Plutarch's Lives (Loeb Classical Library, 11 volumes in one)

Plutarch (translated by Bernadotte Perrin)

This PDF is the public-domain text from https://archive.org/details/PlutarchLivesLCL11VolumesInOnePerrinTrans, set in type for reading and printing. The wording is unchanged; five editorial bracket symbols the font lacks are shown as plain brackets. Loeb volumes published 1914 onward; the text's first volume title page shows 'MCMXIV'. Perrin's translation was completed before 1931 (reasoning; archive record states no copyright status, and I did not verify the publication year of volume XI). Free from Credible Theories: credibletheories.com/library/plutarch-lives-perrin-loeb-1914-1926.html

PLUTARCH’S
| LIVES
WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY

7 5 Ui oe PERRIN bak ~
IN A VOLUMES

THESEUS AND ROMULUS
LYCURGUS AND NUMA
SOLON AND PUBLICOLA
LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN
NEW YORK : THE MACMILLAN CO.
7 MCMXIV
Nad

PREFATORY NOTE

AGREEMENT between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873- 1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) texts of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text of the present edition. Any preference of one to the other where they differ, and any departure from both, have been indicated. All the Lives included in this volume are contained in the Codex Seitenstettensis (S), and occasional use has been made of the collations of that MS. by W. Meyer (Leipzig, 1890). Since no collations of Codex Parisinus 1676 (F*), the excellent MS. so closely related to S, have been accessible to the Editor, its readings could only be inferred here and there from the text and notes of Stephanus. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. The reading which follows the colon in the critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

PREFATORY NOTE

The translation must speak for itself. Its author, like Plutarch himself, prays that he may find kindly readers, and feels reasonably confident of doing so among those who are able to appreciate the peculiarities of Plutarch’s Greek. All the standard translations of the Lives have, of course, been carefully compared and utilized.
B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecricot, U.S.A.
February, 1914.
vl

CONTENTS

PREFATORY NOTE ..... 66.0. 8 «8 4
INTRODUCTION... .. 2.0 «2 ee ee ee ew we ek
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES .
THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES. ,.
THESEUS ... .
ROMULUS . 2 6 6 © © © we @ ee Hw
COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS...

LYCURGUS = ¢- 3. 6% ee He wR ea we 8
NUBEA «0 55 es tm ee ae SR ORY pe Dn a Ae ene a BLS COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA.....e.-.
SOLON: . . . . «© « « © © «= ©
PUBLICOLA .... .

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA .....

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES .. .

577

INTRODUCTION

Piutarcn’s Lire ann WriTINGs

PLuTarcu was born at Chaeroneia, a small town on the northern confines of Boeotia, about the middle of the first century of our era, and toward the close of the reign of the emperor Claudius. He belonged to a family of ample means and generous culture, and was liberally educated. He studied at Athens, the most attractive university town in his day for both Greeks and Romans, and was a disciple of Ammonius of Lamptrae, a Peripatetic philosopher deeply versed in religious lore. Returning to his native town, he was soon called upon to represent it as deputy to the Roman governor of the province of Greece. That he travelled extensively over Greece, visited Asia Minor, Egypt, and Italy, and resided much at Rome, may be inferred from his writings, as most that is known about him must be inferred. At Rome, he was in charge of certain public business, so that he had not time to learn thoroughly the Latin language, as he himself con- fesses in the introduction to his Demosthenes. But Greek was the language of literary and polite society at Rome, and cultivated Greeks, especially philosophers, were welcome there. As a Greek philosopher, and a populariser of Platonism, Plutarch read and lectured at Rome, much as he did in the small but select circle of his intimates and friends at home. He made and retained a large acquaintance with the prominent Romans of his day, and was familiar with the questions which most occupied the minds of men at the political centre of the world, Then, after Athenian education, generous travels, diplomatic missions, modest literary celebrity, and considerable residence at Rome, he seems to have retired to his little country home, with his books, notes, lectures, essays, and gentle philosophy, and there, in a leisure not all too much encroached upon by local magistracies and certain religious offices at neighbouring Delphi, to have elaborated the sketches of his lectures and essays, which have come down to us under the collective name of Morals, and to have composed the work on which his fame chiefly rests, —the Parallel Lives of Greeks and Romans. He lived through the reigns Nero, Domitian, and Trajan, and, leaving the world as he did about 120 a.p., must have rejoiced at the accession of Hadrian to the imperial throne. His world had grown steadily better while he lived, and was now to enjoy its second golden age.

1X

INTRODUCTION

The Morals were composed, for the greater part, before the Lives, and are an invaluable prelude to and commentary on them, especially if we would know just what manner of man the author of the Lives was. They tell us, as the Lives do not, “of the points of view, moral and religious, from which he contemplated not this man’s life or the other’s, but the whole life of men. Nor is it too much to affirm that of the two halves of Plutarch’s writings, of his Lives and his Morals, each constitutes a complement of the other; the one setting forth to us, and, so far as this was possible, from ideal points of view, what the ancient world had accomplished in the world of action, and the other what, in like manner, it had aimed at and accomplished in the world of thought” (Trench, Plutarch, p. 90). But even in the Lives, Plutarch is far more moralist than historian.

Greece, after passing under Roman sway, lost sight gradually of her great men of action, and contented herself with the glories of her men of thought. Here surely the dominant Romans could not vie with her. It was to prove that the more remote past of Greece could show its lawgivers, commanders, statesmen, patriots, and orators, as well as the nearer and therefore more impressive past of Rome, that the Parallel Lives were written. With Scipio Africanus the Elder, the greatest man of Rome, Plutarch matched Epaminondas, the greatest man of Greece. This pair, or “book,” of Lives is unfortunately lost. With Camillus, who saved Rome from the Gauls, he matched Themistocles, who saved Athens from the Persians. Then followed, as nearly as the order can be determined—for the order of the Lives in our collection is not the original one, the Cimon and Lucullus, the Lycurgus and Numa, the Demosthenes and Cicero, the Pelopidas and Marcellus, the Lysander and Sulla, the Philopoemen and Flamininus, the Pericles and Fabius Maximus, the Aristides and Cato Major, and thirteen other pairs. Eighteen of the twenty-two pairs which have come down to us, close with a formal comparison of the two careers and characters. This is often fanciful and forced, abounds in contrasts rather than resemblances, and is seldom of any special historical value, although it often has great literary charm. There are also four single Lives in our collection, Artarerzes, Aratus, Galba, and Otho, and we get traces of twelve more that are now lost. One of the pairs is a double one, where, to match the two Gracchi, Plutarch selects the two reforming Spartan kings, Agis and Cleomenes. We have in all, therefore, fifty Lives by Plutarch.

Manuscripts, Epirions, TRANSLATIONS, ETc.

A full account of the MSS. of Plutarch must be sought in the critical editions of the Lives by Sintenis and Bekker. It will be sufficient to speak here of six.

The oldest and, with one exception, the most authoritative MS., is the Codex Sangermanensis (S*), in the library of the monastery of St. Germaindes- Prés, in the French Department of the Loire. Itis a parchment MS. of the Xth century, but unfortunately contains only fifteen of the Lives: Antony (last part), Pyrrhus-Marius, Aratus, Artaxerxes, Agis and Cleo- menes, Tiberius and Caius Gracchus, Lycurgus-Numa, Lysander-Sulla, and Agesilaiis-Pompey.

The second oldest MS., and on the whole the most authoritative, is the Codex Seitenstettensis (S), belonging to the monastery of Seitenstetten, near Waidhofen, in Lower Austria. It is a parchment MS. of the XIth century, containing sixteen Lives : Lycurgus-Numa, Solon-Publicola, Aristides-Cato the elder, Themistocles-Camillus, Cimon-Lucullus, Peri- cles-Fabius Maximus, Nicias-Crassus, and Agesilaiis-Pompey. There are large deficiencies in the Lycurgus, Fabius, Nicias, and Crassus. It is only since 1870, and the edition of the Aristides and Cato by Hercher, that this MS. has been known to be not only the second oldest, but the best extant MS. of Plutarch. It has not been used in any special editions of Lives included in this first volume, but its readings are collected in the dissertation of W. Meyer, De codice Plutarcheo Seitenstettensi eiusque asseclis, Leipsic, 1890.

Three parchment MSS. in the Bibliothéque Nationale of Paris, No. 1671 (A), of the XIIIth century, containing all the Morals and Lives, No. 1672 (C), also of the XIIIth century, containing all the Lives, and No. 1674 (D), of the XVIth century containing all the Lives, are of supreme importance, and on these the texts of Sintenis and Bekker mainly rest. Of these three MSS., A and D seem to be more closely related to S*, while C partakes of the characters both of S* and S, and is often corrective of A and D.

Another MS. in the same library, No. 1676 (F*), of the XVth century, has only more recently been recognized as the chief authority of Stephanus, and as partaking of the character of S. Its readings have not been fully published as yet, but have been used in editing the texts of special Lives, none of which, however, are included in this first volume.

Other MSS. will be mentioned as they come into importance for the text of special Lives. '

The editto princeps of the Parallel Lives, 1517, " Florentiae, in aedibus Philippi Juntae," was based on Florentine MSS. of relatively inferior value.-

The Aldine edition of the Parallel Lives, 1519, " Venetiis, in aedibus Aldi et Andreae soceri,'' was based on Venetiarr MSS., which were of greater excellence than the Florentine, some of them retaining their importance to the present day.

The first edition of the complete works of Plutarch, 1572, Paris, 13 voll. 8vo, was edited by Henri Etienne (Stephanus), who improved the text of his pre- decessors with readings of better MSS. unknown to them, making special use of Codex Parisinus, No. 1676 (F*). The Paris edition of 1624, in two volumes folio, reproduced the text of Stephanus, and became the textus receptus. By its pages (given on the inner margin of the text of the present edition) Plutarch is cited in the Index vocum verborumque exquisitiorum in Plutarcho, which closes Wyttenbach's great edition of the Morals (Oxford, 1830). ,

Critical and annotated editions of all the works of Plutarch by Reiske (Leipzig, 1774-82, 12 voll. 8vo), and of the Parallel Lives by Coraés (Paris, 1809-14, 6 voll. 8vo), were followed by the great critical. edition of the Parallel Lives by Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-46, 4 voll. 8vo), which still remains the standard edition (Sintenis'). A minor edition of this work appeared in the Bibliotheca Teubneriana (Leipzig, 1852-55, 5 voll. 12mo, re-issued without much change in 1873-75). It shows more boldness in the correction of obvious error, and greater freedom in the admission of conjecture, than the major edition, but is the most generally accepted text of the Lives (Sintenis?). The Tauchnitz text, edited by Immanuel Bekker (Leipzig, 1855-57, 5 voll. 8vo), does not differ very much from the first minor edition of Sintenis, but has a convenient division of the chapters into sections, which has been adopted in the present text.

-In 1559 appeared the French version of the Parallel Lives by Jacques Amyot, the earliest French classic recognized by the French Academy. Amyot consulted many MSS. unknown to the authors of the Juntine and Aldine editions, and his work has an independent philological value, aside from its great literary merits,

It was from Amyot's version, rather than from the original Greek, that Sir Thomas North made his version of the Lives (1579), a translation by the earliest master of great English prose from the earliest master of great French prose. Shakespeare used this version in his Cortolanus, Julius Caesar, and Antony and Cleopatra. It was the Elizabethan
- Plutarch. .

In Queen Anne's time, Dryden was " prevailed upon by his necessities'' to head a company of translators of the Lives, and the version was called by his name (1683), although he furnished merely the Preface and the Life of Plutarch. Notwithstanding all the failings of this motley version, it supplanted that of North.

The first scholar's translation of the Lives from the original Greek into English, by the brothers John and William Langhorne, was published in 1770, and was the version most current from that time down to 1850. Compared with North's spirited version, it is rather dull and pedantic, although much more accurate.

Arthur Hugh Clough's revision of the so-called Dryden translation, a work which occupied this gifted scholar and poet for some seven years, was published in five volumes by Little, Brown & Co., of Boston, in 1859, and reprinted in one large octavo volume in 1876 and 1880. It is probably the best extant English version of all the Lives.

The best monograph on Plutarch in English js that of Archbishop Trench, which was published by the Messrs. Macmillan & Co. in 1873, and in a second edition in 1874. Ralph Waldo Emerson had already furnished a characteristic essay on Plutarch as an Introduction to Goodwin's revision of the translation of the Morals “by several hands” (Boston, Little, Brown & Co., 1870, reprinted, 1889). To the edition of North’s translation of the Lives in the “Tudor Translations’’ (London, David Nutt, 1895-96), the Rt. Hon. George Wyndham furnished an Introduction of superlative power and excellence. Professor Mahaffy’s chapters on Plutarch in his Greek World under Roman Sway (Macmillan & Co., 1890, pp. 291-350 = The Stlver Age of the Greek World, Chicago and London, 1906, pp. 339-402) abound in discriminating and suggestive appreciations. Finally, mention may be made of Plutarch’s Themistocles and Aristides, newly translated, with Introduction and Notes, by Bernadotte Perrin, New York, Charles Seribner’s Sons, 1901.

XVii

ORDER OF THE

PARALLEL LIVES IN

THIS

EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.
VouuME I.

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
VouuME II.

(4) Theinistocles and Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.

Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.
VouvumeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
VouLumeE IV.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
Comparison.
_ (12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLuME V.

(16) Agesilaus and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
XVill

(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.
| Comparison.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
Vouum_e VII.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
VoLuME VI.
|
|
(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
VouuME VIII.

(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

(21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
VoLuME IX.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Cains
Gracchus.
Comparison.

VOLUME X.

(10) Philopoemen and Fiam-
ininus.
Comparison.
(23) Aratus.
(24) Artaxerxes.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.
THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus,

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
(16) Agesilaus and Pompey.
(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.

(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius Gracchus,
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Aratus.
(24) Artaxerxes.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.
x1xX

Digitized by Google

PLUTARCH'S PARALLEL LIVES
THESEUS

VOL. I. B

MAOYTAPXOY BIOI ITAPAAAHAOI

OHZEY2

I, "Qomep év tais yeoypadiats, @ Locate Severiwv, ot totoptxol Ta diapevyovra THY yacw avtav trois eaXarors pépece TOY Wlvda- Koy mreCouvtes; aitias} Tmapaypadovoww 6 bre "Ta 5 emexetvar Dives avu8por Kal Onpraders " h "o1nnos aidyns" H "XnvOtxov xpvos" 4 "< qréharyos TeTrn- os, obT ws épol meph rhy TOV Bicov TOY Trapan- Anhov ypapny, TOV eguxtov elKOTL hoy Kai Baot- _ MOV iaropig Tpayydray éxouery Xpovor der Dove, Tepl Trav avwotépw Karas elyev eireiv: "Ta S eT éxewva Tepatadn Kal TparyiKa, Total Kal puboypador vewovTat, Kal ovKer' exet mio TL ovde caprjveray. émel 5é Tov Tepl Aveoupyou Tov vomolérov Kal Nopa Tow Bacthéws Aoyor éxdovres, eOoxodpev ovn av Groyas TO 'Papiry mpocavaSivau, mwrAnolov TeV Kpovev avrov TH iotopia yeyovores, oxoTrouvTe 5é jot

1 airlas Amyot, Stephanus, Coraés, Sintenis? with C; Bekker and Nintenis! have évfss (explaining some by saying).

Paris

Editio:
a. 1624,
1

PLUTARCH’S PARALLEL LIVES

THESEUS

I. Just as geographers, O Socius Senecio,! crowd on to the outer edges of their maps the parts of the earth which elude their knowledge, with explanatory notes that “ What lies beyond is sandy desert without water and full of wild beasts,” or “ blind marsh,” or ‘«< Scythian cold,” or “frozen sea,’ so in the writing of my Parallel Lives, now that I have traversed those periods of time which are accessible to probable reasoning and which afford basis for a history dealing with facts, I might well say of the earlier periods: ‘ What lies beyond is full of marvels and unreality, the land of poets and fabulists, of doubt and obsecurity.” But after publishing my account of Lycurgus the lawgiver and Numa the king, I thought 1 might not unreasonably go back still farther to Romulus, now that my history had brought me near his times. And as I asked myself,

1 One of the many friends whom Plutarch made during his residence at Rome. He was four times consul between the years 98 and 107 B.c. Plutarch addresses him also at the opening of the Memosthenes and the Dron, thus dedicating to him these ‘‘ books.”

| 3
B 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tor@de dwti (kar Aioytnov) Tis Eup Byoerat;' tiv’ avtiraEw t@be; Tis Pepeyyvos; *
épaivero TOV TOY KaXoV Kal daoldipwv olKLoT Hy “AOnvav avTiaTioat Kal mapaBanreiv TO TA zpl Ths aviKnTov kal peyarodofou ‘Payins, ein ev ou npty éxxaBatpouevov oye TO pvdades vTra-Kodaat kal rAaBeiv iotopias dy, Orrou & av avdaddas Tob aBavov Tmepippovi; kal a) béxnra THhv ™ pos TO €LKOS pikw, evyvapovay aK poaTav Senoopeda Kal mpaws Thy apyatoroyiay mpoode-NOMEVWY.
II. "Edoxee & oby 0 Onaers TH ‘Pamir Kara ToAhas évapporre omovoTnTas: apo ee yap ® aveyyuo Kal axotiw yevopevor Sofav Exyov éx Oeav yeryovevat,
"Auda o aiyunrd, To ye 69 Kal ipev adrravtes, kal peta Tov. duvatod TO ouvetoy ExovTEs. TrOAEwY

5¢ tav eripavertatwr o pev Extioe THY ‘Pawpmny, ¢ l) e \ \ a
o de cuvmnice Tas AOhvas:. aprayn b€ yuvarkav éxatépp mpoceati. ovdétepos dé Svatuyiav Tepl
\ b aA } oa b) ni n 5 4 tAXAa \ TA OlKELA Kal véyeow eyryevi Stehuyev, AAAA Kal a / / va “a TeAevTw@VTES apphotepot A€yovTat Tois éavTav
w~ 4 A .
mMpoaKpovoar ToALTaLs, el TL TOV HKioTa Tpayt-1 Seven against Thebes, 435, rode gwrl wéure— cls tvothoerat;
2 Ibid. 395f.

rly dvrirdters rgde; rls Mpolrov muddy KAnHOpwy AvoeYTwY MpooTareEiy PEepéyyuos; 8 Coraés, Bekker, and Cobet, with ©, after Reiske; buow per.
4

THESEUS

“ With such a warrior” (as Aeschylus says) “who will dare to fight ?”’ “ Whom shall I set against him? Who is competent?”’
it seemed to me that I must make the founder of lovely and famous Athens the counterpart and parallel to the father of invincible and glorious Rome. May I therefore succeed in purifying Fable, making her submit to reason and take on the semblance of History. But where she obstinately dis-dains to make herself credible, and refuses to admit any element of probability, I shall pray for kindly readers, and such as receive with indulgence the tales of antiquity.
II. It seemed to me, then, that many resemblances made Theseus a fit parallel to Romulus. For both were of uncertain and obscure parentage, and got the reputation of descent from gods ; “ Both were also warriors, as surely the whole world knoweth,”
and with their strength, combined sagacity. Of the world’s two most illustrious cities, moreover, Rome and Athens, Romulus founded the one, and Theseus made a metropolis of the other, and each resorted to the rape of women. - Besides, neither escaped domestic misfortunes and the resentful anger of kin- dred, but even in their last days both are said to have come into collision with their own fellow-citizens,

1 Jliad vii, 281, of Aias Telamon and Hector.

KOS elphoOar SoxovvTwv Sherds éort mpos adn-Oevav.
IIT. Oncéws 76 pév ratp@ov yévos els EpeyOéa Kal tovs mpwrtovs avroyOovas dvnxa, Te Sé entp@@ Tleromidns jv. Ilétoyr yap ov xpn-patov ANGEL padrrov } Traidov péeytcroy iayuce trav év IleXotovyycm Bactdéwv, oddas pev éxddpuevos Ouyarépas ois dpiotots, moAXous dé tais ToAecw viods éyxaTaoTelipas apXovTas: wy els yevopevos IlitOevs, 0 Onoéws madmmos, Tod pev ov peyarnv thy Tpottnviov @xice, doEav dé paddoTa TayTwr ws avip AOyLos ey Tots TOTE Kal aopwtatos érxyev. Hy bé THs codias éxeivns ToLavuTn Tis, ws éorxev, dda Kal Svvapus, ola xpnadpevos 'Haiodos evdoxkiue padiota tepl Tas év tois "Epyos yuoporoyias. xal play ye ToUTwY éxetynv Aéyovae IurOéws elvat, Mia Obs & avdpl dirp cipnuévos apxtos Err.

ToUTo pev otv Kal "AptotoréAns 6 dtdocodgos eipnxev, 0 & Euperidns, tov 'Immovvroyv dyvod IlirOéws rraisevpa mpocearav, éudaiver thy rept
rov IIirOéa S0Eav. , Alive? 68 raidwv Seopévm tiv TlvOtayv avedeiv Néyouot Tov Opvrovpevoy ypnopov, SraKedevopéevnv undead yuvarckt ovyyevéoOar mplv édOeiv eis "AOnvas, ov mdavu dé rodto dpdlew evdnrws
6

if there is any aid to the truth in what seems to have been told with the least poetic exaggeration. III. The lineage of Theseus, on the father's side, goes back to Erechtheus and the first children of the soil; on the mother's side, to Pelops. For Pelops was the strongest of the kings in Peloponnesus quite as much on account of the number of his children as the amount of. his wealth. He gave many daughters in marriage to men of highest rank, and scattered many sons among the cities as their rulers. One of these, named Pittheus, the grand- father of Theseus, founded the little city of Troezen, and had the highest repute as a man versed in the lore of his times and of the greatest wisdom. Now the wisdom of that day had some. such form and force as that for which Hesiod was famous, especially in the sententious maxims of his '"

Works and Days.” One of these maxims is ascribed to Pittheus, namely :—

“Payment pledged to a man who is dear must be ample and certain.” }
At any rate, this is what Aristotle the philosopher says, and Euripides, when he has Hippolytus addressed as “nursling of the pure and holy Pittheus,”’ shows what the world thought of Pittheus.
Now Aegeus, king of Athens, desiring to have children, is said to have received from the Pythian priestess the celebrated oracle in which she bade him to have intercourse with no woman until he came to Athens. But Aegeus thought the words of the command somewhat obscure, and therefore turned 1 Verse 370. 2 Fragment, 556. 3 Hippolytus, 11.

Soxovcav: SOev eis Tpotlfiva rapebarv avexot-
A A A A A \ a 4
vooto Iliret tiv tod Oeod havnv ottws éyovcay:
"Ackod tov mpovxyovta Toda, péya héptare Nawr,
pn AVoNS Tply Sjpwov “AOnvéwy cicagixéc bac:
a Qa ? / He so > +. A @ SAXov Ott vonaoas o litOevs, Erreuev avtov 7
/ a IO. f \ \ Suntratnce TH AlOpa avyyevécOar. ovvedOov 5é
a x4 a ,
Kat yvovs éxelvos OTe TH IlitOéws Ovyatpt cuyyévyove, kal Kveww avTiv UTrovonaas, atrédiTre Eidos Kal médtka Kpvras vTro Tétpay peyadyny, évTos éyovcay KowdoTnTa cuppétpas éewreptrapySdavovcay Ta Keipeva. dpdcas Sé€ mpos povny éxetvny, \ 4 en > ’ a“ lA
Kal StaxeXevodpevos, av vios é& avTod yévnrat, kal AaBwv avdpoes jrtkiav Svvatos 7 THY méfpay
dvaotThoat Kal Uderelv TA KaTareapOévtu, Tép-Tey mpos avtov éxovta taita pndevos €idoros, GXX ws éveote padiota AavOavovta mdytas (laxupas yap édedoixer tovs Iladdavtibas, ém-4 bd A \ \ \ J ,

Bovrevovras atte nal da thy araidiav Kxata-dpovobvtas' joav Sé wevTjxoyra aides ex Tlad\Aavros yeyovotes), ane.
IV. Texovons 6€ tis AlOpas viov, of pev evOds
’ a / 4 \ \ A
ovopacOjvat Oncéa Aéyovar 1a THY TOV yvwpl-4 A e \ cf ? 4 ad
opatov Oéow, of 8& batepov 'AOnvnot traiba Oepévov Tod Aiyéws avtov. Tpedouevov é w7ro 8 aside to Troezen and communicated to Pittheus the words of the god, which ran as follows :— “Loose not the wine-skin’s jutting neck, great chief of the people,

Until thou shalt have come once more to the city of Athens.” ! .
This dark saying Pittheus apparently understood, and persuaded him, or beguiled him, to have intercourse with his daughter Aethra. Aegeus did so, and then learning that it was the daughter of Pittheus with whom he had consorted, and suspecting that she was with child by him, he left a sword and a pair of sandals hidden under a great rock, which had a hollow in it just large enough to receive these objects. He told the princess alone about this, and | bade her, if a son should be born to her from him, and if, when he came to man’s estate, he should be able to lift up the rock and take away what had been left under it, to send that son to him with the tokens, in all secrecy, and concealing his journey as much as possible from everybody; for he was ‘mightily in fear of the sons of Pallas,2.who were plotting against him, and who despised him on account of his childlessness ; and they were fifty in number, these sons of Pallas. Then he went away. —

IV. When Aethra gave birth to a son, he was at once named Theseus, as some say, because the tokens for his recognition had been placed 3 in hiding ; but others say that it was afterwards at Athens, when Aegeus acknowledged®.him as hisson. He was reared

1 Cf. Euripides, Medea, 674, 676 (Kirchhoff).

2 His brother.

3 It is impossible to reproduce in English the play on the Greek words. _
9

tov IlitOéws émictarny exyew xat madaywyov bd 4 @ A A > ” a dvona Kovvidav, 6 péxpe viv ’AOnvaior pa TpoTEpov nuépa TaV Onoeiwy Kxpiov évayivovar, pepvnpévoe kal Tiw@vtTes TorvD Sixadtepoy 7 Lwraviwva tin@ot cat Tlappdouov, eixovay @ncéws ypadeis Kal mAdoTAS yevopéevous.
—V."E@ous &€ dvtos éte TOTe Tovs petaBaivovtas é« maidwy éXOovtas eis Aedhods airapyxe-Oat TO Oe@ Tis Kopns, AOE pev eis AedrAhods
€ , \ , > 9 > A \ , v
0 Onoevs, Kai Torey amr auvTov thv Oncetay Err vov ovopatecOar A€youcty, éxeipato Sé Ths Kepaa N , , 4 vA dl \
ARs Ta mpocGev povov, aoTEep “Opnpos Edn TOUS “ABavras nat TovTO THs Koupas TO yévos Bnaonts avopnacbn Sv’ éxetvov.
Oi Sé “ABavtes éxeipavto mp@tot TOY TpoTrOV

a ? e % , A e 54
tovrov ovy wm “ApadBov didayOertes, ws Evcoe vopitovaw, ovdé Mucovs Cnrwaavtes, XX’ GvTes ToNeptkol Kat ayyéuayxol, Kal paduota on TavTey
eis xelpas wOcicBar Tots evavtiows peuadnxoTes, @s paptupel Kat Apytroxos €v TovTots:
Ov trot wodAN eri roka tTavuvccetat ovdé Oaperat
odevdovat, evT’ av dn paXov “Apns cuvayn
b] , Ul \ A wv w
év medio, Erhéwy 5é ToAVaTOVOY EaceETas Epryor: TauTns yap Keivor Saipoves Eroe WAYS
’ 9 Ld o
Searrotat EvBotas Soupixdutot.
10

THESEUS

by Pittheus, as they say, and had an overseer and tutor named Connidas. To this man, even down to the present time, the Athenians sacrifice a ram on the day before the festival of Theseus, remembering him and honouring him with far greater justice than they honour Silanio and Parrhasius, who merely painted and maulded likenesses of Theseus.

V. Since it was still a custom at that time for youth who were coming of age to go to Delphi and sacrifice some of their hair to the god, Theseus went to Delphi for this purpose, and they say there is a place there which still to this day is called the Theseia from him. But he sheared only the fore part of his head, just as Homer! said the Abantes did, and this kind of tonsure was called Theseis after him.

Now the Abantes were the first to cut their hair in this manner, not under instruction from the Arabians, as some suppose, nor yet in emulation of the Mysians, but because they were war-like men and close fighters, who had learned beyond all other men to force their way into close quarters with their enemies. Archilochus is witness to this in the following words :—

“Not many bows indeed will be stretched tight, nor frequent slings Be whirled, when Ares joins men in the moil of .

war
Upon the plain, but swords will do their mournful work ;
For this is the warfare wherein those men are expert
Who lord it over Euboea and are famous with the spear.’ ?

1 Iliad, ii. 542. 2 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr.', ii. p. 383.

II

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 Saws ovv py Mapexorev €x TOV TpLxeoy “avTt-Agypey ToS TONE MLOLS dmekelpavTo. TOUTO Be apenet cal “AdéEavdpov tov Maxedova évvercavTd pact _mpoortagat TOUS oTparnyois Evpeiv Ta ryévera Tey Makxedovar, Os AaBny ravTnv ev Tais paxars obaav TpoxepoTarny.

VI. Tov pév ody &dXov Xpovov ExpuTTTeV Ai6pa THY arnOuny Tov Onoéws yeveow’ jv Sé Noyos
ume tov Uuir0éws 6adobels os é€x Tocedavos Texvwein. Hocebdava yap Tposknveot oéSovTau SeahepovTws, Kat Oeos obTOs éoTty avTtois mrotov-Xs, o Kal KapTr@v amapxovrat Kal TplaLvay
2 emrianjov EXovee Tov vopiawaros. érrel 6é petpa-KLOV OY, dpa TH To} o@paTos poun duepawver aXKnY Kat ppovnua pera yoo kal TUvET EWS
BéBavov, ottws avrov uJ AiOpa Tpos THD TET pay Tpocayaryovoa, Kal ppacaca Tept TS yevéoews
Tarn bes, éxéhevoev Upereiy Ta Tat ppa ovpBora

3 Kal mhetv Els AOivas. o O€ THY pev wéTpav
vmébv Kal padicas avewse, relp 6 aréyva, KaiTrep ovans aapanretas Kat Seopevary Tob Te Tantov Kat Tis PNT pos. Narerrov yap ay meth TmopeverOa THY €S AOijvas od0v, ovdéev Bépos cadapov ovee axivévvov wd AnoT@Vv Kal xKa-Koupyov éxouc av.
4 ‘O yap én Xpovos EKELVOS HveyKev av pwrrous Kerpav pev epryues Kal ToO@V TAXETL Kal TOLaATWY popars, Qs Eouren, umenpueis Kat axaparous,
7 pos ovdev O€ Th pice Xp@wEvous émuetkes ovdé @PEALWOD, ann’ DBpe Te Yaipovtas vrepnpdve, Kal amodavovTas THS Suva pews @LOTNTL Kal mixpia, Kal T@ Kpateivy Te Kai BudlecBae Kal 12

. THESEUS. :

Therefore, in order that they might not give their enemies a hold by their hair, they cut it off. And Alexander of Maeedon doubtless understood. this when, as they say, he ordered his generals to have the beards of their Macedonians shaved, since these afforded the readiest hold in battle.

VI. During the rest of the time, then, Aethra kept his true birth concealed from Theseus, and a report was spread abroad by Pittheus that he was begotten by Poseidon. For Poseidon is highly hon- oured by the people of Troezen, and he is the patron god of their city ; to him they offer first fruits in sacrifice, and. they have his trident as an. emblem on their coinage. But when, in his young manhood, Theseus displayed, along with his vigour of body, prowess also, and a firm ‘spirit united with intelli- gence and sagatity, then Aethra brought him. to.the rock, told him the truth about his birth, and bade him take away his father’s tokens and go by sea to Athens. Theseus put his shoulder to the rock and easily raised it up, but he refused to make his journey by sea, although safety lay in that course, and his grandfather and his mother begged him to take it. For it was difficult to make the journey to Athens by land, since no part of it was clear nor yet without peril from robbers and miscreants.

For verily that age produced men who, in work of hand: and speed of foot and vigour of body, were extraordinary .and indefatigable, but they applied their. powers to nothing that was fitting or useful. Nay rather, they exulted in monstrous insolence, and reaped from their strength a harvest of cruelty and bitterness, mastering and forcing and destroying everything that came in their path. And as for

13

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

SiabOelpey To Tapatrimroyv, abd é Kal dixato-acuvnv Kat Td icov kal To dirdvOpwror, ws aroApla tov abixeiy kal poB@ Tov abixcicBar

TOUS TOAXOUS etraLvodYTas, OvdSéY OlopévoUs TpOC-
5 nxewv tols mréov exe Suvapévos. TovTav “Hpaxrfs tos péev éFexomte xal avnper treptiov, ot S€ AavOdvovtes exeivou Taptovros em@Tno coy Kal avedvovto Kal TapnueNodvTO TaTELVa WpaT-rovres. émel dé ‘“Hpaxrjs éxpnoato Tumpopa, kal xreivas “Iditov ets Avdiay amipe xal ovxvov éxet ypovov edovrNeve trap’ "Oudarn, Sixnv tod gdovou tavTnv émidels abt@, ToTe Ta pev Avdwv Tpadybata ToNAHy éoxev eipnynv Kal adeav: év
S€ tots wept tv ‘EAXdba ToTrots adOrs eEnvOncav ai xaxias Kal aveppdynoav, obdevds miefodvTos ovde KaTElpyovTos.
6 "Hv ovtv oréOptos wopeia ois “AOnvae
welj Babdifovow éx TleXotrovynjcov: cal trav kaxovpywov Exactov éEnyouvpevos IlitOevs orroios eln xal otrota Spen mept trovs Eévous, éreibe Tov @noéa xopibecOar Sta Oaddtrys. tov 5é TddvaL peév, WS orxe, NeEANOOTSS Sréxarey 4 Soka
ths “Hpaxdéous dperfs, xal amdeiotov éxeivou AOyov elxe, Kal mpoOuvpoTatos axpoaThs éyiveTo Tav Sunyoupéven éxeivov olos ein, padtoTta 66 TOV avTov éwpaxoTwv Kal mwpdttovTt Kal AéyorTs 7 Tpootetuxnkoreav' Tote O€ TavtTdtTacw Hy
dhavepos wetrovOas Strep VaTEpov Kpovols TWoAXois OcurotoKxAns érrade, cal elev ws Kabevdery avtov ovx én TO MiAdriddou tpotravoy ottws éxeiv@ tov ‘Hpaxréovs Oavpdfovt: thy aperny, Kal 14 ;

i.

THESEUS |

reverence and righteousness, justice and humanity, they thought that most men praised these qualities for lack of courage to do wrong and for fear of being wronged, and considered them no concern of men who were strong enough to get the upper hand. Some of these creatures Heracles cut off and destroyed as he went about, but some escaped his notice as he passed by, crouching down and shrink- ing back, and were overlooked in their abjectness. And when Heracles met with calamity and, after the slaying of Iphitus, removed into Lydia and for a long time did slave's service there in the house of Omphale, then Lydia indeed obtained great peace and security; but in the regions of Hellas the old villainies burst forth and broke out anew, there being none to rebuke and none to restrain them.

The journey was therefore a perilous one for travellers by land from Peloponnesus to Athens, and Pittheus, by describing each of the miscreants at length, what sort of a monster he was, and what deeds he wrought upon strangers, tried to persuade Theseus to make his journey by sea. But he, as it would seem, had long since been secretly fired by the glorious valour of Heracles, and made the greatest account of that hero, and was a most eager listener to those who told what manner of man he was, and above all to those who had seen him and been present at some deed or speech of his. And it is altogether plain that he then experienced what Themistocles many generations afterwards experienced, when he said that he could not sleep for the trophy of Miltiades.} In like manner Theseus admired the valour of Hera- cles, until by night his dreams were of the hero's

1 Cf. Themistocles, iii. 3.

viKTwp dvEeLpos Hoav ai moakes, Kal pel" nuéepav éEjyev avtov o Chros Kal avnpéOile tTavTa Tpar-Tetv Stavoovpevov.
VII. 'Ervyyavov 6€ cal yévous Kxotvwvodvtes
é& dveliav évtes. AlOpa pév yap hv Iitéws Duyarnp, "ArKunvy 6é Avowdixns, Avowdien 6&é cat TirOeds aderpol yeyovéres e& 'Irrmodapeias Kal [edorros. Secvov ovv érrotetto Kal ovK dvexTov éxelvov pev ert Tous TavTaxod Tovnpovs Badi-Sovra Kadaipew yhv Kali Oararray, auTov de Tous éumod@v aD dous amrobibipdc Kew, TOV Mev AOYE wal do&n marépa: KaTaiexXvvov dua Oardrrns ouy7 Kourlopevos, TD dé 6 évTe mpoo pépwv yepe-cpata rédtia Kal Eipos avaipaxTov, ovw &pyots
evOvs aryabois Kal mpatear Tapéxov éupari Xapaxtnpa THS evryevetas. TOLOUT@ hpovn ware Kal TOLOVTOLS oyeo pois éEwpunoev, ws adtKyo wy peev ovdéva, Tous bé wmrdpyovtas Bias apuvov-HEVOS.
VIII. Kai mparov peev ev TH 'Em daupia Tepedyntnv, STAM Xa uevov Kopuvy Kat bud TOUTO Kopuvyrqy érrimarovpevor, aTrTOMEvOV avtod Kal KONUVOVTA mpodryety cupPadov d dméx Teer" nabets dé TH Kopuvy haBov d7rov em ovnaa.To Kat dueTtéree Xpapevos, Gomep 0 "Hpakhijs 7 déppare Tov NéovTos. éxeivep poev ovv emidergis Vv popoupevor nAticou TO peryeBos Onpiov Kparnoeey, odT0s dé

THY Kopuvny émedeixvuen 7 HTTHwevnV fey utr avrod, pet avrov: be anrtntov ovcav.
"Ey 8 'lo8u@ ivw tov Titvonaumnrny @.TpoTe

16

THESEUS

achievements, and by day his ardour led him along and spurred him on in his purpose to achieve the like.
VII. And besides, they were kinsmen, being sons of cousins-german. For Aethra was daughter of Pittheus, as Alemene was of Lysidice, and Lysidice and Pittheus were brother and sister, children of Hippodameia and Pelops. Accordingly, he thought it a dreadful and unendurable thing that his famous cousin should go out against the wicked everywhere and purge land and sea of them, while he himself ran away from the struggles which lay in his path, disgracing his reputed father! by journeying like a fugitive over the sea, and bringing to his real father as proofs of his birth only sandals and a sword un- stained with blood, instead of at once offering noble deeds and achievements as the manifest mark of his noble birth. In sucha spirit and with such thoughts he set out, determined to do no man any wrong, but . to punish those who offered him violence.

VIII. And so in the first place, in Epidauria, when Periphetes, who used a club as his weapon and on
- this account was called Club-bearer, laid hold of him and tried to stop his progress, he grappled with him and slew him. And being pleased with the club, he took it and made it his weapon and continued to use it, just as Heracles did with the lion’s skin. That hero wore the skin to prove how great a wild beast he had mastered, and so Theseus carried the club to show that although it had been vanquished by him, in his own hands it was invincible.
On the Isthmus, too, he slew Sinis the Pine-bender

1 Cf. chapter vi. 1.
17
VOL. I. C

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

AX \ > ? , dé @ 3 4 2
Tous avypel, ToOVTH OLvepOerpev auTOS, OV peLE-
3 la
AETNKWS OVO EiOtapévos, érideiEas 5é THY aperrV

bt xal téyvns mepleote Kal pedretns amdons.
9 be A Di Py 4 \ , @ 4 nv O€ TM LAtvloe KaANOTH Kal peyloTn Cuyatnp, dvoya Ilepiyovvn. tavtnvy tod Tatpos avnpn-/ “A Ig / oN € UA e b pévov duyovoay éCnter treptiwnvy o Onaevs: 7 5 bd 4 b a / v N
els ToTrov ameNOovca AoXpnv exXovTa todAAHY oTopyny te wAEioTHy Kal doddpayov, axadKas Tavu Kal TaLdLKas WoTep aicBavopévav Seouevn mpocevyeto pe Spxv, av caowoly avTny Kat amrokpuywat, undéemote Aupaveta Oat pndé KavCELD.
avaxanoupévou b6€ tov @ncéws Kal riotw s-SOVTOS, OS ETLpEAHTETAL KAA@S avTHS Kal ovdey adiucnoet, mponrGe Kal TO pev Once avyyevo-4 , wv oo a \ A b 4 peevn MerXaverrtrov érexe, Aniovet d€ tT Evputov
a 4 /
Tov Oiyardtéws Dotepoyv cuv@exnae, Onaéws Sovtos.
> \ / A , J v
éx d€ MeXavizrrrov tov Oncéws yevopevos “Iwkos
"Opvite tis ets Kapiav dtoxias petéoyev’ Or J 4 \ ? 4 / é /
wkidais nat Iwkiot matpiov Katéotn pyte »¥ 9 / / \ 4 3 \ axavOay acdhapayou pnte ororBny Kaiew, adrAa céBecOar nal Tipav.
TX. ‘H &€ Kpoppvwvia cis, Hv Pasay mpocwvopatov, ov padrov Hv Onpiov, aNAA paxtpov
A e A
Kal yareTov xpatnOjvar. TavTny od0v mdpepyor, @s pn Soxoin mdvta Tpos avayKny tovetv, viooTas avelde, kal dua tav pev avOporav Tois Tovnpois apuvomevov olouevos ety tov ayaov
a ,
mpoopépecOar, Tav dé Onpiwv Kal mpoemryxer-potvta Tots yevvaios payecOar nat dSsaxivdv-18
\

THESEUS

in the very manner in which many men had been — destroyed by himself, and lie did this without practice or even acquaintance with the monster’s device, but showing that valour is superior to all device and practice. Now Sinis had a very beautiful and stately daughter, named Perigune. This daughter took to flight when her father was killed, and Theseus went about in search of her. But she had gone off into a place which abounded greatly in shrubs and rushes and wild asparagus, and with exceeding innocence and childish simplicity was supplicating these plants, as if they understood her, and vowing that if they would hide and save her, she would never trample them down nor burn them. When, however, Theseus called upon her and gave her a pledge that he would treat her honourably and do her no wrong, she came forth, and after consorting with Theseus, bore him Melanippus, and afterwards lived with Deioneus, son of Eurytus the Oechalian, to whom Theseus gave her. From Melanippus the son of Theseus, Ioxus was born, who took part with Ornytus in leading a colony into Caria ; whence it is ancestral usage with the Ioxids, men and women, not to burn either the asparagus-thorn or the rush, but to revere and honour them.

IX. Now the Crommyonian sow, which they called Phaea, was no insignificant creature, but fierce and hard to master. This sow he went out of his way to encounter and slay, that he might not be thought to perform all his exploits under compulsion, and at the same time because he thought that while the brave man ought to attack villainous men only in self defence, he should seek occasion to risk his life in battle with the nobler beasts. However, some say

veverv. eyiot 5€ ghact thv Paray AnoTpisa ryevéoOat yuvaixa govxny Kal axodaaTop, av-To00t Katoucodoay év Kpopprvart, cov 6€ é érrovopa-aOeicav bia TO 700s Kai Tov Biov eita wo Oncéws atrobavety.
X. LKelpwova dé T™ po Tijs Meyapixiis aveine
piipas Kata TOV TETPOV, OS pev 0 ToAus AOYOS
AnotevovTa TOUS TapLovTas, Os & évioe Aéyouowy
DBpe Kat Tpuph mporeivovTa T@ TOOE Tos Eévors
Kat KehevovTa vimreLy, cia NaktiCovTa Kal aTro-
2 Potvta vittovtas eis thy OddatTav. ot 6é Me-yapobev suyypadeis, O“oae Th dipun Badifovres Kal TO TOAD V pov, Kara tpovidny, mone-povvTes, ovTE iBprorny ouTE AnoTHy ryervyovevat Tov YKeilpwovd pacw, GNA Anata jev KohaaTHy, arab ov dé Kal Sixatwv oietov \av0pav Kal pirov.
Alaxoy Te yap “ENA veov oLwTaTov vopiter Gan, Kat Kuxpéa THpas Jeay exe "AOnvnoe Tov
Larapivior, Thy 6é IInréws kat Tedapdvos ape-
3 THY vm ovdevos ayvoeiabar. XKeipwva Toivuy Kuypéws pev ryever Gar yauBpov, Aiaxod 5é trev-Oepor, IInréws oe kat Tedapovos Ta TOD, e&
"Evdnidos yeryovoroy THS EKceipeovos kat Xapt-Kdods Ouyat pos. oUKOUD ele 0s elvat TO KaKtore TOUS aptarous els KoLWwviav yévous enGeiv, Ta

péyiota Kal Tipi@tTata AapBavortas Kat &1-Sovtas. aN Oncéa pac ovx OTE TO TPWTOV éBddibev ets "AOnvas, GND’ vo TEpov "EXevoiva
Te NaBeiv Meyapéwy éyovTar, 7 0,pa.k POUT a[LEvOV Avoxréa TOV apxovra, Kal LKeipwova aT OKTEVAL.
TavTA pep ovY EXEL TOLAUTAS avTLNOYias.
20

THESEUS —

that Phaea was a female robber, a woman of murderous and unbridled spirit, who dwelt in Crommyon, was called Sow because of her life and manners, and was afterwards slain by Theseus. .
X. He.also slew Sciron on the borders of Megara, by hurling him down the cliffs. Sciron robbed the passers by, according to the prevalent tradition; but as some say, he would insolently and wantonly thrust out his feet to strangers and bid them wash them, and then, while they were washing them, kick them off into the sea. Megarian writers, however, taking issue with current report, and, as_ Simonides! expresses it, “waging war with antiquity,”” say that Sciron was neither a violent man nor a robber, but a chastiser of robbers, and a kinsman and friend of good and just men. For Aeacus, they say, is regarded as the most righteous of Hellenes, and Cychreus the Salaminian has divine honours at Athens, and the virtues of Peleus and Telamon are known to all men. Well, then, Sciron was a son-in-law of Cychreus, father-in-law of Aeacus, and grandfather of Peleus and Telamon, who were the sons of Endeis, daughter of Sciron and Chariclo. It is not likely, then, they say, that the best of men made family alliances with the basest, receiving and giving the greatest and most valuable pledges. It was not, they say, when Theseus first journeyed to Athens, but afterwards, that he captured Eleusis from the Megarians, having circumvented Diocles its ruler, and slew Sciron. Such, then, are the contradictions in which these matters are involved.
1 Fragment 193 (Bergk).
21
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XI. "Ey dé "EXevoive Kepxtova tov é& ’Ap-Kadias KaTaTaXaicas avethe’ Kal puLKpoYv mpo-rXGa A 4 b °K a1 \ Il , eOav Aapdorny év “Epived! tov Ipoxpovorny, dvayxdoas auTov amicovy Tois KALYTHpaLY WaoTeEp tous Eévous éxeivos. émpatte &€ tabta pupov‘\ € / \ \ bd a 9
pevos Tov Hpakdéa. Kail yap éxeivos ols érreBov-
,
NeVETO TPOTTOLS apUVYdpEvOS TOS TMpoETLXEL-povvras, €0vce tov Bovorpw Kal xaterddatce
a \ Tov ‘Avtaiov cai tov Kuixvov Kxatepovopdynoe
N \ / A \ \ ? ,
Kat tov Téppepov ouppntas thy Kxeharnv arreé-
N \
xrevev. ad ov dn Kal To Tepuéperov Kaxov Gvo-pacOjvat N€eyovet’ Taiwy yap, @s EoLke, TH
a \ b 4 e / > , Keparn tovs évtvyydvovtas o Téppepos dman-
: \
Avev. ovTw® 5 Kal Onoevs Kortalov Tovs
‘ 3 A \ bd / \
movnpovs emeenOev, ols péev éBialovto Tovs
” e 3 9 4 / 2 \ a
GdXous, ut’ éxetvou KataBiatopmevovs, év 5é Tois TpoTrols THS EavT@v abdexias ta Sixava TdoyYovTas.
XII. Tpoiovte 6€ atte xat yevouévm kata tov Kndicov, avdpes éx tod Dutaridav yévous ATAVTHOAVTES nod avtTo TpOTOL, Kal Seomeévou cabapOjvan, TOUS VEVOMLE HEVOLS ayvioavres Kal perdixva Ovucavtes eiotiacay oiKot, wndevos Tpd-TEpov avT@ prravOparrov ad” odov EVTUXOVTOS.
“Hyepa pev ovv oyd0n Néyerat Kpoviou pnvos, Ov -vuY ‘ExarouBardva Kanovet, water beir.
katedOav é eis THY TOLD evpe Ta TE Kowa Tapaxis peora Kab Stxoppocrns, Kal Ta Tepl
tov Aiyéa Kal Tov oixov idta voootvta. Mrédera

1 "Epweg@ with Coraés, after Pausanias, i. 38, 5: “Eppet, a correction by Palmerius of the MSS. ‘Epyidyn.

XI. In Eleusis, moreover, he out-wrestled Cercyon the Arcadian and killed him; and going on a little farther, at Erineiis, he killed Damastes, surnamed Procrustes, by compelling him to make his own body fit his bed, as he had been wont to do with those of strangers. And he did this in imitation of Heracles. For that hero punished those who offered him violence in the manner in which they had plotted to serve him, and therefore sacrificed Busiris, wrestled Antaeus to death, slew Cycnus in single combat, and killed Termerus by dashing in his skull. It is from him, indeed, as they say, that the name " Termerian mischief'? comes, for Termerus, as it would seem, used to kill those who encountered him by dashing his head against theirs. Thus Theseus also went on his way chastising the wicked, who were visited with the same violence from him which they were visiting upon others, and suffered justice after the manner of their own injustice.

XII. As he went forward on his journey and came to the river Cephisus, he was met by men of the race of the Phytalidae, who greeted him first,
and when he asked to be purified from bloodshed,
cleansed him with the customary rites, made pro-pitiatory sacrifices, and feasted him at their house.
This was the first kindness which he met with on his journey.
It was, then, on the eighth day of the month Cronius, now called Hecatombaeon, that he is said to have arrived at Athens. And when he entered the city, he found public affairs full of confusion and dissension, and the private affairs of Aegeus and his household in a distressing condition. Tor Medea,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES-

yap éx KopivOou guyotca, pappaxas vroaxyopmévn a b / 9 lA > / A > A Ths atexvias amadddfeav Aiyéa, ovviv avt@.
A A "A
mpoatcbouevn 5é mept tod @ncéws aitny, Tod
dé Aivéws ayvoobytos, dvtos 5€ wpecButépou Kat goBovpévou mravra bia thy oTdaty, Ereroev avTov ¢ / e a / > a ' \
as Eévov éEctiavtTa dhappydKos avereiv. €AO@v
s € ' > \ " > > /
obv o Onoevs éml to apiotov ovx édoxipace
, e / a / 9 4
dpaley avtov, doris ein, mpotepos, éxeivm Se Bovropevos apynyv avevpécews trapacyeiv, kpeav
TAPAKELLEVOY OTATaMEVvOS THY padYaLpay, ws TauTn Témver, edeixvuey éxelvo. Ttaxv Sé cata-
\ e > 4 \ \ 4 A ,
pabav o Alyets, THY mev KUALKA TOU happaKoU
/ \ \ e\ ' / ' / \

kaTéBare, Tov 5€ viov avaxpivas nomaleto, Kat cuvayayav Tovs TodiTas éyvwpifev, Hdéws Sexopévous bia THY avipayabiav. réyeras Sé Tis KUNLKOS Tecovans exxvOnVvaL TO padppaKov Grou fe) 9 4 \ / , b 3 A vov ev Aerduvip to Tepippaxtov éativ, évtavda e > \ v \ \ € A \ \ of yap 6 Aéyevs wer, cal Tov ‘Epunv rov impos &w
a ¢ A A > 3 > A
Tov iepov KaXovow én’ Aivéws TvXaLs.
XIII. Oc 6€ Wadrravridar rpotepov pév Hrmifov avtol thy Bactreiav xabéEew Aiyéws atéxvou
, q TereuTnoavTos: émrel dé Onoevs amedeixyOn da-Soxos, yareras hépovtes et Bacirever pev Aivyeds Oeros yevopevos Tlavdtou Kal pndev ’EpeyOeibars mpoonkwv, Bacirevoes © 0 Onoeds marsv Ernrvs jv Kat Eévos, eis tmrodcnov KabiotayTo. «Kal 24

THESEUS

who had fled thither from Corinth, and promised by her sorceries to relieve Aegeus of his childlessness, was living with him. She learned about Theseus in advance, and since Aegeus was ignorant of him, and was well on in years and afraid of everything because of the faction in the city; she persuaded him to entertain Theseus as a stranger guest, and take him off by poison. Theseus, accordingly, on coming to the banquet, thought best not to tell in advance who he was, but wishing®to give his father a clue to the discovery, when the meats were served, he drew his sword, as if minded to carve with this, and brought it to the notice of his father. Aegeus speedily perceived it, dashed down the proffered cup of poison, and after questioning his son, embraced him, and formally recognized him before an assembly of the citizens, who received him gladly because of his manly valour. And it is said that as the cup fell, the poison was spilled where now is the enclo- sure in the Delphinium,! for that is where the house of Aegeus stood, and the Hermes to the east of the sanctuary is called the Hermes at Aegeus’s gate. XIII. Now the sons of Pallas had before this themselves hoped to gain possession of the kingdom when Aegeus died childless. But when Theseus was declared successor to the throne, exasperated that Aegeus should be king although he was only an adopted son of Pandion and in no way related to the family of Erechtheus, and again that Theseus should be prospective king although he was an immigrant and a stranger, they went to war. And dividing

1 The site of this sanctuary of the Delphinian Apollo is conjectured to have been somewhere to the east of the Olympieum.
29

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

SseXovtes EéauTous ob pev eppavears 2pnrroev 6
éywpouv. éml To dotu peta TOD matpds, of Se Tapynrrot xpthpaytes éavtous evi pevor, @S d:y 00 ev értOna opevor Tols Umevavtion. mv be Knpv& pet avtav, avap “Ayvovatos, évopa Aeas.
ovTos €Ejyyerke TO Onoe? ta BeBovrevpéva Trois Ilavvavridais. o 5é éEaidrns émimec@v rots évedpevovat mavtas diéerpev. ot 5é peta Tod IldAXavros mudopevor Steardpnoav. é« tovTov gact To Tladrnvéwv Sim mpos tov ‘Ayvouciov émiyapiay pn elvar, pndé xnpuTtecOar ov-Tiy@plov Tap avtois “’Axovete NE@’” pLocodar yap Ttovvoua Sia THY Tpodociay Tov avdpos.
XIV. “O d€ @naevs évepyds elvar Bovropuevos, dpa b€ kal Snuaywyar, éEnrAOev eri tov Mapa-QOwviov Tadpov, ovK dAiya TPdyyaTa TOIS OiKOvGE
tThv Tetpatodw tapéyovta’ Kal yetpwodpevos éredeiEato Cavta dia Tov dateos éXaoas, eita TH
"ArmodAdou te Acrdivip Kxatébvcer. 7 8é
‘ExddAn kal 1oO wept avtny pvOorcynua Tov Eevicpod Kxal tis vmodoyis Eouxe pn wdons dpotpeiy adnOeias. EOvov yap “Exadnjota) of méprE Siow acuvovtes “Exdrw Art, nal thy ‘ExaAny étipev, Exarivny vroxopilopevor Sia 76 Kaxeivny véov dvta Kouidy tov Onoéa EeviLovcay aomacacBat mpexButiKas Kal dirodppovetcOar
1 ‘ExaAnow the correction of Coraés ; ‘ExaAjotoy, themselves into two bands, one of these marched openly against the city from Sphettus with their father; the other hid themselves at Gargettus and lay in ambush there, intending to attack their enemies from two sides. But there was a herald with them, a man of Agnus, by name Leos. This man reported to Theseus the designs of the Pallantidae. Theseus then fell suddenly upon the party lying in ambush, and slew them all. Thereupon the party with Pallas dispersed. This is the reason, they say, why the township of Pallene has no intermarriage .with the township of Agnus, and why it will not even allow heralds to make their customary proclamation there of “Akouete leoi” (Hear, ye people !). For they hate the word on account of the treachery of the man Leos.

XIV. But Theseus, desiring to be at work, and at the same time courting the favour of the people, went out against the Marathonian bull, which was doing no small mischief to the inhabitants of the Tetrapolis.1_ After he had mastered it, he made a display of driving it alive through the city, and then sacrificed it to the Delphinian Apollo. Now the story of Hecale and her receiving and enter- taining Theseus on this expedition seems not to be devoid of all truth. For the people of the townships round about used to assemble and _ saérifice the Hecalesia to Zeus Hecalus, and they paid honours to Hecale, calling her by the diminutive name of Hecaline, because she too, when entertaining Theseus, in spite of the fact that he was quite a youth, caressed him as elderly people do, and called

1 An early name for a district of Attica comprising Marathon and three other adjacent townships.

4 e a > \ \ ” XN
3 TotovTols UmoKopicpois. eet Sé€ evEaTO ev e A bd A A of. 4 2A \ 4
vrép avtov Te Ari, BadiCovtos emi tHhv paxny, el ows trapayévoto, Ovcev, améBave Sé tply
9 a 9 6 a ” a > / 3 \
éxelvov érraveNelv, ExxXe Tas elpnuevas aporBas THs pirokevias tov Oncéws KedeVcaVTOS, OS Diroyopos taTopnKev.
5) , 2 ° : / ‘
XV. ’Odiyo S€ tortepov eov éx Kpnrns ro
Tpitov ot tov dacuov amd£ovtes. STL pév ovV
"Avépoyem mept thy ’Attixny amobavetv Ser dofavtos, 6 te Mivws moddAa Kaka ~TroAELOV
eipyateto Tovs avOpwrovs Kai TO Sdatpoviov
¥ \ 4 3 , \ 4
EpOetpe THY Yopav (agopia te yap Kal vocos
> 4 \ \ > 7s e / \
évéaoxnwe TOAAN Kal avédvoay ot ToTapmoi), Kat Tod Yeov mpootdtavtos tNacapévois Tov Mivw kat diadrAayetoe AwHyoTEY TO pHVILA Kal TOY Kaxov écecOar Travrav, émiknpvKevodpevo. Kal denBévres erroincavto auvOnjKas ooTte Tréutrew bv
b 4 > A bY \ riO€ e a \ Oé
évvéa éTav Sacpov niOéous érra Kal trapbévous TOTAUTAS, OMOAOYODaLY Ol TrELTTOL TOV OVYypa-

/ \ \ a bd 4 4 e
2 héwy: Tovs dé maidas eis Kpnrnv xoptlopévous 6 bev Tpayixwtatos pvOos atropaives tov Miva-tavpov év T@ AaBupivOe dadbecipew, 7 TAAVWpeévous avtovs kal tuxeiv éEodov pn Suvapévous éxet xatabvncKev, tov d€ Miveravpov, domep Kvpuridns pyot,
- Lvppextov eidos xatropwrsov Bpéhos
yeyovévat, Kal
Tavpou pepixyOat cat Bpotrod Sirrn dices.
28
THESEUS

him affectionately by such diminutive names. And since she vowed, when the hero was going to his battle with the bull, that she would sacrifice to Zeus if he came back safe, but died before his return, she obtained the above mentioned honours as a return for her hospitality at the command of Theseus, as Philo-chorus has written.

XV. Not long afterwards there came from Crete for the third time the collectors of the tribute. Now as to this tribute, most writers agree that because Androgeos was thought to have been treacherously killed within the confines of Attica, not only did Minos harass the inhabitants of that country greatly in war,! but Heaven also laid it waste, for barrenness and pestilence smote it sorely, and its rivers dried up; also that when their god assured them in his commands that if they appeased Minos and became reconciled to him, the wrath of Heaven would abate and there would be an end of their miseries, they sent heralds and made their supplication and entered into an agreement to send him every nine years a tribute of seven youths and as many maidens. And the most dramatic version of the story declares that these young men and women, on being brought to Crete, were destroyed by the Minotaur in the Laby- rinth, or else wandered about at their own will and, being unable to find an exit, perished there; and that the Minotaur, as Euripides says, was |

‘A mingled form and hybrid birth of monstrous

shape,”

and that

“ Two different natures, man and bull, were joined in him.” 2

1 Cf. Plato, Laws, p. 706.
2 Nauck, T'rag. Graec. Frag.?, p. 680.
29

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XVI. Birdyxopos 5 Snow ov tavTa suyxwpew
rr AR > € 4
Kpjras, ddrd Aéyerv Ste ppoupa pev Hv 0 AaBv-
\ \ a puvOos, ovdey Exwv Kaxdyv AXX H TO py Staduyely
\ , 3, OA de e Mi >. 3
Tous gvAattouévous, ayava b€ 0 Mivws én
"Avdpoyem yupvixov éroies kat tos mraidas abda
A A 26 ,) / > lo A tv Tois vikaow édidou téws ev te AaBupivbe duratropevous: évixa 5é Tovs MmpoTépous ayavas
A / 0 péytoTov wap avT@ Sduvdpevos Tote Kal
a a \ \
atpatnyav, dvoua Taipos, avnp ovK émverens
Kal Hpepos TOV TpOTrOV, GANA Kal. Tots Tracol TeV
"AOnvaiwy wrepnddvws xal yYaret@s Tpocdepopevos. “Aptotorédrns 56 Kal avdtos ey TH Bottiaiwy oditeia Sidds Cori ov vopitwr bd a \ ny) ee. \ A / 2 \ avatpetcBar tovs waidas bird Tov Miva, adra Onrevovtas év TH Kpntn xataynpdoKxev: kat rote
a 4
Kpjras evynv tradaay atrodidevtas avOp@Tav
arapynv eis Aedrhovs aroctédrev, Tots dé TeuTromevors avamxOévtas éxyovous éxelvav ouv-
A e \ > 2 é \ / e ‘ eEeXOeiy: ws 5€ otk Hoav (xavol tpépewv éEaurovs avToOt, mpatov pev eis “Itadtavy Siamepdoat Kakel Katotkeiy tept tHv “lamruyiav, éxetOev &é 9 >] , wn \ “A avdis ets Opannv KoptcOjvar Kal xrAnOnvar Bottiaiovs: 516 tas Kopas tav Borriaiwy Ovoiav
\ , 2 7 § cc™ > 9 f >»
Tia Tehovaas erradey’ “ lwpev ets AOnvas.
"BR \ v \ t \ J , OLKE Yap OVTwWS YadeTrOD Elvat PwvnVY exoVTN
moder Kat potcay aexOdverbar. Kal yap 6 Mivas del dseréres xaxds axovwv xal rodopo-
a an
pevos év Tots Attixots Oeatpots, Kal ode ‘Haiobos 30

THESEUS

XVI. Philochorus, however, says that the Cretans do not admit this, but declare that the Labyrinth was a dungeon, with no other inconvenience than that its prisoners could not escape; and that Minos instituted funeral games in honour of Androgeos, and as prizes for the victors, gave these Athenian youth, who were in the meantime imprisoned in the Labyrinth ; and that the victor in the first games was the man who had the greatest power at that time under Minos, and was his general, Taurus by name, who was not reasonable and gentle in his disposition, but treated the Athenian youth with arrogance and cruelty. And Aristotle himself also, in his " Constitution of Bottiaea,''! clearly does not think that these youths were put to death by Minos, but that they spent the rest of their lives as slaves in Crete. And he says that the Cretans once, in fulfilment of an ancient vow, sent an offering of their first-born to Delphi, and that some descendants of those Athenians were among the victims, and went forth with them; and that when they were unable to support themselves there, they first crossed over into Italy and dwelt in that country round about Iapygia, and from there journeyed again into Thrace and were called Bottiaeans; and that this was the reason why the maidens of Bottiaea, in per- forming a certain sacrifice, sing as an accompaniment : "To Athens let us go!"

And verily it seems to be a grievous thing for a man to be at enmity with a city which has a language and a literature. For Minos was always abused and reviled in the Attic theatres, and it did not avail him either that Hesiod 2 called him " most

1 Not extant. 2 In some passage not extant.

avrov avnce ' 'Bacthevtatov" ovTe" "Opnpos:-' ' oaptoTHy Avs" Tpogaryopevaas, aXr eT LK PATHS AVTES ot Tpayexol TONY aro TOU oyelou Kal THS oKNUHS abotiav autob KarecKébac ay WS xarerod Kal Buatov ryevopuevon. KQUT Ot gaat TOV pev Miva Bactréa kat vowoberny, Sicacrny dé TOV 'Paéa-pavduy elvat Kai dvAaKa TOV wplopévwy UT éxeivou ducaiwv.
XVII. "Evel 8 ovv Kadicev 0 xpovos Tov TpiTov Sacpov, Kat Tapexey &dee Tovs Tarépas
émt Tov KAAjpov ols Hoav niBeor aides, av0us avepvovTo TO Aiyet 61a Borat 7 pos TOUS Twohitas, ddupopevous Kal ayavaxtovyTas OTL TAVT@V aiTLos QV exeivos, ovoev pépos Eyer THS Konda ews fL0V0S, GNX' emt vob Kat Fev tarot THY apxny TETOLNpévos avTous meptopg yenoiov épnyous Kal amabas dmoherTropevous. TAUT 7, qvia TOV Oncea, Kal SiKa@v pa apenrerv, GANA Kowwovety THS TUXNS TOS ToAiTALS, émédcoxen € éauTov avev KAnpov mpocenOaw. Kal Tots pev Grows TO Té ppovnpa.

Oavpacror epavy Kal TO SnporiKoy Hyanneay, 0 O€ Aiyeus, € €7ret Sedpevos Kal KabiKeTEvWD a per a-
WeloTOV EW@PA Kal apeTaTpETTTOV, ATrEKAT|PWOE
TOUS GAXous Traidas.
‘EdAadviKos bé gnaw ov Tous AaxXovTas aro Krpou Kal Tas Aaxovoas ex Tre MITEL THV TOALY, avrov dé Tov Mivo Taparywwowevov exréyerOat Kab TOV Oncea TavTov ehea Oar Tp@Tov emt Tols
opta Beiow: apo wevov & elvac thy pep vabv ‘AOnvaious TApeXely, éuBavtas be wrely ovV avT@ Tovs HiPéovs pndév Srrrov apniov émiepo-THESEUS :

royal,’ or that Homer? styled him “a confidant. of Zeus,” but the tragic poets prevailed, and from platform and stage showered obloquy down upon him, as a man of cruelty and violence. And yet they say that Minos was a king and lawgiver, and that Rhadamanthus was a judge under him, and a guardian of the principles of justice defined by him.

XVII. Accordingly, when the time came for the third tribute, and it was necessary for the fathers who had youthful sons to present them for the lot, fresh accusations against Aegeus arose among the people, who were full of sorrow and vexation that he who was the cause of all their trouble alone had no share in the punishment, but devolved the kingdom upon a bastard and foreign son, and suffered them to be left destitute and bereft of legitimate children. These things troubled Theseus, who, thinking it right not to disregard but to share in the fortune of his fellow-citizens, came forward and offered himself independently of the lot. The citizens admired his noble courage and were delighted with his public spirit, and Aegeus, when he saw that his son was not to be won over or turned from his purpose by prayers and entreaties, cast the lots for the rest of the youths.

Hellanicus, however, says that the city did not send its young men and maidens by lot, but that Minos himself used to come and pick them out, and that he now pitched upon Theseus first of all, follow- ing the terms agreed upon. And he says the agree- ment was that the Athenians should furnish the ship, and that the youths should embark and sail

1 Odyssey, xix. 179.

pévous, Grrodopévou S¢ tod Muvwravpov répas
Every THY TroLvry.
IIporepov pév ovv ovdepia owtnpias édmris vréxerto’ 60 Kal péXav totiov Eyovcar, ws ert cuupopa mrpodnrw, THY vadv ereptrov: Tote 5é ToD @ncéws Tov Tatépa Oappuvovtos Kal peyarnyopovvTos ws yetpwoetat TOY Mivwraupor, Ewxev Erepov iotiov evKov TO KuBepyynty, KEedevoas troatpépovta awlouevov Tov Oncéws erradpacbar TO AevKov, ef O€ pn, TO péAave TEV Kal AaTrOTn-paiver To Talos.
‘O 8 2upovidns ov NevKOV gnaw elvat 76
Soev tro tod Aiyéws, GAAa “ hotvixeov ioriov iyp@ wedhupyévoyv mpivov avOe. éptOddrov*” Kai TovTO THS TwTNplas avTaV TroLnoacdbat onpetov. éxvBépva dé trav vaiv ’Apapovddas Déperdos, OS once Yepwvidns. PidoxXopos d€ Tapa YKipou pnotv ex 2arapivos TOV Oncéa AaBeiy xuBepyHTHV pev Navoioor, mpwpea Oé Paiaxa, Lndé7r@ TOTE TOY “AOnvatav Tpoa eX ovT ov 7 Qa-AdtTTy Kal yap elvat TOV niBewv éva MevécOnv Sxlpou Buyatpibobv. paptupel dé TovTos np@a NavovOoou kat Paiaxos eto apevou Oncéws Pa-
APO TpoOs T@ TOU Lipou é tep@,' Kal rHv éoprny Ta KuBepynod pact exelvous Terela Oa.
XVHI. Tevouévou 8¢ Tob KApov maparhaBeov TOUS AaxovTas) Oncevs éx TOU mpuTavelou, Kal maperOarv Ets Acrpinor, eOnnev virép avTov TO
"AmoAAwVE THY ikeTnpiav. mv d5é KAdSOS aro
1 jep@ bracketed by Bekker (near that of Scirus).

with him carrying no warlike weapon, and that if the Minotaur was killed the penalty should cease.

On the two former occasions, then, no hope of safety was entertained, and therefore they sent the ship with a black sail, convinced that their youth were going to certain destruction ; but now Theseus encouraged his father and loudly boasted that he would master the Minotaur, so that he gave the pilot another sail, a white one, ordering him, if he returned with Theseus safe, to hoist the white sail, but otherwise to sail with the black one, and so indicate the affliction.

Simonides, however, says! that the sail given by Aegeus was not white, but ‘‘a scarlet sail dyed with the tender flower of luxuriant holm-oak,” and that he made this a token of their safety. Moreover, the pilot of the ship was Phereclus, son of Amarsyas, as Simonides says; but Philochorus says that Theseus got from Scirus of Salamis Nausithoiis for his pilot, and Phaeax for his look-out man, the Athenians at that time not yet being addicted to the sea, and that Scirus did him this favour because one of the chosen youths, Menesthes, was his daughter’s son. And there is evidence for this in the memorial chapels for Nausithoiis and Phaeax which Theseus built at Phalerum near the temple of Scirus, and they say that the festival of the Cybernesia, or Pilot’s Festival, is celebrated in their honour.

XVIII. When the lot was cast, Theseus took those upon whom it fell from the. prytaneium and went to the Delphinium, where he dedicated to Apollo in their behalf his suppliant’s badge. This

1 Fragment 54 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, iii.‘ p. 413).

THS tepas édalas, épim RAeve@ KaTectempévos. evEduevos bé€ xatéBawev Extn penvos ém Oa-Aacgoav taotapévov Movvuxiavos, 7 Kal viv ere Tas Kopas Téwrovaow iNacopévas eis Aerdiviov. AeyeTar dé auT@ Tov pev év Acrdois dverety Geov “Adpoditny xabnyepova troveicBar Kai Trapa-anrely auvéutropov, Ovovtse 6€ mpos Oaraoon THV alya OnXeray ovoay avToudtas tpayov yevéobar: 5:0 Kal KareicOar tHv Oeov ’Emitpayiav.

XIX. *Esrel 68 watémrevcev eis Kpnrny, ws bev ob TodXOl ypdadovar Kal adovat, Tapa TIS

"Apiddvns épacbeians To Aivov AaBwv, Kal 4b:- SayGels ws Erte tod AaBupivOov tods Ediypors SreEeNOciv, améxtevve tov Muvetavpov al arré-wrevoe THY ‘Apiadyny dvarxaBov kal tors Hi-Oéovs. Depexvdns 5é nal ta édddn trav Kpn-Tixav veav gnaw eéexxoyrac tov @naéa, Thy Siwkw adarpovpevov. Anpuov dé xa rov Tadpov dvaipeOfRvai dno. tov tod Mivw otpatnyov, év
TO Auer. Svavavpayobvta tod Oncéws éxmréovtos. ws 5é Piroxopos iotopyKe, TOV ayaova
tov Mivw auvteAobvtos, éridofos dy aravtas Taw vinjoew, 6 Tavpos épOovetto. xal yap 4
Sivauis avtod dia tov tpoTrov Hv émraxOns, Kar
SiaBorny elyey ws TH Ilaciupdn wAnoidfov. 816 Kal tod Onoéws aktoivtos aywvicacba. cuve-xapnoev 0 Mivas. ous 5é dvtos ev Kpyry
Gedc Oar nai Tas yuvaixas, Apiadvn tapovea pos 36

8

THESEUS .- .

was a bough from the sacred olive-tree, wreathed with white wool. Having made his vows and prayers, he went down to the sea on the sixth day ot the month Munychion, on which day even now the Athenians still send their maidens to the Delphinium to propitiate the god. And it is reported that the god at Delphi commanded him in an oracle to make Aphrodite his guide, and invite her to attend him on his journey, and that as he sacrificed the usual she-goat to her by the sea-shore, it became a he-goat (“ tragos’’) all at once, for which reason the goddess has the surname Epitragia.

XIX. When he reached Crete on his voyage, most historians and poets tell us that he got from Ariadne, who had fallen in love with him, the famous thread, and that having been instructed by her how to make his way through the intricacies of the Labyrinth, he slew the Minotaur and sailed off with Ariadne and the youth. And Pherecydes says that Theseus also staved in the bottoms of the Cretan ships, thus depriving them of the power to pursue. And Demon says also that Taurus, the general of Minos, was killed ina naval battle in the harbour as Theseus was sailing out. But as Philochorus tells the story,} Minos was holding the funeral games, and Taurus was expected to conquer all his competitors in them, as he had done before, and was grudged his success, For his disposition made his power hateful, and he was accused of too great intimacy with Pasiphaé. Therefore when Theseus asked the privilege of entering the lists, it was. granted him by Minos. And since it was the custom in Crete for women to view the games, Ariadne was present, and was

1 Cf. chapter xvi. 1.
37
on

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Te Thy ov é£erAdyn Tob Oncéws Kxal thy GOAnow eavpace mrdvtwv Kparncayvtos. Habeis 5é xal 0 Mivws pddtota Tov Tavpou KataradataOévtos xat mpomnraxtobévtos, amédwxe TO @ncet tovs maidas Kal advice TH TWodeL TOV dao Lov.
[dims 5€ ras Kal repittas 6 KretSnyos amrmy-yetre mepl tovTwv, dvwbév rofev apEduevos, Srt Soya Kowov Hv “EAAnvov pnoepiav éxrdeiv Tpinpn pndapolev avdipav mévte wreiovas Seyopévny: tov Oé apyovta THs Apyots "ldcova povov mepit@retv! é£eipyovta tis Oaratrns ta dy-ornpia. Aaddrov 8 rrol@ duyovtos els AOnvas, Mivos rapa ta Soypata paxpais vavol d:oKxev UTS Yetpwavos els Yuxedtav amnvéyOn xaxei xatéatpewe tov Biov. émet &€ Aeveariwv o vids avTov TorNemKas Eywv pos Tors "AOnvaious éreuwev, éxdidovae Aaidarov avT@ Kxerevwov 7} Tovs Tatdas armoxteveiy ameiav ods édXaBev ounpovs 6 Mivas, TovT@ peyv atrexpivato wpdws
0 Oncevs, TAPALTOUMEVOS averiov évta Aaidadov
Kakeiv@ KaTa yévos TMpoonKovTa, pmTtpos dvTa Meporns ths “EpeyOéws, avtos 8€ vavrnyiav éreBareTo, Thy pev ev Qupattadav avToO. pa-kpav tis Eevixns od00, rhv dé Sia TlerOéws ev Tportnv, Bovrdpevos rAavOdvev. ryevopévav Se éroipov é&érvevoe tov te Aaidarov éxwv cal gduydbas éx Kpyrns xabnyeuovas: ovdevds 8é ) wepimAciy Sintenis and Bekker assume a lacuna after this word. A Bodleian MS. (B4) has rpihpe: wAfpe: dvdpav ixavay (with a trireme fully manned). .

33

THESEUS

smitten with the appearance of Theseus, as well as filled with admiration for his athletic prowess, when he conquered all his opponents. Minos also was delighted with him, especially because he conquered Taurus in wrestling and disgraced him, and therefore gave back the youths to Theseus, besides remitting its tribute to the city.

Cleidemus, however, gives a rather peculiar and ambitious account of these matters, beginning a great way back. There was, he says, a general Hellenic decree that no trireme should sail from any port with a larger crew than five men, and the only exception was Jason, the commander of the Argo, who sailed about scouring the sea of pirates. Now when Daedalus fled from Crete in a merchant- vessel to Athens, Minos, contrary to the decrees, pursued him with his ships of war, and was driven from his course by a tempest to Sicily, where he ended his life.) And when Deucalion, his son, who was on hostile terms with the Athenians, sent to them a demand that they deliver up Daedalus to him, and threatened, if they refused, to put to death the youth whom Minos had received from them as hostages, Theseus made him a gentle reply, declining to surrender Daedalus, who was his kinsman and cousin, being the son of Merope, the daughter of Erechtheus. But privately he set himself to building a fleet, part of it at home in the township of Thymoetadae, far from the public road, and part of it under the direction of Pittheus in Troezen, wishing his purpose to remain concealed. When his ships were ready, he set sail, taking Daedalus and exiles from Crete as his guides, and since none mpoeldoTos, GAAa vavs girAias olopévwy Tov Kpnrav mpocdépecOar, tod Aipévos Kpatnoas cal amoBas ébOacev eis tHv Kvwoodv taped- Gov: Kal pdadynv év mvrdas tod AaBupivOov cuvaryyas améxtewe tov Aeveadiwva Kai Tovs Sopudopous. év 5é Trois mpdypacet THs "Apiaddvns yevouevns, omeltapevos Tmpos avuTHY TOUS TE niOéous avédaBe Kal didiav éroince tos 'AOn- vaiots mpos tovs Kpfras, ouocavtas pndérrote Toveuou KatapEeu.

1 Cf. Herodotus, vii. 170; Diodorus, iv. 79.

XX. TloArod b€ AOyor Kal wept tovtwyv ért éyovrac kal repli TAS "Apiadyns, ovdév oporo- ryoupevov &yovres. ob wey yap andyfacbai pac avTny amonrerpbeic av td ToD Oncéus, ot Se eis Ndé£ov v6 vavtav Kopicbeicay Oivapw Te iepet tov Atovicov avvoixeiv, atrorkepOjvar 5é Tod Oncéws ép@vtos Erépas: | Aewvos yap puv étecpev Epws Iavomnidos Aiyans.

A A \ 3 A 'H a) Il / TOUTO yap TO ETos Ex TWY Kiatodou lletataTpator

éFereiv dno ‘Hpéas 0 Meyapevs, domep ad md-
3 a ? \ e / , \ uv éwParety ets THY Opnpov vévviay To Oncéa Ilecpiodv te Pew aptdeixera Téxva, yapifouevov ’AOPnvaios Evior Sé Kal texeiv éx Onoéws ‘Apedouny Oivotriwva Kab Lrdpudov Ov cat o Xios “lev éorl rept THS éavtod Tatpibas Neyo"

Try rote Onaeidns Exticev Olvorriov.

of the Cretans knew of his design, but thought the approaching ships to be friendly, Theseus made himself master of the harbour, disembarked his men, and got to Gnossus before his enemies were aware of his approach. Then joining battle with them at the gate of the Labyrinth, he slew Deucalion and his body-guard. And since Ariadne was now at the head of affairs, he made a truce with her, received back the youthful hostages, and established friendship between the Athenians and the Cretans, who took oath never to begin hostilities.

XX. There are many other stories about these matters, and also about Ariadne, but they do not agree at all. Some say that she hung herself because she was abandoned by Theseus; others that she was conveyed to Naxos by sailors and there lived with Oenarus the priest of Dionysus, and that she was abandoned by Theseus because he loved another woman :—

“‘ Dreadful indeed was his passion for Aigle child of Panopeus.”’ !

This verse Peisistratus expunged from the poems of Hesiod, according to Hereas the Megarian, just as, on the other hand, he inserted into the Inferno of Homer the verse :—

“Theseus, Peirithous, illustrious children of Heaven,” ?

and all to gratify the Athenians. Moreover, some say that Ariadne actually had sons by Theseus, Oenopion and Staphylus, and among these is Ion of Chios, who says of his own native city :—

“¢ This, once, Theseus’s son founded, Oenopion.”’ 3

1 Cf. Athenaeus, p. 587 a. 2 Odyssey, xi. 631.
3 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr. ii.’ p. 254.
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“A & éorly evpnuotata Trav pv0orocyoupévoy, mavres ws érros eitrety ba ordpatos éxyovatyv.
doy S€ tiva trept TovTwy Adyov éxdédwxe Tacwy
e939 4 ‘\ \ , e \
o Apadovotos. tov yap Oncéa dyoly vo yxe-

A ? U4 b] , \ > 4
pavos eis Kuzpoy éFeveyOévra cal rnv "Apiddynv éyxvov éyovta, pavrws 8 Svaxetpévny bd Tod
, \ A Pd A L4 oN
carovu kal Svadopodaay, éxBiBdoa povny, avTov
5¢ 1@ mAol@ BonOodvra madw eis TO wéXdyos amd THs yhs pPépecOat. Tas odv éyxwpiovs yu-vaixas thy ’Apiddvyny dvadaBeiv cal qweptétrey
A 9 \ A 4 ?

abvpovoay él TH povece, Kal ypdupata TAa ’ Led

oTa Tpoahépery, @S TOD Oncéws ypddorros auth, kat wept THv @diva auprovetvy Kal BonOety: arro-Oavodcav 8é& Odvrar pn Texodcav. émedovta dé tov @noéa Kai wepidvrov yevopuevov Tots pev éyxwplos amronttreiy ypjpata, cuvtdeavta Ovew
a 3 4 , \ ? , e ,
Th Apiddvn, dv0 5 pexpovs avéptavticKous idpu-cacbat, Tov pev apyupovv, Tov dé yarxKodv. év 5é 1H Ovola tod Topmuatov pnvos ioTapevov
4 a)
Seurépa Kataxdivopevoy tia taV veavicxwY POeyyecOar Kal rrovety arrep wdivovaa. yuvaixes-carey 88 7d ddoos "Apabovaious, év & tov tadov Secxvuovaw, Apiddyvns 'Adpoditns.
Kat Nakiwv 6€ tives idiws iotopodat Svo
Mivewas yevéoBat cal S00’ Apidévas, av THY pév Aicvicw yaunOijvai dacw ev Nakp cal rovs mept Yradurov texelv, thy 5é vewrépay dpraa e \ a , ? a ?

oOeicav vio Tov Oncews Kal arroradUeicay eis Nadfov édOeiv, Kai tpopdov pet avtns dvopua 42

THESEUS

Now the most auspicious of these legendary tales are in the mouths of all men, as I may say; but a very peculiar account of these matters is published by Paeon the Amathusian. He says that Theseus, driven out of his course by a storm to Cyprus, and having with him Ariadne, who was big with child and in sore sickness and distress from the tossing of the sea, set her on shore alone, but that he himself, while trying to succour the ship, was borne out to sea again. The women of the island, accordingly, took Ariadne into their care, and tried to comfort her in the discouragement caused by her loneliness, brought her forged letters purporting to have been written to her by Theseus, ministered to her aid during the pangs of travail, and gave her burial when she died before her child was born. Paeon says further that Theseus came back, and was greatly afflicted, and left a sum of money with the people of the island, enjoining them to sacrifice to Ariadne, and caused two little statuettes to be set up in her honour, one of silver, and one of bronze. He says also that at the sacrifice in her honour on the second day of the month Gorpiaeus, one of their young men lies down and imitates the cries and gestures of women in travail; and that they call the grove in which they show her tomb, the grove of Ariadne Aphrodite. .

Some of the Naxians also have a story of their own, that there were two Minoses and two Ariadnes, one of whom, they say, was married to Dionysus in Naxos and bore him Staphylus and his brother, and the other, of a later time, having been carried off by Theseus and then abandoned by him, came to Naxos, accompanied by a nurse named Corcyne, 43

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kopxvvnv, Hs SeixvucOar tdpov. amobaveiv Se kal tnv ’Apiddyvnv avrob. wal ripds eye ody opoias TH mpotépa. TH wey yap Hdopévous xal maivovtas éoptdtew, tas 8€ tavtn Spwpévas Oucias elvar mrévOer tw Kal otuyvoTnt. pe-pry wevas.
XXT. Ex 6€ tHs Kpyrns amomdéwv els AfjXov katéoxe: kal T@ Oe@ Bvdcas nal dvabels To adpodiatov & trapa tis “Apiadyns édraBev, éxopevoe peta tav nidéwy yopeiay ty ere viv émitereivy Andlouvs Réyovor, piunua tov év TH AaBupiv0e trepidodwv cai dueFddmr, &v rive pub p@ maparrdfes xal avediers Exovte ytyvopévny.
kareitat S€ TO yévos TovTO Ths yopelas w7ro

Anriwy yépavos, was totopet Arxaiapyos. éxopevaoe 5é rept tov Kepatava Bapor, éx Kxepdrav cUYNppLOG Mévoy EvwWVUpLwWY aTravTwY. TronoaLr Sé cal ayava pact avtov év Ando, Kal Trois vix@oe TOTe Tpa@Tov wT éxeivou poivika SoOjnvar.
XXII. TH 8 “Artixg mpocdhepopévwy éxra-OécOat pev adrov, éxrabécOar dé tov xuBepynrny t1d yapas érdpacBa 76 iotiov Sb THY cwtnplav
avt@ayv éder yvopimov tO Alyet yevéoOar Tov 5é dmoyvovta pirat Kata THY WéTpas éavTov cal SiadOaphvar. xatamrevoas S€ 0 Onoevs €Ove pev autos as éxmrrAéwv Oucias evEato Tots Oeots Padrnpol, cnpuxa 5€ améoreire THs cwTNpias ayyeXov eis Gotu. ovtos évéruyey ddupopé-VOLS TE TOAKNOLS THY TOD Bactréws ‘TeAEUTHVY Kal
Yaipovat, Ss EeiKos, ETEpaLs Kal didrodppoveicBat 44

whose tomb they show; and that this Ariadne also died there, and has honours paid her unlike those of the former, for the festival of the first Ariadne is celebrated with mirth and revels, but the sacrifices performed in honour of the second are attended with sorrow and mourning.

XXI. On his voyage from Crete, Theseus put in at Delos, and having sacrificed to the god and dedi- cated in his temple the image of Aphrodite which he had received from Ariadne, he danced with his youths a dance which they say is still performed by the Delians, being an imitation of the circling passages in the Labyrinth, and consisting of certain rhythmic involutions and evolutions. This kind of dance, as Dicaearchus tells us, is called by the Delians The Crane, and Theseus danced it round the altar called Keraton, which is constructed of horns (“kerata”’) taken entirely from the left side of the head. They say that he also instituted athletic contests in Delos, and that the custom was then begun by him of giving a palm to the victors.

XXII. It is said, moreover, that as they drew nigh the coast of Attica, Theseus himself forgot, and his pilot forgot, such was their joy and exultation, to hoist the sail which was to have been the token of their safety to Aegeus, who therefore, in despair, threw himself down from the rock and was dashed in pieces. But Theseus, putting in to shore, sacrificed in person the sacrifices which he had vowed to the gods at Phalerum when he set sail, and then dispatched a herald to the city to announce his safe return. The messenger found many of the people bewailing the death of their king, and others full of joy at his tidings, as was natural, and eager to welcome him

45

“ 4
Kal orepavody autov én) tH cwrnpla mpoOdpos
2 ° A Q @ 4 5 , QN oval. TOUS pev ov oTepavous OCEexYopEVOS TO xnpvxetoy avéotepev, éeravenOwv Sé éri Oa-
a“ lA
Aacoay ovTw TeTrolnpévoy aTrovoas TOV Onoéws
” , \ ’ A a ,
Ew meptéperve, 7) BovAopevos THY Ovotav tapd-Far. yevopévav S¢ tay orrovdav amnyyetke THY tov Aiyéws tereutnv. of 5€ crv xravOpo Kal 4 OopuBo amevdovres avéBatvov eis THv qWoNs».
@ \ “a 3 “ > rd ce
60ev cai viv év toils w@ayodopios atepavova bau
A > N a, 4 > QA >} a pév ov TOV KnpuKa AEyovoLY, ANAA TO KNPUKELOD, émupwveiy dé éy tais omovdais, "EXeded, ‘Tov,
"lov, Tous Tapovtas: MY TO pév oTrEvdoVTES avaghovety kai tatwvilovtes ciwOact, ro Sé éxtA7> Eews Kal Tapayis €oTt.
@apas 5é€ tov matépa, to *ArodAdwove THY evynyv amredidov TH EBSopnn Tod Tvaveyridvos
pnvos totapévouv’ tavtn yap avéBnoapv eis aatu cwlévtes. 1 pev ovv &nots TAY oonpiov éye-
4 \ , 9 \ ? > A
tas yiverOar dia TO owbévtas avTovs eis TavTO ouppitar Ta weptovta TeV octtiovy Kal play xUTpav Kony eEYrnoavtas ouveotiabnvar xa ouyxatapayeiy aAArAos. Thy 5é eipect@vny éxpépovot xrAdbov édaias epip pev aveoteupévor, WOTTEP TOTE THY txeTNpiay, TayTobaTray S€ aya-Trew Katapypatwv dia TO AREAL THY adopiar, é€mr ddovtes:
46

10

THESEUS

and crown him with garlands for his good news.
The garlands, then, he accepted, and twined them about his herald’s staff, and on returning to the seashore, finding that Theseus had not yet made his libations to the gods, remained outside the sacred precincts, not wishing to disturb the sacrifice. But when the libations were made, he announced the death of Aegeus. Thereupon, with tumultuous lamentation, they went up in haste to the city. Whence it is, they say, that to this day, at the festival of the Oschophoria,! it is not the herald that is crowned, but his herald's staff, and those who are present at the libations cry out: "Eleleu! Tou! Jou!" the first of which cries is the exclamation of eager haste and triumph, the second of consternation and confusion.

After burying his father, Theseus paid his vows to Apollo on the seventh day of the month Pyanep- sion; for on that day they had come back to the city in safety. Now the custom of boiling all sorts of pulse on that day is said to have arisen from the fact that the youths who were brought safely back by Theseus put what was left of their provisions into one mess, boiled it in one common pot, feasted upon it, and ate it all up together. At that feast they also carry the so-called "eiresione," which is a bough of olive wreathed with wool, such as Theseus used at the time of his supplication, and laden with all sorts of fruit-offerings, to signify that scarcity was at an end, and as they go they sing :—

1 A vintage festival, during which branches of the vine with grapes upon them (éexor) were borne in procession from Athens to Phalerum. See chapter xxiii. 2.

Eipeciovn cica pepe Kai Tiovas aprous
Kal péde ev KOTUAN Kai EXavov atonoac bat
Kai KvrALx' evCwpov, ws av peOvovca xabevin.

KaiTOL TAUTA TIVES emt Tots 'Hpaxdreidats yiver Oat

, 4 s e XN "a > Aéyouowy, ovTws Statpehopevors UO Tov AOn-vaiwy: ot Sé WrELovEs WS TpoEipNTat.
XXIII. To 5€ wAotov ev & peta toY HiDéwy €rdrevoe Kal Tad éowOn, THY TplaxoVvTopoY, aX pL trav Anpntpiov tov Padrnpéws ypovev Sivepv-AatTov of "AOnvaio, Ta pev Taraa tov EvroV tpatpovuvTes, GAXa b€ éuBaddovtes toxupa Kal TULTNYVUVTES OUTWS WaTE Kat ToIs Ptdooddorts
eis Tov ayEopevoy Adyov apudidoFovpevoy trapd-Serypua TO WAOLOY Elval, TOY MeV WS TO AUTO, TOY

5¢ @s ov TO aUTO Siapévot NEYorTOV.
2 “Ayovot & xal THY TOV waxXOdopiwy éopTHY
O@ncéws KatacTHcavTos. ov yap amdcas avrov éfayayely tas Aayovoas ToTe Trapbévous, ara
a , 4 4 a Ttav avvnbwv veavicxwv dvo Onrudavets peéev opOjvat Kal veapots, avdpwdes b€ tas yruxas cal m poO uous, AouTpois Te Oeppois Kai oxtatpadiacs kat tTais Tept Kopnv Kat AeLoTnTa Kal xXporav arorpais cal Koopnoecw ws Eotw éEadrdkavra
A 4 \ \ a N
Kopin, Kal diddkavta gwvnv nal oyjpa xa 48

THESEUS

‘“‘ Kiresione for us brings figs and bread of the richest, Brings us honey in pots and oil to rub off from the body,
Strong wine too in a beaker, that one may go to bed mellow.”
Some writers, however, say that these rites are in memory of the Heracleidae,| who were maintained in this manner by the Athenians; but most put the matter as I have done. | XXIII. The ship on which Theseus sailed with the youths and returned in safety, the thirty-oared galley, was preserved by the Athenians down to the time of Demetrius Phalereus.2, They took away the old timbers from time to time, and put new and sound ones in their places, so that the vessel became a standing illustration for the philosophers in the mooted question of growth, some declaring that it remained the same, others that it was not the same vessel.
It was Theseus who instituted also the Athenian festival of the Oschophoria. For it is said that he did not take away with him all the maidens on whom the lot fell at that time, but picked out two young men of his acquaintance who had fresh and girlish faces, but eager and manly spirits, and changed their out- ward appearance almost entirely by giving them warm baths and keeping them out of the sun, by arranging their hair, and by smoothing their skin and beauti-

1 On the death of Heracles, his children, to escape the wrath of the tyrant Eurystheus, came as suppliants to Athens, bearing branches in their hands. See the Heracletdae of Euripides. .

2 Regent of Athens for Cassander of Macedon, 317-307 B.c.
Cf. Plato, Phaedo, p. 58.
49
VOL, I. 'E
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Badbiouv ws &t partiota rapbévors opovodabar rat pndev daivecOar Stadépovtas, éuBareiy ets tov Tov traplévwv apOpov Kat Sradabeiy amaytas:
3 \ ? A > / A ‘ érret 6€ érravnAOev, avTov Te TomTevoaL Kal TOUS veaviaxous OUTWS apuTexopévous ws viv dytréé \ > \ lA lA \ YovTat Tovs aaxovs Pépovtes. épovor 5é Aroviow wat ’Apiddvy xaptCopuevor dea Tov pdOor, 7 a a * PJ , 9 A MarAXov Ott cuyKxomlopuévns omwpas érravyndOor:
ai Sé Semvodopot waparapPavovta Kat Kowe-vodot THs Ovoias aTroptpovpevar Tas pmTépas éxel(vov TOV AaYOVTMOY: érrepoiTwy yap avTots ova Kal citia Kopitovaas Kal pd0or AéyorTas Sia TO Kdkelvas evOvpias &vexa nal Twapnyopias
U f a ‘7 a 2 \
pvOous SreEcévat tots tract. tadta pev ovv cat Anpov iotopncev. &é&npéln 5é cad répevos adro, kal tovs amo THY TapacyovTwy Tov Sacpor
v 3 , e A nw ’ 4
oixwv érakev els Ovoiay avT@ redrely atropopas:
kat THs Oucias émrepeXodvTO Purarldat, Oncéws
atrodovtos avtois auorBny ths pirokevias.
XXIV. Mera 6€ tryv Aiyéws rerXeuTHV péya Kal
\ ” ? A , /
Oavpacrov épyov eis voiby Badépuevos cuvmexice
\ a Tous thy AtriKny Kxatotxovvras eis ev dotu, Kal pias merews Era Sipwov arrépyve, Téws omopddas bvtas Kal dvcavakdyTous TMpos TO KOLVOY TdVTODV 5°

THESEUS

fying their complexions with unguents; he also taught them to imitate maidens as closely as possible in their speech, their dress, and their gait, and to leave no difference that could be observed, and then enrolled them among the maidens who were going to Crete, and was undiscovered by any. And when he was come back, he himself and these two young men headed a procession, arrayed as those are now arrayed who carry the vine-branches. They carry these in honour of Dionysus and Ariadne, and because of their part in the story; or rather, because they came back home at the time of the vintage. And the women called Deipnophoroi, or supper-carriers, take part in the procession and share in the sacrifice, in imitation of the mothers of the young men and maidens on whom the lot fell, for these kept coming with bread and meat, for their children. And tales are told at this festival, because these mothers, for the sake of comforting and encouraging their chil- dren, spun out tales for them. At any rate, these details are to be found in the history of Demon. Furthermore, a sacred precinct was also set apart for Theseus, and he ordered the members of the fami- lies which had furnished the tribute to the Minotaur to make contributions towards a sacrifice to himself. This sacrifice was superintended by the Phytalidae, and Theseus thus repaid them for their hospitality.! XXIV. After the death of Aegeus, Theseus conceived a wonderful design, and settled all the residents of Attica in one city, thus making one people of one city out of those who up to that time had been scattered about and were not easily called together for the common interests of all, nay, they

1 Cf. chapter xii. 1.

aupdépov, ote & Ste nat Siahepopévovs AdANAOLS
2 xal Todepodvtas. emiov ovv avérreOe Kata
i Kal yevn, Tav pev idtwTav Kal TevynTov - evoeyouéevov TAXYDY THY TapaKAnolv avTOD, Tots Sé Suvatois aBacirevtov woditeiav mpotetvwv kat Snpoxpariay av'T@ povoy apyovtTs Torémov kal vopov dvrAaxt xpnoopéevny, trav bé addrAdwv 3 wapéEovcav amacw "icopopiav. Ttovs pev 3
a " € \ / ? " 5 /
Tavta érebev, ot Sé tHv Sdvapw adtov dedioTes peyarnv ovcav Hon Kal Thy ToApav, éBovAovTO mevOopevor wadrov 1 Bralopevoe Tadra ovyxKwpelv.
Katadvoas ovv Ta Trap éxdoTols MpuvTaveia Kal Bovrevrynpia xa apyds, ev b€ moinoas aract kowov évrad0a mputaveiov Kal PBovdeuvTyHprov ea le) cf \ mM" / 4 ? 4
Strov viv iputTat TO dotu, THYV Te TOALY 'AOHVas
,

mpoonyopevae xal Ilavabyvara Ovoiav éroince

/ " \ / a 4 | ?
4 xownv. Ovce bé nal Meroimia rH extn emt béxa tod 'ExatopBatavos, iv ére viv Oudover.
A , bd / 4 e /
kat tv Bacirelay adeis, dorwep Mpmoroynoe, Suexdoper THY TodtTElav amd Deady apydopmevos:

Ke yap avT@ xpnouos ex Acrhav pavtevopéve TEept THS TONEWS"
5 Aéyeidn Onoed, It7Onidos exyove xovpys,
TOAAALS TOL TrOALETaL TATHP Ewos eyKaTéeOnKe
Téppata Kal KNwoTHpas év vueTéep@ TTOALEO PH.
GANA ov yn TL ALnY TreTTOVnpevos evdoOt Oumov Bovreverv’ aoxds yap év olduate rovtoTopevc et.
1 icopoiplay. rovs wey with Coraés and Bekker: lcopo:play, TOUS péy.
52

sometimes actually quarrelled and fought with each other. He visited them, then, and tried to win them over to his project township by township and clan by clan. The common folk and the poor quickly answered to his summons; to the powerful he promised government without a king and a democracy, in which he should only be commander in war and guardian of the laws, while in all else everyone should be on an equal footing. Some he readily persuaded to this course, and others, fearing his power, which was already great, and his boldness, chose to be persuaded rather than forced to agree to it. Accordingly, after doing away with the town- halls and council-chambers and magistracies in the several communities, and after building a common town-hall and council-chamber for all on the ground where the upper town of the present day stands, he named the city Athens, and instituted a Panathenaic festival. He instituted also the Metoecia, or Festival of Settlement, on the sixteenth day of the month Hecatombaeon, and this is still celebrated. Then, laying aside the royal power, as he had agreed, he proceeded to arrange the government, and that too with the sanction of the gods. For an oracle came to him from Delphi, in answer to his enquiries about the city, as follows :—

“ Theseus, offspring of Aegeus, son of the daughter of Pittheus,

Many indeed the cities to which my father has given

Bounds and future fates within your citadel’s confines.
Therefore be not dismayed, but with firm and confident spirit
Counsel only; the bladder will traverse the sea and its surges.” 53

Tovro Sé kal LiBvrAXrav torepov atrootopatioat Tpos THY TOALY (aTOpovaLY, dvapbeyEapévnv’

"Aokds Batrifn: Sivas 5é rou od Depts eoriv.

XXV. "Ere 5é warrov avkfjoa: thy Tod Bov-Adpmevos éxdrer Tavtas él toils taots, Kab TO “ Acdp tre mavtes Xe@” Kypvyua Onoéws yevea8at fact mavdnpiav tia Kabtatadvtos. ov pny dtaxtov ovdé pemeypéevnv weptetdev Uo wANGOUS émrixvbévtos axpitou yevouéevny thy Snpoxpariay, GANA MpO@TOS atroxpivas ywpls evrarpidas Kal yewpmopous Kal Snusovpyovs, evtrarpisars §€ yive-axe Ta Ocia Kal rapéxev apyovtas amrodous cal vopwv ddacKdXovs elvar Kal ociwv Kal iepav bd 4 a ¥ / e ? éEnyntds, Tois adNots TorITALS WoTrEp Ets toov xatéatnae, S0&n pév edtrarpidav, xpeia 88 yewpopwv, ANGE. Sé Snuscovpyav trepéyey Soxovvtov. OT dé mpaTos aTéKALVE TIPOS TOV BYAOV, WS 3 , / IEA \ a ”
Aptorotédns baci, cal ddbjxe To povapxelv, ore
paptupeiy cal “Opunpos ev vedv Katardoyp povous
"AOnvaiovs Sipov mpocayopevaas.
"Exowe 5€ xal voutopa, Bovv éyxapatas, dd XN , A “a \ , tov Mapa8wmov tadpov, } 81a Tov Mivw otpatn-yov, } Tpos yewpyiav Tovs TodiTas TapaKanrov.

> 9% 93 4 , \ e¢ / \ lA
am’ éxeivou 5é dace 76 ExaTtopBotov Kal To Sexd-Botov ovopacOjvar. mpooxtnaduevos 5 TH 'At-Tuxh THY Meyapixny BeBaiws, tiv Opuroupéevyny 54

THESEUS

And this oracle they say the Sibyl afterwards ee
to the city, when she cried :— “Bladder may be submerged ; but its sinking will not be permitted.”
XXV. Desiring still further to enlarge the city, he invited all men thither on equal terms, and the phrase “Come hither all ye people,’ they say was a proclamation of Theseus when he established a people, as it were, of all sorts and conditions. How- ever, he did not suffer his democracy to become | disordered or confused from an indiscriminate mul- titude streaming into it, but was the first to separate the people into noblemen and husbandmen and handicraftsmen. To the noblemen he committed the care of religious rites, the supply of magistrates, the teaching of the laws, and the interpretation of the will of Heaven, and for the rest of the citizens he established a balance of privilege, the noblemen being thought to excel in dignity, the husbandmen in usefulness, and the handicraftsmen in numbers. And that he was the first to show a leaning towards the multitude, as Aristotle says, and gave up his absolute rule, seems to be the testimony of Homer | also, in the Catalogue of Ships,! where he speaks of the Athenians alone as a “ people.”

He also coined money, and stamped it with the effigy of an ox, either in remembrance of the Marathonian bull, or of Taurus, the general of Minos, or because he would invite the citizens to agriculture. From this coinage, they say, “ten oxen” and “a hundred oxen” came to he used as terms of valuation. navn attached the territory of Megara securely to 1 Jad, ii, 547.

év "loOu@ ornrnv eorncer, emuyparypas 76 Svopifov ériypappa tiv yopav Svc) tpimérpors, dv eppate
To! ev pos éw
Ta& ody Tedomrévynoos, ddr’ "Iwvia:
701 8é apes éomépav
Tad éort TeXorovvnaos, ove lovia.
Kal Tov ayava Tpatos One Kata Cirov ‘Hpa-Kréous, ws bt éxeivoy ‘Oddpria tO Ati, eal be avrov “IcOua te Tocesdave dirotipnOels dyew tovs “EAXnvas. o yap éml Mertxépty teOels av-TOOL vuKtos edpato, TeAETHS ExoV pardov H Oéas kal tavnyupicpod taf. evo. 5é dacw én Sxelpwre ta “IoOma teOjvar, tod Onoéws ado-atoupeévov Tov hovov bia THY avyyévetav’ UKelpwva yap viov elvas KavnOov cat ‘Huoyns tis Tet0éws.
of 8€ Liv, od Xketpwva, cal Tov ayava TeOHvac 51a, tovTov bd Onoéws, ov bu’ exeivov. érakev ovv xa Suwpicato mpos tots Kopwbiovs ’AOnvaiwv Tots adixvoupévors etl ta “loOpwa mapéyey Tpo-eSpiav dcov av toTov éricyn xatatetacbev 7d THs Oewpidos vews iatiov, as ‘EdAdviKos Kal “Avdpov o ‘Adtkapvaceds ioropnkacwy.

1 7d wey, 7d de with Coraés, after Reiske : 7a per, ra 3¢.

Attica, he set up that famous pillar on the Isthmus, and carved upon it the inscription giving the territorial boundaries. It consisted of two trimeters, of which the one towards the east declared :—

‘“‘ Here is not Peloponnesus, but Ionia ;’
and the one towards the west :—

“ Here is the Peloponnesus, not Ionia.”
He also instituted the games here, in emulation of Heracles, being ambitious that as the Hellenes, by that hero's appointment, celebrated Olympian games in honour of Zeus,so by his own appointment they should celebrate Isthmian games in honour of Poseidon. For the games already instituted there in honour of Melicertes were celebrated in the night, and had the form of a religious rite rather than of a spectacle and public assembly. But some say that the Isthmian games were instituted in memory of Sciron, and that Theseus thus made expiation for his murder, because of the relationship between them ; for Sciron was a son of Canethus and Henioche, who was the daughter of Pittheus. And others have it that Sinis, not Sciron, was their son, and that it was in his honour rather that the games were instituted by Theseus. However that may be, Theseus made a formal agreement with the Corinthians that they should furnish Athenian visitors to the Isthmian games with a place of honour as large as could be covered by the sail of the state galley which brought them thither, when it was stretched to its full extent. So Hellanicus and Andron of Halicarnassus tell us.
57

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXVI. Bis dé Tov ™OvT OV émdevoe Tov Kib-eu-VoV, WS pev Piroyxo os | Kal tives aAXot Aéyoust, ped” ‘Hpaxdeous émt tas ‘Apatovas cvaTparev-cas, Kal yépas? ’Avriomny éda Bev" ot dé relovs, av éott Kal Pepextdys cat “EXddvixos kal “Hpo-dwpos, Uarepov pacw “Hpaxdéous idtoo TONOV mrevoa. Tov Oncéa xa THY "Apatova ra Bety aixydrwror, miavertepa eyorTes. ovdels yap aNAOS loTOpnTAL TAY per’ avTov oTparevadyT@y "A palova AaBeiv aiyuarwtov. Biwv dé cal tav-THY Tapaxpovd duevov obxer Oar AaBovra: pucer yap ovaas tas “Apalovas prrdv6pous ouTe puyeiv TOV Oncéa mpoa BddAovta 7) xopa, GvAa Kal Eévia TéprreLly* TOV O€ THV xopitoucav épBivac Tapakanrely els TO WAotovy éwBdons 5é ava-NOnvat.

Mevexparns bé€ Ts, totopiav mept Nixaias THs év Biduvia qodews EXOEOWKOS, Oncea dnaot THY *Avreomny éXovTa diatpivrat epi TOUTOUS TOUS TOTrOUS" Tuyyavery dé cveTpaTevovTas auT@ Tpeis veavia Kous e& "AOnvav adedgous aAApAwY, Kovewv kat Qoavra Kat Zonoeva. ToUTOv obv épav-Ta TNS "Avriomns Kal havOavovta TOUS a&Nous eEevmely mpos éva, THY oun bor: éxeivou dé Trepl TOUT@Y eVTUXOVTOS 7) 'AvrioTy, 'THY pep meipav ioxupas amotpinpas Bat, To 6€ mparywa cappovas
dua Kab Tmpdws éveyxely Kal Tpos Tov Oncéa pen KaTnyophca.. Tob dé Lodoevros @s aTréyvo plravtos é éauTov els TOT pov Tia «al Siap Oapevros, pe vauayer ToTe THY aitiav Kal Td TaBos Tod 1 yépas with Cobet ; yépas apioretov MSS., Coraés, Bekker ; yépas apiorecov.
58

THESEUS

XXVI. He also made a voyage into the Euxine Sea, as Philochorus and sundry others say, on a campaign with Heracles against the Amazons, and received Antiope as a reward of his valour; but the majority of writers, including Pherecydes, Hellanicus, and Herodorus, say that Theseus made this voyage on his own account, after the time of Heracles, and took the Amazon captive; and this is the more probable story. For it is not recorded that any one else among those who shared his expedition took an Amazon captive. And Bion says that even this Amazon he took and carried off by means of a stratagem. The Amazons, he says, were naturally friendly to men, and did not fly from Theseus when he touched upon their coasts, but actually sent him presents, and he invited the one who brought them to come on board his ship; she came on board, and he put out to sea.

And a certain Menecrates, who published a history of the Bithynian city of Nicaea, says that Theseus, with Antiope on board his ship, spent some time in those parts, and that there chanced to be with him on this expedition three young men of Athens who were brothers, Euneos, Thoas, and Solois. This last, he says, fell in love with Antiope unbeknown to the rest, and revealed his secret to one of his intimate friends. That friend made overtures to Antiope, who positively repulsed the attempt upon her, but treated the matter with discretion and gentleness, and made no denunciation to Theseus. Then Solois, in despair, threw himself into a river and drowned himself, and Theseus, when he learned the fate of veavioxou Tov Oncéa Bapéws éveyxeiv, ral Svodopobvra Noytov Te mudoxpya tov dveveryneiv Tpos éavtov: elvat yap avTe m poo Terary pevov év Aedgots v7re Ths IIvOias, 6tay éml Eévns dviabh pa

MoTa Kal TepiivTros yévNTaL, TodLW exEl KTICAL Kal TOV apd avtov Twas HyEenovas KaTAaXuTrElY.
éx O€ TOUTOU THY meV TOALY, HY ExTLCEV, ATO TOU
Geod TluOorodv mpocayopevaoat, Yorevta Sé Tov TANTioV TOTAmOV ETL Tih TOU VeavioKoV. KaTa-Autrely O€ Kal TOs abeAhOvS avTod, olov émictd-Tas Kat vopobéras, cal aouv avtois “Eppov avdpa tov “AOnvnow ettratpidav: ad’ ov Kal Tomov ‘Epuov Kadely oixiay tots Iv0oronitas, otk op0as thy Sevrépay cvAdAaBnv Teptotavtas Kal tnv do€av eri Geov aro Hpwos petatiOévtas.
XXVIII. Hpodaci pév ovv tavrny o tav
"Apalovey jorepos Exye: haivetar dé 7) adrov
avToo unde ryuvatxetov yevéoOat TO epyov. ov yap ay év doret KATETTPATOTESEVTaY oude 77 payny cuviyav €v YpP@ rept THY Tlyuca kat to Mov-GELOY, Eb f4)) Kpatovoat THS Xeopas adeas he) monet TpooguEav. ef Uev odv, OS EdAdvixos ¢ iotopnkKe,
T@ Kippepir@ Boonopy: wayevtt diaBacas TEpt-HrGov, € épyov €oti wioTevoas: TO O€ &Y 7H Todt ayedov autas évotpatoTredevoas papTuperTas Kai
TOS OvOHaG’ TOY TOTwY Kai Tais Oneass TOV WEoovTMY.
TloAuy dé Xpovov Sxvos nv Kai pedAAHTES ap horépas THS eTixErpjcews: TéAOs 56€ @noevs cata the young man, and what had caused it, was grievously disturbed, and in his distress called to mind a certain oracle which he had once received at Delphi. For it had there been enjoined upon him by the Pythian priestess that when, in a strange land, he should be sorest vexed and full of sorrow, he should found a city there, and leave some of his followers to govern it. For this cause he founded a city there, and called it, from the Pythian god, Pythopolis, and the adjacent river, Solois, in honour of the young man. And he left there the brothers of Solois, to be the city's presidents and law-givers, and with them Hermus, one of the noblemen of Athens. From him also the Pythopolitans call a place in the city the House of

Hermes, incorrectly changing + the second syllable, and transferring the honour from a hero to a god.

XXVIL Well, then, such were the grounds for the war of the Amazons, which seems to have been no trivial nor womanish enterprise for Theseus. For they would not have pitched their camp within the city, nor fought hand to hand battles in the neighgourhood of the Pynx and the Museum, had they not mastered the surrounding country and approached the city with impunity. Whether, now, as Hellanicus writes, they came round by the Cimmerian Bosporus, which they crossed on the ice, may be doubted ; but the fact that they encamped almost in the heart of the city is attested both by the names of the localities there and by the graves of those who fell in battle.

Now for a long time there was hesitation and delay on both sides in making the attack, but finally

1 Literally, giving it the circumflex accent.

Tt NOyov TO DoB@ ochayiacdpevos ovvippev avtais. 1 pév otv pdyn Bondpopsmvos éyévero penvos éf' 4 Ta Bondpoma péxpt viv "AOnvaior Ovovowv. iotoper 5é Kretdnpyos, éEaxpiBody ta xa' &xacta Bovropevos, TO pev evovUpOY TOY "Apaloven xépas emriotpépev mpos TO viv Kadovpevov "Apatoverov, To Se Se€i@ mpos tHv Ivica cata THY Xpvoav hee. payerbas Sé pos TodTO tous "AOnvaiouvs amo tod Movceiov tais 'ApaCoo. ouptecovtas, nal tddovs TaV WeorovTwv wept THY wAaTEelaY elvat THY Pépovoay emi Tas 13 mUnas mapa dO Xarxwdovros Hp@ov, As viv Tlecpaixds ovopdfovor. xal ravtn pev éxBiacd7vat péxype tov Kopevidwv xal troywphoa: tats yuvarkiv, amo bé Taddadiov wat "Apdntrod Kal Avxeiou mpoaRarovtas doacbat 76 SeFtov adtav adypt tod otpatorédouv Kal TodAds xataBanelv. TerapT@ 6é pv cuvdynKxas ryevea dau 51a Ths 'Lmraronurns: 'Inrrronorqy yap ovTos ovoyates THY T® Onoei svvorxodcav, ovn Avteowny.

"Evot 5€ dace peta tod Onoéws payxopevny meceity THY avOpwrov bro ModAmadias daxovtealetcav, cal THY oTHANY THY Tapa TO THS ‘OdUpmlas iepov érl tavtn KeicOat, nal Gavpactoy ovK Eoriv érl Tm paypacw ovTw manatots mravacbas
THY t ia ropiay, emel Kal Tas TeTpopévas gdacl tay
"Apatovev bn’ ’Avtidmns eis Xadxida Adbpa SiatreupOecicas Ttuyydvew émipedreias, cal tadh-val twas éxet wept To viv Apaloveroy cadovpevoy.
62
~,
THESEUS

Theseus, after sacrificing to Fear, in obedience to an oracle, joined battle with the women. This battle, then, was fought on the day of the month Boédromion on which, down to the present time, the Athenians celebrate the Boédromia. Cleidemus, who wishes to be minute, writes that the left wing of the Amazons extended to what is now’ called the Amazoneum, and that with their left they touched the Pnyx at Chrysa; that with this left wing the Athenians fought, engaging the Amazons from the Museum, and that the graves of those who fell are on either side of the street which leads to the gate by the chapel of Chalcodon, which is now called the Peiraic gate. Here, he says, the Athenians were routed and driven back by the women as far as the shrine of the Eumenides, but those who attacked the invaders from the Palladium and Ardettus and the Lyceum, drove their right wing back as far as to their camp, and slew many of them. And after three months, he says, a treaty of peace was made through the agency of Hippolyta; for Hippolyta is the name which Cleidemus gives to the Amazon whom Theseus married, not Antiope.
But some say that the woman was slain with a javelin by Molpadia, while fighting at Theseus’s side, and that the pillar which stands by the sanctuary of Olympian Earth was set up in her memory. And it is not astonishing that history, when dealing with events of such great antiquity, should wander in uncertainty, indeed, we are also told that the wounded Amazons were secretly sent away to Chalcis by Antiope, and were nursed there, and some were buried there, near what is now called the Amazoneum. But that the war ended in a 63

Oo

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

GANA TOD ye TOV TOAEMOY Eis OTTOVSAS TEXEUTIHTAL
papruptov éotw % Te TOU TOTOU KAHoLS TOU Tapa 70 Onociov, dvirep ‘Opxapoctov Karovow, 7} TE ywwopéevn tarat Ovoia tais "Apatooe mpd Trav Onceiwv. Secxvdovor & nat Meyapeis ’Auato-vov Onknv wap avrtois, éml tov carovpevov ‘Pody Badifovow é& ayopas, Grov 7d “PopBoedés.
NéyeTas O€ xal wept Xarpwverav érépas atrobaveiv, kal radfvat tapa To pevpatiov § madar pév, as Gorxe, Meppwdav, Aluwv S¢ viv Karetrar tept ov év t@ Anpoabévous Bio yéypattat. paivovras 5é pnde Geocariav dmpaypovas ai’ Apafoves dved-Godcat: tddor yap avtav és Kal viv Seixvuvtac mept THY ZKoTovaaiav Kal Tas Kuvds xepandas.
XXVIII.'Taita péev otv adk&ta pvnpns rept tov "Apalovwv. iv yap o tis Onaonidos mourns
"Apalover éravdotacw yéypade, Onoet yapobv-Tt Daidpav tHs Avtiomns émitiOepevns Kal TOV pet autis Apalovev ayvvopévov kal Kteivovtos
avtas “Hpardéous, mepipavas gouxe pvOm Kal TAdopate. tHS dé Avtiomns amobavovons éynpe
Paispayv, Eywv viov ‘Immodvtov €€ Avtidmrys, os 5é Tlivdapés dyot, Anuoddvra. ras 88 rep) tavrny kal Toy vioy auted dvatuyias, émel pundey avtt-64

THESEUS

solemn treaty is attested not only by the naming of the place adjoining the Theseum, which is called Horcomosium,! but also by the sacrifice which, in ancient times, was offered to the Amazons before the festival of Theseus. And the Megarians, too, show a place in their country where Amazons were buried, on the way from the market-place to the place called Khus,? where the Rhomboid? stands. And it is said, likewise, that others of them died near Chaeroneia, and were buried on the banks of the little stream which, in ancient times, as it seems, was called Thermodon, but nowadays, Haemon ; concerning which names I have written in my Life of Demosthenes.2 It appears also that not even Thessaly was traversed by the Amazons without opposition, for Amazonian graves are to this day shown in the vicinity of Scotussa and Cynoscephalae.

XXVIII. So much, then, is worthy of mention regarding the Amazons. For the “ Insurrection of the Amazons,” written by the author of the Theseid, telling how, when Theseus married Phaedra, Antiope and the Amazons who fought to avenge her attacked him, and were slain by Heracles, has every appear- ance of fable and invention. Theseus did, indeed, marry Phaedra, but this was after the death of Antiope, and he had a son by Antiope, Hippolytus, or, as Pindar says, Demophoén. As for the calami- ties which befell Phaedra and the son of Theseus by Antiope, since there is no conflict here between 1 From the oaths of ratification.

2 “Stream,” because water from the mountains above the city once flowed this way. Pausanias, i. xli. 2, The ‘* Rhomboid ” may have been an irregular mound.

3 Chapter xix. 4 In a passage not extant.

TINTEL TAPA TOV LOTOPLK@Y TOLS TPAYLKOLS, OUTWS
Exe Oeréov ws éxeivor TETOLNKAGLW ATraVTES.
XXIX. Eliot pévrot Adyou rept yapwov @ncéws Kal Erepot, thy oxnynv StaTrepevyortes, OTE apKXas evyvapovas ote evTUYEls TeheUTAS ExXOoVTES. Kal yap "Avako twa Tpottnviav dprdcar réyeTtat, Kal Liv amoxteivas nat Kepxvova cuvyyevécOar
Bia tais Ovyatpdow adtay ynyar 6é xa Tepi-Bovav thy Aiavtos pntépa cal DepéBorav adOis car “lorny rhv “Idixréous: nab did tov AlyAns Epwra THs Ilavorréws, domep elpnrar, Hv Apiad-yns amorenpey aitiavrar wn Kadyv yevérOar pnde Tpémrovoay: émi waor Sé tHhv ‘EXévns dprayny ToNeuwou pev euTrAnocas THv Artixny, avT@ 6é els
guyny Kal dreOpov terevtioar mepl av GdAlyov UoTEpoV EipnoeTat.
TloAA ap dé téTe Tois apiators GOAwv yevopévwv ‘Hpodwpos pév ovdevos olerar tov Onoéa petaaxelv, adda povois AawiBais Ths KevTavpopa-xias Erepor 8é Kal peta "Idaovos év Korxous yeveoOar nal Meredypm cuvetenciy tov Kdmpov:
Kal Osa TovTO Trapotpiav elvar thy “OvK dvev Oncéws’” adtov pévtos pndevos cuppdyov Sen-Oévta todrovs Kal Kadovs AOAous KaTepydoa-oat, kal tov “"AXXos obtos “HpardHs” Noyov én’ éxeivou xpatnoat. avuverpake 5é nat "Adpaor@ THY avaipesty Tov Uo TH Kadpeia tecdvror, 66

‘ ~

historians and tragic poets, we must suppose that they happened as represented by the poets uniformly.

XXIX. There are, however, other stories also about marriages of Theseus which were neither honourable in their beginnings nor fortunate in their endings, but these have not been dramatised. For instance, he is said to have carried off Anaxo, a maiden of Troezen, and after slaying Sinis and Cercyon to have ravished their daughters; also to have married Periboea, the mother of Aias, and Phereboea after- wards, and Iope, the daughter of Iphicles; and because of his passion for Aegle, the daughter of Panopeus, as I have already said,! he is accused of the desertion of Ariadne, which was not honourable nor even decent; and finally, his rape of Helen is said to have filled Attica with war, and to have brought about at last his banishment and death, of which things I shall speak a little later.

Of the many exploits performed in those days by the bravest men, Herodorus thinks that Theseus took part in none, except that he aided the Lapithae in their war with the Centaurs; but others say that he was not only with Jason at Colchis,? but helped Meleager to slay the Calydonian boar, and that hence arose the proverb “Not without Theseus’’; that he himself, however, without asking for any ally, per- formed many glorious exploits, and that the phrase ‘Lo! another Heracles” became current with refer- ence to him. He also aided Adrastus in recovering for burial the bodies of those who had fallen before the walls of the Cadmeia,? not by mastering the 1 Chapter xx. 1. 2 In quest of the yolden fleece.

5 The citadel of Thebes.
07 F 2 i
an

ovy ws Kvpiridns éroincey ev tpaymoia, uayy tov OnBaiwv xpatynoas, adda Teicas Kal oTe-odpevos: o0Tw@ yap oi TrEtoTOL Aéyovct: Pidoyopos 6& cal omrovdas Tepl vexpov dvatpécews yevéoBar mpwras éxeivas. Ste dé “Hpaxrjs wpd-Tos amédwxe vexpovs Tois Trodepioss, év Tois Tept “Hpaknréous yéypattar. tadal dé tev péev ToA-Nov év ‘EnXevOepais Seixvuvtar, Trav Sé Hryewoveov
mept ‘EXevciva, kal tovto Onoéws ’Adpadore@

Yapicapévov. Katapaptupovar 5é trav KvpeTridou ‘Ixetidwy ot Aloyvrov *Enevaivior, dv ols Kat TavTa Néywr o Onaevs TweTrointat.
XXX. Thy &€ wpos TeepiOovv gdirtav todtov TOV TpOTTOV aUT@ yevécOar Néyouot. SdEav elyev emi pan kali avdpeia peyiotny: Bovdopevos ovv
o IlespiOous éFeréyEar nat AaBety Sedtrecpay, nrdcato Bots éx Mapabavos aitod, cat mvGo-pevos Oloxey peta TOV OTAWY Exeivov OvK Epuryer, ann’ dvaatpepas aM VINO ED. as dé eldev dire-pos Tov €tepov Kal 70 KAaNXOS €Oavpace kab tH TOhmaY nyaaOn, paxns pev Eaxovto, TletpiOous
5€ mpotepos THV befcay mporeivas éxéXevoev avTov ryeverOau SuxcaatTny Tov Oncéa THS Bondacias:
éx@y yap upebew iv av opion Stxny exeivos” @ncevs 5é cai id Sixny ap jer avT@ Kal /T pou-KaNetTo pidov elvat Kal ovppayov’ éromnoayto dé ray pidiay évopKov.—
"Ex 6€ tovTou yapav o TlecpiBous Aniddpear, éden0n Tod Onoéws eAOeiv Kai THY Ywpav ioTo-68

THESEUS |

Thebans in battle, as Euripides has it in his tragedy,} but by persuading them to a truce; for so most writers say, and Philochorus adds that this was the first truce ever made for recovering the bodies of those slain in battle, although in the accounts of Heracles it is written that Heracles was the first to give back their dead to his enemies. And the graves of the greater part of those who fell before Thebes are shown at Eleutherae, and those of the com- manders near Eleusis, and this last burial was a favour which Theseus showed to Adrastus. The account of Euripides in his “Suppliants’’? is disproved by that of Aeschylus in his “ Eleusinians,” ? where Theseus is made to relate the matter as above.

XXX. The friendship of Peirithoiis and Theseus is said to have come about in the following manner. Theseus had a very great reputation for strength and bravery, and Peirithoiis was desirous of making test and proof of it. Accordingly, he drove Theseus’s cattle away from Marathon, and when he learned that their owner was pursuing him in arms, he did not fly, but turned back and met him. When, how- ever, each beheld the other with astonishment at his beauty and admiration of his daring, they refrained from battle, and Peirithoiis, stretching out his hand the first, bade Theseus himself be judge of his robbery, for he would willingly submit to any penalty which the other might assign. Then Theseus not only remitted his penalty, but invited him to be a friend and brother in arms; whereupon they ratified their friendship with oaths.

After this, when Peirithoiis was about to marry Deidameia, he asked Theseus to come to the wedding,

1 Suppliants, 653 ff. 7 Verses 1213 ff. 3 Not extant.

phoar Kal auyyevécOar trots Aamidats. étunyyave 5é xal tovs Kevtavpous xexdnxas emt 16 Setrvov.
ws O€ noéAyawvov DBpe Kal peOvovtes ovK arrei-YOVTO TOV yuUvaLKa@V, éeTpaTOVTO pos auuvay ot Aamidau: Kal tovs péev extevayv avTov, TOUS
dé modéum Kpatnoavtes botepov éFéBadov ex THs Yapas, ToD Oncéws adtois cuppayopévow Kal ouptrodepoovTos. “‘Hpddwpos S¢ tadta mpaxOjvat dnolv ovy oUTwS, GANA TOD TrONg“OU GUVETTWTOS 70n tov @ncéa BonOotvta tots AawiOais Twapa-yevéoOar, xal Tote mpa@tov dwer yvwpicat Tov ‘Hpaxnréa, trounodpevoy Epyov évruxeivy avT@ Tepl Tpayiva wemavpévm mrdvns Hon kal aOr\wvr-yevéoOar dé pera, TuLns Kal prroppos vvns Kal TOAA@Y erraivev apporépors THY évrevgiv. ov
BV GAG paddov av Tis Mpoaxor Tois TOANEKLS évtuxely autovs aAdndOLs (aoTopovot Kal THY punow ‘Hparre yevéoOat Onoéws ctrovddoavtos Kal Tov Tpo THS puncews KaBappov ws Seopévep
dua twas mpdkes aBovrAntovs.
XXXI. "Hén Sé revrnxovta Ern yeyoves, as now ‘EdAavixos, Erpake Ta tmepl thy ‘“Edévny, ov Kal’ wpav. SOev as 89 pwéytotov érravopBovpevol TOUTO TeV éeyKAnudTwv, eviot R€yovety ovK auToy dpirdcat tiv ‘Edévnv, added “Ida
kat Avyxéws dptacavtov trapaxatadnny Xa-Bovra tnypeiv cal px wpolecOas Tots Avocxovpois atrattovow: 4 vy Aia Tuvdapew rrapaddvtos 7°

and see the country, and become acquainted with the Lapithae. Now he had invited the Centaurs also to the wedding feast. And when these were flown with insolence and wine, and laid hands upon the women, the Lapithae took vengeance upon them. Some of them they slew upon the spot, the rest they after- wards overcame in war and expelled from the country, Theseus fighting with them at the banquet and in the war. Herodorus, howeyer, says that this was not how it happened, but that the war was already in progress when Theseus came to the aid of the Lapithae ; and that on his way thither he had his first sight of Heracles, having made it his business to seek him out at Trachis, where the hero was already resting from his wandering and labours; and he says the interview passed with mutual expressions of honour, friendliness, and generous praise. Notwith- standing, one might better side with those historians who say that the heroes had frequent interviews with one another, and that it was at the instigation of Theseus that Heracles was initiated into the mysteries at Eleusis, and purified before his initiation, when he requested it on account of sundry rash acts.

XXXI. Theseus was already fifty years old, accord- ing to Hellanicus, when he took part in the rape of Helen, who was not of marriageable age. Wherefore some writers, thinking to correct this heaviest accusation against him, say that he did not carry off Helen himself, but that when Idas and Lynceus had carried her off, he received her in charge and watched over her and would not surrender her to the Dioscuri! when they demanded her; or, if you will believe it, that her own father, Tyndareiis,

1 Castor and Pollux, her brothers.

avtov, poBnbévtos "Evapadopov tov 'Imrmoxdwr-Tos éTt vytriay ovcav Bialopevov tiv 'EXévny NaBeiv. ta Sé elxora Kal mreliatovs eyovta paptupas ToradTa éotwy.
"HrGov peév eis Lardprynv dudotepor Kat tiv

, > e lo) b] , > , 4
xopny év iep@ "Aptéutdos "Opbias yopevovcay
e 4 4 A \ 4 9 A
apracavtes Epuyov tov O€ TeupOévtwy em tH
Siwéwy od troppatépw Teyéas érraxodovOnodavrov, > O°f ' ' i. ,
év adeia yevouevoe cal dteXOovtes thv IleXorov-vpnoov étonoavto ouvOiKas, Tov pév NaAXOVTA KAnpw THV "EXévny Exew yuvaixa, cvpmpdtrecy
dé Oatép@ yduov Gdrov. ert tavtass 5é KANpov-pévwv tais oporoyiais EXaye Onaevs: Kal wapa-AaRov tHv Twaplévov oitTw ydpwov @pav &yovaay eis "'"Adidvas éxouice: Kal thy pntépa KatacTHoas
' > an is LS y , 5
pet avutis Adidve mapédwxer dvte diro, dta-Kedevoapevos guratrew Kai ANavOdvew Tovs ad-
> \ \ , \ e 4 > 7
hous. avtos dé [letpiO@ tyv brrovpyiav atrob.bous, eis "Hrretpov ovvarrednunoer ert tHv "Aidiavews Ouyatépa tod ModXooc ay Bactréws, d5 TH yuvarne
Depcedovny dvopa Oéuevos, Kopny 6é 7H Ovyarpi,
T@ 5é xuvl. KépBepov, éexédeve tovT@ SrapayecOar Tovs pywpévous THY Taida Kal NaBeiv TOY Kpatgavta. Tous pevtor trept Tov IlecpiOovv od pynoTipas Hew, AAN apracopévous truvOavopevos
ouvéraBe: Kal tov péev Tletpidovv ev0vs nddvice

51a Tod Kuvos, Tov b€ Oncéa xabeipEas épirartrev.
XXXII. "Ev 5 1@ ypovm tovtm MeveaOeds o Ilete® tod "Opvéws tov ‘EpexOéws mpatos, as gaci, avOpwrwv ériOéuevos TO Snpaywryety Kat 72

entrusted her to Theseus, for fear of Enarsphorus, the son of Hippocoén, who sought to take Helen by force while she was yet a child. But the most probable account, and that which has the most witnesses in its favour, is as follows.

Theseus and Peirithoiis went to Sparta in company, seized the girl as she was dancing in the temple of Artemis Orthia, and fled away with her. Their pursuers followed them no farther than Tegea, and so the two friends, when they had passed through Peloponnesus and were out of danger, made a com- pact with one another that the one on whom the lot fell should have Helen to wife, but should assist the other in getting another wife. With this mutual understanding they cast lots, and Theseus won, and taking the maiden, who was not yet ripe for marriage, conveyed her to Aphidnae. Here he made his mother a companion of the girl, and committed both to Aphidnus, a friend of his, with strict orders to guard them in complete secrecy. Then he himself, to return the service of Peirithoiis, journeyed with him to Epirus, in quest of the daughter of Aidoneus the king of the Molossians. This man called his wife Phersephone, his daughter Cora, and his dog Cerberus, with which beast he ordered that all suitors of his daughter should fight, promising her to him that should overcome it. However, when he learned that Peirithotis and his friend were come not to woo, but to steal away his daughter, he seized them both. Peirithoiis he put out of the way at once by means of the dog, but Theseus he kept in close confinement.

XXXII. Meanwhile Menestheus, the son of Peteos, grandson of Orneus, and great-grandson of Erech- theus, the first of men, as they say, to affect popularity

mpos Yapiy ByAw StaréyerOar, tos te Svvarovs
cuvictn Kal mapwtuve, waddat Bapuvopévous Tov Oncéa cal vouifovtas dpynv cal Bacireiay adnpnuévov éxdotov tay cata Sipov evrratpioay, eis év dotu ovvetpEavta TravtTas UIrNnKoos xpncbat Kat SovrAors, Tovs Te TOAAOUS SueTdpatTe Kal SéBardev, Ws Gvap érXeVOEpias opavTas, py Sé atreatepnuévous tatpiowv Kat iepav, 6tTas avtTl ToNN@Y kal ayabav cal yvnoiwv Bactréwv mpos &va Se-orotny érnduv cal Edvoy amoBNéTwot. TavTa

5¢ avtov mpayuarevopévov peyadny pomny 0 T0-AEM“OS THO vewTEpiau@ TpoaéOynxe, TOV Tuvdapidav 9 , e \ C4 \ e A 4 éreNOovtwv: ot dé Kal drws haclv bro TovTOU areca Oévras éNGeiv.
To peév ody mp@tov ovbdéev 7SixouY, ANN amrynToUY

Q ’ , “y t A 9 ”

Thy aderXonv. amroxpwapévwy S€ TaV ev aoTeEL pynte Exew pte yivwoKey Gtrov KaTanéNeLTTTAL, mpos TOAELoY ETrpdtrovTo. ppater dé avtois 'Axd-Snpuos 7oOnwévos 6 57 tive TpOT@ THY ev ’Adidvacs tA 9 A (nd 9 l4 “A A Kpinpiv autns. Oey exeivm te tial Carte Tapa tav Tuvdapioav éyévovto, cal trodAdAdKs DaTeEpov eis tTHy "Artixny éuBarovtes Aaxedaipoviot Kat TATA OM0d THY KwpaV Té“voTEs, THS Axadnpelas 9 , A N b) VA € 4
atreiyovto 61a Tov "Axddnuov. o 6é@ Aixaiapyos
"Exedyjuou! dynol cat MapdOov cvotpatevedytwv 1 *"Exedquou with Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker, after Xylander : ’Exé€uov.
74

THESEUS

and ingratiate himself with the multitude, stirred up and embittered the chief men in Athens. These had long been hostile to Theseus, and thought that he had robbed each one of the country nobles of his royal office,! and then shut them all up in a single city, where he treated them as subjects and slaves. The common people also he threw into commotion by his reproaches. They thought they had a vision of liberty, he said, but in reality they had been robbed of their native homes and religions in order that, in the place of many good kings of their own blood, they might look obediently to one master who was an immigrant and an alien. While he was thus busying himself, the Tyndaridae* came up against the city, and the war greatly furthered his seditious schemes ; indeed, some writers say outright that he persuaded the invaders to come.

At first, then, they did no harm, but simply demanded back their sister. When, however, the people of the city replied that they neither had the girl nor knew where she had been left, they resorted to war. But Academus, who had learned in some way or other of her concealment at Aphidnae, told them about it. For this reason he was honoured during his life by the Tyndaridae, and often after- wards when the Lacedaemonians invaded Attica and laid waste all the country round about, they spared the Academy,’? for the sake of Academus. But Dicaearchus says that Echedemus and Marathus of .

1 Cf. chapter xxiv. 1-3.

2 Or Dioscuri, Castor and Pollux.

3 A shady precinct near the river Cephissus, about a mile N.W. of Athens. Here Plato and his disciples taught. See Plutarch’s Cimon, xiii. 8.

tore Tois Tuvdapidass é€& "Apxadias, ad od peév "Eyednulay mpocayopevOqvar thy viv *Axadn-pecav, ad’ ov 5é Mapadava tov Sipov, émidovtos €aUTOVY Exovciws KaTa TL NoyLtoy shayidcacbat Tpo THS TapaTateus.
"Edfovres ody eri tas “Adidvas cal payy Kpatnoavtes é€eihov TO Ywpiov. évTad0d dact kal "AXuKoy wecely Tov XKeipwvos viov, TUaTpa-Tevopevov TOTE TOIs AtocKovpois, ad’ ov Kal TOTrOY THs Meyapixns “AXvKov xaretobar Tov c@partos évraghévros. “Hpéas 8 brd Onoéws avrod rept "Adidvas aio0aveiy tov “AXuKoy iotopnKe, Kal paptupta tauvtl ta émn Tapéxetar wept Tov "AXUKou-) Tov év evpyxopp Trot Adidvy papvapevov Onoerds “EXévns Even’ jvKdpoto KTELVED.

Od pny eKxos adtod Oncéws TapovTos GA@vat TH Te pntépa Kal tas “Adidvas. .
XXXII. "Eyopuévwv 8 ody trav ’Adidvaev cat
” b v 4 +4 \ lol e
Tov év aoret dSedtoTwr, éTrecce Tov ShHpov o Meve-abevs SéyecOar tH Tore Kal dirodpoveicbat
\ VA e J na: , e€ 4
tous Tuvdapidas, as wove Onoet Bias brdpEavete TodemouvTas, Tov b€ GAAwWY eEvEpyéTas GVTAS avOpatrwyv Kai cwTipas. éeuaptipe: S¢ adT@ Kal Ta Tap éxeivwr ovdev yap nkiwcav andavtwv Kpatovvres GAN 7H punOjvat, pndev Hrrov ‘Hpa-KNéoUS TH TOAEL TpooHKOVTES. Kal TOUTO Ov.

Arcadia were in the army of the T'yndaridae at that time, from the first of whom the present Academy was named Echedemia, and from the other, the township of Marathon, since in accordance with some oracle he voluntarily gave himself to be sacrificed in front of the line of battle.
To Aphidnae, then, they came, won a pitched battle, and stormed the town. Here they say that among others Alycus, the son of Sciron, who was at that time in the army of the Dioscuri, was slain, and that from him a place in Megara where he was buried is called Alycus. But Hereas writes that Alyeus was slain at Aphidnae by Theseus himself, and cites in proof these verses about Alycus :—
"whom once in the plain of Aphidnae,
Where he was fighting, Theseus, ravisher of fair-haired Helen, Slew."
However, it is not likely that Theseus himself was present when both his mother and Aphidnae were captured.
XXXIII. At any rate, Aphidnae was taken and the city of Athens was full of fear, but Menestheus persuaded its people to receive the Tyndaridae into the city and show them all manner of kindness, since they were waging war upon Theseus alone, who had committed the first act of violence, but were benefactors and saviours of the rest of mankind. And their behaviour confirmed his assurances, for although they were masters of everything, they demanded only an initiation into the mysteries, since they were no less closely allied to the city than Heracles. This privilege was accordingly granted

e aA b a b) / / a"
umnpEev avtois, "Adidvov trouncapévou taidas, os TIvdtos "Hpaxréa: cal tipas icoBéovs éoxor,
"Avaxes mpooayopevOevtes, 7 Sta Tas yevouévas avoxas } dua tHv éripérerav Kal xndenoviay Tod pndéva xaxas Tadeivy otpatias tocavtTns évdov ovonS' avaKkas yap Eéxew Tos émipedopévous 7} guAaTrovtas oTtody: Kal Tovs PRactreis iows pA \ le) a 3 e
avaxtas 61a TovTO KadovaL. cial dé ot A€yorTeEs
d:a thy Tov dotépwy éemipdverav "Avaxas dvopd-

Cecbat 7O yap avw tovs ’AtTiKO’s aveKas dvo-pate, cal avéxabev 76 avolev.
XXXIV. Ai@pav &é trav Onoéws pnrépa yevopévny aixpdrdwtov atraxOjvat Néyouvaw eis Naxe-Saipova, xaxeiOev eis Tpoiay pera “Enrévys: cat a ¢f ig ae , ,
paptupety “Ounpov, ErecOar TH ‘EXévn hdpevov: AlOpnv IlttOjos Ouyatpa KrXupévnv te Bowmiy.

Oi dé xai tovto To ros StaBddAXover Kal THY mept Movviyou pv0oroyiav, bv éx Anuopavtos Aaodixns xpipa texovons év “Trip auverOpéyrar thv AlOpay Aéyovow. idiov 5é Twa Kal Tapyr-Aaypévov SrAwWS RAoyor o “Iotpos ev TH TpLoKat-Sexatn tav "Artixav avadéper trept AiOpas, as éviwv Aeyovtwy “AréEavdpov péev tov Idpuw év Beccaria! ir’ ’AxirAXrws Kal Tlatpoxrov payn KpaTnOnvar mapa tov Xmepxetov, “Extopa sé tnv Tpotfnviov mod dAaBovta Saprdcat Kal
1 roy Mdpw év @ecoadrla, with Bekker: roy év @eaaarlg Tidpuv.
78

THESEUS

them, after they had been adopted by Aphidnus, as Pylius had adopted Heracles. They also obtained honours like those paid to gods, and were addressed as “ Anakes,” either on account of their stopping hostilities, or because of their diligent care that no one should be injured, although there was such a large army within the city; for the phrase “anakos echein” is used of such as care for, or guard anything, and perhaps it is for this reason that kings are called “ Anaktes.” ' There are also those who say that the Tyndaridae were called “ Anakes”’ because of the appearance of their twin stars in the heavens, since the Athenians use “anekas”’ and “ anekathen ” for “ano” and “anothen,” signifying above or on high.
XXXIV. They say that Aethra, the mother or Theseus, who was taken captive at Aphidnae, was carried away to Lacedaemon, and from thence to Troy with Helen, and that Homer! bears witness to this when he mentions as followers of Helen :—

“ Aethra of Pittheus born, and Clymene large-eyed and lovely.”
But some reject this verse of Homer's, as well as the legend of Munychus, who was born in secret to Laodice from Demophoon, and whom Aethra helped to rear in Ilium. But a very peculiar and wholly divergent story about Aethra is given by Ister in the thirteenth book of his “Attic History.”” Some write, he says, that Alexander (Paris) was overcome in battle by Achilles and Patroclus in Thessaly, along the banks of the Spercheius, but that Hector took and plundered the city of Troezen, and carried 1 Thad, iii. 144.

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

anv Ai@pay dmadyew éxet KatarepOeioav. adrAa TOUTO wey EvEL TTONANY Adorytay.
XXXV. ’Aidwvéws 5€ tod Modroccod Eevt-Covros ‘Hpaxréa xal trav rept tov Onoéa Kal TlecpiOovv cata tiynv prnoOévtos, & Te Tpd-Eovres HAOov Kal & dwpabéytes Erabov, Bapéws nveyxev 0 ‘Hpaxndijs, tod pev atrodwdoTos aboews, tov dé amoAAvpévov. xal trepi TleepiOov peév
ovdév @eto Toijoey mA€ov éyKada@v, Tov Sé @noéa wapytetto Kal yadpw nkiov tavtny ait@
SoOjvar. cuyxywpnocavtos 5é Tod ‘Aidwréws, Av-Oels 6 Onoevs évravnrdOe pev eis tas "AOnvas, ovdémw Tavrdtact tav ditov avTod Kexpatnpévwv, Kal doa oTHpye Teu“évn MpoTEpoy avT@ THs Toews eFeXovons amavta Kabsépwoe TO ‘Hpaxnrel al rpoonydpevoev avtl Onceiwr ‘Hpd-KNELA, TANY Tecoadpwov, ws Piroyopos toTopyKev. avOis! S€ BovAdcpevos ws mpotepov apyew Kal xaOnyetaOat Tov TroALTEvpaTos Els oTdoELS évEmece Kal tapaxyds, ods peév atrédure pcovvTas avrov etpioxwv To pn poBeto0a TH picety TpocetAngdotas, év 5€ Te SHuw woru To depOap-pévov opav Kal OeparrevesBat Bovropevov aytt TOU TOLELY OLWITTH TO TpOTTATTOMEVOY. EMLYELP@V owv BialecOar xatednuaywyeitro nal Kateotaoateto. Kal TéXos atroyvous Ta TPaypaTa TOUS pev traidas eis EvBoray vre&éreure mpos 'EXe-dynvopa tov Xadrxwdovtos, avtos bé Tapynrrot kata tav "AOnvaiwy apas Oéuevos, ov viv éort
7) Kadovpevov Aparnptoy, eis YKipov éFérdevcev, 1 ads Coraés, after Reiske : ed@vs (at once).

away Aethra, who had been left there. This, however, is very doubtful.

XXXV. Now while Heracles was the guest of Aidoneus the Molossian, the king incidentally spoke of the adventure of Theseus and Peirithoiis, telling what they had come there to do, and what they had suffered when they were found out. Heracles was greatly distressed by the inglorious death of the one, and by the impending death of the other. As for Peirithoiis, he thought it useless to complain, but he begged for the release of Theseus, and demanded that this favour be granted him. Aidoneus yielded to his prayers, Theseus was set free, and returned to Athens, where his friends were not yet altogether overwhelmed. All the sacred precincts which the city had previously set apart for himself, he now dedicated to Heracles, and called them Heracleia instead of Theseia, four only excepted, as Philo- chorus writes. But when he desired to rule again as before, and to direct the state, he became involved in factions and disturbances; he found that those who hated him when he went away, had now added to their hatred contempt, and he saw that a large part of the people were corrupted, and wished to be cajoled into service instead of doing silently what they were told to do. Attempting, then, to force his wishes upon them, he was overpowered by demagogues and factions, and finally, despairing of his cause, he sent his children away privately into Euboea, to Elephenor, the son of Chalcodon, while he himself, after invoking curses upon the Athenians at Gargettus, where there is to this day the place called Araterion,! sailed away to the island of Scyros,

1 That is, the place of prayer, or cursing.

avons aUT@ mpos Tovs éexel dirias, ws weTO, Kal Yopiov év TH vnom tatpwwv. éBacireve Se Avxoundys tote TOY LKupiwy. mpos TovTov ody 3 4 bd , \ 2 \ bd A e apixopevos eCnret Tovs aypous atovaBely, ws avToO: xatounowv: evior 5€ hace trapaxanely avtov BonOety emi tovs "AOnvatous. o dé Avxo- unons, elte Seicas thv S0€av rob avdpes, elte TO MeveoOet yapifopuevos, ert ta axpa Ths yopas dvayaywv avtov, ws éxetOev érideiEwv tous aypovs, @ae KaTa Tov TeTpav Kal bvépOecper. ” 9 b » @ A ra , \ eviot 8 ad éavtod mrecely hace cparévta, petra Setmrvov, Motrep ciwber, wepitatovvTa. Kal Tapav- tixa pev ovdels Exyev avtod Aoyov ovdéva TEOvN- KOTOS, GAAa tav pev *AOnvaiwv éBacirevoe MevecOevs, of S€ maides iStwrevovres 'EXepyvopu / > 9 a \ 4

cuveotpatevoay eis “Idtov. éxet d€ MeverBéws amobavovtos émaveNOovtes avrot thy Bactrelay avexoicavto. xpovows 8 dorepov ‘AOnvaious Gra Te Tapéotycey as Aowa Tinav Oncéa, nal tav év Mapadar mpos Mydous payopévwn okay
b) 5] 4 , 4 J 4 A \ ovK oriryor Pdopa Oncéws ev dros Kabopav po
autTa@v él tovs BapBdpous depopevoy.
XXXVI. Mera d€ ta Mydixd Daidwvos dp-YovTos pavTevouevots Tots "AOnvaiots avetrev % IIvia ta Onoéws avaraBelv dota nal Oepévous
? / ? e@ a 4
évtiwws trap avtots guddtrew. hv dé cal ra-Beiv aropia Kal yvavar tov tdpov amkia nat yaneTroTnTe Tay évotcovvTwy AodoTwy. ov pny 82

17

THESEUS

where the people were friendly to him, as he thought, and where he had ancestral estates. Now Lycomedes was at that time king of Scyros. To him therefore Theseus applied with the request that his lands should be restored to him, since he was going to dwell there, though some say that he asked his aid against the Athenians. But Lycomedes, either because he feared a man of such fame, or as a favour to Menestheus, led him up to the high places of the land, on pretence of showing him from thence his lands, threw him down the cliffs, and killed him. Some, however, say that he slipped and fell down of himself while walking there after supper, as was his custom. At the time no one made any account of his death, but Menestheus reigned as king at Athens, while the sons of Theseus, as men of private station, accompanied Elephenor on the expedition to Ilium ; but after Menestheus died there, they came back by themselves and: recovered their kingdom. In after times, however, the Athenians were moved to honour Theseus as a demigod, especially by the fact that many of those who fought at Marathon against the Medes thought they saw an apparition of

Theseus in arms rushing on in front of them against the Barbarians.!

XXXVI. And after the Median wars, in the archonship of Phaedo,? when the Athenians were consulting the oracle at Delphi, they were told by the Pythian priestess to take up the bones of Theseus, give them honourable burial at Athens, and guard them there. But it was difficult to find the grave and take up the bones, because of the inhospitable and savage nature of the Dolopians,

1 Cf. Pausanias, i. 15, 4. 2 476-475 B.c.

aia Kipov éXov Hv vicov, ws év Tois sept éxeivou yéypatrrat, Kal piroripovmevos éEavev-pety, adeToo tTiva Torov Bovvoedy KoTToVTOS, OS pact, TH oTopate nal S:acrérXrovtos Tois dbvvEe Jela tTivt TUX TUpdpovncas avéoxarper. eEppéOn 5é Onn Te peyaddov cepaTos aixpn Te WapaKetpérn yarn cal Eldos. xopcbévrwv && rovTwv e_sN , ? A / € e vo Kipwvos émt tis tpinpovs, jnoOévtes of
"AOnvaioe woumais te Aapmrpais edéEavto Kal Ovolas Gorep avtov érravepyopevoy eis TO dorTu.
Kal xetrar pev ev péon TH Woret Tapa TO vov yupvdotov, gots Sé hvkipov oixéraus Kal tact
Tols Tamewwotépars Kal Sedtoce KpEiTTOVaS, WS KAL
Tov @ncéws tmpootarixod Tivos xa BonOnrixod
, 4 ,
yevopevov Kal mpocdexouevou pirav0parras Tas Tav tatewotépwy Sejoes. Ouvciay Sé Trorovow avT@ Thy peyiatny oydon Ilvaveyriavos, ev 7
peta Tov niOéwv ex Kpnrns éravariev. od pny
GAA Kal Talis Arras Gydoats Tim@ow avTor, 7
Sid 70 rp@tov ex Tporkivos aducéoOar rH oySon nA @¢ A e e 4 4 e
tod 'ExatopBaiavos, ws totopnxe Asodwpos o mepinyntns,) voultovres éTrépov padgXov éxeivep mpoonrey tov apiOuoyv todtov éx Tlocedavos yeyovévat reyopevm. Kal yap Togeadova sais who then inhabited the island. However, Cimon took the island, as I have related in his Life,! and being ambitious to discover the grave of Theseus, saw an eagle in a place where there was the semblance of a mound, pecking, as they say, and tearing up the ground with his talons. By some divine ordering he comprehended the meaning of this and dug there, and there was found a coffin of a man of extraordinary size, a bronze spear lying by its side, and a sword. When these relics were brought home on his trireme by Cimon, the Athenians were delighted, and received them with splendid processions and sacrifices, as though Theseus himself were returning to his city. And now he lies buried in the heart of the city, near the present gymnasium,' and his tomb is a sanctuary and place of refuge for runaway slaves and all men of low estate who are afraid of men in power, since Theseus was a champion and helper of such during his life, and graciously received the supplications of the poor and needy. The chief sacrifice which the -Athenians make in his honour comes on the eighth day of the month Pyanepsion, the day on which he came back from Crete with the youths. But they honour him also on the eighth day of the other months, either because he came to Athens in' the first place, from Troezen, on the eighth day of the month Hecatombaeon, as Diodorus the Topographer states, or because they consider this number more appropriate for him than any other since he was said to be a son of Poseidon.® For they pay honours to Poseidon on the eighth day

1 Chapter viii. 3-6.
2 The nasium of Ptolemy. Pausanias, i. 17, 2.
3 Cf. chapter vi. 1.

dydoats TLL@GLY. 1 yap Oydoas KUBos am' apriouv TpOTOS ovoa Kal Tov Mpwrov TeTpaywvou S-wracia, TO wovepov Kal duoKivytoy oixetov exer
THs ToD Oeov Suvapews, by dodareov Kal yatjyoyov
™ pocovop.dtopev. |

of every month. The number eight, as the first cube of an even number and the double of the first square, fitly represents the steadfast and immovable power of this god, to whom we give the epithets of Securer and Earth-stayer.

~ ROMULUS

POMYAO2Z

I To péya tH "Popuns Gvopa. Kat bof dua mayroy avOpamwy KEeXwpnos ad’ dbrov nat oe nv airiay Th TWoNet yeyovev, ovx @pworoynras Tapa Tos cuyypahetory, arr’ Ot pev Heracyous

éml wretoTa THs oixouperns mravnbévras av-Oporreyv TE Thelo TOY KpaTnoavras, aurode Kar-OuKfoat, Kal dia THY ev tois SrrA0Ls pouny obTas ovoudoat THV moNW, ot O€ Tpoias aNt-TKOMEVNS Stapuyovrtas évious Kal mAotwy émitvxovras a) TVEUHAT OV Th Tuppnvig poo trecety epopévous, Kal wept Tov OvpBpu TOTa pov opps cacOar' tais b€ yuvarkiv aura dmropoupévats
non Kal ducavacxerovoars Tpos THV Oddaccay vroGéc Oat piay, u) Kat ryever mpovyew Kat ppovety eddxee partota, Pon Gvoua, KaTamphoar ta whola’ mpaxdevros 5é rovTou T p@Tov pev aya-VaKTELV TOUS avépas, éqrevta be’ avdryeny iSpuv-Oévras epi To HadAdvrvov, @s oMYy@ Xpovep
Kpelt Tov édmidos é emparror, arabs TE TreLpwmevoe @pas Kal Sexouévor aUTOUS TOV mpocoiKay, anAnv TE TEND amrovewely 7 ‘Popn kal Thy mony an avrns, os aitias, T poo aryopevewy, e& éxeivou Te Trapapévery Aéyouce TO TOUS OUYYEVEIS go

1

ROMULUS

1. From whom, and for what reason the great name of Rome, so famous among mankind, was given to that city, writers are not agreed. Some say that the Pelasgians, after wandering over most of the habitable earth and subduing most of mankind, settled down on that site, and that from their strength in war they called their city Rome. Others say that at the taking of Troy some of its people escaped, found sailing vessels, were driven by storms upon the coast of Tuscany, and came to anchor in the river Tiber; that here, while their women were perplexed and distressed at thought of the sea, one of them, who was held to be of superior . birth and the greatest understanding, and whose name was Roma, proposed that they should burn the ships! ; that when this was done, the men were angry at first, but afterwards, when they had settled of necessity on the Palatine, seeing themselves ina little while more prosperous than they had hoped, since they found the country good and the neigh- bours made them welcome, they paid high honours to Roma, and actually named the city after her, since she had been the occasion of their founding it. And from that time on, they say, it has been

1 Cf. Aeneid, v. 604-699.

Tas yuvaixas Kal oixetovs avdpas acmalecOat
Tots oTopact Kat yap éxelvas, Ste Ta Troia Katémpnoav, ovtws aomdtecOar Kat dirodpoveioOat tous avdpas, Seopévas avTav Kal wapac-Toupévas Ti opyny.
II. “AAAo. 5é “Pépny, “Itadrod Ouyarépa xal
Aevxapias, ot 5é, Tnrépov tov ‘Hpaxndéous, Awveia yapnbeioav, ot & ’Acxaviov tod Aiveiov, Aéyovot Tovvoua Oécba TH TOAE ot Sé “Po-pavov, Odvacéws traida nal Kipens, oixicas rip moAw* ot 5€ ‘Papmov éx Tpotas oro Acopjdous amocTanévra TOV "Hyaliovos, ot 6eé ‘Papcv Aartivey TUpavvor, éxBadovra ‘Tuppnvous TOUS
elg Avdiav péev é« @errarias, éx 6é€ Avébias eis ItaXiav mapayevopévovs. ov pnv ovd oi ‘Po-TadLay Tapayevouevous. ov pn w pudov T@ StxatoTaT@m TOY AOyov arropaivovres em @vULOV THS TrodEWs opohoyotcr epi Tov yévous avTov. ot pev yap Aivetou Kal AckiGéas THS PopRavros viov ovTa VAT LOV els ‘Iradlav comoOnvar, Kab TOV adehpov avtou ‘Pamov: év
dé T@ TOTAL TANMBUpAYTE TOV Geo oxapov
SiapGapevrer, éy @ 5¢é Hoav ot maives els pa AaKnVv atroxAwOévTos GxOnv aTpéua, owbevtas*
anpoadoxntws,” ovopacbfvar ‘Pepnv. ot 5é ‘Popny Ouyatépa tis Tpwados éxelvns Aative
7 Tndeudyxou yapnGeioar Texety Tov ‘PwuvrAor ot de Aiwuday THY Aiveiou xal NaBwias’ "Apet auyyevopevny ot 5¢ pv0@dn TavTdrace Teph Tis 1 gw0evras MSS., Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker: caévros.
2 axpocdoxhrws after this word, Bekker assumes a in the text,
Q2

ROMULUS

customary for the women to salute their kinsmen and husbands with a kiss; for those women, after they ‘had burned the ships, made use of such tender salutations as they supplicated their husbands and sought to appease their wrath.
II. Others again say that the Roma who gave her name to the city was a daughter of Italus and Leucaria, or, in another account, of Telephus the son of Heracles; and that she was married to Aeneas, or, in another version, to Ascanius the son of Aeneas. Some tell us that it was Romanus, a son of Odysseus and Circe, who colonized the city ; others that it was Romus, who was sent from Troy by Diomedes the son of Emathion ; and others still that it was Romis, tyrant of the Latins, after he had driven out the Tuscans, wha passed from Thessaly into Lydia, and from Lydia into Italy. Moreover, even those writers who declare, in accordance with the most authentic tradition, that it was Romulus who gave his name to the city, do not agree about his lineage. For some say that he was a son of Aeneas and Dexithea the daughter of Phorbas, and was brought to Italy in his infancy, along with his brother Romus ; that the rest of the vessels were destroyed in the swollen river, but the one in which the boys were was gently directed to a grassy bank, where they were unex- pectedly saved, and the place was called Roma from them. Others say it was Roma, a daughter of the Trojan woman I have mentioned, who was wedded to Latinus the son of Telemachus and bore him Romulus; others that Aemilia, the daughter of Aeneas and Lavinia, bore him to Mars; and others still rehearse what is altogether fabulous concerning his

yevéoews dueEiacr. Tapyetio yap *AdBavev RBacikel Trapavoywtatm Kal porate ddcpa Sarwoviov olxor yevécBar- parrdv yap ex THs éotias dvacyxeiv Kal Siapéver eri words Huépas:
elvat dé TnOvos ev Tuppnvia ypnornpiov, ad od KopicOjvar Te Tapyetip ypnopov vote ouppitas TO Paopatt trapOévov: ececOar yap éf& avths tmaida Krevotatoy apeth Kal Toyn Kal poun Stadépovta. ppdoavtos odv Td pdvTevpa tod Tapyetiou pug tav Ovyatépwv Kal ouyyevésOar T@ Parr@ tpocrdEavros, abtiv pev amraki@oat, Oepdrravay &é eloréprar, ov &e Tapxérvov, as éyvw, yadeTas dépovta cvrAXNaBety
pev audortépas él Oavaro, tHv 8 'Eoriay iSevra Kata Tovs Umvovs arayopevovoay avT@ Tov govov, iorovy twa mapeyyvica, tals Kopacs ipaive dedeuévais, as Gray éEugdyvwot, Tore SoOnoouévas mpos yapmov. éxeivas pev ovv 8:
nuepas upatvew, érépas dé wietwp tod Tap-NETLOU KENEVOVTOS avanvELY TOV iotov. ek Se TOD parrod ths Oeparraividos Texovons bidupua, Sodvai rut Tepatiw tov Tapyétiov averely xerdevoarvra.
Tov 6€ Oetvat pépovta tod motapod mdnolov elra AvKatvay pev emiportav pactov évdidobcap, dpviOas b€ mavrodarols Wopicnata Kxopilovras évTiévar tois Bpépeoty, dypu od Bovkorov iSovra cal Oavpdoavta ToApijoat mpoceNeiy xa dve-AéoGar Ta radia. toadtns 8 THs cwrnplas
avrois yevoperns, éxtpadévras ériBécba rH Tapxetip xal xpatijcat. raira pev otv IIpo- 19

origin. For instance, they say that Tarchetius, king of the Albans, who was most lawless and cruel, was visited with a strange phantom in his house, namely, a phallus rising out of the hearth and remain- ing there many days. Now there was an oracle of Tethys in Tuscany, from which there was brought to Tarchetius a response that a virgin must have inter- course with this phantom, and she should bear a son most illustrious for his valour, and of surpassing good fortune and strength. Tarchetius, accordingly, told the prophecy to one of his daughters, and bade her consort with the phantom ; but she disdained to do so, and sent a handmaid in to it. When Tarchetius learned of this, he was wroth, and seized both the © maidens, purposing to put them to death. But the goddess Hestia appeared to him in his sleep and for- bade him the murder. He therefore imposed upon the maidens the weaving of a certain web in their imprisonment, assuring them that when they had finished the weaving of it, they should then be given in marriage. By day, then, these maidens wove, but by night other maidens, at the command. of Tarche- tius, unravelled their web. And when the handmaid became the mother of twin children by the phantom, Tarchetius gave them to a certain Teratius with orders to destroy them. This man, however, carried them to the river-side and laid them down there. Then a she-wolf visited the babes and gave them suck, while all sorts of birds brought morsels of food and put them into their mouths, until a cow-herd spied them, conquered his amazement, ventured to come to them, and took the children home with him. Thus they were saved, and when they were grown up, they set upon Tarchetius and overcame him.

pabiwy tis iotoplay ‘Itadixny ovuvretaypévos eLpnKe.
TIT. Tod b€ ariotev &yovtos Noyou padtota Kal
TAELTTOUS PLAPTUPAS TA MEV KUPLOTATA TPOTOS Eis Tovs "EdAnvas éFédwxe AroxrAns LemrapyOu0s, & kal DPdBros o Tlixtwp év trois wrelorots éarnKo-Ud / \ 7 4
NovOnxe. yeyovacr S€ Kal tept TovTwy Erepat
Stadopais tuir@ Oé eimeiv ToLovTOs €oTt. TOVaT Aivetov yeyovotwy év “AXBn Bacidéwy eis adergovs dvo, Nountopa nal ’Apovruov, 7 Siadoyy
A ’ / \ , \ 4 4
Kadyjxev. "Apovdriov 6é veipavros ta mavta dixa,
" a QK / \ / \ 3 /
7H 6€ Baciheia Ta Ypnwata Kal Tov é« Tpoias
Komobevta xpuoov avtiOévtos, efreTo THY Bact-Aetav o Nopuntwp. éxov ovv o ’ApovrXos Ta
Xpyyata Kat mréov am’ avtav Suvdpevos Tod Nountopos, thy te Bactrciav adeireto padias, kal hoBovpevos éx THS Ovyatpos avTod yevérOar matdas tépecav THS “Eotias améderEev, dryapov Kat mapBévov del Biwcouevnv. tavtny of pev Trap, ot de “Péay, of 58 YrAoviav dvopdlover. gpwparar

dé er’ ov ToAVY Ypovoyv Kvodca Tapa TOV Kabeorata Tals ‘Kotiaot vopov. Kal TO pev aviKerta N un > A @e- lal v4 s b) AY pn wabeiy avtny 9 ToD Bacidéws Ovyarnp "AvOw mapyTnoato, Senfeica Tov matpos: etpxOn dé cat lartav elyev aveTripixTov, OTwS un AGGoOL TexovVTA

\ ? 4 +4 \ vA A e A

tov Apovdov. étexe 5é dv0 taidas vmepdueis
A e peyeOes Kal KaddrAXa. Sv 6 Kat waGdXov o ’ApovALos

poBnbeis éxéXevoev avtovs vmrnpétny AaRovta CA “A wv Us >
pipar. tovtov émot DavotvrAov ovopdlecbas

96

ROMULUS

At any rate, this is what a certain Promathion says, who compiled a history of Italy.
III. But the story which has the widest credence and the greatest number of vouchers was _ first published among the Greeks, in its principal details, by Diocles of Peparethus, and Fabius Pictor follows him in most points. Here again there are variations in the story, but its general outline is as follows. The descendants of Aeneas reigned as kings in Alba, and the succession devolved at length upon two brothers, Numitor and Amulius.!- Amulius divided the whole inheritance into two parts, setting the treasures and the gold which had been brought from Troy over against the kingdom, and Numitor chose the kingdom. Amulius, then, in possession of the treasure, and made more powerful by it than Nu- mitor, easily took the kingdom away from his brother, and fearing lest that brother’s daughter should have children, made her a priestess of Vesta, bound to live unwedded and a virgin all her days. Her name is variously given as Ilia, or Rhea, or Silvia. Not long after this, she was discovered to be with child, contrary to the established law for the Vestals.? She did not, however, suffer the capital punishment which was her due, because the king’s daughter, Antho, interceded successfully in her behalf, but she was kept in solitary confinement, that she might not be delivered without the knowledge of Amulius. Delivered she was of two boys, and their size and beauty were more than human. Wherefore Amulius was all the more afraid, and ordered a servant to take the boys and cast them away. This servant’s name was Faustulus, according to some, but others

1 Cf. Livy, i. 3. 2 Of. Livy, i. 4, 1-5.

Néyovoty, of 8 ov TOUTOV, GAXA TOV avEdOpEVOV.
évOépevos odv eis oxadny Ta Bpédn, xatéBn pév eri TOV ToTapoV ws pirrwr, idwy Sé KaTLOVTA TOAA@ pevpats cal tpayvvopevov Ederce mpocenOelv, eyyus 5€ THs GyOns Katadels amrndddoceTo. TOU Sé ToTapov KaTakAUlovros 7 TANLMUpA THY oKAadNY itroAaBovca Kal peTewpicaca Tpaws KaTHVEYKEY
eis yopiov émiexas padOaxov, 6 viv Kepparov Kadovot, Tara d€ Teppavov, as Eotxev, bre Kat
TOUS abEeAHous yeppavovs ovoudlovarv.
IV. "Hv &€ waAnoiov épiveds, bv ‘Pwptvarov éxdrour, 7 da Tov ‘PwpvAoy, ws of ToAXNOl vopi-Cova, 7 1a TO TA pnpvKopeva Tov Openpator éxel Sia tHhv oxrdv éevdsdlerv,) pdrtota bia Tov Tov Bpepav Onracpov, 6te thy Te Ondyv podpav
avopatov oi Tadatot, Kai Oeov Tia THs éextpopis TOV VyTiOV emipeeio Gar Soxovaav ovoudtovat ‘Poupediay, kal Ovovow adth vnddda, cal yara
Tois tepois ema mévdovaw. évtatOa 8 ois
Bpédec KELpEVOLS THY Te AUKaLvaY iaTopobat Onraloperny, Kal Spvoxoddnrny Tia mapeivat ouvextpepovTa Kat purdrrovta. vouiferar &
"A pews ¢ tepa ta ta tov dé Spvoxohdrrny al StadepovTws Aativot oéBovtas al Top@ay" dev ovxX ietota Tictw éaxev 7 Texovoa Ta Bpédn Texely && "A pews pdoKovaa. Kaltot TobTo male avtny éEanarnOeioay Aéyouaty, UmO TOU ‘Apovrtiou SrarapbevevOeioar é év Ordos emrihavéy-TOS aUTH Kal cvvapTdcayTos.
95

give this name to the man who took the boys up.
Obeying the king’s orders, the servant put the babes
into a trough and went down towards the river, purposing to cast them in; but when he saw that the stream was much swollen and violent, he was afraid to go close up to it, and setting his burden down near the bank, went his way. Then the overflow of the swollen river took and bore up the trough, floating it gently along, and carried it down to a fairly smooth spot which is now called Kermalus, but formerly Germanus, perhaps because brothers are called “ germani.”

1V. Now there was a wild fig-tree hard by, which they called Ruminalis, either from Romulus, as is generally thought, or because cud-chewing, or rumt- nating, animals spent the noon-tide there for the sake of the shade, or best of all, from the suckling of the babes there; for the ancient Romans called the teat “ ruma,” and a certain goddess, who is thought to preside over the rearing of young children, is still called Rumilia, in sacrificing to whom no wine is used, and libations of milk are poured over her victims. Here, then, the babes lay, and the she-wolt of story here gave them suck,! and a woodpecker came to help in feeding them and to watch over them. Now these creatures are considered sacred to Mars, and the woodpecker is held in especial veneration and honour by the Latins, and this was the chief reason why the mother was believed when she declared that Mars was the father of her babes. And yet it is said that she was deceived into doing this, and was really deflowered by Amulius himself, who came to her in armour and ravished her.

1 Cf. Livy, i. 4, 6-7.

Oi 5é rotvoya ths tpodod bu’ aupeBoriav émi TO pvOades ExtpoTny TH Pun Tapacyely. ovTas yap éxddouy ot Aativot tov Te Onpiwv Tas AvKaivas, KaL TOY yuvaLKav Tas ératpovaas: Elvat 5é roravtny Ty PavotvAou yuvaixa Tod TA Bpédn Opépavtos,”"Axxav Aapevtiay dvoua. tavry dé cad Ovovewy oi ‘Pwpaiol, cab yoas éripéper Tov "Ampirdrlou pnvos adtH!o Tod” Apews tepedts, Kat Aapevtiav Kadodot thy éopTny.

V. ‘Erépav 8& tipaor Aapevtiay é& aitias TotauTyns. o vewKxopos tov ‘Hpaxdéous davor, ws osxev, VIO axXONS, MpovHero mpos Tov Oedv SiaxuBeverv, vremo@v Ste vixrjoas pev avros ekee Tt mapa Tov Oeod ypnorov, nrtnOels 8& 7H De@ tpatetav adOovov tapéEer Kai yuvaixa Kadnv cuvavatravaopevnv. éml TovToss Tas peyv Uirép Tod Oeod riOeis, Tas & brép avTod wWhdous, avedayvn vikepevos. evovvbereiy 5é Bovrdpuevos kat Stxarov éppévery trois optoOeior, Seimvov re T@ Oc@ trapecxevace, kai trv Aapevtiay ovcay

wpaiay, oiTw Sé émidbavh, picOwodpevos, eictiaoev ev TO LEp@, KALYHY UTOCTOpécas, Kal peTa TO delrrvov cuveipEev, ws 57) Tov Oeod E€ovtos aurnpy.
kal pévtor nal Tov Oeov évruyeiy DéyeTat TH
yuvatxt kal Kerctoar Badbifev Ewhev érd riv ayopav Kai Tov aTavTncavTa Tp@TOY aoTraca-pérnv toeicbar pirov. amnvtncey ovv avrTn
TOV TOMTOY avNp NAtKias TE TOppw HKeY Kai
1 ab7i bracketed in Sintenis?, to avoid the hiatus.

But some say that the name of the children's nurse, by its ambiguity, deflected the story into the realm of the fabulous. For the Latins not only called she-wolves "lupae,' but also women of loose character, and such a woman was the wife of Faustulus, the foster-father of the infants, Acca Larentia by name. Yet the Romans sacrifice also to her, and in the month of April the priest of Mars pours libations tn her honour, and the festival is called Larentalia.

V. They pay honours also to another Larentia, for the following reason. The keeper of the temple of Hercules, being at a loss for something to do, as it seems, proposed to the god a game of dice, with the understanding that if he won it himself, he should get some valuable present from the god ; .but if he lost, he would furnish the god with a bounteous repast and a lovely woman to keep him company for the night. On these terms the dice were thrown, first for the god, then for himself, when it appeared that he had lost. Wishing to keep faith, and thinking it right to abide by the contract, he pre- pared a banquet for the god, and engaging Larentia, who was then in the bloom of her beauty, but not yet famous,' he feasted her in the temple, where he had spread a couch, and after the supper locked her in, assured of course that the god would take pos- session of her. And verily it is said that the god did visit the woman, and bade her go early in the morning to the forum, salute the first man who met her, and make him her friend. She was met, accordingly, by one of the citizens who was well on in years and possessed of considerable property, but

1 In Morals, p. 273 a, she is called a public courtezan.

\ b / e , wv \ N
cuvethoxas ovotay ixavyny, amas bé Kal BeBro-

Kos dvev yvvatkos, Gvoua Tappovrios. | obtos éyva tiv Aapevtiay Kal nydirnoe, Kal TeXMeUTOV
b lA 4 3 \ é A i “A amédure KXnpovopov él aWodrdois Kal Kadois
KThpacw, Ov éxeivn TA TrEioTA TH SHuw KaTA SvaOrjxas ewKe. Aéyetas S& adtny evdokov odaav aN N A A bd a. ,
#5n Kal Ocodiry vousrloperny, adpavh yevérOar
mepl todToy Tov ToOTOV év @. Kal THY TpoTEpay
A a) fe) e éxeivnv Aapevtiay xeicOar. Kxareitar d€ viv o rémos ByNaupov, ott Tov moTtapod moNNAKLs imrepeomevov SieTreparodyTo TopOpetows Kata TOb-
To TO ywpiov eis ayopay. thy Sé ropO pear Anvatovpay Kadodow. énot S€é réyovae THY eis Tov immodpopov hépovoay e& dyopas tapodov totlow KaTaTetavyivat Tovs THY Oéav Trapéelel ‘ on 2 ve Q
yovras, évTeDOev apxouevovs: pwpaiati de To iotiov BHdov dvopdfover, Sia tadta pev exer
ripas 9 Sevtépa Aapevtia tape ‘Pwpaios. |
VI. Ta 8é Bpépn Pavortiros ’ApovdAiov ou-
, : > 4
dopBos aveiiero AaOwy arravtas, ws 8 Mot
gact Tov eixdTav exopevor padrov, eidotos TOU
a ; ,
Nopjropos nat ouyyopynyodvros tpopas xpupa
Tois Tpépovcr. Kal ypappata RéyovTar Kal
= , e a 3 ‘ /
Tadra pavOavey oi traides eis TaBtovs Kopeabévres, Baa yp TOUS ED yeyovotas. KdnOjvat
, A A a e
Sé cab TovTOUs amd THS Ondjs iaTopotcr ‘Pwpvrov v ¢ A of A Ww \ 4
cal ‘Papov, dtu Onralovtes GPOnoav to Anpiov.
4) pev ovv ev Tois owpacw edyévera Kal vnTioV dvrwy ebvOvs éFéhaive peyéOa Kal idéa Thy duow abfdpevor Sé Ovpoedeis oav aphorepor Kal
. , . ape
dvdpedses xal ppovnpata mpos Ta awwopeva 102

ROMULUS

- childless, and Unmarried all his life, by name Tarrutius. This man took Larentia to his bed and loved her well, and at his death left her heir to many and fair possessions, most of which she bequeathed to the people. And it is said that when she was now famous and regarded as the beloved of a god, she disappeared at the spot where the former Larentia also lies buried: This spot is now called Velabrum, because when the river overflowed, as it often did, they used to cross it at about this point in ferry-boats, to go to the forum, ard their word for ferry is' "velatura." But some say that it is so- called because from that point on, the street leading to the Hippodrome! from the forum is covered over with sails by the givers of a public spectacle, and the Roman word for sail is "velum."' It is for these reasons that honours are paid to this second Larentia amongst the Romans.

VI. As for the babes, they were taken up and reared by Faustulus, a swineherd of Amulius, and no man knew of it; or, as some say with a closer approach to probability, Numitor did know of it, and secretly aided the foster-parents in their task. And it is said that the boys were taken to Gabii to learn letters and the other branches of knowledge which are meet for those of noble birth. Moreover, we are told that they were named, from "ruma," the Latin word for teat,2 Romulus and Romus (or Remus), because they were seen sucking the wild beast. Well, the noble size and beauty of their bodies, even when they were infants, betokened their natural disposition ; and when they grew up, they were both of them courageous and manly, with spirits which 1 That is, the Circus Maximus. 2 Cf. chapter iv. 1.

dewa Kai Today dws dvextAneToY ExovTEs' o
6¢ "Pwptros yooun te xpycOar padrrov édoxe
Kat TomTiKny exe avveoty, év Tats Tepl vomas
Kal Kuynyias mpos Tovs yerTMavTas éeryuklats TOAANY EAUTOU TAPEXWY KATAVONALW ryE"ovLKOD padrgov 7 weiOapyixod gpicet yeyovoTtos. S40
TO peVv OpopvAos 7 TatrevoTépols TMpordireis
joav, émistdras dé cat duomevs Bacidixovs Kat AYENAPYAS, WS pander avT@Y apeTH Siapépovras, Umepd povoby Tes ouT ares éppovtilov ovTe hes eXpOvTo dé Staitars Kat SiatptBais éNev-epiows, ov THY oXOnY édevOéptov mYOUpevor
Kal THY amroviay, adda yupvaowd Kal Onpas Kat Spopous xa TO Apotas apuvacbas Kat Kr@TTAS éhaiy Kat Bias éfereobau TOUS dOdLKOUpEVOUS. joav 61) dia TadTa meptBonTor.
Vil. Tevopeévns 5é Tivos pos TOUS Noyijropos Bouxonous TOUS 'Apoviiou Ssagopiis kat Booxnparov éAdoews, OvK avacxopevoL TUyKOMTOVTL pev avrovs Kal TpeTrovTa, amroréuvavrat bé tis Aetas aouyyyy. dyavaxtobvTos dé Tod Nopnropos aAuya@povv- auvivyov 8é Kal Tpoa ed€XovTo Toddovs
pev amopous, moAXous 8é SovAous, Opdcous aqro-

OTATLKOY Kal ppoviparas apxKas évd.dovres. Tob dé Papvrov poy Twa Ouotay daroT pam opevov (cal yap hv prob urns Kat pavTixos), ot TOU Nopnropas Borijpes TP ‘Papp pet odLywr Babi-Core TPoaTUXoVTEs euadXovTo. Kat yevopevay mrAnyav Kat TpaUbaTOY év apporépors expaTnoay ot tov Nopntopos nai avvédaBov Cavra Tov 104

ROMULUS

courted apparent danger, and a daring which nothing could terrify. But Romulus seemed to exercise his judgement more, and to have political sagacity, while in his intercourse with their neighbours in matters pertaining to herding and hunting, he gave them the impression that he was born to command rather than to ebey. With their equals or inferiors . they were therefore on friendly terms, but they looked down upon the overseers, bailiffs, and chief herdsmen of the king, believing them to be no better men than themselves, and disregarded both their threats and their anger. They also applied themselves to generous occupations and pursuits, not esteeming sloth and idleness generous, but rather bodily exercise, hunting, running, driving off robbers, capturing thieves, and rescuing the oppressed from | violence. For these things, indeed, they were famous far and near.

VII. When a quarrel arose between the herdsmen of Numitor and Amulius,! and some of the latter's cattle were driven off, the brothers would not suffer it, but fell upon the robbers, put them to flight, and intercepted most of the booty. To the displeasure of Numitor they gave little heed, but collected and took into their company many needy men and many slaves, exhibiting thus the beginnings of seditious boldness ‘and temper. But once when Romulus was busily engaged in some sacrifice, being fond of sacrifices and of divination, the herdsmen of Numitor fell in with Remus as he was walking with few com- panions, and a battle ensued. After blows and wounds given and received on both sides, the herdsmen of Numitor prevailed and took Remus prisoner, whe was 1 Cf. Livy, i. 5, 3 ff.

105
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

‘Popov. davaxOévtos oty avtou 7 pos, Tov Noun-Topa Kal Karmyopnbevros, AUTOS Mev OVK exddace, xarer ov dvta Sedims tov adeAdov, eAOa@v Sé

mpos éxeivoy édetTo Tuxely Sinns, derpos a @v Kai xabuBpiopévos vo olxeTav éxetvov. Bacidéws
3 dvtos. cuvayavaxtovvrwy 5é Tay év “AXBn Kai Sewa macyew oiopévwy tov avdpa rap afiav, evmGels) “Apov\aos avT@ Tapadidwar To Nopn-Tope Tov Papov 6 Te Bobhorro xpnoacbar.
IlapadaPov dé é éxeivos, as Kev olxape, Oaupd-Cwv pév ato TOU cwpaTos TOY veavioxov weEppépovra peryeec Kal poun mavTas, evopéay d€ Tw TpotwnTg TO Oappartov Kal irapov Ths poxis
4 adovAwtov Kal amabes iro TOV TapovT@v, Eprya dé avtov kal wpdfes Guora Ttois Bretropévors axovov, TO b€ péytoTtov, ws Eouxe, Oeod cupra-povros Kat ouverrevOivovTos apxyas peydhoy 7 pay~paToy, am TO pevos émrtvota kal TOXN THIS ady-Oelas, avéxpiver dats ein wat bras yévotro, pov Te mpgela kat giravOpar@ Bréupare
5 miotw avT@ per’ érmidos evdsbovs. o be Gappav Ereyer: “ANN obdev arroxpvouat ve wa yap elvau boxets ‘A povdiou Baowrixwrepas.. aKovels yap Kal avaxpivess mpiv v7 Kohatery: o S _axpitous teb(Stoar. 7 pOoTEpov fev EavTovs oLKEeTOV Bact-AéEws DavotvArov Kat Aapevrias nro rapeba, Tak das (éopev dé didupor), ryevopevos dé év aitia Tpos oé Kai 61a Bodais Ka. Tots mepi puxis ayaa, dxovonev peydda mepl éavtdy’ e b¢
6 TloTd, Kpivery Eouxe voV Oo Kivduvos. yoval pév 1906
~.,
ROMULUS

then carried before Numitor and denounced. Numitor himself did not punish his prisoner, because he was in fear of his brother Amulius, who was severe, but went to Amulius and asked for justice, since he was his brother, and had been insulted by the royal servants. The people of Alba, too, were incensed, and thought that Numitor had been undeservedly outraged. Amulius was therefore induced to hand Remus over to Numitor himself, to treat him as he saw fit. :

When Numitor came home, after getting Remus into his hands, he was amazed at the young man’s complete superiority in stature and strength of body, and perceiving by his countenance that the boldness and vigour of his soul were unsubdued and unharmed by his present circumstances, and hearing that his acts and deeds corresponded with his looks, but chiefly, as it wonld seem, because a divinity was aiding and assisting in the inauguration of great events, he grasped the truth by a happy conjecture, and asked him who he was and what were the circumstances of his birth, while his gentle voice and kindly look inspired the youth with confidence and hope. Then Remus boldly said: “Indeed, I will hide nothing from thee ; for thou seemest to be more like a king-than Amulius; thou hearest and weighest before punishing, but he surrenders men without a trial. Formerly we believed ourselves (my twin brother and I) children of Faustulus and Larentia, servants of the king; but since being accused and slandered before thee and brought in peril of our lives, we hear great things concerning ourselves; whether they are true or not, our present danger is likely to decide. Our birth is said to have been secret, and

q

yap pov amoppnror Aéyovtar, tpopat Sé Kal TiOnvicets arora@repat veoyvav, ols éppidnpev olwvois Kat Onpioss, UTO TOUVTWY TpEpopmeEvoL, pagre AvKaLYNS wal Spvoxoddmrov pouiopacw, ev oKxady Tit Kélmevot Tapa TOY peyay ToTAapoY.
éote © 1) oxddyn xal oolerat, yarxois urroke-oLACt 1pa ppd ory apvdpov eyxexaparypevery, &
ryévour’ dv tows borepov avopedi YyVO pio para TOOLS ToKevow NOY drohopevov.”
‘O pev otv Nounrop & te Trav oon TOUT@Y
Kat Tpos THY Ow eixalwy TOV Ypovoy, oUK EpEevye
Thy édrida caivovaay, adr’ édportiley Gras TH Ouyatpi epi tovtwy Kpida cuyyevopevos dpdoevev’ efpoupetro yap Ett KapTepas.
VIII. ‘O 8 PavaotirAos axotoas tHv TE avA-
Apo Tov ‘Popov Kai thy mapddoow, TOV pev ‘Paptrov ngiov Bon Geir, TOTE Tapes bdd£as mepl Tis yeverews’ 7 poTepov bé UmyviTTETo Kat mapedn hou ToqovTov dcov T pooéxovTas en pix ov ppoveiv’ avros O€ THY oxadny Kopiley exeoper pos TOV N omnropa, omovons Kat d€ous perros
ay dia TOY Katpov. browiay ovv trois mepl Tas ee Ppovpois, Tob Baorréws Ta pexon, Kai
pepevos | Ur avToY Kai _Tapatropevos rept
Tas amroxpicets, ovx éEdade thy cKapny Th xAa-pudip TeptkadumTov. yw 8€ tus év avrois amo TUXNS Tov Ta Tala piyrar AaBovtov Kat yeyovoTO@D mrept TH Exdeow. ovTOs ideav THY aKadny TOTE, KAL YYWPLoaS TH KATATKEVT Kal TOs ypap-

1 Spopwpevos corrected by Bekker to eres (quealioned).

™~

our nursing and nurture as infants stranger: still.
We were cast out to birds of prey and wild beasts, only to be nourished by them,—by the dugs of a she-wolf and the morsels of a woodpecker, as we lay in a. little trough by the side of the great river. The trough still exists and is kept safe, and its brenze girdles are engraved with letters now almost effaced, which may perhaps hereafter prove unavailing tokens of recognition for our parents, when we are dead and gone."
Then Numitor, hearing these words, and conjecturing the time which had elapsed from the young man's looks, welcomed the hope that flattered him,
and thought how he might talk with his daughter eoncerning these matters in a secret interview ; for she was still kept in the closest custody.
VIII. But Faustulus, on hearing that Remus had been seized and delivered up to Numitor, called upon Romulus to go to his aid, and then told him clearly the particulars of their birth; before this also he had hinted at the matter darkly, and revealed enough to give them ambitious thoughts when they dwelt upon it. He himself took the trough and went to see Numitor, full of anxious fear lest he might not be in season. Naturally enough, the guards at the king's gate were suspicious of him, and when he was scrutinized by them and made confused replies to their questions, he was found to be concealing the trough in his cloak. Now by chance there was among the guards one of those who had taken the boys to cast them into the river, and were concerned in their exposure. This man, now seeing the trough, and recognizing it by its

pacty, éruxev UTrovota Tou éyTos Kal ov Tapypédnoer, ANNO ppdoas TO mpaypa TO Bacvret KaTéaTnoev els EXeyyov. év be modhais Kal pe-yaraus dvayKals 0 _Pavarvros ovr anTTnTov éavrov Suepvrakev ovte TavTdmacwy exBrac Geis, awleabat pe @LoroynTe TOUS maidas, elvat 8
drrwbev Ths “AXBnS Epn vévwovtas: autos 6é TodTO Tpos THY Tiiav pépov Badifery, TOANAKLS idety kai Ouyeiy ém’ édrridt BeBarotépa tay Téxvov mobjcacay.
“Orep ouv. oi TapaTToOpEvor Kal pera déous 4
mpos opyny T parrovrTes OTLOUV ET LELKOS wdaxXovat, TUVETTETE Tabeiv TOV “Apoudov. avipa yap adn
TE Xpyoroy kai trou N ourropos dirov v0 arov-bis éreppe, Starrv0écOar Tob Nopjropos Ke-
Nevoas et Tis HKoL NOYOS Eis avdrov Drrép | TeV
Taliov ws TEPLYEVOMEVOD. ddixopevos ovv Oo avOpwiros, Kat Jeacdpevos Soov ova Tov ‘Pa-prov ev meptBonais Kal prop pocwvars Tob Nopn-TOPOS, THV TE TiaTLD toxupay émoinge THS exridos cal Tapexehevaato TOV mpayparav dféws avre-AapBdvecOar, Kal ouviy autos 76n Kal ouve-Tparrev. 0 6 Kaipos ove BovAopevors oxvety Tapeixer. O yap ‘Pepvnros eyyus qv non, Kal pos avTov eeOeov OvK oduryor TOV TOMTOY pices Kal poBy Tov "ApovAiou. TloAAny dé Kal. our auT@ Sivapuy nYE oudAEAOX LG MEV NY eis. éxa-TooTvas: éxaaTns O€ avinp adyyeiro Xoprou Kat Dns aryKarioa KOVT@ TEpiKerpevny avexov pa-vida TavTas Aarivot Karovatv am’ éxeivou &e Kal viv év tols orpatevpact trovTovs pave-Trapiovs ovouafovow. aya S€ Tov péev “Papmov ITO

~

ROMULUS

make and inscription, conceived a suspicion of the truth, and without any delay told the matter to the king,and brought the man before him to be examined.
In these dire and pressing straits, Faustulus did not entirely hold his own, nor yet was his secret wholly forced from him. He admitted that the boys were alive and well, but said they lived at a distance from

Alba as herdsmen; he himself was carrying the trough to Ilia, who had often yearned to see and handle it, in confirmation of her hope for her children.
As, then, men naturally fare who are confounded, and act with fear or in a passion, so it fell out that Amulius fared. For he sent in all haste an excellent man and a friend of Numitor's, with orders to learn from Numitor whether any report had come to him of the children's being alive. When, accordingly, the man was come, and beheld Remus almost in the affectionate embraces of Numitor, he confirmed them in their confident hope, and entreated them to proceed at once to action, promptly joining their party himself and furthering their cause. And the opportunity admitted of no delay, even had they wished it; for Romulus was now close at hand, and many of the citizens who hated and feared Amulius were running forth to join him.. He was also leading a large force with him, divided into companies of a hundred men, each company headed by a man who bore aloft a handful of hay and shrubs tied round a pole (the Latin word for handful is "manipulus," and hence in their armies they still call the men in such companies " manipulares."'). And when Remus incited the
IT!

PLUFARCH'S LIVES

Tovs évros aduotavros, tod $8 'PwuiXouv mpocdyovros &Ewhev, ore mpdEas obdey 6 TYpAVVOS otre Bovievoas cwrnpiov édutd, Sta TO atropety kai tapatrecbar, catarndbels améBaver.
"Ov ta wreiota cat rod PaBiou Xéyovros Kal tov IlerapnOiov Aroxréovs, bs Sone? mparos éxdovvar 'Papuns xticw, Drortov pev éviots éati TO Spapatixoy Kal mwrAacpaT@des, ov Set 58 amoTely THY TUXNY OpavTas olwy TrolnpaTtov Snpuoupyos éott, Kal ta "Pwpaiwy rpdypata AeyCompévous ws ove av éevtaiv0a tpouBn Suvdpeos, pn Oeiav tia apynv AaBovra Kal pmdev péya pnde rapadoEoy éyovcay.
IX. 'Apovatov b€ atoBavevtos nal trav mpaypatwv KatactavTwy, "AXBny pev odt' oiKxeivy py

apxovres oT apxev éBovrovto Tod pntpoTatopos Lavros, atrodovtes 5é tiv aryepoviav éxelvp nat rH pentpl Teuas mperovaas, éyvwoay oixely Kad” éavtous, Tod év ols ywpios é& apyns éverpa-dnocay xticavtes: attn yap evmpetecotatn TeV aittay eat. Fw S tows dvaycaiov, oietav Kal amoatatav Toray nOpoic péevwv pos aUTOUs, F KaTarvOjvat tayvtamact TovTwyv Siactapiytev
7 ouvouxeiy idta pet adtav. Ste yap ove n€louvy of tHv “AXBnvy otxobvtes avaptyvivat Tovs atro-otdtas éavtois ovde mpocdéxyecOat ToriTas, é57-Awoe TPw@TOY pev TO TEept Tas yuVaiKas Epryop, ovx UBper TorpunOev, adra Ou’ dvdyeny, éxovoteoy
I12

citizens within the city to revolt, and at the same time Romulus attacked from without, the tyrant, without taking a single step or making any plan for his own safety, from sheer perplexity and confusion, was seized and put to death.

Although most of these particulars are related by Fabius and Diocles of Peparethus, who seems to have been the first to publish a “ Founding of Rome,” some are suspicious of their fictitious and fabulous quality ; but we should not be incredulous when we see what a poet fortune sometimes is, and when we reflect that the Roman state would not have attained: to its present power, had it not been of a divine origin, and one which was attended by great marvels.

IX. Amulius being now dead, and matters settled in the city, the brothers were neither willing to live in Alba, unless as its rulers, nor to be its rulers while their grandfather was alive. Having therefore restored the government to him and paid _ fitting honours to their mother, they resolved to dwell by themselves, and to found a city in the region where, at the first, they were nourished and sustained ; } this surely seems a most fitting reason for their course. But perhaps it was necessary, now that many slaves and fugitives were gathered about them, either to disperse these and have no following at all, or else to dwell apart with them. For that the residents of Alba would not consent to give the fugitives the privilege of intermarriage with them, nor even receive them as fellow-citizens, is clear, in the first place, from the rape of the Sabine women,? which was not a deed of wanton daring, but one of necessity, owing to the lack of marriages by consent ;

1 Cf. Livy, i. 6, 3 f. 2 See chapter xiv.

] , , : > / \ > \ e 4
dropig yipov: eriuncay yap abtas iprdcavtes
TEPLTTOS. EElrTa THS MorAEWS THY TpwTNY (ra a e , 4 a) > iOpvatv NapBavovens, icpov tt PvEtpov Tots adeoTapévors KaTacKkevacaytes, 6 Beov *Acudraiov Tpoonyopevov, edéyovto tdvtas, ovte SeaTroTals SodAov ovte Ota ypHoTas ovT apxYovot avdpo-Uj ? 4 b] \ lA , dovov éxdiddvtes, GAA pavTevpate tmUOOKpHoTH
n a A oe , , o
mao. BeBatodv thy davriav ddcKovtes, WaTE TAnOvoar TAYD THY TOALY: érrEl TAS Ye TPwWTAS
e / / a / \ / 4
-€OTLAS NEYOUVGL TOV XtALWY jun TrELOVaS yever Oat.
TavTa pev ovv DaTeEpor.
e / \ v3 \ : ‘ > A Oppnoact 5€ mpos Tov cuvoiKiapoyv avTois
< a evOus Hv Siagopa tept tov téTrov. “Pwpyvros pev
ovv THY Kanrovpéevnv ‘Pounv Kxovadparny, direp éotl teTpadywvov, extice, Kal éxeivov éBovdeTO monivey tov toTrov, ‘Papmos 5& ywpiov te Tod
> , 4 A é > 9 “ A > ,
A Bevtivou kaptepov, 6 ot éxeivoy pev wvopacn
e ? “a , ¢ , “A Pepwvioy, viv dé “Peyvaptov xadreirar. avvde-
, de \ ” v > / ro)
pévoy 5é thy épiv Gpuctv aicios BpaRevoa Kral
, 4 [4 a ¢ ,
KabeCopévwv ywpis, € dact tO ‘Pong, SirAa-
, ne 4 aA A
cious be 7 Pwoptr@ mpopavijvar yorras. ot &é
A b a A A Tov pev “P@pov arnOas ideiv, revoacOar dé tov “Pwpvrov éMovros 5€ tod ‘Pemov, tote Tovs daHdexa TO ‘Paopwr@ havhvar, 66 nat viv pddtota xpnabas yuri “Pwpaious oiwrlopévous.
‘Hpodwpos 6é o ovrixos toropet nal tov ‘Hpa-Kea Xaipe yurros emi mpd&e dhavévros. éore év yap aBNaBéctarov Cowy ara dev 6 peev yap a éotarov & avtov, pndev ov 114

for they certainly honoured the women, when they had carried them off, beyond measure. And in the second place; when their city was first founded, they made a sanctuary of refuge for all fugitives! which they called the sanctuary of the God of Asylum. There they received all who came, delivering none up, neither slave to masters, nor debtor to creditors, nor murderer to magistrates, but declaring it to be in obedience to an oracle from Delphi that they made the asylum secure for all men. Therefore the city was soon full of people, for they say that the first houses numbered no more than a thousand. This, however, was later.

But when they set out to establish their city, a dispute at once arose concerning the site. Romulus, accordingly, built Roma Quadrata (which means square), and wished to have the city on that site ; but Remus laid out a strong precinct on the Aventine hill, which was named from him Remonium, but now is called Rignarium. Agreeing to settle their quarrel by the flight of birds of omen,? and taking their seats on the ground apart from one another, six vultures, they say, were seen by Remus, and twice that number by Romulus. Some, however, say that whereas Remus truly saw his six, Romulus lied about his twelve, but that when Remus came to him, then he did see the twelve. Hence it is that at the present time also the Romans chiefly regard vultures when they take auguries from the flight of birds.

Herodorus Ponticus relates that Hercules also was glad to see a vulture present itself when he was upon an exploit. For it is the least harmful

1 Cf. Livy, i. 8, 5f. 2 Cf. Livy, i. 7, 1.

/ A 4, bl 4 ¥

ameipovaty 1 putTevovor % vésovoty avOpwrot aivopevov, tpéderas Sé awd vexpov cwpator,

> / 2 399\ IO , \ arroxtivyvat & ovdév ovdé Nupaivetar ruxny exo, mrnvoss 5€ Ota cuyyévetay ovbe vexpois Tpogeaty.
detol 6€ Kai yNadxes Kal iépaxes CavtTa KomTOVGL
ig 4 4 , > 3
Ta opodvra Kal dovevovor: Kaito. cat At-oyvNov
"OpuiBos opts TAS av ayvetor dayav;

7 ért Tada pev ev OPOarpois, ws Eros eltreiv, avaotpépetar nal mapéyee Sta rravtos alcOnacy éavrav: o 6é yu amdvioy éott Oéapa Kal veooa ; A 9 e , ” J , > aois yuTros ov padiws iopey évreruynKoTeEs, GANA
nal mapéoyev éviots atorov irovoav, &oOerv avtrovs ad’ érépas Tivos yAs KaTtaipev évrabOa, TO oTrdvLov Kal p11) TUVEXES, olov ot wavrets afvovow elvat TO un KaTa pvawv pnd ad’ avrod, TouTTH Sé Oeia harvopevov.
§ \ 8 v \ 2 / e epr
X. Eet 0 éyvw thy atratnv o ‘Papos, éya-
: a e AETratve, Kal TOU “Pwpyvrov Tadpov opvTToVTOS 7
TO Tetyos Euedre KuKAOVTOaL, TA pev eyrevale la) al > ‘
tay épyov, tots 5 éumodwy éyéveto. tédros Se e ae a SeadAOpevoy avtov ol ev avtTov Pwpyvtrov TaTda-Favtos, of S¢ Tav étaipwv tiwds Kédepos, evrad0a
2 qeceiv Néyouow. émece Se kal Pavotinros dv TH
payn cat Wreorivos, bv aderpov dvra Davord-Nou auverOpéevrar Tovs mept Tov Pwpmvrov ictopov-ov. o pev ovyv Kérep eis Tuppnviay petéotn nat an’ éxeivou tovs taxeis of “‘Papaio: nat d&ets
4 3 UU \ Iw 4
KéNepas ovoualovaor «at Koivtrov MéredXopr, Sri 116

a.

ROMULUS

of all creatures, injures no grain, fruit-tree, or cattle, and lives on carrion. But it does not kill or maltreat anything that has life, and as for birds, it will not touch them even when they are dead, since they are of its own species. But eagles, owls, and hawks smite their own kind when. alive, and kill them. And yet, in the words of Aeschylus :—!

“ How shall a bird that preys on fellow bird be clean?”
Besides, other birds are, so to speak, always in our eyes, and let themselves be seen continually; but the vulture is a rare sight, and it is not easy to come upon a vulture’s young, nay, some men have been led into a strange suspicion that the birds come from some other and foreign land to visit us here, so rare and intermittent is their appearance, which soothsayers think should be true of what does not present itself naturally, nor spontaneously, but by a divine sending.

X. When Remus knew of the deceit, he was enraged,? and as Romulus was digging a trench where his city’s wall was to run, he ridiculed some parts of the work, and obstructed others. At last, when he leaped across it, he was smitten (by Romulus himself, as some say; according to others, by Celer, one of his companions), and fell dead there. Faustulus also fell in the battle, as well as Pleistinus, who was a brother of Faustulus, and assisted him in rearing Romulus and Remus. Celer, at any rate, betook himself to Tuscany, and from him ‘the Romans call such as are swift and speedy, “celeres.’’ Quintus Metellus, for instance, when his father died,

1 Suppliants, 226 (Dindorf). 2 Cf. Livy, i. 7, 2.

Tov TaTpos aTOPavEYTOS ayava povowaxyov npépats orlyass érroinae, Oavpdcavres TO TAaYOS THS TapacKkeuns KéXepa ™ poomyopevoay.
XI. ‘O & “‘Paopvaros év tH “Pepowvia ! bdypas Tov ‘Pa@pov opod eal TOUS Tpopeis, prite THY mokw, é« Tuppnrias petatwepdpevos avdpas tepots trae Oecpots Kal ypdppaow tdynyoupevous ef \ 4 ef b ” , Exaota Kal d:ddoKxovtas wotrep év TeAXETH. BOO-pos yap wpuyn tmept TO viv Kopitiov xuxdXortepys, amapyai te Tdvtwv, boos vouw pev ws Kadots eypavto, duce 5 ws avaryxaios, ametéOnoay
? a \ ? we a.
évtav0a. Kai Tédos, €& Hs adixtro yHs Exactos odiynv Kopilwv potpav, EBaddov eis tadTa Kat auvepiyvuov. Karodor S€ tov BoOpov TodTov @ Kal Tov GXvpTrOY ovopaTe podvdoy. Elta waTrEp

, , , \ 4 e o
KUKNOY KéVTP@ Trepléeypayayv THY TOA. oO 8
> \ > \ > / A of: e 4
aikioTns éuBadrwov apotpw yarknv dw, UnofevEas dé Boiv dppeva Kxai OnreLav, adtos peéev emdryet
, Ww nw A 4 ~ b TepteXauvey avtrAakxa Badetay trois Téppact, trav §
e , ” b] , A > 2 , ‘ ETropevov Epyov éativ, as avictnat BwXous TO dpotpov Katactpépev cicw, Kal pnoepiav eo Weplopav exTpeTopevnv. TH péev OvY ypauUH TO Tetyos adopitovat Kat KadeiTas KaTa ovyKoTi mapnptov, olov dmiabev TEeiyous 7) PETA TELKOS" ef \ 4 b] “ A \ 7
Strov dé TuAnv éuBareiv Stavoobvrar, thy dvw éEeXovtes kal TO dpotpov vTepOévtes Sidrerppa 1 ‘Pexwvlz Coraés and Bekker, with UC: ‘Peuopl:.

took only a few days to provide gladiatorial contests in his honour, and the people were so amazed at his speed in preparing them that they gave him the surname of Celer.

XI. Romulus buried Remus, together with his foster-fathers, in the Remonia,! and then set himself to building his city, after summoning from Tuscany men who prescribed all the details in accordance with certain sacred ordinances and writings, and taught them to him as ina religious rite. A circular trench was dug around what is now the Comitium,? and in this were deposited first-fruits of all things the use of which was sanctioned by custom as good and by nature as necessary ; and finally, every man brought a small portion of the soil of his native land, and these were cast in among the first-fruits and mingled with them. They call this trench, as they do the heavens, by the name of “mundus.” Then, taking this as a centre, they marked out the city in a circle round it. And the founder, having shod a plough with a brazen ploughshare, and having yoked to it a bull and a cow, himself drove a deep furrow round the boundary lines, while those who followed after him had to turn the clods, which the plough threw up, inwards towards the city, and suffer no clod to lie turned outwards. With this line they mark out the course of the wall, and it is called, by contraction, “ pomerium,” that is “ post murum,” behind or next the wall. And where they purposed to put in a gate, there they took the share out of the ground, lifted the plough over, and left a vacant

1 See chapter ix. 4. :

2 A space adjoining the forum where the people met in assembly. The mundus, or augural centre of the city, was really on the Palatine.

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Totovow. O0ev array TO TelXos _tepov 7 TOW
TUNGY vouifovar tas dé TUAAS tepas vouitovras ovK HV a avev devo darpovias Ta pev SéxerOat, Ta
8 arroméwretv TOY dvaryKaiov ral pn cabapev.
XII. “Ore pev ov » KTicts TIPE PG yévoltto TH
po évbexa, Kanavoay Matwv opohoyetra Kal THY pep TAUTHY éoptatovar ‘Popaior, yevé-OrLov THs mar pisos ovowatovtes. év apxh 8, as pacw, ovdey Ep puxov éOvov, anna kabapay Kat AVQLLALKTOY @OVTO Seiy TH mar pioe THY em@ovupOY
TIS Yyeverews copThy pudarrew. ov pay ada,
Kal 7 po Tips KTLTEWS Bornpixy TEs Rv avrots éoptn
Kare TAUTNY THv nuépav, Kal Ilapiina mpoon‘yopevov avTay.
Nob bv pep ow ovdev at ‘Popaixat voupnviat ™ pos TAs ‘EXAqvixas omohayoupevov éxovosv:
éxetyny be TV Hpepar, 7 7 THY TOA oO “PwmUroS exten, aT peKh Tpraxdoa _ TuxXely Aéyovot’ Kar avvodov exNELT TLENY év ava yevéoOar ocedquns ™ pos HpALov, ny etdévar Kat (Avtipa ov olovrat, tov Tniov emomroLor, ETeL TPLTW Ths Exrys oAUEL-Td60s gupmecodoay. ev dé Tos KaTa Bappova TOV prroaogov Xpovors, avdpa ‘Popatov €v toropia BtBdaxwratov, 7 HV Tapourtos eTaipos avrod, didrocopos _peD dros Kal pabnpariros, anTo-HEVOS dé THs mept Tov qTivaKa peBodou Jewpias évexa xal dona év auth TEPLTTOS elvat. TOUTED m povBarev 0 Bdppov avaryaryetv THY "Popvdov yeverty els mpepay Kat @pav, €k TOV heyoueveoy aTOTEhEs MATODY mepl TOV avdpa. ToLnag aevov TOV avANOYLT MOV, WOTTEP AL TMV YyewpeTpLKaY Udn-120

ROMULUS

space. And this is the reason why they regard all the wall as sacred except the gates; but if they held the gates sacred, it would not be possible, with- out religious scruples, to bring into and send out of the city things which are necessary, and yet unclean.

XII. Now it is agreed that the city was founded on the twenty-first of April, and this day the Romans celebrate with a festival, calling it the birthday of their country. And at first, as it is said, they sacrificed no living creature at that festival, but thought they ought to keep it pure and without stain of blood, since it commemorated the birth of their country. However, even before the founding of the city, they had a pastoral festival on that day, and called it Parilia.

At the present time, indeed, there is no agree- ment between the Roman and Greek months, but they say that the day on which Romulus founded his city was precisely the thirtieth of the month, and that on that day there was a conjunction of the sun and moon, with an eclipse, which they think was the one seen by Antimachus, the epic poet of Teos, in the third year of the sixth Olympiad.! And in the times of Varro the philosopher, a Roman who was most deeply versed in history, there lived Tarutius, a companion of his, who, besides being a philosopher and a mathematician, had applied himself to the art of casting nativities, in order to indulge a speculative turn of mind, and was thought to excel in it. To this man Varro gave the problem of fixing the day and hour of the birth of Romulus, making his deductions from the conjunctions of events reported in the man’s life, just as the solutions of yobvrat TpoBAnudTov avadvces: THs yap avTis Jewpias elvat ypovey te NaPRdvtas avOpedtrov yeveoews Blov mpoerrrety cal Bip So0évte Onpedi- 5 cat xpovov. énoinoey odv TO mpocTaxOev Oo Tapovtios, nal tad te wdOn nal ta epya Tov avépos émidov Kxal xpovov Sans Kxal tporov TeNeUTHS Kal TavTa Ta ToLavTa cuveis, ed para teOappynKotes Kal avdpeiws atrepyvato THv péev év TH pntpl yeyovévar tod “‘Pwuvrou cvAAN- Yu eres mpwtm tHS Seutépds GAuvpmiddos, év pnvi wat Abyumrtiovs Xotdx, tpitn wal eixdor, tpitns @pas, Kal” hv o Aros e&éAcTrE TravTEAaS" Thy & éupavn vyéveow ev pnvi Oov0, hyépa G mpwrn pet eixdda, wept fALov avaToAds. KTE- cOnvar Sé rHv ‘Pépny tr’ adtod rh évarn Pap- pov pnvos iorapévov, petakd devrépas @pas Kal tpitns’ émel cal Twédews TUYNY, Motrep av- Opwrov, Kuptov eyew olovtar xpovov, ex THs TpPOTNS YyEevéTewS TIPOS TAS TOY aaTépwy éerroKas Jewpovpevoy. aAAa TattTa pev tows Kal Ta totavTa Te Eévm Kal wepitT@ mpocakerar panr- ov » Sia TO pvOwdes evoxAnTEL TOUS évTUYXd-

1 754 B.C,
. 12!
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

YOVTAS AUTOLS.
XIII. KrucPetons o€ ths wodews Tp@tov pev Scov hw ev nrLKia TAHOOS eis cvvTaypata oTpatiotixa Steitev: Exactov Sé€ avvtayya mtrelov Tpioxiriov hv Kal tTptaxoctwy imméewv. éxrHOn 5é Aeyewv TH Aoyddas elvar Tovs payipsovs ex wavTwv. éretta Tois péev aArAros expHto Shum
Kal qrotmovnXous @voundaOn To WARS: Exatov Se Tous apiatous amédeEe Bovrevtds, Kal avrous 122

“——,

ROMULUS

geometrical problems are derived; for the same science, he said, must be capable not only of fore- telling a man’s life when the time of his birth is known, but also, from the given facts of his life, of hunting out the time of his birth. This task, then, Tarutius performed, and when he had taken a survey of the man’s experiences and achievements, and had brought together the time of his life, the manner of his death, and all such details, he very courageously and bravely declared that Romulus. was conceived in his mother’s womb in the first year of the second Olympiad,! in the month Choeac of the Egyptian calendar, on the twenty-third day, and in the third hour, when the sun was totally eclipsed; and that he was born in the month Thoth, on the twenty- first day, at sun-rise ; and that Rome was founded by him on the ninth day of the month Phar- muthi, between the second and third hour: for it is thought that a city’s fortune, as well as that of a man, has a decisive time, which may be known by the position of the stars at its very origin. These and similar speculations will perhaps attract readers by their novelty and extravagance, rather than offend them by their fabulous character.

XII. When the city was built, in the first place, Romulus divided all the multitude that were of age to bear arms into military companies, each company consisting of three thousand footmen and three hun- dred horsemen. Such a company was called a legion,’ because the warlike were selected out of all. In the second place, he treated the remainder as a people, and this multitude was called “populus” ; a hundred of them, who were the most eminent, he

1 772 B.C.
123
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

peév tratpixious, TO 6¢ avaoTHMA TEVaTOY Tpoanyo;
2 pevoev. O pev ovv GEVaTOS aTpEKaS ‘yEepovatay onpaives twatpitious 5é tovs Bovrevtas KANn-Ojnvar réyovow of pev STL wWaidwy yvnoiwy ta-Tépes Hoav, of 5é padXrAov ws avdTovs ExovTas éavta@v atrodei~tar tTatépas, OTEep ov ToANOIS virqpEe TOY TPWTwY Es THY TrOoALY GUPpEoYTwY'

ot 5€ amo THS TaTpwreias. ovTw yap éexdrovy THY TMpoctaciay Kal Kadovow aypt viv, oLopevor Ildtpwva tiva trav ovv Evdvip@ wapayevopévon, xndepovecov TOV Drrodeea Tépwy 6Yra Kat BonOn-TLKOD, arp' auTov TO Tpdarypare TAUT AY TV ™poon-yopiav arromuTreiy. padora & ap ts TUYXaVvOE
TOU elKOTOS, él vopiou tov Pwpvrov afvobvra TOUS TpwTOous Kat duvatwTarous TAT PLKH xnde-povia Kat ppovtide TPOTHKELY éripernеioOa TOV TATELVOTEDWY, dua d€ tovs addous biddoKxovra
pn Sedrévar pnd ax Ger Bau Tais TOV KPELTTOVOY
Tipais, anna xpia Gar Mey evvoias Kab vouiCovtas Kat T poaaryopevorTas Tarepas, oUTWS Ovop"acal.
Kat yap axypt viv TOUS ev TVYKAITO TEAOUYTAS
Ot pev éEwOev avdpas nryEHovas Karovow, avrol
dé 'Papaior TATE PAS TVYYEYPAUPEVOS, TO pé-yeoroy pev akiwopa Kal Tiny, Heora b¢ pOovov éxovre pepevor TOV ovoparor. éy apyn pev ovy TraTEépas AaVTOUS [oOvo?, Uarepov dé mAELovey mpocavahapBavopevar, TmaTépas ouyyeypapipe-VOUS Tm poonyopevaay. cal TOUTO bev ty dvopa
TELVOTENOY AUT@ THS T pos TO SnpworeKov TOU Bovreutixod Siagopas: érépors S€ tovs Suvatovs
124

25

ROMULUS

appointed to be councillors, calling the individuals themselves " patricians,"' and their body a " senate."' Now the word "senate" means literally a Council of Elders, and the councillors were called " patricians," as some say, because they were fathers of lawful childrag!; or rather, according to others, because they could tell who their own fathers were, which not many could do of those who first streamed into the city ; according to others still, from " patronage," which was their word for the protection of inferiors, and is so to this day; and they suppose that a certain Patron, one of those who came to Italy with Evander, was a protector and defender of the poor and needy, and left his own name in the word which designates such activity. But the most reasonable opinion for any one to hold is that Romulus thought it the duty of the foremost and most influential citizens to watch over the more lowly with fatherly care and concern, while he taught the multitude not to fear their superiors nor be vexed at their honours, but to exercise goodwill towards them, considering them and addressing them as fathers, whence their name of Patricii. For down to the present time foreign peoples call the members of their senate "chief men," but the Romans themselves call them "conscript fathers," using that name which has the greatest dignity and honour, and awakens the least envy. At first, then, they called them simply "fathers, but later, when more had been added to their number, they addressed them as "conscript fathers." By this more imposing title Romulus distinguished the senate from the commonalty, and in other ways, too, he separated the nobles from the

1 Cf, Livy, i. 8, 7.
125
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

J \ A A 4: 4 ? 4,

amd TOY TroAA@Y Sinper, TaTpwvas dvopatwr, 5 \ / 2 / \ 4 4
dmep éoti Tpoardatas, éxeivous b€ KXrievtas, SrEep €otl weAdtas dua Sé mpos aAAHAOVS OavpactTiHy
4 9 A \ , , e /
evvotay autos Kal peydrwv Sixaiov ordpEovcay éveTroingeyv. ovTo mev yap éényntds te Tay. voulpov Kai mpooraras dixatopévors cupBovrovs Te TavTwov Kal KNOe“ovas EavTovs TapeElyov, éxetvot 5é tovTous éGepdtrevov ov povoy Tis@yvTes, GAA cal trevopévors Ouyatépas cuvexdidovtes nal ypéa GuvexTivovTes. KaTapapTupelv Te WeAaTOU TpoT-TaTHY, 7) TpoTTaToU TEAATHV, OVTE VOLOS OvOEls ¥ v 2 , ef 4 a) M:
ovte apyov nvayxalev. tortepov dé, TOY aNrOV Sixaiwy pevovtayv, To NapBdavey xXpynpata tovs duvatovs mapa tav TaTevotépwy aiaypov évopicbn Kal ayevvés. Tadta pév ovv TeEpt TOUTOY.
\ \

XIV. Terdprm S€ pnvi peta tHv Kticww, os
@PaBios iotopet, TO Tepl tTHy dptayny érormnOn TOY yuvatKov. Kal Aéyoucr pev Eno Tov ‘PopvrAov avTov tH hvoe gdtAoTrOAELOV GyTa, Kat metrerapévov éx Tivwy apa Noyiwy Ste THY “Pomnv méTpwrat Toreuors tpehopéevny Kat avouevny
yevésOat peyiotnv, Bias tardpkat mpos rtovs LaBtvous: ovdé yap Todds, AANA TPLdKOVTA povas wapBévous NaBely adrov, are 67 ToAEmoV
A a 4 , A \ > > 7+
HadXoY H ydpov Seopevov. todto Sé ovK eiKos*
GANA THY Mev TOALY Op@DV éTroiKwY EOds éumiTAA-pévynv, @v OdLyot yuvaixas elyov, of 5é€ ToAXol 126

ROMULUS

multitude, calling the one “ patrons,” that is to say, protectors, and the other “clients,” that is to say, dependants. At the same time he inspired both classes with an astonishing goodwill towards each other, and one which became the basis of important rights and privileges. For the patrons advised their clients in matters of custom, and represented them in courts of justice, in short, were their counsellors and friends in all things; while the clients were devoted to their patrons, not only holding them in honour, but actually, in cases of poverty, helping them to dower their daughters and pay their debts. And there was neither any law nor any magistrate that could compel a patron to bear witness against a client, or a client againt a patron. But in later times, while all other rights and privileges remained in force, the taking of money by those of high degree from the more lowly was held to be disgraceful and ungenerous. So much, then, on these topics.

