octavius Caesar after the battle of Actium.

Apama the Persian, 77, daughter of Spitamenes the Bactrian prince, and married to Seleucus in 325 B.C., when Alexander and his principal officers took oriental wives.

Apelles, 53, the most celebrated of Greek painters. He flourished at the courts of Philip and Alexander of Macedon.

Apemantus, 297 f., not otherwise

known.

Apollonia, 171, an ancient Greek city of Illyria. Towards the end of the Roman republic it became a famous seat of learning.
Aquae Sextiae, 511, a Roman colony in southern Gaul, founded in 122 B.c., and named from its hot and cold springs, and from its founder, the pro-consul Sextius Calvinus. It is the modern Aix.

Aquillius, 499, Manius A., consul in 101 B.Cc., and in 88 one of the consular legates to prosecute the war against Mithridates. He fell into the hands of Mithridates, who put him to a cruel death.
Archidamia, 439, mentioned only in this connection.
Archidamus, 85, Archidamus IV., king of Sparta. It was in 296 B.C. that he was defeated by Demetrius. .
Archilochus, 87, 213, of Paros, one of the earliest Ionian lyric poets, flourishing in 650 B.C.
Areius, 317, 321, a philosopher of the Stoic school, is said to have been a teacher of Augustus.
Areus, 425 f., 445 f., 453, Areus I., king of Sparta 309-265 B.c. He fell in a battle with the Macedonians at Corinth, and was succeeded by his son Acrotatus.
Ariobarzanes, 11, Ariobarzanes II., © king of Pontus 363-337 B.c.
Aristeas, 447, 451, a citizen of Argos who invited Pyrrhus into the city. His rival, Aristippus, favoured Antigonus Gonatas.
Aristobulus, 143, a prince of Judaea, captured and carried to Rome by Pompey in 63 B.c. In 57 he escaped and stirred up war anew in Judaea, but was again captured and sent to Rome by Gabinius. In 49 he was released and sent home by Julius Caesar but was poisoned to death on thé journey by emissaries of Pompey.

Aristocrates, 295, not otherwise known.
Aristodemus, 21, 39, 41, a friend and flatterer of Antigonus I., sent eA him in 315 B.o. to maintain interests in Peloponnesus against Cassander. The mission for Demetrius in 306 is the last we hear of him.
Arpinum, 469, an ancient city of the Volscians, on the river Liris, the birth-place of Marius and Cicero.
Arruntius, 289, perhaps the Lucius Arruntius who was consul in 22 B.O. , Arsaces, 335, probably Arsaces XV. (Phraates 1V.), king of the Parthians 37-2 B.c.
Artabazus, 341, clearly an error for Artavasdes (cf. the Antony, 1. 4).
Artavasdes, 221, 225, 253 f. (341), king-of Armenia 55-30 B.c. After the battle of Actium, Cleopatra had him put to death, and sent his head to his inveterate enemy, Artavasdes of Media.
Asculum, 413 f., a city in the interior of Apulia.
Asinius, 157, a friend of Antony, otherwise little known.
Atia, 207, daughter of Marcus Atius Balbus and Julia (the sister of Julius Caesar). She was married to Caius Octavius, by whom she was the mother of Octavius Caesar, afterwards Augustus.

Attaius (1), 275, probably Attalus I., king of Pergamum 241-197 B.o.
Attalus (2), 47, Attalus III., surnamed Philometor, king of Peramum 138-133 B.o. In his will e made the Romans his heirs.
Axius, 105, the principal river of Macedonia, flowing past Pella into the Thermaic gulf.
B Baiae, 555, a watering place on the coast of Campania, in the bay between Cape Misenum and Puteoli.

Beneventum, 427, one of the chief cities of Samnium, in central Italy, east of Capua. It was called Maleventum until 268 B.o., when a Roman colony was established there.
Berenicé, 355 f., 361, came to Egypt from Macedonia in attendance on Ptolemy's bride Eurydicé, the daughter of Antipater. She secured the succession for her son, Ptolemy Philadelphus, who paid her divine honours after her death. Theocritus celebrates her virtues in Idyll xvii.
Beroea, 111, 375 f., a city in the northern part of Macedonia, about thirty miles from Pella, the capital. Cf. Acts, xvii. 10, 14.
Berytus, 255, a Phoenician city on the coast north of Tyre and Sidon. It became a Roman colony, and was favoured and adorned by Agrippa.

Bestia, 483, Lucius Calpurnius B., tribune of the people in 121 B.c., and consul in 111. He made a disgraceful peace with Jugurtha, for which he was tried and condemned in 110.

Bibulus, 149, Lucius Calpurnius B., aedile in 65 B.O., praetor in 62, and consul in 59, in each case a colleague of Julius Caesar. He was Pompey's admiral in 49, and died in 48, before the battles at Dyrrhachium.
Bircenna, 369 f., wife of Pyrrhus, not otherwise mentioned.
Bocchoris, 67, an ancient Egyptian king and legislator, of the ninth century B.O.
Bocchus, 485 f. king of Mauretania, and betrayer of Jugurtha to the Romans in 106 B.C.
Boédromion, 61 f., the third Attic month, answering nearly to our September.
Brundisium, 155, 215, 279, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural
DICTIONARY OF

'point of dapactas from Italy to the East, and was the chief naval station of the Romans in the Adriatic.
Brutus, 163, Decimus Junius B., surnamed Albinus after his adoption by Aulus Postumius Albinus, the consul of 99 B.o. He was widely employed, highly esteemed and richly rewarded by Julius Caesar, and yet joined his murpedal After Caesar's death he pupocce Antony successfully, but fell a victim to the coalition between Antony and Octavius in 43 B.C.

cae, 505, 513, Quintus Servilius sg consul in 106 B.C., and proeet in Gallia Narbonensis for the following year. Ten years after his defeat by the Cimbri (cf. the Camillus, xix. 7) he was brought to trial for misconduct in the war, condemned, and thrown into prison.
Caesar, 179 f., Lucius Julius C., uncle of Antony, consul in 64 B.C., legate of Julius Caesar in Gaul in 52. He took no active part in the struggle between Pompey and Caesar, but sided with the aristocracy against Antony. After his life was saved by his sister
we hear nothing of him.
Caesarion, 261, 301, 321, according to Cleopatra, her son by Julius Caesar, He was born in 47 B.c.
Caius, 333, Caius Caesar Caligula, youngest son of Germanicus, emperor 37—41 A.D.
Callimachus, 301, a celebrated grammarian, critic, and poet of the Alexandrine period, chief librarian at Alexandria from about 260 B.C. till his death about 240.
Calpurnia, 171, daughter of the Lucius Calpurnius Piso who was consul in 58 B.c. She became the wife of Julius Caesar in 59. See the Caesar, Ixiii.
Calvisius, 271, Caius C. Statianus, one of the legates of Julius Caesar in the civil war, and governor of Africa in 45 B.c. He commanded the fleet of Octavius

Caesar in the war with Sextus
Pompeius

Canidius, 215, 235, 265, 281, 285, 201 f., 301, Lucius Canidius Crassus, brought about a union between Antony and Lepidus in 43 B.O., and was consul in 40. After the battle of Actium he bet put to death by Octavius aesa.

Ganopua. "203, 339, a town in Egypt, about fifteen miles east of Alexandria, on one of the mouths of the N. ile.
Capito, 217, Caius Fonteius C., had been sent in 37 B.c. to restore friendship between Octavius and Antony.
Cappadocia, 13, a central district of Asia Minor Carbo, 505, Gnaeus Papirius C., was consul with Cinna in 85 B.o. On Sulla’s return from the East and victorious advance upon Rome, Carbo fled to Libya, but was taken prisoner by Pompey and cruelly put oe co (see the Pompey, chapter x.).
Cassander, 19, i. 53, 77 f., 87, 91, 351 f., 361, a son of Antipater the regent of Macedonia. He was master of Athens from 318 to 307 B.O., when Demetrius Poliorcetes took possession of the city. He died in 297.
Cassandreia, 113, a city founded by Cassander on the site of the ancient Potidaea, in the Chalcidic peninsula of eastern Macedonia.
Cassius, 151 f., Quintus C. Longinus, tribune of the people with Antony in 49 B.c., and made governor of Further Spain, by Julius Caesar, where he had been ea and quaestor in 54. Here e renewed the most shameless exactions. He was lost at sea in 47.

Cataonia, uy one of the divisions of Cap pps ocia,
vets, 01, 503, 523 ff., 527, 531-9, 589, Quintus Lutatius ‘Catu-607

DICTIONARY OF

lus, consul in 102 B.c. - with Marius, a highly educated man,
author of orations and poems,
and of a history of his consulship
and the Cimbric war.
Celaenae, 17, a city of Phrygia at the sources of the Maeander (Xenophon, Anad. i. 2, 7).
Cenchreae, 55, the eastern harbour-town of Corinth.
Caunus, 125, a city in southern Caria
with a commodious port.
Censorinus, 187, Lucius Marcus C., a partisan of Antony, praetor in 43 B.C., consul in 39, and afterwards governor of Macedonia.
Cerameicus, 29 f., the Inner Cerameicus is meant, which extended from the Dipylum gate through the agora between the Areiopagus and the Hill of the Nymphs.
Chaonians, 405, 441, one of the chief tribes of Epeirus.
Chersonese, Syrian, 129, 133, a hame given to the valley of the Orontes about the Apameia
cineas, 385 f., 389, 393, 403, 407 f., 413, 419, minister and faithful friend of Pyrrhus, and the most eloquent man of his day. His mission to Sicily is the last we hear of him, and he must have died before pans returned to Italy in 276 B.C

Cinna, 597 f., 585 f., 591, Lucius Cornelius C., leader of the Marian party during Sulla’s absence in the East (87-84 B.0.). He was consul in 87, 86, 85 and 84. He was slain in a mutiny of his soldiers at Brundisium, where he had hoped to prevent the landing of Sulla.
Circeii, 361, a maritime town of Latium, at the foot of Mons Circeius Claudius (1), 403 f., 407, Appius Claudius Caecus, censorin 312 B.C. and consul in 317 and 296, in in which last year he was victori-ous over the Samnites. His speech in reply in reply to Cineas was extent in Cicero’s time (Cicero, Brutus, 16, 62).
608 city of _Cleopatra (1),

PROPER NAMES

Claudius (2), 333, Tfbherius Claudius Drusus Nero Germanicus, fourth Roman emperor (41-54 A.D.).
Cleon, 27, the Athenian demagogue and leader of the war party 428-422 B.C. See the Nicias, chapters vii. f.
Cleonymus, 97, 435 ff., younger son of Cleomenes Il. king of Sparta, excluded from the throne on his father’s death in 309 B.c.
161-339 passim, daughter of Ptolemy Auletes the king of Egypt, born about 69 B.c. On the death of her father in 51, she became queen of Egypt in conjunction with her younger brother Ptolemy.

Cleopatra (2), 219 ¥331, daughter of Antony and C Cleopat: tra, born in 40 B.c. By Juba she had a son Ptolemy, who succeeded his father as king of Numidia.
Clodia (or Claudia), 181, daughter of Clodius by Fulvia. She was betrothed to Octavius Caesar in 43 B.C., but he never regarded her as his wife, and sent her back to her mother at the outbreak of the Perusian wee anuuced to in the Antony, 1).
Clodius, MAL 181, Publius Claudius (Clodius) Pulcher, son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in in the Sulla, xxix. 3. He became the most venomous foe of Cicero (cf. Cicero, chapters xxix.—XXXV.) Coelius (or Caelius), 285, the text is corrupt, and the name should probably be Sossius (or Sosius).
Commagené, 213, 277, the northern-most district of Syria.
Corcyra, 369, 373, an island in the Jonian Sea opposite Epeirus, the modern Corfu.
Cornelia, 557, daughter of Scipio Africanus the Elder, mother-in-law of Scipio Africanus the Younger, and mother of the Gracchi.
Cornutus, 436, probably the Marcus Cornutus who had served with distinction in the Marsic war (90 B.C.).
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Corrhagus (or Corrhaeus), 7, a Macedonian otherwise unknown.
Corvinus, 543, Marcus Valerius C., 371-271 B.c., five times dictator and six times consul.

Cotta, 471, Lucius Aurelius C., consul in 119 B.c.
Craterus, 33, one of the' ablest
officers of Alexander the Great,
and a man of noble character.
He fell in battle against Eumenes in 321 B.c. See the Humenes, chapters v. ff.
Crates, the philosopher, 117, of Athens, became head of the Academy about 270 B.c. His writings are not preserved.
Curio, 141, 149, Caius Scribonius C., an able orator, but reckless and profligate. He was tribune of the people in 50 B.c., and sold his support to Caesar, who made him praetor in Sicily in 49. Thence he crossed into Africa to attack the Pompeian forces there, but was defeated and slain (Caesar, Bell. Civ., ii. 23-44).
Curius, 427 f., Manius Curius Dentatus, consul in 290 B.c., during which year he celebrated two triumphs, one over the Samnites and one over the Sabines. -He was consul again in 275, when Pyrrhus returned to Italy from Sciily. In 274 he was consul for the third time, and continued the war against the allies of Pyrrhus Then he retiréd to his Sabine farm for-the remainder of his days, dying in 270.
Cydnus, 193, a river in eastern Cilicia, on which was the city of Tarsus.
Cyrené, 135, a Greek city on the northern coast of Africa, in commercial relations with Carthage, Greece, and Egypt.
Cyrrhestica, 123, 213, a district in northern Syria, south of Com-magené,

Danaiis, 455, mythical ancestor of

PLUT. IX.

the Danal, migrating from Egypt
into Greece.
Deidameia, 59, 73, 79, 135, 349, 355, 363, sister of Pyrrhus, and one of the many wives of Demetrius.
She died in 300 B.C.
Dellius, 191 f., 273, a Roman knight transacting business in Asia, where he joined Dolabella_ in 44 B.C., and afterwards Antony.
He wrote a history of Antony's war with the Parthians, to which Plutarch is indirectly much indebted. Horace dedicated to him the third Ode of Book ii.
Dometrias, 135, a city at the head of the Pagasaean gulf, founded by Demetrius Poliorcetes about 290
B.C.

Demetrias the Phalerean, 19 f., 25
a celebrated rhetorician and orator (346-283 B.c.). He was regent of Athens for Cassander from 318 to 307.
Democharés (1), of Leuconoé, 57 f..
was married to the mother of Demosthenes.
Democharés. (2), of Soli, not otherwise known.
Deucalion, 347, a mythical king of Phthia in Thessaly, the Noah of the Greek legend of the flood.
Dexoiis, 399, known only from this exploit, which, in Frontinus, Strat., ii. 4, 9, is attributed to Laevinus.
Dicomes, 281, king of the Getae, not otherwise mentioned.

Dionysius, 401, 415, of Halicarnassus, came to Rome in 29 B.C., where he published his great work on the history of Rome in 7 B.C.
Dium, 87, an important maritime town in S.E. Macedonia.
Dodona, 347, a town in Epeirus, seat of the most ancient oracle of Zeus.
Dolabella (1), 157-165, Publius Cornelius D., the profligate and debt-ridden son-in-law of Cicero. He took part with Caesar, but approved of his murder, and gained the consulship for the remainder of the year 44. He ‘was outlawed and declared a public enemy on account of his extortions in Asia, and committed suicide.

Dolabella (2), 325, Publius Cornelius D., son of the preceding. He was consul in 10 A.D.
Domitius (1), 231, 265, 281, Cnaeus Domitius Ahenobarbus, son of the Ahenobarbus_ who fell at Pharsalus (see the Pompey, Ixix.1) pardoned by Caesar, but a follower of Brutus and Cassius, reconciled to Antony in 40 B.c.
Domitius (2), 333, Lucius D. Ahenobarbus, son of the preceding. He was consul in 16 B.C., and afterwards celebrated a triumph for campaigns in Germany. He died in 25 a.p.
Domitius (3), 333 (Ahenobarbus), Cnaeus D. Ahenobarbus, son of the preceding, and father of the emperor Nero. He was consul in 32 A.D. His life was filled with flagrant and unnatural crimes.

Domitius (4), 333, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, the original name of the emperor Nero. After his adoption by the emperor Claudius he was called Nero Claudius Caesar Drusus Germanicus.
Dromichaetea, 99, 133, king of the Getae, known only from his victory over Lysimachus.
Dromocleides the Sphettian, 33, 85, not otherwise known.
Drusus, 333, Nero Claudius D. Germanicus, son of Livia by Tiberus Claudius Nero, born in 38 B.C., a younger brother of the emperor Tiberius. He conducted great campaigns against the Gauls and Germans, and died in the field at the age of thirty-one.
E

Edessa, 107, 381, a city in northern Macedonia, the ancient capital of the country.
Empedocles, 13, a famous philosopher and poet of Acragas (Agrigentum) in Sicily, flourishing in 440 B.C, ° 610

Epicurus, 83, 409, founder of the philosophical school named from him, born in Samos, 342 B.C., died at Athens, 270 B.c.
Erasistratus, 93 f., one of the most celebrated physicians of antiquity. After his residence at the court of Seleucus, he lived at Alexandria in the practice of his profession. He was still living in 258 B.C.

Eumenes, 275, probably Eumenes II. is meant, king of Pergamum 197-159 B.c.
Eurycles the Laconian, 289 f., not otherwise known.
Eurydicé (1), 33, 135, one of the wives of Demetrius, not otherwise known.
Eurydicé (2), 117, daughter of Antipater and wife of Ptolemy Lagus. Jealous of Berenicé, she withdrew from the court of Egypt and was now (287 B.C.) residing at Miletus.
F

Fabricius, 401, 407 f., 411 f., Caius F. Luscinus, consul in 282 and 278 B.C. with Aemilius Papus, and censor with him in 275. A fine example of old Roman simplicity and integrity.
Flaccus, 543, Lucius Valerius F., colleague of Marius in the consulship of 100 B.c:, and censor in 97 with Marcus Antonius the orators In 86 he was made consul with Cinna and sent to Asia to conduct the war against Mithridates. Here he was murdered by Fimbria (see the Sulla, xii. 9, with note).

Frentanian, 399, the Frentani were a hardy people of central Italy, allied to the Samnites, by whom they were bordered on the West.
Fulvia, 161 f., 181, 197 f., 203-207, 217, 261, 267, 301, wife of Antony. She had _ previously been the wife of Clodius the demagogue, and of Curio, the friend and legate of Julius Caesar.
DICTIONARY OF

She redeemed what had been a dissolute life by her passionate devotion to Antony.

Furnius, 271, Caius Furniug, tribune of the people in 50 B.C., a friend of Cicero, and yet a faithful adherent of Antony. After the battle of Actium he was reconciled to Octavius Caesar, by whom he was highly honoured.

G

Gabinius, 143, 155, Aulus G., tribune of the people in 66 B.C., praetor in 61, and consul with Piso in 58, the year during which Cicero was exiled. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking pees and exiled. He died in —

Gallus (1), 235 f., Flavius G., not otherwise known

Gallus (2), 317, Caius Cornelius G., distinguished poet and orator ‘at Rome who stood in high favour with Octavius Caesar, and served him in high command. After Cleopatra’s death he was made prefect of Egypt. He afterwards fell from the emperor’s favour, nee to escape exile, took his own

Gaza, 13, an ancient city and stronghold in southern Palestine.

Germanicus, 333, Germanicus Caesar, son of Nero Claudius Drusus, nephew of the emperor Tiberius, and brother of the emperor Claudius. His extraordinary fame and popularity at Rome awakened the jealousy of ae and led to his death in A.D.

Glaucia, 541, Caius Servilius G., presto in 100 B. 0., a partisan of arius, and a partner of Saturpular tumults of that year. e perished with Saturninus. Cicero compares him to the Athenian demagogue Hyperbolus (Brutus, 62, 224).

ninus in the

PROPER NAMES

H

Halae, 299, a town in N.E. Boeotia, near the sea.
Halicarnassus, 19, a large and strong Dorian city in S.W. Caria.
Helenus, 371, 455, 461, son of Pyrrhus by Lanassa, the daughter of Agathocles (erroneously by Bircenna, 371). Nothing further is known of him.
Heracleia, 395, a Greek city in Lucania on the gulf of Tarentum.
It was at this time in alliance with Tarentum against Rome.
Hercynii, 491, tribes in central and southern Germany.
Herennius, 473 f., Caius H., tribune of the people in 80 B.O. . and opposed to Sulla. After the death of Sulla he joined Sertorius in Spain whale B.O.). See the Pompey, xviii.
Herod, 277, 301 f., iterod the Great,
made king of Judaea in 40 B.c.
by the Roman senate, at the behest of Antony. His ‘title was confirmed by Augustus, to whom he remained loyal till his death in4B.0. Cf. Matthew, chapter ii.
Hieronymus, 97, 401, 415, of Cardia, a historian of the times following the death of Alexander the Great.
He was a friend and companion of Eumenes (cf. the Eumenes, xii.)

and after the death of Eumenes became a friend of Antigonus, then of Demetrius his son, and finally of Antigonus Gonatas.
The death of Pyrrhus (272 B.c.)
is mentioned in his history.
Hipparchus, 293, 305, a friend of Antony, not otherwise known.
Hirtius, 175, Aulus H., a warm friend and supporter of Julius Caesar, consul in 43 B.C. He fell in gallantly leading an assault upon Antony's troops (cf. the Cicero, xlv. 3 f.).
Hortensius, 185, Quintus H. Horta-lus, son of the great orator Hortensius, though apparently cast off by his father on account of his dissolute habits. He joined Caesar in 49 B.C., and served under him in important commands (cf. the Caesar, xxxii. 2). In 44 B.c. he held the province of Macedonia, and Brutus was to succeed him.

Hybreas, 189, of Mylasa, in Caria, reputed to be the greatest orator of his time. His works are lost.
Hyrodes, 211, 219, another form of Orodes, Orodes I., the same as Arsaces XIV., the king of the Parthians who defeated Crassus
in 53 B.c.

I

Ialysus, 51, mythical founder of the city of Ialysus in Rhodes.
Iampsas (Hiempsal), 575 f., king of Numidia. He was expelled from his kingdom by Domitius Ahenobarbus, the leader of the Marian party in Africa, but was

At eeeagets by Pompey in 81 B.c.
Cf. the Pompey, xii. 4.
Iapygian promontory, 391. Iapygia was a Greek name of the S.E. district of Italy, called Calabria
by the Romans.
Iolcus, 135, an ancient and famous city at the head of the Pagasaean gulf, the assembling place for Jason’s Argonauts. It was merged in Demetrias.
Ipsus, 71, 81, 355, a village in southern Phrygia.
Isis, 263, 307, an Egyptian goddess, identified with the Demeter of the Greeks. ,
J Juba, 331, Juba II., king of Mauritania. “He lived from 50 B.c. to about 20 A.D., was educated at Rome, and became a learned and voluminous writer.
Among his works was a History of Rome.
Jugurtha, 477, 481, 485 f., 493, 553, king of Numidia 112-106 B.c.
He was brought a prisoner to Rome, and starved to death in 104.
Julia, 139, 181, daughter of the 612 Lucius Julius Caesar who was consul in 90 B.c., and mother of Antony. She fied from Rome in 41, but returned to Italy with her son in 39, after she had aided in reconciling him with Octavius Caesar.
L

Labienus, 197, 205, 211, son of the Labienus who fell at Munda in 45 B.c. After the murder of Julius Caesar he joined the party of Brutus and Cassius, and was sent by them into Parthia, where he proved a formidable enemy of Octavius and Antony. He was not slain in his battle with Ventidius, but fled in disguise to Cilicia, where he was discovered and killed by a freedman of Octavius.

Lachares, 81 f., an Athenian demagogue who made himself tyrant of the city in 296 B.c. According to Pausanias (i. 25, 7), he was murdered at Coroneia in Boeotia shortly after his flight from Athens.

Laevinus, 393 f., 399 f., 407, Publius Valerius L., one of the consuls in 280 8B.C., known only from this rae Poe against Pyrrhus. The tradition is through Dionysius of Halicarnassus, who copied Hieronymus, who had access to the Memoirs of Pyrrhus.

Lamis, 37, 45, 55, 61-67, mistress of Demetrius. :

Lamprias, 199 f., the grandfather of Plutarch, a convivial soul.

Lanassa, 369 f., 373, daughter of Agathocles, wife of Pyrrhus, and then of Demetrius.

Lentulus (1), 139 f., Publius Cornelius L. Sura, was consul in 71 B.c., but in the following year was expelled from the senate. This led him to join the conspiracy of Catiline.

Lentulus (2), Lucius Cornelius L. Crus, consul in 49 B.C., and author of the violent measures which drove the tribunes, Antony and Curio, to Caesar at Ravenna. On the outbreak of civil war he joined Pompey in the East, fled with him from Pharsalus, and was put to death in Egypt. See the Pompey, 1xxx. 4.

Teonnatus the Macedonian, 397 f., known only from this incident.
Leosthenes, 349, an Athenian general of the league for expelling the Macedonians from Greece after the death of Alexander. He died during the siege of Lamia (323 B.C.).

Leotychides, 435, son of the Spartan king Agis II., excluded from the throne by Lysander (cf. the Lysander, chapter xxii.).
Lepidus, 158, 161, 169, 175-183, 205, Marcus Aemilius L., joined the party of Caesar in 49 B.c., and was Caesar's consular colleague in 46. After Caesar's murder he sided with Antony, and as member of the triumvirate received Spain and Narbonese Gaul as his provinces, then, in 40, Africa, where he remained till 36. He was then deposed from the triumvirate. He lived till 13 B.c.
Lernaean hydra, 407, a fabled monster haunting the marshy district in south-eastern Argolis, slain by Heracles in his second labour.

Libo, 155, Lucius Scribonius L., an adherent of Pompey in the civil war, and legate of Bibulus on Pompey's fleet, succeeding Bibulus in the supreme command. He afterwards served under Sextus Pompeius, but deserted him for Antony in 35 B.c. He was consul with Antony in 34.
Licymnius, 459, a mythical personage, half-brother of Alcmené the mother of Heracles. He was slain by Tlepolemus the son of Heracles.

iris, 567, one of the principal givers of central Italy, flowing S.W. into the sea near turnae.
Lissus, 155, a coast-town in southern Illyria.

PROPER NAMES

Livia, 323, 221 f., Livia Drusilla, married first to Tiberius Claudius Nero, but in 35 B.c. Octavius took her in marriage from her husband. To her first husband she bore Tiberius (afterwards emperor) and Drusus. She bore Augustus no children, but had unbounded influence over him. She died in 29 A.D.
Lucania, 385, 395, 401, 427, a district of southern Italy, west of Apulia and north of Bruttium.
Lucinus, 591, Sextus L., not otherwise known.
Lupercalia, 165, a shepherds' festival in honour of the rustic god Faunus, held in Rome aA eat f 15. Cf. the Caesar xi. 1.
Lygdamis, 491, leader of the Cimmerians in their invasion of Lydia in the seventh century B.c. Cf, Herodotus, i. 15.
Lynceus the Samian, 65, distinguished as comic poet and historian, brother of Duris the historian, and contemporary with Menander in the latter half of the fourth century B.O.
Lysimachus (1), 31-133 passim, 339, 361 f., 375-381, an officer of Alexander the Great, not prominent during Alexander's life, but afterwards king of Thrace., He fell in battle with Seleucus, 281 B.C.

Lysimachus (2), 443, a companion of Pyrrhus, not otherwise known.
Lutatius, 501, 589, see Catulus.

M

Macrinus, 465, a cognomen denoting leanness.
Maecenas, 215, Caius Cilnius M., the great patron of literature and art during the reign of Augustus, whose prime minister he was.
Mamertines, 421-425, '' Children of Mars,'' mercenary troops from Campania in the employ of Agathocles tyrant of Syracuse.

They seized Messana in 310 B.c. and became a formidable power. They passed finally under the dominion of Rome.
Manlius, 513, Cnaeus Manlius Maximus, consul in 105 B.c. He obtained Transalpine Gaul as his province, where he was defeated by the Gauls, chiefly owing to quarrels with his Servilius Caepio.
Marcellus (1), 519, Marcus Claudius M., fromene later (90 B.c.) in the Marsic war, and an orator of some merit (cf. Cicero, Brutus, 36, 136).
Marcellus (2), 149, 207, 331, Calus Claudius Marcellus, consul in 50 B.c., a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Julius Caesar. He took no part in the civil war, and was percouct by Caesar. As husand of Octavia, the sister of Octavius Caesar, he had considerable influence. He is last heard of about 41 B.c.

Marcellus (3), 331, Caius Claudius M., son of the preceding, born in . 43 B.c. He married Julia, the daughter of Augustus, in 25, and was also adopted by Augustus. He died in 23. Cf. Vergil, Aeneid, vi. 860-886.

Massalia (Massilia), 213 a town in southern Gaul, east of the Rhone, the modern Marseilles, Megacles, 399, known only from this incident.

Menelatis, 35-39, a brother of Ptolemy Lagus, and commander of his fleet. He is not otherwise known, Meninx, 575, an island off the north coast of Africa, near Carthage.

Merula, 579, 593, Lucius Cornelius M., chosen consul in 87 B.c., after Cinna had fled the city, by the partisans of Sulla. On the retura of Marius and Cinna in the same year, he was summoned to trial for illegally exercising the consulship, and committed suicide.

Messapia, 385, 393, like Iapygia, a name given by the Greeks to the colleague, _

south-eastern district of Italy, called Calabria by the Romans.

Metellus (1), 465, Quintus Caecilius M. Macedonicus, was praetor in 148 B.c., and received Macedonia as his province, where he was superseded by Lucius Mummius before he could complete the conquest of Greece. He celebrated a triumph, however, in 146, was consul in 143, and died in 115.

Metellus (2), 469, Lucius Caecilius M. Dalmaticus, consul in 119 B.c., and winner of a bloodless triumph over the Dalmatians.
Metellus (3), 477 ff., 485f., 541-547, 549, 583, Quintus Caecilius M. Numidicus, consul in 109 B.c., and conqueror of Jugurtha, but supplanted by Marius. He was unjustly expelled from the senate, and went into exile, from which he was recalled in 99, largely through the efforts of his son, Metellus Pius.
Metellus (4), 583, Quintus Caecilius M. Pius, son of the preceding. He was consul with Sulla in 80 B.c., and one ofshis most successful generals. After Sulla’s death in 78, Metellus was sent to Spain to prosecute the war against Sertorius. He died about 63.
Meton, 383 f., known only from this incident.
Minturnae, 565, 569, 573, a town of Latium, on the river Liris, about three miles from the sea.
Misenum, 207, a promontory and ae on the coast of Campania. t was a station for the Roman fleet in the times of Augustus and the Empire.
Mithridates, 11 f., Mithridates II., king of Pontus 337-302 B.c. At the time here noted (318 B.c.) he was at the court of Antigonus as a subject vassal.

Mithridates (2), 245, 249, not otherwise known.
Mithridates (3), 551, 555 f., 579, 593, the sixth king of Pontus bearing this name, commonly called Mithridates the Great, 120-63 B.c., DICTIONARY OF the most formidable enemy of the Romans in the East.

Mithridates of Commagené, 277. not otherwise known.
Molossians, 405, 447 f., one of the ' chief tribes of Epeirus.
Monaeses, 219 f., 245, not otherwise own.

Mummius, 465, Lucius Mummius Achaicus, consul in 146 B.C., conqueror of Greece, destroyer of Corinth, establisher of the Roman province of Achaia. He was also censor in 142, with Scipio Africanus the Younger.
Munychia, 19, 23 f., 85, the acropolis of the Peiraeus.
Munychion, 63, the tenth month of the Attic calendar, answering to parts of April andMay.
Musaeus, 565, a mythical personage, to whom various poetical works were assigned.
Mutina, 175, an important city in Cisalpine Gaul, south of the Po, the modern Modena.
N

Nero Germanicus, mitius (4).
Nicarchus, 295, Plutarch’s great-grandfather, not otherwise known. .

Numantia, 469, 495, a strong city in north-eastern Spain, memorable for its siege and destruction by Scipio Africanus the Younger

in 134 B.C.
333, see Do-

O

Octavia, 205 f., 211, 215 f., 257-261,

« 265 ff., 273, 303, 233, 331 f., daughter of Caius Octavius by his second wife Atia, and own sister of Octavius Caesar (Augustus).
She died in 4 B.c. Her son Marcellus was destined to be the successor of Augustus, but died untimely in 23 B.c.
Octavius (1), 479-585, 593, Cnaeus Octavius, consul in 87 B.c. with
PROPER NAMES

Cinna, and supporter of the aristocratic party while Sulla was absent in the East.
Octavius (2), 285, was an adherent of Pompey in 49 B.C., and served successfully on Pompey’s fleet.
After the battle of Pharsalus he fled to Africa, and after that of Thapsus claimed joint command with Cato (see the Cato Minor, Ixv. 2). He is not heard of after the battle of Actium.
Olympias, 51, mother of Alexander the Great, put to death in 316 B.0.
by order of Cassander.
Olympus, 321, a physician and historian, not otherwise known.
Omphalé, 337, a mythical queen of Lydia, whom Heracles served for three years.
Ostia, 561, 581, a city of Latium at the mouth of the Tiber, the seaport of Rome.
P

Pandosia, 395, a small city of Lucania near Heracleia, to be distinguished from the city of Pandosia in Bruttium.
Pansa, 175, Caius Vibius P., a devoted friend of Julius Caesar, who made him governor of Cisalpine Gaul in 46 B.c., and consul for the year 43 with Hirtius.
Pantauchus, 101, 365, had been an officer of Alexander the Great.
Patrae, 23, 275, a town on the coast of Achaia near the entrance to the Corinthian gulf, the modern Patras. :
Patrocles, 121, a Macedonian Greek in the service of Seleucus I., the king of Syria. He was author of a trustworthy geographical work on India and other eastern regions, which is cited by Strabo.
Paulus, 179, Lucius Aemilius Paulus (or Paullus), brother of Lepidus the triumvir. He was consul in 50 B.c., and a determined foe of Julius Caesar. But Caesar bribed him into allegiance (see the Caesar, xxix. 3). After Caesar’s death, Paulus returned to the aristocratic party, and was proscribed by the triumvirs. He escaped death, however, and fied to Miletus, where he died soon afterwards.

Pelasgus, 347, mythical ancestor of the Pelasgians, the earliest inhabitants of Greece.
Pella, 107, was made the capital of Macedonia by Philip II., and was the birthplace of Alexander the Great. It was west of the river Axius, and some fifteen miles from the sea.

Pelusium, 143 f., 307, a strong frontier-town on the eastern branch of the Nile.
Pergamum, 271, in Mysia, capital of the kingdom founded by Eumenes in 263 B.C.
Perseus, 135, the last king of Macedonia, 179-168 B.c. See the Aemilius Paulus, x.—xxxvii.
Pessinus, 509, a town of Galatia in Asia Minor, famed for its rich temple of Cybelé.
Petra, 297, chief city of the district of Arabia which borders Egypt on the N.E. It lay about halfway between the Dead Sea and the Arabian Gulf.
Pharos, 203, 297, an island off Alexandria, artificially united with the mainland.
Pharsalus, in Thessaly, the scene of the decisive battle between Pompey and Caesar in 48 B.C.
Phila, 33 f., 51, 65, 77 f., 91, 113, 117, 135, daughter of Antipater and wife of Demetrius, a virtuous and gifted woman, faithfully devoted to Demetrius in spite of all his marital sins.
Philip, 51, 59, 105, Philip II. of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, reigned 359-336 B.c.
Philippides, 31, one of the principal poets of the New Comedy at + Athens, flourishing in 325 B.o.

Philotas, 197 f., 201, known only from these incidents.
Phylarchus, 439, of Naucratis and Athens, a historian flourishing in 616

215 B.c., to whom Plutarch is much indebted in his Agis and Cleomenes, and his Pyrrhus.
Phraata, 223, 227, 253, a place somewhere in ancient Media which served as a residence for the Parthian kings. It was probably named from Phraates.
Phraates, 219, 223, 229 f., Phraates IV. or Arsaces XV. (this latter name continuing that of the founder of the line), king of Parthia, a man of cruelty and treachery. His son was stolen and carried to Rome, and was surrendered to his father by Augustus on condition of the return of the Roman standards and prisoners captured from Crassus. These were actually returned to Rome in 20 B.c.
Phraortes, 255, apparently an error for Phraates.
Piso, 595, Caius P., not definitely known.

Plancus, 177, 269, Lucius Munatius P., a friend of Julius Caesar, serving under him in Gaul and during the civil war. After Caesar's death he went over to Antony, was consul in 42 B.C., and governor of Syria in 35. He deserted Antony for Octavius Caesar in 32. It was on his proposal that the title of Augustus was conferred upon Octavius in 27.

Pleistarchus, 77 f., son of Antipater and brother of Cassander. After the battle of Ipsus (301 B.c.) he received the province of Cilicia. After his expulsion from this by Demetrius nothing further is heard of him.

Polemon, 275 f., Polemon I., made king of Pontus about 36 B.0o. by Antony. He ransomed himself from the Parthians, and continued to co-operate with Antony. After the battle of Actium he made his peace with Octavius, and was by him confirmed in his kingdom. He died about 2 B.o.
Polysperchon, 23, 367, a distinguished officer of Alexander the DICTIONARY OF PROPER

Great, appointed by Antipater to succeed him in the regency. He connived at some of the worst crimes of Cassander. He is last heard of in 303 B.c.
Pompeius (1), 509; Aulus P., not otherwise known.
Pompeius (2), 207 f., 217, 268, Sextus P., younger son of Pompey the Great by his third wife, escaped after the battle of Munda (45 B.c.), and was active against the triumvirate until his death in 35.

Poseidonius, 465, 593, a famous Stoic philosopher, of Apameia in Syria, a contemporary of Cicero, taught at Rhodes, and was resident at Athens and Rome.
Potheinus, 275, one of the guardians of the young Ptolemy when Caesar came to Egypt. He was put to death by Caesar (cf. the Caesar, xliviii. f.). The name must therefore be used oratorically here.
Priené, 267, one of the twelve Ionian cities in Asia Minor, north of Miletus.

Proculeius, 315 f., Cornelius P.
(Plutarch calis him Procleius), a wealthy Roman _ knight, after wards highly honoured by Augustus. Horace mentions him with praise (Carm. ii. 2, 5 f.).
Protogenes, 51 f., of Caunus in Caria, one of the most celebrated of Greek painters, contemporary with Apelles, flourishing in 330 B.C,
Ptolemy (1), 13-117 passim, 227 f., 355, 361, 375, Ptolemy Lagus, king of Egypt 306-283, the most far-sighted and successful of the officers of Alexander the Great.
Ptolemy (2), 109, Ptolemy IV., surnamed Philopator, king of Egypt
222-205 B.C.
Ptolemy (3), Ptolemy XI., commonly known as Ptolemy Auletes, restored to the throne of Egypt in 55 B.c. through Pompey’s influence. He never regained the goodwill of his people, and died in 51.
NAMES

Ptolemy (4), 361, 369, 441, 449, son of Pyrrhus and Antigone, was left in charge of his father’s kingdom at the age of fifteen, when Pyrrhus set out for Italy
in 280 B.C.
Ptolemy (5), 263, son of Antony and Cleopatra, surnamed Philadel-hus. After the death of Antony life was spared by Octavius Caesar, and he was brought up by Octavia with her own children.
Nothing more is heard of him.
Publicola, 285 f., Lucius Gellius P., deserted to the side of Octavius and Antony from that of Brutus and Cassius, and was made consul in 36 B.o. He probably perished at the battle of Actium.

Pyrrha, 347, mythical wife of the mythical Deucalion (cf. Horace, Carm. i. 2, 8).
Pythodorus, 61, the Torch-bearer, an official in the celebration of the Eleusinian mysteries. See the Alcibiades, xxii. 3.
Q

Quinda, 77, a city of Cilicia, later called Anazarbus.
R

Rhosus, 77, probably a place on the N.W. coast of Syria, below the gulf of Issus.
Rutilius, 541, Publius Rutilius Rufus, statesman and orator, consul in 105 B.c. He was convicted of peculation in his proconsulship of Asia (99 B.c.), and retired to Smyrna for the rest of ° his days. He wrote a History of Rome in Greek.

8
Sabaco, 473, Cassius S., not otherwise known.
Sadalas, 277, king of Thrace, not otherwise known.
617

DICTIONARY OF

Salamis, 37 f., 87, a city on the eastern coast of Cyprus.
Samnium (Samnites), 385, 401, 407f. 407 f., 413, 423, 427, a mountainous district in central Italy, east of Latium and Campania. The Samnites did not make final submission to Rome until 272 B.c.

Samosata, 2138, the royal residence of the district of Commagené, situated on the upper Euphrates.
Saturn, 411, Italian god of agriculture. For the festival of the Saturnalia, see the note on the Sulla, xviii. 6.
Saturninus, 499 f., 541-549, 559, Lucius Appuleius Saturninus, a Roman noble who allied himeelf with Marius and the popular party, tribune of the people in 102 and 100 B.O., in which last year he perished at the hands of a& mob.

Scipio (1), 465, Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus the Elder, 234-183 B.O.
Scipio (2), 469, 493 f., Publius Cornelius Scipio Aemilianus Africanus the Younger, son of Aemilius Paulus, adopted by Publius Scipio the son of the COR ADSEDE of Hannibal, 185-129
Seisugua (1), 17-183 passim, Seleucus 1., surnamed Nicator, founder of the Syrian dynasty, king of Syria 306-280 B.c.
Seleucus (2), 307, apparently an officer serving under Antony and Cleopatra.
Sextilius, 575 f., not otherwise known. Cf. Appian, B.C. i. 62.
Sicyon, 205, a city of Achaia in Northern Peloponnesus, near the Corinthian Gulf
Sidon, 255, a Phoenician city on the coast of ’Palestine, north of Tyre.
Silanus, 273, Marcus S., not otherwise kno wn.

Siris, 395, a river of Lucania flowing east into the gulf of Tarentum.

Sosigenes, 125, not otherwise definitely known.
Sossius (or Sosius), 215, Cornelius 8 , consul in 66 B.c., followed the 618 fortunes of Antony, who made him governor of Syria and Cilicia in place of Ventidius. He commanded the left wing of Antony's fleet at Actium, escaped from the battle, and was pardoned by Octavius.

Statianus, 223, Oppius §&., otherwise known Stilpo, 23 f., foundar of a Megarian school of hilosophy. Little is known of life.
Stratocles, 27-33, 57-63, an Athenian orator and demago ogue of disreputable character, but persuasive speec Stratonicé, tL. f., 93-97, 129 f., 135, daughter of Demetrius and Phila.
Sulla, 465, see the Coriolanus, xi. 2-4, with the note.
Sulpicius, 555, 559, Publius S8. Rufus, one of the most famous orators of his time. He was at first an aristocrat in politics, and as such was made tribune of the people in 88 B.c. But he became the creature of Marius, and was put to death by Sulla (cf. the Sulla, x. 1).
not

T

Taenarum, 291, the southern promontory of Laconia, in Peloponnesus.
Taphosiris, 339, a town in Libya about twenty-five miles west of Alexandria. It contained a * Tomb of Osiris."

Tarentum, 215 f., 279, 383 f., 389 f., 318, 401 f., 407, 413, 419, 423, 427, a wealthy and powerful Greek city in S E. Italy, at the head of the gulf named from it. It was a Spartan colony, founded about 708 B.c.

Taurus, 119, an extensive mountain range of southern Asia Minor.

Taurus, 285, Statilius T., a distinguished general under Octavius, consul in 26 B.c., and prefect of Rome during the absence of Augustus in 16.

DICTIONARY OF

Telamon, 579, a city on the coast of Etruria (Tyrrhenia).

Terracina (Tarracina), 563, 569, a maritime city of Latium, about ten miles from Circeii.

Thessalonicé, 87, wife of Cassander, and sister of Alexander the Great.

Timagenes, 303, of Alexandria, carried prisoner to Rome in 55 B.c., where he regained his freedom and taught rhetoric successfully, enjoying the favour of Augustus for a while.

Timon the Misanthrope, 297 ff., is said to have died in consequence of refusing to have a surgeon set a broken limb.

Titius, 235, 269, Marcus T., owed his life to Sextus Pompeius, but when Sextus was captured in Asia, Titius put him to death. He deserted Antony for Octavius Caesar, by whom he was made consul in 31 B.o.

Torquatus, 465, a cognomen formed from ‘‘ torques,’’’’ a chain stripped from a fallen foe.

Trebellius, 157, Lucius T., tribune of the people in 47 B.C., and a colleague of Dolabella. He afterwards, to pee Antony, tried to carry the very measures in which he had opposed Dolabella.
Trebonius, 167, Caius T., tribune of the people in 55 B.c., and an instrument of the first triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul, and was loaded with favours by him, but still joined his murderers. He was sent out as pro-consul to Asia in 43, where he was slain by Dolabella, who was acting for Antony against Brutus and Cassius.

U

Utica, 481, a Phoenician colony from Tyre, older than Carthage, on the N.W. coast of Africa, about twenty-seven miles from Carthage.
Vv

Varius, 179, Lucius Varius, surnamed Cotylon (or Cotyla), had been aedile in 44 B.c., and had served Antony during the siege of Mutina in 43.
Ventidius, 209-215, Publius V. Bassus, a native of Picenum, and brought to Rome as prisoner of war in 89 B.c., where he was manumitted. He served with distinction under Julius Caesar in the civil war, and after the death of Caesar joinied Antony. arent his triumph nothing is heard of him.

Xenocrates the Philosopher, 467, a native of Chalcedon in Bithynia, and a disciple at Athens of Aeschines the Socratic. He lived 396-314 B.C.
619

PLUTARCH’S LIVES.

VoLumE I.
THESEUS AND ROMULUS.
LYCURGUS AND NUMA.
SOLON AND PUBLICOLA.
Vouume II.
THEMISTOCLES AND CAMILLUS.
ARISTIDES AND CATO MAJOR.
CIMON AND LUCULLUS.
VotumE ITI.

PERICLES AND FABIUS MAXIMUS.
NICIAS AND CRASSUS.
VouumE IV.

ALCIBIADES AND CORIOLANUS.
LYSANDER AND SULLA.
Vouume V.

AGESILAUS AND POMPEY.
PELOPIDAS AND MARCELLUS.
VoLumeE VI.
DION AND BRUTUS.
TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS PAULUS.
VoLumeE VII.

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO.
ALEXANDER AND CAESAR.
VoLuME VIII.

SERTORIUS AND EUMENES.
PHOCION AND CATO THE YOUNGER.
VoLUME IX.

DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY.

PYRRHUS AND CAIUS MARIUS.
~PLUTARCH'S
" LIVES
WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
X
AGIS AND CLEOMENES, AND TIBERIUS
AND CAIUS GRACCHUS
PHILOPOEMEN AND FLAMININUS

LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN

NEW YORK : G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
MCMXXI
283262

Vd

PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agree- ment between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as a basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any im- portant deviation from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the manuscripts of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. No attempt has been made to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader must be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846) or to the new text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler (Teubner). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless stated in the note, that of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

In May, 1920, Professor Perrin put the finishing touches upon the eleventh and last volume of this series of the Lives of Plutarch for the " Loeb Clas- sical Library," a task which he had undertaken nine years before. On August 31, 1920, he died after a brief illness, having nearly completed his seventy- third year. During the nine years, of which he devoted the leisure hours to the translation of his favourite author, the very magnitude of the task, and the inspiration of the hope that he might leave behind him a version of the Lives that would make the famous men of ancient Greece and Rome, so wonderfully depicted by the great biographer, as familiar to the next generation as they were to the youth in his own boyhood, seemed to sustain and strengthen his powers. The wide and discriminating experience with modern men of action which the ' translator possessed, combined with the classical historian’s special knowledge of the times which he was called upon to interpret after Plutarch, an author whom he had studied with sympathetic interest for many years, gave Professor Perrin peculiar qualifications for the task ; and the English-speaking world already knows with what eminent success he achieved it.

Vv

PREFATORY NOTE

The American Editor, who had been called in constant consultation by Professor Perrin during the progress of the work, has by the wish of his family undertaken to see the present and final volume through the press. Volume XJ, which will contain an extensive General Index, will, it is hoped, be published in 1922.

THE EDITORS.

CONTENTS

PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE .....--+4e8e0-8. v
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION ... Vill
TRADITIONAL ORDER or THE PARALLEL LIVES ix
AGIS AND CLEOMENES. . .....0e-s+++eee.-s l
TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS ..... «143
COMPARISON OF AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI: ¢.-0 Ss 2.6 aoe eee eR we ee y 24
PHILOPOEMEN .....-.- 6. « «eee 238
TITUS FLANININGS « be See aie a Yale ey NS a Te See pt (EMG. oe
COMPARISON OF PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS 387
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES ..... -.. . 3895
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.
VouuME I,

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VowuumeE II.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus. ©
Comparison.
VouvuMmeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-
imus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
VotumeE IV.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriola- |

nus.
Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLUME V.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
vili

VotumeE VI.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.
VotumE VII.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
(17) Alexander and Julius

Caesar.
VOLUME VII.
(15) Sertorius and Kumenes.
Comparison.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

VoLuME IX.

.(21) Demetrius and Antony.

Comparison.
(11) Eyrhus and Caius Marius. veLtiuk X.

(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.

(10) Philopoemen and Flam-

ininus.
Comparison.
VoLumeE XI.
(24) Aratus.

(23) Artaxerxes.

(25) Galba.

(26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius (+racchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Artaxerxes.
(24) Aratus.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.

ix

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

VOL. X. |

ATIZ KAI-KAEOMENH®

i. ATIS -

~- 7

I. Ovw-ateras tives ov8é pavrws ouyxeio Gat weet 1 pos TOYS dirodd£ous é UTovoovaL Toy él TH "[Evove a. 16% pibor, ‘as 8% NaBovte TP vedéednv avti THs "Hpas 79% _ Seal TOV Kevravpov olTws yevouévwv. Kal yap te “t.6b700 THs apeTis domep cidoro ivi TH Son Ju 3" cuportes, ovdev ethexpuves ovd’ wpoNoynpévor, as ara voba Kal piKTa ToAXNA TPaTTOVaLY, GAXOTE Gras hopas hepopevot, Cjrows Kai waGeow érraxorovbodvtes, Strep of Yopoxréovs Borijpes emi TOV Totmvimv Aéyovetv:

4 \ v U 4
Toutos yap ovtes Sertrotar SovrAEvopuer, Kal TOVd avayKn Kal cLwTreVvTwY KAVELD.
fi b a e \ > 4 ~ \ ¢ \
2 Gmrep adNOas ot Tpos EmLOumIas 6yYXwWY Kal Oppas
TOALTEVOMEVOL TaayYovat, SovAEvoyTEes Kal dKo-Aovbodrres iva Snparywyol cal adpyovtes dvoud-Cwvtat. Kxaddrep yap ot mpwpeis Ta EuTrpoabev Mpoopwuevor THY KUBEepynTtay apopwat Tpos éxeiyous Kal TO TpocTacaomeEvoy UT ExeivwY TOLOvGLY, e fa!
odTWS Ol TodLTEVvopEvot Kat mpos Sofay opartes
e / \ A A > 4 > ,
UTNpPETAL MEV TOV TOAD Eiowy, dvowa Oé apxov-Tw &yovoly.)
2 |

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

AGIS

I. Nor without rhyme or reason is the supposition of some writers that the tale about Ixion—how it was the cloud that he embraced instead of Hera and begat from thence the Centaurs—has an application to lovers of glory. For such men, consorting with glory, which we may call an image of virtue, produce nothing that is genuine and of true lineage, but much that is bastard and monstrous, being swept now along one course and now along another in their attempts to satisfy desire and passion. The herdsmen of Sophocles say,} in speaking of their flocks :— “ Of these, indeed, though masters, we are yet the slaves, |

And to them we must listen even though they’re dumb.”
And this, in truth, is the experience of public men who act in conformity with the desires and impulses of multitudes, making themselves attendants and slaves in order that they may be called popular leaders and rulers. For just as a ship’s lookout, who sees what lies ahead before the ship’s captain does, nevertheless turns to him for orders and does what he ordains, so the public man whose eyes are fixed on glory is a servant of the multitude, although he has the name of ruler.

1 Probably in the lost ‘‘Poimenes,” or Shepherds (Nauck, Trag. Graec. Frag.”, p. 249).
3 fo

f

n 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Il, ‘O pév yap airnepsBopévos Kal rereiws dyabos ovd dv Grws Sokns Séorto, ANY Gon mapoooy éml tas moadteas Sia tod morevecOar!
Sidmaur véw Se ere Gyre Kal dirotiu@ Sotéov amo Tav Kadov epywv nat S0&n Te KaddwtricacBat kal KopTrdcat. guopevas yap év Trois THALKOUTOLS ai apetal Kal Bractdvovaa To Te KaTOpOoUpevor, as dnot Beodpactos, éxBeSasodvrat rots érraivots, Kal TO NotTroyv abfovrat peta hpovnpatos émaipopevas, to d€ dyay mavytaxov wey émicpanées, év 6€ rais trodutixais dirotepiars GAEOpLov: éxpé-per yap eis paviay xal trapadpocvvny UracOpov éEoucias peyddns éminaBopévous, dtray pn TO xanov évdoFov elvat OéXwaty, GAN aryabov nyavrat 70 &vookor elvar. Strep? otv Pwxiwy pods ’Avti-matpov afiovyvta Tt Tap avTov TOY pn KaAwY “Ov divaca,” elev, “dua nai dito Poxiorv xphaIac Kal KONAKL,” Tobro NexTéov y) 6 motov Tt TOUT@ TMpos Tovs ToANovs' “Ov Sivacbe Tov
avroy éyev Kal apyovta Kal axorovOor.” érret Fuiealee ye kal odTws TO Tod SpdKovtos, ov dnaow o pi0os THhv ovpay TH KEhary cTacidcacay aktoby iyeicOar Tapa pépos Kal pur da TavTos axonrovleiv éxeivn, AaBodcav Sé thy Hyepoviay
QUTHY TE KAKMS ATAaAAAaTTEWW avoia TropevomevnY

Kal Thy Keparny catakaivey, tuprois Kal Kwgpois pépeciy avayxalopévnvy rapa dvow érecOa.
TOUTO TONAOUS THY TOS KapLy ATavTA TeTONLTEV-pévov opapyev tretovOoras: éEaptncavtes yap 2 3:4 rod w., Coraés, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Bryan: xa) dia Tov mw.

? 8rep Blass and Ziegler (with S& p.m.) : Samep, 4

II, The man, indeed, whose goodness is complete and perfect will have no need at all of glory, except so far as glory gives him access to achievenient by reason of the confidence men have in him; but a man who is still young and is fond of honours may be allowed to plume and exalt himself somewhat even upon glory, provided that glory is the outcome of noble deeds. For the virtues, which are incipient and budding in the young, are confirmed in their proper development, as Theophrastus says, by the praises ot men, and complete their growth under the incentive of pride. But excess is everywhere harmful, and in the case of men who cherish political ambitions, it is deadly ; for it sweeps them away into manifest folly and madness as they grasp after great power, when they refuse to regard what is honourable as glorious, but consider that what is glorious is good. There- fore, what Phocion said to Antipater, who demanded from him some dishonourable service, “ Thou canst not have Phocion as thy friend and at the same time thy flatterer,” this, or something akin to this, must be said to the multitude: “Ye cannot have the same man as your ruler and your slave.”” Since in this case also one certainly can apply the fable of the serpent whose tail rebelled against its head and demanded the right to lead in turn instead of always following ; so it took the lead, and by the folly of its progress got itself into mischief and lacerated the head, which was compelled, contrary to nature, to follow a part that had neither eyes nor ears. This, as we see, has been the experience of many of the men whose whole political activity is directed towards the winning of popular favour; they made themselves dependent on the multitude, which is borne avtovs SyAwy eixn depopévmv ot avaraBelv datepov ovT émioticat thy atakiay éduvyOncav.

Tatra Sé jpiv eis thy Tapa TOV TroAdN@Y Sokav 9 A 9 a 9 , ey / ¥ , érnrOev eizreiy evvonjoacw Hrixny exer Svvayuy 9 A / eh a ,
éx tav TiBepio cai Taip rois Tpdyxous cuptrecovtay, obs KaAMoTAa pev huvtas, KdANOTA be , , \ A ld e (

tTpadpevras, KadAloTnv O€ THS TrodTElas UTOOEC LY AaBovras, am@drecev OVX ovTas emiOupia SoEns detpos, ws po8os abokias éx mpodacews ovK ayevvous TebuKas. peyadny yap evvolay TpoeEtdypoTes Tapa Tav ToMTaY noxyUVOnoaDY éyKaTaXL-TEly MOTE Kpeos' auLAAGpevor O' del TOALTEVPAGL Xpnatois Tas Tias UIrepBarXco Oat, Kal TLMLwpEVoL
a DJ A 9 4 . , \
HaNdov €€ wy ETrOALTEVOYTO KEXapPLopMEeVvWsS, Kat
TovTov Tov TpoTroy ion iroTimia TWpos TE TOV Sipov éEavtovs xal tov Sipov mpos éavtovs exxav-
e 4 4 > > 4 9
caves, EXabov arypapevor tTpayudtov év ols ovKéT
® \ 9 a , ' \ >» \ ,
Rv TO émipetvat Kadov, aioxpov & dn TO Tavcacbau.
Taira pév ovv émixpivets avtos éx THs Sinyn-4 \ 9 cad \ A cews' trapaBarwpev b€é avtois Aaxwyixov Sedyos Snpayoyav, Ayiv Kal Kreouevnv tovs Bacireis.
Kal yap ovto. tov Sipov avkovtes, MaTrep éxeivot,
\ a4 \ \ 4 b a
Kal mrodtTélay Kadnv Kai dtxaiav éxdeNOuTTVIaY
mov Ypovoy dvarayBadvortes, opoiws amnyOdvovto tots Suvatots ur Bovropévors adetvar tHv auv7i0n mreoveEiay. adedhoi péev ody ovK Foav 6
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

about at random, and then could neither recover themselves nor put a stop to the progress of disorder.
These remarks upon the glory which comes from the favour of the multitude I have been led to make because I was reminded of its great influence by the fortunes of Tiberius and Caius Gracchus. They were men of most generous natures, and had a most generous rearing, and adopted most generous political principles ; and yet they were ruined, I will not say by an immoderate desire for glory, but rather by a fear of losing it. And this fear had no unworthy origin. For after they had enjoyed great kindness from their fellow citizens, they were ashamed to leave it unpaid, like a debt of money ; and so they were forever striving by the excellence of their political services to surpass the honours conferred upon them, and were honoured all the more in consequence of their grateful political services. In this way, after kindling an equal ardour in themselves towards the people and in the people towards themselves, they engaged in enterprises wherein, though they knew it not, it was no longer honourable for them to persist, and already disgraceful for them to stop.

As to this matter, however, my reader will judge for himself from my narrative ; and I shall compare with the Gracchi a pair of popular leaders in Sparta, Agis and Cleomenes the kings. For these also tried to exalt the people, just as the Gracchi did, and tried to restore an honourable and just civil polity which had lapsed for a long time ; and like the Gracchi they incurred the hatred of the nobles, who were unwilling to relax their wonted greed. It is true that the

7

-

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

GAnAoV of Aaxawves, cuyyevods 5é xal aderdijs irbavto TroMTelas, 4pynv TocavTny AaBorTes.
III. *Evred ssaanes TP@TOv els THY TOAD
apyupou Kal Xpuaod Cros, Kal cvvynxorovOnoe Tov
wAoUTOU TH Mev KTNTEL TAEOVEELA Kal pLxporoyia 7H S€ xpnoe Kal dtroAavoe tpydy Kal paraxia
Kal TroduTéAELa, THY TAELoTwY éFerEecEY 1) UTAPTN KaX@v, Kal TaTrewa Tpattovaa Tap aktay duetérer méexXpt TOY ypovwy éxeivwy év ols "Ayis Kat hesvlbas éBacinrevov, "Ayis pev Evpuravtiéns kat Evdapisa mais, Extos amo 'Aynotddaov tov SiaBavros eis tHv 'Aciay Kal péytotov "EXAnvev Suvnbévros: hv yap "Aynoidtdov pev "Apyidapos
o mept Mavdupioyv tis Itadias bro Meooatiwy arofavev, Apyidauou Sé mpecBitepos pév vids
"Ayes, Eddapibas dé vewrtepos, 6s, "Aytdes taro
"Avrimatpouv tept MeydAny odkw avatpeDévtos atéxvou, thv Bacireiay Exxe, TovTou bé 'ApyiSamos, Apxtddpou Sé Erepos Evdapidas, Evdautba
dé *"Ayis, mepl ov rdde yéypamrary Aewvidas Sé 6 Krewrdpou tis pev érépas oixias jv "Ayiddns, dySo0s Sé amo Ilavaaviov Tov wxnoavtTos év

IIkatatais paxyn Mapdonov. Taveavias yap viov éoxe TIkecotwvaxta, Wreotavak dé Iav-caviav, ov duyovtos eis Teyéav éx Aaxedaipovos
6 te mpecButepos vios ‘Aynoitrons éBactirevoe
Kal TovTou TeXeuTHoavTos atéxvou KreduSporos
6 vewtepos. éx b&€ KreouSpotov mad addos
"Aynotrous Hv Kal Kreopévns, ov *Aynotronris
pev ovte Hoke tmroAvy ypovoy ote Traldas Eoxe, KnXeouevns 5¢ Bacthevoas peta Aynoitody tov
AGIS AND CLEOMENES -°

Spartans were not brothers; still, they adopted political courses which were kindred and brother to one another. The occasion was as follows.

WI. When once the love of silver and gold had crept into the city, closely followed by greed and parsimony in the acquisition of wealth and by luxury, effeminacy, and extravagance in the use and enjoyment of it, Sparta fell away from most of her noble traits, and continued in a low estate that was unworthy of her down to the times when Agis and Leonidas were kings. Agis was of the Eurypontid royal house, a son of Eudamidas, and the sixth in descent from the Agesilaiis who crossed into Asia and became the most powerful Greek of his time. For Agesilaiis had a son Archidamus, who was slain by the Messapians at Mandurium in Italy1; Archidamus had an elder son Agis, and a younger son Eudamidas, who, after Agis was slain by Antipater at Megalopolis? leaving no issue, became king; Eudamidas was succeeded by Archidamus, Archidamus by another Eudamidas, and Eudamidas by Agis,® the subject of this Lefe. Leonidas, on the other hand, the son of Cleonymus, was of the other royal house, the Agiad, and was eighth in descent from the Pausanias who defeated Mardonius at Plataea. For Pausanias had a son Pleistoanax, and Pleistoanax a son Pausanias, upon whose exile and flight from Sparta to Tegea‘ his elder son Agesipolis became king; Agesipolis, dying without issue, was succeeded by a younger brother Cleombrotus, and Cleombrotus, in turn, had two sons, Agesipolis and Cleomenes, of whom Agesipolis reigned only a short time and left no sons, while Cleomenes, who became king after him, lived to

1 In 338 B.c. 2 In 330 B.c. 3 In 244 B.c.
4 In 305 8.c. See the Lysander, xxx. 1.
9
r

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

a Aa Ca 9 i _M “ pev mpecRurepov Tav viav 'Axpotaroy éte Cav améBane, vewrepov Sé Kreovupov xaténrstrev, 5s oux éBacirevoev, adr’ “Apeus viwvos dv Kreo-
, 9 ¢ >] a4 wv t
pevous, Axpotatov 8 vies: “Apews S€ trecovtos
mept KopivOov vids wv Axpotatos tHv Bactrciav Kkatéoyev. atréBave 6 Kat obtos nrtnOels paxn

\ , U e \ 3 , a f
mwept Meyadnpy trodu Ure Aptotoonpou Tov TUpay-VOU, KATANLT@Y eyKULOVA THY yuvaiKa. ‘Tratdiou
5 dppevos yevouévou Aewvidas o KXewvipou tHv émiTpomny éaxev, elta mplv év nrxia yevéo Oar TENEUTHTAVTOS, OUTWS Els aUTOY BactrEia TrEptnrAOev ov wavu Tois ToAiTals evappooTtoy dvTa.
/ \ > , ww A A le)
Kaimep yap éyxexdxoTwoy nbn tH StapOopa rod TOALTEULATOS OMANOS ATravTwOV, HY Tis ev TO Acovida tav Tatp@av éemipavns éxdiaitnots, are 57 xpovoy nrLvdnpéev@ TroAvy ev avrAais caTpamtt-Kats Kat teOepatrevxote LédevKor, elta Tov éxeiOev Ww ’ € i“ 4 ? \
dyKov ets EAAnUUKA Tpaypata Kal voptmov apynv OUK EUpENOS peTadéporTt.
IV. ‘08 "Ayis od tw trodv rapyndAXNaTTeEv evpvia

\ f A ? , “ b \
Kal dpovnuate yuy7ns ov povoy TovTov, addr\ja aoyedoyv Gravtas Gao pet ’Aynoidaoy Tov péyay éPacirevaar, date unde yeyovas eixoaTov éTos, évteO pappévos 5€ mAovVTOLUS Kal TpUpais yuvarKav, THS Te eNnTpos "Aynototpatas Kal THs pappns
"Apxbapias, al treiota ypnpata Aaxedatpovior
> , € 92. 9 /
éxéxtnvro, mpos te Tas NOovas evOus amicyxupicacbat, Kal roy émimpéar padiota TH XapiTe 10
797

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

lose his elder son Acrotatus, but left behind him a younger son Cleonymus; Cleonymus, however, did not come to the throne, but Areus,! who was a nephew of Cleomenes and son of Acrotatus; Areus fell in battle at Corinth,” and his son Acrotatus came to the throne; Acrotatus also was defeated and slain at Megalopolis, by the tyrant Aristodemus, leaving his wife with child; and after she had given birth to a son, Leonidas the son of Cleonymus was made the child’s guardian. But the young king died before reaching manhood, and the kingship therefore devolved upon Leonidas,’ who was altogether unacceptable to the people. For although the destruction of the constitution had already led toa general decline in manners, there was in Leonidas a very marked departure from the traditions of his country, since for a long time he had frequented oriental courts and had been a servile follower of Seleucus, and now sought to transfer the pride and pomp which prevailed abroad into Hellenic relations and a constitutional government, where they were out of place.

IV. Agis, on the contrary, far surpassed in native excellence and in loftiness of spirit not only Leonidas, but almost all the kings who had followed the great Agesilaiis. Therefore, even before he had reached his twentieth year, and although he had been reared amid the wealth and luxury of women, namely, his mother Agesistrata and his grandmother Archidamia (who were the richest people in Sparta), he at once set his face against pleasures. He put away from his person the adornments which were thought to 1 See the Pyrrhus, xxvi. 8 ff.

2 In 265 B.c., in battle with Antigonus Gonatas, 3 About 256 B.c.
UI

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

THS mopoyns wpaicpov SoxovyTa tweptomacas Tov TWUATOS, Kal Tacay exdvs Kal Ssahvywv modvTeENecay, éyxadrAwTrilerOar THO tTpLBwvi¢, Kad Seirva Kal Nouvtpa Kal dvaitas Aaxwuixds bnretv, Kat Aéyew ws ovdev SéorTto THs Bactrelas, ef py Sv auTny avaryyorto TOUS vomous Kal THY TaTpLoY aryuryny. |

V. "Apxnv pev ody dSiapOopads nai tod voceiv gaye Ta Tpdypata Tov Aaxedatpovioy oyedov ad' ob thy 'AOnvaiwy Kxatadvoavtes Hyepoviav xpuciov te Kal apyupiov KarémAnoay éavTots. ov nv adda Kal TOV oixwv dy o AuKotpyos wpice guAratrovrwy apiOuov év tais Stadoyais, xai Tatpos mavdt TOY KANpoY atroNelTOVTOS, GLAS Yyé Twos h Takis atrn Kal icdtns Stapevovea tH Tow é€x Tov GAXNwY avédhepey apapTnpaTov. épopevoas 5é tis avnp Suvatos, avOadns dé cat xadetros Tov TpoTrov, Ezutrddevs Svopya, pds Tov vioy avT@ yevouevns Siadopas pytpay éyparrev é£eivar Tov olxov avtTov Kal TOV KAHpoy @ TIS eOéror xal Covta dSodvat nai nataditreiy dtatide-

pevoy. ovTOS pev ody avTov Ttiva Bupov arro-TipTAAS LOtov ELanveyKe TOV Vomov: of 5é GAXot mreoveEias Evexa SeEduevor Kal kupdcayTes aTo-Necav THY apiotny KaTdotacWw. éxTa@VTO Yap apedas 76n tapwhodbvres ot Suvatol Tovs mpoo7-Kovtas ex Tay dtadoyov' Kai tTayd Tis EvTrOpias eis ONLyous cuppuEtians Tevia THY TOMY KaTéoxXED, doYyodav TOY KaNOV Kal dvenevOepiay éripépovca 12

- befit the grace of his figure, laid aside and avoided every extravagance, prided himself on his short Spartan cloak, observed sedulously the Spartan customs in his meals and baths and general ways of living, and declared that he did not want the royal power at all unless by means of it he could restore the ancient laws and discipline.

V. And here I may say that the Lacedaemonian state began to suffer distemper and corruption soon after its subversion of the Athenian supremacy filled it with gold and silver. However, since the number of families instituted by Lycurgus! was still pre- served in the transmission of estates, and father left to son his inheritance, to some extent the con- tinuance of this order and equality sustained the state in spite of its errors in other respects. But when a certain powerful man came to be ephor who was headstrong and of a violent temper, Epitadeus by name, he had a quarrel with his son, and in- troduced a law permitting a man during his lifetime to give his estate and allotment to any one he wished, or in his will and testament so to leave it. This man, then, satisfied a private grudge of his own in introducing the law; but his fellow citizens welcomed the law out of greed, made it valid, and so destroyed the most excellent of institutions. For the men of power and influence at once began to acquire estates without scruple, ejecting the rightful heirs from their inheritances; and speedily the wealth of the state streamed into the hands of a few men, and poverty became the general rule, bringing in its train lack of leisure for noble pursuits and occu- pations unworthy of freemen, along with envy and

1 See the Lycurgua, viii. f.

13

peta dO0ovov nai dvapevetas mpos Tous éxovtas.

4 dtredeipOnoay ody értaxogiwy ov mreloves Lrrap-TtaTal, Kal TovTwy lows éExaTov joav ot yHy
Kextnpévor Kal KARpov' 6 8 aAXos GxXoS ATropos
Kal attuos év TH mode mapexadOnto, Tovs pév

&Ewev trodkéuous apyas Kal ampoOvpws apuvo-pevos, del dé Teva Katpov émitnpav petaBorj7s Kal peTacTdcews TOY TAapoVTwY.
VI. Ava raita 6) xarov o *Ayis, OoTep Hp, Tovovpevos ¢Eto@oat Kal avaTrAnpwo as THY TOMY, emepato TaYv avOpwmwv. ol péev ovv véot TayU Kal wap' éArridas virncovaoay avTa, Kal cvvatredv-CAYTO TPOS THY apeTHY, OaTrEp caOHTA THY SiatTay
2 én' édevOepia cuppetaBdddovtes. tTav Sé mpeEaButépwv, ate 6 Twoppw StapOopas yeyovorar, ouvéBatve toils mreiotos woTrep ei Seorotny dryomevous éx Spacpod Sedsévar nal tpémew Tov Avxoipyov, kat KaOirrovto tod "Aydos ddupopévov Ta Tapovta mpdyyuata Kal To Tadatov 798
akiwpa tis Yraptys émimoPovvros. Avoavdpos 5é o AiBvos nal Mavdporrcidas 0 'Exdavovs, étt
5é "Aynotdaos dredéEavto nal cuvprapwpyunoay
3 avtov THv didotimiav. jv 5é Avaavdpos peév ev d0&n pwadtora TOY TrodLTOY, Mavdpordeidas Se Seworatos 'EA jvev Tpayhata cvoKevacacbat Kal TO cuveTov TovTO Kal Sodepov TOALN _Mepeypévoy Exwv: 'Aynathaoy dé Oetov dyra tod Baot-Aéws kal Suvatoy eizeiy, aN Awos be paraxoyv Kat diroypnuatov, éupavas pev 6 vids 'Tamopésav 14

Bm A

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

hatred towards the men of property. Thus there were left of the old Spartan families not more than seven hundred, and of these there were perhaps a hundred who possessed land and allotment; while the ordinary throng, without resources and without civic rights, lived in enforced idleness, showing no zeal or energy in warding off foreign wars, but ever watching for some opportunity to subvert and change affairs at home.
VI. Agis, therefore, thinking it a noble achieve- ment, as it was, to equalize and restore to full numbers the body of citizens, began to sound the inclinations of people. The young men, as he found, quickly and beyond his expectations gave ear to him, and stripped themselves for the contest in behalf of virtue, like him casting aside their old ways of living as worn-out garments in order to attain liberty. But most of the older men, since they were now far gone in corruption, feared and shuddered at the name of Lycurgus as if they had run away from their master and were being led back to him, and they upbraided Agis for bewail- ing the present state of affairs and yearning after the ancient dignity of Sparta. Lysander, however, the son of Libys, Mandrocleidas the son of Ecphanes, as well as Agesilaiis, approved of the king's aspirations and supported him in them. Lysander was in the highest repute among the citizens, and Mandrocleidas was the ablest Greek of his time in setting schemes on foot, and his sagacity and craft were mingled with daring; Agesilaiis, who was the king's uncle on his mother's side, and a powerful orator, though otherwise effeminate and avaricious, was openly urged on and encouraged by his son

T5

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

exives kat TrapeOappuver, evdoximos év TodXots ToNEuots avinp Kai péya ds evvotay TaY vévwv
, e \ 39 a ? "s \ 9 ,
4 Suvdapevos: 7 5¢ adnOas avatreicaca Tov 'Aynai-Aaov aitia THY TpaTTomévoy peTacyxeiv ohANUA-twv TAOS Hv, ov Amey atradrA\aynoecOas petaBadrAwv THY TodTElay. wS odY TaXLOTA mpoonydayeto TovTov o Aris, evOvs émeyetpel pet avrov Thy pnrépa TeiMew, adeApnyv ovcav TOD
"Aynotvdov, wANGe Sé TWeAaTa@Y Kali dirwy Kai
"A 4 , > A Ld \ \
Npewotav péya Suvapévny ev TH TONE Kal TOANA
TOY Kowa StaTrTpaTTOMevny.
VII. 'H 6é dxovcaca 76 pév trpatov éFeTTAAdyN
Kal KaTémave TO petpaKiov ws ovTe SuvaTa@v ovTE AvatTeA@y eprévevov' érret S€ Tadta pév o Aynlé 9Q7 e A 4 \ 4
airaos edidacKey ws Karas EFet cal mpaxOnoeras cupdepovtTws, autos 5é o Bacirers edeito Tis ent pos émidodvar pos So€av abe cal prrottpiav
TOV TWAOVTOV, WS ypnuace ev ov Suvdpevos pos
2 tous ddAXous Bacireis éEtowOjvar (catpar ay yap oixétas Kai SovArous émetporewv IroNeuatiou Kai Serevnou KextnacOat mreiova ovupmavtwv opov Tay év Lardptn Bactréwv), cay 5€ cwppocvvy Kai LTO d adowuyla tas éxelvwv drrep-eTOTATL Ka peyarowuxig as ep Banropuevos tpugas icotnta xal Kowwviay Kata-4 A , w \ , e ? a oTHon TOS TOTALS, Ovopa Kal Sofay ws arnOas Baciréws peyddou KTycopevos, oUTW peTéTETOY Tais yvwpats ai yuvaixes bro THS Pidoripmias érapOeicat tod veavioxov, Kal tocavTy KarTe-
3 axyéOnoay olov émumvoia mpos TO KaXdOV, WoTE TOV

Hippomedon, who had won fair fame in many wars, and had great influence because he stvuod in favour with the young men. But what really induced Agesilaiis to take part in the king’s enterprise was the multitude of his debts, of which he hoped to rid himself by changing the constitution. As soon, then, as Agis had won over Agesilaiis, he straightway sought with the aid of his uncle to persuade his mother, who was a sister of Agesilaiis, and owing to the multitude of her retainers, friends, and debtors, had great influence in the state and took a large part in public affairs.

VII. When she heard her son’s plea, she was at first amazed, and tried to stop the young man from attempting what she thought was neither possible nor profitable; but Agesilaiis tried to show her that the king’s project would be feasible and its accom- plishment advantageous, and the king himself besought his mother to contribute her wealth for the advancement of his ambition and glory. For in the matter of property, he said, he could not equal the other kings (since the servants and slaves of the satraps and overseers of Ptolemy and Seleucus had larger possessions than all the kings of Sparta put together); but if in self-restraint, simplicity, and magnanimity he should surpass their luxury, and thereby establish equality and community of posses- sion among his citizens, he would win the name and fame of a really great king. The women, lifted up by the young man’s high ambition, were so changed in their purposes, and possessed, as it were, by so great an inspiration to take the noble course, that they joined in urging and hastening on the projects of pev Ay cuveEopuay nat ovverritaxvvew, peTa- Teptroméevas O€ TOUS dirovs Tapaxaneiy Kal Tais Garrats StaréyecOar yuvarkiv, ate 6 tovs Aaxedat- povious émictapévas KaTnKoous dytas del Trav yuvatxcav, Kal TAéelov éxeivars TaV Snuocioy 7 Ta@Y Ldiwv autos ToAUTTpaypovety SidovTas.

1]

“a

"Hy 6 tote tov Aakwvixay trrovTwY év Tais yuvaél TO mAEioTOY, Kal TovTO THY Tpakw TA
v a \ > / b

Aytd: Svcepyov Kal yarerny érroincev. avteéoTnoay yap ai yuvaixes ov povoy tpudas éxri-mrovoat dt atretpoxanriav evdatpovtomevns, GAA Kal tinny cal Svvapiy, iv ex Tod TrovtEiy éxap-TOUVTO, TEPLKOTTTOMEVNY AUT@V OpMaat. Kal pos tov Acwviday tpatrouevas Tapexddouy byta TpeéaButepov émikapBavecOat tov “Ayidos cal ta mpatropeva StakwArverv. éBovreTo pev ovv oO Aewvidas Trois wrAovctiots Bonbeiv, Sedias dé Tov Sjuov éridupobvta tis petaBorHs ovdev avrémpatte havepas, AdOpa Sé thy mpakw étnre Kaxoupyev Kal diapGeipew évtuyydvwy Trois apxovot Kal dSiaBarAXov tov "Ay ws Ttupavvidos piaOor tots Trévnot TA TOV TWAOVOLwY TrpoTEivoyTa, Kal yhs petaddcect Kal ypeav adécect trodXovs @voupevov éavt@ Sopudopouvs, ov TH Yrdpty ToALTas.
VIII. Od pay adda StampaEdpevos o "Ayis épopov yevéoOas tov Avaavédpor, evOvs eiaépepe bu’ QaUTOD pyTpay eis TOUS yépovTas, hs Hy kepadraia eay péev adeOjvar Tovs opetrovtas, THs Sé yis avabacbeions tTHv pev amo Tod Kata TleAXnvny Yapddpov mpos TO Taiyetov nal Manréav xai 18

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Agis, sent for their friends among the men and invited them to help, and held conference with the women besides, since they were well aware that the men of Sparta were always obedient to their wives, and allowed them to meddle in public affairs more than they themselves were allowed to meddle in domestic concerns.

Now, at this time the greater part of the wealth of Sparta was in the hands of the women, and this made the work of Agis a grievous and difficult one. For the women were opposed to it, not only because they would be stripped of the luxury which, in the general lack of higher culture, made their lives seem happy, but also because they saw that the honour and in- fluence which they enjoyed in consequence of their wealth would be cut off. So they had recourse to Leonidas, and besought him, since he was an older man, to withstand Agis and hinder what he was trying to accomplish. Leonidas, accordingly, was desirous ot aiding the rich, but he feared the people, who were eager for a revolution. He therefore made no open opposition to Agis, but secretly sought to damage his undertaking and bring it to nought by slandering him to the chief magistrates, declaring that he was purchasing a tyranny by offering to the poor the property of the rich, and by distribution of land and remission of debts was buying a large body-guard for himself, not many citizens for Sparta.

VIII. However, Agis procured Lysander’s election as ephor, and at once employed him to introduce a bill into the senate,! the chief provisions of which were that debtors should be relieved of their debts, and that the land should be divided up, that which lay between the water-course at Pellene and Taygetus,

1 About 243 B.c. 19

c 2

PLUTARCH’’S LIVES

Ledaciav ie yevérOar rerpaxiaxidious Tev-TaKkoa tous, thv © eco pupious TEVTAKLTXLALOUS*
Kal TaUTHY pév toils Oda _ pépey Suvapévoes 799

TOY TrEptoikay peptoOjvat, THY dé EevTos avrots LrapTiarats: avaTrrnpwO hvac 5€ TovTous ex TE Teptoikey Kal fever, 6 daa Tpodis HETETXNKOTES
éhevbepiou Kat Xapievres GAdws Tois cHpace Kal Kal? Wp ciay axpavovtes elev: ovvtakiv be TOUT@Y els mevrexaivena yeveaOae pudirea Kata TETPAKOlOUS cat dwaxocious, cal diartav iv elyov ot mpoyovat Startao Oat.
IX. Tpadetons db¢€ TAS. pytpas, Kat TOY yEepov-Twv eis TAaUTO Tails yvapars ov cuppepopeveny, éxxAnotav cuvaryaryov O Avaavopos avros Te dtehex On rois mohirars, Kat Mavépoxheidas ral ‘Aynathaos edéovro ea bu" dAdryous evrpupartas avtois mepuidei € épptypévov To atiopa THS Lwap-TNS, GAAA TaV TE TpoTéepav XPng nay myn povevoal, THY piroxXpnuoovvnY ws dO prov Th Lmdpty purdrrecBac Stakehevopevor, Kal Tov
evaryXos éx Iacipaas KEKOMLT HEVOV | avrols.
‘Tepov bé Tlacipdas Kal pavtetov ay év @ada-Haus TLu@pevor, ip TLvES ev ioropodat Tov "Ar-AavTideoy piav ovoav én Atos Tov "Appova texeiv, tives O€ Kacdvipay THY II pedpou TehevTHTATAV
evtavda Kai bia To maoe paive Ta pavreia Taoupaav TpoaayopevOeicav. o dé PDvrapyxos
"Apukha Ouyarépa, Addynv Tovvoua, ono t w7ropevryouoay "ArroAhova Bovdopevov auTh puyivat, Kal petaBarovoay els TO huToy, év TLun TOD Beod yevéoOat kal pavrixny aBeiv Sivauw. epacar 20

Malea, and Sellasia, into forty-five hundred lots, and that which lay outside this into fifteen thousand ; that this larger land should be apportioned among those of the provincials who were capable of bearing arms, and the smaller among the genuine Spartans; that the number of these Spartans should be fillea up from the provincials and foreigners who had received the rearing of freemen and were, besides, of vigorous bodies and in the prime of life; and that these should be formed into fifteen public messes by four hundreds and two hundreds, and should practise the mode of life which the ancient Spartans had followed.

IX. The “rhetra’’ was introduced in the senate, and the senators were divided in opinion. Lysander therefore called together a general assembly and discussed the matter himself with the citizens, and Mandrocleidas and Agesilaiis begged them not, to suffer the insolent opposition of a few to blind them to the prostration of Sparta’s dignity, but to call to mind the earlier oracles which bade them beware of the love of riches as a fatal thing for Sparta, as well as the oracles which had lately been brought to them from Pasiphaé.

Now there was a temple of Pasiphaé at Thalamae, and her oracle there was held in honour. Some say that Pasiphaé was one of the daughters of Atlas, and the mother of Ammon by Zeus, and some that Cassandra the daughter of Priam died at Thalamae, and was called Pasiphaé because she declared her oracles to all, Phylarchus, however, says that she was a daughter of Amyclas, Daphne by name, and that, fleeing the embraces of Apollo, she was changed into the tree of like name, after which she was honoured by the god with the gift of prophetic power. Be

\ aA ’
ov Kai Ta Tapa tav’Tns pavTela TpocTaTTELW Tois Lmrapttatats toovs yevéoOar mavtas Kal” bv e a 9 b) a a A “~ x, ©
o Avxodpyos €& apyis érake vopov. él maa 5é o Bacireds *Ayis eis pécov mrapedOwy cai Bpayéa StarexOcis Epn cupBorads Sidovar tH TortTeLa peyiotas iy xadiotnot THY yap avTod mpaTtov ovciav eis pécoy TiWévat, TOAAHY pev OvcaV eV Tois yewpyoupévors Kal vepopévots, dvev b Tov-tov é€axoola TdAavTa vopmiopatos ~xovcav: TO 5é avTd Kai Tas pntTépas Troleiv Kab Tovs diraus
Kal oiketous, WAOVoLwTAaTOUS OyTas YTapTLaTav.

X. ‘O pév odv Siyos eEerrayn Thy peya-AoWuyiay Tov veavioxov, Kal Treptyap?s hv ws
d2° érav ood te d:axoclwy'! rednvoros akiouv Tis Sadptns Bacthéws: o S5€ Aewvidas tote 69 pa-ALoTA TpOS ToOvvavTiovy édiroveinnoe. Roybo-Mevos yap OTL TavTAa pev dvayxacOnoeTas TroLeiD, ov thy auTny b€ yapw é€er mapa Trois woXitass, GANA TavTwV opoiws & KéexTHVYTAL KaTaTOELEVOY hove te apkapévm mpocOncovor THY TLmNy,
? , N 9 ’ , wv A
npwra tov “Ay et dSixatoy avdpa Kal otrovdaiov Hryettas yeyovévas Auxovdpyov. oporoynoavtos o 9 , 66 “A , 3. 6c A A A exeivov, “Ilov towvy, edn, “ Avcovpyos 7 ypewv
A
amoxotras ébwxev Eévous xatérakey eis tH
, aA 2Q\ oo > ? e 4 \
TodTeiayv, Os ovdé SAWS évomstley HKytaivery THY
A
oA un Kpwopéevny Eevnraciats; ” ‘O &@ *Ayis daexpivato pn Oavpatew Tov
,
Aewviday, ef teOpappévos év Eévn xal tretratdo-
2) bu08 rt Staxoclwy Blass (Fuhr); 540d rptaxoolwy, 22
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

this as it may, it was now said that the oracles brought from this goddess ordained that all Spartans should be on an equality according to the original law made by Lycurgus. , And finally, King Agis came forward and after a brief discourse said that he offered very large contributions to the constitutions which he was trying to establish; for in the first place he put into the common stock his own estate, which included extensive tillage and pasture, and apart from this six hundred talents in money ; and, besides, his mother and his grandmother did likewise, together with their relatives and friends, and they were the wealthiest among the Spartans.

X. The people, accordingly, were filled with amazement at the magnanimity of the young man, and were delighted, feeling that after a lapse of nearly two hundred years a king had appeared who was worthy of Sparta; but Leonidas, now more than ever, strove in opposition. For he reasoned that he would be compelled to do as Agis had done, and that he would not get the same gratitude for it among the citizens, but. that if all the rich alike made their property a part of the common fund, the honour for it would be given to him alone who had led the way. He therefore asked Agis if he thought that Lycurgus had shown himself a just and worthy man, and when Agis said that he did, “ When, then,” said Leonidas, “did Lycurgus either grant abolition of debts or admit foreigners into citizenship—a man who held that the state was in no healthy way at all if it did not practise expulsion of foreigners ?”

But Agis replied that he was not astonished to find Leonidas, who had been reared in foreign lands and

23

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

TOLNMLEVOS éx yapeov TAT PAT LKD ayvoet Tov
AvKovpyoy, StL TO pev Opetrew Kat Saveilew & apa
TS voulo mare ovvebéBarer é éx THS TWONEWS, TOV 6
éy tais modeot E€vwv Tovs Tols émitnSevpact Kat TALS Siairars aouppurous paddov educa y épacve:
Kal yap exelvous HAavvey ov Tots TOpac ToNe-pov, ada tous Bious aut ev Kar TOUS TpoTrous Sedia@s, 41) suvavayYpwrvrupevor Tots Todi ats
Tpupis Kal paraktas Kal Treovefias evTeKa@oe
Snrov: érret Téprravdpov ye Kal Odryra Kal
Depexvdny Eévous dvtas, dre Ta aura t@ Av-Koupy@ SteréXouv Bdovtes Kal dtaoccododrtes, év LXwaptn mop Bia StapepovTas. «So de
'"Exarpérn bev,' " épyaer, ' 'ématveis, bs epopevoor Ppividos Tov movaotKod oKeTapre Tas duo TeV évvéa xopoay eféreue, Kal TOUS ert Tepod ew Tad TO AUTO TOUTO mpafavras, pas dé penn
Tpupay Kar TOAUTENELAY at araloveav &x TAS
Lmraptns avaipobvTas, @omep ovyi kaKelvov
TO ep povorky goBapov Kal TeplT Tov ST ws evraida py Tpoery purarropévor, 6 Orrov yevopéveav Biov Kal TpOT@DV aper pia Kal Tnppereca THY Todt acvpudwvov Kal avdppoatoy éauTH memoinkev.
XI. 'Ex rovtov T@ pév "Aytds 76 A005 érrn-KorovOnoev, of S€ wAovotot tov te Aewviday Tmapexddovy un opas m poe Oat, Kal TOUS yépovTas, ols TO KpaTos Rd éy TO ,TpoRovrevey, Seopevor Kab meiBovres i ioxuvoav, doov evl Telovas yevecOat Tous aroynpicapevous THY pitpav. o 6€ AvcavSpos ete THY apyny Exwv Opunce tov Aew-24

800

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

had children by an oriental marriage, ignorant that Lycurgus had banished from the state debts and loans along with coined money, and that foreigners in the cities were held by him in less displeasure than men to whom the Spartan practices and ways of living were not congenial; these, indeed, he sought to drive away, not because he was hostile to their persons, but because he feared lest their lives and manners should contaminate the citizens, and breed in them a love of luxury, effeminacy, and greed; for certainly Terpander and Thales and Pherecydes were foreigners, and yet, because the teachings of their songs and philosophy always ac- corded with those of Lycurgus, they were held in surpassing honour at Sparta. “Thou praisest Ectrepes,” said Agis, “who, as ephor, cut out with an edze two of the nine lute-strings of Phrynis the musician, and likewise the magistrates in the time of Timotheus, who did the same thing in their turn, but thou blamest me for trying to remove luxury, extra- vagance, and ostentation from Sparta, as if those magistrates also were not on the watch to prevent the pompous and superfluous in music from making such advances here that the consequent excess and discord in lives and manners would render the state dissonant and incongruous.”

XI. After this, the common people took sides with Agis, but the men of wealth entreated Leonidas not to abandon them. And by prayers and arguments with the senators, whose power lay in their privilege of presenting all measures to the people, they so far prevailed that by a single vote the proposed rhetra was rejected. Lysander, however, who was still ephor set on foot an indictment of Leonidas by virtue of viday Stwxew cata 54 tTiva vopovy madatov, ds

ove €& Tov ‘Hpaxrgeidny é« yuvaicos adrodarris texvovoba, Tov S¢ aeNOovta tis Ladpryns émi HeTOLKLOM@ Mpos étépovs atTroOvncKEY KErEVEL.
TavTa Kata Tod Aewvida Neyer Etépovs SeddEas, auTos TapepvAaTTEe peTa THY TUVAapYoYTWY TO on petov.
"Eore 5¢ rotovder 8&0’ érav éevvéa NaBovtes ot
épopot vuxra xabapay Kal acérnvoy, ctoTmn Kalé-Covrat mpos ovpavov amroBAétrovtes. éav ovy
éx pépous tives eis Erepov pépos aotnp didkn, Kpivovot tovs Bacireis ws epi TO Oeiov éeEapaptavovtas, Kal Katatravovet Tis apyis, uéype dv éx Aerdhav h ‘Odvuprrias xpnopmos EXOn Tois nAwkoot TaV Bactrhéwv BonOav.
Todrto 5 To onpetov avT@ yeyovévar AéywV O AvcavSpos xpiow t@ Aewvida mpovOnKe, rat faptupas Trapetyev ws éx yuvatcos ‘Actavys, ny TOV LedevKou TLVOS UTAPKwV avT@ cuvoixicavtos
éxye, Texvwcatto S00 Tratdia, Svoyepatvopevos Sé Kal pLoovpevos UO THS yuvatKos érraverOor Tapa yvounv oixade, kal diadoyns Epnpov avérotto TO | Bacinerov. dpa 5é tH Sinn KreduBporov érreibe
THs Bacttelas avtitroteicOar, yauBpov dvta Tod

Aewvida, yévous 5€ trod Bactixod. doBnbels obv
o Aewvidas ixérns yiverat tis Xad«vwoixov, Kar ouvéreveyv 4 Ovyatnp Te Tatpi, Tov Kredp-Bporov amodmotca. Kxaroupévov 5é mpds tiv Sienv, avrod nal pm xataBaivovtos, éxeivov 26

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

an ancient law which forbade any descendant ot Heracles to beget children by a foreign woman, and ordained that anyone who left Sparta to settle among foreigners should be put to death.' After instructing others to spread these charges against Leonidas, he himself, with his colleagues, proceeded to observe the traditional sign from heaven.
This is observed as follows. Every ninth year the ephors select a clear and moonless night, and in silent session watch the face of the heavens. If, then, a star shoots across the sky, they decide that their kings have transgressed in their dealings with the gods, and suspend them from their office, until an oracle from Delphi or Olympia comes to the succour of the kings thus found guilty.

This sign Lysander now declared had been given him, and indicted Leonidas, and produced witnesses showing that he was the father of two children by a woman of Asia who had been given him to wife by one of the lieutenants of Seleucus; and that owing to the woman's dislike and hatred of him he had come back home against his own wishes, where he had assumed the royal dignity, to which there was then no direct successor. Besides bringing this indictment, Lysander tried to persuade Cleombrotus to lay claim to the royal dignity. Cleombrotus was a son-in-law of Leonidas, and one of the royal line. Leonidas, accordingly, took fright, and fled as a sup- pliant to the temple of Athena of the Brazen House. His daughter also forsook Cleombrotus and became a suppliant with her father. When Leonidas was summoned to his trial and did not appear, he was

1 Plutarch here merges two separate laws. Cf. the Lycurgus, xxvii. 3, 27 -

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

= _
aroyndiodpevor tTHv Bactrelav tH KreouSpot@ TapeowKar.
XII. 'Ev rovrm 5€ tis apyijs o Avoavépos dmrndrayn TOV ypovou SteNOovTos. ot 5é xata-
, " \ \ / 7
otabevtes Epopot tov pev Aewviday dvéornoay ixerevovta, T@ S€ Avodvipw xal te Mavdpo-

, , > a e \ \ , mn
Krelda Sixny émiryov ws Tapa Tov vomov Ypewy
> \ A > 4 ,
amroxoTas Kal ynv avaddcacBa Whdicapévors.
KLVOUVEVOVTES OUY éexEtvot Trei{Bovalt TOUS BactXeEts
Opod yevouevous yaipey av Ta TOV efpopwr Bov-
A \ a NevpaTa’ TOUTO yap TO apxeElov ioxyvew ex dia-wn “A tA A gopas tav Bacihéwv, TH TA BerTiova A€yorTL la \ aA Sad @ > 7
mpooriOéuevov THY Whpov, Gtav arepos Epify
mpos TO aupdhépov’ apudoiy dé tavtd Bovdevo-
\
pévov GAvTov elvas Thy éEovaiay, Kal Trapavopws
ra \ \ a
payetofae mpos tovs Bactreis, av payopévwry Siattav xat BpaBevey avtois elvat mpoojxor,
A e ovyl moAuTpaypovely opodpovovytwy. odtw bn mevoOevtes apotepor Kal peta Tov dirov eis ayopav kataBavtes avéotnoay pev éx Tav didpwr Tous épopous, adXous 8 ay’ ab’tav amédeEar, av els Hv "Aynoinaos. omdicavtes 5é TOY véwr
\ N , \ , > /
moNAOUS Kal AVoaVTES TOUS Sedepévous éyévorTo goBepol toils vrevavtiows ws ToAXNOUS aTroKTeEvoovtes. améBave 5é ovdeis Ur avTa@Y, ANNA Kal Aewvidav eis Teyéav vmekcovta BovrAnOévtos SiapOetpar rod ’Aynotdaov, Kal méuavtos én b ee > \ €Qr wv 4 ¢ 9?
aurov eis tHv odov avdpas, tuOopevos o “Ayes 28
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

deposed, and Cleombrotus was made king in his place.!

XII. At this point, Lysander’s term expired and he went out of office. The new board of ephors encouraged Leonidas to leave his suppliant’s asylum, and brought an indictment against Lysander and Mandrocleidas for violating the law in proposing an abolition of debts and a distribution of land. Thus put in legal peril, Lysander and Mandrocleidas persuaded the two kings to act together and disregard the edicts of the ephors; for that board of magistrates, they said, derived its power from dissension between the two kings, by giving their vote to the king who offered the better advice, whenever the other was at variance with the public good ; but when the two kings were in accord, their power was indissoluble, and it would be unlawful for the ephors to contend against them, although when the kings were in contention with one another it was the privilege of the ephors to act as arbiters between them, but not to interfere when they were of one mind. Persuaded by these arguments, both the kings went with their friends into the market place, removed the ephors from their seats, and appointed others in their stead, one of whom was Agesilaiis.? Then they armed a large body of young men and set free all who were in prison, thus striking fear into their opponents, who thought they would put many of them to death. No one, however, lost his life at their hands; on the contrary, when Agis learned that Agesilaiis had plotted to make away with Leonidas as he was trying to withdraw to Tegea, and had sent men to assault him on the road, he sent out another company of 1 About 242 B.0. 8 See chapter vi. 3 f.