XIV. It was in the fourth month after the founding of the city, as Fabius writes, that the rape of the Sabine women was perpetrated.1. And some say that Romulus himself, being naturally fond of war, and being persuaded by sundry oracles, too, that it was the destiny of Rome to be nourished and increased by wars till she became the greatest of cities, thereby merely began unprovoked hostilities against the Sabines; for he did not take many maidens, but thirty only, since what he wanted was war rather than marriages. But this is not likely. On the contrary, seeing his city filling up at once with aliens, few of whom had wives, while the greater part of them, being a mixed rabble of needy

1 Cf. Livy, i. 9.

U ’ 3 , \ > A Ww e
puyades €E amropwv nai adavav daytes virepewpavro Kal mpocedok@vto p11) cuppevety BeBaiws, / \ \ \ 4 \ érmivwv Sé€ mpos tovs YaBivovs tporov tiva auyKkpdcews Kal Kolvwvias apyny avTois TO adi-KNLA TOLNTELY TMEpwoamevols TAS yUvatKas, éTrexelpnoe TO Epy@ Tovde TOV TpOTFOV.
Avedo0n oyos UT’ avtod mpa@tov ws Oeot Twos aveupnKkot Bwpov vireo ys Kexpuppévov. avopatoyv 5& tov Oedv Kavoov, elite Bovratov
wv 4 \ ¥ A \ UA
GvTa (Kwycidkloy yap éTL viv TO oupPBovrLOV Kadovdot, Kal Tovs bardtous KwvcotAas, oloy mpo-Y] 4 fe) \ e \ Bovnous), etre trmiov Tlocede. xal yap o Bwpos
éy TO peifov. tev immodpopwry éotiv, adavis Tov &AXov xpovov, év Sé Tols immxois ayaou
? , e 4 Q A dvakadurTopevos. of S€ Kal br(ws dhacl Tod Bovrevpatos atoppyntou Kal adavovds 6vtTos v1oyelov oux adroywos T@ Oe@ Bawpov yevéoOar xe-/ e b] > 4 / \

Kpuppévov. ws 8 avedavn, Ovolay te Naprpay
ér avTt@ kal ayava cal Oéav én Karayyerias émerénet Travnyupixny. Kal Toddod pev avOpwrrat auvnrOov, autos Se mpovedOnto peta TaV apioTwY aroupyide Kexoopnpévos. Hv S€ Tov KaLpod THS emuyeipnoews oupBorov éEavactavta THv aGNoupyida mrv—ar Kail meptBarécOar mdreyv.
M” @ 4 a 2 A exovtes ovv Eighn TrodXol wpoceixyov avTo, Kat
fe) /
TOU onpeov yevouévov orracdpevar Ta Eidn Kat
\ a e /,
peta Bors oppnoarvtes fptraloy tas Bvyatépas
tav YaPRivwv, avtovs 8 devyovtas eclwy Kat 128

7”

ROMULUS

and obscure persons, were looked down upon and expected to have no strong cohesion; and hoping to. make the outrage an occasion for some sort of blending and fellowship with the Sabines after their women had been kindly entreated, he set his hand | to the task, and in the following manner.

First a report was spread abroad by him that he had discovered an altar of a certain god hidden underground. They called this god Consus, and he was either a god of counsel (for “ consilium”’ is still their word for counsel, and they call their chief magistrates “consuls,” that is to say, counsellors), or an equestrian Neptune. For the altar is in the Circus Maximus, and is invisible at all other times, but at the chariot-races it is uncovered. Some, however, simply say that since counsel is secret and unseen, it is not unreasonable that an altar to the god of counsel should be hidden underground.! Now when this altar was discovered, Romulus appointed by proclamation a splendid sacrifice upon it, with games, and a spectacle open to all people. And many were the people who came together, while he himself sat in front, among his chief men, clad in purple. The signal that the time had come for the onslaught was to be his rising and folding his cloak and then throwing it round him again. Armed with swords, then, many of his followers kept their eyes intently upon him, and when the signal was given, drew their swords, rushed in with shouts, and ravished away the daughters of the Sabines, but permitted and encouraged the men

1 The altar was kept buried in the earth to signify the secret processes of nature in the production of crops and vegetation. For Consus was an ancient Italian god of agriculture.

129

VOL. I. K

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

6 waplecay. apracOnva 5é hac ot pév Tptaxovra povas, ad ov Kxal tas dparpias ovopa-aOjvar, Ovarrépios Sé "Avtias érra Kal eixoot xal wevtaxocias, IdoBas 6é tpeis Kal dySoryKovta kal é€axocias rapOévous: 5 péytoTov jv aTro-AOynua TO ‘PwpvA@: yuvaina yap ov dAaBelv
arn’ 7 play, ‘Epatriay, Staradodcav avtovs, ate 8m py we? BBpews pnd adsxlas éXNOovtas él thy aprrayynv, add\ja ouppi~ac cal ovvayayeiy ets TAUTO TA Yyevn Tals peyioTals avdayKats Stavon-
7 Oévtas. tHv 8 “Epowdiav of pév ‘Ootirov yhpat Aéyovowy, avdpa “Pwpaiwy éridpavéctatov, ot &é avrov ‘Pwpvrov, xal yevéoOat nal traidas ava, piav pev Ovyarépa IIpipav, tH taker tis yevésews oUTW TpocayopevOciaay, Eva & vidov povor, dv "AcAALov pev évelvos amo THs yevouevns AOpotsews Um avTod TOY TOoNTOY wvopacev, oi daotepov "ABidNov. ddAA TadTa pev ioTOpar Znvoboros o Tporkywos modrrgods exer Tovs avTiNéyovTas.
XV. *Ev 6& tois dpwdfovcr tas trapOévors
TOTE Tuxely héyouar TOY OvK eT ipavay Twas GyovTas Kopnv TO TE KdNNEL TOAD Kal TO meyer
Stagpépovoay. éret & amavravtes Evie TeV KpetTTovwy émexelpovy adpatpeicOar, Boayv tovs ayovtas a Taracip Kopuifaev aityy, dvdpl vé 2 pév, evdoxipm Sé nal ypnot@: Todt’ ody axov-cavtas evdnpety Kal Kpotety érawobvtas, évious dé xal Tapaxodovbely avacrpéavtas evvoia cat 130

ROMULUS

themselves to escape. Some say that only thirty maidens were seized, and that from these the Curiae 1 were named; but Valerius Antias puts the number at five hundred and twenty-seven, and Juba at six hundred and eighty-three, all maidens. And this was the strongest defence which Romulus could make, namely, that they took only one married woman, Hersilia, and her by mistake, since they did not commit the rape out of wantonness, nor even with a desire to do mischief, but with the fixed purpose of uniting and blending the two peoples in the strongest bonds. As for this Hersilia, some say that she was married to Hostilius, a most eminent Roman, and others, to Romulus himself, and that she also bore him children: one daughter, Prima, so called from the order of birth, and one son only, whom Romulus named Aollius, from the great concourse? of citizens under him, but later ages Avillius. However, Zenodotus of Troezen, who gives us this account, is contradicted by many.

XV. Among those who ravished away the maidens at that time, it chanced, they say, that certain men of meaner sort were dragging along a damsel who far surpassed the rest in beauty and stature ; and when some men ef superior rank met them and tried to rob them of their prize, they cried out that they were conducting the girl to Talasius, a young man, but one of excellent repute. The other party, then, on hearing this, shouted and clapped their hands in approval, and some of them actually turned back

1 The thirty divisions into which the three ancient Roman tribes were divided for political and ceremonial purposes. Cf. Livy, i. 13, 6 f.

2 A Greek etymology, connecting the name with aodAdAfs, an throngs.

yapitt ToD Taraciov, peta Bons Tovvopa Pbery-/ 9 > hs 87 N T 4 ¥ A e youeévous. ad ov on Toy TaXaowov axpt viv, ws
"“EAAnves tov ‘Tyévacov, érradover “Pwpaiot rois
yao Kal yap evtvyia gaci ypnoacbar rept THY yuvaixa Tov Taddovov.
4 LéEtTios 5€ YArAas o Kapyndovos, ovte povcov ovTe Yapitwy éridens avnp, Edreyeyv Huty Gre THS aprayns cwwOnua Thy dovny EwKe TavTHY oO
“e@ , ¢ ¢ A , I19/ e
Pwpvros. amavtes otv tov Tadrdovoyv éBowy ot Tas TrapOévous xopivoytes: Kal 1a TodTO Tos ya-pots Tapapéver TO E005. of b€ TWAEloTOL vopitov-

ov, wy nal “loBas éoti, tapdxAnow elvar Kar mTapakérevory eis direpyiay Kal tadaciav, orm g ~ e a > lA la) > A tote tots EAAnvixots ovopace tav ‘ItadiKcov émixeyupévov. ef 5 TodTO pn A€yeTaL KAKOS, GAN éyp@vto ‘Pwyaio: Tore TH GvopaTe THs
Tadacias, xaddrep jets, érépay ay tts aitiay eixdoee TLavwtépay. érrel yap of SaBivor pos
\ € 4 4... , b]
tous Pwpaious roreunoavtes Siunr\rAdynoar, éyévovto cvvOjKat Tept TOV yuvatKkav, STws pNndev
” 4 A b 4 A \ \ ‘4
aNAO Epyov Tots avdpdow 7 Ta Tept THY TAAAGiaY UToUpy@ol. Tapéuewev ovv Kal Tos avOts yapovat Tous didovtas 4 maparéutrovtas 4 Sdws TapovTas, avadwvety Tov Tadrdotov peta Tradias, paptupopévous ws er’ ovdev AdXO Hrrovpynpa THs yuvaixos 7 TaXaclav eicayomévns. Siapéver Sé
4 A ‘ A a, > \ 9 4? e HA A HEXpL vUY TO THY vUEpHY auUTnY ad avuUTHS py
e , \ IQA > \ 4 9 p uTepBaivey tov ovdov els TO dSwpudtiov, aXXr aipomevny cladéperBar, dia TO Kai ToTE KomcOH-132

and accompanied them, out of good will and favour to Talasius, shouting his name as they went along. Hence, indeed, down to the present time, Talasius is the nuptial cry of the Romans, as Hymenaeus is of the Greeks; for they say that Talasius was fortunate in his wife.

But Sextius Sulla, the Carthaginian, a man who lacks neither learning nor charm, told me_ that Talasius was the word which Romulus gave as a watchword for the rape. All those, therefore, who took the maidens away, shouted “ Talasius !’’ and on this account the custom now prevails at mar- riages. But most writers are of the opinion—and Juba is one of them—that the cry is an exhor- tation and incitement to industry and “ talasia,” as the Greeks aall spinning, Italian words having not yet at that time entirely submerged the Greek. Now if this is right, and the Romans did at that time use the word “talasia’’ for spinning, as we do, then a more credible reason for the custom might be conjectured as follows. When the Sabines, after their war against the Romans, were reconciled with them, it was agreed that their women should perform no other tasks for their husbands than those which were connected with spinning. It was customary, therefore, at subsequent marriages, for those who gave the bride away, or escorted her to her new home, or simply looked on, to cry “Talasius !”’ merrily, in testimony that the woman was led home for no other task than that of spinning. And it continues to be a custom down to the present time that the bride shall not of herself cross the threshold into her new home, but be lifted up and carried in, because the Sabine women were carried in

133

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

vat Bracbeioas,"y1 eicerOeiv.' Evo bé Aéyouce Kal TO THY KOuNY THS yapoupévyns atyun SeaxpivesOat Sopatiov cvpBodov elvat Tov peTa WAXNS Kal TONELLKAS TOV Tp@TOV yamov yevéerOat: trepl av émimnéoy év Tois Aitiots epnKkaper.
? 4 \ @ e @ \ \ >

ErorpunOn pév ody 4 aptayn mepl THY oKTH-

, e 4 a 4 4 f

KaLdEKaTHY Huépav Tov TOTE pev YeETLALOV puNVOS, Avyovotou 8 viv, ev % tHhv tov Kwvoadiov éopTny ayovatv.
XVI. Of 5é ZaBivor worrol perv joav Kai
TONE MLKOL, KOpas Sé M@KOUY ATELYiC TOUS, WS TpOCjKov avtois péya dpoveiy cal py poBeicbas AaxeSatpoviwy aroikos oto. ov pny ard

OpavTes avToUS évdedepévous pEeyarOLs Ounpevpact, Kat Sedcotes Trept Tav Ouyatépwv, mpéc Bes arré-OTELNAY ETTLELKT Kal péTPLA TPOKGAOUpPEVOL, TOY
e 4 > / , > a a,
Pwpvroy atrodovta Tas Kopas avtois Kal AvVCav-Ta 70 THs Bias Epyov, eita teBot Kal voy mpatrew Tots yéveore didiav Kal oixetoTnTAa. TOD Sé 'Pwytrov Tas pevy Kopas py mWpotepévor, Tapakadodvtos 8 Thy Kowvwviay déyecBat Tovs SaBivous, of pev dAXot BovAevopevor kab trapaaoxevalopevoe StétptBov, "Axpwv dé Bactreds Kevyytav, avnp Ovpoedns nat Sewods év rots
TONELLKOLS, TA TE TP@TA TOApHnpaTa TOD Pwpd-Nou oe' Utrovpias elye, Kal T@ mpayOévte trept Tas yuvaixas 67 poBepov Hryovmevos TacL elvat Kat OUK avEKTOV, eb pn KoAATOEin, Tpoc~avéoTyn THE Tokéum Kal peTa TorArARS exper Suvdpews em'
1 uh eloerdeivy bracketed by Bekker.
134

by force, and did not go in of their own accord. And some say also that the custom of parting the bride's hair with the head of a spear is a reminder that the first marriage was attended with war and fighting ; on which topic I have spoken more fully in my " Roman Questions." !

Leaving such matters aside, the rape was committed on the eighteenth day of the month once called Sextilis, but now, August, on which day the festival of the Consualia ? is celebrated.

XVI. Now the Sabines were a numerous and war- like people, and dwelt in unwalled villages, thinking that it behoved them, since they were Lacedae- monian colonists, to be bold and fearless. Neverthe- less, seeing themselves bound by precious hostages, and fearing for their daughters, they sent ambassa- dors with reasonable and moderate demands, namely, that Romulus should give back to them their maidens, disavow his deed of violence, and then, by persua- sion and legal enactment, establish a friendly re- | lationship between the two peoples. But Romulus would not surrender the maidens, and demanded that the Sabines should allow community of mar- riage with the Romans, whereupon they all held long deliberations and made extensive preparations for war. But there was one exception. Acron, king of the Caeninenses, a man of courageous spirit and skilled in war, had been suspicious of the daring deeds of Romulus from the beginning, and now that this violence had been done the women, thinking him a menace to all peoples, and intolerable unless chastised, at once rose up in arms, and with a great

1 Morals, p. 285 c (Question 87).

2 A harvest festival, named: from Consus. See chapter xiv. 3.

4 avtov: xal-o 'Pwpiros én' éxeivov. yevouevor &

év Owes xal xatidovtes ANANAOUS TPOvKAXNODYTO payecOat, THY oTpatevpdtwy év Tois SToLs atpexovvTwyv. evédpevos otv o 'Pwpvros, e xpaTnoee Kal KataBdro., T@ Aut dépwy avaln- cely AUTOS TA OWAG TOD avipos, aUTOY TE KaTA- Barre. xparnoas Kal tpémeras TO oTparevpa paxns yevopevns, aipet S¢ eal thy Tod: ov pny nolanoe Tovs éyxaTaArndOévtas, GAN 4 Tas oixias éxéXevoe KaedXovtas axorovbeiv eis "'Paduny, ws

monitas emt rois tlaous écopévous.
Tovtou pev obv ovx dati 6 Te padrov nignoce THY ‘Poyny, adel 7 poamovova ay éautn kal ovpvépquoay ov Kpatnceev: o dé “Pawpvnros, as. dv padsota Thy evyny TO TE Aut Keyapiopévnv cal
Trois Todas iSeiv emitepTry Tapdoxor oKeyd-
| pevos, él otpatotédsou Spiv Eteyev UreppeyéOn,

Kal Suesoppwcey WaoTrEp TpOTTALOY, Kal TOY OTAWwY
tov “Axpwvos éxaotov év taker trepinppoce Kal Karnptncey: avros bé thy pev eoOtTa Trept-eCwcato, Sadvy Sé dotépato thy Kepadny kope-cav. .uro\aBov b€ Te Sefig@ TO TpOTALOY Bum
mpocepedopepov opov, éBddilev eEapywv émiwixiov tTasavos év Sirdoes érropern TH oTparia, Sexopmeveoy TOV TOMTOV peta xapas xal Oadpua-TOS. 1%) pev ovv Tom TOV abdis Pptdp Bev apynv kal Cnrov mapécxe tO S5é tpotatoy avaforce advanced against him.! Romulus also marched out to meet him. But when they were face to face and had surveyed each other, they challenged mutually to single combat before battle, while their armies remained quiet under arms. Romulus, then, after making a vow that if he should conquer and overthrow his adversary, he would carry home the man’s armour and dedicate it in person to Jupiter, not only conquered and overthrew him, but also routed his army in the battle which followed, and took his city as well. To the captured citizens, however, he did no harm beyond ordering them to tear down their dwellings and accompany him to Rome, where, he promised them, they should be citizens on equal terms with the rest.
aN

ROMULUS

Now this, more than anything else, was what gave increase to Rome: she always united and incor- porated with herself those whom she conquered. But Romulus, after considering how he might perform his vow in a manner most acceptable to Jupiter and accompany the performance with a spectacle most pleasing to the citizens, cut down a monstrous oak that grew in the camp, hewed it into the shape of a trophy, and fitted and fastened to it the armour of Acron, each piece in its due order. Then he himself, girding his raiment about him and wreathing his flowing locks with laurel, set the trophy on his right shoulder, where it was held erect, and began a triumphal march, leading off in a paean of victory which his army sang as it followed under arms, and being received by the citizens with joyful amazement. This procession was the origin and model of all subsequent , triumphs, and the

1 Cf. Livy, i. 10.
137
er
4
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Onua Peperpiov Aros érrwvopdcOn. 16 yap TrA-Ear hepipe ‘Pwpaios xadrodow: evEato ¢ wAnEae 7 Tov dvdpa kal xataBareiy: oripia 5¢ ta cKdda,

gnot Bdppwv, xabors kal thv meptovoiay dep ANéyovet. wiBavwrepov & av tis eltror Sta Thy mpakiv: Oirovs yap dovoyalerat TO épyov. av-toupy@ 5€ apioteias oTpaTny@ oTpaTnyov dave-Dovte Séb0Tar KaGtépwors omripior.
Kal tpiot povors tovtov tuyely umapke ‘Po-paios Hyepoot, mpate “Papvr\., Kxtelvaytt Tov Kevvntny “Axpwva, Sevrépm Kopynrtio Koocg, Tuppnvoy dverovte Torovpmov, émt maar Se
Kravdie Maprédr@, Bpitroydprov xpatnoavti Taratav Baoiréws. Koooos peév otv nal Map-KerXroS On TeOpitrmos Eeionravvoy avTol Ta tpoTa:a épovte: ‘Pwpvrov & ove opbas dno dppat. yxpnoacGa, Atovictos. Tapxuvov yap tatopovat tov Anpapatov tov Bactréwv pero
eis TOUTO TO oYHpa Kal Tov byxov éEapar Tovs OptdpBovs: Erepor S€ mpawrov éd’ Apparos Oprap-Bedoat Tomrdixorav. tod dé ‘Pwpvtr0ov ras eixovas opay értiy év ‘Pan tas tpomaropopous melas aTacas.
XVII. Meta dé trav Kevivntayv addwow ere tev adAwv LaBivwv év tapackevais évtwv, cvvéatn-cay ot Didnvnv xai Kpovorouvpépiov xai *Avépvay oiKxodrtes él rods ‘Pwpaious: nal payns
ee

ROMULUS

trophy was styled a dedication to Jupiter Feretrius, so named from the Roman word “ ferire,” to sméte ;
for Romulus vowed to smite his foe and overthrow him. And such spoils were called “ opima,” because as Varro says, “ opes”’ is the Roman word for richness ;

but it would be more plausible to say that they were so called from the deed of valour involved, since " opus" is the Roman word for deed or exploit. And only to a general who with his own hand has performed the exploit of slaying an opposing general, has the privilege of dedicating the " spolia opima " been granted.

Furthermore, only three Roman leaders have at- tained this honour: Romulus first, for slaying Acron the Caeninensian ; next, Cornelius Cossus, for killing Tolumnius the Tuscan ;! and lastly, Claudius Marcellus, for overpowering Britomartus, king of the Gauls.? Cossus indeed, and Marcellus, already used a four-horse chariot for their entrance into the city, carrying the trophies themselves, but Dionysius ® is incorrect in saying that Romulus used a chariot. For it is matter of history that Tarquin, the son of Demaratus, was first of the kings to lift triumphs up to such pomp and ceremony, although others say that Publicola was first to celebrate a triumph riding on a chariot. And the statues of Romulus bearing the trophies are, as may be seen in Rome, all on foot.

XVII. After the capture of the Cuaeninensians, while the rest of the Sabines were still busy with their preparations, the people of Fidenae, Crustu- merium, and Antemnae banded together against the

1 In 436 B.c., according to Livy, iv. 19, 1-5.
2 In 222 B.c. See Plutarch's Marcellus, vii.
3 Antiq. Rom. ii. 34. 4 Cf. Publicola, ix. 5.
139

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

/ e 4 e / VA / €
yevoperns ntTnOévtes omoiws, Tas Te TONES Po-PUA® TraphKay édely Kal thy yopav SacacIat kal petouicas odas avtovs eis 'Pounv. o &é ¢ , \ \ " / oy fs
Pwpvros THY pev AAANY KaTEVELLE YMOPAY TOIS
jonitas, donv 8 elyov of TeV npTacuévwr TmapQévwv Tatépes, avTous Eye exeivous elacev.
"Eml rovrows Bapéws pépovtes oi Aowtrrol La-Bivoc Tariov dodeiEavtes otpatnyov émrt tiv
'p , bY 4 9 de PY , 5 e /
apny éotpatevaav Hv 5€é dvampocodos 7 Tors, éyovca mpoBdAnpua to viv Kamitodov, ev @ ghpoupa xaberornxe: nal Taprrnios hryepov avris, bd \ of. , € 4 / > /
ovxt Taprnia trapBévos, ws évior Néyovow, evHnOn Tov 'Pwpvrov amodexvuovtes' adda Ouydrnp 7
Taprnia tod apyovtos ovca trpovdwxe toils Da-Bivois, émOupjoaca TOV xpvo ov Bpaxovirrnpey

ovs elde TEpiKelpevors, Kal nTNOE puobov THS 7 po-Socias a popoien € év Tas aptotepais yepot. ourde-pévou b€ Tov Tartiov, vixtwp avoi~aca mUAnY pilav 256 ‘\ > 4 td LA 9 e 4
é6éEato tovs YaBivous. ov povos odv, ws Eorxer,
"Avtiryovos pn mpodsdovtas pév direiv, 7podedwxotas b€ puceiv, ovde Kaioap, eimav émi too @paxos ‘Powuntadxov, perety pev mpodociay, ™po-Sorny dé poet GANG KOLVOY TL TOUTO 7 aBos éoti ™pos Tavs Trovnpovs Tois Seopévots avTav, Oamep tov Kat _Xonais éviwy Onpiov Séovrar tH yap xpetav bre hap Bavovowy dayaTavres, exPaipovar THY KaKiav oTav TUX WOE. TOUTO Kat TWpos THY Taprniav tote mabe@v o Tdtios éxédevoe pepmyn-140

28

ROMULUS

Romans,! and in a battle which ensued, they were likewise defeated, and surrendered to Romulus their cities to be seized, their territory to be divided, and themselves to be transported to Rome. Romulus distributed among the citizens all the territory thus acquired, excepting that which belonged to the parents of the ravished maidens ; this he suffered its owners to keep for themselves.

At this the rest of the Sabines were enraged, and after appointing Tatius their general, marched upon Rome. The city was difficult of access, having as its fortress the present Capitol, on which a guard had been stationed, with Tarpeius as its captain,— not Tarpeia, a maiden, as some say, thereby making Romulus a simpleton. But Tarpeia, a daughter of the commander, betrayed the citadel to the Sabines, having set her heart on the golden armlets which she saw them wearing, and she asked as payment for her treachery that which they wore on their left arms. Tatius agreed to this, whereupon she opened one of the gates by night and let the Sabines in. Antigonus was not alone, then, in saying that he loved men who offered to betray, but hated those who had betrayed ; nor yet Caesar, in saying of the Thracian Rhoemetalces, that he loved treachery but hated a traitor; but this is a very general feeling towards the base on the part of those who need their services, just as they need certain wild creatures for their venom and gall; for while they feel the need of them, they put up with them, but abhor their vileness when they have obtained from them what they want. This, too, was the feeling which Tatius then had towards Tarpeia, when he ordered

1 Cf, Livy, i. 11.
141
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, aA e a \ / \
pévouvs TOV Gporoyt@v Tovs LaBivous jndevos avth POoveivy wy év tails apiotepais Exovot. Kal mpa@tos dua tov Bpaxroviotnpa THs ‘KeErpos
A a. \ ‘ > / , \ TepieA@v Kal Tov Ovpeoy étréppie. travtwv &é
avTo TotovvTtwy BadrAomevn TE TO Ypve@ xal kataxwobcioa toils Oupeois wird mrHOovs Kal
, > / es \ \ fe
Bdpous améBavev. éddw 8é kal Tapmnios mpo-Soaias tro “Pwptrou diwxGeis, ws “loBas gpyol
TdrBayv Yovrrixcoy ioropeiv. tov & adda wepi
Taprnias Aeyovtwr amiPavor pév eto ot Tatiou Ouyatépa tod ryemovos Tav LaBivwv oveay av-THv, “Pwoptr@ Sé Bia suvoixotcay, iotopodvTes
A a ,
tadta Toinoat Kal tadeiy vmrép Tov TraTpos wv kai ’Avtiyovds éott. pvros 8 oO wantHs Kal mavramac. Anpel py LaPivors oidpevos, adra KeAtois tHv Taprniav mpodobva: ro Kamita@dtov 9 ray > A fe) 4 , A épacBeicav avtav tov Bacidéws. Déyer dé TaUTAa’
‘H & ayyod Tdpresa twrapal KamitoXuov altos vaiovaa ‘Pons érrero TEevyoréTts, KeAtov 7) orépEaca yaundta Néxtpa yevéc Oar TKNTTOVKO, TATépwY oUK épirake Sopous.
Kal met Oriya trepl THS TeNEUTAS

Thy & ov’ &p Boioi re xal &Ovea pupia Kerrav

4 e / 9 \ 54 4

Xnpapevor pel\Opwv évros EBevto I1ddou:

ef > 9 4 > 4 ? \ A

dara 5 émimpoBarovtes dpepavéwy aro Yetpav xovpn él atuyepy Koopoy &bevto povov.
142

ROMULUS

his Sabines, mindful of their agreement, not to begrudge the girl anything they wore on their left arms. And he was first to take from his arm not only his armlet, but at the same time his shield, and cast them upon her. All his men followed his _ example, and the girl was smitten by the gold and buried under the shields, and died from the number and weight of them. And Tarpeius also was convicted of treason when prosecuted by Romulus, as, according to Juba, Sulpicius Galba relates. Of those who write differently about Tarpeia, they are worthy of no belief at all who say that she was a daughter of Tatius, the leader of the Sabines, and was living w;th Romulus under compulsion, and acted and suffered as she did, at her father's behest; of these, Antigonus is one. And Simylus the poet is altogether dbsurd in supposing that Tarpeia betrayed the Capitol, not to the Sabines, but to the Gauls, because she had fallen in love with their king. These are his words :—

"And Tarpeia, who dwelt hard by the Rapitotian steep, Became the destroyer of the walls of Rome;
She longed to be the wedded wife of the Gallic chieftain, -
And betrayed the homes of her fathers."'

And a little after, speaking of her death : —

" Her the Boii and the myriad tribes of Gauls
Did not, exulting, cast amid the currents of the oO 4
But hurled the shields from their belligerent arms
Upon the hateful maid, and made their ornament her doom."

XVIII. Tis pévros Taprnias éxel tagelans 0 Ogos avopalero Taprnios, axpt ov Tapeuviov Bactréws Act tov tomov Kabrepobvros a dua Te Ta Aeinrava peTnvexOn Kal ToUvopa TAS Taprnias éFéXurre. mAnv Tétpav tt vov ev 78 Karitworip Taprniav Karovow, ad Hs éppintovy tous KaKoupyous.

'E opevns dé Tis axpas Ue TOV ZaPivor, 6 6 Te

‘Popvros um opyyiis Els ayn avrous 7 povKa-retro, Kal) Tarios eOdppet, Kaptepay, et Bta-aOeiev, dvaxwpnaww opay avtois Umdpxovaay.
0 yap petakd toTOs, év o CUM IT TELY EuedXop, UTO TOAN@Y hopov TELEX OWEVOS ayava pev ee
édoxer Kal Xander ov ve Svaxwpias apporé pots mapeEey, guyas bé Kal dia£ets ép oTEV@ Bpaxelas. eTUXE dé Tob TOTALOV ALLVATAVTOS OV TrOA-ais mpoTepov HEPALS, éyrataneneth Gat TEA pa Badu Kal TUprov év TOTOLS émuméedous KATA THY vov ovoay aryopay" 50ev ovK Hv dypec ‘™podnror, ovo" evpvAaxTor, adXrAwWS be Xander ov Kal Umounov.
emt TovTO Tois LaPivors drretpig Pepouevors EvTUxXnea ylyverat. Koupteos yap avnp emupavyps, b0€n kal ppovnpare yadpos, trarov EXeov TON
Tpo TOY GAdwv éx@pee’ deFapévou dé Tob Bapa-Opov Tov tmmov aypl pev TLVOS émetpaTo TANT
Kal TAPAKENEUG EL NP@pevos efedavvey, as iv apnxavon, €acas Tov im ov éauTOV éawtev. 6
pev ovv romos Ob. éxetvoy ert viv Kovptios AdxKos dvopateras: puratdpevor dé TOV Kivduvov of 2a-Bivoe paxny Kaptepay éuaxéravTo Kpiow ov
NaBodcay, Kaito TOAAOY TrecovT?, év ols HY Kal 144

ROMULUS

XVIII. However, Tarpeia was buried there, and the hill was called from her Tarpeius, until King Tarquin dedicated the place to Jupiter, when her bones were removed and the name of Tarpeia died out, except that a cliff on the Capitol is still called the Tarpeian Rock, from which they hurl male-factors. _

The citadel thus occupied by the Sabines,? Romulus angrily challenged them to battle, and Tatius was bold enough to accept, since he saw that the Sabines, if worsted, had a strong place of retreat. For the intervening space, in which they were to join battle, being surrounded by many hills, seemed to impose upon both parties a sharp and grievous contest, owing to the difficulties of the field, where flight and pursuit must be narrowly confined and short. It happened, too, since the river had overflowed not many days before, that a deep and blind slime had been left in the valley where the forum is now. Wherefore it was not apparent to the eye, nor yet easy to avoid, and besides it was soft beneath the surface and dangerous. On to this the Sabines were ignorantly rushing, when a piece of good fortune be- fell them. Curtius, a conspicuous man among them, eager for glory and high aan was advancing on horseback far in front of the rest, when his horse sank in the gulf of mud. For some time he tried to drive him out, with blows and cries of encourage- ment, but since: it was impossible, he abandoned his horse and saved himself. Accordingly, the place to this day is‘called from him “lacus Curtius.” But the Sabines, having avoided this peril, fought a sturdy fight, and one which was indecisive, although

1 Cf. Livy, i. 12.

5 ‘Ootinos. todrov “Epoirtias dvdpa nat wamrov 29 ‘OoriAtov tov petra Nopav Bactrevoavtos ye-véaOat rAéyovotv. avOis 8€ ToAAaY ayovery év Bpaxet ovvictapévar, os eixds, vos paddoTa TOD TeAeuTAiou pynpovevovowy, ev @ “Paptrov THY Keparyy tArAnyévTOS NO@ Kal Teceiv odio SE7-aavtos Tod 7 avtéxew ddepévov Tots LaBivoss, évédwxay of ‘Pwpaio. cal puyh mpos To TlaXdteov
6 éy@povy éEwfovpevos tov émimédov. 76n 5é o “Pwpvros ex THs TANyHAS advahépwy éBovreTO pév eis Ta StrAa Ywpeiv Tois Pevryovor évaytins, Kar péya Bowv iotacba: nai payecOas Trapexdarer.
ToAAns 5é€ THS guvyns avT@ reptyeopevns Kal
pndevos avactpépery toApa@vTos, avatelvas els ovpavoy tas xeipas evEato TH Act othoat rd
aotpdtevpa Kal Td Popaiwy mpdypatra tecovTa 7 py teptidely, GAN dpOacat. ‘yevopévns 5é Tis evyns, aides te TOD Bactréws Eaxe TrordXovs Kal Bapoos éx petaBorns tapéotn trois pevryovaey.
ésTnoav ovv mpa@tov o8 viv o tov Ards Tov Yraropos téputat vews, by éemictacioy dy Tes épunvevoeev’ elta auvactioaytes wad Ewoay oTiaw Tous LaBivous émt thy viv “Pyyav mpoc-ayopevopéevny Kai To THS “Eotias iepov.
XIX. ’Evtadda 8 avtovs dorep && trapyis
payecOar tapacKxevalopévous erréoye Servov idety Péapa nal Aoyou KpeitTwY ois. ai yap HpTraopevat Ovyatépes TOV LaBivwv whOnoav adrraobev ddAXat peta Bors Kal orXoAVYypod Sia Thy OmAwv hepopevar Kal Tov vexpav, WaTrep ex Oeod
ROMULUS

many fell, among whom was Hostilius. This man, they say, was husband of Hersilia! and grandfather to the Hostilius who was king after Numa. After- wards many conflicts raged within a short time, as might be expected, but one is most memorable, namely the last, in which Romulus was hit on the head with a stone and almost fell to the ground, abandon- ing his resistance to the Sabines. The Romans thereupon gave way and began to fly to the Palatine, now that they were repulsed from the plain. But presently Romulus, recovering from his blow, wished to stem the tide of fugitives and renew the battle, and called upon them with a loud voice to stand and fight. But as the waves of flight encompassed him and no man dared to face about, he stretched his hands towards heaven and prayed Jupiter to stay his army and not suffer the Roman cause to fall, but to restore it. No sooner was his prayer ended than many stopped out of reverence for their king, and courage returned to the fugitives. They made their first stand, then, where now is the temple of Jupiter Stator, which epithet might be interpreted as Stayer. Then they closed their ranks again and drove the Sabines back to where the so-called Regia? now stands, and the temple of Vesta. |

XIX. Here, as they were preparing to renew the battle, they were checked by a sight that was wonderful to behold and a spectacle that passes description.2 The ravished daughters of the Sabines were seen rushing from every direction, with shouts and lamentations, through the armed men and the

1 Cf. chapter xiv. 6 f.
2 In historical times, the house of the Pontifex Maximus. See Numa, xiv. 1. 3 Cf. Livy, i. 13.

KaTOYOL, TpOS TE TOS avdpas avTaY Kal TOUS Tatépas, ai pev tradia Kopitovoat vymia mpos tais ayxddats, ai S€ THY KOpNVY TpoicxXopevat NeAupEeVnY, Taga 5 avaxadovpevat Tos PiATa-ToOls 'ovouaot mote pey Tovs YaBivous, rote Se \ e / ; a) 4 ® > , tovs 'Pwpaious. érexrdaOnoav otv apdotepot, kal Séoxov avtais évy péowm Katacthvat THs mapatakews: cal kXavO pos dpa bua wdvtwv éyo-7 9 / \ oy \ pet, Kal TOADS olxTOS Hv Tpos TE THY OLY Kal '\ , a > e \ 4 TOUS AOyous éTt pAAXov, cis ixeciav Kal dénory éx Sixatoroyias xal tappynoias TeXevtavtas. "Ti A " "ea \ 4 \ > , yap (€pacav) vpds dSevoy 1 AUTNpOV Eépyacd-peval, Ta pey Hon TreTOvOapev, Ta b& TaaKXopLEV TOY CXETAiwY KaKaV; HpTacOnyey bTO TOV VOY éyovrav Bia Kal trapavipws, apracbeica & npernonuev on' adeXdav Kal tatépwv xal oi-Kelwy "povoy TocoUTOY Saos Huas mpos TA eyO-oTa Kepdcas Tais peyiota avdyKats, TeTOinKe

yov urép tov Biacapévwy Kal rrapavounoartwy Sedsévar payopévoy cat xralev OvnoKdvtwv. ov yap nAOeTE TLLwpHaorTeEs Huiy TapOévors odvaaLS
2 N\ \ b A ¥) \ a > A) a él Tovs adtxodyTas, GAA viv avdpay aTroonate yaperas kal téxvwy pntépas, oixtpotépav Bon-Jevav éxelvys tis apedeias' Kal mpodoctas Bon-Oobvres july tats dOdats. TovadTa peéev nyatn-Onuev bd TovTwr, ToLadTa Sé bh tpayv édeov-> b v > / > J 4
peOa. Kal yap ei 8 addnv aitiay éudyeobe, mavoacbar &." pas mevOepods yeyovotas Kai dead bodies, as if in a frenzy of possession, up to their husbands and their fathers, some carrying oung children in their arms, some veiled in their dishevelled hair, and all calling with the most endearing names now upon the Sabines and now upon the Romans. So then both armies were moved to compassion, and drew apart to give the women place between the lines of battle; sorrow ran through all the ranks, and abundant pity was stirred by the sight of the women, and still more by their words, which began with argument and reproach, and ended with supplication and entreaty. "Wherein, pray (they said), have we done you wrong or harm, that we must suffer in the past, and must still suffer now, such cruel evils? We were violently and lawlessly ravished away by those to whom we now belong, but though thus ravished, we were neglected by our brethren and fathers and kinsmen until time had united us by the strongest ties with those whom we had most hated, and made us now fear for those who had treated us with violence and lawlessness, when they go to battle, and mourn for them when they are slain. For ye did not come to avenge us upon our ravishers while we were still maidens, but now ye would tear wives from their husbands and mothers from their children, and the succour wherewith ye would now succour us, wretched women that we are, is more pitiful than your former neglect and abandonment of us. Such is the love which we have here enjoyed, such the compassion shown to us by you. Even if ye were fighting on other grounds, it were meet that ye should cease for our sakes, now that ye are become fathers-in-law and grandsires and have 149

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ > , v. > n >] e \
5 Twammous Kal oikelovs OvTas éxyphy. et 8 wrrép Nav O TOAELOS éoTL, Kopicacbe Huas peta
yap Bpov kal téxvwyv cal atrodote huiv watépas
, 4 a
Kai obKeLous, unde apérAnabe Traidas nal avdpas.
LXETEVOPEV UPAS fy) TAALY aiyparwrToL yevér Oat." Totadta moda tis "Epotdias mpoaryopev-
, \ a v 4 b ,
ovens Kal Tov dANwv Seopéevworv, éeoTreicOnoav
9 A \ A ? 4 ee , e
6 dvoxat Kai avvAdov ets Noyous ot nyEpoves. at dé yuvaixes ev TovT@ Tois Tatpdot Kal Tois tO "A \ # 5 (o] A \ / 1
aderdois tous avdpas mpoonyov Kal ta Téxva, mpocépepoy te tpodyny kal trotov Tots Seopévors, Kal Tovs TeTpwpévous eOepdmevov olkace Kopi-Covoar Kal Twapelyoyv opav apyovaas pev avtas
TOU olxov, mpocéxovtas dé Tovs avdpas avrais
7 kal per evvoias tiny amacay véuovtas. éx TovTouv ouyTidevtat THY pev yuvatxav Tas Bovdopévas cuvotkeiy trois Exovow, Womep cipnras,
\ *
TaVTOS Epyou Kal Taons NaTpElas TANY TAaXacias
> 4 > a \ A \ 4 e 4, adepevas oixety b€ Kowwn THY TOdLV 'Pwpaious
kat LaBivous, nat KareicOar pev "Pdynv én
; €
'Pwpvrg thy mod, Kupitas 5€ "Pwpaious
adnavras ént +H Tartiov tatpisd:, Bacidevery dé Kown Kal otparnyeivy daphorépovs. Srrov 6é
a A 4 a
Travta avvéJevto péexpt viv Kopitioy xaretrac:
Koptpe yap 'Pwpaioe to cuvedOeivy Karovor.
XX. Autractacbeions S€ THs TOAEWS, ExaToV
pev éx LaBivwrv twarpixioe mpooxateréyOnoar, ai 1 +4 réxva Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske: réxva.

family ties among your enemies. If, however, the war is on our behalf, carry us away with your sons-in-law and their children, and so restore to us our fathers and kindred, but do not rob us of our children and husbands. Let us not, we beseech you, become prisoners of war again.’

Many such appeals were made by H ersilia, and the other women added their entreaties, until a truce was made and the leaders held a confer- ence. Meanwhile the women brought their hus- bands and their children and presented them to their fathers and brothers; they also carried food and drink to those that wanted, and bore the wounded to their homes for tender nursing; here they also made it evident that they were mistresses of their own households, and that their husbands were attentive to them and showed them all honour with good will. Thereupon agreements were made that such women as wished to do so might continue to live with their husbands, exempt, as aforesaid,! from all labour and all drudgery except spinning; also that the city should be inhabited by Romans and Sabines in common; and that the city should be called Rome, from Romulus, but all its citizens Quirites, from the native city of Tatius?; and that Romulus and Tatius should be joint kings and leaders of the army. The place where these agreements were made is to this day called Comitium, from the Roman word “ conire,’”’ or “ coire,’ to come together.

XX. The city thus doubled in its numbers, a hundred of the Sabines were added by election to the Patricii,s and the legions were enlarged

1 Cf. chapter xv. 4. =? Cures, a Sabine town.

* Cf. chapter xiii. 1.

dé Aevewves éyévovro metov pev éEaxioxyidonr, immévwy 5é éEaxooiwy. uras bé Tpeis KaTAaCT TH CavTes @vOmacay Tovs pev aro ‘Pwpmvrovu ‘Pap- vyvons, tovs &€ amd Tariou Tatinvons: tpitous 5¢ Aouxepyvons Sa TO adoos, ets 6 Todo KaTa- guyovtes, GovAias Sedopévns, ToD modtTedvparos petécyov' Ta 5 Adon AovKous dvoudlovow. st 8 joav ai dural tocaitat, rotvoua paptupet: tpiBous yap éte viv tas pudas Kadovol, Kat tptBovvous tovs ghuddpyous. éxdotn Sé dvrAn déxa hparpias elyev, &s Evsot Neyouoey errwvipous elvat éxeivoy tav yuvatkav. todto Sé Soxel

weddos elvat: rodXNal yap éyovoww amd yopiov Tas mpoonyopias. adda pevToL TOANG tals yu-vaitly eis Tewhy améSwxay, dv Kal tadTa corey:
éFictacbar pev od00 Badifovaaus, aiax pov 58
pndéva pndev eirreiy trapovons yuvacxos, pnd OPOjvar yupvov, 4 Sixny hevyew mapa: trois émt Tov povixay Kabeotaat, hopeiv dé Kal tovs Tai-das avrov THY Kadoupéevny BodAXav amo Tov
g XMATOS» Guotov Troudorvyt, mepud¢pparov TL al mepeTroppupor.
*BBoudeborre dé. of Baornreis OvK ‘ebOds ey Kow@ per addprov, aXN’ éxdtepos 7 POTE pov idta pera Tov éxaTov, Elta oUTMS «Eis TAUTOV dmavras ouviyov. ret 5¢ Tdteos pev Srrov viv o tis Movirns vacs éorte, ‘Paopvros oe Tapa Tovs
Neryosuévous Babpous Kars axths.! oboe 5€ eicl
1 xadjjs daris @ corruption of Kdxov? Cf. Diodorus, iv.

to six thousand footmen and six hundred horse- men. The people, too, were arranged in three bodies, the first called Ramnenses, from Romulus ; the second Tatienses, from Tatius; and the third Lucerenses, from the grove into which many betook themselves for refuge, when a general asylum was offered,? and then became citizens. Now the Roman word for grove is “lucus.” ‘That these bodies were three in number, their very name testifies, for to this day they call them éribes, and their chief officers, trtbunes. And each tribe had ten phratries, or brotherhoods, which, as some say, were named after the thirty Sabine women;* but this seems to be false, since many of them bear the names of places. However, they did make many other concessions to the women, to do them honour, some of which are as follow: to give them the right of way when walking; not to utter any indecent word in the presence of a woman; that no man should be seen naked by them, or else that he be liable to prosecution before the judges of homicide ; and that their children should wear a sort of neck- lace, the “ bulla,” so called from its shape (which was that of a bubble), and a robe bordered with purple.

The two kings did not at once hold council in common with one another, but each at first sat with his own hundred councillors apart, then afterwards they united them all into one body, as at the present time. Tatius dwelt where now is the temple of Moneta, and Romulus beside the so-called Steps of Fair Shore ; ;* these are near the descent into the

! Cf. chapter xiii. 1. 2 Cf. chapter ix. 3. =

3 Cf. chapter xiv. 6. |

4 The Greek text is probably corrupt. The ‘‘scalae Caci,” or Steps of Cacus, must be meant.

153

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

> \ e 4 ‘ 4 9

wept THv eis Tov immddpopov Tov peyay éx Ila-Natlov xatdBacw. évtadOa &é nal rnv Kpa-verav Epacay TV iepay yeyovévat, uvOodXoyouvTES
@ 4 e ¢ 4 e A , J
OTL Treipw@pevos 0 ‘Pwuvros avTov AOYYXNY axovtiaetev aro TOU. Aoveytivoy to EvaTov éyovoay
, 4 a > le > 4
Kpaveias' xatadvons dé THs alypAs eis Baos, 9 U4 . bY 4 “
avaoTdacai pev ovdels metpwpévwoy TONY
” Q A 4 4 e a , 9
taxvaoe, TO O€ EvAOv EateEev 7 yn Cwdutos ovca,
A 3, A } > ,
kal Bracrovs avyxe Kal otérexos evpeéryebes
A > e
kpaveias GOpee. Ttodto 8 of peta ‘Pwmvrov @s Ov TL TOY aylwrdtwv lep@v huArattovtes Kat oeBopevot TEpleTELYLGaY. 6T@~ 5é Wpoctovte So-
\ \ , b :
Eee un Oarepov civas pndé yAwpov, adr’ olov
9 a ‘ / e A a
atpogeiy cai Pbivew, o pev evOus Eppale kpauryn
A 9 td A
Tois Wpootuyyavovet, ot 8, wormep eutTrpnou@

D ‘ bdwp,' Kal é-
BonOodvres, éBowv vdwp, p| Kal ouv
Tpeyov mavrayolev ayyeia wAnpn KopivovTes éml rov torov. Tatov dé Kaicapos, ds act, tas avaBaces émiaxevdlovtos Kal TOV TEXYVLTOV
4 4 es,
meptopuTTovTwY Ta TANnciov, EXaGov ai pita
caxwleioa Traytamact Kal to puTov éwapavOn.
XXI. Mavas peév ody oi LaBivor rots ‘Popaiov é5éEavro, «al trepl avtav boa Kados elyey ey Te Nopa Bip yéypamrar: Oupeois 5¢ Trois éxeivwy o
e “‘Pwywros éxypnoato, xal peténare Tov omALo pov

aA A >
éavtod te Kal Tov “Pwopaiwr, ApyoNcds tTpotepov aomidas dopovvtwy. éoprav dé Kal Ouovay dAAHAow petelyov, as pev Hye TA evn wpoTEepov oux avenrortes, etépas 5€ Oeuevor Katvdas, WY 7 TE tav Matpwvariov éorti, So0eica tais yuvackiv
1 §$3wp, JSwp with two Bodleian MSS. (B%>) : 83wp.

Circus Maximus from the Palatine. There also, it is said, grew the sacred cornel-tree, of which the following tale is told. Romulus, once, in trial of his strength, cast thither from the Aventine hill a spear, the shaft of which was made of cornel-wood ; the head of the spear sank deep into the ground, and no one had strength to pull it up, though many tried, but the earth, which was fertile, cherished the wooden shaft, and sent up shoots from it, and pro- duced a cornel-trunk of good size. Those who came after Romulus preserved this with religious care as one of the most sacred objects, and walled it in. And if any visitor thought that it was not green nor flourishing, but likely to wither away and die, he immediately proclaimed it loudly to all he met, and these, as though helping to save a house on fire, would cry “Water! Water!” and run _ together from all sides carrying full buckets to the place. But when Caius Caesar, as they say, was repairing the steps about the enclosure, and the workmen dug here and there in the neighbourhood, the roots were inadvertently destroyed and the tree withered away.

XXI. The Sabines, then, adopted the Roman months, about which I have written sufficiently in my Life of Numa.! Romulus, on the other hand, made use of their oblong shields, and changed his own armour and that of the Romans, who before that carried round shields of the Argive pattern. Feasts and sacrifices they shared with one another, not discarding any which the two peoples had observed before, but instituting other new ones. One of these is the Matronalia, which was bestowed upon the women to commemorate their putting a 1 Chapters xviii. and xix.

éml TH Tov TONe“oU KaTadUcE, Kal » Tov Kap-pevtariov. trav dé Kappévray olovrai tives peoipay elvat xupiav avOpworev yevécews: S10 Kal

‘Thao avTny ai pnrépes. ot S€ THY Tod Evdy-Spov tov ’Apxddos yuvaixa, pavtixny tiva Kat horBactinny éupétpov Xpnopav yevouévnv, Kappévrav étrovopacOnvar (Ta yap ern Kapmuva a N / 1 be 4 4 > A kadovar) Nixoorpatn! &€ Av dvopa Kvptov avr.
\ a \ ¢ a \ ,
Kat TovTO pev oporoyetrar’ thy 5é Kappévray
éo. wiPavw@tepov adepynvevovaw olov éorepypévny vou, dia Tas ev tois évOovotacpols Trapadpoctvas. TO pev yap orépecOar Kapype, pevtep Sé tov vovdv dvoudfovor. wept &€ tov Hapidiov mpocipntat. ta dé Aovmepxdda TO pev ypovm Sofecev dy elvar xaOdpora: Sparas yap éy yuépats dmoppact TOU PeBpovapiou paves, Ov xalapovov dv tis épunvevoee, cal tHv npépay éxetynv To qmadatov éxadrouv DeSpdrnv: tobvopa 5é Tihs
e A e Q\ 4 , A a QA €opTHs EAAnuioTL onuaiver AvKcawa, wai Sonet dia ra , ? 99 lA 2 ” \
TOUTO TapTdAaLos amr Apeddeov elvat TOY TrEpL Evavdpov. GAG TOTO pev KOLO éote’ SvVaTAL yap a0 THS AvKalvns ryevyovevas Tovvopa. Kat yap apYopevous THs Trepidpopijs tous AoviépKous opepev évted0ev Oro Tov “‘Popdrov cxreOivat ANéyouot, Ta dé Spmpeva thy aitiav rove SuctoTacTov apdttovet yap alyas, celta petpaxiwy dvoty amo 1 Nuxoorpdrn Coraés and Bekker with the MSS. : Nuxoorparn after Stephanus.
156

31

- ROMULUS

stop to the war; and another is the Carmentalia. This Carmenta is thought by some to be a Fate presiding over human birth,and for this reason she is honoured by mothers. Others, however, say that the wife of Evander the Arcadian,! who was a prophetess and inspired to utter oracles in verse, was therefore surnamed Carmenta, since “ carmina”’ is their word for verses, her own proper name being Nicostrate. As to her own name there is general agreement, but some more probably interpret Carmenta as meaning bereft of mind, because of her ecstasies under inspiration, since “ carere”’ is the Roman word for to be bereft, and “mens” for mind. . Of the Parilia I have spoken before.? . As for the Lupercalia, judging .by the time of its celebration, it would seem to be a feast of purification, for it is observed on the inauspicious days ° of the month of February, which name can be interpreted, to. mean purification, and the very day of the feast was anciently called Febrata. But the name of the festival has the meaning of the Greek “ Lycaea,” or feast of wolves, which makes it seem of great antiquity and derived from the Arcadians in the following of Evander.‘ Indeed, this meaning of the name is commonly accepted ; for it can be con- nected with the she-wolf of story. And besides, we see that the Luperci® begin their course around the city at that point where Romulus is said to have been exposed. However, the actual cere- monies of the festival are such that’ the reason’ for the name. is hard to guess. For the priests slaughtér

1 Cf. Plutarch’s Roman Questions, 56 (Morals, p. 278 b, c), and Livy, i. 7, 8 2 Chapter xii. 1. 7

3 «* Dies nefasti.” 4 Cf. Livy, i. 5, 1-2. ,

5 Priests of Faunus, the Roman Pan.

yévous mpocaxGévtwy avtois, oi- pev npayyern
’ A , , @ » 9
payaipa tov petwrrou Ouyydvovat, érepot 5° atro-4 bf ? wv 4 o
pattovow evOus, époy BeBpeypévoy yadXaxte
5 mpoopépovtes. yeray bé Set Ta perpuxia peTa THY

6

7

? , 9 \ , Q , A 2 A atropakw. éx € TovTov Ta déppata TOY aiyav katarepovtes SvaGéovor év repilwopact yupvol, Tois oxuTeat Tov éutrodwy taiovtes. ai & év
e 4 a 9 4 \ , @ , : HrLKLG yUvaiKes ov hevyovat TO TatecBat, vouifovgat wpos evtoKiay Kal Kuinow auvepyeiv. idsov 5é THs EopTns To Kab xvva Ove Tods AovTrépKous.
Bovras 5é tis aitias puOddes ev érexyetous \ fa) id - A > v4 A ~ > Tept TaV Pwpaixav avaypadar, dyol tov ’Apov-
€ ; ae a
Aiov Tovs Trept Tov Pwyvrov Kpatnoavtas éAOeiv
Spopm peta yapas emt tov Torey év & vywios 9 b A 4 \ e ‘ , ova avtois 1) NUKaiva Onriv dTrécyxe, Kal pipnpa
n ‘
tov te dSpopou tiv éoptny ayerOat, Kal Tpéxew

TOUS GO Yyévous TOUS
"Eptrodious tumrovras, Srrws ToTe Pdayay Exovtes
éE “AXBns EPcov ‘Pwpvaros 75é “Pépos. wal To pev Eidos nuayuévoy mpoodépecOar Ta peror@ Too Tore dovov Kat xwdvvou avpBoror, thv dé a Tod ydXaxtos arroxdbapow bTopynpa THS TpoPHs avTav eivat. Tdios 5 Axidsos iatopet mpo HS KTicews Ta Opéupata tev tepl Tov ‘Pwpvrov adpavn yevéerOar' tovs 5€ re Davy mpocev£éapévous éxdpapetiy yusvous ert thy Crrn-ow, STws vrd TOU idp@Tos py EevoydoivTo: Kal 158

as

ROMULUS

goats, and then, after two youths of noble birth have been brought to them, some of them touch their foreheads with a bloody knife, and others wipe the stain off at once with wool dipped in milk. The youths must laugh after their foreheads are wiped. After this they cut the goats’ skins into strips and run about, with nothing on but a girdle, striking all who meet them with the thongs,! and young married women do not try to avoid their blows, fancying that they promote conception and easy child-birth. A peculiarity of the festival is that the Luperci sacrifice a dog also.
A certain Butas, who wrote fabulous explanations of Roman customs in elegiac verse, says that Romulus and Remus, after their victory over Amulius, ran exultantly to the spot where, when they were babes, the she-wolf gave them suck, and that the festival is conducted in imitation of this action, and that the two youths of noble birth run “ Smiting all those whom they meet, as once with brandished weapons, Down from Alba’s heights, Remus and Romulus ran.

And that the bloody sword is applied to their fore- heads as a symbol of the peril and slaughter of that day, while the cleansing of their foreheads with milk is in remembrance of the nourishment which the babes received. But Caius Acilius writes that before the founding of the city Romulus and his brother once lost their flocks, and after praying to Faunus, ran forth in quest of them naked, that they might not be impeded by sweat; and that this is the reason why

1 Cf. Phutarch’s Antony, xii. 1.
159
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Sud TooTO yupvors TepuTpeXery TOUS Aourépxous.
Tov 5€ KUva hain Tis av, Et pev 4 Ovoia xabappos
8 date, OvecIar cabapaip Kpwpévav avT@ Kai yap
"EAAnves év Te TOUS KkaBapators oKUAAKAS expe-povot Kal mohhaxod Xpovrar TOUS eyopevoes Tmepia Kvaakco pois” et O€ Th AuKaivy YaptoTHpra TAvTA Kal Tpopeta Kal cwTnpia ‘Pwpidov TENOUow, OUK ATOTTAS O Kbov opdttetal' vUKOLS yap €oTe TOAEMLOS’ EL #1) vy Ata KonageTat TO S@ov
&s Tapevoyoby tous Aoviépxous Otay srept-Oéwar.
XXII. Aéyerat Sé cal thy Tmept TO Wup ayeoteiav ‘Pwpvrov KATAOTHO GL TPOTEV, aTrOoEL-Eavra mapOevovs lepas. ‘Eoteddas ™ poo aryopevopévas. oi 88 TodTo pev eis Nopav avadépovor, ta & adda TOV ‘Peoptrov OcoaeRh StadepovTas, ére O€ payrixov ia Topovar ryever Gar, nal popeiv emt pavTtkh TO Kadovpevoy hitvoy, éare bE Kear won papsos, 7 Ta TALVOLa nabeCopuevous én’
2 olwvav Siaypddew. todto 8 év Hadati¢p gu-NaTTOMEVOY adavia Oivat mept ta Kearrixa tH
ToAEWS GAOVoNS ElTAa pevTOL TOD | BapBdpwy
extrecavtwv evpeOjvar kata tTéppas Babeias arra-Oés bd TOU TUpos ev TaoL TOis AANOLS aTTOhW-
oot Kal SrepOappevors. |
3 "EOnxe dé Kal vopous TLVaS, OV a podpos peev éotw 6 yuvaxt pn 8.8005 GTTONELTELY dv6pa, yuvaixa Se didovs éxBddrew! ert pappareia Kal
1 éxBdddAew Bekker, after Corads: éxBareiy.
160
NS

ROMULUS

the Luperci run about naked. If the sacrifice is a purification, one might say that the dog is sacrificed as being a suitable victim for such rites, since the Greeks, in their rites of purification, carry forth puppies for burial, and in many places make use of the rites called “ periskuJakismoi ;”1 and if these rites are performed in grateful remembrance of the she-wolf that nourished and preserved Romulus, it is not without reason that the dog is slain, since it is an enemy to wolves, unless, indeed, the animal is thus punished for annoying the Luperci when they run about.

XXII. It is said also that Romulus first introduced the consecration of fire, and appointed holy virgins to guard it, called Vestals. Others attribute this institution to Numa,? although admitting that Romulus was in other ways eminently religious, and they say further that he was a diviner, and carried for purposes of divination the so-called “ lituus,” a crooked staff with which those who take auguries from the flight of birds mark out the regions of the heavens. This staff, which was carefully preserved on the Palatine, is said to have disappeared when the city was taken at the time of the Gallic invasion; after- wards, however, when the Barbarians had been expelled, it was found under deep ashes unharmed by the fire, although everything about it was com- pletely destroyed.’

He also enacted certain laws, and among them one of severity, which forbids a wife to leave her husband, but permits a husband to put away his wife

? Sacrifices where puppies were killed and carried about.
2 See Numa, chapters ix. and x.
3 Cf. Camillus, xxxii. 4-5.

TéKVOV UroBonF * Kal pouxevOeicar ei o adds 32

TLS dmoméuyrarto, TAS ovaias avTod TO peév Tihs yuvarnds elvat, To Se Tis Ajpntpos lepdv KeNEVwV" Tov & a7ro80pevov yuvaira Over Gar xPoviots Oeois. iov dé To pndepiay Sixny Kata TAT POKTOVOY opicavra Tac av avdpopoviar TAT pOKTOvIAY 7 pooeuTetv, @S TOUTOU pev évtos évaryods, éxeivov dé abuvatou. kal pex pe Xpoverr ToAN@y okey op0as dmoyvavat THY TOWAUT AY adixiav ovoeis yap eSpace ToLOUTOV OvdEV éV Poun axedov € era éEaxootov Sraryevopevar, aNNG T PWTOS META TOV “AvviBrarov TONE MOV taropetras Aevxwos "Oottos TAT POKTOVOS yevéoOar. tadra pev ody ixava mept TOUTMD.

XXHI. "Eret de ELT TY rhs Tatiou Bactreias, oixeiol Tues avTovd Kal ouyyevels mpéaBeow a amo Aavpévtov Badifovor els ‘Poyny évTuxovTes Kad od6p, émexelpour apaipeio Bar Ta Xpnpara Bia, Kal pn) Tpotewévous, AAN a LUYOMEvoUs dveldov.

epyov dé devvod ToApnbévtos, 0 pev “Pwpvros evdvs Seiy Beto KorAadlecOat Tovs adicnoavras, o 6é€ Ta aTLOS é£éxpove Kal mapiyye. Kat TOUTO pbvor avtois Umiptev aitiov éudavods Srapopas:
Ta 5 adAXa _kataxoo pobvTes EAUTOUS as &u pa
Miata KOLVOS eXpaYTO Kat pel? opovotas Tots
m™ paypagwy. ot 6€ TOV dvypnyevov olKetot, mdons éFerpryopevor Sixns yop wou Sia tov Tatiov, atro-KTEVvYYOVE LY aQuTov év AaBwig Ovovra peta ‘Po-prov tpootecovtes, Tov 8 “Pwptrov ws Sixacov 1 én) dapyaxela xal réxvwv broBodG with Cobet: éml gap

pakela réxvwy } KAeidav broBorg (for poisoning his children or counterfeiting his keys).

for using poisons, for substituting children, and for adultery ; but if a man for any other reason sends his wife away, the law prescribes that half his substance shall belong to his wife, and the other half be consecrate to Ceres; and whosoever puts away his wife, shall make a sacrifice to the gods of the lower world. It is also a peculiar thing that Romulus ordained no penalty for parricides, but called all murder parricide, looking upon one as abominable, and upon the other as impossible. And for many ages his judgement of such a crime seemed to have been right, for no one did any such deed at Rome for almost six hundred years; but after the war with Hannibal, Lucius Hostius is reported to have been the first parricide. So much, then, may suffice concerning these matters.

XXIII. In the fifth year of the reign of Tatius, some retainers and kinsmen of his, falling in with ambassadors from Laurentum on their way to Rome, attempted to rob them of their money,! and when they would not stand and deliver, slew them. It was a bold and dreadful crime, and Romulus thought its perpetrators ought to be punished at once, but ‘Tatius tried to put off and turn aside the course of justice. This was the sole occasion of open variance between them; in all other matters they acted in the utmost concert and administered affairs with unanimity. The friends of the slain ambassadors, shut out as they were from all lawful redress, through the efforts of Tatius, fell upon him as he was sacri- ficing with Romulus at Lavinium, and killed him, but escorted Romulus on his way with loud praises of his

1 Of. Livy, i. 14, 1-3.

3 dySpa T pouTrepypay ep npoovres. o 5€ To pev odpa tov Tatiov xopicas évripes Bawe, cai KetTaL TEpt TO KaXovpEevoy ‘AppuXovaTpLoy év
’"Aovertive, TAS 5é Sixns Tov dovov taytaracw

npérAnoev. evo. b€ TaYv ouyypadéwy iotopovct Thy pev Tov Tov Aaupevtioy poBnOeicar éxds-Sovas Tovs avtoyetpas Tatiou, tov dé “Pwpvrov
4 adewvat, dncavta povov dovm rAerAvaAat. TovTO
5é Aoyov pay twa Twapécye nai wrowiay ws
AO MEVO YEYOVEY AUT@ TO TOV GUVapYOYTOS aTTad-Aayivat, Tov S€ Tpaypatwv ovdev Suerdpaker, oudé dSuectaciace zovs LaBivous, GAN of pev EvVOLa TH TPOS autov, ot b€ poe THs Suvdapews, ot S ws Ge@ ypwpevot eis Tacav evvoay,' Bav-pavovres SceréXouv.
5 "Edavpalov b€ ToAXO Kai TOV €XTOS avd parry
TOV ‘Peopurov: ot be T pOyEvér TEpot Aativot Te Wavtes avt@ pilav emotnaavTo Kat oUpma iav.
Prdijvas dé elvev, dotuyeltova Tis. ‘Pans Toy,
OS Bev Evuol pact, éEaipyns Tous im7méas méppas Kat Kedevoas UTOTEMELY TOV Tudo TOUS OTpOpuyyas, eita emipaveis avTos am poo bon nTws" 6 érepoe ce A€yovet Tportépous EKELVOUS éuBadovtas eAdcaaGai TE Nelav xal KabvBpicat worda THY X@pav Kai TO mpodaTevov, evédpas dé rov “Popuro Gépevor autos Kat d.apGeipavta TOANOUS AaBety thy Tord. od pny aveirev OvdE KaTEoxawev, adda “Pwpaiwy éroinoev artrotxiay,
1 ypapevan eis tacar ebvoiav MSS., Coraés ; Bekker corrects to xowpevory eis way edpever (hecause heaven favoured him in all his undertakings.)

justice. Romulus brought the body of Tatius home and gave it honourable burial, and it lies near the so-called Armilustrium, on the Aventine hill; but he took no steps whatsoever to bring his murderers to justice. And some historians write that the city of Laurentum, in terror, delivered up the murderers of Tatius, but that Romulus let them go, saying that murder had been requited with murder. This led some to say and suspect that he was glad to be rid of his colleague, but it caused no disturbance in the government, nor did it lead the Sabines into faction, nay, some through the good-will they had for him, others through their fear of his power, and others because they regarded him as a benevolent god, all continued to hold him in reverence to the end.

Romulus was held in reverence also by many foreign peoples, and the earlier Latins sent ambas- sadors and established friendship and alliance with him. Fidenae, a neighbouring city to Rome, he took,! as some say, by sending his horsemen of a sudden with orders to cut away the pivots of the gates, and then appearing himself unexpectedly ; but others say that the men of Fidenae first made an incursion, driving off booty and devastating the territory and outskirts of the city, and that Romulus set an ambush for them, killed many of them, and took their city. He did not, however, destroy or raze it to the ground, but made it a colony of Rome, and sent thither

_ 7 CEé. Livy, i. 14, 4-11.
165
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dia XLMous Kal WevTaKogliovs atrooTeiAas obKnN-Topas eLdots 'AmpthrAaes.
XXIV. 'Ex tovtov orpos cumimret, Javatous
pev aipyidious avO pwr ous dvev voowv emupepeor, GTO PEVOS bé Kal KapTrav aopiats kat Openparov aryoviats. Ban 5é kal ctayoow aivatos
n TOMS, @OTE TONANY Mpoayeved Oat Tots avary-Kaiots mabect Sera darpovian. émrel 5€ kal Tots TO Aavpevtov OLKODG LY dpova cuveBawver, 78 Tav-TaTacw édoxe. Tov emit Tatia TUyKEXUMEVOY bu-Kaley ei TE TOES mpeo Beat povevdeicr pynvipa dac-pooviov apporepas ehavvewv TAS TOAELS. exbo0 év-TOV Sé trav hovéwy Kal Koha Bevtay Tap' apdo-TEpots, ehapnaev érrd7jrAws Ta deuva: Kal i xaappois
O 'Pepvros iyvice Tas Tones, ods Ett viv iato-povowy émt THs Depevtivnys TUANS ovvrTedeto Bau.
Hpiv dé Ana TOV AoLpov éneBevro Kapépvoe 33
'Pepatoss Kal catédpapov THY YOpav, ws abv-VaTov dpover bat dua 70 mdbos. evOus obv 0
'Papiros eo Tpatevaev én avTous Kal ayn Kpatnoas eEaxtoytdious am ex TeLve® ral THY T ONLY EXWV, TOUS peV Hploess TOV TEpLyEVOMEVOY els 'Popny éEdxice, TOV 5 UrropevovTov oumda-aious ex 'Pwopns KaToKioey eis THY Kapepiav LeEtiAias Kaddvédais. TocovToY auTe TeEpiny TOALTOV éxxaidena, érn axedov OLKODVYTL THY
"Pepny. év S€ Tots ddXots Aad vpots kal XadKovv EXOMLGE TeO purrmov éx Kapeptas: TOUTO b¢ ave-oTnoev év TO lep@ Tod 'Hdaiotov, roincdpmevos éavtov vmo Nixns orepavovpevor.
XXYV. Otro de povvupevors Tots Tpaypacty ot pev acbevéctepo. TaV T pogorKey uTredvovTo 166

ROMULUS

twenty-five hundred colonists, on the Ides of April.
XXIV. After this, a plague fell upon the land, bringing sudden death without previous sickness upon the people, and afflicting the crops with un- fruitfulness and the cattle with barrenness. There was a rain of blood also in the city, so that many superstitious. fears were added to their unavoidable sufferings. And when similar calamities visited the people of Laurentum, all agreed at once that it was the miscarriage of justice for the death of Tatius and the slain ambassadors which brought the wrath of heaven down upon both cities. The murderers, therefore, were delifered up on both sides and punished, and the mischief visibly abated. Romulus also purified the cities with lustral rites, which they say are celebrated to this day at the Ferentine gate.

But before the pestilence had ceased, the people of Cameria attacked the Romans and overran their territory, thinking them incapable of defending themselves by reason of their distress. Romulus therefore at once marched against them, overcame them in battle, and killed six thousand of them. He also took their city, transplanted half of the sur- vivors to Rome, and sent to Cameria as colonists from Rome twice the number he had left there, and this on the first of August. So many citizens had he to spare after dwelling in Rome less than sixteen years. Among other spoils he brought also a bronze four-horse chariot from Cameria, and dedicated it in the temple of Vulcan. For it he had a statue made of himself, with a figure of Victory crowning him.

XXV. The Roman state thus gathering strength, its weaker neighbours submitted to it, and were 167

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

kal tuyydvovtes abeias jydtav: ot b€ duvarot Sedsdtes Kat POovodvtes ov wovTo deiv Tepiopar, Grn’ évicotacOar TH avéjoe Kal Kodovew Tov ‘Pwpvrov. mpatoe & Tuppnvav Odnios, ywpav KEKTNMEVOL TOAAHY Kal TOALY pEyadANY OlKODYTES, apynv érotnoavto tmodkeuou Didjvas araiteiv,
@S Tpoonkovaay avtots. To 5 ovK abdixov hv povov, GANA Kalb yedolov, STL KivSuvEevoVeL TOTE Kal moNepmoupévols ov TpocapvvavtTes, ANN édcavres atronéa bar TOUS dvépas, oixtas Kal viv aTrauToley aNAwY exovTo. , caduBpra Gevres ov vTO TOD ‘Papvrov € év Tals dmoxpiceat Siva SietXov éautous, Kal TO pev eméxervte TH Dednvav otpa-Tevpatt, T@ b€ pos ‘PwpvrAov amnvTwY. TpOsS

pev ovv Didnvais Seoxysdious “Pwpaiwy Kxpatncavtes amréxtewav, vd ‘Pwpvrou 5é wKnOévtes
Umép oKxTaktaxtrtous amwéBarov. adOis 5 epi Didnuvnv epayécavto: nat TO pév mretoTov Epyov avtov ‘Pwpurou yevéo Oat, Téxvyy Te peTAa TOAMNS
macav émidecEapevov poun Te Kal Trodwxeia TOAD Sofavtos avd pwrivns pelt Tove KexpioOan, TWAVTES oporoyobat: to 8 tm éeviwv Aeryopevov Kopueop pudadés eat, paiddov dé ddws artarov, bre pupiov Kal TeTpaxta tdiwy mea ovToy vmep-nutoets joav ods avros dia xeupl “Pwpvros é-KTELVEV, OTOV ‘YE Kal Meoorjriot Kou xpjoacbar
doxovar rept "Aptotopévous AéyovTes ws Tpls exaToupovea Ovoevev amd Aaxedatpoviov.
Tevopevns 8& tis tpomis, adels pevyev Tous 168

satisfied to be let alone ; but the powerful ones, out of fear and jealousy, thought they ought not to tolerate, but resist and check the growing power of Romulus. And of the Tuscans, the people of Veii, who possessed much territory and dwelt in a great city, were the first to begin war! with a demand for Fidenae, which they said belonged to them. Now this was not only unjust, it was actually ridiculous, that they, who had not come to the aid of the people of Fidenae when they were in the perils of war, but suffered them to perish, then demanded their houses and land from those who had come into - possession of them. Accordingly, Romulus gave them contemptuous answers, upon which they divided themselves into two armies, attacked Fidenae with one, and confronted Romulus with the other. Before Fidenae, then, they overpowered two thousand Romans and slew them ; but they were defeated by Romulus with a loss of eight thousand men. Once more a battle was fought near Fidenae, and here all agree that the victory was chiefly due to Romulus himself, who displayed every possible combination of skill and bravery, and seemed endowed with strength and swiftness far beyond the lot of man. But there is a statement made by some writers which is alto- gether fabulous, nay rather, wholly incredible, name- ly, that of the fourteen thousand Tuscans who fell in this battle, more than half were slain by Romulus with his own hand ; for even the Messenians seem to have been boastfully extravagant in saying that Aristomenes thrice offered sacrifice for a hundred Lacedaemonian enemies slain.

After the rout of the enemy, Romulus suffered the

1 Cf, Livy, i. 15, 1-5.
169

TepLovTas O ‘Pwpvnros, én aurny éya@pel THY Tony: of & ovK nvérxXovTo peyadns cuppopas yevouerns, GNA denGevres Oporoyiay eTOLT Avro

Kal piriay els eT ExaTov, “Y@pay TE TONY ™ poe wevor Tis éavTa, hy Lemreum dyvov xanobol, Omrep éotiv EMTapopLoy, kal TOV Tapa TOV TOTApov exaTavres ddornyiovr, Kal TevTHKovTA
TOV apioToV Ounpous eyxerplo avres, eO pid u-Bevoe 5€ Kal amo tovtwy eidois OxroSpiass, adAous TE TOANOUS aly pwadwrous eXov Kal TOV
nryepova TOV Ovniwr, avopa mpeaBurny, ad poves
So€avta cal rap BALKLaY aTreipws Tots mpaywace Kexphaar. 610 Kal voy étt Ovovtes eT iviKia, yépovra pev dyovor be aryopas ets Kamrirodtov
ev TepiToppupe, BodAXav avT@ trabuenv aypav-TES, Knpurret & o Knpu& Lapbravous @vious.
Tuppavol yap aTrOUKOL Lapdiavav rAéyovtat, Tup-pynvirn S€ modus ot Ovnior.
XXVI. Todrov éryarov ToheLOV O ‘Popvros émoheunaen. el’, 6 TONAL, parXov dé wry OMyov maa xovoe mares ot peyaArats cal Tapa-Aoryos apbévtes evtuyxiais eis S¥vauww Kal Gycor, ove abros Stépuye mabetv, arr’ exteOappnKas TOUS mpdypact kat Bapurépo ppovnpare V pw-pevos, efiatato Tov Snuottxov, Kat mapydNatrev els povapxiay érayOn kal AvTOvCAaY amo ToD TX MATOS Tp@TOV @ Katerxnuarilev éavuTov.
droupyi pev yp évedvero xeTava, Kal THBevvov
époper TepiT oppupov, év Opovm & avakhite Kad nuevos expnpareber. joav oe mepl aurov adel TOY vévv ot Kadovpevor Kédepes, azro THS Tepit Tas UToupyias OEUTNTOS. éBadsbov Se mpoc-170

34

ROMULUS

survivors to escape, and moved upon their city itself. But they could not hold out after so great a reverse, and suing for peace, made a treaty of friendship for a hundred years, giving up a large portion of their territory, called Septempagium, or the Seven - Districts, abandoning their salt-works along the river, and delivering up fifty of their chief men as hostages. _ Romulus also celebrated a triumph for this victory on the Ides of October, having in his train, besides many other captives, the leader of the. Veientes, an elderly man, who seems to have conducted the campaign unwisely, and without the experience to-be expected of his years. Wherefore to this very day, in offering a sacrifice for victory, they lead an old man through the forum to the Capitol, wearing a boy's toga with a bulla attached to it, while the herald cries: " Sardians for sale!'' For the Tuscans are said to be colonists from Sardis, and Veii is a Tuscan city.

XXVI. This was the last war waged by Romulus. Afterwards, like many, nay, like almost all men who have been lifted by great and unexpected strokes of good fortune to power and dignity, even he was emboldened by his achievements to take on a haughtier bearing, to renounce his popular ways, and to change to the ways of a monarch, which were made hateful and vexatious first by the state which he assumed. For he dressed in a scarlet tunic, and wore over it a toga bordered with purple, and sat on a recumbent throne when he gave audience. And he had always about him some young men called Celeres, from their swiftness in doing service.!_ Others, too, went

Cf. chapter x. 2; and Livy, i. 15, 8.

Gev érepor Baxrnpiars aveipyovtes tov SyAov,
e 4 \ e lA C4 a bd 4 A Umelwopmévor S€ idvras, WoTE Guvdelv EvOUS ods mT poo Tagete.
To 8€ djcae Aarivos wddat pev ALyGpe, viv Sé addiyape karovow: SOev of te paBdodyor ALKTOpets, at re paBdo. RBdxvrAa Kxarodvrat, Sia TO
" 4 4 > A ,
xphoOar tote Baxtnpias. eixos 5é ALKTw@pELS
évtewévou tov Kama viv dvoudtecOar, mpo-Tepov ALTwpELS, EAANUGTL 5é NerTOUpyods dyTas.
Anitov yap TO Synudotov éte viv "EXAnves xal Aaov TO TWAHOOS cvouatovow.

XXVIII. *Evel 5€ tod awdarrov Nopntopos év
"ANBy TeXevTHCAYTOS, AVT@ BactrEvelv TpoaHKor, eis pécov 2Onxe tiv Tmodtteiav Snpaywyav, ral
b 3 \ > 4 LA a bd Kat éviavTov amredeixvuey apyovta Tots 'ANBavois, édidake nal tors év 'Pon Suvatovs aBaci-NeuToy CnTely Kal avTOVvomov TroNTELaY, apxopévous év péper wal dpyovtas. ovdé yap ot KANOUMEVOL TATPiKLOL TPAYpaTwWY pETELYOV, GAN
dvopa kal cxXjpa Trepiny evtipov avtois, Eovs eve-
a a , > / 9 A :

K& £arXov H yvouns aOporfopeévors eis TO Boudev-
THpLOV. Elta aLYH MpoaTaTTOVTOS HKpOwYTO: Kar

T® MWpoTepoe TO Sedoypevov éexeivp mvubécOar TaV
TOANOY TAEOY EXOVTES ATNAAATTOVTO. Kai TaANA
\ ? / a a \ / pev hv édXatrova: tis Sé ys THv Sopixrnrov 172

ROMULUS

before him with staves, keeping off the populace, and they were girt with thongs, with which to bind at once those whom he ordered to be bound.
To bind, in the Latin language, was formerly " ligare," though now it is "alligare'' ; whence the wand-bearers are called " lictores," and the wands ~ themselves " bacula,' from the use, in the time of Romulus, of " bakteriai,'"" which is the Greek word for staves. But it is likely that the "ec" in the word " lictores,' as now used, has been added, and that the word was formerly "litores,'' which is the Greek ''leitourgoi," meaning public servants. For the Greeks still call a public hall "leiton,' and the people "laos." } XXVII. But when his grandfather Numitor died in Alba, and its throne devolved upon Romulus, he courted the favour of the people by putting the government in their hands, and appointed an annual ruler for the Albans. In this way he taught the influential men at Rome.also to seek after a form of government which was independent and without a king, where all in turn were subjects and rulers. For by this time not even the so-called patricians had any share in the administration of affairs, but a name and garb of honour was all that was left them, and they assembled in their council-chamber more from custom than for giving advice. Once there, they listened in silence to the commands of the king, and went away with this advantage only over the multitude, that they learned earlier what he had decreed. The rest of his proceedings were of lesser importance ; but when of his own motion merely

1 For this assumed use of Greek words by the Romans. cf. chapter xv. 3.
173

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

autos ép éavtod Sacdyevos Tois orTpatiorass, kal Tovs ounpous tots Ovntots arrodovs, obte mevaBévtwrv ovte Bovroucvor éxeivov, Soke Ko-pod Thy yepovciay mpomnraxivew. SOev ets uTowiay kal diaBorny évérece Taparoyus ada-viobévtos avTov pet' odLyov xpovov. ndhavicOn 5é vavais 'lovrlats, os viv ovoudlovow, ws bé rote, Kuvtidiats, ovdéev eirety BéBatov ovdé oporoyovpevov TrubécOat mepi TIS TeNEUTHS aTrO-MuTra, arr’ a TOV xpovov, @S mpoeipn Ta. Sparat yap ert viv poa TH TOTE TADEL TOMA KATA THY nuépav éexeiynv.

Ov det b€ Oavydlew THY doddevay, dtrov zen-TLWVOS ‘Ad picavod pera Seimrvoy olxot TeNEUTY-TAaVTOS, OUK éoxe ior ove ENeyXov) Tpomos
Tis TehEuTAS, GX of pev AUTOMATOS dvTa pues voowdn Kapety Aéyouow, o 6 avrov ud’ éavtod papparors amroBavetv, ot 8& tovs éxOpous THY avaTrvony atroNaBeiv avTod VUKT Mp TapeLamed ov-Tas. Kaitou Lenriov é ExerTO ver pos eudavns tdety Taot, Kab TO cya mapeixe mraow Opwpevov brrowiav Tia Tov mdaGovs Kal KaTavonoty: ‘Pwyvdou dé adve HETANAAEAVTOS ovTe pé os adn TWPATOS oure Aeifpavoy éaOfjros. ann ot pey elxatov € Ev T@ jbep@ TOU ‘H¢aiorou tous BovheuTas émavactavtas avT@ kal SiapGeipavras, velmavTas TO capa Kal HE pos éxacTov évO éwevov Els
Tov KodTOV éeveyxeiy: erepor 6° olovTay pnte év
T@ lep@ Tov ‘Hdaiorou pnre povev TOV Bovdev-TOV ‘TapovTay yevér Gar TOV apavic pov, ana Tuxeiv pev &Ew Tepi TO KadovpEvoy avyos éNoS 174

ROMULUS

he divided the territory acquired in war among his soldiers, and gave back their hostages to the Veientes, without the consent or wish of the patricians, he was thought to be insulting their senate outright. Wherefore suspicion and calumny fell upon that body when he disappeared unaccountably a short time after. He disappeared on the Nones of July, as they now call the month, then Quintilis, leaving no certain account nor even any generally accepted tradition of his death, aside from the date of it, which I have just given. For on that day many ceremonies are still performed which bear
a likeness to what then came to pass.
Nor need we wonder at this uncertainty, since although Scipio Africanus died at home after dinner, there is no convincing proof of the manner of his end, but some say that he passed away naturally, being of a sickly habit, some that he died of poison administered bv his own hand, and some that his enemies broke into his house at night and smothered him. And yet Scipio's dead body lay exposed for all to see, and all who beheld it formed therefrom some suspicion and conjecture of what had happened to it; whereas Romulus disappeared sud- denly, and no portion of his body or fragment of his clothing remained to be seen. But some conjectured that the senators, convened in the temple of Vulcan, fell upon him and slew him, then cut his body in pieces, put each a portion into the folds of his robe, and so carried it away. Others think that it was neither in the temple of Vulcan nor when the senators alone were present that he disappeared, but that he was holding an assembly of the people exxAnotiay ayovra Tov 'Pwutrov, apyw é Oavya-oTa Kal Kpeitrova AOdyou mepl Tov aépa 7a0n yever Oa Kal petaBoras dmiarous: TOD pev yap mAtov TO POS emeduTreiy, vuxtra 66 KaTacxely, ov mpgeiav, ovee Hovxov, ara Bpovras Te devas Kal TVvOas avewov Cahny ehauvovTay mavrayobev Eéyouocay: év bé TOUT TOV pév ToNvY OxXAOV axedacbevra puyeiv, TOUS 6é duvatous ovat papi

vat per aAmhov- émrel 5° | eAngev 7 " TApAaX?) xal
TO bas eFéraprpe Kal Tov TOBY els TAUTO maduy TUVEPXOMEVCOV onrnas nv tov Baciréos
kat 1000s, ovx éav Tovs Suvatovs éFeTralew ovde ToAUTpaymovely, GNAA Tipay TwapaKxereverOa mace Kai céBec0ar Paopvaror, a> aynptracpévov eis Deovs nal Oeov evpevny yevnodpevov avrois éx YpNnaToU Baciréws. TOUS ev ovv TroAXOUS TAd-Ta mecOopevous kal yatpovras anardar rea Bat per énaridcoy ayabev TpooKuvodvras: eivat O€ Tivas ot TO TMpaypa mixpes Kal duc pevas éferéynovres eTaparrov TOUS TAaTpLKLoUs Kal b¢BadarAov, @S aBenrepa TOV SF pov avarreiBovtas, avrous &é Tov Baciréws avToxerpas dvTas.
XXVIII. Odtws otv 1 advipa trav martpixiov ryéver 1 p@TOV, 0¢e TE Soxtpw@tarov, aure TE
'Papvrp Tistov Kal ouvnOn, TOY ar "AXBns eT OLKMD, "TovAcov IIpoxdov, eis aryopay Tpoen-Oovra? kal TOY ayunt aT ov évopKov lepay aydpevov eimeiy ev maow ws odov avT@ Babdifovre
'Pwpvros €€ évaytias mpocimy pavein, KaXos pev
! oftws ouv Coraés, following Stephanus and C, has ofrws oby Tapartouévwy (hile such disorder prevailed). 2 wpoerdOdvra MSS., Coraés, Nintenis!: waperddvra.

outside the city near the so-called Goat's Marsh,!
when suddenly strange and unaccountable disorders with incredible changes filled the air; the light of the sun failed, and night came down upon them, not with peace and quiet, but with awful peals of thunder and furious blasts driving rain from every quarter, during which the multitude dispersed and fled, but the nobles gathered closely together ; and when the storm had ceased, and the sun shone out, and the multitude, now gathered together again in the same place as before, anxiously sought for their king, the nobles would not suffer them to inquire into his disappearance nor busy themselves about it, but exhorted them all to honour and revere Romulus, since he had been caught up into heaven, and was to be a benevolent god for them instead of a good king. The multitude, accordingly, believing this and rejoicing in it, went away to worship him with good hopes of his favour ; but there were some, it is said, who tested the matter in a bitter and hostile spirit, and confounded the patricians with the accusation of imposing a silly tale upon the people, and of being themselves the murderers of the king.

XXVIII. At this pass, then, it is said that one of the patricians, a man of noblest birth, and of the most reputable character, a trusted and intimate friend also of Romulus himself, and one of the _ colonists from Alba, Julius Proculus by name,? went into the forum and solemnly swore by the most sacred emblems before all the people that, as he was travelling on the road, he had seen Romulus coming

1 Cf, Livy, i. 16, 1-4, 2 Cf. Livy, i. 16, 5-8.

opO7vat Kat peyas, @S OUTOTE mpoabev, Grows de Aap pois Kal préyourr KEKOT UNLEVOS. aUTOS ev ov exTrrayels ™ pos THY pw "<"O Bacired," pavar, “rt on madov t dvavon Gels mwas pev éy aiTiats adixous Kal movnpais, Tacay dé THY TON opphavny év pupio révOer mpohehouTras; ” ” éxetvov 6 anoxpivacGat, " Beois édokev, @ Tlpoxne, TOC OV-TOV meas yevea bat per’ avOpwrov Xpovor, exeiDev évTas,' Kal T ONLY én apxh Kat 60&n peylorn KTiaavtas avis oixeiy oupavov. aNXa xaipe, Kat ppate ‘Peopators é6Tt cwppoovvny pert’ avdpeias

doxobvtes emi mAcioTov avOpwmivns adpifovras Suvdpews. eyo dé tyiv evpevns écopar Saipeov Kupivos.” tavta miota pev eivat tots “Papaiots
éSoxer Sta Tov TpoTrOV TOD AéyovTos Kal Sia Tov Spxov' ov pnv adrdrd}a Kal Satpowov te ovv-epavracbat 7a0os Guovoyv évOovotacn@: pndéra yap avrTeteiv, GAA Tacav Jrovorav cal da-Bodny adéevtas ebyer Oa ee kat Oeoxwrv-Tely exelvov.
“Eouce ev ovv Tadta Tois Ud’ ‘EAAjvev mept
TE *Aptotéov tov [Ipoxovyncieu xat Kreopjdous TOU “AotuTahaséws pudoroyoupéevors. "Apia téay pev yap ev Tee Kvapelep TeMeUTH Tal dact, kat TO oOLa PETLOVT@Y avtov Tav dirwv adaves oixeoar: eye dé Twas evO0s é& atroénpulas 7 HKOvTAaS evruxely ‘Apia tég Thy emt K pot@vos TOpEvoperen:
Kr«<02.98 bé, popn Kai peyeder TOMATOS vmep-gva yevopevov EUTANKTOV Te TO TpOTre Kat Havxor évta, Toda dpav Biaa, Kat TéXos ev
1 éxeidev Svras MSS., Coraés, Sintenis!?, and Bekker ; Sintenis? transposes to follow otpaydy.
175

to meet him, fair and stately to the eye as never before, and arrayed in bright and shining armour. He himself, then, affrighted at the sight, had said: “O King, what possessed thee, or what purpose hadst thou, that thou hast left us patricians a prey to unjust and wicked accusations, and the whole city sorrowing without end at the loss of its father? ’’ Whereupon Romulus had replied : “ It was the pleasure of the gods, O Proculus, from whom I came, that I should be with mankind only a short time, and that after founding a city destined to be the greatest on earth for empire and glory, I should dwell again in heaven. So farewell, and tell the Romans that if they practise self-restraint, and add to it valour, they will reach the utmost heights of human power. And I will be your propitious deity, Quirinus.”’ These things seemed to the Romans worthy of belief, from the character of the man who related them, and from the oath which he had taken; moreover, some influence from heaven also,-akin to inspiration, laid hold upon their emotions, for no man contradicted Proculus, but all put aside suspicion and calumny and prayed to Quirinus, and honoured him as a god.

Now this is like the fables which the Greeks tell about Aristeas of Proconnesus! and Cleomedes of Astypaleia.2_ For they say that Aristeas died in a fuller's shop, and that when his friends came to fetch away his body, it had vanished out of sight ; and presently certain travellers returning from abroad said they had met Aristeas journeying towards Croton. Cleomedes also, who was of gigantic strength and stature, of uncontrolled temper, and like a mad man, is said to have done many deeds

1 Cf, Herodotus, iv. 14 f. 2 Cf. Pausanias, ix. 6 ff.

, oA \ ¢€ , Q
Tie StdacKareio waidwv tov vepeldovta tiv opodiay Kiova wataktavta TH yerpl KrAdoat pécov Kal Thy otéyny KataBarely. atrodopéver b€ TeV maidwv Siwxopevoy eis xiBwrov Kataduyety
peyaAny, Kal TO Ta KaTaKNELcavTAa ouUVeYeLY
9 a 4 3 4 A 4 A
évTOS, @CTE aTooTaca, pn SuvacGat ToAXOUS
ood Bialouévous: Kxatacyicavtas Sé THY KiBo-Tov ote Cavra Tov avOpwiroy evpety ovTE vExpov.
A ,

éxtrAayévtas ovv atrooteiNat Oeompotrovs eis Aeros, ols thy Tlu@tav eirrety:
"Eayatos npowv Kreopndns "Actutanarevs.

Néyerar 5€ Kat Tov "AXxunvns éxxoplopéerns

: \ 54 S / \ "~ '4
vexpov Gdnrov yevécOar, AiOov dé havyvar KetoN a , Vo \ a feevoy él THS KNLYNS. Kal OXNWS TTOAAa ToOLAUTA
le) \ \ > N ,
pvOorXo0yotver, twapa TO eixos éxOerdlovres Ta Ovnta tis hicews apa Tots Betots.
'Atroyavar uev odv Tavtdtract THy OedtnTa THS apeTns avoowov Kal ayevvés, ovpav@e be pu-yvuew ynv dBértepov. éatéov ody, éxopmévois TIS acdhanreias, cata Tivdapov, ws capa pev Tavtwv Ererat Oavat@ treptabevel,
\ A \ Cwov 8 re Reimetat ai@vos eldwAov' TO yap €oTL "OvoV
ex Oeav.

4 \ 9 a ? a > » > ,
Hees yap éxeiOev, exet & dvetow, ov peta oob b] 2\ a lA , >
patos, aAN €av oTt parXiotTa o@paTos aTrad-Aayn Kal draxp.On nai yévntar xaOapov Twavta-Tact kal doapKov Kai ayvov. Ain yap wuyy 180

of violence, and finally, in a school for boys, he smote with his fist the pillar which supported the roof, broke it in two, and brought down the house. The boys were killed, and Aristeas, being pursued, took refuge in a great chest, closed the lid down, and held it so fast that many men with their united strength could not pull it up; but when they broke the chest to pieces, the man was not to be found, alive or dead. In their dismay, then, they sent messengers to consult the oracle at Delphi, and the Pythian priestess gave them this answer :—

“ Last of the heroes he, Cleomedes, Astypalaean.”

It is said also that the body of Alemene disappeared, as they were carrying her forth for burial, and a stone was seen lying on the bier instead. In short, many such fables are told by writers who improbably ascribe divinity to the mortal features in human nature, as well as to the divine.
At any rate, to reject entirely the divinity of human virtue, were impious and base; but to mix heaven with earth is foolish. Let us therefore take the safe course and grant, with Pindar,! that “Our bodies all must follow death’s supreme behest,
But something living still survives, an image of life, for this alone Comes from the gods.”
Yes, it comes from them, and to them it returns, not with its body, but only when it is most completely separated and set free from the body, and becomes altogether pure, fleshless, and undefiled. For “a dry

1 Fragment 131, Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr. i.* p. 427.
181

aptatn,' Kad ‘Hpdxrertov, WO TEP dorpaTn yégous Siarrrapevy Tou TOMATO. » O¢ copate mepuppern Kat TepiTrAEws o@paTos, olov avau-places éuBpOns Kat omexrwdns, ducéEarros € EOTL

kal dvcavaxoptatos. ovdév ovv Set Ta co"ara TOV ayad ay cvvavar eure ‘mapa pow els ovpavov, adr Tas apeTas Kal Tas puxas mavra-Tac oer Bau Kara puow Kal Sinny Geta € éx pev avOpomov ELS peas, éx & Tpoov eis Saipovas, éx dé Satpovar, a dv TéXeov doTep EV TENETH cabap-Oact Kai oowwbacw dmav amopuyovca TO Ovnrov Kat mabnrixor, ov pomp TOAEWS, arr’ arnbeva xat Kata, Tov eiKoTa Aoyou ets Deovs
dvapépea Bau, TO KaAMOTOV Kal paKkapLoTaToV TéXOS aTroAaBovaas.
XXIX. Tray dé ryevoperny éravuuiay TO ‘Po-pvr TOV Kupivov ot mev "EvudAvov 7 poo a'yopevovotv' ot oe monty,” bre Kal TOUS ToMTAS Kupiras avopatov: ot b€ Thy aixyny h to Sopu
Tous TANALOUS Kp ovopatery, Kal Kupiribos “Hpas dyarpa Kane én’ ai wis iSpupévor, év dé Th ‘Pavia Sopu cabSpupévov “Apea Tm poo aryop-evely, Kal Sopare Tous ev TOAEUOLS apis revovTas yepaipew: @S ovY apnioy Tia TOY "Pepvrov V) aiXmnT ny Oeov ovopac Ofvat Kupivov. iepov pep obp GQUTOU KATETKEVATHEVOY év T@ fa TQ Kv-piva Tpocayopevopevep be éxeivov, 7 o nea 7 1) weTnrraken, 6 Nov guy kanerras, wal vavat Kampartivac 61a ro Ovewv eis TO THs aiyos EXos éx
1 Ain yap Wuxh aplorn Bekker: airn yap puxh Enph xal dplorn.
2 of 3¢ woAlrny, Sr: Coraés and Bekker, with two Bodleian MSS. (B®): of 3€ 871.
182

36

ROMULUS °

soul is best,” according to Heracleitus,' and it flies from the body as lightning flashes from a cloud. But the soul which is contaminated with body, and sur- feited with body, like a damp and heavy exhalation, is slow to release itself and slow to rise towards its source. We must not, therefore, violate nature by sending the bodies of good men with their souls to heaven, but implicitly believe that their virtues and their souls, in accordance with nature and divine Justice, ascend from men to heroes, from heroes to demi-gods, and from demi-gods, after they have been made pure and holy, as in the final rites of initiation, and have freed themselves from mortality and sense, to gods, not by civic law, but in very truth and according to right reason, thus achieving the fairest and most blessed consummation.

XXIX. To the surname of Quirinus bestowed on Romulus, some give the meaning of Mars, others that of Citizen, because the citizens were called Quirites; but others say that the ancients called the spear-head (or the whole spear) “ quiris,”’ and gave the epithet Quiritis to the Juno whose statue leans upon a spear, and the name Mars to a spear consecrated in the Regia, and a spear as a prize to those who performed great exploits in war ; and that Romulus was therefore called Quirinus as a martial, or spear-nielding, god. However that may be, a temple in his honour is built on the hill called Quirinalis after him, and the day on which he vanished is called People’s Flight, and Capra- tine Nones, because they go out of the city and 1 Fragment 74 (Bywater, Heracliti Hphesit reliquiae, p. 30).

Modkews KATLOVTAaS: THY yap abya xd pay évopafovow. efcovres dé 7 pos Thv Ouciay TONG TOV
eriyopiov OvopwaT ov POEyyovTat peta Boje, olov Mapxou, Aovxiov, Tailov, [WOUPEVOL THY TOTE
Tpomny kal avakXnow addAgnrwv peta S€ovs Kal Tapax is.
"Evioe wévtot TO) pene TovTo dact pn puyis,
arr’ ere: ews elvat Kal amoudis, els altiav TOLAUT DY avahépovtes Tov Aoyov. érrel Kedrol
tiv “Peony KxataraBovres éSexpouc Inaav vo Kapidrov kal de aa Béverav n onus ovKeTL pa-Siws € éauTny avehauBaver, eo Tpdrevoay er’ auTny TorRol TOV Aarive, dpxovra AtBvov Tloorovpov éxovres. OUTOS be xadicas TOV a7 par ov ou mpoaw THS ‘Poyns errewTre KnpuKa, BovrecBar
A€éyoov TOUS Aarivous éxdTrovoay non THY Ta-Natav oiKeloTnTa Kal ouryyeveray exCwmrupno a, Katwais adbts dvaxpalévtov ériyapias TeV yevan. av obv Téprpoct map0evous TE TUXVAaS Kal yuvainav Tas avavopous, elonuny éxecOat cal
pudiay autois, os Umnpte Tpos LaBivous 7 po-Tepov éK TOV opotev. TAaPTA aKova artes ot ‘Pw-paior Tov Te TodEpoV epoBotvto cat THY Tapda-docu TOY yuvatkav ovder aixparwaias emrveticéoTEpoy exe évopuitov. atropovat 8 avtois Oepa-Trawva BDirortis, ws 8 ior Aéyouat," Tovréra xandou-pévn, ocuveBovreuce pnderepa Tmovely, arra Xpncapévous dorm Siaduyeiv & awa TOV TONE Lov Kal Thy éEounpevow. ay 8 6 S0X0s abtny te THY Pirrw-rida Kal ov auth Jeparrawvidas evmpeTreis KOT UNTAVTAS WS erevOépas doc rethat pos TOUS modeptous’ elra vixctwp tHv Dirwrtida mupaov

™!,

sacrifice at the Goat's Marsh; and " capra " is their word for she-goat. And as they go forth to the sacrifice, they shout out many local names, like Marcus, Lucius, and Caius, in imitation of the way in which, on the day when Romulus disappeared, they called upon one another in fear and confusion. Some, however, say that this imitation is not one of flight, but of haste and eagerness, and explain it as referring to the following occasion. After the Gauls had captured Rome and been driven out by Camillus, and when the city was still too weak to recover itself readily, an expedition was made against it by many of the Latins, under the command of Livius Postumius. This general stationed his army not far from Rome, and sent a herald with the message that the Latins wished to renew their ancient relationship and affinity with the Romans, by fresh intermarriages between the two peoples. If, therefore, the Romans would send them a goodly number of virgins and their widows, they should have peace and friendship, such as they had formerly made with the Sabines on the like terms. On hear- ing this message, the Romans hesitated between going to war, which they feared, and the surrender of their women, which they thought no more desir- able than to have them captured. But while they were in this perplexity, a serving-maid called Philotis (or, as some say, Tutola) advised them to do neither, but by the use of a stratagem to escape alike the war and the giving of hostages. Now the stratagem was this, that they should send to the enemy Philotis herself, and with her other comely serving-maids arrayed like free-born women; then in the night Philotis was to display a signal-fire, at which the

dapat, Tous. 5é 'Peopaious ere Oetv pera, TOV OTrhwv
kal xpnoacbat KOULWLEVOLS Tots Tone Lots. Taira & édparo mera Gevtay TOV Aativor: Kal Tov Tupaov averxev 7) Piroris & eK TLVOS épveod, TEepiayovca TpPOKANUppace Kat TapatreTaa pact OrrvaOev, @OTE TOS TONE LLOLS doparoy elvat TO Pas, Tots dé
'Popaiors aT dénnov. as ovy érretoov, evOus eEne-aap erreryopevor wal d1a tH émerEtv adAnrous Teépt
Tas TUAAS GVAKANODVTES TOAAGKIS. éumred ovres dé
Tots | Trohepots ampoadoxnTas Kal MpaTnoavTes, emrcvikvov _a&youat Thv éoptny. Kat Karparivas fev at vavat Kadovyras dia Tov épiveov Kam pl-g@ixov vo '"Pwpaiov ovopalouevor, éotiaoe é Tas yuvaixas é&o, cuKhs Krabols axralouevas.
at 6 Deparracvides ayeipovat weptiovcar Kal 3

maifovot, ela mArnyais Kar Borais AMGwv ypav-TAL 7 pos G\AnAas, ws Kal TOTE Tols 'Peopators
TO, ParyeVvowevart kal cwvayovirdpevar Haxopevors.

Tadr’ otv! ToARol mpootevTat TOV ovyypapéov, ara Kal To pel! muepay xphicGar rH avaxhycet TOV OvopaTav Kal To pos TO EXOS TO THS airyos ws éml Ouvciav? BadiCovras éoure T@
Tporépe oye mpoariGec Bau _baddop, él pny vn
Aia tis avtis myeépas év Xpovors érépors d.pupo-Tépa T wda0n auvérvye yevéoOa. Aéyerar dé ‘Pwpddos Técaapa pev érn xal TEVTKOVTA rye-yovas, dydoov Sé€ Baciretwv exeivo nal Tplaxoorov €€ avOparrwv adaviaOjvat.
1 ody with Cobet : ov (by few).
2 @valavy with Coraés (as in xxix. 2): O@dAarray (sea), 186

od

(

ROMULUS

Romans were to come in arms and deal with their enemies while asleep. This was done, with the approval of the Latins, and Philotis displayed the signal-fire from a certain wild fig-tree, screening it behind with coverlets and draperies, so that its light was unseen by the enemy, but visible to the Romans. When, accordingly, they beheld it, they sallied forth at once in great haste, and because of their haste calling upon one another many times at the gates. They fell upon their enemies when they least expected it and mastered them, and now celebrate this festival in memory of their victory. And the Nones on which it falls are called Capratine from the mild fig-tree, the Roman name for which is “ caprificus,’ and they feast the women outside the city in booths made of fig-tree boughs. Then the serving-maids run about in companies and play, after which they strike and throw stones at one anotber, in token that on that earlier day they assisted the Romans and shared with them in their battle.!

These details are accepted by many historians, but their calling out one another's names in the day time, and their marching out to the Goat’s Marsh as for sacrifice, seem to be more consonant with the former story, unless, to be sure, both actions happened to take place on the same day in different periods. Romulus is said to have been fifty-four years of age, and in the thirty-eighth year of his reign when he disappeared from among men. :
1 Cf. Camillus, xxxiii.

187

@®HSEQS KAI POMYAOY SYIPKPLSI5

I.“A pev ody adk&ia pvnuns mvbécOar Tepl ‘Pwptrov cal Oncéws cupBeéBnxev npiv, tadT dott. gaiverar 5¢ mpatov o pev ex mpoatpécews, ovdevos avayxdlovtos, adr’ éFov dbdeds ev Tpor-Chve Baorrevery SiabdeEdpevov apynv ove adofor, autos ad’ éavtod peydrwv opexOeis: o Sé Sov-Nelas Puy} twapovons Kal tiuwpias emipepopevns, éexeivo To Tov IAdtwvos, ateyvas vo Séous avdpelos yevopevos, cal po8@ Tod ta écyata mabey émt to Spav peydra & dvdyenv traparyevopevos. émerta tovTou pev épyov éatl TO péytorov dverety va tov “AXBns Tvpavvov, éxeivou Se mdpepya Kal mpodywves oav o LKelpwv, o Lives,
o IIpoxpovorns, 0 Kopurnrns, ods dvaipov cat Koralwov amnratte thy ‘EAAdba Sevev tupdvvev mpl dots eat) yiwecKev Tovs UT’ avTod awlopévous. Kal TO pev Taphy ampaypoves Kopl-CecOat ba Oardrrns abdixoupéevm pndev vo tev AnoTav, ‘Pwytry@ & ov waphy ph wpdypata éyew ’Apovriou Cavros. péya S€ rovTov Texun-ptov o pev yap ovdev avtos abdixovpevos Mppnoev
virép adAAwy éml Tovs tovnpovs, of 5S Scov avrot KAKOS ovK EracyoY UTO TOU TUPaYVOU, TEpLEwpwV
adicodvta mavtas. Kal piv eb péya TO TpwOFvar 188

COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS

I. Sucu, then, are the memorable things about Romulus and Theseus which I have been able to learn. And it appears, first of all, that Theseus, of his own choice, when no one compelled him, but when it was possible for him to reign without fear at Troezen as heir to no inglorious realm, of his own accord reached out after great achievements ; whereas Romulus, to escape present servitude and impending punishment, became simply “ courageous out of fear,’ as Plato phrases it,! and through the dread of extreme penalties proceeded to perform great exploits under compulsion. In the second place, the chief deed of Romulus was the slaying of a single tyrant of Alba; whereas for mere by-adven- tures and preliminary struggles Theseus had Sciron, Sinis, Procrustes, and Corynetes, by slaying and chastising whom he freed Greece from dreadful tyrants before those who were saved by him knew who he was. Theseus might have travelled to Athens by sea without any trouble, and suffering no outrage at the hands of those robbers; whereas - Romulus could not be without trouble while Amulius lived. And there is strong proof of this;

for Theseus, although he had suffered no wrong at their hands himself, sallied out in behalf of others . against those miscreants; while Romulus and Remus, as long as they themselves were not harmed by the tyrant, suffered him to wrong everybody else. And surely, if it was a great thing for Romulus

1 Phaedo, p. 68 a.

payopevov LaBivors cal dvedeivy "Axpwva kat
A lol 4
TOAA@Y paYn KpaThoat Tworepiwy, ToUTOLs pev gate Tols Epyous KevTavpopayiay Kal Ta mMpos
"Apatovas wapaBaneiv: 6 8 éroApunoe! Onoeds \ N \ , v \ , 4
mept tov Kpntixoy dacpov, ete tii Onpiw Bopay,
ral 9
elite mpochaypa tois 'Avdpdyew tddots, e108", 6
xoupoTatoy eat. TOV AEyopévwv, NaTpEvELY Trap avdpdcww vuBptotais Kal dvopevéow axren da-Tpelav Kal atimov émLdovs EauTOV, Exovaiws pETa mapQévwrv TrEvaas Kal Traidwy véwv, ovK Av eltroL Tis NAiKNS éoTl TOAMNS peyarodpoavyys 7H b.-
,
Katoauvns wept TO Kotvov TOOov dons Kat apeTis. @at Eworye haivetas py KAaK@s <Gpi-
\ / \ " a e
CecBar tovs dirocodovs tov épwra Oewy v7r7-peoiav impos émimédkerav Kal cwtnpiav véwv. oO a "A tO 4 \ n ¥ 5
yap "Apiddvns Epws mavtos parXov Eotxev Epyov Beod Kal pnyavn yevécOar awtnpias Evexa Tov avopos. Kal oux a&vov aitracOat THhv épacbeicap,
? \ / > \ , C4 \ n
arya Gavydaler e¢ wn tTavtTes ovTM Kal TradaL
duetéOnaoav: e & éxeivn povn tovr émaler, eixo-TWS éywrye hainv av avTny dktépactov Oe@ 'yeryovévat, prroxarov cal dirdyabov Kai TaY apiotav
ENWTLKNY OvaAD. |
II. "Apdotépwy towvy tH hice ToAUTIAeY
yeyovotwv, ovdétepos Stepvrake tov BactArKov tpotrov: é&éotn dé Kal petéBare petaBorgrny o pev Snpotixnv, o Sé€ TupavyiKny, TavTOVY an 1% 8 érdédunoe Coraés and Sintenis would begin the second chapter here.

to be wounded in a battle with the Sabines, and to slay Acron, and to conquer many enemies in battle, with these exploits we may compare, on the part of Theseus, his battle with the Centaurs and his campaign against the Amazons; but as for the daring which he showed about the Cretan tribute, whether that was food for some mon- ster, or a sacrifice on the tomb of Androgeos, or whether—and this is the mildest form of the story— he offered himself for inglorious and dishonourable servitude among insolent and cruel men when he volunteered to sail away with maidens and young boys, words cannot depict such courage, magna- nimity, righteous zeal for the common good, or yearning for glory and virtue. It is therefore my opinion that the philosophers! give an excellent definition of love when they call it “a ministration of the gods for the care and preservation of the young.”’ For Ariadne’s love seems to have been, more than anything else, a god’s work, and a device whereby Theseus should be saved. And we should not blame her for loving him, but rather wonder that all men and women were not thus affected towards him ; and if she alone felt this passion, 1 should say, for my part, that she was properly worthy of a god’s love, since she was fond of virtue, fond of goodness, and a lover of the highest qualities in man.

II. Although Theseus and Romulus were both statesmen by nature, neither maintained to the end the true character of a king, but both deviated from it and underwent a change, the former in the direction of democracy, the latter in the direction of tyranny, making thus the same mistake through opposite

1 Polemon, as cited in Morals, p. 780 d.

évavtiov madav dpaprovtes. Set yap Tov ap-yovTa awle mpa@Ttov avTny Thy apxnv: owleras
8 ovy Hrtov amexopévn tov pn MpoonKovtTos 4 Meptexopwéevn Tov wpoonxovtos. o & évdidovs 7
émitelvav ov péver Bactreds ovdé apxywv, GAN 7h Snuaywyos 7) Seamdtrns yiyvopuevos, éurrotet TO pucely xatadpoveiy Tots apxopmévors. ov puny GX’ éxetvo péev éreixeias Soxel nal diravOpwmias elvat, TovTo dé gdidavTias apapTnpa Kal VANETOTHTOS.
III. Ei 8€ b¢2 nal ta dvotuynPévta pon Tavta-
Tact TocicOat Saipovos, GAX 7OtKas Kai rraOn-TUKaS onreiy év avtois Siapopas, Oupod pev ao-yia Tou Kal TAXOS exovons aBovnrov opyis pyre Tes éxeivov év Tots TpOos TOV aderpov amodvéro pare TOUTOV év Tots pos TOV vioV' u] dé KWhoaca.

TOV Super apxn PaXXov Tapattetrat Tov wire peiSovos aitias domep UTrO TANYAS. Kare wT Epas avaTpaTévra. ‘Papwhe pev yap éx BovAjs Kal

oKepens mept KOWav cumpepov Tay Siapopas Yye-vowevns oux av nkiwoé tis abva THY dudvotay
év THALKOUTD made ryevéa Bau Oncéa 5€ T1pos TOV vior, a mapmay odiryou TOY évtwv Statredpevyaw, Epws Kal CnroTuTia Kal diaBorat yuvac-KOS éapnhay. & dé pettov corey, O pev ‘Pamirou Oupos els épyov efemece Kal m pat ovKx evTUXES
éxovcay téhos, 7 O€ Oncéws opyy péxpt Aoryou Kal Bracdnuias Kal katapas mpeaBuTixhs Tponnrle, Ta o adr paiveras 7H TOXD Xpijoa-aOat 70 perpuKtov. WATE TAUTAS Mev AV TLS aTO-Soin TH Onoei Tas Wyqous.
192.
38

COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS

affections. For the ruler must preserve first of all the realm itself, and this is preserved no less by refraining from what is unbecoming than by cleaving to what is becoming. But he who remits or extends his authority is no longer a king or a ruler; he becomes either a demagogue or a despot, and implants hatred or contempt in the hearts of his subjects. However, the first error seems to arise from kindliness and humanity; the second from selfishness and severity.

III. Again, if the misfortunes of men are not to be attributed altogether to fortune, but to the different habits and passions which will be found underlying them, then no one shall acquit Romulus of unreasoning anger or hasty and senseless wrath in dealing with his brother, nor Theseus in dealing with his son, although the cause which stirred his anger leads us to be more lenient towards the one who was overthrown by a stronger provocation, as by a heavier blow. For since the difference between Romulus and his brother arose from a deliberate investigation of the common welfare, there could have been no good reason for his flying into such a passion; while Theseus was impelled to wrong his son by love, jealousy, and a woman’s slanders, the overmastering power of which very few men have escaped. And what is of greater weight, the anger of Romulus vented itself in action and a deed of most unfortunate issue; whereas the wrath of Theseus got no farther than words of abuse and an old man's curse, and the rest of the youth's calamities seem to have been due to fortune. On these counts, therefore, one would give his vote of preference to Theseus.

. 193
VOL. I. oO
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

IV. 'Exeitvm 5€ mpa@tov pév trdpye péya TO pixpotatas AaBeiy dpyas éml ta mpdypara. Sodvor yap 8) Kal cudopBav traides dvouato- Hevor, mply édrevOepor yevécOat, Tavtas Odéryou dely nrevOépwoav Aativous, evi yxpovp TeV KaNACTMY dvopadTwov aya TuyxovTes, goveis éyOpav xal cwtnpes oixeiwy cal Bacrrels eOvav Kal oiictal moAEewv, ov peTotxictai, xabdmep Hv 0 Oncevs, éx TwoANoV auvTibels Kal ouVOLKO- Souav &v oixntnpiov, dvatpay Sé todas ToAES éravipovs Bacttéwv nal Hpwwv taratav. "Po- poros 6€ tadra peéev totepov dpa, tovs Tore- plovs avaykdlov ta oixeta xataRddXovtas Kal adavifovtas trois veuxnxoot mpoovéueoOat TO 5é mp@tov ov petatibels od avEwv thy bTdp- xovoav, adda trowv €€ ovy bTapxovTwy Kal KT@pEVOS EavT@ YOpay opmod, TaTpida, BactreLav, rYEVN, YaMOUS, OlKELOTNTAS, avnper pev ovdéva Ode am@Advev, evepyéter Se Tovs eF doixwy nal ave- otiwy Shuov éOérovras elvat nal moditas. Xy- otras S€ Kal KaKovpyous ovK amréxTevev, GAN €Ovn mpoonyayeto TroAéu@ Kal ToneLs KATES T pe- wrato Kal Baotreis eO piapBevoe Kal 7 nryepovas. Vv. Kal TO. wey 'Popov mos appro Rntov- pevov exer TOV auroxerpa, Kat TO TAéloTOV els érépous Tis aitias Tpémovel! TV 6e pnrépa ScodAupergy gr woe Teptpavars, Kal TOV TAT TOV axreas SovrAevovta xal Gripes eis TOD Aiveiov Opovov éxaOice. Kal toda pe EX@Y evepye- tnoev, EBrAave dé avrov ovdé dxwv. thy &e

194

COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS

IV. But Romulus has, in the first place, this great superiority, that he rose to eminence from the smallest beginnings. For he and his brother were reputed to be slaves and sons of swineherds, and yet they not only made themselves free, but freed first almost all the Latins, enjoying at one and the same time such most honourable titles as slayers of their foes, saviours of their kindred and friends, kings of races and peoples, founders of cities; not trans- planters, as Theseus was, who put together and consolidated one dwelling-place out of many, but demolished many cities bearing the names of ancient kings and heroes: Romulus, it is true, did this later, compelling his enemies to tear down and obliterate their dwellings and enrol themselves among their conquerors ; but at first, not by removing or enlarg- ing a city which already existed, but by creating one from nothing, and by acquiring for himself at once territory, country, kingdom, clans, marriages and relationships, he ruined no one and killed no one, but was a benefactor of men without homes and hearths, who wished instead to be a people and citizens of a common city. Robbers and miscreants, it is true, he did not slay, but he subdued nations in war, laid cities low, and triumphed over kings and commanders.

V. Besides, there is dispute as to who actually slew Remus, and most of the blame for the deed is put upon others than Romulus; but Romulus did unquestionably save his mother from destruction, and he set his grandfather, who was living in inglorious and dishonourable subjection, upon the throne of Aeneas. Moreover, he did him many favours of his own accord, and did him no harm, not even inadver-

O@ncéws ANOnv Kal apérerav THs wept Td torlov évToNAs ports Av olpas paxpa Ti TrapaLTnoe Kal év pabvpos Stxactais aitiay atodpuyeiv matpoxtovias: 6 &) Kal cuvidev tis *ATTiKOS avnp @s TayydAerov dott BovrAopévols atroroyeto Gat, mwrdtre Tov Aivéa Tis vews mpoohepopévns U7r0 omovons avatpéyovTa mpos THY aKxpoTrody Béas é&vexa xal opaddopevov KataTrecey, woTrep oTTAa-Sav Epnuov,) tHv él Odratrav odoyv omeddovTe
pn Tapovens Twos Oeparreias.
VI. Kal pay ta wept tas dpmayas trav y-VaLK@V HpapTnpéeva Onoci péev evoxnpovos evded mpopacews yéyove. mpa@Ttov pey Ste ToAAdKLS:
hprace yap Apiddvnv nat 'Avridanyv nal 'AvaEo tv Tpottnviav, él macats 5é tv "Enévnp, TAPHKMAKWS OUK akpdlovcaY, GAA vyTiay Kal
dwpov avros @pav éxav On ydpov teratdcbat Kal vopipwy: ereta bcd tTHv aitiayy ov yap akiwrepai ye madoTool trav 'AOnvnow 'Epe-NOnidwv Kai Kexporidwv ai Tpolnviev xal
Aandvev nal *Apalovwy avéyyvor Ouyartépes Hoav. adrdd\a Tadta pev vowiavy eyes mTpos bBpw Kal nal' ndovnvy wempaxGat. Poudros

5é mp@tov peév oxtaxociwr drLyov aptOu@ Seovaas aprdcas, ov mdoas, GANG plav, os acu, ‘Epottav édaBe, tas & adrras Sréverue ois ayabois! trav todtTaV Ererta TH peTa Tadta TLuUn Kal ayarrnoe. Kal Sinacootvyn TH Tepl Tas yuvaixas améderEe tiv Biay éxeivnv Kai tiv
1 &yaGors MSS. and edd. : dyduors (unmarried).
196
39

COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS

tently. Theseus, on the contrary, for his forgetfulness and neglect of the command about the sail, can hardly, I think, escape the charge of parricide, be the plea of his advocate ever so long and his judges ever so lenient. Indeed, a certain Attic writer, conscious that would-be defenders of Theseus have a difficult task, feigns that Aegeus, on the approach of the ship, ran up to the acropolis in his eagerness to catch sight of her, and stumbled and fell down the cliff; as though he were without a retinue, or was hurrying down to the sea without any servants.

VI. Furthermore, the transgressions of Theseus in his rapes of women admit of no plausible excuse. This is true, first, because there were so many ; for he carried off Ariadne, Antiope, Anaxo of Troezen, and at last Helen, when he was past his prime and she had not reached her prime, but was an unripe child, while he was already of an age too great for even lawful wedlock. It is true, secondly, because of the reason for them; for the daughters of Troezenians and Laconians and Amazons were not betrothed to him, and were no worthier, surely, to be the mothers of his children than the daughters of Erechtheus and Cecrops at Athens. But one may suspect that these deeds of his were done in lustful wantonness. Romulus, on the other hand, in the first place, although he carried off nearly eight hundred women, took them not all to wife, but only one, as they say, Hersilia, and distributed the rest among the best of the citizens. And in the second place, by the subsequent honour, love, and righteous treatment given to these women, he made it clear that his

197

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

adiuciay KddAdoTov Epyov Kal ToALTLKMTATOV Ets Kowwviay yevouéevnv. o0Tw ocuvéusEev AXANAOLS kal auvennke Ta yévn, Kal Tapéoxe THyHY THs eis avOis evvoias Kal duvdpews Tois mpdypacey.
aidots é nat hirtas al BeBarorntos, iy eipyagato wept Tovs yapous, 0 Xpovos éotl papTus.

év yap éreot Tptdxovta Kal dvaxociols ote avnp eTOAUNTE yUVaLKOS OUTE YUYN Kolvwviav avdpos éyxaTanitretV, XX wotrep ev" EAAnow ot cpodpa
TEPLTTOL TOY TP@TOV EXOVaLY ELTELY TATPOKTOVOY
Hh pntpopovov, o0tw ‘Pwpaior mdvtes toacw Ott
KapBirsos Yropios amenéuyyato yuvaixa mpo-Tos, aTratdiav aitiacdpevos. 7@ Sé Tocov’TP Ypove oUmpapTUpEr Kal Ta Epya. Kal yap apyis éxowwvnoav oi Bacideis, kal modtTelas Ta yévn dua THY emiyapiav éxetynv: aro 6€ TOV Oncéws yapov AOnvators hirsxov ev ovdev ovde KoLvwYLKOV umnpEe mpos ovdéva aupBoratov, éyOpar bé Kai ToNepoL Kat hovot TodTaY Kal TédAos ‘Adidvas amovécat Kal ports Um’ olxTov THY TrOAELiOD, mpocxuvyncavtas Kal Oeovs avertrovtas, fy Tra-Ociv & Tpaes Erafov bd ’AréEavdpov. 1) wévToe entnp 7 Oncéws ove exiwdvvevoev, arr Erade ta THS ‘ExaBns, éyxataXitrovtos Kal mpoeuévou TOU Taidos, elye fy WéTAATTAL TA THS alypa-Awaias, @s eer ye Kal TovTO Wevddos Elvat Kai
Ta TAELCTA TOV AAXwWV. éTrel Kal Ta. TEpt TOU Geiov pvOoroyovpeva TOAAnVY Toes Stadhopay.
198

COMPARISON OF THESEUS AND ROMULUS

deed of violence and injustice was a most honourable achievement, and one most adapted to promote political partnership. In this way he intermixed and blended the two peoples with one another, and supplied his state with a flowing fountain of strength and good will for the time to come. And to the modesty, tenderness, and stability which he imparted to the marriage relation, time is witness. For in two hundred and thirty years no man ventured to leave his wife, nor any woman her husband; but, just as the very curious among the Greeks can name the first parricide or matricide, so the Romans all know that Spurius Carvilius was the first to put away his wife, accusing her of barrenness. And the immediate results of his act, as well as the long lapse of time, witness in favour of Romulus. For the two kings shared the government in common, and the two peoples the rights and duties of citizen- ship, because of that intermarriage ; whereas from the marriages of Theseus the Athenians got no new friends at all, nor even any community of enter- prise whatsoever, but enmities, wars, slaughters of citizens, and at last the loss of Aphidnae, and an escape from the fate which Troy suffered by reason of Alexander, only because their enemies took compassion on them when they called upon them worshipfully as gods. However, the mother of Theseus was not only in danger, but actually suf- fered the fate of Hecuba when she was deserted and abandoned by her son, unless, indeed, the tale of her captivity is fictitious, and it may well be false, as well as most of the other stories. For example, the tales told of divine intervention in their lives are in great contrast; for Romulus was

"'Papir@ pev yap) cwrnpia peta TOANHS brnpFe Oecd evpeveias, o 8 Aived So0els ypnopos, amé-xecOat yuvarxos éml Eévns, eoxev arropaivev Tapa yvounv Oedv yeyovévat tv Oncéos TEKVWOLD.
200

preserved by the signal favour of the gods, while the oracle given to Aegeus, forbidding him to approach a woman while in a foreign land, seems to indicate that the birth of Theseus was not agreeable to the will of the gods.
201

AYKOYPTO2

I. Tlepi Avxovpyou tod vouobérou xaforou peév ovdey éotw eitrety avaudicByntnTov, ob ye Kat
yévos Kal atrodnuia Kal TeXevTH Kal Tpos Atracty Wept TOUS Vvo"oUs avTOD Kal THY TrONTELAY mpayywateta Ssahopous éoxnKev iotopias, hxiora 5é of ypovor xa' obs yéyovev o dvnp oporoyouvras.
ot pev yap 'Idite cuvarpdoa Kal cvvds:abeivar N 9 \ 3 , VA > ' Aa
thv Oduptriaxny éxexerpiay Néyovoly avTOV, OV
dott wal 'AptototérAns o pirccodos, TEexunptov 4 A 9 , 4 wv
mpooghépwv tov 'Ondvytriace dtoxov év @ Tovvopa
2 tov Auxovpyou Stacwlerar xatayeypappévov' ot
5é tais Suaboyais tov év Yraptn BeBacirevKo-Tov avaneyopuevot TOY Ypovov, HaTEep Epatoobévns 9 a + DJ 4 ww 4
kal "ArroAXobwpos, ovK orALyoLS ETeot peo BUTEpoY 9 ? 4 ry , b , i, atropaivovat tHs mpatns 'Oduprridbdos. Tipacos 5¢ dtrovoei, Suety ev Yardptn yeyovotwv Aveovpywv ov KATA Tov aUTOV YpOVOY, TE éTépw TAs apdoiv

, \ s 5) nA ,
mpdakes dia thy Sofav avaxeicOar Kal Tov ye mpecButepov ov troppw trav ‘Op-rpou yeyovévat
a » \ 9 ww 9 “~ @e 4
xpovewy, vio. dé xal Kat’ ov évtvyety ‘Onno.
204

~,

LYCURGUS

I. Concerninea Lycurgus the lawgiver, in general, nothing can be said which is not disputed, since indeed there are different accounts of his birth, his travels, his death, and above all, of his work as law- maker and statesman ; and there is least agreement among historians as to the times in which the man lived. Some say that he flourished at the same time with Iphitus, and in concert with him established the Olympic truce. Among these is Aristotle the philosopher, and he alleges as proof the discus at Olympia on which an inscription preserves the name of Lycurgus.' But those who compute the time by the successions of kings at Sparta, like Eratosthenes and Apollodorus, prove that Lycurgus was many years earlier than the first Olympiad.2,— And Timaeus con- jectures that there were two Lycurgus at Sparta, at different times, and that to one of them the achievements of both were ascribed, owing to his greater fame ; he thinks also that the elder of the two lived not far from the times of Homer, and some assert that he actually met Homer face to face.

1 As joining with Iphitus in founding, or reviving, the Olympic games, in 776 B.c., the date assigned to the first onied victory. Cf. Pausanias, v. 4, 5f.; 20, 1. A stay of hostilities waa observed all over Greece during the festival.

2 776-73 B.C.

205

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 didwor 5é cal Bevoparv trrovoiay apyaiotyntos év 40
ols tov avdpa déyer yeyovévat Kata tTovs ‘Hpa-
, / \ \ ¢€ a ,
Kreldas. yéver pev yap ‘Hpaxrcidar 82 7rovbev 9 \ ie , a 9 4 / £
qoav Kal ol vewtato Tav évy Yardptn Bacidéwy, o 5é doune BovAopévw tos mwpwtouvs éxeivous Kal 4 e 4 9 vA e , auveyyus ‘Hpaxréous ovopalev “Hpaxreidas.
Ov phy adda Kaitrep odtws TeTAAYNpEeVNS TIS toTopias, Tetpacouela Tois Bpayutdtas Exovaty dvtiroylas 7) yvwpiuwrTatovs paptupas émopevoe

TOV Yyeypaypéevwv wept Too avdpos atrodovvar THY 5 4 9° 1 , e AY b
4 dunynow. érret cal! Yipwvidyns o tromntns ovK Kvvopou Aéyet tov Aveodpyov mratpos, adda IIputavidos Kal tov Aveotipyov xal tov E’vopor, ot dé? mreloTtot oyeddv ovy oUTwW yeveadoyodaty,
> / \ a 3 ‘ / 4
adda TIpoxréous pév rod "Apiratodypov yevéobar
, 4 \ J A 4 \ 4
Ldov, Yoov dé Evpuravra, tovrou dé Iputavey, éx toutou O¢ Evvoyov, Evvopov be Tovvdéerny éx mpoTépas yuvaixos, Avxodpyov 5é€ vewrepov éx Atwvdoons, ws Avevtuyidas iotopnkev, Extov pév ato IIpoxnéous, évdéxatov 68 ad’ “Hpaxdéovs.
II. Tav &€ rpoyovay abtod pddorta pev eGav-peaadn Xoos, éf’ ob Kal tods etAwTas érotncavTo SovAous of 2rapridrat Kal yopav mpocexTycavTo
\ 9 / ? 2 , VN
TONAnY “Apkddwy atroremopevot. éyetar 5é TOV
1 éwe) xal Sintenis would begin the second chapter here, assuming also a lacuna in the text preceding.
2 of 8 with Bekker: oi.
206

Mm

LYCURGUS

Xenophon, also,' makes an impression of simplicity in the passage where he says that Lycurgus lived in the time of the Heracleidae. For in lineage, of course, the latest of the Spartan kings were also Heracleidae ; but Xenophon apparently wishes to use the name Heracleidae of the first and more immedi- ate descendants of Heracles, so famous in story.

However, although the history of these times is such a maze, I shall try, in presenting my narrative, to follow those authors who are least contradicted, ‘or who have the most notable witnesses for what they have written about the man. For instance, Simonides the poet says that Lycurgus was not the son of Eunomus, but that both Lycurgus and Eunomus were sons of Prytanis; whereas most writers give a different genealogy, as follows: Aristodemus begat Procles, Procles begat Soiis, Soiis begat Eurypon, and he begat Prytanis, from whom sprang Funomus, and from Eunomus Polydectes by a first wife, and Lycurgus, who was a younger son by a second wife, Dionassa, as Dieutychidas has written, making Lycurgus sixth from Procles, and eleventh from Heracles."

II. Of these ancestors of Lycurgus, Soiis was most famous, under whom the Spartans made the Helots their slaves, and acquired by conquest from the Arcadians a large additional tract of land. It is also

1 Reip. Lac. x. 8.‘ yeurgus is said to have lived in the times of the Heracleidae.’
2 Aristodemus, from whose twin sons Eurysthenes and Procles the elder and younger royal lines at Sparta (the Agids and Eurypontids) were descended, was the son of Aristomachus, the son of Cleodaeus, the son of Hyllus, the son of Heracles. See Pausanias, iii. 1-10; Herodotus, vii. 204 and viii. 131.

Loov vy ywpi~ yarer@ nal dvvdpm trodMopKovupe-vov to KnXe:topiov, ouoroyjoa tHv Sopterntov yqv avtois adnoesv, ei tlot Kal avtos Kal of per'
avTov TayvTes ato THS TANGLOY TNYyIS. yevouevwv 5é tay opxiwv! cuvayayovta tous pel" éavtod diddvae TH pty TriovtTe THY Bactrelav: ovdevds be KaptTepynoavTos, GANA TavT@V TLOVT@Y, AUTOY ert
Tao. KkataBdayta Kal Teptppavdapevov Ett THY TrO-Aeioy twaporvtwy dedOetv Kal THY yopay KaTaaxel, OS pn TavT@OV TLOVTOV.
7AXAG Kaitrep él TovTos OavydlovtTes avTov ovK amo TtovToU THY oixiay, GAA TOD TaLdds avTov wpoonyspevoav Evputawytidas, Ste Soxet
m@patos Kvpuray To adyav povapyixov avelvas TIS Baotrelas, Snuaywyav cai yaptGopevos Tols trov-Nois. ex b€ THs TovavTNS avécews TOD pev Sjpwou Opacuvopévov, tav 5 totepov Bacidéwy Ta pmev amrexOavouéevov te BidlecOas Tovs ToAXNOvs, TA 5é arpds yapuv 7 Se dcOéveray bTropepopmévov, avopla kal atakia catéoye thy Yraprny él wordy
xpovoy' ud hs Kal tov matépa tod Auxovpyou Bacirevovta cuvéBn TereuTHcat. StrepvKwv yap aypipayiav tid, payerpich xomide wrnyels arré-Gave, t® wpecButépw madi IlodvdéeTn Kata-Nere@v THY BactreElav.
III. 'Avroavovros 5é «al tovtou per' dAlyor — xpovoy ee Bacirevev, ws mavTes @ovTo, TOY Avxotpyov> al mpiv ye rnv yuvatca tod abed-

god havepay yevérOat xvovoav éBacirevev. érret
1 dpxtwv with Bekker and Cobet: dpxlwy dnoA0y:a@y.
208
LYCURGUS

related of this Soiis that when he was besieged by the Cleitorians in a rough and waterless place, he agreed to surrender to them the land which he had conquered if he himself and all his men with him should drink from the adjacent spring. After the oaths to this agreement were taken, he assembled his men and offered his kingdom to the one who should not drink; no one of them, however, could forbear, but all of them drank, whereupon Soiis him- self went down last of all to the water, sprinkled his face merely, while the enemy were still at hand to see, and then marched away and retained his ter- ritory, on the plea that all had not drunk.

But although on these grounds he was held in great admiration, his royal line was not named from him, but were called Eurypontids from his son, because Eurypon appears to have been the first king to relax the excessive absolutism of his sway, seeking favour and popularity with the multitude. But in consequence of such relaxation the people grew bold, and succeeding kings were some of them hated for trying to force their way with the multitude, and some were brought low by their desire for favour or through weakness, so that lawlessness and confusion prevailed at Sparta for a long time; and it was ow- ing to this that the father of Lycurgus, a reigning king, lost his life. For as he was trying to separate some rioters, he was stabbed to death with a butcher’s knife, leaving the kingdom to his elder son, Polydectes.

III. Polydectes also died soon afterwards, and then, as was generally thought, the kingdom de- volved upon Lycurgus; and until his brother's wife was known to be with child, he was king. But as soon

209
VOL. I. P
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dé todTo tTdytaTa yobeTo, tTHv pev Ractrgéiav amrépyve TOD Tratdos ovcav, avmep appyny yévntat, Thy 5é apxnyv avtTos ws émitporros Stet7re. TovS Sé trav dpdavav Bacidéwv émitpotovs Aaxedat-2 povio. mpodixouvs! wvopatov. ws Sé 1 yurn mpooémeume xpvpa Kal Rdyous érrotetto, Bov- Nopévn StapBetpar to Bpépos él tO cuvornetv exeivp Bactrdevovts tis Yrdprns, To pev BOs

auTis éuionoe, mpos dé Tov NOYyov avTov ovK avreitrev, GAN érrawveiv Kat dSéyecOar mpoatrotovpevos, ovx égn Seely auBricKovcay avTny Kal dappaxevopévny SvarvupaiverOar ro capa Kat Kivduvevery' avT@ yap peAnoew Grras evOus éx-3 modav éxta. TO yevvynOév. otdtw 5é Trapayayov axpe Tob TOKOU THY avOpwrov, as nabero TiKTOU-gay, eloémeue trapédpovs ais wbdiow avTiis
kal pvAaxas, ols jv Tpoctetaypévoy, dav pev ORAv Tex Of; mapabovvas Tals yuvasgiv, dav Se
é
dppev, kouicas mpos ¢auTov 6 Tu dy tUxn mpdr-Tov. éTUYXE dé Seurrvoivtos avrod pera TOY
apxovTwy atroxunféey appev' Kal Taphoay ot vir7-4 pérat TO Taddptov avT@ Kopifovtes. o 5é deEd-HEVOS, WS AéyEeTAaL, Kal TpPds TOUS TrapoYTasS eiTreOY,
" Baowreds tuiy yéeyover, @ LwapTiatat," KaTéxrL-vev év TH Baoitixh xopa cal Xaplraov ovopace 51a TO Tovs TWavTas elvat TepLyapeis, ayapévous avtTov TO dpovnua Kal thy Sixarcorcvyvny. éBaci-Nevoe S€ phvas oxTw@ TO cvuTrav. Av Se Kal TaAXa TepiBrETTOS LTO TOY TONTHYV, Kal TeéELo-
1 gpodtkovs with most MSS. and edd.: mwpodicws with A (corrected), the Doric form.
210

7k,

LYCURGUS

as he learned of this, he declared that the kingdom belonged to her offspring, if it should be male, and himself administered the government only as guardian. Now the guardians of fatherless kings are called " prodikoi'' by the Lacedaemonians. Presently, however, the woman made secret over- tures to him, proposing to destroy her unborn babe on condition that he would marry her when he was a king of Sparta; and although he detested her character, he did not reject her proposition, but pretended to approve and accept it. He told her, however, that she need not use drugs to produce a miscarriage, thereby injuring her health and en- dangering her life, for he would see to it himself that as soon as her child was born it should be put out of the way. In this manner he managed to bring the woman to her full time, and when he learned that she was in labour, he sent attendants and watchers for her delivery, with orders, if a girl should be born, to hand it over to the women, but if a boy, to bring it to him, no matter what he was doing. And it came to pass that as he was at supper with the chief magistrates, a male child was born, and his servants brought the little boy to him. He took it in his arms, as we are told, and said to those who were at table with him, " A king is born unto you, O men of Sparta;"' then he laid it down in the royal seat and named it Charilaiis, or People's Joy, because all present were filled with joy, admiring as they did his lofty spirit and _ his righteousness. And so he was king only eight months in all. But on other accounts also he was revered by his fellow-citizens, and more than 211

PLUTARCH'S LIVES |

ves éyévovTo TOY ws éemitpoT@ Bacréws cal Ba-

‘ > 4 ” , e > » ‘\
airuxny éEovaiay éxovte weOopéver oi 51° apethy
MpocéxYovTes avT@ Kal trovety COédovTes EToL MWS TO TPOTTATTOMEVOD.
"Hy 8€ te nal 16 POovody cal mpos thy abEnow 6vT. vém Tetp@pevoy evictac0al, pmddtoTa pep ot auryyevets Kal oixetos THS TOD BactXéws pnTpos
e A ,
UBpicbas Soxovons, o 5é dderpos adtis Aewvidas Kat Opacitepov tote TO AvKovpyp dodopnGeis, vreitev ws ebdeln cadas pédAXAovTa Baclrevery > 7 ef ‘ \ f
avtov, wmovotay did0vs Kal mpoxatarapPBavev
A Q A ” 4 A S:aBorn Tov AvKovpyor, et te cupBain to Bacra A , le)

Nel mabeiv, ws ewuBeBourevxoTta. TotovTor Sé Ties Aoyot Kal Tapa THs yuvaiKos éEedoitwr:
éf ols Bapéws hépwv Kal Sedorxas TO adnrov, éyum uyely arrodnuia thy vrdvotay, Kal TwavN-OFjvat péxpis Av o adergidods ev nAtkia yevopevos
mPae BEX PU e gob ALE YEvOES Texvocn diddoxov THs Bacinelas.
IV. Odtws amdpas mp@tov pev ets Kpnrny

apixeto: Kai Tas avToOs TodTElas KaTavoncas
A s Kal avyyevopevos Tois mpwrtevovor xata do€ap dvipaot, Ta ev eCnrwoe xal wapéd\aBe Tey
vopwv, a> olxade petoiowy Kal ypnodpevos, Erte 5S av Kxateppovncev. &va Sé tav vomlopévor
> a “A \ A 4 ,
éxet copay Kat oditix@v yapiTt Kal ditia 4 > / > \ 4 4
meioas améoterev eis THY Yraptnv, OdrnTa, Tointyny pev SoxodvTa AUpLKaVY pEA@V Kal TTpdoxXna Thy TéxyNny TavTHY TeTroLnpEévoV, Epyp Sé

admep ol xpdticton Tav vopolerav Stampatto-those who obeyed him because he was guardian of the king and had royal power in his hands, were those who clave to him for his virtues and were ready and willing to do his bidding.

‘ There was a party, however, which envied him and sought to impede the growing power of so young a man, especially the kinsmen and friends of the queen-mother, who thought she had been treated _with insolence. Her brother, Leonidas, actually railed at Lycurgus once quite boldly, assuring him that he knew well that Lycurgus would one day be king, thereby promoting suspicion and paving the way for the accusation, in case any thing happened to the king, that he had plotted against his life. Some such talk was set in circulation by the queen-mother also, in consequence of which Lycurgus was sorely troubled and fearful of what might be in store for him. He therefore determined to avoid suspicion by travelling abroad, and _ to continue his wanderings until his nephew should come of age and beget a son to succeed him on the throne.

IV. With this purpose, he set sail, and came first to Crete. Here he studied the various forms of government and made the acquaintance of their most distinguished men. Of some things he heartily approved, and adopted some of their laws, that he might carry them home with him and put them in use; for some things he had only contempt. One of the men regarded there as wise statesmen was Thales, whom Lycurgus persuaded, out of favour and friendship, to .go on a mission to Sparta. Now Thales passed as a lyric poet, and screened himself behind this art, but in reality he did the work of

/
2 pevov. Aoyor yap Hoav at @dal pos evTreiPerav
4 a kal opovotay avakAnttkol, dia perov dua xa pvOpav morv TO KOomov éyovTwY Kal KaTaoTa-
f. 4
TLKOV, @V aKpowpevot KaTeTpaivovto AEANOOTAS °

\ »# N a A , a a ta 70n nat cuvmeKxeodvto Te Ento TOY Kadov
éx THs émtywpialovans ToTe mpos GAANHXOUS
a 4 XOP I A p f
KkaxoOupias, wate TpoTroy Tia T@ AvKovpy@
TpooovoTrovety THY Traidevoly AUT@V ExELVvoV.
a re) 4
3 ‘Amo dé THs Kpnrns 0 Auxodpyos él ’Aciav
émrevoe, BovrAcpevos, ws AéyeTat, Tais Kpntixais diaitats, evtedéaw ovaais Kal avornpais, Tas > \ / \ , ad ? N
Iwvixas modvtedeias nal Tpudas, @oTEp LaTpos cwHpaciw vylewols UrovAa Kal vorwdn, TapaBa-
A n 4
AwVv atrobewphcat tHv Stapopay tav PBiwv xal
4 TOV ToNTEL@V. éxet S€ Kal Tots ‘Omnpou trotn-A le) ° a pac évTvy@v wpaTov, ws EolKe, Tapa ToS
, an
éxyovors tois KpeopvAouv Siatnpovpévots, Kat
KaTlowv év avtois THS Wpos HOovyY Kal axpaciay
A \ StatpuBhs TO wWodsTixoy Kal travdevtTLKOVY ovK
éXdttTovos aftov amovdns avapmepiypévov, eypa-rato mpo8vpws Kal cvvnyayev ws Sedpo Koma.
qv yap tis non Sdka Tav éra@v auavpda Trapa
a ¢ > / \ > \ S Ul
tois “EXAnow, exéxtnvto Sé ov TroAXOl pépn TLV, omopdony THS Toincews, ws eTvxXeE, Svahepopéevns:
yvopiunv 5€ adtnv cal pddtoTta TpwTOS erroince Avxovpyos.
b J, \ \ ‘ e \ > 4 Q
5 <Alyvarrios 5€ Kai mpos avTovs adixéoOar tov
Avxodpyov olovtat, cai Thy ato TOV adXwV yevav Tov payiuov Ssidxpiow pardiota Oavpacavta

one of the mightiest lawgivers. For his odes were so many exhortations to obedience and harmony, and their measured rhythms were permeated with ordered tranquillity, so that those who listened to them were insensibly softened in their dispositions, insomuch that they renounced the mutual hatreds which were so rife at that time, and dwelt together in a common pursuit of what was high and noble. Thales, therefore, after a fashion, was a forerunner in Sparta of Lycurgus and his discipline.

From Crete, Lycurgus sailed to Asia, with the desire, as we are told, of comparing with the Cretan civilization, which was simple and severe, that of the TIonians, which was extravagant and luxurious, just as a physician compares with healthy bodies those which are unsound and sickly ; he could then study the difference in their modes of life and forms of government. There too, as it would appear, he made his first acquaintance with the poems of Homer, which were preserved among the posterity of Creophylus; and when he saw that the political and disciplinary lessons contained in them were worthy of no less serious attention than the incentives to pleasure and license which they supplied,: he eagerly copied and compiled them in order to take them home with him. For these epics already had a certain faint reputation among the Greeks, and a few were in possession of certain portions of them, as the poems were carried here and there by chance; but Lycurgus was the very first to make them really known.

The Aegyptians think that Lycurgus visited them also, and so ardently admired their separation of the military from the other classes of society that he fo.)

peteveyxeiy eis THY Yraptnv, kal ywpiocavta tovs Bavavaous Kal yetpotéxvas aoretiov ws ad7-Oa Tb wodtTevpa Kal KaSapov atrodeiEat. tadta pev otv Alyumrriow gor Kal tov “EAAnuiKoV cuyypadhéwy paptupovow: Ste dé cal ArBunv cat 1Bnpiav érndOev o Aviodpyos Kal mepl thy "Ivdcany wravnbels trois Tupvocogiotais wpirn-aev, ovdéva my _Aptotoxparn TOV ae Yraptiatny eipnxota ywac Koper.

V. Of 5é AaxeSacpovcon tov Auxodpyov €1 0-Oovd amovra Kal peTeréutTrovTo TOANGKLS, WS TOUS pev Bacirels Gvopa kal Tyny, adrro 6€ udev dea-dépov tav TodAwY exovTas, év éxeivp Sé Piow Hyepovicny Kal Sivas dvOpatrwv aywyov odaay. ov pv ovde tots Baotredouw Hv aBovANTOS 7 mapovoia tov avdpos, aAX’ HAMLCoV exeivou cupmapovtos Hrrov UBpifover ypjoOat Tots toAXois.

éravehOav ovv mpos ottw SdiaKewpévovs evOvs éreyelpe Ta TapovtTa Kuively Kal peOroTavae THY TOMTELAY, OS TOV KATA MEpos vommwY ovdeyv Epyov ovdé Sheros, El wn TLS WoTEP THaTL TrOYNP@ Kal yéuovTe TavTodaTav voonudtaoy Thy UrapYovoay éxtntas kal petaBadav xpaci bro happdcov kal xaSappov érépas dpketas xawns Svairns.
Stavonbels 58 tadta mp@tov ev arednunoer eis Aerhovs: xal TO Oem Ovcas Kal ypnodpevos
érravndle tov SraBontoy éexeivov ypnopov xopt-Cov, @ Oeodiry pev avrov y IlvOia wpocettre Kat
Oeov padrov 4} avOpwrov, edvouias Sé ypytovte
216
~~.

transferred it to Sparta, and by removing mechanics and artisans from participation in the government, _ made his civil polity really refined and pure. At any rate, this assertion of the Aegyptians is confirmed by some Greek historians. But that Lycurgus visited Libya and Iberia also, and that he wandered over India and had conferences with the Gymnosophists, no one has stated, so far as I know, except Aristo- crates the son of Hipparchus, the Spartan.

V. The Lacedaemonians missed Lycurgus sorely, and sent for him many times. They felt that their kings were such in name and station merely, but in everything else were nothing better than their subjects, while in him there was a nature fitted to lead, and a power to make men follow him. How- ever, not even the kings were averse to having him at home, but hoped that in his presence their subjects would treat them with less insolence. Returning, then, to a people thus disposed, he at once undertook to change the existing order of things and revolutionize the civil polity. He was * convinced that a partial change of the laws would be of no avail whatsoever, but that he must proceed as a physician would with a patient who was debilitated and full of all sorts of diseases; he must reduce and alter the existing temperament by means of drugs and purges, and introduce a new and different regimen. Full of this determination, he -first made a journey to Delphi, and after sacrificing to the god and consulting the oracle, he returned with that famous response in which the Pythian priestess addressed him as “ beloved of the gods, and rather god than man,” and said that the god had granted

Sidovas xal xataweiv &¢n tov Oeov %) wodv KpatioTn TOV GAAWY ETTAL TOMTELODV.

"ErrapOels 88 tovrots mpoonyeto! tots apic-Tous Kal cuvehdrrecOar Trapexdre, cpvda Srareyouevos Tols dirows mpOTov, celta odTws Kata puxpov aTTOMEVOS TAELOVOY Kal cuMLaTAS él THY mpakiv. ws & o Kalpos Ke, TpidKovTa TOUS Tpa-Tous éKéXevoe peTa TOV STTAWY Ewley Eis ayopay mpoeNOeiv éxmrnEews vera cal poBov mpos Tovs avtimpatrovTas. wv elxoot Tovs émipavertaTous “Eppummos avéypaye tov S€ pdaddwoTa Tov
Avxovpyou épywv kowwvjcavta TavTwv Kal oup-TpayLaTevaapevov TA TrEpl TOUS vopovs ’ApOwiddav ovopafovorv. apyopévns S€ THS Tapaxns o Baotreds Xapiraos hoBnbeis ws én’ adtov 6Ans THs mpdkews ocumotaperns, Katépuye mpos THY Xarxioxov: elta trewoOels nat AaBwv EpKous
avéoTn Kal petelye TOV TpaTTopévav, Pvoet
Tpaos av as TOU Kal NéyeTaL cUUBacLrNEVOYTA Tov ApyéXaov avt@ Tpos Tovs éyxaptdlovtas Tov veavioxov eitrety: “las 8 av ein Xapiraos avip ayaos, ds ovdé Tois Tovnpots yareTrOs EoTL;”” TIXevovev S5é Kawvoropoupévwy bd Tob Av-
KoUpyoUu mpwTov hv Kal péytotov 7 KaTAaoTAOLS TOV yepovTar, jv dynow o Iddtwv TH TeV Bact-éwy apy preyparvovan myGeioav Kal yevouéevny ico wnpov es Ta péytota owrTnpiay aya Kal 1 xpoohyero Cobet : mpootye.

his prayer for good laws, and promised him a constitution which should be the best in the world.

Thus encouraged, he tried to bring the chief men of Sparta over to his side, and exhorted them to put their hands to the work with him, explaining his designs secretly to his friends at first, then little by little engaging more and uniting them to attempt the task. And when the time for action came, he ordered thirty of the chief men to go armed into the market-place at break of day, to strike conster- nation and ,terror into those of the opposite party. The names of twenty of the most eminent among them have been recorded by Hermippus; but the man who had the largest share in all the under- takings of Lycurgus and co-operated with him in the enactment of his laws, bore the name of Arthmiadas. When the tumult began, King Charilaiis, fearing that the whole affair was a conspiracy against himself, fled for refuge to the Brazen House;! but he was soon convinced of his error, and having exacted oaths for his safety from the agitators, left his place of refuge, and even joined them in their enterprise, being of a gentle and yielding disposition, so much so, indeed, that Archelaiis, his royal colleague, is said to have remarked to those who were extolling the young king, “ How can Charilaiis be a good man, when he has no severity even for the bad?”

Among the many innovations which Lycurgus made, the first and most important was his institu- tion of a senate, or Council of Elders, which, as Plato says,? by being blended with the “feverish ” government of the kings, and by having an equal vote with them in matters of the highest importance,

1 A temple of Athena. 2 Laws, p. 691 e.

awdporvvny Tapacyeiv. aiwpoupévn yap 7 ToNrtTela Kal aToKNivovca voV pev os TOUS Bactreis emi tupavvida, viv S& @s TO WAHBOS ert Snpoxpatiav, olov Eppa THY TOY yEepovTaY apynV év péow Oepévn kal icoppomncaca thy achanre-oTaTny Taki rye Kal KaTAOTACLY, Gel TOV OKT@
Kal elxoot yepovTwy Trois pév Bactdedoe TpooTe-Gepévwy Goov ayvtiBivac mpos Snpoxpartiav, avis 5é bmép tod wn yevéoOar tupavvida tov Sjpov dvappwvvivtav. Ttocovtous b€ dno. KaTta-orabjvat tovs yépovtas ‘Aptototédys, OTe TpidKovra ToD T POTWV pera Avxovpyou ‘yevo-pévov dvo Thy mpakuv eyeateMtrov amrodeAtdoav-Tes. 6 6€ 2 paipos 3 apyins ono TogoUTOUS
yever Oar Tors TAS yvoOpns peta xovtas. ein 8 av
Tt kal TO TOD apiO pod 50 éBoopdbos TeTpade TodhaThactacbeians AM OTENOUMEVOD, Kal dt tots avrob péperwy igos @y pera TH éEd8a TENELOS EoTLV. enol dé Soxet padora, TocoUTOUS amro-SeiEar Tovs yépovTas émras ot mavtes elev Tpid~ KovTa, Tots OxT® Kal elxoae Toiv Svoiy Bacthéow mpooTBepévorr.

VI. Obra dé repli TAUTHY éoTovdace THY apxny ) Auxodpyos Gore pavteiav ékx Achpav Kopioas meph AUTHS, Hv p prtpav Kanovow. yer dé obras: “ Avds SurAXaviou! Kab APavas ZuANavias * iepov iSpuadpevov, guras purd£avra Kat oBas oBa-Eavra, tpidxovta ‘yepovciay abv dpxaryérais
KaTaotTnoavTa, wpas é£€ Mpas dmeddaley petakv

1 SvAAavlov, ZvAdavlas Bekker adopie the corrections of Bryan to ‘EAAaviov and ‘EAAavias.

-

brought safety and due moderation into counsels of state. For before this the civil polity was veering and unsteady, inclining at one time to follow the kings towards tyranny, and at another to follow the multitude towards democracy; but now, by making the power of the senate a sort of ballast for the ship of state and putting her on a steady keel, it achieved the safest and the most orderly arrangement, since the twenty-eight senators always took the side of the kings when it was a question of curbing democracy, and, on the other hand, always strengthened the people to withstand the encroachments of tyranny. The number of the senators was fixed at twenty- eight because, according to Aristotle, two of the thirty original associates of Lycurgus abandoned the enterprise from lack of courage. But Sphaerus says that this was originally the number of those who shared the confidence of Lycurgus. Possibly there is some virtue in this number being made up of seven multiplied by four, apart from the fact that, being equal to the sum of its own factors, it is the next perfect number after six. But in my own opinion, Lycurgus made the senators of just that number in order that the total might be thirty when the two kings were added to the eight and twenty.

VI. So eager was Lycurgus for the establishment of this form of government, that he obtained an oracle from Delphi about it, which they call a “rhetra.”” And this is the way it runs: “ When thou hast built a temple to Zeus Syllanius and Athena Syllania, divided the people into ‘ phylai’ and into ‘obai,’ and established a senate of thirty mem- bers, including the ‘ archagetai,’ then from time to

BaBuras te xal Kvaxiovos, obTas eta pepe Te kak adgioracbar dap 6é Tay Kupiay Hyev Kat KpaTos. éy TOUTOLS TO Hey guras puraga wal @Bas wBd&ar Steretv dott nal xataveipar Td
beled els peploas, @y Tas pev Aaa tas 6é @Bas ™ poo nryopevKer. apyaryéras 5€ ot Baorreis AéyovTat, To é€ amedra ety exxdnorate ore THY apynv kal THY aitiav Tis moduTelas els TOV T1v-Orov aviyfe. Thy dé BaBvxav Xeipappos," Kal Tov Kvaxiava viv Otvobvra T™ pocaryopevovaty" Apt:
oToTeAns Sé TOV pev Kvaxidva TOTA MOD, Thv sé BaBvxav yepupay. év péow oe TOUTED Tas é€K-KANo Las HYOV, OUTE Tag Tddev ovcay ouTE arANS TLVOS KATACKEUTS. ovey yap weTo TadTa Tpos evBovarcay elvat, ParXov dé Brdarrev, prvapwdets amrepyatoueva, kal yauvous hpovnuate Kev Tas
d:avoias TOV TULT OpEvopEVvorr, Stray eis dydNpata Kal ypagas Tpooknvia Gedtpav atéyas Bov-AeuTn ploy HoKnpevas TEPLTTOS éxxdnovalovTes aTroBheTaot. Tou oe m0 ous a0 poraBevros ét-mety pev ovdevl yvounv TOV Adrwv edeito, THY S

v6 TOV YyepovTay Kal TOY Bacihéwv TpoteGeioay émexpivat KUptos HW o Siipos. dorepov pévToL TOV ToAA@Y adhatpécet Kal 7 poabécet TAS yopas biaotpepovtav Kat mapaBialopeven, TloAvdwpos Kal ®corroptros of Bactneis Tabe TH pytpa 7 apEveypayray: “Ac be o Koay O Sa pos édovto, TOUS
m pea Buryevéas kal dpxayéras amoaTaThpas Tpev,” TOUT éoTL MN KUpODV, GAN Grws adiotacBar Kal

1 Xeluappos this, or some other later name, is thought to have fallen from the text by Sintenis?, after E.. Curtius, Peloponnesu3, ii. p. 315; Coraés and Bekker have rhy 5¢ BaBixav nal roy Kvaxiwva, with the MSS.

time ‘appellazein’ between Babyca! and Cnacion,! and there introduce and rescind measures; but the people must have the deciding voice and the power.” In these clauses, the “ phylai” and the “ obai” refer to divisions and distributions of the people into clans and phratries, or brotherhoods; by “ archagetai” the kings are designated, and “apellazein ”» means to assemble the people, with a reference to Apollo, the Pythian god, who was the source and author of the polity. ‘The Babyca is now called Cheimarrus, and the Cnacion Oenus; but Aristotle says that Cnacion is a river, and Babyca a bridge. Between these they held their assemblies, having neither halls nor any other kind of Building for the purpose. For by such things Lycurgus thought good counsel was _ not promoted, but rather discouraged, since the serious purposes of an assembly were rendered foolish and futile by vain thoughts, as they gazed upon statues and paintings, or scenic embellishments, or extrava- gantly decorated roofs of council halls. When the multitude was thus assembled, no one of them was permitted to make a motion, but the motion laid before them by the senators and kings could be accepted or rejected by the people. After- wards, however, when the people by additions and subtractions perverted and distorted the sense of motions laid before them, Kings Polydorus and Theo- pompus inserted this clause into the rhetra: “ But if the people should adopt a distorted motion, the senators and kings shall have power of adjourn- ment’; that is, should not ‘ratify the vote, but dismiss outright and dissolve the session, on the

1 Probably names of small tributaries of the river Eurotas.

Siadrvery Tov Sjpov, os éextpéwovTa Kal peratrot-

5 obvTa THY yuouny Tapa TO BéATLcTOV. éemrecoay
&é «al avrol tHv TOMY as TOD Beod TadTa Tpoc-Ttdccovtos, ws tou Tuptaios émipéuvntae did TOUTWY: 7

:
®olBou axovoavtes TvOwvdbev ofxad éverxav pavteias te Oeod nal Teréevt’ érrea® apyew pev Bovrts Oeotiunrovs Bacidjas, olor pérer Lapras ipepdecoa Tons, mpeaRuras Te yépovtas, émeta, dé Snpotas avépas,
evOeiais pritpats advratraperBopévovs.
VIT. Odr@ 76 troditevpa tod AvKovpyou pi-Eavtos, duws axpatov ett thy odtyapyiay Kar ioxupay oi pet avTov opayTes oTTapyaoay Kar Oupoupévny, os gnow o IIkdrov, olov ydadov
3 a 3 A \ “A > , , l4
éuBarXovow avTh tHv tov édopav Svvapmey, erect Tou padioTa TpldKovTa Kal éxaTov peta Avxodp-yov mpaTtwy tav mept "EXaTtov épopwy xatacta-2 Oévrwyv émt @eorourov Bacidevovtos: bv Kat gacw bro THs éavtod yuvasKos overdsfopevov os
éXdTTwo TapadwacovtTa Tois Tato THY Bactréiav
} 9 a mapédaBe, “Meilw pév ovv,’ ettreiv, “dow ypoviw -
, 9 A ” \ » > le)
Tépav. TO yap dytt TO ayav amoBandovdoa peTa
le) , A

tov POovou Siépuye tov xivduvov, date wn TAabely ground that it was perverting and changing the motion contrary to the best interests of the state.

And they were. actually able to persuade the city that the god authorized this addition to the rhetra, as Tyrtaeus reminds us in these verses :—
' Phoebus Apollo's the mandate was which they brought from Pytho, Voicing the will of the god, nor were his words unfulfilled :
Sway in the council and honours divine belong to the princes ‘
Under whose care has been set Sparta’s city of charm ;
Second to them are the elders, and next come the men of the people Duly confirming by vote unperverted decrees."

VII. Although Lycurgus thus tempered his civil polity, nevertheless the oligarchical element in it was still unmixed and dominant, and his successors, seeing it "swelling and foaming,' as Plato says,} 'imposed as it were a curb upon it, namely, the power of the ephors." It was about a hundred and thirty years after Lycurgus that the first ephors, Elatus and his colleagues, were appointed, in the reign of Theopompus. This king, they say, on being reviled by his wife because the royal power, when he handed it over to his sons, would be less than when he received it, said: " Nay, but greater, in that it will last longer." And in fact, by renouncing excessive claims and freeing itself from jealous hate, royalty at Sparta escaped its perils, so that the Spartan kings did not experience the fate which the

1 Laws, p. 692 a.

& Mecomviot xat 'Apyetot tovs trap avtois Ba-airels eSpacav, pndev évdodvar pnde yartaoa ths éEovolas émt To Snuotixov eOedXnoavtas. 5 cat padr.tota tTHy AuKovpyou codiay Kal mpovotay érroince havepay eis Tas Meconviwr xal 'Apyelwv, auyyevav Kal yetover, Snuwv cal Baciiéov ordoes Kal KaxkoToNTElas adopaow, of THY iowv am' apyis tetuynnores, ev 66 TO KAHp@ Kal Tréov éyew éKxetvav dofartes, ov émt mov ypovory evdaipovncav, adr' BBpe. pev Trav Bactréwv, ov« 3 4 \ A Ww A VA
evrrevOeia Sé TOY byAwY, TA KADETTaTA cUYTApa-
4 a a) e > A 9 a Eavres GecEav Gri Ociov Hv ws adnOas evTvynpa
Tols Lwapriatats Oo THY ToNLTELaY appoodpEVvos kal Kepdoas Tap avtois. tabta pev ovv DoTepov.
VIII. Aevrepoy d€ trav Avxovpyou todTevpd-Tov Kal veavixwratov 6 THS ys avabacpos éoTe.
Sewis yap ovons advwparias Kal ToNA@Y aKTn-Hovey Kal arropav éripepopéevwv TH TOA, TOD Se mwrovTOU TavTaTacLW Eis OAiyoUS TUVEppUNKOTOS, bBpww nai POovov cal Kaxovpytay nal tpudnv cat
Ta Tovtay ére mpecRutepa Kai peitw voonpara WoNTelas, TAOVTOV Kal Treviav, éFeXavvwV, cuve-
4 @ 9 /
Tee THY Xwpav arracay eis pécov Olvtas ef
apx7ns avaddcacbai, cat Civ pet' AAAHAOY Atrav-Tas opareis xal icoxAnpous Tois Biows yevopuevous,
TO O€ TPWTEiOY ApETH mETLOVTAS, WS GANS érép~

\ (4 > wv “n 9 9 4
Mpos Etepov ovK ovans Stadopas ovdé avicoTnTos, 226
LYCURGUS

Messenians and Argives inflicted upon their kings, who were unwilling to yield at all or remit their power in favour of the people. And this brings into the clearest light the wisdom and foresight of Lycurgus, when we contrast the factions and mis- government of the peoples and kings of Messenia and Argos, who were kinsmen and neighbours of the Spartans. They were on an equality with the Spartans in the beginning, and in the allotment of territory were thought to be even better off than they, and yet their prosperity did not last long, but what with the insolent temper of their kings and the unreasonableness of their peoples, their established institutions were confounded, and they made it clear that it was in very truth a divine blessing which the Spartans had enjoyed in the man who framed and tempered their civil polity for them. These events, however, were of later date.

VIII. A second, and a very bold political measure of Lycurgus, in his redistribution of the land. For there was a dreadful inequality in this regard, the city was heavily burdened with indigent and help- less people, and wealth was wholly concentrated in the hands of a few. Determined, therefore, to banish insolence and envy and crime and luxury, and those yet more deep-seated and afflictive dis- eases of the state, poverty and wealth, he persuaded his fellow-citizens to make one parcel of all their territory and divide it up anew, and to live with one another on a basis of entire uniformity and equality in the means of subsistence, seeking pre- éminence through virtue alone, assured that there was no other difference or inequality between man

227
Q 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

mrny bony aicypayv royos opife: kal Karov ET aLVos.
"Emayov 5€ TO AOyo TO Epyov Evetwe THY jeV GAAnv ois teptotxots Aaxwvixny TpLopupious xAnpous, THY Sé eis TO dot THY YrdpTnY cuvTeE-Notcay evakioytAlovs: ToTovTOL yap éyévorTo KNApor Yraptiatav: éevoe S€ dace tov pev Avxovpyov éEaxioxidlous velwat, tpioxerdtovs Se

peTa Tadta tpocGecivar IloAvdwpov: ot 8€ Tous pev yuicets TOY evaxicxtriwy TodTOY, Tovs fe hpicers Auxovpyov. o dé KARpos HY éxdotou ToaovTos wate arropopay dépev dvdpi pev éEBSo-pncovra KplOdv pedipvous, yuvakl dé SHdexa, Kal Tav vypOv KapTra@v dvadoyws TO TAGs.
apkécey yap @eTO ToTOUTOY avTois, THs Tpohys
mpos eveFiay Kal vryeiay ixavins, dddov bé pu7-Sevds Senoopevors. Néyeras & avrov vortepov TOTE Ypove TH Xepay Srepxopevov é& drrobnias apte TeBe pio pevny, OpavTa TOUS Twpovs mapan-Anrous Kat opanels, pevdiacat, Kal etrety T pos
TOUS TapovTas os 4» Aaxouny paiverar naca
TONNY aderpav elvas veworl VEVEMNMEVOD.
IX. ’Emeye:pnoas 5é «al 7a, émuTha Scaspeiv, 67WS TaVTaTracL, éFédou TO avicov Kal aved-panrov, evel Karem as e@pa mpoadexopuévous TY QVTUKPUS adatpeow, érépa mepiTprOev o6@ Kal
KaTeToMTEvaaTo THY ev TOUTOLS | wheovefiav.
‘Tp@rtov pep yap dxupwcas ita vopec pa pucobv Kal apryupoby joe xphiod al T@ atdnp@ ampocérake: xal tovrm d€ amd todXoU otabpod 228

LYCURGUS

and man than that which was established by blame for base actions and praise for good ones.
Suiting the deed to the word, he distributed the rest of the Laconian land among the “ perioeci,” or free provincials, in thirty thousand lots, and that which belonged to the city of Sparta, in nine thousand lots, to as many genuine Spartans. But some say that Lycurgus distributed only six thousand lots among the Spartans, and that three thousand were afterwards added by Polydorus; others still, that Polydorus added half of the nine thousand to the half distributed by Lycurgus. The lot of each was large enough to produce annually seventy bushels of barley for a man and twelve for his wife, with a proportionate amount of wine and oil. Lycurgus thought that a lot of this size would be sufficient for them, since they needed sustenance enough to promote vigour and health of body, and nothing else.
And it is said that on returning from a journey some time afterwards, as he traversed the land just after the harvest, and saw the heaps of grain standing parallel and equal to one another, he smiled, and said to them that were by: “ All Laconia looks like a family estate newly divided among many brothers.”

IX. Next, he undertook to divide up their movable property also, in order that every vestige of unevenness and inequality might be removed ; and when he saw that they could not bear to have it taken from them directly, he took another course, and overcame their avarice by political devices. In the first place, he withdrew all gold and silver money from currency, and ordained the use of iron money only. Then to a great weight and mass of this he gave a trifling.

kat éyxouv Suvayw orLynv edexer, dare béxa pVav aporBny an oOnxns TE peyarns éy otKia SeicOat Kxal Levyous dyovTos. TOUTOU de Kupe-Dévros é&érecev adiaenpareov yen TOANA THS Aaxedaipovos. Tis yap v1] KET TEL cweddev i] Sapodoxeiv v7] amroarepely H apirdavev 6 pare KaTaxpirar Suvatov Hv pnre Kent ho Oa Cndwrar, GAXa pnde Kataxowat AvarTenes: oFer yap, ws NéyeTa, Star vpou atS7pou TO TTOpCo LAL Kaga-aBéoas adeideTo THY els TaNANa xpelav Kat v-vapy, adpavobs Kal Suaépyou ‘yevopuevov.
Mera 6€ tovTO TaY axXpnoTey Kat Tepioo ay ETFOLELTO TEXVOY Eevndaciav. émehAov é grou Kai pndevos eEeXavvortos at TwoAXal T@ Kow@ vopic-pare ouvecrreccio bat, bidBeaw TOV Epyav ouK eXov-TOV. TO yap atdnpodbv a ary arytpov ovK HY T pos TOUS GNXovs * "EXAnvas odd’ elye TL KATAYENMOMEVOD, DOTE ovee mpiacOat Te TaV Eevixe Kat po-TKD Dmriipxev, ovd eioemNet papros EUTOpPLKOS els TOUS Acpevas, ovoe erréBawe Ths AMaxwvixhs ov copiarns hoyon, ov paves GrYUPTLKOS, oux ETALPOV Tpopevs, ou Xpvo ay Tess OUK apyupav Kaddwmig waTwv Snuwoupyos, are on vopic paros ovK 6vTOS. AANA OUTMS arrepnpwbeia a Kara px pov v) Tpugy TOV Swmupouvtav Kai Tpepovt@y autn de QuTns évapaivero Kal Tdetov ovdev 7 Hv Tots TONG KEKTNMEVOLS, oOoV OvK exovons ELS peérov Tis ev-Topias, arr éyxar@nodopn pevns Kat apyovons.
d10 Kal Ta Tpoxetpa TOV TKEVaY Kal avayKxaia

Taira, KAwripes Kal Sippot xal tparelaz, Ben-TloTa Trap avtois édnutoupyeito, Kal KoOwy o 230

45

LYCURGUS

value, so that ten minas' worth! required a large store-room in the house, and a yoke of cattle to transport it. When this money obtained currency, many sorts of iniquity went into exile from Lacedaemon. For who would steal, or receive as a bribe, or rob, or plunder that which could neither be concealed, nor possessed with satisfaction, nay, nor even cut to pieces with any profit? For vinegar was used, as we are told, to quench the red-hot iron, robbing it of its temper and making it worthless for any other purpose, when once it had become brittle and hard to work.

In the next place, he banished the unnecessary and superfluous arts. And even without such banish- ment most of them would have departed with the old coinage, since there was no sale for their pro- ducts. For the iron money could not be carried into the rest of Greece, nor had it any value there, but was rather held in ridicule. It was not possible, therefore, to buy any foreign wares or bric-a-brac ; no merchant-seamen brought freight into their harbours; no rhetoric teacher set foot on Laconian soil, no vagabond soothsayer, no keeper of harlots, no gold- or silver-smith, since there was no money there. But luxury, thus gradually deprived of that which stimulated and supported it, died away of itself, and men of large possessions had no advantage over the poor, because their wealth found no public outlet, but had to be stored up at home in idleness. In this way it came about that such common and necessary utensils as bedsteads, chairs, and tables were most excellently made among them, and the Laconian "kothon," or drinking-cup, was in very high repute

"1 About £40, or $200.
231
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Aaxwvixds evdoxipet pdrduora mpos Tas oTpareias,

5 ds gyot Kprtias. Ta yap dvarykains Tivopeva.
TOV vdatov Kab dvowmobvra Thy dw aexpur-TeTO TH Kpoa, Kat Tou Gonrepots T POT KOTTOVTOS
évtos Kal Tpoataxopevov Tots apBoot, cadapw-TEpov émrnaiate T@ oT Omar TO TLVOMEVOY. aittos 5é Kal ToUTwY Oo vopoberns: annrdary Wevor yap at Snpsoupyol TOV axpnotwy éy Trois davayKaiots em edeLKVUYTO THY KaddTEx via.

X. "Ere 56 parrov ériBécbar rF Tpupy Kal TOV Cinrov aperérbat Tou TAoUtOU Savondeis, 7a TO TpuToV modiTeupa Kal Kaddto TOV CTE, THY TOV cvoottioy KatacKeuny, wore Sevmveiv per' aXAnhov ouveevTas éml xowvots xal retaypévots drypors ral oitioss, olxoe dé un StactacOar KataKrduvévras
eis OTPWOLVAS ToduTeeis Kal Tpamelas, Xepal
Snpoupya@v Kal paryetporv UTO OKOTOS, WoTrEp
2 adndaya Coa, TLALVOMEVOUS, kal Siapdeipovras dpa rots nOear Ta To"aTa, ™ pos macay er Oupiav averpeva Kal wrANo horny, paKpav pev Drrvev, Oeppay dé AovTpwY, TOAAS dé jouxias «al TpoTrov TLVa, voonhelas caOnpepwns Seouerny. péya pev ouv Kal TOUTO 7, petfov Sé ro Tov mAOvTOY anrov, as onor Geoppacros, Kal dimhourov amepyacacGat Th KOLOTNTL TOV Seiya Kal Th TWepi
3 THY Slarray EVTEAEIA. 'Yphals yap ovK Ay ovde aTroNAVa Ls OVdE pis Gres i eriderkis THS TODS TapacKenijs, él To aro Selrvov Te TEVNTe TOU mXovatou Babilovtos: dare Tobro 57) TO Opudov-pevoy éy povn TeV U0 TOV HAtov TOAEOV TH
Ladptn Breve Oar, ruprov 6vra Tov wrovTov Kal 232 mY
LYCURGUS

for usefulness among soldiers in active service, as Critias tells us. For its colour concealed the disagreeable appearance of the water which they were — often compelled to drink, and its curving lips caught the muddy sediment and held it inside, so that only the purer part reached the mouth of the drinker.

For all this they had to thank their lawgiver ; since their artisans were now freed from useless tasks, and displayed the beauty of their workmanship in objects

of constant and necessary use. |
X. With a view to attack luxury still more and remove the thirst for wealth, he introduced his third and most exquisite political device, namely, the institution of common messes, so that they might eat with one another in companies, of common and specified foods, and not take their meals at home, reclining on costly couches at costly tables, deliver- ing themselves into the hands of servants and animals, and ruining not only their characters but ‘ also their bodies, by surrendering them to every desire and all sorts of surfeit, which call for long sleeps, hot baths, abundant rest, and, as it were, daily nursing and tending. This was surely a great achievement, but it was a still greater one to make wealth “an object of no desire,’ as Theophrastus says, and even “unwealth,”! by this community of meals and simplicity of diet. For the rich man could neither use nor enjoy nor even see or display his abundant means, when he went to the same meal as the poor man; so that it was in Sparta alone, of all the cities under the sun, that men could have that far-famed sight, a Plutus blind, and lying as lifeless

\. cooks to be fattened in the dark, like voracious

1 Cf. Morals, p. 527 b.
235
ae

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kelpevov @omep ypadny arpvyoy Kal axivyrov.
ovde yap oixot mpodertyncavtas éEqv Badbilew éml Ta avociTia TWemAnpwpévous, GAN eripeNras of Nowtrol TapaduAatrovtTes TOY un TivovTa unde éoOiovra pet’ avtav éxaxilov ws axpath Kai Tpos THY Kowny arroparaxiCopevoy Siartav.
XI. Avd cal parrord dact r@ Avxotpye mpos TOUTO TO ToAiTevya yadrerovs yevéoBat Tos evmopous, Kal cuotavras én avtov aOpoous KataBoav Kal ayavaxreiy: TEAOS 5¢ BadAcpevos vo TOAN@Y éEérrese TIS aryopas Spoue. Kart Tous pep adddous pacer cus Lepov KaTapvyay:
els 5€ Tis veavioxos, GAXwWS pev ouK apuys, ous
dé Kal Oupoecdys, "Adnavdpos, emuxeipevos Kat St@Kwv emia TpapevTos avTov TH Baxrnpia Ta-Tatas Tov od0arpov efexorpev. O pev ovv Av-Koupyos ovdéy évdous 70s TO 7abos, adda ores évavt los &ecEe Tots ToALTaLs TO 7 poo wmov nh paary - pévov Kal SepOapperny THY oypuy" aides 5é 1roAAT ral KaThpera TOUS iSovras é Exyvev, WOTE mrapasovvat Tov ”AXxav6 pov auT@ Ka T porréurpar péexpe Tis oixias _guvayavaxrobvtTas. 6 é Auxodpyos exelvous MeV eTralveras apie, Tov 5é “Adcavépov elaaryayeov oixade KaKov pev oudéey ovr eroinoey
ovr elarev, anarndakas 5é Tous ouvnders t omnpéras Kat Oeparrevtipas éxeivov éxéhevoev varnpereiy.
0 6€ ovK op aryevuns emotes TO TpooTaTT opeEvoy own, Kat Tapapevoy apa TO Avkovpyo Kat ouvdrarrapevos év 7@ Katavoev THY WpaoTnra
ral To amabés avtov Tis yuxiis Kal TO repl

Thv Siattay avoTnpoyv Kal TO TpOS TOUS TOVOUS

and motionless as a picture. For the rich could not even dine beforehand at home and then go to the common mess with full stomachs, but the rest kept careful watch of him who did not eat and drink with them, and reviled him as a weakling, and one too effeminate for the common diet.

XI. It was due, therefore, to this last political device above all, that the wealthy citizens were incensed against Lycurgus, and banding together against him, denounced him publicly with angry shouts and cries ; finally many pelted him with stones, so that he ran from the market-place. He succeeded in reaching sanctuary before the rest laid hands on him ; but one young man, Alcander, otherwise no mean nature, but hasty and passionate, pressed hard upon him, and as he turned about, smote him with his staff and put out one of his eyes. Lycurgus, however, was far from yielding in consequence of this calamity, but confronted his countrymen, and showed them his face besmeared with blood and _ his eye destroyed. Whereupon they were so filled with shame and sorrow at the sight, that they placed Aleander in his hands, and conducted him to his house with sympathetic indignation. Lycurgus com- mended them for their conduct, and dismissed them, but took Alcander into the house with him, where he did the youth no harm by word or deed, but after sending away his customary servants and attendants, ordered him to minister to his wants. The youth, who was of a noble disposition, did as he was com- manded, without any words, and abiding thus with Lycurgus, and sharing his daily life, he came to know the gentleness of the man, the calmness of his spirit, the rigid simplicity of his habits, and _ his

> f A , \

axapmrov, autos te devas dteréOn rept tov dvdpa, kal pos tous avv7Bes Kal dirous édeyev
e 9 \ 2909 2n 7 e a 9 \
@s ov oKAnpos ovd avOddns o Auxodpyos, ddXa povos Huepos Kal mrpaos éott Tols GAXOLS. OvTMH
fev ovv OUTOS ExexOAAoTO Kal TOLAUTHY UTrecynKEL Sixnv, éx movnpod véov nal avOdbdous éuperéota-TOS avnp Kal cwdhpovikwTatos yevomevos. Tod 5é waOovs vrrouvnpa AvKodpyos idpicato Tijs
3 A e 4 A b] A 4 AY
AOnvas tepov, hv Omririrw Tpoanyopevae’ TOUS
yap opOarpovs omTirovs of THde Awpteis Kadov-

aw. éyiot pevtoe tov AuKotpyov, ov cat Ato-axopions éotiv o aurtetaypévos Thy Aaxowvixiy TWorTELav, TANYHVvar wév hacwv, ov TUdrAWOHvac
Sé tov ofOarpov, adda Kal TO iepov TH Oe THs
> 4 / e 4 \ ,
aKETEWS YaptoTnpiovy iopvcacGar. TO pévToL dépew Baxtnpiav éxxrnaidlovres of Yrapriaras peTa THY cuudopay éexetynv arréuabov.
XII. Ta 8&€ avocitia Kpijres pév avdpeia, AaneSarponot 6 piditia mpocayopevouaty, ere as dirias nal diroppocvvns trapyovTwv, ayrt
Tov X TO & AapBavovtes, elite ws Tpos evTéXELaV
Kai phedo ouvelifovtwy. ovdév S€ Korver Kai Tov mpatov éEwev émineioBat oi @o7rep éviot ghacw, éditiwy, Tapa tHv diaitav Kal THY eOmdnv Neyopévwv. cuvnpyovto Sé ava TevTexai-Sexa xal Bpayet tovrwy édXarTous 7 WAéetous.
pepe 5é Exacros KaTa pHva THY cvoCiTwY Ardi-Tov pédtvov, olvouv Yoas OKT, TUpod TrévTE pas; ovKoY Huivaia mévre, mpos b€ TovTOLS Eis OYroyiav puxpov TL Kolton vopiopatos. GAXws 236 46

LYCURGUS

unwearied industry. He thus became a devoted follower of Lycurgus, and used to tell his intimates and friends that the man was not harsh nor self-willed, as he had supposed, but the mildest and gentlest of them all. Such, then, was the chastisement of this young man, and such the penalty laid upon him, namely, to become, instead of a wild and impetuous youth, a most decorous and discreet man. Lycurgus, moreover, in memory of his misfortune, built a temple to Athena Optilitis, so called from “ optilus,” which is the local Doric word for eye. Some writers, however, of whom one is Dioscorides, who wrote a treatise on the Spartan civil polity, say that although Lyeurgus was struck in the eye, his eye was not blinded, but he built the temple to the goddess as a thank-offering for its healing. Be that as it may, the Spartan practice of carrying staves into their assemblies was abandoned after this unfortunate accident.

XII. As for the public messes, the Cretans call them “andreia,’ but the Lacedaemonians, “ phiditia,’’ either because they are conducive to friendship and friendliness, “phiditia’’ being equivalent to “ philitia ”’ ; or because they accustom men to sim- plicity and thrift, for which their word is “ pheido.” But it is quite possible, as some say, that the first letter of the word “phiditia” has been added to it, making “ phiditia” out of “ editia,’ which refers merely to meals and eating. They met in companies of fifteen, a few more or less, and each one of the mess-mates contributed monthly a bushel of barley- meal, eight gallons of wine, five- pounds of cheese, two and a half pounds of figs, and in addition to this, - a very small sum of money for such relishes as flesh and fish. Besides this, whenever any one made a kal Oicas tis amapynv Kal Onpedoas pépos emeprpev els TO auocitiov. efhy yap oixot Semvew omote Ouoas Tis 7} cup Ov Ovpioele, TOUS 5é GAXous edeu trapeivar. nal péxpt ye ToAXNOD Tas cuccitnoes axptiBas SuepvAatrov. “Arytdos youv tod Baciréws, ws érravnOev amo TIS oTpa-Telas KatateToNeunxws "AOnvaious, Bovdopévou

qwapa TH yuvatnl Seumrvety cal petatrepropévou Tas peploas, ovK Ereuyay of Todéuapyxet, TOU
dé peO” jyépav wm’ opyns pn Ovoavros fv eéee Ouciav, étnpimaoay avrov. °
Eis 6¢€ ra avacitia Kai Traides ehoitwy, doTrEep eis SibacKxarcia owhpoovvns ayopuevot, Kal NOyov HKPO@VTO ToALTLK@V Kal TradeuTas édEvBepias
émpwv, adtot Te traivew eiOifovto Kal oxwmrrety dvev Bwporoytas cal oxwrropevor pn Svoyepaive. apodpa yap édoxee xal todto Aaxwvixov elvat, cK@ppatos avéyerOa: pn Phépovra Sé éERvy mapaitetcOat, Kal 0 oxamtwv érémautTo. TOV
8 eiovdvtwv exedory SelEas) mpeaBvraros Tas Oupas, “Ata tottwy,” dnoiv, ‘ ‘Ew Aaryos OUK
exTTOpEveTal. | SoxipaterOas dé Tov Bovdopevov
Tov guaatTiov peTacyely ovTw pact. hae TOV auccitwy &xacTos atroparydadiav eis THY YeElpa, Tou StaKxovou Pépovtos aryyetov él Tis Keparis, éBarne ow h cabdrep piov, O pep Sontpdfov amas, 0 8 éxxcpivev opodpa Th ye Tueaas.
n yap Temes weVN THY TIS TETPNMEVNS éyer Sv-vas. Kav piay etpwot ToLtavrny, od mpocdé-2338

sacrifice of first fruits, or brought home game from the hunt, he sent a portion to his mess. For when- ever any one was belated by a sacrifice or the chase, he was allowed to sup at home, but the rest had to be at the mess. For a long time this custom of eating at common mess-tables was rigidly observed. For instance, when King Agis, on returning from an expedition in which he had been victorious over the Athenians, wished to sup at home with his wife, and sent for his rations, the polemarchs! refused to send them to him; and when on the following day his anger led him to omit the customary sacrifice, they laid a fine upon him.

Boys also used to come to these public messes, as if they were attending schools of sobriety; there they would listen to political discussions and see instructive models of liberal breeding. There they themselves also became accustomed to sport and jest without scurrility, and to endure jesting without displeasure. Indeed, it seems to have been especially characteristic of a Spartan to endure jesting; but if any one could not bear up under it, he had only to ask it, and the jester ceased. As each one came in, the eldest of the company pointed to the door and said to him: ‘Through that door no word goes forth outside.” And they say that a candidate for membership in one of these messes underwent the following ordeal. Each of the mess-mates took in his hand a bit of soft bread, and when a servant came along with a bowl upon his head, then they cast it into this without a word, like a ballot, leaving it just as it was if he approved of the candidate, but if he disapproved, squeezing it tight in his hand first. For the flattened piece

1 At Sparta, military commanders under the kings,

239

-PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ b a 4 4 €
Novra. Tov émetotovTa, BovAduevot mdavras 1)50-
, ? , a \ \ e? ?
pévous GAAHAOLS auvElvat. TOV 5€ oUTwWS aTrO-Soxipacbévra nexabdiabar Aéyouce Kaddeyos yap KaneiTaL TO ayyeloy eis 0 Tas arrouaydaNas épSdrrovat. tov Sé ov evdokiper pardiotra
>) ? n e 4 4 ef ,
jap avrois o péras Cwuos, Wore wnde xpeadiou SeicBat tovs mpeaButépovs, GrAXA tTrapaywpely Trois veavioxots, avtovs bé€ ToD Cwpod Katayxeo-pévous éotiaoOar. Aéyetas 5é tia Tov Tlovrina@v Bactrtéwv Evexa Tod Swpod nal mwpiacda Aaxw-ViKOV paryetpov’ elra yevodpevoy dvaxepavat: cat \ U b] a. 66 70 fe) a 5 A N
TOV pedryespov evrrety Bactned, rovtov Set tov Copov ev tr@ Evpwra Neroupévous érowaoba.” muovtes 5é petpiws amiace Siya Napmddos. ov yap éeats pos pas Badilev, ote TavTny ovTeE
” eas cd 1fA/ , \
GAAnv odor, Gras €OilwvTa. aKotous Kal vuKToS evOapoas nal adeds odevew. Ta pev oY cUGCL-Tea ToLauTny exer THEW.
XIII. Nopouvs 5é yeypappévovs o Avcodpyos ovx EOnxev, AAA pla TOV KadouULevwV pPnTPaY éoTi avTn. Ta pev yap KUplwTaTa Kal péyLoTa mpos evdatpoviay modews Kal apetyy, év ois nOcow eto nal tais aywyais TeV ToduTaV

éyxatectoryermpeva, péverv axivnta Kail BéBaca, éxovta THY mpoaiperw Seapov tayuporepoy Tis avayKns, hv) Twaidevats éutrotel Tots véots, vopo-Oérou Sidbeow atrepyalopwévn tept Exactov av-Tov. Ta dé pixpa Kal ypnuatina cupBoraa Kal
e

240

a

4

LYCURGUS

of bread had the force of a perforated, or negative, ballot. And if one such is found in the bowl, the candidate is not admitted to the mess, because they wish all its members to be congenial. The candi- date thus rejected is said to have been " caddished," for " caddichus'' 1 is the name of the bow! into which they cast the pieces of bread. Of their dishes, the black broth is held in the highest esteem, so that the elderly men do not even ask for a bit of meat, but leave it for the young men, while they themselves have the broth poured out for their meals. And it is said that one of the kings of Pontus actually bought a Spartan cook for the sake of having this broth, and then, when he tasted it, disliked it; whereupon the cook said: '¢© King, those who relish this broth must first have bathed in the river Eurotas." After drinking mod- erately, they go off home without a torch; for they are not allowed to walk with a light, either on this or any other occasion, that they may accustom them- selves to marching boldly and without fear in the darkness of night. Such, then, is the fashion of their common messes.

XIII. None of his laws were put into writing by Lycurgus, indeed, one of the so-called "rhetras"' forbids it. For he thought that if the most import- ant and binding principles which conduce to the prosperity and virtue of a city were implanted in the habits and training of its citizens, they would remain unchanged and secure, having a stronger bond than compulsion in the fixed purposes imparted to the young by education, which performs the office of a law-giver for every one of them. And as for minor

1 Or ''caddos," from which the verb in the Greek text is formed.

peraminrovtTa Tats ypelats GAoTE GANS, BEATLOV Hv pn KatarauBavew eyypaddos avdyKxais pnde axuwnros ecw, arr éav él TOV KaLlpOv, Tpoc-Bécers NapBavovta Kal adatpécets, as dv ot memadevpéevor Soxisdowot. TO yap srov Kart mTav THS vopobecias Epyov eis Hv Tatdeiav

aviyre.
Mia peév ovv TOV pnTpav jv, WoTep eipytat,

n xpd) syypadots. étépa b€ mdduy
Hn xXpholat vopols eyypadots. eETéep
KaTQ THs TonuTEnEias, Smres oixia Taoa THY peev apopay amo TENEKEWS elpyac wevny EXI Tas 6é Oupas aTro T ptovos povov kal pndevos TOV addeov épyanrelwy. O7rep yap Uorepov "Erapewvevday el mel Aéyouaw éml THs éavTov Tpamelns, MS TO TovoTov dpiorov ov Xwpet T podoaiar, ToUTO m pe-TOS évonoe Avxoipyos, @S olKia ToLavTn Tpupyy ov Xwpel Kal TONUTEAELAP, oud éorw ovdels oUTMS ametpoxanos cal dvonros @oTe els olxiav aderr Kal Onmorueny elo pepery Krivas apyuporobas Kat oTpwEYas ddoupyets Kat xpucas KUMCaS Kal TAVv TOUTOLS err opevny TOAUTEAELAY, GAN dvarynn ouv-appolecOar Kai cuveEopotody TH peév oixla THY KALYnD, Th be Khivy THY éoOijra, tautn dé TH
anu Nopnyiav Kat KATA KUT. ex 66 TauTns
THS oundeias gdaci cat Acwruytidny rov mpea Bu-TEpov év KopivOo Ser voivTa, kal Jeacdpevoy THS
oTéyns Tov olxou THY KaTao KeuTy TONUTEMT Kat datvopatixny, épwrncat Tov Eévoy et tetpaywva wap avtois Ta Eva puerar.
Tptrny dé p pnt pav Stapynpovetovet Tov Avnoup-you, THY KwAVOVoaY él TOvS avTOUS ToAEmLLOUS 242

LYCURGUS

matters, such as business contracts, and cases where the needs vary from time to time, it was better, as he thought, not to hamper them by written constraints or fixed usages, but to suffer them, as occasion demanded, to receive such modifications as educated men should determine. Indeed, he assigned the function of law-making wholly and entirely to education.

One of his rhetras accordingly, as I have said, prohibited the use of written laws. Another was directed against extravagance, ordaining that every house should have its roof fashioned by the axe, and its doors by the saw only, and by no other tool. For, as in later times Epaminondas is reported to have said at his own table, that such a meal did not comport with treachery, so Lycurgus was the first to see clearly that such a house does not comport with luxury and extravagance. Nor is any man so vulgar and senseless as to introduce into a simple and common house silver-footed couches, purple coverlets, gold drinking-cups, and all the extravagance which goes along with these, but one must of necessity adapt and proportion his couch to his house, his coverlets to his couch, and to this the rest of his supplies and equip- ment. It was because he was used to this simplicity that Leotychides the Elder, as we are told, when he was dining in Corinth, and saw the roof of the house adorned with costly panellings, asked his host if trees grew square in that country. |

A third rhetra of Lycurgus is mentioned, which forbids making frequent expeditions against the same roddraKis! otpateverv, iva phy) ToAAaKLs apuvecoat cvved Cbpevot TOAEULKOL YEVOVTAL. Kat TOUTO ye paduoTa katnyopovaw "Aynaotdaou Tov Bact-réws Barepov, as Tals cuvexéoe Kal mukvais els Tv Bowwtiav éuBorats Kal otpateias Tovs On-Balous dvtimddovs ols Aaxedatpoviows Kata-ceevgcavtos. So Kal TeTpwpévov avTov id@v

>A yrar«idas, " Kard," en, 7a Sidacnddua Tapa @nBalov arorapBaves, un Bovropévous avrous pnde eldotas payer Oar Sud£as." Tad pev odv ToL-aita vopoberipaTa pitpas wvopacer, @s Tapa rob Beod xoprtopeva® Kal xpnopous ovTa.
XIV. Tas 88 rasdeias, fv méyeorov nyeiTo TOU vopobétou Kal KadddoTov gpyov elvat, troppwlev dpxopevos evOvs dreakgmrel TH Tepl TOUS Yyapous nal Tas yevécets. ov yap, WS "AptatoTéeAns pyoty, émiyerpjoas cwppovitew Tas yuvaixas, éravaato un KpaTOv THs TOMAS dvéoews Kal yuvatkoxparias Sid Tas ToANAS oTpaTelas THY avdpav, év als jvayxdfovto Kupias dmoneltre éxeivas, Kal Sid TodTO paAXov TOD TpoTnKOVTOS autas €Oeparevov Kal Searroivas mpoonyopevov' GNA Kat roiTwy THy eévdexouerny émupederay ETT OLNTaTO.
Ta pév ye THpATA TOV TrapOévav Spopots Kal médais Kad Borais Sicxwy Kal axovTiov due7r0vncev, o> } TE TOV yevvopevar pilwors isxupay év laxupois capacw dpyiv aBotca Bdactdvor
1 wodAdxts inserted before orparevew to agree with Morals, p. 227; mwodeulous oTparevely.
2 xouiCéueva Cobet, adopting the conjecture of Sintenis* : youiCopeva (were believed to come).

enemies, in order not to accustom such enemies to frequent defence of themselves, which would make them warlike. And this was the special grievance which they had against King Agesilaiis in later times, namely, that by his continual and frequent incursions and expeditions into Boeotia he rendered the Thebans a match for the Lacedaemonians. And therefore, when Antalcidas saw the king wounded, he said: "This is a fine tuition-fee which thou art getting from the Thebans, for teaching them how to fight, when they did not wish to do it, and did not know how." Such ordinances as these were called "rhetras"' by Lycurgus, implying that they came from the god and were oracles.

XIV. In the 'matter of education, which he regarded as the greatest and noblest task of the law-giver, he began at the very source, by carefully regulating marriages and births. For it is not true that, as Aristotle says,! he tried to bring the women under proper restraint, but desisted, because he could not overcome the great licence and power which the women enjoyed on account of the many expeditions in which their husbands were engaged. During these the men were indeed obliged to leave their wives in sole control at home, and for this reason paid them greater deference than was their due, and gave them the title of Mistress. But even to the women Lycurgus paid all possible atten- tion. He made the maidens exercise their bodies in running, wrestling, casting the discus, and hurling the javelin, in order that the fruit of their wombs might have vigorous root in vigorous bodies and come to better maturity, and that they themselves

1 Pol. ii. 6, 8.

Béxrvov, avrai Te pera, poyns ToUS TOKOUS varo-pévovoat Kanéis dpa kat padies ayovifouvro ™ pos
Tas wdivas. apedwv dé Opinpw Kar oKiaTpapiay
Kal Onrurnta macav ovdev HT TOV eifice TOY KOpov Tas KOpas yupvds TE Topmrevely Kal T pos
iepois teow dpxeicBar Kal ddew Tov veo Trapov-Twv Kal Dewpevary. Eote 6€ 6 ore Kat CKO ULATA héyouras mpos &kacTov eUXPHTTOS émehapBa-VOvTO TOV Gpapravouever: Kal wad els TOUS
a€ious QuTo@V eyeapia per * gos TET OLN LEVaL Siefloved, prdoripiay modAny Kat bnrov éveolouy Tos veavioxols. 0 yap éyxopiacdels én' avdpaya0ia Kal KrEwos év Tais rapt évous yeyovas amher peyahuvopuevos tmd tov emaivev' ai Se pera malas Kal oxoppdrov dA€es ovdev ap-

BrorEpac Tov pera amovdins vouernwatov hoav, are 87 mpos THY Béav opod Tois Gros Tortracs Kal Tov Bactéwv xal TOV yepovT@Y cuptTropevo-peeve.
H &€ yvpvwots TOV mapbévov oudev aia x pov
in aidovs pév Trapovons, axpagias 5é atrovons, ng éOug pov aden} cal CijAov eveFias everpyatero, Kal hpovnpatos TO Oidu Ta,peryevev ovK ayevvois, @s pndev HTTOV avT@ Kal aperijs Kal pirorimias perovciay ovcap. o0ev avuTais Kal eye empeu
kat dpovety ola Kal mepl Topryods ¢ loropytat THS Aewvidou yuvares. elrovans yap TLVOS, @S Cote, Eévns Tm pos AUTH ws “ Movar TeV dvipay a apxere vpels ai Adxawat, “ Movat ydp,” én, “ tixtopev dv6pas.”
XV. "Hy peév ody xal radra TapoppynriKa T POs yapov' Aéyw &€ Tas woutas TeV TapOévor Kal 246

7:

48

LYCURGUS

might.come with vigour to the fulness of their times, and struggle successfully and easily with the pangs of child-birth. He freed them from softness and delicacy and all effeminacy by accustoming the maidens no less than the youths to wear tunics only in processions, and at certain festivals to dance and sing when the young men were present as spectators. There they sometimes even mocked and railed good- naturedly at any youth who had misbehaved himself ; and again they would sing the praises of those who had shown themselves worthy, and so inspire the young men with great ambition and ardour. For he who was thus extolled for his valour and held in honour among the maidens, went away exalted by their praises ; while the sting of their playful raillery was no less sharp than that of serious admonitions, especially as the kings and senators, together with +the rest of the citizens, were all present at the spectacle. |

Nor was there anything disgraceful in this scant clothing of the maidens, for modesty attended them, and wantonness was banished; nay, rather, it pro- duced in them habits of simplicity and an ardent desire for health and beauty of body. It gave also to woman-kind a taste of Jofty sentiment, for they felt that they too had a place in the arena of bravery and ambition. Wherefore they were led to think and speak as Gorgo, the wife of Leonidas, is said to have done. When some foreign woman, as it would seem, said to her: “ You Spartan women are the only ones who rule their men,” she answered: “ Yes, we are the only ones that give birth to men.”

XV. Moreover, there were incentives to marriage in these things,—I mean such things as the appear-

Tas amrobuces Kal TOs ayavas ev des TAY véw?, 9 A bd a” 9 9 a a ayopevwv ov yewpeTpixais, GAN epwTtiKais, as
\
dnow o TlAdtwv, avdayxaiss ov pny adda Kal atipiav tia wpoaéOnKxe Tots aydpots. elpyorTo yap év rats yupvorradiass THs Béas: tov 5 ye-pavos of wey Apyovres avTovs éxédevov ev KUKAW
yupvous meptievar THY ayopdy, oi Sé treptiovtes
2 9 e A 9g / 4 e ,
MOOV eis AUTOVS @ONVY TWA TeTrOLNnMEeNY, ws Sixata
Tdoyxolev, Tt TOis vomots aTreLOovar TeuHs dé Kal Deparreias fv véow mpecButépors Trapetxyov, éorépnvro. dOev cal ro pos AcpxvaArtdav pnbev ovdeis éucupato, Kaimrep evdoKiuov. dvta oTpatnyov.
értovtTs yap avT@ TOV vewTépwy Tis Edpas ovy umetfev, eltrav, “ Ovde yap enol od tov tretEovra yeyévyneas.”
"Eydpuouv b€é 6: aprayis, ob puxpas ovde
2? \ , > \ \ > 4 Q
d@pous MTpos yapov, adda Kal axpalovoas Kal memetpous. THY 5& aptracdbelcav 7 vupdedtpLa Kadoupévn taparaBodoa, tTHv pev Keparny év
“A lA ¢ , de ? 5 / t e } 4
XPP Tepréxerpev, ipwatip Se avdpei xat brrodjua-ow évoxevdcaca Katéxdivev eri oTtBaba povny dvev dwrtos. 6 dé vupdios ov peOvav ovdé Opv-TTOMEVOS, GAAA vndwv, woTrep aei, SedecTIVNKAS év Trois diditiow, TapercelOav Edve THY Cwvny Kal 248

ance of the maidens without much clothing in pro- cessions and athletic contests where young men were looking on, for these were drawn on by necessity, “ not geometrical, but the sort of necessity which lovers know,’ as Plato says.!. Nor was this all; Lycurgus also put a kind of public stigma upon confirmed bachelors. They were excluded from the sight of the young men and maidens at their exercises, and in winter the magistrates ordered them to march round the market-place in their tunics only, and as they marched, they sang a certain song about them- selves, and its burden was that they were justly punished for disobeying the laws. Besides this, they were deprived of the honour and gracious attentions which the young men habitually paid to their elders. Therefore there was no one to find fault with what was said to Dercyllidas, reputable general though he was. As he entered a company, namely, one of the younger men would not offer him his seat, but said : “Indeed, thou hast begotten no son who will one day give his seat to me.”

For their marriages the women were carried off by. force, not when they were small and unfit for wedlock, but when they were in full bloom and wholly ripe. After the woman was thus carried off, the bride’s-maid, so called, took her in charge, cut her hair off close to the head, put a man’s cloak and sandals on her, and laid her down on a pallet, on the floor, alone, in the dark. Then the bride-groom, not flown with wine nor enfeebled by excesses, but composed and sober, after supping at his public mess-table as usual, slipped stealthily into the room where the bride lay, loosed her virgin’s zone, and bore her

1 Republic, p. 458 d.

4 peTyveycev apadpevos él thy KrAlvny. ocuvd.aTpi-was 5& ypovov od modvy atTnEL KoopLws ovTreEp 97 N 4 os a a ”
eiw0er TO TpoTepov, Kabevdnowy peta THY AXrOV vévv. Kal TO Rotrov ovTwS éErpaTTeE, TOs pe HrALKL@TAaLS TUVdnMEpevwY Kal cUVAVaTraVOpLEVOS, mpos Se rv vupdny Kpuda pet evrAaBelas portov, aicyuvopevos xa Sedorxas pn tis alcBorto Tov évdov, Gua Kal ris vipdyns emitexvopévns ral ouveuvTropovens Strws av év Kaip@ Kal NavOavovTes
5 adANAoLS TUpTropEvoLVTO. Kal TOUTO EmpaTToV OUK ewer d , 9 > a \ A OAiryov Ypovov, GAN wWoTe Kal Tratdas yevécOat éviots amply és pépav OedcacOar Tas éavToy yuvaixas. 1 &€ rotavtTn avvodos od povoy éyxpa-
, 4 ¥ 9 \ a
telas Kal cwhpocvyns aoKnots hv, ada Tots TE TwMpact yovimous Kal T@ Pirely del Katvovs Kai mpooghatous Hyev él Thy kowwviay, ov Siaxopeis
ovd é&itirous Tais avédnv Kowwvias, GAN det TL Aeinpavoy xal brréxxavya wo0ov nal ydpttos évatroXelrovras ANNALS.
, a 4 > / IRA \
6 Tooavrny Sé Tois yapots ériatyncas aide Kai 49
4 9 2¢/ \ A \
Taki, ovdey Hrrov éE€éBare tHhv nxevnv nal yvuvaixwdn Enrortutiav, év Kadk@ Katactyaas UBpu pev kal avakiav wacayv elpyew ao Tod ydpou,
/ A aA
maidwv b€ nal Trexvacews Kowvaveivy trois atioss,

KaTayeX@vTas Tov @s auixta Kal aKowarnta
7 Tavra petiovrwy odhayais Kal modéuos. e&jv pev yap avdpl mpecButépm véas yuvatxos, et 57
TWa TOV KaAXNOV Kal ayabav aordcatto vévv Kal Soxtpdoeev, eicayayely map avtny Kal mA1-cavta yevvaiov. oméppatos idstov avrois son-250
™.,

in his arms to the marriage-bed. Then, after spend- ing a short time with his bride, he went away composedly to his usual quarters, there to sleep with the other young men. And so he continued to do from that time on, spending his days with his com- rades, and sleeping with them at night, but visiting his bride by stealth and with every precaution, full of dread and fear lest any of her household should be aware of his visits, his bride also contriving and conspiring with him that they might have stolen interviews as occasion offered. And this they did not for a short time only, but long enough for some of them to become fathers before they had looked upon their own wives by daylight. Such interviews not only brought into exercise self-restraint and moderation, but united husbands and wives when their bodies were full of creative energy and their affections new and fresh, not when they were sated | and dulled by unrestricted intercourse ; and there was always left behind in their hearts some residual spark of mutual longing and delight.

After giving marriage such traits of reserve and decorum, he none the less freed men from the empty and womanish passion of jealous possession, by mak- ing it honourable for them, while keeping the marriage relation free from all wanton irregularities, to share with other worthy men in the begetting of children, laughing to scorn those who regard such common privileges as intolerable, and resort to murder and war rather than grant them. For example, an elderly man with a young wife, if he looked with favour and esteem on some fair and noble young man, might introduce him to her, and — adopt her offspring by such a noble father as his

251

cacBa To yevvnBév. ée&qv Sé wadw avdpl ypn-oT@, Ta evTéxvwY TWa Kal cwdpdvwy Oavpagavtt yuvaicav érépm yeyaunuéevny, Teicat TOV dvipa auverbetv, Baotep ev Ywopa KaANKAapTT
P 4 , , P x pa 9 4 p °
gutevovta Kal trovovpevov traidas ayabovs, aya-Oav opaimous Kal ovyyevets Ecopévous. mpaTov pev yap ovx idiovs nyeiro TaV TaTépwv Tovs

a 3 \ A 4 e A
maidas, GANA KoLovs THS WoAEws 0 AvKovpyos, 54 b ? a / 2 2 3 a > / d0ev ovK EK TOY TUYOVTWY, GAN’ ex TOY apioTwY
b 4 4 2 A v
éBovreTo yeyovotas elvat rods troditas. erecta
TOAAnY aBerTEpiay Kal Tohov évewpa Tots repli
TatTa Tov GAXwv vomobeTH pact, of KUvas péev Kal (tmmous 1rd Tos Kpatictos TAY OYELwY
4 , / A fo ‘
BuBalover yapite weiBovres 4 puocO@ Tovs Ku-
/ \ a fe)
plous, tas 8é yuvaixas éyxrccadpuevoe poupodaory,
“A 4 “A
é& avtayv povev tixrey akvobytes, Kav adpoves
@
@ot, Kav TaphrLKes, Kav voowbels, MS OUXL TPw-
A a“ 4
ToLS TOS KEKTNMEVOLS Kal TpehoveL TaY Taidwr
ywopévwy tovnpav, éav éx tmovnpav yévwvrat, kal touvavtiov ypnotady, dv tovavTns TYUXwoe yevéoews. Tatra € odTws mpaTTopeva Hvcltkas KQi TOMTLKOS TOTE TOTOUTOY aTrEtXE THS VoTEpoV
Neyouévns yevérOat wepl Tas yuvaixas evyepeias
C4 a @oTe SdwS ATLoTOV elvaL TO THS potxelas Trap’
a ,
autois. Kal Noyos arropynpoveveras Tepada Tevos
. Saraptidtov tev odddpa Tada.av, bs épwrnbels varo Eévou ti mdaxovow oi povyol wap’ avrois, own. And again, a worthy man who admired some woman for the fine children that she bore her husband and the modesty of her behaviour as a wife, might enjoy her favours, if her husband would con- sent, thus planting, as it were, in a soil of beautiful fruitage, and begetting for himself noble sons, who would have the blood of noble men in their veins. For in the first place, Lycurgus did not regard sons as the peculiar property of their fathers, but rather as the common property of the state, and therefore would not have his citizens spring from random parentage, but from the best there was. In the second place, he saw much folly and vanity in what other peoples enacted for the regulation of these matters; in the breeding of dogs and horses they insist on having the best sires which money or favour can secure, but they keep their wives under lock and key, demanding that they have children by none but themselves, even though they be foolish, or infirm, or diseased ; as though children of bad stock did not show their badness to those first who possessed and reared them, and children of good stock, contrariwise, their goodness. The freedom which thus prevailed at that time in marriage relations was aimed at physical and political well- being, and was far removed from the licentiousness which was afterwards attributed to their women, so much so that adultery was wholly unknown among them. And a saying is reported of one Geradas,! a Spartan of very ancient type, who, on being asked by a stranger what the punishment for adulterers was among them, answered : “ Stranger,

1 The name is Geradatas in Morals, p. 228 c (Apophtheg. Lacon. 20).

4 oc? / OQ \ , ‘ > © an 99
ervey: “"O, Eéve, ovdels yiveras poryos Trap’ Hiv.
éxetvov 5 vrodaBovtos, “’Edav otv yévntat;” ‘“““Tavdpov,’ ébn o Vepddas, “ éxtiver péyav, 55
e 4 \ Sh > N “ 3 4 4, 99
utepxuas TO Tavyetov aro Tov Kipwta mierat.
Oavpdoavtos & éxeivou cat dnoavros: “las dé
A , n a 99 a e , av yévorto Bovs TnAtKovTOS;” yeddoas o Iepddas,
A > bf
“las 8 dv,” én, “év Yadpty povyos yévouro;”
TavTa pév ovv ioTopnTas Trepl TOY yapov.
XVI. To dé yervnBev ov Hv Kvpios o yeryncas Tpéperv, arr edepe AaRwv eis TOTov Tua NéE-oxnv Karovpevov, ev & KaOnpevoe TOV purAETOY
ot mpecRutato: KatapadovTes TO TratddpLiov, Ee pev evtrayes ein kal pwparéov, tpéperv éxédevor, KANpoy avTe@ Tav evaxicytNiwv TpocveipayvTes:
et & dyevvés xat apuophov, amémeptrov eis tas Aeyouévas “Amrobétas, mapa Taiyerov Bapabpo-
4 el A
5n Tomov, ws ovTe avt@ Chv dpuevov bv! ove
A , \ \ “a 3 \ 3 bd A \
TH WONEL TO Hy Kahos evbus €€ apxis mpos
4 QV a evefiav Kal pouny. TepuKos. b0ev ovee vdarte Ta Bpédn, arr’ oive meptéhovov at yuvaines, dgavov Tia Toltovpevat THs Kpdoews aura.
NéyeTar yap efictacbar Ta éM@iAnTTiKa Kal voaddn mpos TOV axpatov amoo paxedibovra, Ta & vylewva Haddov oropovebar Kal kpatuverbat THY

eEw. Wy dé rept TAS Tpopovs CTLMEAELE TLS PETE Téyyns, @oT avev omapyavev éxtpehovoas Ta
Bpepn Tois péreoe Kat Tots eldeouv éhevOépta Towel, ére 66 eUKona Tas Svairass Kal adowuxya
kat dBauBh cKotov Kai mpos épnyiay adoBa Kat
' by supplied by van Herwerden: &ewoy obre.

254

LYCURGUS

there is no adulterer among us." "Suppose, then," replied the stranger, "there should be one." "A bull,'' said Geradas, " would be his forfeit, a bull so large that it could stretch over Mount Taygetus and drink from the river Eurotas."" Then the stranger was astonished and said : " But how could there be a bull so large?"' To which Geradas replied, with a smile: «But how could there be an adulterer in Sparta?" Such, then, are the accounts we find of their marriages.

XVI. Offspring was not reared at the will of the father, but was taken and carried by him to a place called Lesche, where the elders of the_ tribes officially examined the infant, and if it was well- built and sturdy, they ordered the father to rear it, and assigned it one of the nine thousand lots of land; but if it was ill-born and deformed, they sent it to the so-called Apothetae, a chasm-like place at the foot of Mount Taygetus, in the conviction that the life of that which nature had not well equipped at the very beginning for health and strength, was of no advantage either to itself or the state. On the same principle, the women used to bathe their new-born babes not with water, but with wine, thus making a sort of test of their constitutions. For it is said that epileptic and sickly infants are thrown into convulsions by the strong wine and loose their senses, while the healthy ones are rather tempered by it, like steel, and given a firm habit of body. Their nurses, too, exercised great care and skill; they reared infants without swaddling-bands, and thus left their limbs and figures free to develop; besides, they taught them to be contented and happy, not dainty about their food, nor fearful of the dark, nor afraid to be left alone,

255

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

dtretpa SvoKxoArlas dwyevvods Kal KravOpupiopar.
5:0 kal tev éEwbev evior tois téxvots Aakwvinas éwvotvtTo titOas' Kat tyv ye tov 'AOnvaiov
"ArKBidinv titOevcacay 'Apicrav ioropovat yeyovéva, Adxavvav.
"AANA TovT@ pév, as TIAdtov dynoi, Zwrupov
éréotnoe tradaywyov Ilepixrjs, ovdéy te TeV adrwv Stahépovta SovrAwv tovs 5¢ Yraptiatav qatdas ovn él wvntois ovdé picOiows érotnoato mavdaywyots o AuKoipyos, ovd é&qv éxdore tTpépew ovdé tadevery ws éBovrAeTO TOY vid»,

GvNa wavtTas evOds émraeteis yevopévous trapa-AapBavwv avtros eis ayédas Katedoyile, xal guvyopous Tro@y Kal cuvTpopous per GAAHAWY el0ile cuprraivery Kat cucyordtew. dpyovra &
avrois wapiorato THs ayéAns Tov TE Ppoveiv Siadépovta Kal Ovpoedéctatoy ev Te paxerOar kal mpos TovToy adewpwv Kal mpoordtrorTos nkpo@vTo Kat KorNdlovtTos éxaptépovy, BaoTE THY madetay elvat peréTnv evtreieias. émeaKorrouy 5é ot mpecButepos maifovtas avtovs, nal ra TAArAa pdyas Tivas éuBdarXovtes del nab didoveixias, ov trapépyws KatewavOavov omoids éott Thy dvow Exactos avTav mpdos TO ToApav Kal
pn huyopayeiv ev rais apidrats.
['paupara peév ody &vexa tis ypelas éwavOavov:
7 8 adAn aca Tratdcia Wpds TO apxYecOar Karas éylvero kal Kaptepety TrovotvtTa Kal wiKav payo-pevov. 610 ea THS NAtKias mWpoepYopuevns érré-TELVOY AUTOY THY AoKnoL, év YP@ TE KElpoVvTES 256

50

LYCURGUS

nor given to contemptible peevishness and whim-pering. This is the reason why foreigners sometimes bought Spartan nurses for their children. Amycla, for instance, the nurse of. the Athenian Alcibiades, is said to have been a Spartan.!
And yet Alcibiades, as Plato says,? had for a tutor, set over him by Pericles, one Zopyrus, who was just acommon slave. But Lycurgus would not put the sons of Spartans in charge of purchased or hired tutors, nor was it lawful for every father to rear or train his son as he pleased, but as soon as they were seven years old, Lycurgus ordered them all to be taken by the state and enrolled in companies, where they were put under the same discipline and nurture, and so became accustomed to share one another's sports and studies. The boy who excelled in judgement and was most courageous in fighting, was made captain of his company; on him the rest all kept their eyes, obeying his orders, and submitting to his punishments, so that their boyish training was a practice of obedience. Besides, the elderly men used to watch their sports, and by ever and anon egging them on to mimic battles and disputes, learned accurately how each one of them was naturally dis- posed when it was a question of boldness and aggres- siveness in their struggles.

Of reading and writing, they learned only enough to serve their turn; all the rest of their training was calculated to make them obey commands well, en- dure hardships, and conquer in battle. Therefore, as they grew in age, their bodily exercise was increased ; their heads were close-clipped, and they

1 Cf. Alcibiades i. 2. 2 Alcibiades i. p. 122 b.
257
VOL. I. Ss

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

kai Badilev avutrodntous wailew re yusvovs ws TOA TONAG cuvedilovtes. yevopevas 5é Swdexaereis dvev yit@vos Hbn ScerérXovy, ev ipariov eis Tov éviavtov NapBavoytes, avypnpot Ta oopata Kal AouTpav Kal dreLupadtov aetpor WANY OrjgLYaS nuépas Tlvas Tov eviavTov THS ToLavTnS pidNapy-Opwrias pereixov. éxadevdov Sé ood Kat ¢tdnv
Kal dye érl atiBddwv, ds avtois ovvepdpour, Tov Tapa Tov Eiporay TepuKoTos KaAd“oU TA
dxpa tais xepoiy avev oidypov xataxdacavtes.
éy 06 TO YELw~@Ve TOVS RAeEyopuevous AUKOpOVvAaS umeBdArXrovto Kal KaTepiyvucay Tais ortBaot, Oepyavrixoy éxev Te THS BANS Soxovons.
XVII. "H8y &Sé rots tyAKovTOIsS épactal Trav evdoxipwv vévy ovvaveatpépovro: Kal mpocetyov ot mpecBurepor, Kal warXov émrihocravrTes cis TA yupvaota, kal paxopévos Kal ox@mrovoly AddA}- NOUS TapaTuyyXdvovTes, OV Tapépyws, GAAA TPO-Tov Twa Mayes oLopevor Tavrwv Kab mrarépes
elvau Kal matdaywyol wal dpxovres, OOTE pare KaLpov amoneim ea Oat pare \@piov épnpov Tou vouderovvTos TOV apapravovra Kal xoralovtos.
ov pny adda Kal Tmabovopos ex TOV KANOY wal ayabar avdpay étarrero, Kal Kar’ dyéhas avtol mpolaTavTo TOV Aeyoueéveov elpeveoy ael Toy ow-ppovérraroy Kal payimeraror. elpevas dé xa-ovat Tous eros HON Sevrepov éx maidiov yeyouve-Tas, pedrelpevas be TOV matdeov TOUS mpea Burd-
TOUS. OUTOS OV O Elpny, elkoat éTn yeryoves, dpxes
Te TOV UIroTeTaypévwy ev Taig payals, kal Kat 258
LYCURGUS

were accustomed to going bare-foot, and to playing for the most part without clothes. When they were twelve years old, they no longer had tunics to wear, received one cloak a year, had hard, dry flesh, and knew little of baths and ointments; only on certain days of the year, and few at that, did they indulge in such amenities. They slept together, in troops and companies, on pallet-beds which they collected for themselves, breaking off with their hands—no knives allowed—the tops of the rushes which grew along the river Eurotas. In the winter-time, they added to the stuff of these pallets the so-called "lycophon," or ¢thestle-down, which was thought to have warmth in it.