29 PLUTARCH'S a

érépous amTéorTetne TLa TOUS, ot tov Aewviday TepLoxXovTes acparas eis Teyéav KATETTIT AD.
XIII. Obra dé TIS mpafecws avtois 06@ Bad:-
Covons Kat pndevos évia ra uevou pnde Siarc-AvovTos, els avnp, Aynairaos, avéerpewe wavTa
Kal Siehupnvato, Kado TOV diavonua kat Aaxo-VLKOTATOV aigxiat® voonpare Th pidomovtia
SiapGeipas. emerdn yap éxéxtTnTo pév ev Tois
| padora TOAD kal ayabny ywpap, aperre b¢ TwduTonra, pate Siadioat Suvdpevos Ta xpéa
pire THY X@pav mpoéa Gar Bovropevos & rere TOV
"Agu @S apporépeov pev dua T PAT TOMEv@VY peyas
€o.To Tepl THY WOALV O VE@TEPLG 1108, ei dé Th
TOV Xpedy apéoet Jeparrevdeiev ot KTNWaTLKOL Tporepov, evKoAws ay aura kal Kal" houxiav * varepov evdefopévor tov avadacpov. tavta be Kal tots mepl _Advaavipor eddxet, ouvefaTraTopévots wd TOU 'Aynotdaou, kal Ta mapa TOD Xpewor av ypappareta, ouvevéyeavres eis aryopay, a KAapia KaXovol, Kal TravTa ouvdévres eis éy ouverpnoar. apbeians Sé proyds of péev TroOvolor Kat Saveratexol mepimrabovvtes am7jrOov, o dé Aynathaos domep epufpivov ovK pn hap-TpoTepov éwpaxévat das ovdé wip éxeivou Kaba-pwrepov.
"Aktouvtwy 5¢ Trav moAA@Y Kal THY yHY EvOUS
vewerOau Kal Top Bactréav ovTw tmovety Ke-NevOYTMY, aoYoNLas TLVAS éuBadrov o "Aynaiaos deb Kal Tpopdcers Aéyov mapiyye TOV Xpovoy, aypt ov orparela auvéBn T@ "Aytss, tile kd aetadd tav "Ayalov ouppayov dytwv
1 nal nad' hovyxlay Coraés and Ziegler: xa@ jovxlay.

30

eee a

801 trusted followers who took Leonidas under their protection and brought him safely to Tegea.

XIII. Thus the enterprise of the kings was making good progress and no one tried to oppose or hinder them, when one man, Agesilaiis, upset and ruined everything. He allowed a most shameful disease of avarice to wreck a most noble and most truly Spartan plan. For since he was an exceedingly large owner of valuable land, but owed huge sums of money, being unable to pay his debts and unwilling to give up his lands, he persuaded Agis that if both his projects should be carried through at the same time the resulting convulsion in the state would be great; but that if the men of property should first be won over by a remission of their debts, they would afterwards accept the distribution of land contentedly and quietly. This was also the opinion of Lysander, who was deceived in like manner by Agesilaiis. So they caused the mortgages (the Spartans call them klaria," or allotment pledges) to be brought into the market-place, heaped them altogether, and set fire to them. As the flames rose, the men of wealth and the lenders of money went away with heavy hearts; but Agesilaiis, as if in mockery of them, declared that his eyes had never seen a brighter or purer flame than that.

And now the multitude demanded also that the land should at once be divided, and the kings gave orders that this should be done; but Agesilaiis would always interpose some obstacle or make some excuse, and so consumed time until it became the duty of Agis to head a military expedition, when the Achaeans, who were their allies, sent 31

ra

Bonberav éx Aaxedaipovos. Aitwrol yap hoav émido€ot dea THs Meyapixis éuBaroovtes eis ILe-NOTOVYNTOY: Kal TOTO KwWAVawY "ApaTos Oo TAY
"Ayatav otpatnyos HOpote Svvayty Kal Trois epopots &ypadev.
XIV. Of 5€ rov "Ay evOvs eFérep Tov érnppévov TH ptrotipia Kal mpoOvpia THY ovaTpA-Tevopévwv. véot yap dovtes of mrEloTOL Kal

mwévntes, Kal THY pey aTO TOV ypewv aderav Eyovtes 70 Kal NeAUpévot, TOUS Se aypovs EAzi-Covres, av érravédOwow éx THs oTpaTeias, vewnOnceabat, Oavpaotors To “Ayide Trapetyov éavtous: Kai Oéapa tais morNeow Aoav aBdraBos kai mpaws cal povov ovn arpodntt Siatropevopevor THY TleXorovvnoov, ote Oavypatay nal dsarori-Cecdar tovs “EAAnvas olos Fv apa Koopos
Aaxwvixod otpatevpatos ’Aynoinaov éxovtos 7
Avcavépov éxetvov 4 Aewvidav tov manatov Nryoupevov, Otrov mpos perpdxvoy oAiyou Seiy vewTaTov aTdvTwv adws ToravTn Kai PoBos éoTi TOV TVaTpaTEevopévwov.' Kal pévtot Kal avdtos 0 VEAVLOKOS EVTEAELA Kal diroTrovia Kal T@ pndev iStwtov AapmpoTepoy yudiecOar nal wrricOa cepuvuvopevos aftoPéatos jv Kal CnArAwtos v9
TOV TOAAOY: Errel TOLS YE TAOUVGLOLS OVK NpETKEY
0 vewTepiapos auvTov, Sediooe pn Kivnua Kat mapaderypa Tots TavTaxoce Srpors yévnrat.
XV. SupptEas 5¢ ro “Apat@ wept KopivOor o
"Aris Ett Bovdevopévm trepl puayns Kal wapatd-Eews mpos Tous moAdeplous, éredeiEato Kal mpo-Oupiav moddAny kal ToApay ov paviKny ovde
1 guotparevondvwy Blass: orparevoudvwr.

for aid from Sparta. For the Aetolians were expected to invade Peloponnesus by way of Megara; and Aratus, the general of the Achaeans, in an effort to prevent this, was assembling a force and wrote a letter to the ephors.

XIV. These at once sent out Agis, who was exalted in spirit by the ambition and ardour of the soldiers under him. For being young men for the most part and poor, and having now immunity from their debts and absolution, and expecting that they would receive allotments of land if they returned from the expedition, their devotion to Agis was astonishing. And they were a spectacle to the cities as they marched through the Peloponnesus without doing any injury, without rudeness, and almost without noise, so that the other Greeks were amazed and asked themselves what must have been the discipline of a Spartan army under the command of the great Agesilaiis, or the famous Lysander, or Leonidas of old, since towards a stripling who was almost the youngest of the whole army so great reverence and fear were felt by his soldiers. And indeed the young man himself, owing to his simplicity, his love of hardships, and the pride he took in clothing and arming himself with no. more splendour than a common soldier, won the admiration and devotion of the multitudes; for to the rich, certainly, his innovating ways were not pleasing, owing to a fear that they might prove a disturbing force and set a bad example among the common people everywhere.

XV. Aratus, when Agis joined him near Corinth, was still deliberating whether or not to meet the enemy in open battle. Here Agis displayed great ardour, and courage which was sane and calculating.

aroytctov. épn yap aut@ pev Sone diapa-yeoOat Kai pn tTaptévat TOV TOAEMOV Elow, TAS murxas THS LleAorovyncov mpoepéevous, trounce 5é 16 Soxotv "Apatw: Kal yap mpeoButepov te elvat xal otpatnyeiy "Axa, ols ovyt mpoo-TtaEwv ovdé Hynoouevos, GANA GUETPATEVTOLEVOS not Kal BonOnowv.
'O &€ Sevwreds Batwyv avdtov ov eOérew payecOai dnoe tov "Ayw 'Apatou Kedevovtos, ovK évtetuxnxws ols "Apatos yéypade mepl tovTwr, amroANoytCouevos Ste BédXtLov HyEiTO, TOUS Kap-mous oxedov aravtas cuyKexopucpevwy Aon TOV yewpyav, maperbeiy Tovs todeutous waxy Siaxivduvevoas trept TOV ddov.
"Exel & ody "Apatos aréyvo pdyecOar nat TOUS cuppayous érrawéoas SiadjKe, Oavpacbels
o "Ayis dvelevyvuev, 45n tTav Evdov ev Yrdptn OopuBov trodvy éxovtwv Kai weraBornv.
XVI. 'O yap Aynotdaos épopevwr, amndray-Hévos ols Tatrewvos Hv mpoTepov, ovdevos épeideTo hépovtos apyuptov adianpatos, NAG pHva TpLo-Kav0éxaTov, OVK aTraLtTovoNsS TOTE THS TeEptooou, Tapa THY vevouopéevnv TakLy TOV Kpovwy évéBare Tois téXeot Kal mapérpatte. Sediwas Sé Tovs adixoupévous Kal pucovpevos vTo Tavtwv etpede paxatpopopous, Kal dudrAaTtTopevos vTO TOvTwY katéBatwvev els TO apyeiov. Kai Tav Bactréwv
Tov pev ONWS KaTadpovety, Tov 5é "Ay éBovrETO

For he declared that in his opinion it was best to fight a decisive battle and not to abandon the gate of the Peloponnesus and suffer the enemy to pass inside : '"' However,' he said, "I will do as seems best to Aratus, for Aratus is an older man, and is general of the Achaeans; I did not come hither to be their leader or to give them orders, but to give them aid and share their expedition.”

Baton of Sinopé, however, says that Agis himself was unwilling to give battle although Aratus urged it; but Baton has not read what Aratus wrote about this matter,! urging in self-defence that he thought it better, now that the husbandmen had gathered in almost all their crops, to suffer the enemy to pass by, instead of risking everything in battle.

When, therefore, Aratus decided not to give battle, and dismissed his allies with praises for their proffered aid, Agis, who had won universal admiration, led his forces back to Sparta, where there was already much commotion and a revolution.

XVI. For Agesilaiis, who was one of the ephors, being now freed from what had kept him in restraint before, shrank from no injustice that brought him money, nay, contrary to the customary arrangement of the calendar, and when the time for it had not yet come, he inserted a thirteenth month? and exacted the taxes for it. Moreover, in fear of the victims of his injustice and hated by all men, he kept an armed bodyguard, and would go down to his magistracy under their protection. And as for the kings, he wished men to think that he utterly despised the ene,

1 In his ‘‘Commentaries.”” See the Aratus, iii. 2.

2 This was regularly done thrice during a period of nine years, but in distinctly specified years. The object was to equalize the lunar and solar years.

Soxety Ssa THY ouyyeveray paddrov 7 Sta THv
, wv” A , , \
Bactreiav ev tin tip TiWecOar. Siédwxe Se
NOyov ws Kal avOis épopevowr.
Avo nal Odooov aroxivduvedcartes ot &xOpot \ 4 > y , > \ \ ,
Kai ovotdavtes ex Teyéas avagavddy Tov Aewvidarv
ent THY apyny KaTHYyayor, Hoéws Kal TOY TOAKOY Ocacapévov wpyilovto yap mepevariopévor TIS
, \ , \ \ ° ’ 4
yopas wn veunBetons. tov pev ovv Aynatraov
6 vidos ‘Immopuédwv, Seopevos tav TodtTav Kai
A \ A > 9 , e ,
waot tpocdiAns av Se’ avdpayabiav, vreEnyarye \ , fal \ / e \ 9 Pb] ‘ Kal Stécwoe: Tav 5é Bacidéwy o pev "Ayis emt

thv Xadxtocxov xatéeduyev, o 6€ KXeouBportos ets
\ A a e. . \ e 4 \
To tov Tlocerd@vos iepov éeOwv ixéreve’ Kal yap éSoxes ToUT@ parrdov o Aewvidas yarerros elvae, Kat mapels Tov "Ayw ert TovTov avé8n otpario-
\ , a Tas éxywv’ Kal KaTynyoper pet opyns Ste yauBpos
4 a dv émeBovrevoey avt@ xal thy Bacirelay adei-Neto nal ouveteBare THs tratpiédos.
e \ XVII. ‘O pév otv KnreouBpotos ovdév elyev
a 9 / fa)
elev, GAN NHropHnmevos exdOnTo Kal ciwTaV’ 1
4 A
dé XiAwvis, 4 Tov Aewvidou Ouvydarnp, mpotepov
\ / A A A
pev adixovpevm TO TatTpl cuvndixetto, Kal Tov
, \
Knreoufpotou tnv Bacireiav twrapadaBovtos atro-
A A A \
oTadca THY TOU TaTpOS cuuopay eOepdrreve, Kal
\ 4 a
TapovTt ev suvixeteve, hevyovtos dé mevOovca
An 4 \
Kal xareTa@s Exovoa mpds tov KreouBportov
, \ 2 a
Sueréder, TOTE S€ av Tad Tals TYXAaLS TUPpETA-36

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

and held Agis in some slight honour more because of his near relationship than because he was king. He also spread reports that he was going to be ephor again.

For this reason his enemies lost no time in taking the great hazard, and banding together, openly brought home Leonidas from Tegea to exercise the royal power. Even the common people were glad to see this done, for they were incensed at their decep- tion in the promised division of the land. Agesilaiis, accordingly, was taken out of the country and saved by his son Hippomedon, who entreated his fellow-citizens, and was beloved of all because of his valour ; and as for the kings, Agis fled for refuge to the temple of Athena of the Brazen House, while Cleombrotus went as a suppliant to the sanctuary of Poseidon ;! for Leonidas was thought to be more bitter against him, and in fact he left Agis unmolested and went up against Cleombrotus with soldiers. And when he arrived he denounced Cleombrotus angrily because, though a son-in-law, he had plotted against him, robbed him of the royal power, and helped in driving him from the country.

XVII. Cleombrotus, on his part, had naught to say for himself, but sat perplexed and speechless; Chilonis, however, the daughter of Leonidas, who before this had felt herself wronged in the wrongs done to her father, and when Cleombrotus was made king had left him and ministered to her father in his misfortunes, —sharing his suppliant life while he was in the city, and in his exile continually grieving for him and cherishing bitter thoughts of Cleombrotus—at this

1 On the promontory of Taenarum. See the Cleomenes, xxii, 5. :

BadrXovea pera TOD avdpos iKeTes apOn xade-Comer, trepiBeBAncuta Tas Xstpas éxeiv kal TOV ma iwy To pev évOev, To 8 évdev ud' avThy éxouca. Javpatovtwr 5€ mavtwry Kal Saxpvovt@v él TH XpncroryTe Kal ptroaTopyia THS yuvarKos, anpapévy TOV mem OV Kal THS Kouns aTNHEGs eXOVTMY, e Tobto," elrev, " ay TarTep, éuot TO oXAA Kal THY Oypev oux O Kycop,Sporov TeptTé-Oerxev EXdeEos, arr' ame TOV OWDV KAKO Kal THS
ons guyns pemevnne pot curt popov Kal ovVvotKov 70 wévOos. TOTEPOV ovv det pe aov Baotrevovtos év Lrapty Kal ViKR@VTOS éyxataBiavar TavTals Tais ovpdopais, 7 NaBetv éaOijra Aapmpay Kat Bao iruKny, emdovoav Um6 gov TOV mapOeviov avdpa povevopevor; Os pa mapaireitat ce pndé meiOet TEKVOV Kal yuvarnes ddxpvat, Xarerre-Tépav 7) ov Bovree Stan upeter THS KaxoBovrias eudeby € epe THY hirtarny avT@ mpoaTroGavoicay.
Tim yap eye Set Civ rappynoia mpos Tas dAdas yuvaixas, 7 pyre Tap avi pos deomevy pare Tapa maTpos €Xeos eoTUW; GANA Kal yuvy Kat Juydrnp cuvartuxely Kal cuvatipaterbar Tois euauTiis eyevouny. TOUT bev ovv ei Kai TU nv oyos EUTPETNS, YO TOUTOV aperdouny TOTE gol ouv-eferacdeioa Kat KaTapaptTupncaca TOV wvITr0 TOUTOU yevomevenr" ov bé avT@ TO adixnpa Trovels evaTrodoynToy, 00TH péya Kab Tepiway Tov aTr0-patveov TO Bactrevew ob OOTE bc" auto Kal yauBpovs govevewv Kal TEKVOY apenreiv elvar Sixatov." XVIII. 'H pev Xerovis TolavTa TOTVLM Mev?)
TO TE T™ poow Tov emt Thy Keparnv éréOnxe TOU

KnreouBpotov, nal to Bréupa SiepOappévov cat 38

time changed back again with the changed fortunes of the men, and was seen sitting as a suppliant with her husband, her arms thrown about him, and a little child clinging to her on either side. All beholders were moved to wonder and tears at the fidelity and devotion of the woman, who, touching her robes and her hair, alike unkempt, said: “This garb, my father, and this appearance, are not due to my pity for Cleombrotus; nay, ever since thy sorrows and thine exile grief has been my steadfast mate and companion. Must I, then, now that thou art king in Sparta and victorious over thine enemies, continue to live in this sad state, or put on the splendid attire of royalty, after seeing the husband of my youth slain at thy hands? That husband, unless he persuades and wins thee over by the tears of his wife and children, will pay a more grievous penalty for his evil designs than thou desirest, for he shall see me, his most beloved one, dead before he is. For with what assurance could I live and face the other women, I, whose prayers awakened no pity in either husband or father? Nay, both as wife and as daughter I was born to share only the misfortune and dishonour of the men nearest and dearest to me. As for my husband, even if he had some plausible excuse for his course, I robbed him of it at that time by taking thy part and testifying to what he had done; but thou makest his crime an easy one to defend by showing men that royal power is a thing so great and so worth fighting for that for its sake it is right to slay a son-in-law and ignore a child.”

XVIII. Uttering such supplications Chilonis rested her face upon the head of Cleombrotus and turned 39

Lr

GUYTETHKOS VITO AvITNS TeptyveyKey Eis TOUS
mapovras. o d€ Aewvidas d:arexGels tois pirors
A \ / > 2 9 4 sf
tov pev KreduB8porov éxéXevoev avactavta devyew, THS 5é€ qratdos pévew edSeito Kal pn KaTa-ALTrEty EauToV OUTW dirodYTA Kal SedwxoTAa YdapeV THY TOU avopos AUTH awTnpiav. ov py érretcer, aXN avuotapévm TO avédpl Oatepov trav Tradiwv éyyetpicaca, Batepov 8 avaraBoioa Kal mpocKvvioaca tov Bwopov tod) Geod auveEnrOev, GoTe el pn mavu duebOappévos Hv vto Kevns Sons o
, > +f A e / \ ‘\ KnreouSporos, evtvynua av nynoato thy puynv avT@ Ths Baotreias petloy elvas d1a THY yuvaixa.
Metaornyodpevos 5é tov KrXeopSporov o Acwvi-

Sas nal tovs mpwrtous épopouvs éexBadrov Tis > le e / A VA > \ > 4
apxns, érépous 8€ tornodpevos, evOvds éreBovrAEve
To “Ayidt. Kal mpa@tov pév ereOev avtov avaoThvat Kai cvupBactr€veuv, ws SedwxoTwV auyyvenv Tov TOMToY: cuveEntaTncOat yap UTO TOU
’ / , 4 \ , b ,
Aynothaouv veov ovta Kat dtAoTimov. ExeELVOU dé tdhopwpéevov Kal KaTa Ywpav pévovTos avTos bev erravoato dhevaxitwy Kal KaTetpwvevopevos,
"Audapns dé nal Aapoydpns cai ’ApKxecinaos
’ ld bs > A , 4
avaBaivovtes eimfecayv aiT@ SiaréyecOar: Kat mote Kal mapadaBovtes émt AouvTpOY ad TOU iepod KaTHYyayov Kal NovedpeEevov madd Eis TO iepov Katéotnoay. Kal joav mdavtes’ peév avTo 10 e oe "A 4 t , 2 ” avynbes, 0 6é "Audapns cal Keypnuevos? Evayxos

1 rov Geo) Coraés, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Bryan; tis Geov. 2 Kal xexpnuévos Coraés and Bekker delete kal.

40

803

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

her eyes, all melted and marred with grief, upon the bystanders. Then Leonidas, after conference with his friends, bade Cleombrotus leave his asylum and go into exile, but begged his daughter to remain, and not to abandon him, since he loved her so much, and had made her a free gift of her husband's life. He could not persuade her, however, but when her husband rose to go she put one of her children in his arms, took up the other one herself, and went forth in his company after an obeisance to the altar of the god; so that if Cleombrotus had not been wholly corrupted by vain ambition, he would have con- sidered that exile was a greater blessing for him than the kingdom, because it restored to him his wife. After removing Cleombrotus from his asylum, Leonidas expelled the officiating ephors from their office, appointed others in their place, and at once began to lay plots against the life of Agis. To begin with, he tried to persuade Agis to leave his asylum and share the royal power with him, assuring Agis that the citizens had pardoned him, because, being a young man and ambitious, he had been one of those whom Agesilaiis had completely deceived. But Agis continued to be suspicious and would not leave his asylum. So Leonidas himself stopped trying to cheat and play tricks upon him, but Amphares, Damochares, and Arcesilaiis did not. They were wont to go up to the temple and con- verse with Agis; and once they actually took him in charge and brought him down from the temple for a bath, and after he had bathed, restored him again to the temple. They were all comrades of his, but Amphares had also borrowed recently some

41

(MaTia Kal TOTHpLaA TwY TOAUTEA@Y Tapa TIS
"Aynototpatas éreBovreve Oia Tadta TH Bactret kal tais yuvartly ws amootepncwv. Kai udduoTa ye avtos Uraxovoa: to Aewvida AéyeTar Kat mapokovas Tous epopous, wy Kal autos els Hp.
XIX. ‘Eset 5€ 0 "Ayts Tov pev GrXov ev TO ‘ep@ SierprBe Xpovor, eimBer dé cataBaivery Ore TUX OL 7 pos TO NOUT pop, éxel ouvAdaBeiy auTov éyvwcay, Otay &Ew Tov iepov yévntat. Kal apa-durdEavtes AEAOUMEVOY ATHVYTNTAY Kal joTGcavrTo, Kal ouppotyov dua Sssareyopevos cai maitvovtes ws wpos cuvnOn Kal véov. éxtpomny
d€ Tia THS Od00 TAAaYiaY Tpds TO SecuwTHpLOV
éxovons, ws éyévovto Kar avtny Badilovtes, o
pev Auddpns d1a 10 dpyeww ayydpevos Tov” Ayidos, ““Ayw oe, elrrev, “emt tovs épopous, @ “Aye,
Aoyov UdéEovTa tTav TemodtTevpevwv:” oO bé Aapoyapns, eipwotos dy Kal péyas, TO imaTtov meptBadwv rept Tov Tpaxnrov elrAxev. Gdrov OE érwbovvtwy émricbev éx mapackeuis, ovdevos
a 9 6 bd / v b] 4
BonOobvtos, arr’ éepnpias ovaons, éuBaddovowy
avtov eis TO Seopwtyptov. evOvs 5é Traphy o pev Aewvidas picbodopovs éywv TrodAovs, Kal TO olxnpa tepteoxev EEwOev, ot 5€ Ehopoe mrpos TOV
"Ayu elonrOov, Kai TOY yEepovTwY Eis TO olKNLA
peTatreurpauevoe Tovs Tavta BovAopévous, ws 57 Kpioews auT@ yevoperns, éx€hevov UTEP TOY Te-
T pay weve arronoryeia Gat. yehdoavtos be TOU VEaAVLO KOU TPOS THY Elpwvelay avTav,o ev Apudapns ot wort omevov exanet kal dixny vpéEovta Tihs itapoTntos: addos b€ Tay édopwy, olov évdsdovs 42 costly vestures and beakers from Agesistrata, and therefore plotted to destroy the king and the women, that he might not have to return what he had borrowed. And he, certainly, more than anyone else, as we are told, followed the counsels of Leonidas and embittered the ephors, of whom he was one, against Agis.

XIX. Now Agis spent most of his time in the sanctuary, but was wont to go down from time to time to his bath. There, then, they determined to seize him, when he was outside the sanctuary. So they waited till he had finished his bath, and then came to meet him with friendly greetings, and walked along with him, conversing and jesting with him after the manner of youthful comrades. But at a certain point the road branched off towards the prison, and when they were come to that place, Amphares, by virtue of his office, laid hands on Agis and said: “I shall lead thee, Agis, to the ephors, to answer for thy measures of state’ ; and Damochares, who was tall and robust, threw his cloak about the king’s neck and dragged him along. Others pushed him along from behind, as had been agreed, and since he had no helper but was without a friend, they thrust him into the prison. At once Leonidas was at hand with a large band of mercenaries and surrounded the prison, while the ephors went in to Agis. After sending for those of the senators who were of the saine mind as themselves, as though the king were to have a trial, the ephors ordered Agis to defend his conduct of affairs. The young king laughed at their dissimulation, whereupon Amphares threatened that he would rue the day and be punished for his temerity; but another ephor, as

t@ “Ayids Kat Sexvimvy amopuyny THs aitias, npatnoev et tabta émpakey bro Avadvdpou rat
"Aynotkdov Biaceis. aroxpwapévov 5é Tov
"Agidos @s Btacbels pev wr’ ovdevos, Cnrav Se Kal ptpovpevos tov Auxodpyov émi thy adtny €XOor wodtTeiav, TadLy Oo avTOS HnpwTncey Et peTavoet Tois Tetpaypuevots. hynaavtos b€ Tov VEAVITKOU fy MEeTAVoELV eT TOs KAANOTA BeBov-Aevpevols, KaV TA ETXaATA TELTOpEVvOY avToY Lén, Odvarov avtov Kateyndicavto, Kal Tovs UTnpéTas éxéXNevoy aye eis THY KaXovpevnv Aeydda. TodTO 5é dori oixnpa THs ElpxTHs év & Oavarovat Tors xatadixous arotviyovTes. opav dé Tous UirnpéTas
o Aapoxapns ov toApavtas ayvac0at Tov” Aytdos, e , A la) , \ A opotws dé Kai Tov picOodpopwy Tors TWAPETTOTAS .
atroatpepopévous Kal hevyovtas TO Epyov, ws ov Oeuttov ovdé vevoytcpévovy Bacirtéws cwopate Tas xeipas mpoopepev, StatretAnoapevos avTois Kal Datdopnbels elAxev avTos els TO Olanua Tov Ayey.
non yap yoOnvto moAXol THy cvrAANYL, Kal
OopuBos hv eri tats Ovpats cal dota ToAXA, Kai Taphoav } Te pntnp Tov “Ayioos Kal 7 payyn
Bo@cat cat deopevat tov Baciréa Tov Yrapriatav
Noyou Kal xpicews Tuyely ev Tois Troditats. S20
Kal padiota Katntretay THY avaipecw, as éEap-jwaynoopévou vuxtos dv mreloves éTéN wor.

XX. ‘O pév ody *Ayis ert tHv otpayydAnv
TOPEvVOUEVOS, wS ELE TIVa THY UTNpeT@Y SaxKpv-44

804

AGIS AND CLEOMENFS

though plainly offering Agis a way of escape from the charges against him, asked him if he had done what he did under compulsion from Lysander and Agesilaiis. And when Agis answered that he had suffered compulsion from no one, but that in admira- tion and imitation of Lycurgus he had adopted the same public policy as his, the same ephor asked again if he repented of what he had done. But the young king declared that he had no repentance for what he had most excellently planned, and would not have, even if he saw that he was to suffer the extremest penalty. So they condemned him to death, and ordered the officers to lead him into the “ Dechas,” as it was called. This is a chamber of the prison in which they strangle those who are under sentence of death. But Damochares, when he saw that the officers did not dare to lay hands on Agis, and like- wise that even the mercenaries who were there shrank from the deed and were loth to do it, feeling as they did that it was contrary to the laws of God and man to lay hands upon the person of a king, heaped threats and abuse upon them and himself dragged Agis into the chamber of death. For already many people were aware of the arrest, and there was a noisy throng at the door and many torches, and the mother and grandmother of Agis were there, with cries and prayers that the king of the Spartans should have a hearing and a trial before the citizens. For this reason especially the ephors hastened on the king’s execution, believing that he would be taken out of their hands in the night if the concourse should increase.

XX. Agis, then, on his way to the halter, saw one of the officers shedding tears of sympathy for him.

45

fr

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ovtTa Kat mepitrabobvta, “ Ilavaai pe,” etter, “aw avO poe, KAaiwY* Kal yap OUTwWS TTapavoyws Kal adixos dT oNNUPEVOS KpeLTT@V elu TOV avatpovv-Tov” Kal Tavt’ elroy ma,pedmne Te Bpoy@ Tov TpdxXnrov éxougiws. o 6€ ‘Auddpns mpoedOwv emt Tas vpas, Kal a ‘Aynovatpatay T™poa-Teo OUT ay auT@ da cuvnGevav kal didrtay ava-oTnTaS, ovdey épn mept TOV "Ay éveo Oa Biasov aude a avnKed Tov: ExXéNEVE be KaKelvny, el Bovnarto, T pos TOV viov eiaerOeiv. éexeivns 5€ cal THY pytépa
HET QUTHS Tapeivar Seopevns ovdev edn KoOrUELY

) 0 “Appdpns: Kat ded pevos apporepas, Kal wad
ereioat Tas Gupas tov Secpwtnpiov Kedevoas, T poTépav bev THv “A pxi6apiav TapéOwKer, 78 cpodpa pea Birw ovcav Kat KaTayeynpaxviay év afiwpate peyote TOV TomTidwr, am oBavovons 6é éxelvns éxéXNevoe THY ‘Aynotatpatay é éow Badifer. as bé ceive Boia TOV TE viov éGedoaro
Xapat Kelpmevov Kal Thy pntépa vexpav éx Tod
Bpoxov xpepapevny, exewvny pev avr Tois Umnpe-TALS ovyxadeire Kal Tapexreivaca T@ "Ayi6e TO oa pa TEpLEaTELNE Kat KaTexahupe TO O€ BAL ™poonecovaa Kal prqoaca TO Tpoawrroy, ‘ OH
TOAAT oe, ElTrEV, ‘'@ TAL, evrAdBera Kal TO m™ pgov Kal piravO pwrrov am@here pel! pave”) be ‘A papns aro THs Oupas opav 70, ‘Yevopeva Kai Tas povas aKo ov emrera nde, Kat Tpos THY vAy1-aio TpaTay per’ Opyns elev" “ Ei Toivuy,” eon, s Tava eSoxipates TO ue, TauTa Kat melon.
kal 1) ‘Aynototpata mpos tov Bpoyov avuota-

“My man,’ said he, “cease weeping; for even though I am put to death in this lawless and unjust manner, I have the better of my murderers.” And saying these words, he offered his neck to the noose without hesitation. But Amphares went to the door of the prison, where Agesistrata fell at his feet in an appeal to his friendship and intimacy. Amphares lifted her up and assured her that Agis was not to suffer violence or death; and he bade her, if she wished, go in to her son. And when Agesistrata begged that her mother might .go in with her, Amphares said there was nothing to prevent. So he admitted both the women, and after ordering the door of the prison to be locked again, delivered Archidamia first to the executioners. She was now a very aged woman, and had lived all her days in very high repute among her countrywomen. After she had been put to death, Amphares ordered Agesistrata to enter the chamber of execution. So she went in, and when she saw her son lying dead upon the ground, and her mother’s dead body still hanging in the noose, with her own hands she helped the officers to take her down, laid her body out by the side of Agis, and composed and covered it. Then, embracing her son and kissing his face, she said: “My son, it was thy too great regard for others, and thy gentleness and humanity, which has brought thee to ruin, and us as well.’ Then Amphares, who stood at the door and saw and heard what she did and said, came in and said angrily to her: ‘If, then, thou hast been of the same mind as thy son, thou shalt also suffer the same fate.” And Agesistrata, as she rose to present her neck to the pévn, “ Movov,” dy, “cuvevéyear tatta TH Lawaprn.”

XXI. Tot dé wadous eis thv wodw é€ayyer-
Oévtos Kal TY TpLOY TwpdTwV ExKOplopéevaY OUK
Rv 0 PoBos odTw péyas, WaTE 7 KaTapavels elvat
Tous ToAitas adyouvTas pev emi Tols yeyovoct,
A \ \ 4 A ‘ +) ,
pucodvtas 6€ Tov Aewvidav nat tov Apddpny,
\ ‘ \ >) , b] @ a pndev Secvotepov nde dvooiwrtepov é€ ob Awpteis TleXorovynooy otxovotv olopévous ev Yraptn tre-
A a lA e 54 4
mpaxOa.. PBacirei yap, ws Eouxe, Aaxedatpovimv ovbe of Trodépmtor padiws év Tals wdyats aTraVT@VTES mTpowépepov TAS YElpas, ANN’ atreTpétrovTo SedvoTes \ , \ J l4 \ A
kat ceBopevor TO akiwpa. 610 Kal TodAd@D yeryo-
’ , > . @
votwy Aaxedaipovios ayeverv mpos”EXXAnvas els
4 b 4 \ A A 50
Bovos avnpeOn po Tav Pidirmixav Sopate wAN-yels wept Acdxtpa KreouBpotos. Meoonviwn dé cat @eotrroutrov UT ’Apiotopévous Trecety NeyovTwY ov dace Aaxedatpoviot, wANyHVvas Sé povov. adda Le) \ ¥ \ b) , 2 \ ,
TavTa pev ever Tivas apdiroyias. év dé Aaxedai-
A ? 4 e \ A 9 ,
pout tpwtros Ayis Bactkevwy vio twv éepopwr
b] 4 \ \ v \ 4 A 4
améOave, eara pev Epya Kal mpérrovta TH UTapTy MpoEAopMEVvoS, HALKias Sé yeyovws év 7 apuapTa-votes avOpwrrot cuyyvapuns TUyYavouct, pend Geis 5é vT0 TaV didwv SixaoTepoy 7} TAY eXOpar, OTL \ , , \ a ” bY ,
kat Aewvidav trepiécwoe Kai Tois addXols erri-OTEVTEV, HuEpwTaToS Kal MpaoTaToS YEvopEvos.
48

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

noose, said: “ My only prayer is that this may bring good to Sparta.”’
XXI. When tidings of the sad event had been carried to the city and the three bodies were carried forth for burial, the fear felt by the citizens was not so strong as to prevent them from manifesting sorrow over what had been done, and hatred for Leonidas and Amphares. It was thought that nothing more dreadful or heinous had been done in Sparta since the Dorians had dwelt in Peloponnesus. For against a king of the Lacedaemonians, as it seems, not even their enemies would willingly raise their hands if they met him in battle, but they would spare him, out of fear and reverence for his dignity. And for this reason, although there had been many conflicts between Lacedaemonians and other Greeks, only one Spartan king had been slain up to the time of Philip of Macedon, namely, Cleom- brotus, who was smitten by a spear at Leuctra.! The Messenians, however, say that Theopompus also fell in battle, at the hands of Aristomenes; but the Lacedaemonians deny this, and say that their king was only wounded. This matter may be disputed ; but Agis was certainly the first king of Sparta to Le put to death by the ephors. And yet he had chosen a line of conduct that was noble and worthy of Sparta, and was of an age in which men are usually pardoned for their errors, and his friends could with more justice blame him than his enemies, because he spared the life of Leonidas, and, most mild and gentle man that he was, put faith in his other foes.

1 See the Pelopidas, xxiii.

KAEOMENHS,

I, ’ArroBavovtos 6€ avtTod Tov pep aderdov 805
"A pxidapov ovx éfOn curraBeiv o) Aewvidas evOs
expuyorta, THY be yuvaixa ratoiov éxouray
veoryvov ex Tis oixias am aryaryov Big Kreopeéver ™@ Vi@ TUVMKLOEV OV TavU yapov @pav EXovTt, Thy be vO pwrrov arp SoA jvat Ta) Bovdopevos.
ny yap ovatas TE peyadns emixAnpos 7 “Aylares [TvAtmrouv tod tatpos, Opa TE Kal Kadnet TONV
Tav “EdAnvidwr diadepovea Kat TOV TpoTt ov
EMLeLKNS. OLO TOAAG peév Erroincey, as pact, |
BracOjvat Seouevn, cuvehBovoa dé eis TaUTO To Kreopever TOV pev Aewviday é epioe, mept dé auTov
TOV veavic Kov Hy ayabn yun Kal pidooropyos, EPOTLKAS apa T® AaBeiv pods aur HY Siatebevra Kai Tuva TpoTrov oupmabodvra TH T pos TOV "Aye evvoia Kal pynen THS yuvarnos, OOTE kat Tuv-OdveoOar TONAGKLS TEplL TOV ryeyovor@y Kal
T po exe CT LULENDS Sunryouuevns éxelyns iv o
"Ayes éoxe Sidvotay Kat T poaipeaty.
"Hv &€ xal prroripos pev Kal peyarogpav 0
Krcopevns Kal Tpos é eyKparevay Kal adehevav oux HT Tov TOU “Ayidos: ev TepuKas, To 6€ evraes
ayav éxéivo Kal Tpgov | OUK elyev, andra KévTpOV TE
Gupod Th pucer ™ pocéxetTo Kal pera apodporn-TOS open pos TO pavopevov d aet Kanov. epaivero

dé KaddtoTov fev avT@ Kpatety éxovTav, KaXov 5é xal pn teOouévwy mrepteivar mpos To BéXtLOV éxBialopevov.

5°

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

CLEOMENES

I. Upon the death of Agis! his brother Archidamus at once took to flight, and thus escaped arrest at the hands of Leonidas; but his wife, who had an infant son, was taken from her home by Leonidas and compelled to marry his son Cleomenes. Cleomenes was too young for marriage, but Leonidas was unwilling to have Agiatis marry anyone else. For she was heir to the great estate of her father Gylippus, in youthful beauty she far surpassed the other women of Greece, and she had an excellent disposition. Therefore she begged most earnestly, we are told, that she should not be forced into this marriage, but after she was united to Cleomenes, though she hated Leonidas, to the young man himself she was a good and affectionate wife. And he, as soon as Agiatis was his, became passionately fond of her, and in a way sympathized with her devotion to the memory of Agis, so that he would often ask her about the career of Agis, and listen attentively as she told of the plans and purposes which Agis had formed.

And, besides, Cleomenes was aspiring and magna- nimous, and no Jess prone by nature than Agis to self-restraint and simplicity. He had not, however, the scrupulous and gentle nature for which Agis was remarkable, and his natural courage was always goading him on, as it were, and fiercely impelling him towards that which in any case appeared to be the honourable course. He thought it a most excellent thing to rule over willing subjects, but a good thing also to subdue such subjects as were disobedient, and force them towards the better goal.

1 About 241 B.c.

51

E 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

II. Ov« pete pev ody aut Ta KaTa THY
Tony, ampaypLoauvn Kat ndov7 KATAKERNATHEVOY TOV TOMTEY Kat Tou Bactrews mavra Ta mpary-pata Xatpev €@VTOS, Eb pn dels avrov evox doin oxorale év ap Oovors Kal tpudav Bovdcpevov, dpéehoupevenv dé Tav KOLWOV, KAT oixiay éxda Tou ™pos auTov ENKOVTOS To Kepdanéov: doxnoews
dé Kal cop poo urns véwy Kaul Kapteptas Kal too-THTOS Ovde ardanrés HY TovTw@y Tay wept “Ayr

ATTONWNOT MV pynpovevew.
Néyerau dé Kal hoyov eared tov Kn2eo-Méevn peTaryeiv eTL perpaxcov outa, Xhaipov tov
Bopue Bevirou mapaBarovros els THD Aaxebaipova Kal TEpt TOUS veous Kal TOUS epnBous ouK GMer@s bat piBovros. o 6é Xpaipos é éy Tols Tpwrals eryeyover TOV Zyvevos tov Kutréws padnrav, Kal Too Krcopévous core THS pioews TO dvdpades arya-Thocai Te wat _Tpocexkavaat THY prroripian.
Aewvidav pev yap Tov Tanratov réyovowy, émepa-T0évra TOUS TIS aUT@ paiverat TOLNTNS ye-ryovevat _Tupratos, eltreiy® ‘ “Ayados vewy wuxas KaKKaviy. eMTrUT AG LEvor yap v6 TOY Trolnpatov evdovarac poo mapa Tas payas npeldovy éavtav' o o€é Lrwixos ayos eye Te ™ pos TAS peyaras duces Kal dfeias ema pares Kal Tapa-Boxor, Badet Oe Kat ™mpaw KE pavyvueEVOs HOee padtata eis TO olxelov ayabov émidiSwow.
III. *Ezrel 8€ teXeutncavtos rod Acwvidou tiv
Baotreiay trapédkaBe wal tovs toditas Tote 817 TAVTATACLY EKAEAUMEVOUS EWPA, TOV pev TrOVgiwy xa’ Adovdas idias Kal mreoveFias tapo-52

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

II. Ot course, then, the condition of the city was not pleasing to him. The citizens had been lulled to sleep by idleness and pleasure ; the king was willing to let all public business go, provided that no one thwarted his desire for luxurious living in the midst of his wealth ; the public interests were neglected, while every man was eagerly intent upon his own private gain; and as for practice in arms, self-restraint in the young, hardiness, and equality, it was even dangerous to speak of these now that Agis was dead and gone.

It is said’ also that Cleomenes studied philosophy when he was still a stripling, after Sphaerus of Borysthenis had made a voyage to Sparta and busied himself sedulously there with the youth and young men. Sphaerus had become one of the leading disciples of Zeno of Citium, and it would appear that he admired the manly nature of Cleomenes and in- creased the fires of his high ambition. For Leonidas of old, as we are told, when asked what manner of poet he thought Tyrtaeus to be, replied; ‘A good one to inflame the souls of young men.”’ And indeed they were filled with divine inspiration by his poems, and in battle were prodigal of their lives. However, for great and impetuous natures the Stoic doctrines are somewhat misleading and dangerous, although when they permeate a deep and gentle character, they redound most to its proper good.

III. But at the death of Leonidas! Cleomenes came to the throne, and saw that the citizens were by that time altogether degenerate. The rich neglected the common interests for their own private

1 In 236 n.c. Cleomenes was then about twenty-four years of age.

pavray Ta Kowd, TOY 66 TOAAQY bua TO Tparrery KAK@S TrEpt Ta oieta wal T pos TOV TONE LOV am pobupov Kal Tpos THY ayoyny adidoripwv YeyovoTey, avTou dé évoua Bacdevovtos Wy povov, n O€ apxn TAO tTav épopwv, evOvs bev ets vouy eGero Ta mapovTa peOrotdvar Kal Kuvety, dvtos 6¢ avT@ dirou Fevdpous, épactov yeyovotos (rovTo dé eumrveia Oat Aaxedatpoviot Kadovotv), aTeTeLpato TOUTOU S:arruvOavopevos TOV Aye, oTroios yévotTo Bacirevs Kal tive TpoT Kab meTa Tive@DY él TaUTNY EXOoe THY odo. 5 8 | Rlevapns TO pev Tpw@rTov ouK anoos éméuynto TOY Tpay-patov € exeivon, @S empaxOn Kal' &xaota pd odo-ya@v Kal dinyoumevos: ws 6€ Hv catapavns 0 Knreopévns éumradéa Tepov T poaeXwv Kal Kivov-pEvos UTEPPUMs ™ pos Hy KatvoTopiay Tov "Aytos Kal TaUuTa, TOAAGKLS aKoveLy Bovropevos, émemhn-Fev avtT@ wpos opynv o Fevapns ws ovy vytaivovte, Kab TENS aTrésTN Tod Siaréyer Oat Kal pouray Wpos avTov, ovdevi HEVTOL THY aitiay Eppace THS Svadopas, arr autor Edn yeveoa Kev exeivov. OvrTw b¢ Tov Fevapous avTixpovaavTos 0 Kreo-pévns Kal TOUS aXous opotas Eye MYOUMEVOS, auTos ev eauT@p cuveriber THY mpagv. olomevos & av ev TONED padXov Kar etpnyny peTtaoTi-oa Ta TapovTa, Tuer OUCdE 7 pos tous 'Ayatous THY TONY, avTous B.dévras eYKANMATOD 7 po-paces. 0 yap "A patos toxve perytaTov év Tots "Ayxatois éBovreto pev && apy iis eis piav cuvtTakiy aryaryety Tedorovyycious, Kat TOUTO TO TONY OTPATHYLOY AUT@ Kal THs paKpas TodtTElas Hv pleasure and aggrandizement; the common people, because of their wretched state at home, had lost all readiness for war and all ambition to maintain the ancient Spartan discipline; and he himself,Cleomenes, was king only in name, while the whole power was in the hands of the ephors. He therefore at once determined to stir up and change the existing order of things, and as he had a friend, Xenares, who had been his lover (or znsptrer, as the Spartans say), he would make trial of his sentiments by inquiring in detail what sort of a king Agis had been, and in what way and with what assistants he had entered upon the course of action so fatal to him. At first Xenares was quite glad to recall those matters, and rehearsed the events at length and in detail; but when it was apparent that Cleomenes took an unusual interest in the story, and was profoundly stirred by the innova- tions of Agis, and wished to hear about him over and over again, Xenares rebuked him angrily, calling him unsound in mind, and finally stopped visiting and conversing with him. To no one, however, did he tell the reason of their variance, but merely said that Cleomenes understood it.

And so Cleomenes, finding Xenares averse, and thinking that everybody else was of like mind with him, began to arrange his project all by himself. And because he thought that he could better bring about his reforms in time of war than in the midst of peace, he embroiled the state with the Achaeans, who were themselves giving grounds for complaint. For Aratus, the most powerful man among the Achaeans, was from the outset desirous of bringing all the Peloponnesians into one confederation, and this was the end pursued by him during his many

TENOS, HYOupeV@ poves ay oUTws dvemiXerpnTous écecOau Tots EXTOS TorEpiols. erret bé TOY GAXN@V oyedov amdvrwyv avT@ _Tpoayeyovotmy amreNet-TOVTO ANanedarpoveot kal ’Hreztou Kal boot Aake-Saipoviors *Apxadav T™ poaetxor, dia, 7@ TOV
Aewvidar anoBaveiv mapnveyret Tots ‘Apxaat Kal TepleKomTey avTa@Y padtota Tous Tois ’Axatots omopobvyTas, aTroTEtpwpeVvos TOV Aaxedatpovior, cat tod KrXeopévous ws véou cal dmeipov Kata-ppovev.
IV. "Ex tTovtou Krcopevn TpwrTov ot épopot
TéEWTOUCL KaTadnypopevov TO TWepl T2V Ba Bwap
"A@rjvawov. éuBory 5é Tis Maxovicis TO Xepiov €oti, Kal TOTE T pos TOUS Meyanoronitas 7 my émi-dtxov. cataraPovros d€ TovTo Kal TELXITAVTOS TOU Kreopévous 0 O “A paros over éyxaréoas, arre
VUKTOS exo TpaTEvaas emeyetpnoe Teyeatais Kai

‘Opxoneviars. TOV dé mpoborbs aTrOOELALAT aVT@Y o wev “Apatos dvexwpnoe AeAnEvar vopiSov, O be Krcopevns eipwveta Xpwpevos éyparre _T POs
aurop, ws 67 Tapa pidou muvbavopevos mob Ths VUKTOS eer Gor. Tov ¢ ayTiypayaytos @S EKELVOV
Ber Swap mérAXELY Teuxifelv aKkovoas cataBain
TOUTO Kohvawy, maduy o KrXeopévns dmoatethas
TOUTO pev obras éxeuv eon memeio Ga: “Tous dé Sant Kal Tas KAiMaKas, ” elrrev, ‘ ‘el pn Ti oot raéper, yparfov Huiv, el Ti co Ta pnkodov-our. TOU é ‘Aparovu T pos TO OKC) [L440 yera-cavros kai muvOavouévou Toids Tis 0 veavioxos ein, Aapoxparns 0 Aaxedatponos guyas, “Ee Te TpaTTes, é&pyn, “mpos Aaxedatpovious, wpa 56

generalships and his long political activity, since he was of the opinion that in this way alone would they be safe from the attacks of their enemies without. Nearly all the other Peloponnesians adopted his views, but the Lacedaemonians, the Eleians, and the Arca- dians who sided with the Lacedaemonians, held aloof. Therefore, as soon as Leonidas was dead, Aratus be- gan to harass the Arcadians, and ravaged the territories of those especially who were adjacent to Achaea. His object was to put the Lacedaemonians to the test, and he despised Cleomenes as a young and in- experienced man.

IV. Upon this, the ephors began operations by sending Cleomenes to occupy the precinct of Athena at Belbina. This commands an entrance into Laconia, and was at that time a subject of litigation with the Megalopolitans. After Cleomenes had occupied and fortified this place, Aratus made no public protest, but led out his forces one night and tried to surprise Tegea and Orchomenus. Those who were to betray the places to him, however, played the coward, and Aratus withdrew, thinking that his attempt had escaped notice. But Cleomenes wrote him an ironical letter, inquiring, as from a friend, whither he had marched out in the night. Aratus wrote back that hearing of Cleomenes’ intention to fortify Belbina he had gone down there to prevent it. Whereupon Cleomenes sent back word again that he believed this story to be true; “but those torches and ladders,”’ said he, “if it is all one to thee, tell me for what purpose thou hadst them with thee.” Aratus burst out laughing at the jest, and inquired what manner of youth this was. Whereupon Damocrates, the Lacedaemonian exile, replied: “ If thou hast designs

57

a

gor TAXUVELY @po Tov Kévtpa dicate TovTOY TOV yeooaov.

"Ex TouTou Krcopéver peTa iTTEéEwWY OALywY Kal mweCov TplaKoalay év ‘Apradia oTpaToTedevoperep mpooéTatay dva wpety ot edopor, poBovpevor TOV TONE MOV. érrel dvaxwpnaavros avTov Kadvas éda Bev) “Aparos, avdrs éreptrov TOV Kyr<0-evn. AaBovros d€ avtTov MeOvdpiov Kal Thy
"A pyoneny Katadpapovtos, éfeotpdrevoay ou
"Axatol dio wupioss melois Kal iAlols immredaoL “Aptaropdxou oT paTnyouvTos. aT avTnoavTos dé wept Ila\Adytiov Krcopevous Kal Bovdopevov paxer Gar, poRnbels TH TOApaV o “Aparos OvK elace Staxwduveioar TOV oTpaTHyoy, arr’ arnnrOe Aowopovpevos péev UTrO TaD "Axarar, VAevalo-pevos 56 Kai KATAppovovpEVos UTro TOV Naxedac-poviov, ovde mevraxtaxi Mov 70 TAOS évTwD.
Héyas ovv TO Ppovjpare myeyovas 0 Kreopevns eOpacuvero ™ pos TOUS moniTas, Kab TOV Tadaev TLWOS avrous dvepipvnoxe Bactréwy el OvTOS ov patny Ste! Aaxedatponot truvOavovTat Trept TeV TONEMIWY, OV TOTOL EiaiY, ANAL Tov Eiawy.
V. ’Emet 5€ tots ’'Hredors _ToAEwoupEevors UT oO
TOY “AXaLav BonOjoas, Kal qept To AvKatov aT Lovo non Tots "Ayatois émiBarwv, & dav pev éTpewaro Kat Serr ronoev avT@v TO oT pdrevpa, gTuxXvovs dé dvetre Kal Sovras éraBev, & aaoTe kat
tepl "Apdrov pnpny Ex TTEC ELV els TOUS "EdAqvas WS TeOVNKOTOS, O Oo wep “Apatos dpota T KaLp@
Npnoduevos €x THS TpoThs éxeivns 2300. emt
1 eimdvtos ov udrny 8t. Sintenis (com.) and Blass, after Stephanus: cirdyros tt wdtny (MSS.).
«58

807

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

upon the Lacedaemonians, see that thou hastenest, before this young cock grows his spurs.”
After this, when Cleomenes with a few horsemen and three hundred foot-soldiers was making an expedition in Arcadia, the ephors, fearing the issue of the war, ordered him to come back home. After he had returned, however, Aratus seized Caphyae, and the ephors sent Cleomenes forth again. He seized Methydrium and overran the territory of Argolis, where- upon the Achaeans marched out with twenty thousand foot-soldiers and a thousand horsemen under Aristo- machus as general. Cleomenes met them at Pallan- tium and offered battle, but Aratus, in fear of this boldness, would not suffer his general to hazard the issue, and retired. For this he was reproached by the Achaeans, and jeered at and despised by the Lacedaemonians, who were less than five thousand strong. Cleomenes was therefore greatly lifted up in spirit and began to show a bold front to the citizens ; and he would often remind them of one of their ancient kings! who said, and not idly either, “The Lacedaemonians are wont to ask, not how many, but where, their enemies are.”

V. After this, he went to the aid of the Eleians, upon whom the Achaeans were making war, and falling upon the Achaeans near Mt. Lycaeum, as they were withdrawing, he put their entire army to panic flight, slew great numbers of them, and took many prisoners, so that even Aratus was widely reported among the Greeks to be dead. But Aratus, making the best use of his opportunity, immediately after

1 Agis IT, (427-398 n.c.)3 cf. the Morals, pp. 190c; 215 d.
59

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Maptiverav AOE Kai pndevos av wpocdoxjcavtos \ f \ UA a \ ,
elXe THY TOA Kal KaTéaxe, TOV O€ Naxedatpoviwy mavTamact Tais yvopmas avatecovTwy Kai TO Kreopéves pos Tas otpateias évicotapévarv, wp-pnoe petatréurrecOas Tov Aytdos abderdov ’Apyidapov ex Meconvns, BactXeverv ato THs Erepa auov HVS, G is érépas > 9 a 7 9 lA A A olKlas Hv mpoonKov, oopevos auBrvTEpav THY TOV
épopwv apyny écecOat THs Bacirelas icopporou Kal ONOKANpoU yevouevns. ot Sé aYNpNKOTES TpO-
‘ 9 b] 4 A \ /
tepov Tov "Arytv ataBopevor TovTo, Kai poBnbévtes un Stxnv S00 tod ’Apyidapou KatedOovtos, édé-EFavro peéev avTov eis THY TOMY TrapayevopevoV pupa Kat avyxatiyov, evOus Se aréxtewvay, cite dxovros Tov Kyeopévous, ws oleras DvrAapyos, elite TetaOévtos Ure TOY hirwy Kal TpoELevou TOV
aA A , a avO pwrrov avTois. THs yap aitias TO WAEloTOY eT’ éxeivous HAGE BeBtacbar Tov Krcopévn Soxovvtas.
VI. Ov pny adda Kuveiv evOds éyvoxws Ta KATA
THY TOALV, ETELcTE TOUS EpoOpoUs YprpaAcLW STrwsS
avTe@ Wnhdiowvta otpateiav. €éOcpdmrevoe Sé Kai TOV adAwY suyvors Sia THs pyntpos Kparnat-
J > fe) 4 \
KrElas apedas suyyopyyovans Kal cvppidroTipov-pévns, H ye Kal yadpou pn Seopévn réyerar dra

N eX v a / / \
Tov viov avdpa AaBeiy mpwrevovta S0Fn Kal
Suvayet THY TodLTa@Y. éEayayov Sé THY oTpa-relay KaTanapBaver THS MeyadorronritLO0s Ywptov AedxtTpa: Kat yevouévns mpos avtov o€eias Tov 60

this defeat marched to Mantineia, and to everybody's surprise captured and held the city. At this the Lacedaemonians were altogether disheartened and opposed any further expedition on the part of Cleomenes. He therefore determined to summon from Messene the brother of Agis, Archidamus,! who was the rightful king from the other royal house, thinking that the power of the ephors would be diminished if the royal power were restored to its full strength so as to counterbalance it. But those who had formerly murdered Agis comprehended this design, and fear- ing that they would pay the penalty for their crime — if Archidamus was restored, they did indeed receive him when he came secretly into the city, and assisted in his restoration, but immediately put him to death. Cleomenes may have been opposed to this, as Phylarchus thinks, or perhaps he was persuaded by his friends to abandon the hapless man to his murderers. For the greater part of the blame attached itself to them, since they were thought to have constrained Cleomenes.

VI. However, having determined to attempt at once his reforms in the state, Cleomenes bribed the ephors to send him on an expedition. He also won the favour of large numbers of the citizens with the help of his mother Cratesicleia, who assisted him liberally in providing ways and means, and shared his ambitions. It is even said that although she had no desire to marry again, for the sake of her son she took a husband who was foremost among the citizens in reputation and influence. So Cleomenes led forth his forces and occupied Leuctra, a stronghold of Megalopolis. The Achaeans, under the command of 1 See chapter i, 1.

“Axara Bon Betas "Apdtrov otparnyovrtos, vTro
THY ONLY auTny mapatabapevos 7779 péper
Til TOU OTPATEUHATOS. érrel O€ xapd pay Tia Babciav ovx elace SiaBivar TOUS “Axatous 0
"A patos, aXN éneatnoe THhv Siwkwv, ayavanT ay
dé Avédidéas o 0 Meyanorronitns ouveFdpunce TOUS Tepl aurov imtreis Kat Se@oKwv Ets Xwptov apmédov Kal Tappwv Kal TELY OV peatov évoeiaas Kal diac tad Gels mrepl Taira KaKaS anjrarre, Kar dw@v oO Krcomevns avijxe Tous Tapaytivous Kal TOUS
Kpijras én auroy, id’ wy o Avdsddas apvvopevos

EUPWOTWS ETTECE. _Tpos TOUTO Oappycavres ot Aaxedarpovior pera Bons évéBaXov Tots “Axawois, Kal Tpomny éNov Tov TT PATEVLATOS émoinaay.
aTroBavovtwy dé TUXVOY TOUS pe G&Xous UTr0-amovdous o 0 Kr¢ouévns an édwxe, tov 6€ Avéstaday vex pov axOhvat TpOs avTov Kehevoas, Koo unoas moppupioe Kal or épavov érreis, T pos Tas wvAas TOV Meyanorrodurav améaTetnNev. oTOos nv Avota-das o Kat abEpuevos THY Tupavvidd Kat Tots TohiTaLS amrodous THv édevGepiay Kal THY TWoY TpocKo-pioas “Ayasots.
VII. "Ex TOUTOU Krcopevns peya ppoverw non,
Kal twemreopévos av as Bovderat TOLS mpdypace
popevos TONE TPOS TOUS "Axatous, padiws eT LK PATHOL, edidacxe TOV Tis PNT pos avd pa.
Meyiorovouy @S xen TOV epopav amahraryevTas
els pécov Ocivar Ta KT NATO Tots TOMT ALS Kal THY Lrapryy i lonv ryevopmevny éyetpecv Kai Wpoayetv
emt THY THS ‘Edd dos myepoviay. | metaJevros S éxetvou S00 TOV AANwY hitwv 7 TpeEls Tpodé-AaBe.
62

Aratus, came swiftly to the aid of their allies against him, and Cleomenes, after drawing up his forces under the very walls of the city, was worsted at one point. But Aratus would not permit the Achaeans to cross a certain deep ravine, and brought his pursuit to a stop. Lydiadas the Megalopolitan, however, chafing at this, dashed on with the horsemen under his com- mand, and pursuing the enemy into a place full of vines, ditches, and walls, had his ranks broken and thrown into disorder thereby, and began to fall into difficulties. Cleomenes, observing this, sent against him his Tarentines and Cretans, at whose hands Lydiadas, defending himself sturdily, fell. At this the Lacedaemonians took courage and with a shout fell upon the Achaeans and routed their entire army. Great numbers of them were slain, and their bodies Cleomenes restored at the enemy’s request; but the body of Lydiadas he asked to have brought to him, arrayed it in a purple robe and put a crown upon the head, and then sent it back to the gates of Megalopolis. This was the Lydiadas who renounced the tyranny, gave back to the citizens their freedom, and attached the city to the Achaean league.

VII. After this, Cleomenes, being now greatly elated, and persuaded that if he could keep thie control of things entirely in his own hands during the war with the Achaeans, he would easily obtain the mastery, began to instruct his mother’s husband, Megistonoiis, that they must needs get rid of the ephors, put the property of the citizens into a common stock, and rouse and incite the Spartans, thus put upon their old footing of equality, to assume the supremacy in Greece. Megistonoiis was convinced, and enlisted in the cause two or three of his friends besides. 63

»)
ow
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

WV , \ \ \ e 4 b] 4 ‘ A XuvéBn d€ Tept Tas nuépas exewas Kat TwDv we oe ,) , wv. IQA epopwv eva Kotmwpevov év Ilacipdas dvap idety
, 20 / A; b e / a 2, /
Oavpactov: éd0xer yap €v @ TOT Tots Eepopots
4 bd \ / , 4 li
Gos éati nabelouévors ypnpativeav Eva didpov
KetaOal, tous 6¢ réTTapas avnphnaOar, Kai Oavpd-Covros avtod dary éx Tov lepod yevéoOas dpdaa a <i a Covcay @s TovTO TH LTapTyn A@oV éoTL. TAaUTNV thy ory Sunyousévou tov édopov mpos Tov Kyreopévyn, TO pev mp@tov SuerapdxOn xa’ btrowWiav \ 4 @ PS A e de 9 , 8 \ , twa treipavecGat doxay, ws o€ EemTrelcOn pH Wev-\ 4 5] 4 \ \
SeaBar tov Sunyovpevov, éOdppynce. Kal AaBov dcous UTa@TTEVE UdNLTTA TOV TOALT@Y evayT.LO-\ N A € , \ 9 id
ceaOar mpos tTHy mpakw, “Hpaiav xai ’Adcatay Tas modes TaTTouévas Td Tots “Ayatois etre,
\ a 3 , b) 4 \ ld
Kat oiTov eonyaryer Opxopeviors, war Mavtweia mapecTpatomédevce, Kal GrwWs avw Kal KaTw paxpais tropelats atrotpvcas Tovs Aaxedatpovious
> / > A 4 \ \ ?
anvéximev avutav Senbévtwy tovs amoddAous épy
"Apxadia, tovs 5€ pscOodpopous éxywv adtos eri
vP a > , a \ p »> ¢ x > , Thv Uraptny éywpe. Kai xa’ odov ols éeriateve PadLoTa KaNOS POs aUTOV éyELY aVEKOLVODTO THY yvouny, Kal mpone aoxédnv, ws mept to Setmvoy ovat Tots Epopots érimécot.
, A
VIII. Tevoyevos 8€ tis wordews eyyis, Evpu-
, > A
KrelOay pev els TO TMV éepopwyv auacitioy arréoTELNEY WS TWA Tap avTOU AOyov dO oTpaTLas

xopuivovta, @npuxiwy dé nal PoiBis cal dvo tav cuvtpopwv tod Kreopévous, ods wo0aKxas Kadovaiv, emnxodovOovy otpatiwtas odrtLyous ExovTEs.
64

Now, it came to pass about that time that one of the ephors, who was sleeping in the precinct of Pasiphaé, had an astonishing dream. He dreamed that in the place where the ephors were wont to sit for the prosecution of business, one chair only stood, but the other four had been taken away; and that in his amazement at this a voice came to him from the temple saying that this was better for Sparta. This dream the ephor related to Cleomenes, who at first was much disturbed, and thought that the other had some suspicion of his design and was making trial of him; but when he was convinced that the relater spoke the truth, his courage revived. So taking all the citizens who, as he suspected, would be most opposed to his designs, he seized Heraea and Alsaea, two cities belonging to the Achaean league, intro- duced supplies of food into Orchomenus, and en- camped by Mantineia, from whence he made long marches up and down the land, and utterly wore out the Lacedaemonians, so that it was at their own request that he left most of them in Arcadia, while with his mercenaries he himself set out for Sparta. On the march he imparted his design to those whom he believed to be most favourably disposed to him, and went forward slowly, that he might fall upon the ephors while they were at supper.

VIII. When the city was close at hand, he sent Eurycleidas to the mess-table of the ephors, osten- sibly to carry some message of the king from the army; but Therycion, Phoebis, and two of the Helots, who had been bred up along with Cleomenes! (they call them ‘“mothakes’’), followed after with a few

1 Such Helot companions afterwards became freemen, and sometimes even citizens in Sparta.

ért 5é rod Evpucreida diareyopévou Trois épopous émidpapovres €otracpmévais Tais payaipars Erracov

b) 4 e @ ” 9 4 e > ,
avtous. 0 pev ovv patos ‘AyuXaLos, ws errAnyn, mecwv Kal TeOvavar Sofas atpéua cuvayayov rai TapérK@y éautov €x TOU oixnpmatos Edabey eis TE Swudtiov eicepmvaas puxpov, 5 poBov péev Hv iepov, dAdXws Sé xexderopévoy ael, TOTE Ex TUXNS dvewypevov éruyyavev. eis ToUTO TUvELTEVEYKwV €avtov améxretce TO Oupiov. of 5é técoapes avnpéOncayv, cal trav érsBonOovvtwy avtots ov mreloves 7 S€xa. TOUS yap novylay ayovTas OvK

EXTELVAY, OVSE TOUS GTLOVTAS eK THS TOAEWS EKW-Avov. édheicavto S€ Kal Tod "AyvrAaiov pel” nuépav éx Tov iepov wpoedOovTos.
IX. "Eore 5¢ Aaxedarpoviors od doBov povor,
9 \ \ 4 \ / \ Ul
aAXa Kal Oavatov Kai yéXwtos Kal ToLoOVTwWY
¥ 4 e , A \ ,
GrAXwv tanuatov iepd. tiudos Se tov doBov
ovy wamrep obs atroTpéTrovTar Saipovas, HyovpeEvot BraBepov, adda THY TodTEiaY paddtoTAa ouvExecOar po8w@ vouifovres. 810 Kal mpoexnpuTrov ot &popor Tots qwoNitats els THY apXnV EloLovTes,
e 9 lA 4 , \ ,
as "Aptororérns dyoi, xeipecbat Tov puotaKka Kal mpocéxew Tois vomots, iva pn YareTrol Mov auTois: TO Tod pvaoTAaKoOS, Olwat, WpoTeEtvoyTeEs, Strws Kal Tepi TA pLxpoTaTa TOUS véous TrELOapyety 2fh/ \ A >? , lA “ > E0ifwor. Kal rhnv avdpetay bé poe Soxovow ov« apoBiayv, drrAa PoBov rvpoyou Kal Séos adokias ot manratol vouiterv. of yap SeAoTaToL Tpds TOUS vouous Oapparewraror mpos Tovs TodEpious Eiat-66

soldiers. These men, while Eurycleidas was still making his report to the ephors, ran in upon them with drawn swords and smote them. The first of them, Agylaeus, on receiving the blow, fell and lay still as though dead ; but afterwards he quietly pulled himself together, dragged himself out of the room, and crept unobserved into a little building which was a temple of Fear. Usually it was closed, but at this time it chanced to be open. Into this building he betook himself and locked the door. But the other four were slain, and also about ten of those who came to their aid. For the people who kept quiet were not killed, nor were those who wished to leave the city prevented. And even Agylaeus was spared when he came out of the temple next day.

IX. Now, the Lacedaemonians have temples of Death, Laughter, and that sort of thing, as well as of Fear. And they pay honours to Fear, not as they do to the powers which they try to avert because they think them baleful, but because they believe that fear is the chief support of their civil polity. For this reason, too, when the ephors enter upon their office, as Aristotle says, they issue a proclamation command- ing all men to shave their moustaches, and to obey the laws, that these may not be severe upon them. They insist upon the shaving of the moustache, I think, in order that they may accustom the young men to obedience in the most trifling matters. And the men of old, in my opinion, did not regard bravery as a lack of fear, but as fear of reproach and dread of disgrace. For the men who feel most dread of the laws have most courage in:

67

i

f

i

F 2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

cal To wadeiv Hetota Sediacw 0: padota poBovpevol TO KAK@S aKovcat. 516 Kal KAaADS O ciTe@D:
.. . Wa yap Séos, &v0a ab aides.
cat "Ounpos,
aidoies Té pot éaat, hire éExupé, Seuvos Te Kab
A , VA
ouyn Sevdiotes onpdytopas.
\ A > 4 , 4 \ A
TO yap aicxvvecOat pardiota cupBaiver Tpos ods
A N U A Ca) \ \ \ N
Kai To dedotxévat Tois ToAAOts. 610 Kai Tapa TO TOV épopwy avacitiov tov poBov iSpuytar Aaxe-Saipoviol, wovapyias éyyuTdtw KaTacKevacdpéevot
TO apxetov.
X.'O & obv Krcomévns nuépas yevouévns lA ? 5 , A A A £5
mpoéypayrev oySonkovta TaV ToAdLT@Y ods édet peracthvat, Kat rovs Sidpous dvetre TOV épopwv
\ e 27 P] e / 4 > N
TAnv Evos, EV @ KAOnmEvos EuEedrev avTOS XPNparila. éxxrnoiav 5é rojoas aTreXoyetTo Tept TOV TeTpayuévwv. e&pn yap vro Tod Auxovpyou tois Bactrevor ouppeyOnvat Tovs yépovtas, Kat
A , 4 a \ / QA
Todvv Xpovoy oTw Siotxeto Oar THY ToALW ovdéeY

érépas apyns Seouévnv, borepov Sé Tov mpos Meconviovs mrodéuov paxpov yevopévou Tovs Ba-avnrels, ta Tas oTpatelas aoxXOAOUS GYTAas aUTOUS mpos TO Kpivewv, aipeicOai tivas ex TeV Pidrwv
2 / a 4 ? > ¢ A >. / kal atroneitrey Tots TrodiTats av' éauvTa@y, Epopous mpocayopevOévtas, nal Siaterely ye TovTOVS TO 68

809

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

facing their enemies; and those shun death least who most fear ill fame. Therefore it has been well
said!: |
". . . for where dread is, there also is reverence."
And Homer says ?:
'Revered art thou by me, dear father-in-law, and dreaded too; "'
and
'" Without a word, in dread of their leaders.? "

For by the multitude reverence is most apt to be felt towards those whom they also fear. For this reason, too, the Lacedaemonians erected a temple to Fear alongside the mess-hall of the ephors, after they had endowed this magistracy with almost absolute powers.

X. And now to resume; Cleomenes, when day came, published a list of eighty citizens who must go into exile, and removed all the ephoral chairs except one; in this he purposed to sit himself for the transaction of public business. Then he called a general assembly and made a defence of his proceedings. He said that Lycurgus had blended the powers of senate and kings, and that for a long time the state was administered in this way and had no need of other officials. But later, when the Messenian war proved to be long, the kings, since their campaigns abroad left them no time to administer justice themselves, chose out some of their friends and left them behind to serve the citizens in their stead. These were called ephors, or guardians, and as a matter of fact they

1 By Stasinus of Cyprus. Cf. Plato, Huthyphro, 12a; Kinkel, Hp. Graec. Frag. i. p. 30.
2 Iliad, iii. 172, Helen to Priam.
3 Iliad, iv. 431, of the Achaeans marshalled for battle.
69

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

aA e 4 A 4 wv °

mT pa@tov vIrnpéTas TOY Bactréwy ovTas, eita KaTa puxpov eis éavtovs Thy éEovciay émiotpedhovtas ovtTws AaGeiv idvov apxetov KaTacKevacapévous.
onpetov S€ TovTOU TO péxpL VV peTaTrEe“TrOMEevOD
\ , A 5 , \ A ? 4
Tov Bacthéa tov épdpwy TO Tpa@Tov avTiAéyerv kat TO Sevtepov, to S€ tpiToy KaXovvTwV avaotavta Badifery mpos av’tovs: Kat Tov mpwToV éricpodpuvavTa thy apynv Kat avatevdpevov
"Actepwrov nrALtKials Uaotepov tmoArdais e&dopov yevécOar. petpidfovtas pév ovv autos, épn,
a 9 e / > 4 A 9 , ‘
kpeirrov iy vTopevewv, éfovatg dé emer THY WAaTpLov KATANVOYTAS apYnY, OoTe TOV BaciNéwy
Tous pev éEeXavveayv, Tors dé arroxtivyve axpt-Tous, atretArety 5€ Tois TOOovaLY avOts émidety THY
V4
KaddMorny Kat Oevordtny év Ywdaptyn KaTaotacwy,
, \ A
OUK GVvEKTOV. eb péev ovv duvaTov Hy avev ohayns
L) UU A 5 4 A / amradrakar tas éreicaxtous tHS Aaxedaimovos
a \ Khpas, tpupas nal qonrutereias nal ypéa xal Saveropovs Kal Ta mpecBitepa TovTwY Kaka, meviay Kat TrovTOY, EvTUYéaTATOV AV HyetcOaL 4 e \ C4 > A J , mavrwy Bactréwy éavTov MoTrEp LaTpov avwdvves lacdpevov Thy TaTpiOa: viv 5é THs avayKns Exe
, \ ) a ” \ A
acuyyvepova tov Autodpyop, os ovte Bacirevs Ov
” ¥ Col
ouTe apywr, idiwrns é Bacirevery emriyerpav ev Tols Oras mponADEY cis ayopay, Wate SetcavTa 4 ry
tov Bacikéa Xadpirrov eri Bwopov xatadvyeiv.
> b 3 A \ Ld A 4
GNX €xetvov pev OvTAaA YpnoTOY Kal dtdroTraTpLY taxyu Te AvKovpyp TeV mpaTToMévwy peTacyeiv 70
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

continued at first to be assistants of the kings, but then gradually diverted the power into their own hands, and so, ere men were aware, established a magistracy of their own. As proof of this, Cleomenes cited the fact that down to that day, when the ephors summoned a king to appear before them, he refused to go at the first summons, and at the second, but at the third rose up and went to them ; and he said that the one who first added weight to the office, and extended its powers, Asteropus, was ephor many generations later. As long, then, he said, as the ephors kept within bounds, it had been better to bear with them; but when with their assumed power they subverted the ancient form of government to such an extent as to drive away some kings, put others to death without trial, and threaten such as desired to behold again in Sparta her fairest and most divinely appointed constitution, it was not to be endured. If, then, it had been possible without bloodshed to rid Sparta of her imported curses, namely luxury and extravagance, and debts and usury, and those elder evils than these, namely, poverty and wealth, he would have thought himself the most fortunate king in the world to have cured the disease of his country like a wise physician, without pain; but as it was, he said, in support of the necessity that had been laid upon him, he could cite Lycurgus, who, though he was neither king nor magistrate, but a private person attempting to act as king, proceeded with an armed retinue into the market-place, so that Charillus the king took fright and fled for refuge toan altar. That king, however, Cleomenes said, since he was an excellent man and a lover of his country, speedily concurred in the measures of Lycurgus and accepted

Kat rnv petaBorny déEacbat THs ToALTELas, Epyp
Sé papruphoar tov Avxodpyov St wodTelav peTa-Badeiv dvev Bias nat poBov yarerov éotwy, ols auTov épn petpiotata Kexphabat, Tovs émotapévous TH owtnpia THs Aaxedaipovos éxrrod@y qwomoapevov. Ttois dé aAAOLs Edn Tact THY TE ynv atracav eis pécov tiWévar, cal ypew@y TOUS
>] lé > 4 " / ,
OpetAovtas amadAdtrev, Kal Tav Eévwy Kptow
moveiy Kal Soxtpaciav, Srws of KpatiotoL yevopevoe Yrapridtat cwlwot THv TOA Tois Srrdots,
\ , A \ 9 le)
kat tmavcwpcla tiv Aaxovixny Aitor\av Kat
b A , @ b] a A ? 4
ThAvptoy Aelay ovcay Epnuia TOY apUVOYTwY EehopwvTes.
b , a \ 9 _N ? /
XI. "Ex tovtov mpe@tov pev autos eis pécov
Thv ovciav One xal Meyiorovous o Tatpwos
? A \ a wv li' 4 " A avTOU Kal TOY AAwY hirwy ExacTOS, ETELTA Kal
€ A 4 e , ,
ot ANovrrol TwoNtrat mavtes, 7 5é yopa SrevepnOn.
KAnpov bé Kal tay br' adrod yeyovorwv duyddav amrévemev éxdot@, Kal katate atravTas wpo-
, Sal 4 ? e / /

hoynge Tov TmpaypaTav év Haovxia ‘yevouerwn.
avaTAnpwoas S€ TO TONLTEVpLA TOS YapLEaTaTOLS TOV TEPLOLKMY OTALTAS TETPAKLTXLALOUS ETrOiNncE, kal diddaEas avtovs avtl Sdpatos ypjoOat capion
> »? / A N > 4 La) 9 9 4,
8c’ audorépwrv cai tHv domida popeiy Sv oxavys, un Ova toptaxos, érl thy Tadeiavy TOV véwV érpamn Kal THY AeyomEVNY aywynV, hs TA TKEiTTA
e a A Tapov 6 Xdaipos avtT@ cuyxabiatn, taxd Tov TpoonkovTa ToV Te Yyuyvaciwy Kal TOY avC-
, > f \
aitiwy Kéopov avadapBSavovtwy, Kal cuvoTedXo-72

the change of constitution; still, as a matter of fact Lycurgus by his own acts bore witness to the difficulty of changing a constitution without violence and fear. To these, Cleomenes said, he had himself resorted with the greatest moderation, for he had but put out of the way the men who were opposed to the salvation of Sparta. For all the rest, he said, the whole land should be common property, debtors should be set free from their debts, and foreigners should be examined and rated, in order that the strongest of them might be made Spartan citizens and help to preserve the state by theirarms. “ In this way,’ he said, “‘ we shall cease to behold Sparta the booty of Aetolians and Illyrians through lack of men to defend her.”

XI. After this, to begin with, Cleomenes himself placed his property in the common stock, as did Megistonoiis his step-father and every one of his friends besides ; next, all the rest of the citizens did the same, and the land was parcelled out. Cleomenes also assigned a portion of land to each man who had been exiled by him, and promised to bring them all home after matters had become quiet. Then he filled up the body of citizens with the most promising of the free provincials, and thus raised a body of four thousand men-at-arms, whom he taught to use a long pike, held in both hands, instead of a short spear, and to carry their shields by a strap instead of by a fixed handle. Next he devoted himself to the training of the young men and to the “ agoge,’ or ancient discipline, most of the details of which Sphaerus, who was then in Sparta, helped him in arranging. And quickly was the proper system of bodily training and public messes resumed, a few out

73

peveov odbyeov pev t Un avayKns, éxovaiws 5€ TaV TrELOTWY els TH evTedij Kal Aaxevexny éxetynv diarrav. Gpuws 5€ To Tis povapyxias évoma Tapapubovpevos atrédecke pel” éauTov Baciréa tov aderd ov Evxreidar. Kal ToTe povov Lmapridrass

éx pas oixias avvéBn Sv0 oxeiv Bactnréas.
XII. AicBopevos dé TOUS 'Axatous Kat Tov
“A patop, @S eTLTPARWS auT@ TOV T parywaTeov é€yovtwy da Tov vewTeptopov, ovK av Olopevous
a poe ety eo TAS Aaxebdaipovos ovee amomTeiy
peTéwpov év Kivnpare THMKOUTD THY TOALV, OVK aryEvves ode axpnorov NYTaTO THY m podupiav TOU OTPATEVHATOS émdeiEat Tots Tohep.iors. €[- Barov ouv eis THY Meyadoronerixny awpenreias TE peydras 710 powre Kal pOopav TONY arreipyd-caTo THS xeopas. TédXos € Tous Tept Tov Atovucoy Texvitas éx Meoonyns Starropevopevous AaBav, Kal mtd pwevos déatpov é€v Th moneuia, Kal ™ po-Deis amo TeTTAapdKovTa pv@V ayova, play % npépay €Ocato KaOnpevos, ov Seopevos Oéas, arr olov
evTpupar Tois TONE ULOLS Kal Teptovaiay Tiva Tov Kpateiy TON T@ Katadpoveiy ETLOELKVULEVOS.
émret adds ye TOV ‘EdAnuixav Kal Bacirttxov oT pAaTEvLaTaV exetvo Hovoy ov plpous Tapaxo-AovGobyTas elyev, ov Javparorovovs, OUK opYnatpioas, ov yahtpias, GANA maons dxodactas Kat Bewporoxias Kat Tavnyupto wou xabapov 7 ny, T& pev ToAXNa PETOVTOY TOV vévD Kab TOV
mpeo Butepwv bidacKovtan, Tas d€ matdids, o o7roTe oxoraloven, Tals curnbecty eUTpaTreMaus Kat T@ éyery Te Yaptev kal Aakwrixoy mpos adAoOUS 714

pire — eee ee ee ee eee - ee ee ee oe o—ene = Se ee —ee— een

810

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

of necessity, but most with a willing spirit, subjecting themselves to the old Spartan regime with all its simplicity. And yet, desiring to give the name of absolute power a less offensive sound, he associated with himself in royal power his brother Eucleidas. And this was the only time when the Spartans had two kings from the same house.
XII. Learning that Aratus and the Achaeans believed that this revolution had jeopardized his position, and therefore did not think that he would venture forth outside of Sparta, or leave the city while it was still in the suspense of so great an agitation, he thought it a fine and helpful thing to make a display of the ready zeal of his army to his enemies. Accordingly, he invaded the territory of Megalopolis, collected large booty, and devastated the country far and wide. And finally arresting a company of actors who were passing through the country from Messené, he built a theatre in the enemy's territory, instituted a contest for a prize of forty minae, and sat spectator for a whole day; not that he felt the need of a spectacle, but in exultant mockery, as it were, of his enemies, and to show to the world by his contempt for them that he held com- plete control of affairs, with something, as it were, to spare. For at other times, the Spartan alone of Greek or Macedonian armies had no players in attendance, no jugglers, no dancing-girls, no harpists, but was free from every kind of licence, scurrility, and general festivity ; while for the most part the young men practised themselves and the elder men taught them, and for amusement, when their work was over, they had recourse to their wonted pleasantries and the interchange of Spartan StaTiOenévwv. iy bé é exe TO TOLOUTOV Tis TALOLAS eldos wpéXevay, ev TO Avkoupyou Bio yéypatrrac.

XIII. Iavrwy 5' avros eyiryvero biSdoKaros, evTEnh Kat apedt cat popricov oudev ode i vmrép TOUS WoAXOUS éXovTa Tov éauTov Biov domep mapaderypa ca@ppor ws ev péow Bépevos:) Kal
1 pos TAS 'EAAnuicas mpatecs pomny TiWa /Tape-OYEV AUT@. ToOIs pev yap adRows evTuyXavovTes ol avOpwrot Bactredowy OvY ovUTw KATETANTTOVTO TOUS TOUTOUS Kal Tas TOAUTEAELAS, QS €Bderur-TOVTO THY Dmrepowpiay avTav Kal Tov GyKov
TaxGas Kat TPAX ews T poo pepopevov Tots ép-
2 Tuyydvovet pos dé Knreopevn Badivovres, 8 évra TE n Bacrréa Kal Kaoupevor, elra opavres ov rropdtpas Twas ov YAaivas meph avTOV oudé KXEL-vidiov kal popetwov KaTaoKevds, ove bn ayyehov 6xXov Kal Oupwpav 4 dua Ypauparetov xenwari-Covra Kader os Kat MOMS, GNX' aurov év ipariop
TO TUYOVTL ™pos tas SeEtwooess amavTa@vta Kal Stadeyopevov kal oayordlovta ois xpuvovorw thapas Kal grravdpworws, éxnodvTo Kal KaTe-SnparycoryobvTo, kat povoyv ad' "Hpaxréous éxetvov Epacay yeyovevat.
Tov &€ detrrvwy avtod To pév xa Onpepivov Hv év TpiKdive a podpa TVET TAAPEVOV Kal Aako-yixov, et d5€ wpéaBeus 7) févous déxotTo, dv0 pev aGdrat T poomapeBdddovto KAWat, pox pp dé pan
Novy ob UIrnpeTar THY Tpamelav émeh aT puvov, ov

KapuKelars Tioly oude Té“pactv, GAN waTE apBovarépas elvac TAS mapadécers Kat prravO pw-MoTepov Tov olvoy. Kal yap éretipnoé TVA TOV 76

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

witticisms. Of what great advantage this sort ot amusement is, I have told in my Life of Lycurgus.!

XIII. In all these matters Cleomenes was himself a teacher. His own manner of life was simple, plain, and no more pretentious than that of the common man, and it was a pattern of self-restraint for all. This gave him a great advantage in his dealings with the other Greeks. For when men had to do with the other kings, they were not so much awed by their wealth and extravagance as they were filled with loathing for their haughtiness and pomp as they gave offensive and harsh answers to their auditors; but when men came to Cleomenes, who was a real as well as a titled king, and then saw no profusion of purple robes or shawls about him, and no array of couches and litters ; when they saw, too, that he did not make the work of his petitioners grievous and slow by employing a throng of messengers and door-keepers or by requiring written memorials, but came in person, just as he happened to be dressed, to answer the salutations of his visitors, conversing at length with those who needed his services and devoting time cheerfully and kindly to them, they were charmed and completely won over, and declared that he alone was a descendant of Heracles.

His usual supper was held in a room which had only three couches, and was very circumscribed and Spartan ; but if he was entertaining ambassadors or guest-friends, two more couches would be brought in, and the servants would make the table a trifle more brilliant, not with sauces or sweetmeats, but with more generous dishes and a kindlier wine. And indeed he censured one of his friends, when he heard

1 Chapter xii.

77

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘4 > 4 4 , e “~ \ b] “ diriwy axovoas OTe Eévous éeotimy Cwpov avtois
, \ , 4 4 9 > “A
péAava Kai palav, waomep 00s Hv év Tots didu-
, , > bd fa) > , b] XN
Tiots, mapeOnKev’ ov yap edn Seiv ev rovTats ove
\ \ / / > a / mpos tous Févous Atav axptBas RAaxwvilerv.
A ,
atrapleians 5é THS Tpatrélns elaexopileTo TpiTrous Kpatipa xXarKobv éywv olvov peotov Kal diddras apyupas SixorvAous bv0 Kai mornpia TOV apyu-

a 34 / , b ? 4 € S p@v orjiya wavtatTactiy, €& wy éeivey 0 Bovdo-pevos, axovte 5é€ ovdels aoTypioy mpooédpeper.
9 , \ #7 9% ® Ww 9 9 a ? , axpoapa dé ovT’ Hy ovT érelnteito’ erratdaywryer yap autos omirta Tov TOTOY, TA pEV EpwTOV, TA
\ a a
5é Sunyovpevos, ovtre Thy amovdny andyH Tov
ACyor THy TE Tadtay eTiyapl Kal aaoXoLKOY
> / a A \ e \ A / > A EXOVTWY. AS meV yap ot NoLTrOL TAY BactNEwv ETL
4 “ Tovs avOpwrovs Onpas érovodyTo, ypnpwact Kat
a / 3 \ \ ,
Swpeais Seredlovres avtovs Kal SiadpGetpovtes,
? , \ 297 > 7 Sd N \ ¢ ,
aTéyvous Kat adixous évouslev elvat: TO dé optdia
, fe)

kal Noym yYdpw eyorte Kal ToT otxevcodcIar Kal mpocdyecOar Tos évtuyxdvovtas épaiveto
s ? A \ , e ? \
KdAMoTOY avT@ Kai Bactdtkwratov, ws ovdevt
4 P4 \ A a ‘\ \ ww dirouv Ssadépovta picOwrov 7) To Tov pev Bee ‘ XO \ de e \ , LAL 0
Kat AOy@, Tov b€ UTO YpNudTwY aricKerOaL.
A e A

XIV. IIperov pév odv ot Mavtiveis avtov érnyayovTo, Kal vUKTwP Els THY TOALY TApELaTECOVTL \ \ \ > ” / bf ,
Thv ppovpav thy 'Ayatwv ovvexBadovtes éveyetpisav avtous. o S€ kal Tovs vopmous avtois Kal \ ,) \ > ‘ I oA >
Tv TodtTeLay atrodovs avOnpuepoy amndOev eis Teyéav. oriyo 8 botepov éxmeprerOoy &:° *Ap-4 / > \ \ > ~ , xadias naTéBawev émi tas “Ayaixas Pepas,

718

811

that in entertaining guest-friends he had set before them the black soup and barley-bread of the public mess-tables; ‘‘ for,’ said he, “in these matters and before foreigners we must not be too strictly Spartan.” After the table had been removed, a tripod would be brought in on which were a bronze mixer full of wine, two silver bowls holding a pint apiece, and drinking cups of silver, few all told, from which he who wished might drink; but no one had a cup forced upon him. Music there was none, nor was any such addition desired; for Cleomenes entertained the company hinself by his conversation, now asking questions, now telling stories, and his discourse was not unpleasantly serious, but had a sportiveness that charmed and was free from rudeness. For the hunt which all the other kings made for men, ensnaring them with gifts and bribes and corrupting them, Cleomenes considered unskilful and unjust. In his eyes it was the noblest method, and one most fit for a king, to win over his visitors and attach them to himself by an intercourse and conversation which awakened pleasure and confidence. For he felt that a hireling differed from a friend in nothing except that the one was captured by a man’s character and conversation, the other by a man’s money.

XIV. To begin with, then, the Mantineians invited him to help them, and after he had made his way into the city by night, they expelled the Achaean garrison and put themselves in his hands. Cleomenes restored to them their laws and constitution, and on the same day marched away to Tegea. Then, shortly afterwards, he fetched a compass through Arcadia and marched down upon the Achaean city of Pherae. His

fr

Bovropevos 7 udynv Oéc8ar mpos tous 'Axatovs
4 SiaBddrew Tov” Apatov ws adrrodibpaocKovTa Kat Mpolem“evov AUTO THY Ywpav. eoTpaTHyE: mev yap Fs os ’ a ’ , \ a ® TrepBatas tote, tov d€ ‘Apdrov To av tv

, 9 A > “”~ 3 , de 5 .
xpdtos év Tots "Ayatots. é£eAOovtwy dé ravdnpet trav Axyatav cal otpatoTredevoapévwn ev Avpats mept To ‘ExatopBatov, érecOwv o Kreopuévns
éoke péev ov Karas év péow Ths te Avpaiwv Toews, TorAEpiAas ovaNS, Kal TOU oTpaTEvpATOS
a ? a) 95 / a“ \ 4
tav Ayaiav avr(j.icac bat, ToNwnpas 5é 1 poKandovpevos Tos ’Ayatols jvayxace ovpBanreiv, Kat vuenoas KaTa Kpatos Kal Tpefrdpevos THv pa-Nayya ToAXoUs pev ev TH payn StépOecpev abrar, jmodAav 5€ Kal Sovrwy éxupievoev. érrerOwv 5é

Adyyou. kal trav "Ayatdv Tovs Ppovpobytas éferaoas amédwxev Hrelors thy modu.
XV. Odtw 5é cuvrerptupévors Tois "Axatois o pev “Apatos, etwOas map éwavrov del otparn-yety, ameimato THY apxnv Kal wapynTncaTo Ka-AovvT@Y Kal Seopévwy ov KadOs, olov ev Yetmave mpaypatov peilovt, peleis éetépm Tov oiaxa
\ ? 4 e \ ,
Kal mpoéuevos thy éEovciav. o 5€ KaAécopuevns Tp@Tov pev péeTpLa Tols Ayasois eOoxet Tpéo Reoey émiTatrew, eétépovs b€ méumav éexédXevevy avT@
qwapac.dovat THY Hyenoviay, ws TaAAA py SL0LC0-HEevos Tpos avTOUS, GAAA Kal ToOvs alypadwTous 9 \ ? / \ \ / / \ evOus atrodwowy Kal TA yYwpia. Bovropévwy Sé
a ? a 2 \ U4 / \ /
Tav Axaav emi rouvtois déyecOas Tas Stadvoets
\ \ / 4 > , ef
kal tov Kreopévn xarovvtwy eis Aépvay, Srrov 80

desire was either to fight a battle with the Achaeans, or to bring Aratus into disrepute for running away and abandoning the country to him. For although Hyperbatas was general at that time, Aratus had the entire power inthe Achaean league. Moreover, after the Achaeans had marched out with all their forces and pitched their camp at Dymae, near the Hecatom-baeum, Cleomenes came up against them. He did not think it well, however, to pitch his own camp between the city of Dymae, which was hostile, and the army of the Achaeans, and therefore boldly challenged the Achaeans and forced them to engage. He was completely victorious, routed their phalanx, slew many of them in the battle, and took many prisoners also. Then he went up against Langon, drove out the Achaean garrison, and restored the city to the Eleians.

XV. The Achaeans having been thus utterly over- whelmed, Aratus, who was wont to be their general every other year, refused the office and declined to listen to their invitations and prayers ; thus unwisely, when the ship of state was in a heavy storm, handing over the helm to another and abandoning the post of authority. Cleomenes, on the other hand, at the first was thought to impose moderate terms upon the Achaean embassy, but afterwards he sent other en- voys and bade them hand over to him the leadership among the Greeks, assuring them that on other points he would not quarrel with them, but would at once restore to them their captives and their strongholds.! The Achaeans were willing to settle matters on these terms, and invited Cleomenes to come to Lerna,

1 Cf. the Aratus, xxxviii. 5 f.

Thy éxxdrnotav Ewerdrov & exe, éTUXe TOV Krcopevn guvToves odevoavTa ka no awevov Tapa KaLpov tdporrocia aiwatos wribes _dveveyxeiv Kal THY hoviay aTroKon jvat, 510 TOY pev aX padorov
amr émeure tots 'Axatois Tous emipavea Tatovs, Tov d€ avAAOyov UTEpOéuevos aveyapynoey «eis Aaxedaipova.
XVI. Toto SveAupyvaro Ta mpdryyara THS
'EdAd6os, dpdis yé mows éx TOV TapovT@v avana-Bety autny és cal Sstaduyeiv THY Makedovev UBpw kal meovefiav duvapevns. O yap "Aparos, eire amtoctia Kal poBop TOU Kreopevous, cite PO ovéav euTUXobVTL Tap énmiéa Kat vouilon é érn Tpia Kal TpidKovTa TPWTEVOVTOS avtov Servov elvat thy Sokav dua Kal Thy Ovvapty émipuyta véov avbpa xabeheiv, Kal TwaparaPeiv T payLaT@v nv&npeveov Ur autov Kat KEKpAaTnLEVoV Xpovev TOTOUTOY apxXnVv, WpaTov pev émretparo TOUS
"Axasovs TrapaBidlecGat Kal Siaxwdverw ws Sé ov Tm poo eixov QUT@ TOU Kreopevous exTreT ANY-pévor TO Opacos, ara Kal Sixaiay érrotobvTo THY akimot TOV Aaxesatpovioy, els TO maT pLov
oXhpwa Koo LoUvTw@DV THY TleAomovyncor, TpéMeTaL Tm pos Epryov ovdevt pev TOV "EAAnVOV T™poonKoy, aicxXvoTov & éxeivp xat tov tet aypevery or avtov kal TetroNTevpévov avatiwratoy, 'Avtiyovoy emt thy 'EAAdéba Karey cat Maxedovor eumimAdvar TH Ilehorrovynaor, ods autos ék TleAorrovy cov petpaxcov av éfnhacev éeveparoas TOV 'AxpoxoptvOov, Kal tao | paY Tois Baothevow Urontos Kat Suddopos yevomevos, TovTove 82 where they were about to hold their assembly.

But it fell out that Cleomenes, who had made a strenuous march and then too soon had drunk water, brought up a great quantity of blood and lost his speech. For this reason he sent back to the Achaeans the most prominent men among their captives, but postponed the conference and went back home to Sparta.

XVI. This ruined the cause of Greece, at a time when she was still able in some way or other to recover from her grievous plight and escape Macedo- nian greed and insolence. For Aratus (whether it was through distrust and fear of Cleomenes, or because he envied the king his unlooked for success, and thought it a terrible thing after three and thirty years of leadership to have his own fame and power stripped from him by an upstart of a young man, and the authority taken over in a cause which he himself had built up and controlled for so long a time), in the first place tried to force the Achaeans aside and hinder their purpose ; but when they paid no heed to him in their consternation at the daring spirit of Cleomenes, but actually saw justice in the demands of the Lacedaemonians, who were seeking to restore the Peloponnesus to its ancient status, Aratus took a step which would have been unmeet for any Greek to take, but was most shameful for him and most unworthy of his career as soldier and statesman. For he invited Antigonus into Greece and filled the Peloponnesus with Macedonians, whom he himself had driven out of Peloponnesus when, as a young man, he delivered Acrocorinthus from their power ! —he who had incurred the suspicion and hostility of all the reigning kings, and of this very Antigonus had

1 §ee the Aratus, xvi. ff. 83

Ga 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dé avurov “ApvTiyovoy elonKkas Kana pupia &° ov

4 dm oNEdou Trev DTOMNMATwD. Kaitou TOAAG Tabety Kal mapaBaréabat gyoly avros uTrép 'AOnvaiwr, S7res a) TONS amranrraryein ppoupas calMaxedover: elra TOUTOUS émrl THY marpisa, cal THY éoTiav THY éavTov pe? StrAwv elonyayev ay pt Tis yuvaicavi- TLS0s' Tov dé ap ‘Hpaxdéous yeyovora Kal Baot- 812 AevovTa SraptTiatov, Kal THv TAT pLov ToALTeLay, BoTeEp appwoviav exAehuperny, davaxpovopevovaddis ert TOV cwppova Kat Awptov € €XELVOY TOU Avxoup- you vouov Kal Biov, ovx n&iov LiKvaviey 7 Hryewova

5 Kal Tpetacéov ypaperOau, pevyov be TH pavay
Kal Tov TpiBova, kal To Sewvotatov wy KaTnyopet KAcomévous, avaipecty wrovTOU Kal Tevias érapopbwaw, S:adnpate xal Toppupa kat Make-Sovixois kal caTpariKois TpooTdypacty breéppirpe pera THS "Ayalas avrov, iva pn Krcopeéver ToLety
Soh TO TpOTTATTOMEVOY, ‘Avtuyovea Ovov Kat
Tatavas adwv autos eatepaveapwevos ets AvO pwtrov

U7r0 $0ns KATAONTOMEVOY.

6 6 6’AAAd tTaitTa pev atx “Aparou Bovdopevor KaTmyopeiv ypadopev (ép Trodnois yap 0 avnp ovtos ‘EAAnviKOS yéyove Kal péyas), oixTetpovres
b¢ TIS avOpomivns pucews Thy acbéveray, et nde év nbecww ovTWS aktoroyors Kal Stapopors pos apeTny sig gd Suvatat TO KaXOv dvepéanrov.
XVII. EN Oovtev 6é Ayarav ets “A pyos avbus éml Tov avAXNOYoV Kal TOD Krcopévous éx Teryéas cataBeBnxoros éArris ny TONAH Tov avOpwrav éveaIat THV OudAvowr. 0 68 "A patos, 76n Sto p0-Noynwéevav avT@ mpos tov ‘“Avtiyovoy Tov pe-84

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

said countless evil things in the commentaries which he left behind him. And still, though he had incurred many hardships and dangers in behalf of Athens, as he says himself, in order that the city might be set free from its garrison of Macedonians, he afterwards brought these Macedonians, under arms, into his own country and into his own home; aye, even into the apartments of his women ;! but he would not consent that the man who was a descen- dant of Heracles and king of Sparta, and was seeking to bring its ancient polity, now like a decadent melody, back again to that restrained and Dorian law and life which Lycurgus had instituted, should be entitled leader of Sicyon and Tritaea. Instead of this, to avoid the Spartan barley-bread and short-cloak, and the most dreadful of the evils for which he denounced Cleomenes, namely, abolition of wealth and restora- tion of poverty, he cast himself and all Achaea down before a diadem, a purple robe, Macedonians, and oriental behests. And that he might not be thought to obey Cleomenes, he offered sacrifices to Antigonus and sang paeans himself, with a garland on his head, in praise of a man who was far gone with consumption.

1 write this, however, not with any desire to denounce Aratus, for in many ways he was a true Greek and a great one, but out of pity for the weakness of human nature, which, even in characters so notably disposed towards excellence, cannot produce a nobility that is free from blame.
XVII. When the Achaeans came to Argos again for the conference, and Cleomenes had come down from Tegea, there was strong hope that the two men would come to an agreement. But Aratus, since the most important questions between him and Antigonus
1 See the Aratus, xlix. 1. 8«

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

/ 4 ‘ f A 4
yiotwv, poBovpevos tov Knreouevn pn travTa
4 v4 \ A A A
Ssampakentar KxaboutrAnocas To TAROOs H Kal Bvacdpevos, 7Eiov AaBovtTa TpLaKocious opnpous fovoy éiolévat Mpos avTOUS, 7 KATA yupYdoLoy
w” \ 4 ‘4 \ fol
éEwOev tro KudndapaBtov apoceNOovta peta TIS 2 duvapuews SiaréyecOar. tavr’ axovoas o K2eo-/ v7 , 4 a twa a) pévns Adina macxew Epacke Selv yap evOds
auT@® TOTE MpoeTEty, OV VUY, HKOVTOS eT TAS Ovpas tas éxelvwv, amioteiv Kal amedavverv.
ypawas 5€ wept TovTwy émicToAnY mpos TOUS
’ ? = ‘ a : , ,
Axyatovs, is jv TO WAeloTOV ’Apdtouv KaTnyopia, morrad S€ xal tod "Apdtov Aotbopnaavtos avTov \ \ A > lA \ lA \ ,
mpos TO TWANOOS, avelevEe Sia TaxXéwv Kai KnpvKa TOAELOV TpoepodvTa Tos ’Axatois Emeurpev, ovK
eis “Apryos, adr’ eis Alytov, as dnow “Aparos, Strws POdon THY TWapacKeuny avTov.
A a \
3 ‘Kyeyovee 6¢ xivnua tav ’Ayaiov, nal mpos
a 4
amocTacw @ppnoav ai qodes, Tov pev Shpov vounv Te Ywpas Kal ypeav aTroKoTras éhiricavTwV, ce) A ww
tov dé mpwtev trodAXaxov Bapyvopévwr Tov Apa-tov, éviwv é Kal Sv dpyns éxovTwv ws érayovTa
a , ‘4 \ , b
Th IleXorrovynow Maxedovas. 610 TovTows érrap-Oels o Knreopévns eis "Ayalav évéBare Kal a \ / b , b 4
mpwrov pev elre TlerArnvnv éEativyns émiteocov, kat tovs dpovpovyvtas é€éBare Tav ‘Ayatov’ }
peta 5€ Tavdta Devedy mpoonyayeto nal Ilevte-4 Neo. erred d€ hoByOevtes ot "Ayatol mpodociay
Tia wpattopevny év KopivO@ nat uxvare tovs
1 ray’ Axatav with Blass: pera ray "Axara.
86

had already been settled, and because he was afraid that Cleomenes would carry all his points by either winning over or constraining the multitude, demanded that Cleomenes, after receiving three hundred hostages, should come into the city alone for his conference with them, or else should come with his army as far as the gymnasium outside the city called Cyllarabium, and treat with them there. When Cleomenes heard this, he declared that he had been wronged ; for he ought to have been told of this when the conference was first proposed, and not be distrusted and driven away now, when he had come to their very doors. Then, after writing a letter to the Achaeans on the matter, most of which was denunciation of Aratus, and after Aratus on his part had abused him at great length to the multitude, Cleomenes broke camp with all speed and sent a herald to declare war upon the Achaeans, not to Argos, but to Aegium, in order, as Aratus says, that he might anticipate their preparations for defence.!

Now, there had been agitation among the Achaeans, and their cities were eager for revolt, the common people expecting division of land and abolition of debts, and the leading men in many cases being dissatisfied with Aratus, and some of them also enraged at him for bringing Macedonians into Peloponnesus. Therefore Cleomenes, encouraged by these conditions, invaded Achaea. First, he took Pellené by a sudden assault, and drove out the Achaean garrison ; next, he brought over to his cause Pheneus and Penteleium. Presently the Achaeans, who were afraid that some treachery was afoot in Corinth and

1 Cf. the Aratus, xxxix.

immets nai rous Eévous améaotetnkav &€& "Apyous éxet mapapuAdkovtas, avtol 5¢ ra Névera xata-Badvres eis "Apyos iryov, éArrioas, Sirep hy, o Krcoueévns, GyXov tmaynyupixod Kal Oeatav thy ToAtv yé"oucayv ampoadoxntas émeOav padrov tapakew, vuxtos tye mpos Ta TEelyn TO oTpa-Tévpa, Kal Tov mept thy 'Aorida ToTov KaTa-AaBwv vrép tov Oedtpov yarerov ovTa Kal Suvampocodov ottws tovs avOpwrous é&érdnkev @oTe pndéva TparrécOat mpos addKnv, adddga Kal dhpovpay NaBeiv, cai Sovvat TOY TOALTA@Y O-NpoOUS elxoot, Kal yevécOar cuppdyovs Aaxedaipoviwy, EXoVTOS ExEelvou THY HYyEpLoViaV.

XVIII. Ov puxpov odv todto cat mpos Sokav avT@ cal Sivamw imnpyev. ote yap of wddat Baotreis Aaxedatpoviwy roAAa mpaypatevodpevot mpocayayécbat To “Apyos BeBaiws nduvn-Onoav, & te Seuvotatos TaY otpatnyav Ilvppos eiceXOav kai Bracdpevos ov xatéoye THY TOMY, aX anéBave kal Todv ovvdiehOdpn pépos avT@ THs Suvapews. SOev eOavpaloy tHv o€uTnta Kal
Stavoray Tod KXeopévous: at ot mporepoy avtod Tov Yorwva nat Tov AvKodpyov atoutmnoacbat packovres év TH THY xXpEe@v adécer Kal TH TOV KTNLATOV EELTMOEL KATAYENDVTES, TOTE TAVTENDS
éretGovto TodTo aitiov yeyovévat THS TEpt TOUS Lraptidtas petaBorhs. oltTw yap émpattov Td
mpiv TaTrewa Kai Bonbeiv aitois aduvdtas elyov, @ore TévTe pupiddas avdpatodwy éuBadrovras eis thv Aaxwvixny AitwArovs atrayayeiv, Ste hacly eimely tia Tov mpecBuTépwv XraptiaTav ws
a@Vnoav ot troréutor THY AaxwuKny arroxoudi-88

813

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Sicyon, sent their horsemen and their mercenaries out of Argos to keep watch over those cities, while they themselves went down to Argos and began celebrating the Nemean games. So Cleomenes, expecting, as was the case, that while the throng was holding festival and the city was full of spectators, his unexpected approach would be more apt to cause confusion, led his army by night up to the walls, occupied the region about the Aspis overlooking the theatre, a region which was rugged and hard to come at, and so terrified the inhabitants that not a man of them thought of defence, but they accepted a garrison and gave twenty citizens as hostages, agreeing to become allies of the Lacedaemonians, and to give Cleomenes the chief command.

XVIII. This greatly increased the reputation and power of Cleomenes. For the ancient kings of Sparta, in spite of numerous efforts, were not able to secure the abiding allegiance of Argos; and the most formidable of generals, Pyrrhus, although he fought his way into the city, could not hold it, but was slain there, and a great part of his army perished with him.! Therefore men admired the swiftness and intelligence of Cleomenes ; and those who before this had mocked at him for feebly imitating, as they said, Solon and Lycurgus in the abolition of debts and the equaliza- tion of property, were now altogether convinced that this imitation was the cause of the change in the Spartans. For these were formerly in so low a state and so unable to help themselves, that Aetolians invaded Laconia and took away fifty thousand slaves. It was at this time, we are told, that one of the elder Spartans remarked that the enemy had helped Sparta

1 See the Pyrrhus, xxxii. ff.

4 cavTes. _OMbyou be povou bre GovTos ayypdpevor povov Tov maTpiov éO av ral KATATTAVTES eds iyvos éxeivns Ths dyayhs, Oorep mapovrt eat TUMTPOALTEVOMEV YD TO Avoupye ToD émiderEcy avbpeias émTotouvTo Kai meBapyias, THY THS “EAXAd6os avahapBavovres nryepoviay ™ Aaxe-daipove Kal dvaxt@pevos Thy TleXotrovynaoy.
XIX. ‘Earwxoros 5¢”Apyous cal KATOTLW evOus
m poo Gewevey TO Krcopuever Krewvev Kal Pr.- ovvTos, eTUYXaveE pev o “Apatos év Kopivdy ToLov-HEVOS TWA TOV Aeyouevey Aakwvi lew éFéracw:
aryyedas be Tept TOUTWY TpooTer ovens Siatapay-Geis Kal THY TON arroxMvouaay aia Bopevos T POS
TOV Krcopevn Kal TOV "Ayaav amarrayivar
Bovropevny, éxdnrer pev els TO Bovdeutnprov TOUS TodiTas, érabe 6é doc Bov axpe THS TUANS.
éxel 5€ tod tmmov TpoaaxGevtos avaBas épuyer
2 els Lixcvova. TOV dé KopwGier Gpiddopevov els “Apyos mpos TOV Kr«opevn pnatv) "Apatos Tous imous TavTas payivat, TOV 5é KrXcopévn pémperar TOUS Kopiw@iovs 7 cvrddaBovras
avrov, adn’ édgavras Srapuryeiv: ov pv adrXria Kal T pos avtov éAeiy Meytorovouy Tapa Tov Kyreopévous Seopevou maparafeiv TOV "Ax pokopwy-Oov 0 yap ppoupay ’"Ayaov) Kal TONG, xPIi-para Sovtos: amroxpivac Oat be QUTOV ws OUK exer Ta Tparypara, parrov dé Ud TOY Tpayearov avTos éyeTal’ TadTa MeV 0 “Aparos yeypa ev.
3 ‘Oée Krcopevns €x TOU “Apyous éeTmeN Cov Kal Tpocaryaryopevos Tportnvious, "Emdaupious, “EppLovéas, Hyecev ELS KopevOov- Kat THY pev axkpav meptexapaxwoe, Tov ‘'Ayatay ov Bovropévov
go

by lightening her burden. But now only a little time had elapsed, and they had as yet barely resumed their native customs and re-entered the track of their famous discipline, when, as if before the very eyes of Lycurgus and with his co-operation, they gave abun- dant proof of valour and obedience to authority, by recovering the leadership of Hellas for Sparta and making all Peloponnesus their own again.

XIX. Thus Argos was taken by Cleomenes, and immediately afterwards Cleonae and Phlius came over to him. When this happened, Aratus was at Corinth, holding a judicial examination of those who were reputed to favour the Spartan cause. The unexpected tidings threw him into consternation, and perceiving that the city was leaning towards Cleomenes and wished to be rid of the Achaeans, he summoned the citizens into the council-hall, and then slipped away unnoticed to the city gate. There his horse was brought to him, and mounting it he fled to Sicyon. The Corinthians were so eager to get to Cleomenes at Argos that, as Aratus says, all their horses were ruined. Aratus says also that Cleomenes upbraided the Corinthians for not seizing him, but letting him escape; however, Megistonoiis came to him, he says, bringing from Cleomenes a request for the surrender of Acrocorinthus (which was held by an Achaean garrison) and an offer of a large sum of money for it; to which he replied that he did not control affairs, but rather affairs controlled him. This is what Aratus writes.

But Cleomenes, marching up from Argos and taking over Troezen, Epidaurus, and Hermioné, came to Corinth. Its citadel he blockaded, since the Achaeans would not abandon it, and after summon-
QI

exdurreiv, tov oé€ 'Apdrou Tovs pidous kal Tous em UTPOTrOUS peTaTreLapevos éxéNevoe THY OiKiay Kal Ta Xpnuara ha Sovras purdrrewy Kal dvorxety.
4 Tpetupadrov dé mdadsy TOV Mecanvioy améaTetne pos autov, aki uTo TOV "Axacdy Kat TOV Aaxedatpoviov opod pudarreaOa TOV "AK pokopwv8or, idia 5é To 'Apat@ Sudip eTrary'YENKOMEVOS
THY obvragw AS éAapBave Tapa II todepatov TOU Bactréws. émel dé o "Aparos ovx UMHKOUCED, GNAA TOV TE vioY _erreppe TOs TOV 'Aptiyovov peTa TOV adwv ounpav Kab vngicacBat TOUS
"Ayatovs émreoev 'Avtuyovm mapadioovat TOV
"AxpoxoptvOor, oUTwWS 0 Krcopévas THY Te Yexu-wviav éuBarov érropOnce, Kal Ta XpnwaTa TOU
"A patov, tav Kopwiiov alte wndicapévon, Swpeav EXaBe.
XX. Tod &é "Apreyovou peta TOMAS Suvdpews
THY Tepdvevav vmepBdadXovTos ouK @eto Seiv Tov |
"ToO pov, ddAXa Ta "Overa Napaxwoas wa TeLxioas !
guratreay, Kat TOTFOMAX GY amor piBecBae TOUS |
M axedovas MGXXov 7 Y cupTréKeo Gat T pos parayya cunoKnweny. Kal TOVTOLS Xpepevos Tots Aoyir-2 mois els drropiay cabiarn TOV "Avriyovov. OuUTE yap otTov elev éx TapacKevis ie avon, ouTE Biacacbat TV mapocor, xaOnpevou tov Kyeo-

pevous, hy pasdior: emixerpnaas be mapadverGar
dua Tov Aexatou VUKTOS ebémece Kal TwWas amréBare TOV OTPATLWTOY, dare TavTaTract Gappio at TOV Krcopévy Kal Tous Tepl auTov ern ppevous 7H 814
vinn tpatréa Oar 7 pos. TO deirvop, adupeiv dé Tov ‘Avtiyovov ELS OUK evTropous KaTaKheLopevov vmod
3 THs avayKnns Roytopovs. éBovreveTo yap én

Q2

_—

ing the friends and stewards of Aratus, ordered them to take the house and property of Aratus into their charge and management. Then he sent Tritymallus the Messenian once more to Aratus, proposing that Acrocorinthus should be garrisoned by Achaeans and Lacedaemonians together, and promising Aratus personally double the stipend which he was receiving from King Ptolemy.! Aratus, however, would not listen to the proposition, but sent his son to Antigonus along with the other hostages, and persuaded the Achaeans to vote the surrender of Acrocorinthus to Antigonus. Therefore Cleomenes invaded the territory of Sicyon and ravaged it, and accepted the property of Aratus when the Corinthians voted it to him as a gift.

XX. When Antigonus with a large force was crossing the mountain-range of Geraneia, Cleomenes thought it more advisable to fortify thoroughly, not the Isthmus, but the Oneian range of hills, and to wear out the Macedonians by a war of posts and positions, rather than to engage in formal] battle with their disciplined phalanx. He carried out this plan, and thereby threw Antigonus into straits. For he had not a sufficient store of provisions, and it was no easy matter to force his passage while Cleomenes sat entrenched. Moreover, when he attempted to slip past his enemy in the night by way of Lechaeum, he was driven out and lost some of his soldiers, There- fore Cleomenes was altogether encouraged, and his men, elated by their victory, betook themselves to supper; but Antigonus was dejected, since he was shut up by necessity to difficult plans. For he was

1 Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, king of Egypt 247-222 B.c. See the Aratus, xli. 3.

TY axpay avalevyvivas TO ‘Hpaiov KaxeiBey eis
Lixvdva Wrolow Tepadoas THY Siva 8 Kal “povou ToANOU Kat (mapacKevis HY ov THS TUXOU-ons. 6n dé 7 pos éomépay Hov é& “ Apyous Kara Oddarrav dvdpes "Apdrov piror, KadovyTes aUTOY aS adiorapévev TOY "Apyetov tov Kvreopévous.
o 6é TpatTTov iy THY amoaTacw “Aptororedns: Kal TO TAGs ov Xarerras érreicev, aryavaxTooy ort Xpedy GToKOTAS OUK emoing ev auTots o Ke0-pevns éXrrigact. AaBov ovv o “Apatos Tap ‘Avteyovou oTpaTL@ras XiALous wal WevTAaKoaious
Tapémevaev els ’Ezridaupov. 0 5é ‘Aptatotedns €xelvov ov TE pLeMEvED, aAXa Tous ToMTas TaparaBov T poce“axero Tois ppoupodat THY axpo-ToAlW Kal tTraphny var Tipofevos META TOY
"Ayatav éx Sexvavos BonOav.
XXI. Tadra rept devtépav PvAraKHY THS VUKTOS daKxovaas 0 Krcopéevns peTeTeuyaro Meytorovour, Kal 7 pos dpyiy exéhevoev evOus eis “Apyos BonGeiv
0 yap vrép TOV "Apysiov padora KATATILOTO-TAPeEVOS T pos avrov éxelvos Ty, Kal Svexa Avo ev éxBarely Tous UmromTous. amoNvaas ovv TOV Meytorovouy peta dio xtAtoov OTpaTioTay QvTOS Mpoceive TH “Avtiyorg, Kat Tovs _Kopw8 ious mapeO appuvev @S ovdevos peyarou mept To “Apyos, adda Tapaxis TLVOS amr ’ avO pwtrov OAL YOU yeyern-pevns. émret 5€ 0 Meytorovous TE TApELa TET OV els TO “A pyos avnpebn pax opevos Kat poryts avtetyov ot ppovpol Kal SterépmovTo TUXVOUS 7 pos TOV Krcopevn, poRnbels py) TOD “Apyous Ol TroNé-plot KpaTnoayvtTes Kal Tas Tapodous aTrOKAELTAaYTES 94

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

planning to march off to the promontory of the Heraeum, and from there to put his army across to Sicyon in transports—an undertaking requiring much time and extraordinary preparations. But when it was already towards evening, there came to him from Argos by sea some friends of Aratus, who summoned him to the city, on the ground that the Argives were ready to revolt from Cleomenes. The author of the revolt was Aristotle; and the multitude were easy to persuade, being incensed because

Cleomenes had not brought about the abolition of debts which they expected. Accordingly, Aratus took fifteen hundred soldiers from Antigonus and sailed to Epidaurus. Aristotle, however, did not await his coming, but at the head of the citizens made an attack upon the garrison of the citadel ; and Timoxenus came to his aid from Sicyon with the Achaean army.

XXI. It was about midnight when Cleomenes heard of these things, and summoning Megistonoiis, he angrily ordered him to go at once to Argos with assistance; for it was Megistonoiis who had given him most assurances of the fidelity of the Argives, and had thereby prevented him from expelling the suspected citizens. After sending off Megistonaiis, then, with two thousand soldiers, he himself kept watch upon Antigonus and tried to encourage the Corinthians, telling them that there was no great trouble at Argos, but only a slight disturbance made by a few men. However, when Megistonoiis, who had made his way into Argos, was slain in battle, and the garrison held out with difficulty and kept sending frequent messengers to Cleomenes, he was afraid that if the enemy made themselves masters of rm

,

avtol TropOacww adeas thy Aaxwvixny Kai TodLop-
K@ot THY Lraptyy Epnpov ovaay, atiryev €x Kopiv-
Jov To orpatevpa. Kal tavTns péev EvOus éeorépnto
THS Worews elaeAOovtos "Avtiyovou xal ppovpav Katactncavros: émtBarwv 5é TO Apyet KaTa TO Telos émre xelpnoe per elaréoOar kal ouvert peer éx Ths Topeias THY Svvapmuy, sisi a dé Tas VITO nv “Aorida vraridas avé8n nat ovvémke Trois évdov rt mpos Tovs 'Axatovs avtTéxovat, Kal Tav évTos évia KNipaxas TpocGels KaTéXaBe, Kal Tovs TTEVOTOUS Epynpovs TroAEuLwY erroinae, TOIS BéAECt ypynoacbat mpoatdagtas tous Kpfras. ws 66 Kateide Tov Avriyovoy aio THY akpwy Eis TO TredtoY xkataBaivovra peTa THS Padrayyos, TOUS Sé imareis non pudnv éXavvovtas eis THY TOALY, aTéyvo Kpatnoev Kal cvvayayov amavtas mpos avTov adaparas xatéBn Kal wapda TO TELyos amrndAAaT-TETO, peyiaT@y pev ev édX\ayYioT@ xpovep mpay-patoy emiKpaTnoas, Kal META pLxpov OANS oMov TL pad mepiodm Iledorrovyncov xuptos yevéoOar

Sejoas, Taxyv 8 avis éexrrec@y aravtwy. ot péev yap ev0ds amrexopnoay avtod TOY aTpaTEevoLéven, of Sé dAiyor Uatepov TO 'Avtiyovm Tas ToAELS TapeowKav.
XXII. Oitw & adt@ wempayore Kata tH otTpateiay Kal arayayovte thy Siva, éotrépas non wept Teyéav adixovto tives ex Aaxedaipovos oux éXaTToOva THS év Yepat dvotvyxiap amayyén-Novtes, TeOvavat THV yuvaixa, ds HY ovdé Tats mavu KaTopOoupévars éxeivos évexaptépes oTpa-Telats, GAAA auveyas KatéBatvey eis Yrdpamy,

Argos and shut up the passes, they might ravage at will the Laconian territory and lay siege to Sparta, which he had left without defenders. He therefore led his army away from Corinth. This city was at once lost to him, for Antigonus entered it and set a garrison there; but Cleomenes, on reaching Argos, made an attempt to scale the walls, and with this in view drew his forces together from their march, and cutting his way through the tunnels running under the Aspis, or citadel, he made the ascent and effected a junction with his garrison inside, which was still holding out against the Achaeans. He actually got possession of some portions of the city by using scaling-ladders, and cleared the streets of the enemy by bringing his Cretan archers into action. But when he saw Antigonus with his phalanx descending from the heights into the plain, and his horsemen already streaming into the city, he gave up trying to master it; and gathering all his troops about him he made his way safely down from the citadel and with- drew along past the city wall. He had made the greatest possible conquests in the briefest possible time, and had come within a little of making himself master of all Peloponnesus by a single march through it, but had quickly lost everything again. For some of his allies left him at once, and others after a little while handed their cities over to Antigonus.

XXII. Such was the result of his expedition, and he was leading his ,army home, when, as it was already evening and he was near Tegea, messengers from Sparta came with tidings of a fresh and even greater calamity, the death of his wife. It was because of her that even in his most successful campaigns he could not endure to the end, but would épayv THs ‘Ayidridos Kat mept wNelo Tou Towov-HEVOS éxelyny. érdynyn ev ody Kal HAYNCEY, ws eixos Tv véov dvdpa Kaddiorns Kal owpove-oTATNS adnpnpevov yuvatkos: ov pay KaTHS vey ovoe TponkaTo TH wader TO ppovnpa Kal TO péyeOos Tis puyiis, 4 GvXAa Kal doviy cai oX Twa.

Kal popdiy év @ TMpoTepov | elev 70eu Sagurar-
TOV TA TE MpooTayyaTa Tots nryewooty édidou Kal Tepl THiS. aapaneias TOV Teyeat av éhpovtiter.
Gua 5é€ nuépa xatéBawvev els Aaxedaipova, Kat peTa THS pnTpos olKot Kal TOY Tmaidwv drrady7-cas To wévOos evOds Fv év Trois wept TaV GrAwY Aoylo Lots.
"Erret 5é Il roAepatos 0 THS Alytmrou Bactnrevs
emaryyeXRopevos avuT@ Bond eva nfiov | raBetv
Gunpa TOUS maisas Kal THY pntépa, Xpovov pey ouxvov NO YUVETO ppacas Th nT pl, Kat TOAAAKLS
elo eh Oo Kal 7 pos auTe yevopevos TO OY
KATETLOT ITED, @oTE KaKkelyny Umrovoeip Kal tra ih
TOY pidov avrob StarruvOdver Oar By Te KaToKvEl Bovdopevos evtuxeiy aur ih. TédXos O€ TOD Kreopévous ATOTOAMNT AVTOS elmeiv, eeyédace Te peya Kal, “Tovdro Hv, elev, ‘5 TOAAGKLS opunaas Aeyety amedethiacas; ov Garrov npas vO éuevos els m hotov amroareneis, dirov MOTE TH 2ndpry voulfers TO capa TobTo Xpyoymwwrarov écecOat, mptv wre YIpwos avrob Kan pevov ScarvOfvar; ’ ” Ilavtwy ody éroipoy yevopevor adixovto pev eis Tatvapov meth kal mpouTeprpey n Sivapss avrous éy Tous Sirdous* Hédovea dé Tis VES értBalvery 7) v) Kparnoixdea TOV Krcouevn pLovoy ets Tov vewy Tov Tlocedavos amnyarye, Kal Tept-98

815

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

continually be coming home to Sparta, out of love for Agiatis and in supreme devotion to her. Of course, then, he was smitten with grief, as was natural for a young man who had lost a most beautiful and most sensible wife, but he did not allow his suffering to shame or betray the loftiness of his thought or the greatness of his spirit. He maintained his usual speech, dress, and bearing, gave the customary orders to his captains, and took thought for the safety of Tegea. Next morning he returned to Sparta, and after duly mourning his loss with his mother and children at home, he at once engaged in the measures which he planned for the public good.

Now, Ptolemy the king of Egypt promised him aid and assistance, but demanded his mother and his children as hostages. For a long time, therefore, he was ashamed to tell his mother, and though he often went to her and was at the very point of letting her know, he held his peace, so that she on her part became suspicious and enquired of his friends whether there was not something which he wished to impart to her but hesitated to do so. Finally, when Cleomenes plucked up courage to speak of the matter, his mother burst into a hearty laugh and said: “ Was this the thing which thou wast often of a mind to tell me but lost thy courage? Make haste, put me on board a vessel, and send this frail body wheresoever thou thinkest it will be of most use to Sparta, before old age destroys it sitting idly here.”

Accordingly, when all things were ready, they came to Taenarus by land, while the army escorted them under arms. And as Cratesicleia was about to embark, she drew Cleomenes aside by himself into the temple of Poseidon, and after embracing and kissing

“Of

f

PLUTARCR’S LIVES

Banrotca Kal KaTacTracapeéevy dtadyoovra Kal oup-
6 TeTaparyuevon, “Ae,” ettrev, ““@ Bacired Aaxe-Satpovior, 6 Gres, étrav é&w yevaruela, pndels dn Saxpvovtas 7pbas pnde avd£ tov TL THS Sardprns movobvtas. TobTo yap ép piv povov: ai TuxXaL bé, bras dv 6 daipwy 656, tapes.” taidTa & emodoa eal KaTaoThoaca TO Tpoownov, énl THY vaiv éxwper TO matoiov € éxovca, kal did Taxous éxéNevoev amraipew TOV xuBepynrny. émrel 5é eis Alyurrov adixero Kal Tov Irodenaiov émvdeto Noyous wap’ Avtuyovou Kal mpecBeias Seyopevoy, mept O€ Tov Knr«opevous jeoucer bt, av Axaray T pokadoupevay avtov eis Stadvoers, poBotro be éxelyny avev TItoXepaiou xataBécbar Tov tode-pov, érréarerdev avT@ Ta TH Lrdpry TpéeTTovTa
Kal cuppépovTa mpatrew cal pn dad piav ypaiy Kal madaptov d ael bediévae IItoAcuaiov. aitn pév ovy Trapa Tas TUXaS TOLAUTN Aéyerar yeyerfjo an.
XXIII. Tod de “Avtuyovou Teyéav pev Trapana-Bovtos, ‘Opxopevor dé xal Mavtiverav S.apma-TaAvTOs, éls auThy THY Aakwvenny TUvETTAAMEVOS
o Krcopévns trav péev etrotay Tors TevTE pas
"ATTUKAS xataBanovtas edevBépous érroiet Kal TaNAYTA TEVTAKOTLA owenee, Suxedtous dé T™ poo Kabotrricas Maxedounas dyritayya Tois Trap “Avteyovov AEvKdOTLALY, € €pyov ent vouv Barrera péya Kal mao. ampoadonntov. 1% MeydXn mons hy wev Tore kal Kal? éautny ovdév tt petoy ode aadevertépa THS Aaxebainovos, elye 5€ TH amo tov ‘Axyaav Kal tov ’Avtiyovouv Bonfevav, éy maupais Kabefouévov Kar doxodvros umd TOV

"Ayatav émixexrdAnocbar pddtota tav Meyando-100

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

him in his anguish and deep trouble, said: ‘Come, O king of the Lacedaemonians, when we go forth let no one see us weeping or doing anything unworthy of Sparta. For this lies in our power, and this alone ; but as for the issues of fortune, we shall have what the Deity may grant.’* ‘After saying this, she composed her countenanc# and proceeded to the ship with her little grandson, end bade the captain put to sea with all speed. And WHen_ she was come to Egypt, and learned that Ptolemy was entertaining embassies and proposals from Antigonus, end heard that although the Achaeans invited Clzomenes to make terms with them, he was afraid on {rez atcount to end the war without the consent of Ptolemy, she sent word to him that he must do what was fitting and advantageous for Sparta, and not, because of one |

old woman and a little boy, be ever in fear of a Ptolemy. Such, then, as we are told, was the bearing of Cratesicleia in her misfortunes.

XXIII. After Antigonus had taken Tegea by siege, and had surprised Orchomenus and Mantineia, Cleomenes, now reduced to the narrow confines of Laconia, set free those of the Helots who could pay down five Attic minas (thereby raising a sum of five hundred talents), armed two thousand of them in Macedonian fashion as an offset to the White Shields of Antigonus, and planned an undertaking which was great and entirely unexpected. Megalopolis was at that time of itself fully as large and strong as Sparta, and could have assistance from the Achaeans and from Antigonus; for Antigonus was encamped near by, and it was thought that the Megalopolitans were chiefly responsible for his being called in by the

101

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 moMTaY orovdacdrTw. TAUTHY Saprdcat dia-vonbeis 6 Krcopévns (ov yap. oti o paddov Gouxe TO Taxy kal ar pogdoxnrov éxeivns TAS mpafews), 7 LEp@v méevre. gitta Aa Beiv Kedevoas éEnye thy Svvapy emt may Leraciav ws THY
"A pyohueny Kaxoupyifegsy’ éxeiOev 5é xataBas
érl Hv MeyanromoNurixny Kal Sevrrvorroinad - HEvos jwept TO, “Pai pecov evs emopeveTo THY 5:
4 ‘Edxobytos én: any TmOMy" aToTX@v 5’ ov modw Tavréa .peV “.ggovra S00 taypata Tov Aaxedac-povio, amaTetnre, cataraBed bar Kedevoas peco-Tupyow, O° TaY TEevyav épnporatoy elvat Tots MeytAprontrats érruvOdvero, TH 5€ addy Suvdpee
.gXehatas emncorovder. TOU bé Tlavtéws ou povov
. eelvoy TOV ToTroOD, adra Kai TONY HEpos TOU

*, “Ltelyous advhaxrov eUpovtos, kal Ta pev Kabat- “ podvros evd us, TA bé Siacxdmrovtos, Tav 5é dpov-

pov ols évéTuxe TAVTas aTroKTEivavTos, épace 816
mpoo pi€as oO Kreopevns, Kat mplv aicbécOat Tous MeryanorroAltas évdov 7 my peTa THS Suva pews.
XXIV. Pavepod dé pons TOU KaKOD ryevopievou

TOUS Kara THY OAL, of pev evOus eferrumrov 6 doa TUYXavot TOV XPNMAT OY AapBavovtes, ot Oe guvertpEpovTo peta TAY StrAwY, Kal Tois ToNeploss eva rduevot Kal mpoaBdrrovtes € exelvous MeV
ovK loxuoay éxxpovaat, Tois Se pevyouar TOY TONLTOV aoparss amenOeiv trapéoyov, Gore BY) relova TOY Xerieov eycatarnpOjvar oM"aTa, Tous d€ aAXousS aravrTas opod pera Téxvov Kar YyUVaLK@V pbacar dsadvuyovras els Meconyny.
2 éaw0n 6 Kal Tov poo Bonbovvray Kat paxo-pévov TO TWAHGOS: Griyou 5¢ TavTaracw HArAwWcar, 102

-AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Achaeans. This city Cleomenes planned to snatch away (for nothing else could better describe the speed and unexpectedness of his famous achievement), and ordering his men to take five days’ rations, he led them forth to Sellasia, as though he would ravage the territory of Argos. But from there he descended into the territory of Megalopolis, and after giving his men their supper at the Rhoeteium, he marched at once by way of Helicus against the city itself. When he was not far away he dispatched Panteus with two divisions of Lacedaemonians, ordering him to seize a portion of the wall between two towers which he had learned was the most unprotected part of the walls of Megalopolis, while he himself with the rest of his army followed slowly after. Panteus found not only that particular spot, but also a great part of the wall, undefended, and at once tore down some portions of it, undermining others, and slaying all the defenders whom he encountered. Cleomenes promptly joined him, and before the Megalopolitans were aware of it, he was inside the city with his army.

XXIV. At last the disaster became clear to the citizens, and some of them at once fled the city, taking with them what property they could lay hands on, while others banded together under arms, resist- ing and assaulting the enemy. These they were not strong enough to eject from the city, but they af- forded a safe escape to the citizens who wished to flee, so that not more than a thousand persons were taken in the place ; all the rest, together with their wives and children, succeeded in escaping to Messene. Moreover, the greater part of those who tried to save the city by fighting got off alive ; but a few of them,

103

av iv Avoavdpidas tre nal Beapidas, dvdpes évd0£or Kal duvarol pardiara, Tov Meyadoronurav.
610 Kal AaBovtes avTovs evOds of oTPATLOTAL
T@ Krcopever T poanyyov. o 6é Avoavépibas @S elde Tov Krconévn moppwdev, avaBonaas, ‘‘“KE-earl got vov,” elmev, “@ Bactheb Aaxedacpovior, Epyov amroderEapév@ Tod Tempayuevou KaNDLOV Kal Bacthinaratov evdokorare yevea Bas.”)
Krcopévns b¢ vroToTnTas avtTou THV évrevgev, “Ti 36,” elrev, “o Avoavépisa, Néyets ; Ov yap 6) mov pe THY Tod vply aodobvaL KEAEVELS ; ;” Kato Avoavépisas, “ Auto pev ov, " épn, “ Neyo Kal cvpBovrevw pn) Srapeipac TONW THAKAUTNY, aXn’ eUTAHO aL pidov Kal TULA ov TLo TOV Kal BeBalov, amvrodovra MeryahorrohiTass THY TaTpioa Kal cwTipa Syuou TogovTov ‘yevopuevoy.” pK pov ovv oO Krcopevns Stacwwmjicas, : Xanerov,” épn, “TO mio revoas TAUTA, VIKATW 6¢ 70 _Tpos Sofav ael pardov y TO AVOLTENES Tap Hpiv.” Kal radta elroy anreoTEUnE TOUS avdpas eis Meoonyny Kal KnpvKa Tap eavToo, Tots MeyadoroAirats arrodibous THY TONY emt TO TUppayous elvat Kal dirovs arrooTavTas "Axardy.
Oita dé rod Kieopévous evyvopova Kat dirav-Opmra mpoteivavtos ovK elace Tovs Meyado-moAditas 0 Pidotroiwny éyxatadstrety THY Mpos rovs ‘Ayatovs tiotw, aA KaTNnyopav Tod KXeouévous as ov Enrodytos atrododvat thy T0-Aw, Ga Toot aBely Tovs Toritas, éFéBare Tov eapldav cal rov Avoavipibav é« tis Meoonvns.

all told, were captured, among whom were Lysandri- das and Thearidas, men of the greatest reputation and influence in Megalopolis. Therefore the soldiers had no sooner seized them than they brought them to Cleomenes. Then Lysandridas, when he saw Cleomenes from afar, cried out with a loud voice and said: “It is in thy power now, O king of the Lacedaemonians, to display an action fairer and more worthy of a king than any that has preceded it, and thereby win men’s highest esteem.’’ But Cleomenes, conjecturing what the speaker wished, said: “ What meanest thou, Lysandridas? Thou surely canst not bid me give your city back again to you.”” To which Lysandridas replied: “ Indeed, that is just what I mean, and I advise thee in thine own interests not to destroy so great a city, but to fill it with friends and allies who are trusty and true by giving back to the Megalopolitans their native city and becoming the preserver of so large a people.”” Accordingly, after a short silence, Cleomenes said: “It is difficult to believe that all this will happen, but with us let what makes for good repute always carry the day, rather than what brings gain." And with these words he sent the two men off to Messene attended by a herald from himself, offering to give back their city to the Megalopolitans on condition that they renounce the Achaean cause and be his friends and allies. However, although Cleomenes made this benevo- lent and humane offer, Philopoemen would not allow the Megalopolitans to break their pledges to the Achaeans, but denounced Cleomenes on the ground that he sought, not so much to give their city back to its citizens, as rather to get the citizens with their city !; then he drove Thearidas and Lysandridas out

1 See the Philopoemen, v.
105
ii

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

¢ 4 e , ee
ovtos Av PiroToipny o mpwtevoas torepov
"Ayatov nal peyiorny xrnodpevos év Tots "EX -
/ e 207 9 A 4
Anat do€ay, as idia rept abtod yéyparras.
XXV. Tovtwy 6@ amayyeévtwv r@ Kreopével, TETNPNKwS THV TOALY AOtKTOV Kal aKxépacov, dote undéva rabeiv unde TOVAAYLOTOV AaBovTa, TOTE TavTatTact Tpaxyvvlels Kal ayavaxtnoas
Ta pev xpnuata Sinptracev, avdpiavtas 6 Kal
\ ? 4 bf / a \ 4
ypagas dairéorerev eis Yrdaprnv, rhs S€ wodews Ta TreloTa Kal péyiota pépn KatacKkawas Kal
Stapeipas dvétevEev err' oixov, poRovpevos tov
2 'Avtiryovoy cal rovs 'Ayatovs. émrpaxOn é oddév
? b] b) A bd 4 \ ] > / '
at' avtav. éruyyavov pév yap év Aiyi@ BovAny éyovres: eel 5€ "Apatos avaBas él to Biya
\ \ U " \ 4 /

ToNuy péev Ypovov Exdare THY KAapvba Oépevos
mpo Tov mpocwmov, Oavyatovrwy Sé Kal réyeuv KeXevovtwv elrrev Gtt MeyddXn Trods aTroA@)EV vmTo Kvreopévous, pev asuvodos evOvs Sdrervdn
tov "Axaov xatatAayévtrav thy o€vtTnta Kal
3 70 péyeOos tov maQous, o Sé *Avtiyovos ém-

/ 0 a 3 dé ? A A 5 lA yetpnoas BonOeiv, eitra Bpadews aut@ THs duvapews ex TOV Yemadioy aviotapévns, TaUTHY bev avOis éxéNevoe Kata Ywpay péverw, avTos Sé

a > ww b \ 4 4
mapnrOev eis “Apryos, ov trodXous Eywv oTpaTLo-Tas peO” éavTod.
Aso Kal Td Sevrepov éyxetpnua ToD Kreopuévous édofe péev teToAuHoOar TrapaBorws Kal pavKas, 9 4 a 4 C4
émpayOn 5é peta TodARS Mpovoias, ws Por 4 TloruvBtos. eidms ydp eis Ta yeruddia Steorrapof Messene. This was that Philopoemen who afterwards became the leader of the Achaeans and won the greatest fame among the Greeks, as I have written in his own Life.

XXV. When tidings of these things were brought to Cleomenes, although he had taken strict care that the city should be inviolate and unharmed, so that no one took even the least thing without being detected, he was now so incensed and embittered that he plundered it, and sent its statues and pictures off to Sparta; then, after completely demolishing most and the largest portions of the city, he marched back towards home, being in fear of Antigonus and the Achaeans. But these did nothing. For they were holding a general assembly at Aegium; and here Aratus, after mounting the bema, wept for a long time, holding his mantle before his face; and when his audience was amazed and bade him speak, he told them that Megalopolis had been destroyed by Cleomenes. Then the assembly at once broke up, the Achaeans being filled with consternation at the swiftness and magnitude of the calamity. Antigonus at first attempted to give aid, but afterwards, since his forces came up to him but slowly from their winter quarters, he ordered them to remain where they were, while he himself proceeded to Argos, having only a few soldiers with him.

And this was the reason why the next attempt of Cleomenes, which was thought to be a deed of extravagant and frantic daring, was really made with great forethought, as Polybius says.!_ For Cleomenes

1 Most people thought this a hazardous and foolhardy step ; but those who were capable of judging regarded the measure as at once safe and prudent” (ii. 64, 1).

pévous Kata Todt } TOUS Maxedovas, nat Tov 817
"Avtiyovoy ov troAXovs éyovTa psa Dopopous ép “A pyee Siaxerualovra peTa TOY pidor, évéBanev eis THY "Apyetay, AoyeComevos Hoe aicxovny Tob

’Avtuyovev mapofuvdevros em iKpaTHaELY q pn TONMHGAVTA payer bat dtaBanrety m™ pos TOUS
"A pyetous. 5 kat avveBn. StapGerpoperns yap THS Xwpas ber’ avrob Kal TavTey ayonévey Kal pe ouevor, ol ev “Apyetor ducavacxerobvtes émi tas Ouvpas suvEerTpEPovTo TOU Bacthéws Kal xateBour, paxerBar KehevovTes H Tots KpelTToow éFictacbat TAS nryemovias: 0 Sé “Avtiryovos, ws
ées oTpautnyov Eup pova, TO xuvduvetoat mapa-Aoryeos Kal Tpoéa Gat THY aopanrerav aloxpov, ov
TO KAKOS axodcat Tapa Tots ex os NYOUMEVOS, Ov mpon\Gev, ann’ _ eve EVE Tois avTOU Loyea pois. 0 5é Kreopévns axype tov TeLX av TP OTpATH Tpoc-eXOwv xal «abvBpicas Kat Svadrupnvdapevos adens dvexwpnaer.
XXVI. ‘Ordiyep be Do TEpov adds, Els Teyéav dxovoas mpoievat Tov ‘Avtiryovov @s exeiOev ets thy Aakwvixny euBadobrra, TAXU TOUS oT pari Tas dvahaBov kal Kal” érépas od0us maparndagas a nHEPG. ™ pos TH monet TOV "Apyetov avepayn, mopOav TO Trediov Kal TOV girov ov Keipav, domep
ot AOLTTOL," Opemavars Kat paxaipats, adda KOTTOYV Evhors peydrous eis OX Hwa poudaias am eipyacpevois, ws emt maroig Xpwmevous év T@ TmopeveoAat ovy pn devi TOV@ mayTa ovycararpiyras xa StapOeipar Tov KapTov. ws pévToL KaTa THY 1 xara xédw Blass and Ziegler, after Schoemann: xara mwodw &s ono.

knew that the Macedonians were dispersed among the cities in their winter quarters, and that Antigonus had only a few mercenaries with him at Argos, where he was spending the winter with his friends. Cleomenes therefore invaded the territory of Argos, calculating that Antigonus would either be shamed into fighting and would be overpowered, or, in case he did not venture to fight, would incur odium among the Argives. And this was what actually came to pass. For while Cleomenes was wasting the country and robbing it of all that was there, the Argives, in distress, kept thronging the doors of the king and calling upon him with loud voices either to fight or yield the leadership to his betters. But Antigonus, as became a prudent general, considering that disgrace lay in taking unreasonable risks and throwing away his security, rather than in being abused by the outside rabble, would not go forth from the city, but stood by his previous plans. So Cleomenes came up to the very walls of the city with his army, wrought insolent havoc, and then withdrew unmolested.

XXVI. A little later, however, hearing that Antigonus had advanced to Tegea with intent to invade Laconia from that city, Cleomenes quickly took his soldiers, marched past the enemy by a different route, and at daybreak appeared suddenly before the city of Argos, ravaging the plain and destroying the grain, not cutting this down, as usual, with sickles and knives, but beating it down with great pieces of wood fashioned like spear-shafts. These his soldiers plied as if in sport, while passing by, and with no effort at all they would crush and ruin all the crop. When, however, they were come to the

Kuardpafw ryevopevo TO yupvac tov émrexelpouy
mpoo pépety mop, ex@duaey, @S wal TOV mept Meyarnv TOAW UI' Opyns PaAXOY Hh KAS avTO TET PAY MEVOY.
Tod be" Avtuyovou 7 p@TOV peev evOus eis "Apyos
dvaxwpnravros, éeiTa Ta Opn Kat TAS UTrepBoAras waoas dvAakais kataraBovtos, apedeiy Kal KaTa-ppoveiv 7 poo TroLoupevos érreprpe KijpuKas Tas KNEtS
akvav TOU 'Hpaiov AaBetvy, G6Tws aradXatTTOLTO
Th be@ Gucas. ouTw@ dé maitas kal KaTetpm@vev-TapUEvos, Kal Th ep Ovaas t vmod TOV ve@y KEKNELO-evo, am iyaryev eis DALOD byt Tov aTpaTtov: éxeiOey 5é Tous ppovpoivtas Tov 'Ordyuprov eFehdoas
KatéBn Tapa Tov 'Opxopevoy, ov povov Tots Tron
Tats ppovnpa Kal Gapoos euTeTOUNKes, adhe Kal Tots Toneptots aviip 1YEMOVLKOS Soxay elvat Kal
mpayparov Meyahov a£tos. 70 yap é« suas
TONES Oped wevov omod Th Maxedover duvapes
Kat Tedorrovvnaiors & aract Kal xopnyia Baoding
Trohepely, Kal pn povov adurov Sagpuddrrovra
THY Aaxovixny, aN Kal apay KAKOS TovovvTa
THY exelvany Kal ToXeELs aipovyTa THMKAUTAS, ov THS TUXOVE'NS eddxer Secvorntos elvar Kat peyando-fpocurns.
XXVII. "ANN) T POT OS Ta Xpnpara vevpa

TOV Tpaywarov T poo eum ay eis Ta Tow trodémou ely pddiora Breras TOUT eLvTrety coue.
Anpaéys, TAS Tpunpers pev Kabérxety Kal
oben TOTE TO "AOnvaiwy KENEVOVTOD, xen para 5 ovK eXovTav “TIporepoy dori,” ebm,
‘ro mpodedoat Tod dupacas. | Réyeras dé Kal 17d mpodedoa: rod gupaca: Bekker and Blass, after TIO
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Cyllarabis and attempted to set the gymnasium on fire, Cleomenes stopped them, feeling that his work at Megalopolis had been done to satisfy his anger rather than his honour.
As for Antigonus, in the first place he went back at once to Argos, and then occupied the hills and all the passes with outposts. But Cleomenes pretended to despise and ignore all this, and sent heralds to the king demanding the keys to the Heraeum, that he might offer sacrifice to the goddess before he went away. Then, after this jest and mockery, and after sacrificing to the goddess under the walls of the temple, which was closed, he led his army off to Phlius. From thence, after expelling the garrison of Oligyrtus, he marched down to Orchomenus, not only infusing high spirits and courage into its citizens, but also leading his enemies to think him a man capable of leadership and worthy to wield great power. For he drew his resources from but a single city, and yet waged war against the Macedonian power, all the Peloponnesians, and the treasures of a king together, and not only kept Laconia inviolate, but actually ravaged his enemies’ territory and took cities of great size; and men thought this a proof of no ordinary ability and largeness of purpose.

XXVII. But he who first declared that money is the sinews of affairs would seem to have spoken with special reference to the affairs of war. And Demades, when the Athenians once ordered that their triremes should be launched and manned, but had no money, said: “Dough must be moistened before it is kneaded.” It is said also that Archidamus of old,

Schoemann: rod wpwparetoa: rd pupaca (before the lookout- man comes the bread-maker) with the MSS.

III

ff ™

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"Apxldapos 0 TaXaLos UTr0 THY apxnv rou IleXo-TOVvUNTLAKOU TOEuOU, KeNEVOVT@Y eva popas Taka
TOV TULLaXov auTOV, eiTreiy os O TOKE LOS ov
TETAYHEVA oLTElTaL. xabamep yap ov Teo wMAT-Knkotes a0Antal T@ Xpovp cataBapovar Kat KataryovivovTas TOUS evpud pous cat TexviTas, ottws Kal 0 “Avtiryovos ex TOANTS avapéepov duvapews Tm pos TOV TONE MOV eFerover Kal caTnOreu tov KrXreouévn yMaxpas Kat pores moptfovra Tous Fevous picOov Kat tpopnv Tots moniTats. TEL TaNNG rye ™pos TOU Krcopévous 6 O Xpoves mY; TOV olKoL Tpayparov dviaravrov Tov "Avtiryovov.

BapBapor yap Te pueKomrT Ov aTOVTOS kat Katé-Tpexov nv Maxedoviapr, rat TOTE 67 TOADS avwbev
"TAAupiav eu BeBrjner oT paros, vp’ ov TropBovpevor HETETEMTOVTO TOV “Avtiryovov OL Maxedoves. Kal Tap ONyOV Tpo THS paxns gUVETUXE TavTa Ta ypappata Kopab hvac 1 pos auTov" @v Kop
abévrwy evOus ay anfroe papa Xatperv ppacas
"Axasois. ann’ 7 Ta peyote TOY T paywaTav xpivovea 7@ wapa pix pov TU n THMAKAUTHY aTre-deiEaro porn Kalpov Kal DS iuin, WOTE, THS paxns év Yeracla yevouerns xal Tov Krcopevous arroBeBAnxoros THV Sivayu Kal THY ToALy, evOus mapetvar TOUS KaXovvTas Tov "Avtiryovoy. 6 Kal padiata THY Svatuxiay Tob Krcopévous olKT po-Tépav é émroincey. ei yap Tpépas bv0 povas eméaXe Kal Tapiryarye puyopaxar, oun dv edénoev avT@
paxns, arr éd ols éBovrero dimhrayn Tpos TOUS "Axauovs amredOovT@v TOV Maxedovev vov bd, Womrep eipyntat, Sia THY axpnuatiay év Tois I1l2

towards the beginning of the Peloponnesian war, when the allies ordered their contributions for the war to be fixed, said: “ War has no fixed rations.” ! And indeed, just as athletes who have taken a full course of training, in time bear down and overpower those who are merely graceful and skilful, so also did Antigonus, who engaged in the war with large resources, wear out and prostrate Cleomenes, who could only meagrely and with difficulty provide pay for his mercenaries and sustenance for his citizen- soldiers. And yet in all other respects, certainly, time was on the side of Cleomenes; for affairs at home demanded the presence of Antigonus. During his absence Barbarians had been overrunning and devas- tating Macedonia, and at this particular time a large army of Illyrians from the interior had burst in, and in consequence of their ravages the Macedonians summoned Antigonus home. Their letters came within a little of reaching him before the decisive battle. If they had so reached him, he would at once have gone away and left the Achaeans to their own devices. But Fortune, who decides the most impor- tant affairs by a narrow margin, favoured him with so slight a preponderance in the scale of opportunity and power, that no sooner had the battle at Sellasia been fought, where Cleomenes lost his army and his city, than the messengers summoning Antigonus arrived. And this more than anything else made the misfor- tune of Cleomenes to be greatly pitied. For if he could have held out only two days, and continued his defensive tactics, he would not have needed to fight a battle, but the Macedonians would have gone away and he could have made his own terms with the Achaeans. But now, as I said before, his lack of

1 See the Crassus, ii. 7. ois

VOL. X. 1

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

SerXots TO Trav Oéwevos jvayxdaOn Siopupiors, ws
TIoAvBios pnot, mpos rptopupiovs avtimapata-Eac8au.
XXVIII. Kal davpacrov pév dv ro xwdivm TwapacYav éavTov otpatnyoy, exOvpots 5é ypnod-pevos ois troAiras, ov pny ovdé Trav Eévwv
PELTTTOS Aywvicapevov, TH TPOTH THS OTALcEWs
Kai To Baper THs oTALTEKHS Parayyos éEeOALBn.
Dvrapyos 5 cal mpodociav yevécOar dno tHv
parota TO Knreopéves Ta mpdypata Stepyaca-pévnv. tod yap 'Avtiyovov tovs "IdAvpsods Kal tovs "Axapvavas exrreptenOety xpuda KerevoavtTos Kal Kukrwoacbat Odtepor Képas, ep' od TeTaypEVOS
jv Ev«reidas 0 tod Kreopévous aberdos, elta tH
GXnv em) payn Sivapey extatrovtos, aT TKOT|S
Oewpav o Kreopévns, ds ovdapod Ta StrAa TOV
"Trvpiay nat rev "Axapydver xatecider, époBnOn
pe) pds TL TOLOUTOY aUvToOis o AvTiyovos KéxpnTat.
karécas 5é€ Aaporérn tov eri THiS KpuTTeias TeTaymévov, Opay éxédXevoe Kal Enreiy Srrws Eevee
Ta KaTa voToU Kal KUKAM Ths Tapatakews. Tov
5¢ Aaporérous (jv yap, @s A€yeTal, Ypnpacty mpotepov wm' "Avtiyovou SvepOappévos) aperetv éxeivwv eitrovTos @s Karas éeydovTwr, Tois 8é cuvarrovow é€& évaytias mpocéyev Kal TovToUS apuveoOat, miatevaoas él tov Avriryovov éywpet, Kat TH pon THY Tepl avTov YrapTiaTav wod-Hevos THY darayya tav Maxedovwv éml trévte jou otadious ttoxywpovvtwyv éxBralopevos Kal 114

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

resources forced him to stake the whole issue on a battle where, as Polybius says,'! he could oppose only twenty thousand men to thirty thousand.

XXVIII. He showed himself an admirable general in the hour of peril, his fellow countrymen gave him spirited support, and even his mercenaries fought in a praiseworthy manner, but he was overwhelmed by the superior character of his enemies' armour and the weight of their heavy-armed phalanx. Phylarchus, however, says that there was treachery also, and that this was chiefly what ruined Cleomenes. For Antigonus ordered his Ilyrians and Acarnanians to go round by a secret way and envelope the other wing, which Eucleidas, the brother of Cleomenes, commanded, and then led out the rest of his forces to battle; and when Cleomenes, from his post of observation, could nowhere see the arms of the Illyrians and Acarnanians, he was afraid that Antigonus was using them for some such purpose. He therefore called Damoteles, the commander of the secret service contingent,? and ordered him to observe and find out how matters stood in the rear and on the flanks of his array. But Damoteles (who had previously been bribed, as we are told, by Antigonus) told him to have no concern about flanks and rear, for all was well there, but to give his attention to those who assailed him in front, and repulse them. So Cleomenes, putting faith in what he was told, advanced upon Antigonus, and by the sweeping onset of his Spartans drove back the phalanx of the Macedonians for about five furlongs,

1 Hist. ii. 65.2 and 7. The battle of Sellasia was fought in June of 22] B.c.
2 A rural police with the special duty of watching the Helots, or slave population.
115 12 PLUOTARCH'S LIVES

Kpatav nrorovOncev. elta tav trept rov Kvedei-Sav amo Barépou cukrAwbévrwr émiatas nal Kati-Swv tov xivduvov, " Oixn por, dirtate aderpé," elm@ev, "olyn, yevvaios dv Kal tatcl lnrwTos Lraptiarav Kal yuvatély aotd:yos." odtw dé Tav wept Tov Kv«reidav avarpeévtwr, kat Tov éxeiOer, Os éxpatouv, eirihepopevwvy TapaTTomévouvs opeav Tovs oTpaTi@tas Kal pévely OVKETL TOAL@VTAS, géswlev éautov. aroGavely 5é cal trav Févov
qoNAous Aéyouct kat Aaxedatpovious amavtras
TAnY Staxociwv, éEaxtoytrious GvTas. |
XXIX. 'Emet dé eis tiv modw adixeto, Tots pev atravTncact TOV TodLT@Y Trapyver SéyerOat tov Avtiryovoy, autos Sé elev eite Cav elite atro-avov, 6 pédrroe TH Yrdptyn auvoicewv, tovTo mpdtew. opav 5é tas yuvaixas Tols pet avTod
mepevyoot Tpoatpexovcas Kal deyopévas Ta Stra Kal TwoTov mpoodepovaas, avTos eiamAOe pev Ets THY oikiay THY EavTOU, THs 5é TaLdiokns, Hy elyer, éxevOépav otcav éx Meydrns Torews avetiyngas peta THY THS yuvaLKds TerXEUTHY, wS ElOtoTO,

mpoctovans Kat Bovropévns amo aotparteias HKovtTa Oeparrevety, ote mieiv éxdedupynxws vrréuewwev ovTe Kabicas Kexunkos, adr Wotrep éeTVYKAvE TeOwopakia peévos TOV KLOVOY TiVl THY YElpa TpoT-Badov wrayiav Kal TO Tpdcwrtroy éml Tov WiXUY émiBeis, Kal xpdvov ov ToAvy obTw Svavatravaas
TO cua Kal TH Savoia qwepispapov amavtas TOUS AOYLa MOUS, Wpunoe peta Tov hirov els TO TvOvov. xaretOev értBavres én' adto robo trapeaKevacuévoy Totwv avnyOnaav.
116

819

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

and followed after them victoriously. Then, after Eucleidas with the other wing had been encircled, he came to a stop, and seeing their peril, said; "I have lost thee, my dearest brother, I have lost thee, thou noble heart, thou great example to Spartan boys, thou theme for a song to Spartan wives!' After Eucleidas and his forces had in this way been cut to pieces, and the enemy, after their victory there, were coming on against the other wing, Cleomenes, seeing that his soldiers were in disorder and no longer had courage to stand their ground, took measures for his own safety. Many of his mercenaries fell, as we are told, and all the Spartans, six thousand in number, except two hundred.

XXIX. When Cleomenes came to the city, he advised the citizens who met him to receive Antigo- nus; as for himself, he said he would do whatever promised to be best for Sparta, whether it called for his life or death. Then, seeing the women running up to those who had escaped with him, relieving them of their arms, and bringing drink to them, he went into his own house. Here his concubine, a free woman of Megalopolis whom he had taken to him- self after the death of his wife, came to him, as was her wont upon his return from the field, and wished to minister to him; but he would neither drink, though he was faint with thirst, nor sit down, though he was worn out. Instead, all in armour as he was, he put his arm aslant against one of the pillars of the house, dropped his face upon his forearm, and after resting himself in this way for a short time, and running over in his thoughts all possible plans, he set out with his friends for Gythium. There he went on board of vessels provided for this very purpose and ut to sea,

P 117
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXX. 'O &é "Avriryovos ef épodou TaparaBov THY TOA, Kal Xpng devas Tots Aaxedatpoviors
prravOparas, Kal 76 akiopa Tis mdorns ov
TpoTnhakiaas oud evuBpicas, GANA Kal vOMOUS
Kab moNeTelay atrobous Kal ToS Geis Ovcas, ave-Xopycev nuepa TpiTn, Tu opevos éy Maxedovig

TOAUY TONE MOV elvas Kal mop0eiabat THY épav
tro TeV BapBapov. non 6€ Kal To voonpa
Karelyev avrov, els bbiow exBeBnnos ioxupay Kal KaTappouv gUrTOVoD. ou pny _ameirey, aD dy TnpKede 7 pos Tous olKeious aryavas 6aov émi viKY peyiorn kal hove TrELoT TOV BapBapav eUKA EET TEPOV damobavety, OS pev ELK os éore Kal Aéyouawy ot mepl Dvrapxov, adr tH mept Tov aryava Kpavyh TO Tp mpooavappitas: ev dé tals axXonais iy aKovewv ore Body pera THY viKnv vo xapas, «0, Karis Tpépas,” * wjOos aiparos avynyaye Kat mrupéEas ouvToves éreXeUTHOE. TADTA pev Ta Tepl ’Avtiyovov.
XXXI. Krcopévns dé méwD are Kv8npwv els vnoov érépay, Aiyadiay, KATETXED. bbe «is Kupqyny mepatoba Bac HEANOVTOS auton, Tov pirwv els évopa Onpuxiwr, avnp T pos Te TAS m pagers ppovnpare KEXPNLEVOS peyarhy Kal tots oyous yeyoves TUS inynros ael rai beyarauxos, evTUX@V
avT® Kat’ idiav, “ Tov pev Kaddorov,” el7rev, “@ & Bactred, Odvarov TOV év TH paxn Tm ponkapeba: KQLTOL TAVTES jKovoay MeaV AeYOVT@VY WS ov bmepRyoerat TOV ' Bacthéa TOV VTAPTIATOV “Avtiryovos €b un vexpov. o 6é Sevtepos ofn Kal aperh vov éTs Tapectiv Hiv, trot WréopeEV AdOYioTOS, 1.8

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XXX. Antigonus marched up and took the city without resistance. He treated the Lacedaemonians humanely, and did not insult or mock the dignity of Sparta, but restored her laws and _ constitution,!
sacrificed to the gods, and went away on the third day. For he learned that there was a great war in Macedonia and that the Barbarians were ravaging the country. Moreover, his disease was already in full possession of him, having developed into a guick consumption and an acute catarrh. He did not, however, give up, but had strength left for his conflicts at home, so that he won a. very great victory, slew a prodigious number of the Barbarians, and died gloriously, having broken a blood-vessel (as it is likely, and as Phylarchus says)
by the very shout that he raised on the field of battle.

And in the schools of philosophy one used to hear the story that after his victory he shouted for joy, “O happy day!” and then brought up a quantity of blood, fell into a high fever, and so died. So much concerning Antigonus.

XXXI. As for Cleomenes, he sailed from Cythera to Aegialia, another island, and put in there. As he was about to cross from thence to Cyrene, one of his friends, Therycion by name, a man who brought a large spirit to the conduct of affairs and was always somewhat lofty in his speech and grandiloquent, came to him privately and said: ‘‘ The noblest death, O King, a death in battle, we have put away from us ; and yet all men heard us declare that Antigonus should not pass the king of Sparta except over his dead body. But a death that is second in virtue and glory is now still in our power. Whither do we

1 As they were before the reforms of Cleomenes.

? 4 ? A a \ y \ ,
atropevyovtes éyyus ov Kaxov Kai paxpav d.10-KovTes; eb yap ove aicypoy éote Sovrevey Tois amo Piritmov nal "AreEdvSpou tovs ad’ ‘Hpak-Néous, WAObY TOAD Kepdavodpev “AyTiyov@ Trapa-Sovres éautous, dv einds éore II toveuaiou Stadéperv
4 3 , , % \ @ > #
Scov Aiyurriwv Maxedovas. et S¢ td’ Oy KEexpa-

/ n 5:4 > ? A v /
TypeOa Tots Birdos ovK akioduev apyerOat, Ti
TOV py verxnKota SeoTroTHY TrotovpeV AUTO, iva
? ean a / a ? / \ av@ évos Sveiv kaxiouvs havapev, “Avtiyovoy pév
ghevyovres, IltoXepwatov S€ Koraxevovres; Hh Sa
A) 4 A 9 v N
Thy untépa dyoopev eis Alyurrrov AKew; Kadov pevtav avth Oéapa yévoto Kal Endrwrov éridernvepévyn tais TIroveuaiou yuvackly aiypddrwrov éx / \ UA N ev 9 a 4 “ Baoiréws cai huyada tov viov. ovy ews ete TOY
iStev Eupav dpyopev cal thy Aaxwvixny adopopev, éevtad0a THs TUYns amaddrakavTes éavTOvs atronoynoopea rots év YerXacia Ketpévots bre
Lie ee > 9 ? > 4 7 B 4 p
Ths Xmaptns, GAN ev AlyuTrm Kxabedovpcba muvOavonevoe tia THS AaKxedaipovos cat pamnv

b] , ? lh 9
Aytiyovos amroAéXolTe;
Towadra tod O@npvxiwvos eimovtos o Kyeopévns atrexpivato, “Tov avOpwrtivav To paoror, @ Tovnpé, Kal waow év étoipm Stoxwv, atro-Oaveiv, avdpetos elvat Soxeis, hevyov aicyiova huyny THS WpoTepov; TroNepiors pev yap évédwxay Hon al Kpeitroves Huav, h TUXYN oharévTes 7}
, € ‘\ / € \ 4 , N
BiacBévtes bd wAHGovS’ oO 5é pos Tovous Kai
Tarattrwpias 7 Woyous kai Sofas avOpaTwv ama-
T20

unreasoningly sail, fleeing an evil that is near and pursuing one that is afar off? For if it is not shame- ful that the descendants of Heracles should be in subjection to the successors of Philip and Alexander, we shall spare ourselves a long voyage by surrender- ing to Antigonus, who is likely to surpass Ptolemy as much as Macedonians surpass Egyptians. But if we cannot consent to be ruled by those who have conquered us in arms, why should we make him our master who has not defeated us, thus showing ourselves inferior to two instead of one by running away from Antigonus and joining the flatterers of Ptolemy? Or, shall we say that it is on thy mother’s account that we come to Egypt? Surely thou wilt make a noble spectacle for her, and one to awaken envy, when she displays her son to the wives of Ptolemy, a captive instead of a king, and a runaway. Let us rather, while we are still masters of our own swords and can gaze upon the land of Laconia, here rid ourselves of Fortune’s yoke, and make our peace with those who at Sellasia died in defence of Sparta, instead of sitting idly down in Egypt and asking every now and then whom Antigonus has left as satrap of Lacedaemon.”’ |

Such were the words of Therycion, and to them Cleomenes replied: “It is the easiest possible step thou urgest, wretched man, and one that any man may take, this dying; and dost thou think thyself brave when thou art making a flight more shameful than the one preceding it? Better men than we have given in to their enemies before this, having been betrayed by Fortune or overwhelmed by numbers. But he who in the face of toils and hardships, or of the censorious judgments of men, gives up the fight,

fal

‘yopevov HTTATAL THS airod paraxias. Sei yap Tov av0alpetov Oavarov ov huyny elvat mpdafewr, adhe, _mpakiy. alax pov yap Kal Civ > povols éautois Kai amobunc Kev: ép 6 viv ob mapaxa-Nels nas, oTrevdwv aTrahhayhvar TOV TapovTov,
Kadov bé ovdev ovde Xpio pov aXXo Stam parro-HEVOS. eyo dé xal oé cal ewauTov olopat Sety

TAS brép THS mart pidos éxmldas pt Kataneteiy:
dtrou & av yuas exeivar KaTadiTrwot, paora Bov-Nomévors aTroOavety Urapeet.” II pos tatra Onpuxior ovdey avTerTa@v, OTE mp@Tov a xe Ka.upov arog That Tov Krcopévous, ext parr ouevos Tapa Tov airyuadov eadafer é éavTov.
XXXII. ‘O &é Knyeopévys amo tév Aliytadov avaxGels TH AtBon mpoaéBare, Kal 61a tav Bact-MKOV TAPATréLITOMLEVOS Hey eis ‘AreFdvdpecav.
aGels 8¢ 7H ItoNeuaiw, kat " dpyas pep eruyxave KOWWOS prravOpwrov Kab peTpiov T pos auTov
émel O€ yvauns b:50vs areipav avnp épaivero Euhpov, Kat THIS Kal’ npépav opmtnrias avTod TO Aaxwvexoy Kal agpeneés THv yap édrevOeptov elye, Kab THY evryéveray vba KATAULTX WEY oude
KALTT OMEVOS Umrd THS TUXNS, TOV TTpOS ndovny Kal KoNaKelay _Stareyopevav mifavare os édpaivéTO, TONM) pev aidas Kal peTavova TOY I ronepaiov elxev avdpos apedjcavTa ToLoUTOU Kal
T poe Mevov TO “Avtiyove, Sokay apa KERTH LEV OD
THAKAUTHY Kal Sivamy, avarapBavay dé Tiais Kal ptroppoouvars Tov Krcouevn mapeOappuvev as pera vewVv Kal Xpnmaroy amroaTeh@y avurov els tTHv “EAXdba Kal KatactTHowy eis THY Bact-1 «al (jv Blass and Ziegler, after Richards.

122

820

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

is vanquished by his own weakness. Fora self-inflicted death ought to be, not flight from action, but an action in itself. For it is shameful to die, as well as to live, for one’s self alone. And yet it is to this that thou now invitest me in thine eagerness to be rid of present troubles, though beyond that thou wilt effect nothing that is honourable or useful. I, however, think it right that neither thou nor I should abandon our hopes for our country ; when these abandon us, death will be very easy if we wish it.”

To this Therycion made no reply, but as soon as he got an opportunity to leave Cleomenes, he turned aside along the sea-beach and slew himself.

XXXII. But Cleomenes, putting tosea from Aegia- lia, landed in Libya, and under the escort of the royal officials came to Alexandria. After coming into the presence of Ptolemy, at first he met with only ordinary and moderate kindness from him; but when he had given proof of his sentiments and shown himself to be a manof good sense, and when, in his daily intercourse, his Laconian simplicity retained the charm which a free spirit imparts, while he in no wise brought shame upon his noble birth or suffered the blows of Fortune to bow him down, but showed himself more winning than those whose conversation sought only to please and flatter, then Ptolemy was filled with great respect for him, and deeply repented that he had neglected such a man and abandoned him to Antigonus, who had thereby won great glory and power. Ptolemy therefore sought to regain Cleo- menes by honours and kindnesses, and kept encour- aging him with assurances that he would send him back to Greece with ships and treasure and restore

123

3

3

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Neiav. édidou 6 cal cuvrakw aire téccapa Kal elxoat Tadavra Kal? Exacroy éviautov. ad' ov éxetvos avtov Kal Tovs dirous evTEAaS Kal codpoves Siovna@v, Ta mreloTta KaTayndtcKev eis diravOpwornias kat petaddcets TOV amd Ths 'EXAGdos eis Aiyumrov éxrerrwxotwv.
XXXII. 'O pév obv rpecBvrepos Ttorepaios mp éxtereoar T@ Kreopuéver thv exrreurp éte-NeuTnoe THS S€ Bacirelas eEvOUS eis TrOAAHY aoéNyelav Kal trapowiay Kal yuvatkoxpatiav éutresovans nuereito Kal ta Tov Kreopévous. o
pev yap Bactrers avtos ottw SiébOapto riv Wwuxnv vo yuvaikdv Kal woTrwy waTE, OTOTE vndos partota Kal otrovdatoTatos avToD yévotro, TedEeTAaS TEAEiY Kal TUUTaVOY éyov év Tois Bact-Nels aryeipew, TA 5é péytota THS apyns mpaypata Stoxety 'Ayaboxrecavy thy epwpéevny Tod Bactréws Kal thy ravtns pntépa Kal ropvoBocKov
OivavOnv. spas & ody e0ké tis ev dpyy Kal Tod Kycopévous ypeia yeyovévar. Sedias yap Mayay Tov adergov IIrodepuatos, ws icxvovta Sia Tis MNTpos €v TO oTpatTiwTLK@, Tov Krcopéevn mpoo-erduBave cai wetedioou Tay aTroppntwv avvedpior, RBovrevopevos avedeiv Tov adergov. oO é, Katrrep GNWAVTWY TOUTO TPATTELY KEAEVOVTMY, LOVOS aT7-yopevoev, eiTr@v ws paddov, e Suvatov Hy, eet hicat Te Bactrel TrELovas abdeXdovs pos aoda-Netay kal Stapovny tav Tpaypatov. LworBiov 5é Tod WAEloToy ev Tots hirous Suvapévouv PyocavTos ovK elvar Ta TaY picboddpav avtois BéBata Tod

Maya Cavros, apereity éxérevcey 0 Kreopévns 124

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

him to his kingdom. He also gave him an annual pension of twenty-four talents. With this money Cleomenes maintained himself and his friends in a simple and modest manner, and spent the greater part in good offices and contributions to the refugees from Greece who were in Egypt.

XXXIII. Well, then, the elder Ptolemy! died before sending Cleomenes off as he had promised ; and since the court at once plunged into excessive wantonness and drunkenness, and women wielded the power, the affairs of Cleomenes were neglected. For the king himself was so corrupted in spirit by wine and women that, in his soberest and most serious moments, he would celebrate religious rites and head processions in his palace, timbrel in hand, while the most important affairs of the government were managed by Agathocleia, the mistress of the king, her mother, and a pimp, Oenanthe. But in spite of all this, at the outset Cleomenes seemed to be of some use. For Ptolemy was afraid of his brother Magas, believing that Magas had a strong following among the soldiers owing to his mother's influence, and he therefore took Cleomenes into his following and gave him a place in his privy council, all the while plotting to kill his brother. But Cleomenes, although all other counsellors urged the king to take this step, alone advised against it, saying that it were better, were it possible, to get the king more brothers to increase the security and stability of his affairs. And when Sosibius, who had the most influence among the.king's ministers, declared that they could not be sure of the mercenaries as long as Magas was alive, Cleomenes bade him have no concern on that

1 Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, died in 220 B.c., and was followed by Ptolemy IV., surnamed Philopator.

125
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

évexd ye Tovtou' maAelous yap f TpLayLALous TOV Eévwv eivat IleXorrovynciovs mpocéxyovtas avTa@, Kay povov vevton, mpoOvpas peta TaY OT@Y Waperopevous. oVTOS o NOYOS TOTE EV OV piKPaV T® Kreopévee kal wiotw evvoias cal Soxnow iaxvos mpocéOnxev, totepov Sé, Tod LtoNepaiov THs aaleveias emitevovons THY SetAlay, Kal Kad-diep eiwOev év tO pndey dpoveiv, Tov mdvTa Sedouxévas nal waow amioteiy achadectarou Soxodvtos elvar, poBepoy érroies Tov KXeopévn Tots avrLxois, ws ioyvovta mapa Tots Eévouss Kal TOANGY Rv axovey Aeyovtwv Ste " Odros oO Néwv éy tovtTots toils mpoBdtos dvacrpépetar." TQ

yap dvrt TotovTov Stéhawwev 7005 év tots Bact-ALKols, UTOBAETOY aTpé“a Kal TapeTioKOTOV TA TpPaTTopeva,
XXXIV. Nats pev otv aitav Kal otpatiav ameime: muvOavopevos b€ teOvdvar tov *Avti-yovov, AitwrAn@ 6 Twodéum cupreTrrAkdEyOat rovs
"Ayatous, ta 5 mpdypata wobeiv avtov Kat Tapakanew,) év tapayn cal Ssacracp@ THs IleXorovyncou yeyevnuevns, nEtov ev povos atro-oTadhvat peta TaV dirov, EreOe 5é ovdéva, TOD pev Baciréws ovK eicaxovovTos, adr év yuvarki
nal Odoos Kat Kopors cuvéxovTos EavTov, o 6é TOV GAwWY TpoecTnKws Kal TpoBovrAEvoY Lwai-Bos pévovta pév tov Knreopévn mapa yvouny nryetro Sucpetayeipiatoy elvat Kal hoBepor, ade-Oévra &€ rorpnpov, dvdpa Kal peyanorpdaypLova Kat THs Bactreias vooovaons Geatny yeyevnpévov.
1 wapaxadety Ziegler ; wapaxadety éxeitoe Bekker: rapa-Kadeiy éxeivoy (with the MSS.).
126

8

1

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

point at least; for more than three thousand of the mercenaries were Peloponnesians and attached to himself, and if he but gave them a nod they would readily come to his side in arms. At the time this speech won for Cleomenes no little faith in his good will and belief in his strength; but afterwards, when Ptolemy’s weakness intensified his cowardice, and, as is wont to happen where there is no sound judgment, his best course seemed to him to lie in fearing every- body and distrusting all men, it led the courtiers to be afraid of Cleomenes, on the ground that he had a strong following among the mercenaries; and many of them were heard to say: “There goes the lion up and down among these sheep.” And such, in fact, he clearly was among the courtiers, eyeing with quiet contempt and closly watching what was going on. XXXIV. For ships, therefore, and an army, he gave up asking; but on learning that Antigonus was dead } and that the Achaeans were involved in a war with the Aetolians, and that affairs yearned and called for him now that Peloponnesus was rent asunder and in confusion, he demanded to be sent away with his friends merely; but he could persuade no one. The king would not give him a hearing, but was absorbed with women and Dionysiac routs and . revels; and Sosibius, the prime minister and chief counsellor, thought that if Cleomenes remained against his will he might be hard to manage, in- deed, and an object of fear, but that if he were sent away he would make some bold attempt, being a man of large undertakings, and one who had been an eye-witness of the distempers of the realm.

1 Cf. chapter xxx. 2.

oude yap ai Swpeat KaTemTpauvoy autor, GND’ @otep tov “Ami év ap Govors SiarTwpevov Kal Tpupar Soxotyta Tou Kata piow Biov Kat dpopeov apérov Kat TKIPTHTEDY ipepos &yet, Kat Sires
éore ducavacxeray THY év tats xEpat Tov iepéwy SiatpiBnv, odtws éxeivov ovdev Hpeane TOV par-Gaxor, GNA POwvvOEcKe Hirov Kip,
a@omep Ayirnrevs,
> eo
avr pévav, moPéecxe S avtTyv TE TTOAEpov Te.
XXXV. Torovtwv S& Trav Kat’ auTov évTov
T par waTov agixveitat Nixarydpas 0 Meoonvios eis "AdeEdv6perar, a avnp po ev pev TOV Kyreopévn, TpooTovovpevos dé pidos elvat' Xwptov be swore KaOY aUT@ TET PAKS cai bv aaxoniay, as EorKe, Sia TONE MOUS OUK aTrEANPos TO apyuptov. Tobtov ov éxPaivovta TOTE Ths ornddos id@my o Krc0pévns (éruxe yap év TH xpnrrise Tob Atwévos TeplTaT ov) nom agero 7 p0 vEws Kal tis avTov els Alyumrov aryot T popacts npwra. Tob dé Nixayopou prroppoves avtacmalopevov Kat p7-GavtTos immous ayew T@ Bacrrel KaXovs TOY ToAEuLaTnpLOY, yerdoas O Krcoperns, “<EBov-Noun av,” edn, “oe paddov KEW dyovta oap-Buniotpias Kal xuvaidous TavTa yep vov padora KATETTELYEL TOV Baowrea.” Kal o 0 Nexaryopas TOTE pev éperdiacev® 1) nuépas 5é torepov OrbyaLs vmo-puncas Tov Xwpiou TOV Kreoperny viv yoov édeiro Thy Tuyny aTroNaBelv, ws ovK dv evoyAnaas,

For not even gifts would soften him, but just as the sacred bull Apis, though living in plenty and believed to be having a luxurious time, feels a desire for the life that was his by nature, for coursings without restraint, and leaps and bounds, and is manifestly disgusted with his treatment at the hands of the priests, so Cleomenes took no pleasure in his life of ease and luxury,

—‘“ but kept pining away in his dear heart,”
like Achilles,} “ As he lingered there, and kept yearning for war-cry and battle.”
XXXV. While matters stood thus with him, Nica- goras the Messenian came to Alexandria, a man who hated Cleomenes, but pretended to be a friend. He had at one time sold Cleomenes a fine estate, and owing to the constant demands of war upon the king, as it would seem, had not received the money for it. And so now, when Cleomenes, who chanced to be taking a walk along the quay, saw Nicagoras landing from his vessel, he greeted him heartily and asked what errand brought him to Egypt. Nicagoras returned his greeting in a friendly manner, and said that he was bringing horses for the king, some fine ones for use in war. At this, Cleomenes gave a laugh and said: “I could wish that thou hadst rather brought sambuca-girls and catamites; for these now most interest the king.’ At the time Nicagoras merely smiled; but a few days later he reminded Cleomenes of the estate, and asked that now at any rate he might get the money for it, saying that he would not have troubled him about the matter if he had not

1 Thad, i. 491 f.

ef py Tepl THY TaY doptiwy SiaBeow perpiws!
é&nutodto. Tov Sé Knreouévous dicavtos ovdéy avuT@ wepteivat Tav Sedouévov, AuTNOels o Nixayopas éxdépes TO YworBiw Td cKOppa TOD Kreopévous. 0 O€ Kal TovTO péev aopévas EraBev, ex 5é peifovos aitias Tov Bactdéa twrapoktvas Enrav Eretoe TOY Nixayopay émiatoAny ypawavTa Kata tov Kyeopévous arrodrety, ws éyvwKoros, &é AdBou tpinpers Kal otpatiwtas wap avtod, Ku-pnunv Kkatacyxely. o pev ovv Nixaydpas tadta yparpas atrémXevce’ Tod 8 YwotRiov peta Téc-capas nuépas THv émiaTOAnY mpos Tov IltoAepatov aveveyxovTos Ws apTtiws avT@ Sedopévyny Kal mwapokvvavtTos TO perpdxiov, edokev els otKiay
peyadrny eicayayety tov Kreouéevnv, cal tiv GAAnV opoiws mapéexovtas Siavtay efodwv elpyetv.
XXXVI. "Hv pev ody cal tadta AvTHpAa TO Knreopéver, poyOnpotépas dé tas wept tov pér-NovTos éeAmidas éoyev x ToLavTNS auVTUyias.
Iltoveuaios 0 Xpucéppou didos dv tod Baciréws WavTa Tov Xpovoy émiexas Stetrexto TO Kreopéver, Kal cuvned Tis UTApXev avTois Kal Tap-pnoia mpos aAdAnAoUS. ovTOS ovy TOTE, TOU Knreopévous Senbévros éAOeiv mpos avtov, 7rOe

pev Kal duedéyOn pétpia, To Uromroy éfaipav Kal mept tov Bactr\éws atodNoyoupevos' atiav é Tad Ex THS oKias, Kal un Tpovonaas éEoTriaOer aypt tov Oupav émaxorovbodvra tov Krcopévn, muKpas émeTipnoe tois pudrakw ws oy péya
Onpiov nal dvotynpynrov aueras huddttTovat Kal 1 werplws Bekker and Blass correct to ob perplws, after Reiske.
130

> in 822

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

met with a considerable loss in the disposition of his cargo; and when Cleomenes declared that he had nothing left of the moneys that had been given him, Nicagoras was vexed, and reported to Sosibius the pleasantry of Cleomenes. Sosibius was glad to get even this matter, but he desired to have some larger accusation with which to exasperate the king, and therefore persuaded Nicagoras to write and leave behind him a letter accusing Cleomenes of planning, in case he got triremes and soldiers from Ptolemy, to seize Cyrene. So Nicagoras wrote a letter to this effect and sailed away ; and Sosibius, after four days had passed, brought the letter to Ptolemy, pretending that he had just received it, and so exasperated the young man that it was decided to remove Cleomenes into a large house, and while treating him in other ways just as before, to prevent his egress. |

XXXVI. Even this usage was grievous to Cleomenes, but his hopes for the future received a greater shock from the following incident. Ptolemy the son of Chrysermus, a friend of King Ptolemy, had all the while been on friendly terms with Cleomenes, and they were quite intimate and outspoken with one another. This Ptolemy, then, now that Cleomenes begged a visit from him, came and conversed in a reasonable way with him, seeking to remove his suspicions and excusing the conduct of the king; but when he was leaving the house and did not perceive that Cleomenes was following on behind him as far as the doors, he bitterly reproached the guards for the careless and easy watch they kept upon a great wild beast that was so hard to keep.

131

-

k 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 padupws. TovTwy Oo Krcopévs QUTIHKOOS ryevopevos, Kal imply aicGécbat tov [I roAepatov ava-Xopiacas eppace Tots diros. evOvs ovdv TAVTES
S 7 por epov elyvov édrridas éxBadortes, pos opyny éBovdevoavto tod IIroNenatou THY adixtav apuvdpevot cal THY bBpev aFlas THS LrapTns amvroOaveiv, Kai Bn TE pLjLevery Gor Ep lepeia may-4 Oévtas Kataxorhvar Seuvov yap, éi TAS Tpos ‘Aprityovoy, avdpa TORE MLE THY kal Spactypiop, diarvaers br eplowy Kreopevns KaOnrar pnt paryuptou Bacthews oYXONnV dvapevenr; Srav ™ p@Tov amoOnrat TO TUMTAVOV Kal Katatavon Tov Gia-COV, ATOKTEVODVYTOS aUTOY.
XXXVI. "Emel d€ édofe Tavta Kal Kata
TUXNY o IItonepaios eis KaywBov eEwpunce,
7 p@TOV bey dréd@xav Oyor ws * qapadvorro THS guranhs vro Tov Baciréws émerta ex TLVOS EJouvs BacirtKod Tots péddovow e£ eLpK TAS arro-AveoOar Setrrvov te TEM TOMEVOU kal Eevion, of giro ToAAa ToladTa TH Krcopéver mapac Kevd-TAaVTES éFwbev eloemreprpar, eLamraravres TOUS puraxras olopevous v0 TOU Bactréws aTEeCTan-2 Oat. Kal yap EOve xal peredidov TOUTWY ad Boves avrois, Kat emir Bets orepavous Kal xaTaxrbels ELOTLATO pera, TOV hirov. NeyeTat dé Taylov 7
Steyvones pos THY am pate oppijcat, ovvaic6o-PEVvOS oixérny &va Tav cuvedotav thy mpakw é&w mapa yuvatkt Keno unpevov His pa. Kal poBndels pnvua, éretd7 pécov Hépas iv Kal TOUS le Kas na Gero xadevdovras t uno THS pHéOns, € évovaedpevos TOY XLT@Va Kal THY padny é« Tod Seftod 132

AGIS AND CLEOMENES |

Cleomenes heard this with his own ears, and without Ptolemy's being aware of his presence went back and told his friends. At once, then, they all aban- doned the hopes they had been cherishing and wrathfully determined to avenge themselves on Ptolemy for his injustice and insolence, and die in a manner worthy of Sparta, instead of waiting like sacrificial victims to be first fattened and then smitten down. For it was an intolerable thing that Cleomenes, after scorning to come to terms with Antigonus, a man who fought well and wrought much, should sit idly down and await the leisure of a beggarly priest of a king, who, as soon as he could lay aside his timbrel and stop his dancing, would slay him.

XXXVII. Such being their resolve, and Ptolemy, as chance would h&ve it, making a visit to Canopus, in the first place word was sent about that Cleomenes had been set free by the king; and next, in view of a custom which the king had of sending presents and a banquet to those who were going to be released from imprisonment, the friends of Cleomenes in the city prepared and sent in to him an abundance of such things, thus completely deceiving the guards, who thought the king had sent them. For Cleomenes — made a sacrifice and gave the guards a bountiful share of his provisions, and then took his place at table with garlands on his head and feasted with his friends. We are told, too, that he set out upon his ° enterprise sooner than he had intended, because he learned that a slave who was privy to it had passed the night outside in company with a mistress. So fearing that his plans would be revealed, when noon came and he perceived that his guards were sleeping off their wine, he put on his tunic, opened the seam

133

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tapahvadpevos Gpuou, yuuVe TO Eider pera, TOY
pirov eberrongev ever kevag wevory opotws, bexa-tpiav dvtwy. 'Imritas 6é xwros oy TH wey
mpwotTn cuve-emeccy open mpodupos, ds 88 Ew pa TXoAaLTEpov Topevopevous bu! avrov, éxédevoev avenreiv nal pn SiadOeipew tHv mpakwy, ax pno Tov avOpwrov TEpLwevOVTAs. ETUNXE é tay 'AdeEarpéwv tes immov ayov Tapa Tas Oupas: TOUTOV aperopevor kab tov 'Inmitav avaBarortes, épepovTo Spome bua TOV CTEVWTOV KAL 1 a,peKadouv Tov Ox Aov él THV ehevOepiav. tois 6€ ToTovTOD, WS couxen, Gres meThy Scov éTraivety kal Oavpd-Cew Thy ToD Kdeopévous toApav, axorovbeiv dé ral BonOeiv ovdels edpper.
Tov pev ody rob Xpucéppov Hrodepaiov ex THS

QUANS éfvovta Tpets evdus 7 poo TET ovTeEs aneé-KrTewvay" érépou dé Il roAepatou TOU pudrdacovTos
THV TOMY ehavvovTos Gppare pos auTous, oppn-GayvrTes evayTtot Tous pep Virnpétas Kal Sopupopous dierxedacay, avrov 6€ KataoTacavtes amo Tob Gipwaros améxtevav. Elta T pos THY akpav éxopov», avappngas Siavoovpevor TO S€OMwWTPLOV Kab XpncacGat TH wAHGE THY bedeuévo. fp Gacav
d€ PpaFdpevor KAN@S Ob puraxes, @oTE Kal TAVTNS am oxpova0evTa THS TELpAS TOV Knreopevy diadé eo Oa. kal mwAavacOat KaTa THY TONY, ovdevos avT@ TpooxXw@pobvTos, ana _pevyovTwy Kal poBoupeveor amavrwv. oUTws ovp amoaTas
Kal 7 pos TOUS pidous eitrav, “Ovdév qv apa
Oavpacrov dpxeuw yuvaiKas avO pwmrov pevryovta@y
THY edevdepiay,” Tapexarece TAVTAS asios avrou Kal TOV TeTpayLevWV TEAEUTAV. Kal TPWTOS pev 134

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

over his right shoulder, and with drawn sword sprang forth, accompanied by his friends, who were likewise arrayed, thirteen in number. Hippitas, who was lame, joined in making the first onset with all his soul, but when he saw that he was a hindrance to the progress of his companions, he bade them kill him, and not ruin the enterprise by waiting for a useless fellow. As it chanced, however, an Alexan- drian was leading a horse past the doors, so they seized the animal, put Hippitas on its back, and then rushed at full speed through the narrow streets of the city, summoning the throng to win their freedom. These had enough courage, as it would seem, to admire and praise the daring of Cleomenes, but not a man was bold enough to follow and help him. Well, then, as Ptolemy the son of Chrysermus was coming out of the palace, three of them straightway fell upon him and slew him; and as another Ptolemy, who had the city in his charge, was driving towards them in a chariot, they rushed to meet him, scattered his servants and mercenaries, dragged him from his chariot, and slew him. Then they proceeded to the citadel, purposing to break open the prison and avail themselves of the multitude of prisoners. But the guards were too quick for them and barred the way securely, so that Cleomenes, bated in this attempt also, roamed up and down through the city, not a man joining with him but everybody filled with fear and flying from him. So, then, he de- sisted from his attempt, and saying to his friends, “It is no wonder, after all, that women rule over men who run away from freedom,” he called upon them all to die in a manner worthy of their king and their past achievements. So Hippitas first, at 135

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘Iarmitas Ud TOY vewTépwy TEvdS eTANYN Sen Geis, émevra TOY GAXwY ExacToOs evKOAWS Kai adeds

éauTop arog parrel, mrnv Ilavréws tot mpworTov Meyaanv TONY Katara Bovros. TouToy 5€ KaA-
Morov apa wal Tpos THDV ayaryny | eupuertarov
TOV vévy yevopevov ép@pevov EOXNKOS o BactXevs exéhevaer, éray avutov te Kal Tovs aAdous dy TET TWKOTAS, OUT TedeUTav. non oe rerpévov amdvTwv ET LT OPEVOMEVOS 6 [avtevs Kal T@ Exqu-di@ wapatTopevos Kal’ Exaorov amemetparo BY TU SiahavOdvor Cav. érret dé xal Tov Krcopevn viEas Tapa To opupoy eide cua Tpéyyayta TO pod - wTroy, epidnoey avtov, elta mapexdOice Kal tédos ExovTos 76 TeptBarwv TOY vexpov éavToV
gr isarlodaee
XX XVIII. Krcopévns bev ovv éxxaidena * THS Lmdprys Bacthevoas érn Kal rovodtos dvyp yevOMevos odtw KaTéotpewe. Tis bé dnuns eis tH money OAnY oxedaabeions " pe Kparngoixhea, Kaitrep ovea yevvaia yuvn, mpovdwKe To ppovnpa
Wpos TO THS cuppopas péryeos, Kat meptBarovoa
Ta Traidia ToD Kreopévous @Aropupero. tav &e Tawiwy TO Tm pea Burepov aronndicay, ovdevos dy mpoaboxjaavtos, a amo Tod Téyous emt Kepadny Eppipey éavTo: Kal Kaxas pev oxen, ou pay are Oavev, arr 4p0n Bowy Kal ayavaxtovy éri TO Staxwr,vcoOat TENEUTAY.
‘O 86 IIroAeuaios, ws eyvo Tavita, mpocétake
TO pey copa Tob Krcopevous | Kpeudoas Kara-upawoartas, dTroKTeivar bé Ta Tradia xal THY pntépa nal tas mepi avtnv yuvaixas. ev dé 136

823

yA

AGIS AND CLEQMENES

his own request, was smitten down by one of the younger men, then each of the others calmly and cheerfully slew himself, except Panteus, the man who led the way in the capture of Megalopolis.! He had once been the king’s favourite, because in his youth he was most fair, and in his young man- hood most amenable to the Spartan discipline ; and now his orders were to wait until the king and the rest of the band were dead, and then to die himself. At last all the rest lay prostrate on the ground, and Panteus, going up to each one in turn and pricking him with his sword, sought to discover whether any spark of life remained. When he pricked Cleomenes in the ankle and saw that his face twitched, he kissed him, and then sat down by his side; at last the end came, and after embracing the king’s dead body, he slew himself upon it.

XXXVIITI. Such, then, was the end of Cleomenes, who had been for sixteen years king of Sparta, and had shown himself the man whom I have described. The report of his death spread over the entire city, and Cratesicleia, although she was a woman of noble spirit, lost her composure in view of the magnitude of her misfortunes, and throwing her arms about the children of Cleomenes, wailed and lamented. But the elder of the two boys, forestalling all prevention, sprang away and threw himself headlong from the roof; he was badly injured, but did not die, and was taken up crying out resentfully because he was not permitted to end his life.

But Ptolemy, when he learned of these things, gave orders that the body of Cleomenes should be flayed and hung up, and that his children, his mother, and the women that were with her, should be killed.

1 See chapter xxiii. 4.

tavrais jv Kal Tlavtéws yurn KadXiorn Kai yev-vatoTatn 70 €ldos. ért 5€ avdtois veoydmots ovow
éy axpais épwtwv ai tixat ovvéBnoav. evOds pev ovv ouvextrrAcvoae T@ Ilavtet BovAropéevny avTny ovK élacay ot yoveis, ANAA Bia KaTaKnei-oavres epuratrov: oAty@ 5é Satepoy immov éauTT TapacKkevdcaca Kal xpuaidioy ov mod vuKros amédpa, kal dswtaca ourrovws éml Taivapor, éxelOev éréBn vews eis Alyurrov mrAeovaons Kal StexouicOn mpos tov dvdpa Kal cuvdunveyxer avT@ tov émi Eévns Biov aduTas Kal idapds.
avtTn tote THY Kparnoixvciay bTd TOV oOTpaTLOtov eFayouevny éyetpaywye, Tov Te TémAov avuThs vToN\auBdavovaa, Kai Oappeiy trapaxa-Novoa pndév te pnd adtny éexewAHyMEVNVY TOV Qavatov, adr' é&y povov aitovyévnv, mpo TeV matotwv arolaveiv. émel dé HAOOY Eis TOV TOTTOV
év ® tadta Spay eiw@Becay ot brnpétas, TmpaTov pev Ta wraidia, THS Kpatnoixrelas opwons, éc-gartoy, celta éxeivnv, &v TovTo povoy él tHrL-
, / , cc? / a Koutots POeyEapevnv mabecw, "OQ. réxva, rot éuorete ; 7 O€ Tlavréws yun, mepilwoapevn To ipatiov, evpwatos ovoa Kal peyadAn TeV aTo-Ovnoxovo@y éxdotny ciwTH Kai pe" navyias éOepamreve Kal Twepréctteddev ex TaV évdexouevar.