XVII. When the boys reached this age, they were favoured with the society of lovers from among the reputable young men. The elderly men also kept close watch of them, coming more frequently to their places of exercise, and observing their contests of strength and wit, not cursorily, but with the idea that they were all in a sense the fathers and tutors and governors of all the boys. In this way, at every fit- ting time and in every place, the boy who went wrong had someone to admonish and chastise him. Nor was this all; one of the noblest and best men of the city was appointed paedonome, or inspector of the boys, and under his directions the boys, in their several companies, put themselves under the com- mand of the most prudent and warlike of the so- called Eirens. This was the name given to those who had been for two years out of the class of boys, and Melleirens, or Would-be Eirens, was the name for the oldest of the boys. This eiren, then, a youth of twenty years, commands his subordinates in their

259

s 2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES |

3 olxov omnpétais xphras mpos To Seitvov. éart- tdocet 8é trois péev abdpois Evra éperv, tots 5é puxpotépos AdxYava. Kal Pépovar KAE€rTOVTES, oi pev él Tovs Kntous Babifovres, oi dé els Ta Tov avopav avocitia T ApELa pEOVTES ev para mavoupyws Kal wepurayuevas: av 8 ad, ToA- Aas AauBave: TANyas TH wdortuyt, pabvuws Soxav KAérTev nal atéyvas. KAémTovot 5é Kal Tov oitiwy 6 TL av aut en pavOavoytes evpuas émitiPecOat Tois Kabevddovow 4 padvpws pudadr- Tovot. te bé arovte Enuia wAnyal Kal TO Te- viv. yAioxpoy yap avtois éort Seirvov, Sires 5: avTav apvvopevoe thy évderav avayxalwovrar ToApay Kal mavoupyety.

Kat rovro pev pyov tis OdXLyooLTias' Tapépyov 5é dace thy TOV cwopdtwv aiktnow. dépetas yap eis pnKos, Stay TO Tvedpa pH TOAAnY OXF SiatpiBnv Kal doyodiay bro mAnOovs tpodys eis BaOos nal wAdtos mueCouevov, GAN dvw Ba- Sify Sta Koudotynta, ToD awpatos exAUTws Kar padiws érudidovtos. To 8 avto TodTo Kal Kadovs Soxei troveiy: ai yap ioxval Kal Sidxevot wadrov &€eus bmaxovover mpos tHv SudpOpwowv, ai Se oyx@ders xab moAvTpoda: dia Bapos avtiBaiyouow, woTrEp auere Kal Tov dv Te Kvew Kabatpopévay yuvarcay ioxyva péy, everdn dé Kal yragupa yiveras ta Bpépn, Sia thy édadpornta ths Ans Kparovpévns padrov bd Tod TuTObYTOS.

GANA yap 7 wey aitia ToD aupBaivovTos ev péow apoxeicOw oxortrety.
XVIII. Obtw 82 Krérrrovet Tedpovticpévs oi maides, WoTE Aéyeral Tis dn TKUpVOY Ado-260
51

LYCURGUS

mimic battles, and in doors makes them serve him at ~~ his meals. He commissions the larger ones to fetch wood, and the smaller ones potherbs. And they steal _ what they fetch, some of them entering the gardens, and others creeping right slyly and cautiously into the public messes of the men ; but if a boy is caught stealing, he is soundly flogged, as a careless and unskilful thief. They steal, too, whatever food they can, and learn to be adept in setting upon people when asleep or off their guard. But the boy who is caught gets a flogging and must go hungry.
For the meals allowed them are scanty, in order that they may take into their own hands the fight against hunger, and so be forced into boldness and cunning.
This is the main object of their spare diet; a secondary one is to make them grow tall. For it contributes to height of stature when the vitality is not impeded and hindered by a mass of nourish- ment which forces it into thickness and width, but ascends of its own lightness, and when the body grows freely and easily. The same thing seems also to conduce to beauty of form; for lean and meagre habits yield more readily to the force of articulation, whereas the gross and over-fed are so heavy as to resist it. Just so, we may be sure, women who take physic while they are pregnant, bear children which are lean, it may be, but well-shaped and fine, because the lightness of the parent matter makes it more susceptible to moulding. However, the reason for this I must leave for others to investigate.

XVIII. The boys make such a serious matter of their stealing, that one of them, as the story goes,

261

MEKOS KeKNOPers wa T® TpiBeoviep TEpiaTehrop, oma pagaopevos bao ToD Onpiov THV yaorépa Tois Ovvke Kat Tots ddovoun, vmép Tob Aabety é eyKaptepov amo0avely. Kai rodTro pmév ovdé aro Trav vov épynBov amiotov écti, dv TodXovs er) Tov Bopod ris "OpOias éwpdxapev évarroOvicKovtas Tats WANyals.
Aemvnoas &€ 0 elpny KATAKELMEVOS 7@ pep
doa. wpocérake tov Taidwr, TO Se eparnud. Tt mpoiBane mehpovtiapévns Seopevov amroxpicews:
olor, 6 Satis aptaros év Tots avipaaw, q Toba, Tis » tobde wpakis. éx -rovTov de xal kpivey Ta Kara Kab modu parypovely ev0us é& apxyns Oifovro mepl rév TOMTADY. TO yap éparnGerra, Tis moritns ayabds, } Tis ob EvdoKLMOS, aropeiv Tob arroxpivacGau, vwOpas érotodvTo Kai T pos
d.perny adtNoTipov apuxiis onpeiov. ee. 5é hv ar oKpiow kal) wet aittas elvat rat atrobeiEews eis Bpaydv tia oun y LenS oyov Kal ovvTopov
o éé TANMMENDS aTroK pLvawevos éxodatero Sirypa Aap Paver v0 Tob elpevos eis TOV avrixetpa..
TOANEaKLS 68 Kal m pea BuTépwv TapovToV kat
OvT@Y oO Elpnv éxorate TOUS maidas, am oderEw see éb pera Aoyou Kal Os dei xoraer. Kat KoraSov pev ouK exwveTo, TOV be Taiowv arenr-Oovrev evOuvas breixe, eb TPAXUTEpOV tov déov-TOS éretiunoev 7) Tovvaytioy ene eaves Kat aTOVOS.
"Exovvevouy dé of épacral Tots Tratol Tis d0kns

én’ audotepa: Kat Néyetai mote trades év TH

1 thy awdxpiow nat Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker, with the MSS. : xal rhy dwdxpiory.

who was carrying concealed under his cloak a young fox which he had stolen, suffered the animal to tear out his bowels with its teeth and claws, and died rather than have his theft detected. And even this story gains credence from what their youths now endure, many of whom I have seen expiring under the lash at the altar of Artemis Orthia.

The eiren, as he reclined after supper, would order one of the boys to sing a song, and to another would put a question requiring a careful and deliberate answer, as, for instance, “ Who is the best man in the city?” or, “ What thinkest thou of this man’s conduct?” In this way the boys were accustomed to pass right judgements and interest themselves at the very outset in the conduct of the citizens. For if one of them was asked who was a good citizen, or who an infamous one, and had no answer to make, he was judged to have a torpid spirit, and one that would not aspire to excellence. And the answer must not only have reasons and proof given for it, but also be couched in very brief and concise language, and the one who gave a faulty answer was punished with a bite in the thumb from the eiren. Often-times, too, the eiren punished the boys in the presence of the elders and magistrates, thus show- ing whether his punishments were reasonable and proper or not. While he was punishing them, he suffered no restraint, but after the boys were gone, he was brought to an account if his punish- ments were harsher than was necessary, or, on the other hand, too mild and gentle.

The boys’ lovers also shared with them in their honour or disgrace ; and it is said that one of them

a @ A > a / A

paxec0ar dovnv ayevyn mpoeuévov CnuwOjvat Tov é€pacTHy vd Tov apyovTwov. ovTw Se Tov épav éyxexpiuévov map’ avtois, wate Kal Trav map0évwy Epav Tas Karas Kal ayabas yuvaixas,
TO GVTEPAY OUK Hv, GAA paAXov apynv erroobyTo didtas pos GAAjAOUS Of TOV avTav épacbérTes, kal SseténXovuy Kowh arovddlovres Strws aptaTov ATEpyaoaLvTo TOV épwpeEvov.
XIX. ’Edidacxov dé tovs.waidas Kai rAOy@
XphcOat wixpiav eyovre pemrypméevny yapite Kat Tony amd Bpaxevas rAéEews avafewpnaw. TO pev yap aLdnpody voutopa puxpay exew érroinoey aro TOAD atabpyod Svvaytv o AuKotpyos, os elpntat, TO 5é TOU AOYou vopLopa TovvavTioV aT’ evTeXods Kal driyns AéEEwWs eis TOANHY Kal TTre-pittny Kateoxevace Sidvotav, TH TOAAH oLwmTyH Tous, Taidas aop0eypartixovs Kal memabdevpe-vous Tpos Tas aTroKpioes UNXaveOpevos. Ws yap TO OTrépua TOV TpPOS TAS TUVOVGLAS aKOAdOTwY
dyovov @$ Ta ToANa Kal axaprov éoriv, obTwsS
#) TpOs TO AaAElY akpacia Kevov TOV Oyo TroLel
2 Kat avontov. "Ayis pev ovv o BactrEus, cxo-mrovros "Attixod Twos tas Aaxwixds paxaipas els THY puKpOTNTa, Kal NéyovrTos OTL padiws abras ot Oavpatotool Katamivovow év tots Oedtpo.s, “Kal nv padsota,” elrev, ‘“npeis epicvovpeda

Trois ey xerprotors TOY Tokeuov éyw 5é Kal Tov
Aoyov opa tov Aaxwvixov Bpayov pev elvat So0-KobvTa, pddora 6€ TOY TpaypaTrawv édpicvovpevor, kal tis Stavotas amrTopevov TOV Axpowpmevov.
3 Kal yap o Aveotpyos avros Bpaxvroyos 52

was once fined by the magistrates because his favourite boy had let an ungenerous cry escape him while he was fighting. Moreover, though this sort of love was so approved among them that even the maideps found lovers in good and noble women, still, there was no jealous rivalry in it, but those who fixed their affections on the same boys made this rather a foundation for friendship with one another, and persevered in common efforts to make their loved one as noble as possible.

XIX. The boys were also taught to use a discourse which combined pungency with grace, and condensed much observation into a few words. His iron money, indeed, Lycurgus made of large weight and small value, as I have observed,! but the current coin of discourse he adapted to the expression of deep and abundant meaning with simple and brief diction, by contriving that the general habit of silence should make the boys sententious and correct in their answers. For as sexual incontinence generally produces unfruitfulness and sterility, so intemperance in talking makes discourse empty and vapid. King Agis, accordingly, when a certain Athenian decried the Spartan swords for being so short, and said that jugglers on the stage easily swallowed them, replied: “ And yet we certainly reach our enemies with these daggers.’ And I observe that although the speech also of the Spartans seems short, yet it certainly reaches the point, and arrests the thought of the listener.

And indeed Lycurgus himself seems to have been

1 Chapter ix. 1.

TIS G0LKE yevéoOar al anopbeyparixos, et det
Texpaiped Oat Tois amopynpovevpact’ olov éote
TO Tepl TAS ToMuTEeLas T™ pos TOV afvobvra qroveiy Sypoxpatiay é év TH monet: « Svyap, " én, “ T PWTOS
év TH olKia cou Tolngov Snpoxpatiav.” kal Tept TOY Ovovay 7 pos TOV 7 vO omevov dia Tt paKpas ovTw Kal evTenets érakev, “Iva oz) TOTE, épn, “ Tysdvtes TO Oetov Siadimrwper.” Kai Trept TOV aOrnparov, TavTa pova Th) K@AUVTaVTOS ayoviterOat Tovs mohiTas év ols elp ovK ava-TetveTa. pépovrat é avrob kat * eT lo TON@Y amoxpicers TOLADTAL TIPOS TOUS TrOALTAS. TAS ay Toe piov Epodov areEoipeda ; «Ap mraxol pevynTe Kal pn pécdwv & GT Epos Jatépw epare Typev.” Kal wad mept TOY Tevxavr “ Ovn av ‘eln arei-XLaros Tors TIS dvSperat," Kat ov TrLvOors éorepavorar.” Tepe pev ovv TovTwY Kal TOV TOLOVT@Y ETLTTOAWY OUTE aTLOTHOAL Padioy ovTE TirTEvT AL.
XX. This 82 Tpos Ta paKN TaVv NOyov Sia-Borys Setypara, TovavTa, TOV arropbeyparov éoti.
Newvidas O Baowreds aKaipws TLVOS mept Tparyparen ovK aXpnoT@D StarexGevros, °O, Eéve,” elrrev, “ oun év dort. xpén TH S€ovre.” Xaptraos de 0 ddergibods : rod Auxovpyou mepl THs dAUYOTNTOS avTou TeV YO pov epwrnbeis, elev @S Of OYOLS pa Xpw@pevoe Toddois ovde vowwv Séovrat ToAhav.
“Apxeoapioas dé pepbopevov TLD ‘Exataiov Tov
copia Thy drt Taparnpeels eis TO gucaitiov ovder Exeryev, ““O eldas,” edn, “\oryov Kal Kalpov oldev.”
& b€ tTav mixpav Edny atropynpovevpatwYy ovK &ydpecor Cobet ; avdpelors, short and sententious in his speech, if we may judge from his recorded sayings; that, for instance, on forms of government, to one who demanded the establishment of democracy in the city: “Go thou,” said he, “ and first establish democracy in thy house- hold.” That, again, to one who inquired why he ordained such small and inexpensive sacrifices : ‘‘ That we may never omit,” said he, “ to honour the gods.” Again, in the matter of athletic contests, he allowed the citizens to engage only in those where there was no stretching forth of hands.! There are also handed down similar answers which he made by letter to his fellow-citizens. When they asked how they could ward off an invasion of enemies, he answered : “ By remaining poor, and by not desiring to be greater the one than .the other.’”’ And when they asked about fortifying their city, he answered : “A city will be well fortified which is surrounded by brave men and not by bricks.” Now regarding these and similar letters, belief and scepticism are alike difficult.

XX. Of their aversion to long speeches, the following apophthegms are proof. King Leonidas, when a certain one discoursed with him out of all season on matters of great concern, said: “ My friend, the matter urges, but not the time.”” Char- ilaiis, the nephew of Lycurgus, when asked why his uncle had made so few laws, answered : “ Men of few words need few laws.” Archidamidas, when certain ones found fault with Hecataeus the Sophist for saying nothing after being admitted to their public mess, answered: “He who knows how, knows also when to speak.” Instances of the pungent sayings

1 After the manner of men begging their conquerors to spare their lives.

9 a a > 3 / ?
apoipety yapiTos, Toladr éori. Anpuadparos av-Opwirov tovnpod KoTTovTos avTOY aKatpots épw-/ } 57; “A 4 >] “a ce Ti typac. Kal dn TodTO ToANaKLS épwravTos, “ Tis ww nw 99 v7 cof \ > , 99
dpiotos {rraptiatav; épn: ““O tiv avopototratos.
9 , > 4 “A \ 9 4 e
Ayis 6é, érawotvtav tay tovs "Hréiouvs ws Karas ta ‘Oddprria cal Stcaiws dyovtas, “ Kar
4 / 99 66 b lal A b] 3 ” 4
Ti peya, én, “’Hretoe rroodvte 8s’ érav aévre Gpépa ud Xpdpevor Ta Sixacootve;” @cozroputros
‘ 7 > ‘ 4
Sé &évou-tivds evvorav évderxvupévov, Kar pae \ ” e a 4 Ul
TKOVTOS WS Tapa TOLS aUTOU TrONTAaLs diLoNAKwY
Kaneirat, “ Kaddwov! hv rot,” eltrev, “ w Eéve, htro-/ a 99 A \ oe , monitav Kareioba.” Trkeoravak &¢ 6 Taveaviou,

¢ > 6g / \ 5 / > “
pytopos "AOnvaiov tovs Aaxedatpoviovs apadets
atroxanrobvtos, “’OpOds,” Edn, “réyets* pwovor yap e 4 ” ye \ 9
FAAdvwv appes ovdev Kaxov pepuabjxapev Tap
A 9 > ,
tpav.” “Apyidapuidas 8 mpos tov muvOopevoy
A ”
mocot clot Lrapriarat, ‘‘Ixavoi,” elev, ‘“‘“w Eéve, TOUS KAKOUS ATrepuKELY.”
Ww \ \ a \ a ? 4 aD
Kore 5€ cat trois pera rradas elpnuévous vr
avTav texunpacba Tov eOicpov. eiOilovto yap pndérote ypiobar TH Aoyw Tapépyws, pnde agpiévar havnv Hris ovK apas yé Tas ele TLVOS
e lel
ewpias akiav Sidvowav. o péev yap axodoas ToD pupoupévov tHy dayndova mapaKxadovpevos, cA > Lal >> ed ce OCU” VA 99 e de > \ uTas, é€dn, “axovxa tHvas.” o Sé avayvors
TO éTiypapupa TooTO:
2 Bewuyras wore tovade rupavvida yadxeos "Apns elhe> Leduvodvtos S audi trvras EOavor, 1 «dAdAcov Cobet, van Herwerden; cf. xpetcoov Morals,
p. 22le: Kardyv (tt were well).

not devoid of grace, of which I spoke,! are the following. Demaratus, when a troublesome fellow was pestering him with ill-timed questions, and especially with the oft repeated query who was the best of the Spartans, answered at last: “He who is least like thee.’’ And Agis, when certain ones were praising the Eleians for their just and honourable conduct of the Olympic games, said: “ And what great matter is it for the Eleians to practise righteousness one day in five years?’’ And Theopompus, when a stranger kept saying, as he showed him kindness, that in his own city he was called a lover of Sparta, remarked: “ My good Sir, it were better for thee to be called a lover of thine own city.”
And Pleistoanax, the son of Pausanias, when an Athenian orator declared that the Lacedaemonians had no learning, said : “True, we are indeed the only Hellenes who have learned no evil from you."' And Archidamus, when some one asked him how many Spartans there were, replied : " Enough, good Sir, to keep evil men away."

And even from their jests it is possible to judge of their character. For it was their wont never to talk at random, and to let slip no speech which had not have some thought or other worth serious attention. For instance, when one of them was invited to hear a man imitate the nightingale, he said: "I have heard the bird herself.'' And another, on reading the epitaph :— }
"Tyranny's fires they were trying to quench when panoplied Ares Slew them ; Selinus looked down from her gates on their death," 1 Chapter xix. 1.

"Aixaiws," elie, " teOvdaxavti Tol avdpes: Be yap adéuev Say avtay Kkataxadpev. veavioxos be
\ \ 2 / > A , b
pos Tov éTayyeAAopevoy avT@ Swoew arex-Tpvovas atroOvncKovras év TO payer Oar, "My ov ye," elarev, "arr Sos pot TOY ATroKTevoyvTav év TO
, 9" y EX» 7) ,
payecOar. repos Sé tis iddy ey atroxwophae Gaxevovras ert Sippav avOparous, "My yévorto,"
3 2 a / " > ¢

eltrev, "évtadda xabicas dOev ovn Extw UTeEavaorhvat mpecButépw." TO wey ody TaY atrodpbeypatov eldos Hv toodTov Mate Kal Aéyety Tivas

> ? ' (cd aA 4 > . A a \ OUK ATOTTWS OTL MAaNAOY EgTL TO PLrAOTOdELY 7 TO

diroyupvacteiy Naxwviter.

XXI. 'H 8@ wepi tas pdas cat Ta péAn Tail-Sevots ody Arrov éotrovddlero THs ev Tols NOyous ev&nrias xal xaBapiotntos, GAAA Kal Ta pwédXy xévtpov elyev eyeptixoy Oupod Kal wapactatixoy

opis évOovarwdous Kal mpaypatixns, Kal 4» r€E«s
> ” 4 a
mw aherns nab AOpuvrrros éml wpdypact cepvois kal nOomrotois. emavoe yap Hoav ws Ta TOANA tav teOvnxotwy brép THS Lmdprns evdatpovritopévov, Kal ~royou THY TpEeTavTwY, wS aNyELvoV Kal Kaxodaipova Biovvtwv Biov, érayyedia te xal peyarauvyia Tpos apeTHy TpéTovaa Tais HALKLALS" av évexa Selypuartos ov yelpov éotw & tt trpoevéyxac0ar. tTpiav yap Yopav Kata Tas Tpeis HrAtKiasS GUVLoTapéVvoDV év Tais Eoprais, 6 pev TOV - yepovTwy apyopevos AOEv"

"Appes Tox Hues AXetpor veavias.
270
53

LYCURGUS

said: “ The men deserved to die; they should have let the fires burn out entirely.” And a youth, when some one promised to give him game-cocks that would die fighting, said, “ Don’t do that, but give me some of the kind that kill fighting.” Another, seeing men seated on stools in a privy, said : “ May I never sit where I cannot give place to an elder.”
The character of their apophthegms, then, was such as to justify the remark that love of wisdom rather than love of bodily exercise was the special characteristic of a Spartan.
XXI. Nor was their training in music and poetry -any less serious a concern than the emulous purity of their speech, nay, their very songs had a stimulus that roused the spirit and awoke enthusiastic and effectual effort; the style of them was simple and unaffected, and their themes were serious and edifying. They were for the most part praises ot men who had died for Sparta, calling them blessed and happy; censure of men who had played the coward, picturing their grievous and _ ill-starred life ;
and such promises and boasts of valour as befitted the different ages. Ot the last, it may not be amiss to cite one, by way of illustration. They had three choirs at their festivals, corresponding to the three ages, and the choir of old men would sing first :— “We once did deeds of prowess and were strong young men.” 271

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

0 6¢ Tay akpalovTwy dpeBomevos éreyev"
"Appes S€ 9° eipév: al dé As, avydodeo.)
o O€ TpiTos 6 TOV Traidwr “Appes 56 y' éooopecOa ToAA®@ Kappoves.
"“Orws S€é av tis émioryiocas toils Aaxewrixois Tommpact, av ett Kal nuds ena SverwlbeTo, rat
\ > 4 e \ ? 4 9 “A
Tous euBatnpious puOuovs avaraBor, ols éypavro mpos Tov avrov émdyovtes Tois moAeplots, ov KAk@S HYynoalto Kal Tov Tépmavdpov nal Tov llivdapov tiv davdpeiav tH povoikn ovvartety.
O pev yap ovTws Tremoinxe wept Tov Aaxedat-poviwr:
"Ev? aixpa te vévv OarrAeu Kal podoa Aiyera cab dixa evpvayua — — Tlivdapos 8€ pyoww:

"EvOa Bovral yepovtwv Kai véov sal er aptoTevovTt aiypal kal yopoi Kal Mota «al ayrala.
Movoixwrdtovs yap aya Kxal trodeuKwrarous arodaivovatv avtovs: “Péwes? yap dvta ta aiddpw Td Kad@S KI-Oapiadev, ws 0 Aaxwvixos rotnrns cipnxe. Kal yap év tais paxais mpocOvero tais Movaais o peered avapimyycKov, ws gorxe, THS Tratdelas Kal TeV

1 giydocdeo Cobet, as in Morals, pp. 238 b, 544 e, and S (first hand): weipay AaBé (come take a try).
2 ‘péwe: Scaliger’s correction of épwe. Cf. Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr. iii.4 p. 51 (Aleman, Frag. 35).

272

LYCURGUS

Then the choir of young men would respond :— “We are so now, and if you wish, behold and see.”’

And then the third choir, that of the boys, would sing :—
‘“‘We shall be sometime mightier men by far than both.”
In short, if one studies the poetry of Sparta, of which some specimens were still extant in my time, and makes himself familiar with the marching songs which they used, to the accompaniment of the flute, when charging upon their foes, he will conclude that Terpander and Pindar were right in associating valour with music. The former writes thus of the Lacedaemonians :—
“ Flourish there both the spear of the brave and the Muse’s clear message,

Justice, too, walks the broad streets ef
And Pindar says :—!
“There are councils of Elders,
And young men’s conquering spears,
And dances, the Muse, and joyousness.”
The Spartans are thus showr to be at the same time most musical and most warlike ;
‘In equal poise to match the sword hangs the sweet art of the harpist,” as their poet says. For just before their battles, the king sacrificed to the Muses, reminding his warriors, as it would seem, of their training, and of the firm

1 Fragment 199, Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr. i.‘ p. 448.

Kpioewr, iva Oot Tpoxerpor mapa Ta Sewa xa AGyou TLVOS akias tmapéywou tas mpakeas trav waxopméevon.
XXII. Tore dé Kal ToS véous Ta oKdnpoTara TIS aryory7s emavievTes, OUK éx@AVOV Kadhoni-CecOas rept Kounv cal Kocpov OrAwV Kal ipatiov, xaiporres, damep trots, yaupiace Kal ppuatto-pévors 7 pos TOUS aryavas. 510 Kopavres evOus ex THs Tov édnBwv nrLKias, paduiota mepl TOUS xuvduvous eepamevov THY Kony Merrapay Te daiverOar Kar Siaxexpiperny, am opynpovevovTés Twa wal Avuxotpyou NOvyov mrepl THS KOUNS, ott - TOUS pev kadovs evIrpeTreaTEPOUS mote, Tovs Sé aic-Xpovs poBepwrépovs. expavTo 5é xal ryupva-oios paraxwrépors Tapa Tas aTpareias, Kat TI GdAnv Siarray ovrx obte KeKodao wevny ov" bmev-Buvov Tots veous Tapeixov, Gare povots avO para éxetvous THs els TOV TOAELOV aoKHoEwS dvadTavatY elvat Tov Todepov. 76n dé cuvTeTary pens THS parayyos auTay Kal TOV ToAEpLooy TapovTwy,® ) Bactrevs aya tTHv Te Xtwatpay eopayiatero Kat orepavovelas mapnyyedre Tao Kat Tovs avrnTas abrciy éxédeve TO Kao ropevov pédos:

dua 5 eEnpxev éuBarnpiou mrativos, dare oEumyny
dpa Kal KATATANKTLKHY Thv orp elvat, pv0p@ TE Wpos TOV avrov éuBasvovrev Ka pare d:aoT Ao 1a jWowovuvTwy é€v TH parayyt pate TAL puxais GopuBoupever, ara Tpaas kal thapas vm0 Tov pehous ayouévey ért tov Kivdvvoyv. ove
yap oBov ovte Oupov éyyiverOat mreovalovra

1 xapévrwy MSS., Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker: épdévrep (sn the sight of), with Xenophon, Retp. Lac. xiii. 8.

decisions they had made, in order that they might be prompt to face the dread issue, and might perform such martial deeds as would be worthy of some record.! XXII. In time of war, too, they relaxed the severity of the young men's discipline, and permitted them to beautify their hair and ornament their arms and clothing, rejoicing to see them, like horses, prance and neigh for the contest. Therefore they wore their hair long as soon as they ceased to be youths, and particularly in times of danger they took pains to have it glossy and well-combed, remember- ing a certain saying of Lycurgus, that a fine head of hair made the handsome more comely still, and the ugly more terrible. Their bodily exercises, too, were less rigorous during their campaigns, and in other ways their young warriors were allowed a regimen which was less curtailed and rigid, so that they were the only men in the world with whom war brought a respite in the training for war. And when at last they were drawn up in battle array and the enemy was at hand, the king sacrificed the customary she- goat, commanded all the warriors to set garlands upon their heads, and ordered the pipers to pipe the strains of the hymn to Castor; then he himself led off in a marching paean, and it was a sight equally grand and terrifying when they marched in step with the rhythm of the flute, without any gap in their line of battle, and with no confusion in their souls, but calmly and cheerfully moving with the strains of their hymn into the deadly fight. Neither fear nor excessive fury is likely to possess men so disposed,

1 The Greek of this sentence is obscure, and the translation doubtful.

275
T 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tois oUTW StaKxetpévots etkos éotiv, AAN evoTtabes dpdvnua pet’ érmidos nat Opdcovs, ws Tod Oeod
TUMLTAPOVTOS. |
"Exper 6€ 0 Bactrevs él TOUS Tohepious
eXov pe éavtob arepaviTny ayava VEVLKNKOTA.
Kat gdact yé Tiva XenpaT ov ToAAov év ’'OdXvp-mous dudopevwv avT@ iT SeEdpevor, andra TOAD Tovey KaTaTranaicavTa TOV avrayavar yy, OS TLS elev avTo@, “Ti cou TrEov, @ Adxawv, yéyove did
a /) / , ‘6 \ a

THs viens ; pavat pedidoavta, Tipo Tou Bace-News TET AY UEVOS paxoduat Tots Troheptous.” Tpe-papevor dé Kal VK TO AYTES édiwxov daov éxBe-Ba wocac bar TO vinnpa Th puyy TOV) TONE MLO, elra evOus avexXw@povy, UTE syevvatov obte “EXXnviKov Hyoupevor KOT TEL Kal povevery aroheyouévous cal TAPAKEXwpHKOTAS. Hv dé ov povov xaXov TobTo Kal b weryarowuxov, adda Kal Xprorpov. eldoTes yap ot Haxopmevor 7 pos auTous OTL TOUS i code ega dvatpovat, peidovrar Sé tav évdvdovtwy, Tov pévelv TO pevryery nryouvTo AvatTehéa TEpor.
XXIII. Avtov &€ tov Avkoipyov ‘Imaias pev
) copia TNs TONEMLKOTATOV dnote yevéoOat nai
TONY éuTretpov OTPATELED, Prroc réepavos de
Kal THY KaT ovrNapLOUS TOV iar éooy Stavounv
Avxovpyw mpoctiOnow: elvar 5& Tov ovAapor,
@S éxeivos TUvEes THEY, immévy TEVTHKOVTA wrI-Bos ev TeTpayove oY MATE TET AY EVO. o 8
Darnpevs Anprtptos, ovde mas aypdpevov qWonepurijs mpatews € €V elonvy KataaThoaa ae THV 10-urelay. cote bé nal THs ‘Odupmianis € exexerplas
v) émivoua T™paov Kal pos etpnyny oixei@s EYOVTOS avipos elvat. Kaito. daci tives, ws “Epperros 276

™

but rather a firm purpose full of hope and courage, believing as they do that Heaven is their ally.

The king marched against the enemy in close companionship with one who had been crowned victor in the great games. And they tell of a certain Spartan who refused to be bought off from a contest at Olympia by large sums of money, and after a long struggle outwrestled his antagonist. When some one said to him then: " What advantage, O Spartan, hast thou got from thy victory?" he answered, with a smile: "I shall stand in front of my king when I fight our enemies." When they had conquered and routed an enemy, they pursued him far enough to make their victory secure by his flight, and then at once retired, thinking it ignoble and unworthy of a Hellene to hew men to pieces who had given up the fight and abandoned the field. And this was not only a noble and magnanimous policy, but it was also useful. For their antagonists, knowing that they slew those who resisted them, but showed mercy to those who yielded to them, were apt to think flight more advantageous than resistance.

XXIII. Hippias the Sophist says that Lycurgus himself was very well versed in war and took part in many campaigns, and Philostephanus attributes to him the arrangement of the Spartan cavalry by "'oulamoi," explaining that the "oulamos," as constituted by him, was a troop of fifty horsemen in a square formation. But Demetrius the Phalerean says he engaged in no warlike undertakings, and established his constitution in a time of peace. And indeed the design of the Olympic truce would seem to bespeak a man of gentleness, and predisposed to peace. And yet there are some who say, as pvnpovever, tov Avxodpyov od mpocéyety ovde

xowwveiv év apy toils mept tov "Iditov, adda Tuyxavey addrAjgws eridnuodvta Kal Oewpevor:
axovaa, Sé dwviy dowep avOpwrov Tivos é£omicOev éeritipa@vTos aut@ Kal Oaupdlovtos bre
TOUS TOALTAS OU TIPOTPETTETAL KOLVMVELY THS TAVNyupews: as S¢ peractpadévros ovdapyod pavepos 6 dOeyEduevos Fv, Oelov Hrynodpevov, oTw Tpos
tov "Id¢itov tpatrécOas Kal ovvdtaxocpnoavta Thv éoptnyv évdokotépav Kal BeBaotépay KaraoTHOAL.
XXIV. 'H 6&é radeia pexpt Tov évndixwv b1é-Telvev. ovodels yap Hv adetpevos ws EBovrETO Cv, arr' olov év otpatrotédm TH wore Kal Slarrav

éyovres wpiopéevny cal dvatpiBny mepl Ta Kowa, Kal Sdrws vopivovtes ovY AUTOV, GANA THS TaTpi-50s elvar SveréXovuv, eb poy TL TpaTTe Erepov Ein T pos TET ay UEvOY, émiaKxoTrouvTes TOUS Traioas, Kal diddoxovtés TL TOV XpNnoiwov h pavOdvovTes
2 avtol mapa tav mpecButépwv. Kat yap & Te TOUTO TOV KaXOV HY Kal paxapiwv & TapecKevace Tots éavTov TodiTats o AUKOvpyos, apJovia vyxo-Afjs, ols téyvns pev Grpacbat Bavavoov To wWapd-TAaVv OUK éeiro, Xenpatiopod Sé cuvaywyny éyovtos épywon Kal mpaypuatelay ovd' otioby eet, dua To KouldH Tov TrAODTOY AlnrAOV yeyovéevat Kal 3 dtipov. ot dé etrwres avtois eipydtovtTo THY yy, atropopav thy eipnuévny TeXovVTEs. emridnuav Sé
tis "AOnynoe Sixactnpiov dvtwv, cal tuOdpevos tiva Slknv apyias adAnkota Babifew adupodvra
278 |
™, :
LYCURGUS

Hermippus reminds us, that at the outset Lycurgus had nothing whatever to do with Iphitus and his enterprise, but happened to come that way by chance, and be a spectator at the games; that he heard behind him, however, what seemed to be a human voice, chiding him and expressing amazement that he did not urge his fellow-citizens to take. part in the great festival ; and since, on turning round, he did not see the speaker anywhere, he concluded that the voice was from heaven, and therefore betook himself to Iphitus, and assisted him in giving the festival a more notable arrangement and a more enduring basis.

XXIV. The training of the Spartans lasted into the years of full maturity. No man was allowed to live as he pleased, but in their city, as in a military encampment, they always had a prescribed regimen and employment in public service, considering that they belonged entirely to their country and not to themselves, watching over the boys, if no other duty was laid upon them, and either teaching them some useful thing, or learning it themselves from their elders. For one of the noble and blessed privileges which Lycurgus provided for his fellow-citizens, was abundance of leisure, since he forbade their engaging in any mechanical art whatsoever, and as for money- making, with its laborious efforts to amass wealth, there was no need of it at all, since wealth awakened no envy and brought no honour. Besides, the Helots tilled their ground for them, and paid them the produce mentioned above.! Therefore it was that one of them who was sojourning at Athens when the courts were in session, and learned that a certain

} Chapter viii. 4.

Kal TpoTreumTopuevov Ure TOV ditwv cvvayGouévev
xal Bapéws hepovrwr, édeito SetEar Tovs cupTrap-oVvTaS aUT@ Tis éoTLV Oo THY EdXevOEpias) EaXwKOS Sixnv. oftw Sovromperes Hyotvto THY TEpl TAS
Téyvas Kal Tov xXpnuatiopov dcyoriav. Sdixat 5é, ws eixos, éFéNTTOV Gua TO voplopuaTl, pHTE mreovetias pte amropias avTois trapovens, icotntos 6é év evrropia Kal pacravns de edrérerav yeyevnévns. yopoi 8& cat Bariar cab ebwyiac
kat SiatpiBal epi te Onpas Kal yupvdowa nat Neayas Tov aTavta yYpovoy éerrexwpialov, STE pp
OTPATEVOMEVOL TUYOLED. , XXV. Of pév ye vewtepor TpidKovra eT@V TO mapadmav ov KxaréBatwvov eis ayopav, ddra bia TOV auyyevav Kal TOV épacT@Y éroLodVTO TAS dvayxatas olxovopias. Tois Sé mpeaRutépois ainxpov nv suvexas opacbat trepi tabra Satpi-Bovotv, adra pt) TO TrELoTOY TIS Nuepas Tepl TA
yupvdowa Kal Tas Kahoupévas Noxas dvaorpédecbar. Kal yap eis TavTas auMmorTeEs érrlEeLKas eoxoralov per GAANAWY, OVSEVvOS pepYNnpevOL TOV ™pos Xpnuaticpov h xXpeiav ayopaioy ouvte-NovvTwy: GAAA TO WrElaoTOVY Hv THs TowavTns SwatpiBns epyov éraweiv te TOY KadOV, } TOY aioxpav vpéyew, pera trardids Kal yédwros, édappas wmohépovtos eis vovOeciav nal SvopAworr.
ovde yap avTos Hv akpdtws avotnpos o Av-Kovpryos* a\XAa Kal To ToD TéXwtos ayadpariov éxeivov iSpvcacbat XwaiBios iotopel, THY Tat-Sav Wotep Hdvoepa Tov wovou Kal Ths Suairns
I ércvdeplas, Sintenis? with Coraés, after Bryan; éaev-Gepfavy MSS., Sintenis!, and Bekker.
280

55

LYCURGUS

Athenian had been fined for idleness and was going home in great distress of mind and attended on his way by sympathetic and sorrowing friends, begged the bystanders to show him the man who had been fined for living like a freeman. So servile a thing did they regard the devotion to the mechanical arts and to money-making. And law-suits, of course, vanished from among them with their gold and silver coinage, for they knew neither greed nor want, but equality in well-being was established there, and easy living based on simple wants. Choral dances and feasts and festivals and hunting and bodily exercise and social converse occupied their whole time, when they were not on a military expedition.

XXV. Those who were under thirty years of age did not go into the market-place at all, but had their household wants supplied at the hands of their kinsfolk and lovers. And it was disreputable for the elderly men to be continually seen loitering there, instead of spending the greater part of the day in the places of exercise and the so-called “leschai.””+ For if they gathered in these, they spent their time suitably with one another, making no allusions to the problems of money-making or of exchange, nay, they were chiefly occupied there in praising some noble action or censuring some base one, with jesting and laughter which made the path to instruction and correction easy and natural. For not even Lycurgus himself was immoderately severe ; indeed, Sosibius tells us that he actually dedicated a little statue of Laughter, and introduced season- able jesting into their drinking parties and like

1 Places where men assembled for conversation.

éuBarovra KaTd Katpov eis TA ouptroota Kal Tas TOLAVTAS SiarpiBas.
To 5é Grov elOibe rods roritas pn Bovr\ecOar
pndée errioracOat Kat’ idiay bnv, adr’ Bomep Tas HEAT TAS T@ KOW@ oupdvels SvTas ael Kal pet’
GNAnN@V Ethoupéevovs Tepl Tov apxovTa, pLAKPOD
Sev eFeotatas éavtav tbr’ évOovotacpod Kal dirotiuias, GAouvs elvar THs watpidos: ws éort eal gavais tiow avTav dr ofewphaat thy Seayowav. oO pep yap HaiSdpyros OuK eryxepubels els TOUS Tplaxoatous amrnes pana, pardpos, domep aipwy tt Bedtiovas abtod Tpiaoatous y) moALS evel Todvnpatibas dé 0 mpeo Bevov TOs TOUS Baciréws oT paTHyous pe?” (ETEPOV, épouévwv av-TaY ToTepov LOig TapEeray 7} Snpocta mreppérres, elrrev, “Alka TiX@per, Snpocia, aixa amoruvwpev, dia.” 7 de Bpacidov payrnp ‘Apytheavis, @S adixopevol TLVES ELS Aaxedaipova Tov &&f
"Apdurrorews elanOXov Tos auTny, TpoOTnTEv €L KAAS O Bpacidas améOave «at Tas Lrdpras akiws peyahuvovtov Sé éxeivov Tov dvbpa war AeyovTov @S ovK ever ToLOUTOV adDov a Lmdprn: “M7 Néyere,” elev, ‘@ .Eévou Kados pev yap qv Kal arya os) Bpacibas, Todos 5é dvdpas Aaxedaipov é éxel THVOU Kdppovas.”

XXVI. Tous de yepovtas avTos Hev, WS elpnTat, katéotTnoe TO mp@rov éx TGV petaaxovToV Tob Bovretparos: Uarepov 6é avtl Tob TEhevTOYTOS érake Kabioravat TOV dpto tov apeTh xpidevra trav biep éEixovta &rn yeyovstav. Kad péyrortos 282

~~

LYCURGUS

diversions, to sweeten, as it were, their hardships and meagre fare.
In a word, he trained his fellow-citizens to have neither the wish nor the ability to live for themselves; but like bees they were to make themselves always integral parts of the whole community, clustering together about their leader, almost beside themselves with enthusiasm and noble ambition, and to belong wholly to their country. This idea can_
- be traced also in some of their utterances. For instance, Paedaretus, when he failed to be chosen among the three hundred best men, went away with a very glad countenance, as if rejoicing that the city had three hundred better men than himself. And again, Polycratidas, one of an embassy to the generals of the Persian king, on being asked by them whether the embassy was there in a private or a public capacity, replied: “ If we succeed, in a public capacity ; if we fail, in a private.” Again, Argileonis, the mother of Brasidas, when some Amphipolitans who had come to Sparta paid her a visit, asked them if Brasidas had died nobly and in a manner worthy of Sparta. Then they greatly extolled the man and said that Sparta had not such another, to which she answered: “Say not so, Strangers; Brasidas was noble and brave, but Sparta has many better men than he.”
XXVI. The senators were at first appointed by Lyeurgus himself, as I have said,! from those who shared his counsels; but afterwards he arranged that any vacancy caused by death should be filled by the man elected as most deserving out of those above sixty years of age. And of all the contests in 1 Chapter v. 7 f.

283
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

band Lal 3 > , b) , ze > N
édoxet Tov év avOpwrrots aywvwy ovTos elvat Kal
4 TEPLUAYNTOTATOS’ ov yap év Taxyéot TAXLOTOV
oO. > > a 9 , > > b] > @ “”
ovd €V LaXUpoOlsS LaXUpOTAaTOV, AAN ev ayalots Kal a@ppoow apictov Kai cwdpovéctatov edee
A a \ , \
xcpi0évta vixntypiov éxew HS apeThs da Biov TO
a i a , ,
TULTAY, WS ElTrEely, KPaTOS ev TH TOALTELA, KUPLOV
dvta Kal Oavadtov Kal atipias Kal dros TaV
,
peyiotwv. éyivero Sé 4 Kpiots Tovde TOY TpOTTOV.
/
éxxrnotas aOporcbeions avdpes aiperol Kabeip-yvuvto wAnciov eis olknua, THY péev drYpLv OVX
A ,
op@vTes ovde op@pevot, THY 5é KpavynY povoy
a a dxovovtes éxxdAnotatovrwv. Bon yap ws TaAXda
e “A
Kal Tovs autdrwpévous Expivory, OVX opod TaVTwY, e \ fol > , \ el
GNX’ ExdoTOV KATA KANpoV ELoayopévou Kal TLWTH
Ssatropevoyévov thy éxxrAnoiav. éxovrTes ovv ot KaTdadKnreroTot ypaypateta, Kal” Exactov émecy-paivovto THS Kpavyns TO pméyeDos, ovK eidortes St@ yévolto, TANY OTL Tp@TOS 7} SevTEpos H TpiTos
h otoctocouv ein tav cicayouevwv. stm dé TAELOTH yévorTo Kal peyioTn, TOUTOY avNyopEvoD.
e
o 5€ otefavwodpevos Tepinet TOUS Oeovs: eltovToO
dé modXol véor Cndodvres Tov avdpa Kal pweyadvvovTes, woANai Te yuvatxes éyxoptdtovoar be won \ 9 \ \ \ Bi 9 5 1q PONS THY apeTny Kal Tov Biov evdatpovilovaac.
A 4 nw a
tov de émitndeiwy Exactos avT@ Seimvov tapa-TUOeis EXevyev OTL) TWodls TAVTH Tia TH TPATEL \ Y \ > \ : 4 a Me a P \ Z a meptehOav O€ es TO TVGCiTLOV anne’ Kal Ta meV
adr éyivero cuvvynbws, Sevtépas 5é pepidos avtae 284

the world this would seem to have been the greatest and the most hotly disputed. For it was not the swiftest of the swift, nor the strongest of the strong, but the best and wisest of the good and wise who was to be elected, and have for the rest of his life, as a victor's prize for excellence, what I may call the supreme power in the state, lord as he was of life and death, honour and dishonour, and all the greatest issues of life. The election was made in the following manner. An assembly of the people having been convened, chosen men were shut up in a room near by so that they could neither see nor be seen, but only hear the shouts of the assembly. For as in other matters, so here, the cries of the assembly decided between the competitors. These did not appear in a body, but each one was introduced separately, as the lot fell, and passed silently through the assembly. Then the secluded judges, who had writing-tablets with them, recorded in each case the loudness of the shouting, not knowing for whom it was given, but only that he was introduced first, second, or third, and soon. Whoever was greeted with the most and loudest shouting, him they declared elected. The victor then set a wreath upon his head and visited in order the temples of the gods. He was followed by great numbers of young men, who praised and extolled him, as well as by many women, who celebrated his excellence in songs, and dwelt on the happiness of his life. Each of his relations and friends set a repast before him, saying: "The city honours thee with this table." When he had finished 'his circuit, he went off to his mess-table. Here he fared in other ways as usual, but a second portion of food was set before him, mapateBelons épvrattev apapevos: Kal peta TO Sefrrvoy emi tais Ovpass Tod idetiou Tav oixetwv TWAPOVTOV YUVALKOY, tv padiota TUYYdvoL TLLOY mpocexanreito, kal Sidovs THv potpay Ereyey Ott TavTny autos AaBwv apioteiov éxeivyn Sidwour, @ote Kaxelyny Enroupévny iro THY ANNWY TpOméprreabar yuvatcov.

XXVII. Kai pov «at ra mepl TAS Tapas apiora, drexoopnoev aurois." ™ pérrov pev yap GVEN@V derordatpoviav dnacav évy Th monet Pane tovs vexpovs, cal wAnoioy exe TA pYTpara TOY iepov ovK éx@XVaE, TUYTPOhOUS TrOL@V
tais Totavtats OwWeot nal auvnfets tous véous, @aoTe yn TapattredOar nd oppwoeiv tov Odvartov @> plaivovta Tovs drpapévous vexpod capatos H 51a tabav SteNovtas. erecta ouvOdrrew ovdev elacev, GAA ev dowixids Kal pvrAdos édNaias Oévres TO copa TepleaTeNov. emuypayras dé Tovvowa Oarpavras ov« éfhv tod vexpod, TrIY

avdpos éy TONE Lap Kal yuvarkos TOY lepev aTro-Javovtwv. Xpovov 5é mévOous odiryov Mpocwpicer, nmepas évoexa: Th dé Swbexary Oicavtas éder Anuntpe Aveu To mdOos. ovdev yap ag apryov ovde a eLevov, adrnra moot KaTepiryyue TOUS avaryKators aperis tia Chrov h KaKias Sa Bodny-Kal KaTemUKYOU mapaderyparov wAnse: = THV
Tod, ols avarykaiov WV évruyxdvovtas del xal out pepopevous dryerOa Kat catacynpatives bat iovTas TMpos TO KAXOD.
1 airots Coraés and Bekker, after Bryan: abrés (himeel/).

which he took and put by. After the supper was over, the women who were related to him being now assembled at the door of the mess-hall, he called to him the one whom he most esteemed and gave her the portion he had saved, saying that he had received it as a meed of excellence, and as such gave it to her. Upon this, she too was lauded by the rest of the women and escorted by them to her home.

XXVII. Furthermore, Lycurgus made most excellent regulations in the matter of their burials. To begin with, he did away with all superstitious terror by allowing them to bury their dead within the city, and to have memorials of them near the sacred places, thus making the youth familiar with such sights and accustomed to them, so that they were not confounded by them, and had no horror of death as polluting those who touched a corpse or walked among graves. In the second place, he permitted nothing to be buried with the dead; they simply covered the body with a scarlet robe and olive leaves when they laid it away. To inscribe the name of the dead upon the tomb was ‘not allowed, unless it were that of a man who had fallen in war, or that of a woman who had died in sacred office. He set apart only a short time for mourning, eleven days; on the twelfth, they were to sacrifice to Demeter and cease their sorrowing. Indeed, nothing was left untouched and neglected, but with all the necessary details of life he blended some commendation of virtue or rebuke of vice; and he filled the city full of good examples, whose continual presence and society must of necessity exercise a controlling and moulding influence upon those who were walking the path of honour.

"Odev ovS atrodypeiv Bwxe trois BovNopévots kal mrAavacOat, Eevixa cuvdyovtas 7On Kal pipnpara Biwy amraiSevTov Kat TONTEVLATOV diapopu. adda Kat TOUS a porCopevous én ovdevt XPNTipem al "Tapeta peovras els Thy TONY ann-NAVVEV, OVY, WS @ovnvdidns gnet, debias pa THS TOMTELAS pinral yevovTat Kal Tpos aper ay Te XPHoLpwov éxpudwory, GAG. waddov Omras pn bibdoKaror Kaxod Tivos wmdp—wow. apa yap Eevous cOMacW avaryKn Aoyous émerarevas Eévous*
Aovyor be Kawol Kpioets KaLvas emu épovary. ef @v avayKny man Toa pvecOar kal mpoarperecs amqbovoas T pos THV cabertaoav TONLTELAY, damep dppoviay. 616 parXov @eTO Yphvar pu-NaTTELW THY Tohy Straws nO av OvK avaTrdnaOn-oeTaL Tovnpav } capudtwr vocepav eéFwlev em ELoLOVTOV.
XXVIII. "Ev pév odv TovtTots ovdéy éotuV
adixias iyvos ovdé reovefias, fy éykadovoty
évsoe TOUS Aveovpyov YOLOLS, os iKaVvaS EYovoL Pos avdpevay, evoe@s dé mpos Suxavocvvny. " bé kahoupeévn KpuTtéia Tap avrois, el ye bn TOTO TOV Avkovpyou TOM TEVPATOY & éor,
Ws 'Aptororénns ioTopnKe, TAvTHY av ein Kal TG TWAdteve meph THS ToneTelas Kal TOU avdpos éverpyacpevy bofav. Hv 6é TowauTn' TOV vévy ot apyovTes da Xpovov Tous paMora voov éxyeuv Soxovyras els THY Xepay adds eérreprrop, éyovras eyxetpio.a Kat Tpopny avayKatay, ado
dé ovdév: ot O€ pel? neEpay pev els dauvdrrous Siacre:popevoe TOTOUS, aTréeKpUTrTOY éauvToUs Kal

This was the reason why he did not permit them to live abroad at their pleasure and wander in strange lands, assuming foreign habits and imitating the lives of peoples who were without training and lived under different forms of government. Nay more, he actually drove away from the city the multitudes which streamed in there for no useful purpose, not because he feared they might become imitators of his form of government and learn useful lessons in virtue, as Thucydides says,! but rather that they might not become in any wise teachers of evil. For along with strange people; strange doctrines must come in; and novel doctrines bring novel decisions, from which there must arise many feelings and resolutions which destroy the harmony of the existing political order. Therefore he thought it more necessary to keep bad manners and customs from invading and filling the city than it was to keep out infectious diseases.

XXVIII. Now in all this there is no trace of injustice or arrogance, which some attribute to the laws of Lycurgus, declaring them efficacious in producing valour, but defective in producing righte- ousness. The so-called “krupteia,” or secret service, of the Spartans, if this be really one of the institutions of Lycurgus, as Aristotle says it was, may have given Plato also? this opinion of the man and his civil polity. This secret service was of the following nature, The magistrates from time to time sent out into the country at large the most discreet of the young warriors, equipped only with daggers and such supplies as were necessary. In the day time they seattered into obscure and out of the way places,

1 In the Funeral Oration of Pericles, ii. 39, 1.
2 Laws, p. 630 d.

averravovro, vuxtwp 5& Katdvres eig Tag odovs TOV ELAWTOV TOV ANoKOpeEvoy aTréchaTToY. TON-Nats 8 Kal toils dypots! émretropevopevor tors poparewtdrovs nal xpatiorovs avTay avypovv.
daomep Kal @ovevdtdns év trois TeXotovynotaxots
istopet tovs én’ avdpeta mpoxpiOévtas bred TeV Lraptiatav orepavocacbar pev ws édrevOépous yeyovotas Kal tepiedbeity ta TeV Oedv iepa, pixpov S& borepov aravtas adaveis yevécOar, mrelovas } SiaxXtdLous 6vTas, @S unTe Tapayphpa
unre Daotepov yew Twa rAéyev Stw* TpdOT]E SiePOdpnoav. ‘Apiotorérns 5é pardiota dyot cal rovs épopous, Otay eis THY apYhy KaTacTaCL
m@p@tov, Tos elAwot KataryyédreLy TrOAEpOY, Strws evayes 7 TO avendety.
Kal raddra 6 tpayéws mpooepépovto xai
oKAnpas avdtois, Oote Kal tive avayKdalortes ToXvy aKpaton eis TA GvaciTia TrapEonyov, ért-Secxvipevoe TO peOverv olov éate Tots véols. Kab @odas éxédevov adewy Kal yopelas yopeverv ayevvels
Kal Katayerdaorous, atréxerOar 5é trav édevOépowr.
5:6 nai dacw totepov év tH OnBaiwv eis tHv
Aaxovixny otpateia tos adtoKxopévous etXwtas KENEVOMEVOUS ASew ta Teprrdvépou nat “AXKtpavos kal Srévdovtos tov Adxwvos mapateicOai, haoKxovtas ovK eOédew TOVs SeatTroTUVOUS. WaTE TOUS Néyovtas, év Aaxedaipou Kal tov érevOepov pa-

Mata édevMepoy elvar Kai Tov SovrAov pddoTA
1 rots &ypots MSS. (incl. 8): robs d&ypobs after Coraés.
2 8rqm Cohet, cf. Thuc. iv. 80, 4: r¢.
290

57

LYCURGUS

where they hid themselves and lay quiet; but in the night they came down into the highways and killed every Helot whom they caught. Oftentimes, too, they actually traversed the fields where Helots were working and slew the sturdiest and best of them. So, too, Thucydides, in his history of the Peloponnesian war,! tells us that the Helots who had been judged by the Spartans to be superior in bravery, set wreaths upon their heads in token of their emancipation, and visited the temples of the gods in procession, but a little while afterwards all disappeared, more than two thousand of them, in such a way that no man was able to say, either then or afterwards, how they came by their deaths. And Aristotle in particular says also that the ephors, as soon as they came into office, made formal declaration of war upon the Helots, in order that there might be no impiety in slaying them.

And in other ways also they were harsh and cruel to the Helots. For instance, they would force them to drink too much strong wine, and then introduce them into their public messes, to show the young men what a thing drunkenness was. They also ordered them to sing songs and dance dances that were low and ridiculous, but to let the nobler kind alone. And therefore in later times, they say, when the Thebans made their expedition into Laconia,? they ordered the Helots whom they captured to sing the songs of Terpander, Aleman, and Spendon the Spartan ; but they declined to do so, on the plea that their masters did not allow it, thus proving the correctness of the saying: “In Sparta the freeman is more a freeman than anywhere else in the world,

1 iv. 80. 2 Under Epaminondas, 369 B.c.
291
vu 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Sotrov, ov havrAws teewpynxévar tHv Stapoparv.

6 Tas pév ody ToLaUTAaS YadeTOTHTAS DoTEpoY éy-yevéoOat, Trois Sraptidtass vopito, paddtoTta peta TOV péyav cetopov, ® avveTriOéabat ToOvs ethwTas
peta Meconviwy iotopodot, cai mreioTa KaKad THY x@pav épydcacbar Kai péytotov TH TodeEL
mepiaThoat Kivduvov. ov yap av éywrye rpocbetny
Avxovpy@ piapov ob tw THS KpUTTEtas Epyov amo
Ths GdAns avToD mpaoTtntos Kal Sixatoovvns TEXPALPOpMEVvOS TOV TpoTTOY, @ Kal TO Satpomoy eTréepwapTupnae.

XXIX. KatesAnupévwv Sé trois eOropots Hdn
TOV KUpLwTatev bm avtTov, Kal THs TodtTELas éxteOpappevns ixavas Kal duvapévns héperv éavtv nal colev & éavtis, dotep o TWAdtov dnolv érl TO Koop@ yevomév Kal xuvnOévte THv mpeTny Kivnow evppavOjvar tov Oeov, otTwS ayacbels Kal dyamnoas TO THS vopobertas Kan-Nos Kal péyeOos év epye ryevoperns cai 06@ Baébk-Covons, érreOupnaer, os avuotov é& avopwomivns mpovoias, ab uvatov avr HD amohurrety Kab aKivytov
2 eis TO péddov. cUvaryaryov ovv imavras els ex KAnoiay, Ta péev adra peTpioos exew épn Kat ixavers T pos evdaiuoviay Kal apeTny Tis TONEDS, & 6€ KUpL@ratov cots Kal péytorov ovx dy éfeveryKety ™ pOTEpov T POs avrous i) xXpycacIa Te Jeg. Setv ovv éxeivous éupévery Tots Kabertaat vopors Kal pn dev adddo ew pndée peraxerecy Ews
émdavecw éx Aeddav avtos: érravenOov yap 6 tt 292

and the slave more a slave.’’ However, in my opinion, such cruelties were first practised by the Spartans in later times, particularly after the great earthquake,! when the MHelots and Messenians together rose up against them, wrought the widest devastation in their territory, and brought their city into the greatest peril. I certainly cannot ascribe to Lycurgus so abominable a measure as the “ krup- teia,”’ judging of his character from his mildness and justice in all other instances. To this the voice of the god also bore witness.”

XXIX. When his principal institutions were at last firmly fixed in the customs of the people, and his civil polity had sufficient growth and strength to support and preserve itself, just as Plato says 3 that Deity was rejoiced to see His universe come into being and make its first motion, so Lycurgus was filled with joyful satisfaction in the magnitude and beauty of his system of laws, now that it was in operation and moving along its pathway. He therefore ardently desired, so far as human forethought could accomplish the task, to make it immortal, and let it go down unchanged to future ages. Accordingly, he assembled the whole people, and told them that the provisions already made were sufficiently adapted to promote the prosperity and virtue of the state, but that something of the greatest weight and importance remained, which he could not lay before them until he had consulted the god at Delphi. They must therefore abide by the established laws and make no change nor alteration in them until he came back from Delphi in person ;

1 464-B.c. Cf. Plutarch’s Cimon, xvi.
2 See chapter v. 3. 3 Timaeus, p. 37 c.
293

3 dv T@ Be@ SoxH Toinoev. oporoyouvTwv 8 Tav-Tov cal KedXevovtwv Badbiterv, Spxous AaBov Tapa
tov Bacthéwy cal Tav yepovTwy, ereita Tapa TOV AANWV TOMTOD, eupevery Kal ypnoecOat TH
4 / h e
xabeot@an TodtTela péxpis av érravédOn o Av-Kovpyos, amnpev eis Aerdous.
Ilaparyevopevos S5é mpds TO pavretov Kal te Oe@ Ovcas, npwTnoev ef KAwS OF Vopor Kal ixa-VaS Tpos evdatpoviay Kal apeTny TOAEWS KElpeEvot TuyXavovew. arroxpivapévou bé Tod Geod Kal Tovs
, a a , 4
vomous KaXWS KetcOat Kal rhv rod évdoEoTaTHY
pe ie ‘
Stapevety tH Avxovpyou Xpaperny wonLTEla, TO
/ >
pedvrevpa ypayrdpuevos eis Yrdptny améorenev.
> A A a 4 V4 \ /
autos 6¢ t@ Oe@ wad Ovaas Kal Tovs Pirous aoracdpevos Kal Tov viov, éyvw pnKéte Tots
, ? a \ @ > “ a
ToniTas adetvar Tov Spxov, avtov S€ KaTaddcat
tov Biov éxovaias, iALKlas yeyovas év-} Kad Brody
Ett kal wetmravaba Bovropévors w@paiov éott, cal
TaV Tepl avToY ixavas pos Eevdatpoviay Exe 5o-KovVTMY. éTEAEUTNOEY OVV ATrOKApPTEpHaAS, HYyoU-HEVvOS YpHval TOV ToNTiKaY avdpav pnde Tov
Odvatov atonitevtov elvar pndé apyov Td Tob Biov rédos, adr’ ev aperis pepids cal mapakews yevopevov. auT@ te yap ékeipyacpévw Ta Kar-MoTa THY TEeXEUTHY WS AXNODS erLTEAELwoD elvat
THS evdatmovias, Kal Tois moAitats @yv dua Tod
/ 4 a“ ? A 4 \
Biou wapeckevace Karav cal ayabayv dvrara Tov Odvarov atonrcipey, opwpoxooe ypnoGat TH To-ALTELa PEK pLS Av Exeivos émravénOy. Kal ov dieyev-294

58

then he would do whatsoever the god thought best.

When they all agreed to this and bade him set out on his journey, he exacted an oath from the kings and the senators, and afterwards from the rest of the citizens, that they would abide by the established polity and observe it until Lycurgus should come back ; then he set out for Delphi.

On reaching the oracle, he sacrificed to the god, and asked if the laws which he had established were good, and sufficient to promote acity's prosperity and virtue. Apollo answered that the laws which he had established were good, and that the city would continue to be held in highest honour while it kept to the polity of Lycurgus. This oracle Lycurgus wrote down, and sent it to Sparta. But for his own part, he sacrificed again to the god, took affectionate leave of his friends and of his son, and resolved never to release his fellow-citizens from their oath, but of his own accord to put an end to his life where he was. He had reached an age in which life was not yet a burden, and death no longer a terror; when he and his friends, moreover, appeared to be sufficiently prosperous and happy. He therefore abstained from food till he died, considering that even the death of a statesman should be of service to the state, and the ending of his life not void of effect, but recognized as a virtuous deed. As for himself, since he had wrought out fully the noblest tasks, the end of life would actually be a consummation of his good for- tune and happiness ; and as for his fellow-citizens, he would make his death the guardian, as it were, of all the blessings he had secured for them during his life, since they had sworn to observe and maintain his polity until he should return. And he was not

Oy TOV hoyiopdv: tocodTov én porreva ev 7 TOALS THS 'Edd d805 evvouig Kat 8éEn, x Xpovov ero TEVTAKOT LOY TOUS Avnotpyou Xpnoapevn vopoes, ous dexatecadpav Bactréwv per éxeivov ELS "Ay TOV "Apxvddpou yevopeveoy ov6els € exivnoen. 1 yap TOV epopav KATACTAGLS OUK avETIs ide GAN éritacts TIS moAtTelas, Kal Soxovoa T pos Tob Sjuou yeyovévat oodpotépay éroinae THV aploToKpaTiav.

XXX. "Ayéos dé Bacidevovros eloeppin vo- pio wa Wp@Tov eis THY Lrdptyy, Kal peta TOU VOMiC LATOS Treovetia Kal TNOUTOU Cijdos éréBn bia Avcavépor, & Os autos @V aVAdAWTOS VITO xen paTov, évéeTTAnae TH mat piba pido AovTias Kat Tpupiys, Xpuaov al dpyupov éx Tov TOoNe"OU KaT- aryaryov Kal TOUS AvKovpyou KATATONTEVG due- Os vopous. ov em LK paTOUVT@Y _TpoTepov ov 10- AEws n Lrdprn ToMTELAY, arr avbpos acKnTou Kal copod Biov éxouca, HarXov 0, WaTreEp oe mounTat TOV 'Hpaxdea pvdoroyoiar déppa Kat

EvXov é éxovra THY orouperny émemopever Gat, Ko-Aalovra TOUS Tapavopous Kal Onpradders Tupavvous, ots TOS ATO oKUTaANS pas ai Tpi-Bevos apXxouvea THs “EXddbos éxovons nal Bov-NoL“EVNS, KaTéhve Tas adiKxous duvaceias at Tupavvioas €yv Tots TONTEVLAC L, Kat TONELOUS éBpaBeve nal otdoes Katémave, ToANAKLS OVS aoTrioa Kivjoaca pilav, arn éva, Téwrpaca mpeo Bevtnp, @ TavTeEs evOus émoiovv TO 7 poo-TACT OpMEvO?, dorep at pedooat pavevros nYye-HOv0s, TUVTpPEXOVTES Kal KaTaxoopovpevot. Toc OUTOY TEpLnV Evvomias TH TONE Kal dixatocurns.
296

. LYCURGUS *

deceived in his expectations, so long did his city have the first rank in Hellas for good government and reputation, observing as she did for five hundred years the laws of Lycurgus, in which no one of the fourteen kings who followed him made any change, down to Agis the son of Archidamus. For the institution of the ephors did not weaken, but rather strengthened the civil polity, and though it was thought to have been done in the interests of the people, it really made the aristocracy more powerful.

XXX. But in the reign of Agis, gold and silver money first flowed into Sparta, and with money, greed and a desire for wealth prevailed through the agency of Lysander, who, though incorruptible him- self, filled his country with the love of riches and with luxury, by bringing home gold and silver from the war, and thus subverting the laws of Lycurgus. While these remained in force, Sparta led the life, not of a city under a constitution, but of an individual man under training and full of wisdom. Nay rather, as the poets weave their tales of Heracles, how with his club and lion’s skin he traversed the world chas- tising lawless and savage tyrants, so we may say that Sparta, simply with the dispatch-staff and cloak of her envoys, kept Hellas in willing and glad obedience, put down illegal oligarchies and tyrannies in the different states, arbitrated wars, and quelled seditions, often without so much as moving a single shield, but merely sending one ambassador, whose commands all at once obeyed, just as bees, when their leader appears, swarm together and array themselves about him. Such a surplus fund of good government and Justice did the city enjoy.

297

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"“Odev &ywye Oavpdfw ta AeyovTwV ws Apyxe-
Oa. pev WOecar, dpyew 8é ov HiotavTo Aaxe-Saipoviot, kat tov @eondpurov tod Bacihéws éraivouvtwy doyov, 6s, elrovtos Tivos cwHlerOaL Thv Laraptnv Sa tos Bacirels apxexovs yeyo-
- potas, “Maa nop,” elie, “dia tous moXitas Tret-

Oapyx-xovs Gytas’” ov yap axovew Uropévovet TOY ™poorareiy 1 Suva evan, eed ” mea ta paOn-pa pév €otiy ToD apyovTos | (éurrovel yap 0 KAN@S
dywv To karas ErecOar: nat KaOdrrep immxis TeXUNS atroTékeopa tTpdov immov Kal weOnveoy mapacyeiv, ovtw PBacitixyns émiotnuns Epyov avOpwrows evreiOerav évepydcacbat), Aaxedatpovioe Sé ovK evrreiOerav, GrrériOvpiay everpyd-fovro tois adXaLs TOV apyecOa Kai braKxovew avtois. rovv yap ov vais ovdé ypnuata tap’
avta@y ovdé omditas téumovtes, GANA &va Yrrap-Ul € , \ , > “
_TuaTny Hyewova’ Kai ANaBovtes expa@vTo peta
a , a / “
Tiyuns Kat Séous, womwep Turtwr@m Xxetuaras
Kal Bpacida Xarxdeis, Avodvdpp 6é wal Karrx-xpatida kal ’Aynoitkd@ mavtes ot thv ‘Actay oixovvtTes “EXAnves, Tous pev avdpas dppootas kat gwhpovotas tev éxactayov Snuwv «al
apxyovTwyv ovoydloytes, mpos 5€ ovuracay TH Tov Yraptiatav Tow woTrep Tralbaywyov 7 duddocKxadov evoynpovos Biov Kal teraypéevns
i > 4 > 4
morTelas atroBNeTrovtes. ets 6 Kal YTpatovexos
émucxawat Soxet, peta trabsas vopolerav xal kerevov AOnvaious ayerv pvotypia Kal Tomas,
» , ? a e , “
Hnreiovs 8 aywvo0eteiv, as KadANOTA TODTO
motovvtas, Aaxedaipmoviouvs 5é, av ayuaptdvwoww
1 tov &pxovros with S: &pxovros.

298

LYCURGUS

Wherefore, I for one am amazed at those who declare that the Lacedaemonians knew how to obey, but did not understand how to command, and quote with approval the story of King Theopompus, who, when some one said that Sparta was safe and secure because her kings knew how to command, replied : “ Nay, rather because her citizens know how to obey.” For men will not consent to obey those who have not the ability to rule, but obedience is a lesson to be learned from a commander. For a good leader makes good followers, and just as the final attainment of the art of horsemanship is to make a horse gentle and tractable, so it is the task of the science of government to implant obedience in men. And the Lacedaemonians implanted in the rest of the Greeks not only a willingness to obey, but a desire to’ be their followers and subjects. People did not send requests to them for ships, or money, or hoplites, but for a single Spartan com- mander ; and when they got him, they treated him with honour and reverence, as the Sicilians treated Gylippus; the Chalcidians, Brasidas; and all the Greeks resident in Asia, Lysander, Callicratidas, and Agesilaiis. These men, wherever they came, were styled regulators and chasteners of peoples and magistrates, and the city of Sparta from which they came was regarded as a teacher of well-ordered . private life and settled civil polity. To this position of Sparta Stratonicus would seem to have mockingly alluded when, in jest, he proposed a law that the Athenians should conduct mysteries and processions, and that the Eleians should preside at games, since herein lay their special excellence, but that the Lacedaemonians should be cudgelled if the others

ovrot, dépecOar. xal tovto pev elpnrar yap Tov yerolou: ’Avricbévns 5é 0 Lwxpatixos amo Ths év Aevxtpots payns 6pav tors @nBaious
péya ppovodvtas, ovdév avtovs én Siadéperv Tatoapiwv éml TH cuvyKoWat Tov Tadaywyov yaupiovrav.
XXXI. Ov phy tobto ye TH Aveovpy@ xepa-
Aatov HY ToTe, TAEOTwWY THyYOUMLEeVNY ATrONLTTELY
TV TOA’ GAN @aoTep Eévds avdpos Biw Kar
Torews SAns vouilwv evdaipoviay an’ apetis eyyiverOat Kal opovoias THs mpds avTnv, mpos
tovTo ouvétake xal cuynppocev, dTras édevOépsot
Kai avtdpKeas yevouevot kal cwdpovotytes emt TrElaTov Ypovoy S:aTeA@or. TavTnv cal IIAdtwv éxaBe THs todtelas brobeow Kal Aroyévns Kat Zyvov cal mavres Soot te wept tovTeY émiyetpy-cavtes evmrety érratvovvTat, ypdupata Kal Aoyous GTONTOVTES OVO. O 5é OV ypdppaTa Kal NOyous,
GN Epyw TodTElay apyipntov eis has TpoEveyKd-Hevos, Kal Tois avitapKTov elvat THY Neyouéevny wept Tov codov didbeoww trrokapBdvovow émdel-Eas ONnV THY Tod dirocopodaar, eixoTws UrreEpjpe 7H S0En tTovs mwmote TodTevoapevous ev tois"EXAnat. 80 Strep eal AptotoréAns éXaTTOvas cyxelv hynot Tiuas } TpoajKov hv avtov yew

év Aaxedaipou, xaimep éxovta tas peyloras.
lepoy Te yap éotw avTou, Kal Ovovor nal’ éxa-oTov éviauTov ws Dem. Néyeras bé Kal TOY Nerpavov avTovd Kxoptobévtwy oixade xepauvov eis Tov 300

."

59

LYCURGUS

did amiss.1 This was a joke; but Antisthenes the Socratic, when he saw the Thebans in high feather after the battle of Leuctra,? said in all seriousness that they were just like little boys strutting about because they had thrashed their tutor.

XXXI. It was not, however, the chief design of Lycurgus then to leave his city in command over a great many others, but he thought that the happiness of an entire city, like that of a single individual, depended on the prevalence of virtue and concord within its own borders. The aim, therefore, of all his arrangements and adjustments was to make his people free-minded, self-sufficing, and moderate in all their ways, and to keep them so as long as possible. His design for a civil polity was adopted by Plato, Diogenes, Zeno, and by all those who have won approval for their treatises on this subject, although they left behind them only writings and words. Lycurgus, on the other hand, produced not writings and words, but an actual polity which was beyond imitation, and because he gave, to those who maintain that the much talked of natural disposition to wisdom exists only in theory, an example of an entire city given to the love of wisdom, his fame rightly transcended that of all who ever founded polities among the Greeks. Therefore Aristotle says that the honours paid him in Sparta were less than he deserved, although he enjoys the highest honours there. For he has a temple, and sacrifices are Offered to him yearly as to a god. It is also said that when his remains were brought home, his

1 Cf. chapter xviii. 4.
2 In 371 B.c., when the Thebans under Epaminondas broke the supremacy of Sparta.
301

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

tadov Kataoka’ tovto 5é ov padiws érépm
Twit Tav émipavav wry Evpetidn cuptrecety Batepov, TekeuvTHoavts Kal rahévts THs Maxedovtas wept ApéQovcav. @ote arrodoynpa Kal pap-TUpLOV péya elvas TOS dyaT@at Tov EvpeTiény To pov@m oupmeceiy avT@ peta TereuvTyV! a2 TO Jeodircotate Kai oolwTdt@ MpoTEpoy cuvéTrEceE.
Tereuticas 5€ tov Aveotpyov ot péev év Kippa

Néyouaw, "AmrorAroGeus Se ets "Ade xopscbévra, Tipatos 8€ cat "Apioto£evos év Kpntn xataBia-cavra: Kal tadpov ’Apiotokevos avtot Seixvuabat
dnow wo Kpnrav tis Uepyapias steph tiv Eevixnv obov. vidov 5é Aéyetar povoyevh KxaTtadt-weiv Avtiwpov: ov TeXeuTHoaVYTOS GTéKVOU TO yéVvOS éEérurrev. ot & éEraipor nal oixetor Svadoxynv tiva
kat ovvodov él moAXovs ypovous Stapecvacav KaréoTnoayv, Kai Tas huépas év als auvnpyovto
Avtoupyiéas mpoonyopevoav. *Apiaotoxparns 8é
0 ‘Immdpyov dyna -tovs Eévous tod Aveovpyou
TerevTncavtTos év Kpytn xadocat 70 copa Kat
Staomreipas thy Téppav eis THY OdraTTAaV, avToOD
SenGévros xal duvdrdakapyévou pn wote apa tav
Nerdy es Aaxedaipova xoptcOévtwr, ws erray-HKOVTOS AUTOD Kal THY OpkKay EAUpLEVOV, pETA-Bdarwot thy TodTElav. TavTa pév odv Trept TOU Avxoupyou.
1 The words xal yevéoOa: following reAevr}y are deleted by Bekker and Sintenis? (in critical notes).

tomb was struck by lightning, and that this hardly happened to any other eminent man after him except Euripides, who died and was buried at Arethusa in Macedonia. The lovers of Euripides therefore regard it as a great testimony in his favour that he alone experienced after death what had earlier befallen a man who was most holy and beloved of the gods.

Some say that Lycurgus died in Cirrha; Apollo- themis, that he was brought to Elis and died there ; Timaeus and Aristoxenus, that he ended his days in Crete; and Aristoxenus adds that his tomb is shown by the Cretans in the district of Pergamus, near the public highway. It is also said that he left an only son, Antiorus, on whose death without issue, the family became extinct. His friends and relations, however, instituted a periodical assembly in his memory, which continued to be held for many ages, and they called the days on which they came together, Lycurgidae. Aristocrates the son of Hip- parchus says that the friends of Lycurgus, after his death in Crete, burned his body and scattered the ashes into the sea, and that this was done at his request, and because he wished to prevent his remains from ever being carried to Sparta, lest the people there should change his polity, on the plea

‘ that he had come back, and that they were therefore released from their oaths. This, then, is what I have to say about Lycurgus.

393

NUMA

VOL. I.

NOMA2

I. “Eore 58 wal rept trav Nowa tod Baotdéws xpovov, Kad’ obs yéyove, veavixr Siapopd, Kaitrep é& apxis eis TovTOY KaTtayecOaL TOY oTEUpaTwV axpiBas Soxovvtwv. addr Krwdc0s Tes ev EAeyy—p Ypovov (oUTw yap Tws éruyéyparrtat 76 BuBAiov)
ioxupiverar Tas pev apxaias éxelvas avaypagas
év tots KeArixots wdbeot tis ToAews nhavica., Tas 5é viv datvopévas ove adNO@s cuyKetaOar be’
avdpav yaptfouévwr tioly eis TA Tp@ta yevn Kal Tovs émipavertatous oixous é€€ ov mpoonKovTwry eta Bialopévois. Neyouevou & ody as Nopas yévor-to IIvOayopov cuviOns, ot pev drAws a€todcr pndev ‘EAAnunis maidevoews Nowa pereivar, Kabarrep } pice Suvatov Kal avtdpKn yeverBar
mpos apetiy 7 Bertiove TluOayopou BapBapp twi
tHv Tov Bacikéws arrobodvar traidevowv: ot Se IIvOayopay pév ore yevéoOar, Toav Nopa ypdvev
opod Te trévte yeveais atroAeTropevoy, IlvOayopav 5é rov Sraptidtny Orvprria verrxnnota atadcov éml ris éexxadexdtns ‘Ondvputridoos, Hs érec tpite Nopas eis tov Baotreiay xatéotn, tAaVnOEevTA wept THY Itadiav ouyyevécOa TH Nowa nal ovr-306

60

NUMA

I. Tuere is likewise! a vigorous dispute about the time at which King Numa lived, although from the beginning down to him the genealogies seem to be made out accurately. But a certain Clodius, in a book entitled “An Examination of Chronology,” insists that the ancient records were lost when the city was sacked by the Gauls,? and that those which are now exhibited as such were forged, their compilers wishing to gratify the pride of certain persons by inserting their names among the first families and the most illustrious houses, where they had no cause to appear. Accordingly, when it is said that Numa was an intimate friend of Pytha- goras, some deny utterly that Numa had any Greek culture, holding either that he was naturally capable of attaining excellence by his own efforts, or that the culture of the king was due to some Barbarian superior to Pythagoras. Others say that Pythagoras the philosopher lived as many as five generations after Numa, but that there was another Pythagoras, the Spartan, who was Olympic victor in the foot-race for the sixteenth Olympiad 3 (in the third year of which Numa was made king), and that in his wanderings about Italy he made the ac- quaintance of Numa, and helped him arrange the

1 Cf. Lycurgus, i. 1-3.

2 390 B.c. Cf. Camillus, xix.—xxix. 3 657-654 B.C.

3°7
x 2
ec)

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Staxoopioar thy woNTelav, BOev ovK OrALya Tots "Pwpaixois émirndevpact tav Aakwvixay avape- pixOas TIvOayopou bidaEavtos. adXws 5é Nopas yévos pev Hv éx LaBivwv, LaBivor 5& BovrAovrar AaxeSaipoviwy éavtovs atroixous yeyovévat. ods peyv odv ypovous éFaxpiBaoar yYaderov éort, Kal pariota Tous é« tay 'Odvptriovixay avayouévous, av THv avaypadny ope dhacw 'Trmiav éxdodvar tov 'Hrelov, am' ovdevos oppmpevov avayxatou ampos wiorw: & 8 raperndapev jpyets afta Aoyou wept Nopa, SiéEcuev apyny oixetay da- Bovres.

II. "ESSopov évnavrov 7 'Paun nal rpraxocrov dn 'Pwptrov Baoidevovros wxeito: wéurrn &e iorapévov pnvos, hv viv juépav vovas Karmpa- tivas KanXovdot, Buciay tiva Snuoterh mpd THs morews 0 'Pwpuvros Ove rept TO Kadovpevov Aiyos éXos, kal raphy te Bourn cal rod Sypov To wrelaTov. éEaidyns Se peydAns Trepl Tov aépa TpoT hs yevouerns Kal véhous eri THY yhv épetoar- Tos dua trvevuate cal Carn, TOV pev Arov Susrov éxtrAayevta auvéBn guyety xal oxedacbjva., tov 5é€ "Pwptrov adavn yevéoOa, xal pre avrov érs unre cdma teOynKoros evpeORvat, ya- erny 5é tw' wrovotay GrpacGat TeV TatpiKion, kal pujvat dAoyov év te Shum Kat adTav ws mara. Bapuvopuevoe TO BactrevecOar Kal pera- OThoat TO KpdTos Eis avTovs OédNovTes avérotev tov Baothéa. Kal ydp édoxes tpayvrepov dn mpocpépes Oar cal wovapyixwrepov avTois. adda Taurny pev thy vtowiayv eOepdmevov eis Oeay government of the city, whence it came about that many Spartan customs were mingled with the Roman, as Pythagoras taught them to Numa. And at all events, Numa was of Sabine descent, and the Sabines will have it that they were colonists from Lacedaemon, Chronology, however, is hard to fix, and especially that which is based on the names of victors in the Olympic games, the list of which is said to have been published at a late period by Hippias of Elis, who had no fully authoritative basis for his work. I shall therefore begin at a convenient point, and relate the noteworthy facts which I have found in the life of Numa.

II. For thirty-seven years, now, Rome had been built and Romulus had been its king; and on the fifth of the month of July, which day they now call the Capratine Nones, Romulus was offering a public sacrifice outside the city at the so-called Goat's Marsh,*in the presence of the senate and most of the people. Suddenly there was a great commotion in the air, and a cloud descended upon the earth bringing with it blasts of wind and rain. The throng of common folk were terrified and fled in all directions, but Romulus disappeared, and was never found again either alive or dead. Upon this a grievous suspicion attached itself to the patricians, and an accusing story was current among the people to the effect that they had long been weary of kingly rule, and desired to transfer the power to themselves, and had therefore made away with the king. And indeed it had been noticed for some time that he treated them with greater harshness and arrogance. This suspicion the patricians sought to remove by ascribing divine honours to Romulus,

Timas avdyovtes ws ov TeOvnxota Tov 'Pwpvror, GANA KpelTTOVos bvTa poipas: Kal IIpoxdos, avnp éridavys, Stwpocato 'Pwyvrov idelv eis odpavov ouy Tots SirAOLs avadepopevoy, Kat having axotcas xeXevovros avTov ovopaterBat Kupivoy.
'Erépa 5€ tapayy xal ordow xatedduBave
Thy TOAW vTrép TOU péAXOVTOS aTrodeYOnoerOat
Baciréws, obra TeV érndrvdwv Koutdy Tois Tpw-TOKS oUyKEXpapévwv WoriTats, GAN ETL TOU Te Ssuov woANa Kupalvovtos év éauvt@ Kal tov matpixiwoy év vrowiats é« tov Siaddpov pos GAAnNOUS SvTwWV. OV pnV arANA Bacirever Bat pev edoxes traci, Hptoav Sé nab Séotnoayv ovx uirép avdpos povov, dAXd Kal yévous, omorepov mapébes Tov Hryemova. Kat yap ot peta ‘Popvrov MPATOL Tuvoikicayres THY TOMY OK avaTKXETOV énotobvTo Trodews Kal ywpas Tovs YaBiveus pe-radaBovras dpyew BidlecOar trav ert taira SeEapévwv, nal tois YaBivors Fv tis evyvopwv

Novos, érreb Tatiov rod Bacihéws avtay arro-Bavovros ove eotaciacay mpos ‘Pwpvrov, adr elacav adpyew povov, adOis aktovvrwy Tov ap-xovTa iyever Oar Tap auTa@v. ovTe yap éK Ta-TEwWOTEpwY KpElTTOTL mpooyevécOal, Kal Tpoayevomevot ANGE te pacat Kal mpoayayeiv eis akiwpa qodews éxeivous pel’ Eavtav. vmép pev ovv TovTwy éatraciatov.
"Orws 5€ yun ovyyvow éx Tis avapxias 7 oTdols aTrepydoeTat, peTewpou Tov ToNLTEUpatos dévtos, érakay of twatpixiot, TevtjKovra 61 310 oe

NUMA

on the ground that he was not dead, but blessed with a better lot. And Proculus, a man of eminence, took oath that he had seen Romulus ascending to heaven in full armour, and had heard his voice commanding that he be called Quirinus.!
The city was now beset with fresh disturbance and faction over the king to be appointed in his stead, for the new comers were not yet altogether blended with the original citizens, but the commonalty was still like a surging sea, and the patricians full of jealousy towards one another on account of their different nationalities. It is indeed true that it was the pleasure of all to have a king, but they wrangled and quarrelled, not only about the man who should be their leader, but also about the tribe which should furnish him. For those who had built the city with Romulus at the outset thought it intolerable that the Sabines, after getting a share in the city and its territory, should insist on ruling those who had received them into such privileges ; and the Sabines, since on the death of their king Tatius they had raised no faction against Romulus, but suffered him to rule alone, had a reasonable ground for demanding that now the ruler should come from them. They would not admit that they had added themselves as inferiors to superiors, but held rather that their addition had brought the strength of numbers and advanced both parties alike to the dignity of a city. On these questions, then, they were divided into factions.

But in order that their factions might not produce utter confusion from the absence of all authority, now that the administration of affairs was suspended,

. Cf. Romulus, xxvii. 3—xxviii. 3.

e@ A v 3 A 4 b] a kal éxarov dvtTwy avTayv, Exaorov év pépet Tots BacirtKots Tapacnpots Koo povpevov Ovewv TE Tots Geois Ta vevomicpéva Kal ypnpativew && pév Opas
THS vuctos, && 5é THs Huépas. Kai yap 7 Stavopy
TOV Katp@V ExaTépov Tpos ioOTNTA KANaS ExeLV
éSdxet Tois apxovet, cal mpds Tov SHuoy 7H peTa-
A) “A b] , 3 A \ 4 , e la
Born tis éEovcias adaipety tov POovov, opavrTa THS aUTHS Hyépas Kal vuKTos Tov av’rov idstoTnv éx Bactrtéws yiwomuevov. to € oxRMA TODTO TIS apyis wecoBacireiav ‘Pwyaior carovow.
III. "ANA Kxaivrep oTw TordTIKa@S Kal dveEmaxOas adnyeicbas Soxodvtes, vrovoiats Kat GopvBos meptémimrov, ws peOrotavtes eis OrLyapxiavy Ta tpaypata Kal dtatravdaywyobvres
év adhicw avtois thy troditeiav, BacieverOar
\ 9 2f/ > 4 / > /
dé ovx éOédovev. €x TovTOV cuvéByoay audorepat pos GAANAaS al oTdoEs, BaoTE THY ETépav ex
a es 9 a / 4 \ a THS éTépas amrodeiEas Bactdéa> partota yap av ovTws év TE TH Tapovte travoacOar THy ptdo-
/ \ 9 , N 9 ,
vetxiav, kal Tov amrodeyOevta mpos auotépous icov yevérOat, Tos pev ws EXopévOUS ayaTrOVTA, rots Sé€ evvouvy dvTa dtd aovuyyéveray. émiTpewavrwv b€ mporépats Tots ‘Pwpaios tav LaBivev THhv aipeciv, &oke wadrrov édécOat YaBivov av-Tous atrodetEavtas 7} Tapacyeiv Popaiov éxeivwv éXopéevwov. Kat Bovrevadpuevar xaP éavtovs arro-Secxviiovow éx LaBivov Nopuav Wopridsov, dvdpa Tov pev eis “Paunv ar@xicpévov ov yevdpevon,

it was arranged by the senators, who were one hundred and fifty in number,! that each of them in his turn should assume the insignia of royalty, make the customary sacrifices to the gods, and transact public business, for the space of six hours by day and six hours by night. This distribution of times seemed well adapted to secure equality between the two factions, and the transfer of power likely to remove all jealousy on the part of the people, when they saw the same man, in the course of a single day and night, become king and then a private citizen again. This form of government the Romans call " interregnum."

III. But although in this way the senators were thought to rule constitutionally and without oppression, they roused suspicions and clamorous charges that they had changed the form of govern- ment toan oligarchy, and were holding the state in tutelage among themselves, and were unwilling to be ruled by a king. Therefore it was agreed by both factions that one should appoint a king from the other. This was thought the best way to end their prevailing partisanship, and the king thus appointed would be equally well-disposed to both parties, being gracious to the one as his electors, and friendly to the other because of his kinship with them. Then, as the Sabines gave the Romans their option in the matter, it seemed to them better to have a Sabine king of their own nomination, than to have a Roman made king by the Sabines. They took counsel, therefore, among themselves, and nominated Numa Pompilius from among the Sabines, a man who had not joined the emigrants to Rome,

1 Cf. Romulus, xx. 1.

yvopyiov & ottw 8' aperiy dvta macw ote TOV éEXopevwv TpoOumoTEpoY dvopacGévros avo déEacdat tors LaBivous. Ppdcavtes ov TH Syup Ta Sedoypeva, mpéoBers éexméwrrovot mpos Tov dvdpa Kowh Tovs mpwrevovtas am apuotépav, jew Senoouévovs xa traparaBelv thv Bact-relay.
"Hy &€ aodews pev o Nopas émidavois év LaBivors ths Kupewv, ad Fs nal Kupiras
'Pwpuaios ofas avrovs Gua tois avaxpabetor LaBivors mpoonyopevoay, vies dé Tlopumwvos,} avipos evdoxipov, treccdpwy aberdav vewraros:
MEpg dé yeyovwas kata 5 twa Ociav tiynv év
4 Tnv "Pouny éxticav ot trept 'Pwyvrov avn 5é éoTt mpd Sexawas xaravdov Maloy. dices dé Tpos Tacav apetny ev KEexpapévos TO 4005, Ere bGAXov aurov éEnuépwoe did Traidelas Kal KaKomwabeias kal pirocodgias,? od povov Ta AoLdopov-" peva wdOn Tihs Wuyi, G\Ad wal THY evddone-povoay év tois BapBdpos Biav Kal mreoveFiay éxtrodw@y troinadpevos, avdpelay S¢ adnO7 THY bd NOyou trav émiusuav év avT@ xdbeipEw myov-pevos. éx 5 rovTov tracav olxobev dua tpudyy

Kat TroduTéeNeav é€eAavver, travtl 5é moditn Kal
Eév yphoOar trapéxwv éavtov dpeuTrrov Sixac-Thv kal avpBovrov, autos 8 éavt@ cyordlovtt xpwpevos ovdey pos HduTraeias Kal Tropiopous, adr\a Oeparreiay Oedv xat Oewpiav Bh Noryou duceds Te a'tav nal duvdpews, dvopa péya Kal 1 Tiduxwvos a correction of Nouzrwvlov by Sintenis? (critical notes), adopted by Bekker, and now confirmed by S. 2 nal pidogoplas omitted by Bekker, with C.

but was so universally celebrated for his virtues that, when he was nominated, the Sabines accepted him with even greater readiness than those who had chosen him. Accordingly, after making their decision known to the people, the leading senators of both parties were sent as ambassadors to Numa, begging him to come and assume the royal power. Numa belonged to a conspicuous city of the Sabines called Cures, from which the Romans, together with the incorporated Sabines, took the joint name of Quirites. He was a son of Pompon, an illustrious man, and was the youngest of four brothers. He was born, moreover, by some divine felicity, on the very day when Rome was founded by Romulus, that is, the twenty-first day of April! By natural temperament he was inclined to the practice of every virtue, and he had subdued himself still more by discipline, endurance of hardships, and the study of wisdom. He had thus put away from himself not only the infamous passions of the soul, but also that violence and rapacity which are in such high repute among Barbarians, believing that true bravery consis- ted in the subjugation of one's passions by reason. On this account he banished from his house all luxury and extravagance, and while citizen and stranger alike found in him a faultless judge and counsellor, he devoted his hours of privacy and leisure, not to enjoyments and money-making, but to the service of the gods, and the rational contemplation of their nature and power. In consequence he had a great

1 Cf, Romulus, xii. 1.

Sofav elyev, Bote cal Tdtiov rov év '"Popn

cupBactrevoavta 'Pwpiro, wads adT@ Ovyatpos ovons Tatias, romoacbar yapBpov éxeivov. ov pny érnpOn ye TO yao petoixicacbar pos Tov mevOepov, GAN avTov Teptémav TaTépa ynpatov évy LaBivos vréuevev, dua Kal ths Tarias éNopeyns THY TOD avdpos LdtwrevovTos Haovylav mpo Ths

év ‘Payn dca tov tratépa tins Kal Sofns. airy bev odv A€éyeTat TpiTw Kal Sexdtw pera Tov yapov éres TeAcEuTHOAL.
IV. ‘O 8€ Nopds éxXeitrwv ras ev doter d:a-TpiBas aypaunelv Ta TOAA Kal TrAavaCBAat povos
HOerev, év adocot Oewv nal rAetpwowy iepois Kal TOoTraLs epypuots tolovmevos tHy Siattav. dev
ovY HatoTa THY apxynv o epi THS Ocas EraPe Noyos, ws apa Nopas éxeivos ove adnpovia tivr
Wuys «al wravn tov peta avOpwmwy atronré-Noutre Blov, GAAA GEeuvoTépas yeryeupéevos optrAcas Kai yduov Oeiwv n€wwpévos, "Hyepla Saipovr cuvav épocn Kal cvvdiart@pevos, evdaipwv dvip kal ta Ocia Tmemvupévos yéyovev. OTL pev ovv TavTa Todos TOV Tavu TadaLtav pvOwY Eoxer, obs of Dpuyes te mept “Attew cal BiOvvol crept ‘Hpodetrou nal trepi “Evdupimvos "Apeddes ardor Te Tept GAAwY evdatwovay by Tw Kal Jeopirav yevéoOar Soxovvtwy taparaBorvtes nydtnoar, ovx Gdnrov éott. Kat tov Noyov Evet Tov Oeor, ov dirsmmov ovdé piropwy, adr(a PiravOpwrrov dvTa, Tots Stamhepovtws ayabois eOérXew ouveivas, kal un Svoxepaivery unde aripate avdpos ociov 316
62

NUMA

name and fame, so that Tatius, the royal colleague of Romulus at Rome, made him the husband of his only daughter, Tatia. He was not, however, so exalted by his marriage as to go to dwell with his royal father-in-law, but remained among the Sabines min- istering to his aged father. Tatia, too, preferred the quiet life which her husband led as a private citizen to the honour and fame which she had enjoyed at Rome because of her father. But she died, as we are told, in the thirteenth year after her marriage. IV. Then Numa, forsaking the ways of city folk, determined to live for the most part in country places, and to wander there alone, passing his days in groves of the gods, sacred meadows, and solitudes. This, more than anything else, gave rise to the story about his goddess. It was not, so the story ran, from any distress or aberration of spirit that he for- sook the ways of men, but he had tasted the joy of more august companionship and had been honoured with a celestial marriage ; the goddess Egeria loved him and bestowed herself upon him, and it was his communion with her that gave him a life of blessed- ness and a wisdom more than human. However, that this story resembles many of the very ancient tales which the Phrygians have received and cherished con- cerning Attis, the Bithynians concerning Herodotus, the Arcadians concerning Endymion, and other peoples concerning other mortals who were thought to have achieved a life of blessedness in the love of the gods, is quite evident. And there is some reason in supposing that Deity, who is not a lover of horses or birds, but a lover of men, should be willing to consort with men of superlative goodness, and should not dislike or disdain the company of a wise and holy

317

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

cat ow@dppovos omtrdiav. a Sé xal ceparos
> f ‘ og 3 7 a N 7
avOpwirivov cai @pas é€oti tis Oe@ nai Saipors Kowovia Kai yapis, épyov dn Kai tovto wero Orvat.
Kaitot Soxodaw ot« amiOdves Aiydrrcot Srat-peiy ws yuvatki pev ovx advvatoy mvevpa wW1-otdcat Oeod xai Twas évtexeiy apyas yevécens, avipt € ovK« éote cvppsEss mrpds Oeov ovde opsria ceopatos. ayvoovor Sé€ Ste TO payvipevoy @ piryvuTar THY tony avTatrodiéwot Kowwviay. ov nv adrAa didiav ye mpos avOpwrov civar Oe@
‘ ? 4 s 4 \ Ld
Kat Tov él TavTn Aeyopevoy Epwra Kai huopevov
eis émripéderay Oovs Kal apetis, wpérov av etn.
> ray e 4 , ' N
Kal ov mAnppEAOVCLY of Tov PdpBavta Kal Tov ‘TadnsOov xai rov “Adunrov épwpévous °Arrod-Awvos yeyovéva, pvOoroyovrTes, MaTrep av Kar Tov Xxuwvov ‘Iamodvtov, @ 89 nab hac, e 4 4 4 ? l4 wn”
oodnis Tuyot StaTTAéwy eis Kippay é« Lexvdvos, tThv TIvOtav, olov ataOavopévov tod Beod Kai Xaipovtos, amroGearrivey trode TO Np@ov
Kai 8 av@’ ‘Immodvrowo didov napa es ada Baiver.
IIwvdapov dé cai trav perov cpactiy yevécOar tov lava puOoroyovow. adamédwxe Sé tTiva Tiny \ 9 / € , , kat Apyrroy@ xal “Hodd@ trerevtycace 51a Tas Movoas 76 datpovmov. Yohoxret 5é nal Cavrs 318

NUMA

man. But that an immortal god should take carnal pleasure in a mortal body and its beauty, this, surely,
is hard to believe.
And yet the Aegyptians make a distinction here which is thought plausible, namely, that while a woman can be approached by a divine spirit and made pregnant, there is no such thing as carnal intercourse and communion between a man and a divinity. But they lose sight of the fact that in- tercourse is a reciprocal matter, and that both parties to it enter into a like communion. However, that a god should have affection for a man, and a so-called love which is based upon affection, and takes the form of solicitude for his character and _ his virtue, is fit and proper. And therefore it is no mistake when the ancient poets tell their tales of the love Apollo bore Phorbas, Hyacinthus, and Admetus, as well as the Sicyonian Hippolytus also, of whom it is said, that, as often as he set out to sail from Sicyon to Cirrha, the Pythian priestess, as though the god knew of his coming and rejoiced thereat, chanted this prophetic verse :—

“Lo, once more doth beloved Hippolytus hither make voyage.”

There is a legend, too, that Pan became enamoured of Pindar and his verses. And the divine powers bestowed signal honour on Archilochus and Hesiod after their deaths, for the sake of the Muses.! Again,

1 The Delphian oracle pronounced a curse on the man who killed Archilochus, because ‘‘ he had slain the servant of the Muses.” And the same oracle told the people of Orcho- menus, when a plague had fallen upon them, that ‘‘ the only remedy was to bring back the bones of Hesiod from the land of Naupactus to the land of Orchomenus.”

tov "AoxArntiov émiEevaOjvat ANoyos éotl 1roAXa
péxps Sedpo Stacwlwv Texunpta, Kal TeXMevTHOAYTL Tuxely Tapys adXros Geos, ws AéyeTaL, Tapéoyev.
dpa ovv adk&wv éott, tadta acuyyxwpovvras émt rovTwv, amare e Larevew cat Mive cat Zopoaotpn Kxat Nowa xal Avxotpym Bactreias xuBepvact Kal odttelas Staxocpobcw - eis TO avro époita Td Satpoviov, TovToLs pev EiKos eo Te Kat orovddlovtas Oeovs omsreiy eri didacKaria cal trapaivéces trav BeXTictwY, Trointais 5é Kat AupiKois puvupilovary, elmep apa, ypjoOa trai-
Covras; et 5é Aéyee Tis GAXWS, Kata BaxyvarLdyp, “Tnateta xédevOos.” ovdé yap a&tepos Noyos exer
Tt hairov, dv mepi Avxovpyou cal Nowa xai TOLOUTWY aAXwWY avdpav AéyovoLy, ws SUTKdbexTa kal dvodpecta TANHOn yetpovmevor Kal peydras émipepovres Tais ToAtTElLats KalwoTOMAS, Mpoce-mwomocavto tTHv amo tov Oeod Sokav, avtois éxei-vows Wpos ods eax npatiCovto owTHpLov ovaav.
V. "AAAA yap Eros Hn StatedXobvTs TO Nowa
TecoapakooTov AKov amo ‘Pauns ot mpéoBes TapaxadovvtTes eri THY Bactrelav. tovs dé doyous étrotnoato IIpoxXos Kai OvédXeoos, oY Irpo-Tepov etidokos Hv o Sipos aipnoecOat Tov Erepov Baotréa, IlpoxrAm péev trav ‘“PwpvrAgov rAawy, Overéow 5€ trav Tatiov padtora mpocexovTwv.

oro: pev otv Bpaxéa SueréxOnoav, olopevos TO 320

NUMA

there is a story, still well attested, that Sophocles, during his life, was blessed with the friendship of Aesculapius, and that when he died, another deity procured him fitting burial.) Is it worth while, then, if we concede these instances of divine favour, to dis- believe that Zaleucus, Minos, Zoroaster, Numa, and Lycurgus, who piloted kingdoms and formulated constitutions, had frequent audience of the Deity? Is it not likely, rather, that the gods are in earnest when they hold converse with such men as these, in order to instruct and advise them in the highest and best way, but use poets and warbling singers, if at all, for their own diversion? However, if any one is otherwise minded, I say with Bacchylides, “ Broad is the way.” 2 Indeed there is no absurdity in the other account which is given of Lycurgus and Numa and their like, namely, that since they were managing headstrong and captious multitudes, and introducing great innovations in modes of government, they pretended to get a sanction from the god, which sanction was the salvation of the very ones against whom it was contrived. |

V. But to resume the story, Numa was already completing his fortieth year when the embassy came from Rome inviting him to take the throne. The speakers were Proculus and Velesus, one or the other of whom the people was expected to choose as their king, Proculus being the favourite of the people of Romulus, and Velesus of the people of Tatius. These speakers, then, were brief, supposing

1 Dionysus is said to have appeared to Lysander and ordered him to allow Sophocles to be buried in the tomb of his fathers, on the road to Deceleia, then occupied by the - Lacedaemonian army. See Pausanias, i. 21, 1, with Frazer’s note. * Fragment 29 (Jebb, Bacchylides, p. 423).

321
VOL. I. 3 ¥
2

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

'

Nopad thy cuvtvyiay aotalopéevp yeyovévar hv
5 ov ptxpov, ws Gotxev, Epyov, GANA Kal AdyoV
ToNAoY Kal Sejoews TO Teicat Kal peTacTHoas

yveuny avdpos év jovxyia nat epnvn BeBuwxoros
els GPX TOAEwWS TPOTrOY TWA Kal yeyernpévns } Tokéum Kal ovvnuEnpévyns. Edeyev ody TOD TE jTatpos avTov tapovTos xal Mapxiov, tav ouyyevav évos, os “Ildca pév avOparrivou Blov pera-Bor} cdarepov: 6 6 pit’ dedi Te TOY ixavev
NTE pe“TTOY éoTL TMV TrapovTwY, TOUTOY OvdEeY GXXO WAnVY dvota petaxocper Kal peOiotnow
éx tav avynOwv: ols Kav eb pundev Erepov mpocein, T@ BeBatorép@ Stadéper trav adyjrwv. arr ovde adnra Ta THS Bacirelas Tois “Pwytrouv Texpat-popévw trabjpacuy, ws Tovnpay pey autos éXaBe SoEav émuBouvredoat TH cuvapyovtTs Tati, Tovnpav dé Tols opmoripors mepteTroincey ws avnpnpévos um avtav. xaitot “Paptrov pev odtor maida Oedv vpvovor dyuats, Kal tpodyv Twa Satpoviov avtov Kal owtnpiav amiocToyv Ett vyqiov Néyovatv’ émol 5é cal yévos Ovnrov éote cat tTpop7 Kal tmaidevoits vm’ avOpaTav dv ovK aryvoeite yeyernuévyn: ta & érrawovpeva Tod TpOd-tou Bacthevew Toppw pédrovTos avdpds, Havxia
TE TONAT Kal StaTpLBy EPL AOYOUS aITpayp_ovas,
6 te Seuvos ovTos Kal ovvtpodos eipnyns Epws
Kal mpaynatwv ato\éuwov Kal avOpanev ém Tin Oewv Kai pirodpocvvats eis TO avTO GuP-tovTwy, Ta b€ adrAa Kal éavTodrs yewpyouvTaV 4 1 yeyevnuévns Bekker has -yeyerynuévns (born), after Corada, 322
63

NUMA

that Numa would welcome his good fortune. It was, however, no slight task, but one requiring much argument and entreaty, to persuade and induce a.

man who had lived in peace and quiet, to accept the government of a city which owed its existence and growth, in a fashion, to war. His reply, therefore, in the presence of his father and one of his kinsmen named Marcius, was as follows. ‘ Every change in a man’s life is perilous; but when a man knows no lack, and has no fault to find with his present lot, nothing short of madness can change his purposes and remove him from his wonted course of life, which, even though it have no other advantage, is at least fixed and secure, and therefore better than one which is all uncertain. But the lot of one who becomes your king cannot even be called uncertain, judging from the experience of Romulus, since he himself was accused of basely plotting against his colleague Tatius, and involved the patricians in the charge of having basely put their king out of the way. And yet those who bring these accusations laud Romulus as a child of the gods, and tell how he was preserved in an incredible way and fed in a miraculous manner when he was still an infant. But I am of mortal birth, and I was nourished and trained by men whom you know. Moreover, the very traits in my disposition which are commended, are far from mark- ing a man destined to be a king, namely, my great love of retirement, my devotion to studies ineonsistent with the usual activities of men, and my well-known strong and inveterate love of peace, of unwarlike occupations, and of men who come together only for the worship of the gods and for friendly inter- course, but who otherwise live by themselves as

5 vewovtwv. vupiv dé, w Pwpaior, wodXods péev tows aBourntous aonéAoutre TroAguOUS "Pwpiros, ols
>) *y e 4 J , } aA ,
avTepeioovTos 7 TodLs éutretpov Seitar Bacidéas
\ ' , ' \ , \
Kat axpalovtos: wodAn Sé nal cuvnbea kal
0 , PS > > , , a 5 , \ yO€ mpoOupia Ss' evtuxiay yéyove TO SHue, Kal ovdéva rnéeANOev abEecOat nat xpateiv étépwv BouvrAdpevos,
4 \ , A " b , , ,
@aTe Kal yédXws av ein Tapa, Oepatrevovtos eos,
\ la " , \ \ , >] 4
kar dixnv tipav, Biav bé€ nal Torenov éyOaipew
S:6doKovtTos TOMY oOTpaTnAaTOV padrov H Bact-Aéws Seouévyv."
VI. Totodrots Adyous adhootovpévou thy Bact-Nelav TOD avdpos, of Te 'Pwpaios Tacay érrotobyto
\ 5 n \ , ' a amovony avttBorovvtTes Kal Seopevor pn odas
A /
avOus eis oTdoww éuBanrely Kai Todepov éuhvrcov,
, 4
ovK OvTos éTépou Trpos by auoTEepat curyvEdcovGLY ai otdoes, 6 Te TaTHp Kal 60 Mdpxios éxetywv petaotavtwy idia mpocketpevor Tov Nopuay &res-2 Oov déyeoOar péya wai Octov Swpov. "Ei 5é avtos

" 4 VA 9 > 4 v , ? ote TOVTOU én St avTdpKecay ote So-ay ap-ys nal Svvacteias éfjAwKas Kpetooova THY am 9 le) 4 9 > e , n Q
dpeths Exwv, GAN UTrnpeciay ye Geod To Bact-
/ e / " > 7 \ > 2a

Neveu Hyoupevos, Os ye aviarnos Kal ode eG n > wn“
ketcOar Kal apyeiy thy év col tooavrny Stxaco-4 \ Le) \ > , \ > lé auvnv, bn pheirye pnde arrodidpacKke thy apyny,
b \ 4 4 “A , ®e
avdpi dpovipm mpaktewv Kadov cal peydr\ov ov-aav ywpav, év 7 Kal Oeparreias Oew@v peyador pe-jets elot Kat Tpos evoéBaay avOpwrarv npuepo-gels pdota Kal TayloTa peTAaKoopoUpPEVWY WITd

tillers of the soil or herdsmen. Whereas, unto you, O Romans, whether you want them or not, Romulus has bequeathed many wars, and to make head against these the city needs a king with a warrior’s experience and strength. Besides, the people has become much accustomed to war, and eager for it because of their successes, and no one is blind to their desire for growth by conquest. I should therefore become a laughing-stock if I sought to serve the gods, and taught men to honour justice and hate violence and war, in a city which desires a leader of its armies rather than a. king.”

VI. With such words did Numa decline the kingdom. Then the Romans put forth every effort to meet his objections, and begged him not to plunge them again into faction and civil war, since there was none other on whom both parties could unite. His father also and Marcius, when the envoys had withdrawn, beset him privately, and tried to persuade him to accept so great a gift or the gods. “Even though,” they said, ‘‘ thou neither desirest wealth for thyself, because thou hast enough, nor covetest the fame which comes from authority and power, because thou hast the greater fame which comes from virtue, yet consider that the work of a true king is a service rendered to God, who now rouses up and refuses to leave dormant and inactive the great righteousness which is within thee. Do not, therefore, avoid nor flee from this office, which a wise man will regard as a field for great and noble actions, where the gods are honoured with magnificent worship, and the hearts of men are easily and quickly softened and inclined towards piety, through the moulding influence of their ruler. This people

a A 2 4 ” v
3 Tod KpaTouvTos. ovTot Kal Tdttoy éatepEav érn-
, 4
Avy wyeudva, Kal THY “Papdrov prnunv artro-

Ocodat tals Tiats. tis dé oldev eb Kal vix@vTe Sime tmoAéguou Kopos éotl, kal pweotot OprapBwv
, A /
kab Aapipwv yeyovores tryeuova mpdov Kal dicns étaipov ér’ ebvopia xa eipyvy moBotow; e dé d7
a \ “A
Kal TavrTdTacw axpaTas Eyovot Kal paviKas
\ / 2? >. oN A ? , N
Mpos ToAepwov, ap ovxit BeATLov adrAaXooE THY Opunv avTav tpémewv, Sia yerpos ExovTa Tas
e 7 a \ , \ a / ”
hvias, TH Se watpidc Kal TavTl TS LaBivwv Ever
, ey ae \ / \ os ? ,
avVvoed Lov evvolas Kal didias pos TOAW aKpa-Covcav nai duvarny yevérbar;” TovTos mpoany, as Aéyerat, onueid Te ypnoTa Kat orovdy TeV
a“ a € ? U \ A TodTov Kal CHros, ws ervOovTo THY mpeaBelar, Seoudvor Badifew kat mapadapBavev thy Baot-Nelav eri Kowwvia Kal cvyKpace TOV TOALTOV."
4 a“ a
VII. ‘Qs otv éé80xr0, Gvaas tois Jeots mpo-
a ’ \ ‘Pp , 6 , de e \ \ ©
Aryev eis THY ‘Pounv. amnvra dé n BovdAn Kai o Siuos gpwtt Oavpact@ Tov avdpos, evpyptat Te mpérovcat yuvaikav éyivovto Kat Ovatar apos iepois kal yapa tdavrwv, domep ob Bactréa Tis Toews, AMAA Bactreiav Sexopévyns. errel Se ets
e “
THY ayopay KaTéaTHAAY, O pev Tais Opars éxeivass
\ \ , >/ ~
cuvetrdnyos pecoBactrevs Xroptos Overtios Yijgov éédwxe Tols Toditais Kal TavTes HvEeyKay, mpoohepopévwv 8 avt@ tov Baothtsxwv Trapa-onpov émiryev Kxerevoas épy SeiaOar Kai Beov \ , 3 os bd a : N
thy Bactrelay éuredovvtos avT@. taparaBov

1 yoArray MSS. and edd., including Sintenis}. Bekker corrects to xéAewy (cities), and is followed by Sintenis ?.

loved Tatius, though he was a foreign prince, and they pay divine honours to the memory of Romulus. And who knows but that the people, even though victorious, is sated with war, and, now that it is glutted with triumphs and spoils, is desirous of a gentle prince, who is a friend of justice, and will lead them in the paths of order and peace? But if, indeed, they are altogether intemperate and mad in their desire for war, then were it not better that thou, holding the reins of government in thy hand, shouldst turn their eager course another way, and that thy native city and the whole Sabine nation should have in thee a bond of goodwill and friendship with a vigorous and powerful city?" These appeals were strengthened, we are told, by auspicious omens and by the zealous ardour of his fellow-citizens, who, when they learned of the embassy from Rome, begged him to return with it and assume the royal power there, in order to unite and blend together the citizens.

VII. Numa therefore decided to yield, and after sacrificing to the gods, set out for Rome. The senate and people met him on his way, filled with a wondrous love of the man ; women welcomed him with fitting cries of joy; sacrifices were offered in the temples, and joy was universal, as if the city were receiving, not a king, but a kingdom. When they were come down into the forum, Spurius Vettius, whose lot it was to be "interrex''! at that hour, called for a vote of the citizens, and all voted for Numa. But when the insignia of royalty were brought to him, he bade the people pause, and said his authority must first be ratified by Heaven. Then

1 Cf, chapter ii. 7.

dé pavrets Kal iepeis avéBawev eis.7to Karretodov' Tapryiov avto Aogov ot Tote 'Pwpaior mpoonyopevov. évtadda TaV pdyTewv Oo TpwTevwY TOV peVv els weanpBpiay Tpérpas eyKxexaduppévov, autos dé Tapactas éEoricbev Kal rH Seka THs Keharys épamropevos avTov xaTev—aTo, Kal TepleckoTe. TA Tapa TaV Oeav ev oiwvois 7 oupBoros mpopavopeva, Tavtayooe Tas dypess Twepipépwv. ayn Se amiotos év TANCE ToTOUT@ THY ayopay KaTelye KapadoxovyTwv Kal cuvaiwpoupévoy TO péAXovTL, péypt ov mpovipdvnoav dpviles ayabot Kal Se€ol érrétperay.' obtw Se

THv Baciiuxny avartaBov écOfra KatéBawe
Nopuds eis TO TAHOOS amo THs axpas. Tote Sé kat doval Kai SeEtwoers Hoav ws evocBéotatov cal Oeopiréotatoyv Seyopuévav.
TlaparaBov S& thy apynv mp@tov peyv TO TOY Tpiakootwy ovoTN LA. duéAucen, ods ‘Popdros
éXwv del mept TO copa Kédepas mpoanyopevaer, Strep éott Taxeis: obTE yap aTrLOTELY TLoTEVOVOLY ovte Bacirever amiotovvtwv n€bov. Sevrepov dé Tois ovow iepedot Atos nal “Apews tpitoy ‘PwuvAov mpooxatéotnoev, dv Prduwa KupryaXLov wvopacev. éxddovy dé Kal TOUS Tpoyeve-atépovs PrAdpiwas aro TOV TrEpiKpaviwy TirwVy
ods epi Tais Keharais dopovar, mirapévas Twas 6YTas, @S taTopoval, TOY ‘EAANVEKaV ovo-HATwV TOTE MAAAOY 7) viv Tois AaTivots dvaKeKpa-pévwv. Kal yap as épdpovy ot tepeis Naivas o 1 «al deftol erérpepay with S: «al detcol nal exer, evar.

taking with him the augurs and priests, he ascended the Capitol, which the Romans of that time called the Tarpeian Hill. There the chief of the augurs turned the veiled head of Numa towards the south, while he himself, standing behind him, and laying the right hand on his head, prayed aloud, and turned his eyes in all directions to observe whatever birds or other omens might be sent from the gods. Then an incredible silence fell upon the vast multitude in the forum, who watched in eager suspense for the issue, until at last auspicious birds appeared and approached the scene on the right. Then Numa put on his royal robes and went down from the citadel to the multitude, where he was received with glad cries of welcome as the most pious of men and most beloved of the gods.

His first measure on assuming the government was to disband the body of three hundred men that Romulus always kept about his person, and called “Celeres”’ (that is, swift ones); for he would not consent to distrust those who trusted him, nor to reign over those who distrusted him. His second measure was to add to the two priests of Jupiter and Mars a third priest of Romulus, whom he called _ the Flamen Quirinalis. Now before this time the Romans called their priests “flamines,’ from the close-fitting “ piloi,”’ or caps, which they wear upon their heads, and which have the longer name of “ pilamenai,” as we are told, there being more Greek words mingled with the Latin at that time than now.’ Thus also the name “laena,’ which the Romans

1 Cf. Romulus, xxvi. 2.
2 Cf. Romulus, xv. 3. Plutarch does not. hesitate to derive the Latin ‘ flainines” from the doubtful Greek ‘ pilamenai.”
329

NU)

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, a“
"loBas xXAaivas dyolp elvat, cal Tov brnperotvta T@ leper tod Atos audiOary maida réyecOar Kaprr0ov, os cal tov “Epuny otras eveot tev “EAAjvav Kdyirrov! did ths Staxovias ipoon-ryopevop.
VIII. Taira 5é 6 Nopas én’ edvoia cal yapite tov Snwou tTodTevodpevos evOds erreyeipes THY Wow, WaoTep aldnpov, ex oKANpasS Kal Tode-pukns padaxwtépav trojoa, Kat StKxarotépav. atexvas yap iv WAdtwv droxarei preypai-vovoay TOMY éxelvyn TOT Fv, avcTaca pev EvOUS eE apxiis TOAMD Toph kat Tapapore Opacurnts Tov Opacutdtor Kal PAX woTaTov éxel Tavta-XoGev woapévov, tais Sé rodndais oTparelass Kat TOUS Tuvex ere Toréuos TeopH NXpnoapévn Kal avénoe THS Suvdpews, cal xabarep Ta KaTarn-yvupeva TH celecOar padov édpaterar, pov-vua Gat Soxovea Sia TOV KwvOovov. ottw 57 peTéwpov Kal TeTpaxypevov S7jwov ob puxpas ode pavrns oldpevos elvat Tparypareas peTaxerpl-cacbar Kal peTaxooufoat TOs elpnuny, emnya-yeTo THY amo Tav Oeav Bondeav, TQ ev TONG Ouoiacs kat Toprrais ar Xopetats, &s avros apyiare Kat KATETTNTEV, dpa ocepvotnts bia-yoyny érixapiy Kal prravOpwmov noovny éxou-cass, Snparyoryav Kat Tacevav TO Bupoetdes Kai pthomrorepov" gore 8 Ste nat poBous TWAS aTra'y-yehdov Tapa tov Oeod nal pacpata Satpovery GAXoKoTa Kal dwvas ovK evpeveis, eSovrAOV Kat
, KdpiAAov deleted by Bekker; corrected to KabdpiAoy by Sintenis 2, 339°

~

give to the priestly mantle, Juba says is the same as the Greek “chlaina”’ ; and that the name Camillus, . which the Romans give to the boy with both parents living who attends upon the priest of Jupiter, is the same as that which some of the Greeks give to Hermes, from his office of attendant.

VIII. After taking such measures to secure the goodwill and favour of the people, Numa straight- way attempted to soften the city, as iron is softened in the fire, and change its harsh and warlike temper into one of greater gentleness and justice. For if a city was ever in what Plato calls! a “feverish”’ state, Rome certainly was at that time. It was brought into being at the very outset by the excessive daring and reckless courage of the boldest and most warlike spirits, who forced their way thither from all parts, and in its many expeditions and its continuous wars it found nourishment and increase of its power; and just as what. is planted in the earth gets a firmer seat the more it is shaken, so Rome seemed to be made strong by its very perils. And therefore Numa, judging it to be no slight or trivial undertaking to mollify and newly fashion for peace so presumptuous and stubborn a people, called in the gods to aid and assist him. It was for the most part by sacrifices, processions, and religious dances, which he himself appointed and conducted, and which mingled with their solemnity a diversion full of charm and a beneficent pleasure, that he won the people’s favour and tamed their fierce and warlike tempers. At times, also, by heralding to them vague terrors from the god, strange apparitions of divine beings and threatening voices, he would subdue and humble

1 Cf. Lycurgus, v. 6.

A > \ lA b) fe) e N TaTrEeHy Errove, THY Otavotay avTav vireo Serorbat-f > ? \ 4 , v @e povias. €& wv nal partota RAoyov Eoxev 7
copia nal 7 traidevots Tov avdpos, as IvOayopa
4 7 / A —P . e 2 , Y pe
TUYYEYOVOTOS. péya yap Rv pépos, ws ExEiv@ TAS girocodias, cal ToUT@ THs woNtTElas 1 Trept TO Oetov aytoteta! wai deatpiB)). Réyerar Se Kal tov éEwOev dyxov Kai oxnpatiopoy amo TIS auvtns Ilv@ayopa Stavotas meptBaréobar. Kat yap éxeivos detov Te Soxet pabvat, dwvais Tiow EMLOTHOAS KAL KaTAYaYyoV UVITEepLITTamEVOV, TOV TE
pnpov bTodjvar ypucobv ‘Odvprriace Statropevo-fevos THY Tavyyuplyy GAXas Te TEpaTw@bers pN-
\ 2 a“ \ / 3 / 2)?
xavas avtov Kal mpdteas avayyédXovaw, ed’ als

\ / e , ”
kat Tipwv o PrALdotos Eypare: Iluéayopnv Sé yontras aroxdivovt’ émi d0€as Onpn én’ avOpwrwr, ceuvnyopins daptaTny:
t@ Se Nowa Spapa Oeds Tivos 4} vipdys dpeias Epws Rv Kal cuvovoia mpos avTov atroppnros, @oTrep elpntat, nal Kowal peta Movodv s&a-TptBai. Ta yap WAéioTa TOV pavTevpdtwD eis Movcas avijyye, coi play Motoav idtas cal
Stadepovtws édidake céBeobat tots “Pwpaious, Taxitay mpocayopevoas, oloy crwmnrAny 7 évear’ Strep elvat Soxet Thv IvOayoperov aropvnpovev-ovtos éxepvOiav cal Tima@vTos.

” \ \ \ \ “ b) 4-

Eort 6€ xal ta rept Trav adidpupatrov vopo-Oetnpata travraracw aderoa tav IIv@aydpou
1 Gyiorela Bryan’s correction, after Amyot, adopted by Coraés and Bekker: ayxtorela (relationship). - their minds by means of superstitious fears. This was the chief reason why Numa’s wisdom and culture were said to have been due to his intimacy with Pythagoras ; for in the philosophy of the one, and in the civil polity of the other, religious services and occupations have a large place. It is said also that the solemnity of his outward demeanour was adopted by him because he shared the feelings of Pythagoras about it. That philosopher, indeed, is thought to have tamed an eagle, which he stopped by certain cries of his, and brought down from his lofty flight ; also to have disclosed his golden thigh as he passed through the assembled throngs at Olympia. And we have reports of other devices and performances of his which savoured of the marvellous, regarding which Timon the Phliasian wrote :—

« Down to a juggler’s level he sinks with his cheating devices, Laying his nets for men, Pythagoras, lover of bombast.”

In like manner Numa’s fiction was the love which a certain goddess or mountain nymph bore him, and her secret meetings with him, as already mentioned,! and his familiar converse with the Muses. For he ascribed the greater part of his oracular teachings to the Muses, and he taught the Romans to pay especial honours to one Muse in particular, whom he called Tacita, that is, the silent, or speechless one ; thereby perhaps handing on and honouring the Pythagorean precept of silence.

Furthermore, his ordinances concerning images are altogether in harmony with the doctrines of Chapter iv. 1-2.
333
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Soyparov. ouTe yap € jleuaee aio Onrov 7 a aranrov, dopartov | dé nal axtictov! cat vonrov vieddp-Bavev elvat To mpa@tov, ovTds Te SexmAvOEV avOpwrroedh Kai Swopophov eixova Oeod 'Pwpai-ous vopiterv. ovd Hv wap avTots ovte ypamrov 8 ovTe mAaoTOV eldos Oeod mpoTepov, GAXr ev éxatov éBdounKovta Tols mpwros ereot vaous fev oixodopovpevoe Kal Kadidbdas iepas iotavtes, dyarpa 5é ovdéy Eupopdpov trocovpevor dierédovp, @> oUTE Savoy apopolody TA BeNTiova TOIS YEelpootY ovTE epamrer Gar Geov Suvatov addws a vonoes. Kopdh bé xal Ta, tev Ovaray EXT AL THS v0a-yopurtis aytateias: GvaipaKToL yap hoav ai ye moAnat, be ardirou Kal orovens Kat TOV EvTE-NETTATwWY TreETrOLNMEVaL.
9 Xwpis 5é rovtwr étépors EEwOev erraywvilovrat Texpnplous ot Tov dvdpa T® avdpl cuvorKerouvres. av év pév éotw tt Mv Garyopav 'Popatoc ™) troMteig Tpoo éyparpay, @S loTopnKev 'Eniyappos o KO MLKOS éy TLL hoy 7 pos "Avtnvopa yeypap-péve@, Tadacos avnp Kal TIS vOayopuxijs bta-TpLBAS peTeayNKwS* eTepov 5é OTe Tea oadpav vid Bactrhet Nowa yevouévov éva Mayepxov emt 72
10 IlvOaryopov rash T poo nyopevaen. an éxeivou dé «at tov Aipirdiwy olor avapeyBévra Trois TAT ptxiols ovopac Ofvat pacvy, OVTOS UmoKkopilo-pévou Tob Bacthews THY év Tots: hoyous Tod avdpos aipudav Kat yapw. auto d aKnkoapev TONN@V év 'Papun dteEcovtwy Ste ypnopod rote 'Pwpaios
1 &xrioroy Sintenis! with AC, followed by Bekker: axhparov (unmixed).
334

NUMA

Pythagoras. For that philosopher maintained that the first principle of being was beyond sense or feeling, was invisible and uncreated, and discernible only by the mind. And in like manner Numa forbade the Romans to revere an image of God which had the form of man or beast. Nor was there among them in this earlier time any painted or graven likeness of Deity, but while for the first hundred and seventy years they were continually building temples and establishing sacred shrines, they made no statues in bodily form for them, convinced that it was impious to liken higher things to lower, and that it was impossible to apprehend Deity except by the intellect. Their sacrifices, too, were altogether appropriate to the Pythagorean worship ; for most of them involved no bloodshed, but were made with flour, drink-offerings, and the least costly gifts.

And apart from these things, other external proofs are urged to show that the two men were acquainted with each other. One of these is that Pythagoras was enrolled as a citizen of Rome. This fact is recorded by Epicharmus the comic poet, in a certain treatise which he dedicated to Antenor ; and Epichar- mus was an ancient, and belonged to the school of Pythagoras. Another proof is that one of the four sons born to king Numa was named Mamercus, after the son of Pythagoras. And from him they say that the patrician family of the Aemilii took its name, Aemilius being the endearing name which the king gave him for the grace and ninsomeness of his speech. Moreover, I myself have heard many people at Rome recount how, when an oracle once commanded the

4
yevouévou Tov Ppovimwtatoyv Kal Tov avdpELoTaToV
¢ , 'S , oy ea v 24
EXAnvev idpvoacbat wap' avtois, Eotnoay eri
A b] A >) / a" v4 LY A > THS ayopas exovas yadrxas dvo, Thy pev Ar«e-, A , nr N 9
Biddov, tay bé IlvOayopov. tavtra pév ov
9 / M" \ \ \ A 5 \ audisBntnoes exovtTa TroNNas Kal TO KivEelY 01a paxpotépwy Kai To TictovcBar! petpaxtwdous éotl diroverkias.
A \ \ \ "A > 4 A f
IX. Nopd dé Kal Thy Ta apxtepewy, obs Ifovtigixas Kandodot, diatakw Kal catadotacw atrod60-acl, Kal pact avTov Eva TOUTwWY TOY TPATOV yeyo-

, aA \ \ / € \ 4
véevat. KexdAHobat dé tovs Ilovtigiwas of pev Ott
Tovs Jeous Oeparrevovar Suvatovs Kal Kupious atray-Twy dvTas' o yap duvatos b7r6 'Pwpaiwy ovopaterat mwoTnys: Etepor 5€ hace wpos vrreEaipeoty ryeryo-vévat Tovvopa Tay SuvaTav, @s Tod vopobéTou Tas Suvatas émitedely tepoupyias Tous iepels KEedev-
"A \ ? ty a b]
ovtos, av b€ 4 TL KwAUUA pelCov, ov sUKOpar-
"A e \ a , ' ,
ToUVTOS. ot S€ TAELOTOL UadLOTA Kad TO yeA@pLEVvOY
le) bd , 4 € 2d) 3 > "A TGV ovopaTov Soxipatovow, @S ovoEey ann 4
'yehupotratovs Tovs avdpas emicdnbevtas a amo TOV
TOLoUpEvoy Teph THY yéhupay iepar, ayaTatov
4
Kal TadaotTatwv SyTwy: TovTEew yap ot Aarivos THY yepupay dvopdfova ty. elvas perros Kab THY THpHoW avrijs Kal THY emiaKkeuny, @oTEp ado Tt TOV AKU} TOV Kal maT pov Lepov, Tporjcovaay
Tots tepedow. ov yap Deperor, GAN éwdpatov Hryeta Bar 'Pwpaious THY KaTadvow Tis Evrivns
yepupas. Néyerar b€ Kai TO Tapmav dvev otdypov 1 microvcGat a correction of Reiske's, accepted by Coraés and Bekker: morevea@at (believe).
336

66

NUMA

Romans to erect in their city monuments to the wisest and the bravest of the Greeks, they set up in the forum two statues in bronze, one of Alcibiades, and one of Pythagoras. However, since the matter of Numa's acquaintance with Pythagoras is involved in much dispute, to discuss it at greater length, and to win belief for it, would savour of youthful contentiousness.

IX. To Numa is also ascribed the institution of that order of high priests who are called Pontifices, and he himself is said to have been the first of them. According to some they are called Pontifices because employed in the service of the gods, who are powerful and supreme over all the world; and "'potens " is the Roman word for powerful. Others say that the namie was meant to distinguish between possible and impossible functions ; the lawgiver en- joining upon these priests the performance of such sacred offices only as were possible, and finding no fault with them if any serious obstacle prevented. But most writers give an absurd explanation of the name ; Pontifices means, they say, nothing more nor less than bridge-builders, from the sacrifices which they performed at the bridge over the Tiber, sacrifices of the greatest antiquity and the most sacred character ; for " pons" is the Latin word for bridge. They say, moreover, that the custody and maintenance of the bridge, like all the other inviolable and ancestral rites, attached to the priesthood, for the Romans held the demolition of the wooden bridge to be not only unlawful, but actually sacrilegious. It is also said

1 According to the elder Pliny (N.H. xxxiv. 12), these statues stood in the comitium at Rome from the time of the Samnite wars (343-290 B.c.). down to that of Sulla (138-78 B.c.).

Kata Sn TL AOYyLov cuyyeyoupacbar Sia TeV EvAwv. 17 Sé ALOivn TroAXOIs DoTEpoy éFeLpyacOn xpovots vm Aiptdiou TapsevovTos. ov pv aGdAAa Kal thy Evrivny trav Nowa ypovwy atrodeitres Oat Aéyouo.v, vO Mapkiov trod Nopa Ouyarpidod Bactrevovtos atrorencoOetcar.
'O 8€ péytotos Tay Hovtipixwy olov éEnynrod Kab mpoqnroy, pardov 5é iepopdvtov raEw etrdn- yev, od povoy) tay Snpocia Spapévov emripedov- pevos, AANA Kal Tovs idia OvovTas émioKoTray Kat K@AUwY TrapexBaivey TA vevouiopéva, Kal b1da- axwyv Stov Tes SéoiTo mpos Oewy Tiny 7 Tapat- tho. ny 6 Kal TOY Lep@y TrapOévwr erricKoTros, as "Eotidéas mpocayopevovor. Nowd yap 67 «al Thv tav "Eotiadov mrapbevev Kabiépwow Kal dws THY TEpl TO TP TO aOdvaroy, 7) purdrrovew abrat, Oeparreiav Te Kal TOMY arobiboacw, elTe as kabapay Kat ap0aprov THhVv TOU TUPOS | ovata dxnpatous Kal apudvrous mapaTieuévov Topacw, elTe TO GkapTrov Kat dryovov Th mapGevia oup- OLKELODVTOS. é7reL TOL THS "EAA dS os Sarov wip ao BeoTov eoTlD, @s vuoi Kal 'AOhnow, ov mapbévor, yuvaires dé TET AV MEVaL ydpov éxovar 3 THY émrypéhevay™ éav oé vo TUXNS Tivos éxALtn, Kadamep "AOnyvnot pev emt Tis 'Apts tives Aeyerau Tupavvidos amooBecOjvat tov iepov AUYVOV, €V Acrdois dé Tob yaov karan pnodéevros v7ro M7jéor, Tept dé Ta McOpidartixa kal TOV

éupvrdcov “Pwyaiwy modepov dua TO Bopp ro
1 ywdvov with most MSS. (including S) and edd. : pdveov.
338
NUMA

that it was built entirely without iron and fastened together with wooden pins in obedience to an oracle. The stone bridge was constructed at a much later period, when Aemilius was quaestor.!_ However, it is said that the wooden bridge also was later than the time of Numa, and was completed by Ancus Marcius, the grandson of Numa by his daughter, when he was king.

The chief of the Pontifices, the Pontifex Maximus, had the duty of expounding and interpreting the divine will, or rather of directing sacred rites, not only being in charge of public ceremonies, but also watching over private sacrifices and preventing any departure from established custom, as well as teaching whatever was requisite for the worship or propitiation of the gods. He was also overseer of the holy virgins called Vestals; for to Numa is ascribed the consecra- tion of the Vestal virgins, and in general the worship and care of the perpetual fire entrusted to their charge. It was either because he thought the nature of fire pure and uncorrupted, and therefore entrusted it to chaste and undefiled persons, or because he thought of it as unfruitful and barren, and therefore associated it with virginity. Since wherever in Greece a perpetual fire is kept, as at Delphi and Athens, it is committed to the charge, not of virgins, but of widows past the age of marriage. And if by any chance it goes out, as at Athens during the tyranny of Aristion? the sacred lamp is said to have been extinguished, and at Delphi when the temple was burned by the Medes, and as during the Mithridatic and the Roman civil wars the altar was demolished

1 179 B.C.
2 88-86 B.c. Cf. Lucullus, xix. 6; Sulla, xiii. 3.
339
z2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

nA 3 , Ww 5 A 9 \ e. , A mip npavicbn, ov dact deliv amro ETépov TupOS évaverOar, xavvov §€ troveity Kal véov, cvamrrovTas > \ a ey / 4 \ \ > / amo Tov nAiov droya KaBapav Kai apiavrov.
2 / 4 a ,
éEdmrovat 5é padtota tos oxadeios, & KaTa-/ > \ A > A b] oxevdleTas ev ATO AEUpas toooKedods GpOoyw-vlov Tpiyevou KotAaLvoueva, cuvvever 8° eis ev ex Ths Twepipepetas Kévtpov. Stav ovv Oéow evavriay rdByn mpds Tov HALOV, OoTe Tas avyds TavTa-
4 b 4 > , \ 4

xo0ev avaxorrropévas abpoilecOar Kai cuprré-KkecOat Tepi TO Kévtpov, avTov Te Staxpiver Tov 9 / , \ , /
dépa AeTTTUVOLEVOY, Kal TA Kovdorata Kal Enpo-Tata Tov mpooTiBenévwv o€éws avantes xata Thv avtTéperctv, copa Kal mAnyHY Wupwdn Tijs avyis NaBovons. Evor pev ovv ovdev bro TeV [o) > A tepav trap0évwy adr f TO aoBeotov éxeivo ppoupeicOar rip vouifovow: enor Se eival twa acw abéata Tois AdAaLS (epa KpUTrTopeva, Tept av boa Kal mv@écOar cal ppacas Oemsrov ev Te Kapirrou Bio yéypar ras.
X. Lp@rov pév ov tira Nowa xadsepwOjnvar
Aéyouot Teyaviay nal Bepnviav, Sevtepov Se Kavovaniay cal Taprntav: totepov dé YepBiov duo mpocbévtos adXas TH aplOu@ Sratnpeio Oar!
péxpt TOY XpovwY TOUTwY TO TAOS. wpicOn Se
tais iepais trapOévors bard tov Bactdéws aryvela TplaKxovTaétis, ev 7 THY yey TrpwTyy Sexaetiav a xpy Spay pavOavover, tiv 8&8 péony & pepadjnact Spaou, tThv dé tpitnv érépas avtal ddacKovew.
elra dveita: tH BovrAopévn peta Tov ypovoy Tod-1 B:arnpeio Oa the correction of Coraés, adopted by Bekker :
d:arnpjoa.
340

NUMA

and the fire extinguished, then they say it must not be kindled again from other fire, but made fresh and new, by lighting a pure and unpolluted flame from the rays of the sun. And this they usually effect by means of metallic mirrors, the concavity of. which is made to follow the sides of an isosceles rectangular triangle, and which converge from their circum- ference to a single point in the centre. When, there- fore, these are placed opposite the sun, so that its rays, as they fall upon them from all sides, are collected and concentrated at the centre, the air itself is rarefied there, and very light and dry substances placed there quickly blaze up from its resistance, the sun’s rays now acquiring the substance and force of fire. Some, moreover, are of the opinion that nothing but this perpetual fire is guarded by the sacred virgins; while some say that certain sacred objects, which none others may behold, are kept in concealment by them. What may lawfully be learned and told about these things, I have written in my Life of Camillus.!

X. In the beginning, then, they say that Gegania and Verenia were consecrated to this office by Numa, who subsequently added to them Canuleia and Tarpeia; that at a later time two others were added by Servius, making the number which has continued to the present time. It was ordained by the king that the sacred virgins should vow them- selves to chastity for thirty years; during the first decade they are to learn their duties, during the second to perform the duties they have learned, and during the third to teach others these duties. Then, the thirty years being now passed, any one who

1 Chapter xx. 3-6.
341
i]

co

oO

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tov Hon Kal yauou petartauBavew Kal mpos ére-pov tparrécOar Biov, aradndayelon Ths lepoupyias.
Aéyovra Se od ToAral TavTHY dotracacOar THV
dderay, ovde adorracapévats ypnota mpaypata guvTuxely, GdAa peTavoig Kal KaTnheia cvvodaat Tov Aowtrov Biov éuBareiv tas adras ets Sercordac-poviay, woTe méxpt ynpws Kal Oavdrou datereiy éyxaptepovoas Kal mapVevevopévas.
Tiuas S¢ peydras arédmxev avtais, ov éote
nad 70 dtabécOar Savtos éFeivar watpds Kal Tad-Na Mpatrew avev wpootdtov Siayovcas, WoTeEp ai tpimaives. paBdovyobvra: 8é rpoiotcar Kav aryopuéve tiv mpos Oavarov abroudtas ovyTiyw-ow, ove avaipeitar. Sei Se drropoca: tHv Trap-Oévov axovcovov Kal tuyalay nab ox éberirndes yeyovévat THY amrdvrnow. o dé tredOwv Koutto-pévov bro 7d hopetov amobvncKke. Koddacts 8e TOY pev GAXov auaptnudtwv mrAnyal tais wap-Oévors, Tod peyiotou Tovrigixos cordlovtos éotiv 6te Kal yupyny thy wAnpEAHoacay, GOovns év
TadwoKkim Tapatevopevns: 1 dé THY Tapeviav Katatcxvvaca aca KaTopuTTeTat Tapa THY KondAiyny ANeyowéevny truNnv: év 4 Tis eoTL évTos
THs TWOAEwWS OPpYS yewdns Trapatelvovca Toppa:
Karetrar 6€ youa Staréeto tH Aativor. évraida KatacKkevalerat Katayevos olxos ov péyas, éyov avebev xatdBactv. xKetrar 5 év adtd Kxrlvn te Umeotpwpéevn Kal AVYVOS KaLtopeEvoS, aTapYal TE Tay mpos To CHv avayxatwv Bpayelat Teves, olov aptos, vowp év aryyeiw, yada, édXalov, woTrEp agpoctovpévay 76 7 Aum SiafOeipery copa tails peylotats KaOtepwpévov dyioteiats. avuTnv sé 342

™~

67

NUMA

wishes has liberty to marry and adopt a different mode of life, after laying down her sacred office. We are told, however, that few have welcomed the indulgence, and that those who did so were not happy, but were a prey to repentance and dejection for the rest of their lives, thereby inspiring the rest with superstitious fears, so that until old age and death they remained steadfast in their virginity.

But Numa bestowed great privileges upon them, such as the right to make a will during the life time of their fathers, and to transact and manage their other affairs without a guardian, like the mothers of three children. When they appear_in public, the fasces are carried before them, and if they ac- cidentally meet a criminal on his way to execution, his life is spared; but the virgin must make oath that the meeting was involuntary and fortuitous, and not of design. He who passes under the litter on which they are borne, is put to death. For their minor offences the virgins are punished with stripes, the Pontifex Maximus sometimes scourging the culprit on her bare flesh, in a dark place, with a curtain interposed. But she that has broken her vow of chastity is buried alive near the Colline gate. Here a little ridge of earth extends for some distance along the inside of the city-wall ; the Latin word for it is “agger.”’ Under it a small chamber is con- structed, with steps leading down from above. In this are placed a couch with its coverings, a lighted lamp, and very small portions of the necessaries of life, such as bread, a bow] of water, milk, and oil, as though they would thereby absolve themselves from the charge of destroying by hunger a life which had been consecrated to the highest services of religion.

343

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Thy Kodatopevny eis hopetov évOépevor Kal xataoteyacayvtes &Ewbev Kal ratadaBortes imac, os pndé hovny éEdxovatov yevéoOat, Kopifover 80’ aryopas. é€iotavtat 6é TavTes clwTh Kal Tapaméptrovew AapOoyyot pera Tivos Seuns Katndeias:
ovde dativ érepov Oéapa Ppixtorepov, odd Hyépav ) TOALS GAANY ayer oTUyvoTépay éxeiyns. StTav 5é apos tov Tomov KouscOH TO hopeiov, of pep umnpétat Tovs Seapovs éEéXvoap, o é TAY lepéwv &Eapyos evyds Tivas atroppyrous trounadpevos Kal yetpas avateivas Oeois mpd THs avayKns, cEdye ouvyKexaduppevny kal KaBiotnow éml KrALpaxos els TO Olxnpa KaTw hepovons. eita avTos pep amoTpémeTat peTa THY AArAWY iepéww Tis Se kataBdons 4 Te KAipaE avatpetrar Kal Kata-KpUTTETAL TO OlKNUA YIS TOANS avwbev emripopou-pevns, @aTe iaomedov TO NOLTO Xopare yever Oat

TOV TOTOV. OUTW MEY ai Tpoeuevar THY lepay Trap-Geviay xoralovrat.
XI. Nopas dé Aéyeras Kal:To THs ‘Eorias i lepov eyRUKALOD mepBaréa bat 7@ da Béorp Tupt $povay, [ATOLL OU PEVOS ob TO oxXTpma THS ys as Eortias ovaons, ANA Tob otpmavtos Koo wou, ov pécov ot Tvdaryoprxot TO TU ipicbar vopilovat, kal TovTO ‘Eotiav Karodar Kal povdsa: Thv be yi ouTe dxivnTov ovte éy perw THS Tmepupopas
ovoar, adda KUKX@ mept TO 7uUp aiwpouperny ou TOV TEMLOTAT OV ovdé TOY TpWTwWY TOU KOopOU
poptov Uma pew. tadta 6€ Kal I\drevd pace
mpeaButny yevouevov Sravevonjabas trepl tH ys 344

Then the culprit herself is placed on a litter, over which coverings are thrown and fastened down with cords so that not even a cry can be heard from within, and carried through the forum. All the people there silently make way for the litter, and follow it without uttering a sound, in a terrible depression ot soul. No other spectacle is more appalling, nor does any other day bring more gloom to the city than this. When the litter reaches its destination, the attendants unfasten the cords of the coverings. Then the high-priest, after stretching his hands toward heaven and uttering certain mysterious prayers before the fatal act, brings forth the culprit, who is closely veiled, and places her on the steps leading down into the chamber. After this he turns away his face, as do the rest of the priests, and when she has gone down, the steps are taken up, and great quantities of earth are thrown into the entrance to the chamber, hiding it away, and making the place level with the rest of the mound. Such is the punishment of those who, break their vow of virginity.

XI. Furthermore, it is said that Numa built the temple of Vesta, where the perpetual fire was kept, of a circular form, not in imitation of the shape of the earth, believing Vesta to be the earth, but of the entire universe, at the centre of which the Pythago- reans place the element of fire, and call it Vesta and Unit. And they hold that the earth is ueither motionless nor situated in the centre of sur- rounding space, but that it revolves in a circle about the central fire, not being one of the most important, nor even one of the primary elements of the universe. This is the conception, we are told, which Plato also, in his old age, had of the earth, namely that it is ws év érépa yapa Kabeataons, thy 5é péony Kal Kuptwrarny érépm Tevl KpEeiTTOVL TpOaHKovaay.

345

XII. Ot 8 Hovridines nai ta rept tas tapas

4 a Ul > eo) a Ul
matpua Tos xpnfovow adnyovvrat, Nowa 86a-Eavros pndevy nyetoOar piacpa tov ToLlovTmY, anra nal Tovs exe? Oeovs céBecOar Tots vevout-opévols, WS TA KUPLMTATA TOV hpeTéepwv UTrobEexo-pevous: eEatpéras Sé THY tpocayopevoyéevny Ac-Birwvav, éricxotrov tav tept Tovs OvnoKovtas ooiwy Gedy ovoar, elte Ilepoehovny elite parXdor,
e e , € 4 e 4
@s ot AOylwrato: ‘Pwpyaiwy wrodcapPSdvoverr,
9 9 a > na UA n
Adpobitny, od xaxas eis pias Svvayuy Oeod ra mept Tas yevéoess Kal Tas TeXEUTAS avd ToVTEs.
>A \ \ , » ¢ /, \ ,
autos 5 cal ta TwévOn Kal’ nrALKias Kal xpovous érakev' olov maida pn mevOeciv vewrepoy TpLEeTodvs, \ Ud “~ e 4
pmde mpecBurepov mrelovas phvas ov éBiwoev évavrav peypt tov Séxa, nai tweparrépw pnoe-play nrAtkiav, GAAA Tod paxpotdtov wévOous
, ® a > @ s “povov etvas Sexaunuviaiov, ép Scov xal ynpevovel ai tav atoPavoytwy yuvaixes. 1 Sé mpo-Tepov yapnOeioa Body éyxvpova xaréOvev éexeivou vomobernoavros.
TloAAds 8 wal addrXas Nowa xaradetEavtos
iepwavvas ért Svetv pyvnoOycopat, THs Te Ladiov Kal THs TOV Dittaréwv, al pdadrdtota THY evoé-Beav rod avdpds éudaivovow. of pev yap
Dirtareis eipnvopvracés tives dvres, ws 8 pol
Soxei, xal tovvopa AaBovres aro THS Tpadkews, 346
7, 68

NUMA

established in a secondary space, and that the central and sovereign space is reserved for some other and nobler body.
XI1. The Pontifices also explain and direct the ancestral rites of burial for those who desire it, and they were taught by Numa not to regard any such offices as a pollution, but to honour the gods below also with the customary rites, since they receive into their keeping the most sovereign part of us, and par- ticularly the goddess called Libitina, who presides over the solemn services for the dead, whether she is Proserpina, or, as the most learned Romans maintain, Venus ; thereby not inaptly connecting man’s birth and death with the power of one and the same god- dess. Numa himself also regulated the periods of mourning according to ages. For instance, over a child of less than three years there was to be no mourning at all; over one older than that, the mourning was not to last more months than it had lived years, up to ten ; and no age was to be mourned longer than that, but ten months was the period set for the longest mourning.! This is also the period during which women who have lost their husbands remain in widowhood, and she who took another husband before this term was out, was obliged by the laws of Numa to sacrifice a cow with calf.

Numa also established many other orders of priest- hood, of which I shall mention two, besides, those of the Salii and the Fetiales, which more than any others give evidence of the man's reverent piety. The Fetiales were guardians of peace, so to speak, and in my opinion took their name from their office, which was to put a stop to disputes by oral conference, or 1 Cf. chapter xix. 1.

NOy@ Ta velKn KaTéravoY, ovK éaYTEs OTPATEvELY
mpotepoy 4 tmacav éAmida Siens daroKxomhvat.
Kal yap eipnynv "EdAnves xarovdotw Stav oye, pn Bia, mpos addjdrAovs Ypwopevor AVTwaL ht Stadopds. of S¢ 'Pwpyaiwy Pittareis troANaxKts
pev EBabdiCov ws rods adscodvTas avrot mretOovres evyvapoveiy» ayvepovovyvtay S€ paprupdpevor Jeovs, cat xarevEdwevot trodda Kal Seva Kal" attav avrol «al tis marpidos ef pn Stiaios éreElacty, o0Tw KaTHYyyéAXOV AUTOS TOY TrOELOY.
kwAvovtav d€ TovTwv 1 wy auvaivotvTwr, ovTE
orpatiwrn Oeuitov ovte Bactrct 'Pwopaiwy Srra Kively, GANA Tapa TovTwv ede THY apyny Tod mwonépou SeEdpevoy ws Suxaiov Tov apyovta, TOTE oKotrew wept Tov cupdépovtos. RéyeTae 5é Kal to KeAtixov éxeivo maQos tH mode yevéoOat ToUT@Y TaV lepéwy Trapavopnbévtov.
"Ervyov pev yap ot BdapBapot Kndovoivous moNtopKouvres' éméupOn 5é apecBevtis PdBros
"ApBovoros eis TO orparoredoy Starvoes mpdkov vrép TaY ToNLopKoupévav. ANaBav Se arroxpi-oes ovK émiecKeis Kal mépas oxely abT@ Thy mpecBelay oldpevos, éveavtevoato mpo Tav KXovcivwv Stra AaBov mpoxartécac0ar Tov apioted-ovra Tav BapRdpwv. Ta pev ovv THs paxns evTuxetto Kal KataBadwv éoxvrevoe TOV avdpa:
yvwpioavtes 5é ot Kedtol méurovow ets 'Payny Knpuxa tov DaBiou Katnyopobvtes ws éxaotrovdov

Kal amiorov Kal axatayyeNTtov éFevnvoyoros Ipods auTous Todenov. évTav0a thy pevy avyKANTOY ot Ditiareis Ereov exdidovar tov dvdpa rois 348

‘NUMA

parley!; and they would not suffer a hostile expedition to be made before every hope of getting justice had been cat off. For the Greeks call it peace when two parties settle their quarrels by mutual conference, and not by violence. And the Roman Fetiales often went to those who were doing them a wrong and made personal appeals for fair treatment ; but if the unfair treatment continued, they called the gods to witness, invoked many dreadful evils upon themselves and their country in case they resorted to hostilities unjustly, and so declared war upon them. But if they forbade it or withheld their consent, neither soldier nor king of Rome could lawfully take up arms. War had to begin with their verdict that it was just, and the ruler, on receiving this verdict, must then de- liberate on the proper way to wage it. And it is said that the dreadful disaster which the city ex- perienced at the hands of the Gauls was in conse- quence of the illegal treatment of these priests.

For when the Barbarians were besieging Clusium, Fabius Ambustus was sent from Rome to their camp to bring about a cessation of hostilities on behalf of the besieged. But on receiving an unseemly answer, he thought his office of ambassador was at an end, and committed the youthful folly of taking up arms for the Clusians and challenging the bravest of the Barbarians to single combat. Fabius fought suc- cessfully, unhorsed his adversary, and stripped him of his armour. But when the Gauls discovered who he was, they sent a herald to Rome denouncing Fabius for violating a truce, breaking his oath, and fighting against them before war was formally declared. At Rome the Fetiales tried to persuade the senate to 1 Connecting the name with fateri, fari, to speak.

349

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kedrois, catahuyav 5é éxeivos eis Tovs ToANOUS kal TO Sum amovddlovtse xpnoduevos Srexpovgato Thy dinnv. jer Cdrkyou 5é émedOovtes oi Kearot tv ‘Péuny trv tod Kamit@ndiou SdtemopOncav. adda taiTa pev ev Tois wept Kapirrov paAXov axptBodtar.
* XIII. Tovs 8 Zariovs lepeis ee rTocavtTns AéyeTat svoTncacbar Tpopdacews. ETos sySoov avtov Bacirevovtos otuwdns voros TeEpLtiovca thy “Itadiav éotpoBnoe cai tHv “Popunv.. abv-povvtwy d€ Ttav avOpwrwv iotopeitar Yariv mTéATHVY EF Ovpavod Katadepomévny eis tas Nowa
meceiy yxeipas. emt 5€ avTH Oavydaotoy twa

AOyov A€yerOas vUTO TOD Baciréws, dv ’Hyepias te kal Tov Movoawy mrubécbat. 1d pev yap mov qKew él owtnpia THS ToAEws, Kal Sety avTo hpoupeiabar yevouévwy adrwv Evdexa Kal oxjpa kat péyeOos Kai popdny éxeivp tapatAncior, Smws atopov ein TO KAéTITN St Gpototnta Tod
Stomretovs eémituyety: ere be ypnvat Movcais
Kabtep@aat TO xwptov éxeivo Kal Tovs Tept avTo
ANetm@vas, Sov Ta ToAAA Hoitacat cuvdcaTpi-Bovow avt@. thy && myynv 1) Katdpder Td
yapiov, wp iepov atrodeiEar tais ‘Eotiace wap-Gévors, STws AapBavovaa Kal’ Hyépay dyvifwor kal paivwot TO avdKTopov. TovTos pev ovD paptuphoa Aeyover Kal Ta THs vooov Tapa-Nphua Tavodueva, thy dé wéXTHY TpOOEeVTOS avTov Kal KeAEvoaVTOS apirAAaCIaL TOUS TEeXviTAS bmép THS opotoTnTos, TOUS péy ANXouS atrEesTrEtD, Overovptoy 5¢ Mapovptoy &va tav axpov dnpu-oupyav ovtws édixécOar ths éeudhepeias, Kat 35°

NUMA

deliver Fabius into the hands of the Gauls, but he took refuge with the multitude, and through the favour of the populace evaded his punishment. After a little, therefore, the Gauls came up and sacked Rome, with the exception of the Capitol. But this story is more fully given in my Life of Camillus. XIII. The priesthood of the Salii Numa is said to have been established for the following reason. In the eighth year (of his reign a pestilence, which traversed Italy, distracted Rome also. The story goes that while the people were disheartened by this, a bronze buckler fell from heaven, which came into the hands of Numa, and a wonderful account of it was given by the king, which he learned from Egeria and the Muses. The buckler came, he said, for the salvation of the city, and must be carefully preserved by making eleven others of like fashion, size, and shape, in order that the resemblance between them might make it difficult for a thief to distinguish the one that fell from heaven. He said further that the spot where it fell, and the adjacent meadows, where the Muses usually had converse with him, must be consecrated to them; and that the spring which watered the spot should be declared holy water for the use of the Vestal virgins, who should daily sprinkle and purify their temple with it. Moreover, they say that the truth of all this was attested by the immediate cessation of the pestilence. When Numa showed the buckler to the artificers and bade them do their best to make others like it, they all declined, except Veturius Mamurius, a most excellent workman, who was so happy in his imitation of it, and made all the eleven so exactly

1 Chapters xvii.—xxii.

KaTacKevical Tudaas opoias, wate pnd avrov
ére tov Nopav Siaywooxev. tovtwy oby gv-Nanas wal duditorous amédeacke tovs Yadrious bepets. Dadrsos Se exAHOncay, ody, ws Eveot pvOoroxvovcr, YaucOpaxos avdpos 4} Mavtivéws, dvoua Larlov, mpwtouv thy évoTrALoy éxdidaEavtos Spxnow, dAAA paAXov ato THs opyncews avTis, GATiKhs ovons, hy bTopyodyrat Statropevopevor THY TOMY, STav Tas iepas TéATAS avartaBoow
éy t@ Maptip pnvi, potvixods pev evdedupévor xitavicxovs, pitpats 5 yarxais érelwopévor mAaTElaLs Kal Kpadvn Karka hopodvtes, éyyerpe-Siow; Sé puxpots Ta GtrAa Kpovovtes. 1 5¢ AAAH
THS Opxnoews Todav Epyov éaTi: KiwovvTaL yap EM LTEPTEAS, EXuypovs Tivas Kat petaBords épv puvdu@ TaX0s Eyovtt kal quKvornta ee papns kal xovgotnros dtrodibovtes.
Avtas ‘bé tas méAtas dyxvdLa Kadrodot Sa 70
oXHMa KUKAOS yap oUK EoTLY Ode aTrodidwour, @s wéXTH, THY mepupeperay, Gdn’ ex Topiyy exe ypappis édexoesdobs, Hs ai Kepaiar kawmas éxov-cat Kal cuverriaTpEpovaat TH TUKVOTHT 7 pos ?

adAjhas ayKUAOY TO OYA TroLodaLY 7 Sd Tov aryKxava rept ov mepupepovrat. TadrTa 1p O
"ToBas elpnne yn OMEVOS eFedAnvioat ToUvoua.
Swvarto 8 dv ris avéxabev hopas 7 p@TOv em avupoy yeyovévat, Kal Tis aKETEWS tov vorouvTay,
Kal TIS TOV |, AUX MOY AUTEWS, ere dé THs TOV
Sewvav avacyécews, Kal’ 8 Kal rovs Acooxovpous 352

_
69

NUMA

like it, that not even Numa himself could distinguish them. For the watch and care of these bucklers, then, he appointed the priesthood of the Salii. Now the Salii were so named, not, as some tell the tale, from a man of Samothrace or Mantinea, named Salius, who first taught the dance in armour; but rather from the leaping! which characterized the dance it- self. This dance they perform when they carry the sacred bucklers through the streets of the city in the month of March, clad in purple tunics, girt with broad belts of bronze, wearing bronze helmets on their heads, and carrying small daggers with which they strike the shields. But the dance is chiefly a matter of step; for they move gracefully, and execute with vigour and agility certain shifting convolutions, in quick and oft-recurring rhythm.

The bucklers themselves are called “ ancilia,”’ from their shape; for this is not round, nor yet completely oval, like that of the regular shield, but has a curving indentation, the arms of which are bent back and united with each other at top and .bottom ; this makes the shape “ancylon,” the Greek for curved. Or, they are named from the elbow on which they are carried, which, in Greek, is “ ankon.”’ This is what Juba says, who is bent on deriving the name from the Greek But the name may come from the Greek ‘“anekathen,’ inasmuch as_ the original shield fell from on high; or from “akesis,” because it healed those who were sick of the plague ; or from “ auchmon lysis,’’ because it put an end to the drought ; or, further, from “anaschesis,” because it brought a cessation of calamities, just as Castor and Pollux were called Anakes by the Athenians; if,

1 The Latin ‘‘ salire,” to leap.

“Avaxas AOnvaio: tpoanyopevoay, ef ye Set mrpos thy ‘EXAnuinny Suddextov éEdryerv Tovvopa. Toa 5& Mapoupio réyouar piaBov yeverOar Tijs téyuns exeivns pvijpny tia bv @dis bro TOV Lariwv dua tH Tuppixn Statrepatvopévyns. ot Sé ov Ovetovptov Mapotpiov elvai pact tov aéddo- pevov, GAXA oveTépeu pepopiapy, Srrep éorti, tra- Aatay pynny.

XIV. ’Emel 5€ dsexoopnoe tas tepwovvas, édet- pato TAnciov Tov THS Eotias tepod tv Kadov- péevny “Pyyiav, olov te Bacineov oixnpa> cal Td ~ mrEloTov avToOt Tov ypovov SvétprBev iepoupyav i) Siudoxwy Tovs iepeis 7) Mpos evvoia Twi Tov Oeiwy mpos avTov oxordfwv. oixiav 8 elyev érépav wept tov Kupivov odor, hs ete viv Tov Tomov émudecxvuovow. éy &€ Talis mpotroptrais Kal ddwS TOY lepéav Tals Toptrais Tporryoovro Knnpunes ava THY Tod éduvveW xehevovTes Kal Ta épya KkaTamravovTes. os yap hac. tous Hvdayopixods ovx éay éx trapodov mpooxuvelp Kal m pooevxeo Gat Tots Oeois, GAX oixobev evOvs éml TOUTO youn Taper Kevac pévous Badifer, OUT ws @ETO _Nopas Xpivar Tous ToAiTas pHTE axovey TUT@Y Ociwv pare opav év Tapépyp av AMENDS, adda oXOAIY dryovras amo TOY arreol

Kal mpooéXovTas Thy Sidvovay ws mpdter peylory
Th mepl THY evoéBevar, popov Te Kal TaTayov kal orevaypar, Kal dca Toadra Tois avayKatots cal Bavavoots tovos Eretat, kaOapas tas odo0us Tais iepoupyiats tapéxovtas. av ixvos Te méxpe that is, we are bound to derive the name from the Greek. .

We are told that Mamertius was rewarded for his wonderful art by having his name mentioned in a song which the Salii sing as they perform their war-dance. Some, however, say that the song does not commemorate Veturius Mamurius, but " veterem memoriam,' that is to say, ancient remembrance.

XIV. After Numa had thus established and regulated the priestly orders, he built, near the temple of Vesta, the so-called Regia, or royal house. Here he passed most of his time, performing sacred functions, or teaching the priests, or engaged in the quiet contemplation of divine things. He also had another house on the Quirinal hill, the site of which is still pointed out. At all public and solemn processions of the priests, heralds were sent on before through the city, bidding the people make holiday, and putting a stop to all labour. For, just as it is said that the Pythagoreans do not allow men to worship and pray to their gods cursorily and by the way, but would have them go from their homes directly to this office, with their minds prepared for it, so Numa thought that his citizens ought neither to hear nor see any divine service while they were occupied with other matters and therefore unable to pay attention. They should rather be free from all distractions and devote their thoughts to the religious ceremony as a matter of the highest importance. They should also rid their streets of noise and clatter and clamour, and all such accompaniments of menial and manual labour, and clear them for the sacred ceremonies. And the Romans still preserve some traces of this earlier feeling.

>
es
bo rl:
*
= roa

yov Stacwlovtes, Stay apywv mpos spycww i) Ovciats StatpiBn, Bow@aot ""Ox aye' onpaiver 5é 1) duovn "Tovtto mpacce, auvetiatpépovca xal KaTaKoo Lovaa TOUS TporTUyYavoyTas.
"Hy 6€ cal Tov aAdNwY Tapayyehparwv avTod

aorrd Tois IlvOayopucois éotxota. ws yap éxeivot wapnvovy émrt yoivixos py Kabncba, Kal paxaipa mip wn oxareverr, cal BadlCovras eis aTroonpias pn petactpéperOar, Kal Tols peév ovpaviots Treptaca Ove, dptia 6é Tois yOovioss, @v éxadotov tv Sidvotay amexpUTTovTO Tpos Tous ToANous, o'Tws Evia Tov Nowa tratpiov
amoppntov éyer Tov Aoryov: olov To pun orévdey Oeois && auTréd\ov atyuntrov pnde Ovew atep adpitwv' Kal TO mpocKuvety treptorpepopévous Kal TO KaOjob8a. TpocKvyncaytas. Ta mev ody mpata dvo thy yns éEnuépwow eorxe Siddoney, @> poptov evaeBelas ovaav 1 dé Treptatpody) TAY
T poo KUvOUYTOY AeyeTar pev aTroplunars elvat THS
Tod KOopov a parca b0£eve 6 ay pad dov O TpoaKuvan, émel impos éw 'TOY Lep@v Breer ovtev avTréoTpamTTat TAS avaToNas, peTaBarrELw EavTOV
évraida nal weptotpéedpev emt tov Oeov, KvKrov
TOY Kal TUVATT@OV THY ETLTEAELWOLY THS EVYTIS
8.' audoty: et wn vy Aia trois AiyuTrriots tpoyxots aivitrerait Tt kal di8doKe: TapamAnotov) peta-Born Tod oxHpatos, ws ovdevds éEoT@TOS TOV avOpwrivav, aX Stes av otpéhyn Kat averXitry
tov Biov nuav o Oeos, ayatrav nal déyecOa
T poanKov. 70 dé | KabelerIar TpocKvyyncavTas olwvicpov elvat Aéyoucr ToD PBeRatoTnTa 'ais 356

Me.

70

NUMA

When a magistrate is busy taking auspices or sacrificing, the people cry "Hoc age,' which means
'' Mind this," and helps to make the bystanders attentive and orderly.

Many of his other precepts also resembled those of the Pythagoreans. For instance, the Pythagoreans said: '" Don't use a quart-measure as a seat"; «' Don't poke the fire with a sword'; "" When you set out for foreign parts, don't turn back" ; and "To the celestial gods sacrifice an even number, but an odd number to the terrestrial" ; and the meaning of all these precepts they would keep hidden from the vulgar. Soin some of Numa's rules the meaning is hidden ; as, for instance, " Don't offer to the gods wine from unpruned vines"; " Don't make a sacrifice without meal'; "Turn round as you worship'; and "Sit down after worship." The first two rules would seem to teach that the sub- jection of the earth is a part of religion; and the worshippers' turning round is said to be an imitation of the rotary motion of the universe; but I would rather think that the worshipper who enters a temple, since temples face the east and the Sun, has his back towards the sunrise, and therefore turns himself half round in that direction, and then wheels fully round to face the god of the temple, thus making a complete circle, and linking the fulfilment of his prayer with both deities; unless, indeed, this change of posture, like the Aegyptian wheels, darkly hints and teaches that there is no stability in human affairs, but that we must accept contentedly whatever twists and turns our lives may receive from the Deity. And as for the sitting down after worship, we are told that it is an augury of the evyais xal Stapovny trois dyabois érruyiverOat.

Aéyouor Oe Kal mpatewy Svopta pov elvat hy avdtavatw* @S ovV TH mporépa mpageu Tépas emuTBevras nab ec Bar a a tots Ocois, Wa
éTépas ma duy apynv Tap exeLvov AdBwor. duva-Tat 6é Kal TOUTO TOis Eipnuevols oponroyery, e0t-CovTos as TOU vonoGérou ru) mroveia Oat TAS TpOs
TO Oeiov évrevéets ev aaxorig Kab Tapepyos olov omevdovTas, aX' Stay Xpovoy Exwpev Kal oYOATY diryopev.
XV. 'Ex &¢é Tijs TOLAUTNS mardaryuryias mpos
TO Qeiov odtas 7 modus eyeyover vElpon 7S Kat KkataTtapRnuévn THhv Tov Noa Suvapmey, OOTE pvbous coixoTas THY aromiav Aoyous TrapadexerGau, Kal vopiter pndev amriotov elvar pnde apayxavov éxelvov BovdnBevtos. MeyeTat youv WoTe KaNéaas emt THY Tpamevav OUK ddLyous TOY
TOMTOD, oKEUNn TE patra Kal Setrvov evredres
Tavu mpobéc bat Kal Onworixov™ dpEapévov dé
Seumveiv euBarov Aoyov ws 7 Oeds a ouvEerTLV Hot 7 pos avTov, aidvidsov emdetEa Tov TE OLKOV exT@ WaT OY TANPN TOAUTEA@Y Kal Tas tpamélas
oor Te TayToOaTT@V Kal TapacKevts darpirovs
yenouoas. macav oe brrepBeBAnxev aromiay
TO umép THS TOD Atos optdias ia Topovpevov.
pudoroyovar yap els tov ASevtivoy Aogov ouT® HEpos 6vTa Tis TOAEWS OVE gUvOLKOUpEVO?, Grr' éexovTa mnyas Te daypireis év avT@ xal vatras oKtepas, porray dv0 Saipovas, IItxov xai Paivor ols Ta pev Gd\XAa Latipwv dv tus } Tlavev yéves

TporerKdaere, Suva pet 6é pappaxwy Kat Secvornte THs wept Ta Bela yonteias A€éyovTar TavTa Tos
358

acceptance of the worshipper's prayers and the duration of his blessings. We are also told, that, as different acts are separated by an interval of rest, so the worshipper, having completed one act, sits down in the presence of the gods, in order that he may begin another with their blessing. But this, too, can be brought into agreement with what was said above : the lawgiver is trying to accustom us not to make our petitions to the Deity when we are busied with other matters and in a hurry, as it were, but when we have time and are at leisure.

XV. By such training and schooling in religious matters the city became so tractable, and stood in such awe of Numa's power, that they accepted his stories, though fabulously strange, and thought nothing incredible or impossible which he wished them to believe or do. At any rate, the story goes that he once invited a large number of the citizens to his table, and set before them mean dishes and a very simple repast; but just as they began to eat, he surprised them by saying that the goddess with whom he consorted was come to visit him, and lo, on a sudden, the room was full of costly beakers and the tables were laden with all sorts of meats and abundant furniture. But nothing can be so strange as what is told about his conversation with Jupiter. When the Aventine hill—so runs the tale-——was not yet a part of the city nor even inhabited, but abounded in springs and shady dells, two demi-gods, Picus and Faunus, made it their haunt. In other ways these divinities might be likened to Satyrs or Pans, but they are said to have used powerful drugs and practised clever incantations, and to have traversed

359

ip? 'EdAjvev T pocaryopevdetaw Tdatots Aaxrv-Rots codpslopevot mepriévas Th 'Iraniav. TOUTOUS pact xepdcacbat TOV Nopay, olve Kal péALTe KepacavTa THV Kenny a' HS emivov cv7bus.
Anpbevras dé Todas pev idéas Tpémea Gat Kat perexdver Ga THY avTav vow, adrOKoTa pdc-pare Kat poBepa THS Orews mpoBarXouevous:
érrel dé é éyvocay EANWKOTES loxupay Kal apuxrov ado, adda TE mpodeoriaat TOANG TOV ped-AovToV Kab Tov él Tous Kepauvois éxdidakau
Kabappor, OS ToLelTat peXpe vov Sta Kpoppvwy
Kal Tpryov Kat pavidwv. evtor dé ov Tous Oaipovds pacww vmrobécOat Tov cabappor, ann éxeivous pev Katayayeiv tov Aia Hayevoaytas, TOV 6é Jeov opry-Sopevov T@ Noa MpooTacaey
@S Ven yeverOar TOV eaBappov Keparais: UTrohaBovros dé Tob Nopa, ‘ * KPOMpLBOD ; " eltrety, “ vO pare” Tov &€ avOus ExT péTrOVvTA TO TOU

T por TayLaros Secvov émepeo bat, “OpiEiv;” aTro-Kpwapevov be Tou Atos, * ‘ €uapuxors,” eraryaryeiv tov Nopav, “ pacvicr ;” Tatra every UTO THS
"Hyepias Sedtdaypévov. Kal tov pev Oeov aer-Beiv thew yevopevov, TOV be TOTrOV "Triacov an éxeivou mpocaryopevOhvas Kal Tov caBappov ote cuvrercio Gat. Tavra pev otv Ta pvOwdyn kal yeXota THY Tov TOTEe avOpwrov émidetxvUTat didfecw mpos TO Oeiov, Hv o eOtapos avrTois éveroingen. autoy S€ Tov _Nopay ovTw daoly els 70 Octov aynptio bat Tats eMrriaw, adore wal Mpocayyedias avT@ OTE YEVO LEVIS OS émép-yon TroAéutol, perdtdcas Kal etrety’ “Kya oe Adw a 39
360
e

NUMA

Italy playing the same tricks as the so-called Idaean Dactyli! of the Greeks. These demi-gods Numa is said to have caught, by mixing wine and honey with the water of the spring from which they were wont to drink. When captured, they dropped their own forms and assumed many different shapes, presenting hideous and dreadful appearances. But when they perceived that they were fast caught and could not escape, they foretold to Numa many things that would come to pass, and taught him besides the charm against thunder and lightning, which is still practised with onions, hair, and sprats. Some, however, say that it was not the imps themselves who imparted the charm, but that they called Jupiter down from heaven by their magic, and that this deity angrily told Numa that he must charm thunder and lightning with “heads.” “Of onions?’’ asked Numa, filling out the phrase. “Of men,” said Jupiter. Thereupon Numa, trying once: more to avert the horror of the prescription, asked, “with hair?’’ “ Nay,’ answered Jupiter, “with living—” “sprats?’’ added Numa, as he had béen taught by Egeria to say. Then the god returned to heaven in a gracious mood,—“ hileos,”’ as the Greeks say,—and the place was called I[licium from this circumstance ; and that is the way the charm was perfected. These stories, fabulous and ridiculous as they are, show us the attitude which the men of that time, from force of custom, took towards the gods. And Numa himself, as they say, had such implicit confidence in the gods, that once, when a message was brought to him that enemies were coming up against the city, he smiled and said : «* But I am sacrificing.”

1 Fabulous gnomes associated with the Mount Ida of Phrygia and Crete.

391
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XVI. IIp@rov 8€ dace xai Iiotews nai Tép-povos lepov idpvcacbar. Kat thy pev Iiore Spxov atrodetEas “Pwpaios péyrorov, © ypwpevot péxpt viv StateXovow: o b€ Téppwv Spos av tis ein, nat Ovovow avdt@ Snpocia Kal dia Kata TOUS TOY aypav Trepltoptapous, viv peyv Eurpvya,
TO Tanatoy 5€ avaiwaktos nv 4 Ovoia, Nowa gfirocopycavtos ws xpn Tov Sptov Oeov etpyvns diraxa Kal Sixacoovvns paprv évTa povov xaGapov elvau. Soxet 6€ nal 6Aws obTos opiaat THY xepav o Bacrreds, ‘Popvrov pay Bovdn-Bévros eFoporoynoacGat T@ péTp~ TOD oixeiou
THY adaiperuy TOU ddNorplou Secpov yap eivas THs Suvdews Tov Gpov, av pudarrytat, pa puraTTopevov dé TIS abixias EXeyyov. ov pay ov6e 7 nv Saxprras Xewpa, Th monet KaT apxas, adnre THY TOAHY aXe I POCEKTNHTATO ‘Papuros: Kal
TaUTnY Tacav oO Nopas Sreverpe TOLS drropots
TOV TOMTOY, as avdrynny THS adixias apaipav THY amopiay, Kat Tpémowv ert ryewpyiav Tov Sijpov
apa Th YoOpa ouveEnpepovpevon. ovdev yap ado TOV émurndevpdrav obras épwra Sprmuy elpnyns épyaterat Kat TAX UY @S 0 a1r0 yis Bios, év : Kal THs TONE mK TS evTohpias TO pev Urreppaxn-TLKOV TOU oixetov Srapever Kal Tapert, TO 5é ets aduciay Kal weovefiav _GVELPEVOV EXKEKOTTTAL.
510 Kal THY yewpyiav o Nopas oloy el onus pidtpov éupitas Tos TodiTads Kal paddov as nor ovev 7 TAOUTOTTOLOV ayanrncas TEXUNY, ets HEpn TV X@pay Sueinev, & a \Taryous mT poonyopeuce, kat nal éxaotov émiaKxotrous érake wal rept-362
71

NUMA

XVI. He was also the first, they say, to build temples to Faith and Terminus; and he taught the Romans their most solemn oath by Faith, which they still continue to use. Terminus signifies boundary, and to this god they make public and private sacri- fices where their fields are set off by boundaries; of living victims nowadays, but anciently the sacrifice was a bloodless one, since Numa reasoned that the god of boundaries was a guardian of peace and a witness of just dealing, and should therefore be clear from slaughter. And itis quite apparent that it was this king who set bounds to the territory of the city, for Romulus was unwilling to acknowledge, by measuring off his own, how much he had taken away from others. He knew that a boundary, if observed, fetters lawless power; and if not observed, convicts of injustice. . And indeed the city’s territory was not extensive at first, but Romulus acquired most of it later with the spear. All this was distributed by Numa among the indigent citizens. He wished to remove the destitution which drives men to wrong- doing, and to turn the people to agriculture, that they might be subdued and softened along with the soil they tilled. For there is no other occupation which produces so keen and quick a relish for peace . as that of a farmer's life, where so much of the warrior's daring as prompts a man to fight for his own, is always preserved, while the warrior's licence to in- dulge in rapacity and injustice is extirpated. Numa, therefore, administering agriculture to his citizens as a sort of peace-potion, and well pleased with the art as fostering character rather than wealth, divided the city's territory into districts, to which he gave the name of "pagi,' and in each of them he set

modous. éots 8 Gre xal avtos ehopdv Kat
TEKMALPOMEVOS ATO TAY Epywy TOUS TpPOTrOUS TOV TOMT@V Tovs pev els TLLaAS Kal TioTELs avizye, rous 6 pabvpous eal apereis éyor cal caxilwv éowdpovite.
XVII. Tov 8¢ drAXwv avrod ToNtTevpaTav 7
kata téxvas Siavoyn tov mrnOovs pddtoTa Oavydterar. THs yap rodews ex Suey yevar, @omrep elpntat, cuvertavar Soxovons, dueat@ons
dé parrov Kal pndevi tpoTr@ pas yevécOar Bov-Aopevns unde olov éEaretpar thy érepornra Kal
Siagopdy, dAAA auyKpovcets atravaTous Kal di-NovetKias TOY pEpav éxovons, dtavonBels Srt eal TOV copdtwv Ta dvoe Svopikta Kal oxAnpa xarabpavovres Kat Siarpovvtes dvapeyvvovewr, UTO puLKpOTNTOS GAAHAOLS TUUBaivovTa paAdXoP, éyve Kararepelv Topas mrciovas TO cUpTay Ti}
Bos" éx dé Tovrwy es érépas éuBadrov Suaopas THY TpwTny éxeivnv Kal peyddyv adavicat Tats
éXatTocw évdsactrapeicayv. jv b& 7 Stavopi Kata Tas Téyvas, aVANTOY, YpYaoYOwY, TEKTO-vov, Badéwv, oxvToTopwv, cxvTobewav, yadxéwv, Kepapéwv. tas dé Noutras Téyvas els TAUTO oUPayayov év aitav éx racav anédeake cvoTnpa.
Kotvwvias S€ Kat auvodouvs Kal Jeav Tias «arro-Sous éxdotp yéves mpeTovcas, TOTEe TpPwTOV &ex
THS TWoAews aveiAe TO AEeyerOat Kal vopiterbat Tovs pev LaBivous, tovs 5é "Pwpyatouvs, cal tovs overseers and patrols. But sometimes he would inspect them in person, and judging of the characters of the citizens from the condition of their farms, would advance some to positions of honour and trust ; while others, who were indolent and careless, he would chide and reproach, and so try to make them sensible.

XVII. But of all his measures, the one most admired was his distribution of the people into groups according to their trades or arts. For the city was supposed to consist of two tribes, as has been said,! although it had no consistency, but was rather divided into two tribes, and utterly refused to become united, or to blot out its diversities and differences. On the contrary, it was filled with ceaseless collisions and contentions between its component parts. Numa, therefore, aware that hard substances which will not readily mingle may be crushed and pulverized, and then more easily mix and mingle with each other, owing to the smallness of their particles, determined to divide the entire body of the people into a greater number of divisions, and so, by merging it in other distinctions, to obliterate the original and great distinction, which would be lost among the lesser ones. He distributed them, accordingly, by arts and trades, into musicians, goldsmiths, carpenters, dyers, leather- workers, curriers, braziers, and potters. The remaining trades he grouped together, and made one body out of all who belonged to them. He also appointed social gatherings and public assemblies and rites of worship befitting each body. And thus, at last, he banished from the city the practice of speaking and thinking of some citizens as Sabines, and of others

1 Chapter ii. 4 f.

peev Tariou, tovs &é 'Pwuvrou moXitas, OoTE THY Scat EUV evappootiay Kai avait travtwv yevéoOat pos wavtas.

'Exracveiras dé TOY TOMTLKGY avtTov Kal 70 jept TOV VOmLoV SopB oa tov dL60vTa Tos mar paob TOUS naidas Tim pda KEL, brreFehopevou TOUS yeyapnnoras, et TOU 'TAT pos emaivobvTos Kal KENEVOVTOS 0 yapos YEvOLTO. Secvov yap nryetTo Thv ws edEvOep@ yeyaunpévny yuvaixa SovrA@ CUVOLKELD.

XVIII. "Hyato dé cal ths mepl Tov ovpavov mpayuateias ovTE ax piBors ovTE TavTaTracww Bewpntas. 'Popvrou yap Bacidevovtos anoyous eXp@vTo Tots pnot Kal aTaKTws, TOUS pev ovce ELKO LY TPEPOV, tous 6€ TévTe Kal TpidKovTa, tous 6é€ rELovenvy oyelopevot, THS 6e yevopmerns dveparias mept THY cedquny kat Tov HALOV évvotay OvK ExovTes, arn' ev purarrovtes povor, Ores efneovta, Kat Tpraxoa tov Tepe Oo éviauTos éo Tat. Nopas 5é 76 Tapadhary pa THS dvaparias

npepav evdexa vive Bar Aoyelopevos, @S Tou pep
cEANVaKoD TpiaKkoctas TEVTNKOVTA Téooapas EYOVTOS 7HEpas, Tov 6é ndvaxod Tplaxoatas éEn-KOVTa TEVTE, TAs évoexa TAUTAS npépas durAaoratov emnyare map évavTov ert t@ DeBSpovapi@ pnvi tov euBorcpov, t vTO ‘Popatov Mepen-Sivov kaovpevor, eleoge kal dvoty nMEp@y ovra.
Kal TOUTO per auTe TO lapa Ths avwpadrias pet-Covey cuerrev i laparov Sejoer Gat.
Merexivnoe dé Kal THY Tae TOV pnvev Tov yap ! Mapriop T™ pwTov dvta TpiTov érake, 7 pa@Tov dé Tov ‘lavovdpior, os av évdéxatos ért “‘Pwpdrouv, 366
NUMA

as Romans; or of some as subjects of Tatius, and others of Romulus, so that his division resulted in a harmonious blending of them all together.
Praise is also given to that measure of his whereby the law permitting fathers to sell their sons was amended. He made an exception of married sons, provided they had married with the consent and approval of their fathers. For he thought it a hard thing that a woman who had married a man whom she thought free, should find herself living with a slave.

XVIII. He applied himself, also, to the adjustment of the calendar, not with exactness, and yet not altogether without careful observation. For during the reign of Romulus, they had been irrational and irregular in their fixing of the months, reckoning some at less than twenty days, some at thirty-five, and some at more; they had no idea of the inequality in the annual motions of the sun and moon, but held to this principle only, that the year should consist of three hundred and sixty days. But Numa, estimat- ing the extent of the inequality at eleven days, since the lunar year had three hundred and fifty-four days, but the solar year three hundred and sixty-five, doubled these eleven days, and every other year in- serted after the month of February the intercalary month called Mercedinus by the Romans, which consisted of twenty-twodays. This correction of the inequality which he made was destined to require other and greater corrections in the future.

He also changed the order of the months. March, which had been first, he made the third month, and January, which had beenthe eleventh under Romulus,

367

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Swdéxatos 5é Kal TedXevTaios 0 DeBSpovdpios, ©

a lA A dé 9 “ N
vov dSevtépm ypavrat. toddol Sé etow ot Kat mpooteOfvat tovtous umd Nowa rovs pvas dé-youvat, Tov Te ‘lavovdptov Kal rov DPeBpovdprov, é& apyns 5& ypnoOat Séxa povov els TOV éviauTor, ws évio. Tv BapRdpwr tpici, Kal tov ‘EAAHvoY
"Apxdbes pev récoapary, && 5 "Axapvaves, Aiyu-mriow dé pnviaios Hv o éviauTos, Elita TeTpa-unvos, @ gact. 616 Kal vewratny ywpav oi-KouvtTes apyatotato: Soxotow elvac Kal wrHOos aunxavov érav él tats yeveadoyiats Katadépovaw, dre 81 Tovs pHvas eis érov apiO pov TiOémevor.
XIX. ‘Pwpaior 5é drt peév Séxa penvas eis Tov
éviautov étattov, ov dwdexa, Texpnptov 7 Tod TeXeuTaiov Tpocnyopia: SéxaTov yap avTov aypt vov Kadovow: ote 5é Tov Mdptiov wperov, 7 Takis: Tov yap aw éxeivov téumtTov éxddovy
, 4 \ \ oe N a wv
TéuTTov: éxtoy Oé Tov éxTov Kal Tov AAW
é&ijs opoiws Exaotov, émel tov “lavovdpiov xat Tov WeBpovapiov mpo tod Maprtiov tiOepévoss cuvéBatvey avtois Tov elpnuévoy phva méuTrtov pev dvoudterv, EBdopov Sé apiOpety. adArws Se / 9 \ 4 wv A
kal Noyor elye Tov Maptiov “Ape xabtepwpévor
e \ a e¢ , A b A ,
umd Tov “PwrvAOU Tpe@TOV ovopudler Bat: Sevtepov
dé rov ‘AmpidXov, éra@vupov oyta tHs ‘Adpodi-
4 A A a
Tns, év @ Ovovai te TH Oe@ Kai Tals Kadrdvdats
ai yuvaixes éotepavwpévat pupoivn Rovorta.
tives dé ov dia THY Adpoditny tov ’AmpirXov 368

NUMA

he made the first month ; February, which had been twelfth and last, thus became the second month, as now. Butthere are many who say that these months of January and February were added to the calendar by Numa, and that at the outset the Romans had only ten months in their year, as some Barbarians have three, and as, among the Greeks, the Arcadians have four, and the Acarnanians six; the Aegyptian year had at first only a single month in it, afterwards four, as weare told. And therefore, though they in- habit a very recent country,! they have the credit of - being a very ancient people, and load their genealo- gies with a prodigious number of years, since they really count their months as so many years.

XIX. That the Romans had at first only ten months in their year, and not twelve, is proved by the name of their last month; for they still call it December, or the tenth month. And that March used to be their first month, is proved by the sequence of months after it; for the fifth month after it used to be called Quintilis, the sixth Sextilis, and so on with the rest. Therefore, when they placed January and February before March, they were guilty of naming the above-mentioned month Quintilis, or fifth, but counting it seventh. And _ besides, it was reasonable that March, which is consecrate to Mars, should be put in the first place by Romulus, and April in the second place, since this month is named after Aphrodite. In it they sacrificed to this goddess, and on its first day the women bathe with myrtle garlands on their heads. Some, how- ever, say that April, with its smooth “p,” cannot 1 Perhaps as formed by the deposits of the Nile (Herod. ii. 5 and 9).

hac, arr daotep Exet Totvopa Wirov, Ampir-Nov KexAHoOat TOV pHva THs éaptyAs Mpas axpa-Covons avolyovta kal avaxadXuTTovta Ttovs Bra-oTovs THY duT@Y TOUTO yap } yA@TTA onpaiver.
tav & épeEns tov pev Maiov canrodow amo Maias: “Epyun yap avépwra:: tov bé ‘Jovviov amo tijs a 3 e lA S ? 4
Hpas. etol dé tives of TovVTOUS HALKias ETM@VUpLOUS
elvat éyortes mpeaButépas Kal vewtépas: paiw-pecs yap ol mpecBvTEpor Tap aUTOLS, LOUIL@peEts dé of vEwTE pot Kaovvrat. tav o¢ NoiTaY ExaaTov ato THS Tafews, BoTep apiOpovvTes, wvouatov méuTrov, Extov, EBdopuov, dySoov, évarov, S€xaTov:
elra o Téurros amo Kaloapos tov xataywvcapévou Tloprniov ‘lovvsos: o 5 Extos Abryouaros amo tov Sevtépov pev aptavros, LeBaotod &é émixrnOévtas, wvoudcOn. rovs bé éde&js! AopeTLavos eloeTroinge Tais avTOD Tpocwvupiats ov TodUy Ypovov, GAAA Tas aUTaV dvadaBorTes
Tadw éxeivou adayévtos o pev EBSopuos, o 8e é 800s Kahodvran. povor & ob tereutaio: Svo THY amo THS Tafews KAHoW, dotrep Exyov e€ ap iiss duepurafay.
av S€ vd Nopwa mpooreBévtar 7} peTarte-Devteo o 9 pep PeBpovdpros olov xabdpavos & QV TLS ein’ Kab yap 7 reEes € éyytota TobTo onpaiver, Kal TOUS Pocr0Is evayifover Tote kal THY T@Y AouTrep-KanL@v éopTny els, Ta TOAAA cadappe@ ™ poceot-Kutav Terovow: o be T p@Tos ‘lavoudptos amo tov "lavov. Soxet dé por tov Mdprtiov o Nopas

1 épetiis Bekker adds 8vo.

be derived from Aphrodite, with its rough " ph," but that this month of high spring time is called April because it opens and discloses the buds and shoots in vegetation, this being the meaning of the word "aperio." The next month in order is called May, from Maia, the mother of Mercury, to whom it is sacred ; and June is so named from Juno. There are some, however, who say that these months get their name from an age, older and younger; for ''majores'' is their name for the elder, " juniores" for the younger men. Each of the remaining months they named from its arithmetical position in the list, the fifth Quintilis, the sixth Sextilis, and so on with September, October, November, and December. Afterwards the fifth month was named Julius, from Julius Caesar, the conqueror of Pompey; and the sixth month Augustus, from the second Caesar, who was given that title. The seventh and eighth months bore for a short time the names Germanicus and Domitianus, which the emperor Domitian gave them ; but when he was slain, they resumed their old names of September and October. Only the last two months, November and December, preserved the names derived from their position in the list just as they were at the outset.

Of the months which were added or transposed by Numa, February must have something to do with purification, for this is nearest to the meaning of the word, and in this month they make offerings to the dead and celebrate the festival of the Lupercalia, which, in most of its features, resembles a purification.! The first month, January, is so named from Janus. And I think that March, which is

1 Cf. Romalus, xxi. 4-8.

émavupov dyta tod "Apews éx TIS Mpoéedpias petractinaat, Bovdopevos éy tTravtl THS TrOAEMLKTS Suvdpews tmpotipacOar Thy TomTLIKHY. oO yap

"lavos év tots wavy wadaois ete Saipwy etre Bacirevs yevopevos tmodtTixds Kal KoLvwVLKOS éK tov Onpi@dovs nal aypiov éyeTar petaBanreiv Thy Staitay. Kat da TovTO MraTTOVELY avToV apopem poo wor, as érépav €€ érépas T@ Bie trepi-TOLTAVTA THY poppiy cal dudbecry.
XX. "Eore 88 adtod Kai vews év ‘Payn biGupos, & Ov TORE LOU mUdnY Kanroiar, vopiletat yap dve@y Oar pev auTov éray 7 TONE LOS, KeKreicOat dé elpnvns yevoperns. 7) Sy Nader ov Hv Kat TTAVLWS” ‘yevopevon, det Tue TULTNPTHMEVNS To0-AED THS Wyepovias, dia péryeBos Tois KUKAw TEPLKEX UMEVOLS yévert BapBapors avrepedovons. wry étri ye TOU eBaotob Kaicapos éxreia On cadedovTos "Avtovov Kal 7 pOTEpov vmatev-OVTOD | zMdpxou “AtiAtou kat Titov ManddrAilou
‘povov ov Todvy: Elta evOvs avewyOn Trodépmov TuppayevTos. aXn’ ert ye THs Nopa Bactheias ovdeuliav nuépav avemypévos wh0n, tpia Sé Kal TETTAPAKOVTA ETH TUVEXY@S EpEelve KEKNELO LEVOS" ottas éEnpnto TAVTENOS a Tou Tone wou Kal mavrayobev. ou yap povov 0 ‘Pwpaior 7 TipEpworo
Kal KATEKEKNANTO TH Sixacoobvn Kal Tpaornte TOU Bacvréws Ojpos, andra Kal Tas KUKI TONES, Gomep. avpas TLVOS éxeiOev 7 Mvevpatos byvervod pépovros, apxn petaBorjAs éaBe Kar 7 000s elaeppun TdvTas euvopias Kal eipnyns Kat viv gutTevery Kat téxva tpépav ev aovyia «al 372 nd

3

NUMA

named from Mars, was moved by Numa from its place at the head of the months because he wished in every case that martial influences should yield precedence to civil and political. For this Janus, in remote antiquity, whether he was a demi-god or a king, was a patron of civil and social order, and is said to have lifted human life out of its bestial and savage state. For. this reason he is represented with two faces, implying that he brought men’s lives out of one sort and{condition into another.

XX. He also has a temple at Rome with double doors, which they call the gates of war; for the temple always stands open in time of war, but is closed when peace has come. The latter was a difficult matter, and it rarely happened, since the realm was always engaged in some war, as its in- creasing size brought it into collision with the barbarous nations which encompassed it round about. But in the time of Augustus Caesar it was closed, after he had overthrown Antony; and before that, when Marcus Atilius and Titus Manlius were consuls, it was closed a short time ; then war broke out again at once, and it was opened. During the reign of Numa, however, it was not seen open for a single day, but remained shut for the space of forty-three years together, so complete and universal was the cessation of war. For not only was the Roman people softened and charmed by the righteousness and mildness of their king, but also the cities round about, as if some cooling breeze or salubrious wind -were wafted upon them from Rome, began to ex- perience a change of temper, and all of them were filled with longing desire to have good government, to be at peace, to till the earth, to rear their children

aéBecba Oeovs. éoprai 5é nal Padiatr cal Trap > AY, 5) A a7 \ ? 4 e
GAANNOUS AdEwsS loVT@Y Kal avapyLyVUpLEeVwY UTO-
6 \ \ 7 \ b / A
oxai Kai diroppocvvar thv ItaNav Kxatetyxov, olov éx mnyns THs Nowa codias Tov KaXOv Kal Sixaiwy émevopedvtTwy cis Atravtas Kal duaxeo-wévns THS TWepl éxelvov yarnvns: @aoTEe Kal Tas TountiKas UTepBoras évdeiy pos THY TOTE KAaTA-
s ctacw réyoucw: "Ev dé odapodérors troprrakw aidav dpayvav épya:" Kal, "evpos dSdpvatar éyyed TE AoyywTa Eided T apdyKkea, yYadrKeav Sé ovKéTt carmiyyov KTUTOS, OVS TUAGTAL peEXiIdpwv drrvos ato Brehpdpwv." ote yap TONELOS oUTE OTdaLs OUTE vEewTEpiauoS Tepl ToNTELaY
e , "A J 3 \ 299 > 9
istopnta: Nowa Bactrevovtos: od pny ovd er
2 \ 9 a 4 A / A >
avtov éxeivoyv éyOpa tis POovos 7 bu Epwra BactreiasériBovrAy Kal cvatacis avdpav, adr
v , A / , A
elte hoBos Oey mpoxndecOar Soxovvtwy Tod avdpes elite THS apeTis aidas elite Satpoveos!
TUXYN, Taons Kaxias GOukTov ém' éxeivov Kal
\ 4 \ / > 9 4
xabapov Stapurdtrovea tov Biov, evapyes €&n-

veyxe Tapaderyua Kal Texpnptoy THS TXatwvenns
dwvis, iv Botepov éxeivos ovK orgLyos ypovots ryevopevos éTOAPNoEV adelvat Trepl TroALTELAS, WS
o “A
pia KaxOv TadAa Kal Avots avOpwrrots éeoTiv, Ex
TLVOS Toxns Oeias eis TavTO Stavota girocdpy Baciitxny cuptecotcay Svvapw éyxpatn Kat bmepdéEtov THS KaKias THY apETHY KaTATTHCAL.
e “ Maxdpios pev yap avtos” 0 cwdpwv ws adr-1 Saiudéos Bryan’s correction, adopted by Coraés and Bekker : dafuovos.
374

in quiet, and to worship the gods. Festivals and feasts, hospitalities and friendly converse between people who visited one another promiscuously and without fear,—these prevailed throughout Italy, while honour and justice flowed into all hearts from the wisdom of Numa, as from a fountain, and the calm serenity of his spirit diffused itself abroad. Thus even the hyperboles of the poets fall short of picturing the state of man in those days: “ And on the iron-bound shield-handles lie the tawney spiders’ webs’’; and, “rust now subdues the sharp-pointed spears and two-edged swords; no longer is the blast of brazen trumpets heard, nor are the eyelids robbed of delicious sleep.”! For there is no _ record either of war, or faction, or political revolution while Numa was king. Nay more, no hatred or jealousy was felt towards his person, nor did ambition lead men to plot and conspire against his throne. On the contrary, either fear of the gods, who seemed to have him in their especial care, or reverence for his virtue, or a mar- vellous felicity, which in his days kept life free from the taint of every vice, and pure, made him a manifest illustration and confirmation of the saying which Plato,? many generations later, ventured to utter regarding government, namely, that human ills would only then cease and disappear when, by some divine felicity, the power of a king should be united in one person with the insight of a philosopher, thereby establishing virtue in control and mastery over vice. ‘* Blessed,’ indeed, is such a wise man

1 A free citation, apparently from memory, of Bacchylides, Fragment 13 (Bergk). See Jebb’s Bacchylides, p. 411.
2 Republic, p. 487 e.
375

Os, “ waxdprot dé ot cvri Koo TaV éx Tou ow po-8 vobvTos TTOMATOS lovey hoyov.” Taxa yap ovoe avaryicns TLVOS bel mpos TOUS TOANOUS OVE ATrEDris, avtot dé THY aperny év evdnr@ mapadely pate Kal Aap pe TO Biw tod apxovTos opavres, EXOU-oiws coppovoic Kat cumpeTaaxnparivovrar

mpos Tov év piri xa opovoig TH 7 pos avrous
peta Sucacoaurys Kal HET PLOTNTOS appove ' Kal padprov Biov, év A) 70 KAAALO TOV amraons Toh Telas TERS éoti, kal Baciuxdraros anrdavTev 0 ToUTov Tov Biov Kat tavTny thy Stdbeow Tots bmnxoots évepydcacbar Suvdpevos. taita pév ovv Nopas traytés madXov paiveras TUVEWpPaKar.
X XI. Tept dé TmaiSwy avTov Kal yapov ayi-Aoytal yeyovact Tots taToptKols. ot wey yap ovUTE ydpov aAXov 7 Tov Tatias AaBelv avTov ove
matdos érépov ryevéo Oar TaTépa may pods Ouya-T pos Tlopmedtas héyouow ot o€ 7 pos TAUTH téc-capas viovs avaypddovaow avrod, Toumeva,
I]tvov, Kadrov, Madpepxoy, av éxacTov otkou diadoxny cal yévous évtipou KaTanaTrely, elvat yap amo pep ToD Tloumavos TOUS Toprevious, amo dé Uivou rovs [wapious, amo &é Kaarrov TOUS Kaaroupvious, amo Oé Mazépxov tous Ma-pepKious, ols dua TovTO Kal "Piyyas yever Pau Tapwvuucov, Strep earl Bacrdéas. TpiTot dé eiow ob TOUTOV pev KaTnyopoovTes: @S xaptlopevoy Tots yevert Kal mpoatiHevray ovK adnO7 OTe para THs ao Nopa diadoxys, THY dé Tlopmedtay OUK €K
Tatias yeyovévar Néyovtes, GAN’ FE évépas yuvas-
U

1 Gudpova MSS. and edd.: dxtbuova (waveless, serene), after Wyttenbach.
376

74

NUMA

“in himself, and blessed, too, are those who hear the words of wisdom issuing from his lips.””} For possibly there is no need of any compulsion or menace in dealing with the multitude, but when they see with their own eyes a conspicuous and shining example of virtue in the life of their ruler, they will of their own accord walk in wisdom’s ways, and unite with him in conforming themselves to a blameless and blessed life of friendship and mutual concord, attended by righteousness and temperance. Such a life is the noblest end of all government, and he is most a king who can inculcate such a life and such a disposition in his subjects. This, then, as it appears, Numa was preeminent in discerning.

XXI. As regards his marriages and offspring, his- torians are at variance. Some say that he had no other wife than Tatia, and no other child than one daughter, Pompilia. Others ascribe to him four sons besides, Pompon, Pinus, Calpus, and Mamercus, each one of whom was the founder of an honourable family.

From Pompon the Pomponii are descended, from Pinus the Pinarii, from Calpus the Calpurnii, and from Mamercus the Mamercii, who for this reason had also the surname of Reges, .or Kings. But there is a third class of writers who accuse the former of paying court to these great families by forging for them lines of descent from Numa, and they say that Pompilia was not the daughter of Tatia, but of Lucretia, another wife whom Numa

1 Cf. Plato, Laws, p. 7lle.

3 «0s, hv 45n Bactrevwv énue, Aovapntias' mav-tes 5 ov oporoyovas thy LloumaAiav Mapkio yaunOjvar. trais 8¢ hv o Mdpxuos éxeivou Mapxiov tod Nouay wapopynoavtos émi thv Baci-Nelav' Kal yap cuppet@enoer eis 'Popny ato Kal Tis cuyKANTOU peTéaxe TLU@PEVOS, KaL PETA
tHv Nopa tereutny 'Oortirdtw mept THs Bactdeias eis Gyava KaTaoTas Kal nTTNOEls aTrexapTtépyoer.
o 6é vids avTod Mdpxios éyov tHv Topmediav Katépevev év 'Pan cal Mapxuov "Ayxov éyévyncev, 5 peta TurdXgov 'Oaotiniov éBacinrevae.
4 TOUTOV, ws A€yeTaL, TeEVTAETH KaTaduTToV Oo Nopds éreXevTH EV, Ov TaXelas OVO aiduidtov yevopnévns avT@ THs TENEUTHS, GAAA KATA pUKpdv UTO ynpPwsS
Kal vooou padakys aropapacvopuevos, aS loTopnKe Iletowv. érerevtynce ypdvoy ov TOADY TOS oySonxovta TpoaBiwcas.
XXIF. Zndrwrov 8 adtod nai T@ Tade— Tov Biov
émroinoay ot Te cUppaxor Kal diror Sipo, cvvEr-Oovres eri tas tapas dua Snpocias emipopais cal otepavors, of Te TaTpixtot TO AéYos apapevot, Kal ouptrapovtes ot TOV Oewy iepeis Kal trapa-méutovTes, 00 GAAOS Gyros avapemypévav Kal
yuvatcav Kal traidwy ovy as Bactdéws tadais Ynpatovd Trapovtes, GAN WS TVA THY hirTATwY Exa-oTos év axpy Biov mrodovpevov Sarto, pet' ob w0-2 ys nal KravOpav érropevor. tmupl pév ovv ovK éSocav Tov vexpov AVTOU KWAVGAVTOS, WS
AéyeTaL, Svo 5é troinodpevor ALGivas copods vTTO Td "IdvoK- Dov EOnxav, Thy pev éETépav Exoveay TO COpma, THY dé Erépav Tas iepas BiBXous &s éyparpato pévavtos, married after he became king. However, all are agreed that Pompilia was married to Marcius. Now this Marcius was a son of the Marcius who induced Numa to accept the throne.1_ That Marcius accompanied Numa to Rome, and there was honoured with membership in the Senate. After Numa's death, he competed for the throne with Hostilius, and being defeated, starved himself to death. But his son Marcius, the husband of Pompilia, remained at Rome, and begat Ancus Marcius, who succeeded Tullus Hostilius in the kingdom. This Ancus Marcius is said to have been only five years old when Numa died, not a speedy nor a sudden death, but wasting away gradually from old age and a mild disorder, as Piso writes. He was something over eighty years old when he died. | ;

' XXII. His obsequies were as much to be envied as his life. The peoples which were in alliance and friendship with Rome assembled at the rites with public offerings and crowns; the senators carried his bier, the priests of the gods served as its escort, and the rest of the people, including women and children, followed with groans and lamentations, not as though they were attending the funeral of an aged king, but as though each one of them was burying some dearest relation taken away in the flower of life. They did not burn his body, because, as it is said, he forbade it; but they made two stone coffins and buried them under the Janiculum. One of these held his body, and the other the sacred books which he had written out with his own hand, as the Greek

. 1 Cf. chapter vi.

@otep of TOV 'EdAqvov vopobérar TOUS cupBes, éxdibdfas dé Tous tepels ere Sav Ta yeypappeva Kal mavroy &iv te Kal yvounv évepyacdpevos avrots, éxéXevce cuvrapivar peTa TOV ToLaATOS, as ov Karas év 7 ypappact ppovpovpévey TOV amroppytav. Aoyioup pace pndé tovs Tu@ayopixovs ELS ypagiy caraTiOecOas Ta oup-Taybata, penny dé Kal maibevow avT@v aypa-pov ep mrovety Tois afious. Kal THS ye Tept Tas aT opous Kal appirous heyouevas ev yewpeT pia peOodous Tparypareas ™pos Twa TOY dvatior exdo0eions, epacay emuonpaive TO Sarpoviov peyaro Tot Kal KOLV@ KAK@ THY ryeryer meray Tapavopiay Kal daéBevav éme&epxopevov. OOTE ouyyvayny EX ELV TONAHy Tots els 70 auto Tv0a-ope Nopay hiroTipovupévars ovvayey emt Towav-

TALs opoLoTnaw.

Oi Se rept "Avtiay toropovat SoHbexa pey eivat
BiBrous ‘epopavtixds, badexa dé adras ‘EA-AnviKas ptroa ogous Tas eis THY cOpoV ouvTeei-cas. TETPAKOGLOY 6€ trov dtayevonévwv éeTav bratot pev Raoav Ilomdtos Kopyndtos Kal M dpkos Batftos: éuBpewv dé peyd dav emimes OvT@Y Kal Xoparos TeplpparyeVvTos eFewoe TAS copous TO pedpa: Kal TOV emeOnpatov amoTed OvT@Y " pev érépa Kev TavTamacw On Kal pépos ovdev ovde Aelpavov éxouca TOU THUATOS, ey dé TH
erépg TOV Ypapparov evpeD evry dvayvavat plev aura héyera TletiAsos ouparnyay TOTE, apos O€ THY avyKANTOV Kopioat,) pn Soxety adT@ Oemerov elvat Néywr nde Savoy Extrvata ToAddois TA YyeE-1 xouloa: Coraés, Sintenis!, and Bekker, with C: bpufieas.

lawgivers their tablets. But since, while he was still living, he had taught the priests the written contents of the books, and had inculcated in their hearts the scope and meaning of them all, he com- manded that they should be buried with his body, convinced that such mysteries ought not to be en- trusted to the care of lifeless documents. This is the reason, we are told, why the Pythagoreans also do not entrust their precepts to writing, but implant the memory and practice of them in living disciples worthy to receive them. And when their treatment of the abstruse and mysterious processes of geometry had been divulged to a certain unworthy person, they said the gods threatened to punish such lawless- ness and impiety with some signal and wide-spread calamity. Therefore we may well be indulgent with those who are eager to prove, on the basis of so many resemblances between them, that Numa was acquainted with Pythagoras.

Antias, however, writes that it was twelve pontifical books, and twelve others of Greek philosophy, which were placed in the coffin. And about four hundred years afterwards, when Publius Cornelius and Marcus Baebius were consuls, heavy rains fell, and the tor- rent of water tore away the earth and dislodged the cofins. When their lids had fallen off, one coffin was seen to be entirely empty, without any trace whatever of the body, but in the other the writings were found. These Petilius, who was then praetor, is said to have read, and then brought to the senate, declaring that, in his opinion, it was not lawful or proper that the

381

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ypappéera yeverOar' 810 wal xomtcbeioas eis TO Kopitiov tas BiBdous Kxaraxajvac.
Tlaot pév odv ereras tots dexaiors Kal dyabois avdpdat peileov 0 KaToTriy al peta THY TENEUT HY éqrawvos, TOU POovov qo \“povoy ovK én bavros, évioy dé Kal mpoaTroOyna KovTos® ov pny adr
éxelvou ye THD dofav ai tav totepov Bactréwv 75 TUYaL Lapmporépay émoingay. mévre yap yevo-péveov per’ QvTOV oO bev ErxXaTos exTrec@v (Ths apxiis ev puyf KaTeynpace, Tay b€ Tecodpwr ovodeis KaTa puowy érehevTncer, GNX’ ol Mev TpEIs emreBovrevd eves éopaynaay, ‘Oarindtos d€ Tvrdos, Os peta Nopav éBacineuce, Kal Ta WwreloTa TOV éxelvou Kkarav, év dé TpwrTots Kal pddora THY qWept TO Deiov evddevay, emixrevdoas Kal Kabv-Bploas OS dpyoroiov Kal yuvarnady, T pos TONe-poov érpewe TOUS ToNtTas, oud" auros EVEMELVE TOLS VeaVLEevLAGL TOUTOLS, adn’ vro vooou Xareris Kal qTodutTpotov Thy yvoOunv adNaca opevos els derowdarpoviay évédwaxev vibes Tl TH Kara Nopav evoeBeig ™poankove ay, ére O€ paddov évetroinge Tots ddRovs TO TotovTov 1d0os, ws NEeyETAL, KaTA-prexGels brro xepauvav.
eee

AYKOYPLPOY KAI NOMA SYTKPIZI13

I, "AXX’ eel tov Noa nai Avukovpyou dtedn-AvGapev Bio», exicet Leva apoir, rh xal Vane ov epyov, ovx amoxvntéoy avvayayeiv tas Stadopas.
al

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

writings should be published abroad. The books were therefore carried to the comitium and burned.

It is true, indeed, of all just and good men, that they are praised more after they have left the world than before, since envy does not long survive them, and some even see it die before them; but in Numa’s case the misfortunes of the kings who followed him made his fame shine all the brighter. For of the five who came after him, the last was dethroned and grew old in exile, and of the other four, not one died a natural death. Three of them were conspired against and slain; and Tullus Hostilius, who reigned next after Numa, and who mocked and derided most of his virtues, and above all his devotion to religion, declaring that it made men idle and effeminate, turned the minds of the citizens to war. He himself, however, did not abide by his pre- sumptuous folly, but was converted by a grievous and complicated disease, and gave himself over to a superstition which was far removed from the piety of Numa. His subjects, too, were even more affected with superstition, as we are told, when he died by a stroke of lightning.

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

I. Now that we have recounted the lives of Numa and Lycurgus, and both lie clearly before us, we must attempt, even though the task be difficult, to assemble and put together their points of difference.

e U A
ai pev yap Kowworntes éripaivovtas Tais mpdéecwy, olov 7» cwhpociyn. Trav dvipav, 4 evoéBea, TO TONLTLKOV, TO TWALSEUTLKOY, TO plaY apynY Tapa Tav Peay audorépovs AaBeiv THs vopobecias:
" \ 997 e , n a / ? v a Ttav dé idta éxatépov kadro@v mparov dor. Nopa
\ e ', a , 4 \ .
pev » tmrapddy us tis Bactrelas, Auveovpye@ Sé 7)
/ e \ \ > 2 A e '
mapddoow. o pev yap ov aitrav éraBev, o 5é éywv amédwxe. Kal Tov pev Erepoe xuptov avTav Katéstycav idioTnv cal Eévoy évra, o 5é autos e_N ? " ? / 2 4 on \ \ avTov idiwwotnv ex Baorréws érroinge.. Kado pev ow To Ktncac0at Sixatocvvy tHv Bactreiar, karov d€ TO TpoTiunoat THY Sixatocvyny Tis Bacireias. 9 yap apety Tov péev odTws EvdoEov / oe / ? A \ \ Kkatéatnoey wate Bactreias akiwbjva, rov sé
,
oUTw péyav éroincey Wate PBaagtrelas Kata-ppovicat.
Ul ,

Acutepov Toiwvy, ere wad dmep appovirol
Upas, O pev exhehupergy Kal Tpupacar eT éTELVE
Thy {rdaptyy, o Sé THs 'Pans To chodpov avijxe

Kal ovyTovov, Mev Xarerorns Tov épyov T@
AvKoupy@ mpocertty. ov yap Owparas exdvvat
Kal Eign TOUS ToONLTAS catabéa bat érrevOev, GANG
Xpucov Kai dpyupov adpeivar Kal oTpwpvas éx-Banreiv trodvuteAeis Kal tpanélas, oveé Tavaapevous Torkéuwv éoptalew Kai Ove, adrAa Seirrva kal wotous édoayras év Tots Sr Ao1s Kat Tais
e Tahatat pars Siarroveia Gat kal aoKe. OOev o pev ds' evvoias Kat TEAS anavrTa metOcov én pager, o 6 xuvduvevwy Kai Baddopevos poyis émexpd-TNOEV.
384

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

For their points of likeness are obvious from their careers: their wise moderatien, their piety, their talent for governing and educating, and their both deriving their laws from a divine source. But each also performed noble deeds peculiar to himself. To begin with, Numa accepted, but Lycurgus resigned, a kingdom. One got it without asking for it, the other had it and gave it up. One was made by others their sovereign, though a private person and a stranger ; the other made himself a private person, though he was a king. It was a noble thing, of course, to' win a kingdom by righteousness ; but it was also a noble thing to set righteousness above a kingdom. For it was virtue which rendered the one so famous as to be judged worthy of a kingdom, and virtue, too, which made the other so great as to scorn a kingdom. |

In the second place, then, it is granted that, just as musicians tune their lyres, so Lycurgus tightened the strings at Sparta, which he found relaxed with luxury, and Numa loosened the strings at Rome, where the tones were sharp and high ; but the task was more difficult in the case of Lycurgus. For his efforts were to persuade the citizens, not to take off their breast-plates and lay aside their swords, but to cast away gold and silver, and abandon costly couches and tables; not to cease from wars and hold festivals and sacrifices, but to give up feasting and drinking and practise laboriously as soldiers and athletes. Wherefore the one accomplished all his ends by persuasion, through the good-will and honour in which his people held him; but the other had to risk his life and suffer wounds, and scarcely then prevailed.

385
VOL. I. c c
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

‘ “Hyepos pévrot Kal prravi pwrros 7 tou Nopa podca apos etpnyny exal Sixaroobyny peJappocapévov Kal KaTaT paivartos 4 ax ara Kat Svamripwv nOav TOUS TOAITaS, et de Kal TO mept tovs Kitwtas dvayKacet TUS Teas els THY Avxovpyov Oéc Gas TOMTELAY, G@ WOT ATO epyov
rat Tapavopwrarov, paxp@ tin tov Nopav eddn-VEKWTEPOD ryeyovevar vowobérny prj oper, és ye Kal TOUS @pororynwevous SovAous evyevoe TLMAS
érevépas, ev trois Kpovious éotido Oar peta tov SeaTroTav GVA WE [try LEVOUS Cicas. Kal yap TodTo
TOV Nopa matpiov év elvat Aéyouow, eri Tas
TOV éTnTiWY aTrohavaEts KapTrav TOUS cuvepyous TraparauBavovros. evioe b€ TodTO UTopynya TIS Kpowxis éxeivns icovopias aTmooaleabat pudo-Aoyotauy, @S pndevos SovAou pnde Searrorov, mavrwv &é oUyyevay Kal ¢ tootipev vopclopeveny.
II."Odws 6é paivovrar T pos THY avrdpxetav
apporepot Kal gappoovny opLotes dryovres Ta TrIOy, Tov Se Gddwov apeTov o pev THY avdpeiav
MGAXOv, 0 € THY Stxatoovvny HyaTnKa@s: Ei Ln VT Aia dua THY Drone: pévny TOV TONLTEV PAT OV
éxaTépou dvow 7 ouvn dear, ovy opotay oveap, dvojoias der TapacKeviys. OvUTE yap Nopas bud devAiay KaTéhuae TO Tonepely, Grn’ éml Te BY adixetv, ove Avunodpyos els ddiciav KATETKEVATE TOE MLKOUS, GAN’ varép Tod pwn adiKeio Oat. Tas ovy umepBodas apatpoiytes audorepor Kal Tas évdcias avatrAnpobvres TOV UmapxovtTov Tepl TOUS
monitas, nvayxdalovTo peydArats yphoOar peta-BoXais.
386

76

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

Numa’’s muse, however, was gentle and humane,
and he converted his people to peace and righteousness, and softened their violent and fiery tempers,
And if we must ascribe to the administration of Lycurgus the treatment of the Helots, a most savage and lawless practice, we shall own that Numa was far more Hellenic as a lawgiver, since he gave acknowledged slaves a taste of the dignity of freedom, by making it the custom for them to feast in the company of their masters during the Saturnalia.! For this too was one of the institutions of Numa, as we are told, who thereby admitted to the enjoyment of the yearly fruits of the earth those who had helped to produce them. Some, however, fancy that this custom was a reminder of the equality which characterized the famous Saturnian age, when there was neither slave nor master, but all were regarded as kinsmen and equals.

II. In general, both alike manifestly strove to lead their peoples to independence and sobriety ; but as regards the other virtues, the one set his affections more on bravery, the other on righteousness ; unless, indeed, the different natures or usages on which the government of each was based required different provisions. For it was not out of cowardice that Numa put a stop to the waging of war, but to prevent the commission of injustice ; neither was it to promote the commission of injustice that Lycurgus made his people warlike, but that they might not suffer injustice. Accordingly, in removing the ex- cesses and supplying the deficiencies of their citizens, both were forced to make great innovations.

1 A mid-winter harvest festival in honour of Saturnus.

387
cc 2
3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kad pny tis te Ssaradkews wal ris Svatpéocews
TOV TOATEULAGTWY OYALKH pey aKpaTwWS 1) TOU
Nowa cal Oeparevtixnn tov awdOous, éx ypvao-Yowv cal avdANT@Y Kal oKVTOTOMOY CUMpLYH TLVa
Kal TaptroiKtXov atodaivoytos Shuov, avotnpa
5é 4 Avxovpyetos Kat adpiotoxpatinn, Tas ev
Bavavoous atroxabaipovoa réyvas eis olxeTav Kal HeToixwy yeipas avtovs dé Tovs troAitas eis THY dotiéa kal td Sopy auvdyouca, Todémou yetpotéyvas xal Oepdrovras “Apews dvtas, ddXo Se ovdev eiddTas ovdée pereT@vTas 4 TeiOecOat Tots apxovet Kal Kpareiy tay Trodepiov. Ovdée ya yenpatilerOar trois édevOépors eEjv, a édev-Gepo. wavteda@s kal xa0drak wow, adr’ hy 7H
Tepl Ta Kpnpata KatacKevn Sedopévn Sovdrots
kal Eiiwow, dowep 7 wept TO Setrvoy nal dro Ssaxovia. Nopads dé€ ovdéy Stéxpive Ttotovror, GANA Tas pev oTpaTiwTixas Eravce Treovetias,

Tov 5é GAAov ovK exddrAUTE KpNnpaTLa LOY, Ove TTY
TotavTny KaTecTopecey avwopartav, ddAdgAa Kal
TOUT Mpoigvar pmexXpt TravTos epHKe, Kal Trevias Tors aOpolouevns kal wUioppeovans «is THY mod nuéernae, Séov evOds ev apxy, pwndéTo TOAAHS pyoe peyaAns avicoTnTos ovaNS, GAN Erte trois Biow opardav Kxal mapatAnciwv svrwr, évoThvas mpos Thy TreoveEiav, WaTep AuKodpryos, kal purdtacbar tas at' aitis BrAdBas, od puxpas yevouévas, GAAA ToV mreioTov Kal peyiotey Kakov, doa ovvnvéxOn, orréppa Kal apyny tapaayovcas. o dé THS YRS avadacpos ovTEe TOY Avxoipyov, éuol Soxetv, motel vpextov yevopevos ote tov Nopay pry yevoyevos. TE pev yap pay

And surely, as regards the arrangement and classification of the citizens under their respective governments, Numa's was strongly popular and inclined to favour the masses, resulting in a promiscuous and variegated commonalty of goldsmiths, mausicians, and leather-workers ; but that of Lycurgus was rigid and aristocratic, relegating the mechanical arts into the hands of slaves and aliens, but confining the citizens themselves to the use of the shield and the spear, so that they were artificers of war and servants of Ares, but knew and cared for nothing else than to obey their commanders and master their enemies. For freemen were not even permitted to transact business, that they might be entirely and forever free, but the whole apparatus of business was turned over to slaves and Helots, just like the pre- paration and serving of their meals. Numa, on the contrary, made no such distinctions, but, while he put a stop to military rapacity, he prohibited no other gainful occupation. Nor did he reduce the great inequalities resulting therefrom, but left the acquisition of wealth wholly unrestricted, and paid no attention to the great increase of poverty and its gradual influx into the city. And yet it was his duty at the very outset, while as yet there was no general or great disparity of means, but people still lived on much the same plane, to make a stand against rapacity, as Lycurgus did, and take measures of precaution against its mischiefs ; for these were not trifling, but furnished the seed and source of the most and greatest evils of after times. But as regards the redistribution of the land, Lycurgus, in my opinion, is not to be censured for making it, nor Numa for not making it. In the one case, the re-

Kai Kpnrida tis TwoALTelas 4 icoTns adtn Tapéaxe, Tov 5& mpooddrov THs KANpovyias ovans
ovdey Hrreyey GANov éuParew avadacpov ovdé Kively THY TPWTNVY vé"uNnoLVY, wS EiKOS éoTL, KaTA yapav pévovaav.
III. Tijs 5é rept rods ydpous cal ras Texvocess

Kotvwvias TO abnrétuTov opOas Kal trodTLKaS éutrotobytes audotepot toils avdpdow ov Kata wav els toto auvnvéyOncayv, addr’ 0 “Pwpaios pev dvnp ixavas éxwv tratdotpodias, vp’ érépou dé meicbels Seouévov téxvwv, é&ictato Tis yuvarros, éxdoc0ar = xal petexdoc0ar KUpLos UTdpxor, o be Adxov, olxot Ths yuvatKos ovons Tap auT@ Kal TOU Yyapmou pEvOVTOS ert
trav é& apxis uxaiwv, petedioov TO mreloavTe
This Kolvwvias Eels TéXVWOLD. Todol 86, domep elpntalt, Kal mapaxadovytes etonyov é& av av édoxouy padora maidas everdeis xal dryabovs ryevéa ar. tis ody 7 Stdxprots Tav eOtoperv; jj TavTa pep laxupa kal axpatos amdbea pos yapeTny Kal 7a TapdatrovTa kal KatakatovTa CnroTuTiats Tovs ToAAOUs, exelva dé damep alaxuvopern atudia TUS, TapaxdAvAuppa THY eyyunv epednopmeéry al To Svacxaptépnrov éEopmo-oryouuevn THS Kovevias ;
"Ere 6€ waddov 1) teph Tas map8évous pudacn Katéatarrat T@ Nopa Tos TO Ofy Kat Koa jt0v"
" 8€ TOU Avxoupyou TavTaTaciw avamentapéevn Kal aOnrus ovoa Tois TounTais eyov Taper xX nKe.
daivounpldas te yap avtas amoxanovaw, os 390

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

sulting equality was the foundation and base of his polity ; but in the other, since the allotment of lands was recent, there was no urgent reason for introduc- ing another division, or for disturbing the first assign- ment, which probably was still in force. > III. With regard to community in marriage and parentage, though both, by a sound policy, inculcated in husbands a freedom from selfish jealousy, still, their methods were not entirely alike. The Roman husband, if he had a sufficient number of children to rear, and another, who lacked children, could per- suade him to the step, relinquished his wife to him, having the power of surrendering her entirely, or only for a season ; but the Spartan, while his wife remained in his house, and the marriage retained its original rights and obligations, might allow any one who gained his consent to share his wife for the purpose of getting children by her.. And many husbands, as we have said,! would actually invite into their homes men whom they thought most likely to procure them handsome and noble children. What, then, is the difference between the two customs? We may say, perhaps, that the Spartan implies a complete indiffer- ence to the wife, and to the jealous emotions which confound and consume the hearts of most men; while the Roman, as if with shame-faced modesty, makes a veil of the new betrothal, and concedes that community of wives is really insupportable. Still further, Numa’s watchful care of young maidens was more conducive to feminine decorum ; but the treatment of them by Lycurgus, being entirely unconfined and unfeminine, has given oc- casion to the poets. They call them “ phainomerides,”’

1 Lycurgus,. xv. 7.
391
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“TBuxos, cal avdpopavets Notdopodow, ws Evpt-midns, Néyou"
Al ovv véotow éEepnpuodcry' Sopovs yupvotot pnpots Kal TémAOLS avEtpevous.
A aA n al J
4 7T@ yap vTt TOU TapHEVLKOD YLT@VOS ai TwTépuyes 77
> 4 4 2 > 9 ,
OUK Roay cuveppappévar KaTwbev, GAN aveTTTUCgovto Kal cuvaveyvpvovv Srov év te BadbiCev 4
Tov pnpov. Kal cadhéotata TO yivopeooy elpnKe Lodoxrs ev Tovtoss’
Kal tav véoptov, as ér’ doroXos yuT@v

Oupaiov appt -enpov aTvaceTat, Epusovar.
5 610 xal Opacvtepar AéyovTat yevéoOat Kal mpos
avtTovs mpwtoyv dvdpwdes. tors avdpas, are 87
TOV pev OikwY apYovoat Kata Kparos, év Sé Tois Snmocios mpaypact Kal yvauns petadrapBavovgat Kal Tappncias mept Tav peyiotwr. o dé Nowas tais yapetais to pev akiopa cal rip-
Tiny éTnpnae Tpos Tovs avdpas, hv elyov dro
€ i , \ e 4 Qa
Pwptrov Oeparrevopevas Sa THY aprayny, aida
dé todd éeréctncev avtais Kal TodvT payyoouynv ageire xalyndew edidake cai ctwray ciOicen,
” \ > , \ 4 -f A
olvov péev atrexouevas TO Taptav, Aoy@ S€ pndé e le) ? , bd ‘ ¥
imép Tov advayxaiwy avdpos advev ypwpévas.
6 Aéyeras yobv ote yuvatKkos eitrovans Sixny idiay
éy ayopa téuyar thy avyKAnTov ets Oeod, rruv-1 eepnuovorw adapted from étepnuotoa (leaving their homes).
392
COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

hare-thighed (so Ibycus), and revile them as mad after men. Thus Euripides says ! :—
“ They leave their homes to mingle with the youths ; Their thighs are naked, flying free their robes.”

For in fact the flaps of the tunic worn by their maidens were not sewn together below the waist, but would fly back and lay bare the whole thigh as they walked. popnoces pictures the thing very clearly in these words ? :

« And that young maid, whose tunic, still unsewn,
Lays bare her gleaming thigh
Between its folds, Hermione.”

And so their women, it is said, were too bold, putting on men’s airs with their husbands even, to begin with, since they ruled their houses absolutely, and besides, on public occasions, taking part in de- bate and the freest speech on the most important subjects. But Numa, while carefully preserving to the matrons that dignified and honourable relation to their husbands which was bestowed on them by Romulus,’ when he tried by kindly usage to efface the memory of the violence done them, nevertheless enjoined great modesty upon them, forbade them all busy intermeddling, taught them sobriety, and accustomed them to be silent ; wine they were to re- frain from entirely, and were not to speak, even on the most necessary topics, unless their husbands were with them. At any rate, it is said that when a woman once pleaded her own cause in the forum, the senate sent to inquire of an oracle what the event might

1 Andromache, 587 f. raeaaae slightly adapted.
2 Fragment 788 (Nauck). f. Romulus, xix. 6.
393

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Javopévny tivos dpa Th ode onpetor ein TO yeyEynpévov. kal rhs adds evrreOcias Kal mpadtynTOsS AUTOV MéyA TEKUNPLOY) LYNN TOV YELPOVOY. WS yap wap npiv ot toropixol ypddovat tovs mpe-Tous % povov éudvrov épyacapévous 7 Todeuncavras adedpols 7 TaTpos avToYepas 7} pNTpOS
7 yevopévous, ottw “Pwpaior pvnpovevovow st
Tp@Tos pev aretéurparo yuvaixa Yropios Kap-/ Q e , , ¥ ,
Birtos, peta tiv Papyns xtiow éreot TpidxovTa kal Staxoaiors ovdevos ToLovTOU yeyovoTos, TPATH dé yuvn [lwaplov @araia rotvopa SinvéyOn mpos
e ¢ a , /
éxupav avtTas Teyaviay Tapxvviov ZovrépBov Bactrevovtos. oftw Karas Kal Koopiws TeTaypéva TA TOY ydpwv hv VTO TOD vouobérou.
IV. Ty 5 GAAn tav TrapPévwr aywyn Kal Ta mepl tas éxddcets Ouoroyel, ToD pev Auxovpyou mwemeipous Kal opywoas vupdevorTos, OTws H TE
e 4 / 4 A , / 9

opria, Seopévns dn THS PioEews, YapiTos 7 kal didias apyn paddrov H picovs cal poBov
mapa dvow Bialopévwr, cal Ta copata popny 4 \ \ \ / ’ \ 2 Qa
éyn mpos TO Tas KUnTELS avahépery Kal Tas w6ie > 3 2Q\ yw / \ “
vas, ws én ovdev GAO yapoupevovy 7) TO THs Texvacews Epyov, TaV 5é ‘Pwpyatwy Swdexaetets cad vewrépas éxdiSdvtTwy: otto yap av uddioTa kal 76 c@pa Kal To 7005 KaBapov Kal GOtKTOv eri 270 yapnobvte yiverOar. SHrov ovv Ste TO pey portend for the city. And for their usual gentle- ness and readiness to obey, there is strong evidence in the specific mention made of those who were less amenable. For just as our Greek historians record the names of those who first slew kinsfolk, or made war on their brothers, or were parricides, or matricides, so the Romans make record of the fact that Spurius Carvilius was the first to divorce his wife, two hundred and thirty years after the founding of Rome,
394
™∼

' there being no precedent for it; also that the wife of Pinarius, Thalaea by name, was the first woman to quarrel with her own mother-in-law, Gegania, in the reign of Tarquinius Superbus. In such fitting and proper manner were marriages regulated by their lawgiver.

IV. Further, the practice of the two peoples in the matter of giving their young maids in marriage conforms to their education of them in general. Lycurgus made them brides only when they were fully ripe and eager for it, in order that intercourse with a husband, coming at a time when nature craved it, might produce a kindly love, instead of the timorous hate that follows unnatural compulsion ; also that their bodies might be vigorous enough to en- dure the strain of conception and child-birth, con- vinced as he was that marriage had no other end than the production of children. The Romans, on the other hand, gave their maidens in marriage when they were twelve years old, or even younger. In this way more than any other, it was thought, both their bodies and their dispositions would be pure and undefiled when their husbands took control of them. It is clear, therefore, that one practice regarded nature more, with children in view; the other re-

395 puotcw@repov mpos Tékvwciw, TO 8é al ™pos oupBiwaty.

"AdAG pn éemictaciats Te Taidwy Kal cuvarye-
a“ f Aacpois Kal Tradaywyiats Kal Kotvwviats, Tepi TE
Seirva Kal yupvdow Kal Tatdsas avTov éupenrei-
A 4
ais Kat dtaxoopnoeow, ovdév TL TOD MpooTUXOVTOS / V4 \ . A € “ vonobétov BeAtiova tov Nopav o Aveodpryos amodeixvucty, éml tais. Tov Tatépwy trounad-pevov émiOvpiars 7) yYpelars Tas TOY véwy ayoyas, elte tus épyatnyv ys BovNoto Tovey Tov eN ¥ N aA f 4 A > 4 uiov cite vauTTnyou 7) YadKéa SiddoKew 7 avANTHD, a b] \ a / 3 + b] > a @oTTep OV pos Ev Tédos Odeldovtas éEF apy7s Ww \ f a ” ? > ayesOar xai ovvettiatpépecar tois HOecww, GAX
olov ets vabv émiBdtas Erepov é& érépas AKovta Npelas Kal mpoatpécews ev Tois KivduvoLs povov go8@ tov idiov cuvictacOat mpos TO KoLvor, v7 \ N > e_eN “ 4
dAdAws 5€ TO Kal’ avTov cKoTrety Exactoy. Kal
a \ n > ¥ > a ,
TOUS pev TONAOIS OVK aktoy éyxareiy vopobéTats
édNeltrovow 7H dv’ ayvorav } OV acOéverav- avSpl 5é cop@ Bacireiav waparaBovts Sypov vewarl cuvoTapévov Kal mpos pndey avtuTetvovtos, Tept Ti TPWTOV! Hv aTrovddcat TpoaHKov } Traidwv éx-\ \ , v e A 4 A Tpopny Kai vévwv aoxnoty, Stews pn Stadpopoe pnde Tapaywdets yévowTo Tois HOecw, ANN eis & tt
A fo! ,
Kowov apeThs iyvos evOds && apyis wraTTOpEvot
\ 4 , > s a QA ld
Kal TuToupevor cupPaivotey GNAHXOLS; O 87 TpOS
\ a \ / ,] , A
TE TA ANAA Kal GwWTHpPlay vopnwv wpedrynoe TOV
A e a“ 4
Avxodpyov. xpos yap hv 0 TaY 6pxwv hoBos, eb
1 wp@rov Bekker corrects to xpérepoy.
396
78

COMPARISON OF LYCURGUS AND NUMA

garded more the formation of character, with married life in view.
But surely, by his careful attention to boys, by their collection into companies, their discipline and constant association, and by his painstaking arrange- ments for their meals and bodily exercise and sports, Lycurgus proves that Numa was no more than an ordinary lawgiver. For Numa left the bringing up of youths to, the wishes or necessities of their fathers. A father might, if he wished, make his son a tiller of the soil, or a shipwright, or might teach him to be a smith or a flute-player, as if it were not important that all of them should be trained with one and the same end in view from the outset, and have their dispositions formed alike; but rather as if they were like passengers on a ship, each coming with a different object and purpose, and each therefore uniting with the rest for the common good only in times of peril, through fear of private loss, but otherwise consulting only his own _ interests. Now, it is not worth while to censure the common run of legislators, who fail through ignorance or weakness. But when a wise man had consented to be king over a people newly constituted and pliant to his every wish, what should have been his first care, unless it was the rearing of boys and the training of youths so that there might be no con- fusing differences in their characters, but that they might be moulded and fashioned from the very outset so as to walk harmoniously together in the same path of virtue? This, indeed, was what helped Lycurgus to secure, among other things, the stability and permanence of his laws. The Spartans touk oaths to maintain these laws, it is true, but

\ P \ aA 6 , t fol > fol z 'y £5 1
pn d1a THS TaLdeias Kal THs aywyhs olov avédevce
A a 4
Tots HOeot THY TALSwY TOUS VOpOUS, Kal TUV@KELWCE
aA A A A ,
Th TpopH Tov Cnrov THs TONTELAS, MOTE TEVTAKO-ciwy é€TOV THEW Ypovoy TA KUpLwTaTa Kal aA A , 4 n
péylota Stapetvar THs vopoOecias, waoTrep Badis
A , °
axpatovu Kal ioxyupas Kcabawapévns.
N A be ed 5 f aA , >
oa O€ OTep Hv TéXOS THS TodtTElas, ev
> , ld \ e , e , > A etpnvyn Kal dirla tHv "Pauny vrapyev, evOds
\ ,
ouvebédiTre' Kal peTa THV TEXEUTHY ExEivoU TOV
' , "A
appiOupov oixov, dv KexXeropévov avTos cuvetyer, WoTEP OVTWS Ev AUT@ TUacEevwr KabetpypévoV TOV
Todenov, €& audotépwv dvaTreTdaavTes aipatos \ A \ b] , > / Or

Kal vexpav tnv Itadtav evéerrdnoav: Kal ovdé
I~ 7 , e / \ / s
OMyov ypovoy 7 KadXrLoTH Kal SiKaLoTdTn KaTa-aTacts éuewev, &te dn Kal TO cuvdeTixoy ev avTh, THY TALoelay, OVK EXoUCA.
99
“Ti obv, pynoe tis, “oun emi tro BédXtLOv 4 ‘Pawn pone Tots ToNEuLKOIS ;” épwray épernua paxpas atroxpicews Seduevoy impos avOparrous
\ Ber > x 4 \ eo] \ e 4 70 Bédtiov év TrAOUT@ Kal TpUpH Kat Wpyepovia aA “A \ fal
PaAXovy 7} ocwTnpia Kal TpaoTHT. Kat TH peta
, “a oN
Sixaroovvns avtapKeta Tiepévous. ov pny adrG
\ A 7 /, a \
kat tovto Avxovpym ov Soket BonOeiv, ro “Pwpaious péev thv él Nowa xatdotacw é€anrra-Eavtas émidodvat Tois mpayyace tocovTov, Aaxe-Saipoviovs b€ dua Te wpatov éexBhnvar Thy Avxovpyouv diataki, é« peyiotwv tatretvoTdrous
4 ‘ lal e , e 4 3
yevéoOat kal tHhv tav “EXXAnveY nyepoviay atro-1 avéSevoe Bekker adopts Reiske’s correction to évédeuce.

this would have availed little had he not, by means of his training and education of the boys, infused his laws, as it were, into their characters, and made the emulous love of his government an integral part of their rearing. The result was that for more than five hundred years the sovereign and fundamental features of his legislation remained in force, like a strong and penetrating dye.

But that which was the end and aim of Numa’s government, namely, the continuance of peace and friendship between Rome and other nations, straight- way vanished from the earth with him. After his death the double doors of the temple! which he had kept continuously closed, as if he really had war caged- and confined there, were thrown wide open, and Italy was filled with the Blood of the slain. Thus not even for a little time did the beautiful edifice of justice which he had reared remain stand- ing, because it lacked the cement of education.

“What, then!’’ some one will say, “was not Rome advanced and bettered by her wars?” That is a question which will need a long answer, if I am to satisfy men who hold that betterment consists in wealth, luxury and empire, rather than in safety, gentleness, and that independence which is attended by righteousness. However, it will be thought, I suppose, to favour the superior claims of Lycurgus, that, whereas the Romans increased in power as they did after abandoning the institutions of Numa’s time, the Lacedaemonians, on the other hand, just as soon as they forsook the precepts of Lycurgus, sank from the highest to the lowest place, lost their supremacy over the Greeks, and were in danger of 1 Cf. Numa, xx. 1.

Badovtas xivduvedcat wepi dvactdcews. éxeivo pévtoe TO Nowa péya xal Oeiov ws arOas
e 4 \ f 4 A
imapxel, To Eévp te petaréumrrTm yevécOat Kai mwavra TrevOot petaRanreiv, Kal KpaTHoat TroAEws
bd 4 , a 4 ,
ovT@ oupTeTrVvevKUiAas, unTE GTA@Y SenOévTa pHTE
, / e A ? "N A = \ Bias tevos, ws Auxotpyos émt Tov Shpov Hye Tous dpiotous, addAa aodia Kal Sixatocvvn mdvtas 4
mTpocayayouevov Kal cuvappocavta.

utter destruction. Nevertheless, this remains a great feature in Numa's career, and one really divine, that he was a stranger, and yet was summoned to the throne, where he changed the whole nature of the state by force of persuasion alone, and mastered a city which was not yet in sympathy with his views ; and that he accomplished this without appeal to arms or any violence (unlike Lycurgus, who led the nobles in arms against the commons), but by his wisdom and justice won the hearts of al] the citizens and brought them into harmony.

Digitized by Google

bp D 2

ZOAQN

I. Aidvpos 0 ypapparcos év TH jept Tov akovwv TV YoOAWVOS avtiypadh T pos ‘Agkhared-onv PrroKr€ous Tivos TEOELKE heEw, év % Tov LorAwva TaTpds Evgopiovos aTropaives Tapa Tip TV aAXOV d0fay, dooL pépynvrae LorAwvos. "EEncearidou yap avtov amayres oparas ryeryo-vévat héeyouow, av6pos ovcig MeV, Os, pace, cal Suvdper _Héoov TOV TouTaVv, oixlas 5é TPATNS Kara, yevos" ny yap Kodpiéys avexabev. Thy dé pntépa Tov YoAwvos ‘Hpaxdeidns 0 Tlovtixos ta Topet TAS Tetovotparou pT pos aveyriay ye-veo Sau. Kal g@iria TO TPw@ToV my autois TON] pev da THY Tuy yEvEray, Torn de dua THY 79 evuiay kal @pav, ws évtot pac, EPWTLKAS TOV Tetciotpatov aamatopevov TOU Lohwvos. 50 ev UaTepon, OS EouKen, els Svadopav aura év TH ToNTEia KATAGTAYTOV ovdév iverywev n &9pa oKdmpov ovo dry prov ma0os, ada Trapépervev éxelva Ta Sixaca Tais uyais, cal rapepvrate, Tudopeva Aiov trupos ért S@oav droya, THY epeorucny prjuny Kal Xap. Ste 5é pos Tous KaXous ovK Hy exupos O Lowy oud "Epore Ga paréos “ avravactiva: TUKTHS Ores és yYetpas, |
1 “Epwrt pév vuv Sorts avtavloraras wbnrns dws és xeipas, ob KarAds ppove’l.
(Sophocles, Trachtiniae, 441 f.) 404
SOLON

I. Dipymus the grammarian, in his reply to Asclepiades on Solon’s tables of law, mentions a remark of one Philocles, in which it is stated that Solon’s father was Euphorion, contrary to the opinion of all others who have written about Solon. For they all unite in saying that he was a son of Execestides, a man of moderate wealth and influence in the city, but a member of its foremost family, being descended from Codrus. Solon’s mother, according to Heracleides Ponticus, was a cousin of the mother of Peisistratus. And the two men were at first great friends, largely because of their kinship, and largely because of the youthful beauty of Peisistratus, with whom, as some say, Solon was passionately in love. And this may be the reason why, in later years, when they were at variance about matters of state, their enmity did not bring with it any harsh or savage feelings, but their former amenities lingered in their spirits, and preserved

there,
‘smouldering with a lingering flame of Zeus-sent fire,” 1
the grateful memory of their love. And that Solon was not proof against beauty in a youth, and made not so bold with Love as “to confront him like a boxer, hand to hand,’ may be inferred from his

1 Euripides, Bacchae, 8.

exe TE TOV ToinudTwv avTov AaBeiv Ear, Kal
vopov eypare Staryopevovta SotAov un Enparor-deiy pndé tradepacteiv, eis THY TOV KAaXOV pepida Kal ceuvav émitndevydtwrv tiOéwevos TO Tpaypa, Kal TpoTrov Twa TOs akious mpoKanov-4 pevos Ov Tors avakiovs amndavuye. Reyetar dé cat Ileeciatparos épactns Xdppou yevécOar, cat
TO ayadpa tov "Epwros év “Axadnueia xabee-pacar, Stov TO TWUp dvatrTovaw ot THY lepay Naprdada dcabéovres.
II. ‘O & oby Yorwv tv ovciav tov watpos
éXaTrw@cavtos cis piiavipwrias Twds, Os Pnow
"Eppcrimos, kal ydpitas, ovx dv amopnocas Tov Bovropévwv érrapxeiv, aidovpevos S¢ NauRavewv
map érépwv é& oixias yeyovas eiOccpévns érépors Bonbeiv, dpunce véos dv ere mpos éptropiav.
KatTou aay éviou troAvuTrerpias Evexa parrAov Kal iatoplas } ypnpatiopod TAaVvNnOAVaL TOV LorwVva.
2 aopias pév yap mv oporoyoupévas epactys, 6s
ye kal mpecButepos wy Edeye “ynpdaoKev aiel
TOAAG SiOacKopevos’ | wAovTov 8 ovn Oavpater,
ANNA Kal Pnowv dpoiws WrovTEiv @ Te® aronvs apyupds éott
kal pean Kab ys Tupop opov media
larrou @ nytovoi Te, Kal @ ova TadTa wWapeoTt, yaoTpt Te Kal TEUpH Kal Troclv dBpa Tabeip,

Tasos T HOE yUVALKOS, ErHY Kal TAUT abixnrat, Bn, cvv & apn yivetat appodia.
: a pea 8’ aie) woAAG Sidacxduevos. Fragment 18 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Gr. ii.* p. 47).
3%lodv rot xAovrovow Srp wodds Upyupds ori, K.7.A., Fragment 24 (Bergk), verses 1-6.
406

SOLON

poems. He also wrote a law forbidding a slave to practise gymnastics or have a boy lover, thus putting the matter in the category of honourable and dignified practices, and in a way inciting the worthy to that which he forbade the unworthy. And it is said that Peisistratus also had a boy lover, Charmus, and that he dedicated the statue of Love in the Academy, where the runners in the sacred torch race light their torches.

II. Solon, then, after his father had impaired his estate in sundry benevolent charities, as Hermippus tells us, might have found friends enough who were willing to aid him. But he was ashamed to take from others, since he belonged to a family which had always helped others, aud therefore, while still a young man, embarked in commerce. And yet some say that he travelled to get experience and learning rather than to make money. For he was admittedly a lover of wisdom, since even when he was well on in years he would say that he “ grew old ever learning many things’; and he was not an admirer of wealth, but actually says that two men are alike wealthy of whom one “much silver hath,

And gold, and wide domains of wheat-bearing soil,

Horses and mules; while to the other only enough belongs |
To give him comfort of food, and clothes, and shoes,
Enjoyment of child and blooming wife, when these too come,
And only years commensurate therewith are his.”

3 GAN évépwbe Aéyer:
Xpryata & ipeipw pev yew, adixws 5é se-macbar
oux €BéXw: Tavtws datepov HAGE Sinn.
xkwrver 5é ovdév TOV ayaboy Kal ToNTLKOY avipa UATE TOV TepliTTaV THY KTHoW éy oToVdn Ti-OecOar pnte THS xpelas TaVY avayKxaiwy Kal ixavav Katadpoveiv. év Sé tois tote ypovols, kal 'Haiodov, Epyov ovdév jv dvetdsos, obs TéXVN Stadhopav epepev, eurropia dé nal dofav elyev oixecoupévn Ta BapBapixd xal mpokevodca du-Alas Bactiéwv cal tpaypdtoyv éumetpous troLov-4 ca ToAKoV. évior Sé Kal ToXEwY olxictal yeyovact peyarov, as cal Maccarias paris
umo KeAtav tev mept tov 'Podavoy ayarnbeis.
kat @arjy Sé daa europa xpycacbar Kai
'Immoxpatny tov paOnpatexov, cal TIAdtam ths atroénpias épodsov éXaiou Tivos év Aiyirr@ b:d-Deaw yevécOar.
III. To 3 ody evddravov 76 Yorwv Kal wypov mpos THY Siattay, Kal Td hoptiKw@Tepov 7 didocohwotepov év Tois Tounpact Scatucobai qepl TaDV
nOovav, Tov éumopiKoy olovtat Biov mpoate-TpipOat: modrgovs yap exovta xivdvvous Kal peyadous avTatatety madwv evtTradelas Tivas Kal 2 amodavoas. Str 8 abtov évy TH THY TevnToD pepid. paddov Th TaV TAOVaiwY éraTTe, SHAGY éotiy éx TOUTMV
IIorAol yap wAOUTEDOL KaKoi, dyabol Sé 7é-vovTat'
GX Hueis avtots ov Siaperropucla
— 408
SOLON

However, in another place he says :—+

'Wealth I desire to have; but wrongfully to get it, I do not wish. Justice, even if slow, is sure."

And there is no reason why a good statesman should either set his heart too much on the acquisition of superfluous wealth, or despise unduly the use of what is necessary and convenient. In those earlier times, to use the words of Hesiod,? " work was ino disgrace,' nor did a trade bring with it social inferi- ority, and the calling ofa merchant was actually held in honour, since it gave him familiarity with foreign parts, friendships with foreign kings, and a large experience in affairs. Some merchants were actually founders of great cities, as Protis, who was beloved by the Gauls along the Rhone, was of Marseilles. Thales is said to have engaged in trade, as well as Hippocrates the mathematician ; and Plato defrayed' the expenses of his sojourn there by the sale of oil in Egypt.

III. Accordingly, if Solon's way of living was expensive and profuse, and if, in his poems, he speaks of pleasure with more freedom than becomes a philosopher, this is thought to be due to his mercantile life; he encountered many and great dangers, and sought his reward therefor in sundry luxuries and enjoyments. But that he classed himself among the poor rather than the rich, is clear from these verses :—* _

" For often evil men are rich, and good men poor ;
But we will not exchange with them

1 Fragment 13 (Bergk), verses 7 f.
2 Works and Days, 311. 3 Fragment 15 (Bergk).

THS aGpeTns Tov TwAODTOV: émel TO pev Eutredov alei,
ypnuata 5 avOpwrwv addoTe AdNos ExeL.
TH S€ trounce. Kat apyds pey eis ovdév dkvov aovons, adda Tailwy éowxe tmporxpnaacbar Kal tjapdywv éavtov év Te ayoralew DoTepov
dé Kal yuoopas evérewe gdtdocdpous xal Tar TOALTLK@Y TOAAG GuyKaTémAEKe TOLS Trotnacty, ovy loropias &vexev Kal pvnuns, aA atroroyt-MOVs Te TOV TETTpAayLevwY EXovTa Kal TpoTpo-Tas éviaxod Kal vovOecias kal émumrdn ers mpos tovs "A@nvaiovs. vor Sé daciv Ste Kat Tors vomous émexeipnoey evteivas eis eros eEeverxety, Kai Stapynuovevovaor THY apyny oUTws Exoucay:
Tlpara peév edyapecOa Ait Kpovién Bacirji Oecpois toicde TUyny dyabnv Kal Kidos omde-oat.
Pirocodias 5é Tod HOtKod pddtoTa TO TOALTL-OV, BOTWEP OF TWAELTTOL THY. COPOV, HyaTIGEV. év 6€ Tois huatKois aTAovs dott ALay Kal apyaios, w@s OnXov éx ToUTwWY
"Ex vedérns mérerat xeovos pévos nde yardlns:

Bpovrn & éx Naprpas yiverar doreporijs.
é& dvéuwv 5 Odracoa tapaccerat: hy S€é tes
QvTny |
Bn KWH, TavT@v éotl SixacoTaTn.
Kal Orws eotxey } @drsw povov aodia Tore Tepartépw THS xXpelas éfixécOas TH Oewpig’ Tots 410

80

SOLON

Our virtue for their wealth, since one abides
alway,
While riches change their owners every day.”
And he seems to have composed his poetry at first with no serious end in view, but as amusement and diversion in his hours of leisure. Then later, he put philosophic maxims into verse, and interwove many political teachings in his poems, not simply to record and transmit them, but because they contained justifications of his acts, and sometimes exhortations, admonitions, and rebukes for the Athenians. Some say, too, that he attempted to reduce his laws to heroic verse before he published them, and they give us this introduction to them :—

‘First let us offer prayers to Zeus, the royal son of Cronus,
That he may give these laws of ours success and fame.” !
In philosophy, he cultivated chiefly the domain of political ethics, like most of the wise men of the time; and in physics, he is very simple and anti- quated, as is clear from the following verses :—

‘From clouds come sweeping snow and hail,
And thunder follows on the lightning’s flash.
By winds the sea is lashed to storm, but if it be Unvexed, it is of all things most amenable.” 2
And in general, it would seem that Thales was the only wise man of the time who carried his speculations beyond the realm of the practical ; the 1 Fragment 31 (Bergk).
2 Fragment 9, verses 1-2; and fragment 12 (Bergk).
AII

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dé GNAOLS AITO THS TOMTLKAS apEeTHS TOUVOMA THS copias umnpee.
IV. TevécOar 58 pet’ aXdrjdAwv & te Aeddois

opod AéyovTas Kal mdduv ev KopivO@, Iepedvdpou aUANOYOY Tia KOLVOY avTaY Kal cULTocLOY KatacKkevdcavtos. étt dé paddop eis akiwpa Kal dofav avtovs Katéatncev 4 TOU TpiTrodos Trepiodos kal 51a Tavtwv avaxvKrnots Kal avOvrreEts pet' evpevelas piroTipouv yevouéevn. Kgwv ydp, os gact, catayovtwy caynyny, cal Edvov éx Mery-\ , v \ v
Tov mptapévwv Tov Borov ova davepoy dvta, Npucods épavn Tpitrovs Edxopevos, Sy AéyouaLY
'EXévnv mréovcav éx Tpolas avtoO: Kxadeivar Npnood Tos avayvnoOeicay Tadaov. yevopévns 8€ tots E€vous mpa@tov dvtidoyias Tpos TOUS ddiéas wept tov Tpitrodos, elta TaY ToAEwY » \ 4 avabdcEapévwv thv Stapopav aype toXéwou TpoerOodcay, avetreyv audortépas 7) Uv0la te codw-TaTw Tov Tpitoba atrodobyva. Kal mpa@Tov pév
b) 4 \ A > I. e 4
ameotaAn mpos @aryv eis MidAnrov, éxovotws tov Kody évi Swpoupévwy éxetym tmept od mpos admavtas o"ov MiAnacious érrovtéunoayv. Odrew 5é Biavta copatepoyv atrodalyvovtos avtod mpos
2 a >» , > @ ' , \ exetvov Kev' am éxeivou 8 avOus atreaTtaXn pos
wv e , 9 oN bd
G\XNov ws copwtepov. Elta Teptiov Kal dava-
4 (4 > fo) \ 4 J ,
Teutropevos oUTws él @arjv to Sevrepov adi-
, ? , > , \
KeTO, Kal TéXos eis @nBas é« Murnrov Kromwoels
a? 4 > / 4

T@ 'Iopnvip Amod\d\wv xarepoOn.

412

SOLON

rest! got the name of wisdom from their excellence
as statesmen.
IV. They are all said to have met together at Delphi, and again in Corinth, where Periander arranged something like a joint conference for. them, and a banquet. But what contributed still more to their honour and fame was the circuit which the tripod made among them, its passing round through all their hands, and their mutual declination of it, with generous expressions of good will. Some Coans, as the story goes, were dragging in a net, and some strangers from Miletus bought the catch as yet unseen. It proved to contain a golden tripod which Helen, on her voyage from Troy, is said to have thrown in there, when she called to mind a certain ancient oracle. First the strangers had a dispute with the fishermen about the tripod, and then their cities took up the quarrel and went at last to war, whereupon the Pythian priestess of Apollo told both parties in an oracle that the tripod must be given to the wisest man. So in the first place it was sent to Thales at Miletus, the Coans willingly bestowing upon him alone that for which they had waged war against all the Milesians together. But Thales declared that Bias was a wiser man than he, and the tripod was sent to Bias. From Bias, in his turn, it was dispatched to another, as wiser than he. So it went the rounds and was sent away by each in turn, until at last it came to Thales for the second time. Finally, it was carried from Miletus to Thebes and dedicated to Ismenian Apollo.

1 The names usually given in the list of the Seven Wise Men are: Bias of Priene, Chilon of Sparta, Cleobulus of Lindus, Periander of Corinth, Pittacus of Mitylene, Solon of Athens, and Thales of Miletus. See chapter xii. 4.

@codpactos 5€ dyot, mpa@tov pev eis Upinvny
Biavte tov tpitroda treuhOjvat, Sedtepov 8 eis MiAntov @aryq Biavtos aroréupavtos: ottTw dé da wWavtwv wad eis Biavra weptedOetv, TéXOs Se eis AeAdhovs atrootadjvar. tadta pev ovv bd TreLovav TEOpvANTAL, TAHY StL TO S@pov avtl Tod Tpimobos ot pev pidrAnv Vro Kpoicou reupOeicar, of 5é mornptov BaOuxdéous atroduTrovtos eivas Néyou tv.
V. "I8ia 8 "Avaydpoews te pds Yorwva Kal madwv @drew auvovciav twa Kal oyous ava-ypadovar TOLoUTOUS. ‘Avdyapory Mev ets "AOivas paciv emi THY Lodwvos oixiav éXOovta KOT'TELY, Kal éeyeuv QS Eevos & av apixrat didiay Towa OuEevos
Kal Eeviav 7 pos auTov. amrokpivapevov dé Tov Lorwvos ws olor Bédtiov ears toreicOar girdias, “Ouvxody,” pavar tov Ava apo, “abros av ovKot ov Toingal purdiav Kal Eeviav T pos nas.” ovTw 67 Oavpacavta Thy ayxivoway TOU / avO pos TOV LoAwva, béEacbac prrogpoves, kal xpovoy Tia KaTac Ely Tap auT@, 769 Ta onpoowa mpaTTovTa Kal gup-TATTOMEVOY TOUS VOMOUS. TOV obv “Avdyapoty

muOopevov KaTayeday THs Tpayyareias Tov yoAw-vos, olopevou ypaupacty eg few Tas adixias Kat mwreovetias TOY TONTOV, a pndev TOV apayvieoy Siapépery, GNX’ ws éxetva TOUS pev da Geveis kal
NET TOUS TOV GAL KoMevoV xabéEev, & vo be TOV
duvaTa@v Kat Tova tov S:appaynoe Oar. Tov dé LorAwva mpos TavTa hac evmety Tt Kal oup-Onxas dvOpwrot hurattovew, as ovdetépm Avat-414

81

SOLON

Theophrastus, however, says that the tripod was sent in the first place to Bias at Priene, and in the second place to Thales at Miletus, at the instance of Bias, and so passed through the hands of all the wise men until it came round again to Bias, and finally was sent to Delphi. These, then, are the more common versions of the tale. But some say that the gift thus passed from hand to hand was not the tripod now seen at Delphi, but a bowl sent there by Croesus; and others that it was a beaker left there by Bathycles.

V. In particular we are told of private intercourse between Solon and Anacharsis, and between Solon and Thales, of which the following accounts are given.! Anacharsis came to Athens, knocked at Solon’s door, and said that he was a stranger who had come to make ties of friendship and hospitality with him. On Solon’s replying that it was better to make one’s friendships at home, “ Well then,’ said Anacharsis, ‘do thou, who art at home, make me thy friend and guest.’’ So Solon, admiring the man’s ready wit, received him graciously and kept him with him some time. This was when he was already engaged in public affairs and compiling his laws. Anacharsis, accordingly, on learning what Solon was about, laughed at him for thinking that he could check the injustice and rapacity of the citizens by written laws, which were just like spiders’ webs; they would hold the weak and delicate who might be caught in their meshes, but would be torn in pieces by the rich and powerful. To this Solon is said to have answered that men keep their agreements with each other when neither party profits by an ee era

1 In chapters. v. and vi.

415

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tedés éott TrapaBaivey tav Oepévwv: Kal Tors
yomous avTos oUTwS dpyokeTas TOis TOAITALS WaTE mwaot Tov Tapavopev BéXTLov émidetEat TO Stxato‘a 9 le e > 4 ” mpayeiv. aAAa TavTa pev ws Avadyapors eixalev
adméBn wadrov } nat érrrida tod Yorwvos. edn 5é xaxeivo Oavydfav o ‘Avdyapous éxxdrAnoia Tapayevouevos, STL Aéyouor pev of cohol Tap
"EdAnaot, xpivovas 5é ot apabeis.
VI. IIpos @arjv 8 eis Midrntov éOovta tov
id 4 [14 4 \ \
Dorwva Oavpdter Gti ydpou Kal wardorrotlas 76
mapdtay nuédnke. Kal tov Badrfv tore pev
A , 9 > ‘4 e tA
ciwthoat, Siaditrovta & ddrkyas Hpépas avdpa
mapackevaca. §£évov, aptiws rev ddoxovta
Sexataiov €€ ’AOnvav. uOopévov 8 tod o-Novos ef 64 Te Katvov év tats AOnvats, dedidaypévov & yp Aéyerv Tov avVOpwrrov, “ OvSEér,” eimrety, ‘* &repov, et un vy Aia veavioxou Tivds Hv éxpopa
2 xal mpovTEeutrev) TOALS. Hv yap vids, ws épa-cay, avdpos évddEou Kal mpwtevovtos apeTn TaY TOMT@Y ov Taphy Oé, GAN arrodnyueiy Epacay avrov Hon TodvY Xpovov.” ‘“Os dvaTuXNS exeivos,” ddvat Tov Yorwva. “‘tiva b€ wvopatov avtov;” ““Hrovaa,” ddvat, “tovvoya, tov avOpwror,
“AN ov pynuoved@: TAY OTL TOAVS AOYOS Hy av-fe) / UA 39 oe \ 2 e VA
tov aodias Kal dixatocvuns.” odTw by Kal’ Exdorny aT OKptow i poBw Tpocayopevov Tov Yorwva kal TéXos 4On cuvTeTapaypévov avTov vToBdad-Lew Todvopa TH Eéve, ruvOavopevov yp) Yorwvos
3.0 TteOynkas vids @voudtero. gpyaavtos dé Tod avOpoTov, Tov pev opunoat Talew THY Kepadny
@ a , a)
kal Tada Trovety Kal réyerw A cupBaiver Tots 416
*,

SOLON

the breaking of them, and he was adapting his laws to the citizens in such a manner as to make it clear to all that the practice of justice was more advantageous than the transgression of the laws. But the results justified the conjecture of Anacharsis rather than the hopes of Solon. It was Anacharsis, too, who said, after attending a session of the assembly,

that he was amazed to find that among the Greeks,
the wise men pleaded causes, but the fools decided them.

VI. On his visit to Thales at Miletus, Solon is said to have expressed astonishment that his host was wholly indifferent to marriage and the getting of children. At the time Thales made no answer, but a few days afterwards he contrived to have a stranger say that he was just arrived after a ten days' journey from Athens. When Solon asked what news there was at Athens, the man, who was under instructions what to say, answered: "None other than the funeral of a young man, who was followed to the grave by the whole city. For he was the son, as I was told, of an honoured citizen who excelled all others in virtue; he was not at the funeral of his son; they told me that he had been travelling abroad for a long time." '"O the miserable man!" said Solon; "pray, what was his name?" "I heard the name,' the man said, "but I cannot recall it; only there was great talk of his wisdom and justice.'' Thus every answer heightened Solon's - fears, and at last, in great distress of soul, he told his name to the stranger and asked him if it was Solon's son that was dead. The man said it was; whereupon Solon began to beat his head and to do and say everything else that betokens a transport of mepiTadovar, Tov dé @arnv éemtrdaBopevoy avtov Kal yeddoavta, "Tadrd tot," davat, "a Yorgwv, éue ydpou Kal tratboTalas adiotnow, & Kal ce KaTEpElTreL TOV Eppwyevertatov. adda Oappe TaY AOyww Evena TOUTWY' Ov yap cioty addAnOeis." TadTA pev ovv "Eppirros iotopeiv pnot Udrarcov, bs épacke tHv Atowtou Wuyny éyetv.

VII. "Aromros &€ wal ayewns 0 Te Poy Tis

9 a \ a e \ af 4
amoPonijs THY KTHOW oY YpH Tpoiepevos ODT |
yap ay TUS OU TrovTov, ov dofav, ov codiav aryamna eve Taparyevowerny, Sedias atépec Oar.
Kai yap aperiy, as KThpa peilov ovder oud 78.0v, éErorapevny vm vor wy Kal dapudxwv opa@pev" aut Te Barz) ynpavee Wéov ovdev els ao-Bia, el py Kal pirov KT How Epuye Kal oixetoy
Kal mat ploos. GNA Kat waida Gerav gaye
OLN GfLEVOS avros TOD THS aberois, ay dace, KvBto Gov. éxovons yap Te Tis puxis ayann-TUKOD év éauTh Kal mepucuias, & Oomep ata Oavec Oar al Stavocia Bar Kal pynpovevew, ovTw Kal purely,

evdverat TL TOUT® Kal ‘Tpoapverat TOV exTOs ols oiKetov ovdéev EOTW, Kal Kab amep oiKov 7 X@pav yunoiwv Epnwov Siadoxyer, : TO pedoaropyor anNO-Tplor Kal voGou jwatoes 1 Jepdrovtes elo ouKe-odpevor Kat xataraBovtes Gps TO ptreiv TO ppovrivey nat Sedrévar rrepl auTav everroina ay.
oor ious ay avOparous aTEppoTtépa ™m pvoet mept yapou Kal yevécews tratdwv Saeryos ous, elta Tovs avtovs éml tratoly oixotpiBov 7 1 Opéupact Tahrkaxev vor ovar Kal OvicKover Tapa-Tetvopevous 700m Kai dwvas ayevveis adrévtas.
418
a 82

SOLON

grief. But Thales took him by the hand and said, with a smile, “ This it is, O Solon, which keeps me from marriage and the getting of children; it overwhelms even thee, who art the most stout-hearted of men. But be not dismayed at_ this story, for it is not true.” Such, at any rate, accord-ing to Hermippus, is the story of Pataecus, who used to boast that he had Aesop’s soul.

VII. However, it is irrational and ignoble to renounce the acquisition of what we want for fear of losing it ; for on this principle a man cannot be grati- fied by the possession of wealth, or honour, or wisdom, for fear he may be deprived of them. Indeed, even virtue, the most valuable and pleasing possession in the world, is often banished by sickness and drugs. And Thales himself, though unmarried, was never- theless not wholly free from apprehension, unless he also avoided having friends, or relations, or country. On the contrary, he had a son by his own adoption, as we are told, Cybisthus, his sister’s son. For the soul has in itself a capacity for affection, and loves just as naturally as it perceives, understands, and remembers. It clothes itself in this capacity, and attaches itself to those who are not akin to it, and just as if it were a house or an estate that lacks lawful heirs, this craving for affection is entered and occupied by alien and illegitimate children, or retainers, who, along with love for them, inspire anxiety and fear in their. behalf. So that you will find men of a somewhat rugged nature who argue against marriage and the begetting of children, and then, when children of their servants, or offspring of their concubines fall sick and die, these same men are racked with sorrow and lament abjectly. Some, too,

419
EE 2
2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

v N A 4 \ rf 9 A
no. 5é Kal Kuvav OavaT@ Kal irTov aLtaxpas ral dBiobrws bard Avans StetéOnoav. GAN Erepoi a bd \ 9 ; f.. IQA 4 ye twaidas ayabovs amoBaddvres ovdév émafov
\ 3Q? 3 4 > , > \ 4
Sewvov ovd' érroincay aicypov, GAXA Kai ypwpevot
T@ KOT Bip cata doyov Suetédecav. acévera yap, ov« edvota, AUTas atrepdvTous émayeTat Kal poBovs dvOp@ros davacKytos bro AOyou mpos Tux, ols ovd’ améXavats éyyivetat Tod ToBovpévov TrapovtTos, ToD péddovTos woivas ael Kab Tpdpmous Kal ayavas, eb oTEpicovTaL, TapeXoVvTOS
> a a) \ / , \ 4
abrois. oe be pare mevia mpos Xpyudtov mreppaxGas atépnow pare agiria a pos pirov
dtoBorny pnt daraidia mpos téxvav Odvaror, GANA TH Roytoue pos Twavra. Kal TavTa pév, > év TO TWapovTt, TAELOVA THV LKAVOV.
VIII. ’Evrei 8 paxpov twa Kal Svoxepi Trode-
a ,
pov of év dates mept THS Dadapwiwv vncov Meya-pedoe trodepoovtes ébéxapov, Kal vopov éOevro unre ypdrpar twa pnt’ eltreiy adOis as XpH THY modu avtitoetac0ar THS Larapivos, } Oavare a , / \ LO , e , tnpsodcbar, Bapéws pépwv tiv adofiav o Lorowr,
a“ ean “~
Kal Tov vévwy Opa@v Tordovs Seopévous apyis émt
Tov TréAEmov, avTOVS dé ut OappovvTas apkacBas Sud Tov vopov, éoxyn ato pev Exotacw TdV do-A U A
ytouav, Kal Noyos eis THY TOW ex THS oiKtas §ue5d0n Trapaxwnytixas eyew adtov, édeyela Se kpvda auvbels cal pedeTnoas wate Aéyewv aro aropatos, eterndnoey eis THY ayopay adv / , wv \ fe)
aminidvov mrepiOéuevos. OXAov dé Todo cuvdpa-1 weppdxGa: Bekker and Cobet, after Bryan: weravoda (be delivered from).
420

SOLON

at the death even of dogs and horses, have been plunged into shameful and intolerable grief. But. others have borne the loss of noble sons without terrible sorrow or unworthy conduct, and have con- formed the. rest of their lives to the dictates of reason. For it is weakness, not kindness, that brings men into endless pains and terrors when they are not trained by reason to endure the assaults of fortune. Such men do not even enjoy what they long for when they get it, but are filled with con- tinual pangs, tremors, and struggles by the fear of future loss. However, we must be fortified not by poverty against deprivation of worldly goods, nor by friendlessness against loss of friends, nor by child- lessness against death of children, but by reason against all adversities. This, under present circum- stances, is more than enough on this head.

VIII. Once when the Athenians were tired out with a war which they were waging against the Megarians for the island of Salamis, they made a law that no one in future, on pain of death, should move, in writing or orally, that the city take up its contention for Salamis. Solon could not endure the disgrace of this, and when he saw that many of the young men wanted steps taken to bring on the war, but did not dare to take those steps themselves on account of the law, he pretended to be out of his head, and a report was given out to the city by his family that he showed signs of madness. He then secretly composed some elegiac verses, and after rehearsing them so that he could say them by rote, he sallied out into the market-place of a sudden, with a cap upon his head. After a large crowd had

421

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

, , ane p - / /, 9 INA
wovros avaBas éri Tov tov KnpuKos ANiOov ev wdF dueERAOE THv EXeyelav, hs eatw apyn’
Autos xijpv& 7AOov ad’ iveptis Yarapivos, Koa mov emréwy @dIv avT ayopns Oémevos.
” \
TovTo TO Troinua Yarapmls éreyéyparrar Kal
/
oTivoy éxarov ETL, YapltévTwS Tavu TreTroLnmEeVvoOV.
tote 6€ dobévtos aitod cal trav iw Tod
Lorwvos apkapévwv erraweiv, padiota Sé Tod Tlesorotpatov trois tmrodTais éyxedevopévov xat qWapopyavros wetcOnvar Te AéyovTL, AVCaYTES Tov vopov avis HartovrTo Tod ToAé“ov, TpogTn-odpevor TOV Yowva.
, na nw
Ta pev ovv Snpwdn trav reyopévmv tolavT
3 / iid 4 > UA A éotiv, Stet mrevaas eri Kwrtdda peta tov
4 \ \ 3 4 4
Ileeccaotpdtov, nat xatarkaBwv avTods wacas

Tas yuvaixas tH Anuntpe thv mdtpiov Buciav éritedovoas, reper avdpa micTov els Yadapiva
TpooToLovpevoy AVTOMOAOY Elva, KEAEVOVTA TOUS
Mevyapeis, e& BovrAovra, tav ’AOnvaiwy tas pe-A A b] 4 b > “
tas NaBety yuvainas, éml Kwrrabda pet’ avtod a \ , e de Oé : e M mrely THY TAXLOTHVY. WS O€ TreLaVEVTES Of Meyapets dvdpas é&érreprav ev Ta Trol@ kal KaTeidev id An ry ,
0 LoOAwY TO WAoloy éEXaUYOLEVOY ATO THS VvIjCOU, TAS pev yuvaixas éxtrobwyv amedOely exérevae, Tov dé vewTépwr Tors pndérrw yevermvtas évdv-
a / pact Kal pitpats Kat virodnpact Tots exetvov ‘ , V4 \
oxevacapévous Kat AaBovtas éyyerpidva KpuTTTA waive xab yopevery mpocérate rpos TH Oardoon,
a \ péxpis av atroBa@ow ot Twohéuot Kal yévntae TO Totov vIroxeipiov. odTw 67 TOUTWY TPATTOLEVOY, 422

collected there, he got upon the herald’s stone and recited the poem which begins :—

“ Behold in me a herald come from lovely Salamis,
With a song in ordered verse instead of a harangue.”’ !

This poem is entitled “Salamis,” and contains a hundred very graceful verses. When Solon had sung it, his friends began to praise him, and Peisistratus in particular urged and incited the citizens to obey his words. They therefore repealed the law and renewed the war, putting Solon in command of it.

The popular account of his campaign is as follows. Having sailed to Cape Colias with Peisistratus, he found all the women of the city there, performing the customary sacrifice to Demeter. He therefore sent a trusty .man to Salamis, who pretended to be a deserter, and bade the Megarians, if they wished to capture the principal women of Athens, to sail to Colias with him as fast as they could. The Megarians were persuaded by him, and sent off some men in his ship. But when Solon saw the vessel sailing back from the island, he ordered the women to withdraw, and directed those of the younger men who were still beardless, arraying themselves in the garments, head-bands, and sandals which the women had worn, and carrying concealed daggers, to sport and dance on the sea shore until the enemy had disembarked and the vessel was in their power. This being done as he directed, the 1 Only six more verses are preserved (Fragments 1-3, Bergk). They contain reproaches of the Athenians for abandoning Salamis, and an exhortation to go and fight for it.

¢
wrraxOévres of Meyapeis rH dye Kal mpocpi-Eaves éyyus, éEerndwv as él yuvaixas, apurro-MevoL Tpos GAANAOUS,! Bote pndéva Sraduryety, GANA Tavras atroNécOat, Kal THY ViCoV émiTNEV-cavtas evOvds exe Tos "AOnvatous. .
IX. "Adore 9 gdacty ov' TovTov TOY TpoTrOY yevécOat THY KaTadnY iy, GANA TpaTov pev avT@ tov ev Aerdois Oedv ypiicac:
"Apxnyous xwpas Ovaiais Hpwas evoixous trtaco, Tovs KoATrals "Acwrias audixcarvrret, of POipevoe Sépxovrat és nédcov Svvovta: rov d&€ Yorwva StawrAevoavta vuKros Eis THY vioov éevreuciv aopayia Ilepepyjym xat Kuypet Tois Hpwatv. elta Tapa tav AOnvaiwy éerovras AaBeiy mevraxoaious, Sdypartos yevoyévou tovtous, dv KaTacyYa@ot THY vacoVv, Kupious elvat Tod morTevpatos. avaxOévta Sé ovyvais dddow dpa Tptaxovtopouv ouptapatreovans tbpoppi-cacbat TH Yadrapive kata ynAnv Twa pos THY EdBoav? aroBXérovaeav. mudopévous S€é rovs év Larapive Meyapeis &x Tivos dypuns ovdev BéRarov, avrovs pev eis TA SAA OopuBovpevous Baditerv, vaiv 8 amootetNat xatacKeouévny TOV ToXe-plov: Hs éyyus éXOovons xpatnoat Tov Yor(wva kal xabetpEat Tos Meyapeis. éuiBdoas 8é trav
"AOnvaiwy tovs Kpatiotous KeNevoavrTa reiv éml
THY TOALY, ws dv évdéynTat wddoTa KpvIrrovTas
1 &AAfAous Sintenis and Bekker assume here a lacuna in the text, where such details were given as are found in Polyaenus, Strategemata, i. 20.
2 EtBoay Sintenis suggests Nloaay (cf. xii. 3).

Megarians were lured on by what they saw, beached their vessel, and leapt out to attack women, as they supposed, vying with one another in speed. The result was that not a man of them escaped, but all were slain, and the Athenians at once set sail and took possession of the island.

IX. Others, however, say that the island was not taken in this way, but that Solon first received thi. oracle from the god at Delphi : —

“The tutelary heroes of the land where once they lived, with sacred rites Propitiate, whom the Asopian plain now hides in its bosom ;
There they lie buried with their faces toward the setting sun.”

Thereupon Solon sailed by night to the island and made sacrifices to the heroes Periphemus and Cychreus. Then he took five hundred Athenian volunteers, a decree having been made that these - should be supreme in the government of the island if they took it, and setting sail with a number of fishing boats convoyed by a thirty-oared ship, he anchored off the island of Salamis, at a point of land looking towards Euboea. But the Megarians in the city of Salamis, hearing only an uncertain report of what had happened, armed themselves hurriedly and set out for the place, at the same time dispatching a ship to spy out the enemy. This ship came near and was captured by Solon, who put her crew in confinement. Then he manned her with the best of his Athenians, and ordered them to sail against the city, keeping themselves as much éautovs: dua 5é tovs aAXous AOnvalous avara-Bovra weln cupdépecOar trois Meyapetou Kai THS paxns ett cuvertoons POdcat Tovs aro THs yews KaTaXaBovtas THY TOALY.

ww \ fe] , 4 \ \ , Eorxe 6€ TO AOYM TOVT@ Kai Ta Spwpeva

paptupety. vats yap tis “Attixy mpocémXer TLWT TO TP@TOV, Elta Kpavyh.Kal adaraypo
/ > \ 4 bd /
mpoagepouéevwy els avnp evorrros é€addopevos
\ a x4 \ bd N 10 12 ”
peta Bons be tmpos axpov To Yxupadsov é« yAs
4 / \ a 9 , ‘
mpocghepopévois. mArnoiov dé tod ‘Evvadiouv To iepov éoTw tdpvcapévouv Lorwvos. evinnoe yap \ 4 \ @ \ 4 >
tous Meyapéas, nal Scot pn ScepOapnoav év
TH paXy, Tavtas UTOaTIOVSOUS adnKev.
X. Ov phy adda tov Meyapéwy émipevovtov \ \ \ ce) 9 a /
To\Na Kaka Kal SpavtTes ev T@ Totem Kal
Tacyovtes, étoincavto Aaxedapoviovs d1adda-KTas Kal Sixactas. ot pev ov ToAXNOL TO DorAwu
, 4 A e 4 Ld
cuvaywvicacbar Aéyovot. tHv ‘Opunpov Sokav: > / \ > \ ” > fe) li“ éuBadovta yap avrov émos es veav KaTadoyov
éri ths diene avayvovar Alas & é« Ladapivos dyev Svoxaidexa vias, atnae 8 aywv ty A@Onvaiwy ictavto parayyes.
avtol & ’A@nvaioe tadta ev olovtar drvapiay elvat, Tov b€ Yorkwvd dhacw amobdeiEae tots ba rd a \ ) 4 wv
Kactais ott Diratos cai Evpuvoaxns, Alavtos
viol, "AOnvnot trodtTelas petadaBovtes tapé-1 Xxipddiov after this word Sintenis and Bekker assume a lacuna in the text.

concealed as was feasible. At the same time, with the rest of his Athenians, he engaged the Megarians on land, and while the fight was still raging, the crew of the ship succeeded in capturing the city.

"Now there seems to be a confirmation of this story in certain ceremonies afterwards established. Namely, an Attic ship would approach the island in silence at first, then its crew would make an onset with shouts and cries, and one man in full armour would leap out with a shout of triumph and run to the promontory of Sciradium to inform those who were attacking by land. Hard by that place is the temple of Enyalius! which was erected by Solon. For he conquered the Megarians, and all who were not slain in the battle were released on parole.

X. Notwithstanding all this, the Megarians persisted in their opposition, and both sides inflicted and suffered many injuries in the war, so that finally they made the Lacedaemonians arbiters and judges of the strife. Accordingly, most writers say that the fame of Homer favoured the contention of Solon ; for after himself inserting a verse into the Catalogue of Ships, he read the passage at the trial thus :—

«« Ajax from Salamis brought twelve ships,
And bringing, stationed them near the Athenian hosts.” 2

The Athenians themselves, however, think this an idle tale, and say that Solon proved to the judges

that Philaeus and Eurysaces, the sons of Ajax, became citizens of Athens, made over their island

| 1 Ares. 2 Iliad, ii. 557 f.

Socayv tHv vaoov avtois, Kal KkaT@Knoav o peéev
év Bpavpou tis “Attixys, 0 5é év Medity: Kat Sjuov éravupov Piraiov trav Diraidav Eyovouv,
e¢ * ’ v \ a 9 ,
60ev tw Ileciotpatos. ére dé parrov éFeréyEar
\ A , >] ,
tous Meyapéas BovAcdpevov ioyupicacBae rept
TOV VEKPOY @S OVX Sy TpoTOY Eéxetvor BaTrTOVEL KexndeupLevov, GAN bv avToi. Odmtovotr 5é Meyapeis mpos &w Tovs vexpovs aotpépovtes, ‘AOn-a \ N e lA € VA \ e A vaio. 5é mpos éotrépav. “Hpéas dé 0 Meyapeus
épiotapevos déyer kal Meyapeis mpos éotrépav TETPAL EVA TH THOpATA TOV vexpav TiOévaL’ Kal
peitov éte TovTov, piav Exactov AOnvaiwy exe Onxnv, Meyapéwy 5é Kal tpets Kal téooapas év
a A “a / , a
pod KxeicOat. Te pévTos Yorove Kal vOcKovs twas BonOjoat Aéyovet Ypnopous, ev ols a Beds

"laoviay thy Ladapiva mpoonyopevoe. TavTny Thy Sixny édixacay Lraptiatav mévre avipes, Kpttoraidas, "Apouddpetos, ‘Tyrnxidas, ’Avaki-Nas, Kreopévns.
XI. "Hdn pév otv Kal dio tovtwv évdokos
Av 0 YoAwV Kal péyas. eOavydobn 5é wai dte-BonOn padrrov év tois “EAAnow eltr@v birép tov iepov tov év Aeddois, ws yp BonOetv nal pr meptopav Kippaiovs uBpifovtas eis 76 pavreion, 9 \ / e A a “ a aANG Tpocapuvey UTrép ToD Beod Aedsois. ret-abévtes yap um’ éxeivou mpos TOY TOAELOY @pun-cap ot Apdixtioves, as ANXNOL TE papTUpOder Kal
"Apiotorérns ev tH Tov IIvOtoviKov avaypady 428

SOLON

to them, and took up their residence in Attica, one at Brauron, and the other at Melité; and they have a township named after Philaeus, namely Philaidae, to which Peisistratus belonged. They say, too, that Solon, wishing to refute the claims of the Megarians still further, made the point that the dead on the island of Salamis were not buried after the Megarian, but after the Athenian fashion. For the Megarians bury their dead facing the east, but the Athenians facing the west. However, Hereas the Megarian denies this, and says that the Megarians also turn the faces of their dead to the west. And what is still more important than this, he says that the Athenians use one tomb for each body, whereas the Megarians (like the early inhabitants of Salamis) place three or four bodies in one tomb. However, they say that Solon was further supported by sundry Pythian oracles, in which the god spoke of Salamis as Ionian. This case was decided by five Spartans, Critolaidas, Amompharetus, Hypsechidas, Anaxilas, and Cleomenes.
XI. These events, then, presently made Solon famous and powerful. But he was even more admired and celebrated among the Greeks for what he said in behalf of the temple at Delphi, namely, that the Greeks must come to its relief, and not suffer the people of Cirrha to outrage the oracle, but aid the Delphians in maintaining the honour of the god. For it was by his persuasion that the Amphictyons! undertook the war, as Aristotle, among others, testifies, in his list of the victors at the Pythian games,

1 The twelve peoples who had as coinmon sanctuaries the temple of Apollo at Delphi and the temple of Demeter at Anthela, near Thermopylae.
429

N

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 Yorwve THY yvounv avatibeis. ov pévTot oTpa- 84
THYyOS éml TovTOV amedeixXOn TOV TrOAELOV, OS Aéyerv Hnoly"Epysmos EvavOn tov Yapsov- ote yap Aioyivns o pntwp Tobit eipnKxev, év TE ToIS Acrkdhov vropvnpacw "Adkpaiwv, od orp,
"AOnvaiwy otpatTnyos avayéypaTrrat.
XII. To 8 KuvAwvecov dyos 45n pév éx trodAod duetdparte THv moALv, €€ ob TOs TUYWmOTAS TOD Kvrwvos ixerevovtas tHv Oedv Meyaxdys 0 apyov
éml Sixn xatedeiv Erecoev' éEdxypavtas 5é tod Gdous Kpoxny KXwoTHV Kal TAaUTHS EXOMEVOUS, WS
éyévovto mepl tas ceyvas Beds xataPaivovtes, avToudTws THS KpOKNS payeions, @punoe ava-AauBdvev o Meyarrns nal ot cuvdpyovtes, ws THs Oeod THY ixeciav atroNeyopévns' Kal Tovs meV
éw xatédXevoay, of 5é toils Bwpots mpoaduyovtes aneopdynaav: povot & adetOnoay oi Tas yuvai-2 Kas avTov ixerevoavtes. é€x TovTov dé KANOevTES évayels éutcodvto: kal trav Kudovelwy of trept-

= yevopevoe TdALY Haoav ioxupol, Kal otacidlovTes del Suetédouv mpds tods amd Tod Meyaxdéous.
éy dé T@ TOTE Ypovm THS oTdcews aKpnV Ra-Botvons partota Kal tod Sypov dtactdvtos, 75n Sofav éxywv o YorAwy TapHdrAOev eis pécov aya tois apiotas tav "AOnvaiwy, cal deopevos Kat diddcKwy éretce TOUvs evayeis Neyopévous Sixnv 430

SOLON

where he ascribes the measure to Solon. He was not, however, appointed general for this war, as Evanthes the Samian says (according to Hermippus), for Aeschines the orator makes no such statement,} and in the records of Delphi it is stated that Alcmaeon, and not Solon, commanded the Athenians.

XII. Now the Cylonian pollution had for a long time agitated the city, ever since Megacles the archon had persuaded Cylon and his fellow-con- spirators, who had taken sanctuary in the temple of Athena, to come down and stand their trial.2. They fastened a braided thread to the image of the _ goddess and kept hold of it, but when they reached the shrine of the Erinyes on their way down, the thread broke of its own accord, upon which Megacles and _ his: fellow-archons rushed to seize them, on the plea that the goddess refused them the rights ot suppliants. Those who were outside of sacred pre- cincts were stoned to death, and those who took refuge at the altars were slaughtered there; only those were spared who made supplication to the wives of the archons. Therefore the archons were called polluted men and were held in execration. The survivors of the followers of -Cylon also re- covered strength, and were forever at variance with the descendants of Megacles. At this particular time the quarrel was at its height and the people divided between the two factions. Solon, therefore, being now in high repute, interposed between them, along with the noblest of the Athenians, and by his entreaties and injunctions persuaded the men who were held to be polluted to submit to a trial, and to

1 In his speech Against Ctesiphon, § 109.
2 About 6363.c. Cf. Herod. v. 71; ‘hue. i. 126.

irocyeiy Kal xpiOjvar Tpiaxociov apiotivdny Sixativtav. Mupavos dé tod Prvéws xatnyopodvtos éddwaoay of advdpes, Kal petéctnoay ot tavres: tov & amoOavovtwy Tovs vexpovs avo-4 9¢s e \ \ 4 7
putavtes éFéppupay umép tous Opouvs. TavTats Sé tais tapaxais cal Meyapéwv cuveTriPepévov amnéBarov te Nicaray ot AOnvatos cal Yarapivos ékérecov adOius. Kat goBot Teves éx Setrordac-povias dua nal ddopata Kateiye THY TON, Ot Te pdvres ayn Kal pLacpovs Seopévous xabappov mpopatverOat Sia TOV lepev 7ryopevoy.
a \ 4 > a 2 4
Oitw 6) petdmeprtos avtois jKev ex Kpnrns
"Exripevidns 0 Paictios, dv EBdopov ev tois codois
KataptOpovow Eviot TOV ov Tpoctepévwv Tov
TlepiavSpov. édoxer S€ tus elvat Oeopirns Kat
\ \ \ a \ > \ \ copes Tept Ta Ocia tHhv évOovovactiKny Kal Te-Neotixny codiav, 66 nal waida vuppys svopa
Baarns cat Kovpnta véov avtov ot tote avOpwrot
/ \ \ \ a > / , mpoanyopevuv. €\Oov dé Kal TO BoAwM yYpnoapevos dito TOAAa TpoocuTElpyacato Kal mTpow-
, > a A 7 N ?
Somoinaey adr@ Tis vopobecias. Kal yap evota-
A >

Nets eroinoe Tas tepoupyias Kal mept Ta wévOn
, f \ »AN ? V4 N
mpaotépous, Ovaias tivas evOrs avauitas mpos Ta Kon, Kal TO oKANPOY aderov Kat TO BapBa-pixov w ouvelxyorvTo WpoTepov ai WreEioTas yuvaixes. TO dé péytoTov, (Aacpots Teas Kai xadappois xai (Spvcect xatopytacas Kai xaooww-432

abide by the-decision of three hundred jurors selected from the nobility. Myron of Phlya conducted the prosecution, and the family of Megacles was found guilty. Those who were alive were banished, and the bodies of the dead were dug up and cast forth beyond the borders of the country. During these disturbances the Megarians also attacked the Athen- ians, who lost Nisaea, and were driven out of Salamis once more. The city was also visited with super- stitious fears and strange appearances, and the seers declared that their sacrifices indicated pollutions and defilements which demanded expiation.

Under these circumstances they summoned to their aid from Crete Epimenides of Phaestus, who is reckoned as the seventh Wise Man by some of those who refuse Periander a place in the list.1 He was reputed to be a man beloved of the gods, and endowed with a mystical and heaven-sent wisdom in religious matters. Therefore the men of his time said that he was the son of a nymph named Balte, and called him a new Cures.2,- On coming to Athens he made Solon his friend, assisted him in many ways, and paved the way for his legislation. For he made the Athenians decorous and careful in their religious services, and milder in their rites of mourning, by attaching certain sacrifices immediately to their funeral ceremonies, and by taking away the harsh and barbaric practices in which their women had usually indulged up to that time. Most important of all, by sundry rites of propitiation and purification, and by sacred foundations, he hallowed and conse-

1 See note on iii. 5, and cf. Aristotle. Const. of Athens, i.

2 The Curetes were Cretan priests of Idaean Zeus, who took their name from the demi-gods to whose care Rhea was said to have committed the infant Zeus.

A / e 4 a f \ A
cas THY TOMY UTTHKOOY Tov Sixaiov Kal padrov evTretOn mpos opovoray KaTéoTnae. RéyeTar Sé \ / ION N \ \
Thv Movvvyiav idov xat Kxatapabov todvy
, A

\Vpovoy, ElTEely POS TOUS TapoYTas WS TUpAdY
éoTs TOU péAXOVTOS aVvOpwTros: éxpayeiy yap av
"AOnvaious Tois avTa@y ddovcwy, et Tpondecav boa
THY TOMY avidoeL TO Ywpiov. Gpovov 5é Ti Kai
Oarjy cixdoat Néyovow KEedeVTAL yap auToV év
Tut ToT THS MeAdnoias pPavrA@ Kal Tapopwopévp TeXeuvTycavTa Oeivar, mpoeiT@V WS ayopd ToTE
tovtTo Midnociwy éotar To ywpiov. *Eripevidyns
pév ov partota Oavpacbeis, xal ypnpata &e-Sovtwy ToANG Kal Timas peyddas Tov AOnvaiwr, QV A \ ed \ A e n 4 ? A ovdeyv 7 OarXov aro THS Lepas éXalas aiTnadpevos Kat NaBov anr7nnrlev.
XIII. Oi & ’A@nvaios tHs KuXwveiou tetrav-pévns Tapayns Kal peOcotoHTwv, Baotrep elpynraz, TOV evayOv, THY TadaLay avlis oTdow brép THS
f bd / a 4
mTodTelas eatacialoy, doas 7» ywpa d:adhopas
A a /
elyev, eis TOTavTA pépn THS TOAEWS StacTaoNs.
Hv yap To pev Tov Ataxpiwv yévos SnpoxpatiKe-TAaTOV, oALyapyLKw@TaToV dé TO THY Iledséwy- Tpi-tot © ot Ildpadoe pécov twa xa pepeypévov
aipovpevos ToALTeias TpOTOY, éuTobwYv HRoav Kat
Sex@dvov Tovs ETépous KpaThoat. ToTe bé€ THS TOV
TEVHTWVY TPOS TOUS TAOVGLOUS avwuaias Bomwep
> \ / 4 9 “ e ‘
akpnv XaBovons TavTaTacw éeTiaparas 7 TOMS
duéxerto, Kal povws dv édoxer xatacthHvat xat 434

85

P SOLON

crated the city, and brought it to be observant of justice and more easily inclined to unanimity. It is said that when he had seen Munychia! and considered it for some time, he remarked to the bystanders that man was indeed blind to the future ;
for if the Athenians only knew what mischiefs the place would bring upon their city, they would devour it with their own teeth. A similar insight into futurity is ascribed to Thales. They say that he gave directions for his burial in an obscure and neglected quarter of the city's territory, predicting that it would one day be the market-place of Miletus.

Well then, Epimenides was vastly admired by the Athenians, who offered him much money and large honours; but he asked for nothing more than a branch of the sacred olive-tree, with which he returned home.
XIII. But the Athenians, now that the Cylonian disturbance was over and the polluted persons ban- ished, as described," relapsed into their old disputes about the form of government, the city being divided into as many parties as there were diversities in its territory. The Hill-men favoured an extreme democracy ; the Plain-men an extreme oligarchy ; the Shore-men formed a third party,? which pre- ferred an intermediate and mixed form of govern- ment, was opposed to the other two, and prevented either from gaining the ascendancy. At that time, too, the disparity between the rich and the poor had culminated, as it were, and the city was in an alto- gether perilous condition ; it seemed as if the only

1 The acropolis of the Peiraeus, strategically commanding not only that peninsula, but also Athens itself. It was often garrisoned by conquerors of Athens. 2 Chapter xii. 3. 3 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xiii. 4.

ic? |
]
bo

mavoacOar tapattopéevn tupavvidos yevopevns.
amas pev yap o Shpos hv vTdxpews THY Trov-ciwy. yap éyewpyouv éxecivors Exta TaV Ye-VOMEVOY TEAOUVTES, EXTNMOPLOL TpPOTaryopEevopLEVOL kal Onres, } ypéa AapPavovtes em) Tois Topaciy ayeytyor tos SavelCovow jhoav, ot pev avrod Sovrevovtes, of & éml tiv Eévnv mimpacKnopevot.
ToANol O€ Kal Traidas idious nvayxdlovto Tw.
(ovdels yap vouos exwrAve) cal THY TOAW hevryety
dua. THY YareTTOTHTA Tov SaveaTtav. ot Se TeéioTot Kal pwyarewrTato: cvrvicotayTo Kal Tapexd-Nouv GAAHAOUS 1) Treptopav, aAX' éEXouévous &va mpootdtny advdpa muatov aperécOas rovs virep-nuépovs Kal thy yhv avabdcacOa Kal dros PETAOTHOAL THY TONTELAD.
XIV. 'Evrat0a 8) trav' AOnvalwy of dpovipe-TATOL TUVOPAYTES TOY LOAwWVA LOVOY paMLoTA TOY apapTnuateav éxrds bvtTa, Kal pte Tos TWAOVAtOLS

KotvwvoovTa Tis adixlas ponte tails tay Tevntwv avayKais évexopuevov, édéovto Tois KoLVvOIS TrpOTEN-Oeiy kal xatarratoa Tas Svadopds. Kaitot Pavias
o AéoBuos avdtov iotopet Tov YorAwva, Ypnodpevov aTraTy Tpos auotépous eri cwtnpia THS TOAEWS, vrocyéc0at Kpida Tots pev aTropois THY véewNory, Tos O€ xpnuaTtixois BeBaiwow tav cuvpBoraiwv.
GN' avTos o LorAwy oxvav dnot TO TPa@TOV arba-cOat THS TodtTelas, Kal SeSorcas TeV pev THY eh eimiblan tov 5¢ thy bTepnpaviav. npéOn
é dpyewv peta DirouBpotov opod nab dsadrraxTys Kal vonobérns, SeFapnévwr mpoOvpws adtov ws pev
436

way to settle its disorders and stop its turmoils was to establishatyranny. All the common people were in debt tothe rich. For they either tilled their lands for them, paying them a sixth of the increase (whence they were called Hectemorioi and Thetes), or else they pledged their persons for debts and could be seized by their creditors, some becoming slaves at home, and others being sold into foreign countries. Many, too, were forced to sell their own children (for there was no law against it), or go into exile, because of the cruelty of the money-lenders. But the most and sturdiest of them began to band together and exhort one another not to submit to their wrongs, but to choose a trusty man as their leader, set free the condemned debtors, divide the land anew, and make an entire change in the form of government.

XIV. At this point, the wisest of the Athenians cast their eyes upon Solon. They saw that he was the one man least implicated in the errors of the time ; that he was neither associated with the rich in their injustice, nor involved in the necessities of the poor. They therefore besought him to come forward publicly and put an end to the prevailing dissensions. And yet Phanias the Lesbian writes that Solon of his own accord played atrick upon both parties in order to save the city, and secretly promised to the poor the distribution of Jand which they desired, and to the rich, validation of their securities. But Solon himself says that he entered public life reluctantly, and fearing one party's greed and the other party's arrogance.!_ However, he was chosen archon? to succeed Philombrotus, and made mediator and legislator for the crisis, the rich

1 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, y. 3. 2 594 B.c.

" A la e \ A ,
eUTropov TOV TAOVGiMY, ws Se YNoTOY TOV TeEV1-
/ 3 a 4
Tov. rAéyeTat 5é Kal dwv) Tis avTOd TEepipepopevn
MPOTEPOV, ELTOVTOS WS TO loov TOAELOP OV TrOLEl, Kal Tois KTnpaTLKOIS apéoKey Kal TOiS AGKTHMOCL,

Tav pev akia Kal apeTn, TV Sé péTp@ Kal aprOu@
To icov éev mpocdoxavtTwv’ dOev én’ édrridos peyarns éxatépwv yevouévwv ot mpoiotdpevor
A , A TpocéKelvTo TH Yorwov tupavvida mpokevodvtes

/ a kal avareiOovtes evToApoTepov arracGar THs
4 b a 4 \ “

TONEWS EYKPATH yevopuevov. Todd bé Kal TOY 51a, pécov ToNTOY, THY UITO AOyou Kal vopou petaBorny opavtes épyodn Kal yarerny ovoay, oun épevyov &va Tov Sixardtatov Kal ppovipwra-Tov émisTHaat Tos Tpaypacw. évior 5€ haat Kal pavteiav yevéoOar T@ Yorwve TlvOo0t torav-
TH"
*Hoo péonv kata via xuBepyntiptoy & Epyov
” edOUver: modXob TOL "AOnvaiwy émixoupot.
padota bé of cuvnbers éexaxtCov et dia Tovvopa
Sutwreita: THv povapylav, OaTrEp OvK apEeTH TOU AaBovtos evOs Av Bactretay yevopervny, xal yeyevnuévny ampotepov pev EvBoetor Tuvvar-dav, viv oe MetvAnvaiows Iittaxov npnpévors TUpavvov.
Tovrav ovdév eFéxpouce TOV Lodwva TIS avTOU Tpoarpésews, advra Tpos peév tovs dirous elrrev, as Aeyera, KaXov peév eivat THY tupavvida x«ptov, OvK Exew Sé amroBacw, pos S& Daxov év roils Tompacs ypapwv’
438

SOLON

accepting him readily because he was well-to-do, and the poor because he was honest. _It is also said that a certain utterance of his which was current ‘before his election, to the effect that equality bred no war, pleased both the men of substance and those who had none ; the former expecting to have equality based on worth and excellence, the latter” on measure and count. Therefore both parties were in high hopes, and their chief men persistently recommended a tyranny to Solon, and tried to persuade him to seize the city all the more confidently now that he had it completely in his power. Many citizens, too, who belonged to neither party, seeing that it would be a laborious and difficult matter to effect a change by means of argument and law, were not reluctant to have one man, the justest and wisest of all, put at the head of the state. Furthermore, some say that Solon got an oracle at Pytho which ran as follows :— |

‘Take thy seat amidships, the pilot’s task is thine ; Perform it ; many in Athens are thine allies.”

And above all, his familiar friends chid him for being averse to absolute power because of the name of tyranny, as if the virtues of him who seized it would not at once make it a lawful sovereignty. Kuboea (they argued) had formerly found this true of Tynnondas, and so had the Mitylenaeans, now that they had chosen Pittacus to be their tyrant.

None of these things shook Solon from _ his resolution. To his friends he said, as we are told, that a tyranny was a lovely place, but there was no way down from it. And in his poems he writes to Phocus :— 439

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ei b€ yfjs (bnaiv) épecoauny 86
maTpioos, Tupavvioos 5é cal Bins apecdixyou ov Kabmpduny pudvas Kal Kataoxvvas Kréos, ovdey aideduat wAgov yap @be uixjoew Soxéw mwavtas avO parrous.
5Oev evdnrov Sti Kal po THS vopoOecias peyd-

6 Any Soap elyev. & 5é huyovros avdtod THY Tupavvida ToAAOL KaTayed@vTes Edeyov, yéypadev OUTwWS°
Ovx épu YorAwv Babidpav ovdé Bovrnes avnp-écOXa yap Oeod Sid0vtos avbtos ovn édéEaTo.
TepiBarwv & aypav ayacbels ovx éréctracev péya
dixtuov, Ovpovd 0 apapth nal gpevav arro-oparels.
nOeXov! ydp Kev Kpatynoas, wAOvTOY adOovov
- NaBov
cat tupavyetoas AOnvav podvor nuépay piar, aoKos' dotepov SeddpOar xatrirerpipOas yévos.
XV. Tadta tovs modXdovs Kal davrous rept avTovd memoinxe NéyovTas. ov mV aTwcdpeEvos
ye THY TUpavvida Tov TpadTaToY ex pHoaTo TpOTrOY TOls Tpdypact, ovdé paraxas OVS UTretKwy Tots Suvapévols ovde mpos ndovnv Tav édXopévwv eto HOedov, aoxds Bergk, with the better MSS, : 4GcAcv, airds (he (Solon) wowd have been willing ; himself).

440

“ And if,” he says, “I spared my land,
My native land, and unto tyranny and violence implacable
Did not set hand, polluting and disgracing my fair
-fame,
I’m not ashamed ; in this way rather shall my name
be set above
That of all other men.” !
From this it is clear that even before his legislation
he was in high repute. And as for the ridicule which many heaped upon him for refusing the tyranny, he has written as follows ;— ‘“¢ Solen was a shallow thinker and a man of counsel void ;

When the gods would give him blessings, of his own will he refused.
When his net was full of fish, amazed, he would not pull it in,
_All for lack of spirit, and because he was bereft ot sense.
I had certainly been willing, for the power, and boundless wealth,
And to be tyrant over Athens no more. than a single day,
Then to have a poueh flayed from me, and my lineage blotted out.” ?

XV. Thus he represents the multitude and men of low degree as speaking of him. However, though he rejected the tyranny, he did not administer affairs in the mildest possible manner, nor in the enactment of his laws did he show a feeble spirit, nor make concessions to the powerful, nor consult the pleasure

1 Fragment 32 (Bergk). 2 Fragment 33 (Bergk).

\ Ld 9 > @ \ C4 9 2 > , TOUS VOMLOUS* ANN 7) MEV APLOTOV HV, OUK ET ITYATVEV
‘
iatpelav ovde xawvoropuiav, poBnOels yn ouyyéas mavrdrace Kal tapakas Thy wodw acbevéatepos

yévntat Tov KatacThcat mddtv Kal cuvappo-
\ \ A \ \ 4, bd
cacbat mpos TO apictov: & 5é Kal réyor HALLE
meopévots nal mpocdywyv davayxny bropévovet XpnoacBat, tadr’ Erpattev, Os dno avTos, ‘Opod Binv te cai Sixny cuvappocas.!

d0ev Botepov epwrnGels ci Tovs apiotous *AOn-vatows vopous éyparpev, “ "Ov adv,” en, “ mpoaedé-Eavto Tovs apiotous.
“A 8 oby of vewtepor Tovs “AOnvaiouvs Aéyoucr
Tas TOY TpaypaTtwy Svaxepeias Gvopact xpnorois Kal diravOperros émixadvTrrovtas aotelws vio-xopilecOat, Tas pév Tropvas étaipas, Tovs 5é dopovs ovrtakes, dudaxas 5€ tas ppouvpas Tov modewv, oixnua dé TO SeopwrTnpioy Kadovvtas, TpwTov YOAwVoS HV, Ss CoLKE, TOPLT PA THY TOV
NV pEeav atroxoT Ny cecadyOeay ovopacavTos. TovTO yap eToincato mpwToy TodiTevpa, ypa\as Ta bev uTdpyovta TaVv ypeav aveioBat, mpos Sé TO Noutrov éeml Tols cwopact undéva Saveilerv. Kaitot tives éyparpay, wy éativ Avdpotiwy, ovx atroxoTa YVPEOV, GAAA TOKwWY peTPLOTNTL KovgicOEévTas aya-THoaL TOUS TévNTAS, Kal cetcadyOeay ovoydoat
TO ptravOpwrevpa tTovTO Kal THY Gua TOUT
ryevomevny TOY Te MET PWV emavEnow Kal Tob vop-TUATOS TlunY. ExaToYv yap éTroince Spaypav THY 1 Fragment 36, verse 14 (Bergk); verse 16 of the longer fragment now found in Aristotle’s Const. of Athens, chapter xii. 4, where we have xpdre:: vduov, Blny re KTA, of his electors. Nay, where a condition was as good as it could well be, he applied no remedy, and introduced no innovation, fearing lest, after utterly confusing and confounding the city, he should be too weak to establish it again and recompose it for the best. But those things wherein he hoped to find them open to persuasion or submissive to compulsion,

these he did,
‘‘Combining both force and justice together,”

as he says himself. Therefore when he was afterwards asked if he had enacted the best laws for the Athenians, he replied, “The best they would receive.” |

Now later writers observe that the ancient Athenians used to cover up the ugliness of things with auspicious and kindly terms, giving them polite and endearing names. Thus they called harlots “companions,’ taxes “contributions,” the garrison of a city its “guard,” and the prison a “chamber.” But Solon was the first, it would seem, to use this device, when he called his cancelling of debts a “disburdenment.” For the first of his public measures was an enactment that existing debts should be remitted, and that in future no one should lend money on the person of a borrower. Some writers, however, and Androtion is one of them, affirm that the poor were relieved not by a can- celling of debts, but by a reduction of the interest upon them, and showed their satisfaction by giving the name of “disburdenment’”’ to this act of humanity, and to the augmentation of measures and the pur- chasing power of money which accompanied it.! For 1 See Aristotle, Const. of Athens, x. 1, with Sandys’ note.

or

pvav mpotepov éBdounxovta Kal tprdv ovcar, dor aptOu@ pev icov, dvvaye 8 edattov atodiSovTwr, aderciaOar péev Tovs exTivovtas peydra, pndev S¢ BrarrecGar tovs Koptlopévouvs. ot dé mTrEloTOL TdvTWY opod dace TaV cupBodraiwy dvaipeciy yevécOas THY ceroadxOerav, Kal TovToLs ouvgde: adXov TA Tounpata. Lewvuverar yap Lorwy ev TovToLs OTL THS Te TpOUTrOKELpLEeVNS YAS “Opous aveiie ToANAXH TETNYyOTAS mpoabev 5é SovrAevovaa, viv érevbépa:
Kal TOY aywyipwv Tpds apyupLov yeyovoTwv ToXt-TOV TOUS wey avyyayev aro Eévns, yAdooay ovxér’ Arricny iévtas, @s dv TOAAAYH TAAVwWLEVOUS:
\ > 9 709 3 A 4 bd 4
tous © évOdd’ avrod SovAinv aetkéa

Exyovras
érevOépovs dyol mrorjoag.
IIpaypa 8 avta cupmecety Néyetas TdavTev dviapotatov amo THs mpdkews éexeivns. as yap appnoev aviévat TA ypéa Kal Noyous apLoTtovTas éfnre. xal mpémovcay apynv, éxowwcato Tav

dirwv ols padicta motevwv Kal ypwpevos
2 lA a ‘ S
éruyyave, Tois mept Kovwva nal KrYreviav rai ‘Immovcov, Stu ynv pev ov pédreEL Kiveiv, Ypeav
Sé movely atroxomras eyvaxev. of 5é mporaPovtes
3 \ 4 > 4 : \ bd 4
evOvs cal d0acavtes ebaveicavTo suyvov apyupior 444

87

SOLON

he made the mina to consist of a hundred drachmas, which before had contained only seventy-three, so that by paying the same amount of money, but money of a lesser value, those who had debts to discharge were greatly benefited, and those who accepted such payments were no losers. But most writers agree that the “disburdenment’”’ was a removal of all debt, and with such the poems of Solon are more in accord. For in these he proudly boasts that from the mortgaged lands
‘‘ He took away the record-stones that everywhere
were planted ;
Before, Earth was in bondage, now she is free.”’!
And of the citizens whose persons had been seized for debt, some he brought back from foreign lands,

“uttering no longer Attic speech,
So long and far their wretched wanderings ;
And some who here at home in shameful servitude Were held "’?
he says he set free.

This undertaking is said to have involved him in the most vexatious experience of his life. For when he had set out to abolish debts, and was trying to find fitting arguments and a suitable occasion for the step, he told some of his most trusted and intimate friends, namely, Conon, Cleinias, and Hipponicus, that he was not going to meddle, with the land, but had determined to cancel debts. They immediately took advantage of this confidence and anticipated

1 Fragment 36, verses 4 f. (Bergk), with adaptation from the first person ; verses 6f. in Aristotle’s citation.

2 Fragment 36, verses 9-12 (Bergk); verses 11-14 in Aristotle.
445

a“ / 4 ,
Tapa TOV TOVGiwY Kal peyddas TUVEWYHCAYTO
ywpas. elta Tod Soypatos é&evexOévtos Ta pev KTHpaTa KapTovpeEvol, TA 5é ypnpata Tots Savel-
> 3 , ? > 9 \ /
Tac ovK atrodtoovtes, eis aitiay Tov Yorwva
4 \ / a 3 4
peyarny cal dtaBornv, woTEp ov cuvadiKovpevor, J \ “ , t] “A
a@yrXa cuvabsixovvta, Kxatéotnoav. adAQ TOTO
\ 9 \ 4 \ a 4 ,
pev evOvS EXVON TO EyxAnpa TOIS TréVTE TANAaVTOLS" tocavTa yap evpéOn Saveilwv, cal tradta mpatos apne kata Tov vopov. Evot dé mevTexaidexa Néyovotv, wv Kat IloAvenros 0 “Podsds éott.
Tovs pévtTot Pirovs avTod ypewxoTridas KadodvTES dueTéAEcav.
XVI. "Hpeoe & odderépots, GAN edrvrrnce Kat
ToOvs TAOUGLOUS GVENoY TA TULBOdaLa, Kal LaANOV
Ett TOUS TrévnTas, STL YRS avadacpov OvK éeTroinaeY éXticaciw avtois, ovdé tTaytdracw, woTeEp oO
A e a

Avodpyos, ouarovs tots Biots nal tcous xarté-

> ? 2 aA \ e A > >)
oTnoev. GAN exeivos pty évdéxatos dv ad ‘Hpaxréous cal BeBacirevxeas etn TroAdNa TIS
/

Aaxedaipovos, akiopa péya xal didrous Kal Sivayiv ols eyyw Karas Tepl Tis odLTElas
e an ba \ la a) Aa a uTnpeTovcav elye, Kal Bia paddrov H trecOoi XpnoTapevos, Bote Kal Tov oPOarpov éxxoTrvas, KATELPYAaTATO TO péyLoTOY Eis TwWTNPiAY TrOAEWS
Kal opovoay, pndéva Tévynta pnode AOVGLOV Elvat
A a > ‘4 be 4 \ > 9 é
TWY TOALTOY’ 2ONWY OE TOUTOU peV OUK EdLKETO
Th TodTea Snuotixos ay Kal péoos, évdeéorepov dé THs umapxovons Suvdyews ovdev émpatker, 446

Solon's decree by borrowing large sums from the wealthy and buying up great estates. Then, when the decree was published, they enjoyed the use of their properties, but refused to pay the moneys due their creditors. This brought Solon into great condemnation and odium, as if he had not been imposed upon with the rest, but were a party to the imposition.! However, this charge was at once dissipated by his well-known sacrifice of five talents. For it was found that he had lent so much, and he was the first to remit this'debt in accordance with his law. Some say that the sum was fifteen talents, and among them is Polyzelus the Rhodian. But his friends were ever after called "' chreocopidae,"' or debt-cutters.

XVI. He pleased neither party, however; the rich were vexed because he took away their secur- ities for debt, and the poor still more, because he did not re-distribute the land, as they had expected, nor make all men equal and alike in their way of living, as Lycurgus did. But Lycurgus was eleventh in descent from Heracles, and had been king in Lacedaemon for many years. He therefore had great authority, many friends, and power to support his reforms in the commonwealth. He also employed force rather than persuasion, insomuch that he actually lost his eye thereby,? and most effectually guaranteed the safety and unanimity of the city by making all its citizens neither poor nor rich. Solon, on the contrary, could not secure this feature in his commonwealth, since he was a man of the people and of modest station; yet he in no wise

1 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, vi.
2 Cf. Lycurgus, xi.
447

e , DJ 4 le) 4 '\ , Opu@pevos ex ovou Tov BovrceoOat nat mroTEeveELY auT@ Tovs Toditas. Ott 8 ov mpocéxpouce Tots mrelcTos érepa mpocdoxjnoaci, avTos elpnKxe TEpPt AUTOY, WS
a , A Xatva pév tor' éppdaavto, viv 5é pou yorov-pevot
a e le! o
rNokov oPOarpois opwat.wavtes Wate Sniov.
xaitor gnoly ws, el tug Aros Exe THY aUTHV

Suvapey, Ovn dv xatéoye Sipov, od8’ érravcaro, api avrapdtas, twiap é€eiNev yadda.) Tayv pévrot rod cupdépovtos aicbopuevor nat
a 29Q/ e “A A > 4 4
Tas tdias avTav peppers adévtes COvody Te Kown, ceccadyYOerav tHv Ovciay ovopdoartes, Kat
\ 4 a , \ \
Tov YorAwva THS Toditeias StopAwrnv Kal vopo-
/
Oérny améderEayv, od Ta pév, TA 8 ovyi, travra 8° oparas éemitpéravtes, apyds, éxxAnotas, Sixa-
, , ° / ; 4 fi ,
atypia, BovAds, Kal tipnpa tovTev éxdorou
e

Kal apiOuov Kal Katpov opicat, AvovTa Kab gu-NdTTOVTA T@Y UTapxovTwY Kal KaBecT@Twy 6 TE doxoin.
XVII. Hpatov pév ody trovs Apdxovtos vopous dveibe ANY Tov hoviKxav amavtas, Sua Thy
A 4

YareroTnTa Kal TO péyeOos Tay éTiTibioy. pia
yap Gdiyou Sety Atraciy @pioro ToiS dpapTavovae
1 So the verses are now more correctly found in Aristotle (Const. of Athens, xii. 5, Sandys).
448

SOLON

acted short of his real power, relying as he did only on the wishes of the citizens and their confidence in him. Nevertheless he gave offence to the greater part of them, who expected different results, as he himself says of them in the lines :—

“Then they had extravagant thoughts of me, but now, incensed,
All look askance at me, as if I were their foe.”
And yet had any other man, he says, acquired the same power,
“ He had not held the people down, nor made an end
Until he had confounded all, and skimmed the cream.”
Soon, however, they perceived the advantages of his measure, ceased from their private fault-finding, and offered a public sacrifice, which they called Seisactheia, or Disburdenment. They also appoint- ed Solon to reform the constitution and make new laws, laying no restrictions whatever upon him, but putting everything into his hands, magistracies, assemblies, courts-of-law, and councils. He was to fix the property qualification for each of these, their numbers, and their times of meeting, abrogating and maintaining existing institutions at his pleasure.

XVII. In the first place, then, he repealed the laws of Draco, all except those concerning homicide,” because they were too severe and their penalties too heavy. For one penalty was assigned to almost all transgressions, namely death, so that even those

1 Fragment 34 (Bergk) ; now verses 4f. of a fragment of nine verses cited by Aristotle (Const. of Athens, xii. 3).

2 Cf. Aristotle, op. cit. vii. 1.

7

tnuia Odvatos, @aoTe Kal Tovs apyias adovTas

) V4 \ \ /

amoOyvnoxeyv, Kat Ttovs Adyava KréeYavTas 4F

OTwpayv opoiws KorAdtecOat Tois iepoovrots Kal
2 avdpodovors. 510 Anpadns Sortepov evdoxipun-
; > AN ef ’ o ? \ LA

gev eima@y OTe dt’ aipatos, ov dua pédXavos,

\ , e / ” 9 \ > 9 A
Tous vouous 0 Apdxwy éyparyev. adtos 8 éxeivos,
A , 4 a 4
a> dao, épwrapevos Sid Ti Tois TrELTTOLS
adicnuace Enuiav érake Oavatov, amexpivato Ta
4 ” 4 A 4
bev pupa tavrns akia vopilew, Tots 5é peyarous
oun eyew petfova.
XVIII. Aevrepov 8¢ Yorwy ras pev dapyxas anTdoas, @oTEp Hoav, Tois evmopois amroNctTreEty Bovdopevos, THY & aAXAnY pikat rrodsTelay, Hs oO
Sjmos ov petetyer, EXaPe Ta Tiunpata TaY TrOX-

Tav, Kal Tovs pev évy Enpois opod Kat wypois péTpa tevtaxdo.a Trotobvras mpawtous érake Kal
TWEVTAKOTLOMEdiLVOUS Tpoanyopevoe SevTépous S5é 88
Tovs tmmov tpépev Suvapévovs 4 pétpa trovety
2 tTplaxocta' Kal tovTous immdéba TedobyTas éxa-Nouv' Cevyirar S of Tov TpiTov TibnpaTOS wVO-pacOnaayp, ols pétpov jv cvvaydorépwr Svaxociwy.
ot 5é Nowrrol waves éxarobvTo OTes, ols ovdeuiav ¥ " bd , b \ A Ul
apxew Eaxev apyjv, Ada TO cuverxrAnodlew
kat Sucale povov petetyov Ths rodttelas. 6 9 > \ \ 9 / ef '
kar apyas pev ovdév, totepov Se trappéeyebes épavn' Ta yap mreioTa Tav Stapopey évémirrev els tous Oucactas. Kal yap boca Talis apyxais érafe xpivery, opoiws xal epi éxeivwy eis TO 45° e

i,

SOLON

convicted of idleness were put to death, and those who stole salad or fruit received the same punishment as those who committed sacrilege or murder. Therefore Demades, in later times, made a hit when he said that Draco's laws were written not with ink, but blood. And Draco himself, they say, being asked why he made death the penalty for most offences, replied that in his opinion the lesser ones deserved it, and for the greater ones no heavier penalty could be found.

XVIII. In the second place, wishing to leave all the magistracies in the hands of the well-to-do, as they were, but to give the common people a share in the rest of the government, of which they had hitherto been deprived, Solon made an appraisement of the property of the citizens... Those who enjoyed a yearly increase of five hundred measures (wet and dry), he placed in the first class, and called them Pentakosiomedimnoi ; the second class was com- posed of those who were able to keep a horse, or had a yearly increase of three hundred measures, and they were called Hippada Telountes, since they paid a Knight's tar; the members of the third class, whose yearly increase amounted to two hundred measures (wet and dry together), were called Zeugitai. All the rest were called Thetes ; they were not allowed to hold any office, but took part in the administration only as members of the assembly and as jurors. This last privilege seemed at first of no moment, but afterwards proved to be of the very highest importance, since most disputes finally came into the hands of these jurors. For even in cases which Solon assigned to the magistrates

1 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, vii. 3f.

451
Ga 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Sucaotynpiov éepécers EdwKe Tois PBovropévos.
Aéyerat 5€ Kal Tovs vopovs acadéotepoy ypdwas
Kal Todas avtidnpes exovtas av&joar tH Tov SicactTynpioy ioxyiv un Suvapévous yap be Tov vopwy SiarvOjvat rept ov Svepépovto, ouvé-Bawev det SetcOar Stxactav Kai wav aye audisByntnua mpos éxeivous, TpdToy Tia TOV vouwv Kupiovs dvtas. émeonpaiverac 8 adtos atte THy akiwaow odTws Anup péev yap &wxa Tocov Kpatos Socov aTrapKel,
" vw > 3 \ w 9% 9 Ul
TLLHS OUT adEedXwy ovT' eTropeEapevos'
ot & elyov Sivapw Kal Ypnuacu joa ayntol, Kal Tots éppacdunv pndév devxes Eyerv.
" 5 > \ \ 4 9 A
éeoTny 0 apdiBadwv Kpatepov odKxos apydotepo.oe:
vray & ov elac' ovderépous adixws.
"Ere pévTot padXov oiopevos Seip érrapKety TH
TaY TOAAMY doOevea, TavTt NaBeiv Sixny vrép Tov KaK@s TreTOVOOTOS éwxKe. Kal yap TANYEVvTOS érépov cal Bracbévros 4 PraBévtos eEnv TH Suvapévp xat Bovropévm ypddecOar tov abu-xoovta Kal Siwxerv, 6p0as eOiLovros Tov vopobéTou TOUS TroAlTas M@oTEp Evos pépn cw@paTtos! ouvatcOdvecOat Kal cuvadryeivy addAHXOLS. TOUT@O 5é TO vou@ cupdwvodvta AOyov avTod Stapynpovevov-1 pépn odpuatos (or caparos pépn) Coraés and Bekker, after Xylander: évds mépous.
452

SOLON

for decision, he allowed also an appeal to a popular court when any one desired it. Besides, it is said that his laws were obscurely and ambiguously worded on purpose to enhance the power of the popular courts.' For since parties to a controversy could not get satisfaction from the laws, the result was that they always wanted jurors to decide it, and every dispute was laid before them, so that they were in a manner masters of the laws. And he himself claims the credit for this in the following words :—

“For to the common people I gave so much power as is sufficient,
Neither robbing them of dignity, nor giving them too much ; .
And those who had power, and were marvellously
rich,
Even for these I contrived that they suffered no harm. |
I stood with a mighty shield in front of both classes,

And suffered neither of them to prevail unjustly.” !

Moreover, thinking it his duty to make still further provision for the weakness of the multitude, he gave every citizen the privilege of entering suit in behalf of one who had suffered wrong. If a man was assaulted, and suffered violence or injury, it was the privilege of any one who had the ability and the inclination, to indict the wrong-doer and prosecute him. The law-giver in this way rightly accustomed the citizens, as members of one body, to feel and sympathize with one another's wrongs. And we are told of a saying of his which is consonant with this

1 Fragment 5 (Bergk); Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xii. 1; cf. also ix. 1 f.
453

“PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ow. épwtnfels ydp, os eorxev, Aris otKxetrar
lel b ,
KdAMoTa TOY TOdEwY, “ “Exeivn,” eitrev, ‘ev 7 TOV AdiKOULEVwWY OVY HTTOV ob pn adLKOvUMEVOL a@poBdAXovtat Kal Kordfovat Tous adtxobvras.”
Ul \ \ > > 4 4
XIX. Luorno dpevos dé Ty & Apeip Tayo
“A > 3
Bovrny é« tov Kat émauTov apyovtar, hs Sia
\ a ” “eo Cha
To adptat Kal adtos peteiver, Ere 8 opav Tov
“A fe) / n a n
Sjpuov oldodvtTa Kal Opacvvopevoy TH TAY Kpcav
/ N
adécet, Sevtépav mpooxatéverme BovArAnv, aro urns éexdortns, TeTTAdpwv ovoay, éExatov avdpas 4 “ émireEdpevos, obs mpoBovrevey Erake Tov Snuou
« \ \ IA J / > > 4

Kat pndév éav ampoBovrAevTov ets éexxAnolav
bf , \ 9 ” \ > , elopépecOar. tHvy 8 avw Bovrnv éricKoToy
/ \ / “A / > Ul >)
Tavtwv Kal dvraxa ToV vopwv éxaBicer, ot0-pevos éttl duct Bovrais womep ayKxvpats oppod-
b] , \ , ” A a
Gav HTTOY év GadXw THY TrOALY EveaOaL Kal WadXOV
aT pemovvtTa Tov Ofjpov trapéeev.
Oi pev odv treiotos thy é& "Apeiov mayou / ef ¥ do / ,
Bourn, WOTED ELPpNTaL, LOANWVA ovetncac bai
” ” a“ \
gacts kal paptupeiy avtois doxet padtota TO } le) \ , 4 8 9 4
pndayod tov Apaxovra Réyew pnd’. dvopatery
"Apeotrayitas, GANA Tois eétas adel draréyecBar le) A e w Tept Tov hovxov. o dé Tpiexaldéxatos aFwv
le) A ,
Tov LYorwvos Tov Sydoov exer THY vopwY odTwS
a f > f ud
avTois ovopace yeypaypévov. “ Atipwv daot
” > \ H (¥ > /
atipot oav mpiv LYorwva apEar, émitipovs, elvat wANnV doou €& Apeiov mayou 7h Soot éx Tey
— a

SOLON

law. Being asked, namely, what city was best to live in, “ That city,” he replied, “in which those who are not wronged, no less than those who are wronged, exert themselves to punish the wrong-doers.”

XIX. After he had established the council of the Areiopagus, consisting of those who had been archons year by year (and he himself was a member of this body, since he-had_been archon), he observed that the common people were uneasy and bold in consequence of their release from debt, and therefore established another council besides, consisting of four hundred men, one hundred chosen from each of the four tribes. These were to deliberate on public matters before the people did, and were not to allow any matter to come before the popular assembly without such previous deliberation. Then he made the upper council a general overseer in the state, and guardian of the laws, thinking that the city with its two councils, riding as it were at double anchor, would be less tossed by the surges, and would keep its populace in greater quiet.

Now most writers say that the council of the Areiopagus, as I have stated, was established by Solon. And their view seems to be _ strongly supported by the fact that Draco nowhere makes any mention whatsoever of Areiopagites, but always addresses himself to. the “ephetai’’ in cases of homicide. Yet Solon’s thirteenth table contains the eighth of his laws recorded in these very words: “As many of the disfranchised as were made such before the archonship of Solon, shall be restored to their rights and franchises, except such as were 1 Of. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, viii. 4.

v

éderav 7 éx mputaveiov xatadicacGévtes bTr0 tov Baciriéov éml hove h chayaiow 7 ént / 4 @ ¢ \ > 4 @ bd A Tupavvids epevyov Ste 0 Oecpos epavn 6be.” tadta 57) TaALY WS TPO THS LoAwvos apyAs Kal vopo- Oecias thy é& "Apeiov mdyou BovAny odcav évoeixvuTat. tives yap oav of mpo Yorwvos éy "Apeim mayo xatadicacOévtes, ci mpatos Zorwy edwxe TH €& ’Apetov mayou BovAR 70 / ? \ \ , lA V4 > , n Kpiverv; ev pn vy Ata yéyove tis acahea Tov / “a 4 @ A e 4 9 9? ypaumatos n exdeufris, WaTE TOUS NAWKOTAS ET aitiats als xpivovor viv ot “Apeotayira: xai b / , 4 e N > 4 4 épérar kal mputdves, Ste 0 Oecpos epavn Ge, pévery atipous, TOV GAXwY emiTipwY yevopévar. TavTa pev ovv xa autos émioxorTet.

XX. Tav & addrAXAwY avdTodD vouwv tdtos pev paddtota Kal mapdbokos 6 KeXevwv aAtipov elvar Tov év oTdcet pnodetépas pepioos yevopevov. Bov- rNeTas 8’, ws Eotxe, un aTADaS pnd avatcOnTws éyewy mpos TO Kowwov, ev dodgaret Oéyevov ta oixela Kal TH ph ovvadryely pnde cuvvoceiv TH maTpios KaddAwilopevov, GAN avToOev Tois Ta Bertiow kal Sicarorepa mpadtrovas tpocbépevoy, ouyxivouvevery Kal Bonbetv, wadrXov 4 treptpeverv ‘axwbvves Ta TOV KpatovvTwY. aToTros bé Soxel

a e a“ “a

Kal yeAXotos o TH émixAnpw Sid0vs, av 0 KpaTaV
4 Kal KUpLOS YyEeyoVM@s KATA TOV VOpoY av’TOS pn)

duvatos 7 WAnoidlev, wTo TaV éyytoTa TOD

456

oo’

89

SOLON

condemned by the Areiopagus, or by the ephetai, or in the prytaneium by the kings, on charges of murder or homicide, or of seeking to establish a tyranny, and were in exile when this law was published.” This surely proves to the contrary that the council of the Areiopagus was in existence before the archonship and legislation of Solon. For how could men have been condemned in the Areiopagus before the time of Solon, if Solon was the first to give the council of the Areiopagus its jurisdiction? Perhaps, indeed, there is some obscurity in the document, or some omission, and the meaning is that those who had been convicted on charges within the cognizance of those who were Areiopagites and ephetai and prytanes when the law was published, should remain dis- franchised, while those convicted on all-other charges should recover their rights and franchises. This question, however, my reader must decide for himself.
XX. Among his other laws there is a very peculiar and surprising one which ordains that he shall be disfranchised who, in time of faction, takes neither side.!_ He wishes, probably, that a man should not be insensible or indifferent to the common weal, arranging his private affairs securely and glorying in the fact that he has no share in the distempers and distresses of his country, but should rather espouse promptly the better and more righteous cause, share its perils and give it his aid, instead of waiting in safety to see which cause prevails. That law, too, seems absurd and ridiculous, which permits an heiress, in case the man under whose power and au- thority she is placed by law is himself unable to con- sort with her, to be married by one of his next of kin. °

1 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, viii. 5.
457
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avdpos omvecOar. xal toito 8 dp0as éyew Tivés hace mpds Tovs pH Suvapévovs cuveivat, ypnuatoyv 8 évexa NapBavovtas émiKAnpovs Kal TO vopw xataBialopévovs THY hvaw. opavTes yap @ BovrActae tHv érixdrAnpov cuvotcay 7
mT poncovtTar Tov yapov h pet’ aloxurvns KabéEovat, dirotrrAoutias kal bBpews Sixnv Scdovtes. ed

5 éyes wal ro py Tao, add. TeV oUYyyEevOV Tou avd pos @ Bovnera SuaréyerOau Thy emixhy-pov, ores olxeiov 7) Kal peTéexov TOD yevous 70 TLKTOMEVOV. els tovto b¢ ovvtedet wal Oo THY vouonv TH vuppig cuyKabetpyvuc bas paprou kvdeviou KaTatpayovoay, xal To Tpls éxdorov pnVvos éytuyy ave TAVT OS Th émiKAnp@ Tov AaBorta. Kal yap et un ryévouvro maides, anna,
Tin TLS avd pos adrn 7 pos owdpova yuvaixa, Kat
Sa a TOANA TOV curdreyouevey € éxaa ToTe Svaxepav adatpoica, kal tais Sstadopais ouK éHoa TavTaTacly dmoatpaphvar.
Tov 5 ado yapov ageine Tas pepvds, i indrva
Tpla Kal onxevn pixpod vopic patos aka Kedevoas, Etepov bé pndev eee THV Yanouperny. ov yap éBovnero po oopov ovd' wmov elvas Tov yapov, GX’ érl. TEKVOTEL Kab xapere Kat perornte yiver Bau Tov avdpos Kal yuvarkos TUYOLKLG LOD.
O pep yap Atovictos, ak.ovens TIS pnt pos avtob
S00 vat Tie TOY TOMTOY ™ pos yapov, épn Tovs
pev Tis TONEWS VOLOUS NEAUKEVAL TUPAYVOY, TOvs
dé ths hicews ovK elvar duvaros BidlecOae yd-pous vupeparyory av Tap mp exiay" év b€ Tais moreat Thv atakiay tavTny ov Soréov, ovee TepromrTéov
458

SOLON

Some, however, say that this was a wise provision against those who are unable to perform the duties of a husband, and yet, for the sake of their property, marry heiresses, and so under cover of law, do violence to nature. For when they see that the heiress can consort with whom she pleases, they will either desist from such a marriage, or make it to their shame, and be punished for their avarice and insolence. It is a wise provision, too, that the heiress may not choose her consort at large, but only from the kinsmen of her husband, that her offspring may be of his family and lineage. Conformable to this, also, is the requirement that the bride eat a quince and be shut up in a chamber with the bride- groom; and that the husband of an heiress shall approach her thrice a month without fail. For even though they have no children, still, this is a mark of esteem and affection which a man should pay to a chaste wife; it removes many of the annoyances which develop in all such cases, and prevents their being altogether estranged by their differences.

In all other marriages he prohibited dowries; the bride was to bring with her three changes of raiment, household stuff of small value, and nothing else. For he did not wish that marriage should be a matter of profit or price, but that man and wife should dwell together for the delights of love and the getting of children. Dionysius, indeed, when his mother asked him to give her in marriage to one of his citizens, said that, although he had broken the laws of the city by being its tyrant, he could not outrage the laws of nature by giving in marriage where age forbade. And so our cities should not allow this irregularity, nor tolerate unions which age forbids

459

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ae@pous Kal axyapttous émumAoKds Kal pndev Epryov yapnrdov éxyovoas pnbe TéXNOS. GAAA yéporTe véav ayopéevm hain tis dv éupedras dpywov f vouobérns
TO pos Toy PiroKxtT ATHY' EV your ws yapelv Eves Tddas,

xa véov év Swpatim mrovcias mperBuridos, @omep ot mWépouxes, aTO auvovcias TayYuVopEvoy éEaveuvpwv petoixices mpos tapBévoy vuipdny avépos Seopévnv. tadra peév ovv trept TovTwr.
XXI. 'Emawveirat 88 tod Lédwvos Kal o Kwrdwv vouos Tov TeOvnKoTa KaKa@s ayopeverv. Kal yap Satov Tous peOeoTwTAas lepovs vopilerv, Kal Sixatoy
anvréyerOat TaY ovY UTapxoVTwY, Kal ToALTLKOY adatpeiy ths éxOpas to alésov. (avra 8é xaKas Ayer exw@AvTE Tpos lepois Kal StxacrTypiots Kal
apyeious xal Oewpias ovons daydvwv' 4 Tpels Spaxpas TO idtwty, dv0 & adAas atrotivery eis
TO Snucotov érake. TO yap pndayod xpately opyns amatdsevtov Kal dxodractov: To 5é mavtayxov yaretrov, éviows 5¢ abivatov: Set 88 mpos To Suva-Tov ypdpecOar Tov vopov, eb BovrAeTAL Ypnoipws Odiryous, GAAG pq) ToAAOUS axXpHoTwWS KoAdCeLD.
Eidoxipnoe 5é xnav TO Trepl SiaOnxav vope mpotepov yap ov é&qv, GAN ev 7 yéver ToD teOvnxotos eer TA XpHpata Kal Tov olKov Kata-péverv, 6 & @& BovdrgeTai tis émitpépas, ef pH 460

™,

90

SOLON

and love does not invite, which do not fulfil the function of marriage, and defeat its object. Nay, to an old man who is marrying a young wife, any worthy magistrate or lawgiver might say what is said to Philoctetes!: “Indeed, poor wretch, thou art in fine state for marrying !”’

And if he discovers a young man in the house of a rich and elderly woman, waxing fat, like a* cock-partridge, in her service, he will remove him and give him to some marriageable maid that wants a husband. Thus much, then, on this head.
XXI. Praise is given also to that law of Solon which forbids speaking ill of the dead. For it is piety to regard the deceased as sacred, justice to spare the absent, and good policy to rob hatred of its perpetuity. He also forbade speaking ill of the living in temples, courts-of-law, public offices, and at festivals ; the transgressor must pay three drachmas to the person injured, and two more into the public treasury. For never to master one’s anger is a mark of intemperance and lack of training; but always to do so is difficult, and for some, impossible. And a law must regard the possibilities in the case, if its maker wishes to punish a few to some purpose, and not many to no purpose.

He was highly esteemed also for his law concerning wills. Before his time, no will could be made, but the entire estate of the deceased must remain in his family. Whereas he, by permitting a 1 In a play of this name, of uncertain authorship. See Nauck, J'rag. Graec. Frag.*, p. 841. Plutarch cites two entire verses in Morals, p. 789 a.

maises elev avT@, Sodvat TA avTov, didiav TE ouyyevelas éeTiunoe padXAov Kal ydpw avdyens, Kal T& Xpnpata KTHpaTAa TOY éxovTwY éToinceD.
> \ b] / 4, O- @ A \ 4 ov pny avédnv ye Tardy ovd atA@s Tas doces épfxev, GAN et p27 voowy Evexey) hapydKay 7 Secpa@v! 7) avdyxn xatacyebels 7 yuvatkl 1O0-pevos,? ed tavu Kal mpoonKkovTas TO TetcOjvat Tapa To BéXtTLc Tov ovdey Hryovpevos TOD Brac Ojvat
Stadépev, dAN Eis TAVTO THY ATAaTHY TH avayKy Kal T@ Trove Thy Hoovnv Oéuevos, ws OVX HTTOV éxoTnoat Noyio pov avOpatrou dvvapévoy.
"Eréotnoe 5é€ nal tais é€odars TaY yuvatKav kal tois mévOeot Kal tais éoprais voxov arreip-N ” 9 a b lA \
yovra To ataxtov Kal axo\acTov: é€tévar pev
e / “ \ / ” 4

iwatiov TpLav un TA€oY EXoVaaY KErEVCAS, Unde Bpwrov 7 mwortav mretovos 7 oBodrod depopevny,
, , / ,
pndsé xdvnta mnyvaiou peifova, poe voctwp
mopeverOae ANY apdkn Kourlopévny AVYVOU Tpodaivovtos. “Apuyas 5€ xottopévov nal 76 Opn-a , \ \ 4 Mv ? ”
veiy tretompéva Kal TO KwKveLY Addov ev Tapais eTépwy adeirev. évayitey d€ Bodv ovx« elacer, Oe Gé 4 e (4 nn > > ovde cuvTiévar mrA€oY ipatiwy TpLav, oVvd én
adXot pla pujpata Badivery ywpls éexxopsdys. av
Ta TAEtTTA Kal TOIS HuETépols VomoLS aTrnYyOpEU-
Tat’ mpookertar 5é€ Tois nuetépors Cnpovcbar
1 8ecua» Bekker adopts Schaefer’s correction to deopg.
2 wiOduevos Cobet : wesOduevos.

man who had no children to give his property to whom he wished, ranked friendship above kinship, and favour above necessity, and made a man’s possessions his own property. On the other hand, he did not permit all manner of gifts without restriction or restraint, but only those which were not made under the influence of sickness, or drugs, or imprisonment, or when a man was the victim of compulsion or yielded to the persuasions of his wife. He thought, very rightly and properly, that being persuaded into wrong was no better than being forced into it, and he placed deceit and compulsion, gratification and affliction, in one and the same category, believing that both were alike able to pervert a man’s reason.

He also subjected the public appearances of the women, their mourning and their festivals, to a law which did away with disorder and licence. When they went out, they were, not to wear more than three garments, they were not to carry more than an obol’s worth of food or drink, nor a pannier more than a cubit high, and they were not to travel about by night unless they rode in a waggon with a lamp to light their way. Laceration of the flesh by mourners, and the use of set lamentations, and the bewailing of any one at the funeral. ceremonies of another, he forbade. The sacrifice of an ox at the grave was not permitted, nor the burial with the dead of more than three changes of raiment, nor the visiting of other tombs than those of their own family, except at the time of interment. Most of these practices are also forbidden by our laws, but ours contain the additional proviso that such

TOUS TA TOLAUTA TOLODYTAS UTS TAY yUVaLKOVOLOD, @s avavdpos Kal yuvatxwbdect Tots Trept Ta TévOH mdaQect kal auaptnuacw éveyopévous.
XXII. “Opa@y &€ 76 pév Gotu miwAdpevoy av-Oparrwv det ocuppeovTwy ravtayobev ém adeias eis THY Arricny, ta 5é rrEloTa THIS Yopas ayevy7, cal padra, Tovs 5é ypwpévous TH Gardrry pndev eiwOoras eicayew Tois pndév Exovow avtidovvat, Mpos Tas Téxyvas Etpere ToS TroNdiTas, Kal vopuov
éyparrev vid Tpépery Tov tratépa pn dudaEdpevov TéXVNY erravayKes py elvat. TO pev yap AuKovpy@ kal ody oixovyT. KaBapav Gyrov Eevxod Kxai YoOpav KexTnpéevo
TloAXotor rrorAnv, dts troaols S€é mreiova,} b b , . \ A e “ , kat Eupimidnv, cat To péytorov, etNwTeKod mAN-Gous, 6 BéXtvov Hv pn cyorAdlav, ddrAw TprBopevov

wel Kal Tovody TaTetvoicOat, TepiKeyupéevov TH Aaxebaipou, Karas elyev acyoméav émitovev
\ 4 9 4 \ /
kat Bavatowv araddakavra tovs Tod tas ouveyew €v Tois STrAaLS, play TEeXVNY TAUTHDY expavOdvovtTas Kai doKxodvtas: Lorwy 5é Trois wpadypace TOUS VomoUS “aAAOV } TA TpdypaTa Tos vOLOLS n ec Aan A TpocapLolwry, Kal THs Ywpas THY PvatW Opav Tots yewpyovdar yAloxpws StapKovcay, apyov Sé Kal cxYokactTHy OyXov ov Suvapévny rpépey, Tais réyvats akiwmpa mepteOnne, nal thy éE *Apetouv mayou BovAnv érakev émicxoreiy BOev Exactos
” a 9 7) \ \ b ‘\ Xa
EVEL TA ETLTNOELA, KAL TOUS apyous KoAaCeLD.
1 Following Nauck (7'rag. Graec. Frag.?, p. 680): woAAots, Tocoiase.

offenders shall be punished by the board ot censors for women, because they indulge in unmanly and effeminate extravagances of sorrow when they mourn.

XXII. Observing that the city was getting full of people who were constantly streaming into Attica from all quarters for greater security of living, and that most of the country was unfruitful and worthless, and that seafaring men are not wont to import goods for those who have nothing to give them in exchange, he turned the attention of the citizens to the arts of manufacture, and enacted a law that no son who had not been taught a trade should be compelled to support his father. It was well enough for Lycurgus, whose city was free from swarms of strangers, and whose country was, in the words of Euripides,

‘‘For many large, for twice as many more than large,”

and because, above all, that country was flooded with a multitude of Helots, whom it was better not to leave in idleness, but to keep down by continual hardships and toil,—it was well enough for him to set his citizens free from laborious and mechanical occupations and confine their thoughts to arms, giving them this one trade to learn and practice. But Solon, adapting his laws to the situation, rather than the situation to his laws, and observing that | the land could give but a mere subsistence to those who tilled it, and was incapable of supporting an unoccupied and leisured multitude, gave dignity to all the trades, and ordered the council of the Areio- pagus to examine into every man’s means of liveli- hood, and chastise those who had no occupation.

"Exeivo & 45n chodporepov, 1rd pndé trois &€&
éraipas yevopévois emdvaryKes elvat Tovs TaTépas / e ¢ , € / e a e tpépetv, ws “Hpaxretédns toropncev o Iovtixos. o yap év yadu@ Tapopwv TO Kadov ov TéxvwY Evexa
d7jrXOS eoTLV, GAN’ HOoVAS ayopevos yuvaiKa, TOV
Te pioOov amréyel, Kal Tappnoiay abT@ pos Tovs YEVOMEVOUS OVK aTroAéAOLTTED, Ols AUTO TO yevérBas qWemoinkev OVvEtoos.
XXIII. “Orws 68 mreotny Exe atotiay ot mepl TOV yuvatKav vowot TE Yorwve Soxodce.
povyov pev yap avedciy tO AaBovte Sédwxev-
2\ > e / / “ \ °
éav & aprdacn tis éXevOépay yuvaixa Kal Bra-ontat, Cnuiay éxatov Spaypas érake: «ay mpo-aywyevn, Spaxypas eixoot, TANV doar Tepacpévws TwrobvTal, Aéywv 57 Tas Eétaipas. avTat yap

2 a a \ \ / a ”
éudavas gort@ot mpos Tovs Svdovtas. ért 8 ove Ouyatépas tore od7 aderdas didwor, wANY
A \ A / ? \
dv pn AdBn tapOévov avdpt auryyeyevnuevnv.
to § avTo Tpaypa Tote pév TiKxpa@s Kal atrapat-
, 4 \ 3 bd / \ /
THT@s KonaCeLW, Tore 5 evKoros cal maivovta, T poo Ttpov onuiay THY Tuxobcay opifovra, aXoryov éoTe TAY ef 11) oravilovros Tore Tov vopla patos év TH TONEL peydras emotes TAS apryupicas Cnpias
TO dvomd proton. els ey ye Ta Tlunpata TOY duciav Aoyiverat 7 poBartov xal Spaypnyv avi pedipvov To 8 “IoO wa viKnoavTt Spaxpas ératev éxaTov Si8oc8a., ™@ S ‘Odtpmea TevTakooias: AvKov Oé 7 kopicayTe mévTe Spaxpas EOWKE,
Avawd€ea dé play, Ov gow o Parnpers Anynrpros
TO pev Boos eivat, TO dé mpoRdtou Tiny. as yap 466

91

SOLON

But that provision of his was yet more severe, which, as Heracleides Ponticus informs us, relieved the sons who were born out of wedlock from the necessity of supporting their fathers at all. For he that avoids the honourable state of marriage, clearly takes a woman to himself not for the sake of children, but of pleasure ; and he has his reward, in that he robs himself of all right to upbraid his sons for neglecting him, since he has made their very existence a reproach

' to them.

XXIII. But in general, Solon’s laws concerning women seem very absurd. For instance, he per- mitted an adulterer caught in the act to be killed ; but if a man committed rape upon a free woman, he was merely to be fined a hundred drachmas ; and if he gained his end by persuasion, twenty drachmas, unless it were with one of those who sell themselves openly, meaning of course. the courtesans. For these go openly to those who offer them their price. Still further, no man is allowed to sell a daughter or a sister, unless he find that she is no longer a virgin. But to punish the same offence now severely and inexorably, and now mildly and pleasantly, making the penalty a slight fine, is unreasonable; unless money was scarce in the city at that time, and the difficulty of procuring it made these monetary punish- ments heavy. In the valuations of sacrificial offerings, at any rate, a sheep and a bushel of grain are reckoned at a drachma; the victor in the Isthmian games was to be paid a hundred drachmas, and the Olympic victor five hundred ;

the man who brought in a wolf, was given five drachmas, and for a wolf's whelp, one; the former sum, according to Demetrius the Phalerian, was the price of an ox, the latter that of

467

HH 2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

éy 7@ éxxaidexat@ tov akovev opite tLmdas TOV Exxpitav tepetwv, eixos pev elvat ToAAaTaCIas, addrAws O€ Kakeival TpOS Tas VvoV evTEAEIS Elo~>D. apyaiov &€ tots "AOnvators 16 Tonrepety ois Ul 4 4 a a , 54
AvKols, BeXTiova vépew yewpyely Ywpav Exover.
wal tas gudas eloly ot AdyovTes OvK aTTO TOY
"Iwvos vidv, AXX ato TOY yevar, els & SinpEOnoav ot Bio. To Tp@tov, wvoudobar, TO wey payepwov
'Orditas, 76 8 épyatixov "Epyddes: Suey Se Tav rNoTav Tedéovtas péev Tovs yewpyous, Alytxopets dé TOUS él vopais Kal mpoBateias da-TpiBovras.
9 \ \ " w a 9 ? /
Evel 5€ pos Bdwp ote woTapois eotiy devdors
ovTe Aipvats ticly ot adOovos myyais 4%
4 4 > > e a) a
Yapa dtapnns, GAN of WrEtoTor Ppéace trointois €Ypa@vTo, vouov &yparrev, Strou pév eos Snpoctov ppéap evros immixod, ypjacOar TovT@: TOS imm-A 4 lA , ad
xov dtdoTnpa tecodpwv jv atadiwv: Sov Sé TrElov atéyet, Cntety bdwp ldLov- éay Se opvEavres opyuav béxa BdOos tap' éavtois py edpwot, ToTe AapBdavev Tapa tod yeltovos é€dyour Udpiav Sis éExaotns nuépas wANpodvtas: aropia yap @eto Seiv Bonbeiv, ovx apylay éhodiakerv.
@ A , 'y~> 9 , '\
apice 5é kal dute@v pétpa par éutreipws, TOVs
¥. 4 9 > a , 4
péev adAO Te huTevovtas ev ayp@ wévte mddas 468

SOLON

a sheep. For although the prices which Solon fixes in his sixteenth table are for choice victims, and naturally many times as great as those for ordinary ones, still, even these are low in comparison with present prices. Now the Athenians were from of old. great enemies of wolves, since their country was better for pasturage than for tillage. And there are those who say that their four tribes were originally named, not from the sons of Ion, but from the classes into which occupations were divided ; thus the warriors were called Hoplitai, the craftsmen Ergadeis ; and of the remaining two, the farmers were called Geleontes, the shepherds and herdsmen Aigikoreis.1

Since the country was not supplied with water by ever-flowing rivers, or lakes, or copious springs, but most of the inhabitants used wells which had been dug, he made a law that where there was a public well within a " hippikon,"' a distance of four furlongs, that should be used, but where the distance was greater than this, people must try to get water of their own; if, however, after digging to a depth of ten fathoms on their own land, they could not get water, then they might take it from a neighbour's well, filling a five gallon jar twice a day; for he thought it his duty to aid the needy, not to provision the idle. He also showed great experience in the limits which he set to the planting of trees; no one could set out a tree in a field within five feet of his

1 This is strained etymology to explain the ancient tribal names of Hopletes, Argadeis, Geleontes, and Aigikoreis, which are derived, in Herodotus v. 66, from the names of the four sons of Ion. The first has nothing to do with ‘‘ hopla," arms; nor the second with ‘‘ergon," work; nor the third with ‘‘ ge," earth ; nor the fourth with ‘‘aix," goat.

améyew tod yeitovos Kerevaas, Tovs dé cuKhD
h édaiav évvéa. tToppwrépw yap é&ixveitas tavta tals pitas, Kal od maou yertta Tois gutois aos, adda Kal Tpodny taparpeitar cal Brarroveav éviows atroppony adinar. Bo-Opous dé Kal taddpous tov BovAdpevov éexédXeuvcev optoceyv, bcov éuBdrAr\gc Bdbos, adiordpevov HKos TaNXNOTpioU: Kal peltcoaV opHnvn KafioTa-pevov atréxe tay ud' érépov mpotrepov idpupévov jooas Tplakoctous.

XXIV. Tay 5€é yiwvonéver b:a0eow rr pos Eévous éXaiov povoy édbwxev, GAdra © é€dyew éx@druCE' Kal kata tov éEayovtTwy apas Tov apxovrTa troteicGar mpocérakev, éxtivey avTov éxaTov

Spaxpas els TO Snpdovov. nal mpotos akov éotly 0 TOoUTOY TEepléxwY TOY vopoV. oOvK av ovv
TLS Hpjoarto TAavTENWS aTiOavous TOUS deyovTas (6Tt Kal avewv éEaywyn TO Tadatoy ateipnto, Kal To daivew evderxvdpevov tous é&dyovtas
KrAnOHvat cucoparteiv. eyparbe dé cal BrAABns
TET PAaTrOOWY vopor, € év @ Kal kuva SaxovTa Tapa-Sodvat Kenrever Khoup TpuTnyet dedeuévov' TO pev
évO vpnpa xaprev 7 pos aopanecay.

Tlapéyer & amopiav Kai o TOV OnwoTrovyT oy
vOUOS, OTL yevec Oar ToNiTars ov didwar TAY Tois pevryovot devpuyia THY éavT@v y) maveo Tiots “AGnvate perorerbopévors éml TEX. touto &é morhjoai pacuy avrov ovx obTwS dmehauvovra Tovs GAXOus ws KaTaKaXovpevov AOjvate TovTOUS émt BeBaiom to peOéEaw Tis Todteias, Kal aya 470
SOLON

neighbour’s field, or, in case it was a fig-tree or an olive-tree, within nine. For these reach out farther with their roots, and injure some trees by their proximity, taking away their nourishment, and emitting an exhalation which is sometimes noxious. He that would dig a pit or a trench, must dig it at the distance of its own depth from his neighbour's ; and he that would set out hives of bees, must put them three hundred feet away from those which another had already installed.

XXIV. Of the products of the soil, he allowed oil only to be sold abroad, but forbade the exportation of others; and if any did so export, the archon was to pronounce curses upon them, or else himself pay a hundred drachmas into the public treasury. His first table is the one which contains this law. One cannot, therefore, wholly disbelieve those who say that the exportation of figs also was anciently for- bidden, and that the one who showed up, or pointed out such exporters, was called a “sycophant,” or fig-shower. He also enacted a law concerning injuries received from beasts, according to which a dog that had bitten anybody must be delivered up with a wooden collar three cubits long fastened to it; a happy device this for promoting safety.

But the law concerning naturalized citizens is of doubtful character. He permitted only those to be made citizens who were permanently exiled from their own country, or who removed to Athens with their entire families to ply a trade. This he did, as we are told, not so much to drive away other foreigners, as to invite these particular ones to Athens with the full assurance of becoming citizens ; he also thought that reliance could be placed both mustous vopivovta Tovs pev amroBeBAnKOTAS THY éavtav Sia Thy avayKny, tors & aroXeXolTrOTAS Sia tiv yvounv. idiov b€ tod Yorwvos Kal ro mept THs év Snpocim aitncews, Sep avrTos mapacttely KéKAnKe. TOV yap avTov ovK eG aiteiaOat wodAdKs, av 5€ S Kabynnre py Bov-AnTat, KorAdLEL, TO pev NyovUpevos mTAEoveeiay, TO 5 vmrepowiay tov Koweav.

XXV. 'Ioydy b€ toils vopows maow eis éxatov éyiautous &duxe> Kal Kateypddynaay eis Evrtivous adEovas év mratcios Teptéxovat otpepopévous, ov étt Kal’ npas év IIputaveip Neiava pixpa Stecwlero: Kal mpoonyopevOnaay, ws ’Aptotoré-Ans dyoi, KipBew. Kal Kparivos o xwpuxos elpnné tov’
II pos tod YoAwvos nal Apaxovtos olat viv ppvyovaty Hn Tas KaYpuS Tols KUpBectv.
évior 6€ gacw idiws év ols iepa nal Ouaia

mepiexovTar, xupBes, afovas §€ tovs daAXous

9 4 \ \ 2 w @ e \

a@vopdcbat., Kowvov péev odv @pmvuev Spxov 4 Boudry \ </ / b] 4 cy) be TOUS YOAWVOS VoMOUS eumrEedwaety, idtov 5 ExacTos
a) “a b > A \ a / tov Oeopolerav év ayopa mpos Te riOw, xata-

gdarilwv, et te TapaBain Ta Oecparv, avdpidvra

Npuaoby tcopéetpntov! avabijcew ev Acrdois.}

1 loomerpnroy and év AeAgois are not in the text of Aristotle.

on these who had been forced to abandon their own country, and on those who had left it with a fixed purpose. Characteristic of Solon also was his regulation of the practice of eating at the public table in the townhall, for which his word was “ parasitein.”}_ The | same person was not allowed to eat there often, but if one whose duty it was to eat there refused, he was punished. Solon thought the conduct of the first

grasping ; that of the second, contemptuous of the public interests. |

XXV. All his laws were to have force for a hundred years, and they were written on “ axones,’ or wooden tablets, which revolved with the oblong frames containing them. Slight remnants of these were still preserved in the Prytaneium when I was at Athens, and they were called, according to Aristotle,? “ kurbeis.”” Cratinus, also, the comic poet, somewhere says :—

“‘ By Solon, and by Draco too I make mine oath,
Whose kurbeis now are used to parch our barley-corns.’ 8 | |

But some say that only those tablets which relate to sacred rites and sacrifices are properly called “ kurbeis,’ and the rest are called “axones.” However that may be, the council took a joint oath to ratify the laws of Solon, and each of the “ thesmothetai,” or guardians of the statutes, swore separately at the herald’s stone in the market-place, vowing that if he transgressed the statutes in any way, he would dedicate at Delphi a golden statue of commensurate worth.

1 Hence, with scornful meaning, the word parasite.

2 Cf. Const. of Athena, vii. 1, with Sandys’ notes.
3 Kock, Com. Att. Frag. i. p. 94.

Suvidov $& tod unvds THY avwpariay, Kal THY Kivnoww THS aerHvns ovTe Svomévm TH rio TAVTWS OUT avigXoVTL TUUPEPOMevNV, ANAA TOD-AdKls THS aUTAS Huépas nal KaTadapSdvovacav Kal mapepxYopévny tov HrLov, avTny pev erake TauTnv évnv kal véav KareicOar, TO pev po guvodou popiov avThAs TH Tavopevp pyri, TO 5é AotTrOv dn TH apYopéevp TpoanKeEy Nyoupevos, Tp@Tos, ws Eotxev, OpOds axovacas ‘Opunpov Ré-yovTos,

Tod pev POivovtos pnvos, tod § torapévovo, thv & éde&fs juépay voupnvlav éxdreoe. Tas 5 an’ etxados ov mpoatiOels, GAN’ adatpav Kal 9 s 4 A fo 4 ev

avarvov, womep TA PATA THS TEANVNS Ewpa, pexX pe Tpraxdb0os npiO uncer.
_ 9 la! / 3 / wn
Ered 5¢ tav vouwrv eiceveyOévtwy eviot TH
, 3 @€ Ul , e VA 3
Lowy «ad éexdorny mpocjecay nyépay, éTratvoovtes 7 Wéyovtes 4) cuuRovrevovres éwBdrrety Trois yeypappévors 6 TL TUYOLEY 4 aharpely, TAeiato. & hoayv of muvOavopevot nal avaxpivoytes
xal xeXevovtes avtov Sires éxaotTov éye Kat \ - 4 ? 4
mpos fy xetrar Sedvoray érexdiddoKey kal cadnvitey, opav Ste tTadTa Kal TO mpaTTeLY aToToOV kal TO pH mpdrrew émidOovov, Grws Sé tails atropias UTexorhvat BovAodpevos nal Staduryety 474

SOLON

Observing the irregularity of the month, and that the motion of the moon does not always coincide with the rising and setting of the sun, but that often she overtakes and passes the sun on the same day, he ordered that. day to be called the Old and New, assigning the portion of it which preceded the conjunction to the expiring month, and the remaining portion to the month that was just beginning. He was thus the first, as it would seem, to understand Homer’s verse,! which speaks of a day when

‘This month is waning, and the next is setting in,”

and the day following this he called the first of the month. After the twentieth he did not count the days by adding them to twenty, but by subtracting them from thirty, on a descending scale, like the waning of the moon.?

No sooner were the laws of Solon put into operation than some would come to him every day with praise or censure of them, or with advice to insert some- thing into the documents, or take something out. Very numerous, too, were those who came to him with inquiries and questions about them, urging him to teach and make clear to them the meaning and purpose of each several item. He saw that to do this was out of the question, and that not to do it would bring odium upon him, and wishing to be wholly rid of these perplexities and to escape from

1 Odyssey, xiv. 162=xix. 307, of the day when Odysseus would return to Ithaca.
2 Thus the twenty-first was called the tenth, the twenty- second the ninth, and so on, ‘‘of the waning month.” The twenty-ninth was the second of the waning month, the thirtieth the Old and New.

475

To dvadpectov cal diraitiov tav TrodsTav (Epy-pace yap év peyados waow dobety yadeTor, @> autos elpnke), TMpocynya THs wAdYyS THY vauxrAnpiav Torna dpevos eFeT Neue, SexaeTH Tapa tav "AOnvaiwv amodnpiav aitnadpevos. Hnrmube yap ev Te xpove TOUT®@ Kal TOS VO"oLS avToUs !
éceaOar auvnbecs.
XXXVI. [[parov péev obv es Aiyurrrov adixeto
Kat duét pier, ws avdtos dyct, Nelaovu éml mpoyono. KavwBidos éyyibev axtis.

ypovov dé tTiva Kal tois wept Vévwduv tov ‘Hrov-Tonitny cal Layyw rov Lalrnv, Noywrdrors ovat TaV iepéwv, cuvedidocddyge: trap’ dv Kal tov “AtXavtixov axovaas Royov, as TIXdtov dnaiv, érexeipnoe Sid trotipatos éEeveyxeiv eis tous “EAXAnvas. émetta mrevoas eis Kuoarpov nyannOn Stapepovtas vo PiroxvTpov Tivds TOY éxet Bacidewv, b5 elyev ov peyddnv TOLD, @xiapévnv wd Anpodavtos tod Oncéws, rept tov Knrdptov torapov év xwpiors oxyupois pen, Grrws Se Svoyvepéos Kal gavrAo1s Kerpéevny.
éretcev ovY avTOY 6 LorAwY UToKELpevou Kadov medtou petaverta THY TOA HoLova Kal petLova KatacKkevacat. Kal Tapwv émepednOn rod cuv-ovKtc ov, Kal cuvdtexoopnoe pds te Staywyny dpiora Kal wpos aodddXeav, WoTE ToAXOVS pev
oentopas Te DiroxuTrpm avvedGeiv, Cyraoat Se Tovs adXous Bacidéas: 510 nab TH Yorove tippy
1 rots véuots abrovs after MSS. cited by Stephanus ; Bekker has rovs vdéuous abrois, the conjecture of Stephanus (the laws

would he familiar to them). |
4x6

93

SOLON

the captiousness and censoriousness of the citizens (for “in great affairs,’ as he says himself, “ it is difficult to please all’’), he made his ownership of a vessel an excuse for foreign travel, and set sail, after obtaining from the Athenians leave of absence for ten years. In this time he hoped they would be accustomed to his laws.

XXVI. In the first place, then, he went to Egypt,? and lived, as he himself says,®

“Where Nile pours forth his floods, near the Canobic shore.”’

He also spent some time in studies with Psenophis of Heliopolis and Sonchis of Sais, who were very learned priests. From these, as Plato says,‘ he heard the story of the lost Atlantis, and tried to introduce it in a poetical form to the Greeks.° Next he sailed to Cyprus, and was greatly beloved of Philocyprus, one of the kings of the island. This prince had a small city, founded by Demophon, the son of Theseus, and lying near the river Clarius, in a position which was strong, but otherwise incominodious and sorry. Solon therefore persuaded him to remove the city to the fair plain which lay below it, and make it more spacious and pleasant. He also remained and took charge of the new city’s consolidation, and helped to arrange it in the best possible manner both for convenience of living and for safety. The result was that many colonists flocked to Philocyprus, and he was the envy of the other kings. He therefore paid Solon the honour of

1 Fragment 7 (Bergk).
2 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xi. 1.
3 Fragment 28 (Bergk). 4 Timueus, p. 22 a.
5 Cf. chapters xxxi. 3; xxxii. Lf.

amoéibous Aimeiay THY TONY KaXoOUpévnY TrpO-4 tepov am éxeivov Yorovs mpoonydopevoe. Kal avros S€ péuvntat Tov auvoLKLcpov' Tpoaayo-pevoas yap év tails éXeyetars tov DiddxvT por,

Nov 6€ (dnot) od pév Yorlorot Tworvv ypovov év0ad’ avacowyv
, , ’ Los e 7
THVOE TOALY VALOLS Kal YévOS UpéTE pov" > \ > \ A n n > A 4
avrap éue Edv vyt Bon Kreis amo vnoov aoxnOy méutrot Kimpis toorépavos:
b A 2 9 \ a) , A n 9 4
oixiop@ & él rede ydpw Kal Kddos o7ralor
b \ \ 4 yO? 9 e
éaOXov xal vootov tratpid’ és jmetépny.
XXVII. Thy dé mpos Kpotcov évrevEw avtod Soxodow mot Tois ypovoits ws tmeTNACHEéVHY éreyyew. éeym 5é Aoyor Evdokov ottTw Kai TogovTous paptupas éyovta, Kai, 6 petlov éote, TpeTovTa TO YOArAwvos HOer Kal ths éxelvou pe-yanroppootyns Kal cogias aktov, ob por Soxm@ ™ ponoea Gat Npovixois Tiat Leyopevors Kavoow, ods pupioe dtopOodvtes aypt onpepov eis ovdév
avTots omoXoyoupevoy SvvaYTaL KaTaCTHGAaL TAs
2 avtiroyias. Tov 8 ody Yorwva hacwy cis Dapdeus SenOévtt tH Kpoiow tapayevopuevov, trabety te TapaTAnaLoy avopi Yepoaiw KaTLovy Tp@Tov eat
Oarattav. éxeivos Te yap op@v adrov éE adAXrov
ToTapoy weTo THY OddNaccay civat, Kal TO Lodwve
Thy .avrAnv Svatropevopévm nal Toros opwvte
Tav Bacidttkov Kexoopnpévous ToAVTEAS, Kal
478

SOLON

naming the new city after him, and called it Soli; its name had been Aipeia. Solon himself also makes mention of this consolidation. In his elegies, namely, he addresses Philocyprus, and says} :—

“Now mayest thou long time be lord and master for the Solii here,
Dwelling in this city thyself, and thy family after thee ;
But may I and my swift ship, as we leave this storied isle,

Be brought upon our way in safety by Cypris of the violet crown. 2a
Upon this settlement of thine may she bestow favour and glory ;
And upon me an auspicious return to my father-land.” |

XXVII. As for his interview with Croesus, some think to prove by chronology that it is fictitious. But when a story is so famous and so well-attested, and, what is more to the point, when it comports so well with the character of Solon, and is so worthy of his magnanimity and wisdom, I do not propose. to reject it out of deference to any chronological canons, so called, which thousands are to this day revising, without being able to bring their contradictions into any general agreement. So then, they say that Solon, on visiting Sardis at the invitation of Croesus,” had much the same experience as an inland man who goes down for the first time to the sea. For just as such a man thinks each successive river that he sees to be the sea, so Solon, as he passed through the court and beheld many of the king’s retainers in

1 Fragment 19 (Bergk). 2 Cf. Herodotus, i. 30-33.

coBobyras éy dyA@ mpoTropm ay Kat Sopupepar, Exaatos éddxet Kpoicos elvai, péxpl mpos auTov HYOn, Tav Scov év riOots, év Badais écOAros, ev Téxvats Ypvdod wept Kdopov éxmpetrés Exew 7 mepittov % Endrwrov edoxer treptxeipevov, ws 87 Géapa cepvotatov odOein Kal TotxtdwtarTov. ével 8 0 Yorwv avtixpus Katactas ovr éradev ovdey ovT’ eltre pos THY dypiy WY 0 Kpotcos mpoc-edoxnoev, GAG Kal SHros HY Tots ED Ppovodar Ths atrepoxadias Kal pixpompetreias KaTadpovar, éxéhevoev aur@ TOUS Té Onoavpovs avotEa TOV Nenuatwov, Kat Hv adAny dryovtas émidetEa pndev Seomevep KaTacKeuny Kat TONUTENELAY. 7 pKet yap avros év éauT@ Tov TpoTrou KaTavong tv mapacyeiy. as 8 ouv avis AXON ryerOVOS amdy-tov Oearns, porna ev avrov 0 Kpotcos ei tia oidev av pwrrav avToo _paKaplorepov. amopnva-pévov O€ TOD Lorwvos 4 ore olde TédAov avrob Tont-

THY, Kal SteFeA Govt os 571 xpnoros avnp 6 TEédAog
yevouevos Kal waidas evdoxipous KaTadit@v Kat Biov ovdevos évdedi TOV avaryKaiov, éTeAEUTN TED evdotas dpiorevoas vTep THS TAT pLOOs, Hon pev aGddOKOTOS eddxer elvat 7 Kpoio@ Ka GrypouKos, él pn 7 pos apy vpov TOU poe xpuatov THS evdaspovias ToveiTat THV avapeT pyar, GArAa Snpo-TLKOU wal tStwTov Biov Kal Odvatov av8 pwrrov padrov 7 7 ToTaUThY ayaT on Sivapuy Kal apxny.
ov pny adda madev NpwOrnoey avuToV eb peTa Téd\Xov addov éyveoKev avO parrav evdatpoveote-
pov. wdduww && Tod Zorwvos elm 6vTOS evdévar Kré0Bev xat Bitwva, diradérpous xai pidopn-480

costly apparel and moving proudly amid a throng of couriers and armed guards, thought each in turn to be Croesus, until he was brought to the king him- self, who was decked out with everything in the way of precious stones, dyed raiment, and wrought gold that men deem remarkable, or extravagant, or enviable, in order that he might present a most august and gorgeous spectacle. But when Solon, in this presence, neither showed any astonishment at what he saw, nor made any such comments upon it as Croesus had expected, but actually made it clear to all discerning eyes that he despised such vulgarity and pettiness, the king ordered his treasure chambers to be thrown open for the guest, and that he should be led about to behold the rest of his sumptuous equipments. Of this there was no need, for the man himself sufficed to give Solon an understanding of his character. However, when Solon had seen every- thing and had been conducted back again, Croesus asked him if he had ever known a happier man than he. Solon said he had, and that the man was Tellus, a fellow-citizen of his own; Tellus, he went on to say, had proved himself an honest man, had left reputable sons behind him, and had closed a life which knew no serious want with a glorious display of valour in behalf of his country. Croesus at once judged Solon to be a strange and uncouth fellow, since he did not make an abundance of gold and silver his measure of happiness, but admired the life and death of an ordinary private man inore than all this display of power and sovereignty. Notwithstanding, he asked him again whether, next to Tellus, he knew any other man more fortunate than he. Again Solon said he did, naming Cleobis and Bito, men surpass-

481

, ” \ \ 4 “

Topas Stadepovtws avépas, of THY pnTepa TeV
Boar Bpaduvovtwy brodivres abtol Te Cuy@ THs ig 4 > / \ \ a e @ \ > dpakns éxéusrcav mpos TO TAS ”“Hpas lepov evdac-

povitopévny Um6 TOY TOMTOY Kal Yaipovaay, eita Oicavres Kal moves ovK ete pel” Hyuépav avéoTncav, @dAd TeOvnKdtes avadyh Kal GruTov érl S6En toca’ty Odvarov BPOncav, ““Hyas 6é,” elrev Sn mpos dpynv 6 Kpoiaos, “eis ovdéva
/ b , > N > , bo] \ e
TiOns evdarpovwev apiOpov avOpwerov; Kat o
, v UA s > \ ww
SdrAwv ovtTe KorXaxevery BovrAopevos avTOV oUTE mepattépw mapokivev, “"Eddqow,” elev, “ @ Bactred Avdav, mpds te TaAAG peTpios exe O beds wxe, cal codias tivds AOapaods, ws ore, \ } lo > x n Oe x “” e \
Kal Snuotixhs, ov Baciduxys ovdé NapTpas, vTrO PETPLOTNTOS Hiv péeTerTLV, 1) TUXALs OpOca TayrodaTrais xpwpevov det tov Biov, ovK €@ Tots a > a A a ? LA

mapovaw ayabois péya ppovetv, ovdé Oavpdlerv
avépos evtuyiay petaBorjs xpovov eéxoucav.
érevou yap éxdot@ Trotirov é& adjdov TO péddov:
? b ? / e
6 & eis Tédos 6 Saipwv eto tiv evrpagiav, rovTov evdaipova vopifouev. 0 5é Cavtos Ete Kat xuvduvevovtos ev TO Bim paxaptopos, @aTrEp
> ,
aywvilopévou Knpvypa Kal arépavos, éotiv aBéBatos Kat dxupos.” Tair eirav 6 Yodwv
? 8
dindXdtTeTO AUTIHTAS péV, OV vovOeTHaas SéE
tov Kpoicov.
XXVIII. ‘O 8€ Aoyorrods Aicwios, éruyxave 482
94

SOLON

ing all others in brotherly love and in dutiful affection towards their mother; for once, he said, when the car in which she was riding was delayed by the oxen, they took the yoke upon their own shoulders and brought their mother to the temple of Hera, where her countrymen called her a happy woman and her heart was rejoiced; then, after sacrifice and feasting, they laid themselves to rest, and never rose again, but were found to have died a painless and tranquil death with so great honour fresh upon them. ‘“ What!” said Croesus, who by this time was angered, “dost thou not count us among happy men at all?’’ Then Solon, who was unwilling to flatter him and did not wish to exasperate him further, said: “O king of Lydia, as the Deity has given us Greeks all other blessings in moderation, so our moderation gives us a kind of wisdom which is timid, in all likelihood, and fit for common people, not one which is kingly and splendid. This wisdom, such as it is, observing that human life is ever subject to all sorts of vicissitudes, forbids us to be puffed up by the good things we have, or to admire a man's felicity while there is still time for it to change. For the future which is advancing upon every one is varied and uncertain, but when the Deity bestows prosperity on a man up to the end, that man we consider happy ; to pronounce any one happy, however, while he is still living and running the risks of life, is like proclaiming an athlete victorious and crowning him while he is still contending for the prize; the verdict is insecure and without authority.'' When he had said this, Solon departed, leaving Croesus vexed, but none the wiser for it.

XXVIII. Now it so happened that Aesop, the 483

112

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 4 V4 N Ag \ /
yap eis Ldpdes petamepymros yeyovws vTo Kpotgov Kal Tiw@pevos, HYOéTOn TS Yorwve pundewtas tuxovTe piravOpwrias: Kal mpotpémwv avtov, «7 Sorov," edn, "tots Baciredor Set as Heota } ws AdioTa opsrciv." Kai o Lodwv,
"Ma Al," elev, "ANN Os Haetota } was apiota." Téte péev odv 6 Kpoicos ottw tod Yorwvos kateppovyncer" érrel 5¢ Kip cupBarov éxpar7On paxyn, Kal THY TOA amaddege, Kai COV arovs
avtos emedrNe xatatipmpacbar, nal yevopévns mupas aveBtBdcOn Sedeyevos Oewpévwov Lepoav amdvrev cal Kuipouv rapovtos, éf' dcov éEtxvetro xa duvatos hv TH hovn POcyEduevos aveBonoe rpis, "'O, Zorwv." Oavydoas ovv o Kipos éreprpe rovs épnaopévous batts avOpwrwv 4 Oe@v ovTos éotiv 6 YoAwv, Sv év Tvyats! aTopols povoy dvanaretrat. Kal o Kpoiaos oddév amoxpua-pevos elev Sti " Tav map' "EdAnot coda els odtos Av o avnp, Sv éyo peTeTeradunv ovK
dxotcait tt Bovropevos ovde pabeiv av évdens Aunv, GN ws 87 wor OeatHs yévorto Kal paptus
atios Ths evdatpovias éxeivns, iv amoBadeiv dpa
pettov hv Kaxov } AaBeiv dyaOdv. Aoyos yap Hv nat Sé6£a taya0ov Tapovans' ai pwetaBoral S€ por aiths eis 7aOn Seva nal ocupopas avnxéatous doyw TeXeuT@oL. Kal Tat' éxeivos Oo dp éx TOY TOTE TH VUV TEKpALpopmeEVos, exéAevEe TO TéXOS TOD
Biov cxoreiv xal pn Opacuvopevov aBeBators

trovotats UBpitew.” eet 8 Todt’ avnvéyOn mpos tov Kidpov, ate 8%) copwtepos dv tod Kpoicov xai 1 gv rbxa:s Coraés, Cobet, and 8: rixais.

writer of fables, was in Sardis, having been summoned thither by Croesus, and receiving much honour at his hands. He was distressed that Solon met with no kindly treatment, and said to him by way of advice: ““O Solon, our converse with kings should be either as rare, or as pleasing asis possible.” ‘No, indeed !”’ said Solon, “ but either as rare or as beneficial as is possible.”

At this time, then, Croesus held Solon in a contempt like this; but afterwards he encountered Cyrus, was defeated in battle, lost his city, was taken alive and condemned to be burnt ; and then, as he lay bound upon the pyre in the sight of all the Persians and of Cyrus himself, with all the reach and power of which his voice was capable, he called out thrice :! “O Solon!” Cyrus, then, astonished at this, sent men to ask him what man or god this Solon was on whom alone he called in his extremity. And Croesus, without any concealment, said : “This man was one of the sages of Greece, and I sent for him, not with any desire to hear or learn the things of which I stood in need, but in order that he might behold, and, when he left me, bear testimony to the happiness I then enjoyed, the loss of which I now see to be a greater evil than its possession was a good. For when it was mine, the good I derived from it was matter of report and men’s opinion, but its departure from me issues in terrible sufferings and irreparable calamities which arereal. And that man, conjecturing this future from what he then saw, bade me look to the end of my life, and not let insecure conjectures embolden me to be proud and insolent.’”” When this was reported to Cyrus, since he was a wiser man than Croesus, and

1 Cf. Herodotus, i. 86.

Tov Ayo TOD Yorwvos loyupov év TH Trapadelypate Brérrav, ov povoyv adjxe tov Kpoicov, arava kal tinav éf” Scov en Sretérece: Kal SoFav éxxyev 0 Lorwv él roy Tov pev aoHaas, TOV SE matoevoas Tav BactNewv.
XXIX. Of & év dore: wadw éotaciavov aro-Snuodvtos Tov YOAwvos: Kal TpoELaTHKEL TOV [ev Tledséwv Aveotpyos, trav 6 Tapddwv Meyaxr7s
o Ardxpaiwvos, Tecictpatos 8¢ trav Ataxpiov, év ols jv o Ontixos bys Kal padoTa TOs mov-cious axXGouevos' date xpyjoOar pev Ete TOUS

VOMOLS THY TrOALY, HON Se TpadypaTa vew@TEpa TT poc-Soxav nal wodety dtravtas étépay xatdotaow, ovx ltaov érrifovtas, ddXa mréov eEaw ev TH
petaBorr Kal Kpatnoceay Tavtatace Tov Siadpepo-peéevov. obTw 5¢ TOY Tpaypdatav éxovTwv o Lowy mapayevopevos eis Tas AOnvas, aidé pév elye kal Tiny Tapa Tracy, év 5é xow@ réyew Kal mpdocev opoiws ovK ér Hy Suvatos obdé mpdOupos vo ynpws, GAN' éevruyxdvwv idSia Tols mpoecTHat THY oTacewy avipdaow éretpato Sradvew Kal ovvappore, paduota tov Ilecurtpdtov mpocéyew Soxodvtos avT@. Kal yap aipvrov TL Kal mpocdires elyev ev TO SiaréyerOar, xal BonOntexos hv tows Tévnot Kal mpos TAS ExOpas eruerkys Kal pétpios. & &¢ dices uy mpochy avTa, Kal TradTa ptpovpevos émioteveTo padXov Tav exYovTwWY, wS evriaBns kal Kooptos avnp Kal padiora 87 TO ior ayaTa@v, Kat Svoxepaivev el tis Ta TaporTa 486

saw the word of Solon confirmed in the example before him, he not only released Croesus, but actually held him in honour as long as he lived. And thus Solon had the reputation of saving one king and instructing another by means of a single saying. XXIX. But the people of Athens were again divided into factions while Solon was away. The Plain-men were headed by Lycurgus ; the Shore-men by Megacles the son of Alemaeon, and the Hill-men by Peisistratus.!. Among the last was the multitude of Thetes, who were the bitter enemies of the rich. As a consequence, though the city still observed the new laws, yet all were already expecting a revolution and desirous of a different form of government, not in hopes of an equality, but each party thinking to be bettered by the change, and to get the entire mastery of its opponents. Such was the state of affairs when Solon returned to Athens. He was revered and honoured by all, but owing to his years he no longer had the strength or the ardour to speak and act in public as before. He did, however, confer privately with the chiefs of the opposing factions, endeavouring to reconcile and harmonize them, and Peisistratus seemed to pay him more heed than the others. For Peisistratus had an insinuating and agree- able quality in his address, he was ready to help the poor, and was reasonable and moderate in his enmities. Even those virtues which nature had denied him were imitated by him so successfully that he won more confidence than those who actually possessed them. He was thought to be a cautious and order-loving man, one that prized equality above all things, and would take it ill if any one disturbed the existing

1 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xiii. 4.

xiwvoin Kal vewTépwy opéyotto: tovToas yap &&n-TATA TOUS TOANOUS. Oo 5é LorAwv Tayv TO OOS épwpacey avtov Kai tHv émiBovAnv TpaeTos éyxateioev? ov pny éuionoev, GA érEetpato mpavve Kal vovleteiv, Kal pos avTov é Kat ™pos éTépous ws el Tus €£€éXoL TO pedon pwr ov auTou THS vox Kat thy émiOupiav idoatto THS Tupayvidos,lovx grt addrXos edpuéoTepos)apos apeTHy ovde BeAtiwv Tronritns.
"Apxopévoy Sé¢ trav wept Béomw nbn THVv
Tpaywdiay xiweiv, nat Sta THY KawoTnta TOUS WoAXOus ayovTos Tov mwpaypatos, ove § ets dusrrav évaywouvov éEnypévov, dvcet Gurynxoos @v xal gdirouabns o Yortwy, ert padrrov ev ynpa oyoAyH cal mraéiad Kat vy Ata motos cal povoixy mapanéunrowv éautov, Cbedcato Tov BéoT avTov oroxpivopevov, womep EO0s Hv Tots maXdacois.
peta dé tTHv Oéav mpocayopevoas avTov npwTNcEV €f ToTOvTwY EvavTiov OvK aloyUvEeTaL THALKAUTA wevddopuevos. dyoavtos 5é trod Oéaridos py Secvov elvat TO peta tradias Aéyew TA ToLladTa Kai Tpaooey, opodpa TH Baxrnpig THY viv O Lohwv
marifas: ‘Taxy pevrot THY Tratduay, "én, “ Tav-THY erawobvtes odTw Kal TYL@vTES EUpTToper ev TOUS cvpPoraiors.”
XXX. ’Enel &é KaTaTp@cas auTos €auTov o
Ilevciotpatos Hxev ets aryopay érri Cevryous KOpl-Copevos, Kal Trapwfvve tov Shyov ws Sa tH jwomTEelay vo Tay éyOpav émtBeBovrcupéevos, 488

SOLON

order and attempted a change. On these points, indeed, he completely deceived most people. But Solon quickly detected his real character, and was ‘the first to perceive his secret designs. He did not, however, treat him as an enemy, but tried to soften and mould him by his instructions. He actually said to him and to others that if the desire for pre-eminence could but be banished from his soul, and his eager passion for the tyranny be cured, no other man would be more naturally disposed to virtue, or a better citizen.

Thespis was now beginning to develop tragedy, and the attempt attracted most people because of its novelty, although it was not yet made a matter of competitive contest. Solon, therefore, who was naturally fond of hearing and learning anything new, and who in his old age more than ever before in- dulged himself in leisurely amusement, yes, and in wine and song, went to see Thespis act in his own play, as the custom of the ancient poets was. After the spectacle, he accosted Thespis, and asked him if he was not ashamed to tell such lies in the presence of so many people. Thespis answered that there _ was no harm in talking and acting that way in play, whereupon Solon smote the ground sharply with his staff and said: “Soon, however, if we give play of this sort so much praise and honour, we shall find it in our solemn contracts.”

XXX. Now when Peisistratus, after inflicting a wound upon himself,! came into the market-place riding in a chariot, and tried to exasperate the populace with the charge that his enemies had plotted against his life on account of his political

1 Cf. Herodotus, i. 59; Aristotle,Const. of Athens, xiv. 1.

kal qroAXous elyev ayavaxrovvtas kal Bowrtas, mpoceOwy éyyus o Yorwv xab tapactas, “ Ov Karas,” elrev, “@ wat ‘Iamoxpdtous, broxpivyn Tov ‘Opunpexov "OSvacéa: tadta yap rrovets Tovs ToNTas Tapaxpovopevos ols éxeivos TOUS TroNE-
2 plous éEnrdtnoev, aixiadpevos éavtov.” éx TOUTOU TO pev TAHOOS Hv Eroimov vrreppayety tov Ie- oiaTpatou, Kal cuvadOev eis exxdXnotav o SHyos. ’"Apiotavos 8€ ypdyavtos dtrws 500a01 trevtiKovTa xopuvnpopo. TO Ileovotpatp gvdrAann Tov ow- patos, avreitev 0 YOAwWY avactdas Kal TONNE dueEnAOey Guota rovras ols da TeV Troipatwv

/ : :

ryeypader i Ly ff OAS y :

Eis yap yA@ooav opate Kai eis Emn atpvrou av6pos.

vpay & els wév Exactos adwrexos lyvert Baiver, ovptracw © viv yadvos éverts voos.

3 opav 5é rovs péev TévnTas wpunpévous xa iferOau T@ Llecovotpat@ xal OopuBodytas, Tous 5é mXov- atous amroéubpacKovtas Kal amrodeih@vtas, ar- nrOev eirav Ste TaV pEev eats GopwTEpos, TaY Se avdperorepos: copuarepos Mev TOV LN TUVLEYTODY TO mpatTouevoy, avdpecorepos 5é¢ tay cumdvTwv péy, évavtiova Oar Sé 1H Tupavvids hoBoupévwv. To dé pigicpa Kupwaas o Sipos ovde rept Tod mAHOous

éTt TaY Kopuynpopwy Sieptxporoyetro mpos Tov Tleraiotpatov, arr Scous éBovrero Tpéhovra Kal cuvayovta pavep@s Trepiewpa, méexpt THY aKpo-Tow KaTéa xe.
4 Yevopévou 5€ tovtov nal ris wodews ovrTa-

i,

opinions, and many of them greeted the charge with angry cries, Solon drew near and accosted him, saying: “O son of Hippocrates, thou art playing the Homeric Odysseus badly; for when he dis- figured himself it was to deceive his enemies,! but thou doest it to mislead thy fellow-citizens.’’ After this the multitude was ready to fight for Peisistratus, and a general assembly of the people was held. Here Ariston made a motion that Peisi- stratus be allowed a body-guard of fifty club-bearers, but Solon formally opposed it, and said many things which were like what he has written in his poems :—

‘Ye have regard indeed to the speech and words of a wily man.
Yet every one of you walks with the steps of a fox,
And in you all dwells an empty mind.” ?

But when he saw that the poor were tumultuously bent on gratifying Peisistratus, while the rich were fearfully slinking away from any conflict with him, he left the assembly, saying that he was wiser than the one party, and braver than the other; wiser than those who did not understand what was being done, and braver than those who, though they understood it, were nevertheless afraid to oppose the tyranny.? So the people passed the decree, and then held Peisistratus to no strict account of the number of his club-bearers, but suffered him to keep and lead about in public as many as he wished, until at last he seized the acropolis.

When this had been done, and the city was in an

1 Odyssey, iv. 244-264.

2 Fragment 11 (Bergk), verses 7, 5, and 6. Plutarch has changed the order; Bekker and Cobet restore it.

3 Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xiv. 2.

paxOetons, o pév Meyarrtjs edvOis edpuye pera

TOV GrAXwv ’Adkpatwvidov, o Sé Lordwv 7dy pev

9 ’ , \ \ a > 9

iv aopodpa yépwr Kai tovs BonPodvras ovK elxev,

Suws dé mwpondev eis ayopav nal SiehéyOn pos

ToUs TroMiTas, Ta pev Kaxilwv thy aBouNay av-
A , \ LA wv
Tov Kal paraxiav, ta S€ rapokivwy ért Kal

5 japaxaroy pn mpoécbar thy edevOepiay: Ste xal
4
TO pynpovevomevoy Eltrevy, WS TPwNY eV HV ev-

papéotepoy avutTois TO KwAVTAaL THY TUpavvida

cuvicTtapevny, viv dé petlov €ote Kal NawTpoTeEpov

éxxowat Kat avedetvy cuvertacav On Kal medukutav. ovdevos S€ tpocéyovtos adt@ Sia Tov

I 3 fo > \ > Sf ‘ e “~
doBov annrdOev eis tHY olxiay thy éavTov, Kal

AaBov ta Gtrra Kal mpd TaY Oupav Oéuevos eis
N 4 ac? \ 4 39 9 ce ° ‘
tov otevwov, “ Kot pév, etmrev, “as SuvuTtov

6 Av BeBonOnrar TH TmaTpid: Kal Tots vopots.” Kal

NO ; \ e , 9 A n ‘4 tA

TO AoLTOV Havyiav Hye, kal TaY dirwov hevyev

Tapawovvtwy ov mpowetxyev, AAG Troinpata ypd-

> , a 3 ,
gov wvetoife Tots “AOnvaiors:
Ki &é rerrovOate Avypa Su’ bpetépny Kaxornra, pn TL Ocois TovTwY pny érrapdépere.
avtol yap TovTous nuéjoate pupata Sovtes,

\ “ A ” 4,
cal dua Tavta Kaxny Eoxete SovrAoTUYHD.
XXXI. Emi tovros 5€ roAX@v vovberovvTwr avTov ws amoJavovpevov vo TOU Tupavvov, Kat 492

96

SOLON

uproar, Megacles! straightway fled, with the rest ot the Alcmaeonidae. But Solon, although he was now a very old man, and had none to support him, went nevertheless into the market-place and reasoned with the citizens, partly blaming their folly and weakness, and partly encouraging them still and exhorting them not to abandon their liberty. Then it was, too, that he uttered the famous saying, that earlier it had been easier for them to hinder the tyranny, while it was in preparation ; but now it was a greater and more glorious task to uproot and destroy it when it had been already planted and was grown. No one had the courage to side with him, however, and so he retired to his own house, took his arms, and placed them in the street in front of his door, saying : “I have done all I can to help my country and its laws.” 2 From that time on he lived in quiet retirement, and when his friends urged him to fly, he paid no heed to them, but kept on writing poems, in which he heaped reproaches on the Athenians :— |

“If now ye suffer grievously through cowardice all your own, Cherish no wrath against the gods for this,
For ye yourselves increased the usurper’s power by giving him a guard,
And therefore are ye now in base subjection.” 3

XXXI. In view of this, many warned him that the tyrant would put him to death, and asked him on 1 Grandson of the Megacles who brought the taint of pollution upon the family (chapter xii. 1-3). He had been allowed to return from banishment. .

2 It was for others now to dothe same. Cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xiv. 2. 3 Fragment 11 (Bergk), verses 1-4.

muvOavopévwy tive miatevwy oUTwWS aTrovoEtTat, “T@ yipa, elev. ov pv add’ oO Iletciotpatos éyKpaTyns yevouevos TY mpayuatwv ovTws é€e-Oepamevoe Tov YorAwva, Tiuav nal dtdodpovov-pevos Kal peratreuropmevos, WoTe Kal avuBovrov elvat Kal ToAXA TOV Tpaccopévwy erraweiv.
\ 9 v4 \ , , “A
kal yap épvAattTe Tovs mrELTTOUS VvOLOVS TOU LoAwvoS, Eupévov Tp@Tos autos Kal ToOUs didous
? 4 @ a 9
avayxdatwv os ye nal dovov mpookAnbels exs Apeoy wayov, 75n Tupavvay, atnvrnce Koo pLiws amroXoynaopevos, 0 5é KaTHyopos ovY UarNnKoUCE’ kal vopous autos erépous éypawev, my éote Kal
e ‘ , > f
0 Tous mnpwbevtas ev Toren Snpooia TpéperBat Kerevwov. Ttovto b€ dnaow ‘Hpaxrgetdns xal mpotepov émt Qepoinap mnpwhévte tod Yorwvos
Wndicapévov pipnoacbar tov Ileciorpatov. ws 5é @eoppactos iotopnxe, nal Tov THs apylas
, b 4 9 4
vouov ov Yorwyv eOnxev, adda Tlevciorparos, & thy te ywpay évepyotépay Kal THY TONY npepatoTépay eTroincev.
‘O S€ YorAwv drdpevos peyddrAns Tis rept tov ‘AtNavtixdy Aoyov } pvOov mpaypareias, dv Senxovce tav Tepl Xdiv Aoyiwy mpoonKoyTa trois ‘AOnvaiou, éFéxapev, ov 80 doxoriar, as TlAdrwv dyciv, ddrXd parrov bd ynpws, poBn-Gels 10 péyeBos Tihs ypadis. émel oxor‘s
SOLON

what he relied that he was so lost to all sense, to which he answered, “My old age.” However, when Peisistratus had become master of the situation,
he paid such court to Solon by honouring him,
showing him kindness, and inviting him to his palace,
that Solon actually became his counsellorand approved of many of his acts. For he retained most of Solon’s laws, observing them first himself, and compelling his friends to do so. For instance, he was summoned before the Areiopagus on a charge of murder, when he was already tyrant, and presented himself there to make his defence in due form, but his accuser did not put in an appearance. He also made other laws himself, one of which provides that those who are maimed in war shall be maintained at the public charge. But Heracleides says that even before that Solon had caused a decree to be passed to this effect in the case of Thersippus, who had been so maimed, and that Peisistratus was following his example. Moreover, Theophrastus writes that the law against idleness, in consequence of which the country became more productive and the city more tranquil, was not made by Solon, but by Peisistratus.

Now Solon, after beginning his great work on the story or fable of the lost Atlantis, which, as he had heard from the learned men of Sais,! particularly concerned the Athenians, abandoned it, not for lack of leisure, as Plato says, but rather because of his old age, fearing the magnitude of the task. For 1 Cf. chapter xxvi.1. There is no trace of any such work of Solon's, and the attribution of it to him is prebably a play of Plato's fancy.

nw o ¢
ye Teptove tay avToU pnvuovoly at TOLAVTAL 4 dwvat:
Tnpdoxo 8 aiel rod SidacKopevos:
Kal, |
"Epya &&¢ Kumpoyevots viv po pira wal Arovucou cat Movoéwr, & tina' avdpdow evppoovvas.
XXXII. 'Os 8 yopas carijs ados o WAdtwv Epnuov, avT@ 8 Tas Kata ovyyéverav TpoaKor, éFepydcacba: Kal Staxoopijcar pidotipovpevos tiv Atravticny vToOecw, mpoOvpa pev peyara xai mepiBdrous Kal avras TH apy weptéOnxev, ola Adyos ovdels AAAs Eoyev ode pUO0s ovdE
, 9 \ \ 3 ul , wn"
moinats, owe dé apEayevos mpoxatédvoe Tov

4 \ , id A % , \
Epyov tov PBiov, 0om padAXov eEvppaiver TA YE-
A 4 aA a > a
ypappéva, TocovT@ padNov Tois azrohetpOeiow duidoas. as yap 4 mods Tov ’"AOnvaiwy To
"Orvuutieiov, otTws 7 IIvdtwvos copia ov
"Arvavtixoy év ToAXols Kadois udvov Epyov ate-Aes Eoryneev. :
’EmeBiwce S&S ody 6 Lorwv apEapévov rod Ilewototpdtov tupavveiv, as pev “Hpaxreidns o Tlovtixos (oropet, auxvov xpévov, as 6€ Pavias
¢ 3 4 4 5 a 2 A > \ a
6 "Epéctos, éAdttova dvoiv érav. emit Kwpiouv yey yap jptato rupavveiy Ilevsiotpatos, é¢' ‘Hyeotpdtov 5é Lorwva pyow o Pavias aro-496

97

SOLON N

that he had abundant leisure, such verses as these testify :—
ode |

‘¢ But I grow old ever learning many things ;
and again,
‘¢ But now the works of the Cyprus-born goddess are dear to my soul,
Of Dionysus, too, and the Muses, which impart delights to men.” ®
XXXII. Plato, ambitious to elaborate and adorn the subject of the lost Atlantis, as if it were the soil of a fair estate unoccupied, but appropriately his by virtue of some kinship with Solon,®? began the work by laying out great porches, enclosures, and court-yards, such as no story, tale, or poesy ever had before. But he was late in beginning, and ended his life before his work. Therefore the greater our delight in what he actually wrote, the greater is our distress in view of what he left undone. For as the Olympieium in the city of Athens, so the tale of the lost Atlantis in the wisdom of Plato is the only one among many beautiful works to remain unfinished.

Well, then, Solon lived on after Peisistratus had made himself tyrant, as Heracleides Ponticus states, a long time ; but as Phanias of Eresos says, less than two years. For it was in the archonship of Comeas ® that Peisistratus began his tyranny, and Phanias says that Solon died in the archonship of Hegestratus,

1 Cf. chapter ii. 2. 2 Fragment 26 (Bergk).

3 Plato mentions the relationship of Critias, his maternal uncle, with Solon (Charmides, 4¢ 155 a).

4 Plato's Critias is a splendid fragment. ° 561-60 B.o,

4 Oavely tov peta Keopiav adptavtos. 4 Sé dia-omopa Kxataxav0évros abdtod ths téppas mept Thy Sarapivtor vioov gore pev Sid THY aToTiay aniOavos Tavtdtact Kal pvOwdns, avayéypartat
8 bird te GAdXwv avdpav afioroyev Kal 'Apicto-TéXous TOU dirocogou.

the successor of Comeas. The story that his body was burned and his ashes scattered on the island of Salamis is strange enough to be altogether incredible and fabulous, and yet it is given by noteworthy authors, and even by Aristotle the philosopher.

Digitized by Google

ITOITAIKOAA2

I. Totovre 8) yevopéve re Yorww tov Tommd-xoAav wapaRddropev, @ TOvTO pev Bortepoy o
'Popaiwy Siuos éEedpev ert ripen Totvoua, mpo
tod 5é Tlomdsos Ovarnépios Exaretro, OvadXepiou Soxav aroyovos elvat Tov Tadatav avdpos aitiw-

Tadtov yevopévou ‘Pwyaiovs xal YaBivous é« Torepiov eva yevécOar Shuovy o yap padtora tous Bacireis els tavTo Treicas cuvedOetvy Kar SiadrAdEas exeivos éort. tovtm 8) Kata yévos mpoonkwy o Ovarrépios, ws pact, BactNevopéerns
pev ere ths ‘Papuns éenidavys tv 80a AOyov Kal TroOvTOY, OY TO pev GpOas Kal pera mappnotas del ypwpevos trép tov Sixaiwyv, ad’ ov §é Trois Seopévoes édevdepios kal diravOpares érapKarv, dijhos. hv evOUs, e yévorro Snpoxpatla, mpw-TEVTD.
"Enrel 8¢ Tapvviov LovmepBov obre AaBovra THY apxnv KaN@s, GAN avocias Kal Tapavoues, ouTE NPw@pevov auth Baoirixas, ann’ UBpifovra Kal TupavvoivTa, pov) Siuos ral Bapuvopevos, apynv atoatacews ékaBe to Aovepntias mdbos
aurny éml tT BracOjvac Siepyacapévns, Kat Aevxios Bpovros GTTOMEVOS TOV TpayyaTov 502
PUBLICOLA |

I. Sucn was Solon, and with him we compare Publicola, to whom the Roman people gave this surname later as a mark of honour. Before that he was called Publius Valerius, and was reputed to be a decendant of that ancient Valerius who was most instrumental in making the Romans and the Sabines one people instead of enemies ; for it was he more than anyone else that persuaded their kings to come together, and settled their differences. Such being his lineage, Valerius, as we are told, while Rome was still a kingdom, was conspicuous for his eloquence and wealth, always employing the one with integrity and boldness in the service of justice, while with the other he gave liberal and kindly aid to the poor and needy. It was therefore clear that, should Rome become a democracy, he would at once be one of its foremost men.
Now Tarquinius Superbus had not acquired his power honourably, but by the violation of divine and human laws; nor did he exercise it in kingly fashion, but after the manner of an insolent and haughty tyrant. The people therefore hated him, resented his oppressions, and found occasion for revolt in the fate of Lucretia, who made away with herself after violence had been done to her.

Lucius Brutus, engaging in the revolution, came to 593

PLUTARCH’S LIVES .

THs petaBoris ert mparov HAGE tov Ovarrépiov
Kal Xpnodpevos avt@ mpoOvpotatp ocuveteBare
\ a / \ ? 4) e oF ”
TOUS Baaireis, pepe pev ei okos hv o Shuos Eva Xerporovyceny avtt Tov Bactréos oTparnyor, Houxiay aye o Ovarrépios, WS 7? Bpovto pAAXOV Apyew mpoojKoy Hyewove THs édevOepias yeyevnuevo: Svaxepatvouévov bé Tod THs povapxias ovdpatos, Kal Soxodvtos av ddutrorepov Tov Syuov pepicOetoav vTopetvar thy apxnv Kal dvo mpoBadropévou kal KadovvTos, eAmifwv pera Tov Bpodrov aipeOjcecOar Kal cvvuTratevcew Sunjpap-
rev. 7pé0n yap axovtt T@ Bpovtp avvdpyov
dvtl tov OvadrAepiou Tapxivios Koddarivos, o Aovxpntias avip, ovdév apeth Ovardrepiov da-/ > bd e / \ 4
dhépwv, adr’ ot Suvatol Sediores tovs Bactrels Ere TONAG metpavras tEwOev Kai paddooovtras TH
/ > 4 \ 9 4 9 A 9 N
TOoALV, EB0UAOVTO TOV EVTOVMTATOV AVTOLS éx0 pov
exew sTpaTnyov ws ovy Upyaopevor.

II. ’Ayavaxtav otv o Odardrépios, ef pn muoTeverar TavTa wpaTTew &vexa THS tTraTpisos, dre pndev idia xaxov U0 THY TUpdvvar TétroVbe, Ths Te BovAns amréaTy Kal Tas cuYNnyopias atreiTeE
kal TO TpdtTeW Ta KoLWa mavTedas éeEéX«TreD, @ote Kal AOdyov Tois ToANOIS Tapacyeiv Kat
, / A > 9 A
dpovrTida, poBovpévors yn Se dpynyv wpocbéuevos Tois Bactredow avatpéeyn Ta mpdypata Kal THY Tow emicharas Eyovoay. eet dé Kal apos 504

98

PUBLICOLA

Valerius first of all, and with his most zealous assist- ance drove out the kings.1 Then, as long as the people was likely to elect one-man as their com- mander in place of the king, Valerius acquiesced, thinking it more fitting that Brutus should have the office, because he had led the way to freedom. But the very name of monarchy was odious to the people, who thought that it would be less vexatious to submit to an authority which was divided, and therefore proposed and demanded that two men should be elected to the highest office. Then Valerius, who hoped that he would be chosen next to Brutus, and would be consul with him, was disappointed. For against the wishes of Brutus, Tarquinius Collatinus, the husband of Lucretia, was elected as his colleague," instead of Valerius. He was a man. of no greater excellence than Valerius, but the influential citizens were afraid of the kings, who were still putting forth many efforts outside, and trying to appease resentment inside the city, and they therefore desired to have as their commander the most pronounced enemy of the royal family, believing that he would make no concessions to them.

II. Valerius, accordingly, vexed that his desire to do his utmost for his country should be doubted, merely because he had received no private injury at the hands of the tyrants, withdrew from the senate, gave up his practice as an advocate, and abandoned entirely his public activities. This caused anxious remark among the multitude. They feared lest, in his wrath, he should attach himself to the royal exiles, and subvert the established order of the city, which was in a dangerous pass. But when Brutus,

1 Cf. Livy, i. 58f.; ii, 2, 11. 2 Cf. Livy, i. 60, 4.

érépous tivds trowiay éywv 6 Bpodtos éBovAeTo 51a aodaylwy opxecar thy Bovrny Kal mmpoetrrev npépav, kataBas pdra daidpos els ayopav o Ovarrépios, al patos opooas pndev évdadceu
pnd wdbynoecOar Tapxuviows, adrdXra trodepjoerv
Kata Kpatos omép ths édevOepias, nSovyy Te TH
BovrH wat Odpoos aya toils apyovot tapécyer.
evVOds 8 Kxal ta epya tov Spxov éBeBaiov.
mpecBers yap Heov amd Tapxvviov ypdppata Kopivovres érraywya rod Syuov Kal AoOyous eme-evKels, ols pdduora TOUS ToAXous @ovTo diapOeipery, NEyOLEVOLS mapa Bactréws aderrévae
TO ppovnpa Kat peTpiov deta Bar Soxobvros.
TOUTOUS els 70 mrAOos olopéveoy deity TOV irareov mpoaryaryety oux elacev 0 Ovarrépios, GX' évértn cal Svexorva ev av Opdrrots mévnae cal Bapuvo[éEVOLS padrov THs Tupavvidos TOV TOAELOY APKas ral Tpopac ets VE@TEPLT LOY éyyevéo Oar.
III. Mera &€ ravra m peo Bets HOV Erepot Tis TE Bactretas adiatacbat Kat TohepoovTa Tav-caa Ba TOV Tapxvviov AéyouTes, amraitety 8é Ta Xpnpata wal Tas ovaias avT@® Kal pirors Kat oixelors, ad' ov Sia Biworovrar petryovres. érrixdw-

pévov oé JTOMBY | Kai padoTa TOU Kodnartivov guvaryopevovTos, aTpeT TOS OV avnp al Tpaxus opyny O Bpobros éFé5papev eis aryopayv, mpodoTny amoKkahay Tov cuvapxovTa, ToAémou Kat Tupayvidos adopyas xaprlopevor ols Secvov ay GyTws épodia puyas Yvngicacba., ouvveOovrav Sé Tov TONTaY TpaTos idsarns avip elrrev év Snug ToTE 506

who had his suspicions of certain others also, desired the senators to take a sacrificial oath, and set a day for the ceremony, Valerius went down with a glad countenance into the forum, and was the first to take oath that he would make no submission or concession to the Tarquins, but would fight with all his might in defence of freedom. This pleased the senate and inspired the.consuls with courage. And his. actions speedily confirmed his oath. For envoys came from Tarquin bringing letters calculated to seduce the people, and specious words by which they thought the multitude were most likely to be corrupted, coming as they did from a king who seemed to have humbled himself, and to ask only moderate terms. These envoys the consuls thought should be brought before the assembled people, but Valerius would not suffer it. He was unalterably opposed to giving poor men, who considered war a greater burden than tyranny, occasions and excuses for revolution.

III. After this, other envoys came announcing that Tarquin abdicated his throne and ceased to wage war upon the city, but demanded for himself, his friends, and his kinsmen, their moneys and effects, wherewith to maintain themselves in exile. Many were inclined to grant this favour, and Collatinus in particular joined in advocating it, but Brutus, a man of harsh and unyielding temper, ran forth into the forum and denounced his colleague as a traitor, because he would bestow the means for waging war and maintaining tyranny on men to whom it were a terrible mistake to vote even a bare subsistence in exile. And when an assembly of the citizens was held, the first to speak among them

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 3, 5.
5°97
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Taios Muvovetos, T@ te Bpovtm Siaxerevopevos
kal tois “Pwpyaiots tmapawav opav Stes ta Xpyuatra pet avTav dvta todepoin mpos Tous Tupdvvous padrdov 7H pert’ exeivwv mpos avtous.
ov nv arr éboke rots ‘Pwpatos thy érevOepiav éyovow, vméep ts erronepour, pn wpoécGas thy etpryny évexa XPnpdrorv, aX quver Barely Ka TavTa TOUS Tupdvvors.
"Hv 8 dpa Tapxuvio ee pev éAdytoros
ToVY XpnudTwv, » 8 aTaitnots dua Teipa Tov Sypou Kal KataoKxevn mpodocias. Kal trait’

émparrov ot mpéaRets vmropévovres emt TH TaD Xpnudtoyv mpopdoe, TA pev amodidocbat, ra Se gurdtrev, ta 8 atroréureyv pdoxovtes, axpt od SidpOerpav oixovs 800 Tav KadOv Kayabov vouitopéevwv, tov "AxvAX wv tpeis exovta Bov-ANevTas Kat d¥0 Tov OviteXNiwv. ovToL Tapes
joav amo pntrépwy adedpidot Kodrdarivov tod UTatevovTos, idia S& OviredrLous érépa mpos
Bpodrov olxeLoTns UMHApyYev. aderpny ‘yap avTav
O Bpodros elxe kat traidas é& aurijs Thelovas: av dv0 Tovs év Haukia ouyyeveis ovtas dpa Kal
curnders of Ovitérd01 T paanyaryovTo | Kal ouvemecay év Th OT obocia yevéoOar kat Kar ops £avtas éavtovs eis yévos peya TO TOV Tapkvvicr
Kat BacidtKas éXribas amradhayiyat THS TOU
Tar pos aBedrepias «al Karem orntos: Xanero-TnTa pay TO ara paitnrov avTov mpos TOUS movnpouvs deyoures, tH 8 aBeATEpia tpooTan-508

was Caius Minucius, a private man, who exhorted Brutus and advised the Romans to see to it that the treasures fought with them against the tyrants, rather than with the tyrants against them. However, the Romans decided that, since they had the liberty for which they were at war, they would not sacrifice peace for the sake of wealth, but cast this also out along with the tyrants.!

Now the wealth, of course, was of very slight consequence to Tarquin, but the demand for it was at once a test of the people’s disposition and a means of instigating treachery among them. And it was with this that the envoys busied themselves, making the property merely a pretext for remaining in the city, and saying that they were selling part of it, and reserving part, and sending part of it away. At last they succeeded in corrupting two of the noble families of Rome, that of the Aquillii, which had three senators, and that of the Vitellii, which had two. All these, by the mother’s side, were nephews of Collatinus the consul, and besides, the Vitellii were related in another manner to Brutus. For Brutus had married a sister of theirs, and she had borne him several sons. ‘Two of these, who had come to manhood, and avere their near kindred and close companions, the Vitellii won over and persuaded to join the plot for betraying the city, to ally them- selves with the great family and the royal ex- pectations of the Tarquins, and rid themselves of the stupidity and cruelty of their father. For they gave the name of cruelty to that father’s inexorable treatment of criminals, and as for his stupidity, he had for a long time, as it appears, feigned and

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 4, 3.
509

pare kal Tapaxadvppate TONY ypovov, ws EoLKe, xpnodpevos dopadeias Evexa pos Tovs TUpdvvous, ovd Uvatepov épuyev avrhs THY érwvupiay.
IV. 'Os & ody cuveretaOn Ta petpdxia Kat trois "AkuAXots eis Adyous 7AOEv, SpKov opooas péyav edoke tact Kal Sevov, avOpwrov odayévros émometoavras alua xal tov omddyxXvov Oiyovtas. émd Tovrots eis THY AxudAX ov oixiav auvnrOov. jw & o olxos, év & tadta Spdocuw éuedrov, olov elxos, Umépnuos xal oxoTw@dns.
éxabev ody avtovs oixérns Gvopa Ovwvdineos évdov xataxpias éavtov, ov Kxat' émiBovAnv
h wpoaicOnciv tiva Tod péAXovTOS, GAN' dow
av éruxe kal mpociodew autos peta otrovdns OPOfvar HoBnOels bmréoTn, ANdpvaxa Keywévyny mpd
avrod Totnodpevos, MoTe Kal TOY TpaTTOpévov Beatis yevécOar nal Trav Bovrevpatov érnKoos.
édofe 8 avtois tovs vrdtous avaipety, cal TavTa Sndovcas ypavaytes émuatoAas pos Tov TapKuviov ébwKkay Tots. wpéaBeat* Kal yap @Kouv avto-61, trav "AxuvrArAgov Eévor yeyovores, cal tOoTEe TH

ovvapocia Tapiaav.

'Os 8€ tatta mpdEavtes arndrXdynoap, trek-eXbav o Oduvdixtos AAOpa, ypHnoacbat ois mMpoometovaty ovxK elyev, ANN Hrropetro, Secvov Hey aryoUpEVos, WaTrEp HV, Wpos Tatépa Bpodroy
viay éEaytota Karyyopety 7 mpos Oetov adergpidov tov KodrAarivoy, idsorny 5é "Pwpaiwry ovdéva vo-510

assumed this, to insure his safety from the cruel designs of the tyrants, and afterwards the surname of Brutus, which had been given him for it, 'clung to him.
IV. When, accordingly, the youths had been per- suaded and held conference with the Aquillii, it was decided that all the conspirators should swear a great and dreadful oath, pouring in libation the blood of a slain man, and touching his entrails. For this purpose they met at the house of the Aquillii1 Now the room in which the ceremony was to be held was, as was natural, dark and somewhat desolate. Without their knowing it, therefore, a slave named Vindicius had concealed himself therein, not with design, or with any inkling of what was to happen there; he merely chanced to be there, and when they came in with anxious haste, he was afraid to be seen by them, and hid himself behind a chest that lay there, so that he saw what they did, and heard what they resolved upon. Their decision was to kill the con- suls, and when they had written letters to Tarquin to this effect, they gave them to his envoys, who were living there as guests of the Aquillii, and were then present at the conspiracy.

Their business transacted, the conspirators de- parted, and then Vindicius stole secretly away from the house. He knew not what use to make of what had befallen him, but was at a loss, considering it a dreadful thing, as it really was, to arraign the sons of Brutus before their father, or the nephews of Collatinus before their uncle, on the most abominable charges, and yet believing that no Roman in a private station could be entrusted with such im-

1 At the house of the Vitellii, according to Livy, ii. 4, 5.

4 pigeov ey éyryvov aTroppytav THALKOUTOD. Tav ad pardov 7 dvvaros dy novyiav aryety, édauve-pevos be Te guverooTt TOU T paywaros, Hpynoe Twos Wpos TOV Ovarnrépiov, padsora TOUS Kovvots kal giravOpwrros* enayGels tod avd pos, 6re maou ebm poaodos hv trois Seopévos, Kal THY oixiay adel mapetyev avepymevny, Kar oryou ou-Sevds ovde Xpetav ameppimrer TOV TATELVOD.
V. 'Qs ody aveBn mpos avuTov o Ouvuvdixzos Kal cateire mata, Mapxov te Tob aerpob TapavTos avT@ povov Kal THs yuvatcds, extrharyels eat detcas o Ovarréptos ovKETL 7 ponKato Tov av pwrrov, GNA Katakhelaas eis TO olxnua cal praca THY éavTod yuvaixa Tais Oupas eTLOTNoas, TOV pev aderpov éxédevoe Hv BactiKny érauNy TeploxovTa, Ta ypaupara AaBeiv, av Suvarov 7, tal rovs oixétas Tapapudarrety auros dé meXATO@Y Te TOANOY Kal pirwv del meph aurov OvT@y Kal Gepametas TUXVIS, éBadife mpos THY olktav TOV "AxvAXwY ovK évdov dvtTwv.
2 S20 pndevos av T poo Soxijaavtos QT aMEVOS dia
Oupav é emeTuyx.avel Tots ypdppace KELUEVOLS Grrov
KATEAVOV oi mpéeaBes. tavta 8 avtov mpdr-TOVTOS ot "AxvAdLoe dpoyp ™ pogepépovro, xal mept TAS Oupas ouppitavres eCnrouy ah Grog Tas émiatoAas. of & TipUvOVTO, Kal Ta (para meptBanrovres avréy Tots TpaxnArols UO Bias Kal pores a0ovpevor ral adobyres dua TOV oTEveOT BY eis THY ayopay évéBadov. ta 8 avta al tepl THY éraviw aya tHv Bactdixny éyivero, Tro) Mapxou ypappdrov érépwv év tois oxevect xopslopéevor 1 piAavOpéxas Bekker supplies rpéwors, after Porson.

portant secrets. The last thing that he could do, however, was to hold his peace, and driven on by his knowledge of the affair, he made his way somehow to Valerius, attracted especially by the affable and kindly ways of the man.! For he was easily accessible to all the needy, always kept open house, and never refused to hear or help one of the lowly.

V. Accordingly, when Vindicius came to him and told him the whole story, in the presence of his brother Marcus only, and of his wife, Valerius was _ struck with consternation and fear, and would not now let the man go, but shut him up in a room and set his own wife to guard the door. Then he ordered his brother to surround the royal residence, seize the letters, if possible, and take the servants into custody. He himself, with the numerous clients and friends who were always about him, and with a large company of retainers, went to the house of the Aquillii, who were not at home. Therefore, to the surprise of everybody, he forced the door, and came upon the letters lying in the quarters where the envoys were lodging. Meantime the Aquillii came up in hot haste, joined battle at the door, and sought to take away the letters. But Valerius and his party resisted the attack, threw their togas about their opponents' necks, and after much struggling on both sides, at last succeeded in pushing them through the streets into the forum. The same success was had at the royal residence, where Marcus laid hands on other letters which were to be conveyed away in the baggage, seized as many

1 Vindicius laid the matter before the consuls, according to Livy, ii. 4, 6.

érihauBavopévov, cal Tov BacidtKav Goous du.
vatos Hv EXKxovTos eis THY dyopav.
VI. "Emel &€ tov OopuBov xatémavoay ot bra-
ToL Kal TOU Ovadrcpiou KeXevaavTos ex TIS OLKiAS
6 Ovuvdixcos mponyOn, cal yevouévns Katnyopias aveyvocOn ta ypdupata cal mpos ovdéy éroApngav avreiteiy ot avdpes, hv pev xatnhea Kat olwT) TaY AdAdwv, oriyor 5é BovAdpevor TO Bpovtw yapitecOar guyns éeuéeuvnvto. Kai te wal KodnXarivos avrois érxmidos émetxois évedidou dedaxpupevos nal Ovarréptos oiwrav. o Se Bpodros ovopact) trav vidy éxdrepov TpocEeTroy, “Aye, @ Tite,” elev, “dye, ® TeBepte, ti ovx atrovoyeloOe mpos THY KaTnyopiav;”’ ws & ovdev amexpivavto Tpls épwrnbévtes, oTwWS TpPOS TOUS Umnpétas atrootpewras TO TpdcwTroy, “ “Tyéerepov

Hon, elie, ‘To NotTrov épyov.” of dé evOds avrAAaBovres Tovs veavioxous Trepleppyyvuoy Ta iwaTia, Tas yelpas amiyov omicw, paBdots éEawov Ta cw@pata, TOV pev AAdNwY ov duvapéevav mpocopav ovde xaptepovvrdy, éxeivov &é NeyeTas pnte Tas drypets aTrayayely adAdNaYXoCE par olxrm te Tpepa THS Tepl TO TpoTwToY
opyns kal Baputnros, ddd Sevov évopay Koda-Couévois Tots tatoly axpt ob KaTateivavTes avtovs én rovdadpos tmeréxer Tas Keharas aré-Koay. ottw dé Tovs aAXous ert TH cUvdpxovTt Townodapevos wet éEavactas, épyov elpyac évos ovr émavety Bovropévors akiws ovTe rpéyeuv épixtov. 7) yap apetis typos eis dmrdbeav éEéotnoe tTHy wuyny, maOous péyeOos eis dvanr-514

of the king’s people as he could, and haled them to the forum.

VI. When the consuls had quieted the tumult, Valerius ordered Vindicius to be brought from his house, the denunciation was made, the letters were read aloud, and the accused had no courage to reply. Most of the people held their peace for very sorrow, but a few spoke of exile as a penalty, wishing to do Brutus a kindness. They were also somewhat encouraged to hope by the tears of Collatinus and the silence of Valerius. But Brutus, calling each of his sons by name, said: “Come, Titus, come Tiberius, why do ye not defend yourselves against this denunciation?”” But when they made no answer, though he put his question to them thrice, he turned to the lictors and said: “It is yours now to do the rest.’’ These straightway seized the young men, tore off their togas, bound their hands behind their backs, and scourged their bodies with their rods. The rest could not endure to look upon the sight, but it is said that the father neither turned his gaze away, nor allowed any pity to soften the stern wrath that sat upon his countenance, but watched the dreadful punishment of his. sons until the lictors threw them on the ground and cut off their heads with the axe. Then he rose and went away, after committing the other culprits to the judgement of his colleague.!| He had done a deed which it is difficult for one either to praise or blame sufficiently. For either the loftiness of his virtue made his spirit incapable of suffering, or else the magnitude of his

1 With this account, compare Livy, ii. 5, 5-9. Brutus looked on ‘“eminente animo patrio inter publicae poenae ministerium.”

, 3Q7 \ \ bmNS ? , ynoiav. ovdétepov b€ pxpov ovd dvOpwrnuivor,
b >] Aa “a a “a 4 \ nm 4
arr % Ociov H Onpiddes. Sixasov 5é TH Sok a > \ \ / Cg a A A Tov avdpos thy Kpiow ErecOat parrov Hh THY apeTny aagbeveia Tov Kpivovtos amiateicbar. “Pw-A Q 9 le! bd w e 4 patios yap ov tocovTov Epyov olovras ‘Pwpmvrov
4 a 4 A ¢ ,
yeveoOat THS TOAEWS THY WpuatY, Boov Bpovtou
THY KTLOLY THS WOALTELAS KaL KaTaOTACLD.
VII. ‘Os & oty arndOev é& ayopas rote, mov

\ , ” 2 \ , N \
pev xYpovoy extAnkis eiye Kal Pplen Kai own mavras éml tots Siatrempayyévors’ mpos S€ TH KodAativov padaxiav Kai pérrAnow aveddppnoay of “AxvAdLol, Kal ypovoy nkiovy NaBovtes aro-NoynoacGar, cat tov Ovuwdixcoy avtois arroédo-Ojnvat SodAov bvTa, Kal pn Tapa Trois KaTNYyopoLs
elvat. Bovdropévov bé€ tTadta aovyywpelv Kal Stadrvovtos ert FouTos THY exxAnoiay, 0 OvadrE-plos ovTe Tov avOpwrov olos Tr Ww adelvar Ta mept avTov 6XA@ KaTApEpLypévoy, oUTE TOV Srpov ela mpoéuevov Tovs mpodotas aTeNbeiv. Tédos 5é
a , b \ \ “a 9 a Tois c@paciw émiBadrwv Tas Yelpas Eemexadeito tov Bpotrov, cat tov Koddarivoy éBoa Sewa molelv, ef TH ouVvapyYovTt Tratdopovias avayxny
m poo pivrdpevos avtos oleras deity Kataxapileo Gas
a , ~ tais yuvatEl tovs mpodotas Kal trodepious TIS matpioos. ayavaxtobytos S€ tod wmdrouv Kai

4 ’ 4 \ > , e A KeNEVOVTOS amayecOar Tov Owuvdixcov, ot pev tnnpérat Siwoapevoe Tov dYAOv Hwrtovto Tov avOpwtou Kal tous adatpovpévovs EtuTrtoy, ot 516
PUBLICOLA |

suffering made it insensible to pain. In neither case was his act a trivial one, or natural to a man, but either god-like or brutish. However, it is right that our verdict should accord with the reputation of the man, rather than that his virtue should be dis- credited through weakness in the judge. For the Romans think that the work of Romulus in building the city was not so great as that of Brutus in founding and establishing its form of government.

VII. After Brutus had left the forum at this time, for a long while consternation, horror, and silence prevailed among all who remained, as they thought of what had been done. But soon the weakness and hesitation of Collatinus gave the Aquillii fresh courage ; they demanded time in which to make their defence, and the surrender of Vindicius to them, since he was their slave, and ought not to be in the hands of their accusers. Collatinus was willing to grant this request, and was about to dissolve the assembly with this understanding ; but Valerius was neither able to surrender the slave, who had mingled with the throng about him, nor would he suffer the people to release the traitors and withdraw. So at last he seized the persons of the Aquillii and summoned Brutus to the scene, crying aloud that Collatinus was acting shamefully in laying upon his colleague the necessity of killing his own sons, and then thinking it necessary for himself to bestow upon their wives the lives of his country’s betrayers and foes. The consul was indignant at this, and ordered that Vindicius should be taken away, whereupon the lictors pushed their way through the crowd, seized the man, and beat those who tried to rescue him. Then Valerius and his 517

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dé hidos Tov OvadXepiov mpoéoTncay cpvvopevoe:
cal o djpos éBoa Kedevwv trapeivar tov Bpodtov.
HKev ovv avOis Vrootpéas: Kal yevopéervns avT@ aiwwmns elev Ste Tois péev viots avTos aTroxXpav
jy StxaoTys, Tept dé TaY GAdwv TOS ToNiTALS érevOépors odar Widov Sidwor: rAeyérw SE oO
Bovropevos Kal weOérw Tov Sjpov. ovKEeTE péevTot
Noyor eSénoev, GAA THS Whpov Sobeions macars
€ 4 >] 4
anrovtes érrerexiaOnoav.

‘O d€ KodAartivos Av pév, as Eorxev, év vrowia
Tiwi Kal dla cuyyévecav TOV Baciréwpr, nx 9orro & avtod cai T@ Sevtépw TaV Ovoudtwv, apoctov-pevor Tov Tapxuviov. as Se kal tadta cuveBn, TavramTact mpocKkpovaas apnKe THv apyny ExOV Kal TS Todews wTeEHAOev. odtw 8 wdadw apXatpecav yevoyéevwov vrratos amedetyOn Rap-mpas o Ovarrépios, akiavy dtoxkaBov tis Tpo-Oupias yap Hs otopevos te Seiv arroNadoat

\ b 4 9 A “ > 4
tov Ovuvdixrov éyyndicato mparov atredevOepov 9 nm 9 € , 4, 4 4
éxeivov év ‘Payn yevéoOar troditny nat dépev Wipov i BovrAoto ppatpia mpocveynOévta. ois & dAdo drerevOépors ord nal pera Toru ypovov éEovatav Whdou Snpaywyav ewer ”Ar-mos: 4 O€ wavTeAns amercvBépwors aypt vov > ld J > 9 nw (4 \
owvodixta Réyerac & éxetvov, @s act, Tov Ovuvdixcov.
VIII. "Ex tovrov ta pév xpnpata tav Bact-Adwv Suaptraca. Tois “Pwpaios Edwxav, thy Sé

friends stood forth in the man’s defence, while the people shouted for Brutus to come. He turned back, therefore, and came, and when silence had been made for him, said that for his sons, he himself sufficed as judge, but he would leave the fate of the other traitors to the votes of the citizens, who were free, and any one who wished might speak and try to persuade the people. However, by this time there was no need of oratory, but a vote was taken which unanimously ‘condemned the men, and they were beheaded.

Collatinus, as it would seem, was already under some suspicion on account of his relationship to the royal family, and the second of his names also was hateful to the people, who loathed the sound of Tar- quin. But after these recent events, he saw that he was altogether obnoxious, and therefore resigned his office and withdrew secretly from the city.1 A new election was consequently held, and Valerius was triumphantly declared consul, thus receiving a worthy reward for his zeal. In this reward he thought that Vindicius ought to share, and therefore had a decree passed which made him, first of all freedmen, a citizen of Rome, and entitled him to vote with any curia in which he chose to be enrolled. Other freedmen received the right of suffrage in much later times from Appius,? who thus courted popularity. And from this Vindicius, as they say, a rfect manumission is to this day called “ vindicta.”’ 3

VIII. After this, the property of the royal family was given to the Romans to plunder, and their house

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 2, 3-10.
; ape Claudius Caecus, censor in 312 B.c.
8 Cf. Livy, ii. 5, 10,
319

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

oixiay Katécxayav Kal thy eravduv tod 8
b , 4 \ ef > f/f UA Apeiov tediov To HOvotov éxéxtnto Tapxumnos, kal TtovTo TO Oe@ KaOtépwoav. Ervye 5é TeOepiopevoy aptt, Kal Ketpévwv Ett TOV SpayyaTov
> v 5 a tr "~ Dy, " @ 5 \ \
ovx @ovto Seiv aroadv ovdé ypijcOar Sa tH
4 9 \ / ay / \
Kabtépwow, ara avvdpapovTes ehdpovy Tas
9 4 > \ , e >) (4 '
auadrXas eis Tov ToTayov. as 8 aitas Kai Ta 4 / > / > \ , dévdpa Komrovtes evéBaddov, apyov TravTdtace
TO Xwpiov avévtes TO Oe@ nai axaprov. wOov-pévov Sé€ woddN@v ém addANdOLS Kal aOpdwv e / e Cc a > \ , b) > @ dirqyayer 0 pods ov ToNUV TOTOV, AX' Grrov Ta mpara ouvevexDévra Kal qmepiTmecovTa Tots ore penis bréorn, TOY errupepopevov 5:€E050v ovK éyovTwy, GAN évicyopevwy Kal TepiTrAEKOpEVOD,
, e 4 3 \ \ cf >
érxdpBavev n ovpmntis taxvv Kat piCworv av€avopévnv rd TOU pevpatos. idvy Te yap émnyaye
4 a TOAAHY, 1) TpociaTapevn Tpodny Trapeiyey apa
\ , (/ 4 > ? a,
Kal KoAAnoL, ai Te TWANYyal oddOV OvK érroiou)Y, a\r\a paracas méCovcar cvvyravvoy eis TavTO
TavTa Kal ouveT Nar TOV. vo 6é peyeBous Kal
TTATEWS ErEpov | avTo peéyeOos éxtato Kal Xopav
avadexopevny 74 wheiota TOV bro Tob moTapou
KaTapepopevov. tobT0 voy vijo os éotw iepa Kara THV Tod, exer Sé vaovs Oedy Kal treptmdtous, Kareirat Se hovy th Aativoy Méon Suoiv yepupav.

"Eviot 6€ Tovro cupreceiy toTopobaty oux, dTe Tapeuviou KadiepwOn TO mrediov, adda Xpovors batepov GAAO Ywpiov opopoiy éxeive Tapxuvias 520

101

PUBLICOLA

and palace were razed to the ground. But the pleasantest part of the field of Mars, which had belonged to Tarquin, was dedicated to that god.
Now it chanced that it had just been reaped, and the grain still lay upon the ground; but since the field had been consecrated, they thought it not right to thresh it or use it in any way.
They therefore with one accord carried the sheaves to the river and cast them in. In like manner also they cast in the trees which had been cut,
and left the place wholly untilled and barren for the god of war. The quantities of stuff thus heaped together were not borne along by the current very far, but the advanced portions stopped and | accumulated at the shallows which they encountered.
The portions that followed these could not get through them, but impinged upon them and blended inextricably with them, and the aggregation was made increasingly firm and fast by the action of the stream. For this brought along great quantities of mud, the addition of which increased the size and cohesion of the mass. And besides, the impacts of the current were not rude, but with a gentle pressure pushed and moulded everything together.
Owing to its size and position the mass acquired fresh size, and an extent sufficient to receive most of what was brought down by the river. It is now a sacred island over against the city, containing temples of the gods and covered walks,! and is called in the Latin tongue “ Inter duos pontes.”
Some, however, say that this did not happen when the field of Tarquin was consecrated, but in later times, when Tarquinia devoted another field adjacent

Cf. Livy, ii. 5, 1-4.
52 T
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

b) 4 e \ / 4 9 es
avetons. 1 Sé€ Tapxuvia mapOévos jy iépea,
, A e c \ > \ UU
pia tav ‘“Eotiadwy, éoye Sé teyuds avtl tovTou
peydras, ev als qv xal TO paptupiay avtis SéxecOar povns yuvainav. 70 8 é€eivar yapeioOau Wndicapévov ov mpocedé~ato. Kal tadta pev ovTw yevéoOar pv0oroyodct.

IX. Tapxvmoy 5é tyv éx wpodocias amoyvorra

a > a b 4 29 / \ f
THS apxis avaddry uy édéEavto Tuppnvol pod vpes
Kal peyarn duvdper carhyov. avreEnyov &€é tous “Pwpaious of brrato., cal Trapétakav év ywpiols
e ~ 2 \ \ w 1 Ww \ A 9 4
iepois, @Y TO pev “Apotov! adaos, TO 5é Aicovevov NELL@VA TpoTayopevovaty. apyYopevwy 5é avTav cuvayew eis yetpas ~Appwv o Tapxvviou mais cal Bpovtos o ‘Pwpaiwyv tratos ov Kata TtHyNV
> A 4 > 3 e ’ Ww \
GAAHAOLS TWepiTEecovTEs, ANN UT ExXOGoUsS Kal opyns, 0 pev ws éml TUpavvoy Kal TodémLov TIS Tatpioos, 0 dé THS puyHs apuvvopevos, Opynocay @e , la) ef n \ “A A “ ouoce Tots trons. Oup@ 5é padrXA(OV H AoyLoU@ mpoopigavres nheidnoav avTav kal cvvarrébavov
> / 4 \ a“ , a S
GdAnros. ovTw Sé Setvod yevopévou tov mWpodyovos oux éoyev 0 aywv TédOS errLEeLKéaTEpoD,
> \ \ / ” \ , e ara Kai Spdcavtes ica xal trafovtes ot ot parol SiexpiOnoav bro yEt“avos.
"Hy ovv év atropots 0 Ovadréptos, ovK cides
TO THS MAXNS TEpas, AAG TOUS OTPATLOTAS CpaVv
Tois pev aUT@V vexpois AOvpodVTAs, éTaLpopevous
5é toils TOY TrodEpioy: odTwWS axKpLTos HY Kal
1 “Apotov Amyot, Coraés, Bekker, after Livy’s silva Araa
(ii. 7, 2) : Odpoor.
522

PUBLICOLA

to this. Now Tarquinia was a holy virgin, one of the Vestals, and received great honours for this act, among which was this, that of all women her testimony alone should be received. The people also voted her permission to marry, but she did not avail herself of it. This is how the thing happened, as the tale runs.

IX. But Tarquin, despairing of attempts to regain his throne Dy treachery, was eagerly welcomed by the Tuscans,! who set out to restore him with a great force. The consuls led the Romans out to meet them, and arrayed their forces in certain sacred precincts, one of which was called the Arsian grove, the other the Aesuvian meadow. When the engage- ment began, Aruns the son of Tarquin and Brutus the Roman consul encountered each other. It was not by chance, but both were driven on by hatred and wrath, the one to attack a tyrant and foe of his country, the other to avenge himself on the author of his exile. They urged their horses to the combat, but since they engaged with fury rather than calcu- lation, they were reckless of themselves, and fell by one another's hands. The battle which had such a dreadful beginning, ended no less disastrously ; the armies, after inflicting and suffering equal losses, were separated by a tempest. .

Valerius was therefore in perplexity, not knowing what the issue of the battle was, but seeing his soldiers as much disheartened by their own losses as they were encouraged by those of their enemies. So undistinguishable and equal was the slaughter on a Fie people of Veii and Tarquinii, according to Livy, ii. 6, 4f.

2 According to Livy (ii. 7, 1), the Tuscans departed in terror after the battle.

«J

TApPGAANAOS VIO TWAROovs o hovos. ov pwHV arr éxatépois éyyllev opm@pmeva Ta oixeia padXov éBeBaiov tiv Array fh tHv vincny eixalopeva TA TOV TrOAEpIoV. émedovans Se vuKTOS olav eikds oUTM pepaynpévols, Kal yevouevwr év novxla Tav otpatoTrédwr, NEeyovar cero OFvat TO addoos, ex & avtod davinv éxrecety peyaddnv dpdalovear ws évi wreiovs év TH waxy TeOVaKact Tuppnvav 4 'Popaiov. qv 8 dpa Ociov te ro hOeyEduevov' evOUs Te yap UT adTov Tois pev araddfar wapéotn péya wal Oapparéov, ot Sé Tuppnvol mepipoBot yevopevoe nal ouvtrapayOévres e&érrecov éx tod otpatorédov Kal deeomapnaay oi mreloTo: Tous 5é cataderpOévras

Odiyw mevraxicytriwy éddacous émedOovtes el-
Nov ot ‘Pwpaior, nal radrXrAa Sinptracay. oi Sé vexpol SiaprOunOevres evpéOnoayv tpiaxdctoe pev
él ytrlious Kal pupiows ot TaV TodEpiov, of Se ‘Pwpatov rap va tocobtot.
Tavtny thy paynv réyovar yevéo Oar po pas
caravdav Maptiwv. éOpiduBevoe & ar avtis Ovarrépios eicerdoas teOpitir@ TPATOS UTaTwD.
Kal TO Tpayya ceuynv Kal peyaroTpenh tapé-axev dy, ov étipOovoy ovd avdcacayv, ws
Gviot Aéyovuol, TOUS op@vTas’ ov yap ay éaxe CiAov tocovTov ovdé irotimiay es ern Tapmoira Stapévovcav. amedé-avto 5€ Tov Ovad-ANepiov Kal Tas eis TOV GUVapXYOVTAa TLLAsS, als
éxxopiCopevov xal Oamrdpevov éxoopnce xa
Noyov er avT@ SteENrAGev émitdduov, bs obtws
U0 ‘Pwpaiwv nyatrnOn cal rocavtTny éxye Ydpwv 524

102

PUBLICOLA

both sides. Each army, however, was more convinced of defeat by the near sight of its own dead, than it could be of victory by conjecturing those of the enemy. But when such a night came on as must needs follow such a battle, and both camps were quiet, they say that the grove was shaken, and a loud voice issued from it declaring that the Tuscans had lost one man more in the battle than the Romans. The utterance was.manifestly from some god,! for at once the Romans were inspired by it to -loud shouts of courage, while the Tuscans were panic-stricken, abandoned their camp in confusion, and were for the most part dispersed. As for those that remained, a little less than five thousand in number, the Romans fell upon them, took them prisoners, and plundered the camp. And when the dead on both sides were numbered, those of the enemy were found to be eleven thousand and three hundred, and those of the Romans as many less one.
It is said that this battle was fought on the last day of February. Valerius celebrated a triumph for it, being the first consul to drive into the city on a four-horse chariot. And the proceeding afforded a spectacle which was imposing and magnificent, not odious and offensive to the spectators, as some say ; otherwise it would not have been continued with such ardour and emulation for countless years. The people were also pleased with the honours which Valerius bestowed upon his colleague at the funeral ceremonies. He even delivered a funeral oration in his honour, which was so admired by the Romans and won such favour that from that time on, when

1 Silvanus, as Livy tells the tale (ii. 7, 2).

@aoTe Waat Tois ayabois Kal peydros Uirapyetv é& éxeivov TeXeuTHCacW UTO TAY apioTaV éyKopudlecOar. Réyetas Sé kal Tov "EAAnUiKOY éretahiwy éxeivos yevérOar mpecButepos, elye pi Kal TOTO YoAwVOs éotw, ws 'Avaktméevns 6 pyTwp iaTopnKev.
X. "ANAG be' exetva warrov FYOovTo T@ Ovar-epi Kxal mpocéxpovov, Ste Bpodtos pév, Sv mat épa THS edevbepias évoputev 0 Sfjpos, OUK
ngl@ce povos apxew, adda Kal mTp@Tov avuT@ cuvapxovra 1 pOdelAETO Kal devtepov® "« Oiroat é, : épacay, "els abtov &travta TUVEVEYKGLEVOS ovK EoTL THS Bpovrou KANpOVvopjLos Umateias wndev auT@ TpoanKovans, arra Tis Tapevviov TUpav-vidos. Kaito. Ti Set AOYM pev Bpodrov ¢ eyKW pLLa-Gel, é Epyy dé pipeto Oar Tapxvvoy, uno paBdors onod Tao ats Kal TWeNEKECL kaTvovTa pLovov ef olxias TocaUvTns TO peyeBos 6 Sony ov Kadecire TH
tov. Bacihews;" Kat yap GVTWS O Ovarndéptos @KEL TPAYLK@TEPOV UTEP THY Kadoupernyv Ovediay
oixiap emrix pepa.pevny 7H aryopa Kal xalopacav
é& Dypous anavta, dvompéaodov dé medaoat Kal Naren ny éFwev, dare KataBaivovtos avtov To ox Twa. PET Ew pov elvat Kal Bacthuxoy THS TWwpo-TOLTHS TOV OyKoV. baov obv év apg Kat ™ parypao peyddots ayabov ny exenv @Ta Tappnoiay avtl Kohaxeias T poo téweva Kat oyous arnbeis, edecEev. axovcas yap OTL Tots Todos dpapta-vey edoKel TOV pirov dueELovT@v, ovK epedovel-ANGE, ovo NYAVAKTHGEDY, anrxra Tayv ToXNous

their great and good men died, encomiums were pronounced upon them by the most distinguished citizens. And this funeral oration of his is said to have been earlier than any among the Greeks, unless Anaximenes the orator is right in saying that the custom originated with Solon.