TéXos b€ peTa Wdoas éauvTHY KoouHnOAaAGA, Kal KaTayayovoa tHv TeptBoAnV, Kat pndéva mpoc-eGeiy ddoaca pnoé idety GAXov Hh Tov érl Tis ahayns TeTaypevov, npwikas Katéotpever, ov-Sevds SenOeioa Koopobvtos Kal wepteadvTTovTos
peTa THY TEeAEUTHV. OUTW TapéuEevVe TH DavdT@ TO KOopLoy THS Wuyis, Kal Siepvrakey fv Coca dpovpayv TO cwpate TEpLeOnKev.
138
AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Among these women was the wife of Panteus, most noble and beautiful to look upon. The pair were still but lately married, and their misfortunes came upon them in the hey-day of their love. Her parents, indeed, would not permit her to sail away with Pan- teus immediately, although she ‘wished to do so, but shut her up and kept her under con- straint; a little later, however, she procured herself a horse and a small sum of money, ran away by night, made all speed to Taenarum, and there embarked upon a ship bound for Egypt. She was conveyed to her husband, and with him bore their life in a strange land without complaint and cheerfully. She it was who now took the hand of Cratesicleia as she was led forth by the soldiers, held up her robe for her, and bade her be of good courage. And Crate- sicleia herself was not one whit dismayed at death, but asked one favour only, that she might die before the children died. However, when they were come to the place of execution, first the children were slain before her eyes, and then Cratesicleia herself was slain, making but this one cry at sorrows so great: “O children, whither are ye gone?’’ Then the wife of Panteus, girding up her robe, vigorous and stately woman that she was, ministered to each of the dying women calmly and without a word, and laid them out for burial as well as she could. And finally, after all were cared for, she arrayed herself, let down her robes from about her neck, and suffer- ing no one besides the executioner to come near or look upon her, bravely met her end, and had no need of anyone to array or cover up her body after death. Thus her decorum of spirit attended her in death, and she maintained to the end that watchful care of her body which she had set over it in life.

139

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXIX. ‘H pay ouv Aaxedaipov, epapirroos
dryovira evn 7? ryuvarnetep Spapare ™ pos TO ay-Speion, éy Tos éaxdrous KaLpois émedetEe THY aperiy vBproO hvac By Suvapevny o UI THS TUXNS.
odiryaus bé o doTepov npépacs oi TO capa TOU Kyeo-pévous aver TaupapLevov mapapuAdrrovtes eldov
evpeyedn Spaxovta TH Kepany TEpLTrEeT Aey WEVOY Kal GTOKPUTTOVTA TO TpPogwTroy, WOTE pn dev dpveov épimracOa capKopayov. Kx bé TOUVTOU Seto datpovia, TpoceTETe TP Baowrei Kat poBos, aAXwv Kadapyiv Tals yuvaitiy a apxny TaApacxeon,
as avdpos avypnuevov eogirovs kal KpelTTOvos

Thv vat. .ot é ‘AdeFavdpeis Kat T pooet pe-TOVTO porrevres él Tov TOTrOY, Hpoa Tov Kre0-pevn kat Oewv maida _Tpoaaryopevovtes, ax pu ov karénavoay avTovs of copwrepor, 6:5ovtes NOyOV @sS peditras pev Boes, opjxas 5é tarot Kara catrévtes éEavOodor, xavOapor bé dvwv To avTo mabovtov Swoyovodvrat, Ta be avOpwmiva owpata, TOY wept TOY puEdoY iX@pov ouppony Tia Kat avotaci év éavtois AaBovTwv, pers ava-didwot. Kal TodTO KaTLOovTES Of TaXaLol padioTA Tov Cowy Tov Spdxovta Tols Howat cvvmKeiwoav.
14@

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XXXIX. So, then, Sparta, bringing her women’s tragedy into emulous competition with that of her men, showed the world that in the last extremity Virtue cannot be outraged by Fortune. And a few days afterwards those who were keeping watch upon the body of Cleomenes where it hung, saw a serpent of great size coiling itself about the head and hiding away the face so that no ravening bird of prey could light upon it. In consequence of this, the king was seized with superstitious fear, and thus gave the women occasion for various rites of purification, since they felt that a man had been taken off who was of a superior nature and beloved of the gods. And the Alexandrians actually worshipped him, coming frequently to the spot and addressing Cleomenes as a hero and a child of the gods; but at last the wiser men among them put a stop to this by explaining that, as putrefying oxen breed bees, and horses wasps, and as beetles are generated in asses which are in the like condition of decay, so human bodies, when the juices about the marrow collect together and coagulate, produce serpents. And it was because they observed this that the ancients associated the serpent more than any other animal with heroes. |
141

Digitized by Google

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS

GRACCHUS ,
tw

oS

TIBEPIOS KAI TAIO> CPAVXOI
T. PPAPXO>

I, ‘Hyets 8¢ tHv aperny ictopiay dobedw-KoTes Exouev ovK éAdtTova wdOn TovTwv ev TH ‘Pwpaixn oufuyia Oewpijcar, tov TiBepiov Kat Tatov Biov avtimapaBddxrovtes. obtor TrBeptov Tpayyouv maides Hoav, © tinthn te ‘Pwpatior yevouevp kal Sis btrarevoavtt Kat OprayBous dvo0 KaTayayovTe NapMpOTEpov Hv TO ard THS apeTHs akiwpa. 86 nal tv Yentiwvos Tod Katarone-pnaoavtos ’AvvlBav Ovyatépa Kopynndiav, ovx av diros, GrAra Kal dSiadopos TO avdpl yeyovas, NaBety nEiwOn peta thy éxeivov TEerAEUTHVY. éEyerat 5€ mote cuANaBelw avTov emt THs KALYNS
fedryos Spaxovrwy, tovs 5é pavrers cKevrapévous
TO Tépas audpw pév ovK éav avedety ovde adeivat, wept S€ Oarépov Sratpeiv, ws 0 pev appny TP TiBeplm hépos Odvaroy davaipebeis, 7 5é Onreva
7H Kopyydig. tov oby TrBépiov nai didodvra THY yuvaixa, Kal padrdXov avT@ mpoonKew syvtt mpeaButép@ TedeuTay Hyovpevoy Ett véas ovons éxelyns, Tov pev Appeva Krelvas Tov dSpaxovTwr, adeivas Se tiv Onrcav elra borEepov ov TOAAG
al

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS
GRACCHUS
TIBERIUS GRACCHUS

I, Now that we have duly finished the first part of our story, we have to contemplate fates no less tragic than those of Agis and Cleomenes in the lives of the Roman couple, Tiberius and Caius, which we set in parallel. They were sons of Tiberius Gracchus, who, although he had been censor at Rome, twice consul, and had celebrated two triumphs, derived his more illustrious dignity from his virtue. Therefore, after the death! of the Scipio who conquered Hannibal, although Tiberius had not been his friend, but actually at variance with him, he was judged worthy to take Scipio's daughter Cornelia in marriage. We are told, moreover, that he once caught a pair of serpents on his bed, and that the soothsayers, after considering the prodigy, forbade him to kill both serpents or to let both go, but to decide the fate of one or the other of them, declaring also that the male serpent, if killed, would bring death to Tiberius, and the female, to Cornelia. Tiberius, accordingly, who loved his wife, and thought that since she was still young and he was older it was more fitting that he should die, killed the male serpent, but let the female go. A short time afterwards, as the story

1 In 183 Bc.

xpovm Tereurjoat, Sexadvo traidas éx Tihs Kopvn-Alas avT@ yeyovoras KaTaNurovra.
KopynAia 5¢ dvaraBoica tovs maidas Kab Tov olxov, otTw cwdpova Kal gidrcTexvoyv Kal peya-
, L | A 4 A A ,
AOpuyYov auTny Tapécyev Bote pn Kaxaos Sofas
A \ , > \ 4
BeBovrcdcbar rov TiBéproy avti rovavtns yu-
A 9 a ey, / C4 \ ,
vakos arroOavely éXopevov, 4 ye Kal ItoXepaiouv Tod Baciréws xotwvoupévov To Siddnua Kal pvo-pévou Tov yduov avtis npvyncato, Kal ynpevovoa Tous pév GAXous awéBare Taidas, piav 5 Tav Ouyarépwv, 7) Lentiov. TH vewTépw cuvexkyee,
\ 4 | eee \ ? 4 / 4
Kat dvo viovs, mept ay Tade yéypamrtat, TrBéprov kal [‘diov, dsayevouévous otto gdidrotipws é&€- Opeppey Bore Tavrwav evpvertdtouvs “Pwopaiwy OmoAoyoupEevws yeyovotas memadedac0at Soxeiv Bérrtov 4} wepuxévas pos apeTnv.
II, Evel 8, domep) TOV TAATCOMEVWY Kal
e A ypapopévwy Avooxovpwv opororns exer Tuva Tov
a \ a a TUKTLKOD Tpos TOV Spoytxov él THs popdijs Sra-dopay, odtw TaV veavioxwy éxeivav ev TOAND TH
mpos avopetav cal awppoovvny, ere 5é édXevOepso-TNTa Kab AoyLoTNTA Kal peyarowvyiav éudepeia
7) : ylorn é bey : xX ie Peg peyddat mepl Ta Epya xal ras qoXtTeias olov éEnvOnoav Kat Stepdvnoayv avopotornres, ov Neipov elvat por Soxet tavtas mpoexOéoOar.
A A 9 9 / , A ,
Ilp@rov péev ovv idea mpoawmou Kal Br€éupare
, A \ e

goes, he died,! leaving Cornelia with twelve children by him.
Cornelia took charge of the children and of the estate, and showed herself so discreet, so good a mother, and so magnanimous, that Tiberius was thought to have made no bad decision when he elected to die instead of such a woman. For when Ptolemy? the king offered to share his crown with her and sought her hand in marriage, she refused him, and remained a widow. In this state she lost most of her children, but three survived; one daughter, who married Scipio the Younger, and two sons, Tiberius and Caius, whose lives I now write. These sons Cornelia reared with such scrupulous care that although confessedly no other Romans were so well endowed by nature, they were thought to owe their virtues more to education than to nature.
II, Now, just as, in spite of the likeness between Castor and Pollux as they are represented in sculpture and painting, there is a certain difference of shape between the boxer and the runner, so in the case of these young Romans, along with their strong resemblance to one another in bravery and self-command, as well as in liberality, eloquence, and magnanimity, in their actions and political careers great unlike. nesses blossomed out, as it were, and came to light. Therefore I think it not amiss to set these forth before going further.

In the first place, then, as regards cast of features and look and bearing, Tiberius was gentle and sedate,

1 He was consul for the second time in 163 B.c. The year of his death is unknown. This story is told and commented on by Cicero in De divinatione i. 18, 36; ii. 29, 62.

2 Probably Ptolemy VI., surnamed Philometor, king of Egypt 181-146 B.c.

aig ae évropyos 6é Kal a podpos 0 Tdios, doe
L Snunyopetv Tov pep ép pad xXepa AeBnnora eae tov 6¢€ ‘Pwpyaiwy TP@TOV émi Tov BnpaT0s TEPLT ATW Té XpicacGat rat TEpla TAT AL
THY Tn Bevvov ef apov Néyovta, KadatTrep Kréava TOV ‘AOnvaiov loTopytat TEploT ag aL TE THY meptBorny Kal TOV pnpov arojnaat Tp@Tov THv NENYopowT wy. ETeLTa 0 Novos TOU pev Tatov po Epos Kal mepimabns els Seivwory, nOteov dé 0 TOU TeBeptou Kal paARov €maywyos olxtov’ TH
bé AéEet xaapos xal Stare ovnpevos axpiBas éxeivos, O be Laiou muOavos Kat yeyavapevos.
obTe 6é kat mepl dvavtay Kal tpdnetay EUTEANS Kal adergs o TiBépros, 0 Oo be Daios Tots pev adro1s
mapa Barely cwppwov kal avoTnpos, Th dé T pos TOV ade gov Siagpopé VEOT PETS Kab Teplepyos, @S of Tept Apotcor Hreyxov 6 ott dehpivas ? apryupovs émpiato TLS Ets exaorny Aitpay_ pax pov Xe iw kal dtaxociwv TEVTIKOVTA. T@ 5e nOet KaTa THY TOU Aoyou Stagopay o 0 pev eTTLELKNS Kat ™pGos, o 6€ Tpaxus Kat Oupoedys, WaoTE Kal mapa ye-pny ev TO every expe popevov TOAAAKLS UT opyiis THY TE poviy Grofuvew Kal Pracdnpetv Kat ocuvtTapatte tov Aoyov. GOev cai BonOnua THs éxTpom hs eroina aro TAUTNS TOV Atxtvnoy, olKeTny
OUK aVvONTOY, ds Exav hwvackikor 6 Spyavor, ¢ @ TOUS
POoryous avaBiBalovary, omeaGev ésT@S TOU
Taiov AéyovTos, omnvixa TPAXUYOMEVOV ala0otto
TH pov Kat Tapappyyvupevov 8’ Opyyy, | évedidou
TOVOY paraKor, @ TO shodpov EvOUs éexelvos awa
1 SeAgivas Blass, Fuhr, and Ziegler, with the MSS. :
5éAgixas (Delphic tables, or tripods), after Amyot.
148
Or

while Caius was high-strung and vehement, so that even when haranguing the people the one stood -composedly in one spot, while the other was the first Roman to walk about upon the rostra and pull his toga off his shoulder as he spoke. So Cleon the Athenian is said to have been the first of the popular orators to strip away his mantle and smite his thigh.! In the second place, the speech of Caius was awe-inspiring and passionate to exaggeration, while that of Tiberius was more agreeable and more conducive to pity. The style also of Tiberius was pure and elaborated to a nicety, while that of Caius was persuasive and ornate. So also as regards their table and mede of life, Tiberius was simple and plain, while Caius, although temperate and austere as compared with others, in contrast with his brother was ostentatious and _fasti- dious. Hence men like Drusus found fault with him because he bought silver dolphins at twelve hundred and fifty drachmas the pound. Again, their tempers were no less different than their speech. Tiberius was reasonable and gentle, while Caius was harsh and fiery, so that against his better judgment he was often carried away by anger as he spoke, raising his voice to a high pitch and uttering abuse and losing the thread of his discourse. Wherefore, to guard against such digressions, he employed an intelligent servant, Licinius, who stood behind him when he was speaking, with a sounding instrument for giving the tones of the voice their pitch. Whenever this servant noticed that the voice of Caius was getting harsh and broken with anger, he would give out a soft key-note, on hearing which Caius would at once remit the vehemence of his passion and of 1 See the Nicias, viii. 3.

TOU maQous cal Tis povis avuels érpavvero Kai Tapelyev éauTov evavdKdnTov.
III. Ad pev ody Siapopat Toadral TIVES OAV Quran avipayabia 5é mpos Tous Tonepious Kal pos TOUS bankoous Sucatoouvn Kat mpos TAS apxas €mriperera xal Mpos Tas Hnoovas éyepareta, dmapdddaxros. qv oe mpeaBurepos éyravTots evvea 0 TiBéptos: Kat TovTO THY éxaTépou TOM Telay aarnpTnwevay TOS Ypovots emoinge Kab TAS mpakes ovy Kicta Stehupyjvaro, pn ouvaKpacavTwy pede cvpBarovtov els TO avro THY Svvapey, peyaany av é& appoiv opov Kal avuTrep-Arxntov yevouerny. Aexéov obv idta mept éxaTépou Kal Tmept Tov mpea BuTépou m porepov.
IV. _Exeivos ToLvUY eves éx Twraidwy SYEVOMEVOS
obTws Hv meptBontos & MOTE THS TOY Ad Uyoupwv Aeyo-pevns lepwovrns ak iwOjvar Se' dperny parrov f dra THY euryéveray. edprwce dé "Armt0s Kravdcos, avnp UTaTLKOS Kal TELNTEKOS Kal T POryey pa, wpLEvos Kar afiopa THS 'Popatav Bovdijs Kal TOND ii as TOUS Kad auTov UTEpaipwv. éoTL@pévery yap é
TAUT@ TOV Lepéor, Tpog ayopevaas TOV TiBeprov Kat pirop ovnbeis, aQUuTOS éuvaro 7h Ouyar pi
vupepior. betayévov dé dopévas éxeivou Kal THS KATAWETEWS odTwH yevoperns, eiciwy o "Arrmuos oixade T pos avTov amo rhs Ovpas evOus éxanres THY yuvatKa peyanry TH dwovn Boar, *°O 'Avriotia, thy Kravoiay nov dvdpl Kad@poroynna. ; xaxel-vn Oavpdcaca, "Tis," € TeV, a) orroven 4 "

To Taxos; e& 5é TiBéprov adrn Tpayyov evpyces} 2 cl be... eipheess Bekker has ei uh... edploxes; Blass aud Fuhr ci uh edphxes (unless thow hadst found), after Stephanus,

LEO

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

his speech, grow gentle, and show himself easy to recall,
III. The differences between them, then, were of this nature ; but as regards bravery in the face of the enemy, just dealings with subject peoples, scrupulous fidelity in public office, and restraint in pleasurable indulgence, they were exactly alike. Tiberius, however, was nine years older than his brother; and this ‘set a different period for the political activity of each, and more than anything else vitiated their undertakings. They did not rise to eminence at the same time, and so did not combine their powers into one. Such an united power would have proved irresistibly great. We must therefore give an account of each by himself, and of the elder first.

IV. Tiberius, then, as soon as he got past boyhood, was so widely known as to be thought worthy of a place among the priests called Augurs; and this was due to his virtues rather than to his excellent birth, as was clearly shown by Appius Claudius. For Appius, who had been consul and censor, had been made Dean of the Roman senate! by virtue of his dignity, and in loftiness of spirit far surpassed his contemporaries, at a banquet of the augurs? addressed Tiberius with words of friendship, and asked him to become the husband of his daughter. Tiberius gladly accepted the invitation, and the betrothal was thus arranged, and when Appius returned home, from the - doorway where he stood he called his wife and cried in a loud‘voice: “ Antistia, I have betrothed our Claudia.” And Antistia, in amazement, said: “ Why so eager, or why so fast? If thou hadst only found

1 Princeps Senatus.
2 Presumably at the induction of Tiberius into office.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 vupdior.” ovK aryvom 5é Ste TovTd tives éml Tov Tarépa TOV Tpayyov Tee prov Kal Lanmiova, TOV "Ad pixavor avaépouaty, GN’ Ob TAEloUS ws
npeis yeadopuev toTopovat, Kal TloAvBtos pera, THY Zn eovos "Adptixavod TéeheuTH TOUS olKElous dad ex TAaVTOV TpoxpivarTas TOV TiBéptov ovvat THY Kopyndiav, @S UIT TOU TaTpOS avéK-dotov Kal avéyyvov atrored Oeioav.
4 ‘O © ody VEGTEPOS TeSépsos oT PATEVOMEVOS év
AtBin pera, Tov deutépov LKNTLWVOS, EXOVTOS

avrou THY adehpry, opod ouvdiaiTaevos v0 oKNVHY TO orparny® TAX” pep avrou THhV puaow katépade, TOA Kal peyada 7 pos CHrov aperijs kal pipenovy ert TOV mpabewy exépovaar, TaXU
bé Tay vewy mavTwy émparrevev evtatia Kab
5 avdpeig: Kal TOU YE TELXoUS éeméBn TOV Trohepiov
TpOTOS, as pyot Pavios, A€you Kal avr os To 826
TeBepip ovventBivat Kat TuMpEeTaay ely éxeivns THS apiareias. ToAAny oe Kal Tapov evvotay elev ev TO oTpatoTéedep Kat wo0ov amaddatTO-HEeVvoOsS AUTO KaTénenee.
V. Mera de THY orparetay éxelyny aipebels Tapas edaxe tav vuratov Tat@ Maykive ov-oTparevelv én Nopavrivous, avO pdm pev ov ToVnp®, Bapunotpotatp dé ‘Popaiwv oTpaTny®.
510 Kat padrov év TUXaLS Tapanroyos Kat mpary-paw evar ious Tov TeBepiou béAaprrev ov povov TO guveToV Kal avdpetov, arr’, o Gavydovov HV, aides TE ToNhy Kal Top Tov ap ovTos, vo TOV KaK@V OVS éaUTOY, EL oOTpaTNYOS éoTLY, erLys-
2 vwoKovtos. HTTNOEls yap wayats peydAas érre-

Tiberius Gracchus for betrothal to her!”’ I am aware that some! refer this story to Tiberius the father of the Gracchi and Scipio Africanus Major, but the majority of writers tell it as I do, and Polybius says” that after the death of Scipio Africanus the relatives of Cornelia chose out Tiberius in preference to all others and gave her to him, as one who had been left by her father unaffianced and unbetrothed.

The younger Tiberius, accordingly, serving in Africa under the younger Scipio,’ who had married his sister, and sharing his commander’s tent, soon learned to understand that commander’s nature (which _pro- duced many great incentives towards the emulation of virtue and its imitation in action), and soon led all the young men in discipline and bravery; yes, he was first to scale the enemies’ wall, as Fannius says, who writes also that he himself scaled the wall with Tiberius and shared in that exploit. While he remained with the army Tiberius was the object of much good will, and on leaving it he was greatly missed.

V. After this campaign he was elected quaestor, and had the fortune to serve in a war against Num- antia under the consul Caius Mancinus,! who was not bad as a man, but most unfortunate of the Romans as a general. Therefore in the midst of unexpected misfortunes and adverse circumstances not only did the sagacity and bravery of Tiberius shine forth all the more, but also—and this was astonishing—the great respect and honour in which he held his commander, who, under the pressure of disasters, forgot even that he was a general. For after he had 1 Cf. Livy. xxxviii. 57. 2 Cf. Polybius, xxxii. 13. * In the campaign of 146 B.c., which ended with the destruction of Carthage. * Consul in 137 B.c.

, N 3 4 , 2 A \
xNeipnoe prev avalevyvivar vuKtos, éxduTr@v Td
otparotredoy aicBopévar 5é rav Nopavtivey cab
N . s 5 3 \ 4 A A
TO pev aotpatroredov evOvs AaBovtwy, Tots 4é avOpwrots émimerovtwv gevyovet cal Tous éoxd-Tous hovevovtwy, To 5é may éyxuxXovpévwy oTpa-Teuvpa Kal cvvwOovvTwy els TOTTOUS yaderrovs Ka}
SiadevEty ovK Exovtas, amoyvols THY éx TOU BidlecOat awrnpiavy o Marykivos émrexnpuKxeveto mept omovoay Kal Siadvcewy mpos avtouvs: ot Sé
, ” > \ 4 , N
muoteve Epacav ovdevt mrAnY pov@ TiBepie, cat ToUTOV éKkéAevov atroaTéAAELY POS AUTOUS. ée7rEmovOecav dé tovTO Kai dt avTov Tov veavioKov (hv yap avtod mAEiaTos NOyos él oTpaTtas), Kal pepvnpévoe tov watpos TuBepiou, bs moAeunoas
"IBnpow nat qodXovs xatactpedpevos eipnyny &ero mpos tovs Nowavtivous xal tavtny éurre-Sodvta rov Sijpov opOas Kai Sicaiws del rapécyev.
4 \ e A a
ovTw 59 weudbels o TiBéptos Kal ouyyevopevos
A > 4 \ / \ ,
Tois avdpdot, Kal Ta pev reicas, Ta Oe SeEdpue-vos €otreicato, cal Sucpupiovs ~cwoe mepipavas ‘Pwpaiwv toditas, dvev Oepameias cal trav é&w takews éropévav.
VI. Ta &é év 7 ydpaxt AnPOévta ypnpata wavta Katéoxov ot Nopavtivor cat dSierropOnoav.
éy 5€ tovtots Kal mivaxides oav tov TiBepiov, ypdupata Kat AOYous éxyovcas TIS TapLevTLKTS
b] A \ A 4 9 a
apxns, & mepb TodXOD trotovpevos atroAaBeiv, H8n TOU oTpaTod TpoKEYwpNKOTOS avéaTpEYrE TrPOS
THY Tod, éxwv pel” éavTod Tpeis H TéTTapas

been defeated in great battles, he attempted to abandon his camp and withdraw his forces by night ; but the Numantines became aware of his attempt and promptly seized his camp. Then they fell upon his men as they fled, slew those who were in the rear, encompassed his whole army, and crowded them inta regions that were full of difficulties and afforded no escape. Mancinus, despairing of forcing his way to safety, sent heralds to the enemy proposing a truce and terms of peace; but the enemy declared that they had confidence in no Roman save only Tiberius, and ordered that he should be sent to them. They had this feeling towards the young man not only on his own account (for he was held.in very high esteem by the Numantine soldiery), but also because they remembered his father Tiberius, who waged war against the Spaniards,! and subdued many of them, but made a peace with the Numantines, to the observance of which with integrity and justice he always held the Roman people. So Tiberius was sent and held conference with the enemy, and after getting them to accept some conditions, and himself accepting others, effected a truce, and thereby manifestly saved the lives of twenty thousand Roman citizens, besides attendants and camp followers.

VI. However, all the property captured in the camp was retained by the Numantines and treated as plunder. Among this were also the ledgers of Tiberius, containing written accounts of his official expenses as quaestor. These he was very anxious to recover, and so, when the army was already well on its way, turned back towards the city, attended by

In 180-179 B.C.
155
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 éraipous. éxxarécas 5¢ tev Nopavtivev rovs dpyovras nkiov KopicacBar tas SéXrovs, @S py)
, a 9 a \ 9 ” J
mapacyxot Tots €xOpots SuaBorny ovK Exwv atrodoyioac Oat trept TOV @kovoynpevov. naoOévtes obv of Nopavrivos th ovvtuxia THs ypEeias Tapexddovy 9 AN >’ A b \ / e \ e , auTov eioedOetv eis Thy Todt: ws b€ elaoTHKeL BovXevopevos, éyyus mpoaeAOovtes evedvovto tais yepal, cal ALTrapeis Hoav Seduevor wnere vopifery
>] \ a >] 9 id 4 ray A avTovs TroAEuious, GAN @s dirows ypnoOa Kal mirteverv. edokev ovv TO TiBepio taita mroveiv, tov te SéATwY Treptexopevw Kal SedorxoTt Tapo-Evvewv ws atria toupévous Tovs Nopavtivous. eicer-Oovre Sé eis THY TOoALY Tp@TOV péev AptoToy mapélecav, kal Tacav érroincavto Sénow éuda-n A b A
yely TL KOWT peT aUT@V KaOnpevov’ Eretta Tas déXT0vs amédocayv, cal trav adXwy & BovXotTO

, a > 7 e 9 IO\ A ‘ xenuatav ANaBely exédevov. Oo 8 ovdevy TOV
\ , A ALBavwrov © pos Tas Snuooias éxpHTO Ovaias
AaBowv, awnrdGev domacdpevos Kal dirodppovnbeis Tovs avdpas.
VII. *Enret 5€ ets ‘Pony érravnrOev, 4 ev OA mpakis ws Sewn kal Katatoxvvovca tHy “Pony aitiav elye kal Katnyopiay, of 5é TOV OTPATLWTOV oixetoe Kab diror péya pépos dvres tod Sypyov auvétpexov mpos tov TuBépiov, Ta pev aiaypa TaY yeyovorwy avadéeporTes eis Tov apyorta, Sv avtov 5é cwlerOas TorovTous TOXiTas dacKorTes.
oi pévtoe Svoxepaivortes TA Tempayueva ptpel-aQat Tovs mpoyovous éxédevoy' Kal yap éexeivor 156

bo

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

three or four companions. After summoning forth the magistrates of Numantia, he asked them to bring him his tablets, that he might not give his enemies opportunity to malign him by not being able to give an account of his administration. The Numantines, accordingly, delighted at the chance to do him a favour, invited him to enter the city; and as he stood deliberating the matter, they drew near and clasped his hands, and fervently entreated him no longer to regard them as enemies, but to treat and trust them as friends. Tiberius, accordingly, decided to do this, both because he set great store by his tablets, and because he feared to exasperate the Numantines by showing them distrust. After he had entered the city, in the first place the Numantines set out a meal for him, and entreated him by all means to sit down and eat something in their company; next, they gave him back his tablets, and urged him to take whatever he wanted of the rest of his property. He took nothing, however, except the frankincense which he was wont to use in the public sacrifices, and after bidding them farewell with every expression of friendship, departed.

VII. When he came back to Rome, the whole transaction was blamed and denounced as a ter- rible disgrace to the city, although the relatives and friends of the soldiers, who formed a large part of the people, came flocking to Tiberius, imputing the disgrace in what had happened to his commander, but insisting that it was due to Tiberius that the lives of so many citizens had been saved. Those, however, who were displeased at what had been done urged for imitation the example of their ancestors, who flung to the enemy unarmed the generals

157

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tous ayannoavtas bird Lavrov apePjvar orTpa-THYOUS AUTOUS TE TOIS TOAELLOLS yULLVOUS Tpoc-éppirav, cad rovs ébawapévous Kal peracyovrTas TOV oTrovdar, oloy Tapias Kal yedudpyYous, dpoiws mpovBanrov, eis éxeivous thy émiopKiay Kal Thy Siddrvowv tev wporoynpévov Tpétrovtes. &vOa Sy \ f 4 \ \ wv \
kal paddsora THY Tmpos Tov TtBéptoy edvorav Kal \ 907 e A ‘ A \ ad
omovdny e&édnvev o Stjpos. Tov péey yap braroy éebndicavto yupvov Kal Sedepévov rrapadodva n , A wv 9 , 4
tois Noxavrtivors, Tov 6é ddXwv edeicavto TavTwv Sia TrBéprov. Sone? S¢ nal Lenriwv BonOjaat, péytotos @y TOTEe Kal mreioTov Suvapevos “Pw-
4 9 > 9 A 9 > @ * @ N
paiwy: adr’ ovdey Hrrov év aitriaws Hv Ste Tov Mayxivov ov mepréowoer, o0d5é Tas oTrovddas éptre-SwOjvat tots Nopavtivos éaroviace &:’ avdpos
=) , , a , , \ \ oixetou Kal dirou Tod TiBepiou yevopévas. TO Sé wWAélo Tov éorKev Ex didoTipias Kal TOV érratpovTw@Y Tov TiBépiov dirwv nat codictav éxyevécbar Ta
A nw 9 > ("4 \ 9 ‘ b J , THs Stapopas. adr adn ye mpos ovdev dvnkertov ovdé havarov e€étrece. Soxet 8 dv poe pndapmas mepeteccly o TiBépios ols érrabev, ef raphy avrov
“ 4 , € 9 s “A A Tois ToAtTevLact Yentiwv o Adpixavos viv Se éxeivou rept Nopavtiav dvtos on Kal roAepobvTos HYaATO THs TEpl TOUS VOMOUS TOALTELAS EK TOLAUTNS aitias.
VIII. ‘Pwpaios tis tev dortuyertovwY ywpas Sonv arrerépovto tTrokéuo, THY pev érimpacKoy, 158

themselves who had been satisfied to be let go by the Samnites, and in like manner cast forth those who had taken hand and share in the treaty, as for instance the quaestors and military tribunes, turning upon their heads the guilt of perjury and violation of the pact.1 In the present affair, indeed, more than at any other time, the people showed their good will _ and affection towards Tiberius. For they voted to deliver up the consul unarmed and in bonds to the Numantines, but spared all the other officers for the sake of Tiberius. It would seem, too, that Scipio, who was then the greatest and most influential man at Rome, helped to save them; but none the less he was blamed? for not saving Mancinus, and for not insisting that the treaty with the Numantines, which had been made through the agency of his kinsman and friend Tiberius, should be kept inviolate. It would appear that the disagreement between the two men arose chiefly through the ambition of Tiberius and from the friends and sophists who urged him on. But this disagreement certainly resulted in no mischief past remedy. And in my opinion Tiberius would never have met with his great misfor- tunes if Scipio Africanus had been present at Rome during his political activity. But as it was, Scipio was already at Numantia § und waging war there when Tiberius began to agitate for his agrarian laws. The occasion of this was as follows.

VIII. Of the territory which the Romans won in war from their neighbours, a part they sold, and a

1 In 321 B.o. Cf. Cicero, De off, iii. 30, 109.

2 By Tiberius and his friends.

® Scipio was sent against Numantia in 134 B.0., and took and destroyed the city in the following year, in which year also Tiberius was killed.

thy dé trotovpevor Snuociav ediSocav véuecbat Tols axtnuoct Kal aTropots TOY ToALTOY, aTro- gopay ov todAnv eis ro Syudoiov tedovawv. ap~apévwv 5¢ tav wWrovoiwy brepBadrew TAS atropopas Kal Tous Tévntas eEeXauvovtTwr, eypadn vomos ovK é@y TAC pa ys Exe WrElova TAY Tevtaxociwv. xa Bpayiv pev yxpovov érécxe THY Wreovetiav TO ypadupa TOvTO, Kal Tots Trév7N- aw éBonOnoe Kata Ywpay pévovow emi TaY pE- picbwpévorv Kal vepouévors tv Exaatos €& apxis elye potpav. atepov dé TaY yerTVs@YTwY TAOV- ctwv wToBAnToLs TpocwTos petapEepovTwy Tas picOwces eis éavtouvs, TéeAos S¢ havepas 76n Se éavrav Ta Wrciota Katexovtav, éEwobertes ot Tevnres oUTE Tals oTpaTeEials ETL TpOOUpoUS TrapeEl- Nov éavTovs, HuéAovy Te Taidwv avaTpop7s, @OTE Tayv thy Itadiav adracay odyavdpias éXevOepwv aicBécbar, Secpwrnpiwy S¢ BapBapixov épre- wAnobar, 8 ay éyewpyouv oi TAOVaLOL TA Ywpia, Tous toNitas éFeXdoavtes. emrexeipyoe pev ovv TH StopOwcer T'aios Aaidtos 0 LKnTimvos ETaipos, dvtixpovodvtwy $& tav duvatav poknOeis Tov OopuBov Kat mavadpevos érexAjOn coos 7} ppo- vipos' éxdrepov yap édoxer onpuaivew 0 camTinvs.

6 TiBépios 8& Sypapyos atrodeayOels evOds er’ auTny opunoe THy mpakiv, as pév ol TWretoToL Aéyover, Atopdvovs rod pytopos nai Brooatov
Tod dtrocopou TapopuncavtTwv avTov, @Y Oo meV
Avopdyns guyds Fv Mutvanvaios, 6 8 avrodev 160

part they made common land, and assigned it for occupation to the poor and indigent among the citizens, on payment of a small rent into the public treasury. And when the rich began to offer larger rents and drove out the poor, a law was enacted forbidding the holding by one person of more than five hundred acres of land. For a short time this enactment gave a check to the rapacity of the rich, and was of assistance to the poor, who remained in their places on the land which they had rented and occupied the allotment which each had held from the outset. But later on the neighbouring rich men, by means of fictitious personages, transferred these rentals to themselves, and finally held most of the land openly in their own names. Then the poor, who had been ejected from their land, no longer showed themselves eager for military service, and neglected the bringing up of children, so that soon all Italy was conscious of a dearth of freemen, and was filled with gangs of foreign slaves, by whose aid the rich cultivated their estates, from which they had driven away the free citizens. An attempt was there- fore made to rectify this evil, and by Caius Laelius the comrade of Scipio; but the men of influence opposed his measures, and he, fearing the disturbance which might ensue, desisted, and received the surname of Wise or Prudent (for the Latin word “sapiens” would seem to have either meaning). Tiberius, however, on being elected tribune of the people, took the matter directly in hand. He was incited to this step, as most writers say, by Diophanes the rhetorician and _ Blossius the philosopher. Diophanes was an exile from Mitylene, but Blossius

161

é€ "Itadias Kupaios, "Avtitutpou tov Tapoéws yeyovws €v dotee auvnOns Kat TeTLNpevos UT avtod Tpocpwrncect ypappdtwov dtdocddgav.
éviot S¢ xat Kopyniiay cuvetratti@vtat thy pn-Tépa TodAdKIS TOUS Viors ovetdifovcay Ott “Pwpatio. XKnriwvos autyv Ett TevOepav, ovmrw de pntépa Tpayyev mpocayopevovow. addot be Lropiov twa Lloorovpioy aitvoy yevéoOar NEyou-olv, HruKL@Tny ‘rod TeBepiou Kxat mpos dogay ébuptdrdov avT@ mepl tas cuvnyopias, Ov, ws
érravirOev ad Tis TTpAaTLAs, EUpwv TOAD TH SoEN Kal TH Suvdper wapnrXayora Kal Oavyalopevor, HOéANGEV, ws Eotxev, UTEpBaréa Oat TrodiTEvpaTos
mapaBorov Kal peyddnv mpoadoxiay éyovtos arvyduevos. 0 & adedpos avtod Tdios & tive

BuBrie yéypadev ets Nopavtiav tropevopevov 1a
THs Tuppnvias tov TiBépiov, cal tHv épnulav ths Yapas opavTa Kal Tovs yewpyourTas } véworTas oixétas éretoaxtous Kal BapRdpous, ToTe TPATOV émt votv BaréoOar thy pupiwov Kaxav aptacay avtois modtteiavy. Hv dé wrEoTHY avTos oO 8%- pos opuny Kal dirotipiay éFippe, mpoxadovpevos Sia ypaypatwv adtov év atoais Kai toixots Kal pynpact KaTaypapouevwy avadaBely Tots Téevyct Thy Snpociay ywpay.
IX. Ov pnv ed' abtod ye auvéOnxe Tov vopor, Tois 6€ mpwrevovaw apeth kal SoEn Tov TOMTODY aupBovros ypnodpevos, dv nal Kpdooos Fv 6 apxtepevs Kal Movetos YearBoras o vowodeierns 162

was a native Italian from Cumae, had been an intimate friend of Antipater of Tarsus at Rome, and had been honoured by him with the dedication of philosophical treatises. But some put part of the blame upon Cornelia the mother of Tiberius, who often reproached her sons because the Romans still called her the mother-in-law of Scipio, but not yet the mother of the Gracchi. Others again say that a certain Spurius Postumius was to blame. He was of the same age as Tiberius, and a rival of his in reputation as an advocate; and when Tiberius came back from his cam- paign and found that his rival had far outstripped him in reputation and influence and was an object of public admiration, he determined, as it would seem, to outdo him by engaging in a bold political measure which would arouse great expectations among the people. But his brother Caius, in a certain pamphlet, has written that as Tiberius was passing through Tuscany on his way to Numantia, and observed the dearth of inhabitants in the couutry, and that those who tilled its soil or tended its flocks there were imported barbarian slaves, he tlien first tonceived the public policy which was the cause of countless ills to the two brothers. However, the energy and ambition of Tiberius were most of all kindled by the people themselves, who posted writings on porticoes, house-walls, and monuments, calling upon him to recover for the poor the public land.

IX. He did not, however, draw up his law by himself, but took counsel with the citizens who were foremost in virtue and reputation, among whom were Crassus the pontifex maximus, Mucius Scaevola the 1 Probably a political pamphlet in the form of a letter. Cf. Cicero, de div. ii. 29, 62.

163

UTatevwv Tote Kai KrXavdsos "Amarios 0 KndeotIs

Tov TeBepiou. Kat Soxet vopmos eis abixvav Kai mreovefiay TOTAUTHY pndemore mpgore os ‘ypa-dijvat xat pahaxw@rTepos. ous yap det Bieny THS arreDeias Sodvae Kat pera, Cnpias iv mapa TOUS vopous éxapTovvTo Xwpav agdelvat, TOUTOUS éxe-Nevere TOMY TpoohapBavovtas éxBaivew av aOdLKws EXERTHVTO, Kal mTapadexea Bat TOUS Bon-Oeias Seopévous TAY TONTODY. ana Kaitrep ovTw THs eravop0acews ovens eVYV@MOvOS, O pev Of mos nyara, Tapes TA yeyernueva, mavoacbat 70
NoLTrov abiKxovperos, ot dé TovaLOL «al KTNMATtKOL mrcovetia bev TOV VoLOD, opyh dé xal piroveria.
TOV vopobérny u éxOous exovTes, emex el pouv
aTroT péTrELy TOV jipov, as Ys avasac wov emt
TvyXUTEL THS monTelas eladyovtos Tod TeBepiou Kal TaVvTa mpaypata KtvoovTos.
"AAN’ ovdev émépatvov- 0 yap TeBéptos 7 pos
Kany vrdGeow Kal dccaiav arywvetopuevos ovo
Kat pavrorepa Koo puhoas duvapevep mpaypara
Seuvos Hv Kal Gwaxos, oroTe TOD Sjpou TO Anpare TEpLKeXYMEVOU KATAOTAS Aéyou Tepi TOV TWEvyTOV, @S Ta pev Onpia Ta THY "ItaXiav vewoueva Kal pwreor éyer Kal KovTatov éore altay éxdoT@ Kat carakvoets, Tots O€ UTEP THs ‘Iradias paxopévors cal an oBviaKxovaw dé pos Kat Poros, aAXouv Oe ovdevos peTEaTW, arr’ dowKot Kal avi-Sputor peta TEKVOV TRAVOVTAL Kat yuvarnar, ot dé _auToK paTopes pevoovrat TOUS OTpaTLaTas ev
Tals payais Tapaxadobvytes uTép Tddwy Kal
1 xaradvoe:s Bekker and many other editors have xard8ucis, after Stephanus and Reiske.
164

jurist, who was then consul, and Appius Claudius, his father-in-law. And it is thought that a law dealing with injustice aud rapacity so great was never drawn up in milder and gentler terms. For men who ought to have been punished for their disobedience and to have surrendered with payment of a fine the land which they were illegally enjoying, these men it merely ordered to abandon their injust acquisitions upon being paid their value, and to admit into owner- ship of them such citizens as needed assistance. But although the rectification of the wrong was so considerate, the people were satisfied to let bygones be bygones if they could be secure from such wrong in the future; the men of wealth and substance, however, were led by their greed to hate the law, and by their wrath and contentiousness to hate the law-giver, and tried to dissuade the people by alleging that Tiberius was introducing a re-distribution of land for the confusion of the body politic, and was stirring up a general revolution.

But they accomplished nothing; for Tiberius, striving to support a measure which was honourable and just with an eloquence that would have adorned even a meaner cause, was formidable and invincible, whenever, with the people crowding around the rostra, he took his stand there and pleaded for: the poor. “The wild beasts that roam over Italy,’’ he would say, “have every one of them a cave or lair to lurk in; but the men who fight and die for Italy enjoy the common air and light, indeed, but nothing else ; houseless and homeless they wander about with their wives and children. And it is with lying lips that their imperators exhort the soldiers in their battles to

€ a ? , \ , bd 4 b
fep@av apvverOat Tovs Todepiovs: ovderl yap éativ ov Boos TATPHOS, ovUK ploy TpoyovtKov TAY 4 € J > e 9 a, lol
tocouTtav ‘Pwpaiwy, addr’ vTép adXNoTpias Tpud7s
kal wAOUTOU TrOAELODaL Kal aTroOYNnaKOVGL, KUpLOL THs olxoupevns eivat Aeyopevot, piay dé BadXov idiav ovK éxovTes.
4 Ul
X. Tovtovs amd dpovnpatos peyadov xal
a a ,
aa0ous arnOivod Tovs Aoyous KaTLovTas! eis Tov Siuov evOovaravTa Kai suveEaviotapevov ovdeis ipictato TeV évavTiwv. édoavTes OdV TO aVTI-
> “A Néyerv ert Madpxov ‘OxraBiov tpérovTa trav
Snuapywov eva, veaviav éuBpi0n 16 780s Kal
Koo pov, eraipov S¢ tov TtBepiov cal auvnOn. 816
TO MeV TPOTov aldovpevos Exetvov avedveto* ToA-
Nov bé Kal duvarav Seopévov nal ALTrapovvTwY
(4 9 @ i > 61 A T f \ aotrep éxBiabeis avtixabiotato TH TiBepio Kat
\ / “A SuexpoveTo Tov vowov. éate d€ TOU KwAVOVTOS év
Tots Snudpyors TO Kpdtos: ovdéy yap oi moAXol
,

KeXevovTes Tepaivovoty évos évictapmévov. pos
A e tovTo mrapotuvOecis o TiBéptos tov pev pirav-
, “A Opwroy éraveieto vouov, Tov dé Hdiw TE TOIS a \ / > A bd a qWoANois Kat ahodpotepov eri tovs adixodvTas > / v 7 9ge/ A ,
etoépepev dn, Kedevwn eEiotacbar THS Ywpas Hy EKEXTNVTO TTAPA TOUS TPOTEPOUS VOLOUS.
? e A bd wn
Hoap ovv opod tt Kal!’ éxadotny jpépay ayaves
A \ \ ’ A
avT@ mpos tov ‘OxrdBiov émi rod Bnyatos, év
/ ¥ a ols, xaitep €& axpas aotrovdns Kal dtrdoverkias
, b > a
avrepeloovres, ovdey eitreiv AéyovTat Tepl aAAN-
A ca a
Awy havrov, ovde pHa tpoTeceivy Oatépov pos
1 ~xatidvras Bekker has xararelvovra, after Coraés, from the variant xararelvoyras.
166

829

8

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

defend sepulchres and shrines from the enemy; for not a man of them has an hereditary altar,not one of all these many Romans an ancestral tomb, but they fight and die to support others in wealth and luxury, and though they are styled masters of the world, they have not a single clod of earth that is their own.”

X. Such words as these, the product of a lofty spirit and genuine feeling, and falling upon the ears of a people profoundly moved and fully aroused to the speaker’s support, no adversary of Tiberius could successfully withstand. Abandoning therefore all counter-pleading, they addressed themselves to Marcus Octavius, one of the popular tribunes, a young man of sober character, discreet, and an intimate companion of Tiberius. On this account Octavius at first tried to hold himself aloof, out of regard for Tiberius; but he was forced from his position, as it were, by the prayers and supplications of many influential men, so that he set himself in opposition to Tiberius and staved off the passage of the law. Now, the decisive power is in the hands of any tribune who interposes his veto; for the wishes of the majority avail nothing if one tribune is in opposition. Incensed at this procedure, Tiberius withdrew his considerate law, and introduced this time one which was more agreeable to the multitude and more severe against the wrongdoers, since it simply ordered them to vacate without compensation the land which they had acquired in violation of the earlier laws.

Almost every day, therefore, there were forensic contests between Tiberius and Octavius, in which, as we are told, although both strove together with the utmost earnestness and rivalry, neither abused the other or let fall a single word about the other which

167

Cr

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

TOV Erepov Ov opyny avert jSevov. ov yap jLovov
év Baxxevpace,' os €oucev, GAAG Kal ev prro-Tipiats Kal dpyais TO TepuKevar KAN@S Kal TreE-Trabebabar cod poves epiarnat kal KaTAKOG Wet Thy Sidvotay. errel bé € ewpa TOV 'OxraBrov é évexopevoy TH vow Kal KATEXOVTA THIS Snpoctas YOpAs cuxyny o T tBépros, edeiTo Tapeivat Thy tAovErKiay, UptoTapevos auT@ THY ToNY atro-wo ely éx TOY dior, Katmep ov AayT pay éyTwv.
ouK dvacxouevou be Tob 'OxtaBiou, Staypappare Tas dddas apxas amdcas éxobhuce xpnuarifer, axpe dy 7 mept Tov vomou Suevex OH Pigos TO bé TOU K povou va@ ohpayidas idias éméBanrev, tras ou Tapiae pndev é& avrov hap Bavorev pnd eloge-
povev, Kal TiS areOjaact TOV OTPATHYODY | Cnpiav
émexnpu ev, OTE mavTas UTode.oayTas adetvar
THY EXao TO ™poonkovaay oixovopiar. éevrev0ev

Ob KTnpaTLiKOl Tas pev éoOATas peréBarov Kal Tepiyecav olxTpoL Kal TaTELVoOl KaTa THY ayopay, émeBovrevov be 76 TiBepio xpuda Kal cuvioTacay eT aur ov TOUS avaipngovTas, OTE Kd-Keivoy ovdevos ayvoodvTos Uirotwvvvabat Ergidiov AnarpiKor, 6 doAwva Kxarovou.
XI. 'Evotdons be THs nuépas Kal tov dhpov avtTov KaXovvtos él thy Wihdov, npracOncay
bro TOV Trova toy ai vopias, Kat Ta yevopeva TOAAHY ElXe ovyXUaLY. ov pny adda TOY Tept
TeBéptov mAnOet Bidoac Bar Suvapéveov Kat ouo-Tpepopevwv emi tovto, MadXNos kat PovrABros,
: kal yap év Baxxevuaciy
obo" } ye cwppwy ov Siapbapjoerat (Kuripides, Bacchae, 310f. (Kirchhoff)).

anger made unseemly. For not only “ in Bacchic revelries,” as it appears, but also in the exercise of rivalry and wrath, a noble nature and a sound train- ing restrain and regulate the mind. Moreover, when Tiberius observed that Octavius himself was amenable to the law as a large holder of the public land, he begged him to remit his opposition, promising to pay him the value of the land out of his own means, although these were not: splendid. But Octavius would not consent to this, and therefore Tiberius — issued an edict forbidding all the other magistrates to transact any public business until such time as the vote should be cast either for or against his law. He also put his private seal upon the temple of Saturn, in order that the quaestors might not take any money from its treasury or pay any into it, and he — made proclamation that a penalty would be imposed upon such praetors as disobeyed, so that all magis- trates grew fearful and ceased performing their several functions. Thereupon the men of property put on the garb of mourning and went about the forum in pitiful and lowly guise; but in secret they plotted against the life of Tiberius and tried to raise a band of assassins to take him off, so that Tiberius on his part—and everybody knew it—wore a con- cealed short-sword such as brigands use (the name for it is “ dolo’’).

XI. When the appointed day was come and Tiber- ius was summoning the people to the vote, the voting urns were stolen away by the party of the rich, and great confusion arose. However, the supporters of Tiberius were numerous enough to force the issue, and were banding together for this purpose, when

¥ e , ‘ A , \
avdpes umatiKol, mpoatrecovTes TH TeBepip Kal Yetpav amTouevot Kal daxpvortes éSdovtTo Travca-cOat. tov dé Kal TO éAXOY Goov ovTrH SeLvoY Hd cupudpovodvtos, cat de aide Tav avipav muopévou TL KeNEVOVEL TPATTELY AUTOV, OUK Epacav akioypew elvyat mpos THALKaUTnY oupRovAcaD, 9 , \ fa) fo) V4 \ 4 émetpeirar 5€ TH BovrAn KedrevovTes kal Sedpevor ocuveTrecay.
‘Os 5€ ovddév érépatvey Bovrn cuvedOoica
Sua Tovs mAovatlous taxyvovTas ev AUTH, TpéemETaL
\ v b) , b A 9 / 9 4
Wpos Epyov ov voutpov ovde éemiecxés, aperéobat
fo) 9 A \ b , > “A . 9
THS apxns tov OxraBiov, apnxYavav aNrws é7rayayely TO vou@ THY Whdov. Kal mparov péev éSeiro ghavepas avtov, Noyous Te mpordépwv diravOpwrovs nal yeipav amropevos, évdodvat

nal yapicacGa THe Shum Sixaca pev akcovyts, puixpa 5é avti peyadwv Tovey Kal Kwwdvvev AnWo-/ 5 @ / de a? / \ v peeve. SiwOoupévorv 6é tod "OxraBiou thy évtevéty, urevmav o TrBépios ws ovx Eotiv apyovtas apgo-Tépovs Kal Tepl wpayudtev peyddwv an’ tons
éFoucias Stadepopévous avev rroréuou SreEenGeiv Tov xpovov, &v laua TovTov povoy copay épn TO wavoacbat THS apyis Tov Etepov. Kal TEpt avTOD
/ \. 9 4 > / fe) , A ye mpotépou tov 'OxraBuoy éxédrevoe TO Sum Wi-gov avabobvar: xataBnoecOas yap evOus idvatns ryevopevos, dv Ttovto So&n Trois mroditats. Tov dé
"0 / A) Gé > A 4 \ > , xraBiov un Bérovros avtos edn repli éxeivou Wipov avabacetp, édv un weTayv@ Bovrevadpevos,
XII. Kai tore pev él tovtos duédvoe rv
170

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Manlius and Fulvius, men of consular dignity, fell down before Tiberius, clasped his hands, and with tears besought him to desist. Tiberius, conscious that the future was now all but desperate, and moved by respect for the men, asked them what they would have him do. They replied that they were not competent to advise in so grave a crisis, and urged him with entreaties to submit the case to the senate. To this Tiberius consented.

But the senate in its session accomplished nothing, owing to the prevailing influence of the wealthy class in it, and therefore Tiberius resorted to a measure which was illegal and unseemly, the ejection of Octavius from his office; but he was unable in any other way to bring his law to the vote. In the first place, however, he begged Octavius in public, ad- dressing him with kindly words and clasping his hands, to give in and gratify the people, who demanded only their just rights, and would receive only a trifling return for great toils and perils. But Octavius rejected the petition, and therefore Tiberius, after premising that, since they were colleagues in office with equal powers and differed on weighty measures, it was impossible for them to complete their term of office without open war, said he saw only one remedy for this, and that was for one or the other of them to give up his office. Indeed, he urged Octavius to put to the people a vote on his own case first, promising to retire at once to private life if this should be the will of the citizens. But Octavius was unwilling, and therefore Tiberius declared that he would put the case of Octavius unless Octavius should change his mind upon reflection.

XII. With this understanding, he dissolved the exKhnotay' TH Oe baTepaig TOU Snpov cuvedfovros

avaBas emt TO Bijua | muy emretparo meiGew TOV
"OxrdBiov. @s Sé Fw dapetateatos, elaonveyxe vOHOv aarpovpevov avrod THV dnuapyxitay, Kal TOUS Ton TAS evdus exdre THv Wwhpov emipépovTas.
ovoay b¢ mévre Kal TpidxovTa purer, as ai bexa-ENTA THY igpav emevnvoxeta av Kal pas ere T pooyevouerns édee tov "OxtdBtov iSiornv ryeve-a0a, Kedevoas ema xety addes édeito Tov Oxra-Btov Kai trepréBarev aurov év dyet TOU Spou Ka KaTnomacero, MTapov Kal Seopevos pie éauT ov direpov meprideiy ryeVO{LEVOV par éxeivep Bapéos ovTw Kal cxv0Opwirod TroNLTEvpATOS alTiay mpocaypat.
Tovtwy tav Senoewv ov TAVTENDS aTEeyKTOV
ove arevh Néyouowy axpoacbat TOV 'OxraBrov, arra Kal Saxpuwv Uromiumiac bat Ta Cupara
Kal olwTray ert moNUy \povov. as HévTOL T pos
TOUS WAOvatoUs Kal TOUS KTNpaTLKOvS TWWETTOTAS améBrerper, aidecOels Sonet Kat poBnbels THY Tap exelvous ado€kiav UTooTHvat wav devvov ovK ayEevvas Kal Keredo as mparrew 7) Bovrerat TOV TiBéprov. ovtTw 87 Tov vopou xupodevtos o pev TeBéptos TOV arredevdépov Tut mpooeratev amo
Tob Bipatos EXKVoAaL TOV 'Oxra Bron: EX pijTo dé vrrnpéeTacs amehevdepors idiots, Kal TOUTO THV Oxpu OlKTpoTepay Tob 'OxtaBiov Taperxev Ehucomevou
pos DBpw. o 5é Sipuos epopynoev avT@, Kal TOV Tovotwv cuvopapovrwy Kal SiacxovTwv Tas xelpas, O pev 'Oxra Bros erwOn HOALS eCapraryels kai dtahbuyov Tov dxov, otxétny 5€ avTod TLaTOV 172 assembly for that day; but on the following day, after the people had come together, he mounted the rostra and once more attempted to persuade Octavius.

When, however, Octavius was not to be persuaded,

Tiberius introduced a law depriving him of his tribuneship, and summoned the citizens to cast their votes upon it at once. Now, there were five and thirty tribes, and when seventeen of them had cast their votes, and the addition of one more would make it necessary for Octavius to become a private citizen, Tiberius called a halt in the voting, and again entreated Octavius, embracing and kissing him in the sight of the people, and fervently begging him not to allow himself to be dishonoured, and not to attach to a friend responsibility for a measure so grievous and severe.

On hearing these entreaties, we are told, Octavius was not altogether untouched or unmoved ;_ his eyes filled with tears and he stood silent for a long time. But when he turned his gaze towards the men of wealth and substance who were standing in a body together, his awe of them, as it would seem, and his fear of ill repute among them, led him to take every risk with boldness and bid Tiberius do what he pleased. And so the law was passed, and Tiberius ordered one of his freedmen to drag Octavius from the rostra; for Tiberius used his freedmen as officers, and this made the sight of Octavius dragged along with contumely a more pitiful one. Moreover, the people made a rush at him, and though the men ot wealth ran in a body to his assistance and spread out their hands against the crowd, it was with difficulty that Octavius was snatched away and safely rescued from the crowd; and a trusty servant of his who éumpoobev éota@ta Kai mpotetaypevov éEeTvdrwoav, axovtos tov TiBepiov, xai mpos Tov OdpuBov, os fao0ero TA yiwomEva, TOAAH oTrOVoT KATAOPAaLOVTOS.

XIII. "Ex rovtov xvpodta: pév o tepl tis Ywpas vo"os, aipodytar S€ rpeis aAvdpes eal tH
4 / > A 4 \ ,
diaxpiow Kal dtavopnyv, avtos TiBéptos nat Kravv e N \ fw , e
dios "Amrmios o mevOepos xat T'dios Tpdyyxos o 9 4 9 \ v 9 \ e '\ , adeAdos, oV mapwy ovTos, GAAA bo Yentiove
mpos Nopavtiay orpatevopevos. tadta rod Tr-Bepiov dvarpatapévov xa' jovxyiav pndevos évic Tapévou, Kal 1pos TovTots Snwapyov avtikata-/ b VA "a b A > \ A , oTnoavTos ovdéva TaV émihavav, GAAA Modxtov TwWa, TEAATHY avTov, mods TavTa SvaxYEpaivorTeEs
e \ U4 fe) / \ v

ot Suvatol Kal doBovpevor tod TiBepiov tHv ab-Enow év tH Bovrn mpoernrdxslov avtov, aitovpévp pv, ws os éativ, éx Snuooiov cxnvyr, Strws Exot Stavépwv Thy Ywpav, ov doves, éETépwv én éAadTTOoL ypElats TroAAdKEs AaBovTwWY, dvd-
\ > e 4 e 4 > / 9 \ 4
Awwa dé eis Exdotyny nuépay évvéa oBorovs TAEavTes, Elonyoupnévou tavta IlowAtov Naotxa kal SedwxoTos éautTov eis THY mpos exeivoy éxOpav
? “ , > / A 4
apedas? mreiotny yap éxéxtynTo ynv Snpociar, Kal yxanretras Epepev exBaivery avdtis dvayKa-Co mevos.
e “A wv a) 9 Ul \ l4
O 5 dros Ett madrov éEexaero: Kal didou Twos T@ TrBepi NeuTH LPVLOL t oS TG piw TedeuTnoavTos atpvidios Kal
, A A a 4
onpelwy TO vexp@ poxOnpav émidpayovtwv, Bo@vtTes UTo happaxwy dvynpjobat tov avOpwrov

stood in front of his master and protected him, had his eyes torn out, against the protest of Tiberius, who, when he perceived what was going on, ran down with great haste to appease the tumult. |

XIII. After this the agrarian law was passed, and three men were chosen for the survey and distribu- tion of the public land, Tiberius himself, Appius Claudius his father-in-law, and Caius Gracchus his brother, who was not at Rome, but was serving under Scipio in the expedition against Numantia. These measures were carried out by Tiberius quietly and without opposition, and, besides, he procured the election of a tribune in the place of Octavius. The new tribune was not a man of rank or note, but a certain Mucius, a client of Tiberius. The aristocrats, however, who were vexed at these proceedings and feared the growing power of Tiberius, heaped insult upon him in the senate. When he asked for the customary tent at public expense, for his use when dividing up the public land, they would not give it, although other men had often obtained one for less important purposes; and they fixed his daily allow- ance for expenses at nine obols.!_ These things were done on motion of Publius Nasica, who surrendered completely to his hatred of Tiberius. For he was a very large holder of public land, and bitterly resented his being forced to give it up.

But the people were all the more inflamed; and when a friend of Tiberius died suddenly and his body broke out all over with evil spots, they ran in throngs to the man’s funeral, crying out that he had been poisoned to death, and they carried the bier them-

1 That is, in Roman money, nine sestertii, equivalent to about twenty pence, or forty cents.

175

yA A ’ \ / \ ’ ”
emt THY Expopav cuvédpamov Kal TO A€XOS HpavToO
cat Oarrropéeve TapecTynaay, ov Pavrws UTrovojaat Thv pappanetay Sokavtes. eppayn yap o vexpos \ , e fe] n 1¢/ @
cat dStepOopotay vypav mwAHVos éFéBAUCEV, OoTeE amoaBécas THY prOya’ Kal hepovTwy AAXANV avOts ouK €xaeTo Tpiv els ETEpov TOTTOY pmeTAKO-LaOAVaL, \ 4 / (4 \
kal TWoAAa Tpaypatevoapevwy pods HYyaTo TO Top aUTOD. Mpos TAUTA TOUS TOAAOUS ETL UAAXOV
e , , / A bd fo \
o TiBéptos trapoEvywy petéBare thy éoOirta, Kat Tous traidas mpoayayawy éeito Tov Sjyov TovTwY xkndecOat Kai THS pNTpPOS, WS avTOS aTreyvaKaS éauToOv.
XIV. ’Ezrel 6¢ rod Biropnropos ’ AttaXov Terev-
4 ¥ e \ 9 , 4
tnaavtTos Evénpos o Llepyaunvos avnveyxe d1a0n-knv év 4 KXnpovopos éyéypatrto Tov Baathéws o ‘Pwpaiov Shyos, evOds o TrBépios Snpayoyav clonveyke voyov Stws Ta Bacitixd yprnpara
xkoptabevta Tois Thy ywpav SiadayYavover TAY TONTOY UTaPXOL Wpos KaTacKevTY Kal yewpyias
by) 4 \ ” 4 bud aA 9 4
adopunv. epi 6€ Tav TorEwY, doa THS ’AtTa-Aov Bacireias joav, oddév En TH TUYKATTO Bovrever Oar mrpocnkey, GAA TO SHuw youn autos mpoOnceav. éx tTovTov pddtoTa mpocé-xpovoe TH Bovdy: cal Tloumrnios pév avactas Edn yertviav TO TeBepip cal d1a todTO ywwecKety Evénuoyv avt@ tov Tepyaunvoy trav BaciuKcov diddnua Sedwxota Kat tophipay, ws péAXovTt Bacireve ev “Pon, Koivtos 5¢ MétedXos awveidice tov TeBéptov btt tod pév watpos avTov 176

selves, and stood by at the last ceremonies. And their suspicions of poison were thought to be not without reason. For the dead body burst open and a great quantity of corrupt humours gushed forth, so that the flame of the funeral pyre was extinguished. And when fresh fire was brought, again the body would not burn, until it was carried to another place, where, after much trouble, the fire at last took hold of it. Upon this, Tiberius, that he might exasperate the multitude still more, put on a garb of mourning, brought his children before the assembly, and begged the people to care for them and their mother, saying that he despaired of his own life.

XIV. And now Attalus: Philometor died,! and Eudemus of Pergamum brought to Rome the king's last will and testament, by which the Roman people was made his heir. At once Tiberius courted popular favour by bringing in a bill which provided that the money of King Attalus, when brought to Rome, should be given to the citizens who received a parcel of the public land, to aid them in stocking and tilling their farms. And as regarded the cities which were included in the kingdom of Attalus, he said it did not belong to the senate to deliberate about them, but he himself would submit a pertinent resolution to the people. By this proceeding he gave more offence than ever to the senate; and Pompeius, rising to speak there, said that he was a neighbour of Tiberius, and therefore knew that Eudemus of - Pergamum had presented Tiberius with a royal diadem and purple robe, believing that he was going to be king in Rome. Moreover, Quintus Metellus upbraided Tiberius with the reminder that whenever

1 In 133 B.c.

, \ nm ,
TLULNTEVOVTOS, OTUKLS AVadvOL pEeTa SEiTVOY oiKkade, Ta pata Kater Bevyvvcay ot TroXiTal, PoBovmevor
py Toppwrépw Tov peTpiov SoEwaty ev avVovotats elvat Kal TOoTOLS, TOUT@ 5é Tapadaivovar vuKTOS of Opacitato. Kai amopwtato tav SnpoTar: Tiros & "Avvtos, ovw émieckns pev ovd€ cadpwv
A
dvOpwtros, év dé OyoLs Mpos TAS epwTHaEls Kal Tas aTroKpicElts auayos elvat SoxwY, Els Optapov
a e % TLva TpovKaretTo Tov TiBépiov, 7) ny iepov dvTa
a \
Kal dovNov ek TOY voLwY HTLLwKEeval TOV GUVdp-4 be a 9 6 4 e
xovta. OopvBovvtwy dé roAd@v exTNdnoas o TiBéptos tov te Shpyov cuvexdre Kai Tov "Avwov axOnvar Kedevoas éBovreTo KaTnyopely. o Sé Kai

a / \ “ / \ , 9 A
TO AOY@ Kal TH So—N TOAD REeLTTOMEVOS Els THY
éavtod Sewotnta xatedveto, Kal Tapexdre pixpa
A / ’ /
Tpo TOY Noywv atroKpivacOa Tov TiBépiov. auy-
A a 4 a
yapodvTos 6€ épwrav éxelvou Kai oLwT IS yevopwévns 3 co coe Oe a Z, einev o “Avutos, ‘Av av pév atipovy we Bovr
/ \ a a ;
cal mpomnrakitery, éyw 5€ Tia TOY CoV éTLKA-N€owpar cuvapyovtwy, o bé dvaBh BonOynawr, ov
A A \ 4 99
5é opyic Ons, apa ye avtod THY apxyny adpaipyon;
, A 4
Tpos TAUTHY NEyETAL THY EpwWTNALY OVTW SLaTrOpnOnvar tov TiBéprov wate TavTwY dvTa Kal TO Neyer ETOLMOTATOV Kal TO Oappety tTap“wTaToY ATOCLWTHTAL.
XV. Tote pév ovv Siérvoe tay éxxdrnolav aicOavopevos 5é TOY TOALTEVLdTwWY TO TEpL TOV
"0 f bd a PS a / ’ \ \ a KTaBov ov Tos OvvVaTOLS MOVOY, AANA Kat ToOIS

a 9 4 / , ‘\ \
jmoNNols extrabéatepov (péya yap TL Kal KaNov 178

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

his father, during his censorship, was returning home after a supper, the citizens put out their lights, for fear they might be thought to be indulging immoder- ately in entertainments and drinking bouts, whereas Tiberius himself was lighted on his way at night by the neediest and most reckless of the populace. Titus Annius, too, a man of no high character or sobriety, but held to be invincible in arguments carried on by question and answer, challenged Tiberius to a judicial wager,! solemnly asserting that he had branded with infamy his colleague, who was sacred and inviolable by law. As many senators applauded this speech, Tiberius dashed out of the senate-house, called the people together, and ordered Annius to be brought before them, with the intention of denouncing him. But Annius, who was far inferior to Tiberius both in eloquence and in reputation, had recourse to his own particular art, and called upon Tiberius to answer a few questions before the argument began. Tiberius assented to this and silence was made, whereupon Annius said : “ If thou wish to heap insult upon me and degrade me, and | invoke the aid of one of thy colleagues in office, and he mount the rostra to speak in my defence, and thou fly into a passion, come, wilt thou deprive that colleague of his office ?” At this question, we are told, Tiberius was so disconcerted that, although he was of all men most ready in speech and most vehement in courage, he held his peace. 7

XV. For the present, then, he dissolved the assembly; but perceiving that the course he had taken with regard to Octavius was very displeasing, not only to the nobles, but also to the multitude (for

1 Cf. the Cuto Major, xxii. 5.

éSoxet TO TAY Snudpyov akiwpa péxype THS Nuépas
a / éxeiyns Statetnpnpevovy avnpnobat cai xabuBpi-aOat), Noyov ev TO SHum SeEAAGEV, oF ptKpa mapabécOat TeV émixelpnudtwY ovK AToTOY HV, @oTe UTovonOnvar thy miOavoTnta Kal TuKVO-TnTa Tov avdpos. ée&hn yap iepov tov Synuapyov elvat kal dovrop, 6tt TO SHuw Kabwoiwtat Kat
ToD Onuov mpoéoTnxev. Av ody petaBarXopevos
Tov Sypov adicn Kal thy iayvdy KOON Kat Tapaiphntrar THY Wihov, avTos éavToV atreaTEpnKe
a A 249 " > A J \ \ \ THS Tens ep ols EXaRev ov Tolwv: ETE Kal TO Kamet@Xov xatacxdmrovra Kai TO vewptov épwinmpavta Sipapyov éav Senoe. Kat TavUTA pev Tomy Snpapyos éatt Tovnpos: éay 5é Katadun tov Sipov, ov SHuapyos éott. Tas obv ov
\
Sevov e+ tov pev Umatov o Snuapyos ake,
\ be 5 , > 9 4 A >
TOV nuapyov ove adatpnoetar thv efou-
/ a a a ciav o Onpos Stay avTH Kata Tov dedwKorTos Npitat; Kal yap tratov Kal Snpapyov
e A a opoiws o Ojos aipetrar. Kal pnv h ye Bactreia Tpos TH TWacav apynv exyew év éavtH osvdAda-Sovca kai tais weyiotats iepoupyiats Kadwoiwtar
\ aA
mpos TO Oeiov' adda Tapxvov é&éBarev 1 Torts
adixodyvta, kai &:' évos dvdpos bBpw 4 matpros 9 \ \ / \ e , UA / \ apxXn Kal xticaca THY "Pwopny KcatervOn. ti dé
ovTws adyoy év 'Pwyn Kal ceuvov ws al Tepte-

, \ , \ ”
Tovoat twapbévot Kal durdtrovaa TO adpOeTov mvp; dAX el Tis dv apaptyn avtav, aoa KaToit was thought that the high and honourable dignity of the tribunate, so carefully guarded up to that time, had been insulted and destroyed), he made a lengthy speech before the people, a few of the arguments of which it will not be out of place to lay before the reader, that he may get a conception of the man’s subtlety and persuasiveness. A tribune, he said, was sacred and inviolable, because he was consecrated to the people and was a champion of the people. “ If, then,” said Tiberius, “he should change about, wrong the people, maim its power, and rob it of the privilege of voting, he has by his own acts deprived himself of his honourable office by not fulfilling the conditions on which he received it; for otherwise there would be no interference with a tribune even though he should try to demolish the Capitol or set fire to the naval arsenal. If a tribune does these things, he is a bad tribune; but if he annuls the power of the people, he is no tribune at all. Is it not, then, a monstrous thing that a tribune should have power to hale a consul to prison, while the people cannot deprive a tribune of his power when he employs it against the very ones who bestowed it? For consul and tribune alike are elected by the people. And surely the kingly office, besides comprehending in itself every civil function, is also consecrated to the Deity by the performance of the most solemn religious rites; and yet Tarquin was expelled by the city for his wrong-doing, and because of one man’s insolence the power which had founded Rome and descended from father to son was overthrown. Again, what institution at Rome is so holy and venerable as that of the virgins who tend and watch the undying fire? And yet if one of these

, \ \ v b 4 >
pvocetal' TO yap aovrov ov dudaTTOVOW ace-a bd \ , A \ \ \ 54
Bodaat eis tovs Oeovs, 5 da Tods Beovs Eyovcwy.
LA yO 5 , 7 “ \ fo! 1 »
5 ovKovY ovdé Snuapyos adic@v tov Shyov! éxecv ‘ \ \ fo > 4, 4 U 9 ? A thy dia Tov OHwov acvaAtay Sixatos éotiv' 7 yap ioyver Suvdpet, TavTny avapel. Kal pnv ev oe-U Ye \ 4 A ,
kaiws édaBe tHy Snuapyiav, Tov TAELoTwY
pvrav Whdicapévwv, was ovyl Kav adarpebein
6 Ouxatorepov Tacay arondicapéevwv; tepov dé 832
\ LA CNB! e ? \ e A a a Kal acudXov ovdey ottws éotly ws Ta TaV Oewv

avabnpata: ypinocOar Sé TovToLs Kai KivEly Kal
, e , \ on >) \ ,
petaghepery ws BovreTal, Tov Onpwov OvoELS KEKO-Ifon @ > «A \ \ V4 e AuKevr. EE ody a'To Kal THY Snuapyiay ws avaOnua peteveyxety eis Erepov. Ste Sé OvVK ¥ > \ tJ / e 9 / A 4 > A davvrov ovdé avadaipetov 7 apy, SHrov: €oTe TO 4 " > / ge / \ modAaKis éxovtas apynv twas éEopvucbat Kat mapaiteioOat Ot' avTav.
XVI. Totatta pev iv ta Keparata THs Tov
TiBepiov Sixacoroyias. érret S€ auvopavtes ot
4 \ > \ \ A 4 wv A
iro. Tas ametAas Kat THY avoTacLY @ovTo Seiy
e_ / 4 4 bf \ f
évépas trepiéyecOar Snuapxias eis TO pmédAor, avOts addXots vopots aveNduBave TO TAOOS, TOD TE Ypovov TY aTpaTeLav adaipav, Kal Sidovs
a \ A A A
émixaretabat tov Sipov amo Tay SuxacTaY, Kat
A 4 a
Tois Kpivovat TOTE, TUYKANTLKOIS OvaL, KaTA-
2 puyvus éx tev immévv Tov tcov apiOuov, Kal
4 / 4 fe A \ 9 \ ,
TavTa TpoTOV HON THs BovAns THY taXvY KONOVWY
1 roy dju0v Cobet: djmor.

breaks her vows, she is buried alive ; for when they sin against the gods, they do not preserve that inviolable character which is given them for their service to the gods. Therefore it is not just that a tribune who wrongs the people should retain that inviolable character which is given him for service to the people, since he is destroying the very power which is the source of his own power. And surely, if it is right for him to be made tribune by a majority of the votes of the tribes, it must be even more right for him to be deprived of his tribuneship by a unanimous vote. And again, nothing is so sacred and inviolate as objects consecrated to the gods; and yet no one has hindered the people from using such objects, or moving them, or changing their position in such manner as may be desired. It is therefore permis- sible for the people to transfer the tribunate also, as a consecrated thing, from one man to another. And that the office is not inviolable or irremovable is plain from the fact that many times men holding it resign it under oath of disability, and of their own accord beg to be relieved of it."

XVI. Such were the chief points in the justifica- tion of his course which Tiberius made. And now his friends, observing the threats and the hostile combination against him, thought that he ought to be made tribune again for the following year. Once more, therefore, Tiberius sought to win the favour of the multitude by fresh laws, reducing the time of military service, granting appeal to the people from the verdicts of the judges, adding to the judges, who at that time were composed of senators only, an equal number from the equestrian order, and in every way at length trying to maim the power of the senate

183

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

7 pos opyny Kal prdoverkiay parddov i Tov TOU dixatou xal TUE povTos Noytopov. émrel bé THs nou pepomevns noOovro TOUS évavtious Kpa-TOUVTaS (ov yap Tapny amas o Shpos), T P@TOV
Mev ets Bracdnpias T PATO MEVOL TOV TuvapXoVTwV elAxov TOV Xpovovr' émerta THY éxxdnotav adjcay, els THY voTepaiav amavTay KehevoavTes. Kat ™ p@T ov pev ets THY ayopav KataBas c TuBéptos ixéteve Tovs avOpwrovs tamevos Kai Sedaxpv[évos, émeira deSorKevar dyaas pa VUKTOS éK-Kopoo THY otxiay or €xOpol Kai diag Geipwory avrov, obTH TOUS avO pwrrous b€O nev @OTE Trept THY oixiay avtTod TapTroNdous Tivas avrAtcacbat Kat Scavunrepetoat TapapurdtTovras.
XVII. "Apa 8 nMEpa maphy o Tas dpviOas als Stapavtevovtat Kopiter, Kab mpocBarre Tpopnv aurais. at & ov mponrbov, eb en pia Hovn, ta-TELTaVTOS ev para TOU avOpwrov TO aryyeiov" ovde airy 5é THs Tpopijs EOuyen, XX' emdpaca THY dpiotepay mTEpuya Kal mapareivaca TO oKENOS mada ELS TO ayyetov KaTepuye. TOUTO Kat Tob T™ poTépov onpetov TOV TeBépcov dvéuvnoer.
Hv yap avT@ Kavos @ Tpos TAS maxXas eXpHro,
Kekoo unpévov éxTpeT@s Kal Sidonpov eis TOUTO
KaTaduvres opers éXadov évTexovTes @da, Kal
TavTa eeyhurparto. 610 Kal baddov 0 TuBepros
Tois mepl tas dpriOas éraparrero. Toone sé 6uws, dvw Tov O7jpov 70 pois Gat Wept TO Kamero-ov muvOavopevos" Kal piv eFer Geir 1 poo érr-TALCE T pos TOV ovdor, opoopas ovTw TANYHS yevouévns ote TOV pey Gvuya TOU peyddov Oak-184

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

from motives of anger and contentiousness rather than from calculations of justice and the public good. And when, as the voting was going on, the friends of Tiberius perceived that their opponents were getting the better of the contest, since all the people were not present, in the first place they resorted to abuse of his fellow tribunes, and so protracted the time; next, they dismissed the assembly, and ordered that it should convene on the following day. Then Tiberius, going down into the forum, at first suppli- cated the citizens ina humble manner and with tears in his eyes; next, he declared he was afraid that his enemies would break into his house by night and kill him, and thereby so wrought upon his hearers that great numbers of them took up their station about his house and spent the night there on guard.

XVII. At break of day there came to the house the man who brought the birds with which auspices are taken, and threw food before them. But the birds would not come out of the cage, with the exception of one, though the keeper shook the cage right hard ; and even the one that came out would not touch the food, but raised its left wing, stretched out its leg, and then ran back into the cage. This reminded Tiberius of an omen that had happened earlier. He had a helmet which he wore in battle, exceptionally adorned and splendid ; into this ser- pents crawled unnoticed, laid eggs there and hatched them out. For this reason Tiberius was al] the more disturbed by the signs from the birds. But nevertheless he set out, on learning that the people were assembled on the Capitol; and before he got out of the house, he stumbled against the threshold. The blow was so severe that the nail of his great toe

TuAXov paynvar, To b€ alua dua Tov vTodnpaTos
éEw épecOar. pixpov dé avtovd mpoedOovtos apOncav vmép Kepduov paxouevot Kopaxes év dpiatepg: Kat TOAD, os eikos, avOporev trap-Eepyopévov, Kat avutov tov TeBéptov riOos atwabeis bro Oatépou THY KopaKkwy érece TAPA Tov Toba. TovUTO Kal TOUS OpacuTaToUs TAY Trept
avtoy éméatncev’ adda Broaatos o Kupaios Tapwv aicyuvny ép>n cal xatndeav av elvart moAAny e& TrBépios, Tpayyou peév vies, ‘Adpr-kavod 5€ LKyriwvos Ouyatpibovs, mporrdarnys Sé Tod Pwpaiwy Snpov, copaxa Seicas ovy UTaxovaele TolsS ToAiTals KaNovGL' TOUTO MéVTOL TO aiaxpov ovn ev yédwte OnoecOar Tovs éyOpovs, GAN ws Tupavvodvtos Kal tpupavtos bn KaTa-BoncecOat mpos Tov Sjpov. apa dé xal mpocébeov modAol To TiBepio mapa trav év Karetorio dhirwy, émeiyerOar KeNEVvoVTES, WS TAY exEl KAS
e€yovTwy. Kal Ta ye TPATA NapTpaS amnvTa
To TiBepio, davévte pev evOvs apapyévwv Bony dirtov, avaBaivovta bé mpodipws Sexouévwv kal mepi avutov, ws pnoels meAdceey ayves, TAPATATTOMEVWY.
XVIII. “Ap£apévov 6 mddw rod Mouxiou

Tas guras avaryopevev, ovdév émrepaivero TaY 833
eiwOoTwy Sia tov amo tav éaydtwv OopuBor, wOovpévoy Kat wO0ovvTwv Tovs évavtious etic fia-Couévous nat advayiyvupévous. év dé TovT@ PovarA-Bios @PradxKos aro BovrAts avnp eis eudaves Katactds, @s ovK Hv POeyyouevoy éedixécOa,
1 &y elvac Cobet and Fuhr: [wap]eivai.

was broken and the blood ran out through his shoe. He had gone on but a little way when ravens were seen fighting on the roof of a house to his left hand ; and though there were many people, as was natural, passing by, a stone dislodged by one of the ravens fell at the foot of Tiberius himself. This caused even the boldest of his followers to pause; but Blossius of Cumae, who was present, said it would be a shame and a great disgrace if Tiberius, a son of Gracchus, a grandson of Scipio Africanus, and a champion of the Roman people, for fear of a raven should refuse to obey the summons of his fellow citizens; such shameful conduct, moreover, would not be made a mere matter of ridicule by his enemies, but they would decry him to the people as one who was at last giving himself the airs of a tyrant. At the same time also many of his friends on the Capitol came running to Tiberius with urgent appeals to hasten thither, since matters there were going well. And in fact things turned out splendidly for Tiberius at first; as soon as he came into view the crowd raised a friendly shout, and as he came up the hill they gave him a cordial welcome and ranged themselves about him, that no stranger might approach.

XVIII. But after Mucius began once more to sum- mon the tribes to the vote, none of the customary forms could be observed because of the disturbance that arose on the outskirts of the throng, where there was crowding back and forth between the friends of Tiberius and their opponents, who were striving to force their way in and mingle with the rest. Moreover, at this juncture Fulvius Flaccus, a senator, posted himself in a conspicuous place, and since it was impossible to make his voice heard so

Sueonunve TH Yeupt Ppdoar te BovAopevoy avrov

2 idia Te TeBepio. xal Kxerevoavtos éxeivov d:a-axeiv TO TAOS, avaBas porus Kal TpoceOwv amnyyerev OTe THS BovrAnS ouyxabeCopevns o1 TAOVCLOL, TOY UTaTOV my WeiOovTeEs, avTol diavooovtat KaQ’ avtovs aroxtivvivat Tov TuBépior, moNAous él tovTo Sovrouvs Kal dirovs wrdL-opeévous ExovTes.
XIX. ‘Os otv tatta tots wepi avtov éEny-yetrev 0 TuBéptos, odo pév evOds Tas Te THBEvvous TwepieC@vvurTo, Kal Ta TaY UIrnpetav Sopata

ovykrA@vtes ols aveipyovat Tov dyAov, dredap-Bavov ws apvvovpevot Tots KAaTMAGL TOUS éTEP-2 youevous. Tav dé atwrépw Oavyafovtwy Ta ywopueva kal muvOavopévwv, 0 TiBépios ato
TH XElpt THs Keharijs, évdecevvpevos TH OYree Tov
xivduvov, éret THS Povis ovK émyjxovov. ot dé évavtio. tovTo iddvtes EOeov mpos tiv RBovrnp, amayyédXovtes aitety Stuadnua tov TrBéprov: Kal TOVTOV onmeloy Elvat TO THS KEeharns émiOiyya-3 ve. mdvtes pev ovv eOopuBnOncav: o && Naouas n&iov tov Uratov tH Toe BonOety Kal KaTAaVELY TOV TYPAaVVOY. aTroKpiWVapévou Oé TPAws éxeivou Bias pev ovdemas bmdpEew ovdé avaipncew ovdéva TOY TONTOY AKpLToV, EL péVTOL
Wwndicatto Te TOY Tapavouwy o SHpos UTd TOD TrBepiov mecobels Biacbeis, todTo KUptov py durdtew, avarndnoas o Naouxas, “Eset roivuy,” én, “ mpodiéwav 0 apywv thy ToALY, ot BovdAdc-188)
TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

far, indicated with his hand that he wished to tell Tiberius something meant for his ear alone.
Tiberius ordered the crowd to part for Flavius, who made his way up to him with difficulty, and told him that at a session of the senate the party of the rich, since they could not prevail upon the consul to do
' so, were purposing to kill Tiberius themselves, and for this purpose had under arms a multitude of their friends and slaves.

XIX. Tiberius, accordingly, reported this to those who stood about him, and they at once girded up their togas, and breaking in pieces the spear-shafts with which the officers keep back the crowd, distri- buted the fragments among themselves, that they might defend themselves against their assailants. Those who were farther off, however, wondered at what was going on and asked what it meant. Where- upon Tiberius put his hand to his head, making this visible sign that his life was in danger, since the questioners could not hear his voice. But his opponents, on seeing this, ran to the senate and told that body that Tiberius was asking for a crown; and that his putting his hand to his head was a sign having that meaning. All the senators, of course, were greatly disturbed, and Nasica demanded that the consul should come to the rescue of the state and put down the tyrant. The consul replied with mild- ness that he would resort to no violence and would put no citizen to death without a trial; if, however, the people, under persuasion or compulsion from Tiberius, should vote anything that was unlawful, he would not regard this vote as binding. There- upon Nasica sprang to his feet and said: “Since, then, the chief magistrate betrays the state, do ye

4 pevot tois vopots Bonbeiv axorovbeite.” Kal
TavTa Aéywv Gua Kal TO Kpactedoy Tod ipatiou
Oéwevos eri THs Keharis, exwper pos TO Karre-
T@ALOV. ExacTos bé TOV ETOLEVOY AUTO TH KELpt
Thy tHRBevvoy tepiediEas ewOes Tovs euTrodwr, ovdevos evictapévou Trpos TO akiwpa Tov avopar, GNA hevyovtwv Kal TaTovvTwY aAAnXOUS.
5 Oc peév ovdv trepl avtous potrara Kai oxuTddas exoptlov olxobev: avtol 5é tay Si¢pav Katayre-Hévov vo Tod hevyovtos GyXov TA KAdopATA
kab Tovs modas NapBavovtes avéBawov émi tov TiBépiov, dua aiovtes Tovs mpotetaypévous.
Kal TOUTMY LEV HY TpOTH Kal Povos: avToOU 5é TOD
TiBepiov devyovros dvrTeddBero Tis TOV ipatiov.
60 6é€ THv THBevvov adels kal devywv ev Tois xitdow éopddrn Kal catnvéxOn rept Twas THY ™po avTod TemTwKOTAS. avLaTdpevov dé avrov
0 péev euhavas Kal Tp@TOS Eis THY KEehadny
matdkas Todt Sippou Ilordos Av Latupnios els
TOV cuvapyYovTwv’ THS Oé Sevrépas avTETroLEtTo TAnyns Aevevos ‘Poddos, as éml Karo Tim aEuvuvomevos. Tav O€ dAAwV aTréOavor UTép TpLakoaious EvAots kal AiLMars cuyKotrévtes, otd2p@ SE ovdels.
XX. Tavrny rpetny iotopovow év Pwpn otd-ow, ad ov TO Bacirever Oar KaTtédXvaay, aipate cat dove moritav StaxplOnvar: tas O€ adXas OUTE piKPasS OUTE mepl puKpav yevouévas avOurrei-Kovtes ddAAOLS, PoB@ pév ot SvvVaTOL T@Y TrOd-Aa, aidovpevos Sé THY Bovrnv o Simos, Emavov. edoxer 5é xal TOTE wy YareTras Av évdodvar Tapn-Igo

who wish to succour the laws follow me.” With these words he covered his head with the skirt of his toga and set out for the Capitol. All the senators who followed him wrapped their togas about their left arms and pushed aside those who stood in their path, no man opposing them, in view of their dignity, but all taking to flight and trampling upon one another.

Now, the attendants of the senators carried clubs and staves which they had brought from home; but the senators themselves seized the fragments and legs of the benches that were shattered by the crowd in its flight, and went up against Tiberius, at the same time smiting those who were drawn up to protect him. Of these there was a rout and a slaughter; and as Tiberius himself turned to fly, someone laid hold of his garments. So he let his toga go and fled in his tunic. But he stumbled and fell to the ground among some bodies that lay in front of him. As he strove to rise to his feet, he received his first blow, as everybody admits, from Publius Satyreius, one of his colleagues, who smote him on the head with the leg of a bench; to the second blow claim was made by Lucius Rufus, who plumed himself upon it as upon some noble deed. And of the rest more than three hundred were slain by blows from sticks and stones, but not one by the sword.

XX. This is said to have been the first sedition at Rome, since the abolition of royal power, to end in bloodshed and the death of citizens ; the rest, though neither trifling nor raised for trifling objects, were settled by mutual concessions, the nobles yielding from fear of the multitude, and the people out of respect for the senate. And it was thought that even

Igl

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yopnOels o TrBépios, ers 5é paov elEar diya hovou
2 xal Tpauudtov émiodow: ov yap Tretoves 7
/ \ > N ® bd b) 4 9 aA TploxXtALoL TrEpL aUTOV Noav. AAN EOlKEY OPYH
aA / \ / / A > A ? ,
TOV Wrovoiwy Kal pice. mAEoY fh) Ov As éoxKNT-TOVTO Tpopacets 7) aUaTAGLS én’ avToV yevér Oat:
Kal TOUTOU méya TEKUNPLOY Mas Kal TrapAavopLws
UBpiabels o vexpos. ov yap érétpeway averécOat 834
N a “A > fa! 4 \ 4 Ul
TO COMA TH AdEAD@ Seopévm Kat Garrat vueros, b] \ A a v a > \ N
GNNa PETA TV ANrAWY VEKPwWY ELS TOV TOTAaMOY
¥ \ A / b @ ? \ \ A
3 éppiupav. xal TodTo wépas ovK HV, Adda Kal TOV
hirwv avtod tovs péev éEexnputTtov axpitous, ToUs 5é€ cudAXNapBSavortes atrextivyvvcav: év ols kai Avopavns o pntwp amwrero. Taiov 8é tia
Bidrtov ets ayyeiov nabetpEavtes Kal cuveuBa-AovTes extdvas Kal Spadxovtas otTw SépOetpar.
o 5€ Kupaios Brdootos avnyOn peév én tovs UTaToUs, Epwrapevos 5é€ Tepl TaV YyEeyoveTwV
e 4 VA ‘ ld 4
@pmoNoyel TeTOWNnKEeval TavTa TuBepiou KEeNEVOVTOS.

> 7 \ aA a \ > f gonne 4 y
4 elqrovtos 5é tot Naowxad mpos avrov, “Tt ody, €
4 > ff > A N 4 39
oe TuBépios exeNevoer Eumrpnoar TO Katrer@dutov; \ \ A b) LA e > “a
TO fev TPWTOY aYTérEYEY WS OUK av TovTO TLBe_Epiov KedevoavTos moAAdKis 5€ Kal TOAN@Y TO >_\ f) , ee? > 9 2 , auto tuvGavopevwy, “© AXX éxeLvou ye TpOoTTac-
” ae ee A a melee
govTos, én, “Kapol todTo mpakar Karas elyev > \ a T / A , > \ a ov yap av TiBéptos Tovto mpocéra€erv, eb wn TO
?
Snuw auvéedepev. ovTos pev ovv Stadvywv bote-192

on this occasion Tiberius would have given way without difficulty had persuasion been brought to bear upon him, and would have yielded still more easily if his assailants had not resorted to wounds and bloodshed; for his adherents numbered not more than three thousand. But the combination against him would seem to have arisen from the hatred and anger of the rich rather than from the pretexts which they alleged; and there is strong proof of this in their lawless and savage treatment of his dead body. For they would not listen to his brother’s request that he might take up the body and bury it by night, but threw it into the river along with the other dead. Nor was this all; they banished some of his friends without a trial and others they arrested and put to death. Among these Diophanes the rhetorician also perished. A certain Caius Villius they shut up in a cage, and then put in vipers and serpents, and in this way killed him. Blossius of Cumae was brought before the consuls, and when he was asked about what had passed, he admitted that he had done everything at the bidding of Tiberius. Then Nasica said to him, “ What, then, if Tiberius had ordered thee to set fire to the Capitol? ”’ Blossius at first replied that Tiberius would not have given such an order; but when the same question was put to him often and by many persons, he said: ‘Tf such a man as Tiberius had ordered such a thing, it would also have been right for me to do it; for Tiberius would not have given such an order if it had not been for the interest of the people.” ! Well, then, Blossius was acquitted, and afterwards went to 1 For the story of Blossius, cf. Cicero, Deam. 11. 37; Valerius Maximus, iv. 7. 1.

¥ A 9 , ’ ’ U 4 a“
pov myeto mpos Aptorovexoy eis Actav, Kai Tav éxelvou wpayudtwv diapOapévrwy éavtov avetrev.
XXI. ‘H 6€ BovArAn Oeparrevovoa Tov Siyov éx
TOY Tapovtwv ovTe Tpos THY Siavouny ere THS
Yopas nvavtiovto, Kal dvti tod TiBepiov mpov-
One Tots moAXols optatny éX€cOar. AaBovTes
5é tas Wdous etrovto TlowAtov Kpdacop, oixetov
4 V4 4 A tL) le) 4
ovta Lpayye: Guyatnp yap avtod Arxivrvia Tato
i} , 4 4 4 e / ,
Tpayyo ovvexe. xattot Nérws o Kopyndios
> / 4 de A @ / gdnow ov Kpdocov, Bpovtouv 5é tod OptapBevaavtos amd Avoitavay Buyatépa yhyat dior:
? e ¢ e e A ‘ e a GANA OL WrELoUS wS Hels ypahopmev taTopovowy.
émel 5é yarerras wey o Shpos elye TO Oavato tov TiBepiov nal davepos fv auvvns Tmeptsévov katpov, Hon S€ Kai Sixas tT@ Naotxad mpoaveaelovto, deicaca TEepi ToD avdpos 7 BovarArn Wndi-Cera pndev Seouévn méurey avtov eis ‘Aciav.
ov yap airexpUTTOVTO KaTa Tas ATraYTHTELS Ob
v \ 4 b) > 9 / \
avOpwrirot thy dvapéverav, GAN éEnypraivorvTo Kal
xateBowy Sirov mpootuyoley, evaryh Kal TUpavvor Kal pemayKora povm awuatos agvrou Kal lepov
TO ayiwratoy Kal ppixwdéoTtatov év TH Trondet TOV (Ep@v atoKkaXovdvTes. oTw pev vTEEnN.E
“A > / a a
Ths Itadtas o Naouxds, xaitrep évdedepévos tais peyioTaus lepoupyiats: mv yap o péytotos Kal a vad € , wv ‘9 U \ A TOWTOS THY tepéwy. E€w 5é adVOY Kal TrAVO-LNB > \ ‘ / /
pevos adoEws ov peta todvy ypovoy KaTéoTpeEe
mept Tlépyapov. ov de? 8¢ Oavydtew ef Naoixarv 194

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Aristonicus! in Asia, and when the cause of Aristonicus was lost, slew himself.
XXI. But the senate, trying to conciliate the people now that matters had gone so far, no longer opposed the distribution of the public land, and proposed that the people should elect a commissioner in place of Tiberius. So they took a ballot and elected Publius Crassus, who was a relative of Gracchus; for his daughter Licinia was the wife of Caius Gracchus. And yet Cornelius Nepos? says that it was not the daughter of Crassus, but of the Brutus who triumphed over the Lusitanians, whom Caius married; the majority of writers, however, state the matter as I have done. Moreover, since the people felt bitterly over the death of Tiberius and were clearly awaiting an opportunity for revenge, and since Nasica was already threatened with prose- cutions, the senate, fearing for his safety, voted to send him to Asia, although it had no need of him there. For when people met Nasica, they did not try to hide their hatred of him, but grew savage and cried out upon him wherever he chanced to be, calling him an accursed man and a tyrant, who had defiled with the murder of an inviolable and sacred person the holiest and most awe-inspiring of the city's sanctu- aries. And so Nasica stealthily left Italy, although he was bound there by the most important and sacred functions ; for he was pontifex maximus. He roamed and wandered about in foreign lands ignominiously, and after a short time ended his life at Pergamum. Now, it is no wonder that the people so much hated

1 The pretender to the throne of Attalus Philometor (xiv. 1).
He was defeated and taken prisoner by the Romans in 130 B.c.
2 In a lost biography.

peptonkey oTwS o SHuos, GTov Kal LenTiwv o
"Adptixavos, ob Soxodct 'Pwpaios wndéva Sixaco-TEpov nde MAAXOY ayaThoal, Tapa pKpov HrAOev éxtrecely nal orépecOat tis mpos Tov Spor evvoias, tt mpatov péev ev Nouavtia tHv TeXevTHv tov TtBepiov mudouevos dvepwrncev ex TaY
'Opnpixav:
@$ ATrONOLTO Kal GAXOS 6 Tis TOLADTA ye péCoL, éreita tev wept T'aiov cal PovrABrov avrod. 8'

éxxrAnoias wuvOavopévwv ti dpovoin mepl THs TiBepiov rereutis, ovn apecxopévny ois vi éxelvou qremoATevpéevolts aToKploly EdwKev. €K Toutov yap o pev Simos avréxpovcey avT@ Xéyovtt, pndémw TovTO Tolnoas WpOTEpov, avTOS
de tov SHpov eitrety Kax@s mwponxOn. epl pev ToUTay év TH Lxntiwvos Bim ta Kal' exacta yeypamras.
lr. CTPAPXO®

I, Tdios 5€ Tpdyxos ev apyn pev 7 dedeas Tous éyOpous 7) POovoy cuvadyav em' avtovs trre§- éoTn Te THS ayopas Kal Kal" éavrov novytav

éxyov Seérptbev, ws av tis & te TH Tapovtt TaTeWwda TpaTTwWY Kal TO AOLTOV OUTwS amTpaypovws Biwodpevos, wate Kal AOyov Tict Kal' avtov tmapacyeiv ws duvoxepaivoytos Kal mpoBe-BAnpévov thy tov TeBepiov morstelav. Av Se 196

835

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Nasica, when even Scipio Africanus, than whom no one would seem to have been more justly or more deeply loved by the Romans, came within a little of forfeiting and losing the popular favour because, to begin with, at Numantia, when he learned of the death of Tiberius, he recited in a loud voice the verse of Homer !:—
"So perish also all others who on such wickedness venture,

and because, in the second place, when Caius and Fulvius asked him in an assembly of the people what he thought about the death of Tiberius, he made a reply which showed his dislike of the measures advocated by him. Consequently the people began to interrupt him as he was speaking, a thing which they had never done before, and Scipio himself was thereby led on to abuse the people. Of these matters I have written Mlcumetaauany, in my Life of Scipio.?