X. But that which the rather displeased and offended the people in Valerius was this. Brutus, whom they regarded as the father of their liberties, would not consent to rule alone, but once and again chose a colleague to rule with him. “ But this Valerius,’ they said, “in concentrating all power upon himself, is not a successor to the consulate of Brutus, to which he has no right, but to the tyranny of Tarquin. Yet why should he extol Brutus in words, while in deeds he imitates Tarquin, descending to the forum alone, escorted by all the rods and axes together, from a house no less stately than the royal house which he demolished?” For, as a matter of fact, Valerius was living in a very splendid house on the so-called Velia.1 It hung high over the forum, commanded a view of all that passed there, and was surrounded by steeps and hard to get at, so that when he came down from it the spectacle was a lofty one, and the pomp of his

' procession worthy of a king. Accordingly, Valerius

showed what a good thing it is for men in power and high station to have ears which are open to frankness and truth instead of flattery. For when he heard from his friends, who spared him no detail, that he was thought by the multitude to be transgressing, he was not obstinate nor exasperated, but quickly got together a large force of workmen, and while it

1 An eminence of the Palatine hill.

\ / ” \ ww cuvayaywy Texvitas éTt vuKTOS ovans KatéBanre Thy oixiay Kal Katécxawev eis Eadhos tracay, bid e 4 \ e , ec oa \ a@ate wed nuépay tovs “Pwpaiovs opdvras Kat cuvictapévous Tov pev avdpos ayamrav Kal Oav-pate Hv peyaroppocuynv, axOecOar Se Tijs oixias Kal qoOeiy to péyeOos nal TO KddXos, @otrep avOpwrrov, dua POovov ov Sixaiws xata-
, a \ w C4 ? ,
ANeAupevns, TOV S€ apyovtos, WoTEp aveoTiou,
map érépots oixodvtos. édéyovTo yap ot pirot
tov Ovarrépiov axpt ov torov Edwxev o Sihyos avT@ Kal KaTecKevacey oixiay éxeivns peTpLo-Tépay, Orrov vov tepov éotivy Ovixas ToTas Gvopa-Copevov.

BovAdpevos 5é 7 povoyv éavTov, dda Kal TH
apynv avtl gdoBepas yetponOn Kal mpoodirAy
a a a : 4 / ? ;
moleivy Tots TOANOIS, TOUS TE TEAéKELS ATréXUCE
fa) es > , \ e sf 9 b] , tav padBdwv, autds te Tas paBSous els éxxAnoiav \ e “a a lA 4
Taptwv udnce TO Syum Kal KatéxdLWe, péya
Tot@v TO Tpoaxnpa THS Snwoxpatias. Kal TovTO
péxpe viv Sradpvradtrovery ot dpxovres. éXadvOave 5é TOUS ToAXOUS OvY EaUTOV, WS @OVTO, TOLaY
, 3 \ “ a A / 4,
TaTre.vov, adda Tov POovoyv TH peTpLoTHTL TavTY a UA e han A caBatp@v Kal Kod\ovwv, avT@ Sé€ mpoatilels To-covtov péyeOos Suvdpews Ecov ddaipeiv édoxe Tis éEovaias, vrrobvopévou pel? ndovis abt@ Tov was still night tore the house down, and razed it all to the ground. In the morning, therefore, the Romans saw what had happened, and came flocking together. They were moved to love and admiration by the man’s magnanimity, but were distressed for the house, and mourned for its stately beauty, as if it had been human, now that envy had unjustly compassed its destruction. They were also distressed for their ruler, who, like a homeless man, was now sharing the homes of others. For Valerius was received into the houses of his friends until the people gave him a site and built him a house, ot more modest dimensions than the one he had lived in before, where now stands the temple of Vica Pota,} so-called.
528

Wishing now to make not only himself but also the government, instead of formidable, submissive and agreeable to the multitude, he removed the axes from the lictors’ rods, and when he came into the assembly, inclined and lowered the rods them- selves to the people, emphasizing the majesty of the democracy. This custom the consuls observe to this day. And before the multitude were aware of it, he had succeeded, not by humbling himself, as they thought, but by checking and removing their envious feelings through such moderation on his part, in add- ing to his real influence over them just as much as he had seemed to take away from his authority, and the people submitted to him with pleasure and bore his

1 Victress Possessor, a name of the goddess of victory, whose temple was at the foot of the Velia (Livy, ii. 7, 12). According to Livy, Valerius was building the house on the Velia, but in order to allay the people's jealousy, brought the materials to the foot of the hill, and built the house there.

Sypov nal dépovtos éxovoiws. wate cat Tomwdu-KoAaY avnyopevoev BUTOY onpaiver 5é Todbvoma Snuoxndy Kat tovTo padXrov itoyvoce TaV ap-yalwv dvoudtav, @ Kal npeis xpnoopeBa Tov ANotTrov Biov Tov avdpos ictopovrtes.
XI. 'Yrateiay pev yap axe petiévar xal mapayyédrev tois BovAopévors: mpo Se THs KaTacTdcEws TOU suVdpxoVTOS ovK «EidMsS TOP
, > \ bd 4 ig \ 4
'vero Opevor, arrAa Seduas avrim pag UTO pGavov
TLVOS h aryvoias, expycaro Th povapxia mpos
Ta KadmoTAa «al peyeata TOV TOALTEULAT WD.
Tp@Tov pev yap dveTAjpoce THY Bovdny OAL-yavdpotcar éreOynKeay yap of pev vd Tapxuviov T™ poTepov, oi dé evayxos € év TH paxn. TOUS 5 eyrypadevTas tm' avtod Aéyovoty ExaTov wal éfjkovta Técoapas ever Ba. peta be Tatra VOLOUS éypa eV, ov pddiota per t laxupous érroinge TOUS TOANOUS O TOY SHyoyv ao TwV UTaTeY TO
pevryovte | dixny émixaretcOas did0vs" Sevrepos O
TOUS apxny avaraBovtas, iv o Onpos ovK edwxer, atroOvnao Kew Kedevorv" TplTOS dé pera TOUTOUS, Os éBon Once TOUS TEVNGLV, @ TA TEAN TOV TrokuTay
adeire Kat 7 poOvporepov dmrtecOar TOV épyacvéy érroinaev amravras. o 8é ypagpels KaTa TOV ameBourtav TOLS vrdrous _OUxX HTTOV eookeE Snpo-TUKOS élvat, Kal mpos TOV TOMMY paddov 7 duvatav yeypap Ga. Cnpiav yap arreOeias erage oa TéEVTE KAL duelv mpoBatwv akiav. Hv 6e TUN mpoBdrou pev oBorol déxa, Boos dé éxarov, ovT® vopic pate Xpopevery TON ToTE Pwpaior, 530
™™/.
PUBLICOLA

yoke willingly. They therefore called him Publicola,!
a name which signifies people-cherisher. This name prevailed over the older names which he had borne, and it is the name which I shall use for him in the remainder of this Life.

XI. For he permitted any who wished to enter the lists and sue for the consulship. But before the installation of his colleague, not knowing who he would be, but fearing an opposition due to some jealousy or ignorance, he used his sole authority for the enactment of his best and most important measures. In the first place, he filled up the senate, which was much reduced in numbers; for some had long before been put to death by Tarquin, and others had recently fallen in the battle with the Tuscans. Those who were enrolled in this body by him amounted, they say, to a hundred and sixty-four. After this he enacted several laws, one of which especially strengthened the position of the commons by allowing a defendant to appeal to the people from the judgement of the consuls. A second made it a capital offence to assume a magistracy which the people had not bestowed. A third, following these, came to the relief of the poor; it lifted the taxes from the citizens, so that all engaged more zealously in manufactures and commerce. And the one which was enacted against disobedience to the consuls was thought to be no less popular in its character, and to be in the interest of the many rather than of the powerful. For the fine which it imposed on disobedience was only the worth of five oxen and two sheep. Now the value of a sheep was ten obols, and that of an ox, a hundred, for the Romans at

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 8, 1.

adda poBateias Kal Krnvotpopiars evOnvovvtar.
510 Kal Tas ovcias aypt viv aro TaY mpoBdaTwY MEKOUNA KAaNODGL, Kal TOY vopiopdTwY Tots manraotdtos Body éreydpattoy mpoBatov 7
abv. éridevto Sé nal mwasoly abtrav YvtrAXovs
kat BovBovrAKous cal Kampapiovs ovopata nal Tlopxiovs: xdmpas pev tas alyas, moprous 8é TOUS Yoipous ovoualorTes.
XII. Odtw S€é wept tadta Snpotixds yevdpevos vomobérns Kal méeT pos, ev TE wy wetpio! THy Tipwplay wirepétewvev. eyparre yap vouov dvev Kpicews xteivat Sidovta Tov BovNomevoy Tupavveiv: KTEivavra 5é dovov xabapov éroincer, e Tapdoyotto
Tov ddiKnpatos Tous édéyXoUS. eémEel yap ov Suvatoy émixelpovvta THALKOUTOLS AaUeiv AatravTas, ovx advvatov &€ TO pr) AaOovTa TOD KpLOjAvaL POdcar KpettTova yevopevoy, ty dvaipel TO adinua Kpiow, mporafely éwxe TO Svvapévm cata Tov adixovvTos.
2 "Ennvédn 8 nal Sia tov tapevtixoy vopovr.
émel yap see ypnpata mpos Tov TodEpmOV ciceveyKely ATO TOV OVTLMY TOUS TOALTAS, OUT AUTOS

dyacbat THs oixovopias ovTE TOvs dirous édcat BovXopevos ob8 Gras eis olxov ids@ Tou trapedOely
Snpoca ypnuata, Tapueioy pev aéderEe Tov TOD Kpdvov vaov, © péxypt viv xpwpevor StatedXodar, tapias S€ To Shum Svo Tav véwy Edwxev arro-
3 Sei~ar: nal amedetxOnoay ot mpatot ovmdsos

1 évy rE wh perplp with Coraés: év rg perply.
53?
i

PUBLICOLA

that time did not use much coined money, but their wealth consisted in flocks and herds. Therefore to this day they call their substance " peculium,' from "pecus," cattle ; and their oldest coins are stamped with the figure of an ox, a sheep, or a hog. And they actually gave their own sons such surnames as Suillius, Bubulcus, Caprarius, and Porcius; the last two from "capra"' and "porcus," their words for goat and pig.!

XII. But although in these particulars he showed himself a popular and moderate lawgiver, in the case of an immoderate offence he made the penalty severe. For he enacted a law by which any one who sought to make himself tyrant might be slain without trial, and the slayer should be free from blood-guiltiness if he produced proofs of the crinfe. For although it is impossible for one who attempts so great a task to escape all notice, it is not impossible for him to do so long enough to make himself too powerful to be brought to trial, which trial his very crime precludes. He therefore gave any one who was able to do so the privilege of anticipating the culprit's trial.

He also received praise for his law concerning the public treasury. When it was necessary for the citizens to contribute from their substance means for carrying on the war, he was unwilling to assume the administration of it himself, or to allow his friends to do so, or, indeed, to have the public moneys brought into any private house. He therefore made the temple of Saturn a treasury, as it is to this day, and gave the people the privilege of appointing two young men as quaestors, or treasurers. The first to 1 The first two from forms of '' sus," swine, and "' bos," oz.

533

“

he

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Overovptos kal Muvodcios Mdpxos xal ypypatra auvnyOn ToAAd. TpioKxaidexa yap jamreypaxpavro pupiades, oppavois maiol Kal ynpas yuvackiv aveDetans TIS elapopas.
Tabra dé Siovkjoas amederEev éauT@ ocuvdpxovra TOV Aouxpyrtias TwaTépa Aouxpiriov, @ THS
NYE MOVLKWTEPAS efrardpevos OvTL mpeo Butépe
TaLEWsS mapedwoxe TOUS Kaoupevous paonns: al
TOUTO Sve wervev Els aS TO m peo Betov an’ éxeivou
Tois ‘YeparTepous pudrarropevon. émet 5 oAiryass TMépas Dorepov ered eUTAT EV O Aouxpyrtios, Wad dpxatpec vay yevopmeveov npeOn Mad pros ‘Opdreos, Kal TuvApxXe TP Tlowdcxdr@ Tov UroderTropevov Xpovov Tov évavtod.

XIII. Tapxuviou « dé ‘Pwpaious Sevrepov TOE pov éy Tuppyvia KLVOUVTOS péeya onpetov NeyeTat ryevéer Oar: Bacinedwv yap ért xal TOV VE@V ToD Kamitwriov Ards exov) Tapevvios cov ome oUyTETEhEd UEVO?, ere payreias ryevomerns elt’ av-
TO bofay GdXAws, Gpya Kata Kopudny émiorhjoat
KEPa{LeouV eFeduxe Tuppyvots tTiow €& Ovniwy Snpsoupyots, eit’ odtyov totepov ékérece THis apr is. tav 6é Tuppnvav SiaTreT ac pévov TO
TO pummov éuBarovrav eis KapLVOD, ovx éralev
a T poo jKel Tdaoyvew mnrov év Tupl, aruxvova Gas Kal ouritavery, exTNKOmerns THS Uyporntos, adn
ebay kai @dnoe Kal peyeBos é éaxev apa pouy
Kal TKANPOTNTL TOTOUTOY WATE pores eFarpeOnjvas
THY opodyy atrocKkevacapévoy THS Kauivou nat TaY TOLXwY TmepiarpebevTov. os ov éddxeu Tots pavTect Ociov elvat onpeiov evTuytas Kal Suvd-pews tap’ ols écovto To TéOpiTmov, Eyvwoav ot 534

PUBLICOLA

be thus appointed were Publius Veturius and Marcus Minucius, and large sums of money were collected. For one hundred and thirty thousand names were on the assessment lists, orphans and widows being excused from the contribution.!

This matter regulated, he caused Lucretius, the father of Lucretia, to be appointed his colleague in the consulship.?2, To him he yielded the precedence, as the elder man, and committed to him the so- called “ fasces,’’ a privilege of seniority which has continued from that day to this. But Lucretius died a few days afterwards, and in a new election Marcus Horatius was chosen consul, and shared the office with Publicola for the remainder of the year. ,

XIII. While Tarquin was stirring up in Tuscany another war against the Romans, a thing of great portent is said to have happened. When Tarquin was still king, and had all but completed the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, either in consequence of an oracle, or else of his own good pleasure, he com- missioned certain Tuscan craftsmen of Veii to place upon its roof a chariot of terra cotta. Soon after this he was driven from his throne. The Tuscans, however, modelled the chariot and put it in a furnace for firing, but the clay did not contract and shrink in the fire, as it usually does, when its moisture evaporates. Instead of this, it expanded and swelled and took on such size, strength, and hardness, that it could with difficulty be removed, even after the roof of the furnace had been taken off and its sides torn away. To the seers, accordingly, this seemed a divine portent of prosperity and power for those who should possess the chariot, and the

1 Cf. Camillus, ii. 2. 2 Cf. Livy, ii. 8, 1-4. 535

.

Ovnior uy wpoécbar trois ‘Pwpalows atrastoveor, Kal amexpivavto tovto Tapxuviois, od trois Tap- xuvious éxBarodat mpoanKew. ortyats 8 Sotepov nuépars Roay lrmay ayaves avtois. Kal TA ev adr Béav cal crovdny ciwOviav wapetxe, To 5é vixnoav TtéOpimmov o pev jvioxyos é€EnNauve TOU immodpopov ayédnv ecrehavwpévos, ot Sé tarot mronGévtes am’ ovdeutds éudavods mpopdcews, GdAa Kata Te Satpovioy 7 TUYNY ‘tevTO TapTi Taye. pos THY ‘Pwyaiwy modu, éyovTes TOV nvioxov, @s ovdeyv hv epyov avtod xatatetvoyTos ovde TapnyopobvTos, GAN Hptracto, Sovta TH pupn Kal gepopevov, adypr od TH Kamitwor\io mpoopigavtes éFéBadov avtov évtav0a Tapa tHhv muAnv jv viv “Patovpévay xadovdot. ‘yevouévou dé rovtou Oavydoavtes of Ovnios cai PoBnOévres érétpeway atrodobvar 76 Gpua Tots TexviTass.

XIV. Tov 8 vewv tot Kamitwdiov Atos eb-
Eato pév avabnoav Tapxivos o Anpaparov
TONE MOV LaBivors, geodounae dé Tapxivios 0
LovepBos vids dv Hh viwvos Tov evEapévou:
Kavepdoat dé ov« epOacer, adda pax pov amre-AeimeTo Tob TEXOS éyeuv ore Tapxvveos efémumrev.
as obp arreipyaoro TEACWS Kal TOV TpvgnKxovTa Koo HOV ameiyen, qv Te LomdcorAa purorepia mpos THY Kabtépworr. épBovovr $8 ‘moddol TOD
duvatav, Kal mYXOGovTo tais pev dddaus Tipais HTTOv, as vopoberay Kal oTpAT YOY éx ™poon-KOVTOV éoxe” Tavrny 8 ovcay GddoTpiav ovK @ovto Seiy ait@ mpocyevécOat, eat Tov “Opatciov
536

people of Veii determined not to give it up. When the Romans asked for it, they were told that it belonged to the Tarquins, not to those who had expelled the Tarquins. But a few days afterwards there were chariot races at Veii. Here the usual exciting spectacles were witnessed, but when the charioteer, with his garland on his head, was quietly driving his victorious chariot out of the race-course, his horses took a sudden fright, upon no apparent occasion, but either by some divine ordering or by merest chance, and dashed off at the top of their speed towards Rome, charioteer and all. It was of no use for him to rein them in or try to calm them with his voice; he was whirled helplessly along until they reached the Capitol and threw him out there, at the gate now called Ratumena. The Veientines were amazed and terrified at this occur- rence, and permitted the workmen to deliver their chariot.

XIV. The temple of Jupiter Capitolinus had been vowed by Tarquin, the son of Demaratus, when he was at war with the Sabines, but it was actually built by Tarquinius Superbus, the son, or grandson, of him who vowed it. He did not, however, get so far as to consecrate it, but was driven out before it was quite completed. Accordingly, now that it was completely finished and had received all the orna- ments that belonged to it, Publicola was ambitious to consecrate it. But this excited the jealousy ot many of the nobility. They could better brook his other honours, to which, as legislator and military commander, he had a rightful claim. But this one they thought he ought not to have, since it was more appropriate for others, and therefore they mpoeTpétmovTo Kal twapwetvvoyv aytiroeiocbas TIS cablepwocews. yevonévns ody +e TlomArKod@ otpateias avayxaias, Wndirdpevo, Tov 'Opdtiov KkaQtepody avizyov eis TO Katut@dov, os ovK

dv éxelvov mepuyevopevot mapovtos. évioe Sé dact K\ipwm Tov UTdTwy Aayely Exeivoy él THY oTpaTelay dxovta, TovTov dé éml thy Kabsé-pwow. é€eote 5é mepl tovTwy ws eoyev etxdfew tois mpaxOeior tmepl tH Kadiépwory. eidois ou Lenreupiass, 7) ourtuyyavet Tept THY Tav-oédnvov paduora Tov Merayerryavos, aun pot-opeéveov amdadytov eis TO Kamirwor, O pep
'Oparos TLWOT AS yevouérns Ta Tt adda Spdcas
kat tov Oupav arpdpevos, GoTrEp Gos éotiv, émep 0 eyyero TAS VEVO[LLO MEAS émrl TH cabrepwmoct
gwvas' o 8 'abedpos rod Tlomduxdda Mdpnos éx moNAOU Tapa, Tas Oupas dpertas kal Tapagu-AdTTwWY TOY Kaupon, ©°O, orate,' ' elrrev, "6 VLOS gov TéOvyker € ev TO atpatoTedyp vooyjaas." TOUTO mavras nviace Tovs aKovoavTas: o 8 'Oparios oudey S:atapax eis, ann' A Toc oUTOV povov elm ov, es 'Pinpate Tolvuy O7roL _Bovreade TOV vex pov, cya yap ov mpociepat TO mévOos," émépave THY Aoumrny Kabrépwory. nv &€ TO ™poany-eA pevov ovK arnOés, aX' o Mapxos Os amr0-oT Hoey TOV Oparvov éevoaro. aupacTes ouv
0 avnp THS evoTadeias, elite THY anarny év Karp Bpaxei ouveidev cite marevdels 0 AOdyos ovK éxiynoev avtov.
XV. "Eouxe 5é xal wept tov Sevrepov vacv encouraged and incited Horatius to claim the privilege ot consecrating the temple. At a time, then, when Publicola was necessarily absent on military service, they got a vote passed that Horatius should perform the consecration, and conducted him up to the Capitol, feeling that they could not have gained their point had Publicola been in the city. Some, however, say that Publicola was designated by lot, against his inclination, for the expedition, and Horatius for the consecration.! And it is possible to infer how the matter stood between them from what happened at the conse- cration. It was the Ides of September, a day which nearly coincides with the full moon of the Attic month Metageitnion ; the people were all assembled on the Capitol, silence had been proclaimed, and Horatius, after performing the other ceremonies and laying hold upon the door of the temple, as the custom is, was pronouncing the usual words of con- secration. But just then Marcus, the brother of Publicola, who had long been standing by the door and was watching his opportunity, said : "O Consul, thy son lies dead of sickness in the camp." This distressed all who heard it; But Horatius, not at all disturbed, merely said: " Cast forth the dead then whither ye please, for I take no mourning upon me," and finished his consecration. Now the announce- ment was not true, but Marcus thought by his falsehood to deter Horatius from his duty. _Wonder- ful, therefore, was the firm poise of the man, whether he at once saw through the deceit, or believed the story without letting it overcome him.!

XV. A similar fortune seems to have attended the

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 8, 6-8.

opoia TUYN yeveo Oar TIS Kablepwoews. TOV peV yap TpaTov, ws elpntat, Tapxuviov KatacKeua- aavtos, "Opatiov 8 xadtepwoavtos, év ois éudvaAtors monéuors Op amwawdece: Tov Se Sev- Tepov avéotnce pev YAras, éreypaddn S€ 77H xabtepoaet Katovros XvANA TpoaTroPavovtTos. rovtou 5é madwy ev Tais kara OvitérAXov ordoect S:apOapévtos tov tpirov TH mpos TaAAA Kal
A Ul bY , 9 \ b] tobTo xXpyoduevos edrroTpuig Over meavavos é& apyis axype tédovs avayayav, émeide yevouevor kat POerpopevov pet' Grlyov ovK émretdev, aXXNa ToaovTov evtvyia LArav waphrAOev oov exeivov ev THS adiepwcews tov Epyou, rodroyv bé TIS dvatpécews TpoaTroBavetv. aya yap T@ TErEV- thoat Ovectectavov éverrpyaOn To Kamiteéduov. 'O &€ tétapros ovtos tbo Aopetiavod Kai auvetertaOn Kai xabtepwOn. Réyerac S€ Tap- xuviov els Tous Oepedtous avadadcat Aitpas ap- yuplouv Tetpakiopupias: toutou Sé Tod Kal' pas Tov peytotoyv év 'Poun tov idtwrixov trotTov éxroyicOévTa TO THS Ypvawcews pn TErAdoaL dy avdvdwopa, wréeov 4H Sicytdiov cal pupiwv ta- AdvTwv yevouevov. of dé Kioves éx Tov Tlevte- Ajow éTunOncavy Aifov, KdAMoTaA TH Tayet TpOs TO [LKOS Exovtes: eldopuev yap avrous 'AGynow. év 5é “Pwoyn wrAnyévtes adOis Kai avakv-abévtes ov TocovToy éoxov yradupias dcop aToecav cuppetpias kal! rod Kadov, dtdxevoe

1 «al supplied by Bekker. after G. Hermann: oupperplas
Tov Kadov (the symmetry of their beauty).
540

dedication of the second temple. The first, as I have said, was built by Tarquin, but consecrated by Horatius; this was destroyed by fire during the civil wars.!| The second temple was built by Sulla, but Catulus was commissioned to consecrate it,? after the death of Sulla. This temple, too was destroyed, during the troublous times of Vitellius,’ and Vespas- ian began and completely finished the third, with the good fortune that attended him in all his under- takings. He lived to see it completed, and did not live to see it destroyed, as it was soon after ; and in dying before his work was destroyed he was just so much more fortunate than Sulla, who died before his was consecrated. For upon the death of Vespasian . the Capitol was burned.‘

The fourth temple, which is now standing on the same site as the others, was both completed and consecrated by Domitian. It is said that Tarquin expended upon its foundations forty thousand pounds of silver. But the greatest wealth now attributed " to any private citizen of Rome would not pay the cost of the gilding alone of the present temple, which was more than twelve thousand talents.> Its pillars are of Pentelic marble,® and their thickness was once most happily proportioned to their length ; for we saw them at Athens. But when they were recut and scraped at Rome, they did not gain as much in polish as they lost in symmetry and beauty,

1 83 B.C. 2 69 B.C. 3 69 A.D. * 80 A.D.

5 For purposes of comparison a talent may be reckoned as worth £250, or $1200.
8 Pentelé was an Attic deme on the N.E. edge of the Athenian plain, near which excellent marble was quarried from the mountain. This was called Brilessus in earlier times then Pentelicus.
541

\ \ 4 e A 4 “
5 Kat Nayapot davevtes. o pévtot Gavpacas Tov
KamitwXiov tiv ToduTéAELay, eb play eldev ev
> / a“ A \ oiKig Aopersavod oroay 0] Bacidoeny i) Badra-velov 7 TadXaKkiowy Siaitav, olov éott TO NeEyo-

\ \
pevoy ’"Enrtydppou mpos tov dowtov, - Ov piravOpwros TU y éso" eyes vécov:
xaipes dd0us,
TovovToyv ay tL mpos Aopetiavov eimeiy mponyOn: “Ovn edoeBys odde gidotimos TY oat: execs vooov' Xaipers KaTouxobopar, aotep o Midas éxeivos, AtwavTa aot Xpued wal MOwa Bovdo-PeEVvOS yiver Oa.” Taira bev ov mrept TOUTWDV.
XVI. ‘O & Ta KUvLOS pera TV peyddny
payny év Kal tov viov aTr@rere Hovopayy-cavra Bpovro, KaTapuyov els TO Knyovotov ixérevoe Adpav Hlopcivay, avbpa Kai dSvvapev peytorny éxovTa TOY "Tranicov Bactréwr Kal oKOvYTAa YpnoToV eva Kal b pudorepor o 8 bmé-TXETO BonOnceuw. Kar Tpe@Tov poev erreppev ELS ‘Poyny KedEVOV b¢ ecQat Tov Tapxvviov- as ov UTRKOVTaY ot Popaior, KaTaryyelas: avrots TOAEMOV Kal xpovov év @ Kal ToTrov eis Ov émendev
2 euBareiv, adtKero PETA TONKS Suvdwews. IIomLKOAaS e npeOn pev are@v bratos TO Sevtepov, Kal ou aur Tiros Aouxpyrios: éravehOov de els “Pony rat Bovdopevos T@ ppovnuart ™ p@TOV vrepBarérOat TOV Tlopoivay, exTile TOMY 2-‘yALoupiay mn mya tov GvTOS avTov. Kal Tes-Yicas peydrols avadwpaciw éEmtaxocious érrot-542

PUBLICOLA

and they now look too slender and thin. However, if anyone who is amazed at the costliness of the Capitol had seen a single colonnade in the palace of Domitian, or a basiiica, or a bath, or the apartments for his concubines, then, as Epicharmus says
to the spendthrift, “<’Tis not beneficent thou art; thou art diseased ;
thy mania is to give,”
so he would have been moved to say to Domitian:
«°Tis not pious, nor nobly ambitious that thou art ;
thou art diseased; thy mania is to build; like the famous Midas, thou desirest that every thing become gold and stone at thy touch.” So much, then, on this head.

XVI. But to return to Tarquin, after the great battle in which he lost his son in a duel with Brutus, he fled for refuge to Clusium, and became a suppliant of Lars Porsena, the most powerful king in Italy, who was thought also to be aman of worth and noble ambitions. He promised Tarquin his aid and assist- ance. So in the first place he sent to Rome and ordered them to receive Tarquin as their king. Then when the Romans refused, he declared war upon them; proclaimed the time and place of his attack, and marched thither with a great force.! Publicola was chosen consul for the second time, in his absence, and Titus Lucretius as his colleague. Returning, therefore, to Rome, and wishing, in the first place, to surpass Porsena in the loftiness of his spirit, he built the city of Sigliuria, although his adversary was al- ready near at hand. After he had fortified it at great expense, he sent to it a colony of seven hundred

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 9.

xovs amréctetrev, WS padlws dépwv al abeas Tov médeu“ov. ov pv aGdAA TpooBorArns dkeias TO reixet yevouéevns eEewoOncav ot puvdaKes v7r0 tov Iopciva, cal dhevyovtes ddiyou acuvererTa- cavto Tovs Todeuious eis THY TOA. EhON Se mpo tav mudav éxBonOncas o Ilomdxodas, kai paxynv cuvarpas Tapa Tov ToTapoy avTeiye TA2- ber Bralopévors Tots ToAdepiows, AXpt OU Tpavpac~L veavixols TepiTrec@v atrexopiaOn popadyy éx THS payns. 70 8 abto kal Aovepytiov Tov cuvap- xovTos avre@ madovros abupia Tots Poopatoes évérrene, Kal huyn mpos THY TodLY éawlov Eau- tovs. @O0oupévar Sé TV ToAEuion Sia THS Evdt- yns yedupas éxivdvvevcev 7 “Paun kata xpdtos aN@vat. mpatos dé Koxdos ‘Opdrios Kat ovv aire Si0 Tay éemipavestdtav dvdpav, “Eppivios cai Adpxuos, advtéatnoay rept thy EvAtvnv yédv- pav. 0 & ‘Opdtios tov KoxAsov érwvipiov éoyev éy rodkéu@ Tov oupdtwv Odtepov éexKoreis’ ws 8S nor Néyover, ba cipotnta THs puvos évdedu- xvias ote pndev elvar 70 Siopivoy Ta Supata Kal tas oppis cuyxexicba, Kixrwma Bovdo- pevor Kadely avTov of ToAXOl THS yAWTTAS OM- aBawvovons éexpatncev bd wANGovs Koxdcov xa- NeloOat. ovTos éEcTw@S TpPd TIS yepurpas HuUvETO Tous Trodeuious, aypt ov Sréxoway of adv avT@ KatoTiv thy yépupav. ovTw dé peta TOV OTrwY adels éavtov els Tov Totapov amevntato, Kal mpockuke TH mwépav bxOn Sopate Tuppnuike BeBAnpévos tov yroutov. o Sé TlomAKodas Thy dpetnv Oavpdoas adtixa pév eionyjoato “Po- 106 men, indicating that he had no concern or fear about the war. However, a sharp assault was made upon its wall by Porsena, and its garrison was driven out. They fled to Rome, where the pursuing enem almost followed them into the city. But Publicola promptly sallied out to their aid in front of the gate, joined battle by the river side with the enemy, who pressed on in great numbers, and held out against them until he was desperately wounded and carried bodily out of the battle. The same fate overtook Lucretius, his colleague, also, so that dismay fell upon the Romans, and they fled for safety towards the city. But as the enemy were forcing their way onto the wooden bridge, Rome was in danger of being taken by storm. Horatius Cocles,! however, first, and with him two of the most illustrious men of the city, Herminius and Lartius, defended the wooden bridge against them. Horatius had been given his surname of Cocles because he had lost one of his eyes in the wars. Some, however, say that his nose was flat and sunken, so that there was nothing to separate his eyes, and his eye-brows ran together, and that for this reason the multitude wished to call him Cyclops, but by a slip of the tongue the name of Cocles became generally prevalent instead. This Cocles, standing at the head of the bridge, kept the enemy back until his companions had cut the bridge in two behind him. Then, all accoutred as he was, he plunged into the river and swam across to the other side, in spite of a wound in the buttocks from a Tuscan spear. Publicola, out of admiration for his valour, proposed that every Roman should at once

1 The exploit of Horatius is much more dramatically narrated by Livy (ii. 10).

paious atravras, donv Exaotos €v Type pa. Tpopy avi do Ke, dobvat oUvELaEveyKOVTAS, emeita TiS Xepas hy aves Tepiapooeler éy TPEPQ. T pos
6é TOUTOLS eiKOva Karty éornoav aure’ év T@ Lep@ TOU “H¢aiorou, THY yevouerny é€x TOD Tpavparos TH avdpl Yw@XOTHTA pETA TLLAS Tapnyopouvtes.
XVII. "Enrenetpévou dé Tlopoiva Th woAEL Kal ALpLOs iymrero TOV ‘Powpaicor, xal Tuppyvar & ETEPOS oTpatos avTos Kal” avrov Els THY Xwpay évéBanre.
Tlomduxodas dé TO Tplrov UiraTevo Tlopowva
pe ar pewav kal durdttav rHv médw weTo Seiv avréxery, Tois Oé Tuppnvois emeEnrve Kar oupBa-
Nov €T peparo Kal mevraciaxtdious auto aveire.
To ay mept Movxuov elpnTar pev vd TOAD

Kal Sapopws, ex Téov bé 7 D padiora Tia TEvET AL
Kal nuiv. mv avyp els Tacav apetnv ayabos, év 5é€ Tots woNeutxots apiotos: émtBovrAevwv bé Tov Tlopcivay dvedeiv rrapeanbev els 76 otpartoqeoov Tuppyvida popav eoOijra xal pov VpopEvos opola. TrepiehOav dé TO Biya Tov Baot-Aéws KaleCopévon, Kat Tapas pep avTov OUK
eldws, épécdar S€ mepi avtob bedias, dv w7HOn pddiota TOV curyxabelouevov éxeivov elvat oTa-GadpEevos TO Eidos ATEKTELVED. em TOUT® dé currnpdeis avexptvero" Kai Tivos éoxapidos md éxovans peddovTe TO Tlopoiva Ove KEXOMLO [éyn, birepoxXav THY SeFtay Xeipa Kalomévns Tis gapKos ela TnKeL T™pos TOV Tlopcivay arroPrérav
iTaL@ Kal ATPETTH TO TpoTHOTM, méexpL Ov Bav-

1 airg bracketed in Sintenis? because of the hiatus following.

contribute for him as much provision as each con- sumed in a day, and that afterwards he should be given as much land as he could plough round in a day. Besides this, they set up a bronze statue of him in the temple of Vulcan, to console him with honour for the lameness consequent upon his wound.

XVII. While Porsena was closely investing the city, a famine afflicted the Romans,! and another Tuscan army on its own account invaded their territory. Publicola, who was now consul for the third time, thought that Porsena must be met by a quiet and watchful resistance within the city; but he sallied out upon the other Tuscan army, engaged it, routed it, and slew five thousand of them.

The story of Mucius has been often and variously told, but I must give it as it seems most credible to me.?_ He was a man endowed with every virtue, but most excellent in war. Designing to kill Porsena, he stole into his camp, wearing a Tuscan habit, and using a speech tocorrespond. After walking around the tribunal where the king was sitting with others, -not knowing him certainly, and fearing to inquire about him, he drew his sword and slew that one of the group whom he thought most likely to be the king. Upon this he was seized, and was being questioned, when a sort of pan containing live coals was brought to Porsena, who was about to offer sacrifice. Mucius held his right hand over the flames and, while the flesh was burning, stood looking at Porsena with a bold and _ steadfast countenance, until the king was overcome with

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 12, 1.
2 Plutarch’s version is far less coherent and dramatic than Livy’s (ii. 12).

547

a2
v4
bo
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

padcas adijxev adtov xal to Eldos dodcdovs
v 2 ‘ fe) / e A > 4 a@pe~ev amo tod Bnyatos: o Sé THY ev@vupov
, 23Q7 \ \ a _f | ee
mpoteivas édéEato. xal Sa todTd dacw avTa
yevéoOat tov Yxatorav érixAnow, Step eat Aawv. épn dé tov doBov rod Tlopciva vew-KNK@S NTTaTOaL THS apeTHs, eal yapiTe pwnvvew & pos dvayxny ovK av éEnyopevae. “ Tptaxocror \ e / b>] ” ce A b] \ 3 4 yap ‘Pwpaiwr,” edn, “thy adrnv éeuol yveuny éyovres €v TO oTpaToTéd@ Go TAAVOVTAL KaLpov
3 a > A \ / \ A émiTnpoovtres' éyw dé KAnpY Aayov Kal mpoemiyetpnoas ovK axGouat tH TUYn, Siapmaptev avdpos ayabobd Kal dirov padXov % qodeuiouv ‘p / ? / 99 50° e jaf , wpatos elvat mpérovtos.” tad™’ o Topacivas
+ 4 > / \ \ V4 oe
axovaas émiarevoe kal mpos Tas dsadvoes Hdtov gxxev, ov TocodTo, pot doxel, PoBw TeV TpLaKo-4 sd > \ 4
ciwv, cov ayacbels nal Oavpdoas Tro dpovnpa Kal THY apeTny TOY ‘Pwpaiwr.
Todtov tov dvdpa Moverov opod tte wavtwy Kal {xatorav carovvtwv "AOnvodwpos o {dvdwvos év t@ mpos "Oxraoviay trav Kaicapos aderpiy cal Orpiryovov avoudobar pnoiv.
XVIII. ‘O pévror TMordcxdras avros, ody oftw

4 \ 4 \ e 4
moréuov ovta tov Ilopcivay Bapvy nyovpevos ws GEvov woddod TH TroAE hirov yevécOat cal oUppaxov, ovx epevryer er’ avtov dixn xpiOnvas
mpos Tapxivov, adr éOdpper kal mpovcanreiro 548

admiration and released him, and handed him back his sword, reaching it down to him from the tribunal. Mucius stretched out his left hand and took it (on which account, they say, he received the surname of Scaevola, which means Left-handed). Then he said that although he had conquered the fear which Porsena inspired, he was vanquished by the nobility which he displayed, and would reveal out of gratitude what he would not have disclosed under compulsion. ‘Three hundred Romans, then,” said he, “ with the same resolution as mine, are now prowling about in thy camp and watching their opportunity. I was chosen by lot to make the first attempt upon thee, and I am not distressed at what has happened, so noble is the man whom I failed to kill, and so worthy to be a friend rather than an enemy of the Romans.” On hearing this, Porsena believed it to be true, and felt more inclined to come to terms, not so much, I suppose, through fear of the three hundred, as out of wondering admiration for the lofty spirit and bravery of the Romans.}

All other writers agree in giving this Mucius the surname of Scaevola, but Athenodorus, the son of Sandon, in his book addressed to Octavia, the sister of Augustus Caesar, says that his surname was Postumus.

XVIII. Publicola himself, moreover, thinking that Porsena would be more valuable as a friend and ally of the city than he was dangerous as its enemy, did not shrink from making the king an arbitrator in his dispute with Tarquin,! but often boldly challenged

1 According to Livy (ii. 13, 1-5), Porsena was so terrified by the disclosures of Mucius, that he made propositions of peace to the Romans.

mova os éFedéyEov Kdxiotov avipav Kat
4 Sixaiws abaipeévra Thy apynv. aTroxptvapevou
$8 rod Tapxvuviou tpaxvtepov, ovdéva troreta bar
4 Sicacthy, Axiota dé Tlopcivay, e ocvppaxos

e

dy petaBdrrxcTat, Svaxepdvas Kal KaTayvous oO

A \ v

Tlopaivas, dua 5¢ rod maidds “Appovtos Seouévou

, eu a e / ,

kat orovoatovtos umép tov Pwpaiwv, Katedugato Tov qwodepov éFtoTapévors HS amreTé“ovTo

ths Tuppnvidos xwpas Kal tovs atxpadwrous dtroméutovat, Komlouévors 5é Tovs avTopodous.

él rovtots opnpous edwxav éF evrrarploay Trept-tropdupous Séxa Kxal tapOévovs tocavTas, ov Av xat Womducora Ouydtnp Ovarrepia.

XIX. Lpartopévev 8 rovtwy rod te Tlopciva
TATAY HON THY TOAEMLK]VY GAVELKOTOS TapacKeunY
Sia triotiv, ai wapOévor tov “Pwpaiwy nat7dOov
3 \ wv ‘ 4 ”
él Noutpov eva bn pnvoedyns tus OXON TreEpt-
4 \ \ e , 4
BdadXovca TOV ToTapov jnovxiav pddioTa Kal
yadnvny Tov Kvparos trapetyer. ws 8 ovTE
Twa dvraxny é®pwv odte Tapwovtas GdrAwWS 7 Stamdéovtas, opunyv éoyov dtrovntacBat mpos
fe) 4
peda ToAv Kal divas Babelas. Evior 5€ act
/ >A ” , / 4
piav avtav, dvoua Knrotriav, trm@ dueFeracat
TOV Topov, éyKeXevopevny Tais AANaLS veovaats
Kai tapabappivovaav. émel S¢ cwOeicat mpos tov TlomAxoray hxov, odx Oavpacev od Hyd-9 ’ 9 4 ied M4 4 >
mnoev, GAN nvidOn, Gre Ilopciva xaxiwv ép
miote. havelrat, kal TO TOAMnLa TAY TrapOéveY 55°

10:

PUBLICOLA

Tarquin to do so, confident of proving that he was the basest of men and justly deprived of his king- dom. And when Tarquin gave him a rough answer, saying that he would make no man his judge, least of all Porsena, seeing that he was swerving from his alliance with him, Porsena was displeased and per- ceived the weakness of his cause. His son Aruns also pleaded earnestly with him in behalf of the Romans. Consequently, he put an end to his war against them, on condition that they gave up the territory of Tuscany which they had taken, sent back their prisoners of war, and received back their deserters. In confirmation of these conditions, the Romans gave as hostages ten young men from their noblest families, and as many maidens, of whom Valeria, a daughter of Publicola, was one.

XIX. After these stipulations had been carried out, and when Porsena had already remitted all his ~ warlike preparations through his confidence in the treaty, these Roman maidens went down to the river to bathe, at a place where the curving bank formed a bay and kept the water especially still and free from waves. As they saw no guard near, nor any one else passing by or crossing the stream, they were seized with a desire to swim away, notwith- standing the depth and whirl of the strong current. And some say that one of them, named Cloelia, crossed the stream on horseback, exhorting and encouraging the rest as they swam. But when they were come in safety to Publicola, he bestowed no admiration or affection upon them, but was distressed because he would be thought less true to his word than Porsena, and because the daring exploit of the maidens would be called a base fraud on the part of

, 551

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

aitiay é€e. xaxovpynpa 'Pwpaiwy yeyovevat.
516 cudAAaBwv avtas mddw amréoretNe Tpos TOY Ilopoivay. tadra 8 of rept rov Tapxinov mpo-arcOopevor, Kat xabicavtes évéSpay trois dryovat TAS Taidas, ev TE Trepiiy éméOevto mXeloves OvTes.
éxeivov dé 6pws dpuvopéven, y TlowAtxora.
Ouyarnp Ovarrxcpia da péowy opuncaca Tey paxopévwy amépuye, Kat Tpeis Ties oixéTas
/, " > 4 " > LA
cuvosextrecovtes Eowlov auvTnyv. trav 8 addwv OvK axivdvvws avapemtypévov Tois paxopéevots, wa " e 4 eX bd
aiGopevos "Appwv o Ilopaciva vids oféws apoce-BonOnce, Kal gduyns yevopévns TeV TroNeuoV
mepteTroinae Tous 'Pwpatous.
'Os 5€ ras mrapOévovs Komtcbeiacas o Topcivas elde, THY KatapEapévny tis mpdkews nal trapa-4 vad ¥ 3¢g0/ bd , \

Kedevoapevny tais adrais efnrer. axovaoas dé
TO dvopa THS KXovrdias mpocéBrewev avtny trem Kat haidp@ Te WpocwT@, Kal KeXevoas (larov axOnvar tav Baoiiikay Kexoopnpévov evTrpEeTTas éSwpynoato. TovTO TroLovYTAaL papTUpLoY of wovny thv Knrourtav réyovtes ira SuekeAdoat Tov motayov. of & ov dacw, GAXL Tihoat TO avdpases adtis Tov Tuppnvov. avdxertar dé thy

e \ CAN , > 4 b) \
iepav odov Tropevopévors eis Iladdtiov avdpias
avTns édirios, dv tives ov THs KXotdlas, adda THs Ovadrepias eivar Aéyovowy.
‘O 8€ Tlopcivas Sdiadrayels trois “Pwpaiots

the Romans. He seized them, therefore, and sent them back again to Porsena. But Tarquin and his men got timely intelligence of this, set an ambush for the convoy of the maidens, and attacked them in superior numbers as they passed along. The party attacked defended themselves, nevertheless, and Valeria, the daughter of Publicola, darted through the combatants and fled, and with the help of three attendants who broke through the crowd with her, made good her escape. The rest of the maidens were mingled with the combatants and in peril of their lives. But Aruns, the son of Porsena, learning of the affair, came with all speed to their assistance, put their enemies to flight, and rescued the Romans.

When Porsena saw the maidens thus brought back, he asked for the one who had begun the: enterprise and encouraged the rest in it. And when he heard Cloelia named as the one, he looked upon her with a gracious and beaming countenance, and ordering one of the royal horses to be brought, all fittingly caparisoned, he made her a present of it. Those who say that Cloelia, and Cloelia alone, crossed the river on horseback, produce this fact in evidence. Others dispute the inference, and say that the Tuscan merely honoured in this way the maiden’s courage. But an equestrian statue of her stands by the Via Sacra, as you go to the Palatine, though some say it represents not Cloelia, but Valeria.}

Porsena, thus reconciled with the Romans, gave

1 According to Livy, who gives a very different version of the Cloelia episode (ii. 13, 6-11), the maidens were incited by the example of Mucius to their display of courage, in memory of which the Romans erected at the top of the Via Sacra an equestrian statue, ‘‘ virgo insidens equo.”

GAAnV Te éEavToD wroAAHY peyahoppoo vyny éqe-deiEaTo TH trode, Kal Ta SAA TOVs Tuppyvods avaraBeiv Kerevoas, dAXNo Sé pndév, GX’ éxrei-Tew TOV Yapaka citov Te TOAAOD Kal YpnUadToV
éuovta TavTobaTav, tapédwxe tots “Pwpaiors.
bs kal nal? Huds ert twdovvtes ta Sypdota Tpa@ta KnpuTtovar Ta Ilopciva xphpata, Tun
T@ avopl Tis Xa pias didvov év TH pvnpn SaguArdtrovres. etaotrnces 5é Kal yarxods avdpias avrov Tapa TO BovreuTHpLov, atrrovs Kal ap-Naixos TH épyacia.
XX. Mera 8 taidta YaBivov éuBadrovrwv

> A , C4 ? , 4

els THY ywpav Uiratos pev arredetyOn Madpxos Ovarrépios, aderAgpos Tlomduxdra, nat Woorovpos TovBeptos. Tpatropévoy d€ trav peyiotov yvoun Kal tapovola TlomduKora dvol padyats peydrais 0 Mapros éevixnoev, dv év Th Sevtrépa undéva “Popalwvy dmoBarkov tpicytdovs én Hupiou TOV Todelov dvetre. Kal yépas Eoyev Ett tois OpuduBors oixiav avT@ yevér Oat Snpocioss avaropacw év Iladatip. tav 8 GAdNwv TOTE
Oupav claw THs oiKias eis TO KAELCtOY avoLyo-Mévev, éxeivns povns THs olxias éroincay éxTos atrdayecbar tiv avreov, ws 81) KATA TO TUYXO-PHA Ths Tins del tod Snpwociov mpocerTi-AapBavor.
jDas & ‘EAXnuixds mporepov obras éyew amacas €youcw, ao TaV Koppdiav AapBavortes, Ste
KomrTova. kal opotot tas avtav Ouvpas Evdobev
Ob Wpotévar wédAovTes, Oras alaBnats €Ew yévorto
| TWapepxyopuévors 7 Wpoeotaot Kal py Kata-

PUBLICOLA

the city many proofs of his magnanimity. In particular, he ordered his Tuscan soldiers, when they evacuated their camp, to take with them their arms
only, and nothing else, leaving it full of abundant provisions and all sorts of valuables, which he turned over to the Romans. Therefore it is that down to this very day, when there is a sale of public property, Porsena’s goods are cried first, and thus the man’s kindness is honoured with perpetual remembrance. Moreover, a bronze statue of him used to stand near the senate-house, of simple and archaic workmanship.!

XX. After this, when the Sabines invaded the Roman territory, Marcus Valerius, a brother of Publicola, was made consul, and with him Postumius Tubertus. Inasmuch as the most important steps were taken with the advice and assistance of Publicola, Marcus was victorious in two great battles, and in the second of them, without losing a single Roman, slew thirteen thousand of the enemy.? Besides his triumphs, he also obtained the honour of a house built for him at the public charge on the Palatine. And whereas the doors of other houses at that time opened inwards into the vestibule, they made the outer door of his house, and of his alone, to open outwards, in order that by this concession he might be constantly partaking of public honour.

They say that all Greek doors used to open outwards in this way, and the conclusion is drawn from their comedies, where those who are about to go out of a house beat noisily on the inside of their own doors, in order that persons passing by or standing in front of them may hear, and not be

1 Cf. Livy, ii. 14, 1-4. 2 Cf. Livy, ii. 16, 1.

AapRdvowTo wpoiovoas Tais KNELTLaoLWY eis 'TOV OTEVWTOV.

XXI. Te & é&fs ree wddw bmareve Lomd-KoAaS TO TéTapToy' Hv dé wpoadoxia Trodéuov SaBivev nal Aativov cuvmotapévwv. Kai tus dpa Seodatpovia THs Toews FYyaTo* Tacas yap ai xvotoat Tote yuvaixes éEéBadXov avamnpa, kal Téros ovdeuia yéveots Exyev. BOev ex TaV LuBurArcLwv o TlowAKoras ikacdpevos TO "Acdy Kai Twas ayovas tudoxpnotovs avadaBov kal tais éXmiot mpos TO Oetov ndiova KataoTycas Thy Tok, Hon Tos am avOparav dhoBepois mpoceixye. peyddrn yap édaiveto xatacKevy Ta Torepiov Kal cvoTacts.

"Hv ody "Ammeos Kiadaos év SaBivoss, avnp xonpuact te Suvatos Kal ca@patos pan pos arkny émipavys, aperns 5& SoEn padota xal AOyou SewvoTntt tmpwrevov. 6 bé tact cuvpBaive Tois peydros ov Siepuye rabeiv, GX éfOoveiro: Kal Tots P0ovovew aitiay Tmapéoxe KaTaTAaveD Tov Todepov avkev ta "Pwpaior, érl rupavvids kat SovrAwoet THS TraTpidos. atcOopevos Sé Tous

104

Noyous TovTous BovrAopéev@ TO TANOEL AEyopEevous, kal mpooxpovovta Tots todepoTroLois Kal oTpaa e 4 bd a \ , e TlwTiKols EauToV, epoBeito THY Kpiatv. éTatpelay

dé cal dvvapiv dirov Kal oixeiwy Exwv dyv-

556

PUBLICOLA

taken by surprise when the doors open out into the street.

XXI. In the following year Publicola was consul again, for the fourth time, when there was expec- tation of a war with the Sabines and Latins com- bined.! At the same time also a sort of superstitious terror seized upon the city because all the women who were pregnant were delivered of imperfect offspring, and all births were premature. Wherefore, by direction of the Sibylline books, Publicola made propitiatory sacrifices to Pluto, and renewed certain games that had been recommended by Apollo, and after he had thus made the city more cheerful in its hopes and expectations from the gods, he turned his attention to what it feared from men. For their enemies were plainly making great preparations and a powerful league against them.

Now there was among the Sabines one Appius Clausus,? a man whose wealth made him powerful, as his personal prowess made him illustrious, but who was most eminent for his lofty character and for his great eloquence. He could not, however, escape the fate of all great men, but was an object of jealous hate, and when he tried to stop the war, those who hated him charged him with trying to increase the power of Rome, with a view to making himself tyrant and master of his own country. Perceiving that the multitude gave a ready ear to these stories, and that he himself was obnoxious to the war party and the military, he feared the issue, but with a large and powerful coterie of friends and 1 Livy gives a very brief account of this war (ii. 16, 2-6). > Attius Clausus among the Sabines, Appius Claudius among the Romans, according to Livy, ii, 16, 4.

557

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yovaoay Tepi avtov éotaciale. Kal TovT hv Tov morépov dStatpuBy Kal pédrAAnows Tots YaBivocs. Tadr’ otv o Ilowdxoras ov povov eidévae movoupevos épyov, adda Kal xively nal couvek- oppayv Thy otaow, elyev avdpas émitndeious of

T@ Kravom diedkéyovto trap avrov toladTa, ws
o Tlomdexoras avipa oe ypnotov éyra Kai Sixacov ovdevt Kax@ Setv olerat Tovs ceavtod troAitas dpvveo Gar, Kaimep adicovpevor" et dé Bovnoto cate éauToy petacThvar Kai duyely tovs pugobvTas, brodegerat oe Snpooia Kal toi THS TE ons ApEeTnS aFios Kal THS ‘Peopate apm pornTos.
TaUTA TOAAGKES dvacKonovyTt TO Kravow Béd-TLOTA TOV dvaryKaiwy épaivero, Kai TOvS pirous cupTrapaKkarayv, éxeivwv Te Tohous opoiars cuvavarreDovrwr, TEVTAKLT XUMLOUS oixous ava-oTnoas pera Taidwv Kal yuvarKan, Gmrep yy év LaBivors a8 opuBov pddata xat Biov mpaov Kal xadeoT@ros oixeiov, eis “Popny Frye, m poewdéros tov Ilomdxoda kal Sexopevov prrodpovas Kal mpoOvuws éml mace Sixaiors. TOUS pev yap olxous ev0vs dvéuige T@ TWOALTEUPATL, Kal _X@pav GT évelpLev exdaT@ dvetv EO perv mept TOV "Avi-ava. TOTALOY, T@ O€ Kravow EO pa Tévre Kal elKool vis eOwxev, avrov 5€ TH BovrAq 7 pooeparen, apxXnv trodstTetas AapBavovra TAUTHD, PX Pw MEVOS éuppovas avebpapev Eis TO mT pe@rov
t/ pa Kal Ouvapey éoxe peyadny, Kal Yévos ‘vos dpavporepov év “Pwyun to KrXavdior ad’ xaréALTre.
XII. Ta 6€ YaBivwy odtw Stax pllévra TO kinsmen to defend him, continued his opposition. This made the Sabines put off and delay the war.

PUBLICOLA

Publicola, accordingly, making it his business not only to know about these matters, but also to foment and promote the faction, kept some of his followers employed in bringing to Clausus from him such messages as this: “ Publicola thinks thee too worthy and just a man to inflict any evil upon thy fellow citizens in self-defence, even though thou art wronged by them. But if thou wishest, for thine own safety, to change thine allegiance and flee from those who hate thee, he will receive thee with public and private honours which are worthy of thine own excellence and the splendour of Rome.”’” On repeated consideration of the matter, this course seemed to Clausus the best that was open to him ; he therefore summoned his friends, who in like manner persuaded many more, to join him, and taking five thousand families from their homes, wives and children in- cluded, the most peaceful folk among the Sabines, of gentle and sedate lives, he led them to Rome. Publicola knew beforehand of their coming, and gave them an eager and a kindly welcome, admitting them to all rights and privileges. For he at once incorporated the families in the Roman state, and gave each one two acres of land on the river Anio. To Clausus, however, he gave twenty-five acres of land, and enrolled him among the senators. This was the beginning of a political power which he used so wisely that he mounted to the highest dignity and acquired great influence. The Claudian family, which is descended from him, is no less illustrious than any in Rome.

XXII. Though the schism among the Sabines was

559

°2

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

HETOLKLOL@ TaV avdpov, ovK elacay ot Snpayo-youvres atpeunoat Kai KataoThvat, oyeTNa-Covres ef KAatoos & rapwy ovn éreoe Stampad-Eerar ghuyas yevopevos kal trodéptos, py Sovvas Sixnv "Pwpaiovs av wuBpifovow. adpavres ovv oTpaT@ peydrw rept Didjvas catnurAcavto, Kai Tiva oxov Gépevor mpo THIS 'Payns ev Ywpiots auvnpepéct kab Kxoidors SioyxtrLous omrritas, Eyer-Nov ap mpepg pavepars odiryous immevat etav €Xavvel. eipnrto o avrois, dtav TH TOnEt 'Tporend-
Two, Umopevyen & EWS eu Barwa els THY évédpay TOUS Tmoheptous® Tav@' o TlomAsKodas avd npepov mud Opuevos wap avropodov Taxv dunppocato 7 pos TavTa Kal Ovéverpe Tn Suvapev. Tlocrovpsos pev yap BanBos o yapApes avTOU TpLoYLALOLS
omAiTaLs éomépas ére Tm poe ory kal Kata-AaBwv Tous axpohopovs, up ols evn dpevov ot
Lafivor, _mapepvrarrer: 6 dé guvapxav Aov-Kpnttos EXwv TO oupérarror €v TH monet Kat yevvacoratov eran Tos eabvover THY Aeiay immevow é1t erpeiv, autos &é€ THY aXAnv ava-rAaBov ae KuKh@ mepin Oe TOUS Tone uous.
Kal Kara TUXnY OpiyANS Babetas emimerovans,
mept o Opov awa Tloorovpsos | TE TOUS éved pev-oVvTas euBonoas éBanev amo TOV dx pov, Kat Tots TpoimnacapEevors ephce Tos Tepl autov o Aovxpntios, cat TlomAcKoAas mpoaéBane Tois oT patomédots TOY TONELiWV. TaVTY pe, ovyv éKaKovTo Ta Xa Biveov Kal SepOeipero Tous & évraida und dpuvopevous, anrXra pevyovras, ev0us éxTetvoyv oat
'Pwpaiot, THs éXrridos autos OheO prorarns ryevo-560
109

PUBLICOLA

thus removed by the emigration of these men, their popular leaders would not suffer them to settle down into quiet, but complained bitterly that Clausus, by becoming an exile and an enemy, should bring to pass what he could not effect by his per- suasions at home, namely, that Rome pay no penalty for her outrages. Setting out, therefore, with a large army, they encamped near Fidenae, and placed two thousand men-at-arms in ambush just outside of Rome in wooded hollows. Their intention was that a few of their horsemen, as soon as it was day, should boldly ravage the country. But these had been ordered, whenever they approached the city and were attacked, to retire gradually until they had drawn the enemy into the ambuscade. That very day Publicola learned of this plan from deserters, and took measures accordingly, dividing up his forces. Postumius Balbus, his son-in-law, while it was yet evening, went out with three thousand men- at-arms, occupied the hills under which the Sabines were lying in ambush, and kept the enemy under observation ; Lucretius, his colleague, retaining in the city the lightest armed and most impetuous troops, was ordered to attack the enemy's horsemen as they ravaged the country; he himself took the rest of the army and encircled the enemy in their camp. Favoured by a heavy fog, at break of day Postumius, with loud shouts, fell upon the ambuscade from the heights, while Lucretius hurled his troops upon the horsemen when they rode towards the city, and Publicola attacked the camp of the enemy. At all points, then, the Sabines were worsted and undone. Wherever they were, they made no defence, but fled, and the Romans straightway slew them. The

/ , \ of \ e / e
pévns. cablecOar yap oidpevor Tovs érépovs ot Erepot TH pdxecOar Kal pévety ov mpoceixor, GX of pev ex TaV épupdtwv pos Tors évedpeu-ovtas, of dé TadLv ws éxeivous Eis TO OTPATOmedov Oéovtes évavtion hevyouow évémiTTOv pos ods épevyov Kal BonBetas Seopévors ods AmLCOY
> a / \ \ \ / 3 /
avtots BonOncev. To dé wn TavTas aToAécOat
\ / > \ 5 4 \ €
Tovs YaBivouvs, addAa Kal TrepiyevéoOar TLvas 7
Didnvatav mods eyyds ovca Trapéoxe, Kal / a > ra) '5 "Mm en /
padtoTa TOS Ex THY TTPATOTTECW?, 60 nALoKeEToO, Suexrrimtovatv. door dé Didnvav dinpaptov Sec-
POdpnoav t Cavres arn yOnoav bT16 TaV NaBovT@v.
XXIII. Todto 16 catopOwpa 'Pwpaior, xaitrep
> , @¢ la 4 >] 4 \
etwOores atract Tots peyarous émipnpilerv TO datpovov, évos Epyov nyouvto Tod oTpatnyov yeyovévat. Kal TOY pEe"aYnuevwv TPOTOV HY aKovELV
4 \ \ \ > nA Ld 3

6Tt Ywrovs Kal Tudrovs auTois Kal povoy ov
Kabeip~Eas Tovs trodepiovs LlomAunddXas Trapédwxe xphoBat tois Eiheow. éppw@cOn Sé kal ypnpacw
e A 9 aA tA \ A ? 4
o Ojpos éx TOV Nahvpwv cal TOV atyparorTov.
‘O 6€ TlowAndras tov te OpiawBov ayayav
Kal Tois pet avToy aroderyGetow bmdtols Tapa-
\ \ / > \ > 4 e a 4
Sovs THY TrOALY evOds éredeUTnCEV, wS epsxToY éorty avOp@mons partota Tos vEevopucpévots Kaois nal ayabois, Tov éavtov Blov éxTEeNerdoas.
e \ a 4 OA ? aA “A > ,

o 5€ SiHpyos dotrep oddéy eis Covta Tov akiwv

TETOLNKWS, GANA Tacay Opelrdwy apt, éyrndi-
/ aA \ A e
caro Snuocia tadjvat TO o@pa, Kal TeTapTy-

poptoy éxactov émi Tih ouverceveyxerv. ai Sé very hopes they placed in one another proved most fatal to them. For each party, supposing that the other was safe, had no thought of holding their ground and fighting, but those in the camp ran towards those in the .ambuscade, while these, on their part, ran to those in the camp, so that fugitives encountered fugitives, and found those needing succour from whom they expected succour themselves. And all the Sabines would have perished, had not the neighbouring city of Fidenae afforded a refuge to some, especially to those who fled from the camp when it was captured. All who did not gain this city were either slain or brought back to Rome as prisoners.

XXIII. This success the Romans, although they were wont to attribute all such great events to the influence of the gods, considered to be the work of their general alone. And the first thing his soldiers were heard to say was that Publicola had delivered their enemies into their hands lame, blind, and all but imprisoned, to be dispatched by their ‘swords.

Great wealth also accrued to the people from the spoils and prisoners.
- But Publicola, immediately after celebrating his triumph and handing the city over to the consuls appointed to succeed him, died. So far as it can possibly be achieved by men who are regarded as honourable and good, he had brought his life to pertection. The people, as if they had done nothing to show their esteem for him while he was alive, but owed him every homage, decreed that his body should be buried at the public charge, and that every man should contribute a quadrans towards the honour. The women also, by private agreement

563
0 o 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

yuvaires, idta 7 pos auras cupppovycacat, dveTrév-Onoav é évavtov bdov én 7 avopl mév0os evr ipov
cal SnrwrTov. érahn b¢ kal obTws TOY TONLTODV Yapirapeveav évTos do reas Tapa THv KaNovpévnv Overlay, dore Kal yéver mavtTl Ths Tapys peteivan. viv be Oamreras peev ovdels TOY are yévous, KomicavTes bé TOV Vex pov éxet xatati-Pevras Kal 646d TLS upevnv Aa Bev 8cov om7-veyKev, elta dvatpeirar, papTupopevos ye TO eFeivar, peiderBar dé THs Tins, cal Tov vexpov ovTws aTroKopifovaty.
ZOAQNO® KAI MOMAIKOAA SYTKPISIS

I. "Ap’ ody icov Tt méept TavTny THY ouyKpiow vmdpxer cal py Tmayy cup BeBnnos érépa TOY avaryeypappevor, Tov &repov yeryovevar men TAY Tou éTépou, Tov &repoy se paprvv; bpa Y ap ip O Lodwy ebnveyne mept evdatpovias aTropacty
q pos Kpoicov, WS TlomAuKona parrov 7 Tédrr@
2 Tm poonKet: TéAXou pev yap, Ov elrre yeyovévas paxapioTarov 62’ evmoTmiay «al aperny Kal ev-TeKViAY, OUT auros év Tots Tounpao w {os av6pos ayabod doyov éxxev ovTe Taides ob’ apxy Tes eis So-av HOev: TlomAtKoras be kal Cov émpotevoe Suvaper nal Sdn Se apetnv “Popaior, cat 1 “In the following year, Agrippa Menemus and P. Postumius being consuls, P. Valerius, by universal consent the foremost Roman in the arts of war and peace, died, in the height of his glory, but so poor that means to aie his “te,

amongst themselves, mourned a whole year for him, with a mourning which was honourable and enviable.} He was buried, too, by express vote of the citizens, within the city, near the so-called Velia,? and all his family were to have privilege of burial there. Now, however, none of the family is actually buried there, but the body is carried thither and set down, and some one takes a burning torch and holds it under the bier for an instant, and then takes it away, attesting by this act that the deceased has the right of burial there, but relinquishes the honour. After this the body is borne away.

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA

I. TuereE is, then, something peculiar in this comparison, and something that has not been true of any other thus far, namely, that the second imitated the first, and the first bore witness for the second. For it must be plain that the verdict concern- ing happiness which Solon pronounced to Croesus, is more applicable to Publicola than to Tellus. Tellus, whom Solon pronounced the most blessed man he knew, because of his fortunate lot, his virtue, and his goodly offspring, was not celebrated in Solon’s poems as a good man, nor did his children or any magistracy of his achieve a reputation ; whereas Publicola, while he lived, was foremost among the Romans in in- funeral expenses were lacking. He was therefore buried at the public charge, and the matrons mourned for him as they had done for Brutus” (Livy, ii. 16, 7).

2 See chapter x. 2.

teOvnxotos éy tois émupaveotatos yévert wal oTéupact &re Kad’ nuads Tlomdxccvat cat’ Meoodvae cal Ovarrépioe be érav é€axoclwv Tis evryevetas THY So-ay avadépovar. xat TédrXos pev UTO TOV ToNELiwvy ws avnp ayabds ev Takes pévoy nal paxopevos xatéotpewe: TlomdKdras 5é rods pév todepious xrelvas, 6 Tov TrEecety eVTUXET TEPOY cor, Thv 8é mrarpida, ViKOOaY
émid@v ov aurov dpxovra Kat otparnyovvTa, Tomnbets be kat OptapBevoas éTUXE THs SnXovpens bard Zor@vos rat paxaptfoperns TEMEUTIS.
ére toivuy ols ™ pos Mipveppov aytecreav trept
yYpovou Cwns émumepaornke, Mndé por akravatos Odvatros podrot, adda pirouse

\ BA \ 4
Tomcat Oavwov addyea Kal orovayds, evdaipova TOV Tlowhuxoday avbpa motel. Tedev- 119

THOaS yap ov pirous ovd oixetots povor, andra, Th

monet Taon, puptdor Trodaais, ddxpva Kal a 00ov Kal KaTHpeay éd’ auT@ Tapéaxev" ai yap ‘Po-paiwy yuvaines énévOnoav avToY @oTEp viOV q adehpov 7} TaTépa KoLvoV amoBarovoas. “ Xprp-pata © ipeipw per exew,” prov o 0 Lodo, - adixas
dé€ memacbat ovK eBého,” Os otans emcovans: IlowAccora 8 Drhpxev ov povov a KAaKOS
hourei, anrra Kal Kaas avanio Kes eb Tovovyrt Tous Seopévovs. war’ et copaTatos amdvrwy o Lory, evdarpoverTatos o Tom dicoras. a yap ebéato trav ayabav éxeivos as péytota Kai 566

“

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA

fluence and repute for virtue, and since his death the most illustrious family lines of our own day, like the Publicolae, the Messalae, and the Valerii, have for six hundred years ascribed the glory of their noble birth to him. Tellus, moreover, though he kept his post and fought like a brave man, died at the hands of his enemies ; whereas Publicola slew his enemies, which is a better fortune than to be slain by them, saw his country victorious through his efforts as consul and general, and enjoyed honours and triumphs before he came to the end which Solon pronounced so enviable and blest. Still further, what Solon says to Mimnermus,! in arguing with him on the proper duration of human life,

“ May not an unlamented death be mine, but unto friends
Let me be cause, when dead, for sorrow and for sighing,’’

argues Publicola a happy man. For when he died, his loss filled not only friends and kindred, but the entire city, numbering many tens of thousands, with weeping and yearning and sorrow. For the women of Rome mourned for him as though they had lost a son, or a brother, or a common father. “ Wealth I desire to have,” says Solon, “ but wrongfully to get it, I do not wish,” ? believing that punishment would follow. And Publicola’s wealth was not only not ill got, but also nobly spent in benefactions to the needy. So that if Solon was the wisest, Publicola was the most happy of men, since what Solon prayed for as the greatest and 1 Fragment 21 (Bergk). 2 See Solon, ii. 3.

KaAMoTa, TadTa Kal KtrnoacOas IloTdLKOXe Kal
gurAdtar ypwopév pwéxpe TéeXous varnpEev.
II. Odtwm pév 6 Yorwv nexdopunne tov Tlownu-KoNaY, TOY Lorwva 8 av mddv éxeivos ev TH jwomtTela Trapaberypdtwy KdddLcTOY avdpt KoapouvtTs Snuoxpatiay Oéuevos: Ths py yap apyis
\ b \ > a a Ww
Toy dykov aedov evpevy Tact Kal adUTOY KaT-éotnoe, vopots 5€ TodXols expnoato TAY éxeivou.
Kal yap apxovTwy Katactacews Kupiovs érotnce
'\ 4 \ a 4 4 wn
TOUS TroANOUS, Kal Tots hevyouar Stixny erixaret-
' a a e s \ 4
aba tov Sipov, dorrep 6 LorAwv Todvs SixacTas, éwxe. Kat Bovrny pev érépav ove éroincer, @otep 6 Lorwv, tTHv 8 odcav niEncev apoyo pexpod Sitrdaciacas. Te TOY Tamloy emt ToIs Xpnpace Katdotacis éxeiOev ArAOev, Straws oO
dpywv pnt el xpnoros dot aaxyoNiay én pos
Ta peilo, pyr eb padros ddoppads Tod abdiceiv
HadXrov, Kal Tov mpodkewy nal Tov yYpnpaToV
KupLoS yevouevos. Td 5€ pLcoTupavvoy éy Te 4 ' > 4, > ,
Hlom\wodg apodporepor. él yap TUS emixerpoun
a \ e \

Tupavvely, o pev arovtse THv Sixnv éruiTiOnow, o 5é Kal wpo THs Kpicews avereiy bidwor. cemvu-, A , > ra J, Cd \
vopuévou 8€ Tod LoAwvos GpOas Kal Sixaiws Sts Kal
TaY Tpaypdatwv avT@ Sidovtwv tupavvely Kal THV
TOMT@V OVK aKOVaiws Sexouevwv arreimev, ovY
HTTov UTapye Karov TO [lowALKorAg TO AaBovta Tupavuikny apxnv totjoa Snpotixwrépay Kal und ols é&qv éyovra xpjcacba. Kat todTo S fairest of blessings, these Publicola was privileged to win and continue to enjoy until the end.

II. Thus did Solon enhance the fame of Publicola. And Publicola, too, in his political activities, enhanced the fame of Solon, by making him the fairest of examples for one who was arranging a democracy. For he took away the arrogant powers of the consul- ship and made it gracious and acceptable to all, and he adopted many of Solon's laws. For instance, he put the appointment of their rulers in the power of the people, and gave defendants the right of ap- pealing to the people, as Solon to the jurors. He did not, indeed, create a new senate, as Solon did, but he increased the one already existing to almost double its numbers. And his appointment of ' quaestors over the public moneys had a like origin. Its purpose was that the consul, if a worthy officer, might not be without leisure for his more important duties, and, if unworthy, might not have greater opportunities for injustice by having both the ad- ministration and the treasury in his hands. Hatred of tyranny was more intense in Publicola than in Solon. For in case any one attempted to usurp the power, by Solon's law he could be punished only after conviction, whereas Publicola made it lawful to kill him before any trial. Moreover, though Solon rightly and justly plumes himself on rejecting absolute power even when circumstances offered it to him and his fellow-citizens were willing that he should take it, it redounds no less to the honour of Publicola that, when he had received a tyrannical power, he made it more democratic, and did not use even the prerogatives which were his by right of possession. And of the wisdom of such a course

569

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Zorne ouvideiv mpoTepos O YorAwv, bre Shyos

ay a v ; \ e 4 4

OS dy dptota ouv yepoverouy érrolTo,
, / b] 4 4
pnte Ainv avebels ute TLeCopmevos.

III. "[8cov 88 rod LorAwvos 4 TV Ypedv aveots, H pdruora thy érevOepiav éBeBaiwae Tois TodLTaLs.
oddey yap shedos vopwv icotnTa TapexovTaD, hy adarpeira TA Ypéa Tors mévnTas. GAN Grou pdruota xpiicOar tH édevdepig Soxovar, Sov-Nevovet padiota Tois TAovatols, ev TO Sixalerv kal dpyew Kal Neyer emetatTopevor Kal UTnpeE-Toovtes. TovTou dé peilov, OTL Tdon KpEewVv aTrO-KoTh oTdcews éropevns, éxeivn povn, KadaTep dappaxe rapaBor pév, iaxup@ Sé ypnodpevos eixaipws, kal THy odcay oTdow édvae, TH Tept abrov dpeth kal S0En Ths TOU mpdypatos abokias xat SiaBorrs Twepeyevopevos.
Tis 8 8Ans TrodTelas TH wey apX Naptpo-

Tepos 6 Low: Hryjoato yap Kal ob« nxodrovOnce, cai nal’ abrév, od peO’ Erépwr, Errpake TA TrELTTA Kal péylota Tov KoLWWaV: TO Tér\E Sé aTEpOS ebtuyyns Kal Cnrwrds. THY pev yap Lorwvos moNtTelav autos émeide YorAwv xatadrvOeicav, 7
S¢ Tlomucdra péype tev éeupudiwy Todewov
Svepirakev ev xoopp THY TOMY O pev Yap apa
T@ OécOar Tors vopous admoduTav év Evra Kat
a/°

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA

Solon seems to have been conscious even before Publicola, when he says} that a people “then will yield the best obedience to its guides
When it is neither humoured nor oppressed too much.”
III. Peculiar to Solon was his remission of debts, and by this means especially he confirmed the liberties of the citizens. For equality under the laws is of no avail if the poor are robbed of it by their debts. Nay, in the very places where they are supposed to exercise their liberties most, there they are most in subjection to the rich, since in the courts of justice, the offices of state, and in public debates, they are under their orders and do them service. And what is of greater moment here, though sedition always follows an abolition of debts, in this case alone, by employing opportunely, as it were, a dangerous but powerful medicine, Solon actually put an end to the sedition that was already rife, for his own virtue and high repute prevailed over the ill-repute and odium of the measure.

As regards their political careers in general, Solon’s was more brilliant in the beginning. For he led the way and followed no man, and it was alone and without colleagues that he effected the © most and greatest of his public measures. But in the ending, the other was more fortunate and enviable. For Solon lived to see with his own eyes the dissolution of his polity, while that of Publicola preserved order in the city down to the civil wars. Solon, as soon as he had made his laws, left them

1 Fragment 6 (Bergk) ; cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xii. 2.
571
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ypdppacw épnpovs tod BonBovvtos @yer atiav
éx trav “AOnvav, o 8 pévav kal apywv Kai qrodTevopevos tSpuce Kal KatécTnaev eis aopanes Thy morstelav. ete 8 exeivm pev ovdé pédXovtTa koddoat mpoatcbopévm Llevctatpatov vmiptev, GAN Hr7HOn ovvictapévns THS TUpavvidos’ obTOS
S¢ Bactreiav icxtovoav ex TOBY Xpovev Sy Kal xpatodaay é&éBare xal xatédvoev, apeTnv

pev iconv cal mpoaipecw opoiay mapacyopevos, Tuyn Se Kal Svuvdper tedectoupy@ mpos THV dpeTny Kpnodpevos.
IV. Tov pévroe rorepixav Yorwve pev ovdé Ta mpos Meyapeis Aatyayos o IIkatareds pepaprupnkev, @aomrep Hyueis SueAnrAVOapev' TlomALKodas 5é Tods peyiotous ayavas avTos Kal paxopevos
Kal otpatnyav Kxatepbwoe. xal pny ere mpos
Tas TodTLKas mpdkes o pev ev Tmadias Tove
TpoT@ Kal mpooroinua pavias avadaBov, vrep Sarapivos épdv mpojrAGev: o & avtobev dvap-piipas Tov mepl TOV peyloTwy Kivduvoy éravéoTy te Tapxvvios xal tHv mpodociay épwpace cal Tov KcodkacOjvat Kal pn Staduyeiv Tovs Tovnpous
aitiwTatos yevopuevos ov TA capaTa povoy TaV tupavvwv é&éBare THs modews, GAA Kal Tas éxmidas é&éxowev. odtw Sé€ Tots Seyopévors mpaypacw ayova xal Ovyov Kai avtitakw éppwuévws nal atevas amavtnoas, éTt BéAXtLOv éypynoato Tois omtdtas atoNéwou Kal meWois 572

111

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA

inscribed on wooden tables and destitute of a defender, and departed from Athens; whereas Publicola, by remaining in the city, serving as consul, and busying himself with public affairs.
firmly and safely established his form of government.
And further, though Solon knew beforehand of the designs of Peisistratus, he was not able to hinder them, but yielded to his tyranny in its incipfency ;
whereas Publicola subverted and drove out a kingly power which was strong with the might which many ages bring. Thus, while exhibiting virtues equal to Solon's, and a purpose identical with his, he enjoyed a good fortune and an efficacious power which supplemented his virtues.
IV. When we consider their military careers, moreover, Daimachus of Plataea does not allow Solon even the conduct of the war against the Megarians, as we have described it ; 1 but Publicola, fighting and commanding in person, brought the greatest struggles to a successful issue. And still further, comparing their political activities, Solon, in play, so to speak, and counterfeiting madness, went forth to plead for the recovery of Salamis ; but Publicola, without any subterfuges, ran the greatest risks, set himself in opposition to the party of the Tarquins, and detected their treachery. Then, after being mainly instrumental in the capture and punishment of the traitors, he not only drove the tyrants themselves from the city, but extirpated their very-hopes of return. And if he thus sturdily and resolutely confronted situations which called for active and spirited opposition, still better did he deal with those which required peaceable intercourse and gentle Solon, viii. ; cf. Aristotle, Const. of Athens, xiv. 1.

573
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

umerxovans deopevots, Topoivar apayov avdpa Kal PoBepov EM pedors Tpocayayouevos Kai peTta-OTNTAS ELS prdiav.
Kairor dycer tus evtaida TOV pev Lodwva mpoemevors avaraPety "AOnvaior Larapiva, TOV
b¢ IlomAucorayv As EKEKTNYTO 'Peopaior Xepas amoaT Hvar. dei 5é mpos Tovs UToKeLpevous Kat poUs TAs m pagers Gecopeiv. TOLKLNOS yap ay
O TONTLKOS @ TpoT~ TaV OvT wy éxaotoyv evAn-
m@TOVv éoTL petaxerpiceras,} Kar pépous: apécet ToAAAKLS EcwWCE TO may Kal mixpav amoaTas
petCover eTUXED, @omep éxeivos o avip | TOTE THS
pep aor pias Yapas amrocTas écwoe THY éauTov BeBaiws adracar, ois 8 Hy peya. THY TrOALY Siapurd£at T POTEKTHTATO TO TOY TOMLopKOUYT@Y oT patomedor, émeTpewas dé 7 Todepio Sixaoth
yevéodar, Kat | TE PLY EVOMEVOS Th din, mpooéha Bev
baa Sovtas ayannrov ip yiKnoar' wal yap TOV WOAEMLOV SLéEdUGE Kal THY TapacKeuny TOU WONKE-pou Katéhitrev avrois ova mor aperijs Kal Karoxayabias, iy 0 apxov wumép amravter eveTroinoey avT@.
1 peraxesploera: with two Paris MSS., Coraés, and Bekker:
peraxetpload@a:.
574

COMPARISON OF SOLON AND PUBLICOLA

persuasion, as when he tactfully won over Porsena, an invincible and formidable foe, and made him a friend of Rome.
But here, perhaps, some one will say that Solon won back Salamis for the Athenians when they had given it up, whereas Publicola relinquished territory which the Romans had acquired. But we must view men's actions in the light of the times which call them forth.. The subtle statesman will handle each - issue that arises in the most feasible manner, and often saves the whole by relinquishing a part, and by yielding small advantages secures greater ones. And so Publicola, in that instance, by yielding the territory which belonged to others, saved all that was assuredly his own, and procured besides, for those who were hard put to it to save their city, the camp of their besiegers with all its stores. He made his adversary judge in the controversy, won his case, and received besides what his people would gladly have. given for the victory. For Porsena put a stop to the war, and left the Romans all his provisions for carrying it on, owing to the confidence in their virtue and nobility with which their consul had inspired him.

575

Digitized by Google

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

Abantes, 11, a people of Euboea in the Homeric period.
Adrastus, 67, king of Argos, and leader of ‘the “Seven against Thebes.”’ Acilius, Caius, 159, interpreter in the Roman senate for the Athenian embassy of 155 B.C. (Cato Major, xxii. 4), author of a history of Rome from the earliest to his own time.
Aeacus, 21, a mythical king of Aegina, after death one of the judges in Hades.
Agnus, 27, an Attic township N.E. of Athens.
Alba, 97, a very ancient town of Latium, on the Alban lake, some twelve miles 8.E. of Rome.
Alcman, 291, a Lydian of Sardis, who came in his youth to Sparta, and became the founder of Dorian lyric poetry. He flourished in the eee half of the seventh century B Alcmene i7, “wife of Amphitryon of Thebes, and mother of Heracles by Zeus Avachars. 415, a Scythian, who travelled extensively in pursuit of knowledge (Herod. iv. 76 f).

Anaximenes, the orator, 527, of Lampsacus, a upil of Diogenes the Cynic, act ve at Athens as rhetorician and historian in the latter half of the fourth century B.C.

Androgeos, 29, son of Minos the king of Crete.
Andron of Halicarnassus, 57, a genealogical writer of the fourth century B.C.
PLUT.—VOL. I.

Androtion, ia active in the political life of Athens from 376 to 346 B.c. In old age and exile he wrote an Aithis, or History of Attica, which was "much read.
Antias, Valerius, 131, 381, a Roman historian who flourished in the ue art of the first century B.C. s history extended from the sarllent times down to those of Sulla, and was much used by both Livy and Plutarch.
Antigonus, 141, probably' the general of Alexander who was afterwards king of Asia, surnamed the One-eyed.
Antigonus, 143, author of a History of Italy, in "Greek, probably in the latter part of the third century B.C.
Antimachus, of Teos, 121, an early epic poet. Two poems of the epic cycle, the Thebais, and the Epigoni, went under his name.
Antiathencs the Socratic, 301, a pupil of Gorgias and friend' of Socrates.
Apanae 75, an ancient Attic

wnship, about fifteen miles

v W. of Athens.
Apollodorus, 205, a learned grammarian of Athens in the latter part of the second century B.c. A treatise of hison mythology, the Bibliotheca, has come down to us.
Apollothemis, 303, mentioned only her

Arcniloetius, 11, 319, of Paros, one of the earliest Ionian lyric poets, flourishing in 650 B.o.
Ardettus, 63, a hill in the S.E. suburbs of Athens.
Ariadne, 37, daughter of Minos and Pasiphai, of Crete 577

DICTIONARY OF

Aristocrates, 217, 303, known only as the author of an antiquarian and historical work on Sparta, abet of the early Roman dutomanes, 169, the Messenian hero of the second war between Messenia and Sparta (685-668 B.O.).
Aristoxenus, 308, of Tarentum, a Greek writer on philosophy and music, a pupil of Aristotle flourishing in 380 B.o. Parte of his works on Harmony and Rhythm have come down to us.
Athenodorus, son of Sandon, 549, © of Tarsus, a Stoic philosopher long resident at Rome, and much esteemed by Augustus.

B
Bion, 59, of Proconnesus, a compiler of mythical history, of uncertain date, not earlier than the fourth century B.0O.

Boédromion, the third month in the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our September.
Brasidas, 283, the greatest Spartan hero of the Peloponnesian war. His death at Amphipolis is described by Thucydides in v. 10.
Brauron, 429, an ancient city on the eastern coast of Attica.
Busiris, 23, a mythical Egyptian king, who sacrificed all foreigners that entered his country.
Butas, 159, probably the freedman of Cato the Younger (Plutarch, Cato Minor, ixx.), known as a writer only from this mention of work.
C

Cameria, 167, an ancient city of Latium, the site of which is - unknown.

Cephisus, 23, a river flowing through

e plain west of Athens.
“haeroneia, 65, a town on the northern confines of Boeotia.
iB

PROPER NAMES

Chalcis, 63, the chief town of Kuboea, on the straits of the Euripus.
, 63, ap ntly a district of Athens at the foot of the Pnyx hill; but there are no other allusions to it.
Cirrha, 429, a town on the Corinthian pult, serving as the seaport of Delphi.
Cleidemus, 39, 63, the oldest annalist of Athens, circa 420-350 B.C.

Clodius, 307, a Roman chronographer, otherwise unknown.
Codrus, 405, the last king of Athens, who, according to tradition, sacrificed himself for his country.
Colchis, 67, a district on the eastern shore of the Euxine sea.
Colias, Cape, 423, about three miles to the south-east of the ancient harbour of Phalerum.
Creopny int 215, one of the earliest epic poets of Greece, said to have been a native of Chios, and a relative of Homer. The epic poem Oechalia was attributed to m.

Crommyon, Crommyonia, 19, a village and district on the Isthmus of Corinth.
Cychreus, 21, a mythical king of Salamis, receiving hero worship.
Cycnus, 23, a mythical son of Ares, slain by Heracles in Thessaly.
D

Daedalus, 39, the mythical ‘ cunoe artificer’’ of Athens, who took refuge with king Minos of Crete, for whom he built the Labyrinth. He was the father of Icarus.
Dalmachus of Plataea, 573, a Greek historian active in the latter of the fourth century B.O., author of a work on India.
Deidameia, 69, wife of Peirithoiis, commonly called Hippodameia.
Deinon, 37, 51, one of annalists of Athens, contemporary with Philochorus (306-260 B.C.).
DICTIONARY OF

Demades, 451, a prominent orator and statesman at Athens in the times of Philip, Alexander, and Antipater; a member of the Macedonian party.

Demetrius the Phalerean, 277, 467, regent at Athens for Cassander 317-307 B.C., a voluminous writer on history, politics, poetry, and philosophy.
Dicaearchus, 45, a celebrated Peripatetic philosopher, a disciple of Aristotle and a friend of Theophrastus.
Didymus, 405, the _ celebrated Alexandrian grammarian, of the time of Augustus.
Dieutychidas, 207, perhaps Dieuchidas is meant, a Megarian chronicler, of the fourth century B.C.

Diocles of Peparethus, 97, 113, an otherwise almost unknown Greek writer, whom Plutarch regards as a source for Fabius Pictor.
Diodorus the Topographer (or Periegete), 85, was probably an Athenian, and flourished at and after the time of Alexander the Great (330-300 B.c.). He wrote a work on the townships of Attica, and one on its monuments.
Diogenes, 301, probably Diogenes the Babylonian is meant, the head of the Stoic school at Athens, and one of the Athenian embassy to Rome in 155 B.c. He wrote a treatise on Laws.
Dionysius, 459, the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse 405-367 B.c.
Dionysius, 139, of Halicarnassus, went to Rome about 29 B.c., where he remained for twenty-two years, collecting materials for his great work on the antiquities and history of Rome.

Dioscorides (or Dioscurides), 237, a pupil of Isocrates, writing in the latter part of the fourth century B.C.
449, one of the ‘“‘ thesmothetai,’ or six legislative archons at Athens, in 621 B.c.

PROPER NAMES

E

Eleusis, 21, a city some twelve miles west of Athens, the seat of the celebrated mysteries.
Eleutherae, 69, a mountain fastness between Eleusis and Boeotia.
Epicharmus the comic poet, 335, 542, born on the island of Cos, about 540 B.c., but early taken to Megara in Sicily, and from 484 to 450 B.c. one of the ornaments of the court of Hiero of Syracuse.
Epidauria, 17, between Troezen, on the N.E. cost of Peloponnesus, and the Isthmus of Corinth.
Eratosthenes, 205, of Cyrene, 276-196 B.C., a learned geographer and mathematician, for many years librarian at Alexandria.
Erechtheus, 39, a mythical king of Athens.
Eurytus, 19, a mythical king of the Thessalian city of Oechalia.
Evander, 125, the reputed leader of a colony from Arcadia into Italy, some sixty years before the Trojan war.
G

Gabii, 103, one of the oldest cities of Latium, about twelve miles

8.E. of Rome ; probably an earlier colony from Alba than Rome.
Gargettus, 27, an Attic township N.E, of Athens. ‘
Gymnosophists, 217, the naked philosophers of India. See Plutarch’s Alexander, lxiv.

H
Hecataeus the Sophist, 267, of Abdera, a learned philosopher, critic, and grammarian, contemporary with the first Ptolemy (324-283 B.C.).
Hecatombaeon, the first month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our July.
579

DICTIONARY OF

Hellanicus, 33, of Lesbos, the greatest of the Greek chroniclers, 480-395 (?) B.O.
Heracleides Ponticus, 405, 467, so called from his birth in Heracleia of Pontus, a pupil of Plato and Aristotle, and a learned and voluminous writer on almost all ssible subjects. Cicero thought m superstitious and uncritical.
Heracleitus, 183, of Ephesus, a philosopher of the Ionian school, who flourished in the latter part of the sixth century B.c.
Hereas the Megarian, 41, 77, 429, known only through Plutarch’s citations.
Hermippus, 279, 407, of Smyrna, a distinguished philosopher and pegeunel, active in the second half of the third century B.c.
Herodorus, 59, of MHeracleia in Pontus, flourished in the latter half of the sixth century B.C., and was the author of an extended work on the mythology and worship of Heracles.

Hippias the Sophist, 277, 309, a native of Elis, and a contemporary of Socrates. Two dialogues of Plato bear his name.
Hippocrates, 409, of Chios, a Pythagorean philosopher, flourishing in the middle of the fifth century B.C., and chiefly famous as a mathematician.
Hippodameia, 17, daughter of Oenomaiis, and wife of Pelops.
I

Idas, 71, a Messenian hero, inseparable from his brother, the keen-eyed Lynceus, with whom he took part in the Argonautic expedition and the Calydonian boar hunt.
Ides, the fifteenth day of the Roman month (the thirteenth of March, May, July, and October).
Ion of Chios 41, a popular poet at Athens between 452 and 421 B.C., also author of a prose work entitled ‘* Sojourns,” in which he recounted his experiences with famous men of the day.

Ister, 79, of Cyrene, a Greek historian flourishing between 250 and 230 B.O.
J

Juba, 131, 331, 353, Juba I., king of Mauritania. e lived from 50 B.C. to about 20 aA.D., was educated at Rome, and became a learned and voluminous writer. Among his works was a History of Rome.

L

Lapithae, 67, a mountain tribe of Thessaly.

Laurentum, 165, the ancient capital of Latium, on the sea-coast, about sixteen miles 8.W. of Rome.

Lavinium, 163, an ancient city of Latium, about seventeen miles S.W. of Rome.

Lyceium, 63, in historic times a gymnasium in the eastern suburbs of Athens.

Lynceus, 71, see Idas.

M

Mantinea, 353, one of the most ancient and powerful towns in Arcadia.

Melicertes, 57, a legendary personage, son of Athamas and Ino and, after his death by drowning, a beneficent sea deity.

Melité, 429, a deme, or ward, of the a of Athens, comprising the hill-region west of the acropolis.

Menecrates, 59, otherwise unknown.

Metellus, Quintus, 117, probably the consul of 60 B.c. father had been consul in 93 B.o.

Molpadia, 63, an Amazon who was said to have slain Antiope. She was herself slain by Theseus, and her tomb was shown at Athens (Pausanias, i. 2, 1).

DICTIONARY OF

Munychion, the tenth month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our April.

Museum, 63, one of three hills to the S.W. of the acropolis at Athens.
N

Naxos, 41, the largest of the Cyclades islands, half way between Attica and Asia Minor.
Nones, the ninth day of the Roman month (the seventh of March, May, July, and October).
O

Oechalia, 19, see Eurytus.
Omphalé, 15, a mythical queen of Lydia.
P

Paeon the Amathusian, 43, otherwise unknown.
Palladium, 63, a sacred precinct, evidently near Ardettus, in the S.E. suburbs of Athens. In historical times the ‘‘ ephetai ”’ sat here to try cases of involuntary homicide.
Pallené, 27, an Attic township N.E. of Athens.
Parrhasius, 11, a celebrated painter, a native of Ephesus, but resident at Athens, flourishing in 400 B.c.
Pasiphat, 37, wife of Minos, and mother of Ariadne and the Minotaur.
Pataecus, 419, otherwise unknown.
Peirithoiis, 41, king of the Lapithae, a mountain tribe of Thessaly.
Peisistratus, 41, became tyrant of Athens in 560 B.c.

Peleus, 21, mythical king of the Myrmidons of Thessaly, father of Achilles.
Pelops, 17, a mythical king of Elis in Peloponnesus, husband of Hippodameia.

Periander, 413, tyrant of Corinth 625-585 B.c., one of the Seven Wise Men.
PROPER NAMES

Phalerum, 35, the ancient harbour of Athens, before Themistocles fortified Peiraeus.
Phanias the Lesbian, 437, of Eresos the most distinguished pupil of Aristotle after Theophrastus, a prouns writer on philosophy and istory, an historical romancer.

Pherecydes, 37, of Leros, one of the Greek logographers, who lived at Athens, and died about 400 B.O.

Philochorus, 29, 35, the most celebrated writer on the anti-quities of Athens, 306-260 B.o.
Philostephanus, 277, of Cyrene, an Alexandrian historian and geographer, who was flourishing in 250 B.c.
Phlya, 433, a township in the eastern part of Attica.
Pictor, Fabius, 97, 113, the earliest Roman annalist, flourishing in the latter part of the third century B.C.
Plutus, 233, the god of wealth.

Pnyx, 61, that one of the three hills to the 8.W. of the acropolis of Athens on which the people’s assembly was held.
Polyzelus the Rhodian, 447, an historian of uncertain date.
Promathion, 97, otherwise unknown.

Pyanepsion, the fourth month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our October.

R

Rhadamanthus, 33, a brother of Minos king of Crete, and like him a judge in the under world.
8

Samothrace, 353, a large island in the northern Aegean sea, about forty miles south of the Thracian coast.
Scyros, 81, an island east of Euboea.

Selinus, 269, a Greek city on the southern coast of Sicily.
581

DICTIONARY OF

Silanio, 11, a famous Athenian statuary in bronze, flourishing in 320 B.C.
Simonides, 21, 35, of Ceos, the greatest lyric poet of Greece, 556~467 B.C.
Simylus the poet, 143, otherwise unknown.
Sosibius, 281, a distinguished Lacedaemonian grammarian, flourishing about 250 B.o.
Spendon the Spartan, 291, otherwise unknown.
Sphaerus, 221, a Stoic philosopher who lived at Alexandria and Sparta, and flourished early in the third century B.0. ; Sphettus, 27, a township in the _ eastern part of Attica.

Stratonicus, 299, probably the famous Athenian musician of the time of Alexander the Great.
Sulla, Sextius, the Carthaginian,

133, otherwise unknown.
T

Tegea, 73, an ancient city in southern Arcadia.
Telamon, 21, a mythical king of euamls, son of Aeacus, father of ias.

Termerus, 23, a mythical highway-man slain by Heracles.
erpander, 291, of Lesbos, father of Greek music and lyric poetry, who taught at Sparta during the seventh century B.C.
Thales, 409, 411, 417, of Miletus, the most celebrated Ionian philosopher, one of the Seven Wise Men, flourishing in the sixth century B.C.
PROPER NAMES

Thales (or Thaletas), 213, a Cretan musician and poet, who was flourishing about 680 B.c.
Timaeus, 205, 303, of Tauromenium, a famous historian of Sicily, 352-256 B.O.
Timon the Phliasian, 333, a native of Phlius in N.E. Peloponnesus, composed satirical poems on earlier and current systems of philosophy (320-230 B.c.).
Trachis, 71, a city of Malis, com-manding the approach to Ther-mopylae.
Troezen, 7, a city on the N.E. coast of Peloponnesus.
Tyrtaeus, 225, a poet who flourished at Sparta during the second Messenian war (685-668 B.C.).
V

Valerias, 131, see Antias.

Varro, 121, M. Terentius, ‘‘ the most learned of the Romans,”
an intimate friend of Cicero, whose political principles he shared (116-28 B.C.).
Veii, 169, an ancient and powerful city of Etruria, about twelve miles north of Rome.
Z
Zeno, 301, probably the Stoic philosopher meant, who taught at Athens in the third century B.c., and wrote on law and government.
Zenodotus of Troezen, 131, referred to by Dionysius Hal. (ii. 49) as author of a history of Umbria.
PLUTARCH’S
" LIVES
WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN TEN VOLUMES
I]
THEMISTOCLES AND CAMILLUS
ARISTIDES AND CATO MAJOR
CIMON AND LUCULLUS
LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN

NEW YORK : THE MACMILLAN CO.
MCMXIV
Sy

@eaqave

307636

« © wes
. . .
.
had . .
+ _ oer
* s ry . * ri ie
PREFATORY NOTE

As in the first volume of this series, agreement between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) texts of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other where they differ, and any departure from both, have been indicated. The more important ameliorations of the text which have been secured by collations of Codex Parisinus 1676 (F*) and Codex Seitenstettensis (S), have been introduced. The relative importance of these MSS. is explained in the Introduction to the first volume. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. The reading which follows the colon in the critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

Among editions of special Lives included in this volume should be noted that of Fuhr, Themistokles und Pertkles, Berlin, 1880, in the Haupt-Sauppe series of annotated texts; that of Blass, Themistokles und Perikles, Leipzig, 1883, in the Teubner series of annotated texts ; and the same editor’s Aristides und Cato, Leipzig, 1898, in the same series. All these editions bring F* and S into rightful prominence as a basis for the text. This has been done also by Holden, in his edition of the Themistocles (Macmillan, 1892).

The translations of the Themistocles, Aristides, and Cimon have already appeared in my “ Plutarch’s Themistocles and Aristides’ (New York, 1901), and *‘ Plutarch’s Cimon and Pericles” (New York, 1910), and are reproduced here (with only slight changes) by the generous consent of the publishers, the Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons. The translations of the Camillus, Cato, and Lucullus appear here for the first time. All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared aud utilised, including that of the Lucullus by Professor Long.

B. PERRIN.

New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.
February, 1914.

CONTENTS

PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE Vv
THEMISTOCLES : 4 1
CAMILLUS Oa cto 8 93
ARISTIDES ..... Me ois es Zale Sten ee Se - 2ZOG
MARCUS CATO . wala Se ie vie te: Rds SUE
COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO 384
CIMON: 6:5 52 po Se Be OS pote & @ ee ee. 08
LUCULLUS 469
COMPARISON OF CIMON AND LUCULLUS 610 DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES .

623

Vii

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN

THIS

EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.
VoutuME I,

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.
Vouume II.

(4) Themistocles and
Camillus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.
VouvuMeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-

imus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.
VoutumME IV.
(6) Alcibiades and Coriola-nus.
Comparison.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
VoLUME V.

(16) Agesilaus and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
Vili

|

i
!
VoLuME VI.

(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.
_ (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.

Comparison.

VotumME VII.

_ (17) Alexander and Julius

Cuesar.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
VouumeE VIIL.

(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

(21) Demetrius and’ Antony.
Comparison.
VoLumE IX.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Cains
Gracchus.
Comparison.

VoLuME X.

(10) Philopoemen and Flam-
ininus.
Comparison.
(23) Aratus.
(24) Artaxerxes.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.
THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE
PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilaus and Pompey.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.

(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius .
Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.

(21) Demetrius and Antony.

(22) Dion and Brutus.

(23) Aratus.
(24) Artaxerxes.
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.

Digitized by Google

VOL. II.

THEMISTOCLES

OEMISTOKAH?

I. @epwioronre? Sé Ta pev ex yévous duavportepa mpos Soka trjpye tatpos yap iv NeoxXéous ov Tov ayav érupavav "AOnvnot, Ppeappiov tar Sipwv ex ths Aeovtidos puArs, vobos 5é mpos UNTpos, ws Néyovaw
"ABporovov @pnioca yuvy yévos' adda TexécOau Tov peyav "EAdnoiv dns Bepeotorréa.
Pavias pévtor THY pnTépa TOV Bewotoxréovs ov @patrayv, adra Kapivny, ob8 ‘ABporovov dvopa, arn. Evréprnv avaypage. NedvOns S€ cai wok avutTn HS Kapias ‘AXtKapvacooy tpoc-TtOnot.
Awd Kai Trav vodwy eis Kuvocapyes ovvTedovr-tov (todTo & éotly wm muA@Y yupvdotov ‘Hpa-

KNEOUS, érrel KaKELVOS OUK HY yunatos év Deois, AX’ évetxeTo vobecia Sia thy pntépa Ovntiy ovcav) éres0é tivas 0 BewotoxAns tov ev yeyovoTwv

/ ,
veavioxwy xataBaivoytas eis to Kuvocapyes
, A
areipesOar pet avrod. Kal TovTov yevopévou Paris I Kdition,
a. 1624, 7
1120

THEMISTOCLES

I. In the case of Themistdcles;! his family was too obscure to further his reputation. - His father was Neocles,—no very conspicuous man at Athens,—a Phrearrhian by deme, of the tribe Leontis; and on his mother's side he was an alien, as her spay testifies :—

«" Abrotonon was I, and a woman of Thrace age I brought forth
That great light of the Greeks,—know! 'twas Themistocles."' ?

Phanias, however, writes that the mother of Themistocles was not a Thracian, but a Carian woman, and that her name was not Abrotonon, but Euterpe. And Neanthes actually adds the name of her city in Caria,—Halicarnassus.

It was for the reason given, and because the aliens were wont to frequent Cynosarges,—this is a place outside the gates, a gymnasium of Heracles; for he too was not a legitimate god, but had something alien about him, from the fact that his mother was a mortal,—that Themistocles sought to induce certain well-born youths to go out to Cynosarges and exercise with him ; and by his success in this bit of cunning

1 It is probable that one or more introductory paragraphs of this biography have been lost. ? Athenaeus, xiii. p. 576.

Soxet travovpywas tov tav voOwy Kal yynciwy Ssopta ov aveneiv.
3 "Ore peVTOL too Aveomdav yévous perelxe
Ojos éotte TO "yap Prvjoe TEE TIPLOY, direp
Rv Aviopidev xowov, eumpynobev vmo tay Bap-

Bapwv avros émeaxetace weal ‘ypadais éxécpnoer, @> Biypwvidns toropyreev. *
Il. “Ere 6€ rraty: dv oporoyeirae popas peoros elvat, Kal TH pev-pucer ouveros, TH 5é Tpoaipéc er peya hom paryuoy ‘Kal TON TUKOS. éy yap Tais avécest-jeai axXorais a7To Tov pabnudtwv yevopevos ovg “eratev ovd’ eppadiper, xadatep o8
AeLTrO: TaLdes, GAN’ edpiaxero doyous TWWas MedrE-
_ 2 Tay Kal TUVTATTOLEVOS mpos éavtov. joav 8 oi

-. héyou xatnyopla twos a cuvnyopia TOY Taidwv.

SOev ciw@Ber rNéyerw pds avtov o SuddoKados ws “ Ovdev on, Tai, ov pixpov, GArAA péya TaV’TOS ayabov i) Kaxov.” érel cal Tov Tradevoewr TAs péev nOorrotovs 4 Tpos ndovyY TiVa Kal yapLD éxevOéprov arrovdalopévas oxvnpas Kal armpo-Ovpws eEepavOave, rav 8é eis cvverw 4 pak
Aeyouevev SiHros Hv Urepopwv! rap’ HArckiay, ws
TH pvc TiaTEvov.
3 "Oey borepov év tais édXevOepiows Kal aoreiats
Aeyouévars StatpiBais ward tav Tetadedc0at Soxovvtwy ydevalouevos jvayxalero optiKw-
i apuvecOat, Neywv, Tt AUpay pev appoca-1 $xepopav Sintenis® with the best MSS.; Sintenis' and Bekker have ovx ixepopav, showed attentiveness.

4

=

THEMISTOCLES

he is thought to have removed the distinction between aliens and legitimates.
However, it is clear that he was connected with the family of the Lycomidae, for he caused the chapel shrine at Phlya, which belonged to the Lycomidae, and had been burned by the Barbarians, to be restored at his own costs and adorned with frescoes, as Simonides has stated.
II. However lowly his birth, it is agreed on all hands that while yet a boy he was impetuous, by nature sagacious, and by election enterprising and prone to public life. In times of relaxation and leisure, when absolved from his lessons, he would not play nor indulge his ease, as the rest of the boys did, but would be found composing and rehearsing to himself mock speeches. These speeches would be in accusation or defence of some boy or other. Wherefore his teacher was wont to say to him: “My boy, thou wilt be nothing insignificant, but some- thing great, of a surety, either for good or evil."' Moreover, when he was set to study, those branches which aimed at the formation of character, or ministered to any gratification or grace of a liberal sort, he would learn reluctantly and sluggishly ; and to all that was said for the cultivation of sagacity or practical efficiency, he clearly showed an indifference far beyond his years, as though he put his confidence in his natural gifts alone.

Thus it came about that, in after life, at entertain- ments of a so-called liberal and polite nature, when he was taunted by men of reputed culture, he was forced to defend himself rather rudely, saying that

o0at Kai petaxetpicacbat spadrnptov OUK éntoTaTal, mohwy dé pixpay kat adokov maparaBav évdoEov Kal peyadnv amepyacacba. Katou LTnoipBporos "Avafayopo te Staxovoar Tov Ocwurrondéa gnat Ka mep\Médocov) orovdacat
TOV puaorKon, ovK ev TOV VOV ATTOMEVOS Tlepiexre? yap, Ss woAv vewtepos Fv Beyoroxr€ous, MéNacos pev avTectparHnyet TOALOpKOUVTE Lapious, 'Avafayopas dé ouvdser pre.
MaAnov ody ay Tus 7 pogexor ToS Mrnoudirou TOV OcwicroKréEa Tou Ppeappiov norny yeveaOat Réyouowv, ovTeE propos OVTOS ouTe TOV puoi KrAnPévtwv prrocopar, ara THY TOTE}
Kahouperny codiap, ovo ay 5é dewornta 7roX-Ticny Kal Spactipiov cuverw, emit Oevpa Te-TolnMevou Kal dcacwlovros GoTep aiperw €K
diadoyns amo Yorwvos: tv ot peTa Taira Sicavixais pi€avtes Téxvats Kal peTaryaryovTes amo TaY mpdkewy THY agKNoL éml TOUS ayous, cogioral mpoanyopevOnaay. TOUT®@ pev OvV HON TOALTEVOMEVOS émdnatater.
"Ev b¢ Tais TpOTats THS VEOTHTOS oppais avo-panos nv Kat dot dbunros, aTe TH puces Kad aurny NPwpevos dvev ovyou cal tratdeias én' apdorepa peyaras TOLOUMEVY peraBoras Tey emriTndevpar ov Kat TOAAKLS eLrorapevy Tos TO VELpor, os DoTepov avros @ponroyet, Kal Tous TPAXUTATOUS TONOUS apioTous larqrous yiver Bar pacKkov, drav 7S. Tpoonker TUXWCL maideias Kal
6 Kataptucews. & Sé TovTwy ée~apta@ow évtot Sinynpara wAatrovtes, atroxnpukiv pev vid TOU
1 hv rére Fuhr and Blass with S: rh», tuning the lyre and handling the harp were no accom- plishments of his, but rather taking in hand a city that was small and inglorious and making it glorious and great. And yet Stesimbrotus says that Themistocles was a pupil of Anaxagoras, and a disciple of Melissus the physicist; but he is careless in his chronology. Jt was Pericles, a much younger man _ than Themistocles, whom Melissus opposed at the siege of Samos,! and with whom Anaxagoras was intimate.

Rather, then, might one side with those who say that Themistocles was a disciple of Mnesiphilus the Phrearrhian, a man who was neither a rhetorician nor one of the so-called physical philosophers, but a cultivator of what was then called sophia, or wisdom, although it was really nothing more than cleverness in politics and practical sagacity. Mnesiphilus received this sophza, and handed it down, as though it were the doctrine of a sect, in unbroken tradition frgm Solon. His successors blended it with forensic atts, and shifted its application from public affairs to language, and were dubbed “ sophists.” It was this man, then, to whom Themistocles resorted at the very beginning of his public life.

But in the first essays of his youth he was uneven and unstable, since he gave his natural impulses free course, which, without due address and training, rush to violent extremes in the objects of their pursuit, and often degenerate; as he himself in later life con- fessed, when he said that even the wildest colts made very good horses, if only they got the proper breaking and training. What some story-makers add to this, however, to the effect that his father disinherited him, and his mother took her

1 440 B,c,

matpos avrTod, Oavarov 5é Tihs pnrpds éxovovov émri TH TOU Tatoos aTiia TeptAvToU ryevoperns, doxet cateypedobat Kal TovvayTiov etal ot AéyovTes, 67 Tov Ta! Kowa mpd Tew amoT peTrav
QuTOV o TAaTIp émedeixvue Tpos TH ardrry Tas
Taharas _ Tpunpers pplmpevas ral Tapopwpévas, OS 80 Kal T pos TOUS Snparywryous, 6 Stay aypno rot’ paivovrar, TOV TOAh@v o0lws EXovTo.

III. Tayv pévros Kal VEAVLKWS éouev Gxpao bat
TOU Oeprcroxdéovs Ta TOALTUKG Tpaypara Kat opodpa uD Tpos Sofav opyn Kpario a. bc) ip evOus €& ap cis Too Tpwrevely eplewevos rapes bpiotaro Te $ ™mpos TOUS duvapévous éy TH Todt Kal TpwrEevovTas amex Geias, pdriora 88 "Apt-oreidny TOV Avotpayxov, THD évaytiav ael Topevdpevov * auT@. kairo. Soxei TavTaTacty) [pos

TOUTOV éxOpa perpaxradny raBeiv apxny: npaaOngay yap auorepor Tod Kahov Lryctree, Keiov TO ‘yévos ovTOs, WS *Apiatov) prrocogos ior6-pyneev. éx 6& TovToU due éovy Kal mepl Ta Snpoova oracatovres. ou py GX’ h TeV Biov Kal TOV TpoTroy avopolorns Eotkev avtijoas THY dua opay. T pdos yap av pices Kat Kahoxarya.- OvKos TOV TpOTrOV O "Aptarelons, Kal ToheTevo-pevos ov pos Xap ovde T pos d0Ear, ANN’ aro TOU Bedtiorov peta aopanrelas Kal Sixacoa urns, nvayKalero TO Ocpioronret Tov Onpov em TONG KivoorTe Kab peydras émipépovte Kawvoropias
évavtrovabar TOANAKLS, EVLOTALEVOS AUTOD TrpOS Thy avenowv.
1 rov ra Fuhr and Blass with FaS: ra.

? wopevéuevov with Bekker and the MSS.: wopevduevos.

8

113

THEMISTOCLES

own life for very grief at her son’s ill-fame, this I think is false. And, in just the opposite vein, there are some who say that his father fondly tried to divert him from public life, pointing out to him old triremes on the sea-shore, all wrecked and neglected, and intimating that the people treated their leaders in like fashion when these were past service.
III. Speedily, however, as it seems, and while he was still in all the ardour of youth, public affairs laid their grasp upon Themistocles, and his impulse to win reputation got strong mastery over him. Wherefore, from the very beginning, in his desire to be first, he boldly encountered the enmity of men who had power and were already first in the city, especially that of Aristides the son of Lysimachus, who was always his opponent. And yet it is thought that his enmity with this man had an altogether puerile beginning. They were both lovers of the beautiful Stesilaiis, a native of Ceos, as Ariston the philosopher has recorded, and thenceforward they continued to be rivals in public life also. However, the dissimilarity in their lives and characters is likely to have increased their variance. Aristides was gentle by nature, and 4 conservative in character. He engaged in public life, not to win favour or reputation, but to secure the best results consistent with safety and righteousness, and so he was compelled, since Themistocles stirred the people up to many novel enterprises and introduced great innovations, to oppose him often, and to take a firm stand against his increasing influence.

3

- PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Aéyeras yap otrw trapddopos mpos Sdd€av
9 4 iA e \ , >
elvat nal mpdtewy peyarXov vid didotipias épa-oTNS, @oTE véos dv ett THs év Mapadave paxns \ \ Ld lA a 4
mpos tous BapBapous yevouévns Kal THs Medtia-Sov atpatnyias SiaBonbeions civvovs opacbat
Ta TWOAAA pos EAVT@ Kal Tas voKTAS aypuTVeELY
Kal Tovs WOTOUS Tapaiteia Oat TOvs cuVNnOeEts, Kal
A€yety pos TOUS épwTavTas Kal Oavpafovtas THY \ \ , V4 e 4 oN >
dept Tov Biov peraBornvy, ws Kxabevderv avrov ove
A) \ a M x 10 , e \ \ én TO Tov Mudrtiddouv tpomaov. ot pev yap
aot Tépas Govto Tov ToAépov THY ev Mapabau Tav BapBdpwv Arrav elvat, MemoroxrAns Se
apxiy pelovwv ayavar, éd' ods éavtov bTrép THs 6Ans "EXAdSos HrAEhe Kai THY Tod HoKEL Toppwev étt! rrpocdoxav TO péddov.
IV. Kai wrporov pév tv Aavpewtixny 7 pocodov
9 \ A b] 4 4 " 9 /
amTO TOV apyupeiwy petddAd\gwv EB0s éxYovTwWY
b , A 4 > na] 4
A@nvaiwv sdvavéuecOat, povos eimety érodpyoe mapedOwv eis tov Shyov, ws xph THY Stavouny édoavras éx TOV YpnudTwY ToUTwY KaTaTKEvAd-
, bP] \ N \ > V4 t
cac0at tTpinpes eri Tov mpos Aiytynras TroAepLov.
HKpale yap ovtos év TH 'EAAdL pddAtota Kal

KaTetyov ot vnot@tat? mANOEL veav THY Oaraccav. % Kal pdov DewioroxrANs ovvérercev, ov Aapeiov ovdé Ilépcas (uaxpav yap Roav ovros
1 7: Fuhr and Blass with FS: 45n.
? ynot@rot Fuhr and Blass with FS; Alywijrat, 19
THEMISTOCLES

It is said, indeed, that Themistocles was so carried away by his desire for reputation, and such an ambitious lover of great deeds, that though he was still a young man when the battle with the Barbar- ians at Marathon ! was fought and the generalship of Miltiades was in everybody’s mouth, he was seen thereafter to be wrapped in his own thoughts for the most part, and was sleepless o’ nights, and refused invitations to his customary drinking parties,

a eee ee

Miltiades would not suffer him to sleep. the rest of his countrymen thought that the defeat ;
the Barbarians at Marathon was the end of the war; bat Themistocles thought it to be only the beginning of greater contests, and for these he anointed himself, as it were, to be the champion of all Hellas, and put his city into training, because, while it was yet afar off, he expected the evil that was to come.
IV. And so, in the first place, whereas the Athe- nians were wont to divide up among themselves the revenue coming from the silver mines at Laureium, he, and he alone, dared to come before the people with a motion that this division be given up, and that with these moneys triremes be constructed. for the war against Aegina.? This was the fiercest war then troubling Hellas, and the islanders controlled the sea, owing to the number of their ships. Wherefore all the more easily did Themistocles carry his point, not by trying to terrify the citizens with dreadful pictures of Darius or the Persians—

1 490 B.C, ? 484-483 B.c,
II
™~

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Aéyerar yap obtw mapddopos mpos So€av elvat Kat eats payday bird didoTipias épa-oTNs, @ote véos MY ETL THS ev Mapadane pans Ipos TOUS BapBapous yevomerns Kal TIS Maria
dou oTparnyias Sia BonGetons TUVVOUS _Sphetat, TQ TOAKG 7 pos éauT@ Kal Tas VUKTAS ayp whe
Kal TOUS TOTOUS Trapatteia bat TOUS oun de Ss

Neveu 7 pos TOUS EpOTEnP TANS Kal Gavpator rept tov Biov petaBornv, as Kkabevdew av’ én TO To Mudtiadov T pom aay, J of ddXot Tépas Govto TOD TOAgmoU THY EV: Tov BapBapwv Ajrtav eivat, ep
apxiy pecLovay ayover, é ods OAns “EXXAdSos HrErhe Kal THY pwbev Ett! rpocdoxav TO peAXO
IV. Kai por pev THY Naup avo TOV apyupelwv MeETa. Ve
"A@nvaior diavéueo Oat, a
\ ’ \ A an TmapedOwv eis tov Stor, €dcavTas €K TOV KpHEe
\
cacbat Tpinpecs emt TOP
” \ a >
nKuwale yap ovTOS &y KATELYOV Ol YNOL@TaAL
gav. % Kal paov
Aapetov ovdé és

1 27: Fuhr ane
9
2 ynowra Fub
19 It is away by .

ambitio still a ians at Milti
nere

>
= d Lx
™ cS “28 *
THEMISTOCLES

indeed, that Dhemistocles was so carried desire fo ation, and such an f gree at though he was whe with the Barbarhe generalship of

uth, he yas seen

) nh or

ix

vil that

e Athe-

\~@

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

kat déos ov mavu BéBatov was adiEopevoe trapet-9 ld b] A N > 4 9 aA A yov) ériceiwy, ANAA TH pos Aiyiwwytas opy7y Kal
S A A b) 4 > 4 pudovernig TOV TOM TOD dmoxpnedpevos evxaipws
> e fa)
él THv TapacKeunv. éxaToY yap aTro TOV XpNpeatov éxeivov érrounOnocav tpinpers, als! Kal mpos FépEnv évavydynaav.
"Ex 5 tovTouv Kara puixpov UTaywv Kal Kata-BiBdalov thy modw pos thy Odrdaccay, ws TA
mela pev ovde Tois opopors akvoudyous dovras,
th S amo tav vedv adxq cal tos BapBdpovs apvvacbar kal tis ‘EXAdbos dpyew Suvapévovs, 9 \ J e A a e , aQvTt movipwv oTrrALToY, Ws drnow o IINatwr, vav-Batas nal Badartiovs érroince, cal SdvaBornv kal aitod mapécxev, ws apa BemoroxAANs To Sopu cal thy dowida tay ToNTOV TApENOMEVOS
9 e f \ , / \ >]
els umnpéotoy Kal Kwrny auvértere TOV AOn-
/ a ¥ \ A /
vaiwy Sipov. émpake Sé ravta Mudriddov Kpatnoas avTthéyovtos, ws latopet Yrnoip-Bpotos.
Ei pév 82) tTHv axpiBevav cat To xabapdv Tod mwoXiTevpatos EBAaWev 7} wy TavTa mpdkas, EoTw dirocopwrepov éemicxotreiy: Ste 5é 4) TOTE THTNpia tots “EAXnow é« ths Oaraoons virijpee Kal

\ b 4 4 2 J VA e 4
Thy AOnvaiwy ror avis avéctncay ai TpLinpets
3 a 4 > \ b \ b] , éxeivat, Td T adda Kal FlépEns avros euaptupnyce.
THS yap webixns Suvapews GOpavaTtou Stapevovons Epuye META THY TOV vEOV HTTAY, WS OUK OV akwpayos, cat MapdSowov éeurrodov elvat Trois 1 fs Fuhr and Blass with S: at, these were too far away and inspired no very serious fear of their coming, but by making opportune use of the bitter jealousy which they cherished toward Aegina in order to secure the armament he desired. The result was that with those moneys they built a hundred triremes, with —__ which they actually fought at Salamis! against Xerxes.

And after this, by luring the city on gradually and turning its progress toward the sea, urging that with their infantry they were no match even for their nearest neighbours, but that with the power they would get from their ships they could not only repel the Barbarians but also take the lead in Hellas, he nmrade them, instead of “ steadfast hoplites ’—to quote Plato’s words,” sea-tossed mariners, and brought down upon himself this accusation: ‘“ Themistocles robbed his fellow-citizens of spear and shield, and degraded the people of Athens to the rowing- ~- pad and the oar.” And this he accomplished in triumph over the public saponin of Miltiades, as Stesimbrotus relates.

Now, whether by accomplishing this he did injury to the integrity and purity of public life or not, let the philosopher rather investigate. But that the salvation which the Hellenes achieved at that time came from the sea, and that it was those very tri- remes which restored again the fallen city of Athens, Xerxes himself bore witness, not to speak of other proofs. For though his infantry remained intact, he took to flight after the defeat of his ships, because he thought he was not a match for the Hellenes, and he left Mardonius behind, as it seems to me,

(i 480 B.C. 2 Laws, iv. p. 706.

“EdAgoe Tis diaEecs ParXov 7 Sovreoaspevoy avTous, @S éuol Soxel, KaTEALTTED.
V. Xwvtovoy 5é€ avbtov yeyovévas ypnuatiotny 114
e / /, > , \ \
of pév tives hace be érevOeproTnta: Kai yap
/ ” \ \ ? a \ \ hiroOurny bvta Kai Napmpov ev Taig Tepl TOUS
4 4 b 4 5 a @ 4 e oe
Eévous Samrdvats adOovou deicPat yopnytas: ot dé ToUvvavTioy yALOYpOTHTA TOAATY Kal pLKPOKOYLay
le) Lo) ,
KATHYOpOvaLY, @S Kal TA TEuTrOpEva TAY edwoi-
le /
2 pov mwrovvtos. ere dé Diridyns o immorpodos
? e.» 9 A A by 4 ? I airnOels tm’ avtov ma@Xov ovK &mxev, HITELANTE THY olKiay av’Tovd Tayv Tonoey Sovpetov imo), aimEdpevos éyxAnpata avyyenxa Kai dixas TO avOpwmr@ pos oiKElous TLvas Tapakeu.
A 4 4 e / 4 >”
TH 6 ptroTipia wavtas vrepéBarev, WoT Ett
\ ¢ ,
pev véos Ov Kal adavns ’Emixréa tov €& ‘Epysovns
A 4 e \ “ > /
Kupiatny otrovdalopevoy vio tav *AOnvalor exduTraphoar pedeTay Trap’ avT@, prroTLpmovpeEvos qoAAovs THY oiKiay Enreiv Kal houTay pos avTov.
3 es 8 ‘Oduptriav €Mav cai StaptArdpg@pevos TO Ki A 5 a \ N \ \ ¥.
iuwve rept OElTTVa Kal OKNVAaS Kal THY aXANHY AapTpOTHTA Kal TapacKeunY, ovK HperKe TIS
"EAAnow. éxeivp pev yap byte véw kal an tA ” A * la)
oixias peyadns wovto Seiy Ta ToLadTa cuyyYwpeEly:
e \ / , 4 > N “ >
o b€ pnTw yvapipos ,yeyovws, GrAXa Soxav é&
, .
ovy vTapxXovTwy Kal wap daéiav éraipecbar
4 mpoowdrtoKxavey draloveiav. évixnoe Sé Kal
Nopnyav tpaywoots, peyurnv dn TOTE aroVdnY
4 A A
kal dirotyslav Tod ayavos éxovtos, Kal tivaxa

rather to obstruct their pursuit than to subdue them.

V. Some say that Themistocles was an eager money-maker because of his liberality ; for since he was fond of entertaining, and lavished money splendidly on his guests, he required a generous budget. Others, on the contrary, denounce his great stinginess and parsimony, claiming that he used to sell the very food sent in to him as a gift. When Philides the horse-breeder was asked by him . for a colt and would not give it, Themistocles threat- ened speedily to make his house a wooden horse ; thereby darkly intimating that he would stir up accusations against him in his own family, and lawsuits between the man and those of his own household.

In his ambition he surpassed all men. For instance, while he was still young and obscure, he prevailed upon Epicles of Hermione, a harpist who was eagerly sought after by the Athenians, to practise at his house, because he was ambitious that many should seek out his dwelling and come often to see him. Again, on going to Olympia, he tried to rival Cimon in his banquets and booths and other brilliant appointments, so that he displeased the Hellenes. For Cimon was young and of a great house, and they thought they must allow him in such extrava- gances; but Themistocles had not yet become famous, and was thought to be seeking to elevate himself unduly without adequate means, and so was charged with ostentation. And still again, as choregus,.or theatrical manager, he won a victory with tragedies, although even at that early time this contest was conducted with great eagerness and

THS vinns avéOnnxe ToLavTny éeruypadny EyovTa: “ @euiotoxrAHs Ppedppros éexopryer, Ppvwyos edidacker, "Adeipavtos jpyev.”
Ov piv adda Tois ToAXOs évyppoTTe, TovTO pev éxdoTOV TOY TONTO@Y TOvVO“A AéywV aTrO oTopatos, ToUTO dé KpiTnVY aopary mepl Ta cuuBoraa Tapéyov éavTov, Mate Tov Kal mTpos Lepovidny tov Keiov eireiv, airovpevoy te tav OU peTpiwy Tap avTov oTpaTnyouVTOS, Ms OvT éxeivos av ryévouro TOUTS ayabos adav Tapa péXos ovT autos aoTetos dpyov Tapa. vopov xapilopevos. wanrw oé TOTE Tov Ytpovidnv éme- cxworTwv édeye vodv ouK exe, KopivOious bev hotdopobyTa peyadny oixobyTas TOMW, avrTov b¢ qotovpevoy eikovas oTAS otros aisxpov THY

Oxpev. avEopevos dé xal ois tronnois apec Kav TEXNOS Kater Tas lace kal petéatnoe é€oorpaxicOévta Tov ‘Apia reidny.
VI. "Hén 6e tov Mydou xataBaivovros ém THY “EAAdoa Kal TOV "AOnvatov Bovdevopévoy Tept
atparnyoo, TOUS pev adrouvs éxovTas eKarivat THS orparnyias Aéyouow éxtmemAnypévous TOV xivduvov, "Enrecvdny dé TOV Evdnpisov, dn-parycoryov évra Setvov bev elrreiy, paraxov dé THv puxny Kar XONwaT ov ATTova, TIS apyxiis épier Dau Kal Kparia ety émidofov elvat TH Xet-porovia. TOY ovv @cwiorondéa Seioavta, BN 7a, mparywara StapGapeln TayraTrace Ths Wryepovias eis éxelvov éumerovons, Xpipace Thy piroripiay éEwvncacbat trapa tod ’EKmixvéous.
16

THEMISTOCLES

ambition, and set up a tablet commemorating his victory with the following inscription: “Themistocles the Phrearrhian was Choregus; Phrynichus was Poet ; Adeimantus was Archon.” !
However, he was on good terms with the common folk, partly because he could call off-hand the name of every citizen, and partly because he rendered the service of a safe and impartial arbitrator in cases of private obligation and settlement out of court; and so he once said to Simonides of Ceos, who had made an improper request from him when he was magis- trate : “ You would not be a good poet if you should sing contrary to the measure; nor I a clever magis- trate if I should show favour contrary to the law.” And once again he banteringly said to Simonides that it was nonsense for him to abuse the Corinthians, who dwelt in a great and fair city, while he had portrait figures made of himself, who was of such an ugly countenance. And so he grew in power, and pleased the common folk, and finally headed a success- ful faction and got Aristides removed by ostracism.?

VI. At last, when the Mede was descending upon Hellas and the Athenians were deliberating who should be their general, all the rest, they say, voluntarily renounced their claims to the generalship, so panic-stricken were they at the danger; but Epicydes, the son of Euphemides, a popular leader who was powerful in speech but effeminate in spirit and open to bribes, set out to get the office, and was likely to prevail in the election; so Themis- tocles, fearing lest matters should go to utter ruin in case the leadership fell to such a man, bribed and bought off the ambition of Epicydes.

1 476 B.C. 2 483-482 B.c. _

=

17

VOL. II,

-_

~

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

2 "Emauvetras 8 avtod cal 76 rept Tov diyNwr Tov Epyov év tots meupOeiow vio Bacidéws eri vis kal bdatos aitnow. éppnvéa yap dvta avdXa-Bav Sia wWnhdicpatos drréxtewev Ott wvny
‘EAAnvida BapBapots wpoctdypacw érodrApnoe
3 xXpnoa. ere S& Kal 1rd wept “ApOmoy Tov
ZLereirnv: Beptoroxréovs yap eiaovtos kai tod-Tov eis TOUS atipmous Kal Taidas avTod Kal yévos
évéyparvav, Ste tov éx Mydwv ypuady eis tovs “RAAnvas éxopice. péytorov Sé rdvtwy To KaTa-ADaat ToS “EXAnVLKOdS TroAg“oUs Kal StadrAdEar
Tas ToAes GAAHAAaLS, TeicavTa Tas eyOpas Sia
Toy TWoAcuov avaBaréc0at apos 6 Kal Xeirewv
Tov 'Apxdda pardora cuvaywvicacbar Néyouct.
VII. HapakaBav 8& rHv dpynv ed0ds perv €mexeipes TOvsS Troditas éuBiBdley eis Tas TpLN- 115 pets, Kal tTHv wodw ereOev éxdtTrOVTAS WS TpocwtadtTw HS “EXAddos amavtay 1r@ BapBdp@ kata Oddratrav. évotapévwv 5€ trod\rAwv &€§&n-yare TONY oTpatiay eis TA Téurn pera Aaxe-Satyoviov, ws avtoO. mpoxwduvevocovtwy THs
2 @ertarias otrw Tore pdilev Soxovons: érret & dveywpnoav éxetOev ampaxto Kal Berrarov Bactret mpocyevopevwy eunoile Ta péexpt Botw-tias, wadArov On TH OcprctoKxrAe? mpocetyov oi "AOnvaios wept THs Oardoons, Kal méutreTat peTa veav ém Aptepicvoy Ta orevd purdéwv.
"EvOa 69 Tov pev “EXXAjvov EvpuBiddny nar

Praise is given to his treatment of the linguist in the company of those who were sent by the King to demand earth and water as tokens of submission : this interpreter he caused to be arrested, and had him put to death by special decree, because he dared to prostitute the speech of Hellas to Barbarian stipulations. Also to his treatment of Arthmius of Zeleia: on motion of Themistocles this man was entered on the list of the disfranchised, with his children and his family, because he brought the gold of the Medes and offered it to the Hellenes. But the greatest of all his achievements was his putting a stop to Hellenic wars, and reconciling Hellenic cities with one another, persuading them to_postpone their mutial hatreds

because a the foreign war. To which end, they say, Cheileos the Arcadian most seconded his efforts. |

VII. On assuming the command, he straightway went to work to embark the citizens on their tri- remes, and tried to persuade them to leave their city behind them and go as far as possible away from Hellas to meet the Barbarians by sea. But many opposed this plan, and so he led forth a large army to the vale of Tempe, along with the Lacedaemonians, in order to make a stand there in defence of Thessaly, which was not yet at that time supposed to be medis- ing. But soon the army came back from this position without accomplishing anything, the Thessalians went over to the side of the King, and everything was medising as far as Boeotia, so that at last the Athenians were more kindly disposed to the naval policy of Themistocles, and he was sent with a fleet to Artemisium, to watch the narrows.

It was at this place that the Hellenes urged

AaxeSaipoviovs AyetoOar KedXevovtav, tav 8
'AOnvatov, Ste wANOEL TOV vEeaVv cUpmavTas opLov
Tl Tous @AXous bmepeBadnor, OUK afvovyTwv
ETEPOLS érea Oat," cuviday TOV xivduvoy 0 Beut-TTOKAAS avros TE THY apxny TO EvpuBiddy
TapHKe Kal KATET PAVE TOUS "AOnvaious, UTLTX-VOUHEVOS, ay avdpes aryadot yév@vTat q@pos Tov TOAEMLOV, ExOvTas avTois Tapé-eLy Eis TA OUTTA
metOopevous TOUS "EXAnvas. dioTrep Soxet Tips cwTNpLAs aiTLaTaros yevéoOas TH 'EdAdor Kat pdduara TOUS "AOnvatous "Tpoaryaryety Els dofay, OS avdpeta fev TOV TONELLOY, evyvapocuvn é TOV TULMAX wy TEplryEVOMEVOS.
"Esrel S€ traits "Agerais TOU BapBapcxod aTodov Tm poo piEavtos extraryels O EvpuBiddns TOV KaTa oTOMAa vEeav TO mrHO0s, adrras Se muvOavopevos Siaxocias t brrép Lxed0ov mepitreiv, éBovreTo THY TayloTny elow THS 'Edd dbos Kopia Gels dxpac Gat IleXorrovynacov Kal Tov meCov orpaTtov Tais vavot mpooTreptBarécbat, TAVTATACLW am poopaxov TyoUpEvos THY KaTa Gararray adKny Bacrrews, Seto avrTes ol EuBoeis, T,) opas ot "EAXnves Tpo-@YTAL, ne TO OeprrroKret SeAeyovTo, Tleda-yovta perc Xenpareov TOAK@Y meurpartes. a AaBov éxeivos, ws 'Hpddotos taropnxe, Tots trepl tov EvpuBiddnv exer.
'Evavtvoupévov 5 avT@ padvara TOV TOT OY
"ApxeTérous, os ny pev éml Tis lepas VEOS T pe

Npapxos, oux éyov € yYenpata Tots vaurars xopnyety éomevdev anomredoat, mapwEuvev ere PadXoY 0 DeptoroxARHs Tors Tpinpitas émr autor, 20

THEMISTOCLES

Eurybiades and the Lacedaemonians to take the lead, but the Athenians, since in the number of their ships they surpassed all the rest put together, disdained to follow others,—a peril which Themistocles at once comprehended. He surrendered his own command to Eurybiades, and tried to mollify the Athenians with the promise that if they would show themselves brave men in the war, he would induce the Hellenes to yield a willing obedience to them thereafter. - Wherefore he is thought to have been the man most instrumental in achieving the salvation of Hellas, and foremost in leading the Athenians up to the high repute of surpassing their foes in valour and their allies in magnanimity.

Now Eurybiades, on the arrival of the Barbarian armament at Aphetae, was terrified at:the number of ships that faced him, and, learning that two hundred ships more were sailing around above Sciathus to cut off his retreat, desired to proceed by the shortest route down into Hellas, to get into touch with Pelo- ponnesus and encompass his fleet with his infantry forces there, because he thought the power of the King altogether invincible by sea. Therefore the Euboeans, fearing lest the Hellenes abandon them to their fate, held secret conference with Themisto- ‘cles, and sent Pelagon to him with large sums of money. This money he took, as Herodotus relates,! and gave to Eurybiades.

Meeting with most opposition among his fellow- citizens from Architeles, who was captain on the sacred state galley, and who, because he had no money to pay the wages of his sailors, was eager to sail off home, Themistocles incited his crew all the 1 viii. 5.

21
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

6 woTeE TO Selirvoy apTradcat auydpamovtTas. Tod
"Apxetérous abupovvtos él tovT@ Kal Bapéws dhépovtos, eioérreprev 0 OewiorokArANs pos avrov év xiotn Selmrvov aptov Kal xpeav, UTrobels Kato tadavtov apyupiov Kai KerXevoas avTov te Setmvely ev TH TapovTe Kar pel? npepav emipednOhvat Tay TpinpiT@y eb be pH, xataBojoew avrod _ pos TOUS Tapdvtas! ws ExovTos apyuptov Tapa TOV TOAELLoY. TadTa perv ovv Pavias o AéoBros el pnKev.
VIII. Ai dé yevopevas tore mpos tas ToY BapBdpov vads trepi Ta oteva payat Kpiow pév eis Ta ONG peydrnv ovK ETroinoav, TH Sé Teipa péytota tous “EAAnvas ovynoay, bro TeV épyov

mapa Tovs Kivduvous d:5axOévtas, ws odtE TANON ve@v ovTe KOgpOL Kal AapTpoTHTEs emTLojnpwV oUTE Kpavyal Koume@ders 7) BadpRapot trataves éxovot TL Sewov avdpaou emiaTapévors eis yelpas iévat kal payecBar ToAp@ow, adrAa Set TaD TOLOUTWY KaATappovodvTas em avTa Ta THpaTa
dépecOat kal mpos éxeiva SiaywvilecOar ocup-2mraxevras. 6 67 Kal Ilivéapos ov Kakas Goce ouvid@y él tas év ‘Aptewicio payns evTrety"
"OO: raises "APavaiwr éBdrovro paevvav

Kpnmtd édrevOepias*
apy yap évtws Tov wav To Oappery.
"Eote 5é€ tis EvBoias 76 ‘’Aptepiovov trrép
thv ‘Eoriatay airyiados eis Bopéay avarrertapévos, avtiteivee 8 avT@ pddota THs v7 1 wapévras Fuhr and Blass with F4S: zoAiras.

more against him, so that they made a rush upon him and snatched away his dinner. Then, while Architeles was feeling dejected and indignant over this, Themistocles sent him a dinner of bread and meat in a box at the bottom of which he had put a talent of silver, and bade him dine without delay, and on the morrow satisfy his crew; otherwise he said he would denounce him publicly as the receiver of money from the enemy. At any rate, such is the story of Phanias the Lesbian.

VIII. The battles which were fought at that time with the ships of ‘the Barbarians in the narrows were not decisive of the main issue, it is true, but they were of the greatest service to the Hellenes in giving them experience, since they were thus taught by actual achievements in the face of danger that riei- ther multitudes of ships nor brilliantly decorated figure-heads nor boastful shouts or barbarous battle- hymns have any terror for men who know how to come to close quarters and dare to fight there; but that they must despise all such things, rush upon the very persons of their foes, grapple with them, and fight it out to the bitter end. Of this Pindar seems to have been well aware when he said of the battle of Artemisium :—

‘Where Athenians’ valiant sons set in radiance

eternal Liberty's corner-stone.’’!
For verily the foundation of victory is courage.

Artemisium is a part of Euboea above Hestiaea,
—a sea-beach stretching away to the north,—and just about opposite to it lies Olizon, in the territory 1 Bergk, Frag. 77.
e 23
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

DiroxTyTH yevouévns yopas ‘Orlov. Eyer 5é vaoy ov péyay ‘Aptréutdos érixAnow Ipoong@as, cal Sévdpa aepl avT@ wéduxe Kal orhrat KUKA@
niOov AevKod tTemynyacw: o Sé NOS TH xeEupl TptiBopevos Kal xpoay Kal dopnv xpoxifovaav avabidwaw. év md S€ TOV oTndov édeyeloy Hy TOOE yeypappéevov’
Tlavrodarav avipav yeveas 'Acias aro yw@pas qaides "AOnvaiwy T@dé ToT év TEeNayer
4 4 > \ \ v
vavpayin Saydoarres, rel oTpatos @AETO Mydwr, onpata TadT ecav wapOéve Apréusc..
Setxvutar O€ THS AKTHS TOTOS Ev TOAAH TH repre
Ovi Kxovw redpwdn Kat pédrawav éx Bdbous avadtoovs, BomEep TupixavoTov, év & Ta vavayta Kal vexpovs xadoat Soxovdor.
IX. Tav pévroe wept OepporvrAas eis Td
"Aprepiovoy amayyerdovtwv! trudpevor Acwviday te xetoOar Kai xpateiv HépEnv rev cata yiv wapoderv, elow tis ‘EXdXddos5 dvexopivlorto,
t@v ‘AOnvaiwy éml aot tetaypévov 8. apetrny Kal péya Tots rem parypevors dpovovyvTwv. Tapa wréwov 6€ THY KXwpaYv oO Bepsorowryjs, rep KaT apo ets dvaryeatas kal KaTaguyas éwpa Trois moreuios, evexdpatTe Kata ToV NOwY eripavi ypdppata, ToUs pev EvpioKwY aro TUYNS, TOVs &
1 gwayyeAAdvrwy Fuhr and Blass with F8S : dxayyer0évrwr.
24
116

THEMISTOCLES

once subject to Philoctetes. It has a small temple _ of Artemis surnamed Proseoea, which is surrounded by trees and enclosed by upright slabs of white marble. This stone, when you rub it with your hand, gives off the colour and the odour of saffron.

On one of these slabs the following elegy was inscribed :—

‘ Nations of all sorts of men from Asia’s boundaries coming,
Sons of the Athenians once, here on this arm of the sea,
Whelmed in a battle of ships, and the host of the Medes was destroyed ;
These are the tokens thereof, built for the Maid Artemis.” 1

And a place is pointed out on the shore, with sea sand all about it, which supplies from its depths a dark ashen powder, apparently the product of fire, and here they are thought to have burned their wrecks and dead bodies.

IX. However, when they learned by messengers from Thermopylae to Artemisium that Leonidas was slain and that Xerxes was master of the pass, they withdrew further down into Hellas, the Athenians bringing up the extreme rear because of their valour, and greatly elated by their achievements. As Themistocles sailed along the coasts, wherever he saw places at which the enemy must necessarily put in for shelter and supplies, he inscribed con- spicuous writings on stones, some of which he found to his hand there by chance, and some he himself caused to be set near the inviting anchorages and

1 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graect, iii.4 p. 480.

avros totas mepl Ta vavrAoxa Kal Tras Hdpelas, ériaknttov “Iwor dia TOV ypappdtov, ci pev olov te, petatdeacOat mpos avtovs warépas évTas Kal mpoxwouvevovtas uTép THs éxelvwv érevOepias, ef 5é py, xaxodv to BapBapixoy év tais paxyats Kal ovvtapdttew. tadta § Ar-muceyv) petacotnoey tovs “Iwvas 7 tapdakeuv UTomToTépous Tois BapBapors yevopévous.
ElépEou dé dia tis Awpidos dvobev éuBa-Aovtos eis THY Paxida Kal Ta TOV Poxéewy adorn a 6 A € vf

TUpTONOUYTOS ov mpoonuvvay ot “EKAXnVes,

4 a >] 4 A > ‘ 4
Kaitrep Trav AOnvaiwyv Sgouévwr ets THY Botwriav
amavrioat mpo THs “ATTUKAS, MoTEp aUTOL KaTa Odratray én ’Aptrepiavov éBonOncav. ndevos
5’ vmaxovovtos avtois, dAAa THs LeXotrovyncov

Tepteyouevwv Kal mwacav évros ‘loOpod thy Sivayuv @punpévwv ocvvayerv, Kat Staterytfovtav
A > A > 4 > 4 fu \
tov IcOpuov ets OddXattav éx OaratTNs, awa pev
? A , bd ‘\ b] , 4
copy? TtHS tpodocias elye tovs ‘APnvaious, dua 5é ducOupia cal xatnhera pepovwpévovs. pa-vecbat pev yap ov Stevooivto puptdor otpatod tocavrais: 5 8 Hv povov dvayxaiov év TO Trapor-
\ 4 9 / ? A “ 4 e
Tl, THY Todkw adevtas eupvvat tais vavoipr, ot
a ” e 4 , a
ToAXol NANETWS NKOVOV, WS LNTE VLKNS Seoevoe
pyte owrnpiav émictdpevot Oe@v te icpa Kal TAaTépwv npia mpoiepevwv.
X. “EvOa 67 QeptoroxAs atropav trois avOpw-Tivos Aoytapols TpocdyerOat Ta TWAHOOS, WoTEP
26
THEMISTOCLES

watering places. In these writings he solemnly enjoined upon the Ionians, if it were possible, to come over to the side of the Athenians, who were their ancestors, and who were risking all in behalf of their freedom ; but if they could not do this, to damage the Barbarian cause in battle, and bring confusion among them. By this means he hoped either to fetch the Ionians over to his side, or to confound them by bringing the Barbarians into suspicion of them.

Although Xerxes had made a raid up through Doris into Phocis, and was burning the cities of the Phocians, the Hellenes gave them no succour. The Athenians, it is true, begged them to go up into Boeotia against the enemy, and make a stand there in defence of Attica, as they themselves had gone up by sea to Artemisium in defence of others. But no one listened to their appeals. All clung fast to the Peloponnesus, and were eager to collect all the forces inside the Isthmus, and went to running a wall through the Isthmus from sea to sea. Then the Athenians were seized alike with rage at this betrayal, and with sullen dejection at their utter isolation. Of fighting alone with an army of so many myriads they could not seriously think ; and as for the only thing left them todo in their emergency, namely, to give up their city and stick to their ships,

most of them were distressed at the thought, saying that they neither wanted victory nor understood what safety could mean if they abandoned to the enemy the shrines of their gods and the sepulchres of their fathers.
X. Then indeed it was that Themistocles, despair- ing of bringing the multitude over to his views by

év Tpaywodia pnxavnv dpas, onpeta Saoria Kal Npnopous éeripyev avtois: onpetov pev NapBaveov
To Tov Spdxovtos, bs ahavyns éxeivats Tais
Huépats ex TOU onKod Soxel yevéoOat Kal Tas Kal" ypépay avT@ mpoTiepévas atrapyas cdpi-> 4 e e A b] V4 ?
aKovTes axpavoTtous ot tepets, eEnyyeddXov ets
TOUS TOANOUS, TOU MeuwsaToKrEous Aoyov S6ovTos, @S atroNéAotrre THY Todw 7 Oeos vdnyoupévy N =i 4 > a wn de "
mpos thy OdXNaTTay avTois. TH OE YPNTWO
TAAL eOnpayeye, Nyov pundev Addo SnrovcIa
EvAwov teixos h TAS vabs: 810 Kal THY Larapiva
Oeiav, ovyt Sewny ovdé cxeTAlav Karely Tov Oeor, @s evTUYnpaTos peyddou Tois "EXAnow érroyupov éocopévnv. Kpatnoas 5€ TH yvoun Wrdiopa ypdder, THv péev Tod Trapaxatabéabar 7H "AOnva tH "AOnvdav pedeovon, tors 8 év nrtkia Tavras éuBaivey eis tas Tpinpers, raidas
dé nai yuvaixas kal avdpdtroéa cate exactov
¢ s— , \ a /
as Suvatov. Kupwbévtos 5é tod Wndiopatos ot TrEtoToL TaY "AOnvaiwy vmeEeevTO yeveas } Kat yuvaixas eis Tporliva, dirotiuws mavu tov Tpovtnvior vrodexopévav Kxal yap tpépev en-
, , Waa, \ eos ,
gdisavro Snpuocia, S00 GBorovs Exdot@ Sidovtes, Kat THs OTwpas AapBavew tovs traidas éFeivat
1 yeveds Madvig's correction, adopted by Blass: yovéas parents, 28

any human reasonings, set up machinery, as it were, to introduce the gods to them, as a_ theatrical manager would for a tragedy, and brought to bear upon them signs from heaven and oracles. As a sign from heaven he took the behaviour of the serpent, which is held to have disappeared about that time from the sacred enclosure on the Acropolis. When the priests found that the daily offerings made to it were left whole and untouched, they proclaimed to the multitude,—Themistocles putting the story into their mouths,—that the goddess had abandoned her city and was showing them their way to the sea. Moreover, with the well-known oracle! he tried again to win the people over to his views, saying that its “wooden wall’ meant nothing else than their fleet; and that the god in this oracle called Salamis “ divine,” not “ dreadful ” nor “cruel,” for the very reason that the island would sometime give its name to a great piece of good fortune for the Hellenes. At last his opinion prevailed, and so he introduced a bill providing that the city be entrusted for safe keeping “ to Athena the patroness of Athens,’ but that all the men of military age embark on the triremes, after finding for their children, wives, and servants, such safety as each best could. Upon the passage of this bill, most of: the Athenians bestowed their children and. wives in Troezen, where the Troe- zenians very eagerly welcomed them. They actually voted to support them at the public cost, allowing two obols daily to each family, and td permit the boys to pluck of. the vintage fruit everywhere, and 1 Herod., vii. 141.

mavraxober, Ere & vrrép avta@v didacKdnaots Tedely pucOovs. 70 dé Wydtopa Nixayopas éyparpev.
Ovk dvtwv Sé Synpociwy ypnudtar trois ’*AOnvaio, "ApiotorérAns péev dnote tHv é€& ’Apeiov qmayou BovvAnv tropicacay oxTw Spaxpas éxdoT@ TOV oTpaTevopévwy aitiwtatny yevéoOar Tov
TAnpwOnva. tas Tpenpets, Kre’dnuos dé Kal TovUTO TOU BepiotoKréovs Troveirat oTpaTHYNmA.
cataBawovtov yap eis Tepacad trav ‘AOnvaiwy, gnaw atrorécOa. to Topyovevov amd rhs Oeov Tov aydApatos: Tov ow BeptoTtoKrAéa Tpocjotovpevoy Cnteiv Kal Suepevvopevoy aravta Xpnudtov dvevpioxery mAROos év tais arrooKEVaIS ATOKEKPULULEVOV, MV Els pécOV KoOpLo-Oévrwv evrropnoat tous éuBaivovtas eis Tas vais epodiov.
"Exareovons 5€ THS ToAEwWS TOIS Mev OLKTOV
TO Oéapa, tois 5é Oaipa Tis TOAMNS TapeElye, yeveds ev GAN TpoTreuTrOvTMY, avTaV 8 aKap-TTWY POS oipwyas Kal Sdxpva yovewv Kal

meptBoras Statrepwvtw@v els THY viTOV. KaiToL TONAOL péev 1a yHpas VITOAELTOMEVOL TOV TOAMLTOV EXeov elyov: Hy Sé€ Tis Kal do TOV huépwr Kal acuvtpopav Cowy emixioca yAvKvOuUpia, per a@puyhs xal modov cvprapabeovtwv éuBaivovar Tois éavTay tpopedorv. év ols iatopettar Kvwv ElavOinmov tov Iepixdéovs matpos ovK ava-TXOpEvos THY am' avTOD povwow évarécbat TH
Jarartn Kal TH Tpinpes Tapavnyopevos extrec ety 30

besides to hire teachers for them. The bill was introduced by a man whose name was Nicagoras. Since the Athenians had no public moneys in hand, it was the Senate of Areiopagus, according to Aristotle, which provided each of the men who embarked with eight drachmas, and so was most instrumental in manning the triremes; but Cleidemus represents this too as the result of an artifice of Themistocles. He says that when the Athenians were going down to the Piraeus and abandoning their city, the Gorgon's head was lost from the image of the goddess; and,then Themistocles, pretending to search for it, and ransacking everything, thereby discovered an abundance of money hidden away in the baggage, which had only to be confiscated, and the crews of the ships were well provided with rations and wages.

When the entire city was thus putting out to sea, the sight provoked pity in some, and in others astonishment at the hardihood of the step; for they were sending off their families in one direction, while they themselves, unmoved by the lamentations and tears and embraces of their loved ones, were crossing over to the island where the enemy was to be fought. Besides, many who were left behind on account of their great age invited pity also, and much affecting fondness was shown by the tame domestic animals, which ran along with yearning cries of distress by the side of their masters as they embarked. A story is told of one of these, the dog of Xanthippus the father of Pericles, how he could not endure to be abandoned by his master, and so sprang into the sea, swam across the strait by the side of his master’s trireme, 31

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

els THY Larapiva Kal ATOOUvLNCAS aTroPaveiV evOus: od Kal TO Serxvipevoy axpt vov Kal Kadov-

N a 4 9 /
pevov Kuvos ofa tadov eivar Néyovat.

XI. Tatra te 67 peydda to Bemsorondéous, kal Tovs ToAdiTas aicBopevos moOobvras *Ap.- 4 \ , \ > 9» A a lA ateionv cat Sed.otas, wn 8 opynv to BapBdpo mpoobels éauTov avatpéyyn Ta Tpaypata TIS
e 4 b] 4 \ \ A 4
EAAdbos (€Ewotpdxiato yap wpo Tov TroAémou katactactacbeis vmod @epsotoxdéous), ypade Wnpiopa, Tois éml ypovm peOcotaow ekeivar
“ 4 A , \ LA lel
KkateNOovdat mpatrew Kal réyew Ta BédXtioTa TH “EAAdos pera TOV GdXOV TOMTOD.
EvpuBidbdou Sé thy pév nyepoviay tav veav V4 \ a 4 > ges A éyovtos bia TO THS Yrdprns akiwpa, paraxod
dé mepl tov Kivduvoy dvtos, aipew d5é Bovropévou
\ a ? ee. , 4 = sN \ \
Kal maAety emt tov IoOpuov,- Gtrov Kai to Tefov
4 A V4 € A
nOpooro trav ledorovynciwv, 0 BemoroKrAHs
avréxeyev' Ste Kal TA pvnpovevopeva AeXORVvaAL act. Tod yap EvpuB8iddou mpos avrov e-movtos: “QO. @epiorowXes, ev Tols ayaot Tovs mpoctaviarapeévous parrifover, “Nal,” elev 0 @ecwtorokrys, ‘ ddAa Tous arronepbevras ov arepavovary.” émrapapévou 5é THY Baxrnpiav Os TaTa£ovTos, o 0 BemoroxrARs Eby: “ aragov ev, dxovaoy 66.” Oaupacavros dé THY TpgoTnTa Tov EvpuBidéov Kat deyew KehevaavTos, O pev emia tonr7Hs aviyryev aurov émi Tov ovyov. ei - movtos O€ TLVOS, WS aYnp amrodts ovK Oopbds didacKe Tovs éxovtas éyxataditrely Kal mpoécbat 32

and staggered out on Salamis, only to faint and die straightway. They say -that the spot which is pointed out to this day as " Dog's Mound" is his tomb.

XI. These were surely great achievements of Themistocles, but there was a greater still to come. When he saw that the citizens yearned for Aristides, and feared lest out of wrath he might join himself to the Barbarian and so subvert the cause of Hellas,—he had been ostracized before the war in consequence of political defeat at the hands of Themistocles,!—he introduced a bill providing that those who had been removed for a time be permitted to return home and devote their best powers to the service of Hellas along with the other citizens.

When Eurybiades, who had the command of the fleet on account of the superior claims of Sparta, but who was faint-hearted in time of danger, wished to hoist sail and make for the Isthmus, where the infantry also of the Peloponnesians had been assem- bled, it was Themistocles who spoke against it, and it was then, they say, that these memorable sayings of his were uttered. When Eurybiades said to him, "' Themistocles, at the games those who start too soon get a caning," " Yes,' said Themistocles, " but those who lag behind get no crown." And when Eurybiades lifted up his staff as though to smite him, Themistocles said: "Smite, but hear me." Then Eurybiades was struck with admiration at his calm- ness, and bade him speak, and Themistocles tried to 'bring him back to his own position. But on a certain one saying that a man without a city had no business to advise men who still had cities of their own

1 Cf. chap. v. fin.

\ 4 ¢ aA ? , A
Tas qwatpibas, 0 BewotoxrARs émictpéevras Tov oyou: ""Hyeis rot," eltrev, "aw poxOnpée, Tas pév
> 7&7 A / , b] >
oikias Kal Ta Telyn KaTaNEdOiTTApEV, OVK ati-ovvtes ayuywv Evexa Sovreverv, Tors 8 nyiv
" ae A ¢ / e t
gore peyiotn tav "EdAnvidar, ai diaxdcvat Tpinpets, at vov pev vpiv wapectact Bonbol awtecbar d& avTav Bovropévars, ef & arite |

Sevtepov nas mpodortes, avtixa tevoetat Ts 'EX-Anvev "AOnvaiovs cal tod édXevbépav Kal yopav ov YElpova KEexTNpEvovs Hs améBadov. Tadta Tov Wepiaroxréous ettrovtos évvoia nal déos éxye tov EvpuBiddnv trav ’A@nvaiwv, un odds aro-Neirrovres olxovTar. Tod 8 *Eperptéws rretpwopévou TL N€yeLY Trpos avTov, “"H ydp,” én, “ Kal bmiv tept mror€uov tis eore AOYOS, of KaGdTEp ai revides pdyatpay pev eyere, xapdiay dé ovn

éyete; |
XII. Aéyerar 8 tro tivwy tov pev Beporo-KNéa Tepi tovTwY amo TOU KaTAaCTpwLATOS
avodev Ths vews StaréyeoOa, yradna 5 odOjvar dtatretopévny amo Se€las TOY veav Kal Tois Kapxnaiors émixabilovcar: 616 8 Kal pddwora mpooéberro TH yawn kal maperxevdlovTo vav-paxnoovTes. ANN ETE TMV TroAEMIWY O TE aoTodos TH ’AtrtiKH Kata tO Padnpixov tpoc-hepopevos tovs mméprE artréxpuwev aiytanrous, avros te Bacirev’s peta tov Telod atpatov cataBas émit tHv Odrattav GOpovs BhOn, TaY
dé Suvdpewv opod yevopévor, éfeppinaay OL TOD.

@cutotoxr€ovs AOyo: Tov ‘EAANVoY Kal ware
e évramtawwov ot IleXomrovynctos mpos tov loOuov, 34

to abandon and betray them, Themistocles addressed his speech with emphasis to him, saying: “ It is true, thou wretch, that we have left behind us our houses and our city walls, not deeming it meet for the sake of such lifeless things to be in subjection; but we still have a city, the greatest in Hellas, our two hundred triremes, which now are ready to aid you if you choose to be saved by them; but if you go off and betray us for the second time, straightway many a Hellene will learn that the Athenians have won for themselves a city that is free and a territory that is far better than the one they cast aside.” When Themistocles said this, Eurybiades began to reflect, and was seized with fear lest the Athenians go away and abandon him. And again, when the Eretrian tried to argue somewhat against him, “ Aha!”’ said he, “what argument can ye make about war, who, like the cuttle-fish, have a long pouch in the place where your heart ought tobe?”

XII. Some tell the story that while Themistocles was thus speaking from off the deck of his ship, an — owl was seen to fly through the fleet from the right and alight in his rigging; wherefore his hearers espoused his opinion most eagerly and prepared to do battle with their ships. But soon the enemy’s armament beset. the coast of Attica down to the haven of Phalerum, so as to hide from view the neighbouring shores ; then the King in person with his infantry came down to the sea, so that he could be seen with all his hosts; and presently, in view of this junction of hostile forces, the words of Themistocles ebbed out of the minds of the Hellenes, and the Peloponnesians again turned their eyes wistfully towards the Isthmus and were vexed if any one spake

35
p 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

el Tus AXXO TL ASyOL YaNeTralvovTes, eSoKxer Sé THS VUKTOS ATrOXwWpELY Kal TrapnyyéAXETO TODS TOS
xuBepyyntats, &vOa bn Bapéws dépwv o Bepw-OTOKANS, €6 THY ATO TOU TOTTOU Kal TOV aTEVaV
4 4 eem t
mpoenevoe BonOerav ot "EXXAnves StadrvOnoovtat Kata trodes, EBovreveTo Kal avuvetiOes tHv Tepl Tov Yixivvov mpaypatetav.
3? de A \ , 4 e / > U

Hv 6€ ro pev yéver Tépons 0 Sixevvos, atypa-AwTOS, EvVOUS bE TO BeworoKrAE: Kai TOV Téxv@DV
avToo tTaidaywyos. Sv éximéutres mpos Tov ElépEnv xpuda, xerevoas Névyerv, STs OeptoToKANS
o tav "AOnvatwy otparnyds aipovpevos Ta Baathéws eEayyédAes TpwTos avT@ Tovs "EAAnvas atrob.ubpacKovtas, Kali SiaxedeveTar un Tapetvar guyciv avtots, AAN é€v @ TapattrovTar TaY Telav \ " > VA \ aA \ :
xwpis ovTes émiBécbar Kai StapOeipas THY vavTe-\ } , fe) S) e od , e b) > b) S knv dvvamw. tadta dS o BépEns ws at evvotas Nereypéeva SeEdpevos oOn, Kal rédros eEvOus éFépepe mpos Tovs nyeuovas TOY vew@v, Tas peV
v a bd e , 4 b] GdAAas mAnpoov Kxal' novyiav, Staxocias 4§
b 4 4 A \ , 9
avaxléevras dn meptBarécbat Tov Tropoy ev KiKr@ travta Kal Siala@ocat Tas vicous, Sirs éxpuryot unoels TOV TroNELiov.
Tovtwyv dé mpatropévor 'Aptotetdns o Avot-pedxov mpw@tos atcbopevos HKev ert THY oKnYnDv Tov @euiotoxdéous, ovK dv Piros, ddAArAa Kal be éxeivoy éeEwotpakia pévos, WoTrEep ElpnTat TpoEA-Oovre b€ TH Oewmtoronrc? dodler rv Kverworv.

o O€ THv Te AAANV KaXrOKayabiavy Tod avdpos 36
THEMISTOCLES

of any other course; nay, they actually decided to withdraw from their position in the night, and orders for the voyage were issued to the pilots. Such was the crisis when Themistocles, distressed to think that the Hellenes should abandon the advantages to be had from the narrowness of the straits where they lay united, and break up into detachments by cities, planned and concocted the famous affair of Sicinnus.

This Sicinnus was of Persian stock, a prisoner of war, but devoted to Themistocles, and the paeda- gogue of his children. This man was sent to Xerxes secretly with orders to say : " Themistocles the Athe- nian general elects the King's cause, and is the first one to announce to him that the Hellenes are trying to slip away, and urgently bids him not to suffer them to escape, but, while they are in confusion and separated from their infantry, to set upon them and destroy their naval power." Xerxes received this as the message of one who wished him well, and was delighted, and at once issued positive orders to the captains of his ships to man the main body of the fleet at their leisure, but with two hundred ships to put out to sea at once, and-encompass the strait round about on every side, including the islands in their line of blockade, that not one of the enemy might escape.

While this was going on, Aristides the son of Lysimachus, who was the first to perceive it, came to the tent of Themistocles, who was no friend of his, nay, through whom he had even been ostracized, as I have said ; and when Themistocles came forth from the tent, Aristides told him how the enemy sur- rounded them. Themistocles, knowing the tried nobility of the man, and filled with admiration for

37

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

20 \ a 4 4 9 4 4
eldws Kal THS TOTE Tapovaias aydpevos Réyer
Ta ep Tov Yixwvov avtT@ Kal mrapexdrer TOV
"EdXAnvev cuverrtrapBavecOar Kal cuprpobupeiaOat wiotiv EXovTa padrrov, Stas év TOIS TTEVOIS
7 vaupaynowo. o ev ovv Aprotetdns érraivécas

\ \ v > U
Tov @eptotoxrAéa tovs AdrdrOUS emNEL oTpa-THyous Kal Tpinpdpxous émt THY paxnv Tapo-
4 " > of > 4 9 , 4
Evvwv. ért & dpws anicrovvtay édavn Tyvia Tpinpns avToporos, ns évavapye Ilavaitios, amayyé\Xovca THY KUKNwWOW, Bote Kal Jup@
tous "EXAnvas opujoat peta THS avayKns pos

Tov Kivduvov.
XIII. “Apa & nyépa BépEns pév dvw xabijoto
Tov oToXoy éerromTevor Kal THY TapaTakty, ws ‘N f , e \ VN ¢ 4 e
pev Pavodnuos dyow, iiép to “Hpdxreov, 7 Bpayet mopm Sueipyerar tis “AtreKhs vicos, os 8 ‘Axecrodapos, év peBopio tis Meyapisos
uTép TOV Kadoupévwv Kepatwv, xpvacovv Sidpov Oéuevos Kal ypapupateis oddov’s Tapactn-TUpEVOS, BY Epyov hy atroypapecOas TA KaTA THY payny TpatTopeva.
2 Q@eptoroxrc? 5é rapa tHv vavapyida Tpinpn
ofaytalouevp tpels tpoonyOncav aixpdrwror, KdAdaToL pev LoécOat THY driv, ecOHor 5é Kal
Npvc@ Kexoopnpévor Sratrpera@s. édéyovTo 5é U4 “ % a / bd io
avéatnns traides eivac THs Bacitréws aderdijs \ A 4 ON > / e
kat Aptavxtov. tovtous toov Evdpaytidns o
pavts, os aya pev avéNaprpev ex TOV lepav
péeya Kal tepipaves wip, aya dé mrappos ex 119 38
THEMISTOCLES

his coming at that time, told him all about the Sicinnus matter, and besought him to join in this desperate attempt to keep the Hellenes where they | were,—admitting that he had the greater credit with them,—in order that they might make their sea-fight in the narrows. Aristides, accordingly, after bestowing praise upon Themistocles for his stratagem, went round to the other generals and trierarchs inciting them on to battle. And while they were still incredulous in spite of all, a Tenian trireme appeared, a deserter from the enemy, in command of Panaetius, and told how the enemy | surrounded them, so that with a courage born of | necessity the Hellenes set out to confront the danger. —

XIII. At break of day, Xerxes was seated on a high place and overlooking the disposition of his armament. This place was, according to Phanodemus, above the Heracleium, where only a narrow passage separates the island from Attica ; but according to Acestodorus, it was in the border-land of Megara, above the so-called “Horns.” Here a gilded throne had been set for him at his command, and many secretaries stationed near at hand, whose. task it was to make due record of all that was done in the battle. ° |
But Themistocles was sacrificing alongside the admiral’s trireme. There three prisoners of war were brought to him, of visage most beautiful to behold, conspicuously adorned with raiment and with gold.

They were said to be the sons of Sandaucé, the King’s sister, and Artayctus. When Euphran- tides the seer caught sight of them, since at one and that same moment a great and glaring flame shot up from the sacrificial victims and a sneeze gave forth

39

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

—beEtav eonunve, Tov @emsotrokrAéa deEiwodpevos éxéXevoe TOV veavioxwy Katap~acOar Kal xabe-pedoat trdvtas wpnothn Avoviom mpocevédpevov:
ovTw yap Gua owtnpiav te Kal vicny EcecOa tois "EAXAnow. éxtrayévTos 5é Tod Bemoro-KNéOUS OS Méeya TO pavTevpa Kai Sewvov, olov
elmbev dv peydrous ayaou Kal Tpayyact yanre-
A “ 9 A 4 a “a >) Ul
TOL, PANNOY EX TWY TrapadoywY 7H TaV EvOYoV
Thy cwrnpiav érmilovres of ToAAOL Tov Oedy ama
KOLWH KaTEKAaXOUYTO PwVy Kal TOUS aiypwadWToUS
To Bwu@ Tpocayayortes HUdyKacay, WS O LaVTIS
4 a a éxéXNevoe, THY Ouciav cuvTeXeoOnva. TadTa pev ovv avnp gdirtocopos Kal ypappdtav ovK atretpos iatopixav Pavias o Aéa Bios ecipnxe.
XIV. lept 5 rod wAnOovs trav BapBapixav

A 9 SS e ‘ e A 20 \ \
veav Atayvros 0 TronTIs @s av eidws kal dcaBe-Bavovpevos év tpaywdia Ilépcars Neyer Tata
FiépEn 5é, nal yap olda, yuduas pév Fv

? 2 1 nO e S e , 4

@y rye WANHCGoS* al O UTépKouTaL TAXEL

€ \ \ = e A b eo Ww 4

éxatov Ols Haav érrTa 0 oS exer NOYos.

TeV S “ArriKey éxaTov oySorKovTa TO TrIOos ovowy éxuaTn TOVS ato TOD KATATTPOLATOS paxopéevous oxToKxaidera elyev, Ov TofoTaL Téc-capes Roar, ot Nortrot 8° omhirat.
Aoxet e ovK yr rov ev TOV Kalpov o ®ep-TTOKNAS Tov ToTov auvidwy Kar puratas

1) ~=«‘TpoTepov dV TUTTO poUS KaTacTHoat Tas BapBapixais tas tpinpes, 4) THY EelwOviay
1 Sy» Frye Fuhr and Blass with Aeschylus: vey 7d.

its good omen on the right, he clasped Themistocles by the hand and bade him consecrate the youths, and sacrifice them all to Dionysus Carnivorous, with prayers of supplication ; for on this wise would the Hellenes have a saving victory. Themistocles was terrified, feeling that the word of the seer was monstrous and shocking; but the multitude, who, as is wont to be the case in great struggles and severe crises, looked for safety rather from unreasonable than from reasonable measures, invoked the god with one voice, dragged the prisoners to the altar, and compelled the fulfilment of the sacrifice, as the seer commanded. At any rate, this is what Phanias the Lesbian says, and he was a philosopher, and well acquainted with historical literature.

XIV. As regards the number of the Barbarian ships, Aeschylus the poet, in his tragedy of “ The Persians,’ as though from personal and_ positive knowledge, says this :—

“ But Xerxes, and I surely know, had a thousand ships :
In number under him ; those of surpassing speed
Were twice ve score beside and seven ; so stands the count.”

The Attic ships were one hundred and eighty in number, and each had eighteen men to fight upon the decks, of whom four were archers and the rest men-at-arnis.

Themistocles is thought to have divined the best time for fighting with no less success than the best place, inasmuch as he took care not to send his tri- remes bow on against the Barbarian vessels until the

1 Verses 341-343 (Dindorf).

@pav trapayevéoOar, TO mTvedpa Raptrpoy €x merayous del Kal kopa bia TOV oTEVOY KaTayouoay: 0 Tas pév ‘EXAniKas ovK EBXaTTE Vads aNtTevels OVaas Kal TaTreLvoTépas, Tas 5€ BapBapixas Tais Te Tpvpuvals aveoTwaas Kal ToOiS KaTAoTpopaciw wopohous xal Bapeias éemipepopéevas Exparrg€ mpoomintov Kal tapedidov mrayias tois “EdAnow o€éws mpoodpepopévars Kal T@

Oemsoronhet ™pooéXovaw, ws opavTs. pdduora
TO 7 ULpépon, Kat OTL Kat éxeivov O FépEov
vavapxos ‘Aprapérns vaoy éyov peyddny Gomep amo Tevxyous érokeve kal neovriter, avnp arabes
OV Kal Tov Bacirtéws ade oy TrOnD KPaTia TOs
Te Kal Sixaroratos. ToUTOV yey ovv “Apewvias 0
Aexehevs Kat LZwKArHs o o HWasavtevs! opod THEOVTES, Os at vies avtim pepot mpoonecova as Kab ouvepelracar Tois Narkopacty ever xeOnaar, emu-Baivovta THS avTa@V Tplnpous UToaTtavTes Kal tois ddépact TUMTOVTES els TH Odraocav é&é-Banrov- kal TO o@pa per addov diacepspevov vavaryiov "Aptepicia yvwpicaca mpos HépEnv avijveyKer.
XV. Ep b¢ TOUT@ TOU ary @VOS dvTos das pev exrdprpar péya Aéyouеww "Endevowoben, Xov dé
kal dovny ro Opidovor | Katee medtov ax pe
Garatrns, « WS dvOparey o omov TONA@V TOV puUCTI-ov éEayovtTev “laxxov. éx be Tob wAnOous TOV POeyyopeveov KaTa pxpov amo vis avadepopevov vEpos eofev avOrs Umovoa rely Kal KaTa-OKHTTEW Els TAS TpLpErs. ETEpor b€ dadcpaTta
1 Ta:avieds correction of Blass; Medieds,

42.

THEMISTOCLES

hour of the day had come which always brought the breeze fresh from the sea and a_ swell rolling through the strait. This breeze wrought no harm to the Hellenic ships, since they lay low in the water and were rather small; but for the Barbarian ships, with their towering sterns and lofty decks and sluggish movements in getting under way, it was fatal, since it smote them and slewed them round broadside to the Hellenes, who set upon them sharply, keeping their eyes on Themistocles, because they thought he saw best what was to be done, and because confronting him was the admiral of Xerxes, Ariamenes, with a great ship, and just as if he were on a city-wall he kept shooting arrows and javelins, —brave man that he was, by far the strongest and justest of the King’s brothers. It was upon him that Ameinias the Deceleian and Socles the Paeanian

bore down,—they being together on one ship,—and as the two ships struck each other bow on, crashed together, and hung fast by their bronze beaks, he tried to board their trireme ; but they faced him, smote him with their spears, and hurled him into the sea. His body, as it drifted about with other wreckage, was recognised by Artemisia, who had it carried to Xerxes.

XV. At this stage of the struggle they say that a great light flamed out from Eleusis, and an echoing cry filled the Thriasian plain down to the sea, as of multitudes of men together conducting the mystic Iacchus in procession. Then out of the shouting throng a cloud seemed to lift itself slowly from the earth, pass out seawards, and settle down upon the triremes. Others fancied they saw apparitions and cal cidwra Kxabopav edoEav évorrAwv dvdpav at’ Alyivns Tas yelpas aveyovtav po Tov ‘EXNnveKaV tpinpav: ods elxafov Aiaxidas elvas twapaKexdnpévous evyais mrpo THs waxns él thy BonOerav.

IIpatos pev ovv AapBaver vadv Aveopnons, dvnp “A@nvaios tpinpapxav, Ws Ta Tapdonpa mepixowas avéOnxev "ArrorAXNwvL Sadvnpopm Prv-
jow. ot & dAdo tois BapBdpos eEioovpevor
TO THOS EY OTEV@ KATA MEPS ™ poo pepopevous Kal TmepimimrovTas GdAgrows érpévrayTo, HEXpL deins avriaxovtas, @s elpnKe Zupaovidys, THY Kadnv éxeivnv Kat meptBontov apdpevoe vixny, hs 000 “EXdnow otte BapBdpos évddvov Epyov
elpyactat Aaptrportepor, avopela pev Kal mpoOvpia KOWh TOV vavpaynodyTwv, yvoun Sé Kal Sewvo-Tht. TH! Oepsorrodeovs.

XVI. Mera de THY vaupayiay FépEns pev Ere Ovpopaxav ™mpos THY dmorevgw errexeipet bt
youdtov émdye to melov Tois "EdAgow ets Larapiva, euppatas TOV 61a péoov qopov" Bemis - TOKAAS 5 GTrOTrELPHMEVOS ‘Apioreidou hoy
yepny érrovetto Ave TO Cedypa Talis vavolv emimrdevoavTas es ‘EAAjoTovtop, «"Orrws,” épn, “ THY "Aciayv év tH Evporn AdBopev.” Pa Sct hie dé ToD *Apioteidou Kal AéyovTos “ Nov pep Tpupavre TO BapBape TET ONE ae, dy 6é KATAKAELS 0 LEV els THY “EAAada Kal KaTacTnowper eis avdyKnv vd Séous avopa

/ / / > / / ;
THALKOUTM@Y SuVaLEwV KUPLOV, OUKETL Kadnpevos
1 Sevdryrs 7H Fuhr and Blass with S: dendryt:.

44

120

THEMISTOCLES

shapes of armed men coming from Aegina with their hands stretched out to protect the Hellenic triremes.
These, they conjectured, were the Aeacidae, who had been prayerfully invoked before the battle to come to their aid.!
Now the first man to capture an enemy's ship was L s, an Athenian captain, who cut off its gure-head and dedicated it to Apollo the Laurel- bearer at Phlya. Then the rest, put on an equality in numbers with their foes, because the Barbarians had to attack them by detachments in the narrow strait and so ran foul of one another, routed them, though they resisted till the evening drew on, and thus " bore away," as Simonides says,? " that fair and notorious victory, than which no more brilliant ex- ploit was ever performed upon the sea, either by Hellenes or Barbarians, through the manly valour and common ardour of all who fought their ships, ~ but through the clever judgment of Themistocles."'

XVI. After the sea-fight, Xerxes, still furious at his failure, undertook to carry moles out into the sea on which he could lead his infantry across to Salamis against the Hellenes, damming up the intervening strait. But Themistocles, merely by way of sound- ing Aristides, proposed, as though he were in earnest, to sail with the fleet to the Hellespont and break the span of boats there, "in order,' said he, "that we may capture Asia in Europe." Aristides, however, was displeased with the scheme and said : " Now indeed the Barbarian with whom we have fought consults his ease and pleasure, but should we shut up in Hellas and bring under fearful compul- sion a man who is lord of such vast forces, he will

1 Herod. viii.64. 2 Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, iii.' p. 423.
45
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

bTo oKxitdts ypvon Oedoetac thy paynyv éd'
novxias, GAAA TavTa TOAM@Y Kal Tadcw avTOS
mapav dia Tov Kivdvvov érravopOa@ceTat Ta Trapel-péva cat Bovrevoetas BérXtLov vrép TeV Grav:
ov THY ovaay ovv, épn, "det yédupav, @ Bep-OTOKNELS, NUAS Avatpeiv, GAN érépay, elqep. olov
Te, WpockatacKevacavtas éxBarelv dia TaXOUS Tov avOpwrov é€x tHS Evpamns." " Ovxodr," eltrev 0 Geprorowrgs, "ei Soxel TadTa ouppepern, apa GKOTTELY Kal pnxavac bat mdyTas Teas,

Sirws amadXNaynoeTat THY TaxioTny éK Ts “EXAd6os.”
"Errel bé tata, eoke, Té MTEL TLYA TOV Bacthe-
KO@V evvouxon éy Tools atypadrorors avevpan, ‘Apvaxnv dvopa, ppatew Bacthet Kehevoas, OTe Tots per ° "EAAgoe dédoxTau T@ VAUTLK@ KEK paTn-KOTaS avarrhetv els tov ‘EAAjhorovtov: él 75
Cedypa cal AVELY THY yepupay, Oemio trond hs 6 | KNOOMEVOS Bactréos mrapawvei o7revoety éqrt Thy éautod Odratrav Kai mepacoda an, pex pts avros éprrovel Twas SiatprBas TOUS TUMpayoLs Kal peddyjoets Tpos THD diwEw. tai’ o BapBapos dxovoas Kal rYEVOMEVOS mepipoBos ba Taxus émovetTo THY avaxapnaw. Kat meipav 1 @epa TOKNEOUS cat "Apioreidov ppovnc es éy Mapdovi TapegVeEV, Eltye TOANOTTHLOPLM THS Fépfov Suvd-pews dtaywvic dpevor Thararaow eélg TOV rept TOV OXwWY KivduvOY KartéaTno ay.
XVIT. TloAvewy prev odv tHv Aiyivntav apcared-cat dnow “Hpodotos, @ewotonre: 86, Kaitrep 46

no longer sit under a golden parasol to view the spectacle of the battle at his ease, but he will, dare all things, and, superintending everything i in person, because of his. peril, will rectify his previous remissness and take better counsel for the highest issues thus at stake. We must not, then,” said he, “ tear down the bridge that is already there, Themistocles, nay rather, we must build another alongside it, if that be possible, and cast the fellow out of Europe in a hurry.” “ Well, then,” said Themistocles, “ if that is what is thought for the best, it is high time for us all to be studying and inventing a way. to get him out of Hellas by the speediest route.”

As soon as this policy had been adopted, he sent a certain royal eunuch whom he discovered among the prisoners of war, by name Arnaces, with orders to tell the King that the Hellenes had decided, since their fleet now controlled the sea, to sail up into the Hellespont, where the strait was spanned, and destroy the bridge; but that Themistocles, out of regard for the King, urged him to hasten into home waters and fetch his forces across; he himself, he said, would cause the allies all sorts of delays and postponements in their pursuit. No sooner did the Barbarian hear this than he was seized with ex- ceeding fear and speedily began his retreat. This thoughtful prudence on the part of Themistocles and Aristides was afterwards justified by the campaign with Mardonius, since, although they fought at Plataea with the merest fraction of the armies of Xerxes, they yet staked their all upon the issue.

XVII. Among the cities, now, Herodotus! says that Aegina bore away the prize of valour; but 1 viii. 93.

axovtes vid Oovov, TO Tpwtetov atrédocav
aavres. érel yap dvaxwpyoavres els Tov
"IcOpuov ao tov Bwpov THY Wapov epepov ot oTpaThyot, mparov fev Exactos éavrToy aré-gaivev apeth, Sevtepov bé pel Eavtdy Bemorto-Kréa. Aaxedatpovioe 8 eis THY Yrdptnv avrov
Katayayovres EvpuBiady pév avdpeias, éxeive 5é codias apiotetoy ESocav Oadrdod arédhavor, Kal TOV KaTa THY TOMY apudtTwY TO TpwreEevoy
édwpncavto Kal TptaKkocious THY véwy TrouTrOUs
aypt tav GSpwv avvekérrepyrav. déyerar' 8 ‘Odruprriov trav épeEjs ayouévwv Kal taper-Povtos eis TO otddsov Tov BMeutatroxrAé€ous, apenrncavTas TOV aywvicT@V Tovs TrapovTas SANV THY nuepay éxetvov OeaaOar nal trois Eévous émideckvvew aya Oavpalovras Kat xpotovrvtas, WoTE
Kal avuTov noOevta pos Tovs hirous oporoyhoat Tov KapTrov atéyew Tov vTép ths “EAXabos auT@ Tovnbévrav.
XVIII. Kal yap hv tH hice dirotiporaros, ef Set TexpaipecOar Sia TeV aTropynpovevopevov.
aipebels yap vavapyxos uTO THS TONEWS ovdey ovTe TaY idiwy ovTE THY KOLVOY KATA pMépos é éexpn-parecer, aX’ emaveBadnero 1 160 mpoorimroy els THD nyépav é exelyny, eal’ iy EXT ECV Epuednen, iy” ood troddAa T™ paTTov mpaypara Kal TavTO-Sarrois avOpwrras omtra@v péyas elvat Soxh Kab meta Tov duvacOas.
1 GAN’ éwaveBdAdAero Fuhr and Blass with FaS: a&aad way aveBdAAero every duty.

among individuals, all virtually awarded the first place to Themistocles, though their envy made them unwilling to do this directly. For when the generals withdrew to the Isthmus and solemnly voted on this question, taking their ballots from the very altar of the god there, each one declared for himself as first in valour, but for Themistocles as second after him- self. Then the Lacedaemonians brought him down to Sparta, and while they gave Eurybiades the prize for valour, to him they gave one for wisdom,—a crown of olive in each case,—and they presented him with the best chariot there was in the city, and sent three hundred picked youth along with him to serve as his escort to the boundary. And it is said that when the next Olympic festival was celebrated, and Themistocles entered the stadium, the audience neglected the contestants all day long to gaze on him, and pointed him out with admiring applause to visiting strangers, so that he too was delighted, and confessed to his friends that he was now reaping in full measure the harvest of his toils in behalf of Hellas.

XVIII. And indeed he was by nature very fond of honour, if we may judge from his memorable sayings and doings. When, for example, the city had chosen him to be admiral, he would not perform any public or private business at its proper time, but would postpone the immediate duty to the day on which he was to set sail, in order that then, because he did many things all at once and had meetings with all sorts of men, he might be thought to be some great personage and very powerful.

A A A '\ > , > A

2 Toav &€ vexpav tos éxmecovtTas émicKxoTav mapa thv OdraTTav, ws clde TrEpiKELpevous Wwédta ypvod Kal otpeTTovs, avTos pep mapnrve, to 8 Erropévm hiro Sei~as elev? 121
fe) A a
"°Avedov cavT@ av yap ovK el BemoroKArRs.
\ 4 a A / > /
mpos S€ TLva TOV KaXOY yeyovoTer, AvTiparny, UTepnpdves av'T@ Kexpnuévoy TpoTepov, VaTEpov 5é Oepatrevovta Sa thy SoFav, "OD perpaxiov," elrrev, "oye pév, audotepor & aya voov éox-99 \ > , b A > A
3 xkapev." Edevye O€ Tovs "AOnvaious ov Tina avTov ovdé Oavpalev, arr' Borep TraTAdvm yetpato-
\
pévous pev Urotpéxew xivduvevovtas, evdias 6é
Tept AUTOVS yevomevns TiANELY Kal KOAOVELY. TOV
\ / \ 9 AN > ¢ e b 5 > ¢_.N
5é Yepipiov mpos avrov elirovtos, ws ov di abrov géxynne Sofav, adda Sia tHv Tod, "'AdnOFR revels," elrrev, "GAN ovT av éyw Lepighios ov
3 , 54 wv \ % a "
éyevouny évdokos, ovte ov 'AOnvaios.
e 4 / A a e 4 ,
4 'Erépouv dé tevos Tav otparnyav, ws &oké 1

Ypnoimoy SvatreTpaxOar TH TOAEL, Opacuvopéevon ©
mpos Tov @ewtotonréa xat tas éavtod tails
b 4 / ’ / ” a éxelvou mpateoiww avtirapaBaAdXovtos, pn 7H
e a \ e M4 > / 4 e b , éopTH THY voTepaiav épicar Aéyovaay, ws exEeivn Hey aoyotav Te peor? Kal KoTraodys éotiv, ev attn 5é tavres arod\avovet TOY TapecKeva-opéevay sxXordlovtes: THY O éopTHy pos TadT’ etrrety: “"’AdnOH DNéyerss GAN Ewod pr) yevouevns erry, % 6 2 A , % cet
ov ovux av jada: Kapov Towvuy, edn, “ TOTE \ , lo’ @ A e ~ 99 \ eN
5 py) yevopévov, tov ay hre viv byeis;” Tov dé viov
50

| 'THEMISTOCLES

Surveying once the dead bodies of the Barbarians which had been cast up along the sea, he saw that they were decked with golden bracelets and collars, and yet passed on by them himself, while to a friend who followed he pointed them out and said: “ Help thyself, thou art not Themistocles.” Again, to one who had once been a beauty, Antiphates, and who had at that time treated him disdainfully, but after- wards courted him because of the reputation he had got, “ Young man,” said he, “’tis late, ’tis true, but both of us have come to our senses.” Also he used to say of the Athenians that they did not really honour and admire him for himself, but treated him for all the world like a plane-tree, running under his branches for shelter when it stormed, but when they had fair weather all about them, plucking and docking him. And when he was told by the Seriphian that it was not due to himself that he had got reputation, but to his city, “ True,’ said he, ‘but neither should I, had I been a Seriphian, have achieved reputation, nor wouldst thou, hadst thou been an Athenian.”

Again, when one of his fellow-generals who thought he had done some vast service to the city, grew bold with Themistocles, and began to compare his own services with his, “ With the Festival-day,’ said he, ‘the Day After once began a contention, saying : ‘Thou art full of occupations and wearisome, but when I come, all enjoy at their leisure what has been richly provided beforehand’; to which the Festival-day replied: ‘True, but had I not come - first, thou hadst not come at all.’ So now,” said he, _ ‘‘ had I not come at that day of Salamis, where would thou and thy colleagues be now?” Of his son, who

51
E 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

évtpupavta TH wntpi Kal bv éxeiynv avtoe oKxomrov édeye wreloTov Tav ‘EAAnvev Svvacbau'

”~ ‘ \ e > A 9 la Tots pev yap “EXXnow émitdtrew *AOnvaious,
) A ra , s > 7 2 a de \ > / /
nvaiots & avtov, avr@ 5é thy éxeivou pnrépa, TH wntpt & éexeivov? idios dé tis ev waor Bovro-pevos elvas Ywpioy pév TimpdoKey éxédeve KnpUT-Tew, Ste Kal yeiTova ypnotov exer Tav sé pvopévwv avtov tHy Ouyarépa Tov emuetKh tov wAovaiov tpoxpivas épyn bnteiv avdpa yenudtwv
’ a a i ’ / ? \ ° Seouevov padrov h ypnuata avdpos. év pév ovv
tois atropOéypact ToLovTos TLS Hy.
XIX. Tevopevos 8 aro tev mpdkewr éxeivov evOus emexetpes THY TOALY avoiKodopety Kal TEéL-vite, was pev iotopes @edrropros, ypnpacs meioas pn évavtiwOjnvar Tovs épdpous, ws 8 ot WAELTTOL, TapaKkpovoapevos. Ke pev yap es
4

LrdptTny Svoua mpecBetas ériypayrdpevos: éyxa-NovvTwy dé THY Yraptiatav, Ste TexxXilovor TO dotu, xat Ilodvdpyou Kxatnyopodvros émitndes 3 > # bd 4 5) a \ ,
é& Alyivns aroctadévtos, Hpvetto Kal méutrey
> 2 > 9 , \ , Pv) \
éxéXevev els "AOnvas Tovs KaTovpopévous, Gua pev éuBdrXdov TO TEXLTL@ xXpovoy éx THs S:atpLBis, apa 5é BovAopevos avr’ avtTod Tovs TreuTrOmevous
a?

brrapxew tots “A@nvaiow. 6 cal cvvéBy: yvovrTes

\ e , \ > \ bp] 2Q7
yap ot Aaxedaipovioe TO dAnOés ovK HdiKNTAY QUTOV, GAN adnrws Yarerraivortes atrémeuwav.
ty de , \ Ca) , A

K tovtov Tov Ilepara xateoxevale, rHv

a > 4 \ 4

TaYV Apévwony evdvlav Katavoncas Kal THY TrOALY

lorded it over his mother, and through her over himself, he said, jestingly, that the boy was the most powerful of all the Hellenes ; for the Hellenes were commanded by the Athenians, the Athenians by ¥ himself, himself by the boy's mother, and the mother by her boy. Again, with the desire to be somewhat peculiar in all that he did, when he offered a certain estate for sale, he bade proclamation to be made that it had an excellent neighbour into the bargain. Of two suitors for his daughter's hand, he chose the likely man in preference to the rich man, shying that he wanted a man without money rather than money without a man. Such were his striking sayings.

XIX. After the great' achievements now described, he straightway undertook to rebuild and fortify the + city, — as Theopompus relates, by bribing the Spartan Ephors not to oppose the project; but as the majority say, by hoodwinking them. He came with this object to Sparta, ostensibly on an embassy, and when the Spartans brought up the charge that the Athenians were fortifying their city, and Polyarchus was sent expressly from Aegina with the same accusation, he denied that it was so, and bade them send men to Athens to see for themselves, not only because this delay would secure time for the building of the wall, but also because he wished the Athenians to hold these envoys as hostages for his own person. And this was what actually happened. When the Lacedaemonians found out the truth they did him no harm, but concealed their displeasure and sent him away.

After this he equipped the Piraeus, because he had noticed the favourable shape of its harbours, and

SAnv apuotrouevos mpos THY OddNaTTay, Kal TpoTrov Tia Tos Tadaois Bacrcdot Tov 'AOnvaiwy aVTiTroALTEVopEvOS. éKElvOL ev yap, WS NeyeTal, Tpayywatevopevol TOUS ToALTaS aTro-

omacat THs Oardtrns nat cuveicas Shy py WréovTAas, GANA THY Yopav Hurevovras, Tov Trepl
tis "AOnvas déS0cav Aoxyov, as éepicavta rept THS yepas Tov Tlocada SelEaca tHY popiav Tots Sixactais évixnoe. @epiotronrAns 5 ovy, ws
"Aptotopavns 0 KwpiKds Aéyer, TH TodeL TOV
Ilevpaca mpoceuager, aA Thy mow é&n ve TOU Ilerpacas kal TH yay TAS Oararrns: d0ev kat Tov Shor nvénce KATA TOV aplorey Kat Opacous évérAnoev, eis valTas Kal KéAevoTasS
kat kuBepyntas THs Suvdpews adixopévys. 510 kal to Bhya to év IIvunl retrounuévov aot
atroBrétrew mpos tv Odr\accav borepoy ot TpLadKovTa mpos THY Ywpav atréoTperay, olopmevot
Thy pev Kata OdraTTay apynyv yéveow elvat
Snuoxpatias, drvyapyia 8 Frrov sSvoxepaivery TOUS yewprobvTas.
XX. Bags cease b€ Kal petlov tt mept THS
VAUTLKTS evonOn Suvduews. érrel yap 0 TOV
‘EAArvev OTOAOS eee FiépEou KaTihpev
Ets Tayacas ral dueyeipale, Snunyopav év rots
"AOnvators épn Tiva mpatw Eyer Opedtpov pev avTois Ka TwTIpLOV, amoppytov 5é ampos Tous TONAOUS. trav 0 "AOnvatwy 'Apioteidyn ppdcat Hov@ KedevovTwy, Kay éexelvos S0xiudon Tepat-54

12:

THEMISTOCLES

wished to attach the whole city to the sea; thus in a certain manner counteracting the policies of the ancient Athenian kings. For they, as it is said, in their efforts to draw the citizens away from the sea and accustom them to live not by navigation*but by agriculture, disseminated the story about Athena, how when Poseidon was contending with her for possession of the country, she displayed the sacred olive-tree of the Acropolis to the judges, and so won the day. But Themistocles did not, as Aristophanes ! the comic poet says, “knead the Piraeus on to the city,’ nay, he fastened the city to the Piraeus, and the land to the sea. And so it was that he increased the privileges of the common people as | against the nobles, and filled them with boldness, since the controlling power came now into the hands of skippers and boatswains and pilots. Therefore it was, too, that the bema in Pnyx, which had stood so as to look off toward the sea, was afterwards turned by the thirty tyrants so as to look inland, because they thought that maritime empire was the mother of democracy, and that oligarchy was less distasteful to tillers of the soil.

XX. But Themistocles cherished yet greater de- signs even for securing the naval supremacy. When the fleet of the Hellenes, after the departure of Xerxes, had put in at Pagasae and was wintering there, he made a harangue before the Athenians, in ' which he said that he had a certain scheme in mind which would be useful and salutary for them, but which could not be broached in public. So the Athenians bade him impart it to Aristides alone, and if he should approve of it, to put it into execution.

1 Knights, 815.

yew, 6 pev QeusotoxrAns éppace tO 'Apioretdn,
To vewptov éumpjoat Siavociobat tay "EAN Hvov:
0 8 'ApicteiSns eis tov Sipuov trapedOav Ep Tijs apatens, iv Stavocirar mpatrew 6 MewsctonAgs, pndepiay elvar unte AvoLTEACTTEéEpaY AT' adiKo-Tépav. of wey ody "AOnvaio: da tabta Tavoa-Oat TO QepioroKnrA€? mpocératav.
"Ev &€ tots '"Apdixtvovixois avvedpiow TaY AaxeSatpoviwy cianyoupévar, Straws aeipywvrTat
ths "Apdixtvovias at pn cuppaynoacar Kata TOU M7jdou Tones, hoBnGets, un Oerrarovs nat
"A pyetous, ére 6e OnBaious éxBadovtes TOU
cuvedptou TAVTENOS emiKpAaTT WoL TOV pnpov Kal yernrac TO Soxoby éxeivors, CuvelTre Tals
'TWONECt Kad peTeOnne TAS Yepas TOV TudaYyopwP, bidakas, @S Tpidxovra al pia povas TONELS elo ly at petacxodcar Tod Tohéwou, Kal TOUT@Y
ai wXelovs tTavTatace pexpa Sevvov ovv, eb THs aAAns "EXAdSos exatrovdov yevopévns él Tais peyloras Sualy H tpiot TONET LY értat TO auvédptov. ék TOUTOU pev ovv padiora Tos
ote sa T™poaéxpouce 520 Kal TOV Kipeva Mpohyov tails tuais, avtimanrov év TH ToNTEla
T® Oewotokret cabioraytes.
XXI. "Hv b€ «al rots cuppdyors eax Ons TepiT ew Te TAS vagous Kar Xpnparilouevos am auTev' ola Kal mpos "Avdptous _apybptov aitobvrd pyc avrov Hpddoros elirety TE Kal axovoa. Sdvo0 yap Wwe Edn Jeovs Kopilov, Tle0e® xat Biav ot & édpacav eivat Kxat rap'

Themistocles accordingly told Aristides that he purposed to burn the fleet of the Hellenes where it lay ; but Aristides addressed the people, and said of the scheme which Themistocles purposed to carry out, that none could be either more advantageous or moresiniquitous. The Athenians therefore ordered Themistocles to give it up.

At the Amphictyonic or Holy Alliance conven- tions, the Lacedaemonians introduced motions that all cities be excluded from the Alliance which had not taken part in fighting against the Mede. So Themistocles, fearing lest, if they should succeed in excluding the Thessalians and the Argives and the Thebans too from the convention, they would control the votes completely and carry through their own wishes, spoke in behalf of the protesting cities, and changed the sentiments of the delegates by showing that only thirty-one cities had taken part in the war, and that the most of these were altogether small ; it would be intolerable, then, if the rest of Hellas should be excluded and the convention be at the mercy of the two or three largest cities. It was for this reason particularly that he became obnoxious to the Lacedaemonians, and they therefore tried to advance Cimon in public favour, making him the political rival of Themistocles.

XXI. He made himself hateful to the allies also, by sailing round to the islands and trying to exact ‘money from them. When, for instance, he demanded money of the Andrians, Herodotus! says he made a speech to them and got reply as follows: he said he came escorting two gods, Persuasion and Compulsion ; and they replied that they already had two great

1 viii, 111.

| a , amd

autos Beovs peydrous Svo, Teviay nal ’Arropiav, 2 ud av KworvecIar Sodvar ypnpuata éxeive Xpipara éxeivy.
VA >] ee l4 \ b] a Tipoxpéwv & o “Podsos perorrotes ev aopatt
Kka@dmretat wiKpotepov tod BepsortoKréouvs, ws
A \ > \ 4 4 /
addous pev el ypnwace puydbas StaTrpakapévov kateNOeiv, avtov dé Eévoyv dvta Kat dirov mpoe-4 > 3 4 lA > ce
peevou 80 apyvpiov. Réyer 8 ov Tas"
"ANN ef tuye Tlavoaviay } Kal reye BavOur-

Tov aiveis
h tuye Aeutuyiéay, éyw 8 ’Apsoteidav érratvéw 4 se aA > 99 A avop iepav amr’ “APavav
éNOeiv Eva AG@oTov: érrel OemotroKrAH HxOape Aare,
3 evotav, adixov, mpodotav, bs TipoxpéovTa Ecivov govt
? / A \ > ”
apyuptots oxuBarsxTotct Teta Gels ov KaTayeEv
els Tratpav "laXvoopr, AaBov Sé tpl’ apyupiov taddXavrT’ éBa Tréwv Eis dA€O pop,
A \ 4 tO, \ S Pd Py , Tovs pev KaTdyov adixws, Tors 8 éxduoKor, tous O€ Kaivwr,
9 / e , 9 a 9 ,
apyupiwy wromAews, ‘IcPuot & érravdoKeve yerXolws uxpa xpéa Trapéyov:
e > v \ °¢ A ot & jAoOov Kniyovto pn @pav Bewsotokrcds
f : yeveo Oa.
4 modv 8 doedyeotépa kal avarreTTTapévn padXov
eis TOV Beworoxréa Bracdnpia Kéypntay peta 53

THEMISTOCLES

gods, Penury and Powerlessness, who hindered them from giving him money.

Timoereon, the lyric poet of Rhodes, assailed Themistocles very bitterly in a song, to the effect that for bribes he had secured the restoration of other exiles, but had abandoned him, though a host and a friend, and all for money. The song runs thus ! :—

“Come, if thou praisest Pausanias, or if Xanthippus,
Or if Leotychidas, then I shall praise Aristides,
The one best man of all Who came from sacred Athens; since Leto loathes Themistocles,
“ The liar, cheat, and traitor, who, though Timocreon was his host,

By knavish moneys was induced not to bring him back
Into his native Ialysus,
But took three talents of silver and went cruising off,— to perdition, “ Restoring some exiles unjustly, chasing some away,
and slaying some,
Gorged with moneys; yet at the Isthmus he played ridiculous host with the stale meats
set before his guests ;
Who ate thereof and prayed Heaven ‘no happy return of the day for Themistocles !’”’
Much more wanton and extravagant was the raillery which Timocreon indulged in against Themistocles

1 No attempt is made in the translations of Timocreon to imitate the metre of the original.
59

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

THY duyny avTod Kal thy KaTadixny o Timoxpéwy dopa wounoas, ov éoTw apxy’ Modtca rovde tov péX€Os

Kréos av’ “EXXavas TiOet,

@s éotxos Kal dSixatov.
Aéyeras 8 6 Tipoxpéwy ert pndiope vyetv cuyKkatayngicapévov tod Bepwiotoxkréovs. ws otv 6 BemoronArAys aitiay éoxe pndiver, tadT’ érroinaev eis avTov’
Ovx dpa Tipoxpéwv potvos Mydotow opkia-

TOMEL,

GXN évti KadXoe 579 Tovnpot odK éyo pova xOXoupts*
évti Kal adda adAowTreEKES.)

XXII. "Hédn Sé cal trav TrodTaY Sia TO PO0-

vely Hdéws Tas SuaBoras Tpoctepevwy nvayKaleTo Avanpos elvas Tov avTobd mpdkewy troAdadKis év
TO Snu@ pvnpovevov: xal mpos tors dvayepaivoyvtas “Ti xomliate, etvev, “UTO TOV avToV

ToAAaKS ED TaaxoVTEs;” Hviace b€ TOvS TOA-Novs Kal To THS “Apréusdos lepov eiodpevos, iv
"AptaroBovAnyv pév mpoonydpevoev, ws aptota Th TWode Kal tots “EAAnot RovrAcvadpevos, TANotov dé Ths oixias KaTeo Kevarey éy Medity 76
iepov, ov viv Ta odpara TOY _Javaroupévey oi Srpcot mpoBddrovor Kat Ta tudtia Kal Tovs Spoxous Tav amayyoyévwv kal KabaipeDévtov éxpépovow. éxevto b€ Kai Tod Oeuiatoxréous 60

1

THEMISTOCLES

after the latter’s own exile and condemnation. Then he composed the song beginning :—

“O Muse, grant that this song
Be famed throughout all Hellas,
As it is meet and just.”

It is said that Timocreon was sent into exile on a charge of Medising, and that Themistocles concurred in the vote of condemnation. - Accordingly, when Themistocles also was accused of Medising, Timocreon composed these lines upon him :—

“Not Timocreon alone, then, made compacts with the Medes,
But there are other wretches too; not I alone am brushless,
There are other foxes too.”

XXII. And at last, when even his fellow-citizens were led by their jealousy of his greatness to welcome such slanders against him, he was forced to allude to his own achievements when he addressed the Assembly, till he became tiresome thereby, and he once said to the malcontents: “ Why are ye vexed that the same men should often benefit you?” He offended the multitude also by building the temple of Artemis, whom he surnamed Aristoboulé, or Best Counsellor, intimating thus that it was he who had given the best counsel to the city and to the Hellenes. This temple he established near his house in Melité, where now the public officers cast out the bodies of those who have been put to death, and carry forth the garments and the nooses of those who have dispatched themselves by hanging. A portrait-statue of Themistocles stood in this

. 61

ia

ra

etxoviov év TH va@ THS ‘AptatoBovAns ere Kab!
nas’ Kat gaivetai tis od THY Wuynv povor, aAAA Kal Thy Ow Npwikds yevopmevos.
Tov peév ovv éEootpaxtopov éronoavto Kat avTOD KoNOvVOVYTES TO dEiwmpa Kal TiY brepoyny, oomep elwbecav éri mdvtwv, ods govTo TH Suvdyer Bapeis Kal mpos toornta Snpoxparucny aouppeTpous eivat. KodacLs yap ovK Hv o é€ooTpakiopos, GAAA Tapapmv0ia POovov xa Kov-giopos nSopévov TO Tatrevovv Tovs UrEepexXovTAas kal tyy Svopéveray eis tavTny TH aTipav aTOTVEOVTOS.
XXIII. ’Exiecovtos 8¢ tis troNews avTod Kal
S:atptBovros év “Apyet ta trept Tlavoaviay cvp-mecovTa Kat éxeivov mapéoye Tois éxOpots
adopyds. o &8€ ypaypapevos avtov mpodocias AewBorns my 0 "AAKpatavos ‘Aypavnioer, apa TUVETTALTLO LEVEY TOV Lmapriarav. o yap Ilav-
cavias TpaTTo | éxeiva, 57 Ta Tepl THY mpodogtay
TpoTepov pev amexpomTeTo TOV Oewicroxhéa, Kaltrep évTa pidov as 6 eldev éxtremrwxota THis mohTeias Kal pépovra Yaretras eOdponcev ért THY KoWoviay TOY TpaTToMevav mTapaxanety, ypdppata! rod Bactréws émr Werxyupevos auT@ Kal trapokvvwr emt TOUS “EAAnvas @s Tovnpovs Kal axaplorous.) be THY ev dénow @rerpixparo tod Havoaviov Kal THY Kowwviay 6rXws atreiTrarto, mpos ovdéva bé Tovs AOyous eEnveryxev ovde KaTeEpnvuce thy mpakw, elre twavcecOar mpocdoxav 1 ypdéupara Fuhr and Blass with F988: ra ypdupara.

temple of Aristoboulé down to my time, from which he appears to have been a man not only of heroic spirit, but also of heroic presence.
Well then, they visited him with ostracism,! curtailing his dignity and pre-eminence, as they were wont to do in the case‘ of all whom they thought to have oppressive power, and to be incom- mensurate with true democratic equality. For | ostracism was not a penalty, but a way of pacifying } . and alleviating that jealousy which delights to . humble the eminent, breathing out its malice into

this disfranchisement. we

XXIII. After he had been thus banished from "7 the city, and while he was sojourning at Argos, ’ circumstances connected with the death of Pausanias gave his enemies at Athens ground for proceeding against him. The one who actually brought in the indictment against him for treason was Leobotes the son of Alemeon, of the deme Agraulé, but the Spartans supported him in the accusation. Pau- sanias, while engaged in his grand scheme of treachery, at first kept it concealed from Them- istocles ; but when he saw him thus banished from his state and in great bitterness of spirit, he made bold to invite him into partnership in his own under- takings, showing him a letter he had received from the King, and inciting him against the Hellenes as ‘a base and thankless people. Themistocles rejected the solicitation of Pausanias, and utterly refused the ' proffered partnership; and yet he disclosed the propositions to no one, nor did he even give informa- tion of the treacherous scheme, because he expected either that Pausanias would give it up of his own

1 About 472 B.c.

b , yw 9 v7 fol 7 A avtov, eit addNws Katadavn yevyoecBat auv ovdevrl AOYioU@ WpaypaTwv atoTwY Kal Tapa-Borwv opeyopevov.
Otto 8) tod Tavoaviov Gavatwbévtos émt-aoTo\at tives davevpeBeicat Kal ypdupata trepl
4 > e 4 > / \ ,
TovTwy els UiroWiav évéBarov Tov MeuwotoKrEa’ kat xateBowy péev adtod Aaxedatpovior, KaTnyopovv & ot POovodvtes TAY TOALT@Y, OV TraporToS, |
’ \ \ , b / i“ ,
GANA Ota YypaypaT@v arrodoyoupévov padoTa Tais Mpotépats Katyyopiats. duaBaddopevos yap iro TOV eéxOpav pos TOUS TrodiTas eypader, aS dpyew pev aet Cnrav, apyecOar 5é py TepuKas \ , > M” lA e N
pnde Bovropevos, ove av tote BapBapows avrov ovde troAepiots! amroddcGat pera THs “EXXaébos.
ov nV GAG cuprrecaOels UO TOY KaTHYyOpoUYT@Y
0 Ojos eee? avopas, ols eipyto ourdap Savery Kal avaryewv? avrTov xpiOnaopevov € €v Tots “EAXAnowv.
XXIV. [poarcOopevos & éxetvos ets Képxupav Suevrépacev, ovans avT@ Tpos THY TOALY EvEpyectas.
Tevopuevos yap avtav xpitns mpos Kopi0ious
2 4 / W \ v v
éXOvT@Y Suagopdy, EXvoe THY ExXOpay eixoct TddavTa Kpivas TOUS Kopi ious xataBanreiv Kab
Aevndda Kown ve pel apcporé pw aTroLKov. éxelOev

& els "Hrrecpov epuye’ Kal SiwKopevos UTrO Tov ‘AOnvatoy Kal TOV AaxeSarpoviev eppirpev aurov eis édmridas yaneTras kal dm opous KaTapuyov 99 “Adpntov, bs Baotheds pév jv Mondorrar, Sen els
dé te Tov AOnvaiwy nal rpoTnraxiabels bd Tod 1 girdy obdé woAeulors Fuhr and Blass with F@S: xal wode- plows abrdy. 2 dvdyew Fuhr and Blass with S: &yew.

accord, or that in some other way he would be found out, since he was so irrationally grasping after such strange and desperate objects.

And so it was that, when Pausanias had been put to death, certain letters and documents regarding these matters were discovered which cast suspicion on Themistocles. The Lacedaemonians cried him down, and his envious fellow-citizens denounced him, though he was not present to plead his cause, but defended himself in writing, making particular use of earlier accusations brought against him. Since - he was once slanderously accused by his enemies before his fellow-citizens—so he wrote, as one who ever sought to rule, but had no natural bent nor even the desire to be ruled, he could never have sold himself with Hellas to Barbarians, much less to foemen. The people, however, were overpersuaded by his accusers, and sent men with orders to arrest him and bring him up in custody to stand trial before a Congress of Hellenes.

XXIV. But he heard of this in advance, and crossed over to Corcyra, where he had been recog- nized as a public benefactor of the city. For he had served as arbiter in a dispute between them and the Corinthians, and settled the quarrel by deciding that the Corinthians should pay an indemnity of twenty talents, and administer Leucas as a common colony of both cities. Thence he fled to Epirus, and being pursued by theAthenians and Lacedaemonians, he threw himself upon grievous and desperate chances of escape by taking refuge with Admetus, who was king of the Molossians, and who, since he had once asked some favour of the Athenians and

@euioctoxdéous, OT Hxpavey ev 7H Trodstea, bv opyis elyev avtov det Kal dHros Hv, et AdBor, TLmo@pnodmevos. ev Se TH TOTE TUXYN MAAXoY Oo
BemictoxrAns PoBnbes cuyyev nal mpoadatov POovov opyns madras xal Bacidixys, TavTy
dépov vmréOnxev éavtov, ixérns tod “Adpunrov KataoTas tdvov Tiva Kal TapnrAXNaypEevoY TpOTrOY. éYwv yap. avTod Tov viov éyta taida mpos THY éotiay wpocémece, TavTny peyloTny Kal povny ayedov dvavtippntov hyoupévav ixeciay Tov Modcocay. évioe pev otv DOiav thy yuvaixa tod Bactréws rAéyovow brobéc Oat TO OeptotoKArc? TO ixérevpa TovTo Kal Tov viov éml tiny éoTiav kabicas per avtov: tives 8 avrov tov” Adpntor, @> adootwaaito mpos Tovs StwKovtas tv avaykny, Sv iv ovk éxdidwot Tov avdpa, Siabetvar Kal ovvtpaywdjoat THY. ixeciav.
"Exet & avt@ tiv yuvaica nal tovs traidas éxxréwas x trav “AOnvav "Emrixcparns 6’ Ayapvevs amréotethev: Ov él TovT@ Kipwv dorepov Kpivas avatwoev, as ictope: YryncipSportos. elt’ ovK 016 Orrws ertNabopevos ToOUTWY 7) TOV MewtoToKNéa ToLav eTtAaOopevov TWAECAa dyow es Dexedtav
kat tap ‘lépwvos aiteiy tod tupdvvov tHy Ovya-Tépa mTpos ydpov, UmiaxXvovpEevoy . aUT@ TOvs
"EAAnvas barnkoous trounce’ atrotpiapévov! &é Tov ‘lépwvos, obras eis tHv Actay dmapas.
1 &worpipauévov Fuhr and Blass with S: axvgrpepaueévov.
66
124

had been insultingly refused it by ‘Themistocles, then at the height of his political influence, was angry with him ever after, and made it plain that he would take vengeance on him if he caught him. But in the desperate fortune of that time Themistocles was more afraid of kindred and recent jealousy than of an anger that was of long standing and royal, and promptly cast himself upon the king’s mercy, mak- ing himself the suppliant of Admetus in a way quite peculiar and extraordinary. That is to say, he took the young son of the king in his arms and threw him- self down at the hearth; a form of supplication which the Molossians regarded as most sacred, and as almost the only one that might not be refused. Some, it is true, say that it was Phthia, the wife of the king, who suggested this form of supplication to Themistocles, and that she seated her son on the hearth with him; and certain others that Admetus himself, in order that he might give a religious sanc- tion to the necessity that was upon him of not surrendering the man, arranged beforehand and solemnly rehearsed with him the supplication scene.

Thither his wife and children were privily removed from Athens and sent to him by Epicrates of the deme Acharnae, who, for this deed, was afterwards convicted by Cimon and put to death, as Stesimbrotus relates. Then, somehow or other, Stesimbrotus forgets this, or makes Themistocles forget it, and says he sailed to Sicily and demanded from Hiero the tyrant the hand of his daughter in marriage, promising as an incentive that he would make the Hellenes subject to his sway; but that Hiero repulsed him, and so he set sail for Asia.

XXV. Tabra 5' ovx etxos eat ovTH ryevéa Bat. Gedppactos yap év tois Tlepi Baovretas i iaropel TOV OepioroKréa méurypavTos ets - 'Oduptriay 'lépwvos -Umaous ayovUicrtas Kal oKNnVHY Twa KATETKEVAO HEVNY TOAUTEN DS oTHTAVTOS, etrreiv éy ois "EdAnoe oyor, Os xpn THY oKnvaY Siaprrdacat Tod Tupdvvov Kai Kwr0Ioat TOUS (arqrous ayovicaciar. Oouvcudidys 5é dynot Kai Tredoae aurTov émt THY éTépav kataBdvra Oadraccay aro T1vdvns, ovdevos elddtos 6 dotis ein TOV TEOVTOD, péxypt ov mvevpate THS odrKdbos Els Nafov KaTahepowevns U0 "AOnvatwv ToopKoupevny TOTE poBnbeis avadetEevev é éauTov T@ Te vavednpe Kal TO xuBepyytn, Kal TH [ev Seopevos, Ta oO aTeth@v Kat Aéyeov, étt KaTnYyopHc ot Kal KaTQAevoorro 7 pos tous 'A@nvaious, as OUK ayVvoounTES, andra Xpipace Treva Devres é& apyis, dvahapOLeV QUTOD, obras avaryKdoeve TApAT NDT aL Kal AaBéoOar THs "Acias. trav dé Xenwareov avT@ ToAAG pev uTexkNatrévta Sia TOV pihov els "Aciav. erneu' Tay dé davepav yevopévwv Kal cuvay Jévrov eis TO Snudctov @edrroptros peév éxaTOV Tahavta, @coppactos 5é dySonxovTd nae yevéo Gar TO TAHO0S, ovde T pay afva TadavTwy KEKTNEVOU Tov Weuworoxréovs wplvy amrecBat THS TWodLTElas.

XXVI. "Ezrei 5é xaTén hevoev eis Kopnv ral TOANOUS no Gero tav ett BardtTn mapapunarTOVTAS @UTOV AaBeiv, paduoTa 8e TOUS qept

‘Epyoréhn Kab Tuéodwpov (hv yap i) Onpa
AVOLTEANS TOls TO KEpOaivery ATO TaVTOS GyaTact,

XXV. But it is not likely that this was so. For Theophrastus, in his work “On Royalty,” tells how, when Hiero sent horses to compete at Olympia, and set up a sort of booth there with very costly decorations, Themistocles made a speech among the assembled Hellenes, urging them to tear down the booth of the tyrant and prevent his horses from competing. And Thucydides! says that he made his way across the country to the sea, and set sail from Pydna, no one of the passengers knowing who he was until, when the vessel had been carried by a storm to Naxos, to which the Athenians at that time were laying siege,? he was terrified, and disclosed himself to the master and the captain of the ship, and partly by entreaties, partly by threats, actually declaring that he would denounce and vilify them to the Athenians as having taken him on board at the start in no ignorance but under bribes, —in this way compelled them to sail by and make the coast of Asia. Of his property, much was secretly abstracted for him by his friends and sent across the sea to Asia; but the sum total of that which was brought to light and confiscated amounted to one hundred talents, according to Theopompus,—Theophrastus says eighty,—and yet Themistocles did not possess the worth of three talents before he entered political life.

XXVI. After landing at Cymé, and learning that many people on the coast were watching to seize him, and especially Ergoteles and Pythodorus,—for the chase was a lucrative one to such as were fond of getting gain from any and every source, since

1 i, 137. 2 About 469 B.c.

Staxociwy émixexnpvypkvoyv avtT@ Ttadrdvrov wvrd tov Bactdéws), epuyey eis Alyds, AtorcKov TONMOMLATLOV, UTO TAVTWY aryVvooUmeEVvos TANY TOU
Edvou Nexoyévous, bs Atodéwv mreiotny ovciav EXEKTNTO Kal Tois avw duvaTois yveprpos UTHPYE.
Tapa TOUT@ KpUTrTOMEVOS HuUepas Oruryas SuéTpUper" elta peta TO Settrvov éx Ouaias tives “OABcos
0 TaY Téxvav TOD Nixoyévous tradaywryos Exper ‘yevopevos kat Oeopopnros avehwovnoeyv ev pétpo!
TavTt:
Nuxtl deovaiv, vuett BovrAny, vuxtl thy virenv didov.

Kal peta travra xotpnOeis 0 @emsorokrAHs dvap édokev ideiv Spdxovta Kata THS yaoTpos auToU TE PLEALTTOMEVOY kal TpocavepTovTa T@ TPAKNAM’ yevouevov 6 aeTov, a ato Tov Tpocwnou, mepiBarovra tas mrépuyas éFapae xal Kopiverw ToXAHY odor, ElTa ypvaod TiWOS KNpUKELOU
ghavévtos, él tovtTov aticat BeBaiws avrov apnyavovu beluatos cai rapayns atraddayévta.
Tléumrera: 8 odv vd tod Nexoyévous pnyavn-capévov te To.ovec.2 tod BapBapixod yévous. Td
qodv kal pddiota To Ilepovxov eis EndrotuTriav THY Twepr Tas yuvaixas dryptov pucer Kal Xarerrov €oTLv. OU yap povoyv Tas yapeTds, adda Kal Tas apyupwrvntovs Kal TaddaKevopévas toyupas TapapvAdtrovaety, ws UTO pndevds opacbar TeV €xTOS, GAN’ olKoe pev StatTacOat KaTaKeKdeELo - pévas, év 6 tais odottropiass Ure oKnvas KUKN@
1 dvepdvnoev ev wérpw Fuhr and Blass with S: advepdvnoe

Méerpy. 2 roidvde Fuhr and Blass with F@S;: rorovror, 79 125

THEMISTOCLES

two hundred talents had been publicly set upon his head by the King,—he fled to Aegae, a little Aeolic citadel. Here no one knew him except his host Nicogenes, the wealthiest man in Aeolia, and well acquainted with the magnates of the interior. With him he remained in hiding for a few days. During this time, after the dinner which followed a certain sacrifice, Olbius, the paedagogue of the children of Nicogenes, becoming rapt and inspired, lifted up his voice and uttered the following verse :—

“ Night shall speak, and night instruct thee, night shall give thee victory.”
And in the night that followed, Themistocles, as he lay in bed, thought he saw in a dream that a serpent wound itself along over his body and crept up to his neck, then became an eagle as soon as it touched his face, enveloped him with its wings and lifted him on high and bore him a long distance, when there appeared as it were a golden herald’s wand, on which it set him securely down, freed from helpless terror and distress. However that may be, he was sent on his way by Nicogenes, who devised the following scheme for his safety. Most barbarous nations, and the Persians in particular, are savage and harsh in their jealous watchfulness over their women. Not only their wedded wives, but also their boughten slaves and concubines are strictly guarded, so that they are seen by no outsiders, but live at home in complete seclusion, and even on their journeys are carried in tents closely hung round about with curtains and set 7!

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

A a > A

mTepiTeppaypevas él Tov appapakav oyxeicBat.
a a , TotavTns TO OemworonrAe? KatacKxevacbetons
amnuvns Karadvs éxopileto, taVv Tepl avTov aél Tos évruyydvovet Kal ruvOavopévors eyovTwr, oe 14 € N ¥ > > > } , 4
dt yuvavoy “EAAnuixov ayouow at’ Iwvias mpos tiva Tay éml Ovupais Baciréws.
XXVII. @ovevéidns pév ody nal Xdpwv o
Aapaknvos istopotot teOvnxotos EépEou mpos Tov viov avTov T@ BeuiotoKrAEt yevéoOar Hv évrevEw* “Eqopos dé cat Acivwv wal Kreitapyos cat “Hpaxreidns, érs 8 addXoL wAetoves, pos 9 N b] VA N / : - \ “
avtov adixéoOar tov Eépkny. trois S€ ypovexois Soxel parrov o Bov«vdidns cupdépecOat, xaitrep ovd avTois atpéua cuvtatropuévois. o 8 ovv
nA 4 4
@curoToKAHsS yevouevos wap avto 70 Sewwov évruyxdves mpatov ‘AptaBdve te yIALIdpX@
éyov, “EAAnv pév eivat, BovrecOar 8 évtuxeiv Bactret tepi peyicotwyv wpayudtwv Kal mpos & TuyxYave. partota aotrovddlwv éxeivos. o bé dynow: “"O, Eéve, voor Stadpépovew avOperwv’ ddra 8 adXolts Kara? Kadov 66 Tadot Te obKELo Koopely Kal owlev. vpas pevy ovv édevOepiar

/ 4 \ 3 7 , ‘ e nN \
partota Oavpdlew Kai icdtnta Aoyos’ Huiv Se
A , A :
TONAOY VOMwY Kal KAX@Y OYTMY KAA TOS OUTOS
dott, Tiwav Bactréa, kal mpockuveiy ws eixova Geod Tod Ta TWavtTa cwlovTos. ef pev ovv errawav Ta nueTEepa TpocKUYHCELs, ott cot Kal Oedoac Bat
, a > > A n
Bacthéa kal mpocerreiv: et 8 GAO tt ppoveis, 72

upon four-wheeled waggons. Such a vehicle was made ready for Themistocles, and safely ensconced in this he made his journey, while his attendants replied in every case to those who met them with enquiries, that they were conducting a Hellenic woman, fair but frail, to one of the King’s courtiers.

XXVIL. Now Thucydides! and Charon of Lampsacus relate that Xerxes was dead, and that it was his son Artaxerxes with whom Themistocles had his inter- view ; but Ephorus and Dinon and Clitarchus and Heracleides and yet more besides have it that it was Xerxes to whom he came. With the chronological data Thucydides seems to me more in accord, although these are by no means securely established. Be that as it may, Themistocles, thus at the threshold of the dreadful ordeal, had audience first with Artabanus the Chiliarch, or Grand Vizier, and said that he was a Hellene, and that he desired to have an audience with the King on matters which were of the highest importance and for which the monarch entertained the most lively concern. Whereupon the Chiliarch replied : “O Stranger, men’s customs differ ; different people honour differ- ent practices; but all honour the exaltation and maintenance of their own peculiar ways. Now you Hellenes are said to admire liberty and equality above all things; but in our eyes, among many fair customs, this is the fairest of all, to honour the King, and to pay obeisance to him as the image of that god who is the preserver of all things. If, then, thou approvest our practice and wilt pay obeisance, it is in thy power to behold and address the King ; but if thou art otherwise minded, it will be needful

1a. 137.

\ .

dyyéXows éTépots xX pon mpos avTov. Bacirei yap ov Tatptov avdpos axpodcbar pn rpocKkurn-4 gavtos. Tadta 0 BemotonrAHs axovoas eye mpos autov’ “"’AAXN éyaye tHV Baciréws, @
> 4 , \ , b , Law Mal

ApraBave, djnunv Kai divapww av&nowy adiypas, Kal avTos Te Téelcopat Tots tbmerépors vopmocs,
b \ A a Ss A C4 Cal ‘
émel Oe@ TO peyarvvorte Lépaas obtw Soxei, cat
bv éué reloves Tav viv Bactréa TpocKuyycovoL.
y "
ef le bd \ 54 a , @OTE TOUTO undey éeutrobay Ectw Tots NoyoLS, ods
, Ly a > mn 9 gg TEV 29 9

5 BovAopat wpos éxeivov eitretv.” “Tiva 8,” eitrev
o ’AptdBavos, ““EXAjvov adixyIai ce Papev; ov yap idtoTn THY yveOunv Eoxas.” Kal o OewatokAns: “Todt ovxér av,” edn, “ rvOotro Tx,
"A lA ’ , 99
praPave, mporepos Baoéws.

Oitw péev o Pavias dyaiv. o § ’Epatoabévns év tots [lept wAovrTov mpoototopyae, dua yuvatKos
"EE “a e , 9 A A
PETpPLKIS, Hv Oo yLMapyos eclye, TO OepwortoKre’
THY Wpos avTov evrevéww yevérOar Kal cvortacry.
XXVIII. ’Ezret & obv eianyOn mpds Baciréa
Kal Mpookuvyncas éotn olwwTh, tpootatavtos
T@ €ppnvet Tod Baciréws epwrfcat, tis éott, Kal Tov éppnvéws epwrnaavtos, elmev' “Heo got, Bactrhed, BeutotoxrAns o *AOnvaios eyo gduyas vd’ “EdXdjvav SiwxGeis, & moddka pev opeiAovar Ilépcat cand, mrreiw Sé ayaba Korvcavre thy biwkw, ote THS “EAXdSos ev acdhadrel yevomevns trapéaxe Ta oixot owlopeva yapicacOai
2 Tt Kal vpiv. éuol pev odv wdyta wpéTovTa Tails

for thee to employ messengers to him in thy stead, for it is not a custom of this country that the King give ear to a man who has not paid him obeisance.”’
When Themistocles heard this, he said to him:
“Nay, but I am come, Artabanus, to augment the King’s fame and power, and I will not only myself observe your customs, since such is the pleasure of the god who exalts the Persians, but I will induce more men than do so now to pay obeisance to the King. Therefore let this matter by no means stand in the way of the words I wish to speak to him.”

« And what Hellene,” said Artabanus, “shall I say thou art who hast thus come? Verily, thou dost not seem to be a man of ordinary understanding.” And Themistocles said: “This, Artabanus, no one may learn before the King.”
So indeed Phanias says, and Eratosthenes, in his book “ On Wealth,” adds the statement that it was through a woman of Eretria, whom the Chiliarch had to wife, that Themistocles obtained interview and conference with him.
XXVIII. That may or may not be so. But when he was led into the presence of the King and had made him obeisance, and was standing in silence, the King ordered the interpreter to ask him who he was, and, on the interpreter’s asking, he said: “ I who thus come to thee, O King, am Themistocles the Athenian, an exile, pursued by the Hellenes; and to me the Persians are indebted for many ills, but for more blessings, since I hindered the pursuit of the Hellenes, at a time when Hellas was brought into safety, and the salvation of my own home gave me an opportunity for showing some favour also to. you. Now, therefore, I may look for any sequel to

Tapovcas cvppopais éort, Kal Taperxevac pévos adiyuat SéEac0ai te yapiv evpevas dadXaTTO-pévov Kal trapaiteicOa pynoikaxobvtos opynv:
au Sé Tovs euovs eyOpovs paptupas Oémevos ov evepyétnaa Ilépoas, viv amroypnoat tais éuais TUYaLs Mpos émiderEy apeTns padrdrov 1 pos aTOTANPWGLW GpyHAsS. Twces pev yap ikérny cov, atroneis 8 “EXAHvwV Torépmwov yevouevov.” tadT’ elr@v 0 BemoroKrAns émreVelace TH AOYH Tpoc-dueMOav tiv driv, hy eidev év Nuxoyévous, Kal To pavrevpa tov Awdwvaiov Atos, @s Kxerevobels Tpos Tov ou@vupov tod Beod Badifey cuphpovncee mrpos éxeivov avarréutrec Oar: peydNous yap apportépous civai te eal AéyecIar Bacidéas.
’"Axovaas 8 o Ilépans, éxeivw péev ovdev arre-Kpwato, xaitrep Oavypdoas TO ppovnya Kai TH
ToApayv avTou: paxapicas S€ mpds Tovs dPidrous éauTov, ws ém evTuyxia peyioTn, Kal KaTevEdpevos del Tots troAeutots Tovavtas ppévas Sidovar Tov
"Apipduov, Strws éXavvwat Tos apiarous €& éavtov, Odaat te Tots Oeois Aéyetas Kal pos Troow
evOds tpatréc Oat cal vixtwp vio yapas ba péocwy

Tav Urvev Bojoat tpis: “"Eyo @emioroxréa Tov
"A Onvaiov.”
XXIX. “Apa 8 nuépa cvyxaréoas tovs pirous elanyev avtov ovdéev! errrilovta ypnatov e& dv éopa tous él Ovpass, ws érvOovto tobvopa tra-povros avtov, yanrerras Suaxetpévous Kal Karas
1 ob3ey Fuhr and Blass with FaS: unde.
76
126

THEMISTOCLES

my present calamities, and I come prepared to re‘ceive the favour of one who benevolently offers reconciliation, or to deprecate the anger of one who cherishes the remembrance of injuries. But do thou take my foes to witness for the good I wrought the Persians, and now use my misfortunes for the display of thy virtue rather than for the satisfaction of thine anger. For it is a suppliant of thine whom thou wilt save, but an enemy of the Hellenes whom thou wilt destroy.’ After these words Themistocles spoke of divine portents in his favour, enlarging upon the vision which he saw at the house of Nicogenes, and the oracle of Dodonaean Zeus, how when he was bidden by it to proceed to the namesake of the god, he had concluded that he was thereby sent to him, since both were actually “ Great Kings,” and were so addressed.
On hearing this the Persian made no direct reply to him, although struck with admiration at the boldness of his spirit; but in converse with his friends it is said that he congratulated himself over what he called the greatest good fortune, and prayed Arima-nius ever to give his enemies such minds as to drive their best men away from them; and then sacrificed to the gods, and straightway betook himself to his cups; and in the night, in the midst of his slumbers, for very joy called out thrice: “I have Themistocles the Athenian.”
XXIX. At daybreak he called his friends together and bade Themistocles to be introduced, who expected no favourable outcome, because he saw that the guards at the gates, when they learned the name of him who was going in, were bitterly disposed and

77

NeyouTas. ere bé “PwEayns o xAlapyos, @s KaT
avTov hv o Oepo towers T poor, xadnpevov Bacttéws Kai Tov adXA@V clwTeVTWr, aTpé“a orevatas elmer: ““Odus “EXAnV 0 Trotkiros, Oo Baciréws ce Saipwv Seipo jyayev.” od pry
Grr’ eis Ow édMovTos adtov Kal wad tTpoc-KUVnTaVTOS, aoTTAacdpEvosS Kal TpoveT@V pido-dpovas o Bacirevs, 75n pev Epycev avT@ Siaxdora Tadravta ofetNery? = KopicavTa yap avToY aTro\n-Weobat Sixaiws 1O émixnpvyOev TO ayayovTe:
TONA@ O€ TAELW TOUTWY UTLCYVEITO Kal TrapeDdppuve kal réyey edidov rept Tav “EXAnUKaY, a BovroT0, wappnotalopevov.
‘O 8é Qepiorondrs arrexpivato, Tov Noryoy éorKévat Tov avOpwrrou Tols TroLKirOLs OTPALATLY' WS yap éxelva Kal TOUTOV ExTEevopevoy pev emideiKvu-aOas Ta eidn, ova TEeddOpevov dé xporrrew Kat dia-pOetpesy- dev avT@ Xpovou Seiv. érrel O€, no Gevtos TOU Bacirews 7H eixacta Kat hap Bdvew KeNEV-CAaVTOS, eviauTOV aitnadpevos wal Th Ilepotéda yAOTTAY GTrOXPOYT WS expadov ever uryyave Ba-oirel 50 avrovd, Tots peév EXTOS doEav mapéaxe mept tav ‘EdAAnviKev / Tparywarov Siethéx Oa, TONNOY dé KaLvoTOMOUpEvOY Tept THY aurqy Kar
TOUS _pirous vo TOU Baotreécs év éxelvep 7
Kalp@, POovov ExxXe Tapa ois Suvatois, Os Kal
Kat éKxelvov ‘mappyaig xpncacbar 7 pos autor
GTOTETONMNKWS. ovdev yap hoav au Tipat Tats
TOV a\XNwv éoccviar Fever, andra Kal Kurnyectov Baotrei petéoxye cat Tav oixat dvatpiBav, date 78

spoke insultingly to him. And _ besides, Roxanes the Chiliarch, when Themistocles came along opposite him,—the King being seated and the rest hushed in silence,—said in an angry undertone: “ Thou subtle serpent of Hellas, the King’s good genius hath brought thee hither.” However, when he had come into the King’s presence, and had once more paid him obeisance, the King welcomed him and spake him kindly, and said he already owed him two hundred talents, for since he had delivered himself up it was only just that he himself should receive the reward proclaimed for his captor. And he promised him much more besides, and bade him take heart, and gave him leave to say whatever he wished concerning the affairs of Hellas, with all frankness of speech.

But Themistocles made answer that the speech of man was like embroidered tapestries, since like them _ this too had to be extended in order to display its patterns, but when it was rolled up it concealed and distorted them. Wherefore he had need of time. The King at once showed his pleasure at this com- parison by bidding him take time, and so Themistocles asked for a year, and in that time he learned the Persian language sufficiently to have interviews with the King by himself without interpreters. Outsiders thought these conferences concerned Hellenic matters merely ; but since about that time many innovations were introduced by the King at court and among his favourites, the magnates became jealous of The- mistocles, on the ground that he had made bold to use his freedom of speech with the King to their harm. For the honours he enjoyed were tar beyond those paid to other foreigners; nay, he actually took part in the King’s hunts and in his household diver-

Kai pntpi tn RBactréws eis oyruv érbeiv Kat ryevecAat ouvriOns, Staxotoa. b€ Kal TOY payiKov hoyov TOU Bactréws KeXevoavtos. érrel dé An-pdpatos o Lraptidrns airnoacbat Swpedy Ken-evobels yTHTaATO THY Kitapw, @otep ot Bacirels, émrapapevos elgeddaat dua Ldpsewr, McOporrave-TNS per aveypros av Baciréws elzre Tob Anpapd-Tou TAS Tedpas axpapevos: “ Adrn pev 7 KiT apts
ovK exe éyxépanor, Ov emuxaduyper av 8 ovK
éon Zevs av AdBys Kepauvor" : aTrwa apevou 5é TOV Anpaparov opyn bua TO. airnpa tod Bact-Aéws kat Soxodvtos amapaititas: exew Tpos avtov, 0 @emoroxrns Senbeis rece al dunrra€e.
Aéyerae 5€ xai tovs darepov Baovrels, éf’ ov HaNNOY al Hepoveat mpdtes tais ‘EdAnuicais avexpaOnoar, oodxus denBeiev ayvdpos ' 'Eddnvos, emraryyerer Oar kal ypadew Exag Tov, as peivov ExolTo Tap avTo OepraroKdr<€ous. avurov 5é Tov
OeworoKr<€a ghaciv 76n péyav ovta Kal Oeparrevo-Hevov UTO TOAN@Y Aapmpas Tore Tpametns avT@
mapatebcions | 7 pos TOUS mraidas cimeiy: “°O, maides, anwropeba a av, EL un ATrwXopeOa. TTrdrELs 8 auTe T pets bev ot Trelorou d00jvat Aéyouow eis apTov Kal oivov Kai dypor, Maryvyoiav Kal Aaprpaxov cat Muobyta: dv0 8 dAXdas Tpocti-Onow o Kubixnvos Nedvéns wal Pavias, Hlep-KOTNY cat Tladaiocnnypuw es otpopyny cal amTrexovny.

XXX. Karafaivoyre 5S avr@ mpos tas “Ed-
Anvixas mpdkeus emt Oddattav pons avyp
1 gitg xaparedelons Bekker, Fuhr with F*S: xapare@elons.

80

127

THEMISTOCLES

sions, so far that he even had access to the queen- mother and became intimate with her, and at the King’s bidding heard expositions also of the Magian lore. And when Demaratus the Spartan, being bidden to ask a gift, asked that he might ride in state through Sardis, wearing his tiara upright after the manner of the Persian kings, Mithropaustes the King’s cousin said, touching the tiara of Demaratus : ‘ This tiara of thine hath no brains to cover; indeed thou wilt not be Zeus merely because thou graspest the thunderbolt.” . The King also repulsed Demaratus in anger at his request, and was minded to be in- exorable towards him, and yet Themistocles begged and obtained a reconciliation with him.

And it is said that later kings also, in whose reigns Persia and Hellas came into closer relations, as often as they asked for a Hellene to advise them, promised him in writing, every one, that he should be more influential at court than Themistocles. And Themistocles himself, they say, now become great and courted by many, said to his children, when a splendid table was once set for him: “ My children, we should now have been undone, had we not been undone before.’’! Three cities, as most writers say, were given him for bread, wine, and meat, namely : Magnesia, Lampsacus, and Myus; and two others are added by Neanthes of Cyzicus and by Phanias, namely: Percoté and Palaescepsis; these for his bedding and raiment.
XXX. Now as he was going down to the sea on his commission to deal with Hellenic affairs, a
| 1 Thue. i. 138.
81
VOL. II. G@

-PLUTARCH’S LIVES

’EmiEvns Svopa, catparevwv ths advwa Ppvyias,
émeBovNevoe, Taperxevaxas ExTradat Ilicidas
TiWas aTroKTEevouNTAs, Tay ey TH KaXOUpEYN K@EN |
Acovtoxepdrw yevopevos xatavacb7. Oo 5é

Néyerar KabevdsovTse peonpBpias THY pntépa Tov Gedv Svap paveicay cimeiys “°O, BepsoroKres, botépes Keparis Aéovtov, iva wn Novre mrepitréoys.
éyo 5é€ avtl tovTov ae aitd Oepdrraway Mvnourtoréuav. StatapaxGeis ody 0 BemsoroKrAAs mpocevEdmevos TH Oe@ THv ev Newhopor adjxer, étépg 5é meptehOwv xal trapaddd£as tov ToTov
éxelvov On vuKTOS OVENS KATNUN CATO.
Tov dé thy oxnuny Kopsclovtav UTrotuyiwv évos eis TOV TroTapov éuTEToVTOS, of TOU Beystatoxdréous oixérat Tas avraias StaBpoxous yevouévas éxtretTdcavtes avéwvyov. ot 8é Ilicidas ra Eipn Xra-Bovres év tovT@ wpocedpépovto, Kal Ta Yruxdpeva Mpos THY GEAnVNY ovK AKpLB@s iSovrTes BnOncAY eluat THY oxnvay THY BeutotoKAéous KaKEivoD
évdov etipicev avaravopevoy. ws 8 éyyds ryevdpevos THY avrAaiay avéoteAXOV, EmitTinrovcLw avtois oi TapapuAdocorTes Kat cuAAALBavova.
Staduyeav Sé rov Kivduvov odtw Kai Oavyacas Thy éripaverav THS Geod vadv Katecxevacev év May-vncia Avvdupjvns Kat tHv Ovyatépa Mvnocrro-
A€uay téperay arréderEer.
XXXI. ‘Os 8 FAGev els Yapders Kal sxorHv

1 «én Fuhr and Blass with FS: wdae: city.

Persian, Epixyes by name, satrap of Upper Phrygia, plotted against his life, having for a long time kept certain Pisidians in readiness to slay him whenever he should reach the village called Lion’s Head, and take up his night’s quarters there. But while Themi- stocles was asleep at midday before, it is said that the Mother of the Gods! appeared to him in a dream and said: ‘‘O Themistocles, shun a head of lions, that thou mayest not encounter a lion. And for this service to thee, I demand of thee Mnesiptolema to be my handmaid.” Much disturbed, of course, Themistocles, with a prayer of acknowledgment to the goddess, forsook the highway, made a circuit by another route, and passing by that place, at last, as night came on, took up his quarters.

Now, since one of the beasts of burden which carried the equipage of his tent had fallen into the river, the servants of Themistocles hung up the curtains which had got wet, and were drying them out. The Pisidians, at this juncture, sword in hand, made their approach, and since they could not see distinctly by the light of the moon what it was that was being dried, they thought it was the tent of Themistocles, and that they would find him reposing inside. But when they drew near and lifted up the hanging, they were fallen upon by the guards and apprehended. Thus Themistocles escaped the peril, and because he was amazed at the epiphany of the goddess, he built a temple in Magnesia in honour of Dindymené, and made his daughter Mnesiptolema her priestess,

XXXII. When he had come to Sardis and was 1 Rhea, or Cybele, Magna Mater, called also Dindymené, from Mount Dindymon, in Phrygia.

a 2

i)

drywv eOcato THY lep@v THY KaTaTKEUHY Kal TOV avabnpdtwv To TAnOos, elde Sé ev pontpos tep@ THY Kadovpévny Ldpopopov Kopny YarKv, péyeBos Slanxuv, tv avtos Ste trav "AOnvnow stdarov emLrTaTNS HY, EdXwv Tovs Upatpouvpévous TO vdwp kal wapoxerevovtas, avéOnnev éx tis Cypulas motnodpevos, elite 6 TaGwv TL mpos THY aixpa- Awoiav Tov avaOnpatos elte Bovropevos évdetEa - abat trois "AOnvaioss, donv éyes Tiny Kal Sivayw

DJ a / / / A 4

ev tois Bacidews mpdypact, Aoyov r@ Avdias CATPATH TPOTHVEYKEY ALTOVMLEVOS ATTOTTELAAL THY xopnv eis tas 'AOnvas. yarerraivovtos 5é tod BapBapouv kai Baciret ypayrew dyoavtos ére- oToAny, poBnGeis 6 MemoroKANs els THY yuva,Ko- vitw Katépuye Kat tas madrdaxidas ajrod Oepatrevoas ypnpaciy éxeivov Te KaTempauve TIS opyis Kal mpos Ta dda Tapelyey éavTov evrAa- Béorepov, 45n nal tov POovoy tav BapBdpev ded0xws. ov yap wAavepevos trept THY 'Aciap,

[4 , > be J 4 \ > al °

as dno Beorroutros, adr ev Mayvncia peév oixor, Kaptrovpevos 5é¢ dwpeds peyadas Kal Tipm@pevos 6uota Ilepoav trois apiorois, éml rodv xpovov adeas Sufryer, ov mdavu te Tois "EAXAnviKO's Tpary- pact Bacthéws mrpocéyovtos bm' aoyoay mreph Tas dvw mpdakers.

‘Os & Alyurres te adiotapévn BonBovvrwv
"AOnvaiwy Kal tpinpess “EAXniKal wéxpt Kvmpou
kal Kiduxias dvamdéovoas cal Kiev Barartro-Kpatov émréotpeey avTov avtemyetpeiy Tots “EdAnos kal corvew av€avopévous er avtov, nd
84

THEMISTOCLES

viewing at his leisure the temples built there and the multitude of their dedicatory offerings, and saw in the temple of the Mother the so-called Water- carrier,—a maid in bronze, two cubits high, which he himself, when he was water commissioner at Athens, had caused to be made and dedicated from the fines he exacted of those whom he convicted of stealing and tapping the public water,—whether it was because he felt some chagrin at the capture of the offering, or because he wished to show the Athenians what honour and power he had in the King’s service, he addressed a proposition to the Lydian satrap and asked him to restore the maid to Athens. But the Barbarian was incensed and threat- ened to write a letter to the King about it ; whereat Themistocles was afraid, and so had recourse to the women’s chambers, and, by winning the favour of the satrap’s concubines with money, succeeded in assuag- ing his anger. Thereafter he behaved more circum- spectly, fearing now even the jealousy of the Bar- barians. For he did not wander about over Asia, as Theopompus says, but had a house in Magnesia, and gathered in large gifts, and was honoured like the noblest Persians, and so lived on for a long time with- out concern, because the King paid no heed at all to Hellenic affairs, owing to his occupation with the state of the interior.

But when Egypt revolted with Athenian aid,} and Hellenic triremes sailed up as far as Cyprus and Cilicia, and Cimon’s mastery of the sea forced the King to resist the efforts of the Hellenes and to hinder their hostile growth; and when at last forces began to be moved, and generals were 1 459 B.O.
85
:~

|

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

5é xal duvdpuers exivodvro nal otparryyol Sreréu-mwovro Kal KatéBatvov) dryyediat pos Oepioro-Kréa, Tav “EAAnuicav éEarrecOat KxedevovTos Bactréws xal BeBavody tas vrrocxéoets, ovte Se opyiv tia wapofuvOels Kata THY TroMTaY OTE
émapOels Tih tooavtn cal Suvduer mpds Tov TONELOV, GAX tows pev ovd edixrdy® Hryovpevos
To Epyov, Gdrovs Te weydArous THS ‘EXAdSbos eyov-

ons otpatnyous tote kal Kipwvos vimeppuas EUNpEpouVTOS Ev TOs TWodEmLKols, TO Sé MAEioTOY
aidot rhs te S0Ens TOY wpdkewy THY éavTod Kal tay Ttpotralwy éxeivwv, dptora Bovdevodpevos érBetvar r@ Bip rhv TeXevTHY mpérovaar, Cuvce tots Beois, kal rovs hirous cuvayayov cal SeFww-odpevos, WS pay 6 TODS Adyos, alua Tavpeov mov, a 8 évor, Pdppaxov édjpepov Tpoc every-xapevos, év Maryvncia xaréotpewe wévte pos tous éEnxovta BeBiwoxas érn xal ta wreiota ToOv-Tov év ToNtTeiats Kal Hyepovias. tH 8 aitiav
tov Oavatouv Kal tov Tpomov muOopmevov Baciréa Néyouow ets padXrpjov Oauvyaoar tov avipa Kat Tois hirous avrov Kal oixetors Ypw@pevov Svatereiy pirav pwrres.
XXXII. ’Azrédurre 5€ Qentororrs waidsas éx
pev ’Apylaarns tis Avodvdpou rod ’AdwrrexnhiOev
"Apyxerrtony cat Todtevxrov cal Kreddavtov, ov kal IIAatwv o pirocodos as im7éws dptotou, Tarra 8 ovdevds akiou yevouévouv pynpovedver.
1 xaréBawov Fuhr and Blass with FS: xaréBawov eis Mayvnolay.
2 ob8? épixrdy Fuhr and Blass with FS : obk épicrdy.
86
128

THEMISTOCLES

despatched hither and thither, and messages came down to Themistocles saying that the King commanded him to make good his promises by applying himself to the Hellenic problem, then, neither embittered by anything like anger against his former fellow-citizens, nor lifted up by the great honour and power he was to have in the war, but possibly think- ing his task not even approachable, both because Hellas had other great generals at the time, and especially because-Cimon was so marvellously successful in his campaigns; yet most of all out of regard for the reputation of his own achievements and the trophies of those early days ; having decided that his best course was to put a fitting end to his life, he made a sacrifice to the gods, then called his friends together, gave them a farewell clasp of his hand, and, as the current story goes, drank bull's blood, or as some say, took a quick poison, and so died in Magnesia, in the sixty-fifth year of his life,! most of which had been spent in political leader- ship. They say that the King, on learning the cause and the manner of his death, admired the man yet more, and continued to treat his friends and kindred with kindness. |

XXXII. Themistocles left three sons by Archippé, the daughter of Lysander, of the deme Alopecé, namely: Archeptolis, Polyeuctus and Cleophantus,
the last of whom Plato the philosopher mentions as a capital horseman, but good for nothing else.?

1 Thuo. i. 138, 2 Meno, p. 93.
87
a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tav d5é mpecButdtwv NeoxAns pev ete mais av
ip’ tarmov SnxGels améOave, Acoxréa 5é Avoar-Spos 6 mWdamos viov éroncato. Ouyarépas Sé TArelous éxxev, BY Myvnourrodéuav pev éx THs émiyapnOetaons yevouévny "Apyémrons 0 adedpos
ovK dv omountptos eynpev, “Iradiav 8é TavOotdns 6 Xios, LPapw 8 Nexouydns o *AOnvaios:
Nixoudyny 5¢ Ppacixrjs 0 abderdioods Bepucro-
KANEOUS, HON TEeTENEUTNKOTOS eKxeEivou, TAEVGAS ELS
Mayvnciay édaBe rapa tav aberdav, vewrdrny
6¢ wdavrev tov tTéxvov ’Aciav Opee.
Kai tddov pév aitod ANapmpov év TH ayopa Madyvntes éxovou epi dé tay rEndvev oir’
"Avdoxidn mpocéyev akiov ev t@ IIpos tovs étaipous AéyovTt, pwpdcavtas Ta Neinpava Siappirar tovs *AOnvaiouvs (evderar yap éml tov Siuov tapokvvwyv Tovs oduyapytKous), 6 Te Dvapxos, Bomep ev tpaywodia TH toTopia povovov UNXavnv apas Kat wpoayaywyv Neoxdéa tiva Kal
Anporroduv, vios Bemotonréovs, ayava Pov-NeTae Kiwweivy Kal mdGos, 6 ovS dv o Tuya ayvoncevev Ott TéTAATTAL, Atddwpos 8 0 mepinynTns
év Tots Ilept pynudray elpnxev @s trrovoay pand-NOV H ylv@oKerv, STL Tepl Tov péyay ALpéva TOD Tletpac@s dio tov Kata Tov “Adxtpov axpwrn-ptov mpoxetai Tis oloy ayxwv, Kai xaprartt TovTOY evTos, 7) TO UTrEevoLoyv THS OadadtTNs, KpNTris cori evpeyéOns nat To tept avrnv Bwpoedés 88
THEMISTOCLES

One of his two oldest sons, Neocles, died in boy-hood from the bite of a horse, and Diocles was adopted by his grandfather Lysander. He had several daughters, of whom Mnesiptolema, born of his second wife, became the wife of Archeptolis her half-brother, Italia of Panthoides the Chian, and Sybaris of Nicomedes the Athenian. Nicomaché was given in marriage by her brothers to Phrasicles, the nephew of Themistocles, who sailed to Magnesia after his uncle's death, and who also took charge of Asia, the youngest of all the children.

The Magnesians have a splendid tomb of Themisto- cles in their market place; and with regard to his remains, Andocides is worthy of no attention when he says, in his Address to his Associates, that the Athenians stole away those remains and scattered them abroad, for he is trying by his lies to incite the oligarchs against the people; and Phylarchus, too, when, as if in a tragedy, he all but erects a theatrical machine for this story, and brings into the action a certain Neocles, forsooth, and Demopolis, sons of Themistocles, wishes merely to stir up tumultuous emotion ; his tale even an ordinary person must know is fabricated. Diodorus the Topographer, in his work " On Tombs," says, by conjecture rather than from actual knowledge, that near the large harbour of the Piraeus a sort of elbow juts out from the promontory opposite Alcimus, and that as you round this and come inside where the water of the sea is still, there is a basement of goodly size, and that the altar-like structure upon this is the

5 tadbos tod @euwoKoxréous. olerat Se cat IIda-TOVA TOV KWMLKOV AUTO paptupely ev TovTOLS
'O abs 8é rupBos ev KAA@ Keywopévos

Tots epmropots Wpocpyats ~otar TavTaxod, UA 2712 4 > , 4 >
tous t | éxmdéovtas evomrAcovTas T OWeTal, bd 4 bud 9 a a @ / YoOTOTAY Optra" TWY vewY VEeaceETal.

Tots & amd yévous tod @eptororréovs at tTiyswat ties ey Mayvnoia pvadrarropevar péxpe TOV NMETEpwOY Ypdvav Hoav, as éxapTrovTo Bem-a b a ef / \ }
aToxAns 'AOnvaios, huétepos suvnOns Kai diros
79 / A , ,
Trap Appovie To dirocopm yevopevos.

1 robs 7' corrected by Bekker to obs.
2 dutAda Bekker has &u:aa' Ff after Porson.
a tomb of Themistocles. And he thinks that the comic poet Plato is a witness in favour of his view when he says :—

“Thy tomb is mounded in a fair and sightly place ; The merchantmen shall ever hail it with glad cry ; It shall behold those outward, and those inward bound,

And all the emulous rivalry of racing ships.”
For the lineal descendants of Themistocles there were also certain dignities maintained in Magnesia down to my time, and the revenues of these were enjoyed by a Themistocles of Athens, who was my intimate and friend in the school of Ammonius the philosopher.
gI

Digitized by Google

CAMILLUS

KAMIAAO2

I. Ilept 5€ @ovpiou Kapidrygov aoddov nal 129 UL 4 ” ef a ,
peyarwv Aeyouévov idtov elvar Soxel padsota kal tapdbofov, btu mAciota pev év Hyepoviars kal péyiota xatopOacas, Sictratwp 8& tevrdxis
e , 4 \ 4 / \
aipeOeis, OptawBevoas Sé€ teTpaxis, xtiotns 5é a eH ’ \ , 2»O\ @
ths ‘Pwpns avaypadeis Sevtepos, ovdé amak wrdtevae. tovtov & altiov 7 THs TOTE ToAtelas Kardotacis, éx Siapopas tod dyuou mpds THY abyKANTOY UIraTOUS fev epicavTOS p12) aTro-Seixvucar, yitudpyous b€ YeupotovodyTos émi
THY Hyemoviav, av, Kaimep am é£ovoias Kat Suvdpews vratinns atavta wpatrrovTwy, HTTov jv emayOns H apyn Sia 76 TARBOS. TO yap EE
w” 3 \ A A 4 > 4
avOpas, adNa pn Svo, Tols Tpdypacw edioTavat, mapenv0eito Tovs Bapuvopévous THv oduyapxiav.
Kara todro 8) xatpod pdrdota TH O0En Kal Tois
4 ? 4 e 4 (4 3
mpdypacty axpacas o KdpeArXos brraros peéy ove neiwoey dxovte TO Syuw yevécOat, xaitrep ev TO Sia pécou SeEapévns ttratixas apyatpecias Tis qonTelas TroANGKLS, ev 5é Tais GANaLS Hyepoviass
94

I. Turnina now to Furius Camillus, among the many notable things that are told of him, this seems the most singular and strange, namely, that although in other offices of command he won many and great successes, and although he was five times chosen dictator, four times celebrated a triumph, and was styled a Second Founder of Rome, not even once was he consul. The reason for this lay in the political conditions of his time. The common people, being at variance with the Senate, strove against the appointment of consuls, and elected military tribunes to the command instead. These, although they always acted with consular authority and power, were less obnoxious in their sway because of their number. For the fact that six men instead of two stood at the head of affairs, was some comfort to those who were bitterly set against the rule of the few.

Now it was at this period that Camillus came to the height of his achievements and fame, and he would not consent to become consul over a reluctant people, although during his career the city tolerated consular elections many times. But in the many other and varied offices which he held, he so con- ducted himself that even when the authority rightly moAdAais Kai mavrodatrais yevopévats TtovovTov avTov wapécyev, @oTe THY pev éFovoiay Kal povapxoovtos elvas Kxownjv, tHv bé Sokay idiay kal pel érépwv otpatnyodvtTos’ av Tov pev 7 peTptoTns altioy avermipOovas apyovtos, Tov 8 7 dpovnars, dv hv oporoyoupévws erpwrevev.

II. Ovdw 5é tore wept Tov trav Poupiwy olxov ovans peydArns emipavelas autos ad éauTov mpa- tos eis S0Fav mponrOev ev TH pweyadrAn ayn TpOS Aixavovs xal Ovorovcxous vo duxtatop. Ioc- touuiw TouBéptm otparevopuevos. mpoimmrevwv yap Tov otpaTov Kal ANY TepitTec@y eis TOV penpov ovK avnKev, GAN éyxeluevoy TH TpavpaTt TapéAkov TO axovtTtopa Kal cupTTAEKOMEVOS TOLS aptorors THY Tronepbeoy tpomny érolincev. ex dé

ToUTOV TV T GAAwY yepav érvyYe Kal TLNTNS
amedetxOn, béya THS apyis afiwpa tavrTns él T@Y TOTE Ypovwv exXovons. pvnuovevetar é avtod TLunTevovTOS KaAOV pev Epyov TO TOUS
aydpous Aoyous te meiOovta Kal Cnpuiars atre-NodvTa ovyxataledEas tais Xnpevovaats yuvarkt (rodAal & Haoav avrat da Tous TroAéuovs), avayxaiov 5é€ To Kal Tous dpphavors UroteXEls Troujoat mporepov averapopous dvras. aitias 8 Foav at cuveyels oTpateias peyddwy avadopdtwv de0-pevat, Kal padiota KaTnretyev 7 Ovniwv trodtop-Kia. Tovtous éviot Ounievravovs Kadovaw.
"Hv be mporxXnpa THs Tuppnvias 7 Tos, bTA@v pev aprOu@ cat mrAnOes TOV oTpaTEevoMévwWY OvK amrobdéovaea THs ‘Pauns, rAovT@ Sé ral Biwy aBpo-TnTt Kal tpupais xal trodvteEdciats ayadNopevn

belonged to him alone, it was exercised in common with others; while the glory that followed such exercise was his alone, even when he shared the command. In the first case, it was his moderation that kept his rule from exciting envy; in the second, it was his ability that gave him the first place with none to dispute it. 7

II. At a time when the house of the Furii was not yet very conspicuous, he, by his own efforts, was the first of his clan to achieve fame. This he did in the great battle with the Aequians and Volscians, serving under Postumius Tubertus the dictator. Dashing out on his horse in front of the army, he did not abate his speed when he got a wound in the thigh, but drag- ging the missile along with him in its wound, he engaged the bravest of the enemy and put them to flight. For this exploit, among other honours bestowed upon him, he was appointed censor, in those days an office of great dignity. //There is on record a noble achievement of his censorship, that of bringing the unmarried men, partly by persuasion and partly by threatening them with fines, to join in wedlock with the women who were living in widowhood, and these were many because of the wars ;likewise a necessary achievement, that of making the orphans, who before this had contributed nothing to the support of the — state, subject to taxation. The continuous campaigns, demanding great outlays of money, really required this. Especially burdensome was the siege of Veii (some call the people Veientani).

This city was the barrier and bulwark of Tus- cany, in quantity of arms and multitude of soldiery no whit inferior to Rome. Indeed, pluming her- self on her wealth, and on the refinement, luxury,

mroAXoUs Kal KaXOUs ayavas Nywvicato trept doEns
kat Suvactelas toNcepovcoa “Pwpaios. év 5é Ta TOTE YpOvm THs pev hirotipias ageroTHKe. cuv-tpiBeioa peydrais pdyats érrapdpevor 5€é Teiyn peydia nal xaptepa Kal Thy Tod STrwY Kal Bero@v cai citov cai wapacKevas amdons éuard2-cavres, abed@s UTrépevoy THY TrOMOpKiay, paKpav fev ovoay, ovx Arrov dé Tots TrodtopKovat épyoon Kal yarerny yevouévnv. etOrcpévor yap ov TmoAUY ypovoy dua wpa Oépovs ew otparevery, olxot Oé duayetpalery, TOTe MpwToy nvayxacOnaay
UTO TOV Yikdpywv dpovpia KaTacKEeVodpEvaL
Kat TO oTpaToTedoy Tetxicavres ev TH Todeuia yetuova Kat Bépos cuvdtrew, dn oxedoyv éTous éBoopov TO Toke TEAEUT@YTOS. Wate Kal Tovs apyovtas év aitia yevéoOar cal pararas modopKely Soxobvtas adaipeOjvar thy apyny, éTépwy aipeOévray él tov modeunov' av hv Kal KdpirXos tore yidtapyav 7o Sevtepov. émrpake
Se mept thy modtopkiav ovdev ev exeive TO Ypova, Aayov Darepiows cal Kamnvdrais wonrepelv, ot &:’ doyoNay ToTe TOAAA THY ywpav KabuvBpicaytes Kal Tapa mavTa Tov Tuppnyixov TrodNEpLov évoxrnoayvtes ériécOnaayv b7o tod Kapldrov cai auvectddnoayv els Ta TE’xYn ToANO’S aroBa-
NovTes. |
ITI. "Ex rovrou +o rept tiv AdXBavida Aipyny
mwd0os dxpatovre Tp Todéum ouveveyOev ovdevas TTov Tov arictwv mwubécGar Oavudtowv aitlas Kownhs atrooia Kal Noyou guvoikny éyovTos apyry époBncev. Hv pev yap Spa perovwpiwy, Kal Td 98
CAMILLUS

and sumptuousness in which her citizens lived she had waged many noble contests for glory and power in her wars with the Romans. At this time, however, she had .been crushed in great battles, and had given up her former ambitious pre- tensions. But her people built their walls high and strong, filled the city full of armour, missiles, grain, and every possible provision, and confidently endured their siege, which, though long, was no less laborious and difficult for the besiegers. These had been accustomed to short campaigns abroad as the summer season opened, and to winters at home; but then for the first time they had been compelled by their tribunes to build forts and fortify their camp and spend both summer and winter in the enemy’s country, the seventh year of the war being now nearly at anend. For this their rulers were held to blame, and finally deprived of their rule, because they were thought to conduct the siege without energy. Others were chosen to carry on the war, and one of these was Camillus, now tribune for the second time. But for the present he had nothing to do with the siege, since it fell to his lot to wage war with the Falerians and the Capenates, who, while the Romans had their hands full, had often harried their territory, and during all the Tuscan war had given them annoyance and trouble. These were over- whelmed by Camillus in battle and shut up in their fastnesses with great loss of life.

III. And now, when the war was at its climax, the calamity of the Alban lake added its terrors. It seemed @ most incredible prodigy, without familiar cause or natural explanation. For the season was autumn, and the summer just ended had, to all

Bépos Edmryev ovT érrouBpov ove TvEv past votiots

2 Xaderov eid as ryevopevov" moddas S€ Aimvas Kat TOTAPOUS Kal vapara TavTobaTa THS 'Itadias exovons TH pev éFeXure Kooy, TA O avr-éoxe YAtox pes Kal ports, ot dé ToTapol mayres OOTeEp del KotXot Kal tatrewvol dua Bépous é éppuncay. To &é Tis "ArABavidos Aimyns apyny exov év éauT@ Kai TEAEUT ID, Spec evyetous TEpLexa-pevov, at ovdeEvos aittou, wry el Te Deion, avgo-pevov éridnrws StwyKovTO Kal Wpodictato Tas brreapetass Kal TOV dvatare AGhav omaras érrépaver, dvevu oddou Kal kr\vdwvos eEaviatdpevov.
3 Kat TPGTOV Mev Wy TOLMevov Gaia Kal Botjpor
érrel 5é, Tov Sve pryovros aro Ths Kato X@pas
olov tO pod | TV Aipyny UmrexparyevTos uo Tov
mrBous Kal Badpovs, péya pebpa xatéBawve dua TOV dpoupévev kal puTevopevev éml thv Odrat-Tay, ov povov avtois Tapetye 'Pepators eeArniw, GAA Kal mao édSoKer Tots Thy ITraXriav Karot-Kotor pndevos pix pod onpeiov elvat. NEtoTos & avrod Aovyos nv év TO aotpatoTréi@ T@ TOMOP-KouvTt TOUS Ovnious, @oTE KaKelvols ExTrvaTOY yevéobat TO mepl THY Aipony Taos.
IV. Ola & év mohopkia dua xpovou pijKos emiymEias TE TOAAAS éxourn Kab Kotvohoyias Mpos TOUS moAguLOUS, eryeryover Tit 'Papaip cuvnbea Kal Tappyaia 1 pos éva TOV TOMTOD, av pwrrov Eumretpov TE Aoylav maharov kal ve kal wréov eidévas Tov AdA\XNOV ATO paVTiKijs

Soxotvra. ToUTOV ovY Oo ‘Poopaios, @se hrxovde tHv éridocw Tihs Aipyns, opa@v Umrepydopevov Te Kal xaTayed@vTa THs TodopKias, ov TadT’ 190

CAMILLUS

observation, been neithe}? rainy nor vexed by south winds. Of the lakes, rivers, and streams of all sizes _ with which Italy abounds;.some had failed utterly, others barely managed to hdld out, and all the rivers ran low, between high banks, as was always the case in summer. But the Alban lake, -which had its source and outlet within itself, ant was girt about with fertile mountains, for no reason, except it be that heaven willed it, was observed to increase and swell until it reached the skirts of the mourtains and gradually touched their highest ridges: © All this rise was without surge or billow. At first it was a prodigy for neighbouring shepherds and herdsmen,’ But when the volume and weight of water broke | away the barrier which, like an isthmus, had kept the lake from the country lying below it, and a huge torrent poured down through the fields and vine- _ yards and made its way to the sea, then not only were the Romans themselves dismayed, but all the inhabitants of Italy thought it a sign of no small evil to come. There was much talk about it in the army that was besieging Veii, so that even the besieged themselves heard of the calamity.

IV. As was to be expected in a long siege requir- ing many meetings for conference with the enemy, it fell out that a certain Roman became intimate and confidential with one of the citizens of Veii, a man versed in ancient oracles, and reputed wiser than the rest from his being a diviner. The Roman saw that this man, on hearing the story of the lake, was over- joyed and made mock of the siege. He therefore told

IOI

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

épn povov evmvox evan Savnacra TOV mapovra

Ovov, GAN Erepa TevTOY drorrerepa onpeta
Popatous Yeryoveraty, wept @v é0édev éxeivep
Kowwwadevos, el Te Sovacto, Béc Oat TOY iotev
2 dwevvov év Tots, colvois vooouo ww. UTaxovaavTos

3.

4

5 be TOU dvOpdaroy’ Tpodupos Kat d.dorr0s éauTov els kowvodoylery, @S aTroppnT@v TLVO@V axpoarny éoopevon, Kara box pov ota Siareyopevos Kat uTdyov. auTon, WS TOppwrT ep TOV TUN eyeyovetoay, alper Te peTéwpov eUpwaTOTEpos @y Kal

TWO - TO oTpatoTédov T oc dpapovrwy Xetpar-TG pEvOS Kal KpaTnoas Tapedwne Tos oTpATHYOIS.
-@Y ‘TOUT® S avayens yeyovas) avOpwrros kal = paben & apa TO TET PWHEVOY OS ave Tov eln, Noyta
, “mpodpawer amroppnta Tepl THs éavTod Tat pisos, @S OUK ovans adwoipmou ™ poTepov 1 THY "AXBavida. Aipony exxvbeicav Kal pepoperny odous érépas @oavrTes omiow Kal TEpLoT aT AVTES ot TOAELLOL KWAVTOVCL piryvuc Bae TH Oardrr.
Tatra TH TVYKANTO mudopevn at diaropoton KaXNOS exew éd0€e méeprpavTas ets Aeddous
épécGar tov Oeov. of 8€ rreppOevtes advdpes EvdoEo Kal peyarot, Kooaos Acxivvios Kat Ovadr-réptos Iloriros Kal Patios “ApBovoros, TAP
TE Xpno dpevor Kal TOV Tapa Tob Oeod TUXOVTES
Hycov addas TE bavreias Kopitovres, at matptov
TLVOV mel Tas Kadoupévas Aarivas éopTas OArywpiay Eppatov auTois, Kal TO THS "AABavidos
bdwp EeKédevov elpyovtas @S> avuaToV éore THS Gardoons avwOew es TOV apxaiov Ren i) TobTO Tr) duvapevous opuyyuac. Kal tadpots Tapayew eis, TO qWedtoy Kal KatavaricKer, 1O2
¢

131

CAMILLUS

him this was not the only wonder which the passing days had brought, but that other and stranger signs than this had been given to the Romans, of which he was minded to tell him, in order that, if possible, he might better his own private case in the midst of the public distresses. The man gave eager hearing to all this, and consented to a conference, supposing that he was going to hear some deep secrets. But the Roman led him along little by little, conversing as he went, until they were some way beyond the city gate, when he seized him bodily, being a sturdier man than he, and with the help of comrades who came running up from the camp, mastered him com- pletely and handed him over to the generals. Thus constrained, and perceiving that fate’s decrees were not to be evaded, the man revealed secret oracles regarding his native city, to the effect that it could not be captured until the Alban lake, after leaving its bed and making new channels for itself, should be driven back by the enemy, deflected from its course, and prevented from mingling with the sea. The Senate, on hearing this, was at great loss what to do, and thought it well to send an embassy to Delphi to consult the god. The envoys were men of great repute and influence, Cossus Licinius, Valerius Potitus, and Fabius Ambustus, who made their voyage and came back with the responses of the god. One of these told them that certain ancestral rites connected with the so-called Latin festivals had been unduly neglected ; another bade them by all means to keep the water of the Alban lake away from the sea and force it back into its ancient bed, or, if they could not effect this, by means of canals and trenches to divert it into the drraryryenGevrov 5é rovTwy of pev lepets Ta trept

Tas Quoias Emparrov, 0 5é dhpos exwper T pos
Ta epya kal To bdwp eFérperrev.
V. 'H &€ ovy«rntos eis 1O Séxarov Eros Tod jToNguov Katadticaca Tas adAas apxas Sixtatropa Kaysrrov amédakev' trmapyov § éxeivos aut®@ mpocedopevos Kopyndrov Lenriwva, mpo-Tov pev evyas errotjoato toils Oeois eri TO modem TéXOS EUKAEES AaBovTL Tas peydras Oéas
afew xal vewv Oeds, iy pyntépa Martodray xarovot 'Pwpaior, rabtepwoery.
Tavrnv dv tis dd tev Spwpévev tepav
pdrtota AevxoBéav vopiceey elvar. xal yap Gepatrawvay eis Tov anKoy eiadyouvcas patrifovaty, elr é€eXavvover Kal Ta Tav aderdav Téxva Pd
tav idiwov évayxadivovrar wal dpa@ou mepl TH O@vaiav & tais Atovicou tpopois Kal Trois Sta thy Tadraxny rdbeot THs Ivods mpocéouxe.
Mera 6€ tas evyds o Kdrros eis tay
Paricxov évéBare, eal paxn peyary TOUTOUS
Te Kal Karnvatas poo BonOncavras aurois evixnoev. emrevta Tpos THY ToNopKiay tTpatro-pevos TOV Oinior Kat tov €x mposPonijs ayava Narerrov Kal Sucepyov opay UTOVOMOUS ere uve, TeV wept THY TONY Xo piov évd.dovtwy rots Opvyuace Kal KaTadexouevay eis Babos Gryewy
adndov Tots mohepious Ta éprya. 510 Kal mrpoiovons 0b Tis érmidos auros pev éfwbev mpooéBannev, éxxanovpevos éml ta Teiyn Tovs rodepulous, 104

plain and dissipate it. On receipt of these responses the priests performed the neglected sacrifices, and the people sallied out into the fields and diverted the course of the water.

V. In the tenth year of the war,! the Senate abolished the other magistracies and appointed Camillus dictator. After choosing Cornelius Scipio as his master of horse, in the first place he made solemn vows to the gods that, in case the war had a glorious ending, he would celebrate the great games in their honour, and dedicate a temple to a goddess whom the Romans call Mater Matuta.

From the sacred rites used in the worship of this goddess, she might be held to be almost identical with Leucothea. The women bring a serving-maid into the sanctuary and beat her with rods, then drive her forth again; they embrace their nephews and nieces in preference to their own children; and their conduct at the sacrifice resembles thet of the nurses of Dionysus, or that of Ino under the afflic- tions put upon her by her husband's concubine.

After his vows, Camillus invaded the country of the Faliscans and conquered them in a great battle, together with the Capenates who came up to their aid. Then he turned to the siege of Veii, and seeing that direct assault upon the city was a grievous and difficult matter, he went to digging mines, since the region round the city favoured such works, and allowed their being carried to a great depth without the enemy’s knowing about it. So then, when his hopes were well on their way to fulfilment, he himself assaulted the city from the outside, and thus called the enemy

1 396 B.c.

105

oO

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

drror & adhrws Sroropevopevo. 51a toeV Urrovopov éraBov éevrdos yevopevoe THs Axpas Kata TO ns “Hpas' iepov, 5 péyrorov qv év tH TWorNE Kal THs "Hpas! tepov, 5 péy Wy év TH TONE Kal pdrLoTa TLLwpEVvoY.
’Evradda éyerar tuxelv wat’ éxeivo Katpoi Tov Hyeyova Trav Tuppnvadv éd’ tepois: rov Sé pavrw eis Ta omddyxyva KaTidovta Kal péya hbcyEduevov eitretv, Ste vienv 6 Oeds Sidwor TO KataxorovOjcarre Tots lepois exeivous’ TAUTNS be TAS davis Tous év Tots Drove nous “Pwpatous emaxoveartas Taxv diacmdca, To eéados, Kal pera Bons Kal opou tav dmAwv dvaduvras, demdayérron TOV mone peo Kat puyovrar, apmrd-cavras Ta omhayxva Kopi at mpos Tov Kapr-Nov. aGAAa Tadta pev laws eorxdvac dokee pudevdqaowy.

‘Adovons be THIS TOAEWS KATA Kpdros Kal TOV
‘Pwpatov aryovT@v Kal pepovtoy dime pov Twa movrov, epopav O Kdpsrros amo THS dxpas Ta TpPAaTTOMEVa, mparov pev ET TOS éddxpucer, eira parapta Gels UToO TOV TApovTov avéoxe TAS xelpas Tois Oeois Kal T POG EVXO{LEVOS ele.“ Zed peyiare rat Geol HoTay emicKorros Kat Tovn - pay Epyeov, QvUTOL Tov curiae ‘Peopaiors, @S ov trapa Sixny, dAdAa KaT avayKny dpuvopevoe petepyoueda Svopevdy avdpav Kal Tapavopwwy
Two. e€ & apa TUS,” ébn, “wal npecv ayti-aTpopos OpeireTaL THs Tapovens vewErts evTrpa-Eias, ebyopmar TavTnY vmép Te ToAews Kal
otpatovd Pwpyaiwy eis euavroyv édaxicT@ KaK@
' rhs “Hpas with C and S: “Hpas, away to man their walls; while others secretly made their way along the mines and reached unnoticed the interior of the citadel, where the temple of Juno stood, the largest temple in the city, and the one most held in honour.

There, it is said, at this very juncture, the commander of the Tuscans chanced to be sacrificing, and his seer, when he beheld the entrails of the victim, cried out with a loud voice and said that the god awarded victory to him who should fulfill that sacrifice. The Romans in the mines below, hearing this utterance, quickly tore away the pavement of the temple and issued forth with battle cries and clash of arms, whereat the enemy were terrified and fled away. The sacrificial entrails were then seized and carried to Camillus. But possibly this will seem like fable.
At any rate the city was taken by storm, and the Romans were pillaging and plundering its boundless wealth, when Camillus, seeing from the citadel what was going on, at first burst into tears as he stood, and then, on being congratulated by the bystanders, lifted up his hands to the gods and prayed, saying: “O greatest Jupiter, and ye gods who see and judge men’s good and evil deeds, ye surely know that it is not unjustly, but of necessity and in self-defence that we Romans have visited its iniquity upon this city of hostile and lawless men. But if, as counterpoise to this our present success, some retribution is due. to come upon us, spare, I beseech you, the city and ~ the army of the Romans, and let it fall upon my own head, though with as little harm as may be.” 107

7

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TedkeuTnoa.” Tair eitwv, xaOatep éatt “Popaiows Bos érevEapévors Kai mpooxuyvncacw él SeEia eFenitrew, eopdrn tepratpepopevos. bza-TapayGévrwy 5€ TOY TapovTwYv wad avaraBov
EauTOV ex TOD TWT@UATOS EltrEev, WS YeyovEey AUT@
Kar evynv opdrpa puxpov én’ evTuyia peyioTn.
VI. AcarropOnoas Sé tHv Twodw eyvw TO ayarpa rhs “Hpas peradépery eis “Paounv, dotrep evEato. Kal cuveNOovtwr eri TovT@ TOY TEexVI-Tov, o pev Ebve Kal mpocevyeTo TH Oe@ Séxec Oar
THY m pod upiap aur ap Kal evpev7y yever bar cvvol-Kov Tols ANaYovaL THY ‘Poyny Geois, To 8 dyadud
pacww vropOeyEdpevov ebrreiv, Ott Kal Bovr€cTat Kal TUyKaTaLVEL. Atovios 8é dnow ebyeaOa poev TOV Kaptddov ATT OpeEVOV Ths Jeod Kal Tapa.- Kaneiy, atroxpivacOar 5é TWAS TOY TWapovrTwv, ott
kat Bovretat cal ovyxaraivel Kal cuvarorovbet 7 poOvuuws.
Oi & loxupr Sopevor kal TO mapaboty BonBoiv-
TES peyiorny pev éxovar ouvipyopov Thy TUYXNY THS Toews, iy amo px pas Kal KaTappovoupervns apxis émrt TOTOUTOV bons Kal Suvayews T poEn-Get diya Oeov TodAais kat peydrats emupavelars éxda Tore TUpTrApOVToS aunyavor- OU nV GANA Kal ouvdryovow opoesdh; TVA, TOUTO bev idp@ras ayan-Pato TOANAKES exxubevras, TouTo O€ oTEvaymousS axovablevtas arroatpopas TE Setkvuvtes Kal KaTapooes Eodvewv, as laropiikacw OUK oriryou Ta WpoTepov. ToAAG O€ Kal Tov KAO 7Uas aKnKOO-

Tes avOpwrrwv NéyeLv éyouev afta Pavpatos, ov 108

13

CAMILLUS

With these words, as the Romans’ custom is after prayer and adoration, he wheeled himself about to the right, but stumbled and fell as he turned. The bystanders were confounded, but he picked himself up again from his fall and said: “My prayer is granted ! a slight fall is my atonement for the greatest good fortune.”
VI. After he had utterly sacked the city, he determined to transfer the image of Juno to Rome, in accordance with his vows. The workmen were. assembled for the purpose, and Camillus was sacrificing and‘ praying the goddess to accept of their zeal and to be a kindly co-dweller with the gods of Rome, when the image, they say, spoke in low tones and said she was ready and willing. But Livy! says that Camillus did indeed lay his hand upon the goddess and pray and beseech her, but that it was certain of the bystanders who gave answer that she was ready and willing and eager to go along with him.
Those who insist upon and defend the marvel have a most powerful advocate for their contention in the fortune of the city, which, from its ‘small and despised beginning, could never have come to such a pinnacle of glory and power had God not dwelt with her and made many great manifestations of himself from time to time. Moreover, they adduce other occurrences of a kindred sort, such as statues often dripping with sweat, images uttering audible groans, turning away their faces, and closing their eyes, as not a few historians in the past have written. And we ourselves might make mention of many astonishing things which we ly, 22.
109
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

b] 4 x, A ‘4 ’ AN A

4 ovx av tls euKn KaTtadpovnoeev. adra TolS
4 \ \ 4 / N \ Ld
TolovToLs Kal TO TrLoTEveLW apddpa Kai TO Mav
b] A > V4 > \ \ > ,
amirtew éemuopares éote bra tHY avOpwrivny
aoOéverav Spov ovK Eyovoay ovdé Kpatovdaay
e ”~ > 3 3 lA a ‘ 9
auTis, GAN éxdepopévnv Grrov pev eis Serordar-poviav Kal Todor, drrov & eis Gltywpiav TeV Dear
\ , e > > 4 \ N \
kal tmepippovnow: 1 & evrAdBera Kal To pndev
adyav aptorov.
VII. ‘O &€ Kapsrros el're peyéBee tov epryou,
, 9 , a e , ” 4 a Tod avritarov THs “Pwopns eree Sexato . THs qodtopKias KaOnpnKas, elite LITO TV evdatpovelov-TwY avTov eis GyKov EFapOels Kal Ppovnpa vopipov Kal qoduTiKHAS apxyns émayOéotepov, Ta TE ddrXa coBapas eOptduBevoe nai téOpitrrrov bro-CevEdpevos ANevcKoTrwAor eTéeBN Kal SreEnrace THs “Pwpuns, ovdevds TOTO TroLnaAaVTOS HrYELOVOS TpO> ce a
Tepov ovo Dorepov. lepov yap nyoovrat TO TOLOU-TOV oxnpa T® Bacrnrel Kal Tratpt Trav Gedy érite-
2 Pris pevov. &« te 5) TovTou SueBrXHOn mpos Tods moniTas ovK eOiopévous évtpudpacbat, Kal Seuvté-
> / b , / /
pay @aBev aitiay ématdpevos voup S2orxifovte THY TOMY. ElaonyovvTo yap ot SHuapyxor Tov TE S7jpov Kal THY ovyKANnTOV ica pépyn Svo veunOjvar, xal Tous pev avToOt Kxarotxetv, Tovs b€ KANP@ AaYovTas eis THY aiypadrdwTov peTATTHvar Tone, @s evTopwTéepay ecopéevorv Kal duct peydros Kal
Karoly dateot THY TE YOPaY ood Kal THY AAXNV
3 evdatmoviay dvAakovtwyv. o pév ovv Shuos Hon
\ N TONUS yEeyovMs Kal ayphpaTtos aopevos ébé£aTo,

have heard from men of our own time,—things not lightly to be despised. But in such matters eager credulity and excessive incredulity are alike dangerous, because of the weakness of our human nature, which sets no limits and has no mastery

over itself, but is carried away now into vain superstition, and now into contemptuous neglect of the gods. Caution is best, and to go to no extremes.

VII. Whether it was due to the magnitude of his exploit in taking a city which could vie with Rome and endure a siege of ten years, or to the congratula- tions showered upon him, Camillus was lifted up to vanity, cherished thoughts far from becoming to a civil magistrate subject to the law, and celebrated a triumph with great pomp: he actually had four white horses harnessed to a chariot on which he mounted and drove through Rome, a thing which ‘ no commander had ever done before or afterwards did. For they thought such a car sacred and devoted to the king and father of the gods. In this way he incurred the enmity of the citizens, who were not accustomed to wanton extravagance. They had also. a second grievance against him in that he opposed himself to a law dividing the city. The tribunes introduced a measure dividing the people and the Senate into two parts, one to remain and dwell there, and the one on which the lot fell to remove into the city they had captured, on the ground that they would thus be more commodiously bestowed, and with two large and fair cities could better protect their territory-as well as their prosperity in general. Accordingly the people, which was now become numerous and poor, welcomed the measure

\ \ “a \ \ A vA > A Kal cuveyns WY Tois Tept TO Bnua BOopvBors attav Thy Whdov: 1 5é BovAy cal Tov GAXOV Ot Kpa- TioTo TokTaV ov Staipeciv, GAN avaipertv nryovpevot THs “Pauns worrtreverOat Tovs Snudp- yous Kal Svoavacyerodvtes eri tov Kapirrov Katépuyov. Kakelvos oppwd@v Tov ayava mpo- paces evéBarre TO Sypw cal daoyodas, d:’ ov del Tov vopov éEéxpovev. jv péev ody Sta TadTa AUT POS.
e } 4 4 a“ 9

H Se davepwrdtn wal peyiorn trav arre-yOetav avT@ mpos Tov Sihpov éx THs Sexatns

Tov Aadvpwv UTApEev, ovK Aroyov, ce Kal uy wavy Sixaiay apynv TaV TTo\\@V AaBorTowv. evEato peéev yap él tovs Ovniovs, as Eouxe, Badi- Sov, eb thy modw Edot, TO Ded TovTwY THY Sexatny xadtepwoev. drovans S€ THs ToAEws wal Siaprracbeions, eit’ oxnvncas évoyrAnoat Tots moniTass, eite ANON Tis aVTOV UTO TOY TrapovTwY

mpayudatwv ExaBe Tis evyis, mepretdev wpernOévtas. Barepov Sé ypov@m ths apyns éxetvyns 787 WeTravpéevos avyveyKe Trepl ToUTY eis! TAY oUY-KANTOV, of TE pavTELsS HyyEeAXoV emt Tois Lepois mpopaiver Gat Oeav phvw Nee ney Kat YaptoTnplov deouéevnv.
VIII. Vndioapévns Sé tris Bours tHy pev
@pérerav (yaretrov yap Hv) avddactov uy yeve-Oat, Ttovs 5€ AaBovras avdtots civ Spx THY Sexdtnv tapadépew cis pécov, éyivero ToANa
1 «is Bekker and Sintenis', with most MSS.: axpbs.

112

133

CAMILLUS

with delight, and was for ever thronging tumultuously about the rostra with demands that it be put to vote. But the Senate and the most influential of the other citizens considered that the measure proposed by the tribunes meant not division but destruction for Rome, and in their aversion to it went to Camillus for aid and succour. He, dreading the struggle, always contrived to keep the people busy with other matters, and so staved off the passage of the bill. For this reason, then, they were vexed with him.
But the strongest and most apparent reason why the multitude hated him was based on the matter of the tenth of the spoil of Veii, and herein they had a plausible, though not a very just ground of complaint. He had vowed, as it seems, on setting out against Veii, that if he should take the city, he would consecrate the tenth of its booty to the Delphian god. But after the city had been taken and sacked, he allowed his soldiers full enjoyment of their plunder, either because he shrank from annoying them, or because, in the multitude of his activities, he as good as forgot his vow. At a” later time, when he had laid down his command, he referred the matter to the Senate, and the seers announced tokens in their sacrifices that the gods were angry, and must be propitiated with due offerings.

VIII. The Senate voted, not that the booty should be redistributed, for that would have been a difficult matter, but that those who had got it should, in person and under oath, bring the tenth thereof to the public treasury. This subjected the soldiers to

VOL, 11. I
113
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

AvTHpa Kal Biaca epi Tovs oTpaTLwTas, avOpw-qous Tévntas Kal TOAAA TeTOVNKETAS, avayKatopévous av éxéxtnvto Kal Katexéypnyto pépos
2 elo pépey ToaovTov. BopvBoupévp & un’ ab’tav
7 Kapirry Kal mpopacews d atropoovts BeXtiovos eis TOY ATOTMTATOY TAY Oyo ouveatve KaTa-hevyerv, oporoyobvre éminabécOan Tihs evy7js. oi & éyadérrawvov, eb Ta THY Torepiov SexaTevoev evEdpevos TOTE viv SexaTevet TA TOV TOALTOV. OV pny GANG TavTev Goov eet pépos eioeveyKovTwV
édofe xpatnpa xXpucody KaTacKevdoartas eis
3 Aerdots dtootetNat. ypuciov & hv omdus év
Th woke Kal tov apyovtey Bev av wopicbein
TKOTOUYTWY, at yuvaixes avTal Kal avTas Bov-Aevedpuevar Tov GvTa ypvaody éExdorn Tepl TO COua Koopoy éTédwKav ets TO avaOnpua, cTAOp@ YPUGLOV YyEvomevoy OKT® Tadadvrav. Kal TavTas pev ovyKANTOS atrobiwotca TLnY Tpérovoav éeyndicato pera Odvatov dotep éml Trois avipdce Kal tais yuvackt héyeo Bar Tov a&tov erawov' ov yap iv elOccpévor 7 POTEpoOV eynapmidtea Iau yu-4 vaira Snpocia TedeuTH Taga Ehdpevor dé Tpets dvdpas x TOV apiorov Jewpous Kat vadv paxpay evavOpobvre TANpOpare Kal KOTL@ TavyyupLK@ KaTacKevdoavres ébereunpav.
"Hy Oa dpa Kal Xela K Kal yarqvn daracons dapyanéov, ws éxeivots TUVETUXE TOTE map ovdév éXOovras amohéaGar Ssapuryeiy avdes am poo - doxntTws TOV xivdvvov. émréT Nevo ay yap auToLs Avrapéwy tpinpes tept tas AloXNov vycovs Tov 114

CAMILLUS

many vexations and constraints. They were poor men, who had toiled hard, and yet were now forced to contribute a large share of what they had gained, yes, and spent already. Beset by their tumultuous complaints, and at loss for a better excuse, Camillus had recourse to the absurdest of all explanations, and admitted that he had forgotten his vow. The soldiers were filled with indignation at the thought that it was the goods of the enemy of which he had once vowed a tithe, but the goods of his fellow citizens from which he was now paying the tithe. However, all of them brought in the necessary portion, and it was decided to make a bowl of massive gold and send it to Delphi. Now there was a scarcity of gold in the city, and the magistrates knew not whence it could be had. So the women, of their own accord, determined to give the gold ornaments which they wore upon their persons for the offering, and these amounted to eight talents weight. The women were fittingly rewarded by the Senate, which voted that thereafter, when women died, a suitable eulogy should be spoken over them, as over men. For it was not customary before that time, when a woman died, that a public encomium should be pronounced. Then they chose three of the noblest citizens as envoys, manned with its full complement of their best sailors a ship of war decked out in festal array, and sent them on their way.

Calm at sea has its perils as well as storm, it would seem, at least so it proved in this case. Envoys and crew came within an ace of destruction, and found escape from their peril when they least expected it. Off the Aeolian isles, as the wind died down, some Liparian galleys put out against them, taking them

115
12
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

5 mvevpatos éxALTrOvTOS @s AnoTais. Seopéevwy be Kal mpoicyouévay yetpas éuBorgs pev Exyxorto, tnv 6 vabv dvadpevot Kal Katayayovtes
GTreKnpUTTOV, Gua Kal Ta xXpnuaTa Kal Ta TWpATA, Telpatixa Kxpivavtes elvar. poms 8
évos avdpos apetn Kat Suvduer TiunoBéov rod otpatnyod mecbévtes pweOjKxav. o 5é xal mpoc-xaberXxvoas idta wroia Tapéreue Kal cvyxad-tépwoe ro avabnpa: 8’ & Kal Timas Eoxev, as eos HV, ev Pan.
IX. Tov &é dnudpyov adfis éreyetpovtwy Tov mept tov Suoixccpovd vopov, o mpdos Partoxous TONES ev KaLP@ Tapadaveis EdwKe Tois TpwToLS
dvépacw apxaipectacat Kata yropny nal Kapirrov atrobeiEar pel” Erépwv rrévte yediapyxor, @S TOV TpaypaTwv Hnyem“ovos Seouéevov akiwpa
2 xal Sofav per’ éurrespias Exovtos. >AWwyndicapévou
5é€ tov Syyov AaBav Sivayv o Kaprrdos eis TIV Parioxov évéBare: wal rod épupvav Kate-oKevacpévny waow eis moAe“ov Karas Parepious émroAlopKer, TO prev Edely ov puLxpov Epryov
ovdé y“povov Tov TuYOYTOS HyoUpEvos, GAdws Sé TpiBew Tovs Toditas Kal meptaomav Bovdopevos, as wy oxorAdlorev oixor KaOnpuevos Snpaywyeiobae

kal otacidvev. émietx@s yap del pappax@
ToUT@ xXpwpevor SteréXovv, WoTEp iatpoi, Ta
Tapaxtixa maOn THs tondtelas ew TpérovTes.
X. Odrws Sé THs ToALopKias Kateppovovy ot 116
CAMILLUS

for pirates. The enemy had sufficient regard to their prayers and supplications not to run their vessel down, but they took it in tow, brought it to land, and proclaimed their goods and persons for sale, adjudging them piratical. At last, and with much ado, through the brave intercession of a single man, Timesitheus, their general, the Liparians were persuaded to let the captives go. This man then launched boats of his own, convoyed the suppliants on their way, and assisted them in the dedication of their offering. For this he received suitable honours at Rome.

IX. Once more the tribunes of the people urged the passage of the law for the division of the city, but the war with the Faliscans came on opportunely and gave the leading men occasion to hold such elective assemblies as they wished, and to appoint Camillus military tribune, with five others. The emergency was thought to demand a leader with the dignity and reputation which experience alone could give. After the people had ratified the election, Camillus, at the head of his army, invaded: the territory of the Faliscans and laid siege to Falerii, a strong city, and well equipped with all the munitions of war. It was not that he thought its capture would demand slight effort or short time, but he wished to turn the thoughts of the citizens to other matters and keep them busy therein, that they might not be able to stay at home and become the prey of seditious leaders. This was a fitting and sovercign remedy which the Romans used, like good physicians, thereby expelling from the body politic its troublesome distempers.

X. The Falerians, relying on the great strength of 137

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Darépian TH Travraydbey eEwyupwoba mictev-
OVTES, MOTE TAHY TOV TA TEelyn HYAATTOVTwY TOS GArXous ev (patios KaTa Thv TOW avacTpé-gdecbat, tous S€ traidas avtay els te Ta didaoxarela horavy xal Tapa ta Tetyn TepiTra-THOOVTAS Kal yUu“Vacop"Eevous LTO TOU didacKdXoOU kataBiBalecOa. Kxow@ yap éxypavTo te 8.6aoxddw, waotrep "EXAnves, of Darépior, Bovdopevo. auvtpépecbat Kai avvaryerateoOar per

adAAnrAwy evOus EE dpy7s Tous traidas. ovToS
ovv o dtddoKxaros émiBovrevwv Tots Parepioss dua TeV traidwy éFfryev avTovs Hyuépas Exdorns umd TO TelYos eyyUs TO TpaTOV, elt arriryev avOis elaw yupvacapévous. éx 5é tovToV Kata puixpov Uirdywv elOice Oappeiy ws TrOAATS oboNS adeias, Kal TéXos éxov amavtas eis TOUS Tpopu-Aaxas TaV “Pwpaiov évéBare cal trapédoxer, dyew Kerevoas mpos Tov KdwaArov. ayxOels 5é Kal KataoTas eis pécov EXeye TavdeuTHS pév elvat
kat diddoKxanros, THY S5é pos exetvov yYapw aytt TovTav édXomevos TaV Sikalwv, HKew avT@ THY jon ev Tois Tatcl Kopitwv. Sewov ovv axovcavtt TO épyov éddvn KapidrA(@: Kal mpos tous Tapovras EelTraV, WS Yarerrov pév eaTL TOAELOS
Kat ta woAAHs abixias Kal Braiwv trepaivopevos Epyav, etal 5€ Kal troréwov pws tives vopor Tots ayabois avdpdolt, Kat TO vinav ovxX odTw dionréov, @aTE pn hevyely Tas ex Kaxov Kal aoeBav Epywov ydpitas (apeTtn yap otKeta Tov péyav atpaTnyov, ovKx adAXoTpia Oappodyta Kaxia xphvat otpatevev), mpocétake tois bmnpéracs Tob pev avOpwrou KaTappnyvivat Ta iwdtia Kal 118 134

e@

CAMILLUS

their city at all points, made so light of the siege that, with the exception of the defenders of the walls, the rest went up and down the city in their garb of peace. The boys went to school as usual, and were brought by their teacher along the walls outside to walk about and get their exercise. For the Falerians, like the Greeks, employed one teacher in common, wishing their boys, from the very start, to herd with one another and grow up together. This teacher, then, wishing to betray Falerii by means of its boys, led them out every day beyond the city walls, at first only a little way, and then brought them back inside when they had taken their exercise. Presently he led them, little by little, farther and farther out, accustomed them to feel confident that there was no danger at all, and finally pushed in among the Roman outposts with his whole company, handed them over to the enemy, and demanded to be led to Camillus. So led, and in that presence, he said he was a boys’ school-teacher, but chose rather to win the general’s favour than to fulfil the duties of his office, and so had come bringing to him the city in the persons of its boys. Itseemed to Camillus, on hearing him, that the man had done a monstrous deed, and turning to the bystanders he said: “ War is indeed a grievous thing, and is waged with much injustice and violence ; but even war has certain laws which good and brave men will respect, and we must not so hotly pursue victory as not to flee the favours of base and impious doers. The great general will wage war relying on his own native valour, not on the baseness of other men.” Then he ordered his attendants to tear the man’s clothing from him, tie

119g

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tas yetpas omicw Teptayev, tots 8 maol diabotvas paBdous Kai pdotiyas, Sirws Koda-Covres Tov TpodoTny eXavvworv els THY TOALD.
v \ “A , b 4 \ re)

Aptt 5€ tov Darepiwv yoOnpévwv tHv tod
S:dacKkdXov mpodociay Kal thv pév trod, olov eLKOS, emi cumpops THALKaUTH Oprvov Kare-XOVTOS, avdpav 8 oped Kal yuvaredy éml Ta Tetyn Kal Tas TUAAS oUY ovdevL Aoyiay@ epo-pévov, Tpochyov ot aides tov SidacKxadov
yupvov xal Sedeuévov mpormnraxilovtes, tov 6é Kapsrrgov cwrtipa cal tarépa cal Oeov avaxa-NoOvVTES, WATE (71) LOVOY TOIS yovedat TAY Taldw», GAA Kab Tols GAXAOLS ToAiTaLs TAvA opaat
Padua te xat roOov éutreceiv THs To Kapidndov Sicatocuvns. Kal ouvdpapovtes eis éxxAnoiay mpéecBes ereuav éexeivp ta xa? éavtous ém-Tpémovtes, os o Kadpmtrros aréotetrev eis ‘Popynv. év &¢ rH BovAn xatactravtes elrov, Tt ‘Pwpaio: THs viens tHY Stxatoovvny mpoTibLn-aavres edidakay avtovs tHy Array ayarioat mpo THs éAEvOepias, ov TocovToy TH Suvdayet AettecOar Soxodvtas, dcov HrracOar THs apeThs omoroyobvras. atrodovans dé tis BovAns mdr
éxeiv@ 70 xpivar kal Starthoar tadTa, ypnpata AaBov Tapa trav Darepiwy Kal diriav mpos adtravtas Padioxovs Oéuevos aveywopnoerv.
XI. Of b€ ctpatidtat Si:apnacew mrpocdoKnaavtes Tovs Padepious, ws érravnrOov eis “Paopnv Kevais yepol, Katnyopovy tod Kapiddrou mpos Tovs GAXous TrodiTas ws pucodynpov Kal dOovn-cavtos wperAnOfvat ois mévnow. eet dé Tov
Meplt TOU SLoLKLa MOU VopLoV OF Sypapyot TpoOEevTEs 120
CAMILLUS

his arms behind his back, and put rods and scourges in the hands of the boys, that they might chastise the traitor and drive him back into the city.

The Falerians had just become aware of the teacher's treachery, and the whole city, as was natural, was filled with lamentation over a calamity so great. Men and women alike rushed distractedly to the walls and gates, when lo! there came the boys, bringing their teacher back stripped, bound, and maltreated, while they called Camillus their saviour, their father, and their god. On this wise not only the parents of the boys, but the rest of the citizens as well, when they beheld the spectacle, were seized with admiration and longing for the righteousness of Camillus. In haste they held an assembly and sent envoys to him, entrusting him with their lives and fortunes. These envoys Camillus sent to Rome. Standing in the Senate, they declared that the Romans, by esteeming righteousness above ‘victory, had taught them to love defeat above freedom ; not so much because they thought themselves inferior in strength, as because they confessed themselves vanquished in virtue. On the Senate’s remanding to Camillus the decision and disposition of the matter, he took a sum of money from the Falerians, established friendship with all the Faliscans, and withdrew.

XI. But the soldiers thought to have had the sacking of Falerii, and when they came back to Rome empty-handed, they denounced Camillus to the rest of the citizens as a hater of the common people, and as begrudging to the poor the enjoyment of their rightful booty. And when the tribunes once more put forward the law for the division of the city

I21

a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avis él tiv ~pidov éexdrovv tov Sihpov, o 5é Kdpirros ovdepids amexOeias ovdé mrappnoias heroduevos eddvn pddyora wavtrwv exBialo-Mevos TOUS TOANOUS, TOY ev VoLOY aKOVTES are wndicayvro, Tov 5¢ Kdusrrov &e' opyis elyov, @ote Kat SvatuynoavtTos avTod Tept Ta otKeia (Trav yap viev améBare Tov Erepoy vooncayTa) pndev olxtm THs Opyns vhéoOar. Kaitor TO

maOos ov peTpiws Hveyxev avnp Huepos pvoe. Kal NpnoTos, GAAA THs Sins TWpoyeypaypévns avT@
Sia trévOo0s otxovpes Kabetpypévos pera ToY
YUVALKOV.- |
XII. ‘O peév ody xatyyopos nv Aevxtos ’Atrov-Anios, eyxeAnwa 8 Krorhs wepl ta Tuppnvixda yonpata. Kat Shira Kal Ovpar tives édéyovTO Nankai wap avT@ havivar tov aiyparorwv. 6
dé SHpos eEnpéOiocto Kal dros ie éx waons Tpopdcews KaT avToD. TH Whdw YXpNaopevos. ovTwS ovv cuUVayayav Tovs Te dirovs Kai TOUS TVTTPATEVTApEVOUS OUK OriYyoUS TO TATOOS GvTas,
> a) ‘ o A > \ 2Q?7 > 9 > ?- éSeiro pn meprideity avtov adixws én’ aitiass 135
A / A
jovnpais opAovTa Kal KatayéXaoTov bro TOY
eyOpav yevopievov. érrel & of hirou Bovreved-pevote Kat dtareyOévtes éEavtois atrexpivavtTo, Tpos
\ \ , 2 A \ ¥ / \ pev THY Kpiow avT@ pwndev oleaOar BonOnoecv, THv
: \ , b) , , > 9 ,
O€ Cnpiav opXovte OUVUVEKTLOELY, OUK QAVAG'YVOMEVOS
éyva petacthvar Kal huyely éx THs TWOAEwS TpOS opyyv. aotwacapevos ovv THY yuvaika Kal Tov viov éml Tis oiKias mpone. ciwm@h péxpe Tis mudns éxet b¢ éréatn, Kal petaotpadels orricw 122 -
CAMILLUS

and summoned the people to vote upon it, then Camillus, shunning no hatred nor any boldness of utterance, was manifestly the chief one in forcing the multitude away from its desires. Therefore, they did indeed reject the law, much against their will, but they were wroth with Camillus, so that even when he met with domestic affliction and lost one of his two sons by sickness, their wrath was in no wise softened by pity. And yet he set no bounds to his sorrow, being by nature a gentle and kindly man, but even after the indictment against him had been published, he suffered his grief to keep him at home, in close seclusion with the women of his household.

XII. Well, then, his accuser was Lucius Apuleius, and the charge was theft of Tuscan goods. It was said, forsooth, that certain bronze doors belonging to the booty had been seen at his house. But the people were exasperated, and would plainly lay hold of any pretext whatever for condemning him. So then he assembled his friends and comrades in arms, who were many in number, and begged them not to suffer him to be convicted on base charges and to be made a laughing-stock by his foes. When his friends had laid their heads together and dis- cussed the case, they answered that, as regarded his trial, they thought they could be of no help to him; but if he were punished with a fine, they would help him pay it. This he could not endure, and in his wrath determined to depart the city and go into exile. Accordingly, after he had kissed his wife and son good-bye, he went from his house in silence as far as the gate of the city. There he stopped, turned himself about, and stretching his hands out towards

Kal Tas Xetpas dvareivas pos TO Karird tov émevEato Tois Oeois, et pn dixaiws, GND' bBper Snpov, Kal pbove Tpomrnraxropevos EXTTiMTEL, Tayv 'Pepaious peTavonaat Kal maa av pwrrots pavepous ryevéoOas Seopuévovs avtod cat Trodobvras Kdpsrrov.
XITI. "Exeivos pev ovv, domep o "AytAnevs,
apas Dé pevos emi TOUS TOA TAS Kat peTaaTas @breE THY Sixny epnpny, Tina pupiwv Kat TEVTAKLTX EMO aocapiov exoucay.
"O yiverat pos apyuptou Norvyov Xireae Spaxpai cal TEVTAKOT LAL" aoadptov yap nv TO apyuptor, Kab TO Sexdyadcov oUTHS éxaneito Snvaptov.
Ovdels & éotl 'Popator, Os ov vomller Tas evyas tov Kaptdrov Taxy Thy Ateny vrohaBeiv, Kal yevea Oat Tepcoptay aire TAS adixias OUK
joeiav, GX' avapay, dvopaaTny 5é Kal Tept-Bonrov: ToT AUTH TmepiArbe THv "Poeun pépects, Kal TogovTov dryov Popov Kal Kivouvov & dpa per'
aisxuvns épavn Katpos emi THY TOALY, ELTE THS TUXNS ob cuveBovens, ele cal Oedsy TLVOS epyov éorl 2) Tapapereiy apeTns ayaptorovpévns.
XIV. I porov pev obv eboke onpetov yeryoveva
KaKOU peyarou T poo LovTos u] "lovAiou Tod TULNTOD TENET padiara yap 8 'Papaios céBovras Kal vopitouct lepay THY TOV TLLNTOV apy. bev-TEpov dé To TAS Kapidrov puyis avnp oUK
emipavns pev ovde Ex THS Bours, emrverens b¢ Kal XPNTTOS elvat Soxov, Mdpxos Kacdixcos, dvnveyKe
Tpos TOS yLALapyous Mpayua gpovtidos aEtov.

the Capitol, prayed the gods that, if with no justice, but through the wantonness of the people and the abuse of the envious he was now being driven from his country, the Romans might speedily repent, and show to all men that they needed and longed for Camillus.

XIII. After he had thus, like Achilles,! invoked curses upon his fellow citizens, he removed from out the city. His case went by default, and he was fined fifteen thousand asses.

This sum, reduced to our money, is fifteen hundred drachmas. For the as was the current copper cuin, and the silver coin worth ten of these pieces was for that reason called the denarius, which is equivalent to the drachma.

Now there is no Roman who does not believe that justice followed hard upon the imprecations of Camillus, and that he received a requital for his wrongs which was not pleasing to him, but painful ; certainly it was notable and famous. For a great retribution encompassed Rome, and a season of dire destruction and peril not unmixed with disgrace assailed the city, whether fortune so brought things to pass, or whether it is the mission of some god not to neglect virtue that goes unrequited.

XIV. In the first place, then, it seemed to be a sign of great evil impending when Julius the censor died. For the Romans specially revere and hold sacred the office of censor. In the second place, before Camillus went into exile, a man who was not conspicuous, to be sure, but who was esteemed honest and kindly, Marcus Caedicius, informed the military tribunes of a matter well worth their atten-

‘1 Thad i. 407-412.

épn yap ev TH Tappxnuevn vucti xa? odov Badlfav, He Kawny ovopatovar, cr Gels vio TUVOS
bb eyEapuévov peractpadivar, wal Jeacacbar pev ovdeva, horns é peilovos h Kat avOporivnv axovoat Tabe Aeyouons: “Ave, Mdpxe Kacdixce, réye pos TOUS apxovras EwOev ear Odiyou ‘ypovou Tandaras mpoaSéxea Gat.” TaoT aKov-TAVTES o XuALa.p or yéAwrTa «al madiay érrovob-
TO. Kal pet OALyov cuveBn Ta Tepl Kdpsrrov.

XV. Of 66 Tardrau Tob Kedrixod tyevous OVTES v1r6 mAnGous éeyovTat THY aura dmoMTrovTes, OUK ovoay jauTdapen _Tpepey adravtas, éqi vis ojTqow érépas oppjncat pupeddes dé modal YEvoueEvor vévv avopav Kal paxipov, ért dé

TAeLous Taidwv Kal yuvaikav deyovres, ot bey émt
TOV Bopevov ‘Deeavov vmepBanovtes Ta ‘Purraia 6pn pufvat Kal Ta éoxara THS Evpewrns KaTa-aye, of dé petakv Iluppijyns Spous wal TOV “AMrewy idpudevres eyyes: Lev@veov Kat Kehro-piwv KaTotKety Xpovor Tou: ove & olvou yevod-pevor TOTE mparov é& ‘Tradias Staxopiabévtos ovTas apa Gavydcat To Toya Kal Tpos THY KaWWOTNTA THS ndoviis Ex poves yevéa bau WAVTES, dore dpdpevor Ta OTAa Kat ryeveds dvaraBovtes
éri Tas "AXrets péper Bar Kat Enreiv exeivny TH vi, 4) TOLOUTOV Kaprrov avadiswct, Thy & adAnv aKaprov iyyela Oar Kal av7pepov.
‘O 8 eloayayov TOV olvoy mpos avToOvs Kal mrapokuvas émi thv Iradiav padora kal TpOTOS “Appov Aéyerau yevéa Bau Tuppnvos, a avy emrupavns Kat pucet pee ov Tovnpos, cuppopa é TovavTy Vpnadpevos. mv eémitpotros ratdos opdavovd

tion. He said that during the night just passed, as he was going along the so-called New Street, he was hailed by someone in clear tones, and turned, and saw no man, but heard a voice louder than man’s saying: “ Hark thou! Marcus Caedicius, early in the morning go and tell the magistrates that within a little time they must expect the Gauls.” At this story the tribunes mocked and jested. And a little while after, Camillus suffered his disgrace.

XV. The Gauls were of the Celtic stock, and their numbers were such, as it is said, that they abandoned their own country, which was not able to sustain them all, and set out in quest of another. They were many myriads of young warriors, and they took along with them a still greater number of women and children. Some of them crossed the Rhipaean mountains, streamed off towards the northern ocean, and occupied the remotest parts of Europe; others settled between the Pyrenees and the Alps, near the Senones and the Celtorians, and dwelt there a long time. But at last they got a taste of wine, which was then for the first time brought to them from Italy. They admired the drink so much, and were all so beside themselves with the novel pleasure which it gave, that they seized their arms, took along their families, and made off to the Alps, in quest~of the land which produced such fruit, con- sidering the rest of the world barren and. wild.

The man who introduced wine to them, and was first and foremost in sharpening their appetite for Italy, is said to have been Arron,a Tuscan. He was a man of prominence, and by nature not prone to evil, but had met with the following misfortune. He was guardian of an orphan boy who was heir to

TAOVTM TE TPwWTOV THY ToALT@Y Kal Oavpato-pévou Kar’ eldos, dvopa Aoveovpavos. obras éx veov mapa T@ “Appovt Siavtav exe, Kal peupaxvov ov ouK dm édure THY oixiay, andra. mpoceTroteiro Yaipew cvvav exeivy. Kal TONUY Xpovov ér.dvOave dep DapKars avrov THY yuvaica Kal SiehOappevos vr éxeiyns: Hon be Topp Tov maQous apporepov yeyovoT@y Kal pnr adeivas Thy émiOupiay pnte KpuTrTew ETt Suvapever, 0 O pev veavianos emexel pet pavep as atoomaaas exw THY avOpwrrov, o § avnp émi dStenv endow Kal KPATOUMEVOS wrAnOet dirtov Kal ypnudtwv dSatravats v1rd tov AovKovpwvos é€éXurre THY éavtod: Kal truOopevos Ta TOV Takara HKev es avTous Kal Kabnynoato THS Es tv Iradiav orparetas. .
XVI. Oi & uBarovres evOus expatouv | THS
@pas anv TO mahavov ot Tuppvoi Karetxov, aro TOY “AMrecv en" duporépas Kabnkovoay TAS Jaraccas, @s Kal Tovvoya paptupel TO Oye.
THY bev yap Bopevov Oanratray Adpiay carobow a6 Tuppnvuxijs TOES "Adpias, thy 5é aMpos voToV KEK AMBEV NY aT uKpus Tuppyvuxov TéNAYOS.
Taca © earl Sevdpoputos avTn Kat Opéppaciy
ebBoros Kal Kat dpputos Torapois. Kal Tronens elev oxTrwxaivera Karas Kal peyaras Kal Kare oKevac pévas pos TE XPnpwatic mov EPYATLKMS Kal mpos Startav TAVNYUPLEDS, as ot T'ararat tovs Tuppavous éxBarovtres avtol KaTerXov. ad\ra TavTa pev empaxOn TUXVP Tt Xpovep ‘Tpotepov.
XVII. O¢ dé Pararar TOTE TPOS TOALY Tuppnvida Krovorov oT patevaavres Emoto pKoun. ot dé KAovoivos xataduydvtes él tous “Pwpaious 128

the greatest wealth in the city, and of amazing beauty, Lucumo by name. This Lucumo from his youth up. had lived with Arron, and when he came to man's estate, did not leave his house, but pretended to take delight in his society. He had, however, corrupted Arron's wife, and been corrupted by her, and for a long time kept the thing a secret. But at last the passions of both culprits increased upon them so that they could neither put away their desires nor longer hide them, wherefore the young man made open attempt to remove the woman and have her to wife. Her husband brought the case to trial, but was defeated by Lucumo, owing to the multitude of his friends and his lavish outlays of money, and forsook the city. Learning about the Gauls,-he betook himself to them, and led them on their expedition into Italy.

XVI. The Gauls burst in ands straightway mastered all the country which the Tuscans occupied of old, namely, that stretching from the Alps down to both seas, the names of which bear witness to the story. For the northern sea is called Adria, from the Tuscan city of Adria; the southern is called out-. right the Tuscan Sea. This whole country is studded with trees, has excellent pasturage for flocks and herds, and an abundance of rivers. It had also eighteen cities, large and fair, well equipped for profitable commerce and for sumptuous living. These the Gauls took away from the Tuscans and occupied themselves. But this happened long before the time of which I speak.

XVII. Atthis time the Gauls had marched against the Tuscan city of Clusium and were laying siege - to it. The Clusians applied for assistance to the yTncavto mpecBes Tap avTav Kal ypadupata mpos tovs BapBdpovs. eéréudOnoav 8é Tod PaBiwv yévous tpets avipes evdoxtpoe cal tipas peyaras éxyovres ev TH ode. TovTovs edéEavToO pev of Tardra diravOporras 5a 1d THs 'Pons dvopa, Kal Travodpevol THS TPs TA TELyN WAaXNS eis AOyous curAdOov. ruvOavopévov § avror, 5 te wadovres vd Krovoivev frotev ert tiv Toy, yeraaas o Bactrevs Tov Taratav Bpévvos, ‘Adicodow nas,” épn, “ KyXovaivor ye Kal

Yapav odrynv wer yewpryeiv Suvdpevot, TONAY dé KaTexery afvobvres Kal pH petadidovtes npetv Eévous, ovat Kal TodNobs Kal wéynot. TavTa o dpa kat bpas nodixovr, @ ‘Pawpaior, 7 poTepov pev
"Ar\Bavot xal Didnvatrar cal ‘A pocara, vov 6é Ovnios cal Karnvatat xal jwodXol Parickor Kral Ovorovcrav: éd’ ods tyeis otTpatevortes, dav wy
peTadiodow vpiv tav ayabarv, avdpatrobilerbe Kal XNenraTEeiTe Kal KaTacKaTrTETE TAS TONES
avrar, ovdev ovde byels ye Secvov ovde aSixov TowouvrTes, GAA 7 mpeaButare@ TOV VO [Lov
axorovboivtes, 6 Os TO KpelT Tove Ta TOD NTTOV@Y bidwow d.py.opevos ar6 Tou Bed kal TENEUT OY els Ta Onpia. Kal yap ToUToLS éx pucews € ever Te TO onreip WAEOV exe Ta KpelTTova, TOY UTrobEea TEPODV. Krovaivous 6é mavoacGe trowopKoupévous olKTeipovTes, as pn kal Tadrdtas biddfnre Xpnarovs Kal pido Tippovas yevéoOat Tots bird ‘Papatov adixoupéevors.”
"Ex TovTwv Tov AOyor éyvwcay of ‘Pwpator
Tov Bpévvoy aovpBdras éxovta, nal traped-130
CAMILLUS

Romans, and begged them to send ambassadors in their behalf with a letter to the Barbarians. So there were sent three men of the Fabian gens who were of great repute and honour in the city. The Gauls received them courteously, because of the name of Rome, ceased their attacks upon the city walls, and held conference with them. When they were asked what wrong they had suffered at the hands of the Clusians that they had come up against their city, Brennus, the king of the Gauls, burst into a laugh and said: “ The Clusians wrong us in that, being able to till only a small parcel of earth, they yet are bent on holding a large one, and will not share it with us, who are strangers, many in number and poor. This is the wrong which ye too suffered, O Romans, formerly at the hands of the Albans, Fidenates, and Ardeates, and now lately at the hands of the Veientines, Capenates, and many of the Faliscans and Volscians. Ye march against these peoples, and if they will not share their goods with you, ye enslave them, despoil them, and raze their cities to the ground; not that in so doing ye are in any wise cruel or unjust, nay, ye are but obeying that most ancient of all laws which gives to the stronger the goods of his weaker neighbours, the world over, beginning with God himself and ending with the beasts that perish. For these too are so endowed by nature that the stronger seeks to have more than the weaker. Cease ye, therefore, to pity the Clusians when we besiege them, that ye may not teach the Gauls to be kind and full of pity towards those who are wronged by the Romans.”

From this speech the Roman envoys saw that there was no coming to terms with Brennus, and so they

° 131

K 2
o

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Oovres eis tO Kdotvorov eOdppuvov nai tapoppwv Tous avopas eémekeAOetv toils PBapRBupors pet avTav, elite rHy éxeivwy adKnv Katapaeiv cite THY EQUTOV emetEao Oat Gédorres.
exdpomis dé trav Kdovaiver xat paxns Tapa Ta TelyXn yevouerns els TOV Pafiov, Koivros "Ap-OUCTOS, immrov exo edn racev avtios avépi
peydd kat Kar@ Tandarn TOAU mpoimrmevovre TOV adAXw)?, ayvonbels € év apx 51a TO Thy avvodov ofelav yeverOau Kal Ta Orda TEepihapwrovTa THY ope aTroKpUTTELY. as o emiKpathnoas TH pax
Ka caraBadov éoxueve TOV avO pwrrop, yepiaas
O Bpévvos aurov émepaptupato Beovs, ws mapa
TQ KOWWa Kal vevopiopéeva Taow avOparots bata Kal Sixata mpea Bevtod pev HKovTos, Troe ua de elpryac uevou. KaTaTravaas dé THY paxny avtixa KAovaivous pep ela Xaiperv, emt 3é Thy ‘Popny TOV oTparov nYev. ov Boudopevos Sé do0Fae THY adixiav avtois doTep a LeVvoLs Yeryoveval cal Seopévors Tpopacews, emeprpev eEarta@v émi TL-pewpia Tov dvdpa Kal mpotyev aya TYXONALWS.
XVIII. Ev 6é ‘Poyy Ths BovAns cuvaxDeians
adXot Te WoAAol TOU PaBiov KaTHYyopour, Kal TOV lepéwy ot Kadovpevor Dyriareis evaryov emBecalovres Kal KENEVOVTES TO TOV Tem parypévenv airyos: THY ouyKANTOV eis va Tov aitiov Tpéepacay vTrép ToV aAAwY adociwcacbar.
Tovtous trovs Pntiareis oprrirsos Nopas, Baciréwv TMEPwOTaToS YEvOuEvOS cal Stxavoraros, aad e pudaxas bev eipnvns, erruyvepovas dé BeBawwrdas aitiov, at obv dixn mméodepov CUvaTTTOVGL.
132

13

| aad

CAMILLUS

slipped into Clusium, and emboldened and incited its citizens to sally out against the Barbarians with them, either because they wished to discover the prowess of those warriors or to display their own. The Clusians made a sally, and in the fight which raged along the walls one of the Fabii, Quintus Ambustus, drove his horse straight at a stately and handsome Gaul who was riding far out in front of the rest. At first he was not recognized, because the conflict came swiftly to pass and his dazzling armour hid his face. But when he had conquered and un- horsed his foe and was stripping his arms from him, then Brennus recognized him, and called upon the gods to witness how, contrary to the general practice of all mankind, which was deemed just and holy, he had come as an ambassador, but had wrought as -an enemy. Then, putting a stop to the battle, he straightway let the Clusians alone, and led his host against Rome. But not wishing to have it thought that his people were rejoiced at the outrage, and only wanted some pretext for war, he sent and demanded the offender for punishment, and in the meantime advanced but slowly.

XVIII. When the Senate convened in Rome, many denouhced the Fabii, and especially the priests called Fetiales were instant in calling upon the Senate in the name of all the gods to turn the curse of what had been done upon the one guilty man, and so to make expiation for the rest.

These Fetiales were instituted by Numa Pompilius, "gentlest and justest of kings, to be the guardians of peace, as well as judges and determiners of the grounds on which war could justly be made.

133

2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Ths dé Bovarjs ert Tov Sfjwov dveveyKawevns
TO Tparypa Kal TOY iepéwy Spova Too Pafiov
KATNYOPOUVTOD, ovTm mepBproay oi ToAXol Ta Ocia xa KaTeyéhacay, @oTe Kal xidLapxov
atrodetEa Tov PaBuov pera Tav adeApav. ot dé KeArol mubopevor tavta Kal XareTras pepovTes ovoey épmrod@v em ovobvTo THs orovdns, Gd ex pour Tavtt Taxel Kai mpos TO TAO os avrav
Kal THY Lapmpornta. THS TAapacKeuns Ka Biav
Kal Oupov excTreThyy WEVOV Tap dia péoou, Kal THY TE Nopav aToAwAévat Tacay non Kat TAS modes evOvs atrordctaOar Soxovvrar, Tap éd-midas ovdey dixouv oud edu Bavov éx TOV

ary pay, ana wal Tapa Tas TOAES eyydS mapeg-LOVES éBowv emi rv ‘Pony mopever Oar Kal
LOvots Tohepety ‘Pwpaiow, tovs & ddXous di-Nous émioracbat.
Tovadry dé Hpomeveoy ope TOV BapBdpov
eEiryov or XiMapyxot TOUS ‘Pwpaiovs érri TOV aryava, ae pev ovn évdecis (eyévovTo yap omhiras TeTpaKia wuploy ovK éddacous), avaaK TOUS dé Tous pease Kal TOTE IWpwToOV
GTTOMEVOUS Ordon. éTL efnwednro Ta TOV
Geay avrois ovTE seins ore pavrecs & mpo xwdvvov Kat _ Baxns ELKOS ig epopevors.
ovdeves bé TTOV emeTapat rev 7 mohvapyxia Ta TPATTOMena. Kaitou 7 poTepov Ye Kal 1 pos eharrovas ayavas eltNovTo TONAGKLS povapyous, ods _Ateraropas Kanovow, oux ayvoobrres, daov early els emeagpani Kaipov Opedos pag Xp@pevovs yop pos avuT evOvvov apxny éy ‘xepal THY Sten éxovcay evtaxtely, ovy Hxtota O€ Kat 134

CAMILLUS

The Senate referred the matter to the people, and although the priests with one accord denounced Fabius, the multitude so scorned and mocked at religion as to appoint him military tribune, along with his brothers. The Gauls, on learning this, were wroth, and suffered nothing to impede their haste, but advanced with all speed. What with their numbers, the splendour of their equipment, and _their furious violence, they struck terror wherever they came. Men thought the lands about their cities lost already, and their cities sure to follow at once. But contrary to all expectation the enemy did them no harm, nor took aught from their fields, but even as they passed close by their cities shouted out that they were marching on Rome and warred . only on the Romans, but held the rest as friends.

Against this onset of the Barbarians the military tribunes led the Romans forth to battle. They were not inferior in numbers, being no fewer than forty thousand men-at-arms, but most of them were un- trained, and h€d never handled weapons before. Besides, they had neglected all religious rites, having - neither sacrificed with good omens, nor consulted the prophets as was meet before the perils of battle. But what most of all confounded their undertakings was the number of theircommanders. And yet before this, and on the brink of lesser struggles, they had often chosen a single commander, with the title of Dictator, not unaware how great an advantage it is, when confronting a dangerous crisis, to be of one mind in paying obedience to an authority which is absolute, and holds the scales of justice in its own hands. Moreover, their unfair treatment of Camillus

135

Kapidros aryvepovn Gels éBrawe Ta Tpayyara, Tov £1) 7WPOS xapw pndé KodNaxKevovTas apyeu poBepov yevopevon.
IIpoehGovres oby ano THS TTrOAEwS aradious évevijcovTa mapa tov *AXiav TOT a pov nuAL-cOncav, ov Toppw TOD aTpaToTrédov TO OvpuPprd.
ouppepopevor. evtaida dé TOV BapBapov emupavevTov ala xX pas ayovig apevot be atratiav eT pat ovTo. haa TO pep dpia Tepov Képas evdus ;

éuBadovtes €iS TOV TOTApov ot Kenrol 5iépOerpay TO 6€ devon brexxhivav THV emupopav éx Tov Trediov pos TOUS dogous HT TOV éfexorrn:
kal dueFerrecov amo TOUTED els THY Tov ot
TONAOL. tois 8 adrous, GoOl TOV TONELLWD
GTELTOVT@OY TPOS TOV povov éoa0naar, els
Ounious ai puyal bua VUKTOS eay, Ws THS.

‘Pens otyouévns Kal tov éxel WdvTwV aTro-NWAOTOY.
XIX, "Exyévero 87 paxn pera TpoTras Oepwvas TEpl THY Tavaehnvov, 7 Kal ™ pOTepov npépa peya mabos auveBn TO Tept TOUS PaBious TpLaKOo LoL
yap éx Tob yévous avdpes t bre Tuppnvev avnpebn-cap. expatyae dé THY mpépay amo Ths Sevrépas
ntrns “Adtada péxype viv xareicGar dia tov TOTaMOv.
Tleph o NMEPOY aroppaiwv, elite ypt) TiWecOat
Twas, eire opBais ‘H paxrertos émréT An Eev ‘Hovde
Tas bev aryabas TEOLOVHEVO, Tas dé avras, @sS ayvoourTt puawy 7 MEpAs aT aons pula ovoay, erépwOe Sintropnrat. ™7 8 UToKetpev7 ypadn TO pynpovedoat trapaderypdtwor driywv icws adv 136

138

was in no slight degree fatal to discipline, since it was now dangerous to hold command without paying regard to the pleasure and caprice of the people.

They advanced from the city about eleven miles, and encamped along the river Allia, not far from its confluence with the Tiber. There the Barbarians came suddenly upon them, and after a disorderly and shameful struggle, they were routed. Their left wing was at once driven into the river by the Gauls and destroyed; their right wing was less cut up, because it withdrew before the enemy's onset from the plain to the hills, from which most of them made their way back to the city. The rest, as many as escaped the enemy's hands, which were weary with slaughter, fled by night to Veii. They thought that Rome was lost and all her people slain.

XIX. The battle! took place just after the summer solstice when the moon was near the full, on the very day of a former great disaster, when three hundred men of the Fabian gens had been cut to pieces by the Tuscans. But the second defeat was so much the worse that the day on which it fell is called down to the present time "dies Alliensis," from the river.

Now concerning " dies nefasti,'" or unlucky days, whether we must regard some as such, or whether Heracleitus was right in rebuking Hesiod for calling some days good and some bad, in his ignorance that the nature of every day is one and the same,—this question has been fully discussed elsewhere. Still, even in what I am now writing, the mention of a few

1 390 B.C.

>

137

3

PLUTARCH'S UIVES

appocere. TOUTO pev toivuy Bowwrtois 'Irrrodpo-pio pqvos, as Oo 'AGnvaior Karovow 'Exarop-Bavévos, t tora peévov TENT TD Svo AaBeivy cuvéBn Vikas eT veo Tatas, als TOUS "Eddqvas nrceulépocay, THY TE mept Aeverpa Kal THY én Kepyco@ TAUTNS T pOoTepov ETEGL mAetoo ty i) Staxociors, 6 OTE Aarrapuay Kat Oeccarors évixnoav. TovTo o av Tad Hépoae _Bqvos Bondpopsdvos € extn pev év Mapafan, tpitn & ép Ivarasais aya Kal mept Muxdrny HT THOT ay vTO TOV 'EdAjvor, TET TD dé POivovros év "ApBy rots. ot & 'A@n-vaiot kal THv mepl Nd€ov é évixwv Vavpaxlay, Hs XaBpias ¢ ea TpaTnyel, TOU Bondpoprdvos qept Thy Tava€ehnvor, év bé€ Larapive Tepl Tas eixddas,

@sS npiv év 7@ Ilept TEpaV amrobebecT a. év7)- voye Oé Kal O Oapyn ov pny ToLs BapBapors

€TLONAWS aruxias Kal yap AnréEav6pos él Tpank@ TOUS Baciréws aTpaTHYyovs Oapynrcavos évixnoe, Kal Kapxndoveoe Tept DeKeALAY bio Teporeovtos 7 NTT OVTO TH éBdoun POivorTos, Tmept iy doxet Kal To Tdtov arava, @apyndtovos, as “Egdopos Kal Karnuo Bévns ral Aapaorns Kai Dvrapxos loTopyKacty. avaTranuv & o Mertayecr-viov, 6 ov Bowwrol Tlavepov Karodou, Tots "EX-AoW OvVK evpevns ryéryove. TOUTOU yap Tov pNvos éS8oun Kal tTHy év Kpavevt paynv qnrrndevtes UT “Avtumatpov TEAEWS aT @ONOVTO, Kal TpOTEepov év Xarpwveig pax opevot TOs Diderarov nTuxynoav.
THS 6 auris mpépas TAUTNS év T@ Metayerrnare
KAT TOV aQUuTov éviavTov ot per "Apyeddyov d1a-Bavres ets ‘Itadiav veo tav éxet BapBapwr
' @apynA:avos deleted by Bekker, after Reiske.
ef 38

examples may not be amiss. To begin with, then, it was on the fifth day of the month of Hippodromius (which the Athenians call Hecatombaeon) that the Boeotians won two illustrious victories which set the Greeks free: that at Leuctra, and that at Ceressus more than two hundred years earlier, when they conquered Lattamyas and the Thessalians. Again, on the sixth day of the month of Boedromion the Greeks defeated the Persians at Marathon, on the third day at Plataea and Mycale together, and on the twenty-sixth day at Arbela. Moreover, it was about full moon of the same month that the Athenians won their sea-fight off Naxos, under the command of Chabrias, and about the twentieth, that at Salamis, as has been set forth in my treatise “On days.” Further, the month of Thargelion has clearly been a disastrous one for the Barbarians, for in that month the generals of the King were conquered by Alex- ander at the Granicus, and on the twenty-fourth of the month the Carthaginians were worsted by Timoleon off Sicily. On this day, too, of Thargelion, it appears that Ilium was taken, as Ephorus, Callisthenes, Damastes, and Phylarchus have stated. Contrary- wise, the month of Metageitnion (which the Boeotians call Panemus) has not been favourable to the Greeks. On the seventh of this month they were worsted by Antipater in the battle of Crannon, and utterly un- done ; before this they had-fought Philip unsuccess- fully at Chaeroneia on that day of the month ; and in the same year, and on the same day of Metageitnion, Archidamus and his army, who had crossed into Italy, were cut to pieces by the Barbarians there.

6 dvefOdpnoayv. Kapyndovior 8& rhv évdrnv $6i-

VOVTOS WS TA THEloTA Kal péyloTAa TOV aTUYnpd-TWY avTOIS del hépovcay TapadvAdTTOVE LW.
Ovx dyvo0d 8 6ts wept Tov TOV pvaTNpiwV KaLpoV avOus O7nBai te eateoxnadynoav v6 'AreEdvdpou, kal pera tadrta ppovpav 'AOnvaios Maxeddévev édéEavro repli abtny tHv eixdda tod Bondpopd-7 vos, 7 Tov pvaTtiKxov "laxyov éEdyovow. opotws
5é 'Pwpaios tis abris nuépas mpotepov pev vd KipBpov To peta Kasrriwvos améBadov oTpare-medov, vatepov dé AovxovdAXov oTpaTnyouvTos
"A ppevious Kat _Teypaygy évixnoay. "ATTAAOS 5
o Bactrevs nai Toprnios Mayvos € €v TOLS eauT ay yeveriors an éBavov. Kal 6XosS earl ToNNOUS em dpporepa Tais avrais ypnoapévous arobettar meptodous.
8 'AdAd 'Popators atrn pia TOV pamora aTroppddwr é éorl, Kal bv avtny éxdorou pnvos erepar duo, THS Wpos TO cup Pav evra Betas cal decordacpovias emt melon, GoTrep elwOe, pveions. Tavita pev ovv év t@ Tlept airvav 'Pwpaixdy émipenré-oTEpOV Sunpntas.
XX. Mera 8é THY paxny éxetyny el pev evOus emnxonovOnaay of Taddrtat tots dhevyovawy, obdév dv éx@dvce THY 'Poyny apdnv avaipeOnvar Kat mavTas dmonred Bau TOUS €v AUTH caTarerpbevras:
TOTOUTOY ot pEvyorTes éverpyalovto Seta TOUS
Drrovex opevors, kat Too auTnS mah eveTipTavro
2 rapax7s Kal Tapa porns. yuvi é amatig TOU peyébous oi BdpBapos ris vinns Kal pds ebm dbet-140

CAMILLUS

The Carthaginians also regard with fear the twenty- second of this month, because it has ever brought upon them the worst and greatest of their misfortunes.

I am not unaware that, at about the time when the mysteries are celebrated, Thebes was razed to the ground for the second time by Alexander, and that afterwards the Athenians were forced to receive a Macedonian garrison on the twentieth of Bue-dromion, the very day on which they escort the mystic Iacchus forth in procession. And likewise the Romans, on the self-same day, saw their army under Caepio destroyed by the Cimbri, and later, when Lucullus was their general, conquered Tigranes and the Armenians. Both King Attalus and Pompey the Great died on their own birth-days. In short, one can adduce many cases where the same times and seasons have brought opposite fortunes upon the same men.

But this day of the Allia is regarded by the Romans as one of the unluckiest, and its influence extends over two other days of each month throughout the year, since in the presence of calamity, timidity and superstition often overflow all bounds. However, this subject has been more carefully treated in my " Roman Questions."' !

XX. Now had the Gauls, after this battle, followed hard upon the fugitives, naught would have hindered Rome from being utterly destroyed and all those who 'remained in her from perishing, such was the terror which the fugitives infused into the occupants of the city, and with such confusion and delirium were they themselves once more filled. But as it was, the Barbarians could not realize the magnitude of their

1' Morals, pp. 269 f.

av €K Tov Teptyapo's dua Kal veprnoes TAV
A t éawxotwv ev TO aTpaToTéd@ Ypyu"aToY TpaTro-pHEvol, TH pev EximTovT. THS ToAEwS GYA@
¢ , A 4 bf , >] YG \
pastavny duyis wapécyov, éeXmicat & ett Kal
A 4
TapacKkevacacGat Tols UmTopévevot. THY yap
,
aAAnv TroALv Tpoguevoe TO Katritoov eppdkavro
, \ , > 4 \ a
3 Béreor kal Siateyiopaciw. év mpwtos Sé TaV iepov & pev eis TO Kamtt@dov avecnevacarTo, [fe A € nA
To 6€ Tip THS Eotias at wapBévo. peta Tav
e a " e 4
LEep@VY EepEevyov apTracapeval. ; 139
Kairoz revés ovdéev elvat to hpoupovpevoy vm'
b A a A A wv e la) la! avrav érepov 4) Tip adOtTov iatopodat, Nopa
A / Tov Bactréws KaTacTHOAVTOS WS apKXnVY aTaYTwY
, , 3 A / A

4 céBecOar. Kwntixwtatov yap év rH dvcet TovUTO:
/ A , /
Kivnots O€ Tis } OU TLL KLVHOEL TraVT@S 1 ryéveE-
\ b ” a 4 / ,
ais: Ta 5 - adda THs BrANs popta Oepporntos
\ / \ a : €midtTovens apya KEelweva Kal vexpois eorKoTa na \ A
mole THY TOU Tupos SUVapLY, ws YuynY, Kal mpocenGovons apas yé tas eri ro Spav tt Kal Tacyew Tpémetat. Toit ovv are bn TepiTTOV
¥ \ A \ , ” a) ,
avépa tov Nopav cal Noyov éxovra tais Movcass
a \ 4 b a \ a cuveiva. dua codiav éEoormcat nal dpovpety
4 > / a
aKoiuntov év elKove THS TA TdvTa KoopmovenNs PeO / , e \ \ fo) C4 b
5 aidiov Suvdpews. ot Sé 7O wey wip, domeEep Tap
/ a “EAAnot, mpd iepov aifecOar xaddpotov, adr\a
\ \ a dé Ta évTos aBéata KpiTrecOat TacL, TAY Tav-
a / a e 4 ? ,
Tals Tais TrapOévous, as ‘Eotidbas érrovouatovor, 142

CAMILLUS

victory, and in the excess of their joy, turned to revelry and the distribution of the good things captured in their enemy’s camp. For this reason the throngs who were for abandoning the city had ample time for flight, and those who were for remaining plucked up hope and prepared to defend themselves. Abandoning the rest of the city, they fenced the Capitol with ramparts and stocked it. with missiles. But their first care was for their sacred things, most of which they carried away to the Capitol; the fire of Vesta, however, was snatched up and carried off by the vestal virgins in their flight, along with the other sacred things entrusted to their care. However, some writers state that these virgins have watch and ward over nothing more than the ever-living fire, which Numa the King appointed to be worshipped as the first cause of all things. For fire produces more motion than anything else in nature, and all birth is a mode of motion, or is accompanied by motion. All other portions of matter, in the absence of heat, lie inert and dead, yearning for the force of fire to inform them, like a spirit, and on its accession in any manner soever, they become capable of acting and being acted upon. This principle of fire, then, Numa, who was an extra- ordinary man, and whose wisdom gave him the repute of holding converse with the Muses, is said to have hallowed and ordered to be kept sleepless, that it might image forth the ever-living force which orders the universe aright. Others say that this fire is kept burning before the sacred things by way of purification, as among the Greeks, and that other objects within the temple are kept hidden from the gaze of all except these virgins, whom they call

143

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

\ A \ , A \ oo N
Kat mmEloTos pev AOYOs KaTetxye TO Tpwixov éxetvo HadXadsov atroxeiaOar Sc Alvetov xopaOév eis "Irariav. eciol & of ra YapoOpaxia uvOoroyoodvres Adpdavov péev eis Tpotav é£evey-Kd {Levov opyudcat Kat KaGrepacar KTidavTa TH
mworw, Aivetav &é mept Thy adwow exxderpavta dtacaaat pexpe Ths év Itadia Katoxnoews. ot dé mpootrorovpevor mwAEOV énictracOai tt Tept 4 4 b 4 9 n 4
toutwy dvo dacly ov peydXous amoKxetcOat Ti-Oovs, @y Tov pév avemydTa Kal, Kevov, Tov 6é TwANpH Kal KaTaceonpacpévoyv, aphotépous Se
tais travayéot povats trapOévors oparovs eivat.
Gdrror Sé rovrous Sueweicbar vopifovar re Ta aA le) U
TrEloTA TOV iepav TOoTE TAS KOpas éuBaXdovoas
3 oA 7 4 wa ig A N \ A ets TriOous Sv0 Kpipar KaTa ys Ud Tov vewy TOD
/ "A A a
Kupivou, cai tov totrov éxeivov ért Kal viv Tav iOicxwv pépecOat thy érwvupiav.
XXI. Ta 8€ cupsoratra K@l péytora trav iepav avra: AaBovoat huyh Tapa Tov totapmoy érot-An A >? , > A 4 b , odvTo THY aTroywpnow. evrav0a Aevnwos 'AXBiyios! dvnp Snpuorixds év Tois hevyouow éruxe Téxva varia Kal yuvaixa peTa ypnudtov dvay-
, > e¢ e , ¢ ' N
kaiwy ép apakéns trexxopuifwv. ws 8 elde ras
mapOévous év Trois KOoATrols epovcas Ta TeV
Oeayv iepa Oéparreias epyjpovs mapatropevopmévas
Kal kaxotra0ovaas, TaxXd THY yuvaixa peta TaY
Taidwv Kal TOY XpnuaTwv KaBedX@v ATO THs
apudkns éxeivais Tapédwxev émiBnvar Kxai éd&a-1 "AABlnos S and Livy, v. 40: "AABSivos.

144

Vestals. And a very prevalent story had it that the famous Palladium of Troy was hidden away there, having been brought to Italy by Aeneas. There are some who say that it is the Samothracian images which are hidden there, and they tell the tale of Dardanus bringing these to Troy, after he had founded that city, and consecrating them there with celebration of their rites; and of Aeneas, at the capture of Troy, stealing them away and preserving them until he settled in Italy. Others still, pretend- ing to have larger knowledge in these matters, say that-two small jars are stored away there, of which one is open and empty, and the other full and sealed up, and that both are visible only to the holy virgins. But others think that these knowing ones have been led astray by the fact that the virgins, at the time of which 1 am now speaking, cast the most of their sacred treasures into two jars, and hid them under- ground in the temple of Quirinus, whence that place, down to the present time, has the name of " Doliola," or " Jars."

XXI. However that may be, these virgins took the choicest and most important of the sacred objects and fled away along the river. There it chanced that Lucius Albinius, a man of the common people, was among the fugitives, carrying off his wife and little children, with the most necessary household goods, upon a waggon. When he saw the virgins with the sacred symbols of the gods in their bosoms, making their way along unattended and in great distress, he speedily took his wife, with the children and the household goods, down from the waggon, and suffered the virgins to mount upon it and make uyely els teva Tov 'EAAnVidwYv TOAEwV. THY ey obv 'AdBuwiou ampos To Oetov evrAdBevav Kat TOMMY év ois emtiapanred TAT 015 Kawpots éxdavij yevopevny OUK abuov HV a dyn LovevTov mapereiv.

Or 8 rav addeov Gedy iepets of Te ynpasol Tav UTaTLK@Y Kal OptapBicav avdp@v THY wey TroALY éxhumreiy ovxX vIréuevav, iepas 5é Kal Aapmpas dvaraBovres éaOnras, e€nyoupevov PaBiov TOD dpxcepéws, émevEdpevor tois Oeois, ws EavTous UTEP THS marpibos ™@ Satpove cabvepodvres, ent
TOV ehepavTivey Sipe ev dryopa exddnvro |
KEKOO LNpévol, THY émovoay TUYNY UTopévorTes.
XXII. Tpiry é amo Tis paxns nH pg Taphy
O Bpévvos a aryov emt Thy TOA TO oTparevpa: Kat
Tas TE mUhas evpav avery pévas kal Ta Téeyn
purdxeov épnua, _Tp@rov peev édevoev évébpav Kal donov, aT La T OV od mavrdanacw ametpy-Kévat TOUS 'Popaiors. émret 8 eyve TO arndés, elaerdoas dia tHS KodAlvns mirns ere thy
'Popny éfjovra kal Tpraxoatoy er av Thetova,
Bpayd Xpovov aT THS KTLTEWS éXovaap, el T@

TLoTOV arocwkerbat TWA TOV Xpovery ax piSear, ols Kal meph vewTépov adNwv aphis Barna " ouyXuaLs exeivn TAperye. Tov pévroe wda0ous avrou Kal Tis aAXwoews Eorxev apu8pd TLS evOus els THY ‘EAA aba one bier Oeiv. ‘Hpaxneidns yap ) Tlovrexos Ov TOA THY Ypovav exeLveov arronet~ TOMEVOS év 7? Tlept yrux7ns cuyypaupari onow amo THS éoTrépas Aoryov Katacxelv, as oTPATOS
é& ‘Tre pBop ov €Meav éEwlev npnros moduy ‘EdAnvida ‘Pwynv, éxet mov Kat@xnuevny trept
1 éxd@nvro with all MSS. and editors: xa@jvro.

146:

14(

CAMILLUS

their escape to a Greek city. This pious act of Albinius,and the conspicuous honour which he showed the gods in a season of the greatest danger, could not well be passed over in silence.

But the priests of the other gods, and the aged men who had been consuls and celebrated triumphs, could not endure to leave the city. So they put on their robes of state and ceremony, following the lead of Fabius, the pontifex maximus, and vowed the gods that they would devote themselves to death in their country’s behalf. Then they sat themselves down, thus arrayed, on their ivory chairs in the forum, and a awaited their fate.

XXII. On the third day after the battle, Brennus came up to the city with hisarmy. Finding its gates open and its walls without defenders, at first he feared a treacherous ambush, being unable to believe that the Romans were in such utter despair. But when he realised the truth, he marched in by the Colline gate, and took Rome. This was a little more than three hundred and sixty years from her foundation, if one can believe that any accurate chronology has been preserved in this matter, when that of even later events is disputed, owing to the confusion caused by this very disaster. However, it would seem that some vague tidings of the calamity and capture of the city made their way at once to Greece. For Heracleides Ponticus, who lived not long after that time, in his treatise “On the soul,” saysthat out of the West a story prevailed, how an army of Hyper- boreans had come from afar and captured a Greek city called Rome, situated somewhere on the shores

147
L 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 Thy peyddAny Odraccav. ovK dv ovv Oavpdcapt pv0edn Kat Tac patiay 6vTa TOV ‘Hpa-Krelony arnbet hoy T@ Tept Tis AN@a ews
emiKopmaaat TOUS ‘TarepBopéous Kal TV peyadnv Odrarrav. "A piororedns 5é 0 hirdaodos TO pév ahavas THY TOMY vTr0 Kerrov axprBas dHAGS éoTW aknKkows, Tov Oé cacavTa Aevxtoy elvat gdynow: qv 5&é Mdpxos, od Aevxtos, 0 KdprXos.
GNA TadTAa pev elkac up NENEKT AL. :
4 Karacxov dé THY ‘Poynv) Bpévyos TO pev
Kamirorip ppoupav TepLeaThaey, avros 6€ Kata-
* Baivev bu’ aryopas eOavpate TOUS mpoxadnpévous dydpas év Koo Wp Kat oLwoT] Dewpevos, OS 00" bmeEaveotnaay emriovTa@y Trohepioy ovr oyu ” Xpoay éTpevrar, andra padipos Kal GOES EeryKe-Kdepevor Tois oKiTwoLD, ‘ods épdpoup,} wal 1 poa-
5 Brerovtes adXiprors nobyalor. nV obv Oadua

Tots Tadarass mpos Thy atotiav, Kal TOY

ovoy oxvoovtes apacOat Kal mpooenBeiv WS
Kpeittroot Suntropovy. ere Sé ToAunoas tis &e& QUuT@V eyyus Taperrn [asreupip Madpco Kat mpocaryayanv THY Xelpa T PAWS pare TOU yevelou Kal Karirye THY vITnUNV Bad clay ovaay, o pep Ilazreipios TH Baxrnpia Thy «Kepanrny avrou
mardtas ouvérpipev, 6 8 BapBapos oTac auevos
6 Thy paxarpay GTrEKTELVED éxetvov. éx dé ToUTOU
Kat TOUS ouTrous avypouv TpoaTreovTes, Kat TOV arXrwy scots emuTbxovev Sexp@vTo, Kal Tas oixias
emopOour | ép’ He pas TOAAAS dryovres kat épovres, elra KaTeTipmpacay Kai KATES KAT TOV
opytfouevoe toils éyovot +o Kamitodov, bre
1 épdpouy with S: Ipepos.

of the Great Sea. Now I cannot wonder that so fabulous and fictitious a writer as Heracleides should deck out the true story of the capture of Rome with his “ Hyperboreans”’ and his “Great Sea.” But Aristotle the philosopher clearly had accurate tidings of the capture of the city by the Gauls, and yet he says that its saviour was Lucius, although the fore- name of Camillus was not Lucius, but Marcus. How- ever, these details were matters of conjecture.

When he had occupied Rome, Brennus surrounded the Capitol with a guard. He himself went down through the forum, and was amazed to see the men sitting there in public state and perfect silence. They neither rose up to meet their enemies when they approached, nor did they change countenance or colour, but sat there quietly, at ease and without fear, leaning on their staves and gazing into one another’s faces. The Gauls were amazed and per- plexed at the unwonted sight, and for a long time hesitated to approach and touch them, regarding them as superior beings. But at last one of them, plucking up his courage, drew near Papirius Marcus, and stretching out his hand, gently grasped his chin and stroked his long beard, whereupon Papirius, with his staff, smote him a crushing blow on the head. Then the Barbarian drew his sword and killed him. After that, they fell upon the rest and slew them, made away with every one else they met, sacked and plundered the houses of the city for many days together, and finally burned them down and levelled them with the ground, in their wrath at the defenders of the Capitol. For these would not

N

KaXovvTM@Y avTaV ovx UmnKovor, GANA Kal 7 poo-Baddovar mAnyas éocav aro ToD Siareryiopa-
TOS dpuvopevot. dua Tadra pev oby éXNupnvavTo THY modu Kal mpoa diépOerpav TOUS ato Kopevovs, opolws pev avdpas Kal yuvaixas, opoiws 5é mpec-Boras xat rratéas.
XXIII. Tis 6 vrorsopxias wjxos ANapBavovons emiottia pod Tots Tanrdrais eu: kal SLeNOvTES EaUTOUS Ob peVv TO Bacrnret TA pApevovTes éppovpouv TO Kamuréduoy, ot b THY xopav mepviovTes éhenatouv Kal Tas Ko pas eropbouv T™pooTrt-TTOVTES, ovxX opod TAVTES, aAXot 6 arAn Kal” myepovias Kal cuvTaypara, T peya ppoveiy UTO TOV evTUX maT ov Kal dedtevat pdev atrooKLOvapEvoL. TO b¢ TreloTov avTov Kal pdduora guvTeTaypevov éyepet Tpos THY ‘Apoearav TOALW, év 7 diéTpuBe Kadpirros apy@v rais mpager peTa THY guyny Kal uorrevor, eamidas bé ae ae Kal draroytia pos ovx! TO ANabeiv Kat Staguyely TOUS . Toneptous aryaTOVTOS avdpos, GXr ores, ét Taparyevorro KaLpOs, apuvetras oKOTODVTOS. bio Kal Tovs "Apdedtas o opay mArnOeu pev txavovs évTas, evoeets Oe TOAMNS de arretpiav Kal paraxiav TOV OT PATHYOD, evéBare Aoyov ets TOUS vEOUS mparov, @s ov Yp7 THY “Pwpator druxiay avdpeiav Kerrov voutcery, ovd a KAKOS
ppovncact | ouveBn madety exelvous épya TOV

ovdev eis TO ViKHOAL TAPATXovTav, ana TUXNS érriderEw ajyetoOar. Karov pep ouv elvat Kab bia xivdvvav andcacbat moheLov addopudov
Kat BapBapixov, @ Tob Kpareiy mépas, dot ep 7
Tupi, StapOaphvat TO ViK@pevov' ov pnVY AAAw 150
CAMILLUS

surrender at their summons, but when they were attacked, actually repulsed their foes from the ramparts with loss. Therefore the Gauls inflicted every outrage upon the city, and put to the sword all whom they captured, men and women, old and young alike.

XXIII. The siege lasted a long time, and the Gauls began to lack provisions. They therefore divided their forces. Some remained with their king and watched the Capitol, others ravaged the country round about, falling upon the villages and sacking them, not all together in one body, but scattered about by commands and companies, some here, some there, moved by their successes to great confidence and the fear of nothing. The largest and best disciplined body of them marched upon the city of Ardea, where Camillus was staying since his exile. He lived in complete retirement and privacy, it is true, but cherished the hopes and plans not of a man who eagerly desired to escape the notice and hands of the enemy, but of one who sought to avenge him- self upon them if occasion offered. Wherefore, see- ing that the Ardeans were of sufficient numbers, but lacked courage, through the inexperience and effemi- nacy of their generals, he began to reason with the young men first, to the effect that the mishap of the Romans ought not to be laid to the valour of the Gauls, nor the sufferings of that infatuated people to the prowess of men who did not deserve their victory, but rather to the dictates of fortune. It was a fine thing, he said, even at dangerous risks, to repel the attack of an alien and barbarous folk, whose only end in getting the mastery was, as in the work of fire, the utter destruction of what it conquered. But

151

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kal Gappotor Kal slat mpansten avTois axiv-duvov épv Kalp@ THY viny qapetety.
Tovtous TOUS Aoyous Tov vévy befapéveav émrl Tous
dpxovras Heb Kal TOUS tpoBovhous TOV "Apdearay
0 Kapsrros. OS b¢ KAKELVOUS cuvérreicey, Grice TOUS éy nALKia mdavras Kal ouveixe TOU TeUxous evTOs, dyvoeia Bat Bovdopevos bao TOV Tmrohepiooy éryryus GvT@v. émrel 6¢ THV X@pav imma d.pevot Kat Bapeis OVTES UTTO wAHOous TOV dryopévev Kal hepopévwv apLEers Kal oALyopws eV To medio KaTeaTpaton édeva ap, éx be TOUTOU wok erie peOvovow avtois Kal stam KATETXE TO oTparo-

medov, Tudopevos Taira Tapa, TOV: KATATKOTTOV
0 Kaptrros ebipye TOUS ‘Apoearas Kal beh Bow Kal? nouxiav Tov perafvu Tomov Tepl péoas vocTas mpooewute TO ydpaxt Kpauy Te @[LEVOS TOAAH Kal Tais oddaruyee mavraxobev KTapar-
TOV avOparrous KaK@s UIT péOns Kal bors ék Tov vITveDV avadépovtas Tpos TOV JopuBov.
oALyot pev ouv avavnyavTes év T@ $08 wa LacKevad duevor TOUS jept Tov KapsdAov uTré-oTHTAaV, WOT dpuvopevot meaeiy- TOUS 5é amaeaTous éTt KpaToupevous vrve Kal olv@ KATANA Bavovres dvoTthous ExTewov. door Oe VUKTOS am éSpacav éx Tov Xdpacos ov TOANOL, TOVTOUS pe? TMepav omopdias éy TH Yopa Scapepopevous émreNauvovTes larmets SudpOevpov.
XXIV. ‘H & oyun TaXU Siayyéddouca THY mpatw émi tas monets éFexanetro TONAOVS TOV
év nrukta TVVLTTAMEVOUS, padora dé “Popatev Scot Siaduydvtes ex tis én’ "Ada payns ev Ovniows Foav: Kal wdvporTo Kata opas avTous, 152

14]

CAMILLUS

in the present case, if they were bold and zealous, he would find occasion to give them a victory without any danger.

After gaining the support of the young men, Camillus went to the rulers and councillors of Ardea, and when he had won them over also, he armed all who were of age for service and kept them together within the walls, that they might not be perceived by the enemy, who were near. These had scoured the country round about, and encamped in the plain, without care or concern, and heavily encumbered with their abundant booty. When night had fallen upon them, putting an end to their carousals, and silence reigned throughout their camp, Camillus, acquainted with this by his scouts, led forth the Ardeans. Passing quietly over the intervening space, they reached the camp about midnight, and with shouts and trumpet blasts on every hand confounded the men, who were scarcely brought to their senses by the din, heavy as they were with drunkenness and sleep. A few of them were sobered by fear, armed themselves, and made resistance to Camillus and his men, so that they fell fighting ; but most were still mastered by sleep and wine when they were fallen upon and slain without their arms. <A few only ran from the camp, under cover of darkness, and when day came, were seen straggling about the fields, but horsemen pursued them and cut them to pieces.

XXIV. Rumour quickly carried news of this ex- ploit to the neighbouring cities, and called to arms many of those who were of age for service, particu- larly the Romans who had made their escape from the battle on the Allia, and were in Veii. These

"Olov jryenova tis "Pawpuns o Saipov adedopevos "Apdedtas éxdopnoe trois Kapidrou xatopbe- pacw, dé yewapévn nal Opéraca rTovodTov dvipa mons olxyetat Kal dmdv\wrevy. pyeis 5 drropig oTPATNHYOV adAOT pla rein meptBanro- pévoe Kabrucba Pog wevor THY 'Tradav. Pépe, Trépapavres 'Apoedras crranT apev TOV éavToY atparnyov, AaBovres avTol Ta Gra TpOS éxelvov Badilwpev ovKért "yap éott duyas ovd' npets TohiTaL Trarpidos ouK vans, anna Kpatou- pévns vd TOV TONEPLOV. tavt édo€e wal Teprpavres edéovro TOU Kapidndou déxer Bau THY apynv. 0.6€ ovx é&dn MpOorepov 7}) Tovs ev TO Kamran sronitas éerindicacbat Kata Tov vopov. éxelvous yap wyeta Oa marpiba aowto- pévous, kal Kedevovot pev UTaKovety mpodupas, axovTov Sé pydev TOUT ParyLOVTT EL. THS pev ovv evraBeias xal Karoxayabias Trov Kdpsrrov Cavpacav. hv 8 aropia tov tradta Sdiayye- hovvros ets TO Kamitodov: paddov é OXWS advvarov edoxer TOV TONEpLOV EXOVT@V THY TOLD aryyenXov eis THY dx porrodtv mapereiv.

XXV. "Hy 45 ts ev Tois véors Tovtios Ko- piveos, TOD perov Kara yévos ToMT av, d0Ens be Kal TUBS épacTns: OUTOS bmréarn TOV aOrov Exovatos. Kal ypaupara pep ovx éraBe 7 pos Tovs é&v TO Karirwrto, pn Angdevtos avtTov

popdrwow Of TroNéutot Ot avT@Y TOU Kapidrou TH Sidvovay, éobira dé pavrny (Exov Kat pedrovs tm auth Kopivov THY peev GNANV oOo nuépas adeas Suprev, éyyus 6€ THs TWodews 154

CAMILLUS

lamented among themselves, saying: " Of what a leader has heaven robbed Rome in Camillus, only to adorn Ardea with his victories! The city which bore and reared such a hero is dead and gone, and _ we, for lack of generals, sit pent up within alien walls, and see Italy ruined before our very eyes. Come! let us send to Ardea and demand our own general, or take our arms and go ourselves to him! For he is no longer an exile, nor are we citizens, now that our country is no more, but is mastered by the enemy." So said, so done, and they sent and asked Camillus to take the command. But he refused to do so before the citizens on the Capitol had legally elected him. They were preserving the country, as he thought, and if they had commands for him, he would gladly obey, but against their wishes he would meddle with nothing whatsoever. This noble restraint on the part of Camillus was much admired, but it was hard to see how the matter could be referred to the Capitol. Nay rather, it seemed utterly impossible, while the enemy held the city, fora messenger to elude them and reach the acropolis.

XXV. But there was a certain young man, Pontius Cominius by name, who was, in spite of his ordinary birth, a lover of glory and honour. He volunteered to attempt the task. He took no letter with him to the defenders of the Capitol, lest this, in the event of his capture, should help the enemy to discover the purpose of Camillus; but under the coarse garments which he wore, he carried some pieces of cork. The greater part of his journey was made by daylight and without fear; but as night came on he found himself near the city.
155

2

yevopuevos 70n oKotatos, érel Kata yépupav ovK
WV TOY Totapmov Tepaca Tov BapBdpwv trapadvrAatrovrav, Thy pev eoOAta TH KeharyH Tept-4 b \ QA a a \ omeipdoas ov Toddny ovdé Bapeiav, Ttois Sé
a 9 \ \ A \ / Al
herrols édels TO cHpa Kal auverixovgilwy Te “A N \ , g/mepatovabat pos THY TOAW e&éBn. Kal Tapan-AaTTwY ael TOUS eypnyopoTas, Tois héyyere Kal
A 7 7 . b 4 \ \
T@ OoptBw Texparpouevos, éRddile mpos tH
Kappevtida mvanv, } mrelorny elyev novyiar, \ 4 b > A wv e ce ,
kal pddiora Kat’ avTny bpAtos 0 TOD KaretwAiou
Aopos avéoTnKe Kat TeT pa KUKA@ TON Kal Tpaxeta TEpLTTepune &:” Hs dvéBn Aaov Kal
mpocéuée Tots Purdrrover TO SvaTeiyio pa Xarerds Kal jones Kata TO Aayapwrarov.
doTacapevos dé TOUS dvbpas Kal ppdoas € éavTov
é€ o dvouaros, avarnpbeis é exper Tos TOUS év Tenet TOV ‘Popaiov. TaXy dé ouyKdyTov yevoperns mapehBov THY re vinny amnyyetne TOV Kaptrrov mpoTepov ov mudopévors, Kal Ta SoKodvTa Tois TTPATLOTALS Sunyetro- «al TA PEK are T@ Kapir BeBarooar THY apXHV, WS pove TELoOpévov exeivp trav ew modiTdv. ob RY dKovcavtes Kal Bovrevodpevor Tov Te KdpirXov atro-detxvvovar SieTaTopa, KaL TOV Tevreov avbus aaromréprouct THD QUT HY odop 6 O{L0LWS arya TUXD xpnodpevov. éXabe yap TOUS ‘Trohepous Kal Ta TAPa THS Boudijs amnyyetre Tors &Ew ‘Pepaiors.
XXXVI. ’Exeivv bé deEapévev a poOvpws copt-KOMEVOS O Kapsrros non wev év OT hous Sia wuptous xatéxaBe, mreiovas 5€ ocuripyev amo TOV ocUp-1 +g Bekker supplies ¢v with Bryan.
156

142

CAMILLUS

He could net cross the river by the bridge, since the Barbarians were guarding it, so he wrapped his light and scanty garments about his head, fastened the corks to his body, and thus supported, swam across, came out on the other side, and went on towards the city. Always giving a wide berth to those of the enemy who were watchful and wakeful, as he judged by their fires and noise, he made his way to the Carmental gate, where there was the most quiet, at which the Capitoline hill was most sheer and steep, and which was girt about by a huge and jagged cliff. Up this he mounted unperceived, and __ finally reached, with great pains and difficulty, the sentries posted where the wall was lowest. Hailing them, © and telling them who he was, he was pulled up over the wall, and taken to the Roman magistrates. The Senate quickly convening, he appeared before it, announced the victory of Camillus, about which they had not heard, and explained to them the will and pleasure of his fellow-soldiers. He exhorted them to confirm Camillus in his command, since he was the only man whom the citizens outside would obey. When the Senate had heard his message and deliberated upon it, they appointed Camillus dictator, and sent Pontius back again by the way he had come, wherein he repeated his former good fortune. For he eluded the enemy’s notice and brought the Senate’s message to the Romans outside the city.

XXVI. These gave eager welcome to the tidings, so that when Camillus came, he found twenty thousand men already under arms. He collected

pdyov xal mapecxevatero mpos THY émideou. ovTw pev npéOn Sixtatwp o Kaptrros To dev- Tepov Kal tropevbeis eis Odnlouvs éevétrvye Tots oTpaTiworats Kal auviye mAElous ato THY oUp- paxov was émiOnoopevos Tots Trodeuiors.}

"Ev 8€ 79 ‘Pon trav BapRdpwv tives exeivyn Kata Tuynv tapeEtovtes, % Std vuxtos o Ilovtios mpocéBn TO Karitorio, catayabovtes ToAdayXy

peév Lyvn Today Kal yelpov, Os avTeNauPdveTo Kal mepucdpattero, Today Sé Tay émimepuKOTwY Tols Kpnuvois atrotpiBas Kat TeptodicOnoes THY yewoav, dodtfovas T@ Bacwrei. Kaxeivos émed-Gav cal Ocacdpevos ToTe pev novyaler, éomrépas Sé rovs eXadpotdrous Tois cwpact Kai TepuKoTAas opeiBareiy pddtota tev Kertov ovvayayov, “Tay wey odor,” elrrev, “ nuiv é Eavtovs aryvoov-pévnv ot Trodéutoe Secxv¥ovow ws OUT aTropEevTOS
ouvTE aBaros avOpatrats éoTuy, aioxuvn dé mod} THY apxXny exovras édneirrew mpos TO TEoS Kal mpoéobar TOV TOTrOV os dvahwrop, aura TOV Tohepiwy 4 ANTTOS éaTe SiOacKoVTHV. n yap évi mpooPivas Passor, ovde moAXois cal? éva dvaKONOV, GANA kal poun kal Bonlea Toh eT aAANAWY emuxetpodat. Swpeat 5é «kal Tipal TpeTrova at ths avdpayabias éxdore 6067-covTat.
XXVII. Totadra rod Bactdéws Stare Bévros bmréarno av ot Taddra _ Tp upes, Kal mrepl péoas vixtas ériuBavtes Gua TodXol THs TéTpas
1 Oitw... wodreulors deleted by Bekker, after Reiske.

still more from the allies, and made preparations for his attack. Thus Camillus was chosen dictator for the second time, and proceeding to Veii, he put himself at the head of the soldiers there, and collected more from the allies, with the purpose of attacking the enemy.
But in Rome, some of the Barbarians chanced to pass by the spot where Pontius had made his way by night up to the Capitol, and noticed in many places the marks made by his hands and feet in clambering up, and many places also where the plants that grew upon the rocks had been torn away, and the earth displaced. They advised their king of this, and he too came and made inspection. At the time he said nothing, but when evening came,
he assembled the nimblest men and the _ best mountain-climbers of the Gauls and said to them:
“The enemy have shown us that there is a way up to them of which we knew not, and one which men can traverse and tread. It would be a great shame for us, after such a beginning as we have made, to fail at the end, and to give the place up as impregnable, when the enemy themselves show us where it can be taken. For where it is easy for one man to approach it, there it will be no difficult matter for many to go one by one, nay, they will support and aid one another greatly in the undertaking. Gifts and honours befitting his valour shall be given to every man.” |

XXVII. So spake their king, and the Gauls eagerly undertook to do his will. About midnight a large band of them scaled the cliff and made 159

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

éx@pour aye peTO oLomns, éupuopevot Tots

coptots drroropous ovol al Xarerois, ov pay aNNG HarXov ; mpocedokOn TEL po LEVY aur ap T poo vepevors Kat Tapeixovoty, @are TOUS Tpw-TOUS arfapevous TOV dxpov Kai StacKevaca-pevous Soop ovK 0n TOU TMPOTELXLT MATOS anr-Teabat «al Tois purakiv émuxeupelv KoLpopevors® nodero yap ob avOpwmos ovTe KUMY. adda VIVES joav tepot mept TOV VEOV THS “Hpas TpEepo-pevot TOV GOV YpovoY addoves, TOTE bé Tov ouriov nn yMaxXpas Kal pods avrois Stap-KoUvT@DV Gpeovpevor KAKOS émpartov. EOTL pev oby Kat pucet IPOs aicOnow 0&0 Kal popodeds To C@ov éexeivor dé Kal ba pov GrypuTryntixol Kal GopuB odes ryeryOvOTES Taxy Thy Epodov a cOovro trav Tadartov, Kal pera Spopov Kal Krayyns Pepopevor mpos aUTOUS emrpyerpav adravras, non Kal Tov BapBapev | Sia TO pen) NavOaverv apedovvtov PopvBov Kat Biasorepov emit Bepeveov. aprrdcavtes oby vd omovbijs @ Tes ExaoTos ork TpooeTuyyxaven, éx Tov Ta ovToS éBonGouv. aavrov oe TP@TOS MdAdos, avnp UTATLKOS, TO TE o ope popanréos Kat po-vypare Wuyi emepavns, amavrnoas Svaly opod TOV TONE LLeoD Tov pév épdace Sinppevov xoTrioa TO Eider THY deftav atroxowas, TOV dé TO Oupep matdtas els TO T poo war ov ewoey OTiTW KATA THS

TET PAs. émiaTas be T@ a pera TOV cuvdpa-povToy Kal yevopevev Tep avrov améatpewre Tovs GAAous, OUTE TOANOUS AVw yevopuévous OUTE mpakavrds Te THS TOANs aéLov. ovTw 5é TOY
xivduvov éxgpuyovtes au' huépa Tov pev apyovTa 160
143

CAMILLUS

their way upward in silence. They climbed on all fours over places which were precipitous and rough, but which yielded to their efforts better than they had expected, until the foremost of them reached the heights, put themselves in array,
and had all but seized the outwork and _ fallen upon the sleeping watch. Neither man nor dog was aware of their approach. But there were some sacred geese near the temple of Juno, which were usually fed without stint, but at that time, since provisions barely sufficed for the garrison alone, they were neglected and in evil plight.
The creature is naturally sharp of hearing and afraid of every noise, and these, being specially wakeful and restless by reason of their hunger, perceived the approach of the Gauls, dashed at them with loud cries, and so waked all the garrison. At once the Barbarians, now that they were detected, spared no noise, and came on more impetuously to the attack. The defenders, snatching up in_ haste whatever weapon came to hand, made the best shift they could. Manlius first of all, a man of consular dignity, mighty in body and exceeding stout of heart, confronting two of the enemy at once, cut off the right hand of one of them with his sword as he was lifting his battle-axe, and dashing his shield into the face of the other, tumbled him backwards down the cliff. Then taking his stand on the wall with those who ran to his aid and formed about him, he repulsed the rest of the enemy, who had reaehed the top in no great numbers, and showed no prowess to match their daring. So the Romans escaped out of their peril. At break of day, they east the 161

Tav durdcwv éppipav eis Tovs Trodepious KaTa
THs méTpas, T® 6€ MadXyJo THs viKens apioreia pos TomHY peyadyy® padrov i] xpetav WndicajLevot ouvnveycav daov npépas ExacTOS ehap-Bavev eis tpopyy, citou pév huidtTpoy emruywpiou
(ofTw yap KaXrovow ato), oivov 8é KoTvANS “EAAnuicns Ttétraprov.
XXVIII. ’Ex tovrov ra trav Kerrov jy GOuporepa. Kal yap émirndetwy éomrdutov eipyo-pevoe tpovouns bd8@ tod KapidrXov, cal voaos Umotkoupnoey avtTous év vexpa@v AOE. yvdSnv kataBeBrAnpevwy oxnvovvras év épeutrious, TO TE Bd8os tis téppas dépa Enpotnte nal SpipvtTyte havrov vrd mvevpadtev Kal Kavydtov dvabopuwons éAupaiveto TA cwpata Sia THs avatrvons. pamota & 7 petaBor) THs cuvTpopov SiaiTns éx TOTwY oKLEep@v Kat Bépous KaTaduyas adUTOUS éyovtwv éuBardovtas eis yopayv tatrewi kal kek papevny aguas ™ pos TO [ETOTTW POV éxlunoev

aUTOUS, H TE 7 pos T® Kamitwrjio xabespa Kab axon yevouevn Xpovios. EBSopov yap éxelvov
o.xoupovy piva TohopKoovTes. dare dbopay elvat TOAANY ev TO atpatoTése kat mndé Odrre-obat bia TAOOS. ETL TOUS arobuicKovtas.
Od py rapa’ TodT0 Ta Tpaypata Berto Tois TOAOPKOUPEVOLS WV. eémérewwe yap O ALos, H TE tav wept Kapsrdop aryvoua mapetye SucOvupiav ovdels yap époita trap avtav dia TO ppoupetabat
1 peydAnv deleted by Coraés and Bekker.
2 wapa MSS. and edd., including Sintenis!: wept, 162

captain of the watch down the cliff among the enemy, but voted to Manlius a meed of victory which did him more honour than service. They collected for him the rations which each man of them received for one day, namely, half a pound of native spelt, Roman weight, and an eighth of a pint of wine, Greek measure.

XXVIII. After this, the case of the Gauls was less hopeful. They lacked provisions, being shut off from foraging through fear of Camillus, and disease lurked among them. They were encamped amid ruins, where a multitude of corpses had been cast at random, and besides, an air made dry and acrid by vast quantities of ashes which wind and heat sent flying abroad, made breathing hurtful. But what most of all affected them was the complete change in their mode of life. They had come all at once from regions of shade, where easy refuge could be had from the heats of summer, into a land which was low lying and had an unnatural climate towards autumn. Then there was their long and idle sitting down before the Capitol_—_they were now whiling away the seventh month in its siege. For all these reasons the mortality was great in their camp; so many were the dead that they could no longer be buried.

All this, however, brought no relief to the besieged, for famine increased upon them, and their ignorance of what Camillus was doing made them dejected. No messenger could come from him because the city was now closely watched

aa 16¢

M 2 :

ual!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

THY TOMY axptB@s vrd TeV BapBapov. 00 ev OUTw mpaT Tova dpdoréepors & éyivovTo cupBartiKor Aoryor 61a TOV mpopuhaxov TO Tp@Tov addajrous evTUyXavovT@v™ elTa, @S eboke Tots Kpatiorots, ouvenOovtos els Aoyous Bpévyw Lovdarexiou Tov Xeduapyou TOV 'Popaiwr, @poroynOn TOUS peey Xedias itpas _Xpuatov cataBanreiy, TOUS dé AaBovras ex THS Toews avtixa Kal Ths yw@pas dvaxopeiv. émi TovTo.s yevopevery GpKov Kat Tov xpuatou Kopi Bévros, Tov O€ Kerrav qept Tov oraO pov GryVOMOVOUVT OY pupa TO Tp@Top, ela Kal pavepas aehcovTov Kal duactpepovray THY pomny, NYAVAKTOUY Ot 'Popator mpos autous. o b€ Bpévvos olev epuppivor Kal KATAYENOY am obv-

odperos} THY pdxaipay apa Kai Tov Sworipa mpoaéOnxe tots orabpois. murOavopevov dé Tod ZLovdmuxiou, . Té tovTo ;” “ Te yap adno,” elirev, “7H Tots VEVLKN LEVOLS sium ;” ;” TovTO pev ovv nn Taporpia@dys AOryos yeyove. Tav Oe “Papaior ot ev nyavdKtouv Kal TO _Xpuatov @OVTO Setv AaBovras avdis amrlévat Kab THY mo\opKlay vqTro-pévewy” ot O€ ovyxopelv éxéXevoy adsKovupévous péTpLa, Kal pn TO TEOv d.d0var mpoanhoyitec Bat
TO alax por, avo ye TO Sobvat dea Tov Katpov ov KAN@S GAN’ avayKaiws UmopevovTas.
X XIX. Obons dé mept TovTay T pos TE TOUS
Kenrovs Kal 7 pos avrovs Stag opas drycov TOV oTpaTov oO Kapirros év Tats Tuva HY kal muOopevos Td ylvomeva TOUS adddous éxéhevoev év vase Kai oyédnv éraxorovbeciv, adtos b€ peta
, amoburduevos with 8: dwoAvoduevos unfastening.
abrovs Sintenis? with C: airovs Bekker and Sintenis!.
164

2

CAMILLUS

by the Barbarians. Wherefore, both parties being in such a plight, a compromise was_ proposed,
at first by the outposts as they encountered one another. Then, since those in authority thought it best, Sulpicius, the military tribune of the Romans, held a conference with Brennus, and _ it was agreed that on the delivery of a thousand pounds of gold by the Romans, the Gauls should straightway depart out of the city and the country.
Oaths were sworn to these terms, and the gold was brought to be weighed. But the Gauls tampered with the scales, secretly at first, then they openly pulled the balance back out of its poise. The Romans were incensed at this, but Brennus, with a mocking laugh, stripped off his sword, and added it, belt and all, to the weights. When Sulpicius asked, “ What means this?” ‘ What else,” ‘said Brennus, “ but woe to the vanquished?’’! and the phrase passed at once into a proverb. Some of the Romans were incensed, and thought they ought to go back again with their gold, and endure the siege. Others urged acquiescence in the mild injustice. Their shame lay, they argued, not in giving more, but in giving at all. This they consented to do because of the emergency ;

it was not honourable, but it was necessary.
XXIX. While they were thus at odds in the matter, both with the Gauls and with themselves, Camillus led his army up to the gates of the city. On learning what was going on, he ordered the rest of his army to follow in battle array and deliberately,

1 Vae victis /

TOV apiorav érrevyopevos evOLS érropeveTo Tpos
trovs "Pwpaiovs. Ssacravtwoy S¢ wavtTwv Kal SeEapévwy aidtov ws avToxpdtopa Koop Kal oLWTh, TO ev Ypvalov apas amo ToD Cuvyod Tois uanpetas édwxe, Tov dé Evyov wal ta oTaOua tous Kerrovs AaRovtas amoywpelv éxéXevoev
elev, os oldnp~ watpiov éott "Pwpaiots, ov.
Ypva@ tv tatpiba cwtew. ayavaxtodvytos Fé
Tov Bpévyvov cal dacKovtos abdixeicBar AvOMEéVNS
THS oporoyias, GVTéiTre UN VvoOLipbws yeyovévas
unde Kuplas elvac Tas ouvOnKas: nen yap avTou Sextaropos 7) npnuévov Kal wndevos apyovros érépou vow Tpos OvK éxovras éfouciay opordoynOjvac.
puvi dé xpivat every el TL Bovrovrar VOU@ yap hie KUpLOS ryeryovas cuyyvayny Te Seopévots Sotvat Kal Sixny, él pay petavootow, ériBeivar Tots airtous. mpos TavTa BopuAnOels O Bpévvos inparto pev dxpipaxias, kal mponrOov dypt £e-povrkias Exar epot kal SiwO.o wav dva.peptry Evo 7 pos adrous, damep ELKOS, ev oixiais Kal oTEVWTTOLS dvactpepopevot Kar xwpious déFacbat mapatatw ob Suvapévors. Tayv 5é cupppovijoas O Bpévvos amrnyarye TOUS - 'Kedrovs els TO oTpaTomedov Ov TrOANOY TET OVTMD. Kal vUKTOS dvaoTn-cas amavras éEéNurre THY Tod, Kal mpoed Bary éEnxovra, orabdious KaTeaTpatoT ébevc € Tape THY PaBiviay oOov. aya S TIME Pe mapiy o KaptAXos
én aurov GAL Uevos apr pews Kal teBappnkoras EXov TOTE TOUS 'Popaious: Kal yevowevns loxupas
payns eri todvv Xpovov avTous Te TpeTeTas

TOMK® povp kal AapBdaver TO oTpaToTEdov. TOY 166

CAMILLUS

while he himself, with the flower of his men, pressed on, and presently came to the Romans. These all made way for him, in decorous silence acknowledg- ing him as their dictator. Thereupon he lifted the gold from the scales and gave it to his attendants, and then ordered .the Gauls to take their scales and weights and be off, saying that it was the custom with the Romans to deliver their city with iron and not with gold. When Brennus in wrath declared that he was wronged by this breaking of the agree- ment, Camillus answered that the compact was not legally made nor binding, since he himself had already been chosen dictator and there was no other legal ruler ; the agreement of the Gauls had there- fore been made with men who had no power in the case. Now, however, they must say what they wanted, for he was come with legal authority to grant pardon to those who asked it, and to inflict punishment on the guilty, unless they showed repentance. At this, Brennus raised a clamour and began a skirmish, in which both sides got no further than drawing their swords and pushing one another confusedly about, since the action took place in the heart of the ruined city, where no battle array was possible. But Brennus soon came to his senses, and led his Gauls off to their camp, with the loss of a few only. During. the ensuing night he broke camp and abandoned the city with his whole force, and after a march of about eight miles, encamped along the Gabinian way. At break of day Camillus was upon him, in glittering array, his Romans now full of confidence, and after a long and fierce battle, routed the enemy with great slaughter and took their camp. Of the fugitives, some were at once

167

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

5é hevyovrwy ot péev evOvds avnpéOncav xatadioyOévtes, Tovs 5é mreiaTous StactapévTas éreK-Béovres éx TOY TépLE KopaY Kal TOdEwY ExTeELvoOV.
XXX. Odtw pév 7 ‘Papin Trapanroyos Hw cat
TrapaorydaT epov éo@0n, pijvas étTa TOvS mévras ims tois BapBdpo.s yevouévn. mapedOovres yap eis aUTHY oriyats NuEépats DoTepoy trav Kvivte-Lov eld@v Trepl tas DeBpovapias eidovs éEérrecov.
o 56€ Kdpirros eOpiapBevoe pév, @S eixds Hv, TOV
amodkwrvias cwThpa watpidos yevopevov xal KATAYOVTA THY TWOALY aUTHY els éaUTHY: Ot TE
yap é&wev dua tract nai yuvackiv eioedav-VOVTOS AVTOD GUYyKaTHEcaV, ol Te TrodLopKNnOéyTeEsS
év T@ KamitwrXio, pixpov Senoavtes atrorécbau dua ALpov, dariyToy mrepiBaddovres add rous cai Saxpvovtes v0} THs Tapovans Hoovns, & lepets te kal Caxopor Gear, & boa pevyovres avToOe TaY aBeBnrov eExpuvpav 7) atv avtois é&éxrevrar, avacwloueva® Kxopivovtes éredetxvuvto ro0ov-pevas dypeus Tots TOM TALS Sexopevors pera, xYapas, @OTEp auTev tav Oey avdus els THY ‘Panu oUyKATEpXopevon’ Bucas 5é trois Bevis Kal KaGapas THY modu éEnyoupeveov TOV Tept TavTa

SeLv@v, TA ev évTa TOV lepov KaTéaTnoey, avros 6é isptcaro vE@Y Pryns Kat Krnddvos, aveupov éxelvov TOV TOTFOV, eV @ VUKT@P 1) 7) KaTaryyédhovea THY TOV BapBapov otpatiay €x Oeobd te Kau-— dixig Mapx@ dwvn mpocérece.
1 $9d with S: amortg for distrust of.
2 dvacw(dueva xa nexoounnéeva S, and adorned.

pursued and cut down, but most of them scattered abroad, only to be fallen upon and slain by the people of the surrounding villages and cities.
XXX. So strangely was Rome taken, and more strangely still delivered, after the Barbarians had held it seven months in all. They entered it a few days after the Ides of July, and were driven out about the Ides of February. Camillus celebrated a triumph, as it was meet that a man should do who had saved a country that was lost, and who now brought the city back again to itself. For the citizens outside, with their wives and_ children, accompanied his triumphal chariot as it entered the city, and those who had been besieged on the Capitol, and had narrowly escaped death by starva- tion, came forth to meet them, all embracing one another, and weeping for the joy that was theirs. The priests and ministrants of the gods, bringing whatever sacred objects they had either buried on the spot or carried off with them when they took to flight, displayed them, thus preserved in safety, to _ the citizens, who caught the welcome sights with delight, believing in their hearts that the gods themselves were now coming back to Rome with them. After Camillus had made sacrifices to the gods and purified the city, in the manner prescribed by those who were versed in such rites, he restored the existing temples, and erected a new one to Rumour and Voice,! having sought out carefully

the spot where by night the voice from Heaven, announcing the coming of the Barbarian host, had fallen upon the ears of Marcus Caedicius.
1 Ara Aii Locutii.

XXXII. Xarerads pev ody nal pors ai Tav iep@v avexaduTrTovTo Y@pat dirotiuia Tod Kapidrou Kal Tovm TOAA@ TOV lepopavTarv: ws dé Kal THY TONY avoLKobopeiV edee TravTatrace SteE-POappévnv, aOupuia apos TO Epyov évéruTte Tois ToAXols Kal wérArANOLS HV eoTEpNpévais atravTwY kai Twos €v TS Tapovtt pact@rvns xal dvatrav-cews €x Kaka@v Seopévois padrov h Kduvev kal amotpuyey Eéavtovs ovTe ypnwacw ovTE cwpacty éppapévous. ota dé HoVvXH Tpos TOUS Ovinlovs adOis arroatpepopevot, ToAw aract KaTecKkevacpevny Kai Siapévovoar, apyas Snpayoyav évédocay Tois mpos yap eiPtopévors

Opsrely, Kal NOYwWY HKPOWVTO TTATLATTLKAY TPOS
Tov Kaptrrov, ws éxeivou dirotipias vera Kal S0Ens idtas adtroatepodyTos avTovs TrOAEwWS ETOLWNS
kat Bralouéevov aoxnvodv épeitia Kai TupKaiay TocauTHY eyel perv, OTras WH MovoY rryenov “Popns Kal aTpaTnyos, GXXA Kal KTioTHS A€ynTAL TrapO-cas ‘Papvarov.
"Ex TovTou poPnGeica Tov OdpuBov 7 Boun4
Tov péev KadptrXrov ovx elace BovAopevoy arro-OécOar thy apxnv évtds éviavtod Kaimwep &E pivas ovdevds vmrepBadovtos érépou Sextd-Topos, autn 6é tTapeuvOciro Kal KaTeTpduve meovca Kai dektoupévn tov Sthpov, émidecxve-pévn pev jpia Kal tdhovs tatépwy, vrropepyy-oxovaa S€ ywpiwy iepav Kal ToTwY ayiwv, ods “Pwptros 7 Nopwas 4 tis AAXNos avdtois TeV
170

CAMILLUS

XXXI. Owing to the zeal of Camillus and the abundant labours of the priesthood, the sites of the temples were at last uncovered, but it proved a grievous undertaking. And since the city had also to be built up again from a state of utter destruc- tion, the multitude were overwhelmed with despair of the task, and shrank from it. They were bereft of all things, and for the present needed some rest and repose after their sufferings, instead of toiling ‘and wearing themselves out on a task for which they had neither means nor strength. And so it was that insensibly their thoughts turned again to Veii, a city which remained intact and was equipped with all things needful. This gave opportunity for mischievous agitations to such as were wont to consult only the people’s will and pleasure, and ready ear was given - to seditious speeches against Camillus. He had an eye, it was said, only to his own ambition and fame, when he would deprive them of a city that stood ready to receive them, and force them to pitch their tents among a mass of ruins, while they rebuilt what had become a monstrous funeral pyre. He wished not merely to be a leader and general of Rome, but to thrust Romalus to one side and be styled its founder.

The Senate, therefore, fearful of this clamour, would not suffer Camillus, much as he wished it, to lay down his office within a year, although no other dictator had served more than six months. Mean- while the Senators, by dint of kindly greetings and persuasive words, tried to soften and convert the people, pointing out the sepulchres and tombs of their fathers, and calling to their remembrance the shrines and holy places which Romulus, or Numa, 17!

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 Baciréwv éerileracas rwapédmxev. év mpwtots dé
tav Ociwv tiv te veooghayn Keharnv mpovdpepov 145
év TH Oepercooe. ToD Kamirwréiov daveicar, ws TO TOT@ TeTpwpévon exeive THS Itadias Kepanrt yeveo Bar, Kat 70 THS "Eotias wip, O meTa TOV WONEMOV LITO TOV trapOevev ayarrr opevov aides adavifew Kal oBevvovat TOUS mpodumovTas THY Tot, Gveldos avTots éaopevov, av te UT' ANNOY oixoupévny op@ow éemnry.dov cal Eevov av T Epnuov ovaay Kal unroBorov.
5 Towadta Kxat wpos Exactov idia Kal Kow7
TodNaKs ev TO Onum oyetrLdlovTes eTEKN@VTO Tasty UTO TOV TONY THY Tapoboav odopupo-peveoy aunxaviay, Kab Seopevary pa opas womep
ék vavaryiou yupvors kal am opous owlévTas mpoaBidtecOar ta reifrava tis SirepOappévns TULITHYVUVAL TOAEWS, ETEPAS ETOLLNS TApOVENS.
XXXII. "Edofev otv BovrAnv mpobeivar Te Kapirry.: xal wore pév avros deEnAOe Trapa.- KaXrOv Umrép Ths mwatpidos, ToAda b€ Kal Tov ddrAwy 6 Bovrpmevos: Tédros Se Tov ™P@Tov elwora Néyerv yvounv Aevxiov Aovepnttov ava-otnaas éxédXevoev amodjvacba: mpatov, eira
2 tovs adAous eheEjs. cyevopévns 5é oiwimrjs Kal tod Aovxpntiov pédXovTos évdpyecOat, Kata Tuyny Ewer ExatovTapyns ayov Taypa duXaxhs
NMEpLWhs TapeTopeveto, kal Tov dépovta mparov
TO onpetov peyddrn pwvh mpocayopevoas éxé-Nevoev AUTOD pévery Kal TO onpeiov TiDecOar-

or some other king, had consecrated and left to their care. Among other signs from Heaven, they laid chief stress on the newly severed head that was found when the foundations of the Capitol were dug, showing, as it did, that the place where it was found was fated to be the head of Italy ; also on the sacred fire of Vesta, which had been kindled anew by her virgins after the war. If they should quench and extinguish this again by their abandonment of the city, it would be a disgrace to them, whether they saw that city occupied by immigrants and aliens, or abandoned to flocks and herds.

Thus did the Senators remonstrate with the people, both individually in private, and often in the public assemblies. They, in their turn, were moved to com- passion by the wailing complaints of the multitude, who lamented the helplessness to which they were come, and begged, now that they had been saved alive as it were from a shipwreck, in nakedness and destitution, that they be not forced to piece together the fragments of their ruined city, when another stood all ready to receive them.

XXXII. Accordingly, Camillus decided that the question should be debated and settled in council. He himself spoke at great length, in exhortation to preserve their common country, and every one else who wished did likewise. Finally, he called upon Lucius Lucretius, to whom custom gave the first vote, and bade him declare his opinion first, and then the other senators in the order due. Silence fell, and Lucretius was on the point of beginning, when it chanced that a centurion with a squad of the day watch passed by outside, and calling with a loud voice on the man who led with the standard, KadMaoTa, yap évrava abedeia Gar kal peveiv.

cpa dé TO Karp@ Kal Th TWept TOU HEXOVTOS
évvoia Kal adnroTnTL THs pavijs yevopevns, & Te Aovxpr}rios épn TpooKuryaas 1) eg mpoort-OecOat rhv éavtod yvounv Kal Tov adrwv Exactos émrnKxorovdnae. Gavpacty dé Kal TO wrnOos éoxe petaBor THs opps, GdAH ous TapaKadovvrav kat T POT PETTOLEVOY » T pos TO Epyov, ovK ék Siavopis | FLVvOS 4 Takews, arn’ as Exao Tos érouorntos PBovAyncews elye TOV
Xeplov KaTahapBavopéver. 5160 Kab TeTaparyperp Tois oTevoTrois Kal oupmepuppevny Tais olKno eat ay ryaryov THY TOMY UITO oTrovoAs Kai TaXOUS. évT0s yap évavTov AéyeTas Kab Tous TEeLYert Kaun) Kal tais idtwtiKais oixodopais ava-oTHVaL madiv.
Oi 8é TOUS lepous TOTOUS avanaBetv Kal o opioas
Tax Dévres vumo Tov Kaptnrov, TuyKEeXULEVOY

GTaVTOV, WS Hcov él THY Kkadidba TOU “A pews mepiodevovTes To IlaXdriov, avrny pep, Os Ta adda, _StepOappevnr Kal KATAKEKAULEVND evpov UTO TOV BapBapor, TKEVOPOU [EVOL bé kal xabai- povres TO xm@piov éevTuyxdvovar TP MAVTLKO Eur tov ‘Pwptrov xara Tedpas qoNAns Kab Babetas kaTadeSvKort. tovto } éott pev eT LKAPT ES ex Jarépou TEparos, Kanreitas Sé ALTvov: Xpovrar 6 avT@ Tpos TAS TOV TAWO Lov Uroypapas 6 Orav é1r Gpvice StapayTevopevor Kabélwrvrat, @S KaKElvOS expiito pavrixotatos wv. ered) o é& avO pobrraay noavia On, TapahaBovres ot tepeits tO EvXOv @omep ado TL TOV lep@v arpavaTov épvAaTTo)P.
1 xporperopévay with S : rpexopévey.

bade him halt and plant his standard there, for that was the best place to settle down and stay in. The utterance fel] at the crisis of their anxious thought for the uncertain future, and Lucretius said, with a devout obeisance, that he cast his vote with the god. The rest, one by one, followed his example. Then the inclinations of the multitude were marvellously changed. They exhorted and incited one another to the work, and pitched upon their several sites, not by any orderly assignment, but as each man found it convenient and desirable. ‘Therefore the city was rebuilt with confused and narrow streets and a maze of houses, owing to their haste and speed. Within a year's time, it is said, a new city had arisen, with walls to guard it and homes in which to dwell.

Those who had been deputed by Camillus to recover and mark out anew the sacred places, found them all in utter confusion. When they came to the shrine of Mars, in their circuit of the Palatium, they found that it had been demolished and burnt by the Barbarians, like the rest, but as they were clearing away and renovating the place, they came upon the augural staff of Romulus, buried deep in a great heap of ashes. The augural staff is curved at one end, and is called ituus. It is used to mark off the different quarters of the heavens, in the cere- monies of divination by the flight of birds, and so Romulus had used this one, for he was a great diviner. But when he vanished from among men, the priests took this staff and kept it inviolate, like

TouTo 8 TOTE TOV AGAAWV aTOAWACTAY UaveEV-

f \ \ \ ege > f povres Svatrepevyos thy POopav Hdious éyévovTo
tais éAmiow birép ths ‘Pans, ws aldcov aitA THY cwTNpiay TOD onpetov BeBaLodvTos.
XXXIII. Ovsrw 5é rijs mept tavta temav-pévois aoxorias avtois émiminte modepmos, Aixavev pev dua xai Ovorodonwrv nai Aativev
9 \ 4 ? , a \ els THY yopav éuBarXovtwv, Tuppnvev Sé trods-
o
opKovvTav our pty, ovppayida ‘Pwpaiwy toni.
e émedy S ob Thy Hyepoviay ExovTes yLdALapyxor oTpatomedevoeduevor Tept TO Mdpxiov pos vid trav Aativwy émrodtopKodvTo Kal xivduvevovtes
>) a AN 3 e 4 4
amoBanrely To atpatoredov ets “Payny ereprpay atrobeixvuTas TO Tpitov Kaprros duxtatwp. rept TOUTOU TOD TONELOU SLTTOL AGYyor AéyovTa Sievpu
Sé tov ppvO0dn TpdTEpov.
,
Paci tovs Aativous, eite mpopdce. Ypwpévous elte PBovrouévous ws aArANnO@s dvapi~tacBar Ta
/ a / a
yévn tad €€ vrapxis, Téeupavras airety map
Tav ‘Pwpyaiwy mapbévovs édrevOépas yuvaixas.
4 A a atropouvtwy 5é Trav ‘Pwpaiwy, Ti ypH Trorety (Kat yap Tov TrONELOV @ppwdouV ovTra KADErTaTES OVS avethnpotes avTOUS, Kal THY altnow TOY yuvas-K@v UTe@Trevoy éEopnpevow elvat, ToD S evmpeE-
A la a mous Yap éruyapiav KandeicOa), Oepatraivida
” , e 2 v / ,
Tovvopa TouvtrovAar, ws 8 Evia Aéyovat, Pirwrtida
Tols dpyovat Trapawéoa Twéutrey GUY avTH TOV Suwldwy tas év @pa padiota Kai tais drypeow éxevOepious, Kxoopnoavras ws vipdas evyeveis, \ 9 > led , \ Ta Nota 8 avTH pednoev. eccbevtas bé Tovs

dpyovras émiréEacOar tav Oeparrawvidwv Scas éxeivn mrpos THY Xpeiav edoxipace, Kal Koopnoav-176
146

CAMILLUS

any other sacred object. Their finding this at that time unscathed, when all the rest had perished, gave them more pleasing hopes for Rome. They thought it a token that assured her of everlasting safety.

XXXIII. They were not yet done with these pressing tasks when a fresh war broke upon them. The Aequians, Volscians, and Latins burst into their territory all at once, and the Tuscans laid siege to Sutrium, a city allied with Rome. The military tribunes in command of the army, having encamped near Mount Marcius, were besieged by the Latins, and were in danger of losing their camp. Wherefore they sent to Rome for aid, and Camillus was appointed dictator for the third time. Two stories are told about this war, and I will give the fabulous one first.

They say that the Latins, either as a pretext for war, or because they really wished to revive the ancient affinity between the two peoples, sent and demanded from the Romans free-born virgins in marriage. The Romans were in doubt what to do, for they dreaded war in their unsettled and un- restored condition, and yet they suspected that this demand for wives was really a call for hostages disguised under the specious name of intermarriage. In their perplexity, a serving-maid named Tutula, or, as some call her, Philotis, advised the magistrates - to send her to the enemy with some maid-servants of the comeliest sort and most genteel appearance, all arrayed like free-born brides; she would attend to the rest. The magistrates yielded to her persuasions, chose out as many maid-servants as she thought meet

177

VOL. IL. N

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tas eo Ore Kal Xpuc@ mapadovvat Tois Aartivots ov Tavu Toppo Tis Toews oTpatoTredevouct.
VUKTMP 5é Tas pev addas iperéa Bar Ta eyxerptOea TOV TONEMLOY, THY & eire T ouTouAay el'Te Prwrida TpooBacav epwve® peydro Kal Taparteivacay oniow TO iparov dpa Tupa ov els THY ‘Pouny, @amTTrep iy ouryKel LEVvov avTh Tpos TOUS dpxovras, ovdevos AAXOU TOV TOMTOY eidotos. Ot 6 xal

BopuBady yevéa Gat THY TOV oTPATLOTOY éfodon,
@S KAT HT EL YOY oi dpxovres, aXANAOUS avaKadovv-Tov Kal pons els THY ra Ew Kabsorapevo. érren-Govtas b€ TO yYdpake TOV Tohepioy ov T poabexXo-pévov Kal walk vdovTwv érelv TO oTpatomedov Kab diapGeipa TOUS mela Tous. TOUTO O€ yevéo Gat Tals vov ‘lovAlass, TOTE de Kvivtiriats vovass, Kal THY dryopevny éopTny Dropyn pa THS mpafews exeivns elvat. Tp@rov pev yap eEvovtes aOparvr bua Tis TUANS TOAAA TOV ETLywpiwy Kal KoLVOV ovopd-TOV Bo7 PeyyovTas, Ddiov, Mdpxoyr, Aovecov Kai Ta TOUTOLS - dota, pLpovpevor THY TOTE ryevouerny peTa oTrovons adAnhov avakdynow:
émerta, Kexoopnpévat NapTPAS au Deparratvises
mepilag matlovaas dua oKouparov eis TOUS ATAVTOVTAS. yiverar dé Kal payn TLS aurais 7 pos aAMNaS, @$ Kal TOTE TOU Tpos TOUS Aativous
ay@vos auveriAapRavopévats. éotimpevar 5 cabélovrar KAdOoLS GUKIS oxratopevat wal THY 7 pépav vavas Karparivas Kadovarr, as otovras dua Tov épiveor, ad’ ov THY maudionny TOV Tupa oY dpat- Tov yap é epiveor KaTrpidixoy ovoudlovary.
: Erepot dé TOUTOY Ta WreloTa Spacbat Kat NéyeoOai dacw eri tO Tod “PoptrAov wabec 178

CAMILLUS

for her purpose, arrayed them in fine raiment and gold, and handed them over to the Latins, who were encamped near the city. In the night, the rest of the maidens stole away the enemy’s swords, while Tutula, or Philotis, climbed a wild fig-tree of great height, and after spreading out her cloak behind her, held out a lighted torch towards Rome, this being the signal agreed upon between her and the magis- trates, though no other citizen knew of it. Hence it was that the soldiers sallied out of the city tumultuously, as the magistrates urged them on, calling out one another's names, and with much ado getting into rank and file. They stormed the en- trenchments of the enemy, who were fast asleep and expecting nothing of the sort, captured their camp, and slew most of them. This happened on the Nones of what was then called Quintilis, now July, and the festival since held on that day is in remembrance of the exploit. For, to begin with, they run out of the city gate in throngs, calling out loudly many local and common names, such as Gaius, Marcus, Lucius, and the like, in imitation of the way the soldiers once called aloud upon each other in their haste. Next, the maid-servants, in gay attire, run about jesting and joking with the men they meet. They have a mock battle, too, with one another, implying that they once took a hand in the struggle with the Latins. And as they feast, they sit in the shade of a fig-tree’s branches. The day is called the “Capratine Nones,’ from the wild fig- tree, as they suppose, from which the maid held forth her torch ; this goes by the name of caprificus. But others say that most of what is said and done at this festival has reference to the fate of Romulus.

Kata TAUTHY yap apavia Bias Ty [Le pa auTov eo TUANS; Copou Kar Overs advo mepraxovens, Os S évi08 vopitovary, éxrelyrews apiou yevoperns,
Kal THY nuepay a amo Tob TOTrov yovas Kamparivas Kn Ova, THY yap aia KaT pay dvopatovary: O be ‘Papdros npavicn Snunyopav Teph TO THs airyos EXos mpocayopevopevoy, ws év Tols Tept exelvou ‘yeyparrrat.
XXXIV. Tov & érepov oyov Ol WAELoTOL TaY ouyypadéwy Soxtpatovres Otte eyouew. aro-dey Gels SieTaTwp ” TO Tpitov o Kdwsrros Kal rub pers TO peta TOV Xirudpyov oTpareupa TONLOPKOV{LEVOV UTO Tov Aartivay xal tav QuvonovoKor, nrayndaOn Kai TOUS ODK eV apg TOV TOAL-TOV, AAN HON mapnBnxoras xabordicat. Tepten - Oav oé paxpav Teptocov Wwepl TO Mépevov Bpos
Kal abo Tous ToAeplous hes TH oTpaTtiav KaTomy avTov, Kal Tmupa TONNA Kavoas dueo7-pnve THhv éavTod qWapovoiay. ot pev ovv TroNop-KOUpEVOL lappyoavres emrévar Stevooivto al
pany ouvdmrely: ot Oe Aativor Kal Ovorodaxor avoTeiNavtes elow TOD Xaparos EaUTOUS amreaTaupouy Evrous ToAXois Kat Suepparyvurto TAVTAXO-Oev To atpatomesop, appiBoror myeyovores vd TOV
ToNEpiwy Kal Teptmévery eyvwKortes ETépay olxoOev
Siva, agua S€ Kal _ Tuppnvev | mpoa Sex ouevor
BonBevav. tovto & aiadopuevos 0 Kdyrros Kal dedorxes mabeiv Orrep éroinaev avTos Tovs Trohe-pious KUK wo dUEVvos éomevde mpordafeiy Tov
Kaupov. évros 8é rot Tepippayparos Evdivov | Kal
TVEVMATOS PéYANOU KATLOVTOS ATO TOV OpOY aya 180

14

CAMILLUS

For on this same day he vanished from sight, outside the city gates, in sudden darkness and tempest, and, as some think, during an eclipse of the sun. The day, they say, is called the “ Capratine Nones ” from the spot where he thus vanished. For the she-goat goes by the name of capra, and Romulus vanished from sight while haranguing an assembly of the people at the Goat’s Marsh, as has been stated in his Lsfe.}

XXXIV. But most writers adopt the other account of this war, which runs thus. Camillus, having been appointed dictator for the third time, and learning that the army under the military tribunes was besieged by the Latins and Volscians, was forced to put under arms even those of the citizens who were exempt from military duty by reason of advancing years. Fetching a long circuit around Mount Marcius and thus eluding the enemy’s notice, he planted his army securely in their rear, and then by lighting many fires made known his presence there. The besieged Romans at once took heart and purposed to sally out and join battle. But the Latins and Volscians re- tired within their trenches, fenced themselves in with a great wooden palisade, and barricaded their camp on all sides, for they now had a hostile force in front and rear, and were determined to await re- inforcements from home. At the same time they expected aid from the Tuscans also. Camillus, per- ceiving their design, and fearful of being himself surrounded by the enemy as he had surrounded them, made haste to improve his opportunity. The enemy’s barricades were of wood, and a strong wind

1 Chap. xxvii.

paer, mupoBona | Tapac kevacdpuevos Kat rept Tov OpOpov éEayayav thy Svvaptr Tovs pev dddous €xéNEUTE xphadae Bédect kal Kpavyh xa?’ Erepov Hépos, autos 6€ Tovs TO Tip adnoety péddovtras éXeov d6ev elder padiota mpooninrey o diveuos TO Xapace TOV TONE peo dveweve TH Gpav. emel de TuvEerToaNS TIS paxns 6 Te iALos avnel Kal TO mvedpa hap pov ebeninte, onunvas émedpopny KATEOTELPE TOU Xapakos apbova TOV TupoBodwv. TAXU dé THS proyos év vAN TUKYY) Kat oTavpo- pace Evrivors avatpadetans Kal KUKX® Trepwvepo- pévns, ovdey axos ovde oReorypiov eXovTes ot Aarivot Taper kevac Levon, WS 1WAHpES Tv 700 TO orpatomesov TUpOS, én’ OAtryon | TvaTEANOpEVOL TOTOV éFémumrov bn avaryKns T pos aro pévous Kal TAPATET A HEVOUS Tpo Tov YapaKos TOUS qoNepious. Kal TOUTOY per oriyot Suepuyov, TOUS dé Katarerpevras év TO otparorése mavTas dep Oerpe TO up, péxpt od KatacBécavtes ot “Pwpaios ra XpnwaTa, Sujpmacay.

XXXV. Teyovorwy b€ TovT@Y aTroATT@D etl TO oTpatoTédou TOV vioy Aevxcov piraKa TOY Tw Ko-TOV avO parr av Kab XPNMET OV avros eis THY TOV
Tmoheplov évéBanre. Kat THY Atkavav trod éfedov
Kat TPOTAYAYOLEVOS TOUS Ovorovexous evd us jj Hrye
THY oTpaTiay pos TO YovTpLoy, ovme Ta oupBe-Bnxota trois Lourpivors TET UG HEVOS, GND @s étt xivduvevovat Kab ToMLopKOUpEvOLS vd TOV Tup-pyvay BonPijoat anevoav. ot & éruyov Hon THY pev wom Tols TroAEpiots TrapadedwxoTes, avTOL
1 wupoBéAa conjecture of Sintenis?; wupa woAAd MSS., Sintenis!, and edd.
182

blew down from the mountains at sun-rise. Accord- ingly, he equipped himself with fiery darts, and leading his forces out towards day-break, ordered part of them to attack with missiles and loud cries at an opposite point, while he himself, with those appointed to hurl fire, took his post where the wind was wont to smite the enemy’s trenches with the greatest force, and awaited the propitious moment. When battle had been joined and the sun rose and the wind burst forth with fury, he gave orders for an onset, and scattered no end of fiery darts along the trenches. The flames speedily found food in the crowded timbers of the wooden palisades and spread in all directions. The Latins had nothing at hand with which to ward off or quench them, and when at length their camp was full of fire, they were huddled together into a small space, and at last forced to dash out against an enemy who were drawn up in full battle array in front of the trenches. Few of them made their escape, and those who were left behind in the camp were all a prey to the fire until _ the Romans put it out and fell upon their booty. XXXV. This business dispatched, he left his son Lucius in command of the camp to guard the captives and the booty, while he himself invaded the enemy's country. He captured the city of the Aequians, brought the Volscians to terms, and straightway led his army towards Sutrium. He was not yet apprised of the fate of the Sutrians, but thought they were still in peril of siege by the Tuscans, and so hastened to relieve them. But they had already surrendered their city to the enemy, and been sent off in utter

183

5¢ wdvrov évdecis ev ipatiows povoy aderpévor’

kat xa@ odov dvTe TO Kapirr pera tratsev Kal yUVatKov arrnvrar odupopevol Tas EavToV TUYAaS.

o 5¢ Kdpsrros adres te wpos thy oyu émixra-aes nat Tovs ‘Pwpatovs opay éudvopéver avtois

Tov Loutpivey daxpvovras Kal dvcavacyxerobyras

éml trois yeyevnpévors, éyvw py tovetcOar Tis 3 Tuuwpias avaBoArAnv, GAN evOds aye eérl To Lovrpsov éxelvns THs Hyépas, Aoytlouevos avOpo-

mous evoaisova Kal TAOVGiaY TOMY apTL KaTELAN-

gotas cal pndéva THY TrodELioY UTrONENOITIOTAS év avtn pnde mpocdeyopévous EEwOev, éxreXupévous TavTamact Kal apurdxtous etpnoew opOas Aoylodpevos. ov yap povoy THY ywpay Eade

SueNO wv, GANA Kal pos Tals WAALS yEevopmeEvos Kat

Ta Teiyn KataraBov épirarte yap ovdeis, ANN’

év olve Kal auvovaciats joav éoxedacpévos Kata
“4 Tas olkias. ézrel 8@ aoOovrTo Tovs troNEmious Kpatovvtas On, obtw Siéxevro poxOnpas wre mAnopovis Kal péOns, wes pnde mpds duynvy Oppijcat ToAXovs, GAN ev tais oixiats aloyiora TdavTwv vTropévoytas atrobviaKew Trapadidovat adas avtovs Tots Todeuious. THY pev ov LovTpt-vov TOA Huépa pa Sis arodcay ottTw avvéBn Kai Tovs éyovtas atroBaneiv, Kal tos adnpnue-vous atroNaBeiv 61a Kduiddov.
XXXVI. ‘O & ado tovtwv OpiauBos are “dpi ovux éAaTTova Kal KOopov jveyKe TOV mpwrTwv vey. Kal yap Tovs mdvu BacKaivoytas TOY TOMTaVY Kal mavta BovropLévovs evtvyia 184
i,

CAMILLUS

destitution, with nothing but the clothes on their backs. As Camillus came marching along they met him, with their wives and children, all lamenting their misfortunes, Camillus himself was filled with compassion at the sight, and noticed that his Romans too, with the Sutrians hanging upon their necks in supplication, were moved to tears and anger at their lot. He therefore determined to make no postponement of his vengeance, but to march straight upon Sutrium that very day. He reasoned that men who had just taken a prosperous and opulent city, leaving none of their enemies in it, and expecting none from without, would be found wholly relaxed in discipline and off their guard ; and he reasoned correctly. He not only passed unnoticed through the city's territory, but was actually at its gates and in command of its walls before the enemy knew it. For not a man of them was on guard, but they were all scattered among the houses of the city drinking and feasting. And even when they perceived that their enemies already had the mastery, they were so sluggishly disposed by reason of satiety and drunkenness that many did not so much as try to flee, but awaited there in the houses the most shameful of all deaths, or gave themselves up to their enemies. The city of Sutrium was thus twice captured in a single day, and it came to pass that those who had won it, lost it, and those who had first lost it, won it back, and all by reason of Camillus.

XXXVI. The triumph decreed him for these victories brought him no less favour and renown than his first two had done, and those citizens who had been most envious of him and preferred to ascribe all his successes to an unbounded good fortune rather

Tih padrrov i oe aperny caropbicbat, TOT nvaryKator at mpagers Th Sewornre Kal TO Spa-ornpio Tov avdpos dmodiBévau Thy Sokav. mv dé TOV Ora way opeveov avT@ Kal mpoapIovovvray emiupavérratos Mdpxos MdAmos, O T pOTOS @OAPLEVOS TOUS Kearovs aT THS dxpas bTe To Kamitwrio vuKtos eméBevo Kal dia TOTO
Kamitwdivos émrixrAnbeis. oTos yap akiov T pe-
Tos elvat T@V TONTOY Kal pn SuvapeEvos Tov KdpirrXov amo: tov Bertiotou tpotou tH So&n mapenOetv, vro8ecww Tupavvidos errotnaoaro KoWwnD Kal auvnOn, Snpayaryav TOUS TONAOVS, padora dé TOV OpetdovTov vpéa TOS pev apuvev Kal cuvdsxav él tovs dSaverotds, Tors & aarpov-HEVOS Bia xa KoVov ayer Oa Tos TOV Vowor, Bote jworrods: TOY aro pov TAX ep avTov
yevéoOar xal aodrvy doBov Tapacyeiv Tots Bedtioross TOV TONMTOD Opacvvopevous Kal Tapdttovras TV aryopay. érrel O€ KatacTabels em TavTa, SixTatwp Kovwtos Kamitwrivos els THY elpKTHY évéBane TOV Marnor, o Oe Ojmos yevomevov TovTov peTtéBare THV éobfira, Tm pary wa rytvOeVvOV éml cuppopais peydhaus Kat Snuociass, deicaca TOV OopuvBov 7 TVYKANTOS EXENEVO ED
'agbeDhvar tov MarArov. o & ovdev Hv adeDels
apeivov, ada, coBapdrepov eonparyaryel Kat Stertaciate THY TOoAW. aipovvta. 8) aWdaALW

XiALapyov TOV Kapsarovr.
Eicayopevev bé TOV Kara TOU MaaAniov dix@v peyanra TOUS KaTNYOpous éBramrev n
ovis. 0 yap ToTros, éd ob BeBnxws 6 Pens
1 yuerds with S: 3:4 vuerds,

186

148

CAMILLUS

than to a native valour, were forced by these new exploits to set the man's glory to the credit of his ability and energy. Now of all those who fought him with hatred and envy, the most conspicuous was Marcus Manlius, the man who first thrust the Gauls down the cliff when they made their night attack upon the Capitol, and for this reason had been surnamed Capitolinus. This man aspired to be chief in the city, and since he could not in the fairest way outstrip Camillus in the race for glory, he had recourse to the wonted and usual arts of those that would found a tyranny. He courted, that is, the favour of the multitude, especially of the debtor class, defending some and pleading their causes against their creditors; snatching others from arrest and preventing their trial by process of law. In this way great numbers of indigent folk soon formed a party about him, and their bold and riotous conduct in the forum gave the best citizens much to fear. To quell their disorder, Quintus Capitolinus was made dictator, and he cast Manlius into prison. Thereupon the people put on the garb of mourners, a thing done only in times of great public calamity, and the Senate, cowed by the tumult, ordered that Manlius be released. He, however, when released, did not mend his ways, but grew more defiantly seditious, and filled the whole city with faction. Accordingly, Camillus was again made military tribune. ,

When Manlius was brought to trial, the view from the place was a great obstacle in the way of his accusers. For the spot where Manlius had stood évuxropaxynoe mpos tous Kedtovs, btrepepaivero Tis ayopas amd tod Kamitwdiouv Kai tmapelxev olxtov Tois opwawv: avTos TE TAS Yyelpas dpéywv éxeioe cal Saxpvov trepiuynoxe TOV aYOVOV, WATE TOUS KpivoyTas aTropeiy Kal ToA-Aas avaBadrccDat Hv Sixny, pnt adeivat BovrAopévous érrt texpnpioes havepois TO adixnnua pnte xpjnoacbar TO vopw Suvapévous év 6>0arpois THS mpadkews ovans bia tov Torov. 6 by aupdpovncas o Kapirros petnyayer é€o wirns 70 StxaaT prov els TO [lernaivov dAcos" 50ev ovK ovTos Tov KamitwAiou xatapavoos 6 Te StoKwv

187

eXpngato | Th KaTnyopia Kar Tots Kptvovat Tape-
YOpPNoEv H LYNN TOV yeyovoTey afiay avaXa-Betv* opyiv él tots Tapovaty adunpacw. 0 bev ovv Madrxos arovs eis TO Kamvrwvov annyOn, Kal Kara, Ths méTpas ao Gels TOV avrov TOTrOV éaxe Kal TOV evTUXEo TAT OY Epyov Kal TOV
peyiorov aTUXN MAT OV punpetor. of 5é “Pwpaior THY otKtav avTod KaTacKapavTes tepov iSpvcavro Oeas, jv Movirav kandovor, Kal TO NoLTroV eynpicavro pndéva Tav Tatpixiov éml thy aKpas KATOLKELD.
XXXVII. ‘O 6&é Kapsrros emt Xiuapyiav
ExT nv KaoUpEvos Tapyreiro, yeyovas poev Mrucias non Tporw Kai Tov Twa kat POovov Sed.:a5 Kat
vewer wy emt do&n _TooauTy wal catopOopacty
7" Oe pavepwrdrn TOV aiTLOV id appwatia TOUA-TOS" ervyxave yap voody rept Tas 7) pe as éxeivas.
ov pay Taphkev avT@ THY apyiy o OHpos, AANA
1 dvadaBeivy with S: AaBeiy.

when he fought his night battle with the Gauls, — overlooked the forum from the Capitol, and moved the hearts of the spectators to pity. Manlius himself, too, stretched out his hands toward the spot, and wept as he called to men’s remembrance his famous. struggle there, so that the judges knew not what to do, and once and again péstponed the case. They were unwilling to acquit the prisoner of his crime when the proofs of it were so plain; and they were unable to execute the law upon him when, owing to the place of trial, his saving exploit was, so to speak, in every eye. So Camillus, sensible of all this, trans- ferred the court ontside the city to the Peteline Grove, whence there is no view of the Capitol. There the prosecutor made his indictment, and the judges were able to forget the man's past services in their righteous anger at his present crimes. So then Manlius was convicted, carried to the Capitol, and thrust down the rock, thus making one and the same spot a monument of his most fortunate actions and of his greatest misfortunes. The Romans, besides, razed his house to the ground, and built there a temple to the goddess they call Moneta. They decreed also that in future no patrician should ever have a house on the Capitoline hill.

XXXVII. Camillus, called now to be military tri- bune for the sixth time, declined the honour, being already well on in years, and fearful perhaps of the envy of men and the resentment of the gods which often follows upon such glorious successes as his. But the most manifest reason was his bodily weak- . ness, for it chanced that in those days he was sick. The people, however, would not relieve him of the Body pyre immmevovtos avToD pte OTAOMAYOUVYTOS

év Tois ayaaot SetcOat, Bovrevopévov 5é povoy Kai TpOoTaTTOVTOS, nvayKacev UTOCTHVaL THY oTpa-Thylav Kai pe" éEvds TAY cuvapyovtav AevKiov Movpiov tov otparov ayew evOvds él Tous qoNeulous. ovro. & oav IIpaweorivo. at OvorotcKxo: peta ToAAHS Suvdyews THY cUppayida trav 'Pwpaiwy tropOobvres. é&eAOwv dé Kal tapactpatoTedevoas Tos TroNEuLOLs avTOS pev nkiov tpiBety tov modewov ypove, Kav et paxns Senoee pwgas To copa Siaywvicacba, Aevxiov 6€ Tod auvdpxovros emiOupia d0€ns
hepopévov mpos tov Kivduvoy axatacyétas Kal cuveEopua@vTos dua takidpyous nal Aoyayous, hoBnGels un dOovm 5H Ti Soxp Katopopa Kal dirotipiav adaipeicbat véwy avdpav avvexopnaev adxov éxeivp rapatdéa tiv Sivapiv, avtos Sé dua THhv acéveray virereihOn pet ordiyov ev TO otpato@éd@. tov dé Aeviov mpoteras ypynoapévov TH maxn Kal Tpanrevros, aia bopevos THY tpomTny TaVv Pwpaiwy ov KATETXEV QUTOD, arr' avaBopwv €x Ths otiBddos amnvTa peta Taev oTradav emi Tas TUAAS TOU ydpakos, 51a Tov hev-yovtwy wbovpmevos eis TOUS OLwKOVTAS, BITE TOVS
pev evOds avactpéde xat cvvaxonroveiv, tovs dé mpoodepopévous EFwlev iatacbat mpd avtod kal cuvactivew, mapeyyu@vTas aAdndOLS By atronNeirec Oa, Tov aotpaTnyov. tToTe pev ovp
oUTWS amreTpaTrovTo THs Simfews of Togo TH

& votepaia mpoayayau thy Siva o Kdapurros |

190

CAMILLUS

office. He had no need, they cried, to fight in the ranks of the cavalry or the men-at-arms, but only to counsel and ordain; and so they forced him to undertake the command, and with one of his colleagues, Lucius Furius, to lead the army at once against the enemy. These were the Praenestines and Volscians, who, with a large force, were laying waste the lands of the Roman allies. Marching forth, therefore, and encamping near the enemy, he himself thought it best to protract the war, that so, in case a battle should at last be necessary, he might be strong of body for the decisive struggle. But Lucius, his colleague, carried away by his desire for glory, would not be checked in his ardour for battle, and incited the same feelings in the inferior officers ofthe army. So Camillus, fearing lest it be thought that out of petty jealousy he was trying to rob younger men of the successes to which they eagerly aspired, consented, with reluctance, that Lucius should lead the forces out to battle, while he himself, on account of his sickness, was left behind in the camp with a few followers. Lucius conducted the battle rashly and was discomfited, whereupon Camillus, perceiving the rout of the Romans, could not restrain himself, but sprang up from his couch and ran with his attendants to the gate of the camp. Through the fugitives he pushed his way to their pursuers. Those of his men who had passed him into the camp, wheeled about at once and followed him, and those who came bearing down on him from outside, halted and formed their lines about him, exhorting one another not to abandon their general. In this way, for that day, the enemy were turned back from their pursuit. On the next day, Camillus

IgI

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kal cvvawas paxnv avTovs Te WKG KATA KPaTOS
Kal Tov ydpaxa apBdver cuvecaTTed@V ois
dhevyovot kali dvapOeipas tovs wreiarous. éx dé TovTou mTudopevos TOALY Latpiav bro Tuppnver
éaroxévat xal Tovs - olKntopas amecpayba
"Pwpaiovs atravtas évras, THY yey ToAAHY Kal Bapeiav ris Svvdpyews cis 'Popnv atréotesrer, autos 5é Tovs axpdlovtas pddoTta Kal tmpoOupo-TaTous avahaBov éréBare Tots THY TOALY ExoUGL Tuppnvois nal xpatnoas tovs pev- éEnracev avTav, tous dé aréxTesvev.
XXXVIII. 'EzravenOov 5é peta rodd@y Aagpv-pov els "Poyny éméberEe Ppovipwtdtouvs amdvrwy tovs pn hoBnOévras doBéverav Kal yijpas ijye-peovos éwrepiav xal ToApav exovTos, GAN éXopévous éxeivov akovta Kal vocovvTa madXov 7) TOV
év nartkia tovs Seopuévouvs Kxat orovdalovras

apxew. 16 Kal Tovoxravav apectava Aeyopévav exédevov é€cévar Tov Kduidrov én’ avrovs &va TOV WévtTEe TVTTPATHYWY TpoTENopEVOV. O Oé, Kaimep atravtwv Bovropévor cai deopévar, édoas Tous GAXous, wpoceiAeto Aevxvov Povpioy ovdevos
dv mpocdoxncavtos. ékelvos yap Hv oO Tapa yvounv tov Kapidrdyou b:aywvicacOar mpobvpnbeis évaryxos kai dvotuxynoas Tepl THY waynr adda Bovropevos, as Eotxev, arroxpivar Tip cupudopay Kal thy aioyuynv amadrakat Tod avdpos avtl tavtav TodToy mponyev. ot &é TovoxNavol thy dayaptiay éravopOovpevot travovp-yos, 70n Babifovtos ér adtovs Tod Kapidndovu To pev tediov avOpwrwv ws év eipnvn yewpyouvTay Kal vepovtwy évérrrAnoay, tas §€ mvdas elyov 192

led his forces out, joined battle with the enemy, defeated them utterly, and took their camp, actually bursting into it along with those who fled to it, and slaying most of them. After this, learning that the city of Satricum had been taken by the Tuscans, and its inhabitants, all Romans, put to the sword, he sent back to Rome the main body of his army, comprising the men-at-arms, while he himself, with the youngest and most ardent of his men, fell suddenly upon the Tuscans who held the city and mastered them, ex- lling some and slaying the rest.

XXXVIII. He returned with much spoil to Rome, having proved that those citizens were the most sensible of all who did not fear the bodily age and weakness of a leader possessed of experience and courage, but chose him out, though he was ill and did not wish it, rather than younger men who craved and solicited the command. They showed the same good sense, when the Tusculans were reported to be on the brink of a revolt, in ordering Camillus to select one of his five colleagues as an aid, and march out against them. Although all the five wished and begged to be taken, Camillus passed the rest by and selected Lucius Furius, to everyone's surprise. For he was the man who had just now been eager to hazard a struggle with the enemy against the judg- ment of Camillus, and had been worsted in the battle. But Camillus wished, as it would seem, to hide away the misfortune and wipe away the disgrace of the man, and so preferred him above all the rest. But the Tusculans, when once Camillus was on the march against them, set to rectifying their transgression as craftily as they could. Their fields were found full of men tilling the soil and pasturing flocks, as in

193

- avewypévas kal tovs taidas é ev Tots S:SacKareiors
pavOdvortas, Tov Oe O1jpou TO Bev Badvavaov él

TOV épyacrnplov éwparo rept TAS TEXVas, To 8
aaretov él THs ayopas év iparrious: ot 8 dpxovres Tepineray omovdy KaTadvoers tots “Pwpaiots eTrayyéeAXOVTES, WS ovdev KAKOV m poo Soxavres 4 ovee ouverbores. toutoy ode T paTTouEvay antorelv be OUK emnet TP Kapirry TH Tpovosiay, oixTeipas dé tH éml TH m™po ocia peTdvotay avuTav éxédevce _T pos THY oveyk\nTov ed Oovras mapatteia Oa THY opynv: Kal _TaparToupevors ouven pager AUTOS apeOjvai TE THY mohuy airias amraons Kat wetadraBelv icoroNTEelas. avTat pev ovv éyévovtTo THs ExTNs YLdsapxXias eripavéctatat mpakets.
IX XXIX, Mera dé taita Accewiou LToAwvos
év TH TWONEL THY peyadny oTaow éryetpovos, Nv o Sijpos éataciate pos THY ouyKANTOV Bralopevos
Sveiv t brdtov Kabra tapeverv Tov Erepov TAavTWS éx SnwoTay elvar Kal pn TuvappoTépous TaTpiKious, 57) jpapxor pev npéOncav, tas o vmariKas ap-Xatpecias emteneo Oivar Stexwoduoay ot TONNOL.
2xal TOV Tpaypatwv ov avapyias pepopevery és peifovas Tapaxas arrodeixvuTat dietarop o KaptAAos VITO THs Bourijs a aKovTL TO Onu@ TO TéTap-Tov, ovd avTos Ov mpdOupmos ovde Bovdopevos évavttoba Bat Tpos avOperrous Tappnaiay éxovras aro TONG Kal peyahov ayovev 7pos AUTOV, WS
deiova pe avro@y Svarremparypevos é éy oTpatn-Linge) peta TY Tatpixiwy év TodTeiats, Kal
2 per’ abrav Stamemparyuevos edd., including Sintenis', and S;
éy orparnylas per’ airay with C.
194

CAMILLUS

times of peace ; their gates lay wide open ; their boys were at school conning their lessons; and of the people, the artizans were to be seen in their work- shops plying their trades, the men of leisure sauntered over the forum clad in their usual garb, while the magistrates bustled about assigning quarters for the Romans, as though they expected and were conscious of noevil. Their performances did not bring Camillus into any doubt of their intended treachery, but out of pity for the repentance that followed so close upon their treachery, he ordered them to go to the Senate and beg for a remission of its wrath. He himself also helped to make their prayers effectual, so that their city was absolved from all charges and received the rights of Roman citizenship. Such were the most conspicuous achievements of his sixth tribuneship. XXXIX. After this, Licinius Stolo stirred up the great dissension in the city which brought the people into collision with the Senate. The people insisted that, when two consuls were appointed, one of them must certainly be a plebeian, and not both patricians. Tribunes of the people were chosen, but the multi- tude prevented the consular elections from being duly held. Owing to this lack of magistrates, matters were getting more and more confused, and so Camillus was for the fourth time appointed dictator by the Senate, though much against the wishes of the people. He was not eager for the office himself, nor did he wish to oppose men whose many and great struggles gave them the right to say boldly to him: "Your achievements have been in the field with us, rather than in politics with the patricians ;

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

viv dia POovov éxeitvwv npnpévos vr' avTov, tras 7 Katadvoee Tov Shpov iaxvaas 7) Katadvbein pn Kparnoas. ov pny adda TreL_p@pevos apuUvELD Tots Tapovat, THY Nuépav yvous, év 7 vomobeTetv ot Snpapyor StevoodvTo, mpoéypawe otpatias Ka-TaXoyov Kal petexdret Tov Shuov ex THs ayopas eis TO Tredtoy peydras Cnulas atethk@v KaTa TOD
pn Uraxovoaytos. tav 5é dnudpywy éexeiOev ad TaN avraviara pevov Tais amethais Kal Stopvu-HEvov TéVvTE _pupidow apyuplov Cnpuw@aety, €t pa
Tava arto TOU Snjpou TOV vo pov aarpovpevors Kat
THY pipov, elte detaas puyny érépav Kal: KaTa-Sixny, ws avipl peo Burn Kab KuTeipyac weve peydda HH mpémovcay, elite TOD Symov THY Biav dpaxov ovoav Kal Suavientoy vrrepBaréaBac py Suvapevos pnde Bovdopevos, TOTE [ev brexwpnoev olxabe: Tais 8 éfis. Hmeépaus oxmpdpevos ap-pworeiv éFwpocato THY apxny.
H 8€ abyx«ArnrTos Erepov tKTaTO KaTéaTIGe:
KaKeLvOS amodeiEas immapxov QvTOV TOY HryEHova
Tis oTdTEws Yrorwva rapixcev emi UPOT aL TOV vowov TOV pddora AUTrobVTA TOUS TarpiKious.
éxéXevoe 6 ovtos pndéva TALE pov TmevTaKoci@y
T)etova xXepay kex tha Oat. TOTE wey ovv Aap pos
0 XToA@V eryeryover TH Wnd@ Kpathioas: OAD &
Uarepov auros édw KEKT NUEVOS donv exe éxw-Avey ETEpOUS, Kal KATA Tov av'Tov vouov SiKkny edwxev.
XL. 'Trrodecrropevns dé Ths TEPL TOV VTATLK@V
apyarpec rev prroverkias, 6 0 367 Xarerroratov THS aTacews Hv Kal mpatrov pte xal mreloTa

it is through bate and envy that they have now made you dictator; they hope that you will crush the people if you prevail, or be crushed yourself if you fail." However, be tried to ward off the threatening evils. Having learned the day on which the tribunes intended to propose their law, he issued proclamation making it a day of general muster, and summoned the people from the forum into the Campus Martius, with threats of heavy fines upon the disobedient. The tribunes, on the contrary, for their part, opposed his threats with solemn oaths that they would fine him fifty thousand silver drachmas if he did not cease trying to rob the people of its vote and its law. Then, either because he feared a second condemna- tion to exile, a penalty unbecoming to a man of his years and achievements, or because he was not able, if he wished, to overcome the might of the people which was now become resistless and invincible, he withdrew to his house, and after alleging sickness for several days, resigned his office.

But the Senate appointed another dictator, and he, after making Stolo himself, the very leader of the sedition, his master of horse, suffered the law to be enacted. It was a most vexatious law for the patrician, for it prohibited anyone from owning more than five hundred acres of land. At that time, then, Stolo was a resplendent figure, owing to his victory at the polls; but a little while after, he himself was found to be possessed of what he forbade others to own, and so paid the penalty fixed by his own law.

XL. There remained, however, the strife over the consular elections,which was the main problem in the dissensions, as it was its first cause, and gave

197
al
e)

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

mpaypnata TH BovrAj Tapéa xe Stadhepopévn Tpos Tov Onpov, ayyediat mpocetrecov cadels, Kertous avOus amo THs "Adptatixns apavtas Oa-Adoons puptdot woXAais él rHv “Pounv édrav-
2 vew. dpa S€7T@ Ayo Kal Ta Epya TOU TrONEpOU maphy topSoupévns THS Xwpas Kal Tov avOpo-Tov, boos pr padtoy mv eis THY ‘Pwopyny Karaguyeiv, ava ta dpn cKedavvupévwr. odTOS Oo hoBos Katéravce tHv oTdow, Kal ovvedOovtes els TAUTO TOls TrOAAOIS OL KpdTLaTOL Kat TH BovrAT TO OnwoTtiKov etAovTO TavTes ex pias yuouns 61-3 xTdTopa TO Téumtov Kaptrdgov. o 8 jv pev opodpa yépwv cal puxpov amérectrev oySonKxovTa etn yeyovevar: cuvopav Sé tHhv avdyKknv Kal Tov xivduvov, oUTe UiroTtipnow eiTeVv, ws TpOTEpOY, ovTe Tpopacer Ypnoduevos, GAN’ avToOev wrooTaS THY oTpaTHylay KaTéXeyEe TOUS payYnTO-

EVOUS.

Eidas 5€ tis tov BapBdapwv adkijs rnv Braco-TaTnv év Tails payaipats ovcav, &s BapBapixcas kal aovv ovdeuiad téyvn KatadépovTes wpous 4 pddtota Kal Keparas diéxotrTov, éyadKxevaaTo per xpadvn Tols wAElaTOUs ONOTIonpa Kal rela Tals mepipepeiars, ws amoNcOaivew Katayvucbar
Tas payxaipas, Tois b€ Oupeois KvK@ TEPLAPMLOG Ee ANeTriOa YarKHy, Tov EiAov Kal avTo Tas TAN YAS
pn oTéyovtos: avtous bé€ Tols otpatimtas édt-dake toils taaois paxpots Sa yerpos xpjoOas Kat tois Eiheot TOV Trordeuioy bTroBddXovTas éKdéxecOat tas Katadopds.
XLI. ’Eset 5€ awAnoiov joav oi KeArot, rept
Tov ‘Aviwva trotayov aotpatoredoy Bapv Kar 198
CAMILLUS

the Senate most concern in-its contention with the people. But suddenly clear tidings came that the Gauls had once more set out from the Adriatic Sea, many myriads strong, and were marching on Rome. With the word, the actual deeds of war kept pace. The country was ravaged, and its population, all who could not more easily fly to Rome for refuge, scattered among the mountains. This terror put an end to the dissension in the city, and brought to- gether into conference both the rich and the poor, the Senate and the people. All with one mind chose Camillus dictator for the fifth time. He was now quite old, lacking little of eighty years; but recog- nizing the peril and the necessity which it laid upon him, he neither made excuse, as before, nor resorted to pretext, but instantly took upon him the com- mand and went to levying his soldiers.

Knowing that the prowess of the Barbarians lay chiefly in their swords, which they plied in true barbaric fashion, and with no skill at all, in mere slashing blows at head and shoulders, he had helmets forged for most of his men which were all iron and smooth of surface, that the enemy’s swords might slip off from them or be shattered by them. He, also had thé long shields of his men rimmed round with bronze, since their wood could not of itself ward off the enemy’s blows. The soldiers them- selves he trained to use their long javelins like spears,—to thrust them under the enemy’s swords and catch the downward strokes upon them.

XLI. When the Gauls were near at hand, being encamped on the Anio and encumbered with untold 199 =

a ia

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

peatov apOovov reias eyovtes, eEayayov THv Sivayuy idpyce Kata vans panaxijs Kal ouvy-Kdloes TOAAAS exovans, WaTE TO pév TrEloTOV aroxpuTTecOat, TO 8 opapevor Soxeiv dio Séovs eis ywpia mpoodvTn KatethetcOar. tavTnv dé thy dSofav avtav 6 Kdpirros abfey BovAdpuevos ov T poo npuve TOV LITO TObAas ropBoupevev, GANG TOV Xdpara ppatdpevos npéewer, mex pe ov Tos pev év Tpovopais éoxedac pévous Katetoe, Tous & éy T® oTpatoTéd@ Tacayv Wpav épriTrAapévous
adedas xal peOvovtas. tote 5é vuKTos ert TOUS
Wirous mpoexrréuwas éurrodwy elvar trois Bap-Bdpoats eis tafity xaOtotapévois Kal dvatapattey evOds érreEvovras, xateBiSalev GpOpov tous on-Aitas Kal tapétattev ev Tois emu édous, TOANOUS
kal tpoOvpous, ody waoTrep ot BagBapot mpoce-Soxwy, ddjLtyous Kal aToApous dhavévras. mpaTtov bev odv TovTO TOV Kertav avétpee TA hpovnpata wap akiavy émeyetpetcOar Soxovvtor.
emetta TMpoomimrovTes of Wtdol Kat mply 7 Tov
ouv7On Aaeiv KOG MOV Kal Stax prOfivat kara NOKOUS KevoovTes avTous kat Bialopevor mpos TO ovyTUyov ATAKTOUS ivaryKacay waxes Bau. TENOS bé TOU Kapirrou TOUS omhitas EM AYOVTOS, OL [Lev avarewwdpevor TAs paxaipas cvvdpapeiv éomevoov, ot O€ Tots vVacois atravTavtes Kal Ta cecLOnpwmera pépn Tais mAnyais DropEpovTes ‘avéatpepov TOV éKeivov aiSnpov padanov évra
Kal AeTTAS ekpapévor, 6 Bare caprrrecOat TAXD
kat SumrAotcOat Tas payaipas, Tovs 5é Oupeovs 400

151

CAMILLUS

plunder, Camillus led his forces out and posted them in a gently sloping glade with many hollows, so that the largest part of them were concealed, and the part that could be seen had the look of shutting themselves up in hilly places out of fear. This opinion of them Camillus wished to strengthen, and therefore made no defence of those who were plundered even at his very feet, but fenced in his trenches and lay quiet, until he saw that some of the enemy were scattered abroad in foraging parties, while those in the camp did nothing but gorge themselves with meat and drink. Then, while it was yet night, he sent his light-armed troops for- ward to hinder the Barbarians from falling into battle-array and throw them into confusion as they issued from their camp. Just before dawn, he led his men-at-arms down into the plain and drew them up in battle-array, many in number and full of spirit, as the Barbarians now saw, not few and timid, as they had expected. To begin with, it was this which shattered the confidence of the Gauls, who thought it beneath them to be attacked first. Then again, the light-armed folk fell upon them, forced them into action before they had taken their usual order and been arrayed in companies, and so com- pelled them to fight at random and in utter disorder. Finally, when Camillus led his men-at-arms to the attack, the enemy raised their swords on high and rushed for close quarters. But the Romans thrust their javelins into their faces, received their strokes on the parts that were shielded by iron, and so turned - the edge of their metal, which was soft and weakly tempered, so much so that their swords quickly bent up double, while their shields were pierced and

ouprremapbar Ka Bapvvec Bar ToD Voowy epen-Kopéeven. 50 Kal peOrrapevor Tov (dtwv Grrhwy em etp@VTO Tois éxeivoy ovat péper Oar Kal Tous baoous Tapadé pew émuhapBavopevor Tais Xepaiv.
ot O€ 'Peopaior yupvoupévovs * opavres 70n Tots Eipeouy EXPOVTO, Kal povos bev Hv TONS TOV TpOTaKT@V, puyn 5é Tey adeov TAVTAXOTE Too
medtov. Tovs yap Aopous Kal Ta Dyna 7 poKar-ELAnper Kadpurros, 70 dé otparomedov dia 0
Oapaeiv aphpaxtov éyovres Hoecay ov YadeTras Gdwoopevov.
Tavrny THY paxny éteow DaTepov Tpioxaideca
ryevéoOat héyouat THS 'Popns awa ews, kai Bé-Bavov 4 auTnsS ppovnua KATA TOV Kerrav € eryrye-véoOat "Pepaios apodpa Sedorkoar TOUS Bap-Bapous, ws 70 mpartov bua vorous Kal tUYas Taparoyous, ov Kara KpaTos, um aura veveKnpévous. OUT 8' ot o poBos ny toxupos, Oore GécBau vOjov apeiabar Tous lepets oTpateias xwpis av py TadariKos 7) TONE MOS.
XLII. Tov pe ovv OTPATLOTLKGY ayavev obras nyovic8n Te Kapidrp TedEuT Ais. Thy yap Ovehitpavev modu eldev ev Tapépyp TAUTNS
THIS oTparetas apayel TporxXwpyncacav are.
Tav oe TOT EKOY 0 Heya ros bmeXelTeTo Kal
Xarerwrepos " m™pos TOV Ofjpov toyupov emravn-KOVTa TH ViKN «al Bualopevor é éx Snpotav i dmatov dtrodeitas Tapa Tov KabecTOTA voor, avTITATTOpévns tHS BovAns cal tov KdpirXov ovK éoons
1 yupvouuévous with S: yupvods.