CAIUS GRACCHUS

I. Caius Gracchus, at first, either because he feared his enemies, or because he wished to bring odium upon them, withdrew from the forum and lived quietly by himself, like one who was humbled for the present and for the future intended to live the same inactive life, so that some were actually led to denounce him for disliking and repudiating his brother's political measures. And he was also

1 Odyssey, i. 47 (Athena, of Aegisthus).

* One of the lost biographies.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kal pelpaxioy TavTamaciw: évyéa yap eveauTois
éhelrreto Traderpod rad’ nrtclav, éxetvos Se oumra TpidKovTa yeyovas am éGavev. érrel dé m poioyos
Tob Xpovov Tov Te TpoTrOV NOUXT, Srépawwev a dpyias
Kab padaxias «al TOTOV Kal XPnpaTic wav anXo-Tpioy ovTa, Kal Tov ovyov domrep anim Tepe
KatacKevalopevos em Thy TONLTELAV bfjAos WV
3 ovK TpEpna wy, Siany Té Ti TOV dirov pevyovTe Bertio TUVELT OD, Tov Onwou cuverOova rary Tos bd’ ndovijs Kal Baxxevovtos mept avutov, améderke TOUS ddrdous pHropas Tatoo pndev dtapéporras, eis poBov adOts ot Suvarol cabiotavro, «al TOAUS Hy év avtots Novos ws OvK edcovaty émi Snpapxiav tov Tdiov mpoenGeiv.
4 Luvruyxdver dé aro TAUTOMATOU haxeiy auTov els Lapse tapiav ‘Opéoty TO vrata Kal TodTo Tols pev ex pois Kal’ ndovny éryeyovel, TOV bé Tdiov ovx eMuTngeD. aTeE yap av TONE MLKOS Kai xelpov ovdev 7 pos oTpatelas Ho KNMEVOS v7] dixas, ére O€ THY ToALTELaY Kai TO BHpma ppitrer, avTéyew Oé Kahobvre TO Sym Kal Trois pirous ou duvdpevos, TavTanace Tip arro8nuiay éxelvny 5 nyaT NTE. xaitot xpatret S0&a Toray TOUTOU dxpatov yevérOar Snpayaryor, Kal TONW tov Te-Beptov hap porepov Tpos THY amo TOV x Awv doEav. OvK Exel 5é od Tw TO adn des: GNX’ Eouev vm avaryKns TLVOS paddov odTOS un T poatpéc ews
6 eumecciv els THY mohTeiay. iaropel 5é Kal Kuxe-pwv o pyTwp as dpa pevyove magay apynv T@ Paty Kal pe” novyias npnwerep Chv o adedpos é6vap gaveis xal mpocayopevoas, “Ti Sia,” 198

™∼

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

quite a stripling, for he was nine years younger than his brother, and Tiberius was not yet thirty when he died. But as time went on he gradually showed a disposition that was averse to idleness, effeminacy, wine-bibbing, and money-making ; and by preparing his oratory to waft him as on swift pinions to public life, he made it clear that he was not going to remain quiet; and in defending Vettius, a friend of his who was under prosecution, he had the people about him inspired and frantic with sympathetic delight, and made the other orators appear to be no better than children. Once more, therefore, the nobles began to be alarmed, and there was much talk among them about not permitting Caius to be made tribune.

By accident, however, it happened that the lot tell on him to go to Sardinia as quaestor for Orestes the consul.! This gave pleasure to his enemies, and did not annoy Caius. For he was fond of war, and quite as well trained for military service as for pleading in the courts. Moreover, he still shrank from public life and the rostra, but was unable to resist the calls to this career which came from the people and his friends. He was therefore altogether satisfied with this opportunity of leaving the city. And yetastrong opinion prevails that he was a demagogue pure and simple, and far more eager than Tiberius to win the favour of the multitude. But this is not the truth; nay, it would appear that he was led by a certain necessity rather than by his own choice to engage in public matters. And Cicero the orator also relates ? that Caius declined all office and had chosen to live a quiet life, but that his brother appeared to him in a dream and addressed him, saying: ‘‘ Why, pray, dost

1 In 126 B.c. ? De dir, i. 26, 56. 199

“
i
_-
PLUTARCH’S LIVES
pain, és V'die, Bpadvvers; ovx éotiv atrodpacts, adh els bev 7 Weep duxporépars Bios, els dé Gavaros birép Tov Sjpou TodeTEvopevors mémporat.
II. Tevopevos odv o D'dios év Lapdow wacav aperis arroberkty édidou, «al TON mare Sie pepe TOV vévy ev TOIS ‘pos TOUS TOAEMLOUS ayaae Kat év Trois. 1 pos TOUS UmnKous Sucators kal év th 7 pos TOV oTpaTyyov evvoia Kal TULA, coppoowvy
dé Kat ATOTHTL Kal girorovia TAPHAAATTE KAL TOUS mpeaButépous. iaxupod dé Kal vor adous apa Xetmdavos éy Yapodovr yevouevov kat Tov oTpaThnyou TAS TWOAELS oO ira Tots TTPATLOITALS aiTouvTos, errepypay els “Peuny TapatTovpevor.
Sefapevns dé THS Bovrns thy Tapaitnow aAuTa@V
Kal TOV oTparnyov adrobev aueelery TOUS oTpa-TLOTAS Kehevovons, amropobvros 5é é exeivou Kal TOV TTpATLOTOV kaxoT abouvTav, émehOov TAS TOAELS
o Tdios avTous ad éavtov émroinaev éaOfra mépyat Kxat BonOjoat trois “Pwpaios. tadra warty els ‘Popny atrayyedAopeva Kal Soxodyra Snuaryoryias T podryaves elvat dverdparrte Thy

Bouniy. cal mp@tov pev ex AtBuns Tapa Mexinva
TOU Bacrréws mpéa Bets Taparyevouevous, Kat Aéyovtas as) Bactrevs Xapere Tatou Tpayxov Téprpecev els ZapSova, cirov Te oTpATHY®, dvaxepaivovres e€éBanov emevta Soypa Totovyrat Tots pev otpatiwtats diadoxyny amooTadhvat, Tov be ‘Opéarny eTrLpevely, sn 5) Kal Tou Tatov Sea thy apxny Tapapevoovros. o bé TOUTO@Y aUT®@ Tpoc-TeTOVTO@V evus eFérrhevoe Tpos opyny, kal daveis
év ‘Pawn tap édrridas ov pdvoy UTrd TaV éxOpav thou hesitate, Caius? There is no escape; one life is fated for us both, and one death, as champions of the people.”

II. After reaching Sardinia, then, Caius gave proof of every excellence, and far surpassed all the other young men in conflicts with the enemy, in just dealings with the subject peoples, and in the good will and respect which he showed towards his commander, while in self-restraint, frugality, and industry, he excelled even his elders. The winter in Sardinia proved to be rigorous and unhealthy, and the Roman commander made a requisition upon the cities of clothing for his soldiers, whereupon the cities sent to Rome and begged to be relieved from the exaction. The senate granted their petition and ordered the commander tw get clothing for his soldiers in some other way. The commander was at a loss what to do, and the soldiers were suffering ; so Caius made a circuit of the cities and induced them of their own free will to send clothing and other assistance to the Romans. This was reported to Rome, where it was thought to be a prelude to a struggle for popular favour, and gave fresh concern to the senate. So, to begin with, when ambassadors of King Micipsa came from Africa, and announced that out of regard for Caius Gracchus the king had sent grain to the Roman commander in Sardinia, the senators were displeased and turned them away. In the second place, they passed a decree that fresh troops should be sent to relieve the soldiers in Sardinia, but that Orestes should remain, with the idea that, Caius also would remain with him by virtue of his office. But Caius, when this came to his ears, straightway sailed off in a passion, and his unexpected appearance in Rome

aitiay elyev, GANA Kal Tots ToANOIS GAROKOTOV éd0xet TO Tapiay dvra wpoaTroo THvat TOD apYovToS.
ov nv AANA KaTNyOpias aUT@ yevouevns emi Tav TLULNTOV, alTnadmEVvos AGYoV OUTwW pETETTNGE TAS yvouas TOV axovaavtwy as amedOely ndixjo bar
a 4 50 9 A @ \ a 54
Ta péeytota Sofas. éotpatevoOar pev yap éedy Swdexa ETn, TOV AAXNwY Séxa oTpaTevomevwry év avayxats, Tausevwv S€ TO oTpaTHY@ Tapape-

le) , \
pevnkevat TpLeTiav, TOD vomoU eT EvLaUTOY éTraveXOeiy Seddvros: povos 5é tav otpaTevoapévonv
“a \ 4 9 A \ b
awAnpes TO Badrdvtiov eicevnvoyas Kevov éfevnvo-yévar, Tos 5é aAXous exridvtas by elonveyxav olvov, apyupiov Kal ypuciou pectovs Setpo rovs apdopeis rev KoutCovras.
III. "Ex tovrov madw addas aitias avT@ Kal Sixas eriyov @s TOVs cuppayous adtotarTe Kal
, A / ? a

Kexolvarncote THS tept Dpéyerrav évderyPeions cuvwpocias. o 6¢ Tacap UTroWiay aToNvadpLEVvos Kat \ @ N "Ov > \ 6 4 Lf
t haveis xa0apos evOvs ert dnuapyiay wpunce, TOV ev yvopipeov avdp@v owadras dirayvTwv évavTlounévmy mpos autov, dyAou dé TocovToU guppéovtos els THY Todkw é€x THS ITadias Kal cuvapxarpeatalovros ws TOANAOIs ev OLKNOELS ETTL-Autrety, ToD Se mediov py SeEapévou Td TWAROOS GTO TOV TEYOV Kal TOV KEepduwv Tas Pavas cuvT-
a y ~ yetv. tocodroy 8 obv éfeBidoavro Tov Spor ot
duvatot nal rhs éXaridos Tod Taiou caetrov, cov 202 .

not only was censured by his enemies, but also made the people think it strange that he, quaestor as he was,. had left his post before his commander. However, when he was denounced before the censors, he begged leave to speak, and wrought such a change in the opinions of his hearers that he left the court with the reputation of having been most grossly wronged. For he said that he had served in the army twelve years, although other men were required to serve there only ten, and that he had continued to serve as quaestor under his commander for more then two years, although the law permitted him to come back after a year. He was the only man in the army, he said, who had entered the campaign with a full purse and left it with an empty one; the rest had drunk up the wine which they took into Sardinia, and had come back to Rome with their wine-jars full of gold and silver.

III. After this, other fresh charges and indictments were brought against him, on the ground that he had caused the allies to revolt and had been privy to the conspiracy at Fregellae,! information of which was brought to Rome. But he cleared himself of all suspicion, and having established his entire innocence, immediately began a canvass for the tribuneship. All the men of note, without exception, were opposed to him, but so great a throng poured into the city from the country and took part in the elections that many could not be housed, and since the Campus Martius could not accommodate the multitude, they gave in their voices from the house-tops and tilings. So far, however, did the nobility prevail against the people and disappoint the hopes of Caius that he was not

' Fregellae revolted, and was destroyed in 125 B.c.

' e / a 3 ,
OUX, WS WpocedoKnoe, TPA@TOV, GAAA TéTapToV
avayopevOnvat. traparaBav 8 thy apyny evus
hv atravtT@v TPATOS, iaYvwY TE TO A€yelv, WS
Gros ovdets, Kal Tod madovs ai'T@ Tappyciav ToAAnY StOovTos avakAatopévp Tov abderddv.
évrav0a yap é£ amdons mpopacews tepimye Tov Sipov, avapluyynoKkwv TOY yeyovoTwy Kal Tapate-Jels Ta TOY Tpoyover, ws éxeivor pev Kal Dari-
é |
oKoLs érrodeunoay vTrep L'evuxiov Ttivds Snudpxov
, \ Af , , /,
NoLdopnGevros, cai ['aiov Beroupiou Odvarov xaré-yvocay, OTe OnuapxY@ Topevopeve Se ayopas ovy
e t , gee a 1 ©. > © vreEésTN jwoVvos: Tuav b€ opwrvtar," edn,
"TBéptov Evrors auvéxotrrov odTot, Kal ba péons
a f > 7 \ 3 ' ¢
THS TOAEwWS EgUpeTo vexpos éx KatretwdXiov pidy-TOMEVOS eis TOV TroTamOV: ot Sé aALOKOMEVOL TOV dirwv amwéOnvoKoy dxptro. Kaito. watpLov eoTu npiv, eb tes Exov Sixnv Oavatexny py vrraxove., / \ \ , rd bd , \ TovTou mpos Tas Ovpas EwOev EXOovta carmiyKTHy avaxanretcOar TH oarmTUyyt, Kal un WpoTEpov éme-UA A > fe) \ 4 (4 >
héperv Wihov avT@ tous dixactds. ovTwS evAa-
" \ / \ 4 9 99
Beis nat mepvdNaypévoe Tepl Tas Kpicels Hoav.
4 U / \ A
IV. Totovrous Aoyous tpoavaceicas Tov Sipov
¢ \ \ , \ e , (Hy d€ Kal peyaropwvotatos, cal poparewtatos év TH Névetv), SVO vopwous eicéhepe, Tov pév, et TLVOS APXOvTos adnpHro Thy apyny o Shpmos, ov' é@yra Toute dSevrépas apyis petovoiav elvas Tov returned first, as he expected, but fourth. But after entering upon his office! he was at once first of all the tribunes, since he had an incomparable power in oratory, and his affliction gave him great boldness of speech in bewailing the fate of his brother. For to this subject he would bring the people round on every pretext, reminding them of what had happened in the case of Tiberius, and contrasting the conduct of their ancestors, who went to war with the people of Falerii on behalf of Genucius, a tribune whom they had insulted, and condemned Caius Veturius to death because he was the only man who would not make way for a tribune passing through the forum. “ But before your eyes,” he said, “ these men beat Tiberius to death with clubs, and his dead body was dragged from the Capitol through the midst of the city to be thrown into the Tiber; moreover, those of his friends who were caught were put to death without trial. And yet it is ancient usage among us that if anyone who is arraigned on a capital charge does not answer to his summons, a trumpeter shall go to the door of this man’s house in the morning and summon him forth by sound of trumpet, and until this has been done the judges shall not vote on his case. So careful and guarded were the men of old in capital cases.”

IV. Having first stirred up the people with such words as these (and he had a very loud voice, and was most vigorous in his speaking), he introduced two laws, one providing that if the people had deprived any magistrate of his office, such magistrate should not be allowed to hold office a second time ;

1 For the year 123 B.c., ten years after Tiberius had entered upon the same office. :

be, et Tus dpxwy a@eputov exKExnpuxor ToALT HD, 2 Kar’ avTou di6ovta Kplow TO Snug. TOUT@Y TOV vO meov dytupus tr) pev Médpkov ‘OxraBrov nT mov TOV bro TeBeptou THs Snuapxias exTreg ovTa, ™@ éveiXeTo IlomiAAsos: obtos yap aTparnyay TOUS Tov TeBepiov didous eFexnpute. cat Ilomiddtos pev ov brocras THY Kpiow Epuyev ef "Irarias: Tov 6é Erepov vouov dios autos émaveidero, pncas TH pntpl Kopynvig denDeion xapiver Bar
3 Tov 'OxrdBror Kal o Sijpos nydaOn Kat ouvEexw-pNce, Teme THY Kopyn diay ovder 7 TTOV are Toy Tmaidov 7 rod TAT pos; As ye «al Naraiy elxova oTHTAS Vatepov émreyparpe Kopyy dav pnrépa Dpdyxev. arropynpoveveT at be wal tov Vatov TON-ra PuTopiKas Kal ayopatws bmrép auris eLpnueva mpos tia Tov éyOpav. “Xu ydp,” épn, “ Kopvn-
4 Alay AoLdopets TY TeBéptov TeKxovaay; ” érret Se

81a Be SAnpevos hy ets padraxtav 0 Aowdopn Geis:
“Tiva 66,” elrrev, EXeov Tappynatav auryKpivers
Kopynrig TEAUTOD; éTexes yap WS éxeivn; wal piv TAVTES loace ‘Popaior TrELW povov exelvny ar avd pos odcav 7 ae Tov avbpa.” TOLAVTN peVv 1 mexpia TOV Aoyov iy avrov, kal mo\Na ANaBelv ex TOV VEY Pa Mpeveov éotiy Gpowa.
. Tév dé vOpeoy ods elaeepe TO Sipe xapeto- 837
pevos Kat KaTahvev THe. oUYKANTOD, o ev Hv KAnpoux exes dvavewor ToS TEeVNGL THY Snpociay, o 6€ otpatiwtixos éoOATA Te KedNevwv Snuooia
1 dvavéuwy Coraés and Bekker, after Du Soul, for the MSS. nue véuwy. Ziegler adopts d:avéuwy, proposed by Sint.? and obet.
206

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

and another providing that if any magistrate had banished a citizen without trial, such magistrate should be liable to public prosecution. Of these laws, one had the direct effect of branding with infamy Marcus Octavius, who had been deposed from the tribunate by Tiberius; and by the other Popillius was affected, for as praetor he had banished the friends of Tiberius. Popillius, indeed, without standing his trial, fled out of Italy; but the other law was withdrawn by Caius himself, who said that he spared Octavius at the request of his mother Cornelia. The people were pleased at this and gave their consent, honouring Cornelia no less on account of her sons than because of her father; indeed, in after times they erected a bronze statue of her, bearing the inscription : “Cornelia, Mother of the Gracchi.” There are on record also many things which Caius said about her in the coarse style of forensic speech, when he was attacking one of his enemies: “ What,” said he, “dost thou abuse Cornelia, who gave birth to Tiberius? ’’ And since the one who had uttered the abuse was charged with effeminate practices, “ With what effrontery,’ said Caius, “canst thou compare thyself with Cornelia? Hast thou borne such children as she did? And verily all Rome knows that she refrained from commerce with men longer than thou hast, though thou art a man.” Such was the bitter- ness of his language, and many similar examples can be taken from his writings.

V. Of the laws which he proposed by way of gratifying the people and overthrowing the senate, one was agrarian, and divided the public land among the poor citizens ; another was military, and ordained that clothing should be furnished to the soldiers at 207

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Xopnyeto Oat Kai undev eis TodTO THs prsPopopas
Upatpeic Gat TAY STPAaTEVOMEvwY, Kal VEwTEpOY
éray értaxaivena py KataréyecOar otpatiotny:

o 6é cuppaytKos icorrnhous Trot@v Tots ToAdiTaLs tous “Iraduwtas. 0 6€ aitiKos erevavit@y Tots wévnot THY ayopdav. oO 5é SuxactiKes, @ TO TEiaTov améxowe THIS TOV TUYKANTLK@Y SuvapEws.
povas yap éxpivov tas Sixas, Kai 54a TodTO poBepor T@® Te Onum Kal Tols immevow joav, o b€ tpiaxogious TaV immévy wpocKaTédekev avTois over Tptaxociots, Kal Tas Kpicers KoLWas TaY éEEaKooiwV
€roinae. TovTov TOV vomoy ELahépwy Ta TE AANA
Aéyerar orovddcat SvadepovTws, Kal Ta@Y poe
QaUTOU TavT@Y Snuaywyav Wpos THY aUYyKANTOV
adhopwrvtwy Kal TO KaNOUpEVOY KOMiTLOV, TPATOS
Tore otpadels é&w mpos thy ayopav Snunyophoat, Kal TO NoLTrov OUTW TroLety CE exEivov, piKPa TapeyxAioe: kal petabéce: oxXnpatos méya wpaypya Kivnoas Kal peTEveyK@DV TPOTFOY TLVA THY TrOALTELAY
éx THs aptotoxpatias eis THY Snwoxpatiay, ws TOY jTokA@y Séov, ov ths Bovrns, ctoyalecGar Tous Néyovras.
VI. ’Enred 5é od povov dé€aTo Tov vouov TovTOY
o Sipos, GAA Kaxeivp Tovs Kpivoyvtas é« TeV immévy éwxe xataréEar, povapxicyn tis boys éyeyove qept avtTov, W@oTe Kal THY oUYyKANTOV 208

the public cost, that nothing should be deducted from their pay to meet this charge, and that no one under seventeen should be enrolled as a soldier ; another concerned the allies, and gave the Italians equal suffrage rights with Roman citizens ; another related to the supplies of grain, and lowered the market price tothe poor ; and another dealt with the appointment of judges. This last law most of all curtailed the power of the senators; for they alone could serve as judges in criminal cases, and this privilege made them formidable both to the common people and to the equestrian order. The law of Gracchus, however, added to the membership of the senate, which was three hundred, three hundred men from the equestrian order, and made service as judges a prerogative of the whole six hundred. In his efforts to carry this law Caius is said to have shown remarkable earnestness in many ways, and especially in this, that whereas all popular orators betore him had turned their faces towards the senate and that part of the forum called the “ comitium,” he now set anew example by turning towards the other part of the forum as he harangued the people, and continued to do this from that time on, thus by a slight deviation and change of attitude stirring up a great question, and to a certain extent changing the constitution from an aristocratic to a democratic form; for his implication was that speakers ought to address themselves to the people, and not to the senate.

VI. The people not only adopted this law, but also entrusted to its author the selection of the judges who were to come from the equestrian order, so that he found himself invested with something like monarchical power, and even the senate 209

VOL. X. P
Nw

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 avéyesOat cupBovrevovtos avTov. auveSovreve
\ > / A b , , 5 4 ,
d€ del Te TaV éxElyn TpETTOYTWY ebonryoupevos
\ \ "A , /

olov Wy Kal TO wept Tov aitov Soya pETPLwWTATOV Kal KaddAaTOY, Ov Ereprpe pev EE IT Bnpias DaBros
avttatpatynyos, éxeivos 8 éerece thy Bovarny dtrodopévny tov aitov avatréyar tais ToAEct
TO apyuplov, Kal mpoceTraitidcacba Tov PaBrov
e a a \ a
ws érayOn cal apopnroy ToiodyTa THY apynY TOIS
b , 94? g 4 " / \ avOpwros: ép @ peyddnv éoye Sokav peta evvolas év Tais émapyiass.
"Eypawe 5€ xai trodes arrotxidas éxméptrecbar Kal tas odovs troteicBat Kal KatacKkevdlea ba:
aitToBodta, TovTOLS ATact MpatTomEevors avTov
dpxovta kai dioxntny édtotds, Kal mpos ovdev ATOTPVOMEVOS TWV TOTOUTM@V Kal THALKOVT@Y, ANNA
A , a
Kat Oavpact@ Tit TayEr Kal TOV@ TAY y.WopévaVv
t
@s povov Exactov é€epyalouevos, @aTE Kal TOUS wayu picoovtas avtTov Kxal SedoxoTtas éxmdnTtecOat To Ota TWavT@Y avicimoY Kal TENETLOUPYOD.
ot 5é qwoddot Kal trav dyuw avtny eBavpalor,
b] lA ec a ' a" A 2 , éEnptnuévov opa@vtTes avtov mARGos épyoAdBov,

a A ' ra)
TEXYVLTOV, TpEeTBEeVT@V, APXOVTWY, TTPATLWTOY, diroroyov, ols maaw évtuyyavev peta evKoAas
\ A 4
Kal TO cepvor ev TO dhirtavopwrr@ SiapvAdtror,

A , ,
Kal véuwv adtov TO appuoTToY oikeiws éExadoTe,
\ > , 4 \ \ YareTTrovs amedeixvue cuxopavras Tors PhoRepov
> a \ ¢ A , 9 ce)
avrov » goptixov drws 7) Blatov atroxaXovvtas.
ovTw dSewvorepos Hv év tais omtdiars Kal Tails
210

consented to follow his counsel. But when he counselled them, it was always in support of measures befitting their body; as, for instance, the very equitable and honourable decree concerning the grain which Fabius the pro-praetor sent to the city from Spain. Caius induced the Senate to sell the grain and send the money back to the cities of Spain, and further, to censure Fabius for making his government of the province intolerably burden- some to its inhabitants. This decree brought Caius great reputation as well as popularity in the provinces.

He also introduced bills for sending out colonies, for constructing roads, and for establishing public granaries, making himself director and manager of all these undertakings, and showing no weariness in the execution of all these different and great enter- prises ; nay, he actually carried out each one of them with an astonishing speed and power of application, as if it were his sole business, so that even those who greatly hated and feared him were struck with amazement at the powers of achievement and accomplishment which marked all that hedid. And as for the multitude, they were astonished at the very sight, when they beheld him closely attended by a throng of contractors, artificers, ambassadors, magistrates, soldiers, and literary men, with all of whom he was on easy terms, preserving his dignity while showing kindliness, and rendering properly to every man the courtesy which was due from him, whereby he set in the light of malignant slanderers those who stigmatised him as threatening or utterly arrogant or violent. Thus he was a more skilful popular leader in his private intercourse with men

211
Pp 2

mpatecw % Tois ato Tov Bnuatos oyos Syyarywryos.
VII. 'Eorrovdéace 5¢ padota trepi THv odoTotiav, THS Te Kpelas Gua Kat TOU pos Yaply Kal KAU
emripennbets. evOetar yap iryovtTo Sua TOV ywpiwv arpepeis, Kal TO prev €otopvuTo Trétpa EeoThH, TO dé Aupou yopact vakTis émuKvovTo. Tmipma-péevav &é TaV Koitwv Kal Cevyvupevarv yedupats Soa yeluappos Stéxotrrov pdpayyes, ios Te TAY éxatépwOev icov Kat TapddXAnrov AapBavovTwr, oparny Kal Kadrnv dvi elye 5s’ GXov Td Epyov.

mpos 6€ TovTots Stapetpyjaas Kata pidtov odo Tacav (To b€ pidtov OKT cTAdiwy OALyoY aTrobel) kiovas ALOivous anpeia Tod pétTpov KaTéoTnCED.
adNous S€ AiGous EXaTTOY aTéxYOoVTAaS AANAWY
exatépwlev Tis 0600 SiéOnxev, ws ein padiws Tois immous éxovow émiBaivew am’ avtav avaBoréws pn Seopévors.
VIII. ’Evi tovros tod Shou peyadruvovtos
avrov Kal Trav oTtody éEroipws ExovTos évdeixvucIar Tpos evvotay, Epn TroTe SnuNnyop@v avTos aiTHa EL xapw, vy AaBov pev avr tavtos ee, ef Se aTroTUYoL, undey exeivois peuripopnoev. TodTO pnOev &okev aitnots vrareias elvat, nal mpoc-Soxiav Twadow ws Gya pev vrateiav, dua 8é
Snuapylay petiov Tapécxev. evotavtay 6é TOV UTATIKOY APYALPETLWY KaL METEWPWY GYTwWY aTrAYtov apn Vdiov Puvyiov xataywv eis TO Tediov 212 838

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

and in his business transactions than in his speeches from the rostra.
VII. But he busied himself most earnestly with the construction of roads, laying stress upon utility, as well as upon that which conduced to grace and beauty. For his roads were carried straight through the country without deviation, and had pavements of quarried stone, and substructures of tight-rammed masses of sand. Depressions were filled up, all inter- secting torrents or ravines were bridged over, and both sides of the roads were of equal and correspond- ing height, so that the work had everywhere an even and beautiful appearance. In addition to all this, he measured off every road by miles (the Roman mile falls a little short of eight furlongs) and planted stone pillars in the ground to mark the distances. Other stones, too, he placed at smaller intervals from one another on both sides of the road, in order that equestrians might be able to mount their horses from them and have no need of assistance.

VIII. Since the people extolled him for all these services and were ready to show him any token what- soever of their good will, he said to them once in a public harangue that he was going to ask a favour of them, which, if granted, he should value supremely, but if it were refused, he should find no fault with them. This utterance was thought to be a request for a consulship, and led everybody to expect that he would sue for a consulship and a tribuneship at the same time. But when the consular elections were at hand and everybody was on the tip-toe of expecta- tion, he was seen leading Caius Fannius down into the Campus Martius and joining in the canvass for 213

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kat cuvapxatpectdtwy éexeivm peta Tav dirov.
TOUTO pony nveyne TO Pavvi peyadrAny. KaKEtvos pev dratos, dios bé€ Syuapyos amedeixyOn To Sevrepov, ov TrapayyéAXwv ovde peTL@V, GNAA TOU dnuouv atrovddacarTos.
> V Qi ¢7 \ \ /) \ w
Emel 5€ éwpa thy ev ouyKAnTov éyOpay ayTt-
? \ \ A N > \ b ' \ S Kpus, aro Se TH Mpos avTov evvoia Tov Pavuroy, avOus érépors vouots amnptycato TO mAOos, 9 , ? 4 4 ,
atroikias pev eis Tapavta Kal Karinv réurecOar
/ a \ > \ , / \ ypabav, carav Oé él Kowwvia TrortTElas TOUS
Aativouvs. 1 d¢€ BovrAn deicaca wn Tavtamacwy
Apayos yévntat, kawny Kai aavvynOn Treipar émiye Tois TroANOLs aATroTpOTHS, avTinuaywyovaa Kal
, \ \ 9 \ a yaptlopevn rapa to BéXtTicTOV. Hv yap els tov tov Tatov cuvapxovtwy AiB8tos Apovaos, avip
€
ovTE 'yeyovws Tivos Pwpaiwy ote TeOpappévos
xeipov, HOe! dé Kal NOy@ Kai TAOVTH TOS paddLoTA Tiumpéevors Kal Suvapevolts aro TOUTwWY évdpLNXrOS.
él robrov ovv Of yvwpl~wTaToL TpeTOVTAaL, Kai 4 b) ' ft fo) oh \ , mapexddrouy avtoy ayyacBa tov Taiov nai per avTav él tov dvdpa avathvat, un Brafopevov \ b) 4 vn "A > \ \ pndé avrixpovovta Tots modXois, GANA Tpos noovay apxovTta Kal yapilopevov vmép av Kai ameyOaverOat Karas elyev.
> \ @ e , 9 ol A a
IX. 'Emidovs otv o AtBuos ets tadta tH BovvAR
A 4 n
Thy éavrod Snuapyiay vomous &yparyrey ote TOY
1 #0e: Coraés and Bekker retain the old vulgate 45n.
214
TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

him along with his friends. This turned the tide strongly in favour of Fannius. So Fannius was elected consul, and Caius tribune for the second time, though he was not a candidate and did not canvass for the office; but the people were eager to have it so.

However, he soon saw that the senate was hostile to him out and out, and that the good will of Fannius towards him had lost its edge, and therefore again began to attach the multitude to himself by other laws, proposing to send colonies to Tarentum and Capua, and inviting the Latins to a participation in the Roman franchise. But the senate, fearing that Gracchus would become altogether invincible, made a new -and unusual attempt to divert the people from him ; they vied with him, that is, in courting the favour of the people, and granted their wishes contrary to the best interests of the state. For one of the colleagues of Caius was Livius Drusus, a man who was not inferior to any Roman either in birth or rearing, while in character, eloquence, and wealth he could vie with those who were most honoured and influen- tial in consequence of these advantages. To this man, accordingly, the nobles had recourse, and invited him to attack Caius and league himself with them against him, not resorting to violence or coming into collision with the people, but administering his office to please them and making them concessions where it would have been honourable to incur their hatred.

IX. Livius, accordingly, put his influence as tribune at the service of the senate to this end, and drew up laws which aimed at what was neither honourable

a aA A \ KaXN@Y TLWOS OUTE TOY AVELTEA@Y EXOMEVOUS, ANA
éy povov, uTepBaréabat tov Vdiov ndovq7 Kat
, A a av 6 éL >)
YAPLTL TWOV TOAXOD, WATTED EV KWUWOLA, OTEVOWY
cat StaptrArAwpevos. @ Kal KaTahavertaTny eroinaey éavTnyv } avyKANTOS Ov ducyEpaivovaaLr tots Tov L'afov modtTevpaci, GAXA avTor éxeivov 9 A A A s /
avercivy TaTelvacat TavTaTact BovAopevnv.
N XN \ > , , / \ \
Tov peéev yap atrocias dvo0 ypayyavtTa Kai Tous YaAplescTaTOUS TOV TOMLTOY ELaadyovTa SnmoKoTrely
nriavto, AtBiw 8 dwdexa xatoxifovTe Kal Tpto-
, > e 4 > / Le) b] , NiNLouS ELS EXaoTHY ATOTTENAOYTL THY ATTOPwY
, ’ , / sd , ; ,
cuvedauBavovto. KdKeiv@ pév, Tt yopay Svéverpe

Tots wévnot mpootakas éxdot@ TErCly ATropopay els to Synpoctoyv, ws KOAAKEVOYTL TOUS TOAXOUS amnxGavovto, AiBuos 5€ Kal Thy dtrodhopay TavtTny TOV VElmapevwy ahatpav pecker avTois. Ete Se o pev Tots Aativas ico wndiay S500 édXvTreEL, TOD
4 @ \ 9 A , ISA ,
5é, Srws pundé eri otpatetas é&f twa Aativor paBdos aixicac bat ypawavros éBonbovr TO voy.
kat pévtor kal adtos o AiBios det Synunyopav EXeyev ws ypadoe tavta TH BovAT Soxodvta Kndo-4, “ lal] d \ “A pévyn TOV TOAA@Y’? 6 67 Kal “ovoy aro TeV TOK-TEULATWY AUTOD xpHolwov bIrApyev. TuepwTEepoy yap eoye mpos tHv Bovrny o Shpos’ Kat rors yvwpiwtatous avtov mpoTtepov vpopwpévou Kal 216
TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

nor advantageous; nay, he had the emulous eager- ness of the rival demagogues of comedy to achieve one thing, namely, to surpass Caius in pleasing and gratifying the people.t In this way the senate showed most plainly that it was not displeased with the public measures of Caius, but rather was desirous by all means to humble or destroy the man himself. For when Caius proposed to found two colonies, and these composed of the most respectable citizens, they accused him of truckling to the people; but when Livius proposed to found twelve, and to send out to each of them three thousand of the needy citizens, they supported him. With Caius, because he distributed public land among the poor for which every man of them was required to pay a rental into the public treasury, they were angry, alleging that he was seeking thereby to win favour with the multitude ; but Livius met with their approval when he proposed to relieve the tenants even from this rental. And further, when Caius proposed to bestow upon the Latins equal rights of suffrage, he gave offence ; but when Livius brought in a bill forbidding that any Latin should be chastised with rods even during military service, he had the senate’s support. And indeed Livius himself, in his public harangues, always said that he introduced these measures on the authority of the senate, which desired to help the common people; and this in fact was the only advan- tage which resulted from his political measures. For the peopie became more amicably disposed towards the senate; and whereas before this they had sus- pected and hated the nobles, Livius softened and

' An allusion to the rival demagogues in the Knights of Aristophanes.
217
wf!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

pucouvtos é€éXuceE Kat KaTETPaUVE THY pYNnOLKa-
\ , 3, e / @
klav xal yanrerotnta tavTnv o AiBtos, ws éx

THS EKELVWY OPLwpEVvos yvauns él TO Snwaywryety
Kal yapilec Oat Tois TroNDNoOIS.
X. Meyiorn 8€ rd Apovow miatis evvoias mpos Tov Ojpov éeyivero Kal Suxaroovvys TO pundev
e A > e \ e le) , 4
auT@ pnd wvmreép éavtov gaiverbar ypadorta.
Kal yap oinurtas érépous éFémeutre THY TOEwY
Kat Stotxnoeot xpnudtwv ov mpoone, tov Tatov
Ta WreloTa Kal péyiota TOY ToOLOVTWY aUT@ / b Ve 4 “A , mpoatiOévtos. éarel dé ‘PovBpiov tay auvapyov-e \ > Sf / , 9
Twv évos oixilesOar Kapyndova ypawavtos avnpy-
, e \ / 4 \ e Ju
pevnv wo LKnriwvos, KAnp@ Aaxav o Taios 297 ? 4 92--N N , v éFérdeucev eis AtBiny él tov Katotxiopor, Et
A ? \ ¢ fe) 9 , > “A \
MaGAXov émtBas o Apodoos atovTos avrov Tov
Sipov UTeAduBave Kal MpoonyeTo, padoTAa Tais
Kata tov DovrAPtov b:aBorgais. o 6€ PovrABi0s z 2 A of. 4 4 > \ \
odTos Hv Tod Taiou didros, kal ovvdpxywy eri thy Savopnv Tis Yw@pas npnuevos: hv 6€ PopyBoédns, Kal picovpevos pev vo THs BovAns avtixpus,
Uaromtos S€ Kai TOS AGAXNOLS WS TA TUEpAYLKA Siaxiwav Kai tapokvver xpida tovs ‘Iradwras mpos atootactw. ols avatrodeixtws Kal averéy-
4 N
KTWS AeEyouevors autos mpoceTiber iat Oo
PovrABio0s ody vytatvovans ovdé eipnuixhs dv mpo-aipécews. Toto paddioTta KatédXve tov Tdiov b ? wn i A e , e amoNavovta tov ploovs. xai dre Sentiwy o 218 839 dissipated their remembrance of past grievances and their bitter feelings by alleging that it was the sanction of the nobles which had induced him to enter upon his course of conciliating the people and gratifying the wishes of the many.

X. But the strongest proof that Livius was well disposed towards the people and honest, lay in the fact that he never appeared to propose anything for himself or in his own interests. For he moved to send out other men as managers of his colonies, and would have no hand in the expenditure of moneys, whereas Caius had assigned to himself most of such functions and the most important of them. And now Rubrius, one of his colleagues in the tribuneship, brought in a bill for the founding of a colony on the site of Carthage, which had been destroyed by Scipio, and Caius, upon whom the lot fell, sailed off to Africa as superintendent of the foundation. In his absence, therefore, Livius made all the more headway against him, stealing into the good graces of the people and attaching them to himself, particu- larly by his calumniations of Fulvius. This Fulvius was a friend of Caius, and had been chosen a commissioner with him for the distribution of the public land ; but he was a turbulent fellow, and was hated outright by the senators. Other men also sus- pected him of stirring up trouble with the allies and of secretly inciting the Italians to revolt. These things were said against him without proof or inves- tigation, but Fulvius himself brought them into greater credence by a policy which was unsound and revolutionary. This more than anything else was the undoing of Caius, who came in for a share of the hatred against Fulvius. And when Scipio Africanus

"Adpixavos é& ovdevos aitiov mpodavois éredev-Thee Kal onpeld TiVa TO vEKpO TANYaY Kal Bias énruSpapely edokev, ws ev Tois mepi exelvov yé-yparral, TO pev WAELa TOY ert TOV PovABtoy HOE
A a ? \ 4 ‘ e / ? ,
THS StaBorrs, éxOpov dvta Kal THY Huépay exeivny ért tov Byuatos T@ LKnrriwv AeXordopypevor, oe N \ “A e , \ 5 \ Arvato Sé€ xai tod Tatouv bmovora. Kai dewvov olTws épyov ém avdpl T@ TpwWT@ Kal peEeyloTH
e 4 \ eb) ” , b \ 9
Pwpaiwv torunOéev ovx Ervye Sinns ovd€ eis
i A > Sf A e A \ éXeyyov mponrOev eveatncay yap ol ToNKOL Kat
, \ / e \ fo) Af ,
KatédAvoav THy Kplow vTép Tod Taiou PoBnOevtes, uy wepiTeTns TH aitia tod dovov &ntTovpévov YEVNTAL TAUTA MeV OvY eyeyovE: TrPOTEpOV.
XI. "Ev 88 rH AsBvn wept tov tHs Kapyndovos
catotxiapov, iv o Taios “lovvwviav, direp éotiv ‘Hpatav, @vopace, ToAXNA KwrAvpaTa yevécIat Tapa Tov Saipoviou Aéyovow. H Te yap TpwTN onpata, wvevpatos ahapralovtos avTny, tov bé hépovtos éyxpatas avtTexyouevou, suvetpiBn, Kai ¢€ “ al > 4 b ,
Ta lepa Tois Bwpots emixeipeva dStecxédacery ave-pov Ovedra wai dréppirev bré Tovs Spous Tis yeyernuevns vioypadis, avtous 5€ Tovs Gpous avéorracay émedOovtes AVKOL Kal paKpav wWyYoVTO

dépovres. ov pny addAa mdvta cuvtdtas Kal Siaxoopunoas o Taios nuépats EBdounKovta Tais
macas enavnOey ets “Pawpny, miélecbae tov PovrABiov bre tov Apovoov rruvOavopevos, xal TOY TpayuaTwY THS avTOD Trapovatas Seomérwy.
220

died without any apparent cause, and certain marks of violence and blows were thought to be in evidence all over his dead body, as I have written in his Life,} most of the consequent calumny fell upon Fulvius, who was Scipio’s enemy, and had abused him that day from the rostra, but suspicion attached itself also to Caius. And a deed so monstrous, and perpetrated upon a man who was the foremost and greatest Roman, went unpunished, nay, was not even so much as probed; for the multitude were opposed to any judicial enquiry and thwarted it, because they feared that Caius might be implicated in the charge if the murder were investigated. However, this had hap- pened at an earlier time.?

XI. In Africa, moreover, in connection with the planting of a colony on the site of Carthage, to which colony Caius gave the name Junonia (that is to say, in Greek, Heraea), there are said to have been many prohibitory signs from the gods. For the leading standard was caught by a gust of wind, and though the bearer clung to it with all his might, it was broken into pieces; the sacrificial victims lying on the altars were scattered by a hurricane and dis- persed beyond the boundary-marks in the plan of the city, and the boundary-marks themselves were set - upon by wolves, who tore them up and carried them a long way off. Notwithstanding this, Caius settled and arranged everything in seventy days all told, and then returned to Rome, because he learned that Fulvius was being hard pressed by Drusus, and be- cause matters there required his presence. For

1 See the Tiberius Gracchus, ad fin., and cf. the Romulus, XXvii. 4 f.
2 In 129 B.c., six years before Caius became tribune.
22!

, q , 3 \ > \ \

Aevxtos yap ‘Oripsos, avnp odLyapxiKos Kal

A A , / Suvatos év tH BovAn, mpotepov pev e&étrecey
e 4 , A of, \ ,
Umatelav TapayyéAdwv, tov Taiov tov Pavroy

mMpoaryaryovtTos, éxeivov b€ KaTapyatpectacaytos:
Tore 6€ ToAA@Y BonGovvTwy émidokos Hy UTraTeEvig 4 \ , N Ju . 4

cew, UTatevov 5€ Katadrvoev Tov Tdiov, 467 Tpomov twa THs Suvdpuews avTOdD papatvouervns kal tov Snuov pectod yeyovotos T@Y ToLovTwY ToALTeULaTwWVY Sta TO TOANOUS TOUS POS YapLV Snuaywyovvras eivar nal thv BovrAnv vTeiKxey éxoucav.
XII. *EsraverOav Se mp@tov pev éx tod Ilada-Tiov peToKnoev els Tov UTO THY ayopav TOTOY
ws SnwoTiK@TEpov, OTOU WAEiDTOUS TOV TaTELVaOY Kal TevntTwv cuvéBaer oiKely: ErrErTa TOV VOMWY éEéOnKxe Tovs AoLTOUs ws emdE~wy Hy Whdor avtois. OyAov de Tavtayodey avT@ cuvtovTos éreccev 7 Bovrn tov bratov Davyov éxBareiy
\ ¥ \ e 4 e ,
TOUS G@AXNous TARY Pwpaiwy atravtas. ‘yevopevou
5é xnpuypatos anBous kal dAXoxKdTov, pndéva
“ 4 \ “ 4 > e , fol
TOV TUppaxov unde TAY dirwv ev Poun pavivar
mept Tas Huépas éxeivas, avreEeOnnev o Vaios Sidypampa KaTnyopav tod viraTou, Kal Tois oUp-payos, av pévwor, BonOyjcew émayyerdopevos.
ov piv éBonOnoev, GdAdrAA opav &va tav Eévor
“A / “A a
avTod kal cuvyiOewv EXKopEvoY UTO TOY LIrNnpETaV Tav Tov Pavviov, maphnrOe kai ov tpoonpuver,
¥ \ > \ b] 4 4 \
elite THY LaxuV émiAreitrovaay Hn Sedim@s éAEyKeLDY, 222

840

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Lucius Opimius, a man of oligarchical principles and influential in the senate, who had previously failed in a candidacy for the consulship (when Caius had brought forward Fannius and supported his canvas for the office),! now had the aid and assistance of many, and it was expected that he would be consul, and that as consul he would try to put down Caius, whose influence was already somewhat on the wane, and with whose peculiar measures the people had become sated, because the leaders who courted their favour were many and the senate readily yielded to them.

XII. On returning to Rome, in the first place Caius changed his residence from the Palatine hill to the region adjoining the forum, which he thought more democratic, since most of the poor and lowly had come to live there; in the next place, he pro- mulgated the rest of his laws, intending to get the people's vote upon them. But when a throng came together from all parts of Italy for his support, the senate prevailed upon the consul Fannius to drive out of the city all who were not Romans. Accordingly, a strange and unusual proclamation was made, to the effect that none of the allies and friends of Rome should appear in the city during those days; where- upon Caius published a counter edict in which he de- nounced the consul, and promised the allies his sup- port, in case they should remain there. He did not, however, give them his support, but when he saw one of his comrades and guest-friends dragged off by the lictors of Fannius, he passed by without giving him any help, either because he feared to give a proof that his power was already on the decline, or because

1 See chapter viii. 2.

\

v \ ‘ e . e , 9 \
cite 4n BovAropevos, ws erXeyev, ariayias AUTOS kal ouptroxs dapyas (lnrovor Tois éxOpois Tapacyety.
Luvéruye 5é adT@ Kai mpos Tovs suvdpyovTas
5] 9 “ ‘ 4 b , V4
év opyn yevecOar dua Tocavtny attiav. émeddev
o Shuos OeacAat povoydyous év ayopa, kal Tov apxovTwy ot TrEtoToL OewpnTnpia KUKAw KaTAoKxevaoavtes eEenicAovy. tata o Vdios éxéNevev avtous Kabatpeiv, Grrws of TevyTES ex THY TOTTWY 3 / 3 \ 4 4 ‘ \
éxetvwrv aptcOi Dedoacbar Svvwvtar. jundevos Sé mTpocéyovtos dvapeivas THY po THs Oéas vuKTaA, \ “a a ig 9 > 4 ey?
nal Tov Texvit@v Saous elyev épyoraBous td
éavT@ trapadaBwv, ta Oewpntnpia Kxabetre Kai
A / , > @ / b / \
To Snum axordlovta pel’ Huépav améderEe Tov
/ 799 @ a \ a > A ” 3
ToTrov: €p @ Tols pev TOAAOIs avip eoker eivat, \ \ LA e 9 \ \ , / tous 6€ cuvdpyovTas ws ttamos Kat Biatos édv-mnoev. €K TovTOV Kal THY TpiTnY edoke SnpapyLav

b “A , N ’ A /
adnpnolar, Widwv pev avt@ wWreiotwv yevo-pévov, adixnws 5é Kal Kaxovpyws Tay cvvapyov-TOY TOLNTApEVOY THY avayopevow Kat avadeEry.
Gna Tadta pev dudiahnrnoww eiyev. Hveyxe dé ov peTpLws aTrOTUX@Y, Kal pos ye TOUS éxOpous €TEeyyEN@VTAS AUT@ NéyeTar Opacuvtepoy Tov s€- ovTos eltreiy @s Yapdoviov yéAwTa yeAWouv, ov
ylyv@oKovTes OooY avTois aKoTOS ex TOY avTOD WEPLKEXUTAL TONLTEULATOD.
224

he was unwilling, as he said, by his own acts to afford his enemies the occasions which they sought for a conflict at close quarters.
Moreover, it chanced that he had incurred the anger of his colleagues in office, and for the follow- ing reason. The people were going to enjoy an exhibition of gladiators in the forum, and most of the magistrates had constructed seats for the show round about, and were offering them for hire. Caius ordered them to take down these seats, in order that the poor might be able to enjoy the spectacle from those places without paying hire. But since no one paid any attention to his command, he waited till the night before the spectacle, and then, taking all the workmen whom he had under his orders in public contracts, he pulled down the seats, and when day came he had the place all clear for the people. For this proceeding the populace thought him a man, but his colleagues were annoyed and thought him reckless and violent. It was believed also that this conduct cost him his election to the tribunate for the third time, since, although he got a majority of the votes, his colleagues were unjust and fraudu- lent in their proclamation and returns. This, how- ever, wasdisputed. But he took his failure overmuch to heart, and what is more, when his enemies were exulting over him, he told them, it is said, with more boldness than was fitting, that they were laughing with sardonic laughter, and were not aware of the great darkness that enveloped them in consequence of his public measures.!

1 Blass compares the laughter of the doomed suitors in Odyssey, xx. 346 ff.—the fatuous smile of men whose fate is sealed, though they are unaware of it.

225

XIII. ’Evet 5é€ wal rov "Omipmov xataotncavtes Uratov TOY vo“wy TOAXOUS Stéypadov Kai thy Kapynddvos éxivouv Saraki, épeBifovres tov

Tdiov, ws dv aitiay opyns mapacyav avaipedein, TOV peyv mpa@Tov xpovov éxapréper, Tov 5é hidov \ , ce) 4 4 @

Kal padiota tod PovABiov wapoEvvovtos wpynce
wad ouvayey tous avtitakopévous mpos Tov Uratov. évradv0a cai tTHv pntépa Aéyovow avT@ cvotaciacal, pwcOoupéevny amo Tis Eévns Kpvda
, 3 e , wv e \
Kal wéutovaay eis ‘Paunv avdpas, as 57 Oeptaortas’ Taira yap év Trois émiatoNlols avTAS nveypéva yeypadpOat mpos tov viov. érepoe b€ Kat mavu ths Kopyndias Svoxepaivovens tadta mpdat-terOat Néyouaty.
e 2 9 ” e / \ , 4 e

He 8 obv éuehdov nwEpg TOUS vowous duel ot wept tov ‘Orripov, KaTeiAnTTO pev VITd aphorTepov Ewbev evOds Td Karrerodov, Ovcavtos 8é Tod UmaTOU THY UTNpeT@Y TLS avTOD Koivros ‘AvtuA-Mos Siahépwv Erépwoe TA oTAaYYVA TpPOS TOUS
. A , ? Ad , ’ a mept tov DovAPtov eime: “ Aote toTov ayabois,
\ a 2) \ 4 ef A A KakKol ToNTaL. tives 5€ hacw aya TH pov7
Tavtn kat tov Bpaxiova yupuvov olov éd DBpe oxynuarilovTa tmapeveyxeiv. amoOvicKes your evOus o “AvTvAdos éxei peyddots ypadetors KevTOUpEvOS, em AUT@ ToUTw TeTotHaBaL deyo-pévous. Kal TO pev TAOS StetapdyOn mpos Tov
,
povoy, evavtia dé Tovs Hyemovas eoxe StdBeats.
e Ps a Tr fue] 6 } a FN \
Oo pev yap I'dios HyPeTto Kal Kanas éreye TOs

XIII. The enemies of Caius also eflected the election of Opimius as consul, and then proceeded to revoke many of the laws which Caius had secured and to meddle with the organization of the colony at Carthage. ‘This was by way of irritating Caius, that he might furnish ground for resentment, and so be got rid of. At first he endured all this patiently, but at last, under the instigations of his friends, and especially of Fulvius, he set out to gather a fresh body of partisans for opposition to the consul. Here, we are told, his mother also took active part in his seditious measures, by secretly hiring from foreign parts and sending to Rome men who were ostensibly reapers; for to this matter there are said to have been obscure allusions in her letters! to her son. Others, however, say that Cornelia was very much displeased with these activities of her son.

Be that as it may, on the day when Opimius and his supporters were going to annul the laws, the Capitol had been occupied by both factions since earliest morning, and after the consul had offered sacrifice, one of his servants, Quintus Antyllius, as he was carrying from one place to another the entrails of the victims, said to the partisans of Fulvius: “Make way for honest citizens, ye rascals! ’’ Some say, too, that along with this speech Antyllius bared his arm and waved it with an insulting gesture. At any rate he was killed at once and on the spot, stabbed with large writing styles said to have been made for just such apurpose. The multitude were completely confused by the murder, but it produced an opposite state of mind inthe leaders of the two factions. Caius was distressed, and upbraided his followers for

1 Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 58, 211. -

\ > \ e > Ss s 4 > ¢ a Tept aVTOY ws aitiay Seomevots Trddat KAD EavTOY
aA 3 @ A 5 5 4 ec. de "0 , 4 tots éxOpois Sedwxoras, 0 5é ‘Ozripos worrep 9 , ‘ b] “A , \ A évdootpov AaBwv érijpto cal Tapw£uve tov Shor emt Thy amuvav.
XIV. Kai rote pev GuBpov yevopévov dierv-
- bu \ ec. 7 A \ \ c oe
Onoav apa be nue THY pev Bourny 0 dmaros ouvayayav évdov éxpnudtiler, Erepor S€ to Tod
? , A \ > \ / /
AvtvAXNLov c@ua yuuvov él KNvns TpoBEuEvot
5.’ dyopas Tapa To Bovrevtypoy éritndes Trape-KOmeCov, olpwyn xpwpmevor kal Opnve, yiyveoKor-Tos péev Tov 'Omipiov ta mpatTopeva, TpooTrotov-
, \ , @ \ \ \
pévov b€ Oavydlew, @ate Kal Tovs Bovarcutas mpoerOeiv. xatateOcions 56 THs KALVNS Els peo
e \ > l4 e o \Q A N 4 oi pev éoxetrAialov ws eri Serv@ kai peyddr@
/ a \ a > U - \ 4
wader, Tots dé ToAXOls ener piceiy Kal mpoBar-NecOar Tovs OrLyapytKoUs, ws TrBépioy pév Tpayyov év KatretwXi@ govevoavtes avtol 67-papyYov ovta Kal Tov vexpov mpoaeEéBanor, o 8’
e / 9 4 > 4 N ¥
vanperns AvrTvrALos, ov dSixata pév lows tretrov-

Aas, tiv Sé wreiotny aitiav eis TO TADeiy abTa
Tapacywv, év ayopa mpoKeTal, Kal TEpleaTNKEV » ‘Pwpaiwv BovrAn Opnvoica Kat cvvexxopilovea pucOwrov avOpwrov, éri to Tov ETL ELTrOpEevov dvereiy tav tod Snuov xndouevwy. éx TOUTOU
\
mad es TO BovreuTnpioy amedOovtes eyrndi-
9 A
cavto Kat mpocétatay Oripio 7O UTrate cave
tThv ody Stas Svvarto, Kal Katadvew TOUS Tupayvous.
, A
"Exeivou dé mpoemovros émi Ta dTAa yopely 228

841

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

having given their enemies ground for accusing them which had long been desired ; but Opimius, as though he had got something for which he was waiting, was elated, and urged the people on to vengeance.

XIV. A shower of rain fell just then, and the assembly was dissolved ; but early next morning the consul called the senate together indoors and pro- ceeded to transact business, while others placed the body of Antyllius without covering upon a bier, and carried it, as they had agreed to do, through the forum and past the senate-house, with wailings and lament- ations. Opimius knew what was going on, but pre- tended to be surprised, so that even the senators went out into the forum. After the bier had been set down in the midst of the throng, the senators began to in- veigh against what they called a heinous and mons- trous crime, but the people were moved to hatred and abuse of the oligarchs, who, they said, after murder- ing Tiberius Gracchus on the Capitol with their own hands, tribune that he was, had actually flung away his dead body besides; whereas Antyllius,a mere servant, who perhaps had suffered more than he deserved, but was himself chiefly to blame for it, had been laid out in the forum, and was surrounded by the Roman senate, which shed tears and shared in the obsequies of a hireling fellow, to the end that the sole remaining champion of the people might be done away with. Then the senators went back into the senate-house, where they formally enjoined upon the consul Opimius to save the city as best he could,! and to put down the tyrants.

The consul therefore ordered the senators to take

1 The formal decree of martial law: consul videret ne quid respublica detrimenti caperet (Cicero, In Cat. i. 2, 4).

229

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TOUS GUYKANTLKOUS, Kal TOV iam ey EXATT@
Tapayyedpa Sovtos dyew €wlev oixéras dvo
Kaleo HEvOUS, o 0 pev DovrABtos avTimaped xevd-Gero Kal ouvivyev bxdovr, 0 bé dios é éx THS ayopas am@Epxopevos earn KATA TOV TOU maT pos avdpidvra,, Kal ToNvy xpovov euBreyras eis auTov ouder ég-DéyEaTo, daxpvoas dé Kat orevdtas annet. TovUTO ToAdols THY (Sovrwv oixteipar Tov Tdiov éwArde Kat Kaxioavres AaUTOUS @S éyxaTadelTrovTes TO avdpa Kal mpodidovres HKOV ET THY oixiay Kab
T apevuKTepevov emt To Oupav, ovx omotcos Tots TOV DovrBrov pudattovaty. EXELVOL pev yap év Kpotots Kal addararywois TivovTes Kab Opacuvepevot SteténXecav, avtov tod PovABiov mpwtov peOvaKopévou wal TONG popTiKas Tap preclay POeyyouevov Kab T pat TovTos: ot 5€ mept Tov Tdiov, ws émt cuupopa Kowh THs matpibos nov-xtav aryov Tes Kab TEepla KOT OUpEvoL TO méAXov, ev peepee pudrdrrovres xa dvaTravopevoe Suijyov.
XV. “Apa 6é 9 NHEPS TOV pev PovrAPiov é€x Tov
TOTOU cabevsovra | ods émeyelpavtes ewmnifovto
TOUS mepl THY oixiay avToU agupors, & a Padaras VEVLKNKOS ore vm aTevev ethjpet, Kal pera TONS
amehijs Kal Kpavyns éxwpour KaTadnyopevot TOV ‘ABevtivov hopov. 9 dé Ddios omrdicacbat pev ouK nOednaen, ann’ ado mep els aryopay é€v THBevvw Tponet, pLcpov Urrelwo wevos éyverpidcop, _eFcovte
5€ avT@ Trept Tas Oupas 7 a) yur Tpoorecovca Kat nepmTitaca TOV xerpav Th peév avrov exeivov, 7
dé TO masdio, “Ou émi ro Bijud Ge, elev, Tdie, rpotréumra Onpapyov, os mpoTepor, Kal joie:
230

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

up arms, and every member of the equestrian order was notified to bring next morning two servants fully armed; Fulvius, on the other hand, made counter preparations and got together a rabble, but Caius, as he left the forum, stopped in front of his father’s statue, gazed at it for a long time without uttering a word, then burst into tears, and with a groan departed. Many of those who saw this were moved to pity Caius; they reproached themselves for abandoning and betraying him, and went to his house, and spent the night at his door, though not inthe same manner _ as those who were guarding Fulvius. For these passed the whole time in noise and shouting, drink- ing, and boasting of what they would do, Fulvius him- self being the first to get drunk, and saying and doing much that was unseemly for a man of his years ; but the followers of Caius, feeling that they faced a public calamity, kept quiet and were full of concern: for the future, and passed the night sleeping and keeping watch by turns.

XV. When day came, Fulvius was with difficulty roused from his drunken sleep by his partisans, who - armed themselves with the spoils of war about his house, which he had taken after a victory over the Gauls during his consulship, and with much threaten- ing and shouting went to seize the Aventine hill. Caius, on the other hand, was unwilling to arm him- self, but went forth in his toga, as though on his way tothe forum, with only a short dagger on his person. As he was going out at the door, his wife threw her- self in his way, and with one arm round her husband and the other round their little son, said: ‘‘ Not to the rostra,O Caius, do I now send thee forth, as formerly, to serve as tribune and law-giver, nor yet to

Gérny, ovd' éml TOA HOV evdo£or, t ba poe Kal Ta-Oeov Tt TOY KOLVOY arronimys TLUL@LEVOV youv Trév-Dos, ahha TOUS TuBepiou hovetow vmoBdadndets éavTor, dvoTthov ev KANO, iva TaOns Te paddov
v7) dpdons, pos ovdéev dé Tois Kowols dpehos drronel.
KexpaTynKkev On Ta YElpo’ Bia Kat avdnpe Tas
dias mpatTovov. él wept Nopavriav 0 0S adedos emeceD, Uroamoveos av npiv drreb0On veK pos” viv dé lows Kayo moTawod Tivos Oa-AdTTNS (KEeTES ev omar Pival ToTeE 76 oov capa ppoupovpevor. ah yap i) vopots érs TioTov 7 Oeois pera TOV TiBepiou povov; ’ ” roladta THIS Acxivvias adupoperns, aT péua Tas mrepuBoras aTrohvadpevos aUTHS o T'dios EXWPEL OLWTT META TOY hirwv. uD dé Too {patio AaBEo Gar YAuxoevn KaTappvetoa Tos Tovdados EXELTO mony Xpovov avav6os, HEXpe ov NerroPupicacav aur ny ot Geparrovres apduevor mpos Kpdoaoov @xovto TOV adehpov KouiCovtes.
XVI. ‘O & PDovdPr0s, WS eyévovTo mares
a0 poot, Teva Geis vIro TOU Taiou TéuTet TOV VIMY TOD vewTEpov EYOVTAa KnpUKELOD Eis aryopay. ny be KaAMaTOS 0 veaviaKos ohOnvat kal ToTE KaTaaTas Koopiws cai pet’ aidods Sedaxpupévos érrounaro oupBaticous Aayous pos TOV Umarov Kal
THY TUYKANTOV. ot sg ouv modNol TOV mapovT@y OvUK anos pos Tas Stadvoes elyov" o 66 ‘Oni-[2105 ov ou aryryehooy ébn xXpivae mee THV oUyKANTOD, andra kaTaBavras QS brevOuvous ToniTas él Kpiow Kat mapadovras avrous obras mapatretobas THY opryny TO O€ perpaxio Kal

Sinyopevoev eri TovTots Katiévar mad H py 232

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

a glorious war, where, shouldst thou die (and all men must die), thou wouldst at all events leave me an honoured sorrow ; but thou art exposing thyself to the murderers of Tiberius, and thou doest well to go unarmed, that thou mayest suffer rather than inflict wrong; but thy death will do the state no good. The worst has at last prevailed ; by violence and the sword men's controversies are now decided. If thy brother had only fallen at Numantia, his dead body would have been given back to us by terms of truce ; | but as it is, perhaps I too shall have to supplicate some river or sea to reveal to me at last thy body in its keeping. Why, pray, should men longer put faith in laws or gods, after the murder of Tiberius?"' While Licinnia was thus lamenting, Caius gently freed himself from her embrace and went away without a word, accompanied by his friends. Licinnia eagerly sought to clutch his robe, but sank to the ground and lay there a long time speechless, until her servants lifted her up unconscious and carried her away to the house of her brother Crassus.

XVI. Whenall were assembled together, Fulvius, yielding to the advice of Caius, sent the younger of his sons with a herald's wand into the forum. The young man was very fair to look upon ; and now, in a decorous attitude, modestly, and with tears in his eyes, he addressed conciliatory words to the consul and the senate. Most of his audience, then, were not disin- clined to accept his terms of peace; but Opimius declared that the petitioners ought not to try to per- suade the senate by word of messenger ; they should rather come down and surrender themselves for trial, like citizens amenable to the laws, and then beg for mercy ; he also told the young man plainly to come

233

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 xatiévat. dios pev ody, ds dacw, éBovrAETo
Badifey cal reiOev thy cvyKAnTov ovdevds 5é
TOV AXNWY aUYYwpodYTOS, avOts Ereurev o DovrA-Beos rov traida drareEopevoy trép adtav Smo.a Tots mporépots. 0 Se "Orripuos orrevdwov pdyny cuvawat TO pev petpakiov evOds auvédaBe Kat Tapedwkey els PuraKny, Tots 56 Tept TOV PovABiov €TNEL META TOAAOY OTALTOY Kal TOEOTaY Kpyrar,
4 of paddorTa BadXovTes avtovs Kal KaTATpavpaTi-Covres cuverdpakay. yevouévns 5€ THs TpoTAs o pev DovrABros els te Baravetov nuernpévov xata-guyov Kal peta pixpov aveupeDels xaterpayn peta tod wpecRutTépov sraidos, o b€ Tdios whOn
pev vr' ovdevos paxyopevos, ddrAa Sucavacyer av Tols yivopevors dvexw@pnaey eis To THs Apréuidos
tepov: éxet dé BovAomevos éautov avedety 1rd TAY

TioToTaTwY étaipwv éxwrVOn, Tlouawviov Kai Auxevviov: mapovtes yap ovo. TO Te Eidos adel-
5 NovTo Kal Tadwy hevye erfpav avrov. &vOa b7 NeyeTar KabecOeis eis youu Kal Tas yelpas ava-teivas mpos THv Oeov éemevéacBar tov ‘Pwpaiwr Sipuov avtl rhs ayaptotias éxeivns Kal mpodocias pndérote tavaacOat Sovrevovta: davepas yap oi qWAeloTo. peteBddrXovTO KnpUypaTt SoOELans adeias.
XVII. Devyovrs & ody TG Talo trav éyOpav émipepouévov Kal KxatarayBavovtwy tmepi TH
Eudivny yédupav, ot pev Svo diros mpoxwpety Exelvoy KeNEVTaVTES AUTOL TOUS StwKOVTAS UTéoTncav Kal payopevoe TPO THs yepvpas ovdéva
“~

2 maphxav Ews améBavov. te dé Taiw ovvéhevyev

back again on these terms or not come back at all. Caius, accordingly, as we are told, was willing to come and try to persuade the senate; but no one else agreed with him, and so Fulvius sent his son again to plead in their behalf as before. But Opimius, who was eager to join battle, at once seized the youth and put him under guard, and then advanced on the party of Fulvius with numerous men-at-arms and Cretan archers. And it was the archers who, by discharging their arrows and wounding their opponents, were most instrumental in throwing them into confusion. After the rout had taken place, Fulvius fled for refuge into an unused bath, where he was shortly discovered and slain, together with his elder son. Caius, however, was not seen to take any part in the battle, but in great displeasure at what was happening he withdrew into the temple of Diana. There he was minded to make away with himself, but was prevented by his most trusty companions, Pomponius and Licinius ; for they were at hand, and took away his sword, and urged him to flight again. Then, indeed, as we are told, he sank upon his knees, and with hands outstretched towards the goddess prayed that the Roman people, in requital for their great ingratitude and treachery, might never cease to be in servitude ; for most of them were manifestly changing sides, now that proclamation of immunity had been made. XVII. So then, as Caius fled, his foes pressed hard upon him and were overtaking him at the wooden bridge over the Tiber, but his two friends bade him go on, while they themselves withstood his pursuers, and, fighting there at the head of the bridge, would suffer noman to pass, untilthey were killed. Caius had with him in his flight a single servant, by name

els oLKeTnS ovopa DPrroxparys, TAVTWV MEV, dorep

ev dpidy, Tapaxedevopueven, ovdevos dé Bon-Godvros, ove i (arrov alroupeve Tapacxelv é0edn-CAaVTOS em EKELVTO yap eyyus ot Suwmxovtes. o b€ pGaver pix pov els (epov adoos "Epevyvev Kara-puyov, Kaxel SiapGeiperar, TOU Piroxparous a ave-AovTos éxeivov, elta EauTov emapatartos. as 5é
Evol gdaciv, appotepor pev UTO TOV TONE LOY
KaTehnpOnaar Cavres, tov dé GepamovTos TOV Seon oTnv meptBarovros ovdels éxeivov nduvnOn matatat wpoTepov 7) TOUTOV UO TWONA@Y TaLo-jevov avatpeOfva. Thy oe Keparny tov Taiou Néyovoty aAXNov pev aTroxoyar Kal xopiCery, dagedéo Bas 5é ToUTOU idov ‘Orripiou TWvd, Ler-Toupovdyiov® Hy yap T poKeKnpury WEVvOY év apxi
Tis payns igoatdovov Xpvalov Tols aveveyxovot THY Tatov cai PovrABiouv cedharnv. avnvexn dé bro Tob Lemroupovdnlov meprTeTappern opare apos Tov ’Orriptov, Kat curyou Kouea evros évTE-Oeica AiTpas éemtaxaidera Kal dt motpov el AKuge, Tob LemToupoudniov Kat tTept TOUTO puapod yevo-pévou Kal Kaxoupyncavtos: éfehov yap TOV eryKeparov évern ke poruB6ov. ot de Tob PovdBiov THY Keparnv KopioavTes (joav yap TOV aonpo-TEpwv) ovdev éda Rov. Ta 0€ Topara Kal TOUTMY Kal TOV aANwWY Eis TOV TOTAMOV eppibn, Tpto - yerteov dvaipeBevtrar: Kab Tas ovotias avTav amédovTo Tpos TO Snuoctov. arreitay bé mevOetv Tas yuvarti, THY dé Tatov Atxwviav Kat THS qT POLKOS area TEpnaay. @MOTATOV dé mpogerpya-cavto tod PovABiov Tov vewrTepov viov, ovTE 236

843

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Philocrates; and though all the spectators, as at a race, urged Caius on to greater speed, not a man came to his aid, or even consented to furnish him with a horse when he asked for one, for his pursuers were pressing close upon him. He barely succeeded in escaping into a sacred grove of the Furies, and there fell by the hand of Philocrates, who then slew himself upon his master. According to some writers, however, both were taken alive by the enemy, and because the servant had thrown his arms about his master, no one was able to strike the master until the slave had first been dispatched by the blows of many. Someone cut off the head of Caius, we are told, and was carry- ing it along, but was robbed of it by a certain friend of Opimius, Septimuleius ; for proclamation had been made at the beginning of the battle that an equal weight of gold would be paid the men who brought the head of Caius or Fulvius. So Septimuleius stuck the head of Caius on a spear and brought it to Opim- ius, and when it was placed ina balance it weighed seventeen pounds and two thirds, since Septimuleius, besides showing himself to be a scoundrel, had also perpetrated a fraud; for he had taken out the brain and poured melted lead in its place. But those who brought the head of Fulvius were of the obscurer sort, and therefore got nothing. The bodies of Caius and Fulvius and of the other slain were thrown into the Tiber, and they numbered three thousand; their property was sold and the proceeds paid into the public treasury. Moreover, their wives were for- bidden to go into mourning, and Licinnia, the wife of Caius, was also deprived of her marriage portion. Most cruel of all, however, was the treatment of the younger son of F ulvius, who had neither lifted a hand

Nelpas avTapapevov ovT ev Tos paxopmEvols yEvopevov, adra él orrovdas EXMovta mpo THs waxns aovrraBortes Kal peta THY waynV avedovTes. Ovnv adda Kal tovTov Kal TOV GA\wWY aTravTwY HaXXNOV Hviage TOUS TOAXNOUS TO KATATKEVATOEY
"Opovotas tepov bro Tov 'Oripiou: cepvuverOar
yap éoxer kal péya gpovety Kal tporoy tiva
OptapBevery emi hovors tocovtots woditav. 810
Kal vuKros bro THY eriypadny Tod vew Trapeveypaypdy Teves TOV atixov TobTov: ""Epyov atro-voias vaoy opovotas trotet.
XVIII. Odtos pévtoe mp@tos éEouvcia Suxtd-Topos ép brarea Xpnodwevos Kat Kara Telvas axpttous él TplaxiALoes TodiTaLs Ddaiov Tpayxov
xal PovrABiov Prakxov, OY 6 pev Hv brratixds cal OptapBexos, 0 bé THs Kal abrov ArLKlas apeTH cal do&n mempwtevxws, ovx améoyeTo KAOTAS, adda Treuhbels ws 'lovyoupOav tov Noudda mpeo-Beurns StepQdpn xpnuaci bn' adtod: cat Sienv dprov aiayiotnv Swpodoxias év atipia KaTeyypace pucovpevos Kal mpotnraKiCopmevos vd Tov Sypmou, Tap avuTa pev ta mpayOévta Tamewov yevopévou Kal avatarévtos, ddiyo 5é taTepov éxpnvavtos Soov elyev ipépov cal modov trav [pdyxyov. etxovas Te yap avtav avabeiEavtes év dhavep@ mpevTiPevto, Kai Tous TOTovs év ols édovevOnoav apiepwoavtes aTrnpKXovTO pev Vv wpat dhépover travtwy, €Ovov Sé Kal nad' Hyépav rrod-rol Kal mpocénirtov, Worep Oedv iepois éemidpot-TOUTES. |
XIX. Kal pévror cat 4 Kopynria Aéyerat ra against the nobles nor been present at the fighting, but had come to effect a truce before the battle and had been arrested; after the battle he was slain. However, what vexed the peuple more than this or anything else was the erection of a temple of Concord by Opimius!; for it was felt that he was priding him- self and exulting and in a manner celebrating a triumph in view of all this slaughter of citizens. Therefore at night, beneath the inscription on the temple, somebody carved this verse :—“ A work of mad discord produces a temple of Concord.”’

XVIII. And yet this Opimius, who was the first consul to exercise the power of a dictator, and put to death without trial, besides three thousand other citizens, Caius Gracchus and Fulvius Flaccus, of whom one had been consul and had celebrated a triumph, while the other was the foremost man of his genera- tion in virtue and reputation—this Opimius could not keep his hands from fraud, but when he was sent as ambassador to Jugurtha the Numidian was bribed by him, and after being convicted most shamefully of corruption, he spent his old age in infamy, hated and abused by the people, a people which was humble and cowed at the time when the Gracchi fell, but soon afterwards showed how much it missed them and longed for them. For it had statues of the brothers made and set up in a conspicuous place, consecrated the places where they were slain, and brought thither offerings of all the first-fruits of the seasons, nay, more, many sacrificed and fell down before their statues every day, as though they were visiting the shrines of gods.

XIX. And further, Cornelia is reported to have |

1 Opimius restored the temple of Concord which had been built by Camillus (see the Camillus, xlii. 4).

(Te GAXa Tis cumhopas evyevas Kal peyaroyuyos éveyxeiy, kat tept Tav tepav év ols avnpéOnoav
eitrety ws aEtous of vexpol Tdpous éxyovaw. aiTn 5€ wept tous KaXoupévous Mianvors d.érpeBev, ovdevy petarrAd~aca tis cuvnBous Svaitns. Hv dé rodvdiros Kai dua pirokeviay evtpamelos, ael pev “EXAjvov Kai diroroyor tepl avTny dvtav, _atravtwy 5¢ tav Baotdéwy xal Seyopevwv trap auTns Sapa Kal tjepmovtTwyv. notaTn mev ovv HY
aitn trois adixvoupévors Kal cuvodar denyoupéevn Tov tov tratpos ‘Adpixavov Biov nai diartay, Oavpactwtatn 5€ Tov Taidwv amevOns Kal add-KpuTos pyvnpovevovaa, Kat maOn Kal mpdtes auT@Y, wWoTEp apxaiwy tivav, é—Enyoupuévn Tois muvOavomevots. O0ev edoEev éviots Exvous Uo

ynpws peyéOovs Kax@v yeyovévat Kail Tov atuxynudtwv avaicOntos, avrois ws drnbds avatcOntos ovaw Goov €€ evdhulas Kai Tov yeyovévat kal tetpadOar Kares operos éeate mpos ddutiav avOpwrots, Kal Ste THS apeTns 7 TUXN dvratroméevns wey TA KAKA TOANGKIS TeplEecTLY, év &€ 1@ mraicas TO dépetv eEvAOYioTas ov TAPALPELT at.

ATIAOS KAI KAEOMENOYS KAT I'PArXON
SYTKPISIS

I. ‘Hyiy 5€ nal raurns wépas éxovons THs dunyjoews vrodetretat AaRely éx TapadrnAOV Tav Biwy tHv aTodewpnatv. Ttovs pév ovv I'payborne all her misfortunes in a noble and magnanimous spirit, and to have said of the sacred places where her sons had been slain that they were tombs worthy of the dead which occupied them. She resided on the promontory called Misenum, and made no change in her customary way of living. She had many friends, and kept a good table that she might show hospitality, for she always had Greeks and other literary men about her, and all the reigning kings interchanged gifts with her. She was indeed very agreeable to her visitors and associates when she discoursed to them about the life and habits of her father Africanus, but most admirable when she spoke of her sons without grief or tears, and narrated their achievements and their fate to all en-quirers as if she were speaking of men of the early days of Rome. Some were therefore led to think that old age or the greatness of her sorrows had impaired her mind and made her insensible to her misfortunes, whereas, really, such persons themselves were insensible how much help in the banishment of grief mankind derives from a noble nature and from honourable birth and rearing, as well as of the fact that while Fortune often prevails over virtue when it endeavours to ward off evils, she cannot rob virtue of the power to endure those evils with calm assurance.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI COMPARED

I. Now that I have brought this story of the Gracchi also to an end, it remains for me to take a survey of all four lives in parallel. As for the Gracchi, yous ovd of Tavy TadAA KaKwWS EYOVTES Kal pucovvres éTOApNoay eitrety ws OVK EvpverTaToL

mpos apeTnv éyévovto 'Pwpaiwy atavtwv, Kai Tpopns Te Kal madevoews exmpeTrovs ETUXOV' 7
\ , / b 4
dé "Ayidos cal Kreopévous pias éppwpeveotépa
A >
dhaiverat THs exelvwv yevouéevn, wap dcov ovTeE 4 , 9 A 4 4 X ,
ma.deias peTaraBovtes GpO7s, Ceci Te Kal Sraitats évtpagevtes bp' ov of mpeaButepoe Trarat dtepOopétcay, AUTOVs HyEm"ovas EUTEAECLAS Kal owopoavvns mapéaxov. ére 68 of pév, OTE NauTrpoTarov elyev 7) 'Poun cal péyiotov akiwpa Kal Kadov Epyov. Cnrov, Waomep Siadoyny apeths TaTpwmas
Kal mpoyovuKnns noxuvOncav éyxataditrety' ov Sé
Kal TaTépwy Tavavtia Tponpnpévwv yeyovores, Kal
Thy TaTpiba poxOnpa mpdtrovoay Kal vooodcav , Os a \ \ \
maparaBovtes, ovdey tt d1a tTadTa THY wWpds TO Kadov amnuSdruvvay opunv. Kal piv ths ye Tpdyxov adiroypnuatias Kal mpdos apyvpiov éyxpateias péytotov oti Ste Anppdtov adixwv
\ 3 3 a ' , 4
xka0apovs év apyais nab toduteiats dvepvrAatav e 4 J \ , > \ A éautous: "Ayis 5€ Kav Sunyavaxtnoev éri TO pndev addXotpiov AaBetv ératvovpevos, bs THY
, nn a
ovolayv THY EaUTOD TOS TOTALS érédwKeV, aVEU
A " , e 4 / /
TOV ANNOY KTHLaTwY EFaKOTLA TaddaVTA Vvopic-54 patos EXovoav. amnyAiKov ovy évoutble Kaxov elvat \ 8 , asi e \ 5 / , "
TO Kepdalvely adikws o nal Sixaiws TwAéov exe

érépou mreovefiav ryoupevos;
/ \ : A
TI. "H ye puny ériBovrAn cal torApa TOY Katvo-242

then, not even those who utterly revile and hate them on other grounds have ventured to deny that of all Romans they were best equipped by nature for the practice of virtue, and enjoyed a rearing and training which were preéminent; but Agis and Cleomenes would appear to have had even sturdier natural gifts than theirs, in so far as, though they did not receive a correct training, and were reared in those customs and ways of living by which their elders had long ago been corrupted, they nevertheless made themselves leaders in simplicity and self-restraint. And further, the Gracchi, at a time when Rome had her greatest and most splendid repute and an ardour for noble deeds, were prevented by a sense of shame from abandoning what was like an inheritance of virtue from ancestors near and remote ; Agis and Cleomenes, on the other hand, though they were sons of fathers who had adopted opposite principles to theirs, and found their country in a wretched plight and full of distempers, did not suffer these things to blunt the ' edge of their zeal for what was noble. Moreover, the chief proof that the Gracchi scorned wealth and were superior to money lies in the fact that they kept themselves clear from unrighteous gains during their official and political life; whereas Agis would have been incensed to receive praise for not taking anything that was another's, since he freely gave to his fellow citizens his own property, which amounted to six hundred talents in ready money alone, to say nothing of other valuables. How great a baseness, then, would unlawful gain have been held to be by one in whose eyes even the lawful possession of more than another was rapacity ?

II. Again, the enterprise and boldness of their 243

RQ
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, A A J V4 “5
TOMOLPEVWY TOAY TO peyebes TapHAAATTEV. €TrO-ALTEVOVTO yap oO pév Cd@Y KaTaGKEVaS Kal TOAEwY KTLOELS, KAL TO TAVTwWY vEeavrixwTaTov HY TuBepio
pev avacdcat Snpociovs aypovs, Taio Sé pitas Ta Sucacty pla mpocewBarovte TOY imTTLIKaY TpLAa-
e

Koatous: 0 6é”Aytdos al KXeopevous vewtepic pos,
TO pikpa Kal KaTa pépos TAY HuapTnmevwn lacGar Kal atroxoTrrey bdpay Tia TéuvovtTos, o> dyow
o Wndtwv, nynodmevos elvat, Thy aya mavta amanrd~ar Kana kal peracKxevacar Sdvuvapeévnv petaBorny éemriye Tois mpdypacw. adnOéotepov

& tows etrreiy dot Sti THY wavTa atepyaca-pévny Kana petaBorAnv éEnrauvev, araywv Kat xcabiatas eis TO olKEelov OXHMA THY TOA. é7rel
Kat TOTO ay TLS ElTroL, TH Mev Tpayyov todureva
\ , > & ¢ s \¢?
Tous peyiotous éevictacbar Pwpaiwr, ols dé “Ayes
> U , \ N wv 9 4 nn evexetpnace, Kreouévns 5é To Epyov ééOnke, Tav
4 N 4 e 4 \
TApPAdelypaTov TOKAGAMOGTOV UTrEKELTO KA eyaXo-
M PETESTATOY, Ai WaTpLOL PHT pat Wept swppocvvys
A 4
Kal laoTntos, @Y TovToLs péev o Auxodpyos, éxeive ! dé o [IvOst0os BeBarwrns. 6 5é péytotoy, Stet Tots

\ 9 4 a b] Oe ee 4 aA
pev €xetvwy TroAtTevpacwy eis ovdev 7 Pwoun petlov
> 7 a e ’ ’ \ @ e
érédwxe TOV UTrapxovTwr, ex dé ay o Kreopévns empakev, odvyou ypovou THv Yraptnv tis Tedojwovyncou xpatovaav » ‘EXdas érreide Kat Tots Tote péyiotov duvapévors Staywouilopévny ayava 1 éxelvy Blass, Fuhr, and Ziegler, after Madvig: éxeivois.

attempted reforms were certainly very different in magnitude. For in their political activities Caius had in view the construction of roads and the founding of cities, and the boldest of all the projects of the Romans were, in the case of Tiberius the recovery of the public lands, and in that of Caius the reconstitu- tion of the courts of justice by the addition of three hundred men from the equestrian order; whereas Agis and Cleomenes in their reforms, considering that the application of trifling and partial remedies and excisions to the disorders of the state was nothing more than cutting off a Hydra’s heads (as Plato says 1), tried to introduce into the constitution a change which was able to transform and get rid of all evils at once ; though perhaps it is more in accordance with the truth to say that they banished the change which had wrought all sorts of evils, by bringing back the state to its proper form and establishing it therein. Besides, this also can be said, that the policies of the Gracchi were opposed by the greatest Romans, whereas those which Agis instituted and Cleomenes consummated were based upon the fairest and most imposing precedents, namely, the ancient rhetras or unwritten laws concerning simplicity of life and equality of property, for which Lycurgus was voucher to them, and the Pythian Apolloto Lycurgus.2 But the most important consideration is that through the political activity of the Gracchi Rome made no advance in greatness, whereas, in consequence of the achievements of Cleomenes, within a short time Greece beheld Sparta mistress of the Peloponnesus and carrying on a struggle for the supremacy with those who then had the greatest power, the object of 1 Republic, p. 426 e. 2 See the Lycurgus, xiii.

TOV TEpl THS Hryepwovias, ov TéXOS HY ATraNNayelaav
"Trrupixay Strrwv cal Taratixov thv ‘EdXaba coo peic Oat Tradwv vp “Hpaxarectdacs.
III. Oipas S€ wai tas rerevtas tav avdpav éudaive tiva ths apeths Stadhopav. éxeivoe pev yap waxopmevot pos TOUS TroAtTas, elra hevyovTes
9 , 4 \? \ ° \ a ,
érenevtTnoav: TouTev dé’ Ayis pev vTép TOU wndéva KTELVaL TOV TOALTG@V OAriyou Sety éExwv aTéave, Krecopévns 5€ mpornraxicbels nal adixnbeis ap-pnoe pevaptvacbat, Tov dé Katpod pn TapacyYovTos
e_sAN > f b a , \ 9 4
QUTOV EVTOAMMS avetAe. TWaALY O€ TdvaVTiA oKO-
“A ? \ x QN 3 4 4
movow "Ayis pev ovdev aredeiEato otparnyias
” b \ 4 a \ /
Epyov, adAa mpoavnpéOn, tais 5é Kreopevous vixals ToAXais Kal Karais yevopévas tapaBanrelv
” 4 \ ’ A / éott TiBepiov thy é€v Kapynéoove tod Teiyous lf 3 N ” 4 \ J 4
KaTadynYiy, ov uixpov eEpyov, cat tas ev Nopavtia otovods, als diopupious ‘Pwopaiwy otpatiwtas ouK éyovTas aAAny eATrIba GwTNpias TEpLETTOinae’ kat Taios 5é€ roAAnv pév avtoOs, worAAnY 5é év Lapdou otparevomevos avdpayaltav Epnvev, WaTE Tols TpwTos av évamirrous ‘Pwopaiwy yevéoOar oTpaTHyoIs, Eb un TpoavnpeOnaav.
IV. Tis 8€ rrondcTeias o peév "Ayes Eotxev dracdar

-paraKkwtepov, exxpovabets vo "Aynaotdaou Kat

wrevoduevos Tov avadacpoy Tois TrodiTals, Kal
ef 3 \ \ 9 N e I. \ 4 OAWS EXALTFNS KAL ATEANS WY TPOELAETO Kal KATHY-yetrev UTro aToApias Sia THY HALKiaV ryEevopmevOS: > bé Kreope ; Lov Opacu y
o 6¢ KAeopévns todvavtiov Opacvtepov Kal Bvato-246
AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

which struggle was to set Greece free from Illyrian and Gaulish troops and array her once more under descendants of Heracles,

III. I. think, too, that the way in which the men died makes manifest a difference in their high excellence. For the Gracchi fought against their fellow citizens, and then died as they sought to make their escape; but in the case of the Greeks, Agis would _not kill a single citizen, and therefore died what one might almost call a voluntary death, and Cleomenes, after setting out to avenge himself for insults and wrongs, found the occasion unfavourable and with a good courage slew himself. Butagain, when we take the opposite view of their relative merits, Agis displayed no deed worthy of a great commander, but was cut off untimely, and with the many honourable victories won by Cleomenes we can compare the capture of the wall at Carthage by Tiberius, which was no trifling deed, and his truce at Numantia, by which twenty thousand Roman soldiers who had no other hope of salvation were spared; and Caius, too, manifested great bravery in military service at home, and great bravery in Sardinia, so that the brothers might have vied successfully with the foremost Roman generals, had they not been cut off untimely.

IV. In their civic activities, however, Agis would seem to have taken hold of things with too little spirit; he was baffled by Agesilaiis, and broke his promise to the citizens about the re-distribution of lands, and in a word abandoned and left un- finished the designs which he had deliberately formed and announced, owing to a lack of courage due to his youth. Cleomenes, on the contrary, undertook his change of the constitution with too

247

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tepov emi thy petaBornv AGE Tis TodtTELas, ‘ id A amoxreivas Tovs épopovs trapavopws, ods Kal TpocayayeaOat Tois OTAOLS. KpaTodYTa Kal peTa-
A e7 a ea > 3, / ” oThoa, padiov Hv, waTeEp OVK OduYOUS GAXOUS
; a ! \ \ ” a petéotyncev ex THS Worews. TO yap avev TAS doyarns avdykns emupépery oidnpov ove tatpixoy bd 4 J bd) b 4 \ > “4
OUTE WONLTLKOV, GAN aTexyvias pev apuhoTepa,
A /
TouT@ 5é Kal TO Gdixely peT WMOTNTOS TpocECTL.
a \ / 3Q?7 \ w A tav d¢ Tpdyxav ovdérepos pev npEato ohayijs
éuduriou, Tdios 6€ Aéyerae pndé Bardopevos Opuncat pos apuvav, AANA AaptrpoTaTos adv ev Tois TONEpLKOLS ApyoTaTos ev TH oTdoe yevérOar.
Kal yap mponOev dotAos Kai paxouévwy avexo-pnoe, Kal SAWS TWAELOVA TOU UH TL Spadaat TpovoLaY

h Tov wy wabeiv Eywv Ewpato. S16 Kal thy duynv QUT@Y OUK aToAuias onpetov, AaAN eEvrAaBPelas mwountéov. édet yap vuiretEas Tois émipepopévors
7) wévovras UTép ToD un Tabeiv To Spav apvvacOas.
V. Tov toivuy éyxAnudtwv Tav Kata TuBepiou peylotov €otw OTL Tov auvapyovTa THS Snuapyias eféBare nai Sevtépav avtos Snpapyiay pernec: Taiw dé tov “AvtuvAdiov dovov od SiKxaiws ovdé annOas mpocetpiBovto: S2ehOdpn yap axovros
a“ \ 93 “~
aUTOU Kal ayavaKTodyTos. Kreopévns 5¢, iva Tas
\ “a b] 4 +7 ? , \
adayas Tov épopwyv édcwpev, nrevOepwoe pev
A > / a atavtas Tous otKéTas, éBacinevoe S¢ TH pev Epye id a de 9 ld 4 9 , ‘
Hovos, T@ Oe dvouate Sevtepos, Evreiday Tov 248

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

much rashness and violence, killing the ephors in unlawful fashion, when it would have been easier to win them over to his views or remove them by superior#ty in arms, just as he removed many others from the city. For a resort to the knife, except under extremest necessity, is not the mark either of a good physician or statesman, but in. both cases shows a lack of skill, and in the case of the statesman there is added both injustice and cruelty. Neither of the Gracchi, however, initiated civil slaughter, and Caius, we are told, would not resort to self-defence even when his life was threatened, but though he was a most brilliant soldier in the field, he showed himself most inactive in civil strife. For he went forth from his house unarmed and withdrew when the battle began, and in a word was seen to be more intent upon not doing any harm to others than upon not suffering harm himself. Therefore we must hold that the flight of the brothers was not a mark of cowardice, but of caution. For they were obliged either to yield to their assailants, or, in case they held their ground, to defend themselves actively against harm.

V. Again, the greatest of the accusations against Tiberius is that he deposed his colleague from the tribuneship and canvassed for a second tribuneship himself; and as for Caius, the murder of Antyllius was unjustly and falsely attributed to him, for it happened contrary to his wishes and much to his dis- pleasure. But Cleomenes, not to mention again his slaughter of the ephors, set free all the slaves, and was king by himself in point of fact, though nomin- ally with another, after he had chosen his brother Eucleidas, a man from the same house, as his col-

249

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

5) \ 9 “A 9 / e A , 9 a
aderov ék juas olKlas AUT@ TMpocedAopevos, Apyi-Sapov S€, & mpocjKov iv amo rhs évrépas oixias
wv UA 54 \ b /
dvre oupBacireve, émerce pev ex Mgoonvns
a > La \ , > >
katerOetv, atroOavovtos Sé Tov hovov ovK ére€- \ bd , A > / 9 e a a ellav éBeBaiwoe THY aitriav Kal’ avTovd Tis dvatpécews. Kxaitot Avxovpyos, dv mpocetrotetro pipetcOar, THY pev Bacirgciav éxwv atrédwxe TO qatot Tov adeAdod XapirAro, ghoBovpevos Sé p71, ¥ > , \ , > 7 > 9
Kav GrAXwS atroPdvn TO petpdKLov, aitia Tis ém
avrov €dOn, TroAvv ypovoy Ew mravnOels ov mpo-Tepov éravnrOev 7) traida TO XapirrA yevéoIat Siddoyov tis apxyns. adda Aveovpym pév ovdé ddros tes “EXAHvwv mapaBAnTos ovdels: Ste Sé tots KyYeopmévous modtTevpact KawvoTopias Kat jmapavomiat peitoves éverat, SedyjAwTat. Kal pyv
, A
of ye TOV TpoTroV avTaV wéyovTEs TOUTOLs pev eF
apyns Tupavyuxov Kal trodeyotroloy aiti@vTat
/ A \ 9» 4 4 4 9
yevéoOar, TH Sé exeivayv hioe PiroTipias aperpiav, AdrXo &é ovdev ot POovoivres errixarely elyov:
éxpimicOévtas Sé TH Wpos Tovs évicTapmévous
ayou. Kal Oup@ Tapa thv avtav diow waoTreEp mvoats, épeivat wept Ta EoyatTa THY ToALtTEiaDY @pmoroyouv. émel THS ye TpwTns UVTOBéTEws TL
/ “a , a > \ \ , A
KaNALOV 7 SiKaloTEpoy iv, eb pn KaTa Biay Kat
duvacteiay éemixyerpnaavtes éE@oat Tov vopoy ot TWAOUVGLOL TEPLETTNTAV ALPOTEPOLS AYOVAS, TP pev goBoupevm vrép avTod, T@ Sé éxduxobvTe Tov 250

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

league ; and he persuaded Archidamus, who belonged to the other house and should have been his colleague on the throne, to come back to Sparta from Messene, and upon his death, by not following up the murder, he fixed upon himself the blame for his taking off. And yet Lycurgus, whom he professed to imitate, voluntarily surrendered the royal power to Charillus his brother’s son, and because he feared lest, if the young man should die by another's hand, some blame might attach to himself, he wandered a long time in foreign parts, and would not come back until a son had been born to Charillus who should succeed to his office.1 However, with Lycurgus no other Greek is worthy to be compared; but that the political measures of Cleomenes were marked by greater in- novations and illegalities than those of the Gracchi, is evident. And indeed those who are inclined to crit- icize their characters accuse the two Greeks of having been from the outset over fond of power and strife, and the two Romans of having been by nature im- moderately ambitious, though their detractors could bring no other charge against them; nay, it was agreed that they were caught up by the fury of the contest with their opponents and by a passion contrary to their own natural bent, as by blasts of wind, and so let the state drive into extremest danger. For what could be more just and honourable than their original design? And they would have succeeded in it, had not the party of the rich, by their violent and partisan attempts to abrogate the agrarian law, involved both of them in fierce struggles, Tiberius through fear for his own life, and Caius in an effort to avenge his brother, who had been slain without justice or 1 See the Lycurgue, iii. 5.

> '\ " / \ / QV C > wv aderdhov avev dixns Kat Soypwaros ovde UT' apYovTos avaipeOévta;
Luvopads pév ov Kal avros ex TaY eipnuévwnv

A 4 > \ " \ bd bd / Thv Stadhopav: et O€ dei Kai Kal' Exactov atropn-vac Oat, TiBéptov ev apeTH Trempwrevxévat TION TavTwyv, éhaxiota O€ nuapTnKévat TO pELpaKiov 7A 4 de i '4 fon 9 9 , ylv, mpage. d€ Kat torpn Taiov ove odyw Knreopévous ba tepov yeryovevat.

senatorial decree and without the concurrence even of a magistrate.
From what has been said, then, my reader will perceive for himself the difference between these men; but if I am to express my opinion of them individually, I should say that Tiberius led them all in exemplary virtues, that the youthful Agis com- mitted the fewest errors, and that in. achievement and courage Caius fell far short of Cleomenes.