2 xal xaderwrepos Sintenis', now supported by S: xarerdweighed down by the javelins which stuck in them. Therefore they actually abandoned their own weapons and tried to possess themselves of those of their enemies, and to turn aside the javelins by grasping them in their hands. But the Romans, seeing them thus disarmed, at once took to using their swords, and there was a great slaughter of their foremost ranks, while the rest fled every whither over the plain ; the hill tops and high places had been occupied beforehand by Camillus, and they knew that their camp could easily be taken, since, in their overweening confidence, they had neglected to fortify it.

This battle, they say, was fought thirteen years after the capture of Rome, and produced in the Romans a firm feeling of confidence regarding the Gauls. They had mightily feared these Barbarians, who had been conquered by them in the first instance, as they felt, in consequence of sickness and extra- ordinary misfortunes, rather than of any prowess in their conquerors. At any rate, so great had their terror been that they made a law exempting priests from military service, except in case of a Gallic war.

XLII. This was the last military exploit performed by Camillus, for the capture of Velitrae was a direct sequel of this campaign, and it yielded to him with- out a struggle. But the greatest of his civil contests yet remained and it was harder to wage it now against a people which had come back flushed with victory, and bent on electing a plebeian consul, contrary to the established law. But the Senate opposed their demands, and would not suffer Camillus to lay aside .

| 203

arolécOat Tv apymy; as per loxupas Kal
meyarns eEovotas Tihs éxeivou paxnoopever ay Bérxtiov trép rhs dpiotoxpatias.. émel 8é mpoxabnpévov tov KapiddXou Kal xpnwatifovros
ért THs dyopas varnpétns trepPOels Tapa Tov Snudpywv éxéXevoev axorovbeiy Kai THY YeElpa
T copate Tpoonyey ws amdtwv, kpavyy S€ Kal.
OdpuBos, ofos otra, KaTéoxye THY ayopav, TaV
bev wept tov KdwrrAov @OovvTwv amo Tov Bnparos Tov Snpocvov, TOY dé TONKGY Kat ober EXKxewv CTrLKeAevojLevenr, drropovpevos Tos Trapotat TV ev dpxnv ov TPoHKaro, tous dé Bov-AeuTas dvaraBov éBadifev él THY ouyKANTOD.

Kat mply etoeAOcivy petactpadels cis TO Kam-
TO@ALOV ebEaTo tots Oeois carevdivas Ta 1 a,povTa.
Tm pos TO KdddLaTOV Té)oS, brrocX omevos vaov ‘Opovoias iSptcacbar Tis Tapaxhs KaTacTaans.
Meydrou 6 aryaivos év TH TUyKAHTD Yyevo- - pévou pos TAs évavtias yopas, Cpcos evienaey paraxwTépa Kal bmeixovea TO On Kal wovoa TaV omdrav Tov €repov amo TOU TAN-Govs dpxatpectacat. TaiTa é Os TH Bovrn
SoxobvTa Tov Sixtaropos avert ovTos év TO Siue, TapaxXphya mer, olov eiKos, Hdopevor TH BovrAy SinAAaTTOvTO Kal TOV Kaporrov oixade KpOoT@
kat Bon T poeTre TOV. ™m 8 voTEpata auven-Govres éeyndicavto THs pey ‘Opovoias iepov, HoTep eiEaTo Kapirnros, eis Thy dryopav Kal THV éxxAnotay atomroyv éml Tois ryeryernpévors iSpu-cacbat, tais 6¢é Kadovpevars Aativats pia
népav mpocbévras éoptdtew tétTapas, tapav- 152 204

CAMILLUS

his office, thinking that, with the aid of his great power and authority, they could make a better fight in defence of their aristocracy. But once when Camillus was seated in state and despatching public business in the forum, an officer, sent by the tribunes of the people, ordered him to follow, actually laying hands upon him as though to hale him away. All at once such cries and tumult as had never been heard before filled the forum, the friends of Camillus thrusting the plebeian officer down from the tribunal, and the multitude below ordering him to drag the dictator away. Camillus, perplexed at the issue, did not renounce his office, but taking the — senators with him, marched off to their place of meeting. Before he entered this, turning to the Capitol, he prayed the gods to bring the present tumults to their happiest end, solemnly vowing to build a temple to Concord when the confusion was over.

In the Senate there was a great conflict of opposing views, but nevertheless, the milder course prevailed, concession was made to the people, and permission given them to elect one of the consuls from their own body. When the dictator announced this to the people as the will and pleasure of the Senate, at once, as was to be expected, they were delighted to be reconciled with the Senate, and escorted Camillus to his home with loud applause. On the following day they held an assembly and voted to build a temple of Concord, as Camillus had vowed, and to have it face the forum and place of assembly, to commemorate what had now happened. They voted also to add a day to the so-called Latin festival, and thereafter to celebrate four days, and that all

tixa 5é€ Ovew Kal atepavnpopeiv "Pwpaiors Grravtas. Tov o apxatpeciov BpaBevbévrwv bro Kayidrouv KateaTadnaay dratot Mapxos pev Aipinsos éx Tat pixion, Aevxtos dé LéEr195 éx Snporav TpOTOs. kat tovTo qépas at Kapidrov mpaters 6 éaXov.
XLIII. "Ey 6€ 7 KATOT évauT@ Dowpadns voros éumecodaa TH 'Pan Tov pév addov BX ov ov TrepiAnmT ov apiO ue dep Oerpe, Tov o dpxovrav TOUS Trelorous. 'Eredevt noe dé Kal Kdpirros, Mrrxias pev ovvexa Kal Biou TENELOTNTOS, WS Eb Tes aAos avOpaTrav @paios, auidoas 6é "Po-patos as ovde oupmarres o TH voow KaT éxeivoy Tov Ypovoy amroPavoytes.

Romans at once perform sacrifices with garlands on their heads. At the elections held by Camillus, Marcus Aemilius was chosen consul from the patricians, and Lucius Sextus first consul from the plebeians. This was the last public act of Camillus.

XLIII. In the year following, a pestilential sick- ness visited Rome, carrying off an incalculable number of the common people, and most of the magistrates. Camillus also died at this time, and he was full ripe for death, if any man ever was, considering his years and the completeness of his life; yet his loss grieved the Romans more than that of all those who perished of the plague at this time.

I. "Apioteténs o Avotpayov duvAns peéev jv

"Avtioyibos, Tav & Syuwv "Adwrren7nOev. epi
5 ovcias avtov Aoyou Sudhopor yeyovaciy, ot péev as év mevia ovyvtéve KataBiwoavTos Kal peta
\ \ b 4 @ é 5 4 \
Tnv TeXeUTHY aTroNTrovTOS GuyaTépas Ovo TroNUY
\
xpovov avexdotous Sv? amopiay yevouévas mpos 5é ToTov Tov AOryoy UTd TOAAOY Elpynpévoy avTt-
, e '\ , ? A
Ttacaopevos 6 Parnped's Anyuntpios ev TO Yox-4 U a 4 b] /
pare. yopiov Parnpot dot ywooxev Apioteioouv
yevouevov, év @ TéaTrTaL, Kal TEKpNpLA THS TrEpt TOV osKoV EvTropias ev ev HryelTat THY eTr@VvUpOV apxnv, iv jpyev 0} T@ Kudpo AaxXov ex TOY YEVOV TOV TA péeyloTa TiuNnMaTA KEKTNMEVO?, ODS.
TEVTAKOOLOMEOL VOUS TpOoanyopevoy, ErEepov Sé TOV
> / > a , J
éEootpaxiapov: ovdevl yap TOY TevyTwY, GANA Tois €& olkwy te peydrwv cal dia yévous dryxov
' ' ~ 9 , / \
émipOoverv dotpaxov émipépecOau: tpitov dé Kat Tedevtaiov, Ste vinns avabnpata yopnytKovs tpitodas év Avovicou Kxatadérorrrev, of xal Ka?
n /
nas edeixverto To.avTny émiypadiy S:acw@lovtes:
1 #pxev 5 Blass, adopting Sintenis' conjecture: Apéte.
210
ARISTIDES

I. Aristipes, the son of [Uysimachus, 'belonged to the tribe Antiochis, and to the deme Alopecé. As regards his substance, stories differ, some having it that he passed all the days of his life in severe poverty, and that at his death he left behind him .two daughters who for a long time were not sought in marriage because of their indigence. But in contradiction of this story which so many writers give, Demetrius of Phalerum, in his << Socrates,' says he knows of an estate in Phalerum which belonged to Aristides—the one in which he lies buried, and regards as proofs of his opulent circumstances, first, his office of Archon Eponymous, which only he could hold who obtained it by lot from among the families carrying the highest property- assessments (these were called Pentacostomedimni, or Five-hundred-bushellers) ; second, his banishment in ostracism, for no poor men, but only men from great houses which incurred envy because of their family prestige, were liable to ostracism ; third, and last, the fact that he left in the precinct of Dionysus as offerings for victory some choregic tripods, which, even in our day, were pointed out as still bearing the inscription: " The tribe

211
p 2

“"Avtuoxis éevixa, Apioreidns éyopnye, ’ApyxéoTpatos édiOacKe.”
Tourl pév ovv, xatrep etvar Soxody péytoTor, aoQevéotatov éott. Kat yap ‘Erapewvoveas, dv mavres avOpwro ywooKxovow év Tevia Kal Tpadévta TOAAH Kal Bidcavta, cal TIdtovo pido-coos ovK adirotipouvs avedé~avto yYopnyias, o pev avAntrais dvipdow, o Sé Tact KuKdLols yopnyncas, TovTm pev Aiwvos tod Yupaxovciou Thy Satdvny tapéxovtos, "Evrapewvavda 8 tav wept Wlerdomiday. ov yap éott Tois ayabois
axnpuxtos Kal aotovdos mpos Tas Tapa Tov
dirwy Swpeads modepos, GAA Tas els amrd0ecw Kal mreoveEiay ayevvets Hryovpevoe Kal Tatrewas, boat pirotipias Twos axepSous ExovTar Kat Aap-WpoTNTos ov“ atrwOodvTar.
Ilavaitios pévtot tept Tod rpizrodos atodaiver Tov Anuntptoy opwvupia Sievrevopévov: amo yap tav Mndixav eis tTHv tTéeXNeuTHY Tov [leXoTrovYN-avaKxod troNéuou Svo0 povous ‘Aptoreidas yopnyous avaypadecOar vxavras, av ovdétepov clvar TO Avotpaxou TOV aurov, ara Tov pey Hevodirou
TATpOs, TOV 5é ypove TOMA vewrepov, ws Edey-Nel Ta Ypdmpata THs pet’ Evxreldnv dvta ypappatikhns Kal mpooyeypappévos o 'Apyéotpatos, ov év tots Mnoexois ovdeis, év dé rots [eXozropvnoparots auxvol xyopav diddcKnarov dvaypdgovot.
To pév ovv Tod Ilavartiou Bértiov émucxemréov

212

319

Antiochis was victorious; Aristides was Choregus ; Archestratus was Poet.” Now this last argument, though it seems very strong, is really very weak. For both Epaminondas, who, as all men know, was reared and always lived in great poverty, and Plato the philosopher, took it upon themselves to furnish munificent public performances, the first, of men trained to play the flute, the second, of boys trained to sing and dance ; but Plato received the money that he spent thereon from Dion of Syracuse, and Epaminondas from Pelopidas. Good men wage no savage and relentless war against the gifts of friends, but while they look upon gifts taken to be stored away and increase the receiver's wealth as ignoble and mean, they refuse none which promote an unselfish and splendid munificence.

However, as regards the tripods, Panaetius tries to. show that Demetrius was deceived by identity of name. From the Persian wars, he says, down to the end of the Peloponnesian war, only two Aristides are recorded as victorious choregi, and neither of them is identical with the son of Lysimachus. One was the son of Xenophilus, and the other lived long afterwards, as is proved by the inscription itself, which is written in the character used after Eucleides,! as well as by the last name, Archestratus, of whom there is no record during the Persian wars, while during the time of the Peloponnesian war his name often appears as that of a choral poet.

This argument of Panaetius should be more closely

1 In 403-402 8.c., when Eucleides was Archon Hponymous, the Ionian alphabet was officially adopted at Athens.

érws eye. Te 8 Gotpdem Tas o bia So€ay
A / A s U4 e é \ \
h yévos Aoyou Suvayiv wvmrép Tovs ToAXOUS vouslopevos viréririev: Strov Kal Adpuoyv o Ilepe-lA lA 4 \ A PANS
Kréous Stddonaros, Ste TO hpoveity edoxer Tis elvas wepittos, éEwotpaxicOn. Kal pv ap—ar N\ 9 Vd e9 \ ? , 3 b] ye tov Aptotetdny o ldopevevs ov cvapevTov, aAX
e 4, 9 / , > \ \
érXopévov "AOnvaiwyv dnoiv. ec Sé nal peta THY év [Iatasais paynv ipkev, as avtos o Anpn-

Tptos yéypade, cal wavy miBavov éotiy émi dSd&n
TocauTy Kal KatopOwpact tnArALKOUTOLS aEiwOnVvaL
5.’ apetnyv ts Sua twAovTOV érbyxavoy of Aayyd-
2 \ \ e \ / ’ ,

voyTes. adNa yap o pev Anpuntplos ov povoy
"Aptorenv, GANG Kal Zwoxparnv SHros éote THs
mevias éFeréaOar dirotipwovpevos ws peyddou Kakov Kal yap éxeive dnaly ov povov THY oiKiav UTapXELV, GAA Kal pras éEBSoprjxovta Toxr{opévas vo Kpitavos.
II. ’Apsoreiins 8¢ KrXeroBévous pév tov xata-oTHTAMEVOU THV TOALTELAY PETA TOUS TUpPaYVOUS
éraipos yevouevos, Enrwoas 8 xal Oavpaoas
pamota TOV ToALTIK@Y avdpav AvKotpyov Tov
‘ fo]
Aaxedatpovov, Hrypato pév apiotoxpatixhs Twodtetas, Eye 8 avtitacadpevoy iiép tod Sypov Bemwortoxréa Tov Neoxréous. evot pev ovv dacwy maidas ovTas avtovs Kal ouvtpepopévous at’
apxns év mavti cat aomovdys é oper Kal mavdias mTpaypwate Kat Noym StadépecOat mrpos aAAAOUs, Kai Tas hvaoes EVOds UIrd THIS Pedroverxias éxetvns 214

ARISTIDES

examined as to its validity ; but to banishment in ostracism every one was liable who was superior to the common run of men in reputation, or lineage, or eloquence. And so it was that Damon, the teacher of. Pericles, was ostracized because he was thought to be rather extraordinary in his wisdom.! Furthermore, Idomeneus says that Aristides obtained the office of archon, not by lot, but by the election of the Athenians.?, And if he was made archon after the battle of Plataea, as Demetrius himself has written, it is certainly very credible that in view of such a reputation and such successes
as he there won, he should be deemed worthy, for his valour, of an office which men who drew lots for it obtained for their wealth. In fact, Demetrius is clearly ambitious to rescue not only Aristides, but also Socrates from what he deems the great evil of poverty, for he says that Socrates owned not only his house, but also seventy minas out at interest with Crito.

II. Aristides was an intimate friend of that Cleisthenes who set the state in order after the expulsion of the tyrants. He also admired and emulated, above all other statesmen, Lycurgus the Lacedaemonian. He therefore favoured an aristocratic form of' government, and ever had opposed to him, as champion of the people, Themistocles the son of Neocles. Some say that even as boys and fellow-pupils, from the outset, in every word and deed, whether serious or trivial, they were at variance with one another, and that by

1 Pericles, iv. 2.

2 From 508 B.o. to 487 B.c. the archons were elected by the Assembly ; after 487, they were once more chosen by lot.

dvaxanrvrres Oat, Thy pev evyeph Kal TrapdBonov Kal mavoupyov ovaay Kai per ofbrnTos émi mavTa padiws Pepopevny, THY 8 lige év HOeu BeBaig Kal rpos TO Sixatov a arevi,' Weddos Sé Kai Boporoyiav cal amdarny ot8 év radias Tur TpOTr@ TpocLepevny.

'"Apiatov & o Keios &€& épwrixijs apxiis ryeveobat gnat cal mpoerOety él tocovrov. THY éyOpav avTav. 2ryoirew yap, Os Hv ever Keios, ida te nal poppy ca@patos wodV Tov ép apa Ram poraros, appotépous _fpacbevras ou petpios eveynety To Tabos ovd dua. AnYOUTL TO KdAXret TOU Tratdos atrobécOat THv dtNovetkiar, GAN wWomep éyyuuvacapévouvs exelvn Tpos THY qodttelay evOvs opunaat Svatrvpous évtas Kal diahopws éyovtas.

'O pév obv Memsoroxrs eis Evratpeiav éuBadrowv éautov elye mpoBrnua nab Sivayuy ovK evearadpovntov, @aTe Kal Wpds Tov eiTovTaA KAaXrBS avtov ap€ew "AOnvaiwr, dvirep isos 7 Kal Kowvos amac. " Mydérore," elmreiv, 'els TOUTOV eyo Kcabioarpe Tov Opovov, ev @ méov ovdev EEovarw Ob piror map "épol Trav addoTplav:" "Apioretdnys dé Kad EaUTOV domep obov idiav éBab.le b:a THs ToneTelas, ™ per ov pev ov Bovdopevos ouvadixely Tots

this very rivalry their natures were straightway made manifest, the one as dexterous, reckless, and unscrupulous, easily carried with impetuosity into any and every undertaking ; the other as established on a firm character, intent on justice, and admitting _ no falsity or vulgarity or deceit, not even in any sport whatsoever.
But Ariston of Ceos says that this enmity of theirs, which came to be so intense, had its origin in a love affair. They were both enamoured of Stesilatis, who was of Ceian birth, and in beauty of person the most brilliant of youths; and they cherished their passion so immoderately, that not even after the boy’s beauty had faded did they lay aside their rivalry, but, as though they had merely taken preliminary practice and exercise in that, they presently engaged in matters of state also with passionate heat and opposing desires.
Themistocles joined a society of political friends, and so secured no inconsiderable support and, power. Hence when some one told him that he would be a good ruler over the Athenians if he would only be fair and impartial to all, he replied: “ Never may I sit on a tribunal where my friends are to get no more advantage from me than strangers.” But Aristides walked the way of statesmanship by him- _ self, on a private path of his own, as it were, because, in the first place, he was unwilling to join with any comrades in wrong-doing, or to vex them by with- holding favours; and, in the second place, he saw that power derived from friends incited many to do wrong, and so was on his guard against it, deeming

Sé xodovov tH éxeivou Sivamy ydpiTe TOV
To\Xov av€ouevny vrrevavtiovabar ols Empatrev 0 BemworoxrAns, BérTvov Hyovpevos TmapedOety évia TOY ouudepovt@v Tov SHyov TO Kpareiv éxelvov év taow ioyupov yevécOat. Tédos S€ mote Tov @emotoxrAéovs mpatTovTos TL ToY SeovTwy avtTixpovoas Kat Trepuyevomevos ov KaTéaoxyev, GX eEltrev ato THS éxxAnalas aTiwy, ws ovx gots owtnpia Ttois "AOnvaiwy mpdypyacwv, et pn Kal Bemwortonréa kal avtov eis To Bapadpov éuBdaroev. ward dé ypaas Tia yvounv eis Tov Spor, avtiroyias ovons mpos avTyy Kal diroverkias, expater' pédXovtos S€ Tod mpoédpou Tov Shmov emepwtav aiaQopevos éx TOV AOywV avTav TO aovpdpopoy améctn Tod yndiopaTos.
jonndaKs de Kat St éErépwv eiaéhepe TAS yvomas, @s pn) dtdoverxia TH Wpos avTov 6 BepioroxrAHs éurrdd.os ein TH ovuépovte.
@avpactn Sé tis ehaiveto avtov Tapa Tas év
Th TodtTeia petaBorgas 7 evoeTabea, pte Tals Tiyais ématpoyévou mpos Te Tas Svanpepias aBopvBws Kal mpaws exovtos, Kal opolws Hyou-218
320

ARISTIDES

it right that the good citizen should base his con- fidence only on serviceable and just conduct.

III. However, since Themistocles was a reckless agitator, and opposed and thwarted him in every measure of state, Aristides himself also was almost compelled—partly in self-defence, and partly to curtail his adversary's power, which was increasing through the favour of the many—to set himself in opposition to what Themistocles was trying to do, thinking it better that some advantages should escape the people than that his adversary, by prevailing everywhere, should become too strong. Finally there came a time when he opposed and defeated Themistocles in an attempt to carry some really necessary measure. Then he could no longer hold his peace, but declared, as he left the Assembly, that there was no safety for the Athenian state unless they threw both Themistocles and himself into the death-pit. On another occasion he himself introduced a certain measure to the people, and was carrying it through successfully, in spite of the attacks of the opposition upon it, but just as the presiding officer was to put it to the final vote, perceiving, from the very speeches that had been made in opposition to it, the inexpediency of his measure, he withdrew it withfout a vote. And oftentimes he would introduce his measures through other men, that Themistocles might not be driven by the spirit of rivalry with him to oppose what was expedient for the state.

Altogether admirable was his steadfast constancy amid the revulsions of political feeling. He was not unduly lifted up by his honours, and faced adversity with a calm gentleness, while in all cases alike he pévov xphvar tH tatpid: mapéyew éavtov ov Npynuatwy povov, adrAga Kat do—ns mpoika Kat ayscOit modwTevopevoyv. Obev, ws Eoixe, TOY Eis

"Apdgidpaov br' Aicydtrovu reroinpévor layBetov
év T@ Oedtpw AEyouevov:
Ov yap Soxety Stxatos, aA' eivat BéreL,
a v \ \ ,
Baéeciay Groxa a ppevos Kaptrovpevos,

ad' is Ta Kebva Bractdver Bovrevpata, mavres amréBreirav eis "Aptotetdny, ws éxeiv@ paroTa THS apeTas TavTNS TpocnKovons.

IV. Od povov 88 mpos ebvoray nal ydpiv, adra Kal Tpos opynv Kat mpos ExOpay layupoTatos Hv umTép trav Stxaiwy avtTiornvat. DAéyerar your mote Siaxwov éxOpov év Stxacrnpio, peta THY Katnyoptav ob BovAopéevey axoveww Tod Kivdvuvevovtos Ttav SixacTov, adrAa THY Whpov evOUs aitouvtwy ém avrov, avarndnoas TO Kpwopeve ouvixerevev, Sirws axovobein Kal Tvyos TOY
vonipoy maddy é Kkpivorv .idii@tats Svc, Tov érépov AéyovTos, WS TWoAAa Tuyyaver Tov *Aptateiényv o avridixos NEAVTINnKAS "Aéy', @ 'yabé," ddvat, " padrov, el TL o€ KaKOV TeTrOinKe: col
yap, ovx épauvT@, dixalw." tov Sé Snpociwv

mpocddwv aipebels erriperntys ob pdvoy Tous
Ka? avrov, GAXd Kal Tovs mpd avrod yevouévous 220

ARISTIDES

considered it his duty to give his services to his country freely and without any reward, either in money, or, what meant far more, in reputation. And so it befell, as the story goes, that when the verses composed by Aeschylus upon Amphiaraiis were recited in the theatre :—

‘«¢ He wishes not to seem, but rather just to be,
And reap a harvest from deep furrows in a mind
From which there spring up honourable counsel-lings,” }

all the spectators turned their eyes on Aristides, feeling that he, above all men, was possessed of such excellence.

IV. It was not only against the inclinations of his good-will and personal favour that he was a most strenuous champion of justice, but also against those of his anger and hatred. ‘At any rate a story is told, how he was once prosecuting an enemy in court, and after he had made his accusation the judges were loath to hear the defendant at all, and demanded that their vote be taken against him straightway ; but Aristides sprang to his feet and seconded the culprit’s plea for a hearing and the usual legal procedure. And again, when he was serving as private arbitrator between two men, on one of them saying that his opponent had done Aristides much injury, “Tell me rather,’ he said, “whether he has done thee any wrong; it is for thee, not for myself, that I am seeking Justice.” When he was elected overseer of the public revenues, he proved clearly that large sums had been em- bezzled, not only by his fellow-officials, but also by

1 Seven against Thebes, 592 ff. (Dindorf).

dpyovras arredeixnvue TOAAA vevoodgiopévous, Kat
padota Tov Bepsoronréa:
Loos yap avnp, THs 5é yetpos ov KpaTav.

Aw Kal cuvayayav tonrdodvs ért tov *Apt-aTeiOny év tats evOdvars Sioxwv KroTHAs Katadicn meptéBarev, ws pnow [dopevets. ayavaxrovvTwv
S& tov mpdtav ev TH rode. Kal Bedtiotar, od povor adelOn ths Enutas, GdAa Kal tTadw dpyov éxt riv avtiy Svoixnow aredetyOn. mpoorrotovpevos S€ TeV mpoTtépwy peTapédey avT@ Kal paraxwrepov évdsdovs éauTov, Hpecxe Tots TA Kowa KdEérTovaw ovK éEedAéyyxwv ovd axpiBoro-youpevos, @OTE KATATLUTAApLEVOUS TOY Synod iwY

tmepetraivety Tov Aptoteionv cal Se€tovc8ar Tov Sipwov wirép avtov, orovddlovtas apxovta maddy aipeOjvar. pedrrovtwv Sé yeipotovely érreTtipnoe trois ‘"AOnvaiou: ““Ore péev yap, én, “ tictas Kal KaX@s vpiv Hp~a, mpovmrynraxicOny: érrei 5é
TOAAG TOY KOLVOY KaTATpOEtaL TOls KNETTOVAL
Oavpactos elvat Sox® Torjitns. avTos pév ov aicyvvoyat TH viv tinn paddrov fH TH mpanv katabixn, cvvaxOouar © dpiv, map’ ols évdo€o-Tepov éote Tov calew Ta Snpocta To yapilecOar Tots mrovnpols.” tata © eitr@y cal tas KNoTTIAS éFeréyEas Tous wey ToTe Boavras brép avtod Kal Haptupodyras émrectopice, TOV O° adNOLVOV Kal Sixavoy amd tov BeAtiotwy érratvov elxev.
222

ARISTIDES

those of former years, and particularly by The-mistocles :—
<“‘The man was clever, but of his hand had no control.”

For this cause, Themistocles banded many together against Aristides, prosecuted him for theft at the auditing of his accounts, and actually got a verdict against him, according to Idomeneus. But the first and best men of the city were incensed at this, and he was not only exempted from his fine, but even appointed to administer the same charge again. Then he pretended to repent him of his former course, and made himself more pliable, thus giving pleasure to those who were stealing the common funds by not examining them or holding them to strict account, so that they gorged themselves with ¢he public moneys, and then lauded Aristides to the skies, and pleaded with the people in his behalf, eagerly desirous that he be once more elected to his office. But just as they were about to vote, Aristides rebuked the Athenians. “ Verily,” said he, “when I served you in office with fidelity and honour, I was reviled and persecuted ; but now that I am flinging away much of the common fund to thieves, I am thought to be an admirable citizen. For my part, I am more ashamed of my present honour than I was of my former condemnation, and I am sore distressed for you, because it is more honourable in your eyes to please base men than to guard the public moneys.'' By these words, as well as by exposing their thefts, he did indeed stop the mouths of the men who were then testifying loudly in his favour, but he won genuine and just praise from the best citizens.

223

V. 'Enet 5é Adtis b7r6 Aapetou treppbcis Koyo pev éemibeivac Sixny 'AOnvaiows, Ste Ydpdees évérrpnoay, épym 5é Katactpéyacba Tos "EX-Anvas, eis Mapadava trayti Te ocTOAM KaTécye kal tTHv yopav érop0a, Tov Séxa xabeotoTwv tois '"A@nvaiows éat roy mmodenoy otTpaTnyav péytotrov pev elxev akiwpa Mirriddns, d0En Sé kal Suvaper Sevtepos qv 'Apioteidyns. xal tore Tept THS maxXns youn TH Mirteddov pod Gépevos ov puxpay érroince poTriy: Kat Trap nuépay éxdorov oTpaTnyoU TO KpaTos ExovToS, ws TrEpLAAGEY Ets avrov apxn, twapédaxe Murtiddy, diddoxwv TovUs suvapyYovtas, Ste TO TWeiDecAat Kal dKodov-Oeiy trois ed Hpovadowy ovK aliaxpoV, AAA wEpvov éott Kal cwrnpiov. obtw 8 mpaivas TH dido-verxiavy Kal tpotpeyrdpevos avTovs ayamav pia yvoun TH Kpatiaotn ypwpuévous, Eppwce tov MurA-Tiddnv TO arrepiaTdaTw THs éEovaias taxupoy 'yevopevov. Xaipew yap éav Exacros H6n TO Tap' Tpépay dipxew éxelv mpooeixer.
"Ep be TH pax pddiora tov 'AOnvaiwr Tov peéoov TovyncavTos Kat Aéeio Tov evrava Xpovov TOV BapBapwv avTepeta avr ov Kara THY Acovtida cai THY "Avtuoxiba pudgy, nyavigavTo AapIrpas TETAYMEVOL Tap ard ous 6 TE Oew-aToKNijs Kat oO "Aptaretons' O pev yap Aeovtibos qv, o & 'Avtioyisdos: érel dé TpeYrapevor TOUS BapBdpous évéBadov eis TAS vais kal TEOVTAS ovx énl vncwy é@pwv, add' U76 Tob TVEULATOS kal ths Oardoons eiow mpos ty '"ATTiKnY

V. Now when Datis, on being sent by Darius ostensibly to punish the Athenians for burning Sardis, but really to subdue all the Hellenes, put in at Marathon with all his armament and went to ravaging the country, then, of the ten generals appointed by the Athenians for the conduct of the war, it was Miltiades who enjoyed the greatest con- sideration, but in reputation and influence Aristides was second. By adopting at that time the opinion of Miltiades about the battle to be fought, he did much to turn the scale in its favour. And since each general held the chief authority for a single day in turn, when the command came round to him, he handed it over to Miltiades, thereby teaching his - fellow-officers that to obey and follow men of wisdom is not disgraceful, but dignified and salutary. By thus appeasing the jealousy of his colleagues and inducing them to be cheerfully contented in the adoption of a single opinion (and that the best), he confirmed Miltiades in the strength which comes from an unrestricted power. For each of the other generals at once relinquished his own right to com- mand for a day in turn, and put himself under the orders of Miltiades. |

In the battle, the Athenian centre was the hardest pressed, and it was there that the Barbarians held their ground the longest, over against the tribes Leontis and Antiochis. There, then, Themistocles and Aristides fought brilliantly, ranged side by side ; for one was a Leontid, the other an Antiochid.

‘' When the Athenians had routed the Barbarians and driven them aboard their ships, and saw that they were sailing away, not toward the islands, but into the gulf toward Attica under compulsion of

atroBialopévors, poBnOévtes un THY TodALY Epnwor AdBwot TOY apvvopévwv, Tais pev evvéa hurais nireiyovTo Tpos TO aoTU Kal KaTHYUCAaV avOnpeEpoV
éy 5¢ Mapabau peta tis Eavtod dvarjs ’Apio-retons atroragpbels PvrAaE TaV aiyparwTev Kal TOV Aadvpwy ovK eYrevoato thy Sdtav, adrAA xvdnv pev dpyvpov Kal ypuaod trapovtos, éaOFTos
dé mravTodamis Kal ypnudtwv adrddXov apvOyTeov év Tals oxnvais Kal Tois HAwKOCL okddeoww UTrap-
, ” 9 b) ‘ > 4 aA wy >
Yovtwy, ovT autos émeOvunce Oiyetv ovT adXrOv
elace, TAY Et TLVES Exeivov AaADoVTEs MPEANOnTAaY: @v hv Kat Karas o dadobyos.

Tovrtp yap Tis, as Eouxe, TOV BapBdpov ™poaémrea ev oinBels Bao théa 61a THY Kony Kat TO ag wg elvas: TporKUyygas 5é «al AaBopevos THs Sefas ederfe Todd Xpuatov év haxn Tut
Katopwpuypévov. 0 d¢ KadNias a @MOTATOS dvOpo-
Tov Kat | TApAvomoraros YEVOMEVOS TOY pev Ypu-oov dvetheTo, TOV 8 av pwmov, as 1) KaTELTrOL
q pos érépous, arréKTewver. éx TOUTOU gaci kal haxKoTovTous wre TOV K@MLKBY TOUS amo Tis otxius eye Oat, TKMTTOVTOY els TOV TOTTOY, ev ©
TO Xpuaiov O Kahiias eUpev.
"Aptoretons bé THY éT@vupov EvOrs a apxny np&e. xalrot pnoly 6 Dadnpevs Anpnrtpros apEas TOV
dvdpa, pu pov eumpoabev Tov Oavdtov peta THv
év Irarasais paynv. év 6 Tais avaypagais
PETA wep EavOurmidnp, ép’ ov pay ae nTTn0n
Aatadow, ovS opovipov Aptoteldny év mavu 226

ARISTIDES

wind and wave, then they were afraid lest the enemy find Athens empty of defenders, and so they hastened homeward with nine tribes, and reached the city that very day. But Aristides was left behind at Marathon with his own tribe, to guard the captives and the booty. Nor did he belie his reputation, but- though silver and gold lay about in heaps, and though there were all sorts of raiment and untold wealth besides in the tents and captured utensils, he neither desired to meddle with it himself, nor would he suffer any one else to do so, although certain ones helped themselves without his knowledge. Among these was Callias the Torch-bearer.!
Some Barbarian, it seems, rushed up to this man, supposing him to be a king from his long hair and the headband that he wore, made obeisance to him, and taking him by the hand in suppliant fashion, showed him a great mass of gold buried up in a sort of pit.

llias, most savage and lawless of men, took up the gold; but the man, to prevent his betraying the matter to others, he slew. From this circumstance, they say, his descendants are called by the comic poets “ Laccopluti,” or “ Pit-wealthies,” in sly allusion to the place where Callias found his gold.

Aristides at once received the office of. Archon Eponymous. And yet Demetrius of Phalerum says that it was a little while before his death, and after the battle of Plataea, that the man held this office.” But in the official records, after Xanthippides, in whose year of office Mardonius was deteated at Plataea, you cannot find, long as the list is, so much

1 Qne of the highest officers at the celebration of the Eleusinian mysteries. 2 479-478 B.c.
227
Q 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

a ®
jodnots AaBetv éott, peta 5¢ Paivrroy,! éf' ov
\ > "A 4 > / > A393 4
thv ev Mapadarvt payny évixwy, evOvs Apirreidns apywv avayéypanrat.
VI. Ilacav 8 trav rept adtoy apetov 7 Sixatocuvn pwarLoTa Tos TOAXOIS alaOnow TrapeElxe dua TO «THY xXpeiav evdeXexeoTaTHY avTS Ka KOLVOTATNHY imdpyew. 50ev avnp wévns Kat Snpo-TLKOS exTHaAaTO THY BaciAtKwTdatny Kal OevoraTny mpoonyopiav tov Aixatov' 6 Trav Baciréwv xal
, bd \ 2s bd \ \ \ Tupavvwv ovdels éfjrwoev, Gra TodopKytai Kai Kepavvot xat Nixdropes, évioc 8 Aerot kal 'Tépaxes Eyatpov mpocayopevopevot, THY amd TH Bias xal ra SUvdpews, ws Eorxe, wGAXNOY THV avo THS aperns Sofayv ayaTa@vTes. KalToL TO Geiov, 6 yAixXovTat cvvotxecodyv Kal cvvadhopoLody avrous, tptat Soxet Siadéper, apOapoia Kat Suvdpe. cal apety, Ov Kal ceuvotatov 4 apeT? kal Oevotatrov éotiv. adOdpt@ pév yap elvat Kat TO Kev@ Kal Tois atoxelors TUpBERKe, Sivapuy
e
5é€ xal ceropol Kai Kepavvoi Kal mrvevpdatwv oppat Kal pevpatev émipopal peyarnv exovart, dixns &é kat Béusdos obdév Ste wy TO ppovely nal rovile-cOat® perarayyaver.
Avo kal Tptov dvtwy, & merovOacw oi trodXol

\ \ A 4 \ , a re)
mpos TO Getov, Enrov xat PoBou cal tipns, Cnrodv pev avtovs Kal paxapifew éoixact Kata TO a-\ 3 P] V4 \ /
va kat aidsor, éxarrntTec Oar é Kal dedrévae KaTa TO.KUptov Kal duvaroy, ayaray Sé Kai Timav
1 dalvienovy Bekker, Hercher, and Blass with F4S: #4-vinwoy. 2 év xa) Hercher and Blass with S: dv. ae Aoyl(ecOa: Blass: Aoyl(ecOa: +d Oeiov reasoning about the

ay.
228

32

ARISTIDES

as the name Aristides; whereas immediately after Phaenippus, in whose year of office the victory at Marathon was won, an Aristides is recorded as archon.!
VI. Of all his virtues, it was his justice that most impressed the multitude, because of its most con- tinual and most general exercise. Wherefore, though poor and a man of the people, he acquired that most kingly and godlike surname of “The Just.” This no kings or tyrants ever coveted, nay, they rejoiced to be surnamed “ Besiegers,’ or “ Thunderbolts,” or ‘Conquerors,’ and some “ Eagles,’ or “ Hawks,” 2 cultivating the reputation which is based on violence and power, as it seems, rather than on virtue. And yet divinity, to which such men are eager to adapt and conform themselves, is believed to have three elements of superiority,—incorruption, power, and virtue ; and the most reverend, the divinest of these, is virtue. For vacuum and the ultimate elements partake of incorruption; and great power is ex- hibited by earthquakes and thunderbolts, and rushing tornadoes, and invading floods; but in fundamental justice nothing participates except through the exercice of intelligent reasoning powers.

Therefore, considering the three feelings which are generally entertained towards divinity,—envy, fear, and honourable regard, men seem to envy and felicitate the deities for their incorruption and per- petuity ; to dread and fear them for their sovereignty and power ; but to love and honour and revere them

1 490-489 B.c.
2 Demetrius Polorcetes; Ptolemy Ceraunos; Seleucus Nicator; Pyrrhus Aétos ; Antiochus Hieraz.
229

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 nat oéBecOar xata tHv Sixatoovyvnv. adda, xaitep ottw Siaxeipevot, THS wev GDavacias, iy 1
vats nua ov SéxeTat, Kal THs Suvapews, Hs ev TH TUXN) KEelTaL TO TAELoTOV, ErLOvpOdaL, THY
? by , / > a / > A >y°
5 dpetnv, 5 povoy éoti tav Jeiwy ayabav é>
nut, ev votépw TiPevtar, Kax@s PpovodyTes, ws ‘N b 4 \ 4 4 \ 3 A , e tov éy Svvdmet xal tTuyn peyary Kai apyn Biov 7
A 4 a a e > 3 , 4

pev Sixatocvvyn trove: Oeiov, % 8 adsxia Onpiwon.
VII. Té & ody ’Aptoteién ovvéBn TO TpwToOV ayarropéva Sa tH érwvupiay botepov POovei-Oat, pardtota pev ToD Beptatoxréovs AOYov Eis
Tous TroAAovs StadsdovTos,” ws "Aptoteidns avnpn-Kas Ta Sixactypia TH Kpivery Atravta Kal Sixa-Cav, AédNOe povapyiay dadopudopyntov éavT@
KaTecKkevacpévos’ 5n S€ mou Kal o SHpos emt TH
/ A A a
vikn méya ppovav kal Tav peyiotwv aiav avrov
HXGerTo Tois dvopa Kal Sokay imép Tovs ToAXOVS
2 €yovct. Kal cuvedOovtes cis aotu tavraxobev éEootpaxilovar tov Apioretdny, dvopa te POove
A , ,
THs do&ns poBov tupavvidos Oéuevor.
4 e MoyOnpias yap ovx Hv Kodacts 0 éEootpakia-
, > > 3 “A XN >] > , ” \
0s, GNX éxanretto pev Ou’ evTrpeTretav OyKoU Kal
duvipews Baputépas tamreivwows kal KoXovats, Hv 5é Oévov trapapvbia diravO pwrros, eis avyKea Tov
> , b > > 4 3 A , \ N
ovdev, GAN’ eis petdataci étrav Séxa THY TpOsS
1 +f tdxn Reiske, Hercher, and Blass with F8S: roxp. | 2 d:ad:5évr0s Hercher and Blass with F°S; é«Baddvros, for their justice. And yet, although men are thus disposed, it is immortality, of which our nature is not capable, and power, the chief disposal of which is in the hands of fortune, that they eagerly desire ; while as for virtue, the only divine excellence within our reach, they put it at the bottom of the list, unwisely too, since a life passed in power and great fortune and authority needs justice to make it ' divine; by injustice it is made bestial.

VII. Now, to resume, it befell Aristides to be loved at first because of this surname, but afterwards to be jealously hated, especially when Themistocles set the story going among the multitude that Aristides had done away with the public courts of justice by his determining and judging everything _in private, and that, without any one perceiving it, he had established for himself a monarchy, saving only the armed body-guard. And_ besides, the people too must by this time have become greatly elated over their victory; they thought nothing too good for themselves, and were therefore vexed with those who towered above the multitude in name and reputation. So they assembled in the city from all the country round, and ostracized Aristides, giving to their envious dislike of his reputation the name of fear of tyranny.

Now the sentence of ostracism was not a chastise- ment of base practices, nay, it was speciously called a humbling and docking of oppressive prestige and power ; but it was really a merciful exorcism of the spirit of jealous hate, which thus vented its malig- nant desire to injure, not in some irreparable evil,

?

231

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

3 70 AviobY arrepedopévov Sucpéverav. érrel 5 HpEavTo Ties avOpwrrous ayevvets Kal trovnpovs
uToBdAXev TO TpdypaTt, TeNEUTALoy aTrUdvT@Y ‘TrépBorov éEootpaxicartes érravcavto. NéyeTat dé rov “TrrépBorov éEootpaxicOjvar Sia TovavTny aitiav. “ArgxiBuddns cal Nixias péytotoy ev TH monet Suvdpevor Steotacialov. ws ovr o Stpos Guerre hépey to detpaxoy Kal SHros hv Tov Erepov yparror, duarex Devres ards roes Kal Tas oTaces éxatépas eis TavTO cuvayaryorres TOV 4 ‘TarépBodov é£oo tpaxiaOhvar TapesKevacay. éx
b¢ TOUTOU Suoxepavas o 0 hues @s KabuBpropévov
TO Tm parypa Kal T poem nhakia pévov adpnxe trav-TEADS Kal Katéhuaev.
"Hp 6€ ToLoUTOY, @s TUT@ ppacar, TO yLvomevov.
doTpaKov ha Pov ExaoTOs Kat ypaypas ép éBov-AeTO peTATTHeaL TOV TONLTHY, edepev els éva 7T0-Tov THS aryopas TEpLTEpPA'y HEVOV év KUKN@
5 Spupdxrors. ol é dpxovres mparov pev Sinpibpouv TO cUptray ev TAUT@ TOV doTpaxoy THOS
él yap éFaxioxirLeov éNdTToves ot Péportes | elev, aTedns HV O éFooTpakia pos: émerra TOV évopd-TOV ExagTov idta Oévres TOY v76 TOV TrELT TOV
Yeypappeévov éFexipuT tov eis Ern Séxa, KapTov-Hevoy TA auToD.
Tpadopevov ony TOTE TOV OoTpdKcoy Aéyeraé 324 Tia TOV dypapparov Kal TavTEnas ay olay

avasovra TO "Aptaretdn TO do7Tpakov @S EvL TOV TUYOVTOY ‘mapaxareiy, OTWS ‘Apioreidny eyypaqd Wee. tov d¢ Pavpdcartos Kai rvPopévov, yy Tt

1 pépovres Blass with FaS: ypdpavtes.

but in a mere change of residence for ten years. And when ignoble men of the baser sort came to be subjected to this penalty, it ceased to be inflicted at all, and {Punetborus was the last to be thus ostracized.! It is said that Hyperbolus was ostracized for the following, reason. Alcibiades and Nicias had the greatest power in the state, and were at odds. Accordingly, when the people were about to exercise the ostracism, and were clearly going to vote against one or the other of these two men, they came to terms with one another, united their opposing factions, and effected the ostracism of Hyperbolus. The people were incensed at this for they felt that the institution had been insulted and abused, and so they abandoned it utterly and put an end to it.

The method of procedure—to give a general outline—was as follows. Each voter took an ostrakon, or potsherd, wrote on it the name of that citizen whom he wished to remove from the city, and brought it to a place in the agora which was all fenced about with railings. The archons first counted the total number of ostraka cast. For if the voters were less than six thousand, the ostracism was void. Then they separated the names, and the man who had received the most votes they proclaimed banished for ten years, with the right to enjoy the income from his property.

Now at the time of which I was speaking, as the voters were inscribing their ostraka, it is said that an unlettered and utterly boorish fellow handed his ostrakon to Aristides, whom he took to be one of the ordinary crowd, and asked him to write Aristides on it. He, astonished, asked the man what possible

1 About 417 B.c. Cf. Nicias, xi., Alcibiades, xiii.

kaxov avtov ‘Aptotetdns srerrolncev, “ Ovdér,” 9 ce yOe , \ 4 0 > 9 9
eltrev, “ovde yiyvaoKw Tov avOpwtov, GAN évo-
a a / “a YAodpat travtayov Tov Aixatov axovwv.” Tatra
b) / \ ? , , a er

adxovoavta Tov "Apiotetdny arokpivacOar pev ovdev, eyypdyyrar 5é tovvopa TO OoTRdK@ Kai amodovvat. ths 5é ToAEWS aTradANaTTOMEVOS HON, TaS yEelpas avaTteivas pos Tov ovpavoy evEaTo \ bd , e : > \ A > ”“ THhv évavtiav, ws Gorxev, evynv Te "AxtrrEél, pndéva Karpov “AOnvaiovs xatanaBeiv, ds avay-Kkace. Tov Ojpov ‘Aptoteioov pynaOjvat. |
VIII. Tpitm 8 eres BépEou da errarias

\ , sf > \ \ ’ 4 a kat Botwtias éXauvoytos emt thy ‘Artixny, NU-cavTes Tov vopov éeyndicavto rois peOcotaat ckabodov, pardtcta hoBovpevor tov “Aproteidny,
A , a 4, 4 A
en wpocBémevos Tots trodepiors StadOeipyn Kal peTAaoTHON ToAAO’s THY TWoNLT@Y TWpos TOV
a 4 n

BapBapov, ov« opOas otoyalopevot tov avdpos, bs ye xal mpd tov Soypatos tovrou Srerére
4 \ , \ a > \
TPOTPETM@VY KAL maposvvey Tous EAAnvas én
Thy édevOepiav, Kal pera, TO Soya Touro, @eprotoxr€ovs atpatnyovbvTos avToxpdtopas, wavTa ouver parte Kat ouveBovrever, évdoko-Tato emt TwTnpig Kown ToL@y Tov éyOiatov.
‘Os yap arroNrely THY Larapiva BovxXevo-péveov TOV mept EuvpuBiddny ai BapBaptxai Tpurpeus VUKTWP dvaxBetoar Kat wepiBarovaat
TOV TE Tropoy ev KUKAw Kal TAS VHTOUS KaTELXoD, OUSEVOS m poeLb0r 0s Thy KUKKwoW Heev oO 'Aptateiins am Aiyivns mapaBorws Sia tev 234

ARISTIDES

wrong Aristides had done him. “None whatever,’
was the answer, “I don’t even know the fellow, but Iam tired of hearing him everywhere called ‘The
Just.’”” On hearing this, Aristides made no answer,
but wrote his name on the ostrakon and handed it back. Finally, as he was departing the city, he lifted up his hands to heaven and prayed—a prayer
the opposite, as it seems, of that which Achilles

made !—that no crisis might overtake the Athenians which should compel the people to remember Aristides.

VIII. But in the third year thereafter,?, when Xerxes was marching through Thessaly and Boeotia against Attica, they repealed their law of ostracism, and voted that those who had been sent away under it might return. The chief reason for this was their fear of Aristides, lest he attach himself to the enemy's cause, and corrupt and pervert many of his fellow-citizens to .the side of the Barbarian. But they much misjudged the man. Even before this decree of theirs, he was ever inciting and urging the Hellenes to win their freedom; and after it was passed, when Themistocles was general with sole powers, he assisted him in every undertaking and counsel, although he thereby, for the sake of the general safety, made his chiefest foe the most famous of men.

Thus when Eurybiades wished to abandon Salamis, but the Barbarian triremes, putting out by night, had encompassed the strait where he lay round about, and had beset the islands therein, and no Hellene knew of this encompassment, Aristides came over to them from Aegina, venturously sailing through the

1 Tiad i. 407-412. ? 480 B.C.

moeuiov vedov Suextrrevoas: Kal vucros érAOov
érl Tv oKxnvny Tov BewtotoKréovs Kal Kadréoas
avrov é&wo _HOvoY "« "Hyeis," elrrey, "@ _ Bep-GTOKAELS, éb cwppovoiper, On THY KEvnY ral perpaxiody oTdow ad évres apEopeba, cw@Tnpiov Kat Karis prroveretas 1 p0s adda ous Gptrropevot THoAaL THY 'ENA dba, ov wey apyewv Kal
oTpaTyyar, éya O Drroupyay | Kat oupBovrevor, émrel Kal viv ce muvOavopat povov amrecOar TOV
apiorwy hoya pay, KeNevovTa, Stavavpaxely év Tots oTevois THV TaxlorTny. Kai cob TOV cup paxov aytimpartTovTay ot ToAépLoL ouvepyeiv
éoixact TO yap ev KvKh Kat KATOT LD Hon
TEharyos cumremhnaTat VEOY TONELLOV, WOTE Kab
TOUS [1 Gedovtas avayxy Kxateirndev aryabous dvdpas elvau Kal _baxer Oar: duyis yap odds ov éreuTTTAL." Tpos Tatra O OewrroKrAjs elvrev"
" Ov av éBoudouny, ® "Apiotetdn, oe Kata

TobT0 pov Kpeirrova yeveaOau, jewpacopar dé
mpos Kany apxny Gpiddapevos bmepBadnea Gat Tots epyous. dpa & avTe ppacas TI og' éavtod KatacKxevacbeicav arrarny mpos Tov BapBa ov, TApeKanret melO eww TOV EvpuBiddny Kat ou do Kew, as apn avov éorTt owOivas BN vaupaxnoavras: ele yap avTov padrov more.
d0ev év TO TUAAGYp TOV TT PATH YOY elwrovTos Kneoxpirov Tob Koprv6iov T pos TOV GeuroroKréa, pnd 'Apioretby THY yvemny apéo Key avrob, mapovra yap clo may, avreimev Oo "Aptorelins, os
ovx av éo.wtra Hy AéyovTos Ta apie TOU OemioroKdréous" vov & novxiay dyew ov ov edvoltay Tov avopos, GAAA THY yvouNY érrawor.
236

ARISTIDES

enemy's ships. He went at once by night to the tent of Themistocles, and called him forth alone. "© Themistocles," said he, "if we are wise, we shall at last lay aside our vain and puerile contention, and begin a salutary and honourable rivalry with one another in emulous struggles to save Hellas, thou as commanding general, I as assistant counsellor, since at the very outset I learn that thou art the only one who has adopted the best policy, urging as thou dost to fight a decisive sea-fight here in the narrows as soon as may be. And though thine allies oppose thee, thy foes would seem to assist thee; for the sea round about and behind us is already filled with hostile ships, so that even our unwilling ones must now of necessity be brave men and fight. Indeed, no way of escape is left.'' To this Themistocles replied : "I should not have wished, O Aristides, to find thee superior to me here; but I shall try to emulate thy fair beginning, and to surpass thee in my actions." At the same time he told Aristides of the trick that he had contrived against the Barbarian, and entreated him to show Eurybiades convincingly, inasmuch as he had the greater credit with that commander, that there was no safety except in a sea-fight. So it happened in the council of generals that Cleocritus the Corinthian declared to The- mistocles that Aristides also was opposed to his plan, since he, though present, held his peace. Aristides at once replied that he would not have held his peace had not Themistocles counselled for the best ; but as it was, he kept quiet, not out of any good- will to the- man, but because he approved of his plan.

237

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

IX. Ou pev ouv vavapyot TOV 'Ede Tavr em parrov. 'Apia reténs. iy ope THY WVurrddeay, 4 To THS Larapivos év T@ Top Ket at VIO OS
ov peyann, TONE MLOY av pov fecTHy ovcar, euBiBaoas eis DIN pETiKa, TOUS mpoOuporarous
Kal paxyoTdrous TOV. TOMTODV 'Tpooéuste TH

Wurtanreéa, xal paxny pos TOUS BapBapous ocuvawas QTeKTELVE TavTas, yy door TOV em daveav Caves irwoav. év 6€ TovTaLS Hoap aderpijs Bacirews 6 évopa Lavdavans Tpets Traides, ods evdus area TENE ™pos TOV BepioToKhéa:
Kat déyovTat Katd TL AOYyLov, TOU pdvTEWS Evdgpavtidov xedevoavtos, opnoth Atovice xabvepevO vat. Thv de vncida Tots SirdOLG TavTaxobey O ‘Aproreténs mepiarewas epnopeve ° Tous exh Epopevors 7 pos auTHY, @S are Tav dirwv tiva SiadOaphvar pte TeV Toe wi@v Sabuyeiy.
0 yap TAELTTOS @OLa pos TOV veav Kal (THs payns TO kapTepotatov éouxe Tept Tov TOTov EXELVOV yever Gar 60 Kai tpoTratov éotnKev év
TH Vurraneia.
Mera éé thy payny O OewrroKAijs a am oTrerpajeevos Tov “Aptoretoou | KaXov pev elvat Kal TO
TET parywevov avTots Epyov éXerye, Kpetr Tov dé NetwecOat TO AaBeiv év TH Kvpary tnv Actav, dvam\evoavras els “EXAoTovToy THY Taxtarny kai ta Cevypara} dvaxorpavras. émel S ’AptarelOns dvaxpayav TovToV pév éxéXeve Tov Aovyov cataBaneiv, OKOT ELV be Kat Cnteiy, mas THY TAaXLaT HY éxBddwot TOV Mijdov é« ths ‘EAdabos, HI katakreoOels atropia puyis peTd TrooavTns
1 +a (ed-ypara Hercher and Blass with FaS: 7d (edypa,

3

ARISTIDES

IX. While the captains of the Hellenes were acting on this plan, Aristides noticed that Psyttaleia,
a small island lying in the straits in front of Salamis,
was full of the enemy. He therefore embarked in small boats the most ardent and the most warlike of the citizens, made a landing on Psyttaleia,
joined battle with the Barbarians, and slew them
all, save the few conspicuous men who were taken alive. Among these were three sons of the King’s sister Sandaucé,! whom he straightway sent to Themistocles, and it is said that, in obedience
to some oracle or other, and at the bidding of

Euphrantides the seer, they were sacrificed to Dionysus Carnivorous. Then Aristides lined the islet all round with his hoplites, and lay in wait for any who should be cast up there, that no friend might perish, and no foe escape. For the greatest crowding of the ships, and the most strenuous part of the battle, seems to have been in this region. And for this reason a trophy was erected on Psyttaleia.

After the battle, Themistocles, by way of sounding Aristides, said that the deed they had now performed was a noble one, but a greater still remained, and that was to capture Asia in Europe, by sailing up to the Hellespont as fast as they could and cutting in twain the bridges there. But Aristides cried out with a loud voice and bade him abandon the proposal, and seek rather with all diligence how they might most speedily expel the Mede from Hellas, lest, being shut in and unable to make his escape, from sheer necessity

1 Cf. Themistocles, xiii. 2.

duvdpews Tpany pos dpuvay vn avarynns, ovTw Te mareL Tay "Apvdnny eovodxov O BeproroK rhs Ex TOV aly mahaorov xpudga, ppacat TP Baotnei Kedevoas, STU Teiv éml TAS yepipas Spur tovs "EAAnvas abtos atootpéwee satecbu Baovhéa Bovropevos.

X. 'Ex TOUTOU Fiépins pev mepipoBos yev0- pevos evOUs éml Tov 'EXAgjaomovrov aT ev yETO, Ma dovtos 5é€ Tov oTpaTOD TO Soxima@raroy * Exar mept TpLdKovTa pupidbas UmedeiTreTO, Kal 38 Bepos Hv am ioxupas THs Tepl To Twelov éXTI aTetAk@v Ttois "EXAnoe Kal ypadov Totaira' ef Nevixnxate Garaccioss Evhous Xepaaious av- Opwmous ov« ETLOTAPLEVOUS Kony ehavverv' ahd vov tratela pev 7 Bertarov yh, cadrov $e To Bowwtiov - Tredtov aryaBois immedot Kat omditais evayovicacba.." pos dé 'A@nvatous ear eprer idia ypdppara, Kal ovyous Tapa Bactréos, THY TE moh avTols avaoTno et emTaryyeARopevov Kat Xpnpara TOANG docev xatl tev 'EXAqvor Kuptous KATAOTHGELW EKTOOMY TOU TONEpLOU YEVOpévous.

Oi 8 Aaxedatpovro muOopevot tadta Kat
Seloavtes erreprpav ‘AOnvate mpéoBers, Seopevor TOV "AOnvaiwr, dws maidas fev Kal yuvaixas eis Lmdpryy anoarethoat, rots S¢ mpeaButépas Tpopas Tap aura AapSdvacty’ toxupa yap
Hy drropia mepl Tov Sjjwov drohwhexora Kat Thv? yopav Kal THY TOMY. OV pHY GAA TeV
mpéaBewv axovoavtes, “‘Apioteidou wWidiopa
1 Sukierares Blass with F4S : payiuéraroy.
2 «al chy Hercher and Blass with F4S: rh».
240

he throw this vast force of his upon the defensive.
So Themistocles sent once more the eunuch Arnaces,!
a prisoner of war, bidding him tell the King that the Hellenes had actually set out on a voyage
to attack the bridges, but that he, Themistocles,
had succeeded in turning them back, wishing to save the King.
X. At this Xerxes grew exceeding fearful, and.
hurried straight to the Hellespont; but Mardonius,
with the flower of the army, to the number of
three hundred thousand men, was left behind.
He was a formidable adversary, and because his confidence in his infantry was strong, he wrote
threateningly to the Hellenes, saying: “Ye have conquered with your maritime timbers landsmen
who know not how to ply the oar; but now, broad
is the land of Thessaly and fair the plain of Boeotia
for brave horsemen and men-at-arms to contend
in.” But to the Athenians he sent separate letters and proposals from the King, who promised to rebuild their city, give them much money, and make them lords of the Hellenes, if only they would cease fighting against him.
When the Lacedaemonians learned this, they took fright, and sent an embassy to Athens, begging the Athenians to despatch their wives and children to Sparta, and to accept from her a support for’ their aged and infirm; for great was the distress among the people, since it had so recently lost both land and city. However, after listening to the embassy, on motion of Aristides, they answered

1 Cf. Themistocles, xvi. 2 f.

ypanraytos, amexpivavto Oavpaotiy amoxpiow, TOs pev TONELLOLS OUYyvauNY Exe PdoKorTes, Et wavTa TovTov Kal ypnudtoav advia vopitorer,
2 a ON ” ? / N
@v Kpeitrov ovdev icacw, opyilerOas 5é Aaxedat-poovioss, Ste THY Teviav Kalernv amropiay THY viv tapovcav ‘AOnvaiors povov opact, THs & aperis Kal THs hirotipias apvnpovovow éni atrios trép tis ‘EAAdb0s dyovitecOar Trapaxadoovtes.
a / > / A 4
tavta ypayras “Apioteidns Kal rovs mpéoBets eis THY éxkAnciavy Tapayayov, AaKedarpovios pev éxérevoe ppdlev, ws ovK Eote Ypvaod a A ¥ 7) e A a W¥f> ¢ \ a TocovToy TAGs ovO rep ynv ovO’ vo yiv, Sacov ‘AOnvain déEawrto dv mpd ths Tav “EA-Anvwov édevOepias. Tois 5€ apa Mapdoviov rov Hrwov deiEas, “"Aype av obras,” &pn, “ ravrny mopeinrat Hv tTopeiav, "AOnvaioe toreunoovat llépoa:s vrép ths Sednwpuévns yopas nal tov noeBnpéevwv Kal KaTaKxexaupévov tepav.” ére 8€
apas Oéobat Tovs ‘tepets Eyparrev, ef Tus émiKn-4 V4 Aa \ / > ,
puxevoaito Mnoas 4} THY cuppaxlav amoAitror
a e / tav EAAnvov.
"EuBarovtos 5¢ Mapdoviov ro Sevrepov eis TH
"Arrixny, adOis eis Yarapiva Sierépacav. *Aptateions 6€ meudpbels eis Aaxedaipova tis pev Bpaduriros abtois évexdder nal ris ddvywpias, mpocnévois adllis te BapBdpm tas *AOnvas, n&iov && mpos Ta ett cwoloueva tHS “EAAdSos ray A b) 7 e w” 9
Bonbeiv. taita axovaavtes ot “Edopou ped 394 242
ARISTIDES

with an admirable answer, declaring that they could be tolerant with their foes for supposing that everthing was to be bought for wealth and
money, since their foes could conceive of nothing

higher than these things; but they were indignant
at the Lacedaemonians for having an eye only
to the penury and indigence that now reigned
at Athens, and for being so unmindful of the valour
and ambition of the Athenians as to exhort them
to contend for Hellas merely to win their rations.
When Aristides had made this motion and _ had introduced the waiting embassies into the Assembly,
he bade the Lacedaemonians tell their people that there was not bulk of gold above or below ground
so large that the Athenians would take it in payment for the freedom of the Hellenes; and to the messengers of Mardonius he said, pointing to the sun: “As long as yonder sun journeys his appointed journey, so long will the Athenians wage war against the Persians in behalf of the land which has been ravaged by them and of the temples which they have defiled and consumed with fire.” Still further, he made a motion that the priests should solemnly curse all who came to a parley with the Medes or forsook the alliance of the Hellenes.
When Mardonius for the second time invaded Attica, again the people crossed over to Salamis.
Then Aristides, who had been sent as envoy to Lacedaemon, inveighed against their sluggishness and indifference, in that they had once more abandoned Athens to the Barbarian, and demanded that they go to the aid of what was still left of Hellas. On hearing this, the Ephors, as long as Kaxov avtTov ‘Apsoteidns remroinxer, ‘ Ovdér,” 2 © ode , G00 15% 2

elmrev, “‘ ovde ytyvooKw Tov dvOpwrov, adr’ évo-YANoDpaL TavTayod Tov Atkatoy dxovwv.” TadTa dxovoavta Tov "Apiotetdny arroxpivacBar pév ovoév, eyypayrat 5é€ Tovivoua TH OoTRdKw Kal amodovvat. THS dé TONEWS ATraANATTOLEVOS HON, Tas yelpas avateivas mpos Tov ovpavoy evb~aTo
A > , e . > \ A > a
Thy évavriav, ws douxev, edynvy TO ’AxLArE,
, ‘ b , A a b

pndeva Karpov AOnvaiovs xatadaBelv, 65 avay-
Kkdoet Tov Ojpov Aptoreioou pynoOjva. |
VIII. Tpirm 8 éres BépEov dia @ertarias kal Bowwrtias éXNavvovtos emt rnv ’"Atrixynv, dvgavTes Tov vowov endicavto tots peOectact xkdbodov, udrducta ghoBovpevor tov ’Aptoteidny,
\ / a / / \ Hn mpocbépwevos rots tmorepuios StadOeipn Kat peTaoTHon ToAdovs THY ToOALTOY Tpos TOV
a 4 ce)

BapBapov, ov« opOas asroyalopuevos Tov avépos, bs ye nal apo tod Sdyuaros tovTov Sierédex /, \ Ul \ cf >
MpoTpeT@Vv Kat Trapofvvwy tous “EXAnvas errt
Thy édevOepiav, kal peta TO Soyua TovTo, BeuwotoKréovs oatpatnyovvros avToxpdropos,
TavTa ouver parte kat ouveBovnevev, évd0£o-TaTov eml ca@Tnpla KOUh TOL@y tov éxOto Tov.
‘Os yap arroNety THY Larapiva BovXevopéveov TOV wept KupuBeadnv at BapBapixat
Tpirpers VUKTOP avaxGeta ar Kal meptBarovoat
TOV Te TrOpoV év KUED Kal Tas YHoOUS Kateixon, ovdevos T poetdoTos THY KUKAWOLY FKEV O "Aptoreidns am Aiyivns mapaBor\ws Sia Tap 234

ARISTIDES

wrong Aristides had done him. ‘None whatever,”
was the answer, “I don’t even know the fellow, but Iam tired of hearing him everywhere called ‘The
Just.’”’ On hearing this, Aristides made no answer,
but wrote his name on the ostrakon and handed it back. Finally, as he was departing the city, he lifted up his hands to heaven and prayed—a prayer
the opposite, as it seems, of that which Achilles
made !—that no crisis might overtake the Athenians which should compel the people to remember
Aristides.
VIII. But in the third year thereafter,?, when Xerxes was marching through Thessaly and Boeotia against Attica, they repealed their law of ostracism, and voted that those who had been sent away under it might return. The chief reason for this was their fear of Aristides, lest he attach himself to the enemy's cause, and corrupt and pervert many of his fellow-citizens to the side of the Barbarian. But they much misjudged the man. Even before this decree of theirs, he was ever inciting and urging the Hellenes to win their freedom; and after it was passed, when Themistocles was general with sole powers, he assisted him in every undertaking and counsel, although he thereby, for the sake of the general safety, made his chiefest foe the most famous of men.

Thus when Eurybiades wished to abandon Salamis, but the Barbarian triremes, putting out by night, had encompassed the strait where he lay round about, and had beset the islands therein, and no Hellene knew of this encompassment, Aristides came over to them from Aegina, venturously sailing through the

1 Wiad i, 407-412, 2 480 B.C.

mokepiov veov Stexrrevoas' Kal vueros érAOwov émil rny oxnvny rod Geusotoxdréous xa Karéoas avrov é&wo HOvOV " "Hyeis," elev, "@ _ Gene-OTOKAELS, Eb cad povodper, non THY KEvnV xal perpaxrady oTacw ad evres apfdpeba cwTnplov Kat Karis prroverias POs adn ous apirAdrw-pevol THoaL id 'EAA dba, ov pevy apywv xal TT pATHYOY, éyo & DrroupyOv kat supBovrevor, emrel Kal vov o€ muvOavopas povov amrecbat TOV apioT@v hoya pov, KedevorTa. Stavavpaxeiv év Tois oTevois THY Taxlorny. Kai got TOV oup-pd wv dyrempatTovT@y oi Tohémiot ouvepyety éoixact' TO yap épv KUK@ Kal KaTOT LU non meéharyos cure hnoras VE@V Tonepuion, wore Kal TOUS pL) Oérovras avayKyn KxateiAndev aryadous dvSpas elvau Kal maxes Ba: ghuyis yap odds ov NeAELTTT AL." T pos Tatra O Geporondijs elvrey- "QOvn av éBovrounv, ® 'Aptoteidn, oé Kata TobT0 pov « elTTova yevecbar, mewpdoopar be Tm pos Kann epxny Gpiddaevos vmrepBarrcoOat Tots epyors. dua © avT@ ppacas THY vg' éavtod xatacKxevacbeicav ardrny ™pos Tov BapBa ov, TApeKanet meiBew TOV Evpupiadny kal ou doKew, Os aun avov éoTe owOivat pen vaupaxnoavras: elXe yap avTou paddov TloTeD. dOev év te gUAAGYp TAY oTpaTH yay elTrovTos

KXeoxpitov rob KoptvOtou T pos Tov GcwiotoKréa, und ~Apsoreidn TI yveny dpéo Key avrob, mapovra yap owmmay, ayteimev 0 "Apia reibns, as oun dy eov@tra pt AéyovTos Ta, plore TOD OewroroKdr£ous: vov & novxtav ayew ov ov evvotay TOU aVvdpos, GNAA THY yrounv eTrawav.
236

ARISTIDES

enemy's ships. He went at once by night to the tent of Themistocles, and called him forth alone. ‘©O Themistocles,” said he, “if we are wise, we shall at last lay aside our vain and puerile contention, and begin a salutary and honourable rivalry with one another in emulous struggles to save Hellas, thou as commanding general, I as assistant counsellor, since at the very outset I learn that thou art the only one who has adopted the best policy, urging as thou dost to fight a decisive sea-fight here in the narrows as soon as may be. And though thine allies oppose thee, thy foes would seem to assist thee; for the sea round about and behind us is already filled with hostile ships, so that even our unwilling ones must now of necessity be brave men and fight. Indeed, no way of escape is left.” To this Themistocles replied: “I should not have wished, O Aristides, to find thee superior to me here; but I shall try to emulate thy fair beginning, and to surpass thee in my actions.” At the same time he told Aristides of the trick that he had contrived against the Barbarian, and entreated him to show Eurybiades convincingly, inasmuch as he had the greater credit with that commander, that there was no safety except in a sea-fight. So it happened in the council of generals that Cleocritus the Corinthian declared to The- mistocles that Aristides also was opposed to his plan, since he, though present, held his peace. Aristides at once replied that he would not have held his peace had not Themistocles counselled for the best ; but as it was, he kept quiet, not out of any good- will to the: man, but because he approved of his plan.

237

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

IX. Of pev odv vadapyor tOv ‘EXAHVOV Tab érpatrov. ‘Apioretdns & opav thy Vuttddeap, ) wpo THY Yarapivos ev to Top@ KelTat vAcos ov peydrn, Torepiwy avdpov peaTHny ovoay, éuBuBaoas ets vmnpetiKa Ttovs mpoOvpoTdtous
Kal payimwTdtovs TY TodMToY mpocéuke TH
Wurrareia, xal pwadxynv mpos tovs BapBdpovs ouvawas dméxresve WavTas, WAnY Goo. TOY eTIgavev Cavres rwoav. év 5€ TovTas joav aderapis Bactréws dvoua Yavdavens tpeis aides, ods evOUs amécteXe Tpos Tov OEeywioToKréa:
Kal éyovTas KaTd TL AOYLOY, TOU paVTEws Eid pavtidov KerXevoavtos, apnoth Avovicm KadtepevOjvar. thv 5é€ vnoida Tots OTrdOLS TavTaxobev o ‘Apioteiins meptotéas éepydpeve Tots expepopévors mpos avTynyv, ws unTe TaV dirwv Tiva StapOaphvar pyre TOV TorEuiwv Siadvyetv.

O yap TAELTTOS @O 10 105 TOV vedy al TAS
baxyns TO Kaptepwratov éotxe Tepl TOV ToOTTOY éxetvov yevéoGar 610 Kal tpoTaoy éxrnnev év
th Vurranreia.
Mera 5€ thy paxnv o BeworoKArNs atroTe:pa-pevos Tod ’Aptoteioov Kadrov pev elvat nal To Tem payuevov avTois Epyov éXeye, Kpelrtov é NeitecOar TO AaBeiy év tH Evpa@rrn thv ’Aciap, avatrevoavtas eis ‘EXAnoTovTOY THY TaxtoTny kal ta Cevypata’ diaxowavras. émet d *Apt-atelins dvaxpayov rodToy pev éxédXeve TOV NOvoV kataBanreiv, oxoteiy Sé nal Cnteiv, bras THV taxiotny éxBddrwot tov Midov ex rHs “EXAdébos, en KatakreLoOels arropia guys peta TocavTns
1 a (edypara Hercher and Blass with F*S: 7d (edyya,

238

324

ARISTIDES

IX. While the captains of the Hellenes were acting on this plan, Aristides noticed that Psyttaleia,
a small island lying in the straits in front of Salamis,
was full of the enemy. He therefore embarked
in small boats the most ardent and the most
warlike of the citizens, made a landing on Psyttaleia,
joined battle with the Barbarians, and slew them
all, save the few conspicuous men who were taken alive. Among these were three sons of the King’s sister Sandaucé,! whom he straightway sent to Themistocles, and it is said that, in obedience
to some oracle or other, and at the bidding of Euphrantides the seer, they were sacrificed to Dionysus Carnivorous. Then Aristides lined the islet all round with his hoplites, and lay in wait for any who should be cast up there, that no friend might perish, and no foe escape. For the greatest crowding of the ships, and the most strenuous part of the battle, seems to have been in this region. And for this reason a trophy was erected on Psyttaleia.

After the battle, Themistocles, by way of sounding Aristides, said that the deed they had now performed was a noble one, but a greater still remained, and that was to capture Asia in Europe, by sailing up to the Hellespont as fast as they could and cutting in twain the bridges there. But Aristides cried out with a loud voice and bade him abandon the proposal, and seek rather with all diligence how they might most speedily expel the Mede from Hellas, lest, being shut in and unable to make his escape, from sheer necessity
1 Cf. Themistocles, xiii. 2.
239
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Suvd pews TpaTH mpos dpuvay vn' avaryens, oUTw méurret Taw "Apydxny euvotxov O BepioroKA%s éx TOV aly wadwreov xpoda, ppacar TP Baothet Kedevoas, OTe rely emi TAS yepupas inl liar tous "EAAnvas avtos amoctpépee cwlecOar Baothea BovAopevos.
X. 'Ex ToUTOU Fiépins pév mepipoBos 'yevopevos evOus érl rov 'EAAqoTovtov aymeuyero, Ma dovtos dé Tov oTpaTOU TO Soxipararoy * éyor
Tmeph Tpedxovra pupidbas UeheiTeTO, Kat do-Repos 7 nv ar loxupas THS mepl TO Tetov enmidos amer@v tots "EAXnoe Kat ypadov TovavTa:
' Nevuencare aracciors Evhous xEpaatous ap-Oparous OvK ET LO TAPEVOUS Kany édNavvety' ado vov WraTEla pev 7 @errarav yh Kaov dé TO Bowwtiov tredtov aryabois immedot Kal omriTais evayovicaca.." ™ pos Sé "AOnvatous brrepapev idta ypdppara Kal Aoyous mapa Bactréws, THY TE mom avtTois avaotTnaew emaryryehropevov cat
Xpipara TONG decew Kal tev "EAAnvoy Kuptous KatacTnoew é€xTod@y TOU TrOXemLOU yEVOfévous.
Oi dé Aaxedatpovror muOopevoe Tavita Kal
deioavtes émeupav "AOnvale mpéo Bers, Seopevot TOV "AOnvaiwn, é7ras maidas wey Kal yuvaixas
ets Lmapryy anoatethwat, tois 5€ mpeoBurépars Tpopas Tap avrav AapBdvaciy ioxupa yap mp dropia TeEpt TOV Ojwov dmodwdexora Kal THhv? ywpav Kal THY TOMY. OU pHY GAAA TOV

mpécBewy axovcavtes, *Aptoteidou vipeopa
. 1 Sonsudraroy Blass with F4S : payiudrarov.
2 «al ch» Hercher and Blass with F*S: rh».
240

ARISTIDES

he throw this vast force of his upon the defensive.
So Themistocles sent once more the eunuch Arnaces,}
a prisoner of war, bidding him tell the King that
the Hellenes had actually set out on a voyage
to attack the bridges, but that he, Themistocles,
had succeeded in turning them back, wishing to save the King.
X. At this Xerxes grew exceeding fearful, and hurried straight to the Hellespont ; but Mardonius,
with the flower of the army, to the number of
three hundred thousand men, was left behind.
He was a formidable adversary, and because his
confidence in his infantry was strong, he wrote
threateningly to the Hellenes, saying: “ Ye have
conquered with your maritime timbers. landsmen
who know not how to ply the oar; but now, broad
is the land of Thessaly and fair the plain of Boeotia
for brave horsemen and men-at-arms to contend
in.” But to the Athenians he sent separate letters
and proposals from the King, who promised to rebuild their city, give them much money, and
make them lords of the Hellenes, if only they would cease fighting against him.
When the Lacedaemonians learned this, they took fright, and sent an embassy to Athens, begging the Athenians to despatch their wives and children to Sparta, and to accept from her a support for’ their aged and infirm; for great was the distress among the people, since it had so recently lost both land and city. However, after listening to the embassy, on motion of Aristides, they answered

1 Cf. Themistocles, xvi. 2 f.

241
VOL, II. R
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ypaypaytos, airexpivavto Oavpactny atoxpiow, TOS pey TrOAELLOLS TUyyvapnNY éyev HdoxKoYTES, Et mavtTa TAovTOU Kal ypnudtwv wvia vopiCocer, Ov xpeitrov ovdev icacw, opyilecOar 8¢ Aaxedaspoviots, OTe THY TWeviay KaleTHY aTopiay THY VOV mapovoay "A@nvaios povoyv opact, ths 8 aperas wal Ths pirotiplas auvnpovotow émi autioss imép Tis “EXAdSos aywviterOar Trapaxanodvtes.

TavTa ypdypas “Aptoteidns nal tovs mpéoBets eis THY exxAnoiavy Tapayayeov, Aaxedacpovioss
pev éexérXevoe ppalerv, ws ovK Eats Ypvaod TosovToy TAROV0s ovO Lrép yiv ov8 bd yHp, Scov "AOnvain. SéEawto dv mpo ths tev “EX-Anvev édevdepias. Tots 5€ mapa Mapéoviov rov Artov SetEas, “"Axype av ovtos,” én, “ tavrny mopevntac tv Topetav, "AOnvaios troreunoovor Ilépoais tmep tis dSednwpévns ywpas Kal Tov noeBnuévwv Kal KaTaxexavpévov tepov. ett dé apas Oécbat Tovs tepets eyparrev, et tis émixn-puxevoatto Mydos h THY cuppayiay aToXiTot tov ‘EXAnvop.
"EuBarovros 5é Mapdoviov ro Sevrepoy es tHv
’"Artixnv, avis eis Yarapiva Sietrépacav. *Api-areions 5é meudbels eis Aaxedaipova thas pev Bpadurijros avtois éevexdder Kal THs ddLyupias, mpoewévors ailis te BapBdpw tas ‘AOnvas,
n&iov && mpos- ta étt cwlopeva tis “EXAdSos BonOciv. tratta axovcavtes ot “Edopos pe” 242
3!

ARISTIDES

with an admirable answer, declaring that they could be tolerant with their foes for supposing
that everthing was to be bought for wealth and
money, since their foes could conceive of nothing
higher than these things; but they were indignant
at the Lacedaemonians for having an eye only
to the penury and indigence that now reigned
at Athens, and for being so unmindful of the valour
and ambition of the Athenians as to exhort them
to contend tor Hellas merely to win their rations.
When Aristides had made this motion and had
introduced the waiting embassies into the Assembly,
he bade the Lacedaemonians tell their people that
there was not bulk of gold above or below ground
so large that the Athenians would take it in payment for the freedom of the Hellenes; and to the messengers of Mardonius he said, pointing to the sun: “As long as yonder sun journeys his appointed journey, so long will the Athenians wage war against the Persians in behalf of the land which has been ravaged by them and of the temples which they have defiled and consumed with fire.” Still further, he made a motion that the priests should solemnly curse all who came to a parley with the Medes or forsook the alliance of the Hellenes.

When Mardonius for the second time invaded Attica, again the people crossed over to Salamis. Then Aristides, who had been sent as envoy to Lacedaemon, inveighed against their sluggishness and_ indifference, in that they had once more abandoned Athens to the Barbarian, and demanded that they go to the aid of what was still left of Hellas. On hearing this, the Ephors, as long as

e , A 250 la \ e A] a e , npépav pev edoxovv trailew xal pabvpeiv eoprd-Covtess fv yap avtois ‘TaxivOia: vuntos 5é
/ A 2 / ?
TEVTAKLO'XLNLOUS Lrapriatev émuneEavTes, @v Exactos émTa Tept avrov etdwtas elyev, cEérrep-b QO 7 A b 4 > \ 4
av ovx eidotav tav AOnvaiwy. érel € waduw
9 a e 9: 4 A e \
éyxadkov o ‘Aptoteidns mpoondOev, ot b& avy yéXwrTe Anpety avtov Epacxov Kai xabevdev, 757
yap év Opecteiw tov otparoy elvat tropevopevov DJ \ , 4 \ > 4 \ la
éml tous Eévous (Eévous yap éxaXouv tous [lépaas),

> ‘ 4 / > \ e 9 A ov KaTa Karpov pn traifey adtous o Apioteidns, Gvtl T@v Todepiwy tors dirous éEatraTovTas.
af? e \ \ > VA >
trav” ot rept tov “ldopevéa Aéyovow. év Se
A / an ? / \ >
T® Wndiopare tod ‘Aptoteidov mpeaBevtns ovK > / 9 / , \

avTos, GAA Kipowv cal BavOirros cat Mupo-vidns pépovrar.
XI. Xesporovnbels Sé€ otpatrnyos avtoxpdtwp érrl thv waxny, kal Tov AOnvaiwv onTaKicxtAlous
e V4 2 4 > 4 A
omritas avarkaBov, heev cis Unatads. éxet 5é
\ e A
kai Ilavcavias 0 Tod cuptravTos aAyouvpevos ‘EXAAnuixod couvéwwkev Eywv Tovs Yraptidtas, a ¥ e V4 ? / \ “A

Kal rov arXNwv “EXdAnvev érréppes tO WAROOs.
tav d¢ BapBdpwy To pev OrXOv THS oTpaToTrEdeias
wapa tov ‘Acwrov Totapmoy mTapexteTapéerns ovdels Av pos dua TO péyeOos, wept Sé Tas atro-oxevas Kal Ta KUpLwoTata TEixos TepteppdEavToO TETPGYWVOV, OU TAY TWAEUPA@Y ExadaTH MHKOS HY
déxa otadiov.
Ilavoavia pev ody Kal tots “EXXnot Kown Ticapevos o ‘Hretos éuavtevoato, nal mpoeiie vicny apvvouévots Kal py qTpoemiyecpodary:
244

ARISTIDES

it was day, publicly disported themselves in easy-going festival fashion ; for it was their festival of the Hyacinthta. But in the night they selected five thousand Spartans, each of whom had seven Helots to attend upon him, and sent them forth without the knowledge of the Athenians. So when Aristides came befote them with renewed invectives, they laughed and said he was but a sleepy babbler, for that their army was already in Arcadia on its march against the “strangers” (they called the Persians strangers). But Aristides declared they were jesting out of all season, forasmuch as they were deceiving their friends instead of their enemies.
This is the way Idomeneus tell the story. But in the decree which Aristides caused to be passed, he himself is not named as envoy, but Cimon, Xanthippus, and Myronides.
XI. Having been elected general with sole powers in view of the expected-battle, he came to Plataea !
at the head of eight thousand Athenian hoplites.

There Pausanias also, the commander in chief of the whole Hellenic army, joined him with his Spartans, and the forces of the rest of the Hellenes kept streaming up. Now, generally speaking, there was no limit to the encampment of the Barbarians as it lay stretched out along the river Asopus, so vast was it; but round their baggage trains and chief headquarters they built a quadrangular wall, whereof each side was ten stadia in length. |

To Pausanias and all the Hellenes under him Tisamenus the Eleian made prophecy, and foretold victory for them if they acted on the defensive and 1 Spring of 479 B.c.

3 "Aptoteidou &€é mépuavtos eis Aeddovs aveidev o Oeos *"AOnvaiovs xaOureptépovs éoecOar Trav évavtiwy evyopuévous TO Act xal tH "Hpa tH KiOatpwvia xai avi cal vipdats Xhpayitior, kat Qvovras Rpwow Avdpoxparer, Aevxove, Tleccavdpw, Aapoxpdta, "Trriwr, "Axraioni, Tlovvide, cat tov xivduvoy év ya idia tovovpévous év TO Tebdip tas Adwatpos tas 'EXevaowias xai

4 tas Kopas. otros 6 ypnopmos dvevexyOels drropiay T@ 'Apioteidn mapetyev. of pev yap tpwes, ols éxéreve Ovew, apynyérat TIdatraséwv joav, cal To ToY Xdpayitidwy vupdav dvtpov év mia Kopudf tod KiOaipavos éeotiv, eis Svopas ALouv Oepias Tetpappévoy, ev @ Kal pavteioy jv MpoTepov, Ws pact, Kal ToNAOL KaTELYoVTO TAY értywpiov, os vupydorAnmrous mpoanydopevov.

5 To € Tihs "EXevaowias Anpuntpos rediov, cal rod THY paxynv év iia yopa Trotoupévols Tots 'AOnvaiows vintnv bidoc0at, madi eis thy "Arrixny avexanelto cal peOiorn TOP TONELOD.

"Ev@a TOV ITharacéwp o 0 TTpATHYOS "A piuynaros édoke Kara TOUS Umvous vTro TOU Atos TOU 2wrhpos eT EpwrT @LEVvOV avrov, 6 Te bn mparTew dédonrau TOUS "EAAgow, errety, "Avptov ets '"EXevoiva thy oTpaTLay arrafouer, a @ SéoTroTa, Kal Siapayovpeba, Tots BapBapors éxel KaTa TO mudoxpna tov."

6 Tov obv Oeov davar _ Olapapravey avTovs Tov mwavtTos auToht yap elvat Wept THY Ihataixny Ta =mvboxpnata Kal Cnrobytas dveuphoety.

TOUTWY evapyas TO Apiuynote gavevtwy éEeypo-246
ARISTIDES

did not advance to the attack. But Aristides sent to Delphi and received from the god response that the Athenians would be superior to their foes if they made vows to Zeus, Cithaeronian Hera, Pan, and the Sphragitic nymphs; paid sacrifices to the heroes Androcrates, Leucon, Pisandrus, Damocrates, Hyp- sion, Actaeon, and Polyidus; and if they sustained the peril of battle on their own soil, in the plain of Eleusinian Demeter and Cora. When this oracle was reported to Aristides, it perplexed him greatly. The heroes to whom he was to sacrifice were, it was true, ancient dignitaries of the Plataeans; and the cave of the Sphragitic nymphs was on one of the peaks of Cithaeron, facing the summer sunsets, and -in it there was also an oracle in former days, as they say, and many of the natives were possessed of the oracular power, and these were called nympholepis, or " nymph-possessed."" But the plain of Eleusinian Demeter, and the promise of victory to the Athenians if they fought the battle in their own territory, called them back, as it were, to Attica, and changed the seat of war.

At this time the general of the Plataeans, Arim- nestus, had a dream in which he thought he was accosted by Zeus the Saviour and asked what the Hellenes had decided to do, and replied: "On the morrow, my Lord, we are going to lead our army back to Eleusis, and fight out our issue with the Barbarians there, in accordance with the Pythian oracle." Then the god said they were entirely in error, for the Pythian oracle's places were there in the neighbourhood of Plataea, and if they sought them they would surely find them. All this was made so vivid to Arimnestus that as soon as he awoke

247

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

mevos TayLoTa peTeTéupato Tos eutrelpoTaTous
Kal wpecButdtouvs Tov TodtuTav, pel' wv dia-Neyopevos Kal cuvdsarropav evdpev, St. TOV 'Torov TAnoiov Yro Tov KiOatpava vacs éotiv apyaios mavu' Anuntpos "EXevowias cat Kopns mpocayopevopevos. evO0s otv tmaparaBwv tov *Api-oreiOnv Fryev éml tov tomov, evpvéatatov BvtTa qmaparata: dadrayya webixny immoxpatoupévots, dua Tas Urwpeias ToD KiOatp@vos adurma totovoas Ta KaTadnyovta Kal ovyKxupodyta Tov
qedtov mpos TO iepov. avtod 8 hv xa To Tov
"Avdpoxpatous np@ov éyyvs, adoet muKvav Kar ovoxiwv dSévdpwv treptexopevov. Orras 5é undéev éAdtrés Eyn mpos THv EXmiba THS viKNs Oo YpNnT LOS, °

éd0£e rots Tndarasetow, "Apipvnotov yvouny
elirovTos, avedety TA Tpos THY ATTLKHY Gpla THS

TIvaratidos cal thv yopav éridodvat tois ’AOn-vaiouy umep ths ‘EXXdbos ey oixela Kata Tov Xpnopov évaywvicacbau.
Tavrny peév obv thy pirotipiav Tov TIAataréwy
oitw auvéB8n mepiBontov yevécbar, wate Kal
"AréEavdpov 76n Bactrevovra tis’ Acias tatepov TodNots Ereot Teryifovta tas TlNatards avertrety
"OrAupridow vo KnpuKos, Ott TavTHY 6 Bactreds atrobdiowat IIdatatetot ths avdpayabias Kal Tis peyarouyias yap, ered) tots "EXAnow év
T@ Mndix@ roreup thy xwpav érédwxay cai
Tapecyov avrovs mpoOupotarous.
XII. ’AOnvaiows 5é Teyedras tepl tiakews
éplaavres nklovv, domep del, Aaxedaipovioy ro
deEvov eyovtwy xépas, avtol To evwovupov éyerv,
1 wdyv omitted by Bekker, now found in S.
248
3

6

ARISTIDES

he summoned the oldest and most experienced of his fellow-citizens. By conference and _ investigation with these he discoverd that near Hysiae, at the foot of mount Cithaeron, there was a very ancient temple bearing the names of Eleusinian Demeter and Cora. Straightway then he took Aristides and led him to the spot. They found that it was naturally very well suited to the array of infantry against a force that was superior in cavalry, since the spurs of Cithaeron made the edges of the plain adjoining the temple unfit for horsemen. There, too, was the shrine of the hero Androcrates hard by, enveloped in a grove of dense and shady trees. And besides, that the oracle might leave no rift in the hope of victory, the Plataeans voted, on motion of Arimnestus, to remove the boundaries of Plataea on the side toward Attica, and to give this territory to the Athenians, that so they might contend in defence of Hellas on their own soil, in accordance with the oracle.
This munificence of the Plataeans became so celebrated that Alexander, many years afterwards, when he was now King of Asia,! built the walls of Plataea, and had proclamation made by herald at the Olympic games that the King bestowed this grace upon the Plataeans in return for their bravery and magnanimity in freely bestowing their territory upon the Hellenes in the Median war, and so showing themselves most zealous of all.

XII. Now with the Athenians the men of Tegea came to strife regarding their position in the line. They claimed that, as had always been the case, since the Lacedaemonians held the right wing, they TOAAA TOUS AUT@V Mpoyovous éyxwpcalovTes.

ayavaxtouvtov Sé tav 'AOnvaiwy mapedOov
o 'Apiotetdns eltre: " Teyedtais pév avrectety
mept evyevelas Kal dvdpayabias 0 Tapwpv Katpos ov didwat, rpos § buas, ®@ LBraptiatar, Kal Tovs aANOUS"EAANvas éyomev, STL THY apeTnv
ovK abaipeitas ToTros ovdé Sidwarv: fv & av ipets npiv taki amod@te metpacopeOa KoopovyTes kal PYAATTOVTES 1) KATAITYUVELY TOUS Tponywvt-2 apévous ayavas. Hromev yap ov Tois cuppayots oTATLaGOVTES, GANA payxovpevoe Tots TrorEmLOLS, ovd eTraLvEeropevot TOUS marépas, aXr' avTous avdpas ayabous Th "EAAdOoe mapeEovres: ®S OUTOS 0 aryov Seifer Kal Tod Kat dpxovra kal idiarny om7ogou Tous "EAAno ww aEvos dott. = TavT axovcates ot ctvedpot Kal TYYEMOvES amedeEavto Tovs
"AOnvaious Kal Garepov, avrtois Ke pas amédocav.

XTII. Ovens be PeETEwpou THs 'EdAaddos kal padiota Tots "AOnvaios TOV Tpaypatov eT b-aparés eXovTmr, avépes é& olxeoy emepavav Kal XPNMET ov peyddov TEVTES uTO TOU TOAE Mou yeryovores car wac av dua TO TROUT THY ev TH
TONEL Suva pev aur ay rat Sofav otYoméevny opav-TES, ér€ wv TIpopeveoy Kal upyovTwv, cuvirOov eis olKiay Tia TOV év MAaravais xpupa Kat Tvv@LOTaYTO KatTadvcew Tov Onipov: et be yy
7 po poin, AupavetcOat TA Tpaypata Kal Tots BasBuoois TPOOaely,
2 Iparropéevey 5é rovTwr év TO otpaTtoTredep Kat auxvav on SiepOappevary, aia Bopevos o "Apeateions Kal poBnOels tov Katpov, éyvw unt éay themselves should hold the left, and in support of their claim they sounded loudly the praises of their ancestors. The Athenians were incensed, and Aristides came forward and made this speech: “ To argue with the men of Tegea about noble birth and bravery, there is surely no time now ; but we declare to you, O Spartans, and to the rest of the Hellenes, that valour is not taken away from a man, nor is it given him, by his position in the line. Whatsoever post ye shall assign to us, we will endeavour to main- tain and adorn it, and so bring no disgrace upon the contests we have made before. We are come, not to quarrel with our allies, but to do battle with our foes ; not to heap praises on our fathers, but to show ourselves brave men in the service of Hellas. It is this contest which will show how much any city or captain or, private soldier is worth to Hellas.” On hearing this, the councillors and leaders declared for the Athenians, and assigned to them the other wing.

XIII. While Hellas was thus in suspense and Athens especially in danger, certain men of that city who were of prominent families and large wealth, but had been impoverished by the war, saw that with their riches all their influence in the city and their reputation had departed, while other men now had the honours and offices. They therefore met together secretly at a certain house in Plataea, and conspired to overthrow the democracy; or, it their plans did not succeed, to injure the general cause and betray it to the Barbarians.
Such was the agitation in the camp, and many had already been corrupted, when Aristides got wind of the matter, and, fearful of the crisis that favoured the plot, determined not to leave the

b , \ a 4M? a > 4
dpeXovpevoy TO Tpayya uno’ array éxxarvrrev, 9 4 9 a 3 4 A e
aryvoovpevor eis Oaov exBnoetas TAOS o EXEYKOS Tov Tov dixaiou Sntav Gpov avtl rod cuudépovtos.
oxtm@ 67 Tivas éx ToAN@Y auvédaBe Kal TOvTOV
80 4 A e / 4 \ \
vo pév, ols wrpw@ros 7 Kpiots Tpoeypadhn, oF Kat mwrelaTny aitiay etyov, Aioxivns Aapmrpeds cal
"Aynoias “Ayapveds, @yovto hevyovtes éx Tod
/ ‘ » *9 A A
aotpatotédou, Tovs 8 addous adjKe, Oapojaat

did0vs Kal petayvavat tots ért AavOadverv otopévots, UTrevrav ws péya SixacrnpLov Exovat TOV
/ 9 4 \ > / > a \
Toemov atoAvcacbat tas aitias opbas Kai Sixaiws TH TaTpids BovAevopevot.
XIV. Mera radra Mapdomos, @ mr«ciorov edoxes Stadéperv, trav “EXAnvaY arreTTElparo, THY vf > 4 > a) 3 4 e A \ immov aOpoav avtois édels xabeCouévors bre Tov mpotroda Tov KiBaipavos év ywpiots oxupois cal metpwodect TANY Meyapéwv. obra 5é TproxiAror TO TAOS Svtes ev Tois émrimrédots padXov éstpatotredevovto. S10 Kal xax@s eracyxov bro
a / e ‘ 29 ’ \ \
Ths tmmov pueions em’ avrovs Kal mpoaBoAas
/
éyovons mavtayobev. émeurrov ovv ayyeXov
/ \ 4 A ,
Kata taxos mpos Ilavcaviay BonOety xeXevorTes,
ws ov duvduevor xa’ abtovs UrooThivat TO TeV BapBapwv wAnB0s. tadrta Ilavoavias axovwv, non 5€ Kal xaBopav atroxexpuppévoy akovTic patwv Kai rokevpatwv mAnbes TO otTpaToTredoy TeV Meyapéwv cal suvertarpévous avTous eis OdLyov, auros pev aunyavos Hv mpos immotas apivew 32'

matter in neglect, nor yet to bring it wholly to the light, since it could not be known how many would be implicated by a test which was based on justice rather than expediency. Accordingly, he arrested some eight or so of the many conspirators. Two of these, against whom the charge was first formally brought, and who were really the most guilty ones, Aeschines of Lamptrae and Agesias of Acharnae, fled the camp. The rest he released, affording thus an opportunity. for encouragement and repentance to those who still thought they had escaped detection, and suggested to them that the war was a great tribunal for their acquittal from the charges made against them, provided they took sincere and righteous counsel in behalf of their country.

XIV. After this, Mardonius made trial of the Hellenes with that arm of his service in which he thought himself most superior. He despatched all his cavalry against them as they lay encamped at the foot of Cithaeron, in positions that were rugged and rocky—all except the Megarians. These, to the number of three thousand, were encamped the rather in open plain. For this reason they suffered severely at the hands of the cavalry, which poured in tides against them, and found access to them on every side. Accordingly, they sent a messenger in haste to Pausanias, bidding him come to their aid, since they were unable of themselves to withstand the host of the Barbarians. Pausanias, on hearing this, and seeing at once that the camp of the Megarians was as good as hidden from view by the multitude of the enemy's javelins and arrows, and that its defenders were huddled together in narrow quarters, on his own part had no way of rendering om Tixn pdrayy: kal Bapeia tH Lraptiatov,

3 tois & adAos otTpaTnyois Kal Aoyayois TAY 'EX-AnVOY TEpt avTov ovat TpovBeTo EHrOV apeETis Kal diroTiuias, ef dn tives ExovtTes avadé~awvTo mpoaywvicacbat cai BonOinoar trois Meyapetat.
trav & ddXNwv oxvovvtav Aptatetdns avabeEduevos
umép tav 'AOnvaiwy ro épyov amootéAXeL Tov ™poOvporarov TOV doxaryav 'Oduprradwpor, éyovTa TOUS Um' avT@ TETAYMEVOUS hoyddas Tpraxoaious kal tokétas dvapepmeyuévous adv avtots.
4 Todtrov 5é1 o€éws SiacKevacapevov Kal Wpoc-Pepopevov pope, Masiotios 0 TeV BapBapov im Tapxos, avnp aXKh} TE Oavpaaros peyéOer Te Kal eadnet THUATOS TEPLTTOS, as Kwareider, évavtiov eMLoT pe as TOV lIrTrov €is AVTOUS 'ipavve.
tov & dvacXopevarv Kat cup Barovtwy Tv arya Kaptepos, os metpay éy TOUT@ Tov TAVTOS Aapm-5 Bavovtar. émret é rokevels. O iarmos tov MaoloTLov dm éppupe Kal weo@v vd Bapous TOV 6TNOv avr os TE SucKivytos % WV \dvag épew Kal Tots "AOnvatous.€ ETTUKELMEVOUS Kal mTaiouat dvoperaxetpeaT0S, Ov povov orEpva Kal keparny, arra Kal Ta quia Xpveg Kat Xareg Kab aLdnpe Katamepparv-pévos, TovTov bev 7 TO Kpavos Uméparve TOV opOarpov a aKovTiou oT UpAKt Tai@y Ts avetrer, ol & adddov Tlépoat TT poéevou TOV vex pov Epevyov.
6 éyvacOn Sé Tou caTopOaparos TO péryebos TOS
"EdAqoww ovK amo TOV vexp@v Tod mAnOous, Odiyot yap Ob TecOVTES oav, AXA TE TévOer TOV
1

wovtwy 5€ Hercher and Blass with F8S: rodtwy.

them aid against horsemen, since his phalanx of Spartans was full-armoured and slow of movement ; but to the rest of the generals and captains of the Hellenes who were about him he proposed, in order to stir up their valour and ambition, that' some of them should volunteer to make contention for the succour of the Megarians. The rest all hesitated, but Aristides, in behalf of the Athenians, undertook the task, and despatched his most zealous captain, Olympiodorus, with the three hundred picked men of his command, and archers mingled with them. These quickly arrayed themselves and advanced to the attack on the run. Masistius, the commander of the Barbarian cavalry,a man of wonderful prowess and of surpassing stature and beauty of person, saw them coming, and at once wheeled his horse to face them and charged down upon them. Then there was a mighty struggle between those who withstood and those who made the charge, since both regarded this as a test of the whole issue between them. Presently the horse of Masistius was hit with an arrow, and threw his rider, who lay where he fell, unable to raise himself, so heavy was his armour; and yet he was no easy prey to the Athenians, though they pressed upon him and smote him. For not only his chest and head, but also his limbs were encased in gold and bronze and iron. But at last, with the spike of a javelin, through the eye-hole of his helmet, he was smitten to the death, and the rest of the Persians abandoned his body and fled. The magnitude of their success was known to the Hellenes, not from the multitude of those they slew, for few

BapBapov. Kali yap éavtovs éExepay érl TH Maoutctio xal tamous Kal nptovous, oipwyns TE kat xkravOpov TO Trediov éveTrimracay, ws avipa jou tmp@tov apeTtn kal Suvdper peta ye Map-Soviov avtov amroBaXovtes.

XV. Mera Sé rHv immopaxlay audorepor paxns

ExYovTo Ypovoy ToNVY: apmUVOp_evots yap ob pdv-Tels vinnv Tpovdaivoy ex TaV iep@v opotws Kal tots Tlépaats nat rois"EXAnow, ef § éreyerpoiev, ATtav. émrevta Mapoovos, ws avT@ péev jyepav
ordiywy Ta emitndeca trepinv, ot & “EXAnves adel TiWaV éTLppEedvTMY TAEloVves éyivovTo, SUcavacye-TOV éyvw pynKkéte péverv, AAXKA SvaBds aya ddev tov Acwrov émibécbas tots" EXAnow atpocdoKn-Tos' Kal Twapdyyedpa Tois nyemoow éomépas
EOWKE. |
Mecovons S€ waddsota THS vuKTOS avnp taimov
éywv arpéua mpoceniyvue T@ atpatoTédo Trav ‘EAAnvev: évtuyav 6é€ rais duraxais éxédevev avT@ mpocedOciy ‘Apiotetdnv tov *AOnvaiov.
Umaxovaavtos 5&€ tayéws Edyoev' ‘ Kiul pev
"AréEavdpos 0 Maxedav, rw Sé xiwvduvwv Tov pé-yloTov EvVvola TH TPOs Upas alpopeEvos, WS 7) TO aipvidsoy éxmrAnFaev tas yelpov aywvicacbat.
payeltrar yap viv Mapdovigs aiptov, ody br’
érridos ypnaThs ovdé Odpaovs, Add’ atropias TOV jTapovtwy, émel Kal pedvtTes éxetvoy atratciou iepots Kal Aoyiots Ypnopav eipyovor puayns, Kai TOV oTpaTov exeu ducdupia ToAAn Kal KatTaTdy-
us. GXX’ avayKy TOmaVvTa Teipacbar Ths TUYNS 256
ARISTIDES

. had fallen, but from the grief of the Barbarians. For they shore their own hair in tribute to Masistius, and that of their horses and mules, and filled the plain with their wailing cries. They felt that they had lost a man who, after Mardonius himself, was by far the first in valour and authority.

XV. After this cavalry battle, both sides refrained from further fighting for a long time, since only as they acted on the defensive would victory be theirs—so the soothsayers interpreted the sacrifices alike for Persians and Hellenes,—but if they attacked, defeat. At last Mardonius, since he had supplies remaining for only a few days, and since the Hellenes were ever increasing in number as fresh bodies joined them, impatiently determined to wait no longer, but to cross the Asopus at day-break and attack the Athenians unexpectedly. During the evening he gave the watchword to his commanders.

But about midnight a solitary horseman quietly approached the camp of the Hellenes, and falling in with the outposts, ordered that Amistides the Athenian come to him. He was speedily obeyed, and then said: “I am Alexander the Macedonian, and I am come at the greatest peril to myself, out of my good-will toward you, that no suddenness of attack may frighten you into inferior fighting. Mardonius will surely give battle on the morrow, not because he has substantial hope or even courage, but because he is destitute of provisions. His sooth- sayers, indeed, are trying ‘to keep him from battle by unpropitious sacrifices and oracular utterances, while his army is full of dejection and consternation ; but he must needs boldly try his fortune, or sit

A thy éoxdtny bropéverv arropiav xabeLopevov.
taita dpdcas o ’AréEavdpos édeito Tov ’Apiotet-Snv avtov etdévat cal pynpoveverv, érépm 5é p17 KateTev. 0 8 ov Karas exe éfn tadta Mav-caviav amoxpiwac0a, éxeivp yap avaxeicbat
THY Hyepoviav, Tpos 5é TOs aAXNOUS AppnTa mpo
THs payns edokev! écecOar, vixwaons Sé Tis “ErAdb0s ovdéva tHv ’AreEdvipov mpobupiay Kat apetny ayvoncev. RexOdvTwv 5é TovTwY 6 Te Bacirers tav Maxedovwy amnravvev oricw maduw, 6 te "Aptoteidns adadixdpevos él thy oxnvnv Tod Ilavoaviou dinyetto Tovs Noyous Kar peteTréutrovTo Tovs aAAOUS Hye“ovas Kal mapHyyedAov év KOom@ TOV oTpaTOY exe, WS payns > 4
éoomevns. |
XVI. "Ev rovt@ 98, ws ‘Hpodoros icropeé, Ilavoavias ’Aptoteiin mpocépepe Aoyov, akiav tovs ‘AOnvaious émi ro SeErov petarafar xa?
kata tous Ilépcas avtitayOjvar, Bértiov yap ayovetcOar THS TE wayns Eumetpovs yeyovotas Kal T@ Tpovertennévat Oappodvras, avT@ dé wapa-
A > 7 4 A
Sodvat TO evwvupov, STrov Tav ‘“EAXnvev of pn difovres emtBadrew &uweAXov.

Oi pev obv adXot atparnyol TOV "AOnvatov aryvepova, Kal poprixov ayryobvTo Tov Havoaviay, éb Thy adAnv dav rdf é€ ev X@pa povouvs dvw Kal KaTO peTadhéper ofas waTrep elAwtas, Kata 7d

1 %8otey bracketed by Bekker, omitted by Blass.

2 werardta: «al MSS., Sintenis', Coraés, Bekker: perayaybvra.

258

3

9

a

8

still and endure extremest destitution." When he had told him this, Alexander begged Aristides to keep the knowledge to himself and bear it well in mind, but to tell it to none other. Aristides replied that it was not honourable to conceal this knowledge from Pausanias, since it was on him that the supreme command devolved, but that it should not be told the other leaders before the battle; though in case Hellas were victorious, no man should remain ignorant of Alexander's zeal and valour. After this conversation, the king of the Macedonians rode off back again, and Aristides went to the tent of Pausanias and told him all that had been said. Then they summoned the other leaders and gave them orders to keep the army in array, since there was to be a battle.

XVI. At this juncture, as Herodotus relates,! Pausanias sent word to Aristides, demanding that the Athenians change their position and array themselves on the right wing, over against the Persians, where they would contend better, he said, since they were versed already in the Persian style of fighting, and emboldened by a previous victory over them; the left wing, where the Medising Hellenes were going to attack, should be intrusted to himself and his Spartans.

The rest of the Athenian generals thought it inconsiderate and annoying in Pausanias to leave the rest of his line in the position assigned, while he moved them, and them only, back and forth like Helots, and put them forward where the

1 ix. 46,

259
3 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 paxtpworatov mpoBarrcpevos: o 8 ’Aptoreidns
a , Stapaptavey avtovs eépacxe tov TavtTos, et mTpwnv wev brép Tov TO Eevwvupov Képas ExeL Le) 4 \ VA J
Suehirotipodvto Teyedtats Kal mpoxpiWévtes éoepvovovto, viv dé, AakeSatpoviwr Exovaiws avrois
? / A a \ / \ \ éEtcotapévwv tod Se€tod nat tpoToy twa THY
e / , ” \- , ’ a nyepoviav TrapadioovTwy, ote THY Sofay ayaTobd e le) A \ N e , aw ovTe Képdos HYyovvTat TO fun WpOS opodvAOUS Kal ovyyevelts, aAAa BapBdpouvs Kal Pvoee trodepious aywrvicacOar. éx tovTov mdavu mpobvpws ot “AOnvaios SunuetBovro tots Yraptiadtat tHv takiy' Kal Aoyos éydpe 8 ad’Tav Todds ad-AnArOLS TapeyyvovTwr, ws oUTEe SAA BerTio AaBovres ovTE Wuyas apeivous Of ToAgwLOL TOV
év Mapada@v wpociacty, adrAa TavTapev éxeivots
, > \ 2 9 n Ve \ N
toka, tavta 8 écOyros trouiApata Kal ypvads
él cwpact parakols Kairpuyais avavdpots: nuiv 5 duowa pév OTrAa Kat oa@para, peitov Sé Tails vinats TO Odpaos, 0 8 ayov ovy vmrép yopas Kal
s 4 e > 4 J b e A b]
TOAEWS pOVOY, w@S Exelvols, GAN Umép TaV év
Mapadau cal Zarapive tpotraiwr, ws pnd éxeiva Marteadou Ooxg Kai TUyNs, adra ’AOnvaiwr.
Otitro. pév ovv omevddovtes ev apeirer TaV tdEewv Hoav’ aicBopevor 5é OnBaioe rap’ adtoporov Mapsdovip dpafovar. Kdxelvos evOus, etre Sedums Tavs "AOnvaious, cite tois Aaxedatpovioss 260
ARISTIDES

fighting was to be hottest. But Aristides declared that they were utterly wrong; they had contended

emulously with the Tegeans, but a little while back, for the occupation of the left wing, and plumed themselves on being preferred before those rivals; but now, when the Lacedaemonians of their own accord vacated the right wing for them, and after a fashion proffered them the leadership among the Hellenes, they neither welcomed the reputation thus to be won, nor counted it gain that their contention would thus be, not with men of the same tribes and kindreds, but rather with Barbarians and natural enemies. Upon this the Athenians very willingly exchanged posts with the Spartans, and the word passed from lip to lip far through their ranks that their enemies would attack them with no better arms and with no braver spirits than at Marathon, nay, with the same kind of archery as then, and with the same variegated vesture and gold adornments to cover soft bodies and unmanly spirits; “while we have not only like arms and bodies with our brethren of that day, but that greater courage which is born of our victories; and our contest is not alone for land and city, as theirs was, but also for the trophies which they set up at Marathon and Salamis, in order that the world may think that not even those were due to Miltiades only, or to fortune, but to the Athenians.”

The Spartans and Athenians, then, were busily engaged in exchanging posts; but the Thebans heard of it from deserters and told Mardonius. He, at once, whether through fear of the Athenians or out of ambition to engage with the Lacedaemonians, auptreceiy pidoTipmovpevos, avtitrapeEnye Tovs Ilépocas él ro Se€sov, rods 5¢ “EXXnvas éxéreue TOUs avy avT@ Kata Tovs AOnvaiovs loracba. 6 yevouévns 5é Ths peTaKocpnoews KaTadpavods 6 te Ilavoavias arorpatels avis emt tod Sekoi xatéarn, Kal Mapdovos, domep elyev éF apyis, avéraBe To evovupov Kata tovs Aaxedatpovious yevopuevos, 4 Te nuépa SieEnAev apyyn. Kal rois “EAAnot Bovrcvouévais e0ke tmoppwrépw petaotpatoTrededoat Kal KataraPelv edvdpov ywpior, evel Ta wWAnoioy vapata KabvBpioto Kal Sdi€- d0apto tav BapBdpwv immoxpatovver.

XVII. ’ExeXOovons S¢ vurros cal tov oTpatn-yov ayovrov éml thy atrodederypévny otparomedeiav ov wavy wpd0vpov Av erecOat Kat ocuppevety TO TAHOOS, GAN’ ws avéctncav ex ToYV TpwoTwy épuudtov épépovto mpos THY TrOALY TOV NaTaléwv ol ToAXol, Kal BopuBos Hv éxet Sia-oxtdvapéver kal katacKnvotytav ataxtws. Aaxke-Satpoviors Se cvvéBatvev! dxovat povois atronei-
2 meclar Tov GrAX\wv ‘Apouddpetos yap, avnp Oupoedys wat dtroxivduvos, Extaday mpos TV paynv omapyav xal Bapvyopevos tas todas avaBonras Kal perrAnoes, TOTE 52 TavTaTacL THY peTavaotadow duynyv atoxarov Kal amrodpacuy, oun &bn rete thy taf, GAN avdToO. pévav
peTa TaV éavTOd NOXLT@Y UToaTHaETIat Mapédo-3 vov. ws S€é Tlavoavias évedOov éreye tava mpatrew eyndiopéva wal Sedoypéva tots "EXXD-ow, apdpevos taiv yxepoty métpov péyav oO 1 guvéBavevy Blass, adopting the conjecture of Sintenis! ;
cuvéBn [nev].
262
ARISTIDES

counterchanged his Persians to the right wing, and ordered the Hellenes with him to set themselves against the Athenians. When this change in his enemy's order of battle was manifest, Pausanias returned and occupied the right wing again, where- upon Mardonius also resumed his own left wing, just as he stood at the beginning, facing the Lacedae- monians. And thus the day came to an end without action. The Hellenes, on deliberation, decided to change their camp to a position farther on, and to secure a spot where there was plenty of good water, since the neighbouring springs were defiled and ruined by the Barbarians’ superior force of cavalry. XVII. Night came on, and the generals set out to lead their forces to the appointed encampment. The soldiers, however, showed no great eagerness to follow in close order, but when they had once abandoned their first defences, most of them hurried on toward the city of Plataea, and there tumult reigned as they scattered about and encamped in no order whatsover. But it chanced that the Lacedae- monians were left alone behind the others, and that too against their will. For Agjompharetus, a man of a fierce and venturesome spirit, who had long been mad for battle and distressed by the many post- ponements and delays, now at last lost all control of himself, denounced the change of position as a runaway flight, and declared that he would not abandon his post, but stay there with his company and await the onset of Mardonius. And when Pausanias came up and told him that their action had been formally voted by the Hellenes in council,

263

"A pouddperos Kal cataBarov po THY Today Tod Havoaviou tavrnv én Widov avros mepl ris
paxns TiWecOat, Ta 5é TAY GAXwv Seta Bovrevpata Kal Soypata yaipew éav. catropovmevos bé Tlavoavias 7@ mapovte trpos pev Tovs “AOnvaious éreuapey amiovras On, Teptyetvar Seopevos Kal xownh Baditerv, adtos 5é tHv GdAXnv Sivapww Frye ampos tas TWdataias @s dvactnowy Tov *Apoppaperov.
"Ev tovt@ 5é xateddpBavev juépa, cat Map-Somos (ov yap éXadov thy otpatoredetav éxrEXoL-motes ot “EXAnves) Exov aovvtetaypévny ryv Sivapu éredépeto Trois Aaxedatpovious Bon 4roAXNT Kal watayp tov BapBapwv, ws od paxyns écopévns, GAAA hevyovtas dvaptacopévwv Tovs “EAAnvas. 6 puxpas pomis édénoe yevéoOar.
KaTio@v yap TO ywopuevov o Iavaavias éoxero fev THs Topetas Kal thy él paxn Tak exérXevce NapBdvev Exactov, Ed\aVe & avtov, tA vbr
THS Tpos Tov Apoudaperov opyins cite TO Tdyxet GopyBnOévta taV Trodepiwv, cvvOnpa pH Sodvat tois "EAdAnow. dOev ovt evOuvs obt dOpoor, Kat oduyous bé€ Kal oropddny, Hdn THs payns
év xepaly ovons, mpoaeBonOouv.
Qs dé Ovdpevos ove éxarréper, mpocérake tots Aaxedatpoviots Tas domidas wpd THY Troda@V Oepévous atpéua xabélecOar Kai mpocéyev avTe, pndéva TOV Trodeioy apvvomévous, avtros bé maw éogayiavero. Kal mpooémimrtov ot immeisnon 5é€ Kal RBéros é&txveito Kai Tus erémdnKTO TOY Yraptiatay. év tovT@ dé Kai Kaddexparns, 264
3:

9

ARISTIDES

Amompharetus picked up a great stone and threw it down at the feet of Pausanias, saying that was his personal ballot for battle, and he cared not a whit for the cowardly counsels and votes of the rest.
Pausanias, perplexed at the case, sent to the Athenians, who were already moving off, begging them to wait and make the march in company with him, and then began to lead the rest of his troops toward Plataea, with the idea that he would thus force Amompharetus from his position.

At this point day overtook them, and Mardonius, who did not fail to notice that the Hellenes had abandoned their encampment, with his force in full array, bore down upon the Lacedaemonians, with great shouting and clamour on the part of the Barbarians, who felt that there would be no real battle, but that the Hellenes had only to be snatched off as they fled. And this lacked but little of coming to pass. For Pausanias, on seeing the situation, though he did check his march and order every man to take post for battle, forgot, either in his rage at Amom- pharetus or his confusion at the speed of the enemy, to give the signal for battle to the confederate Hellenes. For this reason they did not come to his aid at once, nor in a body, but in small detachments and straggling, after the battle was already joined.

When Pausanias got no favourable omens from his sacrifices, he ordered his Lacedaemonians to sit quiet with their shields planted in front of them, and to await his orders, making no attempt to repulse their enemies, while he himself went to sacrificing again. By this time the horsemen were charging upon them ; presently their missiles actually reached them, and many a Spartan was smitten. And then it was

dy idéa te xaddXdoTov 'EAAjvev Kal copatt péytorov ev éxelva TO oTpaT@ yevérGat Aéyovar, tokevOels xal OvncKwv ovx &pyn tov Odvartov odvperGat, Kal yap érOeciv olxoBev wimEep Tis
'EAAdOos atroavovpevos, GAN Ste OvioKker TH xerpl pn xpnodpuevos. jv otvy TO pev mados Sevvov, 7 8 éyxpatea Oavpactn tev avipar.
ov yap nuvvovTO Tovs ToXEpious émBaivoytas, GNA TOV Tapa Tov Beod Kal Tov oTpaTnyod
kacpov dvapevortes nvetyovto Badopevor Kat WiMTOVTES EV TALS tafeow,
"Eviot 5é pace T® Ilavoavia pexpov éEw Tis Taparagews Ovovtt "wa KATEUXOMEVY TOY Avdav
Twas adve TpooTEgovTas dpm dvew Kab Suappi-MTEL Ta Tmepl THY Ovotar, tov 6€ Ilavoanav Kai Tous Tept avrov ovK éxovras ba paBdous Kat pao ree matey 616 Kal vov exelvns THS emdpopiis
popnpara Tas Tept TOV Bopov év adpty TwANYas Tav épnBov cal tiv pera tadta tav Avdoy Topmny avyrTenciaGat.
XVIII. Avo gopav ov o Navoavias ToOlS Tapovow, adAa TOU | PaVTEWs én adro1s tepeia KaTa-

Barxdortos, TpemeTat T pos TO ‘Hpatov Th ove
SeSaxpupévos, Kal Tas xetpas dvacxov evEato Kidarpwvia * ‘Hpg Kal Geots adovs, ot Tdataida yay é ovat, él By TET PWT AL Tots “EAAnot viKay, ara pdoavtas 7é Tt mwadety Kal deiEavtas ¢ epyp Tos ToNEepLows, ws em” avipas ayabous Kal paxecOa pepadnKotas éotpatevaay. Taita TOU
Ilavoaviov JeoxdutobvTos dua tais evyais epavy
TQ iepa Kai vienv o pavtis edpate. en S00 évros 266

that Callicrates, said to be the fairest of the Hellenes to look upon, and the tallest man in their whole army, was shot, and, dying, said he did not grieve at death, since he had left his home to die for Hellas, but at dying without striking a single blow. Their experience was indeed a terrible one, but the restraint of the men was wonderful. They did not try to repel the enemy who were attacking them, but awaited from their god and their general the favourable instant, while they endured wounds and death at their posts.

Some say that as Pausanias was sacrificing and praying, a little to one side of his line of battle, some Lydians suddenly fell upon him and rudely hurled away the sacrificial offerings; and_ that Pausanias and his attendants, being without weapons, smote the intruders with the sacrificial staves and goads; wherefore, to this day, in imitation of this onslaught, the ceremonies of beating the young warriors round the altar at Sparta, and of the procession of the Lydians which follows this, are duly celebrated as rites.

XVIII. Then, in distress at this state of affairs, while the seer slew victim after victim, Pausanias turned his face, all tears, toward the Heraeum, and with hands uplifted prayed Cithaeronian Hera and the other gods of the Plataean land that, if it was not the lot of the Hellenes to be victorious, they might at least do great deeds before they fell, and show to a certainty that their enemies had marched out against men who were brave and who knew how to fight. While Pausanias was thus calling on the gods, right in the midst of his prayers, the sacrifices showed themselves propitious and the seer announced

367°

eis Amavras tod Tapayyédpatos caBiorac Bae Tpos TOUS Toneplous, n Te ddrayé dypuy erxev ai pridicos évos Swov Oupoedots mpos adany TpeTropevov kar dpikavros, Tous TE BapBapors
TOTE TaperTy hoyio pos, @>s mpos avdpas o ayoy EcouTo paxovpévous aypt Oavarov. 610 Kat mpo0éuevou ToddG TOV YyEeppov érofevor els Tovs } Aaxedatpovious. at dé THpovvTes apa TOV oUvaoma pov éréBatvov, Kal T poo Tec ovTes éFea0ouv Ta YEppa, kal toils Sopact tumtovTes Tpoowna, Kal oTépva trav Llepoay TOAOUS xaTéBanrov, ovK aT PAKT ws oveé a ipoos TiN TOVTAS. wal yap dyriAapBavopevor tay Sopdtey tais Xepat yupvais cvvedpavor Ta TreloTa, kat pos Tas Eupovrxias éx@pouv ovK apy as, GaNAa tals Te KoTrios Kal Tots aKivdaKals XPwpevor Kal Tas aonidas TapagTavTEs Kal cupTrrEKOpEVoL YpoyoV qToNUY avretxov.
Oi S "AOnvaio téws pev NTE Mouv dvapevovres
TOUS Aaxedarpovious, émel 5é Kpavyy} Te mT poo é-WiTTE TOANH paxopeveo ral Tmaphy, OS pacw, deyryedos mapa Tavoaviov Ta yiwopeva ppatov, Gpynoay Karta TAX OS Bon Beir. wal T poxepov-ow aurois dua TOD medtou apos THY Bony érrepé-povTo TaV ‘Ed vov ob pndifovtes, "Aptotetons dé ™ partov per, @S €l0€, TONU mpoehOarv éBoa, papTupopevos “EAAnvious Jeovs, améxer Oat pans Kal pI odiow éutrodov elvar pnde xwdvev eT apUuvovTas Tous mpoxwwduvevovow tiép Ths ‘EdAd60s, émrel & éwpa pn Tpoo éxovTas auT@
Kal ouvteraypévouvs érl Thy pdynv, otTw Ths
1 eis rots Hercher and Blass with S: robs.

-268

330

_ ARISTIDES

victory. Word was at once passed all along the line to set themselves in motion against the enemy, and the phalanx suddenly had the look of a fierce beast bristling up to defend itself. The Barbarians then got assurance that their contest was to be with men who would fight to the death. Therefore they made a rampart of their wicker targets and shot their arrows into the ranks of the Lacedaemonians. These, however, kept their shields closely locked together as they advanced, fell upon their foemen, tore away their wicker targets, and then, smiting the Persians in face and breast with their long spears, they slew many, who nevertheless did great deeds of courage before they fell. For they grasped the long spears with their naked hands, fractured them for the most part, and then took to short-range fighting with a will, plying their daggers and scimetars, tear- ing away their enemies' shields, and locking them in close embrace ; and so they held out a long time. The Athenians, meanwhile, were quietly awaiting the Lacedaemonians. But when the shouts of those engaged in battle fell loud upon their ears, and there came, as they say,a messenger from Pausanias telling them what was happening, they set out with speed to aid him. However, as they were advancing through the plain to his aid, the Medising Hellenes bore down upon them. Then Aristides, to begin with, when he saw them, went far forward and shouted to them, invoking the gods of Hellas, that they refrain from battle, and oppose not nor hinder those who were bearing aid to men standing in the van of danger for the sake of Hellas. But as soon as he saw that they paid no heed to him, and were

éxel BonOeias drotpamopevos cuvéBare TovrTots
wep) tevtaxiopupiovs ovcw. Gddr\a TO meV mreiotov evOds évédwxe Kal amexwpnoev, ate 89 «al trav BapBdpwv amndrdaypevov, 7 8é payn déyerat paddota Kata OnBaiovs yevérOar, mpoOupotata T&Y TpwTwY Kai dSuvaTwTdtwY TOTE 9 b a , \ Aa 3
nap avtois pndilovtwy Kal To wAHOos ov Kata yvepunv, GAN' dduyapxovpevoy ayovTay.
XIX. Odtw 5é tod dyavos diya ovvertaTos mpato. pev édoavto tovs Ilépoas ot Aaxedat-porto: wal tov Mapdouov avnp Xmaptiatns
" ? / > , / \
Svowa "Apipynatos arroctivvuct, MO@ THY Kegarny wartdéas, dorep avTe Mpoeonpave TO év Apdidpew poavtetov. emeprpe yap avdpa
Avddv évtad@a, Kapa 8 érepov eis Tpodwviou
6! MapSduos: Kal tobrov peév o rpopytns Kapixh 7 yrwocon mpoceimev, 6 5é Avdds év TO oNnk@ Tod
"Apdidpew Kxatevvacbels edokev vanpérny tid
Tod Oeod mapacthvat Kal KedeveLy avTOY aTLéval, pty Bovropevou Sé ALGov eis THY Keparny éuBareiv peyav, Oote SdEat TANyévTa TeOvdvat TOV avOpw-mov' Kal TavTa pev o0TH yevérOat NEyeTaL. 'TOUS Us a 58 devryovtas eis TA EvNwa teixn KabeipEav.
' 4 > oo 9 A '\ ,

Orly 8 dbarepov ’APnvaios tovs OnBatous
TpeTOVTAL, Tplaxocious Tous éemiupavertatous Kal mpwrous StapOeipavtes ev avTn TH mayn. ye yevnpevns 5& THs TpoTHs Hey avtois ayyedos
a \ \ >
modopKeto bat TO BapBaptxov eis Ta TEeLyN KaTA-1 § bracketed in Sintenis?; Blass reads eis rd Mrgov 6 with S, after Hercher, thus agreeing with Herodotus viii. 135.

arrayed for battle, then he turned aside from rendering aid where he had proposed, and engaged with these, though they were about fifty thousand in number. But the greater part of them at once gave way and- withdrew, especially as the Barbarians had also retired, and the battle is said to have been fought chiefly with the Thebans, whose foremost and most influential men were at that time very eagerly Medising, and carried with them the multitude, not of choice, but at the bidding of the few.

XIX. The contest thus begun in two places, the Lacedaemonians were first to repulse the Persians. Mardonius was slain by a man of Sparta named Arimnestus, who crushed his head with a stone, even as was foretold him by the oracle in the shrine of Amphiaraiis. Thither he had sent a Lydian man, and a Carian besides to the oracle of Trophonius.! This latter the prophet actually addressed in the Carian tongue ; but the Lydian, on lying down in the precinct of Amphiaraiis, dreamed that an attendant of the god stood by his side and bade him be gone, and on his refusal, hurled a great stone upon his head, insomuch that he died from the blow (so ran the man’s dream). These things are so reported. Furthermore, the Lacedaemonians shut the flying Persians up in their wooden stockade. |

Shortly after this it was that the Athenians routed the Thebans, after slaying three hundred, their most eminent leaders, in the actual battle. After the rout was effected, and more might have been slain, there came a messenger to the Athenians, telling them that the Barbarian force was shut up and besieged

1 According to Herodotus, viii. 135, Mys the Carian visited the shrine of the Ptoan Apollo, overlooking Lake Copais.

KeKNELTMEevov. oUTw 61 cwlecOat TOs “EAANVas édcavtes éBondovy mpos ta Teiyn? Kal Tos Aakedaipoviots Tavtdtaciw apy@s mWpos TEeLxXo-paxiav Kai atreipws Exovow éemipavévTes atpovot

TO otpatotredoy hovp TOAXG TeV Trordepion.
4 Aéyovras yap amd Tav Tplaxovta pupiddov mA aA A >] 4 nA >) TeTpakiopuploe puyeiy avy ‘AptaBdalo, Trav §
e A e , Sf ty , 54 e umép tas “Edddbo0s dywricapévwv etrecoy ot mavtes éml yxurlos é—nKovTa Kal TpLaxdotot.
routwv "AOnvaio: pev hoav dvo0 nal twevtnKovTa, 4 ? io) ? lA A C4
mavres éx THs Alavridos duds, Os pynoe Krel-
5 dnuos, aywvcauévns dpiota: $10 Kal Tais
/ 4 20 9 (8 \ 86
Lppayitice vupgdars EOvov Atavtidar tHv tvOo-Xpnorov Ovoiay wirép THs vinns, ex Snpociov Tod avadkopa AapuBavovtes> Aaxedarmoro. 8 évt anelous TaV évevyiKxovta, Teyeara: 8 éxnaidexa.
@avpacrov ovv to “Hpodctov, ras povovs tovutous dyaoly eis yelpas éAOeiv Tois Trodepios, tov & dddov ‘“EdXAjvov pyndéva. xal yap To WAHV0s TOY TWecovTWY papTUpE Kal TA pYnLaTa
6 Kxowvov yevéoOat TO KaTopOwpa: Kal Tov Bopov
oux dv éréyparav obtTws, ef ovat Tpels woders
? / A A ? /
nyovicavTo, TOV GAdAwY atpéwa Kabelopéver: Tovde 100" ExXnves vinas xparter, py “Apnos,*
Ilépaas eEeXacavtes éXevOépa “EXAdd: Kowvov (Spvcavro Aros Bwopov érevBepiov.
1 Coraés and Bekker insert after this verse the pentameter :

ebrdAum Wuxas Afparit wetOduevoi, following the bold tmpulse o their spirit, found in the Palatine Anthology, vi. 50. 4

o 09 |
? vie ARISTIDES
‘ a . ;
in their/stockade. So they suffered the Hellenes in front of them to make good their escape, while they themselves marched to the stockade. They brought welcome aid to the Lacedaemonians, who were altogether inexperienced and helpless in storming walled places, and captured the camp with great slaughter of the enemy. Out of three hundred thousand, only forty thousand, it is said, made their escape with Artabazus. Of those who contended in behalf of Hellas, there fell in all one thousand three hundred and sixty. Of these, fifty-two were Athenians, all of the Aeantid tribe, according to Cleidemus, which made the bravest contest (for which reason the Aeantids used to sacrifice regularly to the Sphragitic nymphs the sacrifice ordained by the Pythian oracle for the victory, receiving the expenses therefor from the public funds); ninety-one were Lacedaemonians, and sixteen were men of Tegea. Astonishing, therefore, is the statement of Herodotus,' where he says that these one hundred and fifty-nine represented the only Hellenes who engaged the enemy, and that not one of the rest did so. Surely the total number of those who fell, as well as the monuments erected over them, testifies that the success was a common one. Besides, had the men of three cities only made the contest, while the rest sat idly by, the altar would not have been inscribed as it was :—

"'Here did the Hellenes, flushed with a victory granted by Ares
Over the routed Persians, together, for Hellas delivered,
Build them an altar of Zeus, Zeus as Deliverer known."

1 ix. 85.

7 Tavdrnv rhv paynv éuaxeravro TH TETPAOL TOU Bon Spopueivos lorapévov cat' 'A@nvalous, kata dé Botwrous TeTpaoe Tov Tlavépou pOivovros, 7% 331 kal viv ére To "EXAnuixov év TXataiais aOpoi-Cerat ovvédpiov Kal Avovar T@ ehevOepiop Act TIAaraceis vmrép THs viens. Thy dé TOY NwEepev dvapariay ov Gavpacréor, Strov Kai viv Sinn pt-Bopever TeV év aatpohoyia MGAXov GAAHV AAXoOL NVvos apxny Kal TENET HY aryoucty.

XX. "Ex rovtov trav 'A@nvaiwy to aproretov ov mapadidovrev Tots Lraptidracs ouoe Tpo-Tavov iordvar cuyxwpovvTar éxeivows, Tap ovoev av mrOev evOus atrohéobar Ta mrpaypatra TOV "EAXAnvov év TOUS dmAoLs StarrdvTwy, el uy TONG mrapnyopav Kal "SiddoKxwv Tovs cvoTpatiyous o A tarelons, pdrwoTa Oé Aew-Kparn Kal Mvpontb oye Kal cuvéreice THY

2 xplovy epeivas Tots “KAAnow. évtai0a Bovievoeven TOV Edge Qcoyeitwv per o 6 Meyapevs
elev, ws étépa! mode Soréov ein TO dptatetor, el py Botrovrar ovvTapatac TONE LOV eupudeov emt TOUT@ o dvacTas Krcoxperos O KopivO cos bofav pev mapea xev OS Kopw tous aiTHTOV TO torelov* Hv yap év afiopare peyote pera THY eae maprny Kal tas "AOnvas 7 Kopw8os- eltre dé Taow apéoavta Kal Pavpacrov Noryov UTrép Traraséwr, Kal avveBovhevce THY puroverciav aveNely exeivoLsS 70 dpva Télov atrodovtas, ols
3 ovdeTépous Tipe MEvOLS dx era. pnbevtar dé
ToUTwy mpaTos pev ‘Apioteidns cuveyopnoe
1 érépg Bekker has ob8erépg neither city, adopting a conjecture of Muretus.
274

ARISTIDES

This battle was fought on the fourth of the month Boédromion, as the Athenians reckon time; but according to the Boeotian calendar, on the twenty-seventh of the month Panemus,! the day when, down to the present time, the Hellenic council assembles in Plataea, and the Plataeans sacrifice to Zeus the Deliverer for the victory. We must not wonder at the apparent discrepancy between these dates, since, even now that astronomy is a more exact science, different peoples have different beginnings and endings for their months.

XX. After this, the Athenians would not grant the Spartans the highest meed of valour, nor allow them to erect a general trophy, and the cause of the Hellenes had certainly gone at once to destruction from their armed contention, had not Aristides, by abundant exhortation and admonition, checked his fellow-generals, especially Leocrates and Myronides, and persuaded them to submit the case to the Hellenes for decision. Thereupon, in the council of the Hellenes, Theogeiton the Megarian said that the meed of valour must be given to some third city, unless they desired the confusion of a civil war. At this point Cleogrjtus the Corinthian rose to speak. Every one thought he would demand the meed of valour for the Corinthians, since Corinth was held in greatest estimation after Sparta and Athens. But to the astonishment and delight of all, he made a proposition in behalf of the Plataeans, and counselled to take away contention by giving them the meed of valour, since at their honour neither claimant could take offence. To this proposal Aristides was first to 1 About August 1, 479 B.c.

imép tav “AOnvaiwv, erevta Tavoavias viép tov Aaxedapoviwv. ottw 5é dsradrayévtes é£eiXov oydojxovta tddavta trois Udaraccdow, ad’ av to Ths “AOnvas av@xodopnoay tepov Kat
TO €005 éctncav Kai ypadais tov vewv duexo-opnoav, al péxypt viv axpdfovoa Stapévovor, gatnoav 5é tporraiov idia pev Aaxedarpdvios, xapis 8 "A@nvaior.
Ilept 5é€ Ouoias épopevors avTois dvetbev oO
T1u6cos Auos édevbepiov Boopov iSpicacba., ica 5é pi) 7 pOoTepov i) TO KaTa THV xepav Tip aTro-oBécavtas ws UT TOV BapBapor Hepiac Hevov évavo ac Gat xaDapov ex Aedpav aTO THS KOLVHS éorias. OL ev OY ApPYoVTES TOV ‘EAAgvey Trepe-Loves evOus nvarynaSov arroa Bevvivat Ta Tupa WavTa TOUS Xpapevous, ex 6€ IlAataréwy Kvxibas u UITrOT XOMEVOS WS evdéyeTat TUXLOTA Kopeely TO Tapa Tov Geov wip HKEV els Acrdous. ary-vioas 8€ 16 o@pa Kal ‘Teptppavdpevos eorepave-oaTO Sadvn’ Kal haBeov amo TOU Bopod 70 mip Spomep Tad es Tas ITAararas éX@per Kat m™ po
mato duo pov erravnrve, ‘THe —aLrns nuépas Xtrious oTadious karavioas. domac duevos dé Tous roditas «Kal TO mip mapadous ev0ds émece Kal MET O, [ALK POV eFerrveuaer. drydpevor
8 avtov ot Udaracets eOayav év TO Lep@ Tis Rvxvéias "Aptépsoos, émuypdvavres T00E TO TET PA PET POV
Evyidas Tv0ad5e OpéEas HAM 745’ adOnpepov.

1 dvpxodéunoauvy Hercher and Blass, following Stephanus, and favoured by FS: @xoddéunoay built.

agree on behalf of the Athenians, then Pausanias on behalf of the Lacedaemonians. Thus reconciled, they chose out eighty talents of the booty for the Plataeans, with which they rebuilt the sanctuary of Athena, and set up the shrine,and adorned the temple with frescoes, which continue in perfect condition to the present day; then the Lacedaemonians set up a trophy on their own account, and the Athenians also for themselves. When they consulted the oracle regarding the sacrifice to be made, the Pythian god made answer that they were to erect an altar of -Zeus the Deliverer, but were not to sacrifice upon it until they had extinguished the fire throughout the land, which he said had been polluted by the Barbarians, and kindled it fresh and pure from the public hearth at Delphi. Accordingly the commanders of the Hellenes went about straightway and compelled all who were using fire to extinguish it, while Euchidas, who promised to bring the sacred fire with all conceivable speed, went from Plataea to Delphi. There he purified his person by sprinkling himself with the holy water, and crowned himself with laurel. Then he took from the altar the sacred fire and started to run back to Plataea. He reached the place before. the sun had set, accomplishing thus a thousand furlongs in one and the same day. He greeted his countrymen, handed them the sacred fire, and straightway fell down, and after a little expired. In admiration of him the Plataeans gave him burial in the sanctuary of Artemis Eucleia, and inscribed upon his tomb this tetrameter verse :—

« Euchidas, to Pytho running, came back here
the selfsame day.” 277

6

2

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tiy & Evereray of pév troddol Kal Kadrovor kal vopitovow “Apreuy, évioc dé dacw ‘Hpa-KXéous pev Ouryarépa kat Muprtods yevécOat, Tis Mevortiov pév Ovyarpos, [arpoxrou & aberdijs, TehevT io acay dé mapGevov é Exe Trapé te Bowwtots Kat Aoxpois timds. Bopos yap avTH Kat dya\pa Kata wacay ayopay idputat, Kal mpo-Ovovcw at re yapovpevat Kal of yapobvres.
XXI ’Ex rovrov yevopévns éexxdXnolas Kons TOV ‘EXAqvev eyparpev ‘Apioreiéns vat pa.
ouveevar pev eis Thataras xa” ExacTov éviauTov

amo THs “EXXdébos mpoBovdous Kab Gewpous, dryer Oar be TEVTAETNpLK OD ayova TOV "Enev-Depo. elvat dé ouvratw ‘EAAquicny Pupias pev aomidas, xirtous dé tmaous, vats 8 éxarov émt TOV pos BapBdpous mwonenov, IIdataceits & aavnous Kat ltepovs adeicbar tH Oe@ Ovovtas itép THs “EAXd6os.
Kupobévrev 58 rovrwv oi TAaraves vmedé-

Eavro roils jwecovat Kal _ Weupevors aura. TOV “EdAjver évarylfew Kal’ Exagrov eviauTov. Kal
TOUTO méexpe VvOV Spact Tovee | TOV TpoToV: TOD
Matpaxrnpiavos pyres, 5s éote Tapa. Bowwrots
FP AdaAKopencos, TH extn éml béxa mepTrouat TOM

THY, nS mponyeir as peev ay npepg TaNTvyKTHS
ery KEN EVO[EVOS TO TOheMLKOD, Erovrat & Gpatac
puppivns peoral Kat orepavapaTov Kal pérXras Tatpos Kal yoas oivou Kal ydNaxTos év appopedacy éXaiov te Kal pupov Kpwocors veavioxot Kopi-Covres édevOepou SovrAM yap ovdevos eFeaTe TOV
1 +év8e Hercher and Blass with FS : rovrov.
278
33

2]

ARISTIDES

Now Eucleia is regarded by most as Artemis, and is so addressed; but some say she was a daughter ‘of Heracles and of that Myrto who was daughter of Menoetius and sister of Patroclus, and that, dying in virginity, she received divine honours among the Boeotians and Locrians. For she has an altar and an image built in every market place, and receives preliminary sacrifices from would-be brides and bridegrooms.

XXI. After this, there was a general assembly of the Hellenes, at which Aristides proposed a decree to the effect that deputies and delegates from all Hellas convene at Plataea every year, and that every fourth year festival games of deliverance be cele- brated — the Eleutheria; also that a confederate Hellenic force be levied, consisting of ten thousand shield, one thousand horse, and one hundred ships, to prosecute the war against the Barbarian ; also that the Plataeans be set apart as inviolable and con- secrate, that they might sacrifice to Zeus the Deliverer in behalf of Hellas.

These propositions were ratified, and the Plataeans undertook to make funeral offerings annually for the Hellenes who had fallen in battle and lay buried there. And this they do yet unto this day, after the following manner. On the sixteenth of the month Maimacterion (which is the Boeotian Alalcomenius), they celebrate a procession. This is led forth at break of day by a trumpeter sounding the signal fcr battle ; waggons follow filled with myrtle-wreaths, then comes a black bull, then free-born youths carrying libations of wine and milk in jars, and pitchers of oil and myrrh (no slave may put hand to

279

\ \ a b / UA \
Tept thy Staxoviav éxeivnv mpocdacbat Sia 70
Tovs avdpas amroPaveiv trrép édevOepias: él Tract &¢ trav Tataséwy 6 dpyov, db. tov adXov x povov ovUTEe oOnpou Ouyeiy ekeotiv 008 érépav écOfra \ aA ? A 4 ral a TwAnv evKnS avaraBely, ToTE yLT@VA PowtKodY
évdedux@s apapevos Te Udpiay dd ToD ypapLparo-duraxiov Evpypns éri rots tddous mpodye da
, a 4 \ 4 J N ww
péons THS TodEws. elta AaBav Bdwp ad Tis Kpnvns avTos aTrodover TE TAS OTHAAS Kal pIpYH xpiet, kal Tov Tavpov eis THY Tupayv opakas Kad xarevédpevos Aut nal ‘Epun yOovie trapararei Tovs ayabovs advdpas tovs vrép tis “EAAASo5 amroBavovras él 76 Setrrvov Kal tiv aipoxoupiay.
éretta Kpathpa Kepacas olvouv Kal yedpevos é7re-Aéyer: “TI porivw tots dvdpdot toils vrép ths érevOepias tev ‘EXAnvwv amobavoict.” Tadta pev ovp ert Kal viv StadvAdtrovew ot TIharaets.
XXII. "Evel & dvaywpyjoavtas eis TO dotu

\ >) , e 9 4 es roy tovs ‘A@nvatovs o Apioretdns éwpa Cnrovyras
A , ’ a \ oo e /
Thy Onpoxpatiay arronaPeiv, dua pev dkvov Hyovpevos ba tHv avdpayabiay éemipercias Tov SHmov, dpa 8 ov« étt paddvov ioyvovta trois Sots Kat
péya ppovotvta tais vinas éxBracOjnva, ypadee
loa Kowny elvat THY TodLTELaY Kal TovS ¥ 9g 9 / / e a apxovras €€ A@nvaiwy mavtwv aipeic bar.
@eusotoxréovs Sé wpos tov Sipov eitrovtos, ws
éxet te Bovrcvpa nal yvounv amoppytov, wdé-Atypov b€ TH TOKE Kal cwTHpLov, éxéNevoaD
"Aptoreionv povov dxovtca. xal cuvdoxipaca..
280

any part of that ministration, because the men thus honoured died for freedom); and following all, the chief magistrate of Plataea, who may not at other times touch iron or put on any other raiment than white, at this time is robed in a purple tunic, carries on high a water-jar from the city’s archive chamber, and

proceeds, sword in hand, through the midst of the city to the graves; there he takes water from the sacred spring, washes off with his own hands the gravestones, and anoints them with myrrh; then he slaughters the bull at the funeral pyre, and, with prayers to Zeus and Hermes Terrestrial, summons the brave men who died for Hellas to come to the banquet and its copious draughts of blood; next he mixes a mixer of wine, drinks, and then pours a libation from it, saying these words: “I drink to the men who died for the freedom of the Hellenes.” These rites, I say, are observed by’ the Plataeans down to this very day.

XXII. After the Athenians had returned to their own city, Aristides saw that they desired to receive the more popular form of government. He thought the people worthy of consideration because of its sturdy valour, and he saw also that it was no longer easy to be forced out of its desires, since it was powerful in arms, and greatly elated by its victories. So he introduced a decree that the administration of the city be the privilege of all classes, and that the archons be chosen from all the Athenians.

Themistocles once declared to the people that he had devised a certain measure ,which could not be revealed to them, though it would be helpful and salutary for the city, and they ordered that Aristides alone should hear what it was and pass judgment on

281

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ppacavtos dé 7@ "Aptotetdn tov Oewotordéovs, Qs Sravociras TOV vavata@pov é ep pho ae TOV ‘ED-ANVvov, oUTa yap ExecOat peyictous Kal Kupious
amdvTay TOUS ’AOnvaious, mrapehOov | et¢ TOD
o7jMov oO "Aptareions epn THs mpakews, 7 hv Oem-TTOKAHS mparrev Svavoeirat, pre AvotTeeo - Tépay addnv pnt daodicwrépav elvat. Tad axovaavtes of “AOnvaiot mwavoacbar Tov emoTOKNEA mpoceratay. obtw per 0 SApwos. Hy prrodixacos, odtw S€ Te Syuw motos oO avinp Kal BéBanos. :
XXIII. Enret dé oTpatnyos éxmreud Gels peta Kipeovos em Tov Toepov éwpa tov te Ilavoaviav Kal TOUS adXous a NovrTas TOV Lraptiat ay emax ets Kal Xarerrous Trois TUMpaXoLS évTas, avTos TE TPAWS wal pravOparas Omecov Kat
TOV Kipwva TAapeXov eUdppootov avTois Kat KOLVOY éy tTais atpartetass érade TOV Aaxedatpovieay ovx SirAoLs ~ovdée vavoly oud) imo, edyvopoa ty dé Kal qodTela THV nryepoviay Ta ehopevos. mpoodtrels yap 6 évtas tous *A@nvatous TOIS "EAAgoe bua. THY ApioretSou Suxato-ovrny cal tHv Kipwvos émeetcecay étt wadrov F TOU javoaviov wreovetia car Baputns mob ewous emote. TOUS TE yap apYovct TOV TUMLAX OV aet per opyhs éveruyxave kal Tpaxéws, Tous TE Tovndous éxorale mryyais : n ocdnpay dyeupav emit Bets nydryxater éotavas Os bANS TAS nuepas.

A sae S ovx ty raBetv ovdé Noprov ovde
Kenn m pooenOeiv b6pevopevor ovdéva Tpo TOV

TWaptiaTav, ANAa pdotuyas Exovtes bmippéTae

it. So Themistocles told Aristides that his purpose was to burn the naval station of the confederate Hellenes, for that in this way the Athenians would be greatest, and lords of all. Then Aristides came before the people and said of the deed which Themistocles purposed to do, that none other could be more advantageous, and none more unjust. On hearing this, the Athenians ordained that Themistocles cease from his purpose.!1 So fond of justice was the people, and so loyal and true to the people was Aristides.

XXIII. When he was sent out as general along with Cimon to prosecute the war,? and saw that Pausanias and the other Spartan commanders were offensive and severe to the allies, he made his own intercourse with them gentle and humane, and induced Cimon to be on easy terms with them and to take an actual part in their campaigns, so that, before the Lacedaemonians were aware, not by means of hoplites or ships or horsemen, but by tact and diplomacy he had stripped them of the leadership. For, well disposed as the Hellenes were toward the Athenians on account of the justice of Aristides and the reasonableness of Cimon, they were made to long for their supremacy still more by the rapacity of Pausanias and _ his severity. The commanders of the allies ever met with angry harshness at the hands of Pausanias, and the common men he punished with stripes, or by compelling them to stand all day long with an iron anchor on their shoulders. No one could get bedding or fodder or go down to a spring for water before the Spartans, nay, their servants

1 Of. Themistocles, xx. 1-2. 2 478 B.C.
283
6

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

TovS WpoolovTas amTndauvov. vrép wv TOD
'"Aptatetdouv moté BovrnOévros éyxaréoat xal
S:8aFat,) cvvayayov To mpdcwov o Tlavaavias ovK pn cyordley ovd' HKoucer.
"Ex tovTouv MpoctovTes of vavapxot Kal oTpa-tnyo. Tov 'EXAnvov, udrdtora 6€ Xioe cat Ydpeor kal AéoB.ot, tov "Apioteidny éreiPov avadé—a-cBat tHv Hyepoviay Kal wpocayayécOat Tovs
cuppayous mdrar Seopévovs atradrXaynvat tov Lwraptiatav cal petard—acOa mpos tovs "AOnvaious. atroxpwapévov 8 éxeivou Tois pév Noyots
a) J A " N \ 4 :
avTow TO TE avayKatoy évopav Kal Td diKxaLov, Epyou bé SeicOas THy miativ, 5 mpaxOév ovK édoes madd petaBarécOat Tovs roAXOUs, ovTwS of wept Tov Laptov OvrAddnv cal tov Xiov Avrayopay auvopoodpevot wept Bufdvtiov éuBar-Novow els THY TpLnpN Tod Ilavaaviou, mpoexTréovoav év pécw AaBovtes. ws bé caTidmv éxeivos
éEavéotn Kal pet' opyhs nretAnoey ody ypove Tous avodpas eémdeiEew ovK eis THY avrTod vadv éuSeBrnKoTas, Grr eis tas idlas sarTpidas, éxéXevoy avTov amiévar Kal ayaray thy cvvayo-vioapéevny tuyny év TIhataais: éxetyny yap ére Tous "EAAnvas aioxyuvopévovs pn apBavew
akiav Sdixny map avtov: tédos 8 amroctavtes @xovto mpos Tous "AOnvaious.
"EvOa 59 kal ro ppovnua ths Ladptns Suehavy

1 wore... SiSdgac Hercher and Blass with F488; wor' éyxa-Adoat nal BiBd=ar BovrAopuévov.
284

333

ARISTIDES

armed with - goads would drive away such as approached. On these grounds Aristides once had it in mind to chide and admonish him, but Pausanias scowled, said he was busy, and would not listen.

Subsequently the captains and generals of the Hellenes, and especially the Chians, Samians, and Lesbians, came to Aristides and tried to persuade him to assume the leadership and bring over to his support the allies, who had long wanted to be rid of the Spartans and to range themselves anew on the side of the Athenians. He replied that he saw the urgency and the justice of what they proposed, but that to establish Athenian confidence in them some overt act was needed, the doing of which would make it impossible for the multitude to change their allegiance back again. So Uliades the Samian and Antagoras the Chian conspired together, and ran down the trireme of Pausanias off Byzantium, closing in on both sides of it as it was putting out before the line. When Pausanias saw what they had done, he sprang up and wrathfully threatened to show the world in a little while that these men had run down not so much his ship as their own native cities ; but they bade him be gone, and be grateful to that fortune which fought in his favour at Plataea ; it was because the Hellenes still stood in awe of this, they said, that they did not punish him as he deserved. And finally they went off and joined the Athenians. .

Then indeed was the lofty wisdom of the Pavpacrov. as yap noOovro TO _heyeber THIS éEoucias dtapBerpopevous avTav TOUS apxovras, adphav Exovoiws THY nyewoviay Kai TE MTFOVTES emt TOV ToNEMOV eTAaVTAVTO oTpaTnyous, parXov aipovpevor cwppovodvras éxeuv Kal Tots edeow éppévovtas Tous ToAiTas H THs "EXAddos ape anTaons.

XXIV. Oi & "EdAnves éréXouv pév Tuva Kal Aaxedatpoviav Hryoupévov anopopav eis TOV

mohepuon, Tax Ohya 6é Bovdopevor Kata WoAw
éxda Tous TO per ptov HTHCaVTO Tapa TOV "AOnvatov “Aptoreidny, Kal mpooérafay auT@ x@pay Te Kal mpoaabous emia keyydpevov Opicat TO Kat’ akiav éxdoT@ Kal Suva. 6 be THALKAUTNS
efouaias KUpLOS _Yevopevos Kal TpoTrov TWa THs “EAAdSos5 én avT@ povm TA TpdypaTa mayta
Pepérns, mévns pev &&7n Ger, erraviOe 5é srevé-OTEPOS, Ov povov kabapas Kal Sixaiws, aAAd Kal
Mporpras Tact Kab dppodics THY emeypapny
TOV Xpnparov TOLNG GWEVvos, as yap ot Tadaot
Tov él Kpovou Biov, oUTwS ob TULpAX OL TOY
“A Onvatoy Tov ém “Apuareibou Popov evTroTpiay
TWa THS ‘EdAd805 ovopdtovres duvovy, Kat paNOTA PET OV TOY YpoVvoY durhactaa Gévros, elt’ aves TpiTAactad Gevtos. dy pev yap "Aptareldns érafen, HV eis (einxovta Kat TeTpaxoo tov Taddvrwv Royov' TOUT de Tlepuxdijs pev érré-Onnev OAiryou Sey To TpiTov pépos: éEaxoowa ya TaXavTa Oovevdisns pnoly dpxopevou Tov ene pou mpootevar tots ‘A@nvaiows amo TOV cup-paxov Ilepucréous 8 arrofavovtos émutetvovtes 286

ARISTIDES

Spartans made manifest in a wonderful way. When they saw that their commanders were corrupted by the great powers entrusted to them, they voluntarily abandoned the leadership and ceased sending out generals for the war, choosing rather ‘to have their citizens discreet and true to their ancestral customs than to have the sway over all Hellas.
XXIV. The Hellenes used to pay a sort of contribution for the war even while the Lacedaemonians had the leadership, but now they wished to be assessed equably city by city. So they asked the Athenians for Aristides, and commissioned him to inspect their several territories and revenues,!
and then to fix the assessments according to each member's worth and ability to pay. And yet, though he became master of such power, and though after a fashion Hellas put all her property in his sole hands, poor as he was when he went.
forth on this mission, he came back from it poorer still, and he made his assessments of money not only with purity and justice, but also to the grateful satisfaction and convenience of all concerned.

Indeed, as men of old hymned the praises of the age of Cronus—the golden age, so did the allies of the Athenians praise the tariff of. Aristides, calling it a kind of blessed happening for Hellas,
especially as, after a short time, it was doubled and then again trebled. For the tax which Aristides laid amounted to four hundred and sixty talents only; but Pericles must have added almost a third to this, since Thucydides? says that when the war began the Athenians had a revenue of six hundred talents from their allies. And after 1 478-477 B.c. 2 ii, 13.

ot Snuaywyol Kata puxpoy eis yYiAiwy Kal Tpta-Koolwy TaddvTwv Kepdrutov avynyayov, OVX ovTw Tov Totéu“ou dia pijKxos Kal Tvxyas Satravnpov yevouevou Kal ToduTEXOUS, @s TOY Sjpov ets bavouas Kal Oewpixd xa natacKevas ayadpatov Kal lepa@v Tpoayayovtes.
Méya 8 ovv dvopa tov Apiotetdou cal Bavpactov éyovtos éml rH SuatdEes THY popwv o QcuiorokAhs Aéyetat KaTayerav, ws ovK avdpos évTa Tov éraivov, adda OvAdKoV ypvcopvAaKos' dvopoiws apuvopevos THY Apioteioou rrappyna lay' exelv yap! eimovtos mote Tov BepioTondéous apeTnv yyetcOar peyiotny oTpatnyov TO ywWo-axew Kal mpoatcOdverOar ta Bovrevpata Tov
' moneutov, " Toto pév," eitrety, " dvayxaiov éotw, ® OewioroxrAes, carov b€ kat orparnytKoyv aXn-Aas 1) wept Tas Yelpas éyxpaTea."
XXV.'O & 'Apioreiins apxice pev rovs
EAAnvas Kal @pooev Urrép tav 'AOnvaiwr, pv-Spous éuBarwv ém) tais dpais ets tTHv Oadratrap, baotepov Sé TOY TMpayyaTwv apyew éyKxpare-otepov, ws Eoixev, exBiafopévwv exédeve TovS
"AOnvatous thy émiopkiay tpévravtas els éavroy?
4h ouppépes yphoOar tois mpdyyact. Kal' Srou
5 o Mcodpactés dnot tov avdpa Tovtov Tepi Ta oikela Kal Tovs mroditas axpas dvta Sixacoy év 1 éxelvp yao Hercher and Blass with F*S: éweivos ydp. 2 éavrdy Hercher and Blass with F8S: abrdv.

the death of Pericles the demagogues enlarged it little by little, and at last brought the sum total up to thirteen hundred talents, not so much because the war, by reason of its length and vicissitudes, became extravagantly expensive, as because they themselves led the people off into the distribution of public moneys for spectacular entertainments, and for the erection of images and sanctuaries.
So then Aristides had a great and admirable name for his adjustment of the revenues. But Themistocles is said to have ridiculed him, claiming that the praise he got therefor was not fit for a man, but rather for a mere money-wallet. He came off second best, however, in this retort upon the plain speech of Aristides, who had remarked, when Themistocles once declared to him the opinion that the greatest excellence in a general was the anticipation of the plans of his enemies: “That is indeed needful, Themistocles, but the honourable thing, and that which makes the real general, is his mastery over his fingers.”
XXV. Aristides did, indeed, bind the Hellenes by an oath, and took oath himself for the Athenians, solemnly casting iron ingots from the very altars into the sea; but afterwards, when circumstances, forsooth, compelled a more strenuous sway, he bade the Athenians lay the perjury to his own’ charge, and turn events to their own advantage. And in general, as Theophrastus tells us, while the man was strictly just in his private relations to his fellow-citizens, in public matters he often

Tois Kowois ToAXd mpaEar mpos THY vToecw
Ths Tatpisos, as cuxvas Kal adixias Seopévnv.' Kai yap Ta Xpnpata pnow éx Andou Bovrevopée-vov "AOnvate xopicat twapa tas ouvOyjKas, Kat?
Lapiov eionyoupévwv, eimety éxeivov, @F Ov
3 Sixatov pév, avpdépov && todr’ éoti. Kat TédOS eis TO apyew avOpaTwy Toco’TwY KaTacTHAAS

THY TOMW avTos évéyetve TH Tevia Kal THY ard Tov mévns elvar do-av ovdév Artov ayarTav Tis amo TOV TpoTraiwy SterérXeve. SHrov 8 éxeiOev.
Karras 0 Sadodyos Hv adT@ yéver TpoonKwr
tovtov of éyOpol Gavdtov sSu@xovtes, émel rept @v éypawavtTo petpiws Katnyopnoay, citrov Tia Aoyov eéEwOev TovodTov mpos Tous StxacTds:
4 “"Apioteidny,” épnoav, “tore tov Avoipayou Gavpalomevov év tois“EAAnot Tovt@ Tas oleaOe
Ta Kat olxov éyew opavres avTov év TpiBove
TOLOUT@ TpoEpYopEvoy eis TO SnuooLoy; ap ovK
ELKOS EoTL TOV puyobvTa havepas Kal Treway oixoL Kal Tov aAdAXAwY émiTndelwy otraviterv; TovTOP pévtoe KadAlas, avewrioyv bvta, mAOvoLwTAaTOS OV “AOnvaiwv mepropa peta téxvov Kal yuvaikds évdeopevov, Todd Keypnuévos TH avdpl Kat ToNraKs avTOD THS Tap viv Suvdpews arrore-
5 AauKes.” 0 6€ KadAlas copay éml route pddora
1 nal Gdiclas deouerny Blass, favoured by F*S: dd:clas Seouévns. 2 «al bracketed by Sintenis?®.
290
ARISTIDES

acted in accordance with the policy which his ~ country had adopted, feeling that this required much actual injustice. For instance, he says that when the question of removing the moneys of the confederacy from Delos to Athens,’ contrary to the compacts, was being debated, and even the Samians proposed it, Aristides declared that it was unjust, but advantageous. And yet, although he at last established his city in its sway over so many men, he himself abode by his poverty, and continued to be no less content with the reputation he got from being a poor man, than with that based on his trophies of victory. This is clear from the following story.
Callias the Torch-bearer was a kinsman of his.
This man was prosecuted by his enemies on a capital charge, and after they had brought only moderate accusations against him within the scope of their indictment, they went outside of it and appealed to the judges as follows: “You know Aristides the son of Lysimachus,” they said, “how he is admired in Hellas; what do you suppose his domestic circumstances are when you see him entering the public assembly in such a_ scanty cloak as that? Is it not likely that a man who shivers in public goes hungry at home, and _ is straitened for the other necessaries of life? Callias, however, who is the richest man of Athens (and his cousin at that), allows him to suffer want with his wife and children, though he has often had service of the man, and many times reaped advantage from his influence with you." But Callias, seeing 1 454 BO.

291
u 2

{

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

BopuBobvras tovs Sixacras nai yaderdds mpds avroy éyovtas éxdder tov "Aptoreldny, akiav peaptupjoa. mpos Tovs Sucaotds, OTL ToANAaKLS
avtov TroAAd cal Seddvtos Kal Seopévov AaPety ovx nOéAncEV aTroKpLvopEvos, @S PAaAAOY av'T@ dia treviay peya > poveiv i) Kadrig 51a. Avro
m poorer: wor pep yap éott mroddous idety ev Te Kal KaKas Xpwpévous, meviay 88 dépovrs yevvators ov padzsov évtuxeiv' aicxwverbat 5é meviay TOUS dxovotas TTEVO[LEVOUG. Taba dé Too
"Aptareisov TS Kaddia TPO papTUPHTaYTOS Ov-dels Hv TOY dxovévrev, Os ouK arg. TEVNS paddov QS "Apiareiéns elvat Bovropevos * i) TAov-rely ws KadAlas. taita pev ov! Alaxivys 6 LwKparrKeos avaryéypade. Iara dé Trav peya: Awv SoxovyTwY Kal dvopacray "AOnunat povoy aEvov Aoryou ToUTOY anopaives TOV dv8pa- @epeoroKhEea pev yap kat Kipwva xat Tlepuxcréa TTOOV Kal Xpnwarov Kar prvapias TOANAS ép-TAO a THY qodu, Apiatetonv 5é trodurevoac bas pos apeTny.
Meydda 3 avTod Kal Ta qWpos Gewrroxrhéa
THS emueucetas, onpeia. Xpno dpevos yap avT@ mapa Tacav opod THY mohitelay Ex9P@ wal oe éxetvov éLoatpaxia Beis, émel THY aUTnY AaBny mapéaxev o avnp év aitia yevopavos T pos THY

TONAL, OUK euvnoicaxnoer, GAN' "AAKpatwvos Kat
Kipewyvos ral TOA ay adov éAauvovTey Kat KaTIyOpoUvT@Y povos 'Aptaretdys ovr' Srpakev
ovr el7é te hadrov, ovd amédavoev ey Opod
1 yey ody Hercher and Blass with FS : pe».

that his judges .were very turbulent at this charge,
and bitterly disposed toward him, summoned Aristides and demanded his testimony before the judges that though often proffered aid from him and importuned to accept it, he had refused it, with the answer that it more became him to be proud of his poverty than Callias of his wealth; for many were to be seen who use wealth well or ill, but it was not easy to find a man who endured poverty with a noble spirit; and those only should be ashamed of poverty who could not be otherwise than poor. When Aristides had borne this witness for Callias, there was no one of his hearers who did not go home preferring to be poor with Aristides rather than to be rich with Callias. This, at any rate, is the story told by Aeschines the Socratic.
And Plato! maintains that of all those who had great names and reputations at Athens, this man alone was worthy of regard. Themistocles, he says, and Cimon, and Pericles, filled the city with porches and moneys and no end of nonsense; but Aristides squared his politics with virtue.
There are also strong proofs of his reasonableness to be seen in his treatment of Themistocles. This man he had found to be his foe during almost all his public service, and it was through this man that he was ostracized; but when Themisto¢cles was in the same plight, and was under accusation before the city, Aristides remembered no evil; nay, though Alemeon and Cimon and many others denounced and persecuted the man, Aristides alone did and said no meanness, nor did he take any advantage of 1 Gorgias, pp. 518 f., 526.

Svatrvxobvtos, daoep ovd evnpepodvrs mpoTepov épOovnce.
XXXVI. Tereutfcas dé "Aptoretdnv ot péev ev

Ilovr@m daciv éxtretcavta mpdfewr Evera Snpno-aiwv, ot 8 AOnvyce yypa, tiwwpevov cai Oavpatopevov U1ro TOV ToALT@Y. Kpatepos 8 0 Maxedov ToLaUTa TiWa TrEpl THs TEAEUTHS TOD aVvdpos ElpNKe.
peTa yap THY Beptoroxréovs guynv dynow worep éEvBpicavra Tov Siuov dvadhtdaat mAROos cuKohavT@ay, of Tovs apiatovs Kal duvatwrdtous avipas Ss@xovtes b1réBadrov TO HOdva TAY TOA-AOY erratpopéver Ur' evtvXias Kal Suvdpews. ey tovTots xal Aptotetonv adda@vat Swpodoxias, Acogavrov Tov 'Apditpownbev KATNYOPOUYTOS, WS, Ste Tovs Popous ératte, Tapa tov Lavery ypn-pata NaBovros: éxticas & ov« Exovta Thy KaTa-Sieny revtnkovta pvav ovoay éxtrrACdoas Kal Tept THY "Imviay amofaveiy. tovtwv Se ovddy éy-ypaghov o Kpatepos texpnpiov wapéoynnev, ode dixny ovte Whdiopa, Kaitep eiwOas érrierKas ypadew ta TovavTa xal TapatibecOat Tovs ioropoovtas. |
Oi & adAXoe awdvtes, os Eros eEltrety, Soo. TA TAnpperAnOévta te SHww Tept Tos atpaTHyouUs
dteEiacl, THv yey Beptoroxréovs duynv Kal Ta Martiddou Serpe nal tiv Ilepixréous Enpiav nat
Tov Iaynros év tO Sixactnpiom Oavatov, aveXov-Tos autov él tov Bnyaros @s nNioKeTo, Kal ToAAa ToLavTA suVayouvct Kai OpvAovaw, 'Apt-oteidov dé tov pev éEootpaxiapov traparifevtac, catradixns 5€ TrosavTns obapod povnpovevouat, 294

335

ARISTIDES _

his enemy's misfortune, just as formerly he did not dge him his prosperity.
XXVI. As touching the death of Aristides, some say he died in Pontus, on an expedition in the public service ; others at Athens, of old age, honoured and admired by his countrymen. But Craterus the Macedonian tells something like this about the death of the man. After the exile of Themistocles, he says, the people waxed wanton, as it were, and produced a great crop of sycophants, who hounded down the noblest and most influential men, and subjected them to the malice of the multitude, now exalted with its prosperity and power. Among these he says that Aristides also was convicted of bribery, on prosecution of Diophantus of the deme Amphitropé, for having taken money from the Jonians when he was regulating the tributes; and, further, that being unable to pay the judgment, which was fifty minas, he sailed away and died somewhere in Ionia. But Craterus furnishes no documentary proof of this,—no judgment of the court, no degree of indictment,—although he is wont to record such things with all due fulness, and to adduce his authorities. =

All the rest, as I may venture to say,—all who rehearse the shortcomings of the people in dealing with their leaders,—compile and descant upon the exile of Themistocles, the imprisonment of Miltiades, the fine of Pericles, the death of Paches in the court room,—he slew himself on the rostrum when he saw that he was convicted,—and many such a case, and they put into the list the ostracism of Aristides, but of such a condemnation as this for bribery they make no mention whatsoever.
295

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXVII. Kal pévrot Kal tapos early avrou Parnpot Serxvdpevos, 6 dy dace KaTacKevac at THY TOMY AUTE pnd évrdgua KaTahimovte. kal Tas pev Ouyarépas ioropovow éx Tov mpuTavetov Tous vuplors exdoO vas Snpocia, THS WoNews TOV ydpov éyyvoons xal mpotka TpLoyirtas Spaxpas éxaTépa pnpioaperns, Avowpaxe | 6é TO vid pvas pev éExatov apyupiou Kal yijs Tocabra TO pa. Tre-gutevpwévns eoxev) Ofuos, GArras &é Spaxpmas Téogapas els mpepav EXAOTHV aneratev, "AX«t-Biddov TO Whdic pa yparyravtos. ére Oe Avot-pedyou Ouyatépa Todvxpirny dTroNTOvTos, QS Kadrsodévns pot, Kal Tavry oiTgoy bonv Kai Tots ‘Orupriovixass o 0 Simos eyndgicaro. Anpy-TpLos 5’ o Dadnpevs cal ‘Tepavupos 6 ‘Pddios Kal "Apia rogevos o pouowKes, Kat "Apia roréhans (eb 57 To ye? Ilept evryevelas BiBrLov év Tots ryunatous ‘Aptotoreéhous Geréov) loTopotat Mupr@ Ouya-

TpLoqy "Apioreisou Lwxparer TP TOPO Tuvarehoat, yuvaira pev érépay & EXOvTL, TAUTHY 3 avaraBovre Xmpevovoar bia meviav Kat TOV avayKaiwy évdeo-bevy. Tpos ev ovy ToUTOUS ixavds o Tlavaitvos év Tots qepl Lwxpdrovs avreipnxen' o be Darnpevds
éy T@ Lwxparer pnat pynpoveve 'A ptotetbov Ouyarpisoiy | ev para mevyyT a. Avoipaxor, os éauTov pev? éx mrivaxiou TLvds dvepox ptt Lod mapa
TO larxetov Aeyomevov Kcabelopevos EBooKxe. TH
6¢ pntpl Kal TH TAUTNS abenpi; tome ypdrpas érreroe TOV Sijpov Tpopny ovat Tpr@Bodov
éxdotns nuépas. avtos pévtos dyoty o Anprrptos
1 +é ye Hercher and Blass with FS : 72.
2 éayrdv new Hercher and Blass with FaS: éavrdv.
296

ARISTIDES

XXVII. Moreover, his tomb is pointed out at Phalerum, and they say the city constructed it for. him, since he did not leave even enough to pay for his funeral. And they tell how his daughters were married from the prytaneium at the public cost, the city bestowing the dowry for the marriage and voting outright three thousand drachmas to each daughter, while to Lysimachus his son, the people gave one hundred minas in silver, as many acres of vineyard land, and besides this a pension of four drachmas per diem,—all in a bill which was brought in by Alcibiades. And further, Lysimachus left a daughter, Polycrité, according to Callisthenes, and the people voted for her a public maintenance, in the‘style of their Olympic victors. Again, Demetrius the Phalerean, Hieronymus the Rhodian, Aristoxenus the Musician, and Aristotle (provided the book "On Nobility of Birth' is to be ranked among the genuine works of Aristotle) relate that Myrto, the granddaughter of Aristides, lived in wedlock with Socrates the Sage. He had another woman to wife, but took this one up because her poverty kept her a widow, and she lacked the necessaries of life. To these, however, Panaetius, in his work on Socrates, has made sufficient reply.

And the Phalerean says, in his "Socrates," that he remembers a grandson of Aristides, Lysimachus, a very poor man, who made his own living by means of a sort of dream-interpreting tablet, his seat being near the so-called Iaccheium. To this man's mother and to her sister, Demetrius persuaded the people to give, by formal decree, a pension of three obols per

297

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

vopober dav avril tpiwBorov Spaxpuny éxatépa Tafa TOV ryuvaiedy,
Kai ovdév éore Oavpacrov obtw dpovticat Tav év dotes tov Shpov, Sov Ovyarpidnv "Apictoyeitovos éy Anuvm mruOopevoe Tatrewa mpaTrew

’ \. 9 a \ , l ’ n
avépos amopovcay bia Treviay Kathyayov AOnvate, Kal ouvotxicavtes avdpt tav ev yeyovoTwy TO Ilotapot ywpiov ets hepyny érédwxav. Hs hidav-Opwrias Kal xpnototntos étt moAAa Kal Ka”
€ A ¢€ / > / , 4
nas 1 Todts éxpépovoea deiypata Oavydlerar xa &nrovra Stxatas.
298

ARISTIDES

diem; though afterwards, in his capacity of sole legislator, he himself, as he says, assigned a drachma instead of three obols to each of the women.

It is not to be wondered at that the people took such thought for families in the city, since on learning that the granddaughter of Aristogeiton was living humbly in Lemnos, unmarried because of her poverty, they brought her back to Athens, consorted her with a well-born man, and gave her the estate in Potamus for her dowry. For such humanity and benevolence, of which the city still gives illustrious examples even in my own day, she is justly admired and lauded.

299

MARCUS CATO

MAPKO> KATON

\
I. Mdpr@ &¢ Kdtwvi dacw aro Tovoxrdou To 4 bd i 5 } / ¥ \ A 336
yévos elvat, diartay 5é nal Biov Eye mpo Trav
a) “ 4
oTpaTel@v Kal Tijs TroALTELAS Ev YwpLoLs TAT pPwots
mwept YaBivovs. tTav dé mpoyovwy TraytTdTracw ayvootwv yeyovévat Soxovvtwmy avros 0 Kdtov \ UA 4 e 9 ” }
kal tov tarépa Mdpxov ws dyabdv avdpa xa oTpatiwtixoy étraivet, kal Kadrwva tov mporar-Tov apiaTeiwy TorAdKLS TUXEly hnot Kal qévTE
TodewiaTas tmmous év udyais atoBadovra Ti
\ ’ a 2 a / > >
Tiny atrovaBeiy éx tod Snpooiov & avop-
2 ayabiav. eiwOotwv 8¢ Ttav “Pwpaiwyv tovs ao

4 > > f A
yévous pev Sdkav ovn eyovtas, apyopévous bé yuwpilesOat 8° aitav Katvovs mpocaryopever avOpwrovs, aotep cal tov Kdtewva mpoon-
, > \ \ ed \ bd) \ yopevoy, autos EdXeye Kalvos eElvat Tpos apynV
wal do€av, Epyors S& tmpoyovwv Kal dperais
4 > a A , A >
Tapmanalos. exareito 5é TH TPIT@ TOV GvOpedtwv mpotepov ov Kdtawrv, adrga Ilpicxos, dotepoy 5é tov Kdtwva tis Suvdpews era@vupov
éxye ‘Pwyaior yap tov euretpov Kdtov dvopa- | Sovow.
9 \
3 “Hy 8 76 pev eidos baomuppos Kal yNavuKos,

I. Tue family of Marcus Cato, it is said, was of Tuseulan origin, though he lived, previous to his career as soldier and statesman, on an _ inherited estate in the country of the Sabines. His ancestors commonly passed for men of no note whatever, but Cato himself extols his father, Marcus, as a brave man and good soldier. He also says that his grand- father, Cato, often won prizes for soldierly valour, and received from the state treasury, because of his bravery, the price of five horses which had been killed under him in battle. The Romans used to call men who had no family distinction, but were coming into public notice through their own achieve- - ments, “new men,’ and such they called Cato. But he himself used to say that as far as office and distinction went, he was indeed new, but having regard to ancestral deeds of valour, he was oldest of the old. His third name was not Cato at first, but Priscus. Afterwards he got the surname of Cato for his great abilities. The Romans call a man who is wise and prudent, catus.

As for his outward appearance, he had reddish hair, and keen grey eyes, as the author of the well-

@> 0 Tolnoas TO émrvypappatioy ovK evpeVvas Tapeppaiver:
IIuppov, mravdaxérnyv, yNavKoppatov, ovdé Aavovra
Tlopxcov eis aidnv Pepoepovn Séxerat.

Thy € Tob cwpatos &€w avtoupyia cal Suairy awppou xal otpateiaus am apyns cuvtpodou yeyovotos mwdavu ypnotixny elye, Kal mpos layer Kal Tpos Uyiecay oparas auveotacav. Tov be

AOyor, Wamep SevTepovy Taya Kal TaVY Kardon, ov povoy Tay avayxaiwy! dpyavov avdpl pn
taTrewas Buwcopévp pnd ampaxtas, é&nprveto Kal twaperxevatey év Tais Teptotkion K@mats Kal
Tots Todtxvios éxdortoTe cuvdtx@y Tois Seomévoss Kal Tp@Toy pev aywvicTys elvat Soxav wpodupos, elra xal pytwp ixavos. éx &€ trovTov padXov Tois Xpwpévors Katedhaivero Bdpos te Kal dpoynua rept avtov nous mpayyaTwov peyadov xal qoteias Sedpevoy ryepovixns. ov yap ovo,
ws €oixe, picOapvias KaBapov éavtov émi tas Sixas nal tovs ayavas tapeiyev, adr ovde THY Sofav ws péyiotov ayatrav épaiveto THY aro TOV
TOLOUTWY ay@vev, TOAY Se wadXov ev Tais payats
Tais pos Tovs oAEuious Kal Tails oTpaTetass
Bovdopevos evdoxipety Ere petpdxiov Ov Tpavya-TWY TO CGpa perro évavtiov elye. hnol yap avTos émtaxaideca yeyovmas ern THY TpwTnY
otpatevoacba. otpateiav rept bv *AvviBas Xpovoy evtuyay erépreye THY Itadiapv.
1 trav dvayxalwy Hercher and Blass, with Bekker: dvay-KaLOY.

304

MARCUS CATO

known epigram ill-naturedly gives us to understand :-—
Red-haired, snapper and biter, his grey eyes
flashing defiance, Porcius, come to the shades, back will be thrust by their Queen.
His bodily habit, since he was addicted from the very first to labour with his own hands, a temperate mode of life, and military duties, was very serviceable, and disposed alike to vigour and health. His discourse,—a second body, as it were, and, for the use of a man who would live neither obscurely nor idly, an instrument with which to perform not only necessary, but also high and noble services,—this he developed and perfected in the villages and towns about Rome, where he served as advocate for all who needed him, and got the reputation of being, first a zealous pleader, and then a capable orator. Thenceforth the weight and dignity of his character revealed themselves more and more to those who had dealings with him; they saw that he was bound to be a man of great affairs, and have a leading place in the state. For he not only gave his services in leyal contests without fee of any sort, as it would seem, but did not appear to cherish even the repute won in such contests as his chief ambition. - Nay, he was far more desirous of high repute in battles and campaigns against the enemy, and while he was yet a mere stripling, had his breast covered with honourable wounds. He says himself that he made his first campaign when he was seventeen years old, at the time when Hannibal was consuming Italy with the flames of his successes.!

1 217 B.c.
| 395
VOL. II. x
|

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tapeiye & avroy év tais paxars TH pe Xeupe
TANKT NY, TO O€ Tool povepov Kal BéBavor, yadpov 5é TO Tpocwne doyou 6° arreuhf Kar TpaxuTnTe povis mpos TOUS TOAELLOUS expiiro, opFas Kat Siavooupevos kat dwddoxwv, 6Tt ToANAKIS Ta ToLavTa TOU Eidous badhov KATATAHTTETAL TOUS
évaytious. év 5€ tais wopeiats avros éBabibe Speed Ta érrAa, Kal Oepamrev els eltrero Ta Tpds
iatrav avuT@ Kopivov, & réyerat pndérrore Suoxohavat pdt péprpacBas mapabévre apuorov
i ©Selmvor, GAG Kal cuhdap Saver AUTOS Ta WreloTa Kal oupmapadKxevatery amo TOV oTpa-TLOTUROY ryevopevos epyor. vdwp & emiwev émt
oTpareas, may el rote dupjoas mepiprAeyas 6€os aitnaesev® H THY taxvos evdidovens émtNa Boe piKpov otvapLov.
II. "Hv dé mAnaiov adrod TOY aypav 7% yéevo-pevn Maviov Koupiou TOU Tpis OprapPevoavros érrauXs. emt TAUTHY TUVEXaS Babifav Kal Jewpevos ToD TE xwptov THY puxpoTnTa Kal Ths oixncEws TO MeTov, évvotay ehdpBave Tob avdpos, bre 'Popatov peyiaros evopevos Kal Ta pax ped-

Tara Tov éOvev Draryaryopevos Kal Tluppov eehdoas THS ‘Iradias TOUTO TO xepidiov autos
éxxamre Kal TavTHY THY émaudtv ret peTa Tpets OprapBovs. évTavba T pos éoxapg _ kan wevov aurov porta yoyyuridas ebpovtes of Lavver ay mpéa Bews édidocav TOAD Xpuatov- o 8 aren - pato pnoas ouder Xpuatou Sciy @ detrrvov apKet Tovolrov, auT@ HEVTOL Tov Ypuciov exeuy KaAMOV elvat TO viKdy Tovs Exovtas. tav™’ o Kdrwv
1 airhoeey Blass, with Bekker: #rnoev.

306

MARCUS CATO

In battle, he showed himself effective of hand, sure and steadfast of foot, and of a fierce counten- ance. With threatening speech and harsh cries he wauld advance upon the foe, for he rightly thought, and tried to show others, that often-times such action terrifies the enemy more than the sword. On the march, he carried his own armour on foot, while a single attendant followed in charge of his camp utensils. With this man, it is said, he was never wroth, and never scolded him when he served up a meal, nay, he actually took hold himself and assisted in most of such preparations, provided he was free from his military duties. Water was what he drank on his campaigns, except that once in a while, in a raging thirst, he would call for vinegar, or, when his strength was.failing, would add a little wine.

II. Near his fields was the cottage which had once belonged to Manius Curius, a hero of three triumphs. To this he would often go, and the sight of the small farm and the mean dwelling led him to think of their former owner, who, though he had become the greatest of the Romans, had subdued the most warlike nations, and driven Pyrrhus out of Italy, nevertheless tilled this little patch of ground with his own hands and occupied this cottage, after three triumphs. Here it was that the ambassadors of the Samnites once found him seated at his hearth cooking turnips, and offered him much gold; but he dismissed them, saying that a man whom such a meal satisfied had no need of gold, and for his part he thought that a more honourable thing than the possession of gold was the conquest of its possessors. Cato would go away with his mind full of these

397
x 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

évO upovpevos amnet, ral TOY avTov ma day olKov
épopav Kal Xepta Kai Geparovras Kal Siarray
éréTetve THY aUTOUpyiay Kal ‘TrepléxoTTEe TV TOAUTENELAD.
Pafiov bé Mafiyou THY Tapaytivey mbduy
EXovTos éTuye pev 0 Kdrop OT PATEVOMEVOS oT
AUT@ Koptdyn pLetpaxcov av, Neapyw o€ Tit Tov

Tlvdaryopuccy Eévo Xpnodpevos é€omrovoace TOY
doyov petaraBeiv. dxovaas dé TavTa Siadeyopévou Tov avdpos, ols KEXPNTAL Kal TAdrov, THY peep nOovny amoxahay béyia Tov KaKod déXea ouppopay dé TH ux TO cOpa TPOTHy, AVOUW as ral cabappov ols bddorta x igen Kal adiornaty aur ny TOV mept TO o Gp es par ov Aoyts pois, ért “adXXov nyannoe TO ALTOV Kal THY éyKpareay.
GArws 6é ma. delas ‘EAAnuueiis dptpabys yever Oat AeyeT as, Kal Toppe TavraTacw nruxias ednhaxas?
‘EAAnuina BuBria AaBow els Xetpas Bpayéa bev amo Ooveviisou, Tretova © are Anpoaévous els TO pyTopicoy apenOfvat. Ta pevTOL cuyypaypara Kal ddypacw ‘EXAnuKois Kal iotopiats ETLELKOS StarrerroiKehrae Kar peOnppnvevpéva
' ToNNa KATA éEw € év Tots amropOéypyact Kal tais yrwporoyiats TETARTAL,
III. "Hv 6é res avnp ebmarpidns peév ev Tois parLota ‘Pwpaiwv xal Suvatos, d aperny dé propeny pev alcOdverOar Seuvos, evpevns Sé Kal Operas Kat mpoaryaryety els Sofav, Ovarnréptos PrAdKKos.
ovTos elyev opopodvra xepta Tois Kdrwvos, mudopevos 6é THY avtoupylav kat diattay avTod
Tapa Tov oiKeTav Kal Oavpdoas éEnyoupévar, Ort
1 HAuas €AnAaxws Hercher and Blass with S: HAcelas.

things, and on viewing again his own house and lands and:servants and mode of life, would increase the labours of his hands and lop off his extrava-gancies.

When Fabius Maximus took the city of Tarentum,! it chanced that Cato, who was then a mere stripling, served under him, and being lodged with a certain Nearchus, of the sect of the Pythagoreans, he was eager to know of his doctrines. When he heard this man holding forth as follows, in language which Plato also uses, condemning pleasure as “ the greatest incentive to evil,” and the body as “the chief detriment to the soul, from which she can release and purify herself only by such reasonings as most do wean and divorce her from bodily sensations,’ he fell still more in love with simplicity and restraint. Further than this, it is said, he did not learn Greek till late in life, and was quite well on in years when he took to reading Greek books; then he profited in oratory somewhat from Thucydides, but more from Demosthenes. However, his writings are moderately embellished with Greek sentiments and stories, and many literal translations from the Greek have found — a place among his maxims and proverbs.

III. There was at Rome a certain man of the highest birth and greatest influence, who had the power to discern excellence in the bud, and the grace to cultivate it and bring it into general esteem. This man was Valerius Flaccus. He had a farm next to that of Cato, and learned from Cato's servants of their master's laborious and frugal way of living.

He was amazed to hear them tell how Cato, early in 1 209 B.o. ;
399

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

put perv eis aryopay Badile: ai mapioctatat Tois Seouévois, éravedOdy 8 eis TO xopiov, av pev i xetpeov, Ewplda AaBav, Gépous dé yupuves épyaca-pevos pera Tav olxeT@v éoOies Tov avTOY apToV 600 KaOypevos cat mlver Tov adrov olvov, aNAnv re TOAAWD emietxeray alto Kal peTpLOTHTA Kal Twas Kal Novyous arrodbeypaTixovs 81a pynpovevov-
Tov, exérevoe KANOHVaL pds TO Setrvov. ex Sé ToUTov Ypwpmevos Kal KaTavody fpepov Kai dortelov W005, damep puTov doxnaews Kal Ywpas érupavods Sedpevov, mpoetpéyato Kal cuvérercey GwracOar ris ev "Poun todtelas. KateOov ody evOds Tods péev avTds éxTato Bavuactas xa pirovs Sid Tav ouvyyopidv, moAdny 4é tod Ovarrepiou tinny cal Sivauitvy abt@ mpocriOévros XuALapxtas Ervxe mpGrtov, elra erapievaev. é« Tovrou b& Aapmpos dv 7dn Kal Trepipaynys
aite te Ovadrrepio epi tas peyiotras ouvege-Spapev apyds, Umards Te pet éxelvov Kal TAadW TLUNTNS YEVOMEVOS.
Tap 8 mpecButépwv roriTav Makinw PaBio
T Pog EveLpev éautov, évdoEordt@ pev dvTe Kal peylorny éxovTs Stvayiv, wadAdrov bé Tov TpoTroV avtod xal Tov Biov ws Kcdd\NoTa TapadeiypaTa mpoOenevos. S20 Kal Lenriwve TO peydr, vew 338
'wep évtt TOTE, TpOs 5é THV PaBlov Sdvapwv avratpovtt Kal POovetcOar Soxodvtt, trap' ovdéev érrotn-caro yevécbat Sidpopos, GMAA Kal Tapas avT@
apos Tov ev AtBin modepov cuvextreuPOeis, ws Aad

310

MARCUS CATO

the morning, went on foot to the market-place and pleaded the cases of all who wished his aid; then came back to his farm, where, clad in a working blouse if it was winter, and stripped to the waist if it was summer, he wrought with his servants, then sat down with them to eat of the same bread and drink of the same wine. They told Valerius many other instances of Cato's fairness and moderation, quoting also sundry pithy sayings of his, until at last Valerius gave command that Cato be invited to dine with him. After this, discovering by converse with him that his nature was gentle and polite, and — needed, like a growing tree, only cultivation and room to expand, Valerius urged and at last persuaded him to engage in public life at Rome. Accordingly, taking up his abode in the city, his own efforts as an advocate at once won him admiring friends, and the favour of Valerius brought him great honour and influence, so that he was made military tribune first, and then quaestor. After this, being now launched on an eminent and brilliant career, he shared the highest honours with Valerius, becoming consul with him, and afterwards censor.

Of the elder statesmen, he attached himself most closely to Fabius Maximus, who was of the highest reputation and had the greatest influence, but this was more by way of setting before himself the character and life of the man as the fairest examples he could follow. In the same spirit he did not hesitate to oppose the great Scipio, a youthful rival of Fabius, and thought to be envious of him. When he was sent out with Scipio as quaestor for the war in Africa,! he saw that the man indulged in

1 204 B.c.
311
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

éwpa 7H ouvnOer TroAvTENcia Ypwpevoy Tov avdpa
Kal Kataxopnyobvta Tols oTpaTevpacw aedas TOV XpnuaTwv, érappnotagvero Tpos avToV, Ov TO Ths Satrdavns péytotov elvac dapevos, GAN Ste StadOeiper Thv matpLoy EevTéNELaY TOV OTPATIWTOV
ép' 7dovas Kal Tpudds TH TepiovTe THS ypeias TpeTopevoyv. eimovtTos 5¢ TOU Lanriwvos, ws. ovdév Séovro tapiov Aiav dxpiBovds MrnciatLos él TOV ToNEpov Pepopevos, mpakewv yap, ov XV py pd-TOV, TH TONEL hoyov adel hery, anijrOev 0 Kdrev éx Sumedas, ead PETA TOD PaBiov cataBowy é ev To cuvedpicp pOopav TE XPneareov apvdnrov t vm Tob Lenmiovos Kal StarpiBas avTou perpaxiadess év TaraiaTpars Kat Jedrpots, & @oTEp OV OTPATHYOUD-she SM maynyupivovtos, éFerpyacato Treuponous én avrov a€ovtas eéis 'Popny, pas ake ets at Karnyoptae pavaciy. O pep oby Lenn Lov a TH Tapackevf Tod mWodépov THY vin émiderkdpevos, Kat davels dvs bev ert TXOMIS guveivar pirors, ovdapot dé 7@ dirar-Oparrep Ths Staitns eis Ta oTrovoaia K ae

paOupos, éEérdevcev ert tov Tohewov.
IV. T@ dé Kdrov TONM pev aro Tou AOyou
Svvapis vento, Kal ‘Peopaioy avTov oi ToAAXol Anpoobevny Tpoan'yopevon, o Oe Bios. paddov dvopacros hv avrov Kal mepiBonros. uy pep yap ev TO eye Sewvorns mpovKesto Tols véors aya vio pa Kowvov non cal TEplaTrOvbaTTOP, O o Oé€ THY maT pov avroupyiay Dmropeveov cab Setirvov ahenes kal a apiorov arupov Kal Merny éoOfra Kal Onpo-TiKhY aoTratvouevos oixnow Kal To py SeicOat ToV 312

his wonted extravagance, and lavished money with- out stint upon his soldiery. He therefore made bold to tell him that the matter of expense was not the greatest evil to be complained of, but the fact that he was corrupting the native simplicity of his soldiers, who resorted to wanton pleasures when their pay exceeded their actual needs. Scipio replied that he had no use for a parsimonious quaestor when the winds were bearing him under full sail to the war ; he owed the city an account of his achievements, not of its moneys. Cato therefore left Sicily, and “joined Fabius in denouncing before the Senate Scipio's waste of enormous moneys, and his boyish addiction to palaestras and theatres, as though he were not commander of an army, but master of a festival. As a result of these attacks, tribunes were sent to bring Scipio back to Rome, if the charges against him should turn out to be true. Well then, Scipio convinced the tribunes that victory in war depended on the preparations made for it; showed that he could be agreeable in his intercourse with his friends when he had leisure for it, but was never led by his sociability to neglect matters of large and serious import ; and sailed off for his war in Africa.

IV. The influence which Cato’s oratory won for him waxed great, and men called him a Roman .
Demosthenes; but his manner of life was even more talked about and noised abroad. For his oratorical ability only set before young men a goal which many already were striving eagerly to attain ;
but a man who wrought with his own hands,
as his fathers did, and was contented with a cold breakfast, a frugal dinner, simple .raiment, and a humble dwelling,—one who thought more of not
: 313

TEPLTT@Y paAdNov H TO KEexTHaOar Baupdtov
TTAVLOS HV, dN TOTE THS TroALTELaS TO KABapoV
umd peyéBous od purarrovcns, GAAA TO Kpareiv TpayudTov TOANoY Kal dvOparrev impos mroAN

puryvupevns €0n cal Biwv rapabelypata mravroda-Tov uTrodexopéevns. eixdTas odv avpaloy Tov Kdrwva, tovs ev adXovs bro TOY Trovev Opavo-Hévous Kal paraccopévous bro! trav Adovav opavtes, exetvoy Se bm' audoiy anrrnrov, ov povov ws Ett véos cal PiroTLuOs hv, GAAA Kal yépovTa - Kat trodLov 76n pel" drrateiav cal OpiayBov, darep aOrXnTHhv vixndopor, éyxaptepobvra TH TdEEL THs adoxnoews Kab Sopanrivovra péxype TIS TeNCUT HS.
"Ko Ojra pev yap ovdétroré not hopécat trodv-Tedeotépay éxatov Spaxpar, mueiy 5€ Kal orpa-THYyov Kal UiraTev@v Tov avTov olvoy Tois épyd-tais, dvpov S¢ mapacKxevdlecOar mpos TO Setavov
é& dyopas accapiwy tpidxovta, Kal todto bia THY Tod, STas icYvoL TO Taya Mpos Tas
otpateias. ériBdrnua Sé€ tav troitriov Bafv-Awvioy éx KAnpovoylas KTnodpevos evVOLS arro-S0c0a, tav dé érravrewv avtod pundepiay elva xexoviapevny, ovdéva S@ wetrote mpiacba Sodrov bmép tas xtAlas Spaypas xal mevtaxocias, ws dv ov Tpudepav ovd wpaiwv, adr épyatixav xal oTepe@y, olov immoxouwv xal Bondatov, Se0-pevos' Kal trovrous 5é mwpexBurépous yevouévous @eto dety atrodidoabat cal un Boone axpynatous.
GAws dé pndev edovoy elvar TOY TrEepLTTa@V, ANN'
ov tis ov Settat, Kav dooapiov mimpdoKnrat,
1 5nd Hercher and Blass with 8: xa) drd, 304

wanting the superfluities of life than of possessing them,—such a man was rare. The commonwealth had now grown too large to keep its primitive integrity ; the sway over many realms and peoples had brought a large admixture of customs, and the adoption of examples set in modes of life of every sort. It was natural, therefore, that. men should admire Cato, when they saw that, whereas other men were broken down by toils and enervated by pleasures, he was victor over both, and this too, not only while he was still young and ambitious, but even in his hoary age, after consulship and triumph.
Then, like some victorious athlete, he persisted in the regimen of his training, and kept his mind

unaltered to the last.
He tells us that he never wore clothing worth more than a hundred drachmas; that he drank, even when he was praetor or consul, the same wine as his slaves; that as for fish and meats, he would buy thirty asses' worth! for his dinner from the public stalls, and even this for the city's sake, that he might not live on bread alone, but strengthen his body for military service ; that he once fell heir to an embroidered Babylonian robe, but sold it at once ; that not a single one of his cottages had plastered walls; that he never paid more than fifteen hundred drachmas for a slave, since he did not want them to be delicately beautiful, but sturdy workers, such as grooms and herdsmen, and these he thought it his duty to sell when they got oldish, instead of feeding them when they were useless ; and that in general, he thought nothing cheap that one could do without, but that what one did not need, even if it cost but a

1 The as corresponded nearly to the English penny.

ToAXOD vouibew KTaacOar Se TA oTrELpOpeva Kal VeLopeva LaAXAoV 7H TA patvoueva Kal catpopeva.
V. Taidra & ot pév eis puxporoyiavériPevto Tod avipos, ot & ws émt SsopPwce: cal cwhpovcp@
TaY dAdwy évdoTépw TUaTEANOVTOS EaUTOV aTrE-Séyovto. mA Td TOs oiKérats ws UTrolvyiols adtroxpnodpevoy éml ynpws édavvew Kal wimpa-ake atevods ayav Oous éywye TiOeua, Kat undév avOpwre mpos avO0pwirov olopévov Kowva-ynua THs xXpelas WAéoy UTdpyew. KaiToL THY NpnatroTntTa Ths Sicavoovvns WraTUTEpov Td-Tov opa@pev emiiapBSdvovoay: vom pevy yap kal T@ Sixai@m wpos avOpwrrovs povov ypncOas mepuxapev, mpos evepyecias $é Kal yapitas got OTe Kal péypt TOV aGroyov Loov doTep x TNHYHS WNovotas atroppel THS HywepoTnros. Kal yap inmrwy aeipnxotoy bd ypovov tpodal Kal
KUV@Y ov oKUAaKElaL MOVOY, AAAG Kal ynpoKopiat
TO XPNTTO TpoonKovaty. |
'O 8 trav "AOnvaiov Shwos olxodopav tov
"Exaropmredor, cas KxaTevonaey nurovous panorta Tois Tovous eyKxaptepovaas, amérvoev édevbépas vépecOar nal adérous, dy piay dacl xataBalvovoav ad éavrhs impos Ta Epya tois avdryouct Tas audkas broluyios eis axpoTodw cupTapa-Tpéxew Kal mponyeto0as xabatrep éyxedevopevny cal auveEoppadcav, iv nal tpépecOar Snuocia péxpe Terevtns erndicavto. tav S5é Kipwvos

irmov, als ‘Odvpmia tpls évienoe, cal tapal 316

339

MARCUS CATO

penny, was dear; also that he bought lands where crops were raised and cattle herded, not those where lawns were sprinkled and paths swept.
V. These things were ascribed by some to the man’s parsimony ; but others condoned them in the belief that he lived ‘in this contracted way only to correct and moderate the extravagance of others. However, for my part, I regard his treatment of his slaves like beasts of burden, using them to the uttermost, and then, when they were old, driving them off ‘and selling them, as the mark of a very mean nature, which recognizes no tie between man and man but that of necessity. And yet we know that kindness has a wider scope than justice. Law and justice we naturally apply to men alone; but when it comes to beneficence and charity, these often flow in streams from the gentle heart, like water from a copious spring, even down to dumb beasts. A kindly man will take good care of his horses even when they are worn out with age, and of his dogs, too, not only in their puppyhood, but when their old age needs nursing.
While the Athenians were building the Parthenon, they turned loose for free and unrestricted pasturage such mules as were seen to be most persistently laborious. One of these, they say, came back to the works of its own accord, trotted along by the side of its fellows under the yoke, which were dragging the waggons up to the Acropolis, and even led the way , for them, as though exhorting and inciting them on. The Athenians passed a decree that the animal be maintained at the public cost as long as it lived. Then there were the mares of Cimon, with which he won three victories at Olympia; their graves are

317

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

adnotov eiot tev éxeltvou pynpudtov. Kvvas dé auvTpégous yevopévous nal ovvibes adroL TE Wo\Nol Kal RdvOurros 0 WadaLos TOV ets
Larapive TH Tpenpes mrapaynfdwevov, Ste TH
TOALV O Ofjpos eFehevrrev, € éml THs axpas éxndevoer,

Av Kuvos ofjpa péypt viv xadrodow.
Od yap as troéjpacw h oKeveot tois Wuyny
éyouol XpynaoTéov, KoTwrévta Kai KatarpiBévta Tats Larnpeciaus drroppurrobvras, arn ef dia pndev anno, penrérns évexa TOU GrravOperrov m™poeOoTeOv éauTov év TOUTOLS pov elvat Kab peidyov.
éy@ ev ovV ovde Booby dv epyarny bua ynpas arrodoipny, pn th ye 1 ea Surepoy ay pewrrov, ex Xopas cuvTpopou Kal dvairns curious @ domep
éx mat pidos peOorapevov avtt Kepuarov px poy, axYpnotov ye robs @VOUPEVOLS domep Tow wimpdcKovat ryevna opevov. o be Karo domep veave-EVO MEVOS éml rovrou Kat Tov iarmrop, @ Tapa
tas oTparelas brrarebov expHTo, pnoly ép TPnpia KaTaneTrely, iva p41) TH Tone TO vavXov avrov AoyionTau. TaUTa pév ov ele peyaro-wuyxias elte puxporoylas Oeréov, eats TO Treidovte xpijo Fas Aoyio up.
VI. Ths & ars éyxparelas Umeppuas Oavya-oTOS 0 aynp: olov Ore OTpAaTnyay éAapBavev EauT@ Kal Tots mepl avTov ov mdeov eis TOV piva Tupav i TpEls "ATTUKOUS pedipuvous, ets
. 06 TH npépav Kp ov Tots vrrotuyious éXaTrov
T play Typtpedipveov. errapxiay dé AaBaov Lapsova, TOV TPO avTod oTpaTHyav eiwOdTwv ypjcOat
-

318

MARCUS CATO

near the tombs of his family. Dogs also that have been close and constant companions of men, have often been buried with honour. Xanthippus, of olden time, gave the dog which swam along by the side of his trireme to Salamis, when the people were abandoning their city, honourable burial on the promontory which is called to this day Cynossema, or Dog’s Mound.!

We should not treat living creatures like shoes or pots and pans, casting them aside when they are bruised and worn out with service, but, if for no other reason, for the sake of practice in kindness to our fellow men, we should accustom ourselves to mildness and gentleness in our dealings with other creatures. I certainly would not sell even an ox that had worked for me, just because he was old, much less an elderly man, removing him from his habitual place and customary life, as it were from his native land, for a paltry price, useless as he is to those who sell him and as he will be to those who buy him. But Cato, exulting as it were in such things, says that he left in Spain even the horse which had carried him through his consular campaign, that he might not tax the city with the cost of its transportation. Whether, now, these things should be set down to greatness of spirit or littleness of mind, is an open question. |

Vl. But in ether matters, his self-restraint was beyond measure admirable. For instance, when he was in command of an army, he took for himself and his retinue not more than three Attic bushels of wheat a month, and for his beasts of burden, less than a bushel and a half of barley a day. He received Sar- dinia as his province,? and whereas his predecessors

1 Cf. Themistocles x. 6. 2 198 B.c.
319 wr)

A)

PLUTARCH’S .LIVES

Kat oxnvopact Snpmocios Kal xrjLvais wal tpa-tots, TONAH 5é Oeparreia Kal hirwv mAnOEL Kal
mept Seirva Satavais xal wapacKevais Bapuvor-TwV, eKxelvos aAmiaTov émoince thy Svadhopay Ths evTeretas. Samdvns pev yap eis ovdev ovde-pias mpocedenOn Snuocias, éredoira Sé ais Torker avrTos pev avev Levyous ropevopevos, els 5€ nxorov0er Snudcatos éoOijra Kal orrovdeiov aUT@® Mpos lepoupyiay Kouitwv. év Sé tovross ovTws evKONOS Kal adeAns Tois UIrd yYeEelpa pa.vofevos, av0us dvtamedidov thy cepvornra «al
To Badpos amapaitnros av ev te Sixaiw «al Tois umep THS Hye“ovias mpootaypacw sSpOcos kal avdéxacros, wore pe ie THY ‘Pwpaiwv apxnv éexeivors pre hoRepwrépay pre mpoade-Neorépav yevér Oa.
VII. Tovadrny Sé teva aiverar eal 0 Xoyos
Tov avopos idéav éyew edyapis yap apa kal
Seuvos Hv, HOS Kal KaTaTANKTLKOS, PLOT KOppOV
kal avotnpos, atop0eypatixes Kal aywioTtKos, womep o lAarwv rov Lwxparny dno Ewlev iduwTny Kal catupixoy Kal UBptatny Tots évTuy-Xdvovet hatvopevoy évdo0ey otrovdys nal mpay-BaTwy peoroyv elvac Saxpva Kiwotvtwy ois axpowpévors Kal thy xapdiav aotpepovTwy. SOev oux old Ott aemévOacw of T@ Avaoiov rAOy@ padiota dapevot mpoceoxévat tov Kadtwvos.
ov pny addAA Tadra pev ols parXov idéas Adyov ‘Pwpaixdy! aicOdverbar rpoonxer Svaxpivodow, nyets bé TOY atropynuovevopévwv Bpaxéa ypd-Wopev, of TH ANOYO TOAD pAaAXOV 7 TH poco,

1 “Pwuaicayv Blass with 8S: pyropicdy.
320
_.<

34

MARCUS CATO

were wont to charge the public treasury with their pavilions, couches, and apparel, while they oppressed the province with the cost of their large retinues of servants and friends, and of their lavish and elaborate banquets, his simple economy stood out in an in- credible contrast. He made no demands whatever upon the public treasury, and made his circuit of the cities on foot, followed by a single public officer, who carried his robe and chalice for sacrifices. And yet, though in such matters he showed himself mild and sparing to those under his authority, in other ways he displayed a dignity and severity which fully corresponded, for in the administration of justice he was inéxorable, and in carrying out the edicts of the government was direct and masterful, so that the Roman power never inspired its subjects with greater fear or affection.

VII. Much the same traits are revealed in the man’s oratory. It was at once graceful and powerful, pleasant arid compelling, facetious and severe, sen- tentious and belligerent. So Plato says of Socrates! that from the outside he impressed his associates as rude, uncouth, and wanton; but within he was full of earnestness, and of matters that moved his hearers to tears and wrung their hearts. Wherefore I know not what they can mean who say that Cato’s oratory most resembled that of Lysias. However, such questions must be decided by those who are more capable than I am of discerning the traits of Roman oratory, and I shall now record a few of his famous sayings, believing that men’s characters are revealed

1 Symposium, p. 215.
‘N o 3 2 I
VOL, II. Y

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

xadarrep EVvLOL vopigovar, tov avOporav dapev éppaived Bat To 700s.
VIII. MéAAwv Tore TOV ‘Popatar Sipov wpun-pévov aKaipos émt otropetpias kat Stavopas aTroT peTEL, npEato TaV horyor obTws" - Xaherov peév coTL, @ monitat, Mpos yaoTépa eye OTA OuUK éxouray.” Kkatnyopav oé THS. mohuTehetas epn XareTrOv Elva coOivas TOMY, EV 1) WwretTaL
2 TeLovos ixdvs n Bods. eouevar Se mpoBdrots épn TOUS ‘Pepaious: @s yap éxeiva xa’ ExaoTov pév ov meiOerau, CULT AYTA o emer au per’ anr.7-Mov TOL dyovaolr, “Otte xal ipeis,” eiqrev, * ols ovK ap afiwoaite cupBovrors XpnoacOat Kat’ iditav, vo ToUTwWY «ts év auvenOovres aryerOe.”

dept O€ THS yuvarxoxparias diadeyopevos “ Tlap-TES, elev, ‘ ‘dvOpwmo. TOV yuvarkav adpxova ww, Timers dé TavToy avOpworer, 7 Hypa 5é at yuvaixes.’
3 TovTO ev ovv éoTw éx Tov Bepsoroxdéous per evnvery Levov amopbeyparov. éxetvos yap érm-TATTOVTOS aur WOAAa ToD viod Sia Tis ENT pos
“7K yuvat,” elmrev, “ "AOnvaiot pev apxover TOV ‘EXdjvov, eyo dé “AOnvaiwy, éwod dé av, cov be 0 vias, OOTE peidec Ow THS éfovoias, du iv avontos av melorov ‘EXAqvev Suvarat.” 4 Tov & SHuov o Katov ébn trav ‘Pwpaiwy ov pLovov tals Toph upas, GAG Kal tots emerndevpace Tas TLas emuypadery. Os yap. ot Badeis,” épn, ef TAUTHY padiora Bdsrovewy,) YalpovTas Op@cty, obras Ol véoe Taba, pavOdvover Kal Enrovow, ols av 6 Trap bpov erratvos emnta..” 5 mapexddea 8 avtovs, elpev apetn nal awdpo-much more by their speech than, as some think, by their looks.

VIII. He once wished to dissuade the Roman people from insisting ,unseasonably upon a distribu- tion of corn, and began his speech with these words: “It is a hard matter, my fellow citizens, to argue with the belly, since it has no ears.” Again, in- veighing against the prevalent extravagance, he said: “It is a hard matter to save a city in which a fish sells for more than an ox.” Again, he said the Romans were like sheep ; for as these are not to be persuaded one by one, but all in a body blindly follow their leaders, “so ye,” he said, “though as individuals ye would not deign to follow the counsels of certain men, when ye are got together ye suffer yourselves to be led by them.” Discoursing on the power of women, he said: “ All other men rule their wives; we rule all other men, and our wives rule us.” This, however, is a translation from the sayings of Themistocles.! He, finding himself much under his son’s orders through the lad’s mother, said: “ Wife, the Athenians rule the Hellenes, I rule the Athenians, thou rulest me, and thy son thee. Therefore let him make sparing use of that authority which makes him, child though he is, the most powerful of the Hellenes.”

The Roman people, Cato said, fixed the market value not only of dyes, but also of behaviour.
“For,” said he, “as dyers most affect that dye which they see pleases you, so your young men learn and practice that which wins your praise.”
And he exhorted them, in case it was through virtue and temperance that they had become great, to 1 Themistocles, xviii. 4.

oun yeyovace peydnot, pnder’ petaBdrrcoOat qpos TO Xeipov, él & dxpacia Kal Kaxig, peETQ-BarrcoOat pos TO Bédrvov" ixavars yap dn peyddous an éxeivov ryeyovevan. TOUS de ToANa-Kus dpxetv orovddtovras épn Kabarrep ayvoovvras THY odov del peta paBoovxev Cnteiv mopeverOan,
Bn TravnO@aw. érretia O€ Tois WonriTals TOUS QUTOUS ,aipovpevors ToNNaKes dpxovras. _ Aokere yap,” Eby, ‘ ‘pn ® TONAOV TO apyELY afvov 7, en TOANOUS Tov apyew atious meta Ban.” mept dé
Tov éexOpav Tevos alaxpes wal adobws Booby Soxobvros seo TOUTOU payrnp,” ep, ‘ ‘xaTdpay, OvK edn, nryetras TO ToUTOY UTrép Ys amroderreiv.” tov 0é TeT paKora TOUS MaTp@ous arypous jTapaXious évras em erxvpevos T poa'e-TOLELTO Gavpatew @> ba YUpoTEpov TiS Gararrns
A yap éxeiyy ponus Exrulev, ovTos, én, ‘padiws Katarrémoxev.”

"Ered 82 Evpevois tov Bactréus éridnpnoavtTos
eis ‘Paynv i} TE TUYKANTOS UITEeppvas anedéEaro Kal TOV TPOTwV Gptrra kal omovon meph avrov éyiveTo, 87XOsS a O Kdrov Upopwpevos cal age aurov. eltrovTos Oé Twos * "AANA nV XpINTTOS éoTt Kal ptoppapasos, ” ‘"Korw,” aay ‘adhe, puoes TodTo To pov o Baatrevs capkopdryov éotiv.” ovdéva 5é Tav evdatpovitopéveav épn Bacthewy® aEtvov elvac mapaddrew pos "Errapewovday 7 i Tlepexhéa 7 y @ewiarondéa H n Manov Kovpiov 7 ’Apirxav rov émindrnOévta
1 undeyv Hercher and Blass with FS: ph.
uy} Blass with Fas : 4 ud.
3 %pn BaciAéwy Hercher and Blass with F8S: BaosAréwy.

make no change for the worse ; but if it was through intemperance and vice, to change for the better ;

these had already made them great enough. Of those who were eager to hold high office frequently, he said that like men who did not know the road, they sought to be ever attended on their way by lictors, lest they go astray. He censured his fellow citizens for choosing the same men over and over again to high office. ‘“ You will be thought,” said he, “not to deem your offices worth much, or else not to deem many men worthy of your offices.” Of one of his enemies who had the name of leading a disgraceful and disreputable life, he said: “This man’s mother holds the wish that he may survive her to be no pious prayer, but a malignant curse.” Pointing to a man who had sold his ancestral fields lying near the sea, he pretended to admire him, as stronger than the sea. “ This man,’ said he, “has drunk down with ease what the sea found it hard to wash away.”’

When King Eumenes paid a visit to Rome, the Senate received him with extravagant honours, and the chief men of the city strove who should be most about him. But Cato clearly looked upon him with suSpicion and alarm. “Surely,’ some one said to him, “he is an excellent man, and a friend of Rome.” “Granted,” said Cato, “but the animal known as king is by nature carnivorous.” He said further that not one of the kings whom men so lauded was worthy of comparison with Epaminondas, or Pericles, or Themistocles, or Manius Curius, or with Hamilcar, surnamed Barcas. His.

9 Bapxav. auT@ 8 eheve Tous €xOpous pOoveiv, Ott Kal’ TIPE pay éx vuxtos! aviaratat Kai Tov idieov ape TOUS Snpoators ovxvonater. Bovreo Pau 6 édevye padrov ev mpatas amoarepnOhvat Xap 7) KAKOS pny Tuxely Kohdoews, Kal ovyyvapny edn dudovat Taat Tots dpaptdvovat WAV AUTO.
TX. Tav &€ ‘Popaioy ets BiOuviav T pels éXo- 34] péevov peo Bers, @V O sev TrOOaYPLKOS 7 7, o 6€ THY Keparqy é& avaTpHoews Kab TepiKoTrhs KoiAnv elyen, 0 6é Tpitos édoKet peopos elvat, KATAYEN@Y o Katov clare mpea Betay UTrO Popaiov amroaTén-

Neo Oat pare Todas panjTE Kehadiy [nTeE Kapoiav
2 éxoveay. umép b€ TaV ia "Ayalas puyddov ep.
Tevy Gels La TorvBiov t v6 Lanriw@vos, @S TOUS év TH TVYKAHTYD Aoryos éyivero, TOY pev diSovT@y xdOosov abrois, tov & eviT TAMEVOY, GVacTAaS 0 Katov ““Qorep ovK éXxovtes,. elrrev, “6 mpar-Topev Kadnuca tHV mpépav ogy Teph ‘yepov Tio: Tparcav Cnrovvtes, TOTEPOV UTrO TOV Tap Hutv 7) 3 tov év Ayaia vekpopopav exkopicd dat.” yng obeions oe Tis xaBodov trois avopaotw, juépas édiyas ot mept tov IloAvBiov Scarerrovtes aves
CTE elpouv | LS THY oUrYyKA TOV eloenbeiy, Omres as
7 pOTEpov elyov ev ‘Axaig Toa ot puyades ava-Aa Borer, Kat Tov Kdravos aTrEeTELPOVTO THS qwo-ps. 0 o 6é pevdudoas épn Tov TloAvBrov, & OaTEp TOV
’"Odvacéa, Bovr\coOau mad els TO TOU Kucdwrros omnXatov eioedOeiv, TO TWiALoY exer Kal THY Corny emiAeANo MEVOD.
4 Tous &€ ppovipous edeye pardov UTO TOV
appovev % Tovs Ahpovas vo TaV Ppovipwv
1 é« vuxrds Hercher and Blass with F8SD: vuxrds, enemies hated him, he used to say, because he rose every day before it was light and, neglecting his. own private matters, devoted his time to the public interests. He also used to say that he preferred to do right and get no thanks, rather than to do ill and get no punishment; and that he had pardon for everybody's mistakes except his own.