Digitized by Google

et

®IAOIMOIMHN

I. KXéavdpos jv €v Mavtiveta yévous te mpwrou 356

cal SuvnOeis év Tois paddtota THY TOMTOV, TUXN dé yYpnodpevos Kal THY éavTodD huywy Kev eis MerydAny modu ovy RKtota 51a Tov PrdroTroipevos matépa Kpaiyiv, avdpa mdavrwy &vexa Naptpor, ova O€ mpos éxeivoy oixeiws Eyovta. CavrTos pév ovv avTov TavTwy éTUyXave, TeNeUTHCTAVTOS Sé Thy apoBny THs ptroFevias atrodibovs EOpeyrev avTov TOY viov opdavoy dyta, Kabdrep dyaoly “Opunpos v6 Tod Doiuxos tov AxytAd€a Tpadjvac, yevvaiav tia Kal BacirKny tov iOous evOds &&
apxns tTAdow Kai ab—Enow AapBdvovtos. dn dé
A 4 9 la v ” \
Tov Dirorroipevos avtitaidos Gyros "Exdnpos Kai Meyarodavns ot Meyadoronita: duedéEavto THY bd 4 » , V4 9 bY 4
émipedecav, Apxeothaw auvydes év “Axadnueia
, \ / , a 5
yeyovotes xat gtrdocodiav pdadtota tov Kab éauTous éml TrodTelay Kal mpakets TpoayayovTes.
ovToL Kal Thy éavTaV TraTpida TUpavvibos a7rn-Nakav, Tovs atoxtevodvtas ‘Apiatodnuov Kpuda
‘ /
jwapacKevdcavtes, Kat Nixoxréa Tov SuKvwviov 4 tupavvov ’Apdt@m avvebéBarov, nal Kupnvaiois 256

PHILOPOEMEN

I. CLeanper was a man of the highest lineage and greatest influence among the citizens of Mantineia, but he met with reverses and was exiled from his native city. Hethen betook himself to Megalopolis, chiefly because of Craugis, the father of Philopoemen, aman in every way illustrious, and attached to him by ties of personal friendship. As long as Craugis lived, Cleander’s wants were all supplied, and when Craugis died, Cleander, wishing to requite him for his hospitality, undertook the rearing of his orphan son, just as Homer says that Achilles was reared by Phoenix,! so that the boy’s character took on from the very outset a noble and kingly mould and growth. But as soon as Philopoemen had ceased to be a boy, Ecdemus and Megalophanes, of Megalopolis, were putin charge of him.? They had been comrades of Arcesilaiis at the Academy, and beyond all men of their day had brought philosophy to bear upon political action and affairs of state. ‘They freed their own native city from tyranny, by secretly procuring men to kill

Aristodemus ; they joined with Aratus in expelling Nicocles the tyrant of Sicyon;? and at the request of the people of Cyrene, whose city was full

1 Cf. Iliad, ix. 438 ff.

2 A brief biography of Philopoemen may be found in Pausanias, viii. 49-51. It agrees, in the main, with that of Plutarch. Philopoemen was born about 252 B.c.

3 See the Aratus, ii.-x.

a A \ , \

SenOetiot, TeTapaywevwv TOV KaTa THY TOA Kal
/
vooovvTwy, TAEvaavrTes Evvopiav EOevTo Kal dSvexo-Opnoav apiota Thy ToALY. avToL ye pny év Tots Garros Epyos nal tHv Dirorroipevos érrototvTo matdeva ty, as Kowov Operos TH 'ENAGEL Tov avdpa TOUTOV VITO dirogopias atrepyacopevor. Kal yap a@otep orpiyovoy év ynpa Tals TOV TaNaLav TryEewLo-
A a A e
vov émitexovaa ToUTOV apeTais 7 EXXas Hyarnoe Stadepovtws Kal cuvnvénoe TH S0En thy Svvayuv.
e , 4, J A 4 > N e 4
Pwpatiwy S€ Tis Errawva@v éoxyatov avTov EXAnvev MpOceElrev, WS OVdEVA péyay ETA TOUTOV ETL Tis
"EAA dbos avépa yetvapévns ovd€ avtns aksov.
II. "Hv S€ 76 pév elds ove aiaypos, ws ios
vouifovow: eiKova yap avrov Siapévovoay épv Aerdois opapev: tHv 5é ths Eévns THs Meyapixijs
" a 4 > > / \
dyvoiav aupPyva réyouvot Ot evKoNlay Tivda Kal adpédeav avtod. wuvOavopévn yap épyec Oat pos auTous Tov otpatnyov tav '"Ayadv éBopuBetTo mapacKkevalovaa Seitrvov, ov TapoVTOS KATA TUX NY
a »% , ? / \ A / >
Tov avdpos. é€v ToUT@ dé TOU Piromroipevos eioen-Oovtos xAapvdiov evTerts ExovToOs, olopévyn Tiva
TaV UTNpETaY elvas kal mpddpomoy TrapeKdreEL THS

Siaxovias cuvedaacOa. Kal o pév evOvs atrop-
4 A
piipas thy xdAapvda tov Evrdov Eoyilev' o Se
4 bd rGa A @ , 6c , A 99
Eévos émeaceav cai Ocacduevos, “Ti todto,
@
épn, “a Dirotroipny;” “Ti yap adAro,” edn
/ a A Swpilwy éxeivos, “4 xards Oews Sixas didwpe;”
A be ” 4 \ Ul > , e

Tov d€ adXOv cwpaTos THY HYoW ETLOKOTTOV O

258

39 fod

i
PHILOPOEMEN

of confusion and political distemper, they sailed
. thither, introduced law and order, and arranged matters in the city most happily. They themselves, however, counted the education of Philopoemen also among their many achievements, believing that their philosophical teachings had made him a common benefit to Greece. For since he was the child, as it were, of her late old age and succeeded to the virtues of her ancient commanders, Greece loved him surpassingly, and as his reputation grew, increased his power. And a certain Roman, in praising him, called him the last of the Greeks, implying that Greece produced no great man after* him, nor one worthy of her.

II. In looks he was not, as some suppose, ill- favoured ; for a statue of him is still to be seen at Delphi ; and the mistake of his Megarian hostess was due, as we are told, to a certain indifference and simplicity on his part. This woman, learning that the general of the Achaeans was coming to her house, in great confusion set about preparing supper; besides, her husband chanced to be away from home. Just then Philopoemen came in, wear- ing a simple soldier's cloak, and the woman, thinking him to be one of his servants who had been sent on in advance, invited him to help her in her housework. So Philopoemen at once threw off his cloak and fell to splitting wood. Then his host came in, and seeing him thus employed, said: “What does this mean, Philopoemen?’’ ‘ What else,’ said Philopoemen in broad Doric, “than that I am paying a penalty for my ill looks?’’ And once Titus Flamininus, making fun of certain parts of his

1 See the Aratus, xxiv, 2

259

s 2 a ——_

PLUTARCH’S Bee

Tiros elev, nO) Dirorroipwny, Os Kands Xetpas exes Kal axédy yaorépa 8 ove éxeus:” Hy yap ex TOV METWY ATEVWTEPOS. TO pevToL oKep pa 7 pos Thy Suva auTou paidDov eXex On. Kat yap omhitas EXeov ayadous Kat imaeis Xenpatav TONAGKLS ovK evTropet. TavTa pev ovy év Tais oxonats mept TOU PidoTroipevos eyeTar.
III. Tod & Hous ro prdorepov ovK Hy mavTd-Tact prdovercias xaapov ovd opyns annddarypevor- GAA KaiTrep "Exrapewvovdov Bovdopevos elvat pamota nrwrns, TO dpacrnprov kal ouverov avrov Kal bro XPnwar ev anaes t loXUPAS EUspEiTo,
To O€ mpey cai Babei Kat prravOpame Tapa TAs ToMTUKaS. Ssadhopas éeupévery ov Svvapevos be opyny Kat prroverciay paddov edoxer oT PATO TLRS 7) TOALTLKNS APETHS OlKELOS Elva. Kal yap €x qTalowy ev0 us my proc tpatiatns, Kat Tots T pos TOUTO Xpnstwors pabnpacty vIrnkove Tpo-Ovpes, omhopaxeiv Kat immevely. émel 56 Kal mahaiety EVPUAS edoxet Kat Tmapexadovv auTov emt THD GOrnow € évot TOV pirov Kal TOV emt-TpOoTraY, iparncev auTous fn TL pos THY oTpa-TLOTLRND aoKnow v7r6 THs abrjoews BaByacotro.
trav 5é hapévar, Strep hv, dOANTLKOY OTpPaTLWTLKOD
capa Kal Biov Siapéperv Tois Tact, padiota bé diartapv érépav Kat adoxnow elvat, TOV pep orvep
Te TOAD Kat TANopovais evdehexert Kat KLVAT ETL
TeTAyMevaLs Kal novxiars avgovt ov te kal Svagv-AaATTOVTOV THY éEiv ud Taans poms Kar TApec - Bacews TOU cvvndous daxpoopari 1 pos peraBodny ovoav, ta dé tdons péev mAaYyns Eptretpa Kai 260

PHILOPOEMEN

figure, said : ‘“‘ Philopoemen, what fine arms and legs thou hast; but belly thou hast not”; for Philo-poemen was quite slender at the waist. This piece of fun, however, was aimed the rather at his resources. For though he had excellent men-at-arms and _ horse-men, he was often at a loss for money. However, these stories are told of Philopoemen in the schools of philosophy.

III. But the love of distinction which marked his character was not altogether tree from contentiousness nor devoid of anger; and although he desired to pattern himself most of all after Epaminondas, it was. the energy, sagacity, and indifference to money in Epaminondas which he strenuously imitated, while his proneness to anger and contentiousness made him unable to maintain that great leader's mildness, gravity, and urbanity in political disputes, so that he was thought to be endowed with military rather than with civic virtues. For from his very boyhood he was fond of a soldier’s life, and readily learned the lessons which were useful for this, such as those in heavy- armed fighting and horsemanship. He was also thought to be a good wrestler, but when some of his friends and direetors urged him to take up athletics, he asked them if athletics would not be injurious to his military training. They told him (and it was the truth) that the habit of body and mode of life for athlete and soldier were totally different, and particu- larly that their diet and training were not the same, since the one required much sleep, continuous surfeit of food, and fixed periods of activity and repose, in order to preserve or improve their condition, which the slightest influence or the least departure from routine is apt to change for the worse ; whereas the

Tdons avwparias mpoonKoy elvat, padtoTta dé ‘hépew padiwos ev evderav eiOropéva, padiws 5é aypurviav, axovaas 0 PiroTroipny ov povov avTos Epuye TO mpayua Kal xateyékacev, GANA Kal oTpaTnyav VaTEPOY ATiMials Kai TPOTNAAKLO LOLS, Saov Hy er avTo, wacav GOrAnow é&éBarev ws TA XPNTLLMTATA TOV TWOPLATWYV Eis TOUS GvayKaLoUS
ayavas aypynota tolovaav.

IV. ’Azraddayels 5é€ dtdacxddwv xai matéa-yoyav év péev tais qodTiKais otpatelats, as €TrOLOUVYTO KAwWTeElas Evexa Kal NENrNacias els THY Aaxovixny éuBaddovtes, elOicev. avtov mparov
pev éxotpatevovtwy, totatov dé amepyopevav Babifev. axorrs dé ovaons 7 KUYnyav SveTrover
TO o@pa Kat KateoKevale Koddov dua Kal popa-Aéov, } yewpyav. hv yap aypos avT@ Kados aro cTadiwy elkoot THS TOAEwWS. els TOUTOV éBadLle Kal’ huépay peta TO aptotov 7 peta TO Seimvor, kat cataBadov éavtov ert ottBadtou Tov TUYOVTOS @oTrep ExacTos TOY épyaTa@y dveTraveTo. Tpwt dé avactas Kat cuveharrdapevos Epyou Tois aptre-

Aoupyovoty 7 BonrarTovaw, avOts ets TrodLY aTrnEL Kat jepl Ta Snwoota Tois Pirdois Kal ToOls apxYovet cvvno xYoNEtTO.
Ta pev ovdv ex TOY OTpaTELMY TpocLOVTAa KaTaVaduoKev els imtovs Kal STA Kai AVTOES alxpa-AwTwY, Tov 5é olxovy amo THs yewpylas avkew
émretpaTo OLKaLoTaT@ TOY XpHnpaTLa “eV, OVE TOUTO TOLOUPEVOS TApEpyoV, GAAA Kal Tdvu TpooHKery 262

soldier ought to be conversant with all sorts of irregularity and all sorts of inequality, and above all should accustom himself to endure lack of food easily, and as easily lack of sleep. On hearing this, Philopoemen not only shunned athletics himself and derided them, but also in later times as a commander banished from the army all forms of them, with every possible mark of reproach and dishonour, on the ground that they rendered useless for the inevitable struggle of battle men who would otherwise be most serviceable.

IV. And when, set free from teachers and tutors, he took part in the incursions into Spartan territory which his fellow-citizens made for the sake of booty and plunder, he accustomed himself to march first as they went out, but last as they came back. And when he had leisure, he would give his body hard exercise in hunting, thus rendering it agile and at the same time sturdy, or in cultivating the soil. For he had a fine farm twenty furlongs from the city. To this he would go every day after dinner or after supper, and would throw himself down upon an ordinary pallet-bed, like anyone of his labourers, to sleep for the night. Then, early in the morning, he would rise and go to work along with his vine-dressers or his herdsmen, after which he would go back again to the city and busy himself about public matters with his friends or with the magistrates.

As for what he got from his campaigning, he used to spend it on horses, or armour, or the ransoming of captives; but his own property he sought to increase by agriculture, which is the justest way to make money. Nor did he practise agriculture merely as a side issue, but he held that the man who purposed to 4 ~ a“ Q , b a olopevos otxeta KexTHaOat Tov addoTpiwv adeto-

) ~ QA a Qa td
Hevov. nxpoato 5€ Aoywv Kai avyypappact ptro-
a b + @ Ld
copuwv évetuyYavev, ov Tact, GAN ad wv edoxer
A > A > “~ N “ ‘;O “ 4 ™pos apeTnyv @perctcOar. xaitTav Ounpixav ooa
¢ 9 t
Tas pos avopeiay eyeipey Kat tmapokuvew evouute davtacias, Tovras mpocetxe. TaV 8 adrAwV ava-yvwopatwv partota trois EvayyéXov taxtiKois 9 4 A N ‘ > tA id av
evepueTo Kai tas mept ‘Ar€Eavdpov totoptias KQTELYE, TOUS OYOUS ETL TA TpdyynaTa KaTA-
4 a4 ’ \ “~ ad ‘ A
TTPEPELY OLOMEVOS, EL LN TKOANS Evexa Kal Nadas
aKapTrov TepaivowTo. Kat yap TOY TAKTLKOV Oewpnuatwv tas émi tois mivaxio Staypadas é@v Yalpev, emt TAY ToTwY av’TaY édapBavev ro ,
EXeyxov Kal pedétnv erroteito, ywpiwv ovyKduvias kal mediwy amoKxomds, Kal boa mepl pevOpors 7 Tappots 7) oTevwtrois TAON Kal oxnpata SwactTa}-
4 \ 4 A 4 >
Hevns Kat Tad avoTtedXopevns Parayyos. Emt-TKOTOV AUTOS Tpos avToV ev Tals OdoLTrOpiats Kat
a > +e a , ” cA ?
toils we éavtov mpoRddAdAwy. EolKEe yap ovTOS
e ‘ ‘ A “
0 avnp TéEpaitépw THS avayens éudioxarjoat
TOLS OTPATLWTLKOIS, Kal TOV TOAELOY WS TOLKLAW-TaTny uToleow Ths apeTns aomdcacba, xal dws KaTadpovety TOV aTONELTOMEVWY WS aTpG-KTOD.
Ww \ b le / Ld ,
V. "Hén 6€ adtovd tpraxovta én yeyovorTos
/ e KrXeouevns o Baotrevs Aaxedatpovioy vuKtos
b / \ a / / \ \
eEaiduns mpoorecav tH Meyddn tore Kal tas Ud > \ “a \ \ bd gurakas Biacdpevos évtos waphnrAGe xal THV ayopav katérxaBev. éxBonOnaas S€ Piromoipnv tovs 264

PHILOPOEMEN

keep his hands from the property of others ought by all means to have property of his own. He also listened to the discourses and applied himself to the writings of philosophers-—not all of them, but those whom he thought helpful to him in his progress towards virtue. And as for the poems of Homer, whatever in them was thought by him to rouse and stimulate the activities of the soul which made for valour, to this he would apply himself. Among other writings, however, he was most of all devoted to the ‘Tactics’ of Evangelus, and was familiar with the histories of Alexander, thinking that literature was conducive to action, unless it were prosecuted merely to while away the time and afford themes for fruitless small talk. Indeed, he would ignore the charts and diagrams for the illustration of tactical principles, and get his proofs and make his studies on the ground itself. The ways in which places slope to meet one another, and level plains come to an abrupt end, and all the vicissitudes and shapes of a phalanx when it is elongated and contracted again in the vicinity of ravines or ditches or narrow defiles, these he would investigate by himself as he wandered about, and discuss them with his companions. For it would seem that he brought more zeal than was necessary to the study of military science, setting his affections on war as affording a most manifold basis for the practice of virtue, and despising as unsuccessful men those who left it to others.

V. He was now thirty years of age, when Cleomenes, King of the Lacedaemonians, suddenly attacked Megalopolis by night, forced the guard, made his way into the city, and occupied the market-place. Philopoemen came to the help of the citizens, but had not

pev Troeuious ov KatioXxuaey éFeAdoa, KalmEep Eppwpevars Kal mapaBorws Stayoviaduevos, TOUS
dé Toi Tas Tpomrov TWa THS TONES eFexrerpe, T POG WAX OMEVOS Tots értOL@Kouat kat tov Kyeo-pevny TepioTrav ed éavTov, ws Karem as Kal mods VETATOS amrendeiv, arroBarwv Tov liov Kal Tpavyarias ‘YEVOMEVOS. emet Oe ™ poceTepapev aUTOLS O Kreouevns els Meconynv amerBodar THY TE TOLD pera TOV Xenparov amrodLoous kal TH
YOpav, opav 0 Dirorroipny Tovs modiTas aa pévers dexomevous Kal omrevdovTas emraven Gein € éveoTn Kal Svexwruce TO hoy, disdoKwv ws ovK amrobiswat THY TOALY Krcopevns, TpooKTaTat dé TOUS Toditas
el TO Kal THY TONW yeu BeBarorepo ov yap éFerv avtov Straws oixias Kat Tetyn Keva purdger Kad npevos, aAXa Kal TOUTOD un epnpias éKTEG EL - cOat. tadra réywr Tous pev TON TAS amétpewe,
TO dé Kreopéver mpopacty Taper € Aupnvac Bar
Kal xataBare Ta TWAELOTAa THS Toews Kal x pnpaTov eUTropya ave peydhov amen Bein.

VI. ’Exel 6 Avtiryovos O Bactreus Bonfov em Tov KXeopévny peta TOV ‘Axatay € ecoTparevce, Kat Tas wept LedAaciav axpas Kal Tas éuBoras KATEXOVTOS avtov tapétrake tiv dSvvapty eyyus émrexerpely Kal Bidteo Oat Stavoovpevos, Hy pev év Tots iirrevot pera TOV éautod TONLT OV TETAYMEVOS 0 Prrorroipny, Kal “Twapactaras elyev ‘TAAupious, ols Ta AnyovTa THs Tapatakews auveTTéehpaxto
1 See the Cleomcnea, xxiv.
2 Cf. the Cleomenes, xxvii. and xxviii. The battle of Sellasia was fought in 221 n.c.

force enough to drive the enemy out, although he fought with vigour and daring. He did, however, steal the citizens out of the city, as it were, by attacking their pursuers and drawing Cleomenes against himself, so that with the greatest difficulty he got away last of all, after losing his horse and receiving a wound. Moreover, when Cleomenes sent to them at Messene, whither they had gone, and offered to give them back their city with its valuables and their territory, Philopoemen, seeing that the citizens would be glad to accept the offer and were eager to go back home, opposed and dissuaded them from it, showing them that Cleomenes was not so much offering to restore their city as he was trying to win over to himself its citizens, that so he might have the city also more securely in his possession ; for he would not be able, Philopoemen said, to remain there and guard empty houses and walls, but the solitude would force him to abandon these also. By this speech Philopoemen diverted the citizens from their purpose, but furnished Cleomenes with an excuse for devastating and demolishing the greater part of the city and marching off loaded with booty.’

VI. Soon, however, Antigonus the king marched with the Achaeans to give aid against Cleomenes, and finding that his enemy was occupying the heights and passes about Sellasia, he drew up his forces near by with the purpose of attacking him and forcing a passage.” Philopoemen was stationed among the Macedonian cavalry with his own fellow-citizens,’ and had as a support the Illyrians, a large body of 3 According to Polybius, ii. 66. 7, a thousand Achaeans and as many Megalopolitans were stationed with the ~Macedonian cavalry.

<

2 moAXois ovat Kal payipos. elpnro dé avtois
9 , ° a 4 Ww ? \ 4
épedpevovotv nouvxiav exe axpt dv atro Oarepou

Képws vTro tov Baciréws apOn dotvixis trrep captions Svatetapevn. Tav Sé aWyEe“ovwv ois
"TAAuptots tretpwpévwv exBialerOar tovs Aaxedarpovious, Kai tav “Ayatav, ooTep tpocetéTaxTo, Thv epedpetav ev Taker Stapvratrovtwv, Ev«reidas
o ToD KXeopévous adeAdos Katayabwv To ytvopevov Sudotracpa epi Tovs TroAEpLLOUs TaYU TOUS é€Aappotatous Trav Widow mepreTrepev, eEoTLa ev Tots
"T\Xupcots éesritreceiv KeAEVoas Kal TEpioTray Ep7-fous TOV immévwy ATrOAEAELULPEVOUS.
3 Tevopevov dé TrovTwy Kal Tov idav Tous IAdv- 359 ptous TEploTaVTOV Kal StataparrovTey, ouvio@v ) Drdoroiunv ov peya dv épyov éemiBécbat Trois
irots Kal Tov Kalpov Upnyovpevoy TOUTO, TPATOV
A 4 a a e s\ > w
pev Eppate trois BactrLKois, ws € ovn Errecber,
’ N 4 an nA 5 o
adda patwerbar Soxav Kateppovetto, ovdérw peydarns ovbé aktoriorou pos THALKOUTO OTpAT?}-
4 \ 2 A ” > \ b] 4
ynua do0&—ns epi avtov ovans, autos éuBdadrEK 4 ouveTrioTacUdpEvos Tovs ToXiTas. ‘yevouevns bé

a \ A A a
TAPAYTS TO TPATOV, Elta Puvy7ns Kal povou ToAXoD
“ a ‘ 4 a) J A Tav Wide, Bovdopevos Ett pAadXov émippaca tous BaotrtKous Kal mpocpitar Kata TayXos Oopvu-Bovpévots Tots troNemios TOV péev immov adjxev,
\
autos S€ mpos Ywpia oKxodla Kal peata peiO pwr Kal dapayyev melos ev immix@ Oopaxt Kal oxevh Baputépa yareT os Kal TadaiT@pws aulAropmEVvos dieAauvetar Siaptrepes OMod TOvS uNpoOvs ExaTépous 268

PHILOPOEMEN

good fighters, who closed up the line of battle. They had been ordered to lie quietly in reserve until, from the other wing, a signal should be made by the king with a scarlet coat stretched upon a spear. But the Illyrians, at the command of their officers, tried to force back the Lacedaemonians, while the Achaeans, as they had been ordered to do, kept quietly waiting at their post. Therefore Eucleidas, the brother of Cleomenes, who noticed the gap thus made in the enemies’ line, quickly sent round the most agile of his light-armed troops, with orders to attack the Iilyrians in the rear and rout them, now that they had lost touch with the cavalry.

These orders were carried out, and the light-armed troops were driving the Illyrians before them in confusion, when Philopoemen perceived that it would be no great task to attack the light-armed troops, and that the occasion prompted this step. At first he pointed this out to the king’s officers. Then, when they were not to be persuaded by him, but looked down upon him as a madman (since his reputation was not yet great enough to justify his being entrusted with so important a maneuvre), he took matters into his own hands, formed his fellow-citizens into a wedge, and charged upon the enemy. At first the light-armed troops were thrown into confusion, then put to rout with great slaughter. And now Philo- poemen, wishing to encourage still further the king’s troops and bring them swiftly upon the enemy thus thrown into disorder, quitted his horse, and with grievous difficulty forced his way along on foot, in his horseman’s breastplate and heavy equipment, towards ground that was irregular and full of water-courses and ravines. Here he had both his thighs pierced

evt peraryKvne, Kaiplas pey ov yevomerns, toxupas
66 TIS TANYAS, adore THY aiyunv él Odtepa
5 diaoat. TO bev obv 7 p@rov eva xebeis Oarep
Seon TWAVTATAGLW amr opws ele 70 yap évappa
THS aryxudns ane ny émroies TOU GKOVTLO MATOS VEAKOMEVOU 51a THY Tpaupdta@v THY maposov: @S be Gevouv ot TapovTes aypacGat Kal THS MAXNS
akpny dfeiav exovans éopabater vio Oupod Kat prroripias T pos TOV ayava, TH TapaBacet Kal Th Taparrager Tov ckedov dia pero KMdoas TO GKOVTLG pa Xepis éxéNevoev EAXKVTAL TOV ayparov
6 éxdte ov. ovTw dé aTradharyels Kal oT aTdpevos
TO Eidos ex wper dua TOV Tpopdyeov éml TOUS ToAepwLous, OTE TONY mpoOupuiav Kal CiAov aperijs Tapacyxety TOUS arywvtFouevors. ViKNoAS ovv oO "AvTiryovos ametretpato TOV Maxedover, épwTav 51a Tl, py KeNEVTAYTOS avrob, 70 iaraeKov
7 éxwnoap. TOV dé aTrodoryouLEvary @S Tapa yvounv
Brac beter Els Yelpas ENOeEtY Tots TroNEpLOLS peipa-Kiov Meyarorrondutixod mpoepBarovros, yehaoas
0 ‘AvTiryovos ‘Exeivo Toivuy To betpaxiov, ” eltrey, “« Zoyov TYEHOVOS perya ou TeTroiNnKeD. .

VII. ’Ex ToUTOU b0fav axe, @otrep eikos, 0 Didroroipnv. Kal TOU pee Apriyovou oTovodd-cavTos bras TTPATEVOLTO per aurou, kal didovros
wryepovian | Kal xXpnuata, TapyTngaro, padioTa
THY éauTOU pvow Kata pa Ov pos TO apxecBar

SutTKOAWS Kal Xareras éxougar, apyety dé wal axon ery ov Bovdopevos aoKnoews &vexa xa pererns TOV TONELLKOY els Kpyrqy émhevoev emt
2 oTpateiav. KdKel cvyVvoY Kpovoy eyyupvacdpeEvos through by a thonged javelin. The wound was not fatal, though severe, and the head of the weapon came out on the other side. At first, then, he was held fast as by a fetter, and was altogether helpless ; for the fastening of the thong made it difficult to draw the weapon back through the wound. But since those about him hesitated to attempt this, and since, now that the battle was at its hottest, the ardour of his ambition made him impatient to join in the struggle, by moving his legs backward and forward he broke the shaft of the weapon in two in the middle, and then ordered each fragment to be drawn out separately. Thus set free, he drew his sword and made his way through the front ranks against the enemy, thereby greatly animating the combatants and inspiring them with a desire to emulate his valour. After his victory, therefore, Antigonus put his Macedonians to the question, and asked them why, without his orders, they had brought the cavalry into action. They defended themselves by saying that they had been forced against their will to attack the enemy, because a young man of Megalopolis had first led a charge against them. At this, Antigonus gave a laugh and said: “Well, then, that young man behaved like a great commander.”

270

PHILOPOEMEN

VII. This naturally brought Philopoemen into high repute. Antigonus was eager that he should take service under him, and offered him command and pay. These Philopoemen declined, chiefly because he well knew that it was naturally unpleasant and hard for him to be under another man’s orders, Not wishing, however, to be inactive and idle, for the sake of training and practice in war he sailed to Crete in search of military service. In Crete he practised

271

a *

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avopdot maxipots Kal Trouiros peTaxelpicacar TONEMOY, ETL DE GWHpoct Kal KexoAaTpEvoLS TeEpi
diattav, eravnrOev odtw Naptpos eis TOVs "Axatovs wate EVOUS immapyos aTrobetyOjvar. mapa-AaBov Sé€ Tous imreis PavAs pév imaptors
€x TOD TpooTtuvyorTOsS, 6TE oupBaivor oTparTeia, TpoaxXpwpévous, autos bé Tas TOANAS TOV OTpA-TeL@Y aTrooLOpdoKovTas, éTépouvs dé TréutrovTas av@ éavtav, Sewnv Sé ateipiay peta atroApias TdvTwY ovcay, TeptopwvTas 5é TadTa TOvs dpxov-

tas del did Te TO TAEioTOY ev ToIs 'Axatois TOUS inteis SuvacOat Kal padrdtota Kupious elvat Timis Kai KoNadoEwWS, OVX UrretEev ovdE AYjKEV, GNAG Kal
Tas TONES eTi@Y Kal Kat avdpa TOV vévy Exac Tov
érl thy dirotipiay cuveEoppav, Kal KorXabwv Tovs avayKns Seopévous, meAeTats TE Kab Tomas Kal Wpos GAAAOUS ApiAraLS YpwpEVOS, OTroUV TELA TOL
Ocacbatr pérrorev, ev OALy@ Ypovp Tact pouny Te Jdavpactny cat mpoOupiay tapéotnoe Kai, 6 péytorov hv év Tos TaKTLKOLs, EXadpovds Kat o€eis Wpos TE TAS KaT ovAamOV emMLGTPOpas Kal TeEptomacpous Kal tas nal' immov émistpopas Kat KNioets aTretpydoato, Kai cuveiOicer ws Evi cwpart xwwoupéeve Kal" opunv éxovotov éotxévat THY SAOU Tov cvaTH patos év Tals petaPorais evyépecav.
Luoraons Sé THs wept Tov Adpiocov avtois
ToTapov icxyupas paxns mpos Aitwrovs xal
"Hrelous, 6 Trav 'Hrelwv immapyos Aapodartos 272
360

PHILOPOEMEN

himself for a long time among men who were not only warlike and versed in many kinds of warfare, but also still moderate and restrained in their ways of living, and he came back to the Achaeans with such distinc- tion that they at once made him commander of their cavalry.!. But he found that the horsemen whom he was to command used worthless animals acquired at random, whenever a campaign was to be under- taken ; that they shirked most campaigns themselves, and sent others out in their places; that they were all characterized by a shocking lack of experience, together with its resultant cowardice ; and that their commanders always overlooked these things because the knights had the greatest power and influence among the Achaeans and the chief voice in the assignment of rewards and punishments. Philo- poemen, however, did not yield or give way to them. He went round to the different cities and roused the spirit of ambition in each young man individually, punished those who needed compulsion, introduced drills, parades, and competitive contests in places where there would be large bodies of spectators and thus in a short time inspired them al] with an astonishing vigour and zea], and, what is of the greatest importance in tactics, rendered them agile and swift in wheeling and deploying by squadrons, and in wheeling and turning by single trooper, making the dexterity shown by the whole mass in_ its evolutions to be like that of a single person moved by an impulse from within.

Moreover, in the fierce battle which they fought at the river Larissus against Aetolians and Eleians, the commander of the Eleian cavalry, Damophantus,

1 For the year 209-208 B.c.

273

ev . A ‘ , y)
oppnoev emt tov Diromoiueva mpoefeXdaas.
deEdpevos b€ THY Opunv éxetvos avtou Kai POdacas T@ Sopate Tate xal KataBaArre Tov Aapodavtov.
> \ 4 4 ” e a .
evOus dé rovtov meadvTos Epuyov of Trodémtou, Kat N @ e , e ” \ ra]
Naptpos nv 0 Dirorroiuny, ws ovTE KaTAa YElpa
“ , \ ”
TOV vewy TiIVOS ovTE oUvécEL TOY TMpEeaRuUTépwrY ATONELTOMEVOS, GANA Kal payecOat Kal oTpa-TNHYELY (KAV@TATOS. |
VIII. To 3€ xowov trav ‘Ayarav mpatos pév
"Apatos eis d€iwpa nat Suvayuy jpev, ex TaTrervod
kat Oteppumpévov Kata mores ouvayayov Kai TwodtTevoduevos ‘EXAnvinny Kxal giridvOpwrov qoNwTelay’ émrerta, MoTTEep ev Tos Ydacw, apka-pévwy oriywv Udioracbat Kai pixpoYv cwpaTov, non Ta éewippéovTa Tots TpwTos evioyomeva Kat TepiTintovta mkv ioyupav Kal oTepeotnTa motet d¢ GAAHAWY, OUTW THS “EAAdSos aaevois
\ 70 4 / \ 4 > a 4
Kal EVOLAAUTOU HEPpOMEVNS KATA TONELS EV T@ TOTE
Ypovm mpwTovy avatdavTes oi ‘Axatoi, Kal Tov
, , \ 29 a a \ ,
KUKAW TrOhEwWY TAS pev ex TOV BonOEiy Kai auVe-NevOepodv amo TAY TUpdvywy UToAapPBavortes, tas 5€é oovoia Kal qodTEla KaTamyVUYTES Ets éauTous, év cpa Kal piav duvamw KatacKevdoat
A A ‘ 9 be) 4 A
Scevoodvto Thy IleXorrovvnaov. adr Apadrtou pev
A ww a 4 4 e , \
Cavtos étt Tots Maxedovwv OrXols UiredvovTo Ta
, , a 9 » @ 9 ,
ToAAd, Geparrevovtes Il roNepuaiov, elt’ avOus 'Avti-yovov kal Dirsutrrov év pécats avactpehopévous tats “EXAnvicais mpdkeoww émret dé Prdrorrotuny els TO WpwTevery MponrOev, dn Kal’ éavTovs 274

rode out from the ranks and charged upon Philopoemen. But Philopoemen received his onset, was first to drive home a spear-thrust, and threw Damophantus to the ground. Their leader fallen, the enemy at once took to flight, and Philopoemen was in high renown, as one who yielded to none of the young men in personal prowess, and to none of the elder men in sagacity, but both in fighting and in commanding was most capable.

VIII. The commonwealth of the Achaeans was first raised to dignity and power by Aratus, who consolidated it when it was feeble and disrupted, and inaugurated an Hellenic and humane form of govern- ment. Then, just as in running waters, after a few * small particles have begun to take a fixed position, others presently are swept against the ‘first, adhere and cling to them, and thus form a fixed and solid mass by mutual support, so the Achaeans, at a time when Greece was weak and easily dissolved and drifting along by individual cities, first united them- selves together, and then, by receiving into their number some of the cities round about which they had aided and assisted in shaking off their tyrants, and by uniting others with themselves in a harmonious civil polity, they purposed to form the Peloponnesus into a single political body and one power. As long, however, as Aratus lived, they were dependent for the most part on Macedonian armies, paying court to Ptolemy, and then again to Antigonus and Philip, all of whom busied themselves in the affairs of Greece. But when Philopoemen was advanced to leadership among them,! they were at last capable of contending

1 In 207 z.c. ; Aratus had died in 213.

aktopaxyot Tois iayvovet wretotov dvTEs eTrau-TAVTO KPWmMEVvOL TpoTTUTals ETELTAKTOLS. “ApaTos
pev yap, apyotepos elvas Soxa@v mpos Tous ToXepuxods ayavas, outdia Kal mpaoTynTe Kal diriats Bacinixais Tra mretoTa KaTELpyacaTto TAY Tpaypdtwv, ws év Tols Trepi exeivou yéypaTrtat, Pirotoiuny S€ dyabos todkemotys av nat did TOY StAwv évepyos, Ere & evtuxns Kal xkatopOwtixds
evOvs ev Tais TpwTats yevopevos payxats, dua TH Suvduet To dpovnua trav "Ayaav niEnoe viKav eOccbévtwy pet adtovd Kal xateutuyely ev Tots TAELTTOLS UYWCL. ;

IX. [Ipe@rov péev otv ta mepl tas takers Kai Tous oTALcpovs davrAws Exyovta Tois “Axatois exivnoev. éypwvto pev yap Oupeois pév evrretéat
Sia AetrToTHTA Kai oTEevwTépols TOU TEpLaTéANELY Ta owpata, Sopact Sé puxpotépos modu ToD

capicay: Kal dia TovTO WAHKTAL Kal paxtpot Toppwhey yoav wre Koudoryntos, mpoopiavtes
S€ trois moAdepiows EXatTov elyov: eldos be Ta€ews
Kai TXHMATOS ELS TTELpAY OK Hv ovYNOES, Parayyt 5é ypw@pevoe unte mpoBorAny éyovon pte oupvacticpov ws) Maxedovav, pabiws é&eOXiBovto kat dseota@vto. taita o Pirotroipny didd£as emeioev avTous avtt pev Oupeod cat Sopatos domida AaBely nal captoay, kpdveot 56 Kai Oopaks wai TEpLKYniot TeppaypjLevous povesov Kal BeBnxviav avtl Spopinns Kal meATACTIKAS paynv aoxeiv.
276
PHILOPOEMEN

alone with their most powerful neighbours, and ceased to rely upon foreign protectors. Aratus, indeed, who was thought to be too sluggish for warlike contests, accomplished most of his under- takings by conference, urbanity, and royal friendships, as I have written in his Life ;1 whereas Philopoemen, who was a good warrior and effective with his weapons, besides proving himself fortunate and successful in his very first battles, increased not only the power but also the courage of the Achaeans, who were accustomed to be victorious under him and to win success in most of their contests.

IX. In the first place, however, he changed the faulty practice of the Achaeans in drawing up and arming their soldiers. For they used bucklers which were easily carried because they were so light, and yet were too narrow to protect the body ; and spears which were much shorter than the Macedonian pike. For this reason they were effective in fighting at a long distance, because they were so lightly armed, but when they came to close quarters with the enemy they were at a disadvantage. Moreover, a division of line and formation into cohorts was not customary with them, and since they employed a solid phalanx without either levelled line of spears or wall of interlocking shields such as the Macedonian phalanx presented, they were easily dislodged and scattered. Philopoemen showed them all this, and persuaded them to adopt long pike and heavy shield instead of spear and buckler, to protect their bodies with helmets and breastplates and greaves, and to practise stationary and steadfast fighting instead of the nimble movements of light-armed troops. After 1 Nee the Aratus, x.

277

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 metaas de KabotrAicacOas Tovs év HrALKLa TPw@TOV
pev érrinpe Oappety ws apwaxous yeyovotas, éresta Tas Tpupas avTa@v Kal Tas ToAuTEAElas apiota peTeKoopnoev. adedev yap ovK hv TavtTdtracw €k TONAOV VOTOUYTMY TOV KEVOY Kai watatov CHrOD; éoO tas ayaTovtwv TepiTTas oTpwpuvas Te BaTTTO-pévwv aroupyeis Kal rept Setrva PidoTipoupevwv nat tparévas. o dé apEdpuevos extpérey aro TOV oUx dvayKaiwy éul Ta yYpyolwa Kal KAA THY didoKkoo piav, TAX TaVTAaS ETELTE Kal TApwWPLNCE tas Kal')pépay rept capa daTravgs KoNOvoaVTAS EV TALS OTPATLWTLKAIS KAL TOMELLKALS TApAacKEDv-ais Stampetrets opacOat Kexoopunuévous. hv ovv LOety TA pev epyagTiipia peTTAa KATAKOTTTOMEVOY

KUM Kw Kal Onpixreiwy, ypua oupéevon b€ Owpanwv Kal Katapyupoupevwy Ouped@y Kai yarivav, Ta 5é oTd0la TwdwWY Sapalomévwry Kal veavicKkwy oTAO0-payouvtwv, év de tails yepol Tay yuvatKav Kpdvy Kat wrepa Badais Koo povpeva Kal YtTMVwY LTTI-KOV Kal oTpaTlwTiKaV YAapvowy SinvOicpévor.
7 8 dus attn TO Odpaos avEovca Kai Tapaxa-ova THY opuny érroie GiroTrTapdBoXov Kal Tpo-Oupov emi tovs xivdivous. 7 pev yap év Trois Gros Oedwact rorvtéXera tpudyy éerdyerat cat parariay evdidwor toils yYpwpévos, Botrep wd puyphav Kal yapyadopav Tis atcOnoews ouveTt-KrAwons THY Stdvotay, nO Eis TA TOLAVTA povvVaL Kal peyadvver tov Oupov, waTrep "Ounpos éroince tov "AxiAdéa TeV Kawav STAwWY TapaTeDévTwV 278

361

PHILOPOEMEN

he had persuaded those of military age to arm them- selves in this manner, in the first place he inspired them with confidence that they had thus become invincible, and then made most excellent reforms in their luxurious and extravagant ways of living. For it was not possible to remove altogether their empty and idle emulation from a people long addicted to it. They were fond of costly apparel, the coverings of their couches were dyed purple, and they vied with one another in banquets and table array. But he made a beginning by diverting their love of show from what was unnecessary to what was serviceable and honourable, and speedily persuaded and incited them all to check their daily expenditures upon bodily wants, and to find their chief adornment in military and warlike equipments. And soone might have seen the workshops filled with goblets and Therycleian plate 1 which were being broken up, with breastplates being gilded, with shields and bridles being silvered over, while in the places of exercise colts were being broken in and young men were learning the use of heavy armour, and in the hands of women there were helmets and plumes for dyeing, and horsemen's tunics or soldiers' cloaks for 'em- broidering. The sight of all this increased men's courage, called forth their energies, and made them venturesome and ready to incur dangers. For extra- vagance in other objects of display induces luxury and implants effeminacy in those who use them, since something like a pricking and tickling of the senses breaks down serious purpose ; but when it is seen in the trappings of war it strengthens and exalts the spirit, just as Homer represented Achilles, when his

1 See the Aemilius Paulus, xxxiii. 2,

wn ' A \ /
éyyus 0776 THs Gypews olov opyavTa Kal PrEeyouevov mpos THY du avTa@v éevépyerav.
Co ' 4 \ Uj 3 4 Q
Ottw S€ Koopnoas Tous veous éyupvale Kat
Suevrovet, Tais Kivnoeot TpoOvpws v7TaKovoYTAS
Kai dtArotipas. Kal yap 4 takis Bavpactas
HyaTato aOpavoTov Te NapBdvew wiKVwpa 6o-
KOVO, Kal TAOTAA TOS TWpacLD eyivEeTO YEeLponOn
Kal xovda, pel' ndovijs Sa RapmpoTnTa Kat KAaNNOS aTTopévwv Kal hopovvtTwr, éevaywricacbat te Bovropevov kal StaxpiOjvar Taxtota mWpos TOUS TOAEpMLOUS.
X. "Hv 8é rote tois Ayatois o mpos Mayavidav
/ \ 4 / b) N nw
ToAepLos Tov AaKkedatpovimy TUPAVYVOY, ATO TOANNS
N 4 , b 4 wn
Kal peyarns Surapews emtBoudNevovtra tract leXoqovyyctos. ws ovy eis thy Mavtiveray éuBe-BrAnnas amrnyyérOn, Kata taxos o PiroToipny éEnyaye TV oTpatiay ér avtov. éyyus b€ THs
, 4 an \ / e Ul
ToOAEwWS TapeTaeavTo TONNOLS pev EEvors EXATEPOL, iaais 5é ood Te Tais moNdTLKais SuVdpece.
yevonevou 6€ Tov ayavos ev yepatv, 0 Mayavidas
tois Eévors tovs Tav "Ayai@v mMporeTaypévovs dxovristas Kat Tapavtivovs tperdpevos avi TOD xwpeiy evOds emi Tovs payopmévous Kal mTapappynyvivat To ovvertyKos e€éTrEce Si@KwVv Kal
I \ " "A A
wapnrr\ake Thy darayya tav "Axatav év rake
, e \ 4 4 /
pevovtwv. o 5€ Dirotroiuny tHrALKOUTOV TTAIcpatos é€v apXy yevouévov Kal TeV TpaypaTor aTroAwAévar xoudn Kai dScehOdpOat Soxovyrwr,
A \ a" a
TOUTO MEV OMWS TPOTETOLELTO Tapopay Kal pundEev

new armour was laid down near him, as exulting at the sight and all on fire to get to work with it.4

After he had thus arrayed and adorned the young men, Philopoemen exercised and driJled them, and they eagerly and emulously obeyed his instructions. lor the new order of battle pleased them wonderfully, since it seemed. to secure a close array that could not be broken; and the armour which they used became light and manageable for them, since they wore or grasped it with delight because of its beauty and splendour, and wished to get into action with it and fight a decisive battle with their enemies as soon as possible.

X. At this time the Achaeans were carrying on war with Machanidas the tyrant of Sparta, who, relying upon his large and strong forces, was scheming to get control of the whole Peloponnesus. Accord- ingly, when word came that the tyrant had invaded the territory of Mantineia, Philopoemen quickly led his army out against him. They drew up in battle array near the city, both parties having many mer- cenaries and almost all their citizen soldiery. When battle was joined, Machanidas with his mercenaries routed the javelineers and Tarantines who had been stationed in front of the Achaean line, and then, instead of advancing directly against the main body of the enemy and breaking up their close array, he dashed off in pursuit of the fugitives, and so- passed by the phalanx of the Achaeans, which remained drawn up in position. Then Philopoemen, although so great a disaster had occurred at the outset and his cause was thought to be utterly lost and ruined, pro- fessed to ignore and make light of it, and seeing what

1 Ihad, xix. 15 ff.

nryeta Oa Secvor, KaTiowy € TOUS TONELLOUS, Ocov npapravoy év TH bo£et, THS pararyyos amop- pnyvupevous Kal Kevnvy Ywpav didovras, ovK amy THOEV OVO ever rn hepopmevars aurois émi Tous pevyovTas, ann edoas mapenOeiv Kat Sudo Tac pa TOLoaL péeya 7 pos TOUS omAiras EvOus 7; nye TOY Aaxedatpovior, opaiy THY parayya yupeny amo- ehetmpevny, Kat KaTa Képas Tapa pape év€- Bare, pte dpxovtos avrois _TapovTos pare paxerbar TpoadexXomevols' viKav yap NryouvTo Kat Kpateiy TavTdTract, Su@KovTa TOV Mayavidar

Opa@vres. Qo duevos d€ TOUTOUS pove TONN@ (A€E-yovrar yap vmep TOUS TeTpAKLaXLALOUS drrobaveiv) Gpunoev éml Tov _Maxyaviday éx THS St@kews dvacTpepovTa pera TOV Eévwv. tadpouv oé pe-yarns Kat Babeias év péo@ sordid a mapeEn-Navuvov adrd#rous éxatépaben, © O ev SiaBivas Kat puryeiy, 0 6€ TOUTO KwWAVCAL Bovdopevos. Rg dé dYres ovy Os oTpaTnyav HaXopevov, GD WomrEp Onpiw mpos ahany Um avayKns TpEToMEveD dewvod Kuvyyerou Tov Prrorroipevos TUVETTOTOS. év0a o pep iarmros Tod Tupdvyou pouanr€os av Kal l Oupoerdns Kal Tois pve ai pay Gels éxaTépwev eTreTOAnoe TH StaBace, Kal mpocBarwyv tH Tappy To arhdos éBidlero trois mpoa Oiors mépav epeicacOau oTKEedEowW. év 66 TOUT@ Luplas Kal TloAvacvos, olmrep del T@ Pidomoipevt Taphoav HaXomEre Keo Kal cuvnamivov, omou Tpoandavvov dor epot Tas aixpas KAivavTes évavtias. Odvet dé avrous 0 Piromoiwny amTavTnaas TO Maxyaviéa, Kal TOV immo avTOU petewpitovta THY Kepadny Tpo Tov 282

a great mistake the enemy had made by going off in pursuit, thus breaking away from his phalanx and leaving a vacant space there, did not oppose or resist their chase after the fugitives, but let them pass him by and make a great gap. Then he led straight against the Lacedaemonian heavy-armed, seeing that their phalanx had been left exposed, and fell upon them in a flank attack, while their commander was away and they were not expecting to fight; for they thought they were victorious and getting the upper hand altogether, since they saw Machanidas pursuing. After Philopoemen had routed these with great slaughter (more than four thousand of them are. said to have fallen), he set out against Machanidas, who was returning with his mercenaries from the pursuit. But a broad and deep ditch stretched between them, along which the two leaders rode opposite each other, one wishing to get across and escape, the other to prevent this. The spectacle was not that of two commanders fighting, but that of a powerful hunter attacking a wild beast that has been forced to turn at bay, and Philopoemen was the hunter. And now the tyrant’s horse, which was vigorous and high-spirited and felt the bloody spurs in his sides, essayed to make the leap across, and striking against the edge of the ditch with his breast, was struggling with his fore-feet to extricate himself. At this point Simmias and Polyaenus, who were always at Philopoemen’s side when he was fighting and protected him with their shields, rode up both at the same time and levelled their spears at the horse. But Philopoemen was before them in attack- ing Machanidas, and seeing that the tyrant’s horse was lifting its head up in front of its rider’s body, he

283

TWMATOS opa@v puKpov even dive Tov idtov, Kab Ota-AaBov To Evotov ex yetpos wOEr Kal TEpLT PETEL TOV avdpa cuveTepelaas. TobTo eX cov TO oXHpa xarrovs év Acrdois EaTyKev UTO TOV “Ayata Javpacaytoy pddiaTa kat thy wpakw adtod Kal
THY oTparnyiay exelyny.
XI. Aeysrat b€ THs TOV Newelov Tavyyupens TUVETTOONS oTparnyobvTa TOV Prromoipeva TO devrepov Kal vevixnKora pev ov midat Tv €v Mavtweig pany, TOTE dé oyorny dyovra da
THY EopTny, 7 POTOV pev émrvdelEar TOLS "EAAgoe KexoopNuevny THY dadrayya Kal KLVOUMEDND, Gomep elOtaro, TOUS: TaKTLiKOUS puOpovs peTa taxous Kai pouns: ETrelTa KBappoan arywvitopevov els TO Géarpov mrapenOeiv éxovra TOUS veavioxous ev Tails TTPATLWOTLKALS yAamvor Kal Tots powixois Umodurats, ax walovt ds Te Tots cwpaciy atavtas Kal Tals mrceiaus TAapard-Rous, aida dé TONNHY T pos Tov dpxovra Kal ppovnya veaviKov Umopaivortas é€x TOAAQD Kal Kad@v ayovev: apTt & avuTo@v cio eAmudoray kata TUYnY IluXadny tov KLOap@ddv adovra Tous Tipobéou Ilépoas éevapEacbat
Knewvov érevOepias Tevywv péyav “Endaou

KOO OV’

dpa dé Th Lapmrpory Te THs povis tod mepi Thy moinow dyou TupmpéeavTos emi Breve syevéa Oar TOU Geatpov mavrTaxobev els TOV Prrorroipeva Kat
KpOTOV META YapPas, TOV “EXAnvoY TO Tadatov
1 guveoroons Bekker has éveoréons, after Bryan.

gave his own horse a little swerve to one side, and then, clasping his spear firmly in the middle, pushed it home with all his weight and overturned his enemy.
This is the attitude in which he is represented by a bronze statue set up at Delphi by the Achaeans, who admired especially both his deed of prowess and his generalship on that‘day.

XI. Moreover, we are told that at the celebration of the Nemean games,! when he was general of the Achaeans for the second time and had recently won his victory at Mantineia,? but was at leisure the while on account of the festival, Philopoemen in the first place displayed before the assembled Greeks his phalanx, with its splendid array, and performing its tactical evolutions, as it was wont to do, with speed and vigour. Then, while the minstrels were con- tending for the prize, he came into the theatre with his young men. ‘hey wore their soldiers’ cloaks and their purple tunics, were all in the prime of their strength and of the same age, and showed not only great respect for their commander, but also that high spirit which young men have after many honourable contests. And just as they made their entrance it chanced that Pylades the minstrel was chanting the opening verse of the Persians of Timotheus—

‘‘ Glorious the crown of freedom which he fashioneth for Hellas’”’ ;
whereupon, as the splendid voice of the singer fitly sustained the majesty of the poet’s words, all the spectators turned their eyes upon Philopoemen and gave him glad applause; for in their hopes the

1 In the summer of 205 B.c.
2 In the spring of 206 B.c.
285

i

#

PLUTARCH’’S LIVES

akiwpa tais édmiow avarapBavovtwy Kat Tov TOTE Ppovnpatos eyy.ota TO Oappety yivopevov.'
XII. Tapa 6 tas pdyas Kal rovs xevduvous> @omep ot Tao Tos cuvides ém@iBdtas _To-Godvres, éav GAXov dépwot, mTVpovtar kal Eevo-Twabovow, odtws 7 Svvayis Tav ’Ayaav érépou oTparnyouvTos Ove Kal mpos éxeivoy eraTTaLve Kal povov opOévtos evOvs op0n Kal Spactnptos jv ba 70 Oappeiv, are dn Kai tovs évavTious aicOavopevot mpos Eva TovTOY TAY oTpaTNYaV avTtBr€érrevy ov Suvapévous, ara Kal THY dSofav avTod Kat Tovvopa SedorxoTas, ws Hv pavepov é£
2 av émpacaov. Pidiros pev yap o tov Make-Sdvwv Bacirgevs oidpevos, adv éxtrobwv o Pido-Toluny yévntat, madtv vTomTHkey avT@ TOUS
"Ayarous, éreuev eis “Apyos xpuda tous avaipy-govtas avtov' émruyvwabetons 5é THs éemeuBovdrs Tavratvacw éFeucnOn Kal dceBAHOn mpos ToVvs
3"EXAnvas. Botwrot 5é rodropxodytes Méyapa rat AnWvecOa, tayéws Ermilovtes, eEaigyns RAoyou

TpoameaovTos avtois, ds. ovx Hv adnOns, Dido-moimeva BonOoivta toils TmodtopKoupévors eyyvs
elvat, Tas KAiwaKas adévtes On Wpocepynpec-4 pévas Tois Teiyeow wyovTo pevyovtes. NaPtdos dé tod pera Mayaviday rupavvodvtos -Aaxedatpoviov Meconvny addvw xatadraBovtos, érvyxave pev idi@tyns Ov Tore 0 Diromoipny cai dvvduews ovdeuas Kuptos, émel Sé Tov oTpaTnyoUvTAa TOY 363
"Ayatov Avoitrov ovx érebe Bondeiv tots Mec-
1 ywomevwy Bekker after Coraés: yevouevwr.

Greeks were recovering their ancient dignity, and in their courage they were making the nearest approach to the high spirit of their fathers.
XII. But when it came to perils and battles, just as young horses long for their accustomed riders, and if they have others on their backs, are shy and wild, so the Achaean army, when someone other than Philopoemen was commander-in-chief,! would be out of heart, would keep looking eagerly for him, and if he but came in sight, would at once be alert and efficient because of the courage he inspired. For they perceived that he was the one general whom their enemies were unable to face, and whose name and fame they feared, as was evident from what they did. For Philip the king of Macedon, thinking that if Philopoemen could be got out of the way the Achaeans would again submit abjectly to his sway, secretly sent men to Argos who were to assassinate him; but the plot became known, and Philip was utterly condemned and hated among the Greeks. Again, the Boeotians were besieging Megara and had hopes of its speedy capture, when suddenly a report reached their ears (and it was a false report) that Philopoemen was coming to the aid of the besieged and was close at hand; so they abandoned their scaling-ladders, which were already planted against the walls of the city, and fled away. And once again, when Nabis, who succeeded Machanidas as tyrant of Sparta, suddenly seized Messene, it chanced that Philopoemen was out of office and had no force under his command; but since Lysippus, the commander-in-chief of the Achaeans, could not be persuaded by him to go to the rescue of the

1 As a rule, the same man could not be general of the Achaean league two years in succession, 287 7

a iby)

onvivis, aTOAWAEVAL KouLdy hagKoVTAa THY TOMY

évdov yeyovoroav THY TodEpiwv, autos éBonbeEr \ e A , ’ \ v ‘ ww
TOUS EauTOU TONTAS avadaBwv oUTE VOsoY OUTE YEelpoToviay TeptmeivavTas, GAN ws ba TavTos adpYovTt T@ KpeiTTOVE Kata vow émopévous.
” b] b A , ww b UA e lA non & avtovd wrAnciov évros axovaas o Nafis ovy uméatn, Kaiwep év TH ToL OTPATOTEsEvOD, > pd) e \ A A e , XN , arr viekdus bia TUA@Y ETépwY KaTa TAXOS amnyaye tThv Siva, evTUyia Xpncacba Soxav ei Suadhvyou: Kai duépuye, Meconvn & jrEvepwro.
XIII. Taira pev otv xara 10d Dirorroipevos:
n 8 ets Kpnrny adOus amodnuia Vopruviwy ben-Oévtwyv, WS YpHoalwTO TrodkELoUpEVOL aTpaTNY®, SiaBornv Exyev, STL THS TaTpidos avTov Todepougevns uma Nafidos ami gdvyopayov 7 diroTipovpevos aKaipws Tpos EtTépous. KaiTor
, ey ’ , : a
TUVTOVWS OUTwWS ETrONELNONcaY MeyaroToNiTas
KaTa TOY Xpovoy éexEivoy BaTE TOS ey TELYEoLY évouxely, aometpey Sé€ TOUS GTEvwTrOUS, TEpLKExoppevns! THs Ywpas Kal TOV TOAELioY oXEdOV
év tais wuAats otpatoTredevovtwv. o 5é€ Kpnat TON LOV THYKA’TA Kal oTpaTnywv StaTroVTLos éyxArjpata tTaperye Kab’ EavTov Tots EXOpois ws amrobispdaKwVv TOV oiKOL TOAEMOY. Hoav Oé TLVES oi déyovTes, éTépovs TeV "Axalav npnLévev 5) / dpxovtas, SiaTyv ovta Tov Dirotroipeva yphoat
tiv éavtov axoArnv eh jryewovia SenBeice ois
1 repixexoupevns Coraés and Bekker, with the vulgate: MEpiKEKOMpEVOUS.

PHILOPOEMEN

Messenians, because, as he said, the city was utterly lost now that the enemy were inside, Philopoemen himself went to their rescue, taking with him his fellow-citizens of Megalopolis, who did not wait for any law or commission, but followed the man whom nature had made superior as though he were always . in command. And when Nabis heard that Philo- poemen was already close at hand, he did not wait for him to come up, although he was encamped in the city, but stole out by an opposite gate and led his forces off as fast as he could, thinking that he would be fortunate if he should escape; and he did escape, and Messene was set free.

XIII. All these things, then, made for the honour of Philopoemen; but his going away to Crete again at the request of the Gortynians, who wanted him to be their general in their war, brought calumny upon him, and it was said that when his native city was at war with Nabis, he was away, either to avoid fighting or to show kindness out of all season to others. And yet so continuously were the Megalo- politans under hostile attack all that time that they lived upon their walls and planted their grain in the streets, since their fields were ravaged and the enemy were encamped almost in their gates. Philo- poemen, however, was waging war in Crete all that while, and serving as general across the sea, and so afforded his enemies a chance to accuse him of run- ning away from the war at home. But there were some who said that since the Achaeans chose other men as their generals and Philopoemen was without public office, he merely put the leisure which belonged to him at the service of the Gortynians when they

3 Topruviow. hv yap adXdotptos cxoANs, Kabatep
a \ GAO TL KTHA THY OTpATHYLKNY Kal TrOAEmLKNY
apetny éxev S:a mavros év xpnoe Kai TteLBH
a , Bovropevos, ws cal TQ wept IIroNewatiouv aroté
e 7 a , b) / 27m \
pnGévte Tod Bactréws aredndocev. éxelvoy yap a a XN éyxomtalovTwy Tay was ev pev éEacKovvTa TO otpatevpa Kal" yuépav, ed 5é yuuvdlovTa Kat
A "A ,
diroTovas d1a tov EtrAwWY TO capa, "Kal tis adv," &ébn, "Baciriéa Oavpdceev ev TovT@ Tis NALKias py eTLdELKVUMEVOY, GAA peAETO@VTA;"
4 Xareras & otv ot Meyanroronritar péportes
2 \ Us N U , 9 , él ToUT@ Kal mpobedoa Oat vomilovTes ETE XELPNTAaV atroEevovv autov: oi & 'Ayarol Svex@ducay 'Api-
/ ' / / ,
TTALVOV TELWAVTES ELS MeryaXnp trod oTPATHYOV,
a , ba} , a 4 \ '
ds Kaitrep dv Stdhopos To Dirotroipert trepl THY TodtTEelay, oUK elace TeXcoOHVaAL THY KaTAdiKNDY.
5 é« S€ TovTOV Tapopwpevos TO TOV TOMTOY oO
Diroroiuny awéornoe Todds TaY TreptotKidwy
Kopov, réeyerv SbaEas' ws ob cuveTéXouy OvdE
=} A n~

noav €€ apyns éxeivav, xal \\eyovoais TavTa pavepws cuvnywrvicato Kal cuyxatectaciace THY
, a A “A
Tod ert Tov Ayaiav. Ttadta pev ovv DaTepov.
3 A a
6 ‘Ev 6é rH Kpntn cuverronéuet rois Topruvios, 9 e fo
ovx ws ILeXotrovynotos dvip nal "Apras amdobv TLVa Kal yevvaiov morenov, AAA TO Kpntixov
‘ A HO0s évdus Kad roils exelvwv codicpace kal Soros
/ A KAwWTELALS TE Kal NOXLT MOIS YpwpmEvos err avTOUS 290
PHILOPOEMEN

asked him to be their leader. For he was averse to inactivity, and wished to keep his skill as a commander in war, like any other possession, all the while in use and exercise. And he made this evident by what he once said about King Ptolemy. When certain persons were extolling that monarch because he carefully drilled his army day by day, and carefully and laboriously exercised himself in arms, “ And yet who,” said Philopoemen, “can admire a king of his years for always practising but never performing anything?’

The Megalopolitans, nevertheless, were displeased at this absence, and looking upon it in the light of a betrayal, undertook to make him an exile; but the Achaeans prevented this by sending to Megalopolis Aristaenus, their commander-in-chief, who, although politically at variance with Philopoemen, would not suffer sentence of condemnation to be passed upon him. In consequence of this displeasure, Philopoemen was ignored by his fellow-citizens, and therefore induced many of their outlying villages to secede from them, instructing them to say that they were not tributary to the city and had not originally belonged to it; and when they made this plea, he openly supported them in their contention and helped them to raise a faction against the city in the assembly of the Achaeans. This, however, was at a later time.

In Crete he waged war in the service of the Gortynians ; not the straightforward and honourable warfare of a Peloponnesian and Arcadian, but one in which he adopted the Cretan practices, and turning their tricks and wiles and stolen marches and am- buscades against themselves, speedily showed them

291
u 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tayxv waidas amédecEev avonta Kal Keva mpos éuretpiay ddnOuviny tavoupyobvtas.
XIV. 'Eml rovtos 8 Oavpacbeis nat Aapmpos
mapa tov éxei mpakewv avaxomicbels ets IleXo-movynaov evpe Tov pev Pirstrov UTO Tov Titov KaTamTeTroNeunpevoy, tov o€ NaBw tro Tev
"Ayaov Kai tov "Pwpaiwy roreuovpevov. é¢' dy evOvs aipebels apxywv Kai vavpayia tapaBa-Aopevos TO TOD Errapewavdou wabeiv édoke, OAD
THs wept avtov apeths Kal do€ns ev rH Oaradoon KaKLov aywvicdpevos. tmAnV Emapewovdav pmév éviot A€youolv GxvodVTA yedoaL TOY KaTa Odrac-cav wperer@v Tovs ToAditas, Twas avTo py AaOwotv avTi povipwyv omrALTaV, KaTa T]AdTova, vadrar yevopevor nat d:apOapévtes, Ampaxtov ex Ths "Actas xal trav vnowy amedOely Exovciws:
Pirorroipyny b€ tHv év rois melois émiotHpny Kat
Sia Oaratryns aprécey ad'T@ Wpos TO KAS
aywvicac0a, memecpevos, eyva THY aoKnoL, HALKOD pépOS éoTL THS apeTns Kal moony emt mavTa Tos eOccbeict Svvapv tpoctibnow. ov yap povov év tH vavpayia bd. THY arreiptay éXatrov écyev, GAG Kal vadv Twa, Tadatay peév, EvdoEov Oé, b¢ érav Teccapdxovta Kataomdoas éwAnpwoev, WoTE pn TTEyovCNS KiVdUveDoal TOUS TEOVTAS.
ad

1 In the battle of Cynoscephalae, 197 B.c. See the Flamininus, xiii.
292

364

PHILOPOEMEN

that they were children opposing foolish and vain mischievousness to genuine military experience. XIV. Having thus won admiration, and having come back to Peloponnesus with a brilliant re- putation from his exploits in Crete, he found that Philip had been defeated and subdued by Titus Flamininus,! and that the Achaeans and the Romans were waging war upon Nabis. He was at once chosen general against Nabis, and by hazarding the issue on a naval battle would seem to have fared as Epaminondas once did, since he fought on the sea in a manner which fell far short of his great reputation. Epaminondas, however, as some say, was reluctant to give his fellow-citizens a taste of the advantages accruing from naval superiority, in order that they might not surprise him by becoming, instead of " steadfast hoplites," to use Plato's words,? degenerate mariners; and therefore he purposely came back from Asia and the islands without achieving any- thing. Philopoemen, on the other hand, was per- suaded that his skill in handling land forces would suffice to give him success in fighting also on the sea, and theretore learned to his cost how large a part of superior excellence consists in practice, and how much additional power it gives to men who have accustomed themselves to all methods of fighting. For not only was he worsted in the sea-fight, owing to his lack of experience, but he actually launched an old but famous ship after forty years of disuse, and manned her, the result being that her seams took in water and her crew came into peril of their lives. 2 Laws, iv. p. 706. Cf. the Themistocles, iv. 3.

3 In 364 B.c., two years before his death, Epaminondas successfully inaugurated a naval policy for Thebes, which enabled her to cope with Athens on the sea. fo "gill

J

IIpos tadta yiwweoKkwv xatadpovovvtas avtov
/ a
TOUS TrOAELLOUS WS TaVTaTrTagL TepEVyOTOS EK THS Oaratrns, Kab todtopxotvtas wrepnpdvws TO Tvdov, evOvs émémrevoev avtots ov mpocdoxaawy,
b b b / \ \ , \ N
GX' éxrerdupevois Sta THY ViKNY. Kat vuUKTOS 4 éxBiBaoas Tovs oTpaTiwtas Kal Tpocayayor, Top évike Tails oxnvais Kal TO oTpaTOTEdoV KaTé-Kavoe Kai TroAAous béPOetpev. oriyats 8 daTEpov
/ "A nuépars Kal? odov év dvaxywpias tTiciv advo Tod NaBidos éridbavévtos adt@ cal doByaavros Tovs
"Ayatovs avéXmiatoy Hyoupevovs THY cwTNpiav
éx TOT@V YaXreETOV Kai yeyovoTwY UTOXELpioV Tots TOAEpLOLS, GALYOV Kpovoy emiaTAaS Kai TeEpt-AaBav Set THY TOD yYwpiov duvow érédecEe THY \ aA A fo]

TAKTLKNY TOV AKPWV TIS TroAEMLKTS TEXVYNY OlcaY
\ aA
oUTM LiKpa KLWnoas THY éavTOD dddayya Kal WpOs Ta Trapovta peOappocas dbopvBws Kal padiws
\ , \ a Siexpovoato tHv adtropiav, Kai mpocBadwv Tots

,

Tonepios TpoTHY laxXupay erroincev. émrel O€ OV
\ \ , e7 4 > \ A 4
Mpos THV ToALY ewpa hevyovTas, adhrAa@ THS Ywpas GXXov GAN Stactrecpopevov (VAwWSyS Sé Kai TreEpt-
a ‘4
Bovvos tv maca Kat dvourmos bo petOpwv Kai dhapayyov), Thy pev Siw éméoyxe Kal KaTeoTpa-TomTédevcev ETL HwTos GyTOs' TEexpatpomevos dé
, A an b]
TOUS TroAemious ex THS Pvy7js Kal eva xa dvo
\ \ / e , / 3 / A
pos THY Tod UITakey oKOTAaLOUS, EhNOYICEL TOLS
N \ ww e / \ 4 \ 4
mept TO dot petOpors Kal NOpots TOANOUS EXOVTAS éyyerpiiva Tav Ayaiov. évtavda TrEtoTOUS aTroa / “A wn , 7 \ b]
Oaveity cuve8n tav tov NaBidos: ate yap ovK 294

PHILOPOEMEN

Understanding that in consequence of this disaster his enemies despised him, thinking that he had altogether given up activity on the sea, and that they were insolently besieging Gythium, he promptly sailed against them when they did not expect it and were careless because of their victory. He landed his soldiers by night and led them to the attack, set fire to the enemy's tents, burned down his camp, and slew many of his men. A few days afterward, as he was marching through a rough country, Nabis came suddenly upon him and threw the Achaeans into a fright; they despaired of saving themselves from a position which was difficult and already commanded by the enemy. But Philopoemen waited a little while, surveyed the nature of the ground, and then demonstrated that skill in drawing up an army is the crowning feature in the art of war. For by changing his order of battle a little and adapting it to the present exigency, with no confusion and no trouble he evaded the difficulty, and charging upon the enemy put them to utter rout. Then, observing that they were not fleeing towards the city, but scattering themselves hither and thither through the region (which was woody, entirely surrounded by hills, and impracticable for cavalry owing to water- courses and ravines), he checked his pursuit and encamped while it was still light. But judging that the enemy after their flight would steal back to the city by ones and twos under cover of the night, he placed large numbers of his Achaeans armed with swords in ambush among the water-courses and hills about the city. Here very many of the followers of Nabis met their death; for since they did not make

9 4 4 A > , 3 9 e e Lf aOpoav TroLotpevor THY avaYwpnolV, GAN ws éxd-aTois at guyal cuvervyxavoyv, @aoTep dpyiles
e , \ \ U b] A " 'A NMOKOVTO TEPL THY TOALY ELS TAS THY TOAELLOV yelpas KaTAIpoVTES.
b \ 4 ? a \ ?
XV. 'Emi rovtos -ayar@pmevos Kal TL@pEvos
9 " e \ aA e , 9 a" A extrpeT@s vireo Tov EdXAnvav év trois Oeatpots diroTimov dvta tov Titov novyn mwapervTes. Kal
. \ e € , e J ' + 4 2g?
yap @s "Pwpaiwy dratos avdpos 'Apxados nétou OavyatlecOat warXov vrd tav 'Ayaldv, Kal Tais evepyetiass UmrepBddXELy OV Tapa puKpOY TyEtTO, bv évds xnpvypatos édevPepwcas thy "EXAdOa, bon Pirira@ cai Maxedoow edovrevcev.
9 A , 4 A e , "A

Ex 6€ rovrov xatadverat pev o Titos Te
NdB.6s tov roAenov, arroOvnaKes dé 0 NaBus oro
Aitwrav_ Sorogovnbeis. tetapayuévns S€ Tis Lmaptns 0 Pirorroipny apracas Tov Kaipov ért-mimtet eta Suvdpews, Kal TOV Lev AKOVTWY, TOUS 5é cuumeloas mpoonydyeTo Kal peTexopicey eis tous 'Ayatovs THY TrOALY. Ov yevouévov OavpaoT@s pev evdoxipnoe Tapa Tois 'Ayatois, Tpoc-KTnoauLEvos avTois akiwpa Trordews THALKAUTNS
\ 4 9 \ \ ? lA
cat dvvapiv (ob yap Hv pixpov 'Ayaias pépos yeveoOat tHv Lardprny), avédaBe bé nal Aaxedat-/ A > 7s , a b] , poviwy Tovs apiotous, gduvrXaxa THs éNEevHEpias
éxetvov éAmiaavtas é€ev. 810 Kai thy NaBedos
oixiay Kal ovciav éEapyupicbeioay Kal yevouévny

1 Cf. the Flamininus, chapter x.
2 Cf. the Flamininus, ix. 5.

. their return in a body, but as the chances of flight disposed them severally, they fell into the hands of their enemies and were caught like birds about the city.

XV. In consequence of this exploit Philopoemen was beloved by the Greeks and _ conspicuously honoured by them in their theatres, thus giving secret umbrage to Titus Flamininus, who was an ambitious man. For as Roman consul he thought himself more worthy of the Achaeans' admiration than a man of Arcadia, and he considered that his benefactions far exceeded those of Philopoemen, since by a single proclamation he had set free all those parts of Greece which had been subject to Philip and the Macedonians.!

After this Flamininus made peace with Nabis,? and Nabis was treacherously put to death by the Aetolians.? Sparta was therefore in a state of confusion, and Philopoemen, seizing his opportunity, fell upon the city with an armed force, and partly by compulsion, partly by persuasion, brought it over to his purposes and made it a member of the Achaean league. This achievement brought him an amazing repute among the Achaeans, since through his efforts they had acquired a city of so great dignity and power (and indeed it was no slight matter that Sparta had become a member of the Achaean league); moreover, Philopoemen carried with him the principal men among the Spartans, who hoped to have in him a guardian of their liberties. Therefore, after they had confiscated the house and property of Nabis and obtained thereby a 3 In 192 3.c, Nabis had called in the Aetolians to help him against the Achaeans and Romans (Livy, xxxv. 35-37).

lé
elxoot Kal éxaTov TardvTwy endicavTo Swpeay avt@ Sodvat, tpeaBeiav Urép TovTwY TéuavTes.

” A \ Ul A 9 “A e x9 AN >
évba 8 nai diepdvn xabapads éxeivos o avnp ov Sox@Y povov, GAAa Kal Mv aptoTos. MmpeToV pev yap ovdels éBovreTO THY Uraptiatay avdpl ros-4 ovTw Staréyer Oat rept Swpodoxias, addra SedotKo-\ 93 4 A N , b] “
Tes Kal avadvopevot TpoeBaXovTo Tov Eévoy avTov
e
Tiporaov. émevta 5é avtos o Tiporaos, ws AOE eis Meyadnv trod, éotiabeis mapa t@ PiroTroi-
A e A
eve Kal THY cEem“VvoTHTAa THs o-trias adtod Kai \ 9 , a Py / \ \ ¢ b , Thy adérerav THs Staitns Kat to HO0s eyyvOev b A \ b] \ 3 7 e \ 4
ovdapyn Tpoottov ovdé EvddAwTOV bTd YpNnUAdTOV KaTavonoas, amectwmnae Trept Ths Swpeas, éTépay
dé twa wpopaciw Tis mpos avTov ob00 Totnoa-HEevos @yYETO dmiwv. Kal mddw é« Sevrépov Tweuplers tavtov émabe. tpitn b€ 060 porss
> \ 3 V4 \ 4 a 4 e
évruxayv édnAwoe THY Tpodvmiay THS TOAEWS. 0
\
Sé DiroToipnv 7déws axovoas Kev avTos ets zs a \ Aaxedaipova, cat auveBotrNevcey avTois pn TOUS
/ \ 9 ‘\ 4 ® A na
ghirous al ayabovs Sexdlew, ov mpoika THs
b] n ” bJ 4 b] N \ N apetns e£eoTLv amrodNavelty, GXXA TOUS TrOVNpOUS
4 a
Kal THY Tod év TO cvvEdpio KaTacTacidlovTas
avetobat cal dapdeipev, iva TO NaBely eriato-
/ a a pucbevtes Arrov évoydotev avtois’ BéATLov yap J a le) A
elvar Tav éxOpav TapatpetcOar tiv Trappnoiav
1 See the Aristides, iii. 4.

PHILOPOEMEN

hundred and twenty talents, they voted to make a present of the money to Philopoemen, and to send an embassy to Megalopolis on the matter. Here, indeed, it became perfectly clear that Philopoemen not only seemed to be, but actually was, a most excellent man.) For, to begin with, no Spartan was willing to confer with a man of his character about the acceptance of a gift, but they were all so reluc- tant and afraid to do it that they entrusted the business to a guest-friend of his, Timolaiis. And in the second place, Timolaiis himself, when he came to Megalopolis, having been entertained at the house of Philopoemen, and having learned thoroughly how dignified he was in his converse with others, how simple his ways of living, and how his character was nowhere to be approached and much less easy to be overcome by bribes, held his peace about the gift of money, and after giving some other excuse for his visit to him, went back home. And when he was sent a second time on the same errand, he did as before. On his third visit, however, he at last got so far as to acquaint Philopoemen with the earnest desire of his city. Then Philopoemen, who was pleased by what he heard, went in person to Sparta, and counselled the people there not to try to bribe good men who were their friends, and by whose virtues they could profit without payment of money, but rather to buy up and corrupt the bad men who were ruining the city by their factious conduct in the assembly, to the end that such might have their mouths stopped in consequence of their venality, and so be less annoying to their fellow- citizens; for it was better, he said, to take away freedom of speech from their enemies rather than

h Tov dhirov. otTws pev Hv mpdos ypnpata Nam pos.
XVI. 'Ewei 6€ wadwv tovs Aaxedatpovious
e aA 3 A
vewrepifery axovaas 0 otpatnyos Tav 'Ayaov
Atohavns éBovreTo Koralerv, ot Sé€ eis ToAEMOV Ka@iotapevor Stetdpaccov tv TleXorrovvncor, émepato mpavvey Kal KataTvavey tov Awodavy
a) a € _ 4 , A '
Ths opyns 0 Pidrotroipny, SidacKnwv Tov Katpov, e ? 4 " / ve a > a ws 'Avtioyou tod Bactiéws cai "Pwpaiwr ev rH ¢ , , 2 , , FAAS THALKOUTOLS Aiwpoupevwy aTpaTorébots
a \ exelae Ypn TOV ApyovTa THY yvouny exe, Ta SE n A A A Oikela 2) KLVvElv, AAG Kal Trap.oety TL Kal Tapa-KovcaL TOY auaptavopévwv. ov mpocéxovTos bé tod Atopavous, adr' eis tHv Aakourny éuBa-
a 4
AovTos dua TO Titm nal Babslovrwy evObs eri
e ,
THY TOA, ayavaKtncas 0 Piroroipny, Epyov ov
, 909 9 / 3 A / >] \
voptpmoy, ovd amrnkptBwpévoy ex TOV StKaiwVv, adrAa

péya Kal peyad@ hpovnpats ToAunoas, Ets THY AaxeSaipova mrapnrOe Kai Tov Te oTpaTHYyOY TOV
a A € ,
"Ayatav cal tov drarov tov Pwpaiwv idtorns av amréxrece, Tas 8 év 1H Tore Tapayas ETavae
,
Kat Kateotynoe Tous Aaxedatpoviovs TadLy els TO Kowvov, aaTrep €& apyAs Haav.
Xpove bé vatepov éyxaréoas tt tots Aaxedar, nn A A
poviows otpatnyav o PiroToiuny tas pev huyas KaThnyayev eis THV TOALY, Gydonkovta b€ Yrap-
4 > 4 e 4 4 e .
Tidtas amextevev, ws IlorvBios dyno, ws dé
1 Philopoemen was for the sixth time general in 188 B.c.

from their friends. Such was his splendid spirit in matters of money.

XVI. Soon, however, Diophanes, the general of the Achaean league, hearing that the Lacedaemonians were once more agitating for a change, determined to punish them, and the Lacedaemonians, determining upon war, were throwing the Peloponnesus into confusion. Here Philopoemen tried to mollify Diophanes and put a stop to his wrath, showing him what the occasion demanded, and that since King Antiochus and the Romans were hovering about in Greece with armies so great, it behoved the general of, the league to pay attention to them, and not to stir up domestic troubles, but even to be somewhat oblivious to the transgressions of his colleagues. Diophanes, however, paid no heed to this advice, but invaded Laconia along with Titus Flamininus, and marched directly upon the city of Sparta. Incensed at this, Philopoemen ventured upon an act which was not lawful, nor even exactly just, but great and prompted by a great spirit. He went on past them into Sparta, and, private man though he was, shut out therefrom both the general of the Achaean league and the Roman consul, put an end to the disorders in the city, and brought the Lacedaemonians back again into the league, as they were at the outset.

At a later time, however, when he had some ground for accusation against the Lacedaemonians, as general of the league! Philopoemen brought back its exiles to the city, and put to death eighty Spartans, according to Polybius,® or according to 2 In a passage not extant. Livy gives the same number (xxxvili. 33).

4 "Aptotoxpdtns, wevTyKovTa Kal Tpiaxocious. Ta
‘ , a , \ \ b /
bé Tetyn Kadeire, Ywpay Sé TOAAHY aTrOTEMOMEVOS
, ra , ad y @
mpoceverme tots MeyanrotroAitas, door Sé jHoav UNO TOV TUpavvwy aTrodederypmévoe TONITAL THIS
, / @ > , > 9
Lraprns, petw@reter dmavras amaywv eis Axalav
TANY TpLaXLALwY: TovTOUs 5€ aTreOovvTas Kal pH BovAopévous amenOeiy éx tis Aaxedatpovos éraef? > ‘4 9 XN a ,
Anoev, 10 olov ehuBpilwy amo TaV xpnLaTwr
4 ? / 4 \ > ‘4
touTwy év MeyddAn modes otody wKodouncen.
3 , \ aA , \ 9
5 éumumrauevos 5€ tav Aaxedatpoviwy xai Tap afiav rerpayoow énmeuBaivwy, To T*ept THY TOAL-Telav épyov @potaroy éFeipydcato Kai Trapavope-
> N ‘N 4 \ tf
Tatov. «aveire yap nat diépOetpe tHv Avxovpyetov aywynv, avayKxdaas Tovs Traidas avTa@v Kal Tous ay 7 13 oN > Via , ,
épnBous thy Ayaixny ayti ths watpiov madeiay petaBanrelv, ws ovdémote pixpov év Tots Auxavpyou vopots Ppovnoovtas.
, \ 2 €.. XN a , ee
6 Tore pév ovv bd cupdopay peyddov woTeEp
veipa THY TroAEwS ExTEepely TH PiroToipevt TapaoVXOVTES, eyévovTo YetponBets Kal TamrELvol, Ypove
S vatepov aitnodpevor wapa ‘Pwpaiwy thy pev
"Ayainny Epvyov modtteiav, avéraBov b€ Kat KATECTHOAVTO THY TATPLOV, WS HY avuaTOY éx xkaxaov Kat POopas TyrtKaUTHS.
XVII. ’Enrei 5é ‘Pwpaiors 6 pos Avtioyoy ev 366

a ¢
TH Edad: cuvéotn mrodemos, Hv pev tdtwTNS Oo
Dirorroiunv, opav S€ tov "Avrioyov avtov épv Xarxids xaOnyevov tepl ydyouvs Kal tapbévev
1 In 184 B.c. (Livy, xxxix. 34).

Aristocrates, three hundred and fifty. He also tore down the walls of the city, and cutting off a large part of its territory, annexed it to Megalopolis ; moreover, in the case of those who had been made citizens of Sparta by the tyrants, he removed them all into Achaia, with the exception of three thousand who would not obey him and were unwilling to go away from Sparta. These he sold into slavery, and then, as if in mockery of their fate, erected a portico in Megalopolis with the money which they brought. And now, glutting his anger at the Lacedaemonians and unworthily trampling upon them in their misery, he treated their constitution in the most cruel and most lawless fashion. For he took away and abolished the system of training which Lycurgus had instituted, and compelled their boys and their young men to adopt the Achaean in place of their hereditary discipline, being convinced that while they were under the laws of Lycurgus they would never be humble.

For the time being, then, owing to their great calamities, the Spartans suffered Philopoemen to cut away, as it were, the sinews of their city, and became tractable and submissive; but a while afterwards,! having obtained permission from the Romans, they abandoned the Achaean polity, and resumed and re-established that which had come down from their fathers, so far as was possible after their many misfortunes and great degeneration.

XVII. When the Romans went to war with Antiochus in Greece,? Philopoemen was without command, and seeing that Antiochus himself was sitting idly down in Chalcis and spending his time
* In 191 B.c. Cf, the Flamininus, xv.

to

Epwtas ov Kal’ dpav cxordlovta, Tous 5é Yupous
év atakia moAdH Kat xwpls nyepovov év tais
/ , \ A wv \
modeot TAALOmEevous Kal Tpudavras, XGeTo py
oTpatnyav ToTe Tov Ayaiay, cai “Pwpaioes érexye hOovety tHS vixts. ‘“"Eyo yap av,” épn, “ otpa-Tny@v €v Tols KamrNnAEiols KaTéxoYa ToOvTOUS
/ a qTavtas. émel O€ vixnoavtes ot “Pwpatoe rov
a ¢ A “A
"Avrioxov évepvovto Tois EAXnviKots waddov 76n, \ / vol Ps) , \ ? ‘
Kat tepieBurXrovTo 7H Suvawer Ttovs ‘Ayatovs UToKaTAKALVOpEéVOV avTots TOY Snuaywyav, 7 S
iaxus ért mdvta ToAAN peta Tod daipovos éyapet, Kal TO TEAOS eyyus WY ets O THY TUynY EdeL Trept-Ul 3 / , bd \ ,
dhepopevny eEixécOat, cabamep ayabos KuBepyntns
a \ mpos Kdua dieperdopevos 0 PiArotroipny ta pev
, wn nA
évd.dovat Kal Trapetxery nvayKateTo Tots KaLpois, \ \ n 4, f \ a ,
mept 6€ TOV TAELaTOY SLahEepopmeEvos TOUS TW NEyeLY
Kal WpatTew ioxXvovtas dvTioTay éTEeypato WpOS Thy édevOepian.
"Aptataivou 6é Tov MeyaXoTroAitov duvapévou
a ? a ¢€ pep ev tots Ayatois péytotov, tous 5é Pwpaious del Oepatrevovtos Kai tos "Axyaiovs pn olopévov dety évavtiovabar pndé dyapiateiv éxeivous, év
a 4 \ A T@ guvedpiw Aéyetar tov Diroroipyeva oiwtrav
b] / \ / , , \ e 9 9 A axovovta Kat Bapéws péperv, tédos Sé br” dpyis dugavacyxetobyvta mpos tov "Apiotavoy ei7rety: TRA 6) ¥ Q / 16 A , a av@pwre, TL oTrevders THY TrETpHLeVNY THS
e “A aA
EXAdbos emdeiv;” Maviou dé 100 ‘Pwpaiwy trd-
U

Tov vevikneotos pev ‘Aytioyov, aitoupévou Sé 304

in a courtship and marriage which were not suited to his years,! while his Syrian troops, in great disorder and without leaders, were wandering about among the cities and living luxuriously, he was distressed because he was not general of the Achaeans at that time, and kept saying that he begrudged the Romans their victory. “For if I had been general,” he said, “I would have cut off all these fellows in their taverns.” But soon the Romans, after conquering Antiochus, applied themselves more closely to the affairs of Greece. They encompassed the Aqhaean league with their power, since the popular leaders gradually inclined to their support; their strength, under the guidance of the heavenly powers, grew great in all directions; and the consummation was near to which the fortunes of Greece must come in their allotted revolution. Here Philopoemen, like a good helmsman contending against a high sea, was in some points compelled to give in and yield to the times; but in most he continued his opposition, and tried to draw to the support of freedom the men who were powerful in speech or action.

Aristaenus the Megalopolitan 2 was a man of the greatest influence among the Achaeans, but he always paid court to the Romans and thought that the Achaeans ought not to oppose or displease them in any way. As this man was once speaking in the assembly, we are told that Philopoemen listened to him a while in silent indignation, but at last, over- come by anger, said to him: “My man, why art thou eager to behold the fated end of Greece?”’ Again, Manius, the Roman consul, after his victory

1 Cf. the Flamininus, xvi. i. 2 Cf. chapter xiii. 4.

-

\ la) b] ”~ 4 > 7 A } Tapa tov Axaltov ows éagwot tous Aaxkedat-
, UA A N 4 b] \ “A

povioy guydbas xatedOetv, cai Titov tavTo Te Mavi rept trav duyddwv afvodvtos, dvex@Xvo ev
0 Dirotoipny ov tois pvyaot ToAcuav, adda
, 9 e “ Q fa) 9 A 9 QA A
Bovropevos bs’ avtod Kai trav ‘Ayaiav, adda py
Titov wndé ‘Pwpaiwy yapite todTo mpayOjvar:
Kal oTpaTnyay eis TOUTLOY AUTOS KaTHYayE TOUS
ghuydbas. obtws elyé te mpos Tas éEovcias wre dpovnparos Svcept Kal pudovercov.
XVIII. "H8y 5é yeyovas eros éBoounnoarov, BySoov 6é Tov Axatay orparnyar, nrmilev ov povoy éxetyyv THY apynv atrodépes Sidkew, adrAa xal tov Biov To NouTOY avT@ ped’ Hovyias KaTa-Bidvat Ta Tpaypata Tapé-ew. ws yap ai vooot
Tais TOV cMOpLaTMOY Pomals oVVATOMapaiverBaL Soxodat, odtws év tais “EXAnviKais ToAEow Errt-NeLTOVaNS THS Suvdpuews EAXNYE TO HiAOVELKOY. Ov
\ b] \ / 4 Lf > A) > pny adr\9a Népecis tis womep AOAnTHV evdpo-pobyTa Tpos Tépuact Tov Biov KaTéBare. éyerat yap é& Tit cvAAOY TOY TapOYTHY ErralvoUYTaY
dvipa Sevov eivat Soxodvta wept otpatnyiav
b] ” \ @D / ce A “A wv 3 4
eiwety Tov Pirorroipeva, “ Kai was aktov éxetvou Noryov Eyew TOV avdpos, doTis HAw Cov bro TaV
, ” > e Ff \ 34 / 4
Toneuiwv; uel nuépas b€ orLyas Aewvoxpatns
e / ¥ 29N/ a 4
0 Meoonvios, avOpwros idta te TO PiroTroipert TpooKkexpouKws Kal Tois Addo errayOns ba 4 4 9 , / 4, 9 [4
jovnpiav Kat axoraciav, thv te Meconvny arré-
od

1 Cf. chapter xiii. 3.

over Antiochus, asked the Achaeans to permit the exiles from Sparta to go back home, and Titus Flamininus joined Manius in making this request. But Philopoemen successfully opposed the request, not out of hostility to the exiles, but from a desire that they should owe this favour to himself and the Achaeans, and not to Flamininus and the Romans;

indeed, as general for the following year he restored the exiles to their city.1 To such a degree did his lofty spirit lead him to strive and contend against men in power.

XVIII. But being now seventy years of age, and for the eighth time general of the Achaeans,? he hoped not only to pass that year of office without war, but also that affairs would permit him to spend the rest of his life in peace and quiet. For as our diseases seem to lose their virulence as our bodily strength declines, so among the Greek cities the spirit of contention lapsed as their power waned. Nevertheless, some divine displeasure threw him down, like an all but victorious runner, at the very goal of his life. For it is recorded that at some conference, when others present were lavishing praise upon one who was reputed to be a redoubtable general, Philopoemen contemptuously said: “ Yet why should any account be made of this man, who has been taken alive by his enemies?’ And a few days afterwards Deinocrates the Messenian, a man who had a private quarrel with Philopoemen?® and was obnoxious to everybody else because of his baseness and unbridled life, induced Messene to

2 In 182 p.c. Plutarch passes over the years 187-183, during which the Achaean league and Philopoemen came increasingly into collision with the Roman power.

3 Cf. the Flamininas, xvii. 3. '

oTnoe Tov AxYatov, Kal Kony THY KaNoupevny Kodovida mpoonyyérXOn pédAXwv catradrapBaverv.
e \ li 4 \ > wW lA
o 6€ Didotoiuny Ervye pev ev” Apyet rrupécowr,
‘ \ “ 4 ’ 4 Ul
mu0omevos € TavTa cuvetetvev cis MeyaXnv Troduy Huepa pid otadiovs MrElovas 7) TeTPAaKOTioUs.
b a ? \ ? 4 A e a > id
kaKketOey evOus éBonber tovs immeis avartaBov,
¢/ @ b) / \ “ A“ / \ oimrep Hoav évookotato: péev TOV ToALT@D, véok Se (ol >] v “ S, PY A xopidn, dt evvocav tov Pirotroipevos cat Cirov €PeXovtai avaTpatevovtes. immacupevor 5€é Tpos \ , ‘ \ ‘ os f
tThv Meoonvnvy xai mepi tov Evavdpov dodov atravravrTe T@ Aewwoxpate: cuptrecovTes exetvov bev éTpéeivavTo, Tav Sé TevTAKOciW»Y, of THY Yopav
tov Mecaonriwy tapepvrarrop, cEaiguns émripepo-

HévOV Kal TOY TWPOTEPOY ATTHUEvOV, WS TOUTOUS Kateioov, avlis ava tovs Aogovs AOpolopévwr, deicas 6 Diroroiuny cverwOjvac kai tev imTéwv perdopevos aveywpe ia TOTMY YareT@V, avTOS
b] a \ / b] , n
ovpayov Kai ToAAaKLs avTe~eXaUYwY TOs TOXEplots Kat Sdrws emict@pevos é€h EauTOoY, ov
, b] a > , bd “A TOApL@VTOY avTEe“Barely exEeivwV, AAAA Kpavyais Kat Tepiopopats Ypwpevav arolev. adiatdpevos oby ToAAdKIS 61a TOUS veavioxous Kal Kal” &va UA ” 3 al b 4
mTaparéuTwv édAabev év Tokhots arropovwbels Torepiors. Kal cuvdryrar pev eis xeipas ovdels éroApnoev aur, TmroppwGev dé Badr opevos Kat Brafopevos tpos ywpia wetpwdyn nal Tapaxpnpva Xarer ds perexerpifero cal xarefawve Tov (irtov.
avt@ dé To pep Yhpas UT aoKHaEWs TONS €Xadpov Av «al mpos ovdévy éuroduov eis TO 308

36%

PHILOPOEMEN

- revolt from the Achaean league, and was reported about to seize the village called Colonis. Philopoemen at the time lay sick of a fever at Argos, but on learning these facts, he hastened to Megalopolis in a single day, a journey of more than four hundred furlongs. From there he at once set out for the rescue, taking with him the horsemen. These were the city’s most prominent men, but altogether young, and serving as volunteers under Philopoemen out of good will and admiration for him. They rode off towards Messene and encountered Deinocrates, who came to meet them at Evander’s hill. Him they put to flight; but the five hundred men who were guarding the open country of Messene suddenly attacked them, and when those who had before been worsted saw this, they collected together along the hills. Then Philopoemen, fearing that he would be enveloped, and trying to spare his horsemen, withdrew over difficult ground, bringing up the rear himself and frequently riding out against the enemy, and trying to draw their attacks entirely upon him- self. They did not venture, however, to return his attacks, but merely shouted and threatened his flanks. Withdrawing from the line frequently, then, to spare his young men, and sending them one by one into safety, before he was aware of it he was left alone among numerous enemies. Even then no one ventured to come to close quarters with him, but he was pelted with missiles from a distance and forced upon rocky and precipitous places, so that he had difficulty in managing his horse and kept tearing him with the spur. His age, owing to his generous exercise, was not burdensome, and in no way impeded his escape; but at that time his bod

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

cwOivat, tote b€ Kal dia THY appwartiav Tod TWMATOS évdeods YEYOVOTOS kat da THY odotToplay KaTaKxorou, Bapuv évtTa Kat duvaKxivntov dn opaneis 0 tam os els THY viv xatéBane. oxANpov 6é TOD TT {LAT OS YEvopevov Kal TIS xeparijs
madovons & EXELTO TOLD Xpovov dvav60os, & MOTE KAL TOUS Toe pLous TeOvdvat Sofavras aurov emixet-pei aoTpepely TO Tapa Kal oxvreverv. érret 5é THY Kepariy émdpas dréBrewer, GO poor TeplTre-OOVTES amea Tpepov auto Tas yelpas omiow Kal djoavtes Hyov, UBpe Xpwpevor TOXAT Kal Aotbopia xat avdpos ovdé dvap av tote tradeiv bro Aewvoxpatous Tatra poo SoxynaarTos.
XIX. Ot & €v rH rode TH pev aryyedia GavpaoTOS émapOevtes nOpoitovro Tept Tas TUAaS: ws 5é eidov Eh comevov TOV Diromoipeva Tap afiav THs te SoEns Kal TOY éumpocbev Epywv Kai Tpo-mato, nrenoav ol rela ToL Kal ouvnrynoav, date Kab Saxpioar KaL THY avOpamivny expdav-pioar Suvapuy WS dma Tov Kal TO pndev ovaav.
obtw b€ Kata px pov Ets Toddous pirdvOpwrros
exwper Aoyos as pvnpovevtéov ely TeV 1 poa ev EVE Yer Loy, Kal THS ehevOepias iy atrédwxev avrois Naw éfeAXuaas Tov TUpavvor. GAiryor 5€
hoav of TO Acwoxparer Xapelopevor otpeBrobv TOV avpa ‘Kal xreivew exe€hevov ws Bapuv trode-pov Kat dvopeidtxtov, avT@ Te Aetvoxparec goBepwrepov « Staduyot xaduSpicpévos ba’
QUTOU Kal yeyovas alxypddwTos. ov pny dda
KopioavTes aUTOV Els TOV KaAOUpLEVOY Anaaupon, olxnua KaTtayelor ote Tvetua AapBavoy ovTE pas €Ewlev ove Oupas Exov, drAAa peydrw ALGw 310
PHILOPOEMEN

was enfeebled by sickness and worn out with a long journey, so that he was heavy and stiff,
and at length his horse stumbled and_ threw him to the ground. His fall was a heavy one and his head was hurt, and he lay for a long time speechless, so that his enemies thought him dead and tried to turn his body over and strip it of its armour. But when he raised his head and opened his eyes, they threw themselves in a throng upon him, tied his hands behind his back, and led him away, treating with great insolence and contumely aman who could never have even dreamed that he would suffer such a fate at the hands of Deinocrates. XIX. The people of Messene, wonderfully elated at the news, gathered in throngs at the gates. But when they saw Philopoemen dragged along in a manner unworthy of his fame and of his former exploits and trophies, most of them were struck with pity and felt sympathy for him, so that they actually shed tears and spoke with bitterness of the inconstancy and vanity of human greatness. And so, little by little, many were led to say humanely that they ought to remember his former benefactions, and especially how he had restored to them their freedom by expelling the tyrant Nabis. But there were a few who, to gratify Deinocrates, urged that the captive should be tortured and put to death as a stern and implacable enemy, and one more than ever to be feared by Deinocrates himself in case he made his escape after having been taken prisoner and loaded with insults by him. However, they carried Philopoemen into the Thesaurus, as it was called, a subterranean chamber which admitted neither air nor light from outside and had no door, 311

Teplayouev@ KaTaxAEopevor, évtav0a xaTéBevto,
‘ , 3 4, ww > 2
kal tov diOov émippakavtes avdpas évomAous

KUKA@ TEpléa THaaD.

Oi & immeis trav “Axatav éx tis puyfs avada-

, e 4 e > “ \ @ e
Bovres avtovs, a> ovdapod davepos tv o Pido-
/ 9 >» 2907 4 ‘ A ,
Toiunv, GAN edoKxet TeOvavat, TOAUY peEV YpovoV
éméaTnoay dvaxadovpevot Tov avdpa Kai doves
> 4 U e >? \ , \ ws
GAANAOLS AOYOY WS alaxYpay cwrnpiay Kai adexov

cwlovTar Tpoéuevor Tots TrOAELLOLS TOV OTPATNYOY apednoavra tov Civ dv avtouvs, Emerta mpotovTes dua Kal Tov paypovobvres emvOovto THY cVAAN-wiv avtod Kai SunyyeAdov eis Tas ToS TOY
"A a ¢ Se \ , /
Vatov. ot 0€ ouuhopay Trocoupevor peyadnv
atraiteiy pev éyvwoav tov avopa Tapa Tav Meconviwy mpecReiav wéurpavtes, avtot S€ Trape-oxevalovTo oTpateveuv.
XX. Odtor pev ovv tadra émpattov. ‘O &é Aeivoxpatns padtoTa TOV Ypovoyvy ws TwWTHpLOV TO Pirorroipeve Sedoixas xai POdcat Ta Tapa Tav
>? fa! U ? \ \ b] fo) . N \
Ayatav Bovropevos, émei vuE émHr\Oe Kal TO TANOos ateywpnoe TOV Meconviwy, dvoi~as 70 4 Seopwtyptov eicéteurve Snpootoy oixérnv pdppaxkov KopilovTa, mpoceveynety Kal tapacTHvat wéxpe av éextrin KeXevoas. éetuye pev odv év 7O
, / ‘
Yrapvdim Kataxeipevos, ov KaGevdwv, GAXa AUTEN
, a cal GopvBo xatexopevos, idwv 5é das xal tape-
oT@TAa TAHGLOY TOV avOpwirov ExoVTA THY KUALKA TOU dappdxov, cuvayaywv ports éavToyv br’
’ @g , > 1@ \ 5 4 > , wv agGeveias avexadile. Kat deEdpevos npwrycer et 312

PHILOPOEMEN

but was closed by dragging a huge stone in front of it. Here they placed him, and after planting the stone against it, set a guard of armed men round about.
Meanwhile the horsemen of the Achaeans recovered themselves after their flight, and when Philopoemen was nowhere to be seen, but was thought to be dead, they stood for a long time calling aloud upon their leader and reproaching one another for having won an unlawful and shameful safety by abandoning to the enemy their general, who had been prodigal of his life for their sakes. Then they went forward in a body, and by diligent effort learned of his capture, and sent word of it to the cities of the Achaeans. The Achaeans felt that they had suffered a great calamity, and determined to send an embassy and demand Philopoemen from the Messenians, while they themselves prepared an expedition against the city.

XX. The Achaeans, then, were thus engaged. But Deinocrates, who feared that delay was the one thing most likely to save Philopoemen, and wished to forestall the efforts of the Achaeans, when night came on and the multitude of Messene had dis- persed, opened the prison and sent in a public official with poison, ordering him to give it to Philo- poemen and to stand by his side until he had drunk it. Now, Philopoemen was lying down wrapped in his soldier's cloak, not sleeping, but overwhelmed with trouble and grief. When, however, he saw a light and a man standing by him holding the cup of poison, he pulled himself together as much as his weakness permitted and sat up. Then taking the cup he asked the man if he had heard anything

TL mept TOV imméay Kat padtora AvKxopta tremv-o UEvOS eoriv. ELT OVTOS 6é tavOperrrov Stamrepevyéval TOUS TOAOUS, éméveuce TH Kepargy, Kai diaPreyas mpaws mpos TOV dO peorrov, - Eo héyers,' " eltrev, "' €¢ By TAVTA KAKOS mem pixaper."
andro bé pndev eiTr@v unde POeyEdpevos ferme Kat Tart avTov amex ruven, ov TOAXNG mpaypata TQ pappane Tapacyov, arr' aroaBeabels tayv bra tThv acGéveav.

XXI. 'Os ody o wepi Tis TeNeUTAS NOyos Kev
eis TUS 'Axatovs, Tas pev Tohets QUT@Y own Karnpera Kat trevOos eixev, o O év nrLKia pera TOY mpoBovhov cuvedovtes eis MeydAnv Tohev ovd quTwody avaBorny é emToljoavtTo THs. TLULMW PLAS, adh EXO MEV OL oT patayov Avxopray ets THY Meoon-viav évéBadov Kal Karas emrolouv THY xXepar, axe ov TumppovncavTes edéLavto tous Axyatovy. Kal Acwoxparns ev avTos avrov $0acas dleypynoaro,
To 5é ddAwy Soots péev averety bboge Prdo-Tmoimeva Ot avtav! améOvnoKov, Soo 5é€ Kat Bacavicat, TOUTOUS ém atkiats amroXovpmevous cuvehdpBavev) Avxoptas. To 5€ capa Kav-cavTes avtov Kal Ta eirava ouvdevtes ELS vopiav avelevyvucay, ouK aTaKT@s ovde ws ETUYED, arr errevixtov Tom HD Tia apa tais tadpais pifavres. iy pev yap ea Tepavwpevous idety, Av 53 TOUS avTovs Kal Saxpvovtas, 7; nv be TOUS ex9pous

dea pious aryouevous. aurny dé THY vopiay wre mwAnGous Tarvia@y Te Kal oTEPaYwY OMS OpwLevnY
éxousleyv 0 TOU aoTpatnyod Tav ’Ayatav trais 1 $ abra» Bekker and Blass have &:’ abray (died by their own hands), with Stephanus.
314

about the horsemen, and particularly about Lycortas, and on being told by him that the greater part of them had escaped, he nodded his head, and with a kindly look at the man said to him: “That is good news, if we have not wholly lost.’ Without another word and even without a sigh he drained the cup and laid himself down again. He did not give the poison much to do, but breathed his last speedily, so weak was he.

XXI. Accordingly, when the report of his death reached the Achaeans, their cities were filled with general dejection and grief, and the men of military age, together with the members of the council, assembled at Megalopolis. With no delay whatso- ever they proceeded to take revenge. They chose Lycortas general, invaded Messenia, and ravaged the country, until the Messenians with one consent received them into their city. Deinocrates antici- pated their vengeance by making away with himself, but all the others who had voted to put Philopoemen to death they slew, and as for those who would have had him tortured also, these Lycortas seized and held for a more excruciating death. Then they burned Philopoemen’s body, collected his ashes in an urn, and set out for home, not in loose or pro- miscuous order, but with a blending of triumphal procession and funeral rites. For their heads were wreathed with garlands while their eyes were full of tears, and they led their foes along with them in chains. The urn itself, almost hidden from sight by a multitude of fillets and wreaths, was borne by Polybius, the son of the Achaean general, and about

315

4 lo] fo) “A
TlorvBios Kai trepi avrov oi mpatot Tov 'Aya.av.
e . wn “
oi O€ OTpaTL@TaL WIrrALTpEVOL eV aUTOL, Tois S 4 immo Kexoopunuevots émnxodAovOouy, oUTE, olov Ul a lol
émt mévOer TocovTe@, KaTnhets ovTE TH viKy
yaupi@vtes. é€x b€ TOV Sta pécov Trorewv xal
A la) \

KOLO ATAVTWVTES, MATEP AUTOV ATO oTpaTElas
, A
émaviovtTa SeEtovpevor, THS Udpias édnmtovTo, Kai wn fn:
auptponyov eis MeyaAnv tod. ws ovv avvavea \ nw
eixOncav avtois ot mpecBUTEpor peta yuvatKayv \ , 9 ") \ \ 2 -»
Kal taldwrv, dropuppos Hon dia travTds éx@per fo) 4 \ fe)

TOU OTpaTEvMATOS Eis THV TOMY éerLTOOOVGADY TOV
avépa nai Bapews pépovoay, oiouévnv ovvatro-
, \ A a BeBAnkévat To mpwteverv év tois "Axasois.

b 4 \ h id ’ 4 b , \ \ \
_"Eradn pev ovdv, ws eixos, evdoEws, xai trept TO pvnpetov ot Trav Meconviwy aiyuddwrto KaTedev-
A al 4 A
cOncav. ovcav 5€ ToAA@Y pev ElxOVOV avToOd,
A , ,
peydrwy S€ TYL@v, as ai mores éyrndicarTo,
wn \ A ,
‘Pwpatos avnp év tots mept KopivOov atvynpace
Aa le , 9 , 9 a e , \

THs ‘EXXados érexerpnoey averety amdoas Kal
4 “A Sudxety avtov, évderxvupevos, @aTrep Ett Cavra, e , , U
Pwpaiots Tovémiov Kai Kaxovouv yeverOat. Noyov
&€ Ae Bévtwv xai TloduBiov mpos tov cuxopavrny
? / ”~? e / Ld e / avtTectovtos ov o Mopptos ovte ot mpéofBees
es 8 \ 2 Oo” . 2 , , UTréuevav avodpos évdoEou Tipas apavicat, caiTrep
> 3 7 a \ , \ , > ovK OAlya Tois rept Tutov nat Mawov évavtiwra] , tAr N A 4 \ > \ 2 n \ *
EVvTOS, GNAG THS KpElas THY apeTHy ExElvol KAL TO

1 In 146 B.C., at the close of Rome’s war with the Achaean league.

him were the chief men of the Achaeans. The soldiers followed after, in full armour themselves, and with their horses decorated ; they were neither dejected in view of their great affliction nor exultant over their victory. Moreover, the people from the cities and villagesson the way came to meet them, as if receiving Philopoemen on his return from an expedition; they laid their hands upon his urn, and accompanied him to Megalopolis. And so when they had been joined by the old men and by the women and children, a lamentation at once spread through the entire army and into the city, which longed for the presence of Philopoemen and was grievously cast down at his death, feeling that with him it had lost its supremacy among the Achaeans. He was buried, then, as was fitting, with con- spicuous honours, and at his tomb the captive Messenians were stoned to death. Many statues of him were erected and many honours decreed him by the cities. All these a Roman, in the disastrous days of Greece following the fall of Corinth,! attempted to have removed, and he attacked the memory of Philopoemen himself, accusing him, as if still alive, of having been a malevolent enemy of the Romans. After the proposal had been discussed and Polybius had spoken in opposition to Philopoe- men’s detractor, neither Mummius nor the members of the commission? would consent that the honours paid to an illustrious man should be obliterated, although he had made no little opposition to Flami- ninus and Manius. These judges distinguished, as

2 A commission of ten, appointed by the Roman senate to settle the affairs of Greece. It was before this body that Philopoemen’s memory was attacked and defended.

KaXov, @S EotKke, TOD AVoLTENO’S Siwpilov, opOas
Kal mpoonkovTws Tois wey wmperovat picOov Kal
Xap Tapa tav ev Tabovtwy, trois 8 ayaois
\ 9 / A > fo! > \ ,
Tuinv odeiecOat trapa tov ayaday ae vopt-Cortes.
Tadra mepi Piroroipevos.

it would appear, between virtue and necessity, between honour and advantage. They rightly and fitly considered that benefactors ought always to receive reward and gratitude from their beneficiaries, and good men honour from the good.
So much concerning Philopoemen.

i

TITUS FLAMININUS

VOL. X. Y

TITOZ

I. “Ov 8€ mapaBdArdcuev adt@, Tiros Koivyreos 36%
A a 4
Prapuvivos, idéav pév o7roios Hv wapeot Oeacaa a ¢ fol
aBat tots BovAopévots aro THs ev Pwopn Yarns
> / a \ \ / 9 / N
ELKOVOS, 1} KetTaL Tapa Tov péeyay ’ATOANwVA TOV
éx Kapxndovos avtixpy tod imodpopovu, ypapypaow ‘EXAnvixois émrvyeypappevn, TO b€ 7005 avs ANéyeTas yevérOat cai mpos Opyny Kal mpos Xapev.
OU NV opoiws, GAN’ EXadpos pev ev TO KorAaLEev
\ > b , N y 4
kal ovK érijovos, mpos S€ Tas YapuTas TEAECLoupyos Kal Tois evepyeTnOcion Sta travtos woTrEp
> , ” N 4 € 4
EVEepyeTaLs EvVOUS, Kal mpoOuMOS, WS KdANCTA
TOV KTNMATWY, TOUS ev TeTOVOOTAs UT avTOv / bn \ , , XN \ mepieTrey det Kal awlev. gidroTiuotatos Oé Kai girodofotatos wv éBovreTO TeV dpictwy Kal peyiotwr mpakewy avtoupyos elvar, Kal Tois Seopévoats ev Tradeivy padrAov 7} Tots ev TrotHaaL Suva-Mévols Exatpe, Tors pev DANY THs apetis, Tors be 4 J , \ 4 e UA
woTEp avtitdnous pos Sokav Hyovpevos.
TlasdevGeis 5€ mraideiav thv da tay dav taY
A \ , \ , “
OTPATLWTLKWV, TONAOUS TOTE Kal peyarous TIS 322

TITUS FLAMININUS

I. In parallel with Philopoemen we shall put Titus Quintius Flamininus. What his outward appearance was may be seen by those who wish it from the bronze statue of him at Rome. It stands by the side of the great Apollo from Carthage, opposite the Circus,! and has upon it an inscription in Greek characters. As to his disposition, he is said to have been quick to show anger as well as to confer favours, though not in like extent. For he was gentle in his punishments and not persistent, whereas in his favours he was unremitting, always well disposed towards his beneficiaries as though they were his benefactors, and eager to protect at all times and preserve those who had ever met with kindness at his hands, as though they were his choicest possessions, But since he was covetous of honour and fame, he desired that his noblest and greatest achievements should be the result of his own efforts, and he took more pleasure in those who wanted to receive kindness than in those who were able to bestow it, considering that the former were objects upon which he could exercise his virtue, while the latter were his rivals, so to speak, in the struggle for tame.

From his earliest years he was trained in the arts. of war, since at that time Rome was carrying on

1 The Circus Flamininus is meant, which was erected in 221 B.c. by the censor Flamininus Nepos.

"Pwpas ayovifopevns ayavas Kai Tay vévy evOus éF apyins év T@ otpatever Oat atpatnye SidacKo-Hévwv, Tpa@Tov wéev év to pos 'AvviBay troréuo NiMapyos umatevovte MapxédXrAw ouvertparev-\ , \ 3 ‘ gato. Kai Mapxerros pév éevédpa repttecov
9 , , A "~ \ 4 , éreXeutnoe, Titos d€ tis wept Tapavta ywpas cat Tupaytos avtod To Sev Tepoy nAwKOTOS Era pKos dtrodeyGeis evdoxiunoev ody HtTov émi Tots Sexat-ols 7) KaTa THY oOTpaTelav. 510 Kal TrEepTrOpévor
b] la 9 7 ’ , 4 Q\ a atroixwy eis dvo modes, Ndpveray te cal Kovoap, apywy npeOn Kai oixtotys.

II. Todto 5€ avtov émnpe padtota tas dua pécou Kai ovvnlers Tots véows apyas brepBavra, Snpapxiay cal otpatnyiav Kai ayopavopiar, evOvds avroy uUTateias aktobv: Kai KaTHEL TOUS amo TAY KAnpovxytav Exwov wpoOvpous. tov Sé epi DovrABiov cai Manov Snpapxyworv émorapévwr ai

,
Secvoy elvar Aeyovtwy avipa véov eis THY peyioTyy
apyny eiaBialecPar Tapa Trovs vopous, olov areé-NETTOY ETL THY TPWTOY lEepay Kal pUaTNPiwY TIS TOALTELAS, 1) peey GUYKANTOS aTédwxe TO SHpw \ aA e A lol 9 , > N ¢
Thy Whdov, o dé Sjpmos amébeckev avdtov Stratov
3 a , w , ”
peta XéErou Ainiov, xaimrep ow TpidKovra éTn
, 4 4 ‘ QA ,
yeyovoTa. KAnpm bé Nayydver Tov pds Pidemcrov
A / , ? , \ a“ € ¢ cat Maxedovas Trodepoy, evtuxia Tivi TOV Pwpai-wy cvAAayov mpdypact Kai avO perros ov mavTa ToAéum Kai Bia xpwpévov Seopmevors apxovtos, 324

many great contests and her young men from the very outset were taught by service as soldiers how to command soldiers. To begin with, then, he served as military tribune in the war against Hannibal under Marcellus the consul. Marcellus fell into an ambush and lost his life,! but Titus was appointed governor of the country about Tarentum and of Tarentum itself, now captured for the second time. Here he won a good name, no less for his administration of justice than for his conduct in the field. For this reason he was also chosen director-in-chief of the colonists sent out to the two cities of Narnia and Cosa.

II. This success more .than anything else so exalted his ambition that he ignored the intervening offices which young men generally sought, the offices of tribune, praetor, and aedile, and thought him- self worthy at once of a consulship ; so he became a candidate for that office, with the eager support of his colonists. But the tribunes Fulvius and Manius opposed his course, and said that it was a monstrous thing for a young man to force his way into the highest office contrary to the laws, before he had been initiated, as it were, into the first rites and mysteries of government. The senate, however, referred the matter to the votes of the people, and the people elected him consul? along with Sextus Aelius, although he was not yet thirty years old. The lot assigned him to the war with Philip and the Macedonians, and it was a marvellous piece of good fortune for the Romans that he was thus designated for a field of activity where the people did not require a leader relying entirely upon war and

1 In 208 B.c. Cf. the Marcellus, xxviii. f. 2 In 198 B.c.
325

ada weGot Kai omlria padrdrov ddrwWaipos.
Pirinry yap hv cropwpya pev eis payny amoxpav 1) Maxedovwy apyn, pon Sé morémov tpiBnv Exovtos Kai yopnyia nal xatagduyn Kat dpyavov drws THS dadrayyos 7 TaVv “EAAnVwY Svvayis, av py StarvOévrwyv aro tov Pidiwmov pas PaYNS OvK Hy Epyov o Tpos avTOY TOAELOS.
7 8 ‘EdAas ow TOAAA cuvernveypEevn ‘Pwpaiots, GXAG TOTE TP@ToY emipweyvupevn Tais mpdkeory, el pn) hvoer TE YpNOTOS. RY Oo ApxYwy Kal rOY@ HaAXOV 7) TOAEU@ XpwpEvos, EevTUYYKavoVTL TE
mpoony wiOavoTns Kal mpaotns évtuyyavopéve Kal tovos mAeiotos Urép Tov Sixaiwy, ovK av oUTWS padiws avTi THY cuVnOwY ddAXrdodUNOY aPXNVY nyaTnoe. TavTa pev ovv eri TOY wpakewy avTOU dnrovTat.
TIT. TvvOavopevos S€ o Titos tovs mpo éavtod oTpatnyous, TolTo pév LovaAmixiov, tovto sé IlowAcov, owe THs Bpas éuBarovras ets Maxe-Soviay xat tod orXeuwov Bpadéws aryrapévous KataterpipOar ToTopayovvtas Kat SvaTrAnktLfopévous axpoBoric pois vrép ob@v Kal aiTOAOYias
mpos Tov Pirstov, ovK @eTo Seiv, WaTrEp ExEtvot KaTavarwoavTes olxot Tov éviauToy év Tipals Kat ToALTElats UoTepoy EEwpunoav emi Tas oTpaTteas, obtws Kal avtos éviauToy émixepddvat TH apxXy, Tov pev UTraTevaas, TO Sé ToAEp OAS, GAN ofov 326
3i(

violence, but were rather to be won over by persuasion and friendly intercourse. For the realm of Macedonia afforded Philip a sufficiently strong force for actual battle, but in a war of long duration his phalanx was dependent for its vigour, its support, its places of refuge, and in a word for its entire effectiveness, upon the states of Greece, and unless these were detached from Philip, the war with him ‘would not be a matter of a single battle. Greece, however, had not yet been brought into much contact with the Romans, and now for the first time was drawn into political relations with them. Unless, therefore, the Roman commander had been a man of native goodness who relied upon argument more than upon war, and unless he had been persuasive when he asked an audience and kind when he granted one, ever laying the greatest stress upon what was right and just, Greece would not so easily have been satisfied with a foreign supremacy instead of those to which she had been accustomed. However, this will be made clear in the story of his achievements.

III. Titus learned that the generals who had preceded him in this field, first Sulpicius, and then Publius Villius, had invaded Macedonia late in the season, had prosecuted the war slowly, and had wasted time in manceuvring for position or in long range skirmishes with Philip to secure roads and provisions. ‘These men had squandered the year of their consulship at home in the honours and political activities of their office, and afterwards had set out on their campaigns. But Titus did not think it right to imitate them and thus add a year to his term of office, acting as magistrate during one, and

wt

~ \ A

PiroTiovpevos evepyov TH Tworeum THY apynV Tmapacyelv, Tas pev ev TH WOAEL TYMas Kal Tpo-edplas adjcev, aitnodpuevos Sé tapa tHs BovAns Tov abergor avt@ Acvxtov apxYovTa vewv ovaTpa-TEvELV, KAL TOY pEeTa Lenriwvos év “IBnpia pev
9 , 9 , \ 9 , ’ ‘ ‘ AadpovBav, év AtBun &€ ’AvvtBav avrov Kkatapewaynuéveon Tos axualovtas Ett Kat TpoOvwous 3 “ Cad , , .
avartaBov wonrep oTOoLwp"a, TpiaxXLALOUS ‘yEVO-
4 » ‘ ” 9 a 5 4
pevous, ets tnv “Hrretpov aodardros dvevépace.
cat tov IlomXov etpwyv pera ths Suvdpews avti-
A \ otpatomedevovta TQ Dirimm@ Tas Tepi Tov
"Awrov motapmov éuBoras xal ta oteva puddt-TOVTL TrOALY HON xpovov, ovdéey 5é TrEepaivovTa Sia THY OXUpOTHTA TOY Yepiwv, wapér\aBe TO otpatevya Kat tov IlomAov aroréuyas nate-

aKeTTETO TOUS TOTroUS. eElat Sé dyUpOL MEV OVY Hrtov Tov wept Ta Téurrn, xadAn 6é Sévdpawr, ws
exelvol, Kal YAwpoTnTa Ans Kal StatpiBas Kat Aetw@vas Hdeis OUK Exovaly. opav bé pEeyador
A e A e 4 > la ,

Kat uvynrav exarépwlev eis piav papayya eyiotnv Kai Babeiay cupdepopevov Srextrimreav
” A A
o "Aros kai cyjpua Kai tdyos eEopovodrar mpos tov IInveov, tv pev AAANY atacay atroxpUT THY uTwMpELay, exTouny O€ KPNnUVadN Kal oTEVHY Tapa \ ec A 3 4 9 ‘ IQ ” @
TO petOpov atroreiTwv aTpaTrov, ovde AANWS paou ?, 5 g a > \ \ lA .
tay otpatevpars dedOeiv, eb 6€ Kat pvAadTTOLTO, TAVTEA@S ATrOpOV.
IV. "Hoav pev ody ot tov Titov dyew xvKro
dia tHS ~Aacoapytides xata Avxov ettopov 328

TITUS FLAMININUS

as general fur a second. On the contrary, he was ambitious to prosecute the war at the same time that he served as consul, and therefore renounced his honours and special privileges in the city, and after asking the senate that his brother Lucius might accompany him on his expedition as naval commander, he took with him as the main part of his force those of Scipio's soldiers who were still in full vigour of body and spirit after conquering Hasdrubal in Spain and Hannibal himself in Africa (they were three thousand in number), and crossed safely into Epirus. He found Publius Villius encamped with his forces over against Philip, who for a long time now had been guarding the narrow passes along the river Apsus. Publius was making " no progress, owing to the strength of his adversary’s position, and ‘Titus therefore took over his army, sent Publius home, and began an examination of the ground. It has no less natural strength than the Vale of Tempe, but is without the beautiful trees, green woods, agreeable haunts, and pleasant meadows which there abound. Great and lofty mountains on either side slope down and form a single very large and deep ravine, and through this the Apsus dashes with a volume and speed which make it the equal of the Peneius. Its water covers all the rest of the ground at the foot of the mountains, but leaves a cut, precipitous and narrow, for a path along past its current ; this path would not be easy for an army to traverse at any time, and when guarded, it would be utterly impassable.

IV. There were some, therefore, who tried to have Titus lead his forces by a roundabout way through

329

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

odov Kat padiay é emixetpodvTes. O 5¢ Sedorx@s m7) Topp daddrrns éuBarov €avTov €iS ToOTFOUS yAtoypous xal o TELPOMEVOUS Tovnp@s Tov Pirtrr - Tou puyouaxovvtos aropnon olTiov Kal mahev dmpaxtos, @aTep 0 po avrob oTPATNYOS, dva.- ywpev avayracO7 7 pos THY Oaraccar, eyva poo Baroy ava KpaTos dua TOV ax pov BiaoaoOat thy mapooov. érret. S€ Ta Opn Tov DirjLtraov TH parayye KATEXOVTOS, éx Tov Trayiov Tavta-x00ev émri tous “Pwpaious aicOVTLeoV eal Tofevpatov Pepopevay, TANYAL poev éyivovTo Kat WYOVES ofeis Kat vexpol map dppotépwv é EWLTrrov, ovdev b€ TOU ‘ToAEMOV Tépas épaivero, poo rO ov avOpwrrot Tov avrotr VewovToV ppatovrés Teva KUKNW@OLY dwehouperny UTo TOV TOAEMLOY, n TOV
oTpaTov afew UmuaxvobvTo Kab KATAGTHO ELV pidtara TpiTaiov ert TOY aK pov. yyaarny 5é THs TLOTEWS 7a perXovTo Kal BeBatwrnv Xdpora TOV
Maxara, TpwrEevovTa pev "Hreipwtav, evvouv dé “Pwpatos dvta xa Kpupa poo TOU Pedirrmov cuvaryovilouevon. @ TT TEVTAS o Titos ex éuaret xeMapxov éva metods éXovTa TETpAKLG XtNLOUS Kat i1mrets TplaKoaious. nyoovTo 5é ob vowels
éxeivor Oedepévor’ Kal Tas pev neépas aveTravoVTo KoiXous mpoBardopevor Kat wvrAwodets TOTOUS, @devov O€ rUKTWP TPOS THY TEAnVHY’ Kal yap Hv Sexounvos.
‘O dé Tiros TOUTOUS dmoorelhas Tas pev GAXasS neepas Stavétrave Tov oTpaTov Soa pn) TEeptoTrav
TOUS axpo8oric pois TOUS TONEMLOUS, Kal’ iv dé EmerXov Urephavyces at TOV aKpwv of TreptiovTes,
@

33°

31]

TITUS FLAMININUS

Dassaretis towards Lycus, a safe and easy road. But he was afraid that if he went far away from the sea and got into regions that were poorly tilled and barren, while Philip avoided a battle, lack of pro- visions would compel him to come back again to the sea with his task undone, like the general who had preceded him. He therefore determined to attack with all his might, and force his passage through the heights. But Philip was occupying the mountains with his phalanx, and on the flanks of the Romans javelins and arrows came flying from all directions against them. Sharp encounters took place, men were wounded and men fell dead on both sides, and no end of the war was in sight. But at last some herdsmen of the vicinity came to Titus and told him of a roundabout path which the enemy was neglect- ing to guard; over this they promised to lead his army and bring it, in three days at the farthest, to a position on the heights. As surety and voucher for their good faith they brought Charops the son of Machatas, a leading man in Epirus, who was well- disposed to the Romans and was secretly co-operating with them through fear of Philip. In him Titus put confidence, and sent out a military tribune with four thousand foot-soldiers and three hundred horsemen. They were conducted by the herdsmen, who were in bonds. By day they rested under cover of caves or woody places, and they travelled in the night, by the light of the moon, which was at the full.

After sending off this detachment, Titus kept his army quiet for two days, except so far as he drew off the enemy's attention by skirmishes; but when the day came on which the enveloping party were ex- pected to show themselves on the heights, at daybreak

ev e , a \ 4 A \ , "\
au npépa wav péev Bapv, wav b€ yuyynrixov OmAov exiver Kal TPLYH vetmas THY SUVauLY AUTOS fev els TO OTEVOTATOY Tapa TO peiMpov opOias x A \ , s e N "A aviyye Tas aometpas Baddopevos Utro Tav Makxe-Sovwy Kal oupTAEKopevos TOS aTavT@oL TeEpt
\ , a \ A .- , e
Tas Suoxywpias, Tov b€ ad\dNwV ExaTéepwhev aya Tetp@pevwv apiNrAGc8ae Kai Tais TpayvTnaeV éupvonevwy mpolvuws, 6 TE HALOS avéoye Kal N 9 , b ? ? Ld e , U xamvos ov BeBatos, aAX olov SpEros OMLYAN Trop-
? / ' Lg \ \
pwHev avatérrAwv Kat Stadatvopuevos tovs pev Todeptous éAadvOave, KATA VwWTOUV yap HV avTois,
.Y] a v ? , e de e a 50
70n Tav axpwv éexopevwy, ot O€ "Pwpaior doEav Exxyov audiBorov év ayau kal move thy éAmriba mpos To BovAcpevoy ANapBavoytes. érrei 5€ war-Nov avEavopevos Kai SiapeXaivwy Tov aépa «at \ ¥ A J A \ 9 é TWOAUS AVW YwpeVv €dNrODTO TrUpaoOS eElvat Pirtos,
e \ ' 4 9 4 9 4 \
ol pev adadukavtes eTeBatvov eppwpyevws Kat
TUVETTEAXOD ELS TA TPAXUTATA TOUS TrOAELLOUS, OL
6€ Omta0ev atro THY Axpwy avTnrAdratap.

V. Dury uéev ody Hw evOvs o€eta mavtav, ere-\ ? b) 4 b A \ e
gov 5€ dicytrdiwy ov meElovs: adpnpovvTo yap ai Svayopiat thy Siwkiv. ypnuata b€é nal oxnvas kat Oepdtrovtas ot ‘Pwpuaio: Stapracavres éxpa-TOUV TOV TTEVOV, Kal Si@devov THv “Hretpov otTw Kogpiws Kal pet’ eyKpateias ToTaUTNS MOTE, TAY
Trolwv Kat TIS Oardoons paxpay éytas avTous, Kal TOV €ripnvioy oiToV pr) wEeLETpHEevous OVO
TITUS FLAMININUS

he put all his heavy-armed and all his light-armed troops in motion. Dividing his forces into three parts, he himself led his cohorts in column formation “up into the narrowest part of the ravine along the stream, pelted with missiles by the Macedonians and engaging at close quarters with those who con- fronted him at each difficult spot; the other divisions, one on either side, strove to keep pace with him, and grappled eagerly with the difficulties presented by the rough ground. Meanwhile the sun rose, and a smoke—not clearly defined, but re- sembling a mountain mist—lifted itself and came into view from afar. The enemy did not notice it, for it was behind them, where the heights were already occupied, and the Romans were of doubtful mind about it, but as they struggled and laboured on, they let their wishes determine their hopes. But when the smoke increased in size and darkened the air, and ascending in great volume was clearly seen to be a fire-signal from their friends, then the Romans below raised shouts of triumph and dashed upon their foes and crowded them together into the roughest places, while the Romans behind the enemy sent down answering shouts from the heights.

V. At once, then, the enemy fled precipitately, but not more than two thousand of them fell;! for the difficulties of the ground made pursuit impossible. However, the Romans made spoil of their money, tents, and slaves, mastered the pass, and traversed all parts of Epirus, but in such an orderly manner and with so great restraint that, although they were far from their fleet and the sea, and although their monthly rations of grain had not been measured out

1 So Livy, xxxii, 12.

a

<
a

evTupobyTUsS Wwypopas, améxyerAat THS Ywpas ap-pirageis wpereias éyovans. o yap Tiros mupv-Gavopevos Tov Pirirrov, ws Gpota hevyovTs TH
@ertariav diepyopevos tovs pev avOpwrrovs &x
TOY TOMwY avicTnaW cis TA Gon, TAS Sé ToNELS
Katatipmpnot, Tov S€ ypnudTwv Ta NerTrOLEva
51a AROS 7 Bdapos aprayny mpotiberat, TpoTroy

TIWa THS ywpas éEtotdpevos 76y “Pwpaiors, édi-NoTUMELTO KaL TrapEKAaAEL TOUS OTPATLWTAS WaTrEP
oixelas Kal Tapaxeywpnuévns Knodopévouvs Badi-Ce. xat pévto kal wapetyev avtois Ta ywopeva Ths evtakias alcOnow ev0us. mpocexwpouy peév
yap ai mores aapévors Bettaréias, oi 8 évros Tlurdy “EXAnves éerofouv xal dSserronvro tais oppais mpos tov Titov, "Axazot dé tv PerLTarov Tuupayiay amemduevor Todepety éendicayto peta “Pwpaiwy mpos avtov. “Ormovytia &é, xacwep Aitwrav tote ‘Pwpaios cuvaywrifouévwy mpoOupyotata Kal thy ToAW aktovyTwY Tapada-Beiv cai durdtreEw, ov TpoTéa YOY, ANAG PETATEL-Wapevoe tov Titov éxeivm dueviotevoay éavtous Kat TapédwKay.
IIvppov pev ody Aéyovow, STE TPwWTOV atro
oxomTns Kateide TO oTpaTevpa Tav ‘“Pwpaiwy Siaxexoopnpévov, eimety ov BapBapixny ‘abt@e davivar thy tov BapBdpwv wapatakw: oa 8é
Titw mp@tov évtuyydvovtes nvayxalovto Tapa
TAnoLas adtevat dwvds. axovovTes yap TeV Makedovar ws avOpwros dpywy BapBdpov atpa-334

tu them and they could buy little, they nevertheless refrained from plundering the country, which offered abundant booty. For Titus had learned that Philip, in passing through Thessaly like a fugitive, was driving the inhabitants from their cities into the mountains, burning down the cities, and allowing his soldiers to plunder the wealth which was too «abundant or too heavy to be carried away, thus in a manner ceding the country already to the Romans. Titus was therefore ambitious, and exhorted his soldiers accordingly to spare the country in march- ing through it, and to treat it as though it had been handed over to them and were their own. And indeed the results showed them at once the advan- tages of this orderly conduct. For as soon as they reached Thessaly the cities came over to them, the Greeks south of Thermopylae were all eagerness and excitement to find Titus, and the Achaeans, renounc- ing their alliance with Philip, voted to join the Romans in making war upon him. The Opuntians, moreover, although the Aetolians, who were at that time fighting most zealously on the side of the Romans, asked permission to take Opus in charge and protect the city, would not grant the request, but sent for Titus and gave themselves with the | fullest confidence into his hands.

Now, we are told that Pyrrhus, when for the first time he beheld from a look-out place the army of the Romans in full array, had said that he saw nothing barbaric in the Barbarians’ line of battle ;} and so those who for the first time met Titus were compelled to speak in a similar strain. For they . had heard the Macedonians say that a commander

1 Cf. the Pyrrhus, xvi. 5.

A Ww > ow 4 ,

Tlas éTetot Ot OTAWY TaVTa KaTaoTpEpopmeEvos
cai Sovrovpevos, eita atravTavTes avodpl THY TE Hrckiay véw nat thy Ow dtravOpwre@, povnv te Kat StdrexTov "EAAnve cai tins ad Pods
5) a , > a \ \ ,
épactn, Gavpaciws éxnrodvTo, xal tas Toes amovres éveTriumwAacay evvotas Ths Wpos avTOV
e b , e U a by 4 b] \ \
@S €yovaas nyepova THs eXevOepias. mel 5é Kal
Dirinmr@ Soxobvte cupBatixas Exe eis TAvTOY
9 \ w J , , x AQ A N
éNM wy mpovtevev eiprjynv Kal diriav éml Te TOUS EXAnvas avrovopous éav Kai Tas ppovpas amrad-NaTtTev, o 5 ove edéEaTO, TavTadTac Hn TOTE
Q A 4 A 4 lA
kal tois Oeparrevovo. ta Tov DPiriaTov TapéoTy
'Poowatous ToAEunoovTas Kew ovy "EXAqour, aX vIrép Se laut Maxeédoct.
VI. Ta pév ody ddXa Tpoceywpe Kal' Hovyiav avT@, THY b€ Botwrtiay atrorXéuws éemiropevopeve QnBatwv arnvtncav oi mpatot, dpovodvtes péev
Ta Tov Maxedovos Sia BpayvrAnv, aorafopevor dé xal tiu@vtes Tov Titov, ws dirtas pos apotépous bTrapxovons. o 8 évruyov avtois girav-Opwrws cai deEtwoduevos mponyey novyn Kad od0v, TA pev épwrav Kal truvOavopevos, Ta 5é
3 , 4 > 7 wv \
Sinyoupevos, nal tapaywv émitndes aypt Tovs
, ' a 9 A , 4 \
otTpatiwtas avaraBeiv ex THs mopetas. ovTw dé
, a A 4, >] \ '
mpoaywv cuveanre trois O@nBators eis THY Toru,
> , \ e€ , 9 A \ 4 b]
ov mavu pév dopévots, oxvotar Sé KwAUVELY, é7rel

of a barbarian host was coming against them, who subdued and enslaved everywhere by force of arms ; and then, when they met a man who was young in years, humane in aspect, a Greek in voice and language, and a lover of genuine honour, they were wonderfully charmed, and when they returned to their cities they filled them with kindly feelings towards him and the belief that in him they had a champion of their liberties. After this Titus had a meeting with Philip (who seemed disposed to make terms), and proffered him peace and friendship on condition that he allowed the Greeks to be independent and withdraw his garrisons from their cities ; but this proffer Philip would not accept. Then at last it became quite clear even to the partisans of Philip that the Romans were come to wage war, not upon the Greeks, but upon the Macedonians in behalf of the Greeks.

VI. Accordingly, the other parts of Greece came over to the side of Titus without any trouble; but as he was entering Boeotia without hostile demonstra- tions, the leading men of Thebes came to meet him. They were in sympathy with the Macedonian cause through the efforts of Brachyllas, but welcomed Titus and showed him honour, professing to be on friendly terms with both parties. Titus met and greeted them kindly, and then proceeded quietly on his journey, sometimes asking questions for his own information and sometimes discoursing at length, and purposely diverting them until his soldiers should come up from their march. Then he led them forward and entered the city along with the Thebans, who were not at all pleased thereat, but hesitated to oppose him, since a goodly number of oTpaTia@rat rye peTpeot TO mribos elmrovro. Kat pévToe TrapeAOwy o Tiros, ws ovx éxov my ToAty, éretOev érNeoOar Tae Popaiwy, "AttaXov Tob Baor- News guvaryopevovTos avTa Kal cuvefoppavros TOUS OnBatous. arr’ “Arrados pev, WS Eoure, TOD Yyipws mpoOuporepor € éavTov T@ Tirp pitopa mapacxetv prroripovpevos, ev auT@ T Aéeyew 1 POO TED OVTOS idiryyou TLVOS 1) pevpatos apves THY aicOnow emerngpdels & érrece, Kal per’ OU TOAU Tais vavoly eis ‘Acta dtroxoptadels éreAXeUTNTEY Of 5¢ Bowwrtot TpoceXw@pyaay TOS ‘Peopaiors.

VII. Dirtwrov be mpéeo Bets TeurpavTos eis ‘Pouny daméaTethe cai o Tiros Tap Q@UTOU TOUS mpafovras Omrws emupnpionrat n ruyKAyTos xpovov auTe Tov TONE MOV HEVOVTOS, et be LN, oe’ éxelvou Thy eipnvnv yevecOat. peror1U08s yap ay laxupas édedles meppOevros éml Tov ToXELov éTépou oTpatyyoo THY d0fav adatpeDvat. dia-mpafapever dé Tov pirov auTe@ pare TOV Pirer-Tov av expnce TuYely Kai Tov TONE MoU THY Hyepoviay exelv@ gurayxGijvar, bed pevos TO dor Ka Tals éXriow émapOeis evOus eis Gerrariav él Tov Pidirrov TONE MOV dpunoey, vmép eFaxto-xedious kai Stopupious EXeov TTPATLWOTAS, Ov Aitwhot melous efanto tAtous Kat lrrqreis TET pa.- koa tous Taperxov. ay Bs Kat tov Dirimmov To oT paTevpa T@ THOe! TapaT Ajo toy.

‘Exret S8 Baditovres ém’ GAAHAOUS Kab yevopuevor mTepl THY ZKoTovcay evtadvOa Siaxcvdvvevery Ener-

—

1 Cf. Livy, xxxiii. 1 f.
* So Livy, xxxili. 4. wr

TITUS FLAMININUS -

soldiers were in his following. ‘Titus, however, just as though the city were nut in his power, came before their assembly and tried to persuade them to side with the Romans, and Attalus the king seconded him in his appeals and exhortations to the Thebans. But Attalus, as it would appear, in his eagerness to play the orator for Titus, went beyond his aged strength, and in the very midst of his speech, being seized with a vertigo or an apoplexy, suddenly fainted and fell, and shortly afterwards was conveyed by his feet to Asia, where he died. The Boeotians allied themselves with the Romans.

VII. Philip now sent an embassy to Rome, and Titus therefore dispatched thither his own representatives, who were to induce the senate to vote him an extension of command in case the war continued, or, if it did not, the power to make peace. For he was covetous of honour, and was greatly afraid that he would be robbed of his glory if another general were sent to carry on the war. His friends managed matters so successfully for him that Philip failed to get what he wanted and the command in the war was continued to Titus, On receiving the decree of the senate, he was lifted up in his hopes and at once hastened into Thessaly to prosecute the war against Philip. He had over twenty-six thousand soldiers, of whom six thousand infantry and four hundred cavalry were furnished by the Aetolians.! Philip’s army also was of about the same size.”

The two armies advanced against each other until they came into the neighbourhood of Scotussa, and there they proposed to decide the issue by battle.3

> On the same battlefield Pelopidas had been defeated and slain by Alexander of Pherae, in 364 B.c. Cf. the Pelomidaa, oTpATLaTaAL ye eT prot TO mhidos elqrovro. Kat pevTou mapeddwv o 0 Tiros, ws ov« EXov ry Tort, érretOev ErécOat Ta ‘Pwpatoy, "Artadovu tod Bact-

A€ws TuvayopevorTos auT@ Kal avveEoppavros
TOUS OnBaious. ann’ “Arranos pev, @S Eouxe, TOD yI1pws mpobuporepop é éavTov T@ Tire prropa
Tapacyety prroripovpevos, ey QUT ep TO héyew TT POO TET OVTOS iddryyou TLVvOS 7) pevpatos adveo THY aicOnoww erirnpeeis é ETET E, KAL per’ OU TOAU Tals vavoly eis ‘Aciav atroxomobels éreXevTHaOEV: 01
bé Bowwrol mpocexwpnaar tots ‘Peopaiors.
VII. Dirimrov sé mpea Bets TeLWavTos ets ‘Poyny dméorerre kal o Titos Tap avTov Tous mpagovtas dmrws emipnplantas 7) 7 iryKATOS xpovov aur Tou Ton wou HEVOVTOS, et bé UE be éxelvou THv eb ayy yevéoOan. Ptdori wos yap av ia upas édedter meppbevros emt Tov wodepLoy 2 érépou oTpaTnyoo THY bofav aparpeO vat. diampafapevay dé Tay pirov aura pare TOV Pirer-Tov av expnte TuXYEly Kal TOD ToAEpov THY myepoviay exelv purayOjvat, beEdpevos TO boyy Kal TALS éAtriow emapOeis evOus els @errariav él TOV Prdimrov TOAELOV WpLNnceY, Umrép éfaxtoxUrLous kal Siopuptous EXeov oTpPATLWOTAS, @y Aitwroi meCous efaxto vALous Kal bmTrets TeTpa-Kogious TaperXov. ay Bs Kai tod DPiriwmov ro aTpdTeupa Te ThOet TapaT hija tov.
3 ‘Errel dé Baditovres é €m GAXAHXOUS Kab yevopuevot Tepl THY ZxoTovoay évtaiOa Staxivdvveverv Ewenr-

i] -

—

1 Cf. Livy, xxxiii. 1 f.
2 So Livy, xxxiii. 4.
CPt eters
-_ 7
a re — dines
stohchers were mony ope use co

To dh ts San ane

plar the oratur in * uy my: :
Strength, amd ow ine ver ig seized with a VETUEC YF 45 age “ef Dye teat get and fell, and BUUTI atiorm em 4 fleet to Asta wires 10 Oat, ve doe themselves with <1 Bunes:, VII. Philip sow ear a: -, rs ore Titus therefore Ostet tte fy Pen) sentatives, why were uw sa. . ee

him an extension Uf Gnas ae ae tinued, or, if it did LU tise bOI 8 te ate
For he was COVetuU Of srs:
aur 3 tote
afraid that he would i TOWNE is i we :
general were seut tw TN A A ee Ss nk managed matters wu sucess; Se oe failed to Set what ue wan, oy
the war was COiuver ig decree of the OMIM es 9g and at once hasteuee nr St, peek War against Phe: $4s say yt
w beg a7 the seme «A ge at we hundred cava'rs om hah #

2 gga - r

they came ints -a0 5 Ot <a tS 3 tg a awe er ar

there they Propact stew +, ce a a ee
: On the sane sar. ate verry ye Sou i slain by Alezanier sy ol ae 2
*XXXii,

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Lov, ovy, Grrep eiKosS Hy, mpos Séovs éAraSov oi OTparol THY GAAnNEY yeLTViaTLY, GANA Kal “wad or opps kal prdoripias emrnpobvro, ‘Pwpaios per, et Maxedovav Kpatijcovoty, av dvopa St "ANE-avOpov aXns Kal Suvdpews wrEloTOVv av map avrois, Maxedoves Se ‘Papaious Tlepoay iryou-pevot Svadépery Hrmevov, él TrEpiyévotvTo, apm po-Tepov atrodetEety * AneEavdpov @idummoy. o per otv Titos wapexddes TOovs otpatiotas dvdpas ayadous yevéoOat Kai mpoOvmous, ws ev TO xadXNiote Oedtpw TH ‘EddAdbt péAXOVTAS ayori-Cea Oat mpds TOvs apiaTous TOY avTayaMaTaY oO

5¢ Pidsartros, elite amo tUYNs elite UO aTOVdIS Tapa TOY KaLpoY ayvonoas, hy yap Tt ToAUavOopLoY innrov é&w Tod ydpaxos, él TodTo mpoBas npEato pév, ola mpo paxns gdirct, SvaréyerOar Kat Tapoppay, aOusuas Sé Sewis mpdos Tov otwvor éumecovons SiatapaxGels erécye THY nuépav éxelyny.
VIII. Ty 8 totepaia rept tov dp8pov, éx parakns Kal votiov vuKros, eis omlxydAnv Tov vepav tpeTouévav, averiptrato Copou Babéos
mav TO Tedlov, Kal KaTHEL TaXUs eK TOV aKpwr dnp els TO peTakd TOV oTpaToTrédwy, evOds apxopéevns npépas atroxpuTtwy Tovs ToTrous. ot 5é im’ audorépwv amoatanrévtes epedpeias evera xai KatacKoTns év wavy Boaxel mepitmerovtTes aXAN-Nous eudyovto rept Tas Kadoupévas Kuvos xehaas, at AOhwv ovoat TUKVa@Y Kai TAapadrAnrAwWY 34°

TITUS FLAMININUS

Their mutual proximity did not inspire them with fear, as might have been expected ; on the contrary, they were filled with ardour and ambition. For the Romans hoped to conquer the Macedonians, whose reputation for prowess and strength Alexander had raised to a very high pitch among them; and the Macedonians, who considered the Romans -superior to the Persians, hoped, in case they prevailed over them, to prove Philip a more brilliant commander than Alexander. Accordingly, Titus exhorted his soldiers to show themselves brave men and full of spirit, assured that they were going to contend against the bravest of antagonists in that fairest of all theatres, Greece ; and Philip, too, began a speech of exhortation to his soldiers, as is the custom before a battle. But, either by chance or from ignorance due to an inopportune haste, he had ascended for ' this purpose a lofty mound outside his camp, beneath which many men lay buried in a common grave, and a dreadful dejection fell upon his listeners in view of the omen, so that he was deeply troubled and refrained from battle that day.

VIII. Towards morning on the following day, after a mild and damp night, the clouds turned to mist, the whole plain was filled with profound darkness, a dense air came down from the heights into the space between the two camps, and as soon as day advanced all the ground was hidden from view. The parties sent out on either side for purposes of ambush and reconnaissance encountered one another in a very short time and went to fighting near what are called the Cynoscephalae, or Dog's Heads. These are the sharp tops of hills lying close alongside one another, 34!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dxpat rewrat &: opototnTa TOU OXNpATOS OUTAS 31).

9 U s \ > AN > '
avonacOncayv. 'yevopévwy Sé olov etxos Ev TOOLS
oxXnpots peraBorov xara tas puyas xat duw€ers, EXATEPOL TOIS TrovOovGLY GEL Kat UTTOYwpOvCEY ET -
a , b] ~~ 4 \
méurrovtes BonOeav éx Tov otpatoTéder, Kat 777 Tov aépos dvaxadatpopévov xaBopavtes Ta ytVOpeva TavoTpatia cuvéBanov.
To pev odv &e&ia mwepiqy o Piditrmos, €x TOTeV

a" a 9 , LY 4 a

Katagepav orn EeTTEpeicas THY Parayya Tots
'Pwpaios, To Bapos Tov avvacmicpod Kai Tv TpaxvrTnra THs MpoBor(Ns THY Taptowy OVX UTFOpevavtov Tov & evwvipou Svactacpoy dva Tous ogous Kal tepixrAacw AapRavorrTos, o Titos, TO ev NTTwWpEVOY UTTOYVOUS, Tpos 5é Odtepov okéws mapéerAdoas, TpowéBare Tots Maxedoot avoTHvat
pev eis ddrayya Kat wuKv@car Thy Taew ets 4 ef @ > A a" 9 , , Bados, Hrrep hy adn THs éxeivwv Svvapews, KWAVO-pévors Sta THY avwpadiay Kal TpayvTNTAa TeV / N + b ww ,

Ywpiwv, mpos S€ TO nat avdpa cuprréxecOat Bape cal ducépyo ypwpévors oT LO. Com yap e Ul ww ? 4 \ 9 c 4 0 >
n parayE éoxev apayw thy toxuy, Ews & Eat THA Kal THpEL TOY GUvacTLOopoOY év Takes jue.
Siarvbecions b€ kai thv nal' &va popny arorAdvar
T@Y paxopuévwv Exactos Sia Te TOY TpOTTOY THIS id , \ @ s) oe A » 9 A omTALTEWS KAL OTL TAVTOS OXOU TOLS Tap ANANA@Y

pépert padrov 7 Ot avroy ioxver. Tpatropévwy Sé¢ rovtwy ot pev ediwxov rors hevyovtas, at 8€
Tous paxyouéevous TOV Maxedovwy trapexdpamovTes 342
TITUS FLAMININUS

and got their name from a resemblance in their shape.
As was natural on a field so difficult, there were alternations of flight and pursuit, each party sending out aid from their camps to those who from time to time were getting the worst of it and retreating, until at last, when the air cleared up and they could see what was going on, they engaged with all their forces.!
With his right wing, then, Philip had the advantage, since from higher ground he threw his entire phalanx upon the Romans, who could not withstand the weight of its interlocked shields and the sharpness of its projecting pikes; but his left wing was broken up and scattered along the hills, and Titus, despair- ing of his defeated wing, rode swiftly along to the other, and with it fell upon the Macedonians. These were unable to hold their phalanx together and maintain the depth of its formation (which was the main source of their strength), being prevented by the roughness and irregularity of the ground, while for fighting man to man they had armour which was too cumbersome and heavy. For the phalanx is like an animal of invincible strength as long as it is one body and can keep its shields locked together in a single formation; but when it has been broken up into its parts, each of its fighting men loses also his individual force, as well because of the manner in which he is armed as because his strength lies in the mutual support of the parts of the whole body rather than in himself. This wing of the Macedonians being routed, some of the Romans pursued the fugi- tives, while others dashed out upon the flank of the

1 For a fuller description of the battle, cf. Livy, xxxiii. 7-10 (Polybius, xviii. 20-27).
343

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ék Trayiwv ExTELVOV, OOTE TAYY KAi TOUS VIKOVTAS
a Uf \ 54 ft
mepioTacba: xal devye ta SAA KataBad-NovTas. eErecov pev odv OKTAKLTXIAiwY OvK éXdTTOUS, Eddwoav O€ TEpi TeVTAaKLTYLALOUS. TOU dé tov Pikurmoy dadaras aredOeiv thv aitiayv
»: 9 / \ e \ , \
éxaBov AitwaAol, epi aptrayny yevouevor Kai mopOnaw Tod xapaxos éTt TOY 'Pwpaiwy di0-KovTwv, @oTe unOev evpeiv éexeivous émavenOovTas.
IX. pa@rov pev ovv éyévovto Aodopias Kal
S:ahopal mpos adAnAOovs avTois: ex 5é TOvTwY

A > AN \ 37 4 e A > , MadAOv aet Tov Titov édXvtrouy éEavTois avaTiOevtes
TO viknpa Kal TH pin mpoxatarapPavovtes TOUS
ef
"EdAnvas, Wate kal ypaderOat nal adecOar Tpo-Tépous éxeivous Ud TrounT@Y Kal idiwrav buvovv-
\ ?
Twv TO épyov. wv pddota Sia oTOpaTos Hy ToUTt
i
TO éTiypappa’
“Akravotot kai abarrot, odotrope, TOS él VOT @D @cocarins tpiccai KeipeOa pupiddes, Aitwrav Sunbevtes tr’ “Apeos 75é Aativer,
A , > , ” > 9 be 4
ovs Tiros evpeins ryay an’ ‘Iradins,
"Hyabin péeya ria. 70 6é Opacv xeivo Piri rou mvevpwa Oowy éhagdwy @yeT’ eXadportepov.
A , \ a
Tov érroinae pev Adxaios épuBpilov Pirinme
\ \ > \ a kal tov aptOporv tav amoPavovtwy éemipevadpevos,
4 \ A a a
Neyouevov S€ TOAAAXOD Kal Od TOAA@Y padAOV
>. ?- A 4 “a \ b. e \ \ bd nvia tov Titov) Tov Pidsrmov. 0 wey yap avtt-A N 9 aA A Kopupdoav tov Adxaiov T@ édeyeiw wapéBanev:
344

TITUS FLAMININUS

enemy who were still fighting and cut them down, so that very soon their victorious wing also faced about, threw away their weapons, and fled. The result was that no fewer than eight thousand Macedonians were slain, and five thousand were taken prisoners. Philip, however, got safely away, and for this the Aetolians were to blame, who fell to sacking and plundering the enemy’s camp while the Romans were still pur- _ suing, so that when the Romans came back to it they found nothing there. 7

IX. This, to begin with, gave rise to mutual quarrels and recriminations; but afterwards the Aetolians vexed Titus more and more by ascribing the victory to themselves and prepossessing the minds of the Greeks with the fame of it, so that they were mentioned first in the writings and songs of poets and historians who celebrated the event. Of these the one most in vogue was the following epigram in elegiac verses :— “‘‘Unwept and without graves are we, O traveller, who on this ridge of Thessaly lie dead, in number thirty thousand, subdued by the sword of the Aetolians, and of the Latins whom Titus led from spacious Italy, Emathia’s great bane. And the bold spirit that Philip had displayed was gone; it showed itself more agile than swift deer.”

This poem was composed by Alcaeus in mockery of Philip, and its author exaggerated the number of the slain; however, being recited in many places and by many persons, it gave more annoyance to Titus than to Philip. For Philip simply made fun of Alcaeus with an answering elegiac distich :— 345

4

ci

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“Ad dotos Kai ApvArdAos, odotTropE, THO ETL VOTE
"AAKaiw otaupos TiyvuTas nALBaTos tov d€ Titov dtdoTipovpevov mpos Tous” EXAnvas ov peTpiws tapwtuve ta Ttotavta. 616 Kal Ta UTONOLTA THY Tpayudtwv empaTrte Kal’ éavrov, éedaytota ppovtifwy tov Aitwrav. ot 5é 7xGovro, Kat mpoodeEapévov Aoyous avTov Kal mperBetay
éml aupBacect twapa tod Makedovos, tovTo
? a 1 of > \ \ ” / b) s éxeivot’ teptiovtes éri Tas adXas trodes EBowr,
a \ > 2 , \ > /
TorecOar Thy eipnynv Piriame, wapov éxxoyrar
\ 4 wv > a 9 \ e b e Tov qWoAEnov aponv Kal avedeivy apynv vd’ 1s
mpaTns edovAwOn To “EAAnviKOV. TadTa TOV AitwrAav RAeyovrwv Kai ss:atapatrovtwy Tovs
, > \ ¢ 4 : ‘ \ N
guppayxous, avTos 0 Dirimmos eAOwv mpos Tas
, b] A \ e , b 4 “
dtadvoes avetrAe thy vroiav, émiTpépas TO Titm nai ‘Popaio ta xa abtov. Kal odte
Ud N U e 4 \ \ \
Katadvetat Tov tTodenov o Titos' Kat THY pev

Makedovixny arédwxey ato Bactreav, THs dé ‘EAXabos mpocérakey atoctivat, xtdiows 5€ Ta-4 bd , \ N Le) 4 /
Advtos eCnpiwae, Tas 5€ vais Wacas TrapeiAETO
\ , “a , N 4 ,
TAY Séxa, ToY 5é maidwy Tov Etepov, Anprtpsor,
e 4 \ » ¢ , b] 4 ”
ounpevoovtTa AaRwv eis Paynv arécrerrev, aptota
TO KALPO Ypnodpevos Kal mpotaBov To pwéedXOV.
, A ~<
’AvviBouv yap rod AiBvos, advdpos éxOiorov te 4 ‘Pwpators cal huyddos, 75n ToTe mpos ’AvTioxov nKovtTos Tov RBactréa Kal TwrapoEvvovtos avrop ets 1 rouro éxetvo: Coraés, with the MSS. : rotro éxeivo after Reiake.
346 374

é

TITUS FLAMININUS

“ Leafless and without bark, O traveller, on this ridge A cross is planted for Alcaeus, and it towers in the sun ;

but Titus was ambitious to stand well with the Greeks, and such things irritated him beyond measure, For this reason he conducted the rest of his business by himself, and made very little account of the Aetolians. They on their part were displeased at this, and when Titus received an embassy from the Macedonian king with proposals for an agree- ment, they went round to the other cities vociferously charging him with selling peace to Philip, when it was in his power to eradicate the war entirely and destroy a power by which the Greek world had first been enslaved. While the Aetolians were making these charges and trying to make trouble among the Roman allies, Philip himself removed all grounds for suspicion by coming to terms and putting himself and his realm in the hands of Titus and the Remans. And in this manner Titus! put an end to the war ; he returned to Philip his kingdom of Macedonia, but ordained that he should keep aloof from Greece, exacted from him an indemnity of a thousand talents, took away all his ships except ten, and taking one of his sons, Demetrius, to serve as hostage, sent him off to Rome, thus providing in the best manner for the | present and anticipating the future.

For Hannibal the African, a most inveterate enemy of Rome and an exile from his native country, had already at that time? come to the court of King

1 Rather, the ten commissioners sent from Rome to settle the affairs of Greece (chapter x. 1). Cf.- Livy, xxxiii. 30

(Polybius xviii. 44).
: In 196 B.c., according to Nepos, Hannibal, vii. 6. According to Livy (xxxiii. 47), it was in the following year.

TO mpoodev mpoiévar TH TUX) Tis Suvdpews €Upoovans, Hon Kar ral' éauTov UT Mpaywatov peydrwv, a KaTEpyacdpevos peéyas emavouaa On,
Tpos THY am avTe@v nyenoviay droBhémovta, pa
Arora 8é KATO 'Peopatar dvig TaMevov, él pay TOUTO mpoidwy o Tiros _ Eup povess évedw@xe Tpos
Tas Siadvoes, ANNA TOV Dedummiov 6 'AvTio-XeKOs KaTerArnget TONE MOS éy TH 'Edda81, Kat ouvert TaV vn aireep d:pxpor por KOLV@V al
péyear Toe TOV TOTE Kal duvaTératot Baairewv € én THY 'Popny, éoxev ap ayavas €& UTapyijs Kal
KvOvVOUS TOV T pos "AvviBav ovbk €AATTOUS. vov 6é TOV TONE Lev peony Kara KQLpOV éuBadov THY elpnuny O Tiros, Kat mpiv apfacbat TOD HedovTa Siaxowpas TOV mapovTa, ToD pev THY éaxXaTny éedmida, Tob dé Thy mporny Upet rev.
X. 'Enrel S€ ot déea rpéoBers, ods r) oUyKANTOS
Emeue TH Tit, avveBovrevoy TOUS ped dAdous
EdAnvas érevOeporr, Kopw Aor dé xal bXarxida Kal Anyntpiaba Scatnpeiv eu povpous evexa THs pos
"Avtioxov dodpaneias, évravba 57 Tats KaTnyopiats Nam pot Lapmpas Tas TOAELS aveppryvucay Aitwaroi, tov pev Titov KedevovTEs Tas Tédas Tis
'EAAdbos vey (ott yap o Pirurros elder Tas Tpoerpnpevas TONELS dvopatery), tovs 6 "EAXqvas
cpwTavres et KAoLOY EXOVTES Bapbrepov Mev, NecoTepov 5é Tov mara TOV viv, Xaipovat, Kat avpdtovar tov 'Titov Os evEpryeTny, OTL TOU TOOdS Avoas THY "EAAdOa Tob TpAXNroV dédexev. eg' ols ax Oopevos o Tiros xat Bapéws pépwr, Kal Sedpevos Tov i aed TéXos eFérretce Kai TAUTAS
348

Antiochus, and was trying to incite him to further achievements while fortune gave his power successful course. Antiochus himself also, in consequence of the magnitude of his achievements, by which he had won the title of Great, was already fixing his eyes on universal dominion, and had a particular hostility to the Romans. Therefore, had not Titus, in view of all this, made favourable terms of peace, and had the war with Antiochus in Greece found the war with Philip still in progress there, and had a common cause brought these two greatest and most powerful kings of the time into alliance against Rome, that city would have undergone fresh struggles and dangers not inferior to those which marked her war with Hannibal. But as it was, by interposing an oppor- tune peace between the two wars, and by cutting short the existing war before the threatening war began, Titus took away the last hope from Philip, and the first from Antiochus.

X. And now the ten commissioners, who had been sent to Titus by the senate, advised him to give the rest of the Greeks their freedom, but to retain Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetrias under garrisons, as a safeguard against Antiochus. Thereupon the Aetolians stirred up the cities with the most vociferous denunciations, ordering Titus to strike off the shackles of Greece (for that is what Philip was wont to call these three cities), and asking the Greeks whether they were glad to have a fetter now which was smoother than the one they had worn before, but heavier; and whether they admired Titus as a benefactor because he had unshackled the foot of Greece and put a collar round her neck. Titus was troubled and dis- tressed at this, and by labouring with the commission

3

a

TAS TWodEls avetvar THS Ppovpas, Gmws OAOKANPOS
) xapis UrapEn map avtov trois "EAA.
"TcOpiwv odv ayopévoy TAOS pev avOpworwv év T@ aTabim KaOnoto Tov yuuMKoY ayava Jewpévor, ola 8 Sta ypovwv weTravpévns pév Tronéepov THs ‘EAXdSos er’ éAtriow eNevOepias, cadet dé elpnvn tavnyupitovans: tH odATyyt 5é aLwmis els Atravtas StadoPetons, mpoeOor eis wécov
o Knpve aveitrev Ott “Pwyaiwv 7 avyKANTOS Kat Titos Koivtios otparnyos bmatos Kcatato\eun-cavtes Bacthea Piritrmov xal Makeddovas, agidotv adpovpytous. Kal éXevOépouvs Kai adoporoynTous, vou“ots YXpwuevous Tois TaTpio.s, KopwvOiovs, Aoxpovs, Pwxeis, EvBoéas, Axatovs POiwras, Mayvntas, Mettarovs, TepparBovs. to fev OvY TWPATov ov mavu ravtTes ovdé cadas émynxovcav, Grr aveparos cat JopuBodns xivn-ais Wy év T@ atadio Oavpalovtwy Kat dtaTrur-Oavopévov kab madLw daveutrety KeXEVOVTOV: ws & avbis jaovyias yevouevns avayayeav o Kypv& thy gdwvnv mpoOvpotepoy eis atravtas eyeywver Kal dup AOe TO Kpvypa, Kpavyn pmev aTTLOTOS TO péyeE-Bos dua yapav éywper péxpt Oaradtrns, dpOov dé avecaotnket TO Béatpov, ovdels S€ AOYos Hv TeV aywuiCouevwv, Eatrevdov b€ TayTes avaTndjoat cal SeEt@oacOat Kai mpocetreiy Tov GwTipa THs ‘EAAaSos Kal mpopayov.

To 6€ modAdxts Neyouevov eis UrepBornv Tis gwvijs xai peyeBos whOn ToTe. Kopaxes yap 359

| an Aiea

TITUS FLAMININUS

finally persuaded it to free these cities also from their garrisons, in order that his gift to the Greeks might be whole and entire.
Accordingly, at the Isthmian games, where a great throng of people were sitting in the stadium and watching the athletic contests (since, indeed, after many years Greece had at last ceased from wars waged in hopes of freedom, and was now holding festival in time of assured peace), the trumpet signalled a general silence, and the herald, coming forward into the midst of the spectators, made procla- mation that the Roman senate and Titus Quintius Flamininus proconsular general, having conquered King Philip and the Macedonians, restored to free- dom, without garrisons and without imposts, and to the enjoyment of their ancient laws, the Corinthians, the Locrians, the Phocians, the Euboeans, the Achae- ans of Phthiotis, the Magnesians, the Thessalians, and the Perrhaebians. At first, then, the proclamation was by no means generally or distinctly heard, but there was a confused and tumultuous movement in the stadium of people who wondered what had been said, and asked one another questions about it, and called out to have the proclamation made again; but when silence had been restored, and the herald in tones that were louder than before and reached the ears of all, had recited the proclamation, a shout of joy arose, so incredibly loud that it reached the sea. The whole audience rose to their feet, and no heed was paid to the contending athletes, but all were eager to spring forward and greet and hail the saviour and champion of Greece.

And that which is often said of the volume and power of the human voice was then apparent to the 35!

a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

UTEPTTETOMEVOL KATA TUXHY ErrEecon Els TO OTAOLOD.
> 4 Y e a 90 Ca 4 \ € ‘\
aitia b€ TOU aépos pHkts' Stay yap 7 povn

A \ , / , e. 6°
TOAAH Kai peyaddn épyntat, Stactwpevos var
2. A b > 4 aA 4 9 > b , avThs ove avtepeides Tois tetopévots, GAN’ Or-cOnpa trot xadarep KevepBatovdo.r, € pn V1) Aia wAnyn Tie WadAXOV ws Ud Bédous dveXavv0-peva wrimte. Kat atroOvncxe. Svvatar dé Kat Tepidivnais e€lvat Tov dépos, olovy édtypov ep
4 \ 4 A , \ ,
merayel Kal Tadippuyny Tod aadov bia péyeOos
NapBavovTos. |
XI. ‘O & ovv Tiros, ef py tayrota ths Oéas
Siarvbetons vridopevos THY hopav tov mAjOovs \ \ , ge / J “A an 7 kat tov Spopov éFéxAvev, ovx dv édoxet trept-yevéoOat tocovTwy ood Kat tavtodev avT@ Teptyeonevwv. ws 6 atréxapov rept THY oKNVHY avtov Bowvtes 5n vuxtos ovans, aves obaTtivas
¥ A 4 A , + , \ idorev 1) hirous woAiTas daotralopevoe Kal Tept-
a 4
TAexopevot, mpos Seimva Kat ToTOUS eTPéTOVTO
a > 7F
eT GAANAWY. €v & Kal MAaAAOP, ws ELKOS, 7d0-
, 9 ! 4 \ . , \ aA
pévols emnet NoyilecOar Kai SiaréyeoOar TEpt Tis ‘EdAabos, Gaous TOAEUHnTAGA TroAcmoUS bia THY édevlepiav obtrw TUx0t BeBarotepov ovdé Hdrov a , ra auTns, éEtépwy Tpoaywvicapevwy odiryou Seiv dvaipaktos avty Kal arevOns hepopévn TO Kad-NoTOY Kal TeplmaynToTaToy aBrov. Hv 8 apa
, 4
omdviov pev avdpeia kat dpovnots év avOpwrras, otmaviwratov 5€ TaY adrAwY ayaday o dixatos.
oi yap Aynaoidac nal Avoavdpoar cat ot Nexiar 352

TITUS FLAMININUS

eye. For ravens which chanced to be flying overhead fell down into the stadium. The cause of this was the rupture of the air; for when the voice is borne aloft loud and strong, the air is rent asunder by it and will not support flying creatures, but lets them fall, as if they were over a vacuum, unless, indeed, they are transfixed by a sort of blow, as of a weapon, and fall down dead.! It is possible, too, that in such cases there is a whirling: motion of the air, which becomes like a waterspout at sea with a refluent flow of the surges caused by their very volume.

XI. Be that as it may, had not Titus, now that the spectacle was given up, at once foreseen the rush and press of the throng and taken himself away, it would seem that he could hardly have survived the ‘concourse of so many people about him at once and from all sides. But when they were tired of shouting about his tent, and night was already come, then, with greetings and embraces for any friends and fellow citizens whom they saw, they betook them- selves to banqueting and carousing with one another. And here, their pleasure naturally increasing, they were moved to reason and discourse about Greece, saying that although she had waged many wars for the sake of her freedom, she had not yet obtained a more secure or more delightful exercise of it than now, when others had striven in her behalf, and she herself, almost without a drop of blood or a pang of grief, had borne away the fairest and most enviable of prizes. Verily, they would say, valour and wisdom are rare things among men, but the rarest of all blessings is the just man. For men like Agesilaiis, or Lysander, or Nicias, or Alcibiades could indeed

1 Cf. the Pompey, xxv. 7.

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

kat ot "ArdxcBiddar rrodéwous pev ed Siérreny cai pPaxas windy xatd te yhv cal Odraccav apyov-Tes HTLoTavto, xpjcOar S& mpos xdpw evyertj Kat TO Kanrdv ols Katw@pOovv ovk eyvacay, aXX’ et TO MapaOwuov tis epyov abédor cal tH
év Zarapive vavpayiav nai Nvatards nai @eppomvAas Kai Ta mpds Evpupédovts cat Ta Tepi Kumpov Kipwvos épya, macas tas payas % ‘EdAds eri Sovrcia peudynrar mpos abthy, Kai wav TpoTaLoy avThs cuudopa Kai dverdos én’
auTny éoTnKe, TA TrEloTA KaKia Kal dtdoverxia TOY Hyoupévwr mepitparetans. adrAdpvAGL Se avdpes, evavopata piKpa Kal ydloxXpa KoLwVrpata Taraiod yévous exe Soxobvtes, ad’ Ov Kal oym Te Kal yroun TOY Xpnoipwev brapEa
Th EXAd& Oavpacrov Hv, oboe Tots peyiaTous xivduvots Kat movois éFersuevor thy ‘EXAdSa deatoTav Xarerav xal tupdvvwv édrevbepodat.
XII. Tatra 89 tovs “EXAnvas bane nal ra TOV Epywv o“oroyobrvtTa Tois KNpvyuacw. apa
yap éEéreumev 6 Titos Aévtdov pev eis ’Aciav Bapyvrujtas édevbepwmcovta, Steptivnov 8 ets @paxnv tas ab’toOs ores Kal vnoovs aTaddd-

Eovta tiv Dirirmov gpoupav. Tldmduos Se
OvirrALos emhee Starefouevos ’Avtidy@ mept THs
Tov vm autov EdAnven édevOepias. avtos dé 6
Tiros ets Xandxida maperOov, elta mrevoas
3 a) ? AN a exeiJev émi Maryvnaiav, éFirye tas dpoupas nai
Tas ToATElas dmredidou toils Syuots. dywovodérns
6 Nepetwv droderybels ev “Apyer tiv Te Tavn)- yup apiota SiéOnxe, kal mddww éxet tors
"Eddnot tiv édevOepiay bard knpuxos dvetrev.
354

conduct wars well, and understood how to be victori- . ous commanders in battles by land and sea, but they would not use their successes so as to win legitimate favour and promote the right. Indeed, if one excepts the action at Marathon, the sea-fight at Salamis, Plataea, Thermopylae, and the achievements of Cimon at the Eurymedon and about Cyprus, Greece has fought all her battles to bring servitude upon herself, and every one of her trophies stands as a memorial of her own calamity and disgrace, since she owed her overthrow chiefly to the baseness and contentiousness of her leaders. Whereas men of another race, who were thought to have only slight sparks and insignifi- cant traces of a common remote ancestry, from whom it was astonishing that any helpful word or purpose should be vouchsafed to Greece—these men under- went the greatest perils and hardships in order to rescue Greece and set her free from cruel despots and tyrants.

XII. So ran the thoughts of the Greeks; and the acts of Titus were consonant with his proclamations. For at once he sent Lentulus to Asia to set Bargylia free, and Stertinius to Thrace to deliver the cities and islands there from Philip's garrisons. Moreover, Publius Villius sailed to have a conference with Antiochus concerning the freedom of the Greeks who were under his sway. Titus himself also paid a visit to Chalcis, and then sailed from there to Magnesia, removing their garrisons and restoring to the peoples their constitutions. He was also appointed master of ceremonies for the Nemeian games at Argos, where he conducted the festival in the best possible manner, and once more publicly proclaimed freedom to the

3

6

ETLPOLT@VY TE Talis TOAETLY EvVOMLaY apa Kal
Sicny modAnv -opovoray te Kat dtAdoppoovyny mpos GAAyAous Trapelye, KaTAaATAVwWY pEev TAS
oTdces, Kataywv bé Tas duyds, ayadXopevos Sé
To Tree Kat Siadraccew Tous "EAAnvas ovyx HTTOv 7) TO KEexpatnxévar TOV Maxedover, date

puxpotatov dn Thy érevOepiay Soxeiy wy eveprye-TOUVTO.
Eevoxpatny pev obv tov -dirocogor, te Avxodpyos avTov oO pyTwp vie TeV TeAwVaV ayoLeE-VOV Tpos TO pEToLKLOY adelAETO Kal Tols ayovoLY éméOnxe Sixny THs acedyeias, AéyeTaL TOIS Tato ly anavtncavta tov Aucovpyou, ‘ Kadnv ye tuor, ® waides,” havat, “Te Twatpl yapw azrodidope:
mavTes yap auTov émawovow éd' ols émpake,” Titm 8€ cat ‘Pwpators wv tovs "EXAnvas evepryé-Tnaav ovx eis éraivous pmovoyv, aAAA Kai TioTeD
€v Tac avOpwrros Kal Svvapiv 7 Yapis aTrHnvTA
Sixaiws. ov yap mpoodeyopevot povoy Tous
HYEMOVAS AUTOY, GANA Kal peTATETrOMEVOL KAL Kanrobvres éveyetpitov avTovs. ovde Ojpor Kai modes, GAAa Kal Baotreis bd Etépwy abdiKxov-pevot Bacitéwy xatépevyov eis Tas éxeivwv xelpas, wote ev Bpayet ypovw, Taya Tov Kai Geo cuvehbatrtopévov, wavta avtois virnKtoa yevéoOar. Kal avdtos Sé péytotov eppovnoen er}
TH THs “EXAdbos EXevBepwoe. davaTieis yap eis Aerovs dotidas dpyupas nal tov éavtod Oupedy eméypawe:
356 dif

TITUS FLAMININUS

Greeks. Then he visited the different cities, establishing among them law and order, abundant Justice, concord, and mutual friendliness. He quieted their factions and restored their exiles, and plumed himself on his persuading and reconciling the Greeks more than on-his conquest of the Macedonians, so that their freedom presently seemed to them the least of his benefactions.

Xenocrates the philosopher, as the story runs, was once being haled away to prison by the tax-collectors for not having paid the alien’s tax, but was rescued out of their hands by Lycurgus the orator, who also visited the officials with punishment for their impu- dence. Xenocrates afterwards met the sons of Lycurgus, and said: ‘“ My boys, I am making a noble return to your father for his kindness towards me ; for all the world is praising him for what he did.” In the case of Titus and the Romans, however, gratitude for their benefactions to the Greeks brought them, not merely praises, but also confidence among all men and power, and justly too. For men not only received the officers appointed by them, but actually sent for them and invited them and put themselves in their hands. And this was true not only of peoples and cities, nay, even kings who had been wronged by other kings fled for refuge into the hands of Roman officials, so that in a short time—and perhaps there was also divine guidance in this— everything became subject to them. But Titus him- self took most pride in his liberation of Greece. For in dedicating at Delphi some silver bucklers and his own long shield, he mp them with this inscription :—

Znvos tw xpattrvaiar yeyabotes immoauvaict
Kovpot, iw Swraptas Tuvéapidas Bactreis, Aiveddas Titos tupty vréptatoy wrace Spor,
e Ld 4 '\ ? ld
EXAnver tevEas tratciy €dAevGepiav.
7 aveOnxe S€ Kai ypvaovvy To ATOAAWNML CTéEhavor émeypawas.
Tovde tot apBpocioar éri mroxdpotow Eorre |
xetaOat, Aatoléa, ypuvcopan atépavor, ov? opev Aiveadav tayos péyas. GAr,
"Exdepye,
arxas TO Dei xidos dtrale Tite.
s TH 8 ovv? Kopi iw more mpos tous" EXAAnvas \ > N A w , \ \ , >
To auto dis dn cupBéBnKe: Kai yap Titos év
- , ' \ , e > ea 9
Kopw0@ tore xai Népwv avis xa? nyas ev
>
KopivO@ wapamaAnoiws 'Icbuiwr ayopévwv tovs
"EdAnvas édevOépous Kal avtovduous adjKay, o
pev ba KypuKos, ws elpntat, Népwy 5é€ abtos érri THS ayopas amo Byyatos év TO TANOEL SypNyo-pyoas. adda tadta pev dotepov.

XTIT. 'O 6€ Tiros tote xadXiotou Kai dixato-Ttatov tov mpos NaBiv apEapevos toNémou, Tov
Aaxedatpoviov éEwréotatTov xal Tapavopwtarov Tupavvon, ev TH TérEL OvefrevaaTo Tas THs 'EAAabos
édmidas, édeiv tapacyov ovK eOednoas, adda
oTELTAaMLEVOS Kal Tpoe"EVOS THY LTapTny avakios Sovrevovaay, elite Setcas 7) Tov TroNé"oUv pHKOS
AapuBavovros Adros aro 'Pwpyns ereOwv otpa-
1 Zouce an anonymous correction adopted by Sintenis? and Blass ; Coraés and Bekker retain the vulgate &@nxe.

2 tv Bekker corrects to 8s, after Jacobs.

* 8 ody Bekker and Blass: yoor.
358

TITUS FLAMININUS

““Q ye sons of Zeus, whose joy is in swift horsemanship, O ye Tyndaridae, princes of Sparta, Titus, a descendant of Aeneas, has brought you a most excellent gift, he who for the sons of the Greeks wrought freedom.”
He also dedicated a golden wreath to Apollo, and it bore this inscription :— ,
“ This will fitly lie on thine ambrosial locks, O son of Leto, this wreath with sheen of gold; it is the gift of a great leader whose descent is from Aeneas. Therefore, O Far-darter, bestow upon the god-like Titus the glory due to his prowess.”

It follows, then, that the city of Corinth has twice now been the scene of the same benefaction to the Greeks; for it was in Corinth that Titus at this time, and at Corinth that Nero again in our own times—in both cases at the Isthmian games—made the Greeks free and self-governing, Titus by voice of herald, but Nero in a public address which he delivered in person, on a tribunal in the market-place amidst the multitude. This, however, came at a later time.!

XIIT. Titus now began a most honourable and righteous war, the war against Nabis, that most pernicious and lawless tyrant of Sparta, but in the end he disappointed the hopes of Greece. For though it was in his power to capture the tyrant, he refused to do so, and made peace with him, thus leaving Sparta to the fate of an unworthy servitude. He was led to this step either by his fear that a protraction of the war would bring another general from Rome

ar

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 \
THrYyos aveAntat thy dokay, eite Piroverkia Kal
4 ”~ ‘ “ 4 a
CnrotuTia Tay Pirotroipevos Tiwov, dv Ev TE TOS
, “~ € ,
aAXots atracw avdpa Sewvoratoy tav EAAnver
“A ‘ byTa Kai Trept exeivov Tov ToAELOY Epya Oavpacta ‘’ AY e 9 4 Ww “~ a TOABNS Kat SeLvoTnTos amoberFapevov iva tp Term
‘ “” “A xvdaivovtes Axatot Kal TLL@VTEs ev TOS Deat pats
a “A ,

é\urrouv éxeivov, ovx aktovvta “Pwpaiwyv vate mpoToNenouvTe THS ‘EAAdSos avOpwrrov "Apxaéda, [LKp@V Kal opopwrv wore“mwov aoTpatryov, Smog
, 9 b) ”“~ b \ ? b >) N e
Oavyalerbar trap avtois. ov pnv ard autos o
Tiros imep Tovtwy amredoyeito, xataflécBar Tov
, e es \ “A 4 ”~ w
TOAELOVY WS EWPA TUY KAK®@ peyad@ TwWY adrwv Vraptiatav atTroAoupevoy Tov TYpavvoV.
Tov 6€ “Ayatay atit@ Todda Tpos Tiny
\ , \
Wndicapévoy ovdev édoxer mpos Tas evepyecias éEccovobar wAnv plas Swpeds, Hv éexeivos avi
, > 7 « \ , e ’ e
TwTavtTwy nyarnoev. mv dé torade. “Pwpaiwy oi Svatuxynaavtes é€v two mpos ‘AvyiBay Troréue aA \ w Ud ,
TWOANAKOU ev wHLOL yevouevot Kal dtacTrapEVTeEsS at ‘ edovrevov év d€ TH EXAdS yidsoe Kat Staxoctot
‘ “ ? > \ \ > \ fo! ~
To TANnIOS Hoay, del pév OixTpol THS peTaBorARs, Ul \ A e > , b lA ¢ tote 6€ Kal MaAXOV, WS ElKOS, EVTUYYaVOPTES Of pev lots, ot dé adeAdois, of 5€ cuvnOeaty, edevOE-pots SovrA0L Kal viKwow alypdrwToL. TovTOUS Oo pev Titos ov« adeireto TOY KEexTnLévwV, KaiTrEp 9 / 9 % b) A e \ 9 ,
aviwpevos em’ avtots, ot 6¢ 'Ayatol AUTPwCapEVOL 1 Cf. the Philopoemen, xv. 1-3.

to succeed him and rob him of his glory, or by his jealous displeasure at the honours paid to Philopoemen. For in all other matters Philopoemen was a most capable man among the Greeks, and in that war particularly he displayed astonishing deeds of ability and daring, so that he was extolled by the Achaeans | as much as Titus, and equally honoured in their theatres. This annoyed Titus, who thought it out of keeping that a man of Arcadia, who had held command in small border wars, should receive just as much admiration from the Achaeans as a Roman consul, who was waging war in behalf of Greece.}

However, Titus himself had this to say in defence of his course, namely, that he put an end to the war when he saw that the destruction of the tyrant would involve the rest of the Spartans also in serious disaster."

The Achaeans voted Titus many honours, none of which seemed commensurate with his benefactions except one gift, and this caused him as much satis- faction as all the rest put together. And this was the gift: The Romans who were unhappily taken prisoners in the war with Hannibal had been sold about hither and thither, and were serving as slaves. In Greece there were as many as twelve hundred of them. The change in their lot made them pitiful objects always, but then even more than ever, natur- ally, when they fell in with sons, or brothers, or familiar friends, as the case might be, slaves with freemen and captives with victors. 'These men Titus would not take away from their owners, although he was distressed at their condition, but the Achaeans

* Titus offered this defence of his course to the congress of Greek states at Corinth (Livy, xxxiv. 48 f.).

TEvTE evan éxaaTov dvépa Kal sUvaTyaryovTES els TAUTO mavras non mept wAovv GvTt 7@ Tit Tape- dwxay, @ dare aurov evppacvopevov amo hei, amo KaXav € epyav KaNaS dporBas Kat TpeTrovaas avopt peyary Kal prrorrohiry KEKOpLG MEVOV" 0 57 Soxet ™pos TOV OpiauBov avT@ TavTav vmapEar Lape po- TaTov. ot yap. avdpes ovtrot, xaOatrep EBos éati Tots OlKEeTaLS érav édevdepwOaow, EvpecOat re Tas Keparas Kal midia hopeir, TavTa dpacavtes autot OprauBevorti TO Tite TapelTrovTo.

XIV. Kadri 8€ cai ta Addupa TOMTEvouEva maperyev oyu, "1 AAgvena xpavy Kat TENT AL Maxedovirat Kat odpicat. TO TE TOV Xenpat av TAOS ovK oALyov WV, @S avaypadovoety ot Trepl Tovd:tavov ev T@ OptduBo Koyo Ojvar Xpua tov pev TVYKEX VEL LEVOV ALTpas TpLOXLALAS ewra- Koolas dexatpeis, apyupouv 6é TET PAKLG MUpLas TpLrXALAS Siaxocias éBSounxovra, pudimaetous dé ypucots puptous Tetpaxia xudious TEVTAKOTLOUS dexatércapas, yopis 6€ TovTwy Ta xidia tddavTa Pirvraro0s aiperrev. aAv\a TavtTa pev DaTepov érreia Onaav - Popaior, padiata Tov Titov cupmpa.- Eavros, apeivas T@ irinre, Kat o Umpaxov eynpicarto, Kal Tov vioy amnddrAatav avT@ Tis opnpetas.

XV. "Emel d€ 0 "AVTLOXOS els thy ‘“EAAdéba
vavat ToAAais Kal oTpaT@ meparoeis apiorn Tas odes Kal dsuectaciaverv, AitwrAwv avT@ ouveTriiapPavopéevay Kal marae Sraxetpevwv Trpos en a AG, CTT

1 The mina was one sixtieth part of a talent, or one hundred drachmas, ransomed them all at five minas! the man, collected them together, and made a present of them to Titus just as he was about to embark, so that he sailed for home with a glad heart; his noble deeds had brought him a noble recompense, and one befitting a great man who loved his fellow citizens. This appears to have furnished his triumph with its most glorious feature. For these men shaved their heads and wore felt caps, as it is customary for slaves to do when they are set free, and in this habit followed the triumphal car of Titus.

XIV. But a more beautiful show was made by the spoils of war which were displayed in the procession —Greek helmets and Macedonian bucklers and pikes. Besides, the amount of money exhibited was large. Tuditanus records that there were carried in the procession three thousand seven hundred and thirteen pounds of gold bullion, forty-three thousand two hundred and seventy pounds of silver, and fourteen thousand five hundred and fourteen gold coins bear- ing Philip's effigy.2 And apart from this money Philip owed his fine of a thousand talents.? This fine, however, the Romans were afterwards persuaded to remit to Philip, and this was chiefly due to the efforts of Titus; they also made Philip their ally, and sent back his son whom they held as hostage.

XV. Presently, however, Antiochus crossed into Greece* with many ships and a large army, and began to stir the cities into faction and revolt. The Aetolians made common cause with him, a people which had long been most inimically disposed towards ° These ‘‘ Philips” were nearly equivalent to sovereigns. Cf. Livy’s description of the triumph (xxxiv. 52). 3 Cf. chapter ix. 5. 4 In the autumn of 192 r.c.

tov Pwpatwy Sipov éyOpas rai trodkeunas, Utro-Jeaw tov Trodéuou Kai tpodaciy SidovtTwr é€dev-

Depovy tous ”"EddAnvas ovdev Seopévous (EAevOepar 9 \ @) Xr > , > 2 ’ ” =
yap noav » a EUTT PETTED TEPAaS AtTtLas aTropta Tm@” 3

KaAXNoT@ TOV ovopatwv xpncOat SidacKorTwr,

Kat apodpa Seioavres ot ‘Pwpato: thy avactacty

xat So€av avrov ris Suvdpews, otTpatryor per

VTarov Tov ToAEwov Maviov' Axidoy catérepray,

/

mpeoBeutnv d€ Titov d:a tous” EAAnvas, Ov Tovs

pev ev0us opOeis éroince BeBatotépous, tous de dpKXomévous vooeivy MaTrep TL’ ev Katlp@ hapsaxov

evdiSous Thy mMpos avtov evvotay Eotnce Kai

Suex@Avoev eEapapteiv. odyou 5é avtov éFépuryov

\
non TooxarerAnpmevoe Kal StepOappévoe travra-n “ la
mac wmro Tov AiTwAav, ods Kaitrep opytaOeis
\ A Kat twapokvvOels Guws peTa THY paxnY TreEpte-4 b ld \ Cy \ 9 UA
mwoinoev. Avtioxos yap nT TnGeis ev BeppotruNacs

Kat duyov evOvs eis “Aciay amémdevoe, Marios

, ¢ ‘ A ~

5 0 bratos Tous pev avTos ériwv tav AitoXov

, A aA

emToNLopKel, Tovs dé TH Bactrel Didi cuveyo-

pnoev éEarpeiv. dyouevwy S€ xal hepopévwv wo

A , A \ “4 \ ‘4
Tov Maxedovos toto péev AordoTrwr Kai Mayvyrop,
“ \ 9 , \ 3 ~ > a \ routo € 'A@apdvev nai ‘Arepavtav, avtov sé
a 4 A \ ¢ , ‘4
tov Maviou tiv péev Hpdxrerav d:atrerropOnxotos,
A \ 2 > A 9 4 ~
tnv d€ Navzraxtov AitwXav éxovtwy todLopKovr-

TOS, olKTELpwY TOUS "EXAnvas o Tiros StérAevcev

1 Gowep 1: Coraés, Bekker, and Blass, after Stephanus ;

WOanEp TES.

the Romans, and they suggested to him, as a pretext that would account for the war, that he should offer the Greeks their freedom. The Greeks did not want to be set free, for they were free already; but for lack of a more appropriate ground for his action the Aetolians taught Antiochus to make use of that fair- est of all names. The Romans, greatly alarmed by reports of defection among the Greeks and of the power of Antiochus, sent out Manius Acillius as consular general for the war, but made Titus his lieutenant to please the Greeks. The mere sight of him confirmed some of these in their loyalty to Rome, while to others, who were beginning to be infected with disloyalty, he administered a timely medicine, as it were, in the shape of good will towards himself, and thus checked their malady and prevented them from going wrong. <A few, however, escaped his influence, having been already won over beforehand and totally corrupted by the Aetolians, but even these, in spite of his vexation and anger, were spared by him after the battle. For Antiochus was defeated at Thermopylae ! and put to flight, and at once sailed back to Asia; while Manius the consul went against some of the Aetolians himself and besieged them, leaving others to King Philip to destroy. And so it came about that the Dolopians and Magnesians here, the Athamanians and Aperan- tians there, were harried and plundered by the Macedonians, while Manius himself, after sacking Heracleia, was engaged in the siege of Naupactus, which the Aetolians held. Then Titus, out of pity for the Greeks, sailed across from Peloponnesus to 1 In 191 B.c. For a description of the battle, cf. Livy, xxxvi, 14-21.

to

€x [leXotovvijcou mpos tov imatov. Kat TpaTov

\ > , 3 \ > a ” @ o
bev erretiunoen el vevixnkw@s autos Ta ETADKA TOU moréuou Dirirrov é& hépecOa, cai tprBopevos epi pa more KaOnras Se dpynv, GOvn Sé ove ddirya nal Bactreias Maxeddves aipodow. étrevta
TOV TrOALOpKOULEevwY, @S Eldov avTOY, amo TOU
Telyous avakanovvTwy Kal xElpas OpeyovTwY Kai Seopévwv, TOTE pev ovdev EiTr@v, AAA oTpadels cat Saxpvcas amndOev, datepov 5é SiarexPeis TO Maviw nai xatarravoas Tov Ovpov adbtod dverpa-
A A a ,
Eato tois AitwAois dvoxas SoOjvat, Kal ypovov
év @ mpeaBevoartes eis “Payny petpiov Tivos
Tuxely aFi@covat. |
XVI. Wdeiorov 5é dyava Kxal rovov avT@ maperyov ai epi Xadxidéwy Sejoets mpos Tov
/ > A s > Manop, év opyn yeyovotwy Sia Tov yapoy by Trap
a) 4 ? a)
autay éeynuev Aytioyos On Tov Trodkémou ouve-
” 9 ’ e SOA , > >
oTWTOS, ov Kab wpay ovdé KaTa KaLpov, AX > N >) \ 4 Ul 4 Q épacbeis uvnp mpeaButepos xopns, 1) Ouyatnp pev nv KdeotrroA€puou, cardrioty b€é AéyeTat trapbevwy yevéoOar. tTovto Tovs Xadxtbets éerroince Bactnri-cat wpoOupotata Kal THY ToALY aUT@ Tpos TOY TONELOV OpLYNTIpLov Tapadyxelv. exEivos pev ovV
WS TAXLOTA ETA TiVY pay hevywv mpocéuske ™ Xadkidt, tTHv Te Kopnv avadraBav Kat ra Xpnmata Kat tovs dirous eis "Aciav arém\evce:
‘\ be M / "Ov > \ a \ ? A Tov 6€ Mdwov evOvds emi tovs Xadkideis. ody opyty
8

TITUS FLAMININUS

the consul. At first he chided Manius because, although the victory was his own, he was permitting Philip to carry off the prizes of the war, and to gratify his anger was wasting time in the siege of a single city, while the Macedonians were subduing many nations and kingdoms. Then, when the besieged citizens caught sight of him from their walls and called aloud upon him and stretched out their hands to him imploringly, he turned away, burst into tears, and left the place, without saying anything more at the time; afterwards, however, he had an interview with Manius, put an end to his wrath, and induced him to grant the Aetolians a truce, and time in which to send an embassy to Rome with a plea for moderate terms.

XVI. But the hardest toils and struggles fell to Titus when he interceded with Manius in behalf of the Chalcidians. They had incurred the consul's wrath because of the marriage which Antiochus had made in their city after the war had already begun, a marriage which was not only unseasonable, but unsuitable for the king's years, since he was an elderly man and had fallen in love with a girl (the girl was a daughter of Cleoptolemus, and is said to have been most beautiful among maidens).! This marriage in- duced the Chalcidians to take the king's side most zealously and allow their city to be his base of opera- tions for the war. Antiochus, therefore, fleeing with all speed after the battle at Thermopylae, came to Chalcis, and taking with him his girl-wife, his treasure, and his friends, sailed back to Asia; but Manius immediately marched against Chalcis in a rage. He was accompanied, however, by Titus, who

t Cf. the Philopoemen, xvii. 1}.

Topevopevov o Tiros mTapaxodovd wy euaharre Kau TapnTéito Kal Téhos émerce Kal Kxatetpauver, avtov Te kai Tav év TédAEL 'Pwpaiwy Sedpevos.
3 Odtw dtacwbévtes ot Xadrxideis Ta KdddCTA Kal péeytota Tov map auTOts avadnpatav TO Tire xabrépwaar, Ov emrvypapas gore TOLAUTAS ax pe viv opay- "O Shuos Tite cat '"Hpaxdrei 70
yupvdstov," érépwOt dé madLy, '0 Ojos Tit 4 Kat "AtroAAwve TO Acrpiviov." ére b€ Kal Kal?
7mas lepeus Xetporovytos amedeixvuto Titov, xai vaoavTes avTo TOV orrovdey yevomevay adovot
Tatava TET OLNLEVOD, ov Tada 61a pijKos Tyyets Taperres dveypaayev & ravopevoe Ths @Oijs Aéyouat:
miotw dé 'Po pater oéBopev,
Ta MeyadevKTOTA TAY Opkots guraacev

péMere Kovupat,

ZLinva peyav Popayp Te Tirov 0 dpa 'Pwpaiwv

TE TLOTLY"
inie Ilarav, @ Tite o@tep.

XVII. "Heap dé Kal Tapa TOV adov 'EAMivov!

Topal T peTrovg at, Kat TO Tas THbas arnOivas TmoLobv, evvola Gavpacrn bu emueiKeray jOous. Kat yap el Tow &€x mpaypaTov } pirotipias évera, xadarep PDrdrorroipert Kai maduy Avopaver oTpaTn-yourTe TOV "Axaon, 7 pog éxpovcey, OUK nv Bapus ove' els Epya Siateiveov 0 Oupos, arn' ev Aoy@ mappnotap Tuva TONLTLANY éXovTe TrAvO"EVOS.
2 miKkpos pev ody ovdevi, TOAAO!s O€é OFS eOoKEL Kad

1 gav BAAwy 'EAAfvwyv Coraés and Blass, after Bryan: ta» .
"RAAAva.
368

TITUS FLAMININUS

Lried to mollify and intercede with him and at last won him over and calmed him down by entreaties addressed both to him and the other Romans in _ authority.

Having been thus saved by Titus, the Chalcidians dedicated to him the largest and most beautiful of the votive offerings in their city, and on them such inscriptions as these are still to be seen: " This gymnasium is dedicated by the people to Titus and Heracles," and again in another place, "This Del-phinium is dedicated by the people to Titus and Apollo."" Moreover, even down to our own day a priest of Titus is duly elected and appointed, and after sacrifice and libations in his honour, a set hymn of praise to him is sung: it is too long to be quoted entire, and so I will give only the closing words of the song:
"And the Roman faith we revere, which we have solemnly vowed to cherish; sing, then, ye maidens,'to great Zeus, to Rome, to Titus, and to the Roman faith: hail, Paean Apollo! hail, Titus our saviour !"'
XVII. He also received from the rest of the. Greeks fitting honours,and these were made sincere by the astonishing good will which his equitable nature called forth. For even if the conduct of affairs or the spirit of rivalry brought him into collision with any of them, as, for instance, with Philopoemen, and again with Diophanes the general of the Achaeans, his resentment was not heavy, nor did it carry him into violent acts, but when it had vented itself in the outspoken language of free public debate, there was an end of it. However, he was never bitter,

Kovgos elva. THv duaw, arArAwWs Se auvyyever Bat mdavTwv HnotoTos Kal eimrety émiyapis peta Setvotntos. ‘Axatovs pev yap aodetepifopévous thy ZaxvvOiwv vicov atotpérav ébn xuvdvvevoey, av @OTED al YEAM@vat ToppwTépw THY Kearny TIS [leXorrovynaov mpoteivwot' Diritrov 4é, omnvixa
a Aa 4
Tépt oTropowyv Kal elpnvns TO TpwToV Els OYOUS TUYHETAY, ELTOVTOS META TrOAA@Y HKELY ExELVO,
a e \ , >
avtov 5€ povov, UToAaBwv o Titos, “ AvTov yap, y elt > ’ , \ ,
eon, ‘‘povoy étoinoas amoKxtelvas Tous pidous
“a e ,
Kal ovyyeveis.” érel dé Aetvoxpdtns o Mecanuos
’ e , \ , \ bY V4 \
€v Pawn rapa troroy peOvabels apynoato NaBov ipuatiov yuvaixetov, TH 8 baTepaia Tov Titov nEtou
“A A 4 \
BonOeiv ait@ Stavoovpevm thy Meoonvny adr-
, a 9 a a \ ” 4
otavat tov Ayalov, Tavta pev edn oxérecOar, Oavpdlew dé éxeivor, et tHrALKaAVTALs émLKEYeL-enxas mpakeow opyeto0at Sivatat Tapa ToTov kai ade. mpos d€ tovs ‘'Ayatovs TeV Trapa
"Avtioxouv mpéaBewy AROS te! THs BactdKAs oTpaTlas KatadeyovTwv Kai KxatapiOpoupévor \ la e , # aA
moAANas poonyopias, o Titos épyn Seemvodvtos
’ an \ a , \ / \ “~
avTod mapa Te Eévm Kai peudopuévou To TAHOos Tay Kpe@v Kai Oavydlovtos tobev otTw ToiKirns ayopas evtropyaey, eitrety tov Edvov, ws Dera tTravta DJ \ “A , / a.’ A e , cori TH oxevacia dtapépovra wai rois Sto pas.
” e A /
“My town, edn, “ unde dpets, @ dvdpes ‘Ayaroi, 1 gAHjOos ts Coraés and Bekker have wAj@os re, after Bryan.
37°

although many imputed hastiness and levity to his nature, and in general he was a most agreeable companion and able to say a graceful thing with force. For instance, when he was trying to dissuade the Achaeans from appropriating the island of Zacyn- thos, he said it would be dangerous for them, like a tortoise, to stick their head out of its Peloponnesian shell! Again, when he held his first conference with Philip concerning a truce and peace, and Philip remarked that Titus had come with many attendants while he himself had come alone, Titus answered, " Yes, thou hast made thyself alone by slaying thy friends and kindred." 2 Again, when Deinocrates the Messenian, who had taken too much wine at a drinking-party in Rome, and after putting on a woman's robe had executed a dance, on the following day asked Titus to assist him in his plan to separate Messene from the Achaean league, Titus said he would consider the matter ; " But I am amazed,"' said he, "that when thou hast matters of so great moment in hand, thou canst dance and sing at a drinking- party."'% And once more, when an embassy from Antiochus was recounting to the Achaeans the vast multitude of the king's forces and enumerating them all by their various appellations, Titus said that once, when he was dining with a friend, he criticised the multitude of: meats that were served, wondering where he had obtained so varied a supply; where- upon his host told him they were all swine's flesh, and differed only in the way they were cooked and dressed. 'And soin your case," said he, 'men of 1 Cf. Livy, xxxvi. 32; Plutarch, Morals, p. 197 b. * Cf. Morals, p. 197 a (Polybius, xviii. 7). 3 Cf. the Philopoemen, xviii. tf. (Polybius, xxiii. 5).

37!
BB 2
to

Javpatete tHv. Avtioxou Stvapuv AoyXopapous Kat
Evatopopous cai weferaipovs axovovtes: TavTes
\ @ 4 > \ e 4 } , 99
yap ovtTot Lupo. evotv oTAaplols dvadeporTes.
XVIII. Mera &€ tas "EXAnuixas mpakews Kat \ ' ' / ? , 4 es
tov AvtioxeKov TOAEMOY aTredeLyOn TiLNTHS, ATES €otiy apxn peyioTn Kal TpdTov Tiva TIS TWoN-Teas emiTEAEiwals. Kal cuvnpye ev ad'T@ Map-
, a , e* , er 2g /
KéAXOU TOU TEVTaKLS UTAaTEVaaVTOS ViOs, EFEBaXov
d€ Ths BovArs TaY ovK ayay éripavav Téccapas, mpoaedéEavto dé ToAITAS AToypahopévous TavTas, door yovéwy érevOépwy Haoav, dvayxacbévtes vrr0
A , , , & b] ¢
tov Snudpyou Tepevtiov KovAéwvos, ds emnpeatwv
Tois apioToKpatixois Emerce TOv SHyov tadTa

Wwndicacbac.
Ta de 4 > > A ? } a Q
av S€ yywpipwratwv KaT avTov avdpav Kat
peylatwy évy TH Tore StadhEepopéevwy mpos adrA7-Dous, Adpixavod Sxynmiwvos cai Mdpxov Katwvos, Tov pev Tpoeypawe THs Bours, ws aptotoy avdpa
\ a , » ~#»9 Y] 2 a Kai mpwtor, Katwu 6 eis ExOpav nrAOe cupghopa
4 . 4 J \ = rvs ,
ToLavTN Ypnodpevos. adeAddos jv Titw Aevetos
Praptvivos, ote Ta ANA TpoceoiKas éKxEivH
‘ 4 ” a e a > / fe)
Tv gdvow év TE Tais HOovais avedevOepos Servas
Kai OALyYwWpoTATOS TOU TpEeTTOVTOS. TOUTM TUVHV petpakioxos épw@pevos, by Kal oTpaTias apywv émnyeto Kat duétwv éetapyias eiyev dei epi
aurov. év ovv TOT TLVi OpuTTToOpEevos pos TOV
1 Cf. Morals, p. 197 ¢ (Livy, xxxv. 49).
372
379

TITUS FLAMININUS

Achaia, do not be astonished when you hear of the Spear-bearers and Lance-bearers and Foot-companions in the army of Antiochus; for they are all Syrians and differ only in the way they are armed.” !

XVIII. After his achievements in Greece and the war with Antiochus, Titus was appointed censor.” This is the highest office at Rome, and in a manner the culmination of a political career. ‘Titus had as colleague in this office a son of the Marcellus? who had been five times consul, and the two censors ejected from the senate four men of lesser note, and received into citizenship all who offered themselves for enrolment, provided they were born of free parents. To this step they were forced by the tribune Terentius Culeo, who wanted to spite the nobility and so persuaded the people to vote the measure.

The two men of his time who were most notable and had the greatest influence in the city, Scipio Africanus and Marcus Cato, were at variance with one another. Of these, ‘Titus appointed Scipio to be Dean of the Senate,‘ believing him to be its best and fore- most nian; but with Cato he came into hostile relations, owing to the following unfortunate circum- stances. Titus had a _ brother, Lucius, who was unlike him in all other ways, and especially in his shameful addiction to pleasure and his utter contempt of decency. This brother had as companion a young boy whom he loved, and took him about and kept him always in his train, whether he was commanding an army or administering a province. At some drinking party, then, this boy was playing the coquet

* Tn 189 B.c. 3 Cf. chapter i. 3.
4 Cf. the Wtherius Gracchus, iv: 1; Cato the Elder, xvii. 1.
373

So]

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Aevxiov ottws pn chodpa pireiv avtov, ware Oéay povopayor atroXTrety ovTH yeyovws avOpwmou povevouevov Oeatis, To pos exeivov ndv TOD \ Cd ‘ ’ 4, ‘ , id N , Tpos avTov ey mAElovt Noy Oéuevos. o Se A€eveios
e A 66 > 7. 99 69 66 6 , +7 \ 9 , nabeis “ Ovdev,” Epn, “ detvov idcopar yap eyo cou Thy emiupmiav.” Kat Kedevoas eva THY KaTA-Sixov €x Tod Secpwtnpiov tpoayOjvat, Kat Tov UITNPETNY PETATEUWA[LEVOS, EV TO TVUTIOGL@ TpoGérakev atroxowat Tod dvOpwrouv tov tpayndrov.
’ , \ 9 , b) b] VA , 9 9
OvarrE€ptos 5é ‘Avtias ovK epwpéva pyaiv, adr
épwuévn ToUTO yapicacOar tov Aevxiov. o dé AiBtos év Aoym Katavos adrod yeypad0at dyaiy,
e , > , , \ 4 N
as Tadatnv avtoporov éMovta peta traidwy Kai yuvaros emt tas Oupas deEdpevos els TO TUpTOGLOV
o Aevxios améxtewver idta YeLtpt TH Epwpevy Yapt-Copevos. TOUTO Ev ovv ELKOS Els Seivwown elphabat
THS KaTHYyoptas Uiro tov Katwvos: ote b€ ov«
9 4 ” ? \ , e ’ \ ‘ avTomoros nV, adda SeapwTns 0 avaipeOeis Kai
éx ToY KaTadixwy, adrOL TE TOAXOL Kai Kexépav
6 pytwp év THe wept yipws avt@ Kdtow ry
Sunrynow avabets etpnxev.
XIX. “Emi rovtrm Kadtov tipntyns yevouevos
Kai Kabaipwrv thy cuyKAnTOV arnArace THS BourTs tov Aevxtov, UtTratixod pev aki@patos bvtTa, cuva-ripovabar bé tod adedpod Soxodytos avT@. S10
, > N on ? ‘, Q
Kal mpoeNOovtes ets TOV Ojpoy audoTEepot TaTrewot
1 Cf. Livy, xxxix. 43.

with Lucius, and said he loved him so ardently that he had come away from a show of gladiators in order to be with him, although he had never in all his life seen a man killed; and he had done so, he said, because he cared more for his lover's pleasure than for his own. Lucius was delighted at this, and said : “ Don’t worry about that! I will give thee thy heart's desire.” Then ordering a man who had been condemned to death to be brought forth from his prison, and sending for a lictor, he commanded him to strike off the man’s head there in the banquet-hall. Valerius Antias, however, says it was not a lover, but a mistress whom Lucius thus sought to gratify.1. And Livy says that in a speech of Cato himself it is written that a Gaulish deserter had come to the door . with his wife and children, and that Lucius admitted him into the banquet-hall and slew him with his own hand to gratify his lover. This feature, however, was probably introduced by Cato to strengthen the force of his denunciation; for that it was not a deserter, but a prisoner, who was put to death, and one who had been condemned to die, is the testimony of many others, and especially of Cicero the orator in his treatise “On Old Age,” where he puts the story in the mouth of Cato himself.?

XIX. In view of this, when Cato became censor 3 and was purging the senate of its unworthy members, he expelled from it Lucius Flamininus, although he was a man of consular dignity, and although his brother Titus was thought to be involved in his disgrace. Therefore the two brothers came before the people in lowly garb and bathed in tears, and

2 Cf. Cato the Elder, xvii. 1-4; Livy, xxxix. 42.
3 In 184 B.c.
375

-
iw
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

nat Sedaxpupévor pétpia Setobar Tov TodTOV
eSoxour, aEtovvtes aitiay eitrety Tov Katwva Kai Noyov, @ ypnadpevos olxoy Evdokov atipia TocavT}) meptBeBrAnkev. ovd€ev ody UTroaTEtAapevos 0 Katay mponrOe, Kal KaTATTAS PETA TOU TUVaPYOVTOS ypwTnae tov Titov eb yivwoKet TO oUpmTrOcLOD.
’ , \ bd , , > € Q 7
apvoupevou O€ éxeivou, Sinynoamevos evs opto pov ad \ U ¥ 4 nA 9 4
mpoexaneiro Tov Aevxioy ét Tidnol TaV EipnLevav \ b \ 9 fe) \ , 4
un adnOes eivar. tod dé Aevxiov aiwrnoavtos,
o pev Sjpos yum Sixaiay yeyovévat THY atipiav \ Y , , “A 3 \ nA

Kat tov Kdtwva mpoermeuwe Aap pas aro TOU
» a a a a Biypatos, o b€ Titos tH acvpdopa tod ddedrpod mepiTa0a@y ouvéotn PETA TOY TWaraL pLcovVTOV tov Kdtwva nai maocas peév as éxetvos érrotnoato tav Snuociwy éxdoces Kal pwicOw@ces Kal wvas nevpwoe xal avéduvoev év tH BovAn KpaTnoas, \ \ ¢ , J b] fo)
movNas 5€ Kal peyddas Sixas Kat’ avdtTov Trape-oKEevacev, ovK O15 Sirws ev Kal TOALTLK@S pds apYovTa vousmov Kal moritnv aptotou wmép
\
avépos otxeiov pév, avakiou 5€ Kai Ta TpoanKkovTa
: ,
metrovOotos avnxectov ExOpay apapevos. ov nv
’ \ ae , \ , , 4 b]
ara TOD Pwpaiwv tote Snwou Oéav Exovtos év
A 6 , \ A A @ yv ‘
7@ Geatpy cai tis Bovdns, waormep clwOe, KoopLM
4 > \ e , > 9 9 ,
mpokabnpévns, opOeis o Acvxtos én’ éoyatots trou KaOnpevos atiuws Kal TaTretvas oixTov éoye Kal
\ fol ‘
TO WAHOos ovK nvéaxeTo Thy Oe, adr éBowv
2 A 4 4 4 ,
peraBivat xerevovtes, Ews petéSn, SeEapéevev avrov eis EauTovs TOY UTATLKOD.

376

380

TITUS FLAMININUS

made what seemed a reasonable request of their fellow citizens, namely, that Cato should state the reasons which had led him to visit a noble house with a disgrace so great. Without any hesitation, then, Cato came forward, and standing with his colleague before Titus, asked him if he knew about the banquet. . Titus said he did not, whereupon Cato related the incident and formally challenged Lucius to say whether any part of the story told was not true. But Lucius was dumb, and the people there- fore saw that he had been justly disgraced, and gave Cato a splendid escort away from the rostra. Titus, however, was so affected by the misfortune of his brother that he leagued himself with those who had long hated*Cato, and after getting the upper hand in the senate, revoked and annulled all the public rentals and leases and contracts which Cato had made, besides bringing many heavy indictments against him.! That he acted the part. of a good man vr a good citizen | cannot affirm, in thus cherishing an incurable hatred against a lawful magistrate and a most excellent citizen on account of a man who, though a kinsman, was nevertheless unworthy and had suffered only what he deserved. However, as the Roman people was once enjoying a spectacle in the theatre, and the senate, according to custom, had seats of honour in the foremost rows, Lucius was seen sitting somewhere in the rear among the poor and lowly, and excited men's pity. The multitude could not bear the sight, but kept shouting to him to change his place, until he did change his place, and was received among their own number by the men of consular rank.

1 Cf. Cuto the Elder, xix. 2; Livy, xxxix. 44..

XX. To & obv dvces Titov dirotipov, aype pev iKavny eiyev UANV TEpL TOUS ELpnuévous TrOAELOUS SiatpiBovtos, evdoxipers Kai yap éxidudpynoev av0is pera thy Umateiav, ovdevos érreiyovTos: 9 ' \ a" Sd \ , A amadAayeis 5€ TOU apyelv Kal mpezBUTEpos av 9 , wn" 3 ' "¥ 4 ww a nAEYXETO UANXOV, EV OVK ExyovTL mpakes ETL TO AaT@ Biw srapyavra mpos do€av Kal veavifovta
To Ta0e Katéyvev éavTov ov Suvdpevos. ToravTy
, A N \ 93 ' ~ 9 ' ,
yap Tivt Kat To wept AvuBav dopa édoxer mpakas 9 \ / a a e N >] , emraxOns yevéoOar Tots mWodAois. 0 yap AvviBas
ry) \ 9 ' e \ 9 , oixoGey pev éx Kapyndovos virexdpas 'Avtioxo
cuvi, éexeivov dbé peta tHv ev Dpvyia payny Elpnuns ayamnTas TuxovTos, avOis devywv Kal
\ n mravnbeis TorAra Tédos ev TH BeOvvia Kxaréorn
e Ilpovciavy Oepamrevov, ovdevos 'Pwpyaiwy aryvoovVTOS, AAA TapopevTay atravTwy Su' acbéverav Kal yijpas @oTmeEp eppippévoy bro THS TUYXNS.
Tiros d€ mpecBevtns de étépas by tTivas mpakes
e ' n le 4 \ 4 ' 4
vo ths BovAns mpos tov Ipovciay adixopevos \ \ b , ON > Ul , > ,

kai tov AvviBav id@v avtToOe Start@pevov, nyava-

2 A \ \ fe) , ,
KtTyoev eb Cy, Kai rorda Tov IIpovatov Seopévou
Kal NTaApOUVYTOS UTEP avdpos ixéToU Kab auynOous ov TaphKe. xpnopod O€ TiVOS, ws EoLKE, TAaNXAaLOU wept THs AvviBou TereuTis ots ExovTos, AtBvoca xpues BOXos ’AvviBou Sépas,

1 The battle at Magnesia, in Lydia, 191 B.c. Under the terms of peace, Antiochus was to deliver Hannibal to the Romans. Cf. Livy, xxxvii. 45.

s

TITUS FLAMININUS

XX. Now, the native ambition of Titus, as long as it had sufficient material to gratify it in the wars which I have mentioned, met with praise, as, for instance, when he served a second time as military tribune after having been consul, though there was no necessity for it; but after he had ceased to _hold office and was well on in years, he met the rather with censure, because, although the portion of life which still remained to him did not admit of great activity, he was unable to restrain his passion for glory and his youthful ardour. For by some such fierce impulse, as it would seem, he was led to his treat- ment of Hannibal, which made him odious to most people. Hannibal had secretly fled from his native Carthage and spent some time at the court of Anti- ochus; but when Antiochus, after the battle in Phrygia,' had gladly accepted terms of peace, Hanni- bal took to flight once more, and after many wander- ings, finally settled down at the court of Prusias in Bithynia. Noone at Rome was ignorant of this, but all ignored him on account of his weakness and old age, regarding him as a castaway of Fortune. Titus, how- ever, who had been sent by the senate as ambassador to the court of Prusias on some other business,? and saw that Hannibal was staying there, was incensed that he should be alive, and although Prusias made many fervent intercessions in behalf of a man who was a suppliant and familiar friend, would not relent. There was an ancient oracle, as it would appear, concerning Hannibal’s death, and it ran as follows :—

“‘ Libyssan earth shall cover the form of Hannibal.”’

2 According to Ny (Xxxix. 51), Hannibal’s presence in Bithynia was part of Rome’s complaint against Prusias.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

° 4 6d / e , \ N f
o pev dpa AtBunv vrevoee Kai Tas ev Kapyndov
’ ° “4 a) , 3 \ 4
tagus, ws exe KataBiwoomevos’ év bé Biduvia
, 9 ‘ , > \NQ , \ \ a!
Tomes éati Oivwdns eri Oaradoans Kai Tpos avTO
Kon tis weyddAn AiBvooa Kanetrat. epi tav-
¥ , b] , > A \ ? ”

tnv etuxe SsatpiBwv AvviBas. det b€ admicrov
tH tod IIpovciov paraxia Kai doBovpevos tous ‘Pwpaious thy otxtay étt mpotepov ée€odos éwta KaTayelols auVTETpHLEevnV ex THS EavTOD StaiTns
a ,
elyev, @AXov Kat GAO TOV VTrovopwy, TOppw dé TaVvrTmv AdnAWS EXPEPOVTWY. Ws ODY HKOUGE TOTE
TO Tpoataypa Tov Titov, pevyew pev @punoe dia la) e , 9 \ \ - : “A TOV UTovopmwr, evtuyav de dudaxais Bacidtxais éyuw 6 avuTov TeAXeuTay. Evioe pév odv A€éyovGLD ws (MaTLOY TO TPAXNA® TEpLBarwy Kal KeXevoAS oixétny Omicbevy epeicavta Kata Tov iaxiov TO youu Kat opodpas avaxdA\doavta avyteivat Kal
, ‘ A b] / N nw
Teptotpéewar, pexor av éxOrjtar TO Tvedua, StapOetpeey avtov’ Evior 5é ptpnodpevov Bem-aotoxvéa Kai Miéday ala tavpeov mueiv: AiBtos 5é dnot happaxoy Eyovta Kepacas kai THY KUALKA deFupevoy etvrety: “’ Avatravowpev 4dn woTé TV
\ 4 ¢ / A ‘\ e 4
ToAANY hpovTiba “Pwyaiwy, of paxpov HrynoavTo cat Bapv ptcoupevou yépovros avapeivar Oavatov.
’ ‘ xO ‘ b) , b] , ld
ov pnv ovdé Tiros dktofnXwrtov aroicetas vinnv 9Q\ a 4 2 gs “a , “A ovde Tav mpoyover akiav, ot vpp@ mroAenobvre Kai xpatovvTs THY méAAOVEaY UTroTé“Wartes KaTEbyvucayv pappaxeiav.” 380

TITUS FLAMININUS

Hannibal thought this referred to Libya and a burial at Carthage, and believed that he would end his days there ; but there is a sandy tract in Bithynia on the sea-Shore, and on its border a large village called Libyssa. Near this village Hannibal was living. But he had always distrusted the weakness of Prusias and feared the Romans, and therefore even before this time his house had been provided with seven underground exits leading from his own chamber. These ran in different directions beneath the surface of the ground, but all had secret issues far away. Accordingly, when he now heard of the behest of Titus, he set out to make his escape by way of the underground passages, but encountered guards of the king, and therefore determined to take his own life. Some say that he wound his cloak about his neck and then ordered a servant to plant his knee in the small of his back, pull the rope towards him with all his might until it was twisted tight, and so to choke and kill him; some, too, say that he drank bull’s blood in imitation of Themis- tocles! and Midas; but Livy says? that he had poison which he ordered to be mixed, and took the cup with these words: “ Let us now at last put an end to the great anxiety of the Romans, who have thought it too long and hard a task to wait for the death of a hated old man. Nevertheless, Titus will not bear away an enviable victory, nor one worthy of his forefathers, who sent secret information to Pyrrhus, when he was at war with them and a victor over them, of the poisoning that was going to be attempted.” 3

1 Cf. the Vhemistocles, xxxi. 5.
2 Livy, xxxix. 51, 3 Cf. the Pyrrhus, xxi. 1-3.
381

a

to 3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXT. Otte pev tov ‘AvviBarv aroPaveiv deyovowv. «amayyedOévrwy dé tovTwy mpos Thy
, > %y, 7 b \ ” e , avyKANTOV, ovK OALyos eTaYOns Edokev 0 Titos
Kal jTepitTos ayay Kal wmos, @oTep Spry vO Ynpws anTHva Kai Kodoupoy adetpévov Chv yerponOn tov ’AvviBav amoxtetvas, ovdevos érretb] \ \ 4 e J , a Ul yovtos, dAAG bra Sokay, ws err@vupos TOD Oavartou yévoito. Kai thy "Adpixavod Xntiwvos éxtt-Gévtes mpaotyta Kat peyadouyxtay Tt pardov
9 4 e > / Ld \ ‘\ >
Cavualov, ws antrntov ovta Kai poBepoy ev AtBvn Kxatatonepnoas ’AvviBav obte é&nracev oute €EntnoatTo Tapa THY TOMTO@Y, GANA Kai Tpo
“ 4 9 , \ bd] 4 . \
THS paxns els NOyous EAOay edeEtHocaTto Kal peta Thy payny omevdopevos ovdéy ereToAunoev ovd’
’ / A 4 A b 4 , 2
émevéBn TH TUXN TOU avdpos. Aéyerar Sé ads
ev Edéow cupBareiv avtovs: Kai mpa@tov pev év
A “ a?
TO cupTEepiTatei TOU AvviBou THY TpoonKovcay
b] > ‘ 4 > , 1 , 9 ,
év d&wwpatt tak éxetvw! mporaBovtos avéxeaOat xal mepitateiy adedras tov 'Adpixavor, éretTa NOYyoU Trepi OTPATHYaY EuTrETOVTOS Kal TOU
"AvviBou Kpatiatov atrodnvapévou yeyovévar TaV

“ 9 4 9 ? , \
atpatnyav AdéE~avdpov, eita Iluppov, tpitoy dé autor, novxn metdidoavta Tov Adptxavoy eitrety, «cps or 9 2 > \ , ” es ee , Ti &', et un) oe €yw veuxnnev; Kat rov AvviBayr, 6c QO 9 ” e > , b>] 4 6s , 9 ,
uk av, @ ZKnTiwv, gdavat, ‘ TpiTov EwavToy,
A “ nn >
GANA TpOTov emocovpny TOV oTpATHYODV.
Tadta 57 Tod Yantiwvos ot ToAAOL Oavpalortes

1 éceivm Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: elva:r. Blass corrects to mpohwovaay év a. Tabi.

38|

TITUS FLAMININUS

AAI. Such are the accounts of the death of Hannibal. When the story of it was brought to the senate, many of them thought the conduct of Titus odious, officious, and cruel; for he had killed Hanni- bal when he was like a bird permitted to live a tame and harmless life because too old to fly and without a tail, and there had been no necessity for his doing this, but he did it to win fame, that his name might be associated with the death of Hannibal. Men also pointed to the clemency and magnanimity of Scipio Africanus and admired it all the more, since after defeating a Hannibal who had not been conquered before and was filling Africa with fear, he neither drove him from the country nor demanded his surrender by his fellow citizens, nay, he actually gave him a kindly greeting when he held conference with him before the battle, and after the battle, in making terms of peace, he did not insult or trample upon the fortunes of his foe.! Moreover, we are told that the two men met again at Ephesus, and in the first place, that when, as they were walking about together, Hannibal took the side which more properly belonged to Scipio as the superior, Scipio suffered it and walked about without paying any heed to it; and again, that when they fell to discussing generals and Hannibal declared Alexander to have been the mightiest of generals, and next to him Pyrrhus, and third himself, Scipio asked with a quiet smile, “ And what wouldst thou have said if 1 had not conquered thee?”’ To which Hannibal replied, “In that case, Scipio, I should not have counted myself third, but first of generals. ”’ ?

Such conduct on the part of Scipio most people

1 Cf. Livy, xxx. 29 @. 2 Cf. Livy, xxxv. 14.

os

baal |

exaxitov tov Titov ws adXoTpl@ vEexp@ Tpoce-
’ Q a v 1 @ : e - veyxovTa Tas xeipas. Eveoe SE Hoay of TO WemTpa-4 > ~ . NX > 4 av td
yuévov etaivourtes xat Tov ‘AvviBav, éws éCn, Tip iyyouuevor Seopevov Tod piTriCovtos: pndé yap axuavovtes avtov TO capa “Pwpaios Kai thv yetpa hoBepay, adra Thy Sevorynta Kat THY éuTecpiay yeyovévat peta THs éupvtTov mixpias Kal
s e >) A > “ N n > > Suocpevetas, @Y ovdéy adatpety TO yHpas, GAXr
e Ul N , b] aM \ \ Ld b
UTopévery THY hvaow ev TO WHat, THY b€ TUXNY Ov Sitapévery opoiav, dd\dXa petarintrovoay éxKxanei-aOat tais éXrict Wpos Tas emiécets TOUS del TO ptcety Todepouvtas. Kat ta voTEepa Tas ETL “~ bd , “ ‘4 ” ‘ > ,
HadrXov euaptupyce TO Tite, Tov'ro pev Apiotoe A A \ \ b) a , vixos 0 Tov KiOap@mdov Sia thy Evdpevois Sofa éumAncas ATacay aTocTdcewy Kai TO LwWY THY
"Aciav, tovto 5é MiOpiddrns peta YvArav Kat @ipBpiav Kai tocovtov drAcOpov otparevpatwv
N a @ 9 AN 4 9 A e ~
Kal otpatnya@v avOis emi AevKoAXoy Ex ys Op“ov
‘ 4 > \ “A
xai OaXaTTns avactas THALKOUTOS.
Ov pny ovdé Paiov Mapiouv tareotepos ’Avvtw a \ A ‘ 4 e ”
Bas éxerto. tT@ pev yap Bactrevs piros uTApye
\ , @ , ‘ \ \ aA \
Kai Bios iv auvnOns cai StatpsBai wept vas Kat oF N A > s XN \ ,
immous Kai oTpaTi@Tor éripedecav’ tas 6é Mapiou TUXas ‘Pwpatos yeA@vTes AXwpévou Kal TTWYEU-
> ? A N > € a’ o
ovtos ev AtBun peta puxpov €v Pwpn odpatto-Hevot Kal pactiyoupevol MpoceKvvouy. ovTwS
1 Tn 131-130 B.c. ? In §8-84 B.c.

admired, and they blamed Titus for having laid violent hands on one whom another had slain. But some there were who praised what he had done and thought that Hannibal, as long as he was alive, was a consuming fire which needed only to be fanned ; for when he was in his prime, they said, it was not his body nor his arm that had been formidable to the Romans, but his ability and experience coupled with his ingrained bitterness and hostility, and from these naught is subtracted by old age, but the natural characteristics remain unchanged : whereas fortune does not remain the same, but changes sides, and summons with hope to fresh undertakings those whom hatred makes perpetual foes. And _ sub- sequent events were perhaps still more a justification - of Titus; for Aristonicus, the son of a harpist's daughter, used his reputed connexion with Eumenes to fill all Asia with wars and rebellions,! and Mithri- dates, notwithstanding his defeats by Sulla and Fimbria and his great losses in armies and generals,? rose once more to be a formidable antagonist of Lucullus by land and sea.'

However, not even Hannibal was reduced to a lower level than Caius Marius. For Hannibal had a king as his friend, and his days as usual were occu- pied with ships and horses and the care of soldiers ; whereas Marius in his misfortunes was a laughing- stock to the Romans as he wandered about and begged his way in Africa, though after a little while he was in Rome with his axes at their necks and his rods at their backs, and they were humbly begging his mercy. So true is it that nothing in the present

3 In 74-67 B.c. The argument is that if so great dangers to Rome were latent in Asia, the presence of Hannibal there was a menace.

A i ovdcy oUTE piKpov OUTE MéyAa TOY TrAPOYTwWY Tpds
TO péAXOv é€aTiv, GAAA pia TOU peTraBadrew
A \ aA @ \ , " ,
TEAEUTN Kal TOU Elvar. 16 Kai hac Evo Titov ou" ap éavTou Tavta Tpakar, TeuPOAvar Sé wpec-
A \ , 4 2 @\ " A
Beuvrny pera Acvxiou XKniwvos, ovdév AdXO THs
, b 4 bd A N b] , ? mpeo Betas éyovons éEpyov 7) Tov AvviBov Odavarov.
? \ ' , w , , "
Evet 6@ ovdeuiav Ett tovUTwy KaToTLW ovTE TOhuTURHY tov Titov mpakiv ovte Troe weeny ig To-pheapen, GAG Kal TehevTHs Etvyev eipnuiKiys, Opa THv cvyxpiow emtoKorely.
@IAOIIOIMENOS KAI TITOY SYTKPISIS

I. MeyéOee ev oty tav els tous "EXAnvas evepyectav ovTe Piroroipeva Titm tapaBdrrew oUTE mavu ToAXOUS TOY PiroTrOipevos apmetvovav 9 a ¥ s ? a \ \. « ' avopov aktov éott. Tois péev yap” EXXAnat pos “EAAnvas ot Trodepot, TO O€ ovYEAANM Kal vrrép e , \ i. , bd A a“ EAAnvav? Kat ore DiroToiwnv aynyavey tois

EauTOU TOALT ALS GpmUvELY TOAELOUpEVOLS Ets Kpnrny 9 A , , Ti b] / a ¢ , amnpe, ToTe vixnoas Tiros év péon TH ‘EAXNASe @Didirmov nrevSépov xait ta eOvn Kal ores e ? ? J > , \ id e amdoas. e O€ Tis é€eralor Tas pdyas éxa-Tépov, wAeious “EAAnvas Pirovoipnv "Ayaav otpatnyav 7) Maxedovas Titos “EdXdAnot Bonbarv avetne.
Ta troivuy dyaprnpata tod pév gtdroTUWIas, is either smal] or great in view of what may happen in the future, but change, like life, can only end with death. Eor this reason some say that Titus did not take this step on his own account, but that he was sent as ambassador with Lucius Scipio, and their embassy had no other object than the death of Hannibal.

We do not find that Titus was active after this, either as statesman or soldier, and his end was a peaceful one. It is therefore time to think of our comparison.

COMPARISON OF PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS

I. Accorpinaty, in the magnitude of their benefactions to the Greeks, neither Philopoemen nor any one of the Greeks who were better men than Philopoemen is worthy of comparison with Titus. For they were Greeks and waged their wars against Greeks; whereas Titus was not a Greek and waged war in behalf of Greeks ; and at a time when Philopoemen was unable to defend his own countrymen from the attacks of their enemies, and had gone off into Crete, at that very time Titus won a victory over Philip in the heart of Greece and set her peoples and all her cities free. And if we examine into the battles which each fought, we shall find that the Greeks slain by Philopoemen as general of the Achaeans were more in number than the Macedonians slain by Titus as helper of the Greeks.

And then as to their errors, in the one they were 387

cc 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

tov Sé diroverxias yéyove, Kal Tpds opyiy oO mev evxivntos, 6 S¢ nal Svomapaitntos. Tiros pev yap xat Piriarp to dkiwpa Tis Bactretas épvrake xal wpds Aitwrovs evryvmpovnae, Prdomoiuny 5&é THS TWaTpidos bu dpynv adeideto THY meptoikiba auvtTédecav. Ete 56 O pev Tois ev maQodaw det BéBatos, o b€ Ouu@ ATDoat yapry éroipos. Aaxedatpoviwy yap evepyéTns mpotepov
ay vatepov Kal Ta Tetyn KaTéoxawe Kal TiVv Nwpav Teptéxowe xai TéXoS auTHY peTéBare Kal
SiépOerpe THY wodtTeiav. éSoxer bé Kal tov Biov Opyh mpoéc0ar Kal diroverxia, pn KaTa KaLpov, GXN ofvTepoy tov Séovtos eis Meaanvny emery Geis, ovy wotrep Titos mravta NoyLone@ Kal pos acda-NELav OTPATHYNTAS.
II. "AAG ANGE ye ToAgLwY Kal TpoTTAiwY 7
@idoToipevos eumeipia BeBatotépa. TH ev yap Ta mpos Pidirmov éxpibn Svoiv aywvo, o 6é
pupias payas xatopOecas ovdemav augia yt now
TH TUXN Tpds THY ETLaTHUNVY arrONEAOLTTEV. ETL
dé 0 pey TH "Papaiwy daxpunv éexovon durdpec xpnodpevos, 0 Sé THs Eddddos dn POiwovans érmaxpacas, dofay Exyev, Wate TOU pev Ldvov, TOD
dé xo.vov épyov elvat Td KatopOovpevov: o pev yap jpxev ayabav, o S¢ dpywv ayadous érroier.
kal pny To ye mpos" EXAnvas TovT@ yevéaOas ToOvs GY@vasS OUK EVTUXH MEV, Laxupay Sé THs aperis 388
382

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

due to ambition, in the other to a spirit of conten- tion. For Titus preserved Philip's royal dignity and . showed favour to the Aetolians; whereas the anger of Philopoemen led him to rob his native city of its supremacy over the surrounding villages. And further, the one was always constant towards his beneficiaries, while the other, to indulge his wrath, _ was ever ready to cancel a kindness, For instance, though he had once been a benefactor of Sparta, he afterwards tore down her walls, reduced her territory, and finally altered and destroyed her very constitution. And it would appear that he threw away his life in a fit of anger and contentiousness, by hastening to attack Messene before occasion offered and more quickly than was feasible; for he did not, like Titus, conduct all his military opera- tions with deliberation and a due regard for safety.

II. But surely the multitude of his wars and trophies put the military experience of Philopoemen on a firmer basis. For the campaign of Titus against Philip was decided by two conflicts, whereas Philopoemen was successful in countless battles and left no room for the claim that his victories were due to fortune rather than to skill. And besides, Titus, in his quest of fame, availed himself of the culminating power of Rome; whereas Philopoemen flourished when Greece was already in declension. Therefore the success of Philopoemen was his own work, while that of Titus was the result of a com- munity of effort; for the latter was commander of good soldiers, while the former, as commander, had to make his soldiers good. And surely the fact that Philopoemen's conflicts were with Greeks furnished a proof of his valour which was convincing even amodeEw mapeivyerv: ols yap Guota TadAA, TO mpovxyey apeTn Kpatovor. Kal yap 57 TroXe-puxwtarots "EAAnvwov Kpnoi cai Aaxedapoviots Toke"noas, THY "ev TWavovpyotatav Sor, TaV & ddKipwratrav torn TEepleyevero.

IIpos 5é rovros Tiros peéev é& vroxespéevov évixa, Kpwpevos owAtopols Kal tafeow als rapeé-raBe, Piroroiuny 5€ avros éreceveyxav Kat petaBarwyv Tov twepl TavTa Kocpov, waTE TO vientixwtatov ud od pev ovK by evpjabat, Ta Sé imdpyov Bonbeiv. Kxata xelpa toivyy PiroTotplevos prev Epya mwodda nal peydda, Oatépou dé ovdéy, ddA Kal tov AitwdOv Tis avrov 'Apye-Snuos éréaxwntev ws, Ste avTOS éoTTAaTpmévos THY pdxatpay er Spoum mpos Tovs payxopévous Kai Tous cuvectatas Tov Maxedovwr, tod Titov tas yetpas eis TOV OUpavoY UTTLAS avaTeivaVTOS ETTO-TOS Kal TpodEevyopevou.
III. Kai phy Titm pév dpyovt: auvéByn xa mpeoBevovts Tavta wpakar Ta Kara, PiroTroiuny
5¢ od yelpova Tapécyev ovde at paxToTEpoy EavToY iSs@rny oTpatnyov Tots "Ayatois. wdsaTns pev yap av NdBw éFéBarev éx Meconvns cai Meoonvlous nrevOepwoev, idswtns 5é Atopayny tov otpatnyov Kai Titov éwepyopévous atréxderce THs Zmdprns xai Aaxedatpovious Stécwoev. obtws 39°

though unfortunate: for where other things are equal, they prevail who surpass in valour. And so it was that although he carried on war with the most warlike of the Greeks, namely, the Cretans and Lacedaemonians, he surpassed the first in wiles, though they were most crafty, and the second in daring, though they were most brave.

In addition to this it may be said that Titus won his victories by using what lay ready to his hand, since he availed himself of styles of armour and formation which had come down to him, whereas Philopoemen won his successes by making contributions and changes of his own in these matters, so that in the one case what was most essential for victory did not exist and had to be discovered, while in the other it lay ready for service. “In the way of personal prowess, moreover, Philopoemen performed much that was great, but Titus nothing at all; nay, an Aetolian named Archedemus mocked at him because, when he himself had drawn his sword and was running at full speed against the Macedonians who were holding together and fighting, Titus was standing with his hands stretched up towards heaven and praying for help.

IlI. And further, Titus was either a commander or an ambassador when he did all his noble deeds, whereas Philopoemen showed himself no less active and effective for the Achaeans when he was a private citizen than when he was their general. For it was as a private citizen that he expelled Nabis from Messene and set the Messenians free, and as a private citizen that he shut the gates of Sparta against the coming of Diophanes the general and Titus, and so saved the Lacedaemonians.

NYEHoViKNY Hvaty EXWV OV KATA TOUS VOMLOUS, AANA Kal TOV VOUwY ApYELY HTLiTTATO TpPOS TO TUpdéepor, ov Seopevos Tapa Tv apyopuévwy AaBeiv TO apxetv,
] N , % a 4 N wv \ e ‘\
GNA KPHLEVOS AUTOLS, OTTOU KAaLPOS ELN, TOV UTED

“~ ~ a A e
avtav dpovovvta padXov Tov UT avTaV npNLE-
: ‘
you nNyOUupLEvos OTPAaTNYOv.
Tevvaia pév odv Titov ta pos tous” EXAnvas émiexy Kat diravOpwrra, yevvatotepa 5é Pidrorroi-\ \ 1, , ’ \ \ ’ pevos Ta TPS TOs Pwpyaious oxupa Kai pirerev-Ocpa: pdov yap xapifecPat tois Seopévors 7 Aurreiy avTiteivovta Tovs Suvatwrépous. érrel dé ovtrws eFetalopevarv Svcbewpntos 1 dsadopa,
a ‘ fe) ‘ a N 9 , oKoTrel, un TO pev EAAnVE TOY Ep7retpLas TroXeE-
“A A \ ¢
puns Kal otpatnyias aotepavor, Te Sé ‘Popato
, U
Tov Sikaroovvns Kal YpnoToTNTOS aTrodLdovTEs ov
A I
davrws Siartav Sofopev.
392

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

Having this natural gift of leadership, he not only knew how to use it in accordance with the laws, but also how to dominate the laws for the common good ; he did not think it necessary to be appointed commander by the people, but took them under his command when occasion required it, considering that he who took wise counsel in their behalf, rather than he who had been elected by them, was their real general.

Nobly generous, then, was the clemency and humanity which Titus showed to the Greeks, but more nobly generous was the firmness and love of freedom with which Philopoemen opposed the Romans; for it is easier to confer favours on suppliants than it is to vex with opposition those who are more powerful. But since, after this examination, the difference between the two men is hard to define, I leave it to my reader to say whether, if we award to the Greek the crown for military experience and generalship, and to the Roman that for justice and goodness of heart, we shall not make a fair decision.

393

Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF
PROPER NAMES

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

Acrotatus, 11, elder son of Cleomenes King of the Lacedaemonians, died before coming to Pe tontae tt dson of abo crotatus, 11, grandson of above, became King of the Lacedaemonians ea. 265 B.0.; defeated and slain at Megalopolis, 11.
Agathocleia, Mistress of Ptolemy IV Philopator, her influence, 125.
Agesilatis, uncle of King Agis, supported him in his reforms, 15; his motives corrupt, 17; appointed ephor, 29; his deception of Agis, 31; tampered with the calendar, 35; driven into exile, 37.

Agesilatis, king of the Lacedaemonians, his descendants in the Agesipolis, Mor ing? of th Lace

pous, ® g O © ba daemonians in 395 B.0O.
Agesipolis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after Cleombrotus.
Agesistrata, 11, mother of King Agis; supported him in his reforms, 17; her death, 47.
Agiatis, wife of King Agis, married Cleomenes, son of g Leonidas, 51; his great love for her, her death, 99.
Agis, 9, third in descent from Agesilatis, slain by Antipater at Megalopolis in 330 B.o.
9, king of the Lacedaemonians, sixth in descent from Agesilaiis.

Agis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians

from 244 B.O.; his qualities and achievements, passim in his Life.
Amphares, betrayal of Agis, 41.

PLUT. X.

Antigonos Doson, king of Macedon, intervened in Peloponnesian affairs by invitation of Aratus, 83; captured Argos, 97; victory over Cleomenes at Sellasia, 113, 267 ; captured Sparta, 119.
Antiochus Il, king of Syria, made war with the Romans in Greece - in 191 B.0., 303, 349; defeated by Titus Flamininus, 365.
Antipater, second son of Cassander, regent of Alexander, attempt to corrupt Phocion, 5; slew Agis at Megalopolis in 330 B.o., 9.
Aratus, general of the Achaean League, was assisted by Agis in opposing the Aetolian invasion of the Peloponnesus, 33 ; attempt to bring Sparta into the League, 55; captured Mantineja, 61; refused the generalship of the League after the defeat at Dymae 81; invited the intervention of Antigonus, 83; dependence of the League upon Macedonian help during his life, 275.
Arcesilatis, betrayed Agis, 41.

Archidamia, 11, grandmother of King Agis ; supported him in his reforms, 17; her death, 47.
Archidamus, son of Agesilatis king of the Lacedaemonians, slain by the Messapians at Mandurium in Italy in 338 B.0., 9.
Archidamus, brother of King Agis, placed on the throne of Sparta by Aratus, but are to death by the murderers of Agis, 61.

Areus, 11, son of Acrotatus, kin of the Lacedaemonians, 11; fe in battle at Corinth about 265
B.O.
Argos, occupied by Cleomenes, 89 ;
397
DICTIONARY OF

successfully revolted from Cleo-arr and joined Antigonus, Aristomenes, king of the Messenjians, wounded and slew the Spartan king Theopompus in battle, 49.
Attalus Philometor, king of Per-amum, made the Roman people is heir, 177.
B

Belbina, precinct of Athena on the borders of Arcadia and Lacedaemon, 57.
Cc

Cassandra, daughter of Priam, supposed to give oracles as Pasi-phaé at Thalamae in Laconia, 21.
Centaurs, begotten by Ixion, who embraced a cloud, not Hera, 3.
Serre saved by Titus Flamininus,

Chilodis, daughter of Leonidas and wife of King Cleombrotus, her loyalty to both father and husband, 37.
Claudius, Appius, marries his Geugbeee te Tiberius Claudius, Cleombrotus, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians "after his brother
Agesipolis.
Cleombrotus, only Spartan king to be slain in battle, 49.
Cleombrotus, son-in-law of Leonidas, became king of the Lacedaemonians in his stead ca. 242

B.0., 29; was deposed, 37; his life ‘spared by the supplications of his wife Chilonis, 40.
Cleomenes, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after his brother
Agesipolis
Cleomenes, son of Leonidas, married the wife of Agis, 51;
came to the throne of Sparta in 235 B.O., 53; his character and achievements, passim in his Life.
Cleonymus, 11, son of Cleomenes king of the Lacedaemonians, did not succeed to the throne.

oo occupied by Cleomenes,

Cornelia, mother of the Gracchi,
her demeanour after the death of her sons, 241.
Cratesicleia. mother of Cleomenes,
61; went to Egypt as hostage,
99 : executed by Ptolemy, 139.
Cynoscephalae, defeat of Philip V
by Titus Flamininus, 341 ff.
D

Daphne, daughter of Amyclas, eeing from Apollo, was metamorphosed into a tree, becoming the oracular Pasiphaé, 21.
Democharés, betrayer of Agis, 41.
Diophanes, general of the Achaean Poeeue, opposed to Philopoemen, Livius, popular tribune with Caius Gracchus, took the side of the Senate in the conflict with Caius, 215.
Dymae, battle at, between Cleo-menes and the Arcadians, 81.
Drusus,

E

Ectrephes, a cares at Sparta, cut out two of the oe eee an the harp of Phrynis, 2
Epitadeus, ephor at Sparta, changed ane law regulating inheritance, Eudamidas, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after the death of Agis in 330 B.o.
Eudamidas, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after Archidamus.
F

Flamininus, Titus, defeated Philip V of Macedon at Cynoscephalae, 293; became jealous of Philopoemen, 297; his character and achievements, passim in his Life.
DICTIONARY OF

Fulvius Flaccus, friend and supporter of Caius Gracchus, 219; murdered by the agents of Opimius, 235 ff.; his high character, 239.
G
Gracchus, Caius, character and achievements, passim in his Life.
Gracchus, Tiberius, character and achievements, passim in his Life.
H

Hannibal, Carthaginian general, stirred Antiochus against the Romans, 347 ; his death through the persecution of Titus Flamininus, 381.
Hera, loved by Ixion, 3.

Hippomedon, supported the reorms of King Agis, 17.
I
Ixion, embraced a cloud instead of Hera and begat the Centaurs, 3.

L

Laelius, Caius, attempted without success to remedy the social and economic condition of the Romans, 161.
Leonidas,
= of the Lacedaemonians, eighth in descent from the Pausanias who defeated
eo at Plataea in 488 B.oc., _Leonidas, 11, became king of the Lacedaemonians ca. 256 B.C., luxury-loving and weak ; assisted the rich in opposing the reforms of Agis, 19, 24; was indicted for having children by a foreign woman, 27; deposed as king about 242 B.c., 29; was brought back to Sparta by his partisans, 37; expelled the ephors from office, 41.
PROPER NAMES

Leuctra, rout of the Arcadians by Cleomenes there, 61.
Lycupgus, founder of the Spartan institutions, 13; his memory detested by Spartans in later times, 15.
Lysander, supported the reforms of King Agis, 15; became ephor, and introduced a bill for the abolition of debts, 19; indicted Leonidas, 25; was indicted in turn, 29.
M

Machanidas, tyrant of Sparta, defeated and killed by Philo-poemen at Mantineia, 281 ff.
Mancinus, Caius, campaign against Numantia, 153.
Mandrocleidas, supported the reforms cf King Agis, 15; indicted for this, 29.

Megalopolis,
menes, 103.
Megistonoiis, step-father of King Cleomenes of Sparta, assisted the latter in overthrowing’ the ephors, 65.
captured by Cleo-

N

Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, yielded to Philopoemen at Messene, 289;
defeated Philopoemen at sea, 293 ; was defeated at Sparta by al aa 295; assassinated, Nasica, P. Cornelius Scipio, leader of the Senate in the murder of Tiberius Gracchus, 193; incurred thereby the popular hatred, 195.
Nicanor, Messenian, enemy of King Cleomenes of Sparta, plotted against him in Egypt, 129.
O

Octavius, Marcus, popular tribune, opposed the measures of Tiberius Gracchus, 167 ; was ejected from his office by Tiberius, 173.
399

DICTIONARY OF

the opposition to Caius Gracchus, 223, 227, 229, 233; restored the Temple of Concord, 239; guilty of corruption, 239.
l

Se Lucius, as consul led in

P

Pasiphaé, her temple and oracle at halamae in Laconia; she was daughter of Atlas and mother by Zeus of Hermes, or else was another name for Cassandra, daughter of Priam, or else identical with Daphne, 21.

Pausanias, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians, defeated Mardonius at Plataea in 488 B.0.; his successors on the throne down to Agis, 9.
Pausanias, 9, son of Pleistoanax,

i of the Lacedaemonians,
went in exile to Tegea.
Pherecydes, though a foreigner, was honoured in Sparta, 25.
Philip V, king of Macedon, opposed Philopoemen, 287 ; the campaign of Titus Flamininus against him, 329 ff., 339 ff.; his defeat at Cynoscephalae, 341 ff.
hilopoemen, successor of Aratus as leader of the Achaean League, his character and _ achievements, passim in his Life; aroused the jealousy of Titus Flamininus, 361 ; kept Megalopolis faithful to the League, 105, 265.

Phrynis, harpist, was obliged in Sparta to modify his harp of nine strings, 25.
Pleistoanax, king of the Lacedaemonians after his father Pausanias, 9.
Ptolemy II, Euergetes, aided King Cleomenes of Sparta, 99; gave him asylum after his defeat at Sellasia, 123.

Ptolemy IV, Philopator, his character and his attitude toward King Cleomenes of Sparta, 125.

Ss

Sellasia, decisive defeat of King
Cleomenes there by Antigonus, 113, 267.
Sosibius, minister of Ptolemy IV,
Philopator, hostile to King
Cleomenes of Sparta, 125.
Sparta, the two lines of oh: in descent from Agesilaiis and Pau-as, 9 ff.; after its overthrow of Athens became wealthy and corrupt, 11; decline in Spartan families and concentration of the wealth in the hands of a few, 15 ;
its wealth in the hands of the women, 17; economic and social condition when Cleomenes came to the throne in 235 B.0., 54;
defeated by Philopoemen and ay into the Achaean League,
T

Terpander, though an alien, was ~ honoured at Sparta, 25.

Thalamae, in Laconia, seat of the oracle of Pasiphaé, 21.
Thales,. though a foreigner, was honoured at Sparta, 25.
Theopompus, king of the’ Lacedaemonians, wounded (or slain)
by Aristomenes in battle, 49.
x

Xenares, friend of King Cleomenes of Sparta, 55.
PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY THE CORNWALL PRESS, LTD., PARIS GARDEN, STAMFORD STREET, LONDON, 8.8. I.

PLUTARCH’S
LIVES

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY
BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN ELEVEN VOLUMES
“Xi
ARATUS, ARTAXERXES, GALBA AND OTHO

INDEX TO ALL THE LIVES BY J. W. COHOON
CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
MOMLXIT

First printed 1926
Reprinted 1943, 1954, 1962
Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION .

TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES. .
ARATUS a e e * e e e e e e e e oT
ARTAXERXES e e e . e e e * e e e e
GALBA e e e e c] e e e e . e e e o

OTHO e) e . e . e e ° . a ° e e

INDEX . e e cy e e e e e

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.
VoLuME I.

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VoLuME II.

(4) Themistocles and

Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
- Comparison.
VouuME III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-

Imus,
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
VoutumE IV.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
nus.
Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VOLUME V.
(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
vi

Voitume VI,
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.
VoutuME VII.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
VoutumE VIII.
(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
VoLuME IX.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.

Comparison.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
VOLUME X.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison,
(10) Philopoemen and Flam-InINNUS.
Comparison.

VoLuME XI.

) Aratus.
) Artaxerxes
THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilaiis and Pompey.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.

(21) Demetrius and Antony.

(22) Dion and Brutus.

(23) Aratus.

(24) Artaxerxes.

(25) Galba.

(26) Otho.

APATO2

I. Llapotuwiavy twa taratav, » LlorvKcpartes, _ Paris
nda ee : p Ss Edition.
a fal e /
delcas poe Ooxet TO SUadnpuov auThs, 0 pirocogos 4.1624
, ? rN v , 5) > e >). N Pes
XpvolTros, ovY Ov EXEL TPOTOV, AAX @S AUTOS 1027 bya / s f @ero BérXtwov eivat, dratiGerat,
,

/ 4.3 2 an A > ‘ b] , e
Tis TATED aivHoel, EL pon EVSALMOVES VLOb ; Atovucodwpos dé- 0 Tpotgnvios éXéyyov avtov avtexTiOnat THY adnOwiy oTws Exovaar:
/ 4 3 > / 3 \ , e 7
TIS TATED ALVIGEL, EL [LN KAKOOALMOVES VIOL ;
/ \ ’ 5 e a bf \ bd , of Kal gyno tous ad autav ovdevos aktous évtas,
, a an
uUTodvomevous S€ Tpoyovwy TiWaVv apetais! Kal

i a ?- a
TAEovalovTas év TOS exElvwY eTatVvoLS UTFO TIS
4 >? , > > a , \ Tapotmas emiatopivecbar. aAArN @ ye hUaeEL TO

a ,

yevvatoy érumpéeres €x tratépwv, Kata Iivdapov,?

, \ a aA
WOTEP TOL TPOS TO KAAALOTOY adopotodyTL TOV
v @ 5 ? \ id MO XN ” olxobev Tapaberypmatwy Tov Biov, evoatpoy ay ein
n “ ,

TO meuvno Gat TMV amo yévous apioTwY, aKovorTas Tept aUT@V ae TL Kal A€yovTas. ov yap idiwy 1 Qperais Sint. and Ziegler with 8&; Bekker has dperds, with inferior MSS.

2 Pyth, vill. 44f. (gud . . . éx warépwy maiol Anja).
ARATUS

I, There is an ancient proverb, Polycrates,! which the philosopher Chrysippus puts not as it really is,
but as he thought better :— ‘Who will praise a father, except happy sons?”
But Dionysodorus of Troezen corrects him, and restores the true form thus :— “Who will praise a father, except unhappy
sons? ”’
And he says that the proverb stops the mouths of those who, being worthless in themselves, take refuge in the virtues of certain ancestors and are forever praising them. But surely for a man in whom, to use Pindar’s words, “the noble spirit naturally displayes itself as inherited from sires,” and who, like thee, patterns his life after the fairest examples in his family line,—for such men it will be good fortune to be reminded of their noblest progenitors, ever and anon hearing the story of them, or telling it themselves. For it is not that they lack 1 A friend of Plutarch, not otherwise known, to whom he thus dedicates this Life. See the note on the Vheseus, i. 1.

amopia Kar@v éEapT@aty adXoOTPloV eTaivav THY d0Eav, dAXA Tots éxEivwY TA OlKELaA GUVAaTTTOVTES, ws Kai TOD yevous Kai Tod Biov KaOnyepovas evdnuovar. dso Kay Tov’ Apatou Tov cov ToAN-Tov Kal mpomdtopos Biov, by ovte TH SoEn TH

Tepl GeavTov ovTE TH Svvapet KATALTXUVELS, (Tr é-oTANKA Cot ouyyparrapevos, ovx, ws ovxl TAVTOV dxptBeotara oot peer KOS ef apxs ériatacbat Tas éxetvou mpdkes, adAN OTws ot Twaidés gov TlodvKpatns cat WvoxrAs otxetors mapade'ypaav évtpépwrtat, Ta pméev axovovTes, TA S€ ava-yiuwaoKkovTes, amep avtouvs pipetoOar mpoonKet.
diravtov yap avdpos, ov dtNokaXov, TavTos del Peau nryeto Gan,
1h Bena 5 aes Lixveovioy TOMS, €TEL TO TP@Tov éx THS
aK patov Kal Awpixiis dpid TOK paTias OoTrEp apjLovias auyxuveions ets TTUTELS evémece Kal pero-TLpias Snparyoryov, OUK eTavaaTO vooovca Kal
TapaTToMErn Kal TUPALVOY eK TUPaYYOU petaBanr-Novea, MeXpL OD Krewvos avatpebévtos ef NovtTo Tipoxretday apxovra kat KYeviay, dvdpas évdoEous TA padictTa Kal év duvd per TOV TOXTOV 6yTas. non b€ Tiva THs TWorNLTELAS KaTUGTAGLY Eye Soxovans Tiwoxretdas pev avréPavev, ABav-tidas 6€ 0 llacéou tupavvida mpdttev éavT@
Tov KXerviay ameéxterve kai Tov dirwv Kal oiKelwv
Tous pev é&éBare, tous b€ avetrev. efntea Se Kal Tov viov auTov, "Apatoyv, avedetv, éEmtaeTi KaTanererupevoyv. é€v S€ TH Tept THY OlKiaY Ta-
1 In 264 B.c,

noble qualities of their own and make their reputa- tion dependent on their praises of others, nay rather, they associate their own careers with the careers of their great ancestors, whom they hail both as founders of their line and as directors of their lives. And therefore, now that I have written the life of Aratus, who was thy countryman and forefather, and to whom thou thyself art no discredit in either reputa- tion or influence, I send it to thee, not as though thou hadst not been at pains from the beginning to have the most precise knowledge of thy great an- cestor's career, but in order that thy sons Polycrates and Pythocles may be reared, now by hearing and now by reading, after examples found in their own family line—examples which it well becomes them to imitate. For it is the lover of himself, and not the lover of goodness, who thinks himself always superior to others.

If. The city of Sicyon, as soon as it had fallen away from its pure Doric form of aristocracy (which was now like a harmony dissolved) and had become a prey to factions and the ambitious schemes of demagogues, was without cease distempered and agitated, and kept changing one tyrant for another, until, after the murder of Cleon, Timocleides and Cleinias were chosen chief magistrates, men of the highest repute and influence among the citizens. But no sooner did the government appear to be somewhat settled than Timocleides died, and Aban- tidas the son of Paseas, attempting to make himself tyrant, slew Cleinias,! and, of the friends and kinsmen of Cleinias, banished some and killed others. He tried to kill also the son of Cleinias, Aratus, left fatherless at the age of seven. But in the confusion

5

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

payn TUVERTET OY Tols evyovaw o mrais, Kal
TAVWMEVOS ev Th TONEL mepipoBos Kat aBon8n-TOS, Karta TUN NV eradev els olxiav mrapedOov yuvacKos, aderdas pev 'ABavtidov, Tpopavre dé
TO Krexviou a0EXPO yeyapnpernys, dvopa Lwaods.
auTn 6€ Kal TO 710 05 ovca yevvaia Kal avy Gee TW TO Taldtov olopevn KaTATEPEVY EVAL 7 pos auTny améxpuiev évdov, eita vuKtos els "'Apyos umeEemeurpev.
III. Obte & éxxraTrévt TO 'Apate Kat oua-puyovte Tov Kivduvov evdus ev évep veTo Kal cunveeTo TO ahodpov Kal dsamupov pioos én TOUS TUpdvvous. T PEPO/LEVOS d€ mapa Tots ev
"Apyet Eevors Kat iro TAT pepors edevdepins, Kal TO copa Bracravov op@y els evefiav Kal péeyebos, emedwnen € EAUTOV AoKHOEL TH TeEpl mahat-oTpav, @oTe Kal TévTaOXov aywvicacGa Kal
2 oTrepavwyv tuyeiv. eémridaiverar 8 apérer Kai
Tais eikoow a@dAnTLK TIs idéa, Kal TO TUvETOV
Tob Tpocwmov Kal Bacthixov ov TavTaTacw apvetTat THY aon garyiav KaL TO oKxaetor. 60ev evdeéaTepor i LTWS 1) TOALTLK@ ™ poo hiKov Hy avdpi mept tov Adyov eorovsace KaltoL ryeyovévat Kopryore pov evmreiv i) Soxet Teo ex Tov UTOMYNLa-T@Y Kpivovaty, a TapEepyos KQL UTrO YEipa Ora TOV emUTUXOVT@Y ovoparov Aphno dpevos KATEMITE, Xpove 6 tatepov "ABavtiday pév ot mepi Ae-viav kal "AptaototédXn Tov SiarextiKOV, etwOoTa Tots NOYOLS AUT@V KaT Wyopav cyoralovTwr Exd-
1 A contest involving the five arts of running, leaping, hurling the spear, boxing, and wrestling.

6

ARATUS u. 3-111. 3

which prevailed about the house the boy made. his escape with the fugitives, and wandering about in the city, full of fear and helpless, by chance got unnoticed into the house of a woman who was a sister of Abantidas, but had married Prophantus the brother of Cleinias. Her name was Soso. This woman, who was of a noble nature, and thought it a divine dispensation that the boy had taken refuge with her, hid him in the house, and at night sent him secretly off to Argos.

III. Thus was Aratus stolen away from the peril that threatened him, and at once that vehement and glowing hatred of tyrants for which he was noted became a part of his nature and grew with his growth. He was reared in liberal fashion among the guests and friends of his father's house at Argos, and since he saw that his bodily growth promised high health and stature, he devoted himself to the exercises of the palaestra, going so far as to win wreaths of victory in contesting the pentathlum.! And indeed even his statues have plainly an athletic look, and the sagacity and majesty of his countenance do not altogether disown the athlete's full diet and wielding of the mattock. Wherefore his cultivation of oratory was perhaps less intense than became a man in public life; and yet he is said to have been a more ornate speaker than some think who judge from the Commentaries which he left; these were a bye-work, and were composed in haste, off-hand, and in the words that first occurred to him in the heat. of contest.

- Some time after the escape of Aratus, Abantidas was slain by Deinias and Aristotle the logician. The tyrant was wont to attend all their public disputations

OTOTE Tapeivat Kal TuudtAroverxelv, éuPadovtes ets TotauTnv statpiBnvy Kal KaTacKevacaytes éeriBovrny avetrov, Ulacéay 6€ tov 'ABavtidov TaTepa THV apxinyv UToraBovta Nixoxrs Soropovncas éauToV avecerte TUpavvoY. TovUTOV eppepertarov Neyouse THY oyptv Tlepravopy TO Kuyeérou yevea Gat, cabamep 'AAKpai@ve bev T@ "Apudidpew Tov Iéponv 'Opavtny," 'Exropt d€ TOV Aaxedatpoviov veariaKon, Ov LaTopel Muptinros

varo TtANnOovs TaV Gewpévwrv, WS TOTO éyvwaar, KaTataTnOnvat.
IV. Too be Nukoxreous Téa capas pnvas: TupavvoovTos, €v ots TONG KAKA TV TOALW épyacd-pevos extvduvevcev UT AlTwrA@Y et Bovrevomevny avTiy amoBareiv, 75n petpdxcov o “Apatos av
aftwopa Naprrpov elxe bu evyéveray Kal doovnma, O duepawey ov puck pov ovee apyov, éuBprbés b¢ Kal Tap nrcKeaY daharertepg von KEKpapLevov.
d0ev of Te puyades pariara, TOV VOOY ExEeiv@ TpoG-elXov, 6 te Nexoxd.5 ovK nwErEL TOV 7 PAaTTO-pEévov, Grn eros am eBewper Kal TapehvAaTTeEV QUTOU THD oppyny, TOAPLNLA pev ovdev THALKODTOV dedims oVSE Epyov ovdév oUTW TapaKexKivduveEv-MevOY, UTOTTEVMY be Tots Bactredow auTov dta-AéyeOar dirous ovot Kal E€vois TAT POLS. Kal yap arnbas o “Apatos eTEXVELNNTE THY odon € éxetynv Babditewv. os dé “AvTiryovos pev Umax vovfevos nuédXet Kal Taphye tov ypovor, ai dé at 1 wapiye Coraés and Ziegler, with S&8: wapiice (let the time pass).

1 95] B.c.

ARATUS m1. 3-1v. 3

in the market-place and to take part in them; they encouraged him in this practice, laid a plot, and took his life. Paseas also, the father of Abantidas, after assuming the supreme power, was treacherously slain by Nicocles, who then proclaimed himself tyrant. This man is said to have borne a very close resemblance to Periander the son of Cypselus, just as Orontes the Persian did to Alemaeon the son of Amphiaraiis, and as the Spartan youth mentioned by Myrtilus did to Hector. Myrtilus tells us that when the throng of spectators became aware of this resemblance, the youth was trampled underfoot.

IV. Nicocles was tyrant of the city for four months, during which he wrought the city much harm, and narrowly escaped losing it to the Aetolians when they plotted to seize it. By this time! Aratus, now a young man, was held in marked esteem on account of his high birth, and of his spirit. This was showing itself to be not insignificant nor yet unenterprising, but earnest, and tempered with a judgement safe beyond his years. Wherefore the exiles from Sicyon had their minds fixed most of all upon him, and Nicocles was not neglectful of what was going on, but kept secret watch and ward over his undertakings, not because he feared any deed of so great daring and hazard as that in which Aratus finally engaged, but because he suspected that Aratus was in com- munication with the kings who had been on terms of friendship and hospitality with his father. And in truth Aratus had attempted to travel along that path. But since Antigonus? neglected his promises and prolonged the time, and since the hopes derived

* Antigonus Gonatas, king of Macedonia 283-239 B.c.

2

co

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Aiyurtov kal wapa IrtoNewaiov paxpav ijaoav
ENTILOES, eyve dv avrTov KaTANvELY TOV TUpavvon.
V. II parors dé KowodTat THY yrapny ‘A picto-HaX® Kal ‘Eedy A. TOUTWY O pev éx SuKV@vos
a puyas, ° dé "ExSydos ‘Apkas éx Meyarns TOXEWS, avn p hirocogos Kat TPAKTLKOS, "A pKeatidov Tov “Axadnptaxod yeyovws év doter ouvnOns. SeEapévov b€ ToUTwY TpoOvmas StEdXéyETO Tols aNrXOLS Huydatv, Ov oriryou pev ataoyuvevtTes éyxaTanriTety TY éATiOa pEeTEeLyov TOY TpaT-Tomevwv, of S€ ToAAOL Kal Tov” Apatow érretp@VvToO
- e > , ld ,
KATAKMAVEL WS aTELpLa Tpayudtwv Ppacuvo-pevov.
BovAevopévou & avtov Xwptov TL TNS Lixvevias
KataraPeiv, o0ev CppnwEevos SvaTrohepo et ™pos
TOV TUpavvor, KEV ELS "A pyos dvnp LiKva@vios éx
THIS ELOKTHS ATOOEO PAKS" iy dé Tov dvydsov EVOS Eevoxhéous aoEX pos" Kal TO ‘Apat@ 7 poo-axOeis uo tod Fevoxdéous Erxeye Tod TELVYOUS cab’ Ov uTepBas avTos éow@On TOTOV, évTOS meV Oréryou Oetv émizrecon Elval, TpogTEPYKETA YW piots
TET pwobert Kab byynrots, TO 6€ &Ewlev tros vm KNLLAK OY ov Tavu aVvEPLKTOD. @s 6€ TAUTA HKOUoev 6 “Apatos, éxméutret pera ToD =Evoxréous oixéTas Lotous ovo, SevOav te Kat Téxveova, KaTaa Kerrop.evous TO TELXOS, eyVOKOS, et Suvatto, Kpuda Kal pos &va xivOuvov o&€as TO Tay avap-pirat fadXrov 7) paKp@ TONEL® Kal pavepois ary a@oww LOLoTNS dvrixabiatac Bat 1 Pos TUpavvor.
ws © émavidOov of wept Tov Hevoxréa Tod peév TeLyous etAnhoTes METPA Kal TOU TOTOU THY pvaw } Fe)

1029

ARATUS Av, 3=v. 5

from Egypt and Ptolemy! were a long way off, he resolved to overthrow the tyrant by his own efforts.

V. The first to whom he imparted his design were Aristomachus and Ecdelus. Of these, the one was an exile from Sicyon, and Ecdelus was an Arcadian of Megalopolis, a student of philosophy and a man of action, who had been an intimate friend of Arcesilaiis the Academic at Athens. These men eagerly adopted his proposals, and he then began conversations with the other exiles. A few of these took part in the enterprise because they were ashamed to disappoint the hope placed in them, but the majority actually tried to stop Aratus, on the ground that his in- experience made him over-bold.

While he was planning to seize some post in the territory of Sicyon from which he might sally forth and make war upon the tyrant, there came to Argos a man of Sicyon who had run away from prison. He was a brother of Xenocles, one of the exiles; and when he had been brought to Aratus by Xenocles, he told him that the part of the city's wall over which he had climbed to safety was almost level with the ground on the inside, where it had been attached to steep and rocky places, and that on the outside it was not at all too high for scaling-ladders. When Aratus had heard this, he sent with Xenocles two servants of his own, Seuthas and Technon, to make an examination of the wall ; for he was resolved, if he could, to hazard the whole enterprise on one secret and swift attempt, rather than in a long war and in open contests to match his private resources against those of a tyrant. So when Xenocles and his party came back with measurements of the wall

1 Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt 283-247 B.c.

ATAYYENNOVTES OUK ATTOPOV OVE YarETNHV, TO SE
Aadety mpoceNOovtas epyades civat PadcKovrTes UTTO KNTOUPOD TLVOS KUVAPLWV, LEX POV MEV, EXTOTOS be payipov Kat arapnyopitwv, evOvs évictato THY m pacwy.
Vi ev ovv TOV Om hov TapacKeun ouvnOns
WY, TAVTOD, @s éros ELT eiy, TOTE KN@TELALS Xpo-[LEV@OV KAL KaTacpopats én aNXdajNOUS" Tas b€ KDE [aKkas Kug¢pivep o O HNXaVOT OLOS avagavéov € em)- Earo, Tis TEXYNS AVT@ TO avUTOT TOV Odovans, € TEL
Kal avr os WV TOV guryidav. av6pas b€ aUT@ TOV pev év "A pyet pirov é EXATTOS €& Od YoV déxa Tapéayev, autos 6€ TaY lotwr oiKeT@r TpidKovTa KADwWTALTED. epic baoato dé xal dea Tpwrou = evopidov TO) dpXtxhom wv ov TrodXous oT parow-Tas, ois 61e609 NOyos ws el TAS tnmous TAS BaotdtKas eis THY Luxcvoviav &€oo0s ev 0lTO. Kal
m poet éupO noay ol ToAAOL orropdbes ert Tov IIo-AUYVWTOU TrUpYor, exet Kereva Devtes Teptpweiva. mpoereupon b€ Kal Kaduicias vm' av'tod peta

Teacdpwv arAdXkgwv evfwvos, ods Ede pos Tov
KN TOUpOV adixeabat axotatous, ddaKovras obot-Topovs eElvat, Kal KATAUALTAMEVOUS GUTOV TE TuyKrEloar Kal TOUS KUVas* OU yap yy adn Tap-ei ety. Tas d€ KAAS dtaXuTas ovcas éuBa-NovTES Els Aydvas Kal KaTaKkaduYayTes Eh
apat@v tpoaTréatetiav.
’Ep rovtm 6€ KatacKoTrwy Tiveav év Apyet Tod Nixoxréous havévtwy Kai Trepti€vas eyouévwv adyrws Kal twapahvAattev tov “Apatov, ap 12

ARATUS v, 5=vI. 4

which they had taken, and with a report that the place was by nature not impassable nor even difficult (although they declared that it was hard to get to it undetected owing to a certain gardener's dogs, which were little beasts, but extraordinarily fierce and savage), Aratus at once undertook the business.

VI. Now the laying in of arms was nothing unusual, since almost everybody at that time indulged in robberies and predatory forays; and as for scaling-ladders, Euphranor the engineer made them openly, since his trade screened him from suspicion; and he too was one of the exiles. As for men, each of the friends of Aratus in Argos furnished him with ten out of the few they had, and he himself equipped thirty of his own servants with arms. Through Xenophilus, the foremost of the robber captains, he also hired a few soldiers, to whom it was given out that a foray was to be made into the territory of Sicyon to seize the horses of Antigonus. And most of them were sent on ahead in small bands to the tower of Polygnotus, with orders to wait there. Aratus also sent on in advance Caphisias, lightly armed, with four companions; their orders were to come to the gardener’s when it was dark, pretending to be travellers, and after taking up quarters there for the night, to shut up him and his dogs; for there was no other way to get past them. The scaling-ladders, which could be taken apart, were packed in boxes, and thus concealed were sent on ahead in waggons.
In the meantime some spies of Nicocles appeared in Argos and were reported to be secretly going about and watching the movements of Aratus. As soon as it was day, therefore, Aratus left his house

ne

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TE Pe ™poeh Benv Kal pavepos & @V €V ayopg dueT pie
pera TOV pirov: elt ddewpapevos € év TO yupvacio Kal Taparasav Teas éK THS madaisTpas TOV
elwOoTwV ive Kal pabupetv per avrou veavi-TKMV amie oixade Kab pera pox pov ewpato TOV oikeT@V avTov ot’ ayopas o pév aTEhavous hépoy,
o 6€ Aapmadas @vovpevos, oO bé TOis EiOiopévots Tapa ToTOv Wadrew Kal avrA<€iv yuvaiots Staneyo-pevos. Tavuta S€ ol KaTaCKOTOL TAVTA OP@VTES €ENTaTNVTO KAL TOOS AAANHAOUS AVAVEN@VTES EAE) q p) Of you: “ Ouvdev Hv apa tupavvov SetdoTepor, et Kal

NixoxAs tyrALcKavUTHY Tod EYwWY Kal TOoTaUTHY

SvvapLy Oppwoel etpaKLov eis NOovas Kal TrOTOUS

peO nmepivovs Ta THs huyns épodta xataypo-
b pevov.

VII. Ot pev ody obtw maparoyicOévtes amn)d-Aaynoay’ o 6€ "A patos evOvs peT aptotov éFen-Owv Kai cuvarpas 7 pos TOV [loAvyverou TUpYyov Tots atpatiotais eis Neuéav ™ poner, 61rov Thy m™ pagev eLeprve TOUS TONS TOTE TPOTOV, UT0-oXETELS TE KAL TAPAKrAN TELS €TO!NTATO' KAL cuD-Onpa mapasovs ‘AT OAN@va bmepoetvov 7 potpyev emt THD TOLD, TUMMET POS TH mepupopa THS oe-Aqvns eT LTAX VOD Kab TadLV aviels THY TopeElay, @OTE TO pev pari xphobar Kal? odor, 700 be Suopévns mepl Tov Kirov etvae TANnGiov Tov TEél-Nous. evtadba Kaguoias am VT NT eV aUT@, TOV jev Kuvapiov ou Kpatnaas (EpOn yap dmomns1}- cava), Tov O€ KNTOUpOY eyKecherkns. ad vpous dé TOUS mWAEiaTOUS YEVOMEVOUS Kab KENEVOVTAS amaddaTtecVar tapeOappuvev 0” Apatos, os at-aEwy, av ol Kuves ayay évoyA@aw adtois. apa 14

1030

and showed himself openly in the market-place, conversing with his friends; then he anointed himself in the gymnasium, took with him from the palaestra some of the young men who were wont to drink and make holiday with him, and went back home; and after a little one of his servants was seen carrying garlands through the market-place, another buying lights, and another talking with the women that regularly furnished music of harp and flute at banquets. When the spies saw all this, they were completely deceived, and with loud laughter said to one another: ‘Nothing, you see, is more timorous than a tyrant, since even Nicocles, though master of so great a city and so large a force, is in fear of a stripling who squanders on pleasures and mid-day banquets his means of subsistence in exile.”

VII. The spies, then, thus misled, left the city; but Aratus, immediately after the morning meal, sallied forth, joined his soldiers at the tower of Poly- gnotus, and led them on to Nemea. Here he dis- closed his design, to most of them then for the first time, and made them exhortations and promises. Then, after giving out as watchword “Apollo Vic- torious,” he led them forward against Sicyon, quickening or retarding his progress according to the revolution of the moon, so as to enjoy her light while on the march, and as soon as she was setting to be at the garden near the wall. There Caphisias came to meet him; he had not secured the dogs (for they had bounded off before he could do this), but had locked up the gardener. Most of his men were disheartened at this and urged Aratus to retire; but he tried to encourage them, promising to lead them back if the dogs should prove too troublesome for

6€ TOUS Tas KripaKas pépovras T poTreuyras, @v
"Exdnros nyeito Kab Mvaaideos, autos emnKko-Novdet TxXohalws, ON TOV Kuvaptov evTOvOS vra-KTOVVTOV Kat TULTAPAT pEeXOVT MY TOUS mepl TOV
“Exdmhov. ov mn ana T poo éuiav TE TO TEelKXet
Kal Tpoonpetaay Tas KhipaKas dopards. ava-Ba.vovtwy 5é€ TOY TPWTwY, oO THY EwOLViPY puraxny mapaci0ous epwdeve kwdwu, Kal Sata TOANG Kal OopuBos ay TOV ET LT OPEVOMEVOY. at oé, Oomep eLXyov, avTou atneavrTes emt TOV KNLLAKWY TOU-TOUS pev ov Xahemas éradon, arrays be puraxis évavtias TavTn Tpocepyomevns Els TOV ~ayaToV kivouvov HrAOov. ws b€ KaKeivny dStéehuyov TraperXGodaar, evOus avéBatvov oi tpw@tot Mvaaideos
kat “Exdnros, Kal tas éxatépwOev odovs Tod TELXOUS dtaraBovtes améoterrXov Téyvwva mpos
"A patov erretryed Oat KENEVOVTES.
VII. "Hy 6€ ov TOND OuiaTn wa amo Tob Kr) TOU
Tpos TO TELyos Kat TOV mupyov, ev w KU@Y péyas

ep pou per Onparixos. avTOS pev OvV OvK 0 Gero THY éposor, cite puaet voOns wv, EiTe ped Typepay KATUKOTOS yeyovws. Tav oe Tob KnToupod Kuva-piwv Kat wdev ex Ka OVLEVOY avr ov umed Deyyero Tupror Kat donpoy TO Tpatov, Elta pandrov ér-ETELVE TAapEepXopever. Kat Kateixev 0 ToAUS
DAayLOS TO YWPLOV, WOTE TOV Trépav puhaka
Kpavy} peyady TU Gaverbat Tov KuVNnyod, 7 pos
TLVA TPAYEWS OUTWS O KUWY VAAKTEL, KaL pn TL
1 The sentries who had formed the night-watch came up at the sound of the bell, to be inspected, and then relieved by the morning-watch.
16

ARATUS vit. q-vil. 2

them. At the same time he sent forward the men who carried the scaling-ladders, under the comimand of Ecdelus and Mnasitheus, while he himself followed after them slowly, the dogs already barking vigorously and running along by the side of Ecdelus and his party. However, they reached the wall and planted their ladders against it without mishap. But as the first men were mounting the ladders, the officer who was to set the morning-watch began making his rounds with a bell, and there were many lights and the noise of the sentries coming up.!_ The invaders, however, crouched down just where they were on the ladders, and so escaped the notice of this party without any trouble; but since another watch was coming up to meet the first, they incurred the greatest danger. However, they escaped the notice of this guard also as it passed by, and then the leaders, Mnasitheus and Ecdelus, at once mounted to the top, and after occupying the approaches to the wall on either side, sent Technon to Aratus, urging him to hasten up.

Vill. Now it was no great distance from the garden to the wall, and to the tower, in which a huge dog was on the watch, a hunter. The dog himself did not notice their approach, either because he was naturally sluggish, or because during the day he had become tired out. But when the gardener’s whelps challenged him from below, he began to growl in re- sponse, faintly and indistinctly at first, then bayed out more loudly as they passed by. Presently the whole place resounded with barking, so that the watch- man opposite called with a loud cry to the hunts- man asking why his dog was baying so savagely and whether some mischief was not afoot. The hunts-

17

PLUTARCR’S LIVES

,
yieTat KALVOTEPOD. 0 & amo TOD m Upyou avT@ ?
dvtepovnee ponder eivat Sewvov, AAA Tov Kvva
Tpos TO POS THY TELYopUAdKwY KaL TOV Wwodor
TOU KWOWVOS TapwEvvOa. TOUTO pudtora TOUS “Apatou (oTpaTLMT As eT Eppwaer, oLomevous “Tov

Kunyov enix puT TEV KOW@VvovrTa TH mpage, elvat dS€ woANAXous Kat dX ous éy 7H TONEL TOUS oUD-EpyouvTas. ov pny GAAXA TO TELX EL m™ poo Banrov-TOV Karem os Av Oo Kivduvos Kal fiKOs chap ave, TOV KML AKOV Kpadawwopmevav El 1) Kad éva Kat oVoAains avaBaivorev' 1) 66 WPA KaTHTrELYEV, HON POeryyopevev aexTpvorwn, Kat door ovr TOV
e& aypov TL pepe elw0 oT wv 7 pos ayopav emepXo-pévov. Oto Kab omevdwoy o "Apatos aveBawe, TeToapaKovTa TOV TaVTWY avaBeBnnotev 7 po avTOv' Kal Tpoadesapevos ere TOV catobev 6Aiyous él THY olKiay TOD Tupavvov kal TO oTpa-TIYLOV avi Gev- évtavda yap ot pra Gopopor TApeVvUKTEPEVOV. advo oe eT LT ETO autois Kal ovA\afav amayvtas, ovdeva 5€ atroxtetvas, evOus dueTéuTeTO mpos Tovs gdirovs avakadotpevos éxaoTov am' oiKias. Kab ouvdpapovTov Tavtaxobev, 7 "Epa pev UTELA MT EV On Kal TO Géat pov ip dxAov peo TOV, ETL TpOS TV adndov a.icpov-[EVO pnenv Kal capes ovdev elOor op uTép TOY TPATTOMEVOY, T piv 7¢ 57 mpoedOav o np elqrev ws "Apatos 0 KyXeuviov mapaxadel tovs Toditas érl tTHv édevOepiav.
IX. Tore 6€ mictevcavtes ee a Tarat
TpocEedoKay, Wpuncav aOpoot Tpos Tas Ovpas Tod 18

ARATUS vir. 2-1x. 1

man answered him from the tower that there was nothing to fear, but that his dog had been excited by the lights of the sentries and the din of the bell. This more than anything else gave heart to the soldiers of Aratus. They thought that the huntsman was privy to their design and was trying to conceal it, and that there were many others also in the city who would assist them. However, when the rest of the company essayed the wall, their peril was grievous and protracted, since the ladders shook unless they mounted one by one and slowly ; moreover, time was pressing, since cocks were already crowing, and directly the people who brought produce from the country to the market-place would be coming up. Therefore Aratus also mounted the wall in haste, after forty in all had mounted before him; and when he had been joined by a few more of those below, he went up against the tyrant's house and the praetorium, where the mercenary soldiers passed the night. And after falling upon these suddenly and capturing them all, but killing none, he straightway sent messages to his friends summoning them all from their homes, and they ran together from all quarters. Day was now breaking, and the theatre was thronged with people who still were in suspense because of the un- certain rumour that prevailed and in utter ignorance of what was afoot, until the herald came forward and made proclamation that Aratus the son of Cleinias invited the citizens to secure their freedom.

IX. Then, convinced that what they had long expected was come, they rushed in a body to the 1 ard... ate bracketed by Sint.?; Ziegler reads mpds aurév, with Stephanus.
19

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tupavvou Tp emipepoy Tes. npOn be prok peyarn KaU KaTrapavns péexpt Kopiv@ov THS otKias avaPOevons, wore Javpacavras Tous ép Kopivé@ mapa [LK POV Opuaat pos THY Bonevav. O pev
oy Nixoxds erabe Sta TWOY UTovopwv UTEKOUS Kat am obpas ex THs. TONEWS, ot oe€ oTpPATLATAL
KATATAVTGLTES beta Tov Lixveoviwy TO Tuvp Siunptalov Thy otKiav. Kal oUTE TAaUTA ex@AVEEV
o "Apatos, Ta TE NOLTTA YPHMAaTAa TMV TUPaVYwD
els pécov €OnKe Tois ToNtTats. améGave dé ovdels
ovde éTpwOn TO TapaTray TaY émreAOoYTOY OLOE TOV TOAEMLOV, GAAG KaBapay Kal aOLKTOV alwaTos éuduriou thy mpakw 7 Tvyy Stepvrake.
Katnyaye 5€ guyadas tovs pev vo NixoKNEOUS EXTETTWKOTAS GYSoONKOVTA, TOUS 6€ éml TAY
eum poo Gev Tupavyey OUK EXATTOUS TEVTAKOTLWY, ols paKpa pev WAGV) Kal O"oD TL TEVTNKOVTAETIS eryeryovee. ated Bovres 6€ of mrEtoTOL TEVNTES, DY KUPLOL TPOTEPOV Hoav éTEeNauPavovTo, rat Badilovtes emi Ta xopta, KaL TAS OiKLas SeLv7)Y am optay TO "Apateo Tapetxov, émtBovrevopevny pev dwbev Kal PGovoupevny UT 'ApTuyovou THY Tod op@vTe Ova THY édXEVOEpiav, TapaTTOMEeVHY de Up' avTis Kal ctactafoveap.
"Oev éx TOV TapovTwy apioTa Kpivas Tpocépuuev avTny dépwv tots *Ayatoiss cat Awprets OvTes umédvocav ExovaiWws Ovo"a Kal TOALTELAD
TH Axara ourTE adFiopa NauTpov ovTE peyadny
1a XUV eXOV TOV TOTE. HiKxpoTrortTa yap Hoav ot
TOANOL, KAL yy ovTEe YpnoTHVY ovTE adOovor 20

1031

ARATUS Ix. 1-4

residence of the tyrant, carrying firebrands. A great flame arose as the house caught fire, and it was visible as far as Corinth, so that the people of Corinth were astonished and were on the point of sallying forth to help. Nicocles, then, slipped out unnoticed by way of certain underground passages, and ran away from the city, and the soldiers, after extinguishing the fire with the aid of the Sicyonians, plundered his house. Nor did Aratus prevent this, but put the rest of the wealth of the tyrants at the disposition of the citizens. And not a man was killed or even wounded at all, either among the assailants or their enemies, but fortune preserved the enterprise free from the taint of civil bloodshed.

Aratus restored eighty exiles who had been banished by Nicocles, and those also who had fled the city during the reign of former tyrants, to the number of five hundred. These had long been wanderers, yes, for close to fifty years. And now that they had come back, most of them in poverty, they laid claim to the property which they had formerly held, and by going to their farms and houses threw Aratus into great perplexity. For he saw that the city was plotted against by outsiders and eyed with jealousy by Antigonus because it had regained its freedom, while it was full of internal disturbances and faction.
Wherefore, as things stood, he thought it best to attach the city promptly to the Achaean League; and so, though the people of Sicyon were Dorians, they voluntarily assumed the name and civil polity of the Achaeans, who at that time had neither brilliant repute nor great strength. For most of them lived in small cities, owned land that was 2!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

€EKEKTIVTO, Kal Gararry 7 poo @KOUY aNLWEVEY, Ta TOAAA KATA paxylas ex Pepowevy 7 pos THY irevpov.
anra partota 6n dédecEav ovToe THY “EXAnViKHY GXKNVY ATpoOTpLayov ovaar, OGdKLS TUYOL KOG MOU
Kat ouvtakews opoppovovans Kai vovv éyovtos YELOVOS, OL THS pev Tara TOV “EARN ivOV aKuAs ovdév, ws eltreiy, wépos dvTes, év O€ TH TOTE pas
a€tohoyou TOAEWS TUT AVTES omod Obvapuy ouK
EXovTEs, evBourig Kab omovoia, Kal OTL T@ TPOTY
Kar GpeTHV eduvayTo By pOoveiv, GNA meiber Oat
Kal akoXovdely, ov povov avTous év peo@ TONWY
Kab Ouvapewy THALKOUTMY Kal TUpavvidwy Sedu-Nakav édevOépous, adArAG Kal TOV GrXwv “EXA?- vov ws TAEoTOUS EAXEUVEpOvVTES Kal owCoVTES dteTéAOUY.

X. "Hv 6€”Apatos TO TpOT TONTLKOS, peya-
Aodpor, axptBéaTepos els Ta Kova parXov TOV Lolwy, TKpaS pucotbpavvos, Ex9pas opm Kai prrias del TO KOLVO ouppepovTe VY PWLEVOS. d0ev ovy obT ws Soxei yeyovevar piros axpyans, @S éxO pos evyVoLov Kal TPGos, vO THS TONTELAS em appotepa TO KaLp@ pera Badropevos, 6 omovoias éOvav Kal Kowwvias TOAEwWY Kal ouvedpiov Kal Geatpou piav povny apevTos as ovdevos addou
TOV KAA@Y épacTns, TONE LD Kal ay@ve xXpnoa-Fat pavepas adapons Kal duvoeXTLs, KrEYra dé mpaypara Kat ouoKxevacacGa. Kk pupa TOXELS
Kal tupavvovs éemnBorwTaTos. ae Kal TONKA TOV avedtiatwy KaTtopbwaas év ols éTOAmNcE?, ovK é\aTTova SOoxet Tov SuvaTav éyKaTaNwTELDV 22

ARATUS ix. 4-x. 3

neither fertile nor extensive, and were neighbours to a sea that had no harbours and for the most part washed a precipitous and rocky shore. But this people more than any other showed the world that Greek prowess was invincible, whenever it enjoyed good order, harmonious discipline, and a sensible leader. For though they had taken almost no part in the ancient glories of Greece, and at this time, though counted all together, had not the power of a single considerable city, still, owing to their good counsels and their concord, and because they were able, in place of envying, to obey and follow the one who was pre-eminent among them for virtue, they not only preserved their own freedom in the midst of so great cities and powers and tyrannies, but also were con- tinually saving and setting free very many of the other Greeks.

X. Aratus was by natural bent a statesman, high- minded, more exact in his public than in his private relations, a bitter hater of tyrants, and ever making « regard for the public weal determine his enmity or his friendship. Wherefore he seems to have proved not so much a strict friend, as a considerate and mild enemy, changing his ground in either direction according to the exigencies of the state, loving concord between nations, community of cities, and unanimity of council and assembly, beyond all other blessings. It was manifest that he resorted to open warfare and strife without courage and with little confidence, but that in stealing advantages and secretly managing cities and tyrants he was most proficient. Therefore, though he won many unex- pected successes where he showed courage, he seems to have lost no fewer favourable opportunities through

23

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

bu evAaBevay. ov yap pov'ov, Os EOLKE, Onpicov

Tivav ders évepyol dia GKOTOUS ovCat pe 7H pe-pay anoTuphovvTat Enpotnte Kal NeTTOTNTL THS mepl TOV op Oa pov UYPOTNTOS [7 gepovens THY 7 pos TO das TUyKpacL, dna Kat deLvoTns TUS éotiv avOowrou Kat TUvETLS év Tols uTalOpors Kal SraxexnpuyLevors evTapaKtos mhuaet, pos b€ TAS erixpupous kal AaB patous avalapoovca mpagers.
vp € TowauTny avopaniav évdea oyou prroaopou epi Tas evgvias damepyaterar, THY caper iD, OTTEP KapT ov avropui Kab dyew@pyntor, exd €poucas_OiXa THS éTiatTHUNS. TavTa pev ovv é€eTa-CécOw Tots Tapaceiypacty.
XI. “O é6€”"Apatos, ével xatéuske Tots “A xatois
EAUTOV Kal THY TOAD, év TOLS immEvaL GTPATEV-OMEeVvOS HYATATO Ot EvTEOELaY LTO TOY apYovTwD, 6TL, KaiTrep TULBOXAS TO KOLVO peydras bedwKas THY éavtod bofay Kat THY THS maT pi6os uvapey, ws ev TOV €TLTUXOVTOY Xpijo Par Tmapelyev AUTO TOV Gel aoTpaTnyouvTa TOV ‘Ayatov, cite Av-paios, ELTE Tpetavevs, etre Hix poTepas TLVOS WY TUX aL TOAEWS. nKe O€ avT@ Kal Xpypar ov Swpea
Tra. pds TOU Bactrews TEVTE Kal ElKocL Tahavra.
Tavta édaBe pev 0” Apatos, X\aBa@y b€ Tots EavToOd
ToNrtiTals eTédwKev atropoupévols els TE TAaAXNA Kab AUTpwWOLY aX padwTov.
XII. ’Esret 6€ of puyaces Hoav arra.py'y opr Tou
Tols EXovGL Tas KT ELS evoxrodvtes, 1} TE TONS exivduvevev avaaTtatos yevéecOat, piav opav €ATriba Thv lItodepaiou diravOpwriav apyunoev éxTred-1 roy del orpatrnyovrra Ziegler, with Sint.! and the MSS. :

TS ael oTparnyovrti.

24

10°

ARATUS x. 3-xul. 1

over-caution. For not only in the case of certain wild beasts, as it would seem, is the vision strong by night but wholly blinded in the day-time (since the humour in their eyes is too dry and delicate to bear contact with the light), but there is also in some men a cleverness and sagacity which is prone to be confounded in transactions that are carried out under the open sky and proclaimed abroad by public criers, but when confronting hidden and secret enterprises recovers its courage. Such unevenness a lack of philosophy may cause in men of good natural parts ; they produce virtue without scientific knowledge, and it is like spontaneous and uncultivated fruit. This can be proved by examples.

XI. Aratus, now, after uniting himself and his city with the Achaeans, served in the cavalry, and was beloved by his commanders on account of his ready obedience. For although he had made great contributions to the commonwealth in his own reputation and the power of his native city, he gave his services like those of any ordinary person to the onc who from time to time was general of the Achacans, whether he was a man of Dyme or of Tritaea, or of a meaner city. And there came to him alsoa gift of money from the king of Egypt, five-and-twenty talents. These Aratus accepted, but gave them at once to his fellow-citizens, who were in want of money, especially for the ransoming of such as had been taken prisoners.