IX. The Romans once chose three ambassadors to Bithynia, of whom one was gouty, another had had his head trepanned, and the third was deemed a fool. Cato made merry over this, and said that the Romans were sending out an embassy which had neither feet, nor head, nor heart. His aid was once solicited by Scipio, at the instance of Polybius, in behalf of the exiles from Achaia, and ater a 1 long debate upon the question in the Senate, where some favoured and some opposed their return home, Cato rose and said: “ Here we sit all day, as if we had naught else to do, debating whether some poor old Greeks shall be buried here or in Achaia." The Senate voted that the men be allowed to return, and a few days afterwards Polybius tried to get admission to that body

- again, with a proposal that the exiles be restored to their former honours in Achaia, and asked Cato's opinion on the matter. Cato smiled and said that Polybius, as if he were another Odysseus, wanted to go back into the cave of the Cyclops
for a cap and belt which he had left there.
Wise men, he~said, profited more from _ fools than fools from wise men; for the wise shun the 327

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

apereio Bar TOUTOUS pev yap purdrrecBat TAS éxelvav apaptias, éxelvous dé Tas TOUTOV pn pepe bat katophacets. TOV 6 vewy py Xaipew ois epub prdcr paddov i) TOU OX place, oT ariwTou dé py Seto0ar Tas pev yetpas év r@ BadiCery, TODS 5é rrébas ¢ év TO a oaiee KLVOUYTOS, petCov O€ p peyxov-Tos % anaddlorTos. Tov dé UrépTaxuv KaxiCov a [lob 8 av," épn, 'c@pa TOLOUTOY TH 'TONeL yevouro XpHatpor, ov TO peTakv Aaspou Kal _Bov-Bovev rav bro Ths yao Tpos KATEXETAL ; 5° TeV
dé prrnsovev TLWa BovAopevov aUuT@ cuveivar TAparTrouperos, épn pn divac Oat Chv per avOpa-Tou Tis xapoias THY Um ep@av evataOnroTépay ExovTOS. Tod 5 épwvros édeye Thy ux é év addor pip copati Civ. petapednOjvas é AUTOS év javTt TO Bio Tpeis peTapenetas: pay bev emt TO ryuvaurcl mMioTevoat Noryov arroppytop, eTépay dé TrEvoas Orrov duvatov hv meleboat, THY dé tpirny, OTe piav Tpépay adidberos € EMELvE. apos d5é mpeaBurny TOVNPEVO[LEVOY "'AvOpere," eltre,
i TONG éxovrt 7 y7pq Ta aloxpa py) TpoaTiOer THY a0 THS Kaxias aiaxvuny. T pos dé Snpapxov év d:a Born pev pappaxeias YEvopevoy, patrov bé vopLov eta pépovta Kat Bralopevov © "QO pec dKvov, elev, . ovK olda, ToTEpoY xetpov éoTw 0 Kipyns mely nO yeaders Kupaoas. Prac dnpovpevos
S tar avOparov ReBiwxoros ao eXyOs Kal KaKas
""Avicos," elTrev, "9 T pos o€ prot paxn err Kal

yap dxovers TA KAKA padias Kal deyens EX EPAS, épol be Kat éyeuv ands és xal dover anes.’ 76
pev ody TOY aTropynpwoveupadTaV yévos TOLAVTOV eoTLV.
328

MARCUS CATO

mistakes of fools, but fools do not imitate the successes of the wise. He said he liked to see blushes on a young man’s face rather than pallor, and that he had no use for a soldier who plied his hands on the march, and his feet in battle, and whose snore was louder than his war-cry. Railing at the fat knight, he said, “Where can such a body be of service to the state, when everything between its gullet and its groins is devoted to belly?”’ A certain epicure wished to enjoy his society, but he excused himself, saying that he could not live with a man whose palate was more sensitive than his heart. As for the lover, he said his soul dwelt in the body of another. And as for repentance, he said he had indulged in it himself but thrice in his whole life: once when he entrusted a secret to his wife; once when he paid ship's fare to a place instead of walking thither; and once when he remained intestate a whole day. To an old man who was steeped in iniquity he said: “ Man, old age has disgraces enough of its own; do not add to them the shame of vice.” To a tribune of the people who had been accused of using poison, and who was trying to force the passage of a useless bill, he said : “Young man, I know not which is worse, to drink your mixtures, or to enact your bills.” And when he was reviled by a man who led a life of shameless debauchery, he said: “I fight an unequal battle with you: you listen to abuse calmly, and utter it glibly; while for me it is unpleasant to utter it, and unusual to hear it.”’
Such, then, is the nature of his famous sayings.
329

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

X. “Yaratos dé peta PrdxKKov Ovandepiou
TOU pidov Kab Tuvious atrodetyOeis éXaye
TOV eTapXLaV ny "Eyres Tomaviav “Pwpatot
Kadovow. évTavda 5 avuT@ Ta pev KaTACTPpEpopeven tov eOvev, ra 8 oixeroupere Sia hoyor TOA) oTparia tav BapBdapov émrémrece, Kal Kivdvvos 7 nv aia xpas éxBracOjvar. 06 TOV éyyus KerriBjpov émrexaneiTo oUMpAXiay. aiTouvtov © éxelvov THis Bonbeias Siaxocta TadavTa
padov, ot pev GdXOL TavTes ovK avaoxeTov €7rOLOUYTO ‘Pepaious BapBapos émuxouptas 0jL0-Noyijoar pa Bor, 0 dé Kadzov ovdev bn Seevov elvat, viK@VTas pev yap arro}waety Tapa } TOY modem, ov Tap AUTO?, HTT Oo LEvOY de pyre
TOUS dm arToupevous ever Oa pre TOUS arravtobv-Tas. Tautny de THY payny Kata Kpatos évixnae, Kal Tana ™pou ape Aa [LT POS. TlovdBios pev ye once TOV évTos Baitwos ToTapod TONEWY NEPA pad Ta Teixn KEAEVTAVTOS avtov mreprarpeO jac: TWALTOANAL & hoav avrat Kal yémoucat pay iptor avopav. avTOS oe pnow o Katey mdrétovas etn evar Tones ov Supryaryev 1) Hwepav év 'TBnpia:
Kal ToUTO KOwTOS OvK éoTw, elirep Os ddnO0S TeTPAKOTLaL 70 TAOS 7, Hoa.
Tots pev ovv OT PATLOT ALS TOXNG Tapa THY oTparelav adernGetow £&rt Kal ALTPAV apyupiou
KaT dvbpa T poo Siévet per, evra OS KpeiT Tov eln ToANoUs ‘Popatoy apryuptov 7 xpuatov ddiryous exovTas énavedOeciy. eis & avtov é eK TO amo Kopevov ovdev é€AOety reyes ANY boa TéTwWKEV 7 BéBpwxe. “Kal ovx« aitidpat,” dyot, “ rovs
1 rapa Hercher and Blass with FS: awd

330

34

MARCUS CATO

X. Having been elected consul! with Valerius Flaccus, his intimate friend, the province which the Romans call Hither Spain was allotted to his charge. Here, while he was subduing some of the tribes, and winning over others by diplomacy, a great host of Barbarians fell upon him, and threatened. to drive him disgracefully out of the province. He therefore begged the neighbouring Celtiberians to become his allies. On their demanding two hundred talents pay for such assistance, all his officers, thought it intolerable that Romans should agree to pay Bar- barians for assistance. But Cato said there was nothing terrible in it; should they be victorious, they could pay the price with the spoils taken from the enemy, and not out of their own purse; whereas, should they be vanquished, there would be nobody left either to pay or to ask the price. In this battle he was completely victorious, and the rest of his campaign was a brilliant success. Polybius indeed says that in a single day the walls of all the cities on this side the river Baetis—and they were very many, and full of warlike men—were torn down at his command. And Cato himself says that he took more cities than he spent days in Spain, nor is this a mere boast, since, in fact, there were four hundred of them.

His soldiers got large booty in this campaign, and he gave each one of them a pound of silver besides, saying that it was better to have many Romans go home with silver in their pockets than a few with gold. But in his own case, he says that no part of the booty fell to him, except what he ate and drank. “Not that I find fault,’ he says, “with those who

apereia Oar Cntodvtas éx TrovTwY, GAA BovrAopat padXov tepl aperhs Tots apiotots } wept ypnua-TMV TOls WAOVOLwWTAaTOLS AptAdNaCOaL Kal Tois
pitapyupwraros rept dirapyupias.” ov ovo
8 avtov, dAdrAa Kal tovs wept avroy épvrXatTe xabapovs tavTos Anppatos. joav dé mWévTeE Oepatrovtes él atpareias auv avT@. TovTwv els ovopa Ilaxxtos jydpace TOV aixparwTwv Tpia mavapia: tov dé Kdrwvos aicbopevou, mpiv eis Oi édOciv, amnyEato. tos dé maidas 0 Kdtrov aTOOOMEVOS eis TO Snwoavov aVIvEyKE THY ToD.
XI. “Ere 8 avtoo Stat piBovros ev ‘IBnpia Lanmiov o peyas, éyOpos ov Kal Bovdopevos évoThvat KatopOodyTe Kal Tas "TAnpuxas mpd LS UrorkaBelv, Sterpatato THs érapyxias éxetvns
amodetxOjvar d:ddoxos. omevoas S as évay Tdxtota Karémavoe THY apxny Tov Kdrwvos. 0 bé LaPov omelpas omhurav jwevtTe Kat TEVTAKOaious imrets T poTromrrous KaTeaTpeyato pev TO Aaxeravav EOvos, éEaxoatous dé TOV NUTOMOANKO-TOY KO pio dpLEVvos TrEKTELVED. éf’ ols oxeThedbovra Tov LKnTriova KATELPWOVEVOMEVOS obTas Edn THY ‘Pouny éxec Oar peylaTny, TOV pev evdofov Kat peydd.ov Ta Tis apeTas mpwreta 1) peOvevrav TOLS aanworepors, Trav & domep auros eo SnworiKay Gpuhd.oweveov APETH WPOs TOVS TO yévet kal tH S0&n TponkovTas. ov pay GXNA THS TUYKAHTOV yadicapevys mndev adharrew pn de

Kively TOV bepan weve v0 Kdrevos, 7 u pev apx7
TO UK Tiwve THs avTOU padov H THS Karevos adedovoa SoEns év drpakia Kal TXOAR parny 33?

MARCUS CATO

seek to profit by such a case, but I prefer to strive in bravery with the bravest, rather than in wealth with the richest, and in greed for money with the greediest." And he strove to keep not only himself, but also his associates, free from all taint of gain. He had five attendants with him in the field. One of these, whose name was Paccus, bought three boys for his own account from among the public prisoners, but finding that Cato was aware of the transaction, or ever he had come into his presence, went and hanged himself. Cato sold the boys, and restored the money to the public treasury.

XI. While Cato still tarried in Spain, Scipio the Great, who was his enemy, and wished to obstruct the current of his successes and take away from him the administration of affairs in Spain, got himself appointed his successor in command of that province. Then he set out with all the speed possible, and brought Cato's command to an end. But Cato took five cohorts of men-at-arms and five hundred horsemen as escort on his way home, and on the march subdued the tribe of the Lacetanians, and put to death six hundred deserters whom they delivered up to him. Scipio was enraged at this proceeding, but Cato, treating him with mock humility, said that only then would Rome be at her greatest, when her men of high birth refused to yield the palm of virtue to men of lower rank, and when plebeians like himself contended in virtue with their superiors in birth and reputation. However, in spite of Scipio's displeasure, the Senate voted that no change whatever be made in what Cato had ordered and arranged, and so the administration of Scipig was marked by inactivity and idleness, and detracted from his own, .

333

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 drAAOev, o dé Kdtov OprapBevoas ovx, Gomep ol WElo TOL TOV pn I pos dperny, anna _T pos d0fav dpirdopeveor, 6 ray els TAS axpas TLUAS éFixwvras Kal TUXwoLY Umareias Kal OprdpBov, Hn TO Aovrrov els ndovny Kat oyodXnv cvoKevacdpevor tov Biov éx TOY KOLV@V amvacty, oT Kal avTos eFavixe Kat KATENUCE THY aperny, arr Gola Tots 7 p@rov aT TOmevous monuTetas Kal bipaae
TEAS cai d0Ens ad' érépas apxis ourTeivas éav-Tov éy péow qTaperye Kal pirors RoOar Kat
TohiTass, ovTEe TAS GUYNYopias OUTE TAS OTPaTEiasS ATELTPAPLEVOS.
XII. TeBepin pev oly Leutpwvio ta epl Opaxnv kal "lotpov UrrarevovTt mpecBevov ouy-kaTeipyaaaro, Mavi & 'Anirio Xeuapyav en

"Avrioyov Tov péryav ouvebirOev eis THY ‘HAAdéba, poBycavra ‘Papatous as ovdeva Erepov per
"AvviBav. Ty yap ‘Aciap, danv o Nixatwp LéXevKos elyey, dALryou dety aracay ef UTAapY7S
avengers, un TE maprrodha Kal payee ap-Bdpov vmnKoa [TET OLNMEVOS, emipto cupTrEceiy ‘Pwpators Os povors ert _T pos avTov afvoudyors
2 ovaw. evmpeTh dé Tov ToAg“ou Tolnodmevos aiTiay TOUS "“EAAnvas ehevGepodv, oudev Seopuevous, GAXa Kal €devépous Kal avTovopous VapeTe Th ‘Popatev amo Didiamov kat Maxedovwv veworti 343
yeyovoras, 5éBy pera duvapews. kal canrovevdvs
n "EdXas elye Kal _HETEWpOS hw éXtrioe SiapBerpo-3 pevn Baowruxais vTr0 TOV Snpayoryar. ETE [LTT EV ovv mpéa Bers 6 Mdmos eri tas modes. Kal ra pev TreloTa THY vewteptlovTwy Titos Pra pevivos
V

rather than from Cato’s reputation. Cato, on the other hand, celebrated a triumph.!1 Most men who strive more for reputation than for virtue, when once they have attained the highest honours of consulship and triumphs, straightway adjust their future lives to the enjoyment of a pleasurable ease, and give up their public careers. But Cato did not thus remit and dismiss his virtue, nay, rather, like men _ first taking up the public service and all athirst for honour and reputation, he girt his loins anew, and held himself ever ready to serve his friends and fellow-citizens, either in the forum or in the field. XII. And so it was that he assisted Tiberius Sempronius the consul in subduing the regions in Thrace and on the Danube, acting as his ambassador ; and as legionary tribune under Manius Acilius, he marched into Greece against Antiochus the Great, who gave ‘the Romans more to fear than any man after Hannibal. For he won back almost all of * Seleucus Nicator’s former dominions in Asia, reduced to subjection many warlike nations of Barbarians, and was eager to engage the Romans, whom he deemed the only worthy foemen left for him. So he crossed into Greece with an army, making the freeing of the Greeks a specious ground for war. This they did not need at all, since they had recently been made free and independent of Philip and the Macedonians by grace of the Romans. Greece was at once a stormy sea of hopes and fears, being corrupted by her demagogues with expectations of royal bounty. Accordingly, Manius sent envoys to the several cities. Most of those which were un- settled in their allegiance Titus Flamininus restrained

1 194 B.c.

Eryev avev Tapayis Kal KaTeTTpauvev, ws ev TOLS wept éxcivou yéypatrrar, Kdtrwv 5é KopuvOtovs cat

flatpeis, ére & Alytets trapeotyncato.
[Iveta rov 8& ypovov év "AOnvass Siétpipe. Kat AéyeTar pév TLS avToD hépeabat AOdyos, dv “EA-Anviotl mpos Tov Shwov elev, @s Cnro@v TE Thy aperny TOV Tadraov AOnvaiwy Tis Te TONEWS Sia TO KdAXOS Kal TO péyeOos Hdéws yeyovas DeaTns 70 8 ovK adrnOés dori, adrd 80’ Eppnvéws evéruxe tows AOnvaiors, duvnbels dv avdtos eitreiv, éupéevov dé Tots martpiow Kal xatayeXov tov Ta ‘EA-Anuixa teOavpaxdtwov. Tloctovpsoy yoov *AX-Bivoy iotopiav ‘“EXAnuotl ypawWavta nal ovy-yvopunv aitovpevor érécxwrpev eitrwv, Sotéov elvat THY cuyyvepny, et tov ’Apdixtvovey Wwnhdica-pévov avayxacbels virépewve TO Epyov. Oavydoat dé dyot Tovs APnvaiovs TO TaXOs avTov Kab THY ofvTnTAa THs ppdcews: a yap auros éEedepe Bpaxéws, TOV epunvéa paxpas Kal bia TONN@V drraryyehevy" TO 5° bAov olecOar Ta p pnuata Tols pev “EdAnow aro xethéwr, Tois b€ “Pwpaiors aro xapdtas pépecBar.
XIII. “Ered & ‘Avtioxos euppatas Ta mept Geppor tras oreva 7 oTpaTon es, kat Tots avropuect TOV TOTMWY Epvpace 7 poo Badov apa-Kopara Kat Sratexiopata, xabijoro TOV (TONE LOv ex Ker etK evar vopiCwv, TO pev Kara, oTOLa Bud-Ceo dat TavTamacw ameyivad kov 06 ‘Popaior, THY Sé Tlepotxny éexeivny mepinrAvaow Kat KiKrwow o 336

MARCUS CATO

without ado, and quieted down, as I have written in his Life;! but Corinth, Patrae, and Aegium were brought over to Rome by Cato.
He also spent much time at Athens. And we are told that a certain speech of his is extant, which he addressed to the Athenian people in Greek, declaring that he admired the virtues of the ancient Athenians, and was glad to behold a city so beautiful and grand as theirs. But this isnot true. On the contrary, he dealt with the Athenians through an interpreter. He could have spoken to them directly, but he always clung to his native ways, and mocked at those who were lost in admiration of anything that was Greek. For instance, he poked fun at Postumius

Albinus, who wrote a history in Greek, and asked the indulgence of his readers. Cato said they might have shown him indulgence had he undertaken his task in consequence of a compulsory vote of the ‘Amphictyonic Assembly. Moreover, he says the Athenians were astonished at the speed and pungency of his discourse. For what he himself'set forth with brevity, the interpreter would repeat to them at great length and with many words; and on the whole he thought the words of the Greeks were born on their lips, but those of the Romans in their hearts.

XIII. Now Antiochus had blocked up the narrow pass of Thermopylae with his army,? adding trenches and walls to the natural defences of the place, and sat there, thinking that he had locked the war out of Greece. And the Romans did indeed despair utterly of forcing a direct passage. But Cato, calling to mind the famous compass and circuit of the pass

1 Chapters xv-xvii. 2 191 B.C.

: 337
VOL Il. : Zz
a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

’ 4 > a 4 b] / ,
Katwv es voov Badopevos eEadevce VUKTWP,
2 avahaBov pépos Te TAS orpatias, émél S dve

cr

mpoerGovt ay o xabodnyav AX WAKwT OS ebérece
THS 0000 Kal TAAV@peEVvos ey TOTALS a7 opots Kat
Kpnpvadert Sewny abupiay | Kal PoBor € everpydcato
TOUS’ OTPATLOTALS, opéy) Katov Tov Kivdvvov éxéhevae TOUS aNXous Atravras atpeuety Kat Teptpéverv, autos bé Aevecov TL, Marnuop, avdpa Sevvov opetBareiv, TraparaBav ex@per. TohUTrOvEDS
Kat Tapa Rohs ev doednve puetl xat Badeia, Kotivows! Kal wayos dvaTteTapevous Saomdopara TOAAA THS orpews Kal ao dpeav exovons, Ews éuBanrovres ets ATPATPOV, WS @OVvTO, KaTO) Trepal-vouaay émt 76 oTpaTomedoy TOV TOAK Loy éevto onuela mWpos Twas evoKorrous Kepaias vmép TO Kaarispopor dvexovoas. ore dé dd emavedovtes oTriaw THY oTpaTiay avédaBov, eal

7 pos Ta onpela, Tpoayoures IpavTo bev éxeivns THS atparob Kal KaTEDTHCAYTO THY Topelay, pixpov 6é mpoehfotary avTois érréhurre Paparyryos vrorapBavovays. Kal wadw ay drropia Kat d€0s5 ovK emia Ta mevery ovodé TUVOPMVTOY OTL mWANoiov eTbyXavov TOV Tohepiov ryeryovoTes. non 5é dé-Aaprrev nuepa, Kat Pboyyis Tes edokev € emaxovoat, Taya b€ Kal xadopav “EXAnvexov Xapaka al mpopvraniy um0 70 Kpnuvades. obtws odp ére-oTHTAS évtav0a THY TTPATLAY O o Katowy éxéhevoev au7@ mpocedeiy avev tTav addAwV Tous Pippavous, ols ael maTols éypnTo Kal Tm poOuposs.
sh aged dé Kal Twepictavtwy avtTov abpowy 1 xotlvois MSS.; xoAwvois (hills) Bekker, adopting the correction of Coraés, 338

MARCUS CATO

which the Persians had once made, took a con- siderable force and set out under cover of darkness. They climbed the heights, but their guide, who was a prisoner of war, lost the way, and wandered about in impracticable and precipitous places until he had filled the soldiers with dreadful dejection and fear. Cato, seeing their peril, bade the rest remain quietly where they were, while he himself, with a certain Lucius Manlius, an expert mountain-climber, made his way along, with great toil and hazard, in the dense darkness of a moonless night, his vision much impeded and obscured by wild olive trees and rocky peaks, until at last they came upon a path. This, they thought, led down to the enemy’s camp. So they put marks and signs on some conspicuous cliffs which towered over Mount Callidromus, and then made their way back again to the main body. This too they conducted to the marks and signs, struck into the path indicated by these, and started forward. But when they had gone on a little way, the path failed them, and a ravine yawned to receive them. Once more dejection and fear were rife. They did not know and could not see that they were right upon the enemy whom they sought. But presently gleams of daylight came, here and there a man thought he heard voices, and svon they actually saw a Greek outpost entrenched at the foot of the cliffs. So then Cato halted his forces there, and summoned the men of Firmum to a private conference. These soldiers he had always found trusty and zealous in his service. When they had run up and stood grouped about him,

339

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

elarey" © “Av6pa xpnseo AaBety Trav Tohepieov Covra Kat mud écOau, tives ot ™popudarrovtes OUTOL, T0- oop THOS aAUTOD, Tis 0 TOY dAdo Sidxoc pos ny Takis | Kal TapacKeun, pe HS UToOLévovT av 7pas.

Too € epyov dpraypa Set Tdyous yevéo Oat Kal TOA-

NS, 7) Kat N€ovTes dvorrhot Gappodrtes éml Ta Seiad TOY Onpiwv Babdifoucr.” Tata elTrovTos Tod Katevos aurodev opovaartes, aomep elyov, ot Pippavot Kata TOV opav Eeov él tas mpopura-Kds* Kal TpootrecovTes am poo Soxnrot mavTas pe dverdpafay kal Svecxedacay, éva 8 avtois Grows apwdacavres evexeipiay T@ Karon. Tapa Tov-Tou pabay, ws 7 wev GdAn Sivapus é év Trois arevois KdOnrat per’ avrob! tov Bactréws, ot Sé ppovpouves ovTOL Tas imepBoras AitwX\o@v eiow éFaroovoe Aoydbes, kaTadpovycas THS GALYOTNT OS
dpa Kal Tis OMLywpias evs emrnryev ape oan muyse cal draraype, 7 p@Tos THAT ApEVOS THY paxacpay. ot & ws eidov arr6 TOV Kpnuverv émt-pepopevous, dhevyovtes cis TO péya atparomedoy KaTeTipTNacay Tapaxijs amavtas.” XIV. "Ey TOUT® dé xal tod Maviou xdrwev mpos Ta Stateryiopata Bralopevov Kal Tots orevois mpos BdddovTos aOpoav THY Svvapuv, 6 pev ’Avtioxos eis TO oTOMA AO@ mAnyels ExTLva-xOevT@y autod Tay dddvT@Y am éatpeye tov lar-mov oTriaw, Teplahyns YEVOpEVOS, Tov € orpaTob HEpOs ovdev Urrépeuve TOUS ‘Popaious, GAA Kai-TEP drropous Kat dpnxavous Ths puyhs odous Kal
a NaneS éyovons, éxov Baléwv cal TET POV atro-

1 per’ abrod Blass with §: pera. 2 dxavras Sintenis? with C; Bekker reads &zayra, with Sintenis? and Coraés.

340

344

MARCUS CATO

he said: “I must take one of the enemy’s men alive, and learn from him who they are that form this advance guard, what their number is, and with what disposition and array their main body awaits us. But the task demands the swift and bold leap of lions fearlessly rushing all unarmed upon the timorous beasts on which they prey.” So spake Cato, and the Firmians instantly started, just as they were, rushed down the mountain-side, and ran upon the enemy’s sentinels. Falling upon them unexpectedly, they threw them all into confusion and scattered them in flight ; one of them they seized, arms and all, and delivered him over to Cato. From the captive Cato learned that the main force of the enemy was en- camped in the pass with the king himself, and that the detachment guarding the pass over the mountains was composed of six hundred picked Aetolians. Despising their small numbers and their carelessness, he led his troops against them at once, with bray of trumpet and battle-cry, being himself first to draw his sword. But when the enemy saw his men pouring down upon them from the cliffs, they fled to the main army, and filled them all with confusion.

XIV. Meanwhile Manius also, down below, threw his whole force forward into the pass and stormed the enemy's fortifications. Antiochus, being hit in the mouth with a stone which knocked his teeth out, wheeled his horse about for very anguish. Then his army gave way everywhere before the Roman onset. Although flight for them meant impracticable roads and helpless wanderings, while deep marshes and steep cliffs threatened those who

TOMMY Ta TOMATO Kal Tas ona Ojoers Umobexo-pevary, eis TavTa 61a T@V oTevaY Drrepxeopevor kal acuvwlovrtes adAHdouS hoBw mArAnyhns Kat adnpov TONE LOY atrous Sue Decpov.
'O bé- Kater del pév Tes my, 5 Eotke, TOV
idtev é jeyKapion adevdns Kal THY dyTuxpus peyahauyiav @S émakorovdnpa | TNS peyadoupyias OUK
Epevye, 1AEta Tov 5é Tais mpakeoe TAavTals byKov qepiTeette, Kai por Tots: tSovow avTov TOTE Su@KovtTa Kal qaiovta Tous Todepious TapaoThvat pndev opetreuv Karwva TO One TO-courov, doov Kdrow tov Shpov, attév te Mdmov rov tratov Oeppov dro THS viKns Ere Jepye TepiTAAKEVTA TONY xXpovov damdater Oat
Kal Boav wi7r6 xapas, @S our' adv avros ov0 o
TULTAS SApos éLicdaese Tas aporBas Tats Ka-TWVOS evepyeciaus. peta dé THY paxny evOus eis
'Popny emré pm ero TOV nryoved Weverv auTdyyenos-Kal duéqAevoe ev eis Bpevtéo tov EVTUXOS, Me 8° nuepa Sterkdoas éxeiDev eis Tdpavra Kal téocapas addrAas obevaas mewTTatos els 'Papyny aro Garacons adixero Kal T PwTOS amr nryryetne THY vinnv. Kal THY wey TOALY éverrAnaev evppo-ouvns Kat Ovove, ppovnpatos dé Tov Sipov ws Tacns ys Kal Bardo ors Kpateiv duvapevov.
XV. Tov peV ouv TONE MLD mpatewv Tov
Kdtwvos avrar axedov elouy EMO YLMOTAT AL THS dé TmohiTeias paiverat TO Tept Tas KaTnyopias Kal Tous éheyXous Tey Tovnpav: poptov ov puxpas akvov orovdijs 7 NYNT apEvos. avTOS TE yap ediwfe Todnovs Kal Sudxovow ETEpOLS oUDnywvicato Kal tapecxevacevy 6Aws StwKovTas, 342

MARCUS CATO

slipped and ‘fell, still, they poured along through the pass into these, crowding one another on in their fear of the enemy’s deadly weapons, and so destroyed themselves.
Cato, whp was ever rather generous, it would seem, in his own: praises, and did not hesitate to follow up his great achievements with boastings equally great, is very pompous in his account of this exploit. He says that those who saw him at that time pursuing the enemy and hewing them down, felt convinced that Cato owed less to Rome than Rome to Cato; also that the consul Manius himself, flushed with victory, threw his arms about him, still flushed with his own victory, and embraced him a long time, crying out for joy that neither he himself nor the whole Roman people could fittingly requite Cato for his benefactions. Immediately after the battle he was sent to Rome as the messenger of his.own triumphs. He had a fair passage to Brundisium, crossed the peninsula from there to Tarentum in a single day, travelled thence four days more, and on the fifth day after landing reached Rome, where he was the first to announce the victory. He filled the city full of joy and sacrifices, and the people with the proud feeling that it was able to master every land and sea.
XV. These are perhaps the most remarkable features of Cato’s military career. In political life, he seems to have regarded the impeachment and conviction of malefactors as a department worthy of his most zealous efforts. For he brought many prosecutions himself, assisted others in bringing theirs, and even instigated some to begin prosecutions, as

343 |

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

2 ws emt Lanriwva tors wept Weriidcov. TovTov pev ovv am’ olxov Te peyadov Kal dpovnipatos

arn Owoi jwotnodpevov wire jwodas Tas dia Boras fn) aTroKTEtvaL dur Gels apie Aevxtov dé tov aderpov aitod peta TeV KaTNYyOpwr ove Tas
KaTaoiKy mepie Bane Xenwaroov TONY | Tpos TO
Snpoctov, iv ovx Exwv éxeivos anohvcacbat Kat Kivduvevov SeOhvat mors émikAnoe. Tov §Sn-papyov aden.
3 Aéyerac 5€ Kal veaviox til reOvnKotos matpos €xOpov nripwxots Kal tropevouévm Sv' dyopas peta thy Sixny dmavtnoas 0 Kdtoy SeEvwoacAat Kal eimeiv, Ste ravdtTa ypn Tots
A > / > wv PN > « > 3
yovedot évayie, ovK apvas ovd épidous, arr
> "A 4 ' / 9 \ 9 Q3 > \
éyOpav Saxpua kai Katadixas. ov pny ovd autos 9 A / a bd a > > @ \
éy Th TodtTeLa Tepiny ab@os, aXN Orrov TLVa
AaBnv wapdoyoe Tois éyOpois, Kpivopevos Kal
4 xwwQuvevmv Sieréret. RéyeTas yap oAlyoy azroXLmovaas Tay tevTynKkovta guyeiv Sixas, pilav 5é
A , 1 4 " \ 3 5 / fe.
Thy Terxevtatav! && &rn cal dydonxovta yeyovws
éy 7) Kal TO pwynpovevopmevoy eltrev, WS YaXreETrOV €otiy év ddXos BeBtwxora avOpwrrors év adXots 345 atroNoyeicOar. Kal rovto wépas ovK errotncato
a" 9 , 4 > # ? a
TaYV ayovwv, Tesodpwv § adrAXdwv éviavtav Ser-Oovtwy Lepoviov TdrABa xarnyopyncev évevyxovta
5 yeyovws érn. xuvduvever yap ws o Néotwp eis
1 rhv reAevralay Hercher and Blass with F*S : reAevrafap.
. 344
MARCUS CATO

for instance Petillius against Scipio. That great man, however, trampled the accusations against him under foot, as the splendour of his house and his own inherent loftiness of spirit prompted him to do, and Cato, unable to secure his capital conviction, dropped the case. But he so co-operated with the accusers of Lucius, Scipio's brother, as to have him condemned to pay a large fine to the state.
This debt Lucius was unable to meet, and was therefore liable to imprisonment. Indeed, it was only at the intercession of the tribunes that he was at last set free.

We are also told that a certain young man, who had got a verdict of civil outlawry against an enemy of his dead father, was passing through the forum on the conclusion of the case, and met Cato, who greeted him and said: “These are the sacrifices we must bring to the spirits of our parents; not lambs and kids, but the condemnations and tears of their enemies.” However, he himself did not go unscathed, but wherever in his political career he gave his enemies the slightest handle, he was all the while suffering prosecutions and running risk of condemnation. It is said that he was defendant in nearly fifty cases, and in the last one when he was eighty-six years of age. It was in the course of this that he uttered the memorable saying: “It is hard for one who has lived among men of one generation, to make his defence before those of another.” And even with this case he did not put an end to his forensic contests, but four years later, at the age of ninety, he impeached Servius Galba. Indeed, he may be said, like Nestor,

Tptyoviay te Biw Kal tais wpaEeot KaredOeiv.
Lentriove yap, os AéAEKTAL, TH peyddr@ TroAAG Stepioduevos ev tH Toduteia Svérewvev eis Lenmiwva Tov véov, ds Hv éxeltvov KaTa ‘Troinow viwvos, vies dé IlavAov tod Tlepcéa wat Maxe-Sovas KatatroN\EeunoavTos.
XVI. Tis & trratreias Katomw érect Sdéxa Tuunrelav o Kdtwv tmapyyyenre. xopudy Sé
tis dott Tins amaons 7 apyYn Kal TpoTOY TWA THS qoAtTelas émritedelwots, AAANY TE TOAAHY
éfovoiav éyovca Kal tTHy mept Ta 70n Kal Tovs Bious ékéracwy. obte yap yduov ove Tatdotrottay Tivos otte Siartay ovTe oupmroctov @ovTo Seip axpitov Kal dvekétractov, ws Exactos émiOupias 2 éyou Kal mpoatpécews, adeioOat. rorv dé padrdov éy rovtous vouilovtes 7 Tais vraiOpous Kal moXtixais mpakeoe tTpoTrov avdpos evopacba, duraxa kal cwdpoviatny Kat KoXaoTny Tov pndéva Kal’ noovas éxtpémecOar kai tapexBaivew tov ért@ ptov wal ouvndn Biov npodvro TOY KadOvpEvOY Tatpikiov éva Kal tav Snpotikay eva. Tintas
d€ TovTous mpoonyopevor, éEouciay Eyovtas ade-AéoOas pev larwov, éxBareitvy 5€ avyKANTOU Tov
3 akoAdaoT@s Biovvta Kal ataxtws. ovrtot &€ Kal Ta TLnpaTAa TOV ovolt@y AawRdvorres éerrEecKoqouy, Kal Tais amroypadais Ta yévN Kal TAS TTo-AuTetas «= uexpivov; §=aAdAasS TE peyddas Exes Suvapers apyn.
Ato nal t@ Karove mpos thy trapayyeriav to have been vigorous and active among three generations. For after many political struggles with Scipio the Great, as told above, he lived to be contemporary with Scipio the Younger, who was the Elder's grandson by adoption, and the son of that Paulus Aemilius who subdued Perseus and the Macedonians.!

XVI. Ten years after his consulship,? Cato stood for the censorship. This office towered, as it were, above every other civic honour, and was, in a way, the culmination of a political career. The variety of its powers was great, including that of examining into the lives and manners of the citizens. Its creators thought that no one should be left to his own devices and desires, without inspection and review, either in his marrying, or in the begetting of his children, or in the ordering of his daily life, or in the entertainment of his friends. Nay, rather, thinking that these things revealed a man's real 'character more than did his public and _ political career, they set men in office to watch, admonish, and chastise, that no one should turn aside _ to wantonness and forsake his native and customary mode of life. They chose to this office one of the so-called patricians, and one of the plebeians. These officers were called censors, and they had authority to degrade a knight, or to expel a senator who led an unbridled and disorderly life. They also revised the assessments of property, and arranged the citizens in lists according to their social and political classes. There were other great powers also con- nected with the office.

Therefore, when Cato stood for it, nearly all

1 In the battle of Pydna, 168 B.c. 2 184 B.C.

aTnvrncay évicTapEevot. GYESOV OL YvwpPLL@TAToOL
a A "A \
Kal TWpOTOL TOV TUYKANTLK@V. TOUS pev Yap
> , € Paw , / > ,
evrratpioas 0 POovos eAUTrEL, TaYTaTracLY olopév-
4 \ > / > a
ous wpotnnraxilecOat tiv evyéverav avOporrav
3 > 9 n > U bd A " \ \ , am' apyis adoEwv eis thy axpav Tiny Kal dvva-9 4 e be @ \ 60
piv avaBiBalopévev, ot dé poxOnpa auverdotes
a A 4 4
avrots émiTndevpata Kal TOY TaTpioV exdLaiTnoLW

A fo) “A ,
Gav éhoBobvto thy avotynpiay tov avdpos,
/
atrapaitnrov év é€ovala nal yarerny écopevny.
510 cupdhpovncavtTes Kal wapackevacavTes éTTa
aA 4 ol
Katiyyov émt thy tTapayyediay avtiTddouvs TO
/ a A
Kdtau, Oeparrevovtas éXrriot ypnotais TO TAH-
€ \ : an \ N e \ ¥
Bos, as 8 paraxas Kai mpos Hdovav apyerBar
Seopevov. tovvavtiov 8 o Kdtev ovédepiav évo.- \ bf / b > 9 a a
Sous émeixerav, aAX’ avTiKpus amrEeLA@Y TE TOIS Tovnpots amo Tov Bnuwatos Kal Kexpayws peyadXou
a“ 4 \ 4 9s A 4, caBappod ypyfev Thy trod, nEiov Tovs TroAXOUS, 3 A \ ‘ isd > \ N
él cwppovotet, pn Tov fdtoTov, GAAA TOV oho-Spotatoyv aipetoba: Tov tatpa@v: TovTov dé avToY
3 A / rd / >
elvat kal tov tratpixiwy &va PrAdKKxov Ovadr-NEptoy: per’ éxeivou yap olecOaz povou THY Tpudiy
/
Kal THY paraxiay @otep Bdpav Téuvwv Kal atro-
4 na A
Kaiwy Tpovpyouv Te Toijoew, TaV 8 aAAwY opav
4 wv “A / 4 \ na
Exaotov apéat caxas Bialopevoy, tt Tovs Karas ¥ , e > ov / = e > “a aptovras dédatxev. ot Tw 6 apa péyas hy ws adnOas
la) id a Kai peydrov a&tos Snpayayav o “Pwpatov dijmos, @aote un PoPyOjnvat thy dvatacw Kal Tov SyKov le) > / > \ e@ nw“ 3 , \ Tov avdpos, AAAA TovS Hdeis exEivous Kal pos

the best known and most influential men of the senatorial party united to oppose him. The men of noble parentage among them were moved by jealousy, thinking that nobility of birth would be trampled in the mire if men of ignoble origin forced their way up to the summits of honour and power ;

while those who were conscious of base practices and of a departure from ancestral customs, feared the severity of the man, which was sure to be harsh and inexorable in the exercise of power.
Therefore, after due consultation and preparation, they put up in opposition to Cato seven candidates for the office, who sought the favour of the multitude with promises of mild conduct in office, supposing, forsooth, that it wanted to be ruled with a lax and indulgent hand. Cato, on the contrary, showed no complaisance whatever, but plainly threatened wrong-doers in his speeches, and loudly cried that the city had need of a great purification. He adjured the people, if they were wise, not to choose the most agreeable physician, but the one who ~ was most in earnest. He himself, he said, was such a physician, and so was Valerius Flaccus, of the patricians. With him as colleague, and him alone, he thought he could cut and sear to some purpose the hydra-like luxury and effeminacy of the time. As for the rest of the candidates, he saw that they were all trying to force their way into the office in order to administer it badly, since they feared those who would administer it well. And so truly great was the Roman people, and so worthy of great leaders, that they did not fear Cato’s rigour and haughty independence, but rejected rather those agreeable candidates who, 349

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

wn 4
yapw amravta tomoeay Soxovvtas aroppivvas
lo . ad
éréa bar pera ToD Kadravos Tov PrdxKKoy, domep
OUK aALTOUVTOS apxny, arn apyovtos bn Kat WT pPOoTATTOVTOS GK POW [EVOS.
id A XVII. Ipodypawe pev odv 0 Katwv tis ovy-
a N , 4 4
KXNTOU TOY cuvapxYovTa Kat girov Aeveov
A \ n wn
Ovarr€ptov PrAdxxov, eEéBare bé Tis Bovdrjrs
»” \ \ V4 of, C4

AXXOovVS TE TUXVOUS KAL Aeve.ov Koivtiov, t1ratov
n , A 3
pev eta Tporepov eviauTois yeyevnwévov, 0 S Hv
> A N 60 e , n 10 \ Ti
avt@ mpos do£ay viratetas petlov, adedgov ‘Titov
4 n 4 4
Prapwvivov tod KataTovNennoavtos Pidz77op.
aitiav dé ths éxBorHs oye ToravTHV. jetpaxtov wn “ a i¢ ra
éx THS Tradikhs Wpas ETarpovv avethndas o Aev-Ktos del Tept avTo elye KaL GUVETTIYETO OTPATNa a v YA \
you él tiuns Kal duvdpews Tocavtys, bony ovdels
a“ ra 4
elye TOY TpwTwWY Trap aUT@ dirtwv Kal oiKeiwr.
nA ,
eTVYKXaVE Lev OY HryoUmEvOS UTAaTLKHS érapyias’ éy 6€ cuptroci - Til TO pEetpaKLov, WaTrEp cL@len, 4 GuyKaTaKeipevoy GAAHV TE KONaKElaY Exiver POS
” @ 1 3 wy e OL b , \ x A avOpwrov' év olvm padiws ayopevov, Kai pideiv > \ ad wv. 6c a >’ 99 sy 4 6c , # avutTov ovTws Edeyev “WoT, én, “Oéas ovons 4 oikot povoudywv ov Teeapévos mpdtcpov éEwp-pnoa wpos oé, Kaitrep émiOvpav ideiv avOpwroy odattouevov. o dé Aevxtos dvtidtroppovot-3 pevos “’AXAA ToUTOV ye xapLY,” elmre, “ wr) pot
\
KATAaKELTO AUTTOUpEVOS, eyo yap idoopua..” Kal nw J Kedevoas éva Tov ert Oavdtw KaTaKpita@v eis TO cuptoctoy ayOnvar Kal tov wmnpérny éxovta
1 pbs tvOpwrov Blass with FaSC : apds roy &vOpwror.
350 : 346

MARCUS CATO

it was believed, would do every thing to please them, and elected Flaccus to the office along with Cato.! To Cato they gave ear, not as to one soliciting office, but as to one already in office and issuing his decrees.

XVII. As censor, then, Cato made Lucius Valerius Flaccus, his colleague and friend, chief senator.*~~ He also expelled many members of the Senate, including Lucius Quintius. This man had _ been consul seven years before, and, a thing which gave' him more reputation than the consulship even, was brother of the Titus Flamininus who conquered King Philip.2~ The reason for his expulsion was the following: There was a youth who, ever since his boyhood, had been the favourite of Lucius. This youth Lucius kept ever about him, and took with him on his campaigns in greater honour and power than any one of his nearest friends and kinsmen had. He was once administering the affairs of his consular province, and at a certain banquet this youth, as was his wont, reclined at his side, and began to pay his flatteries to a man who, in his cups, was too easily led about. “I love you so much,” he said, “that once, when there was a gladiatorial show at home, a thing which I had never seen, I rushed away from it to join you, although my heart was set on seeing a man slaughtered.” “ Well, for that matter,” said Lucius, “don’t lie there with any grudge against me, for I will cure it.” Thereupon he commanded that one of the men who were lying under sentence of death be brought to the banquet, and_ that a lictor with an axe stand by his side. Then he
1 184 B.C. 2 At Cynoscephalae, 198 B.c.
33°
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

MTENEKUY TAPATTHVAL, TAN NpwTnTE TOV épwpeE-vov, et BovreTat TuTTopevov Oedoacbar. dyoavtos 5é€ BovrgecOat, wpocétakey arroxoyat Tov avOpwrov tov TpaxXnXov.
Oi pév ody TrEioTOL TADTA ioTopodat, Kal 6 YE Kixépwv avtov tov Kdtewva dunyovmevov év re mwept ynpws Siaroyw memotnxev, o Sé AiBtos _avroponror eivai pyot Taddrnv tov avaipeBévra, Tov 5é Aevncov ov Ou banpérou KTElval TOV aul pay Tov, GAX avToy idia yept, Kal tadTa év doy@? yeypapGat Karevos.
"Ex Brn Ievtos ov TOU Aevetou THS Bounris v UITo

TOU Kdrwwvos, o adehpos avrTov Bapéws pépeov emt TOV _Sijpov Karepuye Kal THY aitiay éxéXevev eltreity TOV Kdrwva tijs éxBonijs. elTOvTos be Kat Senynoapévou TO ouptroc.ov emexetpet pev oO Aevxzos apveia Aan, TPOKANOUPEVOU 6é tov Kadtovos eS Optapov avedveTo. Kal TOTE pev aka madeiy kateyvoaOn: béas & ovtons év Oedtpe Thy vTAaTLKNY xopay mapehbav Kal ToppwTarw qou cabecGeis olxTov éo € Tapa TO OLD, cai“ Boav-‘TEs NVayKacay avTov perenbeiy, @sS Hv Suvatov éravopOovpevoe Kat Oepatrevovtes TO yeyern-peévov.
"AdAov bé Bours €FéBarev ttratevcoer érridoEov évta, Mavirnsov, Sti THY avTod yuvaixa EO pépay opwons THs OuyaTpos Karepidnoey. aure 5
én THY yuvaixa pndérote nv Bpovtijs weyadns yevouevns TeptThaxhvat, Kal pera Tatouas eltreiv aUTOV ws waKxdpLos éoTt TOU Atos BpovravtTos.
1 év Adyp Hercher and Blass with F8SC: év rg Adyg.
352 |
MARCUS CATO

asked his beloved if he wished to see the man smitten. The youth said he did, and Lucius ordered the man’s head to be cut off.
This is the version which most writers give of the affair, and so Cicero has represented Cato himself as telling the story in his dialogue “On Old Age.” !
But Livy? says the victim was a Gallic deserter, and that Lucius did not have the man slain by a lictor, but smote him with his own hand, and that this is the version of the story in a speech of Cato’s.)
On the expulsion of Lucius from the Senate by Cato, his brother was greatly indignant, and appealed to the people, urging that Cato state his reasons for the expulsion. Cato did so, narrating the incident of the banquet. Lucius attempted to make denial, but when Cato challenged him to a formal trial of the case with a wager.of money upon it, he declined. Then the justice of his punishment was recognized. But once when a spectacle was given in the theatre, he passed along by the senatorial seats, and took his place as far away from them as he could. Then the people took pity upon him and shouted till they had forced him to change his seat, thus rectifying, as far as was possible, and alleviating the situation.

Cato expelled another senator who was thought to have good prospects for the consulship, namely, Manilius, because he embraced his wife in open day before the eyes of his daughter. For his own part, he said, he never embraced his wife unless it thundered loudly; and it was a pleasantry of his to remark that he was a happy man when it thundered.

1 Cato Manor, 12, 42. 2 xxxix, 42.

Sale)
hd
«

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XVIII. "Hveyxe 5€ twa tro Kdrow xal
Aevx.os 6 Lentriwvos aderdos éridOovov aitiar, \ > A > e > b) a) ‘ a OptapBixds avnp adatpeels iar’ avdtov Tov imrov:
3 A / Soke yap olov épuBpilwv “Adpicave Yenriov
el n \ / TeOvnkoTL TOUTO Trothoat. Tovs Sé TAEioTOUS lo a / nviagé paXLCTAa TH WepixoTwh THs ToAVTEAELAS, a v \ ’ / @ 4 “Py Nv avtixpus pev aderéoOat, vevoonxotwv on la e 9 > lol n ae) > A kat StepOappévov wr’ adtis TOV TONY, adv-vatov Hv, KvKrA@ O€ Tepriov nvdyKxalev éeaOijTOs, OXNMATOS, KODpOV YyUVaLKEloV, TKEVoY THY Tecl
, ’
Siattay, @y éxaorou TO Tivnua Spaxypas yLdLas
‘ “A \ Kat tmevtaxocias uTepéBadAey, atrotipacbar Thy
A
akiay eis TO SexaTAdo.ov, BovrAdpEvos amo péL-
a bd Covwv Tiunpdtwv avtots peiCovas Kal Tas eiogopas elvat. Kal mpooetivnoe Tpeis YadKovs Tpos Tois yxwAlows, Srrws Bapuvopevo. taisériBorais
Kal TOUS evoTaNeis Kal ALTOUS Op@VTES aTrO TOV

iowy éXdTTOva TEXNODVTAS Els TO SnudCLOV aTra-yopevwolv. joav odv avT@ YadeTrol pév Ol TAs etogopas Sia THY Tpudyy UTopévovtes, Yarerrol
5 = iA € \ \ 6 4 \
av wddwv ot Thy TpudHv atrotiOéuevor Sia
\ 9 , , \ > / e \
Tas elopopas. amovtou yap adatpeciv ov ToAXNOL
J A na
vouiloval Thy KeAVoLWW avToU Tis émidetEews, émudeixvucBat S€ tols mepitTois, ov Tolls avay-xaiow. & bn Kal padiota hace Tov didocodoy
b /
Apiorwva Oavpdlev, Ste Tovs Ta TEepLTTA Ke-KTNMEVOVS pAadrOV HyovUvTaL paKapious 7) ToUS TOV avayKkaiwy Kal ypnoipwv evTropovvTas. {Ko~ be e ® N 3 / \ “ 4
mas 6€ 0 WertaXros attoupevou Tivos TaV dirwv 354

MARCUS CATO

XVIII. Cato was rather bitterly censured for his treatment of Lucius, the brother of Scipio, whom, though he had achieyed the honour of a triumphy he expelled from the equestrian order. He was thought to have done this as an insult to the memory of Scipio Africanus. But he was most obnoxious to the majority of his enemies because he lopped off extravagance in living. This could not be done away with outright, since most of the people were already infected and corrupted by it, and so he ' took a roundabout way. He had all apparel, equipages, jewellery, furniture and plate, the value of which in any case exceeded fifteen hundred drachmas, assessed at ten times its worth, wishing by means of larger assessments to make the owners’ taxes also larger. Then he laid a tax of three on every thousand asses thus assessed, in order that such property holders, burdened by their charges, and seeing that people of equal wealth who led modest and simple lives paid less into the public treasury, might desist from their extravagance. As a result, both classes were incensed against him, both those who endured the taxes for the sake of their luxury, and those no less who put away their luxury because of the taxes. For most men think themselves robbed of their wealth if they are prevented from displaying it, and that display of it is made in the superfluities, not in the necessaries of life. This, we are told, is what most astonished Ariston the philosopher, namely, that those possessed of the superfluities of life should be counted happy, rather than those well provided with life’s necessary and useful things. Scopas the Thessalian, when one of his friends asked for something of his which

355

AA 2

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tap avrod TL TOLOUTOY, O pn opodpa ty Xpno ywov 347
exeive, Kal NéyovTos, @s oudev airtel TOV avary-Kaiwy Kat xpnoipou “Kal pv éye rovrots,” eltrev, “ evdaimov Kat mrovotds elt, Tois aXypn-otTows Kal wepittois.” ovTws Oo Tob mhouTou fiXos ovdevt waber puaixe TUVTLMEVOS €x THS dyAwSoUS Kal Oupaiov b0kns émetaddLos eae.
XIX. Ou pny ara TOV eyxadovvTav eAdXota ppovtivoy o Katov étt paidrov em ETELVED, aqro-KOTTWY [LEV OXETOUS, ols To Twapappéov Snpootov
ddwp VrokapBavovres aT hyov evs oixias tdtas Kal KNTOVS, avar péT ov dé Kal xataBddXov dca m pouBa.ver els TO Snpoovov olxodounuara, avaTtéArwy 6é Tots pra Bois Tas épyovaBias, Ta 5é TEAM Tais mpaceow émt Tas é éaxdras ehavver TLLas. ag’ @Y avT@ TOD ouvnyn pioos. OL dé qTepl TOV Titov cvoTayres er avrov éy TE
Th Bova} TAS yeyevnpuevas éxdocets kat pradacers TOV iepav Kai Snpoctov Epyov éXucay as Ye-yeypnuévas advaolted@s, Kal tov Snudpyev tovs Opacutatous wapwkvvay év Sym mpooKanre-cacOat tov Kdtwva Kat onmiaoar dvol Taddv-TOUS. TOANG dé xal ampos THY THS Bains
KATA KEUHY nvavreadnaay, ny éxeivos éx Xena Tov Kolv@v wUTd TO BovArEUTHpLoOy TH ayopg mapeBane cat Tlopxia BaciiKn T poanyopevOn.) Paiverar 6é Bavpacras amrodeEdpevos avroo THY TUM T ELLY 0 Ojpos. dyOpidvra youv avabels
éy T@ vam Ths “Tryselas érréypayev ov Tas
1 Topxia BaciAtkh mpoonyupevon Sintenis with the better
’ MSS., and now S. Cf. Livy 39, 44. Mopklay Baotrcwhy xpoonydpevoev Bekker (and called).
356

was of no great service to him, with the remark — that he asked for nothing that was necessary and useful, replied: “ And yet my wealth and happiness are based on just such useless and superfluous things.”” Thus the desire for wealth is no natural adjunct of the soul, but is imposed upon it by the false opinions of the outside world.
XIX. However, Cato paid not the slightest heed to his accusers, but grew still more strict. He cut off the pipes by which people conveyed part of the public water supply into their private houses and gardens ; he upset and demolished all buildings that enroached on public land; he reduced the cost of public works to the lowest, and forced the rent of public lands to the highest possible figure. All these thing brought much odium upon him. Titus Flamininus headed a party against him which induced the Senate to annul as useless the outlays and payments which he had authorised for temples and public works, and incited the boldest of the tribunes to call him to account before the people and fine him two talents. The Senate also strongly opposed the erection of the basilica which he built at the public cost below the council-house in the Forum, and which was called the Basilica Porcia.

Still, it appears that the people approved of his censorship to an amazing extent. At any rate, after erecting a statue to his honour in the temple of Health, they commemorated in the inscription

a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

oTpaTayias ovdé Tov OpiapBov Tob Katwvos, arr’, ws av Tis petappacece THY erreypany, “Or THY ‘Popaiwy ToNuTelay eye ypevny kal pérovoay éml ro xelpov TiunTns YEVOPEVOS Ypnotais aryaryais Kal aadpoow eOtc pois Kai didacxahiaus els opGov atOus dmokaTéaTnae.
KaiTOL TpOTEpoY avTos KaTEyéXa TOV ayaTe@VYTOY Ta TolavTa, Kal rAavOavev auTous EXevyev és) XarKEwy Kal Swrypapov épryous peya ppovodvras, autud de KadMaTas elxovas év Tais yuyais Tepe épey Tovs qoAtTas: mpos bé€ tols Oaupd-Covras, ort TOO adoEwy avdpidvras eXovTwv
EXELVOS OUK EyeEL “ MaAdov yap, " &n, . pone
CnteicOar, Sta ti prov avdptas ov KelT ae 7
Tb keitau’” To 8 Gdov obs eTraLLvovpLEevov h Elou TOV aryalov Todt AY Umropevecy, El {Ln TOUTO X~PNoipos ryivotro TO Kole.
Kaitou! rela Ta mdvrov éautov eyKexm planer, és ye Kal Tous dpaptdvovtds Tl Tept TOV Biov, eit’ éhery xopevous eye ono, as OvK aEuov eynanely avTots: ov 7p Kdraves elou Kat TOUS

évia ppeio Bac TOV UT avTovd TpaTTopévav ovK
EUMER@S emixeipoovTas emapisTepous xaneic bas
Karavas: apopay dé Thv BovaAny pos avrov év Tois émiahadeotdTols Kalpojs waomrep ev TAO pos xuBepyyray, Kal qodXAdKLS fL TApOVTOS bmeptiOeaOar Ta Trelarns aa onovdis. & bn mapa TOV GAN@Y auT@ paptupeirac péeya yap éaxev év TH monet Kat &ta Tov Biov Kal da Tov Noyov Kai 51a TO yHpas afiopa.
XX. Téyove 6€ kal watnp ayabos Kai Tepi

1 «alto: conjecture of Blass : al,

upon it, not the military commands nor the triumph of Cato, but, as the inscription may be translated, the fact " that when the Roman state was tottering to its fall, he was made censor, and by helpful guidance, wise restraints, and sound teachings, restored it again." And yet, before this time he used to laugh at those who delighted in such honours, saying that, although they knew it not, their pride was based simply on the work of statuaries and painters, whereas his own images, of the most exquisite workmanship, were borne about in the hearts of his fellow citizens. And to those who expressed their amazement that many men of no fame had statues, while he had none, he used to say: "I would much rather have men ask why I have no statue, than why I have one." In short, he thought a good citizen should not even allow himself to be praised, unless such praise was beneficial to the commonwealth.

And yet of all men he has heaped most praises "upon himself. He tells us that men of self-indulgent lives, when rebuked for it, used to say: " We ought not to be blamed; we are no Catos.'"' Also that those who imitated some of his practices and did _ it clumsily, were called "left-handed Catos." Also that the Senate looked to him in the most dangerous crises as seafarers to their helmsman, and often, if he was not present, postponed its most serious business. These boasts of his are confirmed, it is true, by other witnesses, for he had great authority in the city, alike for his life, his eloquence, and his age.

XX. He was also a good father, .a considerate

eo

359

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

yuvaika xpnotos avnp Kal ypnyatiotns ovK
evxatagppovntos ovS as TL pixpoy 4 hadrov év Tapéepy@ peTuyerpioapevos THY ToLavTHY émt-pérecav. GOev olowar Setv nal epi tovTwv dca Karas Ever duehOeiyy = yuvaixa pev evyeverrépav ) WArovovwtépay eynpev, Hryovpevos opmoiws pep aupotépas éxery Bdpos Kal dpovnua, tas Se yevvaias aidoupévas Ta aiaxpa padXOV virnKoous elvat mpos TA KaAa TOis yeyapnKdar. Tov Oé TUTTOVTA YAMETHY 1) Tada ToIs dyLw@TaTols EXNeyev lepots mpoopépey tas yeipas. ev érraivm Se peibov. TiVecOar TO yapéerny ayadov h TO pméyay elvat ouyxAntiKov' érel cal Ywxpatovs ovdev GXo0 Oavpalerv tod taraod TAH STL yuvatKt NareTH Kal mato arom iKToLW ypwpevos ére-exas Kal mpaws drerérece. © yevouévou 88 Tov Tatoos ovdeyv Hv Epyov otTws avayxailov, Ee wy TL Snpoctov, @S yy Tapelvar TH yuvatKl Novotan TO Bpépos Kai omapyavotcn. avtn yap étpedev idiw ydXaxte TwoAAdKis Sé cal Ta Tov Sod jTatoapia TO pacT@ T pOo te Lev Kateaxevatey evvotay €x THS TUYTpodias Tpos TOV Viov. érrel dé np~ato ouviévar, TaparaPov avros édidacxe ypap para, KaiTot Xa,pievta, SodXov cixe ypappatTioTnvy svona Xirwva, wodrdpovs did0doKovtTa maidas. ovx nkiov 8 Tov vidv, a dyatv avtés, uo SovAOU KAaKO@S aKoveWW TOU wWTOS avaTetverOar pavOdvovta Bpddiov, ovdé ye paOnparos TnMLKOUTOV TH SovAW Yapiy Gdheiretv, AAN aUTOS péev Hv ypaypatiatys, autos Se vomody-360
"S 348

husband, and a household manager of no mean talent, nor did he give only a fitful attention to this, as a matter of little or no importance: Therefore I think I ought to give suitable instances of his conduct in these relations. He married a wife who was of gentler birth than she was rich, thinking that, although the rich and the high-born may be alike given to pride, still, women of high birth have such a horror of what is disgraceful that they are more obedient to their husbands in all that is honourahle. He used to say that the man who struck his wife or child, laid violent hands on the holiest of holy things. Also that he thought it more praiseworthy to be a good husband than a great senator, nay, there was nothing else to admire in Socrates of old except that he was always kind and gentle in his intercourse with a shrewish wife and stupid sons. After the birth of his son, no business could be so urgent, unless it had a public character, as to prevent him from _ being present when his wife bathed and swaddled the babe. For the mother nursed it herself, and often gave suck also to the infants of her slaves, that so they might come to cherish a brotherly affection for her son. As soon as the boy showed signs of understanding, his father took him under his own charge and taught him to read, although he had an accomplished slave, Chilo by name, who was a school-teacher, and taught many boys. Still, Cato thought it not right, as he tells us himself, that his son should be scolded by a slave, or have his ears tweaked when he was slow to learn, still less that he should be indebted to his slave for such a priceless thing as education. He was therefore ° 364

f
if

4 > A \ 4 9 / 3 ,
duxtns, autos 5€ yusvacTns, ov povoy dxovTiley
sao ¢ A »>OQod ¢ 4 4 A «7
od’ oTAopayely ovd’ immevery SiddoKev Tov vior, » N (ol A , A “A
Gra Kal TH yYelpl WE traiew Kai xadpa kal
yiyos avéyerOar cal ta divwdn Kal tpaxydvovta Tov TroTamov dravnxYopevoy aToBiualecOar. Kai Tas ¢ / 4 \ > AN IN 7
iatopias 5é auyypdyrat gdnoiv avdtos idia yeepl
wal peyaros ypaupacw, Orrws olxoev UTrapyot T® wad pos éutretpiav TOV TaXaLov Kal TaTpi-
’ a 9 > “A e 4 >

wv wpercicbar: ta 8 aloypa TOY pnudTwY ovx Hrrov evrAaBeiobar rod tmaidos mapovtos 7 Tov lepwv tapBéver, ds ‘Eotiddas xadodot svddov-cacOar dé pndérote. xal tovto Kxowwov ore
e , £0 9 \ mY @ i a1

Pwpaiwrv e6os eivar: Kal yap trevOepol yauBpois
’ , 4 4 A
epurAutrovreo audrdoverOar, Svawrovpmevor THY amoxdduyy Kal yopywow. elta pévTot wap
"KAAnVeY TO yupvovoba pabortes, avTOL mwadLV Tov Kal pera YUVALK@Y TODTO Tpacoely avaTrenANkao Tous” EXAnvas.
Odtw dé xarov epyov eis aperny to Katou mAaTTOVTE Kal Snuvoupyobyre Tov vioV, érel Ta
a , Ths mpoOupias Av aueutrtra nal & evdvlav imrnkovey 7 ux, To O€ copa paraxadTepov
épaiveTo Tov Tovey, VIraviKev aVT@ TO TUVTOVOV
“ ¢
dyav Kal Kexoracpévov THs Staitys. o Sé, Kaimrep ovUTWs Exwr, avnp ayabos Rv ev Tais otpateias, kat THY pos Lepoéa paxnv jywvicato AapTpas
4 fe ce)
IlavAov otparnyoivros. eita pévtoe Tov Eidous exxpovabevtos vmro TAnyis 7) 8. UypoTnTa THS
1 wevBepol yauBpots Hercher and Blass, adopting the conjecture of Sintenis : wev@epots yauBpol, .
362

MARCUS CATO

himself not only the boy’s reading-teacher, but his tutor in law, and his athletic trainer, and he taught his son not merely to hurl the javelin and fight in armour and ride the horse,.but also to box, to endure heat and cold, and to swim lustily through the eddies and billows of the Tiber. His History of Rome, as he tells us himself, he wrote . out with his own hand and in large characters, that his son might have in his own home an aid to acquaintance with his country’s ancient traditions. He declares that his son’s presence put him on his guard against indecencies of speech as much as that of the so-called Vestal Virgins, and that he never bathed with him. This, indeed, would seem to have been a general custom with the Romans, for even fathers-in-law avoided bathing with their sons-in-law, because they were ashamed to uncover their nakedness. Afterwards, however, when they had learned from the Greeks their freedom in going naked, they in their turn infected the Greeks with the practice even when women were present. So Cato wrought at the fair task of moulding and fashioning his son to virtue, finding his zeal blameless, and his spirit answering to his good natural parts. But since his body was rather too delicate to endure much hardship, he relaxed some- what in his favour the excessive rigidity and austerity of his own mode of life. But his son, although thus delicate, made a sturdy soldier, and fought brilliantly under Paulus Aemilius in the battle against Perseus.!. On that occasion his sword either was smitten from his hand or slipped frum his

} Pydna, 168 B.c.
363
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

xeipos eEodcPovtos axOecbels tpéretas mMpos Tivas tav auvvnibev, cal waparaBov éxelvous avddis eis Tovs modeuious evéBare. Trordr@ 8 ayave cal Bia peyddrn Stabwricas tov Torrey aveipe poyis év ToAdois oayuacw Srrwv Kal owuact vexpav opod didrwv Te Kal TrodvEeuloy KaTaceowpevpévov. ep @ Kal Tladdos 0 otpa-Tnyos HyadaOn TO pepaxtov, Kal Kdtwvos avtov dépetal tis emisToAN Mpos Tov viovy Umepduas ératvouvTos tTHy wept TO Eihos Pidoripiayv avtod
Kai omuvony. vaTtepov dé xai LlavAov Ouyarépa Teptiav éynpev o veavias, aderdny Lenriwvos, ovy ATTov Hn Se avrov fH Tov TaTépa KaTAapeyvupevos eis yévos THALKOUTOY. 7 pev ovV TrEpt TOV viov éripércca Tov Katwvos &Evov éxyev TéXas.
XXI. Olxéras 5é moddovs extat0, TaY aix-
HareTwv wvovpevos pddoTa TOUS pLKpo’s Kal
Suvapévous ete tpopny Kxai taidevow @s oKv-Aaxas h mwXous éveyxeitv. TovTwy ovdels eioHnA-Bev eis oixiay érépav, ef py wéurpavros avtod Karavos 4 tis yuvatcos. o 8 éepwrnbeis, ri ampatto. Kdtwv, ovdev amexpiveto TANV aryvoety.
Gdec O€ 4 mpattey Te TOY dvayKaiwy olKxot Tov Sovrov) xadevdev: nal opodpa Tots xotpwpévoes
o Kdtwy éyaipe, mpgotépous Te TaY éypyyopoTwy ropicwv Kal pos otvody BeXTiovas ypnocOar Tav Seouévwy Urvov Tos atroAeAauKoTas. olopeVvos 5é ra péytota padvoupyeiy adpodiciwy évexa rovs dovrAous eEtakev @piopévou vopicpatos opsreiy tats Oeparrarviory, érépa S€ yuvaixl pndéva. wr7-ovale.
364

349

MARCUS CATO

moist grasp. Distressed at this mishap, he turned to some of his companions for aid, and supported by them rushed again into the thick of the enemy. After a long and furious struggle, he succeeded in clearing the place, and found the sword at last among the many heaps of arms and dead _ bodies where friends and foes alike lay piled upon one another. Paulus, his commander, admired the young man’s exploit, and there is still extant a letter written by Cato himself to his son, in which he heaps extravagant praise upon him for this honourable Zeal in recovering his sword. The young man afterwards married Tertia, a daughter of Paulus and a sister of the younger Scipio, and his admission into such a family was due no less to himself than to his father. Thus Cato’s careful attention to the education of his son bore worthy fruit.

XXI. He owned many domestics, and usually bought those prisoners of war who were young and still capable of being reared and_ trained like whelps or colts. Not one of his slaves ever entered another man’s house unless sent thither by Cato or his wife, and when such an one was asked what Cato was doing, he always answered that he did not know. A slave of his was expected either to be busy about the house, or to be asleep, and he was very partial to the sleepy ones. He thought ' these gentler than the wakeful ones, and that those who had enjoyed the gift of sleep were better for any kind of service than those who lacked it. In the belief that his slaves were led into most mischief by their sexual passions, he stipulated that the males should consort with the females at a fixed price, but should never approach any other woman.

ae

3 ‘Ey apxf pev ody ere mévns av cal oTpatevo-HEvOs T POs ovodeyv EOUVTKOAaLVE TOV mept diavray, arr aiayloTov arrépawve bua yaorépa T pos otKéTny Cuyouayey. Darepov b¢ TOV Tparywarov émdib0v Tov TOLOUJLEVOS eoridaers prov Kal cuvapxXovT@y éxodater evd0s pera TO Seirvov
ipadvre TOUS dpedéa:repov Urroupyna av7as oT/00p 7 4 oxevdoavTas. ael 6é TWA oTdoLW EXELD Tovs dovous eunXavaro Kat Sia opav TOS adAnrous, ibe het THY omovotav avTayv Kal Sedocws. Tovs & d&sov eipydoOar re Oavdrou dSokavtes édixaiou xpiOévras év Tots oixétats Taow arodynoxeap, EL Katayvoa bien.
5 ‘Amropevos dé TUYTOVUTEPOV Topia pow THY

pe yewpytav paXXdOv iryetto Saryoyny n ™poaodov, eis 8 aahanh mpaypara, kat BéBaa

KataTeBépevos Tas ddhopmas é€xTato ALuvas, beara

Oepud, TOTOUS xvadevoty ayetpeévous, épya.

Tico, x@pav? Exoucay avropuels vouas Kat

Dras, ag’ Ov auT@ Xprpara T pone TOAAG nd

v6 TOU Atos, as Pnow avros, BraBfvar duva-

6 péverv. expiaato dé «al TO SiaBeBAnperep pdduora, TOY Saveouan € €ml vauTeKxois TOV TpoTrov TovTov. éxéXeve TOUS SaverSouevous eri Kowevig TOANOUS Tapaxanely, yevopevev be TevTHKOVTA
kal tAolwy TocovTwY avTos elxe piav pepida dia Kovivtiwvos dsrehevdépov Tois yaar fra oUp-TPAryWATEVOMEVOY Kab TULTAEOVTOS. jv & ovv
ovK eis dtrav 0 xivduvos, adr' eis Hépos petx pov
7 émt xépdect peydros. édidov é xai tTav oixeTav

1 Ipya alooia, xépav Blass with S: épyarnolay xépay, productive land.
366

MARCUS CATO

At the outset, when he was. still poor and in military service, he found no fault at all with what was served up to him, declaring that it was shameful for a man to quarrel with a domestic over food and drink. But afterwards, when his circumstances were improved and he used to entertain his friends and colleagues at table, no sooner was the dinner over than he would flog those slaves who had been remiss at all in preparing or serving it. He was always contriving that his slaves should have feuds and dissensions among themselves ; harmony among them made him suspicious and fearful of them. He had those who were suspected of some capital offence brought to trial before all their fellow servants, and, if convicted, put to death.

However, as he applied himself more strenuously to money-getting, he came to regard agriculture as more entertaining than profitable, and invested his capital in business that was safe and sure. He bought ponds, hot springs, districts given over to -fullers, pitch factories, land with natural pasture and forest, all of which brought him in large profits, and "could not," to use his own phrase, " be ruined by Jupiter." He used to loan money also in the most disreputable of all ways, namely, on ships, and his method was as follows. He required his borrowers to form a large company, and when there were fifty partners and as many ships for his security, he took one share in the company himself, and was represented by Quintio, a freedman of his, who accompanied his clients in all their ventures. In this way his entire security was not imperilled, but only a small part of it, and his profits were large.

367

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

"A ' 3 4 e > 3 lel
tots PBovropévots apytptov. ot 8 éwvodvTo
na 9 4 ? / 4
jwaioas, era tovTous adoxnaaytes Kab diddEartes

b) 4, A ,) > \ b) , avaropact tod Katrwvos pet’ éviavroyv aredi-
\ \ \ a Cowes ef
SovTo. wroAXovs b€ Kal KATELYEV O Kator, bony
€ / \ 9 a 4 e a
o wrelaTny Sid0vs éwvetto Tiny UTroNoyLCOpmevos.
ampotpémay dé roy viov él tadtad dyno ovK
> / > \ / N 9 \ A , avdpos, AAAG YXNpas yuvatKos Elvat TO pELdoai TE Tov wrapyovterv. éxeivo 8 dn oodpotepov
A 4, ed ‘ Ww a tov Kdrwyvos, dts Oavyactov avipa Kal Geto
> A > f \ 4 a ? / 4
elmety érodpnoe pos So€av, ds arroNetTret WAEOV
> a , aA 4 ka ,
év Tois NOYyots 5 mpocéOnKev ob mapéAaBev.
XXII. "Hén 6€ adtod yépovtos yeyovoros mpéaBers “AOnvndev ArOov cis “Pwuny ot tepi Kapvedinv tov ‘'Axadnpaixoy xal Asoyévn tov Lrwixoy Pirocogoyv, xatadikny tia twapa:tnao-pevo. too Syyov trav *AOnvaiwrv, iv épnunv
aprov ‘Opwriwy pev SiwEdvrov, Lixvaviorv Sé Katayndicapévov, Tivnua TadravTwyv tevtTa-
/ ” > 4 ® e ,
Kociwy éyovoav. evOds ody of didoroywraTot TeV veavicxwy érl tous dvdpas tevto, Kal cvvicav axpowpevor cal Oavudlovtes aytovs. pa-bd e 4 A K @ , ,
Mota & 1 Kapvedadouv yapis, hs Svvapis Te
, ‘ U aA 7 b 9 /
wreiatn Kat Sofa THs Suvapews ovK atrodéovaa,
lA 9 4 ‘ 4 9
peyarov emiiaBopéevn cat diravOpwrwv axpoa-THpiwy ws veda THY TOALW HyHS evéTANCE.
\ / a“ € > A a 3 ”
kai Noyos KaTEeiver, ws avnp “EXXnv eis ExrrAHEcy vreppuns wavTa Knrov Kal Yelpovpevos Epwra 368

MARCUS CATO

He used to lend money also to those of his slaves who wished it, and they would buy boys with it, and after training and teaching them for a year, at Cato’s expense, would sell them again. Many of these boys Cato would retain for himself, reckoning to the credit of the slave the highest price bid for his boy. He tried to incite his son also to such economies, by saying that it was not the part of a man, but of a widow woman, to lessen his substance. But that surely was too vehement a speech of Cato's, when he went so far as to say that a man was to be admired and glorified like a god if the final inventory of his property showed that he had added to it more than he had inherited.

XXII. When he was now well on in_ years, there came as ambassadors from Athens to Rome,} Carneades the Academic, and Diogenes the Stoic philosopher, to beg the reversal of a certain decision against the Athenian people, which imposed upon them a fine of five hundred talents. The people of Oropus had brought the suit, the Athenians had let the case go by default, and the Sicyonians had pronounced judgment against them. Upon the arrival of these philosophers, the most studious of the city's youth hastened to wait upon them, and became their devoted and admiring listeners. The charm of Carneades especially, which had boundless power, and a fame not inferior to its power, won large and sympathetic audiences, and filled the city, like a rushing mighty wind, with the noise of his praises. Report spread. far and wide that a Greek of amazing talent, who disarmed all opposition by the magic of his eloquence, had infused a tremen-

1 155 B.c.

Sevov éuBéSrnxe Tots véots, Vf' oF TOY ArAdOV noovayv Kat diatpiBav éxmecovtes évOovoimor Tept dirocohpiav. Tada Tois pév Gras HpecKe
'Pwpaiots yivoueva, cal Ta perpdxia traidetas
"EAAnviKAs perarapBdaveyvta cal cuvovta bavpa-Copévors avdpdow déws éewpwv' o 5é Katov é& apxiis te Tod SnrXov TaV Adyar Tapappeovros eis THY TOALY HYOETO PoBovpevos, wn TO ptido-Tusov évrad0a tpéravtes of véot THY ETL TO Aéyery Sokav ayarnowot padrdXrov THS ato TOV Epywv Kal THY oTpaTeL@y, érrel Sé mpovRaivev
n Sofa tav dtroccpav év. TH TWOAEL Kal TOvS TPWTOUS AOYOUS AUT@V Tpos THY GUYKANTOV GV1)
émiupavns oamovddcas avtTos nal SenBels npynvevoe, dios "Axirtos, éyym pet evmperreias amodioTropnmncacbat Tovs pirocopous amavtas €x THS ToAEwS. Kal TapeNOov eis THY TUYKAN-Tov é€uéuaparo tols adpyovow, Ste mpecReva xkdOnrat ToAvY ypovoyv atrpaKxtos avdpav, ot Tepi mavTos ov BovrowrTo padiws reiPew Svvavtac: Seiy ody Thy TaxloTHY yvavai Tt Kal YndicacBat mept THS mperBeias, Grrws ovTOL pev emi Tas axoras Tparropevo. Staréywvtar mato 'EX-Anvev, of dé "Pwpaiwy véot TOV vopwv Kal TaV

apKovTwy ws TpoTépoy axovwat. ' XXIII. Taira & ovy, ws Got vopifovar, Kapveddn duoyepavas empakev, ddr bdws pedo-copia mpookexpovxas xal wacav ‘EXXAnviKny podaoay Kal ns Sia bo tdoTiuias mpoTnAaxi-Cov, bs ye eal Ywxpatn dnol Adrov Kal Blavov rYEVOJLEVOV emuyerpeiy, @ tpoT@ Suvaros Tv, Tupavvety THS waTploos, KaTaXVoYTa Ta €On Kal pos 37°

350

MARCUS CATO

dous passion into the youth of the city, in conse- quence of which they forsook their other pleasures and pursuits and were “ possessed ”’ about philosophy. The other Romans were pleased at this, and glad to see their young men lay hold of Greek culture and consort with such admirable men. But Cato, at the very outset, when this zeal for discussion came pouring into the city, was distressed, fearing lest the young men, by giving this direction to their ambition, should come to love a reputation based on mere: words more than one achieved by martial deeds. And when the fame of the visiting philoso- phers rose yet higher in the city, and their first speeches before the Senate were interpreted, at his own instance and request, by so conspicuous a man as Gaius Acilius, Cato determined, on some decent pretext or other, to rid and purge the city of ~ them all. So he rose in the Senate and censured v the magistrates for keeping in such long suspense an embassy composed of men who could easily secure anything they wished, so persuasive were they. “ We ought,” he said, “to make up our minds one way or another, and vote on what the embassy proposes, in order that these men may return to their schools and lecture to the sons of Greece, while the youth of Rome give ear to their laws and magistrates, as heretofore.”

XXIII. This he did, not, as some think, out of personal hostility to Carneades, but because he was wholly averse to philosophy, and made mock of all Greek culture and training, out of patriotic zeal. He says, for instance, that Socrates was a mighty prattler, who attempted, as best he could, to be his country’s tyrant, by abolishing its customs,

371
B B 2 >
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

évavtias Tois vopots S0éas éAXxovra Kal peOrotavra Tous qwoAditas. hv © "laoxpdtovs diatpiBny émickwrtoy ynpav not tap avT@ Tovs pabnras
as év “Aidov rapa Mivg ypnoopévouvs rais Téxvats Kal Sixas épodvtas. tov Sé traida d.a-BdddXwv mpos ta “EXAnviKa hava Kxéxpnrac
Opacurépa tod ynpws, olov amobeoTilwv Kai
TpPOMaVvTEvov, WS aTroNOVGL Pwpato Ta TPaypLaTa

Ypappdroy “EAA quicay avarAnabevres. adrXra TAUTNVY ev avrob THY Svodnpiav 0 ‘Xpovos amrodeixvuct KEV, év @ Tots Te Tpaypact ) TONS npOn peyiarn Kad 7 pos ‘EXdnvind pabn-para Kat masdela & amacav eaxev oixelws.
‘O & ov povov anny Gdvero Tois: pdocogovat ‘EXdqvev, andra Kal TOUS lat pevovtas év ‘Poeun by’ browias eixe. Kal Tov _Inmoxpdtous, ws GouKeVv, AKNKOWS ROYo?, ov elre TOU jmeyddou
Bacthéws xahobvros avroy éml qoAXois TLot
TANGYTOLS, ouK av Tote _BapBapors ‘EXAqvev Torepiots éauTov mapaayeiy, EXeye KOLVOV GpKov elvat ToDTOV tar pay amrrdvTer, Kal TapexeeveTo purdrrecbat TO mavdl mayras: auT@ dé yey pay-pévov Uropynua elvat, xal mpos Todo Jeparrevery Kat Stattav tovs vocobvras oiKot, vijorev pev oudétroTe Scatnpav ovdéva, TpEpav 5é Aaxavors i] capxidious ynoons 7 pdcons 4 Naya Kal yap TOUTO _Koupov elva Kal ™ poo popov aadevoriar, wANY ore TONG oupBaiver trois hayodaty é évuTrvid-Feadat- ToLaUTy de Oeparreia Kal Siairn xpe-HEVOS _byvatvery pev abrés, ixytatvovtas 88 Tovs éavtov dvahuratrey. .
372

MARCUS CATO

and by enticing his fellow citizens into opinions contrary to the laws. He made fun of the school of Isocrates, declaring that his pupils kept on studying with him till they were old men, as if they were to practise their arts and plead their cases before Minos in Hades. And seeking to prejudice his son against Greek culture, he indulges in an utterance all too rash for his years, declaring, in the tone of a prophet or a seer, that Rome would lose her empire when she had become infected with Greek letters. But time has certainly shown the emptiness of this ill-boding speech of his, for _ while the city was at the zenith of its empire, she made every form of Greek learning and culture
her own.
It was not only Greek philosophers that he hated,
but he was also suspicious of Greeks who practised medicine at Rome. He had heard, it would seem, of Hippocrates' reply when the Great King of Persia consulted him, with the promise of a fee of many talents, namely, that he would never put his skill at the service of Barbarians, who were enemies of Greece. He said all Greek physicians had taken a similar oath, and urged his son to beware of them all. He himself, he said, had written a book of recipes, which he followed in the treatment and regimen of any who were sick in his family. He never required his patients to fast, but fed them on greens, or bits of duck, pigeon, or hare. Such a diet, he said, was light and good for sick people, except that it 'often causes dreams. By following such treatment and regimen he said he had good health himself, and kept his eee in good health. |

373

XXIV. Kal crepi ye totro paivetas yeyoves ovK avepéontos' Kal yap thy yuvaixa Kal Tov viov
' / > \ \ A , \ b /
amréBanrev. avtos b¢ T@ copatt mpos evekiav Kal popunv dodaras twemrnyas él mreicTov avtetyer, @oTe Kal yuvatcl mperBurns dv apodpa wAnotd-Cerv Kal yhuat ydpov ov Kad" Hruciay ex TovavTns mpopdcews. amroBadwv TrHv yuvaixa TO pev vi@
TlavAou Ouyarépa, Zanriovos dé adeApiy 7 nryaryero
Mpos yapov, avTos 5é yXnpevwv éeyphto tardtoKy Kpupa porrwon ™pos avrov. wv ovv év oixia poxpa vopepny exovon TOU IWpdypLaTos aicOnots: Kal Tore TOU yuvaiouv Opacvrepov trapacoBhjoae
mapa TO dSwudtiov Sofavtos o veavias elie pev +Q/ b] / . , \ ovdév, éuBrepas 5é ras wixpotepov Kal Satparrels
oun éabe Tov rperBuTny. ws ody &yvw TO Tpaypa Svoyepavopevov br' adtav, ovdev éyxarécas ovdé
4, >? 4 LA 27
peurdapevos, adda xataBaivwv, @aorep etolet, \ , > b A 4 a e
peta dirwy eis dyopav Yarwviov twa tov bT0-yeypauparevKoTwoy avT@ tapovta Kal cupumpo-TwéuTovTa peyaryn pwovn Tpocayopevaas npwrnaer, ef To Quydrpiov acuvnppoxe vupdig. tod &

b 4 / e Q\ \ “ avOpw@rov djnoavtos, ws ovde wéArEL) TpPOTEpoV
éxeivy Kotvwcdpevos “ Kal pny éyw aot,” dnaty, ce eo” PS) A 9 15 9 N ‘ Ad a ‘etpnxa Knoeotny éemitndevov, et pn vn Aia + Ths Hrucias Svoyvepaivoito: TaANa yap ov pep-
, ? / } de / ” e * e
mTOS é€oTlt, apodpa dé mpecBuTns. ws ov o
Larovios exéreve tadra dpovrivew Kai Sdovat THY KOpnY @ Wpoapeitar, merdTwW ovoav avTov xa Seouevnv ris éexeivov xndeuovias, ovdeuiay 6 374

351

MARCUS CATO

XXIV. Such presumption on his,part seems not to have gone unpunished, for he lost his wife and his son. He himself was well confirmed in bodily health and vigour, and long withstood the assaults of age. Even when an old man he was prone to indulge his sexual appetite, and at last married a _ wife when he was long past the marrying age. This was the way it came about. After the death of his wife, he married his son to the daughter of Aemilius Paulus, the sister of Scipio, but he himself, in his widowhood, took solace with a slave girl who secretly visited his bed. Of: course, in a small house with a young married woman in it, the matter was discovered, and once, when the girl seemed to flaunt her way rather too boldly to his chamber, the old man could not help noticing that his son, although he said nothing, looked very sour, and turned away. Perceiving that the thing displeased his children, Cato did not upbraid or blame them at all, but as he was going down in his usual way to the forum with his clients, called out with a loud voice to a certain Salonius, who had been. one of his under-secretaries, and was now in his train, asking him if he had found a good husband for his young daughter. The man said he had not, and would not do so without first consulting his patron. ‘“ Well then,” said Cato, “I have found a suitable son-in-law for you, unless indeed his age should be displeasing ; in other ways no fault can be found with him, but he is a very old man.” Salonius at once bade him take the matter in charge and give the maid to the man of his choice, since she was a dependant of his and in need of his kind services. Then Cato, without any more

375

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kdtov avaBodny TOLNTAMEVOS avros épn THY

4 mapO évov aiteiy EavT@. Kal TO weév mpdTor, as eiKos,) AOyos éberAnke TOV avOpwmrov, Topp pev ydpov TOV Kdrova, moppw 8 avtov otxias UTATIKHS Kab Opa pBicay ndevpar av TiO épevov omovon oé Xpwpevov opav do pevos ebéEato, Kal karaBdvres evOus ets ayopav éro.odvTo THY éyyiny.

Ipartopevov be Tou ydpou TaparaBov TOUS
émirndeious 0 vlos TOU Kdravos parnae Tov TATEpA, fn Tt pepapopevos) AeAUTNWEVvOS UIT'
5 avuTov pntpucav emdyeTau. 0 be Karov ava.- Bonoas Evpjpncoy," elev, 'Oo mai TwavTa yap ayaotd pot Ta Tapa cov Kal peparrov ouderemOupe dé WAEtovas EpaUT@ TE maidas kat TohiTas TH Tapio TOLOUTOUS amonureiv." TaUTHY dé rH yopny 7 POTEpPOV elrrety pact TletatoTpaTtov Tov "AOnvatev TUpavvoy erruynpavTa Tots évnrtKots matat THY "Apyoriba Tipavaccar, éE iis "Topavta kat @cocarov auT@ Aeyouat
6° ryevéo Bar. ynpavee 5é To Kdrove yiverat ais, @ Tapwvupcov aro THs pnt pos éeto Yadwviov.
O 8e pea Birepos vios eredevTHTE TTPATHYOV.
Kal pepe fey avTov modduKes év tots Bu-Brtous 0 Kdtov @S dv8pos aryaod Yeyoveros, TPEOs dé Kal dirocopuws €yeTaL THY cunpopay
éveynely Kal pnodev apBrvrepos . du' avtnv eis
7 Ta TWortTika yevérOar. ov yap, ws Aevxtos AovKxovAros Dorepov Kat Méreddros 0 [Iios, eFéxapev bro yHpws Tpos Ta dnpoota, evtoupylav TH TOALTELay MYOULEVOS, ovd ws ™ poTepov Lentiov o 'Adpixavos Sia Tov avtTixpovcavTa 376

MARCUS CATO

ado, said that he asked the damsel to wife for himself. At first, as was natural, the proposal amazed the man, who counted Cato far past marriage, and himself far beneath alliance with a house of consular dignity and triumphal honours; but when he saw that Cato was in earnest, he gladly accepted his proposal, and as soon as they reached the forum
the banns were published.
While the marriage was in hand, Cato's son, accompanied by his friends, asked his father if it was because he had any complaint to make against him that he was now foisting a step-mother upon him. "Heaven forbid! my son," cried Cato, "all your conduct towards me has been admirable, and I have no fault to find with you; but I desire to bless myself and my country with more such sons." However, they say that this sentiment was uttered long before by Peisistratus, the tyrant of Athens, who gave his grown up sons a step-mother in the person of Timonassa of Argolis, by whom he is said to have had Iophon and Thessalus. Of this second marriage a son was born to Cato,. who was named Salonius, after his mother's father. But his elder son died in the praetorship. Cato often speaks of him in his books as a brave and worthy man, and is said to have borne his loss with all the equanimity of a philosopher, remitting not a whit because of it his ardour in the public service. For he was not, like Lucius Lucullus and Metellus Pius in after times, too enfeebled by old age to serve the people, regarding the service of the state as a burdensome duty; nor did he, like Scipio Africanus before him, because of envious attacks 377

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

mpos THY dokav avTod POovoy atroatpadels Tov Sjpov éx petaBorgrs erroirnoato Tov AotTrov Biou Téhos dmpayporvuny, arr', wae Atoviavor Tis émretce ~KaAALOTOV évraptov myetobar THY Tupavvida, «adda Tov avros eyynpapa THY T0- ALTELAV TOLNa dpEvos avaTatceow éxpiro Kat madiais, omore cxorator, 1 ouvrdrrerOas BiBXia Kai To yewpryety.
XXV. Luverarrero pev ov. Noryous TE TaVTo- Samrous «al ioropias: "yewpyia dé 1 7 pooeixe véos pev vy ere kal dua THY Xpetav (pyot yap dual Kexpijo Ba povoats Topta pots yewpyia Kal pevdot), TOTE be Sraryorytyy kat Oewptav avT@ Ta yeyvopeva KaT arypov Tapeixe. Kal cuvTétaxtai ye BiBALov ryewoprytKor, év @ Kal Tmepl TAAKOUYTOY oKevaclas Kal TNPNT EDS oTrwpas yéypadev, év mavri du- oT LpLoUpEVOS TEPLTTOS elvat kat idsos. jv Se Kal 76 Selrrvov éy ayp@ Sarpideatepoy exdret yap EXAOTOTE TOV arypoyertovav Kal TEPLX@POV Tovs aurnbes Kal cuvdsyyev idapa@s, ov Tois Kal" nrLKiavy povots HOUs Ov auyyevécBat Kal modewos, anra Kal tois véots, are 67 TOAN@Y pev EMTTELPOS Tparyparov yeyovas, ToNNoLsS be ypaupac Kal aryous a€tors axons EVTETUXTIKDS.

THY 5é tpamelay épv Tots parirra pidorrovov wyetro: Kal oAA pep evpnpta TOV Kar@v Kal ayabav TodmsTav eTreLanyeTo, TOAAH O ay dpynotia TOY axpnatov Kal TovnpaY, pyre pore pyr éraivy wdpodov umrép avtav tod Katwvos ets To oUmTOTLOV 5id0vTos.
XXVI. “Eoyarov de trav TrodtTevpuToY auto

upon his reputation, turn his back upon the people and make leisure his end and aim for the rest of his life; but rather, as someone persuaded Dionysius to regard his sovereignty as his fairest winding-sheet, so he held public service to be the fairest privilege of old age. For recreation and amusement, when he had leisure therefor, he resorted to the writing of books and to farming.

XXV. He composed speeches, then, on all sorts of subjects, and histories, and as for farming, he followed it in earnest when he was young and poor,—indeed, he says he then had only two ways of getting money, farming and frugality,—but in later life he was only a theoretical and fancy farmer. He also composed a book on farming,! in which he actually gave recipes for making cakes and preserving fruit, so ambitious was he to be superior and peculiar in everything. The dinners, too, which he gave in the country, were quite plentiful. He always asked in congenial country neighbours, and made merry with them, and not only did those of his own age find in him an agreeable and much desired companion, but also the young. For he was a man of large experience, who had read and heard much that was well worth repeating. He held the table to be the very best promoter of friendship, and at his own, the conversation turned much to the praise of honourable and worthy citizens, greatly to the neglect of those who were worthless and base. About such Cato suffered no table-talk, either by way of praise or blame.

XXVI. The last of his public services is supposed

1 De re rustica.

379

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ , » / w” a
thy Kapxduvos avdotacty olovtas yeyovévat, TD
pev Epyp tédos émiOévros Tov véov Lxnriwvos, 352

BovrAn dé cal yroun parsota TH Kdtavos apapévwv tov wodrenov éE aitias toladcde. Karov éréupOn mpos Kapyndovious nal Maccavdconv tov Nowdda rrorenotvtas adAAos, éricKeyo~
pevos Tas THs Stapopas mpopacers. oO pev yap hv “ , t] > 9 A e > 9 4 4 tov Siuouv piros am’ apyfs, ot & éyeyoveroav évomrovdot peTa THY UTO LKnTiwvos Artav, apac-péoes Te THS apxis Kal Raped Saou Ypnudtov xodovbévtes. ebpwv 5é THY Tod OY, @ Povro ‘Pwpaiot, cexaxwpevny Kal Tatrewda wpatTovcay, GNA TOMAR pev evavdpoioay HruLKla, peyddoy
5€ wAovTwY yéuovcay, StTAwWY 5é TavTodaTeV Kal TapacKeuns TodeutaTnplou perTHYy Kal uLKpOY a>Q\ 4 a bf 4
ovdev él tovrots dpovotcay, ob ta Nopuddwr @eto xal Macoavacoov mpaypata “Pwpaious C4 ” 4 2 ” 9 bd > ‘ @pav éyew tiOecbar Kai d:artav, adr ae py
Katadmpovtat Tod advwOev éxyOpav nal Bapv-Ouyov nuEnpéevny ariotws, Twadw éy Tois tools 4 ” 4 A e lA 2Q/
xivduvats EveaOat. taxyéws otv vroatpéras édi-Sacxe tv BovAny, ws ai wpoTepov HrTat Kat ouppopalt Kapyndoviwy ov tocodtov ths Suvdpews 6c0v THS avolas ataptaacal, Kivduvevouvcw autous ovx dabeveotépous, épreiporépous dé Tonepev amepyacacOa, on Sé xal ampoava-xivetaOat Tots Nopadixois tovs pds “Pwpaious ayavas, eipyvnv S€ Kat aorovdas dvopa Tov 380 to have been the destruction of Carthage. It was c-

Scipio the Younger who actually brought the task to completion,! but it was largely in consequence of the advice and counsel of Cato that the Romans undertook the war. It was on this wise. Cato was sent? on an embassy to the Carthaginians and Masinissa the Numidian, who were at war with one another, to inquire into the grounds of their quarrel. Masinissa had been a friend of the Roman people from the first, and the Carthaginians had entered into treaty relations with Rome after the defeat which the elder Scipio had given them. The treaty de- prived them of their empire, and imposed a grievous money tribute upon them. Cato, however, found the city by no means in a poor and lowly state, as the Romans supposed, but rather teeming with vigorous fighting men, overflowing with enormous wealth, filled with arms of every sort and with military supplies, and not a little puffed up by all this. He therefore thought it no time for the Romans to be ordering and arranging the affairs of Masinissa and the Numidians, but that unless they should repress a city which had always been their malignant foe, now that its power was so incredibly grown, they would be in- volved again in dangers as great as before. Accord- ingly, he returned with speed to Rome, and advised the Senate that the former calainitous defeats of the Carthaginians had diminished not so much their power as their foolhardiness, and were likely to render them in the end not weaker, but more expert in war; their present contest with Numidia was but a prelude to a contest with Rome, while peace and treaty were mere names wherewith to

1 146 B.c. 2 150 B.c.

WoNe“ov TH péeAAHTEL KeloOaL KaLpoY ‘TrEpLpLe-VOVTOS.
XXVII. IIpos tovtors ghaci tov Karwva Kat ovKa TOV AtBunadyv érrirndes éxBaneiv év TH Bovvrn, tiv tTHRevvov avaBaropevov: eira davpa-odyrov TO péyeos Kal TO KaNNOS elrrely, WS
7 Tabra pépovca, wpa TpLay npEep@y aWAoUY ameXet THS “Pons. ae 8 76n nar Bracorepor, TO Tept tTavTos ov SHroTeE T parywaT0s yvaunv arropaivopevoy TpooeT epwvety ovTas: “ Aoxet b€ joo Kat Kapyndova BN elvat.” tovvaytiov Sé Tl omrAvos Lenmiov 0 Naowxas JET LKAOUPEVOS del Svetédrer Aeyeov Kal am opawvopevos: “ Aoxei pot Kapyndova elva.” TOAAa yap, ws Eouren, bBpee TOV djjuov opé@y mn TANWMENOUYTA Kal be’ evTuYiav Kal ppovnpa Th Bourn Svoxabexrov é6vTa Kal THY modmy Sdnv vrs durdpews bn
perpece Tats oppais Bia TuvEepercouevor, éBovrerTo TOUTOV youV TOV poBov & BoTEp Xarwvov emixetabar

cud povirTiipa Th Opacurnte TOV TOANOD, ENarrov peep TYOUMEVOS ioxvey Ka ndovious TOU TepuryevéoOar “Popaiov, peifov a TOU catagpoveia ar.
To 6€ Kdtwve rodrt avto Sewov épaivero, Baxyevoure TO nue Kal oparroperp Ta Toda be efovciay TONY ael peyadny, pov 6& xal vigdovoav wviro ouppopeov Ka KEKONA MEVnY emuxpépac dae Kab pn WavTaTAaGt TOUS éfw0ev aveneiy THS Hryepovias poBous, avapopas avrois pos Tas olxoVev dyaptias dmommovras.
Ottw pev eepyacaabas Aéyeras Tov TplTov
Kal reXevtatiov o Kdtwy ért Kapyndovious mode-382

cover their postponement of war till a fit occasion offered.

XXVII. In addition to this, it is said that Cato contrived to drop a Libyan fig in the Senate, as he shook out the folds of his toga, and then, as the senators admired its size and beauty, said that the country where it grew was only three days’ sail from Rome. And in one thing he was even more savage, namely, in adding to his vote on any question whatsoever these words: “In my opinion, Carthage must be destroyed.” Publius Scipio Nasica, on the contrary, when called upon for his vote, always ended his speech with this declaration: “In my opinion, Carthage must be spared.” He saw, pro- bably, that the Roman people, in its wantonness, was already guilty of many excesses, and in the pride of its prosperity, spurned the control of the Senate, and forcibly dragged the whole state with it, whithersoever its mad desires inclined it. He wished, therefore, that the fear of Carthage should abide, to curb the boldness of the multitude like a bridle, believing her not strong enough to conquer — Rome, nor yet weak enough to be despised. But this was precisely what Cato dreaded, when the Roman people was inebriated and staggering with its power, to have a city which had always been great, and was now but sobered and chastened by its calamities, for ever threatening them. Such external threats to their sovereignty ought to be done away with altogether, he thought, that they might be free to devise a cure for their domestic failings.

In this way Cato is said to have brought to pass the third and last war against Carthage,! but it had

1 151-146 B.c.

pov, apkapévov Sé rorepeiv ereXeUTNGEV, aTrO-Oeatricas ~ept tod pédXovTos émriOnoev TO Tokéum TérAOS avdpos, Ss Hv TOTE ev veavias, XeMapxos dé aorpatevopevos amedetxvuto rat yvouns épya at rorAuns pos Tovs ayavas.
amayyedXopévov 5é tovTwy eis ‘Pomnv mvvOavopevov Tov Kdrwva dacwy eitreiv:

olos TWémvuTal, TOL O€ GKLAL Aicaovet.
TaUTHnY wey OvY THY aTodacw Tax St Epywr éBeBaiwcev 6 Xeynriwv: o $& Kdtov amédure yeveay &va pev viov éx THs éemiyapnbecions, @ Tapwovdpiov epapev ever Bar Zahonor, eva dé vimvov ex Tov TeNEUTHCTAYROS Viod. Kal LadXw@vios uev éreXeuTnoE OTpaTHyav, o O é€& a'Tod yevopevos Mapxos umdtevoev. qv b€ watros ovTos tov girocogouv Kdtwvos, avdpos apetn nai do&n TOV KaT avTov émipaveatdtou yevomevov.
[APISTEIAOY KAI KATONOX SYTKPI3I=]

I. Teypappévor 5é cai mept rovtwy trav akior la 4 e lA la 4 A , pununs, 6Aos o TovTov Bios OAw Te Garépov mapatelels ovx evOewpnrov eye THv Svadopay

b] / "a 4 e /
évahavilopévny trodXais Kal peyaras oporornay.
et O¢ Sef kata pépos TH ouyxpice Stadrafetv @omep Eros 7} ypadny éxadrepov, TO pev €E ovy UTapxovons ahopuns ets qodtelav cal So€av 384

353

MARCUS CATO

no sooner begun than he died,! having first prophesied of the man who was destined to end it. This man was then young, but as tribune in the army, he was giving proofs of judgment and daring in his engagements with the enemy. Tidings of this came to Rome, and Cato is said to have cried on hearing
them :—
" Only he has wits, but the rest are fluttering shadows." 2
This utterance of Cato's, Scipio speedily confirmed by his deeds. Cato left one son by his second wife, whose surname, as we have already remarked, was Salonius; and one grandson by the son who died before him. Salonius died in the praetorship, but the son whom he left, Marcus, came to be consul. This Marcus was the grandfather of Cato the philosopher, who was the best and most illustrious man of his time.

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES WITH MARCUS CATO

Now that I have recorded the most noteworthy things in the careers of these men also, if one compare the entire life of the one with that of the other, it will not be easy to mark the difference between them, obscured as it is by many great resemblances. And even if, in our comparison, we analyse each life, as we would a poem or a picture, we shall find that the rise to political power and repute in consequence

1 149 B.c. 2 Odyssey, x. 495.

aperi kat Suvapet mpoedBeiv aphorépors Kowov éoTt. paiverar So pev "Aptoreidys obo TOTE peyddov ovcapy TOV "AOnvav cal tats ovcias ETL TUMPET POLS Kal opanrois émuBarov Snparye- yois Kal oTparnyous emupavns yevéa Iau: TO yap peyeorov nv Timnpa TOTE TEVvTaKOG Lov pedipveor TO O€ SevTEpov Tplakoa lov, éoyatoy dé Kal TptTov Siaxoctwy: o 0 oe Kdrov éx TOMXVNS TE pLKpas Kal Stains a drypoteov doxovens pépor adijcey €aUTOV dorep els TELAYOS axaves Thy év- Poun TOALTELaY, OUKETL Koupiwy Kal PaBpreiov Kal "ATOL@D Eoryov ovcay TyeHover, ove am' a.potpov Kab oKadetou TEVNTAS Kal avToupyous dvaBaivovtas emt TO Biya T pootewerny dpxovras Kal Snparyo- yous, AANA pos yévn peydra Kal mrovTOUS Kal vomas Kal orovdapxias amroBnerre eOtcperny, Kal du" OyKov dn Kal dvvapuy _evtpupaaay Tots adpyew akiovow. ovK Hp & Gjovoy avTLT aN xphobae OepioroKret pnT amo yévous AapTp@ Kal KEKTN MELD pet pea (wévre yap n Tpuay Tandv- TOV ovciay avT@ yevéacOas Aéyovary bre 7 p@rov iyrrero THS Tohreias) Kat ampos Lentiovas 'A dpixavous kat Yepovious PdAfas Kal Koivrious Prapuvivovs apurracBar Tepl TpWTELwr, pendev OppnTpLov éyovTa TANY hoviy tappynatalopévny virép Tay Suxaiwv.

II. "Ere S 'Apioreidns pev év Mapabdu Kal mad év Indaratais béxaTos my oTpAaTHyos, Karey b¢ Sevrepos pev braros npeOn TONN@Y avripetiovray, Sevtepos dé Tiuntyns érTa Tovs

émiupaveotdtous Kal TpwrTous Gp deopeevous UTrepBadopuevos. Kal prv “Apiotetdns pev ev 386
COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

of innate excellence and strength, rather than of inherited advantages, is common to both. But in the case of Aristides, Athens was not yet great when he rose to eminence, and the leaders and generals with whom he dealt were men of moderate and uniform fortunes. The highest assessment of pro- perty in those days was five hundred bushels of grain, the second three hundred, the third and last two hundred. Whereas Cato, coming from a little town and from ways of life deemed rustic, plunged headlong into the boundless sea of Roman politics when they were no longer conducted by such men as Curius, Fabricius, and Atilius, nor welcomed as magis- trates and leaders poor men who had mounted the rostrum after working with their own hands at the plough and the mattock, but were wont to have regard rather for great families and. their wealth, largesses, and solicitations, while those who sought office, such was now the power and arrogance of the people, were wantonly handled. It was not the same thing to have Themistocles for a rival, who was of no illustrious family and had only moderate possessions (he is said to have been worth three, or, at most, five talents when he entered public life), as it was to compete for pre-eminence with such men as Scipio Africanus, Salus Galba, and Quintius Flamininus, having no other advantage than a tongue which spoke boldly for the right.

II. Besides, at Marathon, and again at Plataea, Aristides was only one of ten generals, while Cato was elected one of two consuls out of many com- petitors,and one of two censors over the heads of seven of the foremost and most illustrious Romans, who stood for the office with him. Furthermore,

387
cc 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

oddev! Tav KaTopOwudTwv yéyove TPATOS, GANA MaaAtiadns éyet tov Mapadavos to mpwreiov, @ecpictonrAys 5€ tis Larapivos, ev 5é Wraracais
dnow “Hpodotos avedéo0at xadrXiorny vinny Tlavoaviav, ’Aptoteidn Sé xal tov Sevrepelwy apis Bnroder Ywpavat cal’ Apewia cat KanrnxrIipayor cal Kuvaiyerpor Swamrperas apiotevoayrtes év éxeivows Tois ayaou Kadrtwv & ov povoy avros imatevwv éempwtevoe Kal Yerpl Kal yuopun Kata tov “IBnpixov woremov, adrAA Kal yYiNapyav wept @eppowvrAas viratevovtTos érépov tHv do-av gaye THS vixens, peyaras én’ ’Avtrioyor ‘Pwpators dvameTadoas KAeLotddas Kal Tpdaw povoy opavTt T@ Bacirel mreptaotnacas KaTa vwTOU TOV TOAELOD.
éxeivn yap 7} vikn treptpaves épyov ovaa Karwvos éEndace THs EXAdbos THY ’Aciay Kal trapécyxev ériBatny avOis Dentiove.

Tlovepobvres ev ody antrnto. yeyovac.y apporepot, wept dé THY TWoNLTElay Aptotetdns pev érratcev éEootpaxicbels Kai Kxatacractac Gels
bro Oemoroxréovs, Kdtwv 8, olrep Foav év “Popn Suvvat@tarot cal péytorot, Tact, ws eros elTrety, ayTimddows Ypwpevos Kal péxpr ynpws aaotep aOAnTHS aywvilopevos aTTaTA tenes éauvtov. awrelotas 5é Kal duywv Snuoctas Sixas cat SidEas moddas pév elrXe, macas 8 awépvye, mpoBAnpa tov Biov Kal Spacrnpiovy dpryavov éywv tov dNovyov, @ SucatoTepov av tis H TYXY kal Saipove tov avdpos To pndev trabeiv rap
afiay dvariein. péya yap kal ’Aptototéde: TO 354 388

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

Aristides was not the foremost man in any one of his victories, but Miltiades has the chief honour of Marathon, Themistocles of Salamis, and at Plataea, Herodotus! says it was Pausanias who won that fairest of all victories, while even for second honours Aristides has such rivals as Sophanes, Ameinias, © Callimachus, and Cynaegeirus, who displayed the greatest valour in those actions. Cato, on the other hand, was not only chief in the plans and actions of the Spanish war during his own consulate, but also at Thermopylae, when he was but a tribune in the army and another was consul, he got the glory of the victory, opening up great mountain passes for the Romans to rush through upon Antiochus, and swinging the war round into the king’s rear, when he had eyes only for what was in front of him. That victory was manifestly the work of Cato, and it not only drove Asia out of Hellas, but made it afterwards accessible to Scipio. |

It is true that both were always victorious in war, but in politics Aristides got a fall, being driven into a minority and ostracised by Themistocles. Cato, on the contrary, though he had for his antagonists almost all the greatest and ablest men in Rome, and though he kept on wrestling with them up to his old age, never lost his footing. He was involved in countless civil processes, both as_ plaintiff and defendant; as plaintiff, he often won his case, as defendant, he never lost it, thanks to that bulwark and efficacious weapon of his life, his eloquence. To this, more justly than to fortune and the guardian genius of the man, we may ascribe the fact that he was never visited with disgrace. That was a great

1} ix. 64.
389
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

dhiriocodw@ tTovlTo mpoceyaptipnoev ’Avtitratpos ypaduwy rept avTod peta THY TEeAEUTHY, OTL TPOS
a. i @€ 9 A \ \ \ 2
Tois GAOLS O avNnp Kal TO TLOavov EtxeD.
IIT. “Ore pev 82 THs TWoALTiKhs avOpwriros aperis

A e ld ,
OU KTATAL TEAELOTEPAY, OMONOYOUpEVOY eoTL’ TAL-
€ A Tns 5€ Trou LOpLoV OF TrAELoTOL THY OiKOVOpLKHY Ov pxpov tiOevtary Kal yap 1) qWodts olKwv Tet
, \ 4 9 ev N XN
aovoTnpa Kal Kepdratov otca pwvyuTat mpos TA
a“ 4 a A
Snuoota tois idiots Biows TOV TodtTaY evOevovr-tov, 6trouv Kal Auxotpryos éFotxicas péev apryupon, bd 4 \ \ a f / \
2 éEouxicas 5& yxpucdv ths Lrdprns, voutopa 5é SiehOappévou trupi ovdypov Oéuevos avtots olKovo-pias ovK amnAXake TOUS ToAiTas, GANA TH TPUdavra cal drrovAa Kal preypaivovta Tob mAOUTOU TEepleNwVv, OTWS EVTTOPHTwWOL TOY avayKdiwy Kal
, 4 e 5A b \ /
Ypynotpwv Amavtes, WS aAdAos ovdels vopobéTns Tpouvonae, TOV aTropoy Kal avéotioy Kal mévnTa avvotkov emi Kotvwvia TodtTElas LaNOV TOD TAOV-
, Ve , 4 4 / e
3 ciov cal UTepoyKxou goPybeis. aiverar toivuy o pev Kdtav ovdév te havrotepos olxov mpoorarns ) TONES Yyevomevos: Kal yap autos nvEncE Tov attov Biov Kal xatéotn &8doKados oixovopias wal yewpylas érépots, TOAAA Kal ypnorpa Trepl / lA m ? / \ a / TOUTE ouvradwevos Apioreidys dé 17 mevig
e >
kal tnv Sixavoaovrny cuvdieBarev ws oixopOopov
Kal WTWXOTOLOY Kal TaGL aAAOY 7H TOLS KEKTN-
4 pévors @pédpov. Kaito. woddrAa pev “Heiodos 39°

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

tribute which was paid Aristotle the philosopher by Antipater, when he wrote concerning him, after his death, that in addition to all his other gifts, the man had also the gift of persuasion.

III. Man has no higher capacity than that for conducting cities and states, as is generally ad- mitted. But the ability to conduct a household enters in no small degree into this higher political capacity, as most believe. For the city is but an or- ganised sum total of households, and has public vigour only as its citizens prosper in their private lives. When Lycurgus banished both silver and gold from Sparta, and introduced there a coinage of iron that had been ruined by fire, he did not set his fellow citizens free from the duty of domestic economy. He merely removed the swollen and feverish wantonness of wealth, and so provided that all alike might have an abundance of the necessary and useful things of life. He did this because better than any other ancient legislator, he fore- saw that the helpless, homeless, and poverty-stricken citizen was a greater menace to the commonwealth than one who was rich and ostentatious. Cato, then, was no whit less efficient in the conduct of his household than in that of the city. He not only increased his own substance, but became a recog- nized teacher of domestic economy and agriculture for others, and compiled many useful precepts on these subjects. Aristides, on the other hand, was so poor as to bring even his righteousness into disrepute, as ruining a household, reducing a man to beggary, and profiting everybody rather than its possessor. And yet Hesiod! has much to say by

1 Works and Days, 309.

mpos Sixatoovrny dua cal oixovopiay Tapaxarov
nas elpnxe cal thy apyiay ws dadixias apyny Aerordopynxer, ev 5€ kat 'Opnpo tetroinrac
Epyov Sé wot ov dirov Hev LNG >? , 4 VA J \ 4
ovd oikwpenin, h Te Thépher ayAaa Téxva,
GANG poe aiel viajes Emnpetpoe pirat Hoav Kal ToAeuot Kal dKovTes ebEeaTOL Kal dio Tot' e ' b] \ > he. > 7 \ ' @$ TOUS avTOUS dpeXobdVTAS olKias Kal TropiCopev-
: ' n ? , e:) €9 ,
ous €€ adixias. ov yap, ws TovAaLOY ot taTpot
dace Tod cwparos elvat Tots ev EKTOS @HEALLOa > > \ , LA e
Tatov, Tois & evtds BrAaBepwrarov, ottws oO Sixasos érépors poév Eote ypHnotpos, avTod Sé Kal
a %»9F7 ? / ' >" / A Tov idiwy axndys, Ar' EotKe TAUTN TrEeMnpa@cBaL
a? / \ / " e e a
to Aptoteton TO-ToNLTLKOD, ElTrEp, WS Ob TAELOTOL Néyouatv, ovde polka ois Ovyatpiou ovde
\ e_ha , > / 4 e Tapiy avT@ KatadiTéecAa mpovvonoev. SOev o pev Kdtwvos olxos &ypt yévous terdptov otpatn-na ¢ "A
yous kal wiratovs TH Pon tapeiye Kai yap viwvol kal touTwy étt Taides Hp~av apyas Tas peyioras: THs 8 "Apiotetdov tov mpwtevaaytos
e / a e \ \ » / '\
EAAnVe@Y yeveas n TOAANH Kal ATrOpOs TEVIA TOUS pey els @yuptiKods KaTéBare Tivaxas, Tous Sé by-poaiw Tas yelpas épdv@ bu évderay brréyew Hvdy-7.) \ de \ Oe 7. v ? 4

Kacev, ovdevi S€ Napmpov ovdev ovd’ aEvov éxeivov Tov avdpos ppovacar Tapécyev.
a A 4 ” ,
IV. *H rovto mp@tov appidroyiay Eyer; mevia
\ 3 N ? “A \ b] e 4 ? >, &
yap aoxpov ovdapod péev Se’ avTHy, aX OTrov Seiyua pabupias éotiv, axpacias, TodvTenetas, 392

way of exhorting us to righteousness allied with domestic economy, and abuses idleness as a source of injustice ; Homer also says well :— “ Labour I never liked,
Nor household thrift, which breeds good children.
But ships equipped with oars were ever my delight, Battles and polished javelins and arrows,” !
implying that the men who neglect their households are the very ones to live by injustice. Oil, as physicians tell us, is very beneficial when externally applied, though very injurious when used internally. But the righteous is not so. He is not helpful to others, while heedless of himself and his family. Indeed, the poverty of Aristides would seem to have been a blemish on his political career, if, as most writers state, he had not foresight enough to leave his poor daughters a marriage portion,? or even the cost of his own burial. And so it fell out that the family of Cato furnished Rome with preetors and consuls down to the fourth generation, for his grand- sons, and their sons after them, filled the highest offices of state. Whereas, though Aristides was foremost of the Greeks, the abject poverty of his descendants forced some to ply a fortune-teller’s trade,’ and others, for very want, to solicit the public bounty, while it robbed them all of every ambition to excel, or even to be worthy of their great ancestor.

IV. Possibly this point invites discussion. Poverty is never dishonourable in itself, but only when it is a mark of sloth, intemperance, extravagance, or

1 Odyssey, xiv. 222 ff., Palmer’s translation.
2 Aristides, xxvii. 1, 3 Aristides, xxvii. 3.
393

GroytaTtias, avdpt 8& cadpov kal dirovrov@ Kal Sicaio cal avdpeim xal Snwootevovrt tais apetais anrdcais cvvotoa peyarowuyias éoTi Kal peyano-dpoauvns cnpelov. ov yap éote TpaTTew peyara
td “A Oe A ry ,

dpovTifovra puxpav, ovdé Troddrois Seopévots
wn an ‘ ‘ ra 9 >]
BonOeivy arod\dX@v avtov Seopevov. péya 8 eis
n . > mwonttelav épodioy ovXl mWAODTOS, ANN auTapKELa, TO pndevos idta TOV TepitTaV SetaOae pos ov-deptap aayontlav dyovca TOV Snpociwv. airpoc-Sens wey yap awras 0 Oeds, avOpwrivns & aperijs, ouvdyeTat pos TO EAGXLTTOV H ypEia, TOUTO
s lA “A \ TeXeLtoTaTov Kat Oeotatov. ws yap capa TO KaN@S ITrpos eveEiav Kexpapévov oT’ eaOFTos OUTE
tpopys Setra mepittHs, obtw Kal Bios xa oiKxos Uylaivov ato tav TuxXovT@v Stoixeitar. Set be
Th Xpela ovppetpov eye THY KTHoW: ws 6 YE
A 4 9 , \ 4 b] v
TOAAA TUVaYwV, GArtyos 5é YP@pevos OvK EaTLV
avTapKns, GAN elite wy Selrat, THs TapacKevys Ov
ovK opéyeTat patatos, elt’ opéyeTat, puxpodoyia
, \ +) , wv
KoAOVwY THY aTroXavotLY AOXALOS.
Avtod yé tot Kadtwvos déws av tudoipny:
El ev ATrOAAVaTOV O TAOUTOS éaTL, TL TE“LVOVN TO TONG KEeKTHMEVOS apKeicOar peTpios; eb Sé
/ A“ AapTpov eat, WaoTrEp eaTiv, apT@ Te KEHGIaL
A , la
T@ TpootvyovTe Kal tive olov épydtat i-vovat Kal Oepdrrovtes olvoy Kal mopdvpas pr SenOjvat pndé otKias Kexoviamévns, ovdev ov’
9 , ” 9 9 , ww o
Aptoreiéns ob7 ‘Erapetvavdas otte Manos
Kouptos obte Vdios PaBpixios évédurrov Tov Tpoa-394

355

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

thoughtlessness. When, on the other hand, it is the handmaid of a sober, industrious, righteous, and brave man, who devotes all his powers to the service of the people, it is the sign of a lofty-spirit that harbours no mean thoughts. It is impossible for a man to do great things when his thoughts are busy with little things ; nor can he aid the many who are in need when he himself is in need of many things. A great equipment for public service consists, not in wealth, but in contented independence, which requires no private‘ superfluities, and so puts no hindrance in the way of serving the commonwealth. God alone is absolutely free from wants; but that is the most perfect and god-like quality in human excellence which reduces man’s wants to their lowest terms. For as a body which is well tempered and vigorous needs no superfluous food or raiment, so a healthy individual or family life can be con- ducted with the simplest outlays. A man should make his gains tally with his needs. He who heaps up much substance and uses little of it, is not con- tented and independent. If he does not need it, he is a fool for providing what he does not crave; and if he craves it, he makes himself wretched by parsi- moniously curtailing his enjoyment of it.

Indeed, I would fain ask Cato himself this question: “If wealth is a thing to be enjoyed, why do you plume yourself on being satisfied with little when possessed of much?” But if it be a fine thing, as indeed it is, to eat ordinary bread, and to drink such wine as labourers and servants drink, and not to want purple robes nor even plastered houses, then Aristides and Epaminondas and Manius Curius and Gaius Fabricius were perfectly right in turning

395

a

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

nKOVTOS, yalpey édoavrTes THY KTHOW OY THY xpiow amedoxipalov. ov yap hv avayKxaioy av-Opat@ yoyyvaAidas HOvotoy vpov meToinpev@ Kat
8.’ ab’tod tattas Aports, pattovons aya THs yuvatcos aXpita, Torcavra mepl aocapiou Opureiy Kal ypadev ad As av tis épyacias tdyicra Wrovatos yévotTo. péya yap TO evTEdes Kal avtapKes, OTe THs eriOupias dua Kal THs ppov-Tidos amraAAdtTTEeL TOV TrepiTTaV. 810 Kal TovTO
pacww év th KadnXiou Sinn tov "Apioreloqy ecrreiy, @S airxuver bat Tmeviay T pooner tois GKOUVTLWS
Tevopevots, Tois 8, @omep autos, éxovaiws, éyxan-AwmiverBar. yedotov yap otec Oat pobupias elvat THY "Apia teiSou Teviay, Taphy aloxpov eipya-TMEV pndér, arr’ &va oxvrevoavts BapRapov 4 play cKnVaY KataraBovee Wrovaim yevérOar.
TAUTA pev ovv rept TOUT.
V. Ltpatnyiat dé at pev Kdravos ovdev OS peydros mpaypwact péeya mpocéOnxar, év Sé tais “Aptoreisov Ta Kaddiora Kal Aapmporara Kat
Tpara TOV ‘EAAnuKaY Epyov eatin, 0 Mapaéop, » Darapis, ai TXaracat. «al ovx aktov Syrou mapaBareiy TO Eép&n TOV “Avtioxov Kal Ta meprarpeOevra, TOV "I8npredy TONEDY Tetyn Tais Tuc avraus pev év yn, TOTAUTALS & év Sardoon

Teg ova als pupidowy éy ols ’Apsoretdns eoye pep ovdevos édelreto, S0Ens dé «al orepdvenr,
damep apédret TAOUTOU wal Xpnuaron, vpyKaro Tois parrov Seopévois, OTL Kal WdavT@Y TovTwY
drédeper,

396

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

their backs on the gaining of what they scorned to use. Surely it was not worth while for a man who, like Cato, esteemed turnips a delectable dish and cooked them himself, while his wife was kneading bread, to babble so much about a paltry copper, and write on the occupation in which one might soonest get rich. Great is the simple life, and great its independence, but only because it frees a man from the anxious desire of superfluous things. Hence it was that Aristides, as we are told, remarked at the trial of Callias! that only those who were poor in spite of themselves should be ashamed of their poverty; those who, like himself, chose poverty, should glory in it. And surely it were ridiculous to suppose that the poverty of Aristides was due to his sloth, when, without doing anything disgraceful, but merely by stripping a single Barbarian, or seizing a single tent, he might have made himself rich. So much on this head.

V. The military campaigns of Cato made no great addition to the Roman empire, which was great already ; but those of Aristides include the fairest, most brilliant, and most important actions of the Greeks, namely, Marathon, Salamis, and Plataea. And certainly Antiochus is not worthy to be compared with Xerxes, nor the demolition of the walls of the Spanish cities with the destruction of so many myriads of Barbarians both by land and sea. On these occasions Aristides was inferior to no one in actual service, but he left the glory and the laurels, as he did wealth and substance, to those who wanted them more, because he was superior to all these things also.
1 Aristides, xxv. 5,

397

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Eyo 8 od péudopat pev Katovos to peyarvvey del Kat TpwToy éavTov amdvTav TiOccOat:
Kaito. dnoly &v Tut NOY TO éerratveiy aUTOY
@omwEep TO RoLoopeiy AToTroy eElvat: TEAELOTEPOS
5é pou Soxel mpos apetny To TWoANAKIS EaVTOV

éyxapualovtos o pnd étépwv TodTo ToLovyTwY Seopevos. TO yap adiroTimov ov puiKpoY eis TpaoTnTa ToduTixny épodiov, Kal Tovvavtiov ) piroTyia yaretroyv Kai POovov yovimwraror,
e \ > / / e \ \ ys 0 pévy amndXaxto Tavtdtact, o Sé€ Kal lA a “A 9 4 /
wavy TWoAdAns petetyev. “Apioteidns pév ye QcutototKrE TA péyioTa cuuTpaTTwV Kal TpoTroV
TLWa THY oTpaTHylayv avTod Sopvdopav wpOwce
\ 9 4 4 ° b 4 4
tas ‘AOnvas, Kdtev 8 dvtirpattoav Yenwiwrr
puixpod pév avétpeve xal Sredupnvato thy eri
, > a J 3 @ \ > /
Kapyndoviovs avtov otpatnyiav, év 4 Tov anr-
? 4 A la \ s
tntov “AvviBav Kabeire, TéedX\0s 5é€ pnyavepevos det Twas vUtrovias Kat dta8ords avdtov pev éEjiace THS Toews, Tov 5 adeAdhov aicyloty KAOTHS KaTadixn wepréBanev.

VI. “Hy toivuy mrreictos 0 Katov xexoo une ld by , > \ , b)

kal KadNoTos étaivous del cwhpocdyny ’Apt-orelons pev aOixrov ws adnOes xal xabapar “A fe) e
érnpnaev, avtovd dé tod Kdtwvos 6 trap daéiayv
dua Kal rap’ @pav ydpos ob puKpay ovdé havAnY eis TodTo SiaBornv Katecxédace. mpecBvrnv yap 78n tocodrTov éynrixm tradi Kal yvvairl voppn tardos éruyjpwat Kopyny varnpérov kal SnpootevovTos eri pucO@ watpos ovdapod Kandov, 398

356

COMPARISON OF ARISTIDES AND CATO

For my own part, I do not blame Cato fur his constant boasting, and for rating himself above everybody else, although he does say, in one of his speeches, that self-praise and self-depreciation are alike absurd. But I regard the man who is often lauding himself as less complete in excellence than one who does not even want others todoso. Freedom from ambition is no slight requisite for the gentleness which should mark a statesman; and, on the con- trary, ambition is harsh, and the greatest fomenter of envy. From this spirit Aristides was wholly free, whereas Cato was very full of it. For example, Aristides co-operated with Themistocles in his greatest achievements, and as one might say, stood guard over him while he was in command, and thereby saved Athens; while Cato, by his opposition to Scipio, almost vitiated and ruined that wonderful campaign of his against the Carthaginians, in which he overthrew the invincible Hannibal,! and finally, by perpetually inventing all sorts of suspicions and calumnies against him, drove him out of Rome, and brought down on his brother's head a most shameful condemnation for embezzlement.

VI. Once more, that temperance which Cato always decked out with the fairest praises, Aristides maintained and practised in unsullied purity ; whereas Cato, by marrying unworthily and un- seasonably, fell under no slight or insignificant censure in this regard. It was surely quite indecent that a man of his years should bring home as step- mother to his grown-up son and that son's bride, a girl whose father was his assistant and served the public for hire. Whether he did this merely for

1 At Zama, 202 B.c.

avr ele Tpos noovny TavT érpatev elt opyn
bia THY ératpav dpuvopevos TOV vioD, _aoxuvny Exel Kal TO eplyov Kal 7 mpopacts. o 6 AUTOS éxpnaato AOYo KQTELPWVEVOMEVOS TO MELpaKLoD, ovK ay arn Ons. él yap éBovreTo Tatas ayabous opotos Tekvoa at, yapov eeu AaBeiv ryevvatov ef apyins oKeypdpevor, ovr, Eos ev eddvOavev aveyyue ges Kal Kowwh ovyKoLmwpevos aya-way, érel § epopaln 'roujoac Oat mwevOepov, 6v pdoTa Teicew, OVX @ KdAMGTA KYSEevcELY EuwenAev.

his own pleasure, or in anger, to punish his son for objecting to his mistress, both what he did and what led him to do it were disgraceful. And the sar- castic reason for it which he gave his son was not a true one. For had he wished to beget more sons as good, he should have planned at the outset to marry a woman of family, instead of contenting himself, as long as he could do so secretly, with the society of a low concubine, and when he was discovered, making a man his father-in-law whom he could most easily persuade, rather than one whose alliance would bring him most honour.

401
VOL. II. D D
Digitized by Google

CIMON

2

KIMON

I. [leperovtas o pdvtis ex @ettarias eis Bovw-

, >? 4 \ / ‘\ e693 ? A
tiav ‘OdéXtav tov Bactrdéa Kal tovs ba avT@
Aaovs KaTayaywv yévos evdoxiunaay émt TroAKOUS “povous KaTEATEV, OV TO TAELTTOY ev Xatpwveia KAT@KYTEV, Hv TpaTny ToOdALY ~xyov éEeXdoayTeEs tous BapBdpous. ot pev ovv mretoTOL TOY ard Tov yévous hucer paytpor Kal avdpaders yevdmevor Katavarw0noap ev tais Mydixats éridpopais Kat tots Tanartixois ayaow adedynoavtes éavTov: Neitreras O€ trais oppavos yovéwy, dvopa Adpor, mapwvuptoy dé IlepevroAtas, wokv by Te Kar TWUATOS KaAAEL Kal uy7s Ppovnpate Tovs Kal’ e_N e , 4 A > V4 ‘
avrov Urrepaipwy véovs, adXws 8 arraideutos Kal aoKAnpos To 700s.
e a Tovtou ‘“Pwpaios aryeuov oreipas Tivos év
, 4 9 ¥ \
Xatpwveiq Siaxemalovons épacbels dpre Thy TaALoLKny HALKiaY TAPNAAGXOTOS, ws ovK ErreHe
A \ 4 “A > ? 4 ,
meipav Kat Stdovs, djs Hv ovK adeEopevos Bias,
A 4 “A
dre 69 kal rhs waTpidos Nuay TOTE AUITPA TMpaT- Tovens Kal dia piKpoTnta Kal Teviay TapopwpEerns.

a € a Toto 57 dedtas 0 Adpov, kal thy Teipay avrTny Sv dpyns metrounpévos, éemeBovrAeve TH avdpt nab cuvicTn TOV AALKLWT@Y TiVas ém avTOY, Ov qoAXous évexa Tov Aaleiy, GAN of cUpTaVTES 404

I. Perrpottas the seer, who conducted King Opheltas with his subjects from Thessaly into Boeotia, left a posterity there which was in high repute for many generations. The greater part of them settled in Chaeroneia, which was the first city they won from the Barbarians. Now the most of this posterity were naturally men of war and courage, and so were consumed away in the Persian invasions and the contests with the Gauls, because they did not spare themselves. There remained, however, an orphan boy, Damon by name, Peripoltas by surname, who far surpassed his fellows in beauty of body and in vigour of spirit, though otherwise he was untrained and of a harsh disposition.

With this Damon, just passed out of boy's estate, the Roman commander of a cohort that was winter- ing in Chaeroneia fell enamoured, and since he could not win him over by solicitations and presents, he was plainly bent on violence, seeing that our native city was at that time in sorry plight, and neglected because of her smallness and poverty. Violence was just what Damon feared, and since the solicitation itself had enraged him, he plotted against the man, and enlisted against him sundry companions,—a few only, that they might escape notice. There were

éxnaldera, yevopevor xplovra | pev aiddry ra TpoowT a. YUKTOS, _ epATLOVTES 5é¢ dxpatov ap mpépa mpoonimrova TO 'Papaip Kar aryopay Avovrt, Kal cataPanrovres autTov te Kal Tov Tept avrov ovK OAlyous éx THS TONEWS petéctycav. yevopens O€ Tapaxhs m Tov Xarpovéov Bours
cuvefoica Oavarov avTav Karéyve" Kar TOUTO ny Umép Ths 7 TONEWS am ohoyn pia. T pos tous 'Po-pratovs. éaotrépas 5€ Tov apxovrov, domep Gos
éoti, Kows aes Ol wept Tov Adpova
TApELa Tred OvTES els TO apxetov aréopatay avTOUS Kal 1d @YoVTO pevyovtes éx THS: TONEWS.
"Etuxe é Trept Tas Hpuépas éxeivas Acvxeos
AovKovdnos ert tiva mpakiw pera Suvdpews
TAPEPX OMEVOS. eTLoT HT AS dé TH sropelay Kal
TOY yeyoverav Tpoaparay & évTey eféracw Town

odpevos evpe THY WoMY ovdevos airlav, adda.
paddov ouyndienperny’ Kat TOUS oTpaTiaras davaraBov a annyaye ueO” éavrod. Tov bé Adpova Agatetacs Kal caradpopais mopOoivra THY Xepav Kal TH monet T poo Kel Levov barnyaryovTo pea Beiats Kal Wngicpace piravO parrots of ToNTat, xkarenOovra 5é yupvactapxov Katéotnoay «iT aderopevov ey TQ mupiarnple Sieg Oerpar. emt moAuv O€ ypovoy ciOw@XaV Twa év TO TOT@ ™poparvouevey | Kal otevaypav éEaxovouévav, ws ob
TATEPES 1) Ov Aéyoust, Tas Gupas dvpxodounoay
Tov mupiaTnpiov™ Kal péypt viv ob TO TOTH YELTVL@VTES OLOVTAL Tevas Abe cat pov $ Tapa-
w@des péperBau. TOUS & amd tov yevous avTod (Siaodtovrat yap évol, padmtora THs Pwxidos 406

CIMON

sixteen of them in all, who smeared their faces with soot one night, heated themselves with wine, and at daybreak fell upon the Roman while he was sacri- ficing in the market-place, slew him, together with many of his followers, and departed the city. During the commotion which followed, the council of Chaeroneia met and condemned the murderers to death, and this was the defence which the city after- wards made to its Romanrulers. But in the evening, while the magistrates were dining together, as the custom is, Damon and his men burst into the town- hall, slew them, and again fled the city.

Now about that time! it chanced that Lucius Lucullus passed that way, on some errand, with an army. Halting on his march and _ investigating matters while they were still fresh in mind, he found that the city was in no wise to blame, but rather had itself also suffered wrong. So he took its garrison of soldiers and led them away with him. Then Damon, who was ravaging the country with predatory forays and threatening the city, was induced by embassies and conciliatory decrees of the citizens to return, and was appointed gymnasiarch. But soon, as he was anointing himself in the vapour-bath, he was slain. And because for a long while thereafter certain phantoms appeared in the place, and groans were heard there, as our Fathers tell us, the door of the vapour-bath was walled up, and to this present time the neighbours think it the source of alarming sights and sounds. Descendants of Damon’s family . (and some are still living, especially near Stiris in

1 74 Bc. (2)

407

PLUTARCRH’S LIVES

qept 2reipw, aionritovtes) ac Bohwpévous KaNovat dua TO tov Adpwva mpos tov dhovov acBor(o yvptodpevov éEerOetv.

II. "Evel & datuyeltoves OVTES Opxoperioe
Kat Sidopor Tots Xa:pwvedorv emia Owcarro
‘Popaixoy avxopdvrny, o 8 @omep EVOS avO parr ov
TO TAS ‘TONEWS évopa KATEVEYKOV ediwxe povou Tov v6 TOU Adpavos aunpnuever, n O€ Kptaws ay emt Tov aTpaTnyod THs Maxedovias (bare yap els THY EnAdda ‘Popaior oTpATHYOUS SveTrép-Tov70), ot Aéyortes vIrép THS TOAEWS ETTEKANODVTO THY Aoveovdndou paptupiay, yparpavtos bé Tov
oTPATHYOV Tos AovKovddov EXELVOS éuapTupnae Taryn, kab tHV Sienv adTws anépuyev iY modus xudvvevouca mept TOV peyiara. éxelvo. pev
ouv ot TOTE cwbévres elkova Tou Aovnovdrov ABivny € ép ayopa mapa tov Acovucov avertna ay, Tuets 8, ef Kal wroAdXais Wauclaus AevrropeOa, THY pev xapuv oloueBa dtateiver Kal 7 pos NAS TOUS viv évTas, eixova dé TOAD Kadtova, vouitovtes elvat TAS 70 cOpa Kal TO Tpoa wn ov aT 0 juuovpévns THY TO 7005 Kal Tov TpoTrov eupavifovaar, avarypopeba Th ypapn TOV TAPAAANAWY Biov
Tas m pagers TOU avdpos, TarANOH SieEvovtes. dpxet yap 7 THis prnpns xapus* adrnOois S€ paptuptas ove dv avtos exeivos ngiwce pia Bov ANaBetv Wrevdh Kab Temas pevny brrép avtTod Siynocv.
y Qorep yap Tous Ta Kana Kal TOAAHY eXovTa.
Xap elon Swypadodvtas, ay mpoon Te pix pov avrots duaxepés, aktodpev pare mapanctreiy ToUTO TENEOS pare eEaxprBoov TO pev yap aiaxpay, 70
5 avomotay twapéxerar tHv dip: odtas, érel
408
CIMON

Phocis, Aeolians in speech) are called “ Asbolomeni,’ or ‘ Besooted,” because Damon smeared himself with soot before he went forth to do his deed of murder.
II. But the Orchomenians, who were neighbours and, rivals of the Chaeroneians, hired a Roman informer to cite the city by name, as though it were an individual person, and prosecute it for the murder of the Roman soldiers who had been slain by Damon. The trial was held before the praetor of Macedonia (the Romans were not yet sending praetors to Greece), and the city’s advocates invoked the testimony of Lucullus. Lucullus, when the praetor wrote to him, testified to the truth of the matter, and so the city escaped capital condemna- tion. Accordingly, the people who at that time were saved by him erected a marble statue of Lucullus in the market-place beside that of Dionysus. And we, though many generations removed from him, think that his favour extends even down to us who are now living; and since we believe that a portrait which reveals character and disposition is far more beautiful than one which merely copies form and feature, we shall incorporate this man's deeds into our parallel lives, und we shall rehearse them truly. The mere mention of them is sufficient favour to show him; and as a return for his truthful testimony he himself surely would not deign to accept a false and garbled narrative of his career.

We demand of those who would paint fair and graceful features that, in case of any slight imper- fection therein, they shall neither wholly omit it nor yet emphasise it, because the one course makes the portrait ugly and the other unlike its original. In 409

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

yanrerov éatt, paAXov & icws auynxavov, apeudy kai caBapov avbpos émidetEas Biov, év Tots KaXois avarAnpwtéov @aowep oporoTnta THY adnOeav.
tas & é« mwaGouvs Tivos 4 TOALTEKHAS avayKNS émitpexovoas Tails mpdkerw auaptias Kal Knpas é\Nciupata paArXov apeTns Tivos Kakias Tovnpevpata vopilovtras ov Set wdvu mpoOvpws évatoonpaive TH tatopia Kal tepiTT@s, AND' @aoTrep aidoupévous Umrép THs avOpwrivns Pvcews, el Kadov ovdev eihuxpuves ovd avaudiaBynrntov eis apetny 700s ryeyoves aTrodtéwotv.
Ill. 'O & ovbv AovxcovaAros edoxee cxotodow
H piv TO Kipove mapaBrnTéos elvas. mohepuxol yap dpddorepor ar ™ pos TOUS BapBapous Aap pol, mpGor dé 7a, TohTeKa Kal padiora TOV eppudiov oTdoewy avamrvony Tais Tat pior TapagxXovres, exaaros 5€ Tis avTav OTHTAYTES TpOTraLa Kat viKas GVENOMEVOL _meptBorrous. ovTE yap 'EX-AHnVOV Kipevos OvTE 'Peopatov AovxovaAdou Trpo-TEpos ovdels odTw paxpay Toheuav TporrOev, éfeo Noryou TB epeverv Tav Kal ~Hpaxréa Kal Avovucov, ef ré Tt Tlepa ews T pos: Ai@torras 7) M7jdous Kar "Appevious 1 'Idcovos Epyov afvore-oToV ée TOV TOTE Xpovesy punen pepopevov eis TOUS VvoV apixras. Kowvov é Tos avrav Kal TO GTEres yéyove THs oTparnyias, éxarépov pev cuvtpixpavros, odderépoy be KaTahvaavtos TOV aVvTayoVLcTHV. pdduara 6 n mepl Tas brodoxas Kal Tas prravOpwrias TaUTAS Dyporns Kal Saypi-Aeta Kal TO veapov Kal aver pevov ép Th Siaitn TapamAnotov er apyhotépwv idely vrdpyet.
410

like manner, since it is difficult, nay rather perhaps impossible, to represent a man's life as stainless and pure, in its fair chapters we must round out the truth into fullest semblance; but those transgres- sions and follies by which, owing to passion, perhaps, or political compulsion, a man's career is sullied, we must regard rather as shortcomings in some particu- lar excellence than as the vile products of positive baseness, and we must not all too zealously delineate them in our history, and superfluously too, but treat them as though we were tenderly defending human nature for producing no character which is absolutely " good and indisputably set towards virtue.

III. On looking about for some one to compare with Lucullus, we decided that it must be Cimon. Both were men of war, and of brilliant exploits against the Barbarians, and yet they were mild and beneficent statesmen, in that they gave their coun- tries unusual respite from civil strifes, though each one of them set up martial trophies and won victories that were famous. No Hellene before Cimon and no Roman before Lucullus carried his wars into such remote lands, if we leave out of our account the exploits of Heracles and Dionysus, and whatever credible deeds of Perseus against the Aethiopians or Medes and Armenians, or of Jason, have been brought down in the memory of man from those early times to our own. Common also in a way to both their careers was the incompleteness of their campaigns. Each crushed, but neither gave the death blow to his antagonist. But more than all else, the lavish ease which marked their entertainments and hospi- talities, as well as the ardour and laxity of their way of living, was conspicuous alike in both. PosjTapanreitropev 5 tows nai ddAdas Twas opmolo-TnTas, as ov yarerov ex THS Sinynoews avTis ouvayaryetv.

IV. Kiwov o Mirriddou pntpos qv 'HeynotmvAns, yévos Opatrns, Ovyarpos 'OAdpov tod / 'e PJ a? , /

Bactréws, ws év toils Apyeddov cal Medav6iouv Tompacty eis avtov Kipwva yeypappévors ioropntar. 816 kat Bovxvdidsns 0 toropiKds Tots Tepl Kipova xara yevos mpoonkwyv "Odopou Te Tratpos hv, els TOY Tpoyovoy avadépovtos THY OpwvupLar, Kal Ta Ypuceia Tept THY Opannv éxéxtyto. «al TedeuTHoaL pev ev TH YkawTH UAy (TodTO Oo Eats Ths Opaxns xwpiov) Réyerat qovevOeis exci, puna & avtod Tav rAEnfpdvey eis tHv Atticny

xopicbévtwy év trois Kipwvetos Selavutat mapa Tov "EArwinns ths Kipovos dderdis tddov.
aNAG Bovavdidyns pev “Arpovovos yéyove TaV Sypuwv, ot dé wept tov Mertiddny Aaxidbat.
Mirriddns peév ovv wevtnKovra TaXdvTwv opA@v
Sixny kal wpos Thy Extra eipyOels éreNcUTyGeEV ev
7@ Secportnpio, Kivwv 88 pwepdxiov mavtdmaciy atrovaplels pera tHS adeAPTs Ere KOPNS OvENS
Kal adydpou tov mpwrov nodokes ypovov év TH TONE KAL KAKOS HKOVEY WS ATAKTOS Kal TrONV-moTns Kal To Tanto Kipwv wpoceoikos TV
dicw, dy de evnbedv dacs Koddenov rpocayopevOjvar. XrnaiuBpotos & 6 @dovos wept Tov avrov opov Te xpovoy T@ Kipwve yeyovos hyow avrTov oUTEe wovatKny oUTE GAO TL UAONLA TOV édevdepiwy nal tois “EAAnow émvywpiatovtov éxdidayxOyjvat, Seworntos te Kal orwpvdtas 412

sibly we may omit still other resemblances, but it will not be hard to gather them directly from our story.

IV. Cimon was the son of Miltiades by Hegesipyle, a woman of Thracian stock, daughter of King Olorus, as it is stated in the poems of Archelaiis and Melanthius addressed to Cimon himself. That explains -how it was that the father of Thucydides the historian—and Thucydides was connected with the family of Cimon—was also an Olorus, who referred his name back to that of the common ancestor, and also how it was that Thucydides had gold mines in Thrace. And it is said that Thucydides died in Skapte Hylé, a place in Thrace, having been murdered there; but his remains were brought to Attica, and his monument is shown among those of Cimon’s family, hard by the tomb of Elpinicé, Cimon’s sister. However, Thucydides belonged to the deme of Halimus, the family of Miltiades to that of Laciadae.

Now Miltiades, who had been condemned to pay a fine of fifty talents and confined till payment should be made, died in prison, and Cimon, thus left a mere stripling with his sister who was a young girl and unmarried, was of no account in the city at first. He had the bad name of being dissolute and bibulous, and of taking after his grandfather Cimon, who, they say, because of his simplicity, was dubbed

Coalemus, or Booby. And Stesimbrotus the Thasfan, who was of about Cimon’s time, says that he acquired no literary education, nor any other liberal and distinctively Hellenic accomplishment; that he lacked entirely the Attic cleverness and fluency

1 Thue. iv. 105.
413
' PLUTARCH’S LIVES

“AT TURAS | brs ammrrax as, Kat T® TPOT TOAV
70 yevvatov Kal arndes évuTdpxet, Kal paddov elvat [leXotrovynotovy TO oxXHpa THS Wuyns Tov avdpos,
para, dxopapov, Ta payor’ dryabdv,

Karta TOV Rupe iSecov “H axéa* Tadra yap | gore

Tois ord ToD UTnotpwSporou yeypappévoes Errec- |

qe.
"Ere 6é véos @y aitiay érye mrnordtew TH aeroh. Kal yap oud GAdXws tay *“EXariwicnv ebTaKrov Twa yeyovéva héyouow, Gra Kal Tpos [odvyverov eEapaprety TOV Corypador-kat dua Toro pace év TH Tesovavanreip TOTE KaXoupévn, Tlovxiny 5é viv arog, ypadovta Tas Tppdsas TO THs Aaodiens TOLnoat 7 poo wrrov éy eixove THs "EAruvi«ns. 0 dé Tlodvyvertos OvK
iy TOV Bavatowy ov am épyokaBias eypade
THY orody, GANA TWpolka, prdorimovpevos Tm pos
THY TOALD, Qs ot Te cuyypageis tatopobat Kal MerdvOtos 6 rrointns Aéyet TOV lad Tovrov’ Avtod yap Samdvaroe Oeav vaovs aryopay TE pended Koouna piOéwov apeTais.
eiat & of THv Edarevieny ov pupa To Kipou, pavepas dé YNaevny cuvotkhoas Aéyouaty, akiov Ths evyevelas vuppiov dia THY qeviay amopovcavy érel 8€ KadNias tev eviropwv Tes
"AO now épacbels ampoondOe rv barép Tob WAT POS caradtany éxtlvev Erotwos dv Tpos TO Snpwocrop, auTnY TE mea Ohya cal tov Kipova 7T@ Kaddla auvoixtoar tiv ’EXrrivieny.
414

481

of speech; that in his outward bearing there was much nobility and truthfulness ; that the fashion of the man’s spirit was rather Peloponnesian, ‘ Plain, unadorned, in a great crisis brave and true,”

as Euripides says of Heracles,! a citation which we may add to what Stesimbrotus wrote.
While he was still a youth he was accused of im- proper intercourse with his sister. And indeed in other cases too they say that Elpinicé was not very decorous, but that she had improper relations also with Polygnotus the painter, and that it was for this reason that, in the Peisianacteum, as it was then called, but now the Painted Colonnade, when he was painting the Trojan women, he made the features of Laodicé a portrait of Elpinicé. Now Polygnotus was not a mere artisan, and did not-paint the stoa for a contract price, but gratis, out of zeal for the welfare of the city, as the historians relate, and as Melanthius the poet testifies after this fashion :—

“ He at his own lavish outlay the gods’ great fanes, and the market
Named Cecropia, adorned ; demigods’ valour his theme.” :
Still, there are some who say that Elpinicé did not live with Cimon in secret intercourse, but openly rather, as his wedded wife, because, on account of her poverty, she could not get a husband worthy of her high lineage; but that when Callias, a wealthy Athenian, fell in love with her, and offered to pay into the state treasury the. fine which had been imposed upon her father, she consented herself, and Cimon freely gave Elpinicé to Callias to wife. 1 Nauck, J'rag. Graec. Frag., 473.

8 Ov pnv adda kal brAwWsS daivetat Tois trepl Tas yuvaixas Epwtixois o Kipwv évoyos yevér Oar.
kal yap ‘Aotepias TO yéver Yarapuivias kal warty Mynorpas tivos o mourns Meddv0cos punpwoveves mrpos tov Kipeva rraitov 80 édeyelas, 9 a> orovdatoyevwv wn’ avrov. Syros 8 oth kal ampos ‘Iaodixny thy Evpumtovéuou pev Ouvyatépa tod Meyaxdéous, cata vopous § avrTe cupBiwoacav o Kiwov eumabéotepov Statebels wal dvodopncas atoPavovans, et tt Set texpatperBar tals yeypappévars él mapnyopia tod mévOous édeyelats mpos avTov, ov Tlavattios 0 Pidoaopos oletrat TrountHy yeyovévat TOV dvatxov ‘ApyédXaov, ovK amd TpoTrov Tos Ypovots

eixalwv.
V. Ta & dAda wavta rob ous ayacrTa Kai yevvaia Tov Kipwvos. obte yap ToApwy Merteaddou NevTropevos ovTE cuvéce. BeytoTrowréovs, Sixaro-TEepos appoiy oporoyetTar yevéoGat, cal ais ToreuiKais ovde puKpov amrodewy apeTais éeKxeivev apnyavov Saov év tais wonTiKais UTepBarécOat
2 véos @y étt Kal Todépov arreipos. Gre yap Tov
Sjyov ercovrway Mndwy BepmiotoxrAs érebe
Tpoépevoy THY TOW Kal THY YoOpay éKrALTIOVTA
Tpo THS Larapivos év tais vavol ta Gara GécOar cat Staywvicacba xcata Odrattap, éxtreTANy Le-YOV TOY TOAAOY TO TOALNLA TpwTOS Kipwv @h0n Sia rod Kepaperxod daidpos aviwv eis THv axpoTrody peta Tov étalpwy iirmou Tiva yadwwov avabeivar TH Oe, did Yetpwv Kopilwv, ws ovdéy immixkhns adKhs, ANNA vavypadywv avdpav év TO 3 wapovtTe THS ToAEws Seouevyns. avabels Sé Tov 416 é

CIMON

However, it is perfectly apparent that Cimon was given to the love of women. Asteria, of a Salaminian family, and a certain Mnestra are mentioned by the poet Melanthius, in a sportive elegy addressed to Cimon, as wooed and won by him. And it is clear that he was even too passionately attached to his lawful wife, Isodicé, the daughter of Euryptolemus and grand-daughter of Megacles, and that he was too sorely afflicted at her death, if we may judge from the elegy addressed. to him for the mitigation of his grief. This was composed by the naturalist Archelaiis, as Panaetius the philosopher thinks, and his conjecture is chronologically possible.

V. All other traits of Cimon’s character were admirable and noble. Neither in daring was he inferior to Miltiades, nor in sagacity to Themistocles, and it is admitted that he was a juster man than either, and that while not one whit behind them in the good qualities of a soldier, he was inconceivably their superior in those of a statesman, even when he was still young and untried in war. When the Medes made their invasion, and Themis- tocles was trying to persuade the people to give up their city, abandon their country, make a stand with their fleet off Salamis, and fight the issue at sea, most men were terrified at the boldness of the scheme ; but lo! Cimon was first to act, and with a gay mien led a procession of his companions through the Cerameicus up to the Acropolis, to dedicate to the goddess there the horse's bridle which he carried in his hands, signifying thus that what the city needed then was not knightly prowess but sea-fighters. After he had dedicated his bridle,

417
VOL. U. E E
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Yadivov cal AaBwv é« Tov TreEpl TOV VadY KpEeLapévov dotridwr, Kal mpocevEdpevos TH Oe@, xaré-Batvev éri Oddaccay, ovK GAjryors apy TOD Oappeiv ryevojeros.
Hv &€ xal rnv idéav ov pepmrtos, as "Iwv o
Tomntyns pyow, adArAa péyas, ovAn Kal ToAAR Tpexl Komav Thy Keharv. davels dé wal cat' aUTOV TOV dy@va Naputpos Kal dvdpwdys Tayvd S0-gay évy 1 TOAEL eT Evvoias Eaxev, aOpolopevwy TONAGY TPOS avTOV Kal TrapaKadovvTaY aka TOU
4 Mapadavos dn Siavoeicbar nal mpdocey. oppyn-cavta & avtov él tv wodtTelay dopevos o Sjyos ébéEato, Kal perros dv TOU MepmsotoKr€ovs avaye pos! tas peyiotas ev TH ToNEL Timas Kal apXas, evdppootov dvta Kal mpoogiAn Tois rodhots Sta mrpaotnta Kal i dle ovy HKiotra be avtov nu—noev "Apioteions o Avotmdyou, tiv evpulay évopav T@ 0, Kal mrocovpevos olov avTimanrov mpos THY Bemotoxréovs Sewvdtnta Kal TOApaDV.
VI. 'Enel 66 Mydav duyovtay é« ths "EXrabos émeupOn oTpaTnyos, KaTa OdraTTay ovTew Thy apxnvy A@nvaiwr éyovtav, ért Sé Havoavia
Te kat Aaxedatpovioss éeTropévwv, mrp@tov peév év Tais oTpateiars del Tapeiye TOUS TodiTas KOT MY te Oavpactovs Kal mpoOupia ToAv wdayrwy da-
2 hépovtas: érerta Ilavoaviov ois pev 'Bap- 482 Badpous S:areyopévov trepi mpodocias cal Baciret ypapovtos émiatonds, Tots 5€ cvuppdyots tpaxéws
Kal av0adas mpocpepopévov ral tmorddrdjga &
1 wpds supplied by Stephanus, and confirmed by § ; Bekker supplied els.
418
"

CIMON

he took one of the shields which were hung up about the temple, addressed his prayers to the goddess, and went down to the sea, whereat many were first made to take heart.

He was also of no mean presence, as Ion the poet says, but tall and stately, with an abundant and curly head of hair. And since he displayed brilliant and heroic qualities in the actual struggle at Salamis,! he soon acquired reputation and good will in the city. | Many thronged to him and besought him to purpose and perform at once what would be worthy of Mara- thon. So when he entered politics the people gladly welcomed him, and promoted him, since they were full to surfeit of Themistocles, to the highest honours and offices in the city, for he was engaging and attractive to the common folk by reason of his gentleness and artlessness. But it was Aristides, son of Lysimachus, who more than any one else furthered his career, for he saw the fine features of his character, and made him, as it were, a foil to the cleverness and daring of Themistocles.

VI. After the flight of the Medes from Hellas, Cimon was sent out as a commander,' before the Athenians had obtained their empire of the sea, and while they were still under the leadership of Pausa- nias and the Lacedaemonians. During this campaign, the citizen-soldiers he furnished on expeditions were always admirably disciplined and far more zealous than any others; and again, while Pausanias was holding treasonable conference with the Barbarians, writing letters to the King, treating the allies with harsh arrogance, and displaying much wantonness of 1 480 B.o. 2 478-477 B.C.

éfouciay cal dyxov avonrov vBpitovros, vTodap-Bdvwv rpaas Tovs adiveoupévous Kal diravOparras éFouur@v Erabev ov 80 GtrrWY THY THS "EXAdSos Hryepoviav, GAAB Adyw Kal HOE. TrapEedrcpevos. mpocetiOevTo yap of wWAEioTOL TOY cUppdyoY éxeivp te kai 'Apiotetdyn thy yareToTnTa Kal virepopiav tov Llavoaviou py péporres. at Se kal rovuTous awa wpoanyovto Kal Tois épdposs méutrovtes eppatov, ws adokovons THs Brdptns kal tapattopéevns THs "EAXdbos, avaxadely Tov Iavoaviap,
Aéyerau 5é rrapOévov twa Bulavtiav émriupavav
yovéwy, dvoua Kneovixny, ér' aiayvvn tod Iav-TAVLOUV METATELTOMEVOU, TOUS MEV YovEls UT' avay-Kns Kat PoBov mpoécbat tHhv Taida, thy Sé Tov mpo tov Swpatiou Senbeicay avedécOar To Pas, 51a oxoTous Kal cLwTrHS TH KALVN Tpoc.Lodcay Ady tov Ilavaaviov xafevdortos, éutreceiv cal ava-Tpéyrat TO AUXViov axovaay: Tov 8 bd Tod Wopou

tapaxdevta Kal omacdpuevov’ 7o Tmapaxelpevov éyxerpidxon, @s Tivos em avtov éxOpod BabiCovtos, watatat kal KataBarely thy TapOévor, éx Sé THs TANnYyNS atobavvdcay avTny ovK éav Tov Ilavaaviay nouxater, GAG viKTwp eldwrov avTO dHot-T@oav els Tov Umrvoy opyn Aéyetv TSE TO Hp@or' Lretye Sinns doocovy pada Toe Kakov avdpdow bBpus.

ép’ @ Kal pariota yareTas eveyKovtes ob
1 nal onagdpevoy with S: oxacduevor.

power and silly pretension, Cimon received with mildness those who brought their wrongs to him, treated them humanely, and so, before men were aware of it, secured the leadership of Hellas, not by force of arms, but by virtue of his address and character. For most of the allies, because they could not endure the severity and disdain of Pausanias, attached themselves to Cimon and Aristides, who had no sooner won this following than they sent also to the Ephors and told them, since Sparta had lost her prestige and Hellas was in confusion, to recall Pausanias.

It is said that a maiden of Byzantium, of excellent parentage, Cleonicé by name, was summoned by Pausanias for a purpose that would disgrace her. Her parents, influenced by constraint and fear, abandoned their daughter to her fate, and she, after requesting the attendants before his chamber to remove the light, in darkness and silence at length drew near the couch on which Pausanias was asleep, but accidentally stumbled against the lamp-holder and upset it. Bausanias, startled by the noise, drew the dagger which lay at his side, with the idea that some enemy was upon him, and smote and felled the maiden. After her death in consequence of the blow, she gave Pausanias no peace, but kept coming into his sleep by night in phantom form, wrathfully uttering this verse :—

“ Draw thou nigh to thy doom ; ’tis evil for men to be wanton.”

At this outrage the allies were beyond measure

421

"PLUTARCH'S LIVES

oUmpayor peta tod Kipwvos éFetouopxncav avrov. o 8 éxmecwv tot Butavriov xal To pdopatt tapatromevos, ws RAéyeTal, KaTépuye pos TO vexvopavteiov eis "Hpdxrccav, cal rhv puyny dvaxarovpevos ths KXeovians tapntetto
Thy opynv. 1 & es dy eModca taxéws Edn
TavoecOa TaV Kak@v avTov év Ywrdpty yevo-HEVOV, alvirTomevn, ws EoLKE, THV MENNOVT AY AUTO TENEUTHV. TAUTA pey OvVY UTO TOAAWY LoTOpyTAL.
VII. Kiporv 6é, trav cuppdywv dn Tpooke-XOpHKOToV avTO, oTpaTHYyos' els Opaeny Errevee, TuvOavopevos Ilepaay advipas évdokous wal ovy-yevets Bactréws 'Hidva rody Tapa Te UrTpvpove
KELLEVND TOTAM@ KaTéxoVTAas evoxAEiv Tos rept Tov Tomov éxeivoy "EAAnat. tmpaTov pev ody autous pdyn tous Ilépcas évinnoe wal xatéxrecEey EIS THY TrOALY? ETELTA TOUS UTép UTpUpoVva
Opdaxas, Bev avtois époita citos, avactatous
Tomy Kal THY yoOpar TapadvrAaTTwY atracav eis ToTaUTHY aTropiay Tovs TroALOpKOUpévOUS KaTéoTNcev, Bote Bovtny tov BactXtéws atpatnyov atroyvovta Ta Tpdyyata TH ToAE Top évetvar Kal auvvdiagpbecipar peta Tov pirwov Kal TOY ypnpaTov éavrov. ottw &¢ AaBwv THv word AAO pev ovdev a€toAoyov wpernOn, Tav TrEioTwY Tots BapBapos avyxataxadvrwv, thy 8€ yopav evpvertatny ovaav Kal KadrgXjioTny olKnoaL
mapédwxe tots "AOnvaiow. Kal Tovds "Eppas 422

CIMON

incensed, and joined Cimon in forcing Pausanias to give up the city. Driven from Byzantium, and still harassed by the phantom, as the story goes,
he had recourse to the ghost-oracle of Heracleia, and summoning up the spirit of Cleonicé, besought her to forgo her wrath. She came into his presence and said that he would soon cease from his troubles

on coming to Sparta, thus darkly intimating, as it seems, his impending death. At any rate, this tale is told by many.

VII. But Cimon, now that the allies had attached themselves to him, took command of them and sailed to Thrace,! for he heard that men of rank among the Persians and kinsmen of the King held possession of Kion, a city on the banks of the Strymon, and were harassing the Hellenes in that vicinity. First he defeated the Persians themselves in battle and shut them up in the city; then he expelled from their homes above the Strymon the Thracians from whom the Persians had been getting provisions, put the whole country under guard, and brought the besieged to such straits that Butes, the King's general, gave up the struggle, set fire to the city, and destroyec with it his family, his treasures, and himself. And so it was that though Cimon took the city, he gained no other memorable advantage thereby, since most of its treasures had been burned up with the Barbarians ; but the surrounding territory was very fertile and fair, and this he turned over to the Athenians for occupation, Wherefore the people permitted him to

1 476-475 B.c,

"A "A ~ ,
avT@ Tovs AOivous o SHuos avabcivar cuvexo-
A ,
PYNTEV, MY eTTiYyeyPATTTAL TO Mev POT
4 "Hv dpa xaxeivos tadaxdpésot, ot tote Mydov mato én' Hidm, Xtpupovos audi pods, Apoy T alOwva Kpvepov T érayovTes "Apna mpatot dvopevéwy evpov aunxavinv.
aA \ / "
T@ O€ SevTép@
>] a
"Hyepoveoar 5é pc Oov "AOnvaia rad' ESwxav
9 9 > V4 \ 4, ? A
avr' evepyecins Kal peydrov ayabov.
MaAXOv Tis TAD iOwv Kal érecaopéevwn eOeAnoet
appl rept Evvois mpdypace Sipe exerv.
5 +@ 6€ TpiT@:
"Ex mote thade modnos au 'Atpeidnot Meve-abeus
nryetto CaVcov Tpwixdr és trediov:

bv 10? "Opunpos ébn Aavadv Trica Owpnntdov Koopntnpa payns éEoxov dvra poneiv. ovTws ovdev aeixes AOnvaioror xareicbat KoopNTais Todéwov T audi Kal jvopéns, dedicate the stone Hermae, on the first of which is the inscription :—

‘‘ Valorous-hearted as well were they who at Eion fighting, Facing the sons of the Medes, Strymon’s current beside,
Fiery famine arrayed, and_ gore-flecked Ares, against them, Thus first finding for foes that grim exit,—despair ;”’

and on the second :—

‘“ Unto their leaders reward by Athenians thus hath been given ;
Benefits won such return, valorous deeds of the brave. :
All the more strong at the sight will the men of the future be eager,
Fighting for commonwealth, war’s dread strife to maintain ;’’

and on the third :—

“With the Atridae of old, from this our city, Menestheus
Led his men to the plain Trojan called and divine. |
He, once Homer asserted, among well-armoured Achaeans, Marshaller was of the fight, best of them all who had come.
Thus there is naught unseemly in giving that name to Athenians ;
Marshallers they both of war and of the vigour of men,”

VIII. Tadra sairep ovdapod +o Kipwvos
Y) n a e \ ” /
dvoua SynrobvTa Tins varepBorAnv éxew done

Tots Tote avOpwroas. ote yap BemotoKrs
TotovTov Tivos ovTe Mudrriadns eruyev, adda
4 a , ’ A , €
TouT@ ye Jarrod crépavov aitovvTs Lwpavns o Aexedevs x pécov THs éxxAnoias dvactas avtTelrev, ovK evyvwpova pév, apécacav Sé Te Sym rote gdovny ages: ““Orav ydp,” ep, “ povos
’ 4 ® 10 4 ‘
aryovicdpevos, & Mirriddn, vixnons tous Bap-4 / A 4 9 g/ 99 \
2 Bapovs, rore nal tipaabar povos akiov.” dia ti tolvuy 76 Kipuwvos tirepnyarnoav épyov; 4 Ste TOY pev ANAwY oTpAaTHYyOUYTwY UIrép TOD pI) mwaGety nuvvovTo Tovs ToNemous, TovTov 5é Kal Tonoas KaKas novynOnaay él Thy éxeitvov avTol oTpAaTEVTAVTES, KAL TPOTEKTHTAVTO Ywpas aUTHV \ > of ? 4 9
te THv Hiova nal thy "Apditrorw oixicavtes ;
3 “Otxroay 5é xal Xadpov éEXovros Kipovos é& airias totavtns. Addrgotres @Kovy THY vijcov, bd UA A ogi f \ 4
épyatat Kaxol ys AniLopevos Sé THY OdrNaccar .
€K Wanatov, TENEUT@VTES OVE TOV Elo AEOYTOV
Tap avrovs Kal Ypwpevwv arretyovto Eévav, adXa
@errarovs tivas éumopovs tepi to Kryacov
4 Opptcapévous ovrnoavtes elpEav. érei 5é¢ d:a-Spavres ex tav Seapev of avOpwrrot Sixnv Kate-PS 4 A / > 4 >
txaoavtTo THS TOAEWS ApdixtuoviKxny, ov Bovro-.
pévov TA YPHpaTa THY TOAAGY auvEKTiVvELY, GXAA tous éxovtas Kal Sinptraxoras atodovvat Kedevovrwy, Seicavres éxeivot wWéutTovot ypaypata
mpos Kipwva, xedevovtes rey peta TOV vEeav Anouevoy tHy wok UT avTav Evdidopevny, 426
ir,

CIMON

VIII. Although these inscriptions nowhere men- tioned Cimon by name, his contemporaries held them to be a surpassing honour for him. Neither Themistocles nor Miltiades achieved any such, nay, when the latter asked for a crown of olive merely, Sophanes the Deceleian rose up in the midst of the assembly and protested. His speech was ungracious, but it pleased the people of that day. “ When,” said he, “thou hast fought out alone a victory over the Barbarians, then demand to be honoured alone.” Why, then, were the people so excessively pleased with the achievement of Cimon? Perhaps it was because when the others were their generals they were trying to repel their enemies and so avert disaster ; but when he led them they were enabled to ravage the land of their enemies with incursions of their own, and acquired fresh territories for settle- ment, not only Eion itself, but also Amphipolis.

They settled Scyros too, which Cimon seized for the following reason. Dolopians were living on the island, but they were poor tillers of the soil. So they practised piracy on the high sea from of old, and finally did not withhold their hands even from those who put into their ports and had dealings with them, but robbed some Thessalian merchants who had cast anchor at Ctesium, and threw them into prison. When these men had escaped from bondage and won their suit against the city at the Amphictyonic assembly, the people of Scyros were not willing to make restitution, but called on those who actually held the plunder to give it back. The robbers, in terror, sent a letter toj,Cimon, urging him to come with his fleet to seize the city, and they would give it up to him.
427

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

5 maparafov 8 ottw THY vacov o Kipwv tovs pev Addrotras é&jAace nal tov Aiyaioy nrevOépwce, muvOavopevos b€ Tov Traralov Oncéa tov Aiyéws / \ ? 9 a > a. ? a“ ? guyovta pev €E “AOnvav eis Yxdpov, avtov § atroPavovta S0A@ dia PoBov vTd Aveopndovs tod 4 > , '\ 4 J a '

6 Bactréws, éorrovdace Tov tadov aveupeiv. Kat yap hy xpnopos "AOnvaias ra Onoéws Aeivava KeXevov dvaxopivery es dotu Kal Tiav ws hpwa TpEeTOVTWS, GAN Hyvoovy Sirov Keita, Lkupiov ovy oporoyouvTwYy ovd éewvtwv avatntely. TOTE 57) TOANT Piroripia Tod onxod poyts éEevpeBévros, évOéwevos 0 Kipewv eis Thy avrov Tpinpn Ta GoTa Kal TaANa KoopHoAaS peyadoTpETaS KaTHYayEV els THY auto bu' érav ayedov TeTpaxociwy. ed' w@ Kat Xr N > \ SOE € on v ¢ padoTta Tpos avToV ndéws Oo SHpos Eoyev. v ? ? a ? A \ \ a

7 “E@evto & eis pujunv avtod cal tiv TeV TpPAywoo@V Kpioly GvopadTHY yevomevny. TmpwTny yap Sidacxadiav rov Zodoxréovs ert véov xabévros, "Awedhiov o apxeorv, pirovekias ovons kat tapatakews Tov Ocatav, Kpitas pev ovK b 4 ral 9 A e \ , \ A éxAnpwae TOD ayavos, ws 5¢ Kipwov peta tov
ocvoTtpatnyev mpoerOev eis TO Oéarpov érrouncato
T@ Oe@ Tas vevopiopévas otrovdds, ovK adhKev 9 \ > a) xe , 9 4 , autovs amreNOeiv, AAX OpKwaas HvayKace KaBiaat kai kptvat déxa dvtas, ato PuAijs pias Exacrov.
8 o pév ovv ayov cal dia TO THY KpiToY akiepa

\ , ¢ v4 J \ nw
Thv pirotyiav brepéBare. vixnoavtos $&€ Tov
428 |
-

~

re"

CIMON

In this manner Cimon got possession of the island, drove out the Dolopians, and made the Aegean a free sea.)
On learning that the ancient Theseus, son of Aegeus, had fled in exile from Athens to Scyros,
but had been treacherously put to death there,
through fear, by Lycomedes the king, Cimon eagerly sought to discover his grave. For the Athenians had once received an oracle bidding them bring back the bones of Theseus to the city and honour him as became a hero, but they knew not where he lay buried, since the Scyrians would not admit the truth of the story, nor permit any search to be made. Now, however, Cimon set to work with great ardour, djscovered at last the hallowed spot, had the bones bestowed in his own trireme,
and with general pomp and show brought them back to the hero’s own country after an absence of about four hundred years. This was the chief reason why the people took kindly to him.

But they also cherished in kindly remembrance of him that decision of his in the tragic contests which became so famous. When Sophocles, still a young man, entered the lists with his first plays, Apsephion the Archon, seeing that the spirit of rivalry and partisanship ran high among the spectators, did not appoint the judges of the contest as usual by lot, but when Cimon and his fellow-generals advanced into the theatre and made the customary libation to the god, he would not suffer them to depart, but forced them to take the oath and sit as judges, being ten in all, one from each tribe. So, then, the contest, even because of the unusual dignity of the | judges, was more animated than ever before. But “ 429

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Lopowdéous Aéyerar tov Alayvrov *epiralh ryevopevov Kal Bapéws éveyxovTa ypovov ov ToAvY
"AOnvnot Stayayeiv, eit’ olyecOas 8: opynv eis
Licediav, Omrov Kal tereuvtnoas mept T'édav TtéOarrrat.
IX. Lwvdermvijo at dé T@ Kipeovi prow 6 o "lav TavTadmace peipaxtoy AKwv els ‘AOnvas éx Xiov mapa Aaopédovte: Kal Trav atrovday yevouévwv maparhnGévros ' doa, kal. daavros! ovK andas
éqracvety Tous Tapovras @S Bekusrepov Oeptoto-KAéous" éxelvoy yap ade pep ov pavas pabeiv
oudé KBapiveww, Tomy dé Tohoa peyadny ral
Tova tay éniatac bau TouvTgvev, olov eixos ev
TOT, Tov oyou puévos ent tas mpdges rob Kipevos Kal pevnovevopéevav TOY peyiorop, aurov éxeivov év Sue Bety oTpATHYN WA tov idiev
@S copwrarov. émrel yap éK 2noroo kal Bv-Cavtiov TOAAOUS TOV oon ee “aly manarous AaBovrTes ot oUppaxor Kipove Stavelpar mpocérata, 0 0 5é yopls ne auTous, xeopis dé tov
mept Tots Topact kOopov avtav éOnxev, TLBYTO TV Siavopny @s duicov. o 6é Tay pepidev éxé-Aevoev avtrovs érécbar Thy érépay, jv & ay éxelvos Katahimwaw, ayarna ey ’AOnvaious.
‘Hpogurov dé Tod Yapiou cupBovreva avros ai-peta Bau Ta Tlepowy padrov 7 Ilépoas, TOV pep KOG [Lov autol éhaBov, "AOnvaiors be TOUS aixparo-TOUS am édetrov. Kal TOTe pev O Kipev ames yeXotos evar Soxav Siavomevs, TOV pev cuppdyov 1 wapaxAnOérvros, doavros Bekker corrects, after Schiifer, to wapaxAnévra, dcayra.
430

Sophocles came off victorious, and it is said that Aeschylus, in great distress and indignation thereat, lingered only a little while at Athens, and then went off in anger to Sicily. There he died also,
and is buried near Gela.

IX. Ion says that, coming from Chios to Athens as a mere stripling, he was once a fellow-guest with Cimon at a dinner given by Laomedon, and that over the wine the hero was invited to sing, and did sing very agreeably, and was praised by the guests as a cleverer man than Themistocles. That hero, they said, declared that he had not learned to sing, nor even to play the lyre, but knew how to make a city great and rich.! Next, Ion says, as was natural over the cups, the conversation drifted to the ex- ploits of Cimon, and as his greatest deeds were being recounted, the hero himself dwelt at length on one particular stratagem which he thought his shrewdest. Once, he said, when the Athenians and their allies had taken many Barbarian prisoners at Sestos and Byzantium and turned them over to him for distribution, he put into one lot the persons of the captives, and into another the rich adornments of their bodies, and his distribution was blamed as unequal. But he bade the allies choose one of the lots, and the Athenians would be content with whichever one they left. So, on the advice of Hero- phytus the Samian to choose Persian wealth rather than Persians, the allies took the rich adornments for themselves, and left the prisoners for the Athenians. At the time Cimon came off with the reputation of being a ridiculous distributer, since

1 Cf. Themistociles, ii. 3.

édua ypucd Kal paviaxas Kal oTpemTovs Kal xavovas Kat Tmoppupay Pepopeverr, tav o> "AOn-vaiwy yuuVa copaATa KAKOS noenpeva pos épyaciay tapadaBovtwrv. uixpoy 5é tarepov
ot TV EaAXwKOTwY Pidot Kal oiKetor KaTABaivovTEs
éx Dpvyias xal Avédias édutpodvTo peyddov Xenuatoy Exactov, ooTe TH Kipou tecodpev
pnvav rpodpas eis Tas vaids bardpEat nal mpocére
Th TOL Xpvaiov ovK oALyov éx TeV AUTPOV mepuyevéo Bar.

X. "H6y é evTropav 0 Kipor epodia THS
oTpaTnyias & Kadas aro Tov Trohepieny édofev aperfia Gat KaNdLov aviAto KEV Els TOUS TONiTas.
TOY TE yap arypav TOUS pparyyous adeiner, iva
Kat Tobs Févous Kal TOY TokiTaY Tois Seopuévous
adeds w umdpxy hauPdverv Tis om@pas, kat Setrvov olKoL Tap avT@ derov pen, dpxobv dé TrOAAots, €TroletTo Kat nuepay, éf’ 6 TeV TEVA TOV O Bovdopevos eloner Kal Siatpopny elyev amrpay-pova, povors ToS Snwoators axonatwv. @S 5 ‘AptaroreAns pnotr, ovx, ATAVTW@V "AOnvator, aXrAG TOV SnyoTav autod Aaxiadév Tape Kevd-Cero t@ BovAopéve TO Setrrvov. auT@ 6é veavia kot mapelTrovTo cuvjders dpTrex opevot Karas, Ov Exaotos, el TUS TUVTUXOL T@ Kipou tév aorév mpea Burepos Huap veo mevos évdeds, SinuelBeto 7 pos aurov Ta tparia: Kal TO ryuvopevoy épaivero ceuvov. ob 8 autot kal vopsopa Kouilovres

apOovov Tapa Tapevor Tots Koprpous TOY TEVATOV
évy dyopa ciwnry TaVv Keppatiov évéBadXov eis

the allies had their gold anklets and armlets and collars and jackets and purple robes to display, while the Athenians got only naked bodies ill-trained for labour. But a little while after, the friends and kinsmen of the captives came down from Phrygia and Lydia and ransomed every one of them at a great price, so that Cimon had four months’ pay and rations for his fleet, and besides that, much gold from the ransoms was left over for the city.

X. And since he was already wealthy, Cimon lavished the revenues from his campaign, which he was thought to have won with honour from the enemy, to his still greater honour, on his fellow- citizens. He took away the fences from his fields, that strangers and needy citizens might have it in their power to take fearlessly of the fruits of the land ; and every day he gave a dinner at his house, —simple, it is true, but sufficient for many, to which any poor man who wished came in, and so received a maintenance which cost him no effort and left him free to devote himself solely to public affairs. But Aristotle says ! that it was not for all Athenians, but only for his own demesmen, the Laciadae, that he provided a free dinner. He was constantly attended by young comrades in fine attire, each one of whom, whenever an elderly citizen in needy array came up, was ready to exchange raiment with him. The practice made a deep impression. These same fol- lowers also carried with them a generous sum of money, and going up to poor men of finer quality in the market-place, they would quietly thrust small change into their hands. To such generosity as this

1 Const. of Athens, xxvii. 3.

Tas xelpas. av &) nai Kparivos o K@pLKOS eV Apyrexoise Goce pepvnoBas Sta TovTwv:
Kayo yap niyouy Mnrpoftos 0 ypappatevs

ov avdpl Deip Kal prrofevorary

Kal TavT apior@ TOV TlavedAjvey po TOU

Kipeove Mumapov ynpas eVaNXoUpevos

alova TavTa ouvdiarpivery. o de

Maroy BéBnxe mporeEpos.
ért Toivuy Popyias pev o Acovrivos dyno tov Kipova ra xpnpata kraobat pev @S XPPTO, xpiia Bat be OS TLUMTO, Kprtias dé tev TpLdKovTa ryevomevos ev Tais éXeyelats evYeTAaL’
T]Aobrov péev Yeorradav, peyaroppocvvynv bé _ Kipevos,
vinas & be cand TOU Naweadatpoviow:
Kaitou Aiyay ye Top Lrapridrny am’ ovdevds adou yweadcoper €v TOOLS "EdAnaww ovoac Tov ryevopevov n ort TOUS Févous é év Tas yupvorraSiars eSeirrviter: n 6e Kipwvos apOovia Kal THV Taratay tov ’AOnvaiwv trokeviay Kal pudav-Opwriav uTrepéBadev. ob ev yap, oe ols 4
TOMS peya, ppovet Siuxaiws, TO TE oTéppa THs Tpopijs el TOUS "Eddqvas eFeSooxay VddTwY TE mynyaiov ..... Kal TupOS évavow pnSovary dvOparrous edidatay,” o 5é€ THY pev oixtay Tois momiTats mputavetoy arrodei Eas Kowvon, ey é
TH Xopa Kaprr a érolmwv atrapxyas Kai boa
@pat Kara pépovar XphoOas Kat Aap Bavery
atravra Tots Eévows Tapéyov, TpoTrov Twa THv él
1 The lacuna can only be conjecturally filled. 2 ¢3{3atay Bekker corrects, with Schifer, to Weitar.

Cratinus; seems to have referred in his Archilocht, with the words :—
“ Yes, I too hoped, Metrobius, I, the public scribe, Along with man divine, the rarest host that lives, In every way the best of all Hellenic men,

With Cimon, feasting out in joy a sleek old age,
To while away the remnant of my life. But he Has gone before and left me."
And again, Georgias the Leontine says that Cimon made money that he might spend it, and spent it that he might be honoured for it. And Critias, one of the thirty tyrants, prays in his elegies that he may have " the wealth of the Scopadae, the great-mindedness of Cimon, and the victories of Arcesilaus of Lacedaemon."' |
And yet we know that Lichas the Spartan became famous among the Hellenes for no other reason than that he entertained the strangers at the boys' gym- nastic festival; but the generosity of Cimon sur- passed even the hospitality and philanthropy of the Athenians of olden time. For they—and their city is justly very proud of it—spread abroad among the Hellenes the sowing of grain and the lustral uses of spring waters, and taught mankind who knew it not the art of kindling fire. But he made his home in the city a general public residence for his fellow citizens, and on his estates in the country allowed even the stranger to take and use the choicest of the ripened fruits, with all the fair things which the seasons bring. Thus, in a certain fashion, he

435
F F 2
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kpovov pu0oroyoupévny xowvwviav eis tov Btov
7 avis Katiyev. of 5€ Tradta Kodaxeiav dydov Kal Snpaywyiay elvat dsaBaArXovtes bard THs aAANS éEnréyxovTo Tov advdpos Tpoatpécews aptoToxpa-Tuxhs Kal Aaxwrixns ovons, os ye Kal Qeysotonr.t qépa tod Séovtos éerraipovte thy Snpoxpatiav
b) A > 9 , 'N > 4
avréBawe per 'Aptatetdov, cal mpos 'Ediadtny
dotepov yapire Tov Sypov Katadvovtra Thy éF 8 "Apeiou mayou BovAny dunvéyOn, Anppatov sé poaiwy tovs adAXous TAnY 'Apioreidov xal
"EdidXrovu travtTas dvatipmAapévous opav, auTov abéxactoy Kai dOixtov éx TH TodTEla SwpodoKias
Kal wdavtTa mpoixa Kat Kafapas mpattovTa Kat Névyovra Sua TéNOvS Trapéecye.
Aéyerai yé rot 'Porcaxny tia BadpBapov azo-era ¥ n pBap
orarny Baciréws éeciy pera ypnudtwv TONNOY eis "AOnvas, cal orrapatrtopevoy vid THY cUKO-gavtav Kxataduyeiy mpos Kipwva, cat Oeivar

Tapa THv avArAEov avTod didras dv0, THY peév apyupetwy éumrnodpuevoy Aapexav, thy b€ ypu-
cav. idovtra bé tov Kipwva cal pedsacavta 9 wubécba Tod dvOpwTov, ToTEpoy aipetrar Kipwva
picOwrov } hirov eye: tod bé dyoavros didov “ Ouxody,” davar, “tadr amiOe peta ceavrod Koullov xprjoopat yap avrots Stray Séwpat piros rYEVOLLEVOS.
XI. "Emel & of cuppayor rovs popous pep
érérXouv, avdpas bé Kal vais ws érayOnoay ov Tapetxov, GNX atrayopevovtes On IMpos Tas oTparelas, Kal ToNéwou wey ouvdev Sedpevor, yewpyey 6€ wal Cnv xa? jovyiay ériOupourtes, aTn\XNaypevov tav BapBapwv cal pn Svoyrovr-436

restored to human life the fabled communism of the age of Cronus,—the golden age. Those who slanderously said that this was flattery of the rabble and demagogic art in him, were refuted by the man’s political policy, which was aristocratic and Laconian. He actually opposed Themistocles when he exalted the democracy unduly, as Aristides also did. _ Later on he took hostile issue with Ephialtes, who, to please the people, tried to dethrone the Council of the Areiopagus; and though he saw all the rest except Aristides and Ephialtes filling their purses with the gains from their public services, he remained unbought and unapproached by bribes, devoting all his powers to the state, without recom- pense and in all purity, through to the end.

It is told, indeed, that one Rhoesaces, a Barbarian who had deserted from the King, came to Athens with large moneys, and being set upon fiercely by the public informers, fled for refuge to Cimon, and deposited at his door two platters, one filled with silver, the other with golden Darics. Cimon, when he saw them, smiled, and asked the man
whether he preferred to have Cimon as his hireling or his friend, and on his replying, “ As my friend,’ “ Well then,” said Cimon, take this money with thee and go thy way, for I shall have the use of it when I want it if I am thy friend.”
XI. The allies continued to pay their assessments, but did not furnish men and ships according to allotment, since they were soon weary of military service, and had no need of war, but a great desire to till their land and live at their ease. The Barbarians were gone and did not harass them, so they neither

437

Y) a 4 » b 4

Twv, ovTe Tas vais émrAnpovy obt’ dvdpas arée A wv ~ 9 , OTENAOY, OF eV AAAOL OTpaTHYyOL TAY 'AOnvaier
mpornvayxatoy avtovs taira toeiy Kal Tous
é\NeiTovtas Umrdyovtes Sixats Kxal Kordlovtes
éraxOn thy apyny Kal AvIrnpav éroiovy, Kiwor 5¢ tHv evavtiay odov ev rh otparnyla tropevo-pevos Biay pev ovderi trav ‘EXAnvayv mpoonye, ypnpata 5¢ AXauBavwy rapa tev ob BovrAopévwy
otpatevecbat Kal vais Kevds, éxelvous ela Serea-Copévous 7H oxXoOAn Tept Ta oxeia SiatpiPey, yewpyous cal xpnuatiotas arrodepous ex ToAe-puK@y Ure Tpudjs xal avotas yivopévous, Tov 5
b) , ’ 4 ‘ 9 4
AOnvaiwy ava pépos rodXdovs éeuBiBalwov xat
Siarovay tais otpareiars ev odjLyYH Ypove Tots Tapa TOV cuppaywr picbois Kal ypnuact Seorro-tas avtav tov did0vray éerroince. mdéovras yap avrous auveyas kal bia yerpos Byovras ael ra S3AvAa Kal rpehopevovs nal aoKxovyTas ex THIS YT@Y a las) éO.cé io d
auTav aotpateias! éGicbévtes oBeicbar xa Koraxevery, EXabov avtl cuppdywv Uroredcis Kal SoiAor ryeryovores.
XIT. Kal pay avrod ye rob peyddou Bactréws ovdels érareivwoe Kal ovvéoterde TO Ppovnpua adrov h Kipwv. ov yap avijcev éx tis ‘EX-Adbos amnAAaypévov, GAX Wotep €x Todds
Sioxwv, mplv Svamvedoat nat orivar tous Bap-Bdpous, Ta pev erropOer kai xateotpédeto, Ta Se adiatn Kal mpoonyeto tots “EXAnow, date THY
> be] / 9 / ” / 4
at’ 'lwvias ’Aciav aypt Tlapdumas traytrdaract

1 dorpareias the correction of Reiske, adopted by Sintenis and Bekker. The MSS., including 8, have orparelas, which must be referred to the Athenians, So Coraés, manned their ships nor sent out soldiers. The rest of the Athenian generals tried to force them to do this, and by prosecuting the delinquents and punishing them, rendered their.empire burdensome and vexatious. But Cimon took just the opposite course when he was general, and brought no com- . pulsion to bear on a single Hellene, but accepted money from those who did not wish to go out on service, and ships without crews, and so suffered the allies, caught with the bait of their own ease, to stay at home and become tillers of the soil and unwarlike merchants in$tead of warriors, and all through their foolish love of comfort. On the other hand, he made great numbers of the Athenians man their ships, one crew relieving another, and imposed on them the toil of his expeditions, and so in a little while, by means of the very wages which they got from the allies, made them lords of their own paymasters. For those who did no military service became used to fearing and flattering those who were continually voyaging, and for ever under arms and training, and practising, and so, before they knew it, they were tributary subjects instead of allies.

XIJ. And surely there was no one who humbled the Great King himself, and reduced his haughty spirit, more than Cimon. For he did not let him go quietly away from Hellas, but followed right at his heels, as it were, and before the Barbarians had come to a halt and taken breath, he sacked and overthrew here, or subverted and annexed to the Hellenes there, until Asia from Ionia to Pamphylia was

[epouxayv Str wv épnpacat. muOopevos be TOUS Bactréws otparnyous peydrop oTpaT® Kal vavot moNNais epedpevery Tept Hapduatay, Kat Bovno- HEVOS aurois dr evy kal avéwBarov dAws U7rd poBov THY evTOS XerSoviwv Tonoarbas 6dXar- Tay, @punoev apas are Kvisov Kal 'Tpromiou Staxociats Tpinpect, Tpos pev TAXOS at' apx7s Kat Mepraryeory ny v0 Wepirroxhéous dpiora KATETKEVATHEVALS, éxetvos O€ ToTe Kal ThatuTépas érroincev avtas Kai didBacwv tots KatacTp@pact éwxev, @S Av UO TOAXOY OTALTOY paxlpwrepat por épowvTo TOLS TroAEpLous. emimAevaas dé Th TONEL TOV Paonhurav, "EAAHVOY pev OVTMY, OV

Seyouévwy 5é Tov oT ONY ovse Bovropevear arpi-oracbat Bacrréws, THY TE Xwpav KAKOS €roiE Kal mpooéBarne Tots TELXET LY. at b¢ Xiou oup-WrEOVvTES AUTO, ™ pos dé TOUS Pacnrhitas éx
Taravod prrixds é Was dpa pev Tov Kipwva
Karen pavvov, Epa. dé To Eevovres vmrép Ta Tein BiBrtb.a ™ poo Keipeva Tois GiaTois efaryyedAov tois Pacnritats. Tédos 5é€ SinrArakev! adrous, S7r ws béxa tddavra Sovres axorov0a@at Kal ov-oTpaTevwoly emt Tous BapBapovs.
"Eg opos pev ovv TeOpaverny gnoi trav Bact-NLKOY VvEewv dpxew Kal Tov melod Depevdarny, ‘KaddoGevns & Apioudvinv tov T'wPpvov KUpLo-TaTov évTa THS duvdpews mapa TOV Evpupédorra
Tais vavol Tapoppeiy, oux évTa payer Oat Tois EAAnet ™poOupor, adda mpogdexXopevov oydon-Kovta vats Povicoas amo Kvuapov mpoomre-

1 3hAAatey Coraés and Bekker have &:4AAaéav, as does S, referring to the Chians as reconciling the two hostile parties.

entirely cleared of Persian arms. Learning that the generals of the King were lurking about Pamphylia with a great army and many ships, and wishing to make them afraid to enter at all the sea to the west of the Chelidonian isles, he set sail from Cnidus and Triopium! with two hundred triremes. These vessels had been from the beginning very well con- structed for speed and manoeuvring by Themistocles ; but Cimon now made them broader, and put bridges between their decks, in order that with their numer- ous hoplites they might be more effective in their onsets. Putting in at Phaselis, which was a Hellenic city, but refused to admit his armament or even to abandon the King’s cause, he ravaged its territory and assaulted its walls. But the Chians, who formed part of his fleet and were of old on friendly terms with the people of Phaselis, laboured to soften Cimon’s hostility, and at the same time, by shooting arrows over the walls with little documents attached, ; they conveyed messages of their success to the men of Phaselis. So finally Cimon made friends with them on condition that they should pay ten talents and join him in his expedition against the Bar- barians.

Now Ephorus says that Tithraustes was com- mander of the royal fleet, and Pherendates of the infantry ; but Callisthenes says that it was Ario- mandes, the son of Gobryas, who, as commander-in- chief of all the forces, lay at anchor with the fleet off the mouth of the Eurymedon, and that he was not at all eager to fight with the Hellenes, but was waiting for eighty Phoenician ships to sail up from

1 About 467 B.c.

ovoas. tavtas hOjvat Bovropevos 6 Kipov
avnxOn, BidlecOat twapecxevacpévos, dv éxovTes
Hn vavpay@ow. of Sé mpaTov pév, as BN BiacGeiev, ets Tov Totamov elowpyicavTo, Tpoc-depouévwv 5€ tav ‘AOnvaiwy avrekérdevacar, ws tatope. Davodnuos, éExaociais vavaiv, ws 8S "Eqopos, mevtjxovra xal tpiaxociais. épyov dé Kata yotv thy Oddratrav ovdev bn’ avdtrav éempaxyOn ths Suvdpews akiov, adr’ evOds eis Thv Yhv atrootpépovtes eEémimrov ot mpwroe Kal Katéhevyov eis TO elev eyyvs TapaTeTaypevoy, ot 5€ KaTrarapPavopevot SiehOeipovTo pera
tav veay. @& Kal Sirov dori, Ste wapytroAdXai TiVES Al TrETTANPwpEVvaL Tols BapBdapo.s vijes Hoay, STE TOAA@Y EV, WS ELKOS, ExPUYoUTaY, TOAN@Y
5¢ avytpiBevcav, Suws alyparwrous Staxocias éXaBov ot 'AOnvaio..
XIII. Tév 8 refSav érixataBavrwv mpos tiv
Oaraccay plya pev Epyov éepaivero TH Kipove
TO BidfeOau THY ar oBaow Kat KEKMNKOTAS apie Kat ToANaT AAT LOLs em dryewy TOUS "EdX7-vas, Suws b¢ popn «al ppovipare Tov Kparety pay emnppevovs xal TpoOupous opoce xepeiv Tots BapBapass, GmneBiBate TOUS omhiTas ere Beppovs a) KaTa THY vavpaxiay ayau pera xpauyns Kat Spoov Tpoo pepopevous. broardytwv oé€ TOY Mepo ay ral beFapévov OUK ayEVVaIS Kpatepa pdyn auveotn Kal Tov "A@nvaiwy avdpes aryadot Kal Trois afiopace Tparot Kal Statrperreis Emecov. TorAAD 8 ayave TpeYrapevos

Cyprus. Wishing to anticipate their arrival, Cimon put out to sea, prepared to force the fighting if his enemy should decline an engagement. At first the enemy put into the river, that they might not be forced to fight ; but when the Athenians bore down on them there, they sailed out to meet them. They had six hundred ships, according to Phanodemus ; three hundred and fifty, according to Ephorus. Whatever the number, nothing was achieved by them on the water which was worthy of such a force, but they straightway put about and made for shore, where the foremost of them abandoned their ships and fled for refuge to the infantry which was drawn up near by; those who were overtaken were destroyed with their ships. Whereby also it is plain that the Barbarian ships which went into action were very numerous indeed, since, though many, of course, made their escape and many were destroyed, still two hundred were captured by the Athenians.

XIII. When the enemy's land forces marched threateningly down to the sea, Cimon thought it a vast undertaking to force a landing and lead his weary Hellenes against an unwearied and many times more numerous foe. But he saw that his men were exalted by the impetus and pride of their victory, and eager to come to close quarters with the Barbarians, so he landed his hoplites still hot with the struggle of the sea-fight, and they advanced to the attack with shouts and on the run. The Persians stood firm and received the onset nobly, - and a mighty battle ensued, wherein there fell brave men of Athens who were foremost in public office and eminent. But after a long struggle the Athenians

Tovs BapBdpous éxtewov, elta Hpouvv avtovs
Te Kal oxnVvas mavTodaT av XpPnwaTwy yemovoas.
Kivov & domep adrnrns Sexvos Tyepe pg
Svo KaOnpnkas aywviopata, kal TO ev ep Larapive meCouayia, TO & ev IWAatasais vavpayia twapednrv0as tpdrratoy, ernywvicato tais vixass, al tas-oySonxovta Dowicoas rpinpecs, al Tis pdyns arereihOnaav," Tdpm mpocBeBAnxévat wvOduevos Sia Tayous émdeucev, ovdev eldoTtwy BéBatov ovtrw mepl tis pelCovos . duvapews TOY oTpaTnyaV, adAAa SvaoTictws ETL Kal METE@PWS EYOVTWY" 7 Kal MAGAXOV éxTAAaYErTES am@\ecav tas vais atrdacas, kal Tov dvdpav ot qWreioro. auvdiehOdpnaav. rovTo TO épryov ovtws éTramelywoe THY yvounv tod Bactréas, @ote suvOécIar THv TepiBonTov eipnvny éxeivnp, immou pev Spopov del ths "EXAnvixts arréxeuv

Gardoons, évdov 5€ Kvavéwy xat Xersdoviwv paxpa vni Kal XarucepBorep fn) WAEELY.
Kaitos Karryrcbévns od dnote tadra cvvbécbat
tov BdpRapov, épym Sé mwovety Sid hoBov tijs
ATTHS exelvys, Kal paxpav oUTwWs aTrooTHvat THs ‘EAAdbos, @ote wevTnxovta vaval Tlepixréa Kat Tpidxovra povais “EdudArnyv éréxewa mmrevoat Xersdovior cai pndev adtois vaurexov aravricat
mapa tov BapBdpworv. év bé trois Wdiopaocw, & ouvynyaye Kpatepos, avtiypapa ovuvOnkayv ws yevouévwv Katatétaxta. ghact dé Kat Bwwov 444

routed the Barbarians with slaughter, and then captured them and their camp, which was full of all sorts of treasure.

But Cimon, though like a powerful athlete he had brought down two contests in one day, and though he had surpassed the victory of Salamis with an infantry battle, and that of Plataea with a naval battle, still went on competing with his own victories. Hearing that the eighty Phoenician triremes which were too late for the battle had put in at Hydrus,! he sailed thither with all speed, while their commanders as yet knew nothing definite about the major force, but were still in distrustful suspense. For this reason they were all the more panic-stricken at his attack, and lost all their ships. Most of their crews were destroyed with the ships. This exploit so humbled the purpose of the King that he made the terms of that notorious peace, by which he was to keep away from the Hellenic sea-coast as far as a horse could travel in a day, and was not to sail west of the Cyanean and Chelidonian isles with armoured ships of war.

And yet Callisthenes denies that the Barbarian made any such terms, but says he really acted as he did through the fear which that victory inspired, and kept so far aloof from Hellas that Pericles with fifty, and Ephialtes with only thirty, ships sailed beyond the Chelidonian isles without encountering any navy of the Barbarians. But in the decrees collected by Craterus there is a copy of the treaty in its due place, as though it had actually been made. And they say that the Athenians

1 Hydrus is the name in the MSS., but no such place is known. Syedra is the most probable correction.

elpins Sia taita tovs "AOnvaiovs iSpicacOat, cal KadAlav tov mpeoBevoavta tijor Stadepovrws.

IIpabévrwry Sé trav aiyparorav Aadvpwv ets
Te TA AdAXra YpHpacw Oo Shyos eppwcGn, Kal TH
dxpomoher TO voTiov Tetyos KaTeckevacey arr' éxeiyns evTropnaas THS oTpareias. Aéyerat Sé Kal TOV paxpav TEeLXav, & OKEAN KAaNODGL, OUVTEAEobhvat pev datepov THY oixodopiay, THY Oé TpwTHY Gepediwow eis ToTrous ékw@das Kat StaBpoxous
Tov Epyov éeurecovrwy épecOjvat Sia Kipavos Goparas, YaALKt TOAAR Kal ALGots Bapéot Tov
eho mieoGevtwr, exeivov ypnuata Tropifovtas Kal
d:dovtos. mpartos 5é tais Neyouevais eXevOepiors kal yAadupais StatpeBais, al puixpov torepov itreppuas nyatnOnoav, éxarrOrice TO doTU, THY yey ayopav wWratdavos Katadutevoas, thy 8
"Anadnpecav €& avidpov Kal avyunpas KaTappuTov amrobetEas Adaos Hnoxnuévoy vm' auTtov 'Spomots xadapois Kal wvoKiois wepiTrarots.
XIV. 'Eqel 6¢ trav lepoay tives ovn éBov-NovTo THY Keppovnoov exditrety, ddAa Kal Tovs
Opaxas avwlev érexarovvTo xatadpovodvtes Tod Kipewvos per' odAcywv TwavTdtract tpinpwy *AOn-ynev éxremdevKoTos, opunoas er' avtovs Téccapot pev vavol TpicKxaldexa Tas éxeivwy éEXaBer, éferdoas 5€ tous Ilépous nal xpatioas Tov Opa-KOY TacaY @KELwWoaTo TH TOAE THY XEppdvycor.
éx 5 rovTov @acious yey dtrootdvras 'AOnvaiwy Karavavpaynoas Tpels xal tTprdxovta vads édaPe Kal tiv wodw é€errodopKnce Kal Ta Ypvocia TA

also built the altar of Peace to commemorate this event, and paid distinguished honours to Callias as their ambassador.

By the sale of the captured spoils the people was enabled to meet various financial demands, and especially it constructed the southern wall of the Acropolis with the generous resources obtained from that expedition. And it is said that, though the building of the long walls, called "legs," was completed afterwards, yet their first foundations, where the work was obstructed by swamps and marshes, were stayed up securely by Cimon, who dumped vast quantities of rubble and heavy stones into the swamps, meeting the expenses himself. He was the first to beautify the city with the so-called “liberal’’ and elegant resorts which were so excessively popular a little later, by planting the market-place with plane trees, and by converting the Academy from a waterless and arid spot into a well watered grove, which he provided with clear running-tracks and shady walks.

XIV. Now there were certain Persians who would not abandon the Chersonese, but called in Thracians from the North to help them, despising Cimon, who had sailed out from Athens with only a few triremes all told! But he sallied out against them with his four ships and captured their thirteen, drove out the Persians, overwhelmed the Thracians, and turned the whole Chersonese over to his city for settlement. And after this, when the Thasians were in revolt from Athens,? he defeated them in a sea- fight, captured thirty-three of their ships, besieged and took their city, acquired their gold mines

1 466 B.C. 2 465 BC.

répav ’AOnvaiors mpocextncato Kal yepav, iis émipyov @dovo, wapérXaBev.

"ExeiOev 5é padiws émiBivat Maxedovias Kai TOAAnY aTroTeuéoOat Trapacyov, ws edoKel, M7 Oernoas aitiay gaye Swpots varo Tod Bacthéws "AreFdvdpou cuptrerretcOar, cai Sixny epuye Tav éyOpav cvotdvrwy én avtov. atrodoyoupevos dé mpos tous Stxaotas ovK ‘lovwv edn mpokevety ove Beccadav, TAOVGiwY dvTwY, WoTrEp ETEpoUSs, iva Ocparrevwvrar Kal AapBavwow, adda Aa-Kedalpoviwy, pipovpevos Kal ayaTo@v THY Tap avrots evtéAecay Kal cwhpocurvny, hs ovdéva mpo-TuLay MAOUTOV, AANA TAOUTICWY ATO TOY TO-Aeulov THY ToAW ayarrecOar. pynaobels Sé THs Kptoews exeivns 6 YrnoiuBporos dynos thy ’EXte-vicny trép tod Kipwvos Seouevnv érbetv emt tas Oupas rob Ilepexréous (odtos yap hv Tov KaTn-yopwv 6 adodporatos), tov 6 peidiacavra “Tpats el,” davai, “ypais, ® “Edmuwixn, os tTnrikadra diampatrecOar mpdypata*” aWAnv év ye tH Sixn wpadtatov yeveoOar Te Kipove cat mpos THv KaTnyopiavy arak avacTivar povor, Womwep ahocrovpevoy.

XV. "Exetyny peév obv atrédhuye thy Sixny: év be TH AoLTH ToNTELa Tapwv pev Expater Kal cuvé-arene TOY Ojpov émtBaivoyvta Tols apioros Kal

TEeplomTavTa THY Tacav els EavToYV apyny Kal duvapuv> ws O€ 1rdALv él otpateiay éFéerdevce, TEAEwS aveBévres of ToAAOL Kal auyyéavTes TOV KaDECTO-Ta THS TWONTELAS KOT MOY Ta TE TAaTpPLA VOpipma, ols 448

488

CIMON

on the opposite mainland for Athens, and took possession of the territory which the Thasians controlled there.

From this base he had a good opportunity, as it was thought, to invade Macedonia and cut off a great part of it, and because he would not consent to do it, he was accused of having been bribed to this position by King Alexander, and was actually prosecuted, his enemies forming a coalition against him.! In making his defence before his judges he said he was no proxenus of rich Ionians and Thessalians, as others were, to be courted and paid for their services, but rather of Lacedaemonians, whose temperate simplicity he lovingly imitated, counting no wealth above it, but embellishing the city with. the wealth which he got from the enemy. In mentioning this famous trial Stesimbrotus says that Elpinicé came with a plea for Cimon to the house of Pericles, since he was the most ardent accuser, and that he smiled and said, “Too old, too old, Elpinicé, to meddle with such business.” But at the trial he was very gentle with Cimon, and took the floor only once in accusation of him, as though it were a mere formality.

XV. Well then, Cimon was acquitted at this trial. And during the remainder of his political career, when he was at home, he mastered and constrained the people in its onsets upon the nobles, and in its efforts to wrest all office and power to itself; but when he sailed away again on military service,’ the populace got completely beyond control. They con- founded the established political order of things and the ancestral practices which they had formerly

1 463 B.C. 2 462 B.c. See chap. xvii

449
VOL. II. . GG
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

2 éypavro mpotepov, "Ediddrov mpoeatartos adet-AovTto Tis é& "Apetou mayou BovAs Tas Kpicets
TAnY ONlywy atTacas, Kat tav SiKaorTnpioy
Kuplous éavtovs Troimaavtes eis axpatov Snpo-Kpatiav évéBarov-tHv mod, 46n Kat Llepixdréous Suvapévov xal Ta TOY TOAABY ‘pPpovodyTos. S60 kal tov Kipwvos, os éravndOev, ayavaxrovvros
énl T@ mpomnrakiferOar 1d akiwpa Tod cuve-Spiov, cal mepwuévov madd dvw tas Sixas avaxaneicOat Kai tiv éml KreucBévous éyetpev dpistoxpatiav, kateBowy cumotdpevos Kal Tov 3 Shyov eEnpeOclov, éxeiva te Ta pos THY adeXdny avaveovpevor kal Aaxwviopov émixadovvtes. els & xal ra Evtronséos StateOptrnras rept Kipwvos, bre
Kaxos pév ovn Hv, peromorns 5é Kaperns

Kaviot dv amexotmat av év Aaxedaipou, cay ’Exruvicny ryvde katadiTrev povny.

et & auedov cal peOvaoxopevos tooavTas moAEs
elke xal tocavtas vixas évixnoe, SHrov Tt yypovtTos avtod Kal mpocéxovTos ovdels Av ovTE TOV TpOTEpoVv OvTE TOY VaTEepov EXAjvar TapyrAGe
Tas mpakes.
XVI. "Hy pev ody ar’ apyis btAoAdcov: Kal ray ye waidwv tav Sidvpwv tov érepov Aaxedatpovtov @vopace, Tov 8 Erepov Hreéiov, éx yuvateds aita Kreropias yevopévous, ws YrnoipuSporos iotopet: 520 rroAAaxus Tov Tlepuxréa To untpo@ov avtois yévos ovedivev. Arodwpos 8 o Iepinyn-THS Kal ToUTOUS Pyol Kal Tov TpiT Ov TeV Kipewvos
450 .

CIMON

observed, and under the lead of Ephialtes they robbed the Council of the Areiopagus of all but a few of the cases in its jurisdiction. They made them- selves masters of the courts of justice, and plunged the city into unmitigated democracy, Pericles being now a man of power and espousing the cause of the populace. And so when Cimon came back home, and in his indignation at the insults heaped upon the reverend council, tried to recall again its juris- diction and to revive the aristocracy of the times of Cleisthenes, they banded together to denounce him, and tried to inflame the people against him, renew- ing the old slanders about his sister and accusing him of being a Spartan sympathiser. It was to these calumnies that the famous and popular verses of Eupolis about Cimon had reference :—

“ He was not base, but fond of wine and full of sloth,
And oft he ‘ld sleep in Lacedaemon, far from home,
And leave his Elpinicé sleeping all alone.”
But if, though full of sloth and given to tippling, he yet took so many cities and won so many victories, it is clear that had he been sober and mindful of his business, no Hellene either before or after him would have surpassed his exploits.
XVI. It is true indeed that he was from the first a philo-Laconian. He actually named one of his twin sons Lacedaemonius, and the other Eleius,—the sons whom a woman of Cleitor bare him, as Stesimbrotus relates, wherefore Pericles often reproached them with their maternal lineage. But Diodorus the Topographer says that these, as well 45!
G@a@ 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

viavy @Beccarov e& “Icodixns yeyovevat tijs Evpumrodéuou Tow Meyaxnéous. nuEnOn & wo TOV Aaxedarpovier 78n 7 Bepiorowrel ™poonro-AewouvTov Kal ToUTOV édyvta véov ev "AOnvats panrrov toxver kal Kpatetv Bovropevev. ot Oy “AOnvaior TO 7 p@Tov ndéws EWpwV ov pixpa Tijs Tpos exéivov evvoias TOV Lraptiarév am ohavov-Tes" avEavopevors yap avtois Kar apxas kal Ta TUmpAXLKA mohuTpary wovobary ovK HYG ovtTo Tuy Kab Xapete ToD Kipwwvos. ta yap TheloTa bt! éxetvou TOY “EAAnuicav Stem parrero, TPAws pev Tots TUUpAXOLS, KeXapio pevers dé Tois Aaxedac-povioss oushodvos. éreita SuvaT@tepot ryevo-pevot Kat TOV Kipwva Tots Lrapridrats oux Tpepa. 7 poo Ketpevov op@vres nXIovro. Kal yap avros émt mavtt peyaduvev Ty AaxeSaipova pos "AGnvatous, Kai padiora dTe sixet peuo-pevos autots 7) mapokvver, as dnot UTnoipBporos, eiober every” “AN ov Aaxedatpovsot ye ToovTo.. d0ev pOovov éauT@ ouviyye Kal Suc péverdy Teva, mapa TOV TOMTOD.
‘H & ovv toxucaca paduora Kat avrov TOY S1aBor.ov airiav éoxe TotautTny. ‘Apysddpou Tod

ZevEwdpov TéTapTov * Eros év Rrdpty Baotrevov-TOS vTrO cto pou peylorou 87 TOV pYNpovevopEveov mpotepov 4 Te Yapa THY Aaxedaipoviny ydopaow évoduabe roAXvis Kas Tov Taiyérev TIVaX—Gévtwv Kxopudai tives ameppdarynoay, aut? o 7 ” qos OAn ouvexuOn Thay OLKIDY TWEVTE, TAS S Gras Hperpev 0 ceo pos.
1 séraprow Bekker adopted Niebuhr’s correction to reoca-peexadéxarer fourteenth.
452 ~~

CIMON

as the third of Cimon’s sons, Thessalus, were born of Isodicé, the daughter of Euryptolemus, the son of Megacles. And he was looked upon with favour by the Lacedaemonians, who soon were at enmity with Themistocles, and therefore preferred that Cimon, young as he was, should have the more weight and power in Athens. The Athenians were glad to see this at first, since they reaped no slight advantage from the good will which the Spartans showed him. While their empire was first growing, and they were busy making alliances, they were not displeased that honour and favour should be shown to Cimon. He was the foremost Hellenic statesman, dealing gently with the allies and acceptably with the Lacedaemonians. But afterwards, when they became more powerful, and saw that Cimon was strongly attached to the Spartans, they were displeased thereat. For on every occasion he was prone to exalt Lacedaemon to the Athenians, especially when he had occasion to chide or incite them. Then, as Stesimbrotus tells us, he would say, “ But the Lace-daemonians are not of such a sort.” In this way he awakened the envy and hatred of his fellow-citizens.

At any rate, the strongest charge against him arose as follows. When Archidamus, the son of Zeuxida-mus, was in the fourth year of his reign at Sparta,! a greater earthquake than any before reported rent the land of the Lacedaemonians into many chasms, shook Taygetus so that sundry peaks were torn away, and demolished the entire city with the exception of five houses. The rest were thrown down by the earthquake,

1 464 B.C.

453

5

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"Ey &e wen 7 arog yumvalopevon opod TOY
epnBov cai Tov veavionwy déyeTat pute pov mo TOU oeta pou ayo mapadavivas, kal Tous pep veavioxous, WomTrEep Hoav ay tL HEvOL, META Wacolas éxdpapeiy Kal Stax, (Tots 5 ep) Bors vrorerpGetow € emumen ety TO ‘yupvacvov Kal mavTas opov TEAEUTHO AL. tov 8€ tddov avtav étt viv Seopatiav Tpocaryopevouat.
Taxv 67 cuvday amo TOU TapovTos TOV HénovTa xivduvov 0 "Apxidapos, Kai Tovs TrodiTas op@ayv é€k Tov oiKLaY Ta TUMOT ATA, TméeLpwpévous ower, éxéhevae TH oadmuyyt onpaivELY, Os “qroNepioy emTLovTmY, Omws ort Taxiora peta TOY Srhwv aOpoiSevrar mpos avtov. 6 87 Kal povoy évy T@ TOTE Kalp@ Ty Lmdprnv b:éow-
oev. ob yap elhoores dx TOV dry pay ouvédpapov
mavTaxolev ws dvapTrac opevor TOUS TETWOUEVOUS TOV LraptiaTay. Omg WEvous b¢ Kal ouvTe-TayWEvous evpovTes avexwpnaay em Tas ToneLs Kal pavepas em oN LOuy, TOV TE TepLoixeov ava-meloavrTes ovK OdLyous, Kal Mecaonviwy apa Tots Ymapridrats ouven epeveov.
Tléumrovew ovVv ot Aaxedatpsvrot Tlepexrcioav
ets "AOnvas Seopevor Bondeiv, dv pyar Keoppday
"Aptarod duns abelouevov éml trols Bapois wXpov
ev howixids otpatiay érarteiv. "EqidAtou Se KWAVOVTOS Kat Stapaptupopévov Pe Bon@etv pnd aviaTavat Woy avritranov émt Tas “AOnvas, GXN’ éav xetoOat nal rarnOijvat To ppovnua THS Lmdprns, Ktuovd gnot Kpetias THY THS TaTpibos
abtnow év totépw Géuevoy tod Aaxedatpovioy 454
™~
489

CIMON

It is said that while the young men and youths were exercising together in the interior of the colon- nade, just a little before the earthquake, a hare made its appearance, and the youths, all anointed as they were, in sport dashed out and gave chase to it, but the young men remained behind, on whom the gym- nasium fell, and all perished together. Their tomb, even down to the present day, they call Setsmatias.

Archidamus at once comprehended from the danger at hand that which was sure to follow, and as he saw the citizens trying to save the choicest valuables out of their houses, ordered the trumpet to give the signal of an enemy's attack, in order that they might flock to him at once underarms. This was all that saved Sparta at that crisis. For the Helots hurriedly gathered from all the country round about with intent to despatch the surviving Spartans. But finding them arrayed in arms, they withdrew to their cities and waged open war, persuading many Perioeci also so to do. The Messenians besides joined in this attack upon the Spartans.

Accordingly, the Lacedaemonians sent Pericleidas to Athens with request for aid, and Aristophanes introduces him into a comedy as " sitting at the altars, pale of face, in purple cloak, soliciting an army."?} But Ephialtes opposed the project, and besought the Athenians not to succour nor restore a city which was their rival, but to let haughty Sparta lie to be trodden under foot of men. Whereupon, as Critias says, Cimon made his country's increase of less account than Sparta's interest, and persuaded the 1 Lysistrata, 1137 ff.

cuudépovros avatreicavtra tov Shpyov é&eNOeiv BonOotvra peta TodrAOv oTduToY. Oo 8 "lwv amopvnovever Kal Tov Adyov, & padtoTAa TOUS
"AOnvaiovs éxivnoe, Tapaxadrov pnte thy 'EXrdda Koray Byte THY Todw ETepolvya TrepLidety yeyevnpevny.
XVII. "Enel &é Bondijoas Tois Aaxedatpoviors
amnet dia KopivOov thv orpatiav ayo, évexanet Adyaptos avT@ mpiy évruxeiv Tots TromMTals eloaryaryovre TO oTpateupa Kat yap Oupay Kopavras aNXOT piav ovK elovevat 7 pOTEpoV i) TOV KUPLOD xehevoat. Kat 9 Kipov "'AAN ovy upeis," elev, @ Adyapre, TAS Krcwvater Kal Meyapéwy TUAAS KOWayTes, ada. KATACXITAYTES elo eBid cacde pera TOY OTN@DV afvoivtes dvepyevas mavra Tois peifov Suvapevors." ovTH pev eOpaovvaTo 7 pos tov KopivOcov év Séovrt, cal peta Ths oTpaTLas beEAOev.
Oi 6é Aaxedarpovior tous 'A@nvaious addts
éxdXouv émt tous ev 'lO@un Meconvious xat
elhwras, EXMGovtwy dé THY TOhpay Kal THY Aap

™poTnTa deicavres arreTrépapavTo povous TOY CULUAXOY WS vewTepia Tas. at O€ mMpos Spyny
atreNOovtes nbn TOI Aaxwvifovet pavepas éxahe-Tawov, kai tov Kineva puxpas émthaBopevor Tpopdcews éEwotpaxicav ets érn Séxa> TocovTov yap hv Xpovov TeTaypévov atract Tots eLootpaxt-Copevots.
"Ev 6é TOUT TOV Aaxedatpovior, as emavnp-yovto Aeddovs aro Paxéwy éXevOepwoartes, ép 456

people to go forth to her aid with many hoplites. And Ion actually mentions the phrase by which, more than by anything else, Cimon prevailed upon the Athenians, exhorting them “not to suffer Hellas to be crippled, nor their city to be robbed of its yoke-fellow.”

XVII. After he had given aid to the Lacedaemonians, he was going back home with his forces through the Isthmus of Corinth, when Lachartus upbraided him for having introduced his army before he had conferred with the citizens. “People who knock at doors,” said he, “do not go in before the owner bids them”; to which Cimon replied,. “ And yet you Corinthians, O Lachartus, did not so much as knock at the gates of Cleonae and Megara, but hewed them down and forced your way in under arms, demanding that everything be opened up to the stronger.” Such was his boldness of speech to the Corinthian in an emergency, and he passed on through with his forces.

Once more the Lacedaemonians summoned the Athenians to come to their aid against the Messenians and Helots in Ithomé, and the Athenians went, but their dashing boldness awakened fear, and they were singled out from all the allies and sent off as dangerous conspirators. They came back home in a rage, and at once took open measures of hostility against the Laconizers, and above all against Cimon. Laying hold of a trifling pretext, they ostracised him for ten years.!. That was the period decreed in all cases of ostracism.

It was during this period that the Lacedaemonians, after freeing the Delphians from the Phocians,

1 461 B.c,
457
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 V4 bf a \ Tavaypa xataotpatoredevodytwy 'A@Onvaior pev
b fe)
anmnvrwv Swapayovpevor, Kivwr 88 peta Tov StA@Y Hey eis THY avUTOD dvAnyv Thy Oivnisa,
4 b 4 \ ,
mpoOumos dv auvverOat Tovs Aaxedatpovious peta Tov ToMTaV. 7 5é BovdAn TOY TevTaKociwy TuO0-pen xai doBnOciga, trav eyOpav avtod Kxata-Bowvrev ws cuvtapd—ar tHhv ddrayya Bovdo-pévov kal tH ToAct Aaxedampovious érayayeiv, amnyopevoe Tois otpatnyois pn SéyerOat Tov dvdpa. xKaxeivos pev wero SenBels Evdimarov a 9 , \ ce) wv: @ , @
tov Avaddvotiov Kal ToV adrwWV ETALPwY, Boot UA \ lo) , > - " > ,
padtoTta THY TOD AaKwvilew aitiay Eryxov, éppwpévos aywvicacbas pos Tovs Trodeuious Kat de'
4 b] , \ > @& N \ lg
Epywv atrod\voac bat Thy atTiay Tpos TOUS TONTAS.
ot 8€ AaBovres avtod thy TavorAlay eis Tov AGKOV éOevto: xat pet GdAnAWY aUaTavTeEs exOdpas éxatov évtes Emecov, wodvv avTov ToOov Kat petapéreay ed' ols nridOnoav adixws amrodtrov-a 9? ld @ Pr A \ , tes tots "AOnvato. S0ev ovdé tH wpos Kipova Oup@ Tord. ypovoy évéweway, Ta "EV, WS ELKOS,
? w @ V4 \ \ "A "
@y Era0ov ev pepvnpévot, Ta 5é TOU KaLpod auA- - Xa o : '4 ' N 9 4

1p Pavopevov _vevexnpevor yap ev Tavayp¢ ayn peyadn Kat TpocdoxavTes Els @pav ETOUS
otpatiav TeXoTvovynciwy em' avrovs éxddouv ex THs guys Tov Kipeva: cai catnre To Wydiopa
, > " 4 4 4

ypaxpavtos aut@ Ilepixreous. ovTw ToTE TroALTE-Kai pev joav ai Stadopat, pérptos S ot Oupoi 458 encamped at Tanagra on their march back home.! Here the Athenians confronted them, bent on fight- ing their issue out, and here Cimon came in arms, to join his own Oeneid tribe, eager to share with his fellow-citizens in repelling the Lacedaemonians. But the Council of the Five Hundred learned of this and was filled with fear, since Cimon’s foes accused him of wishing to throw the ranks into confusion, and then lead the Lacedaemonians in an attack upon the city ; so they forbade the generals to receive the man. As he went away he besought Euthippus of Anaphlystus and his other comrades, all who, were specially charged with laconizing, to fight sturdily against the enemy, and by their deeds of valour to dissipate the charge which their countrymen laid at their door. They took his armour and set it in the midst of their company, supported one another . ardently in the fight, and fell, to the number of one hundred, leaving behind them among the Athenians a great and yearning sense of their loss, and sorrow for the unjust charges made against them. For this reason the Athenians did not long abide by their displeasure against Cimon, partly because, as was natural, they remembered his benefits, and partly because the turn of events favoured his cause. For they were defeated:at Tanagra in a great battle, and expected that in the following spring-time an armed force of Peloponnesians would come against them, and so they recatled Cimon from his exile. The . decree which provided for his return was formally proposed by Pericles. To such a degree in those days were dissensions based on _ political differ- ences of opinion, while personal feelings were

1 457 B,C.
459
ae
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

xat mpos TO Kowov evavdxrnTOL cuphépov, % 5é
diroriia wdavrwv émixpatovoa Tay Tabay Tois THS TaTpioos UIreywpel KaLpois.
XVIII. Evdds pev odtv o Kipowv kxatenOov EXvae Tov todenov Kal SundArdake Tas odes’ yevopévns § eipynvns opav rovs *A@nvaious hovylay dye un Suvapévous, GAXA KivetoOat Kal avfavecOar tais otpateiats Bovdopévous, iva
ayn tots “EXAnoe SioxA@or pnde rept Tas VHGOUS 9 [leXomrévvncov dvactpepopever vaval trodndais aitias éupurAiwr Trodéweov Kal cuppayecav éykdn-patwy dpyds émiomdowvtTas Kata THS TodEws, émAnpou Siaxocias tpihpers ws er Alyurrov cat
Kvurpov avéis éxorpatevocpevos, apa pev éep-MeXNETAY TOs mpos TOvs BapBapous ayaa Bovdo-pevos tovs ’AOnvaious, dua § wperetoBar dixaiws Tas amo Tov dicet Trodeulwy evrropias eis THY ‘EAAdba Kouilovtas.

"Hdn 8€ wapecxevacpévwv aravtwv Kai Tod
otpatob mapa tais vavaly dvros bvap cidev o Kiuov. éd0xer xiva Ovpoupévnv brAaKTELY TpOS avrov, éx b€ THs bKAAHS pemypéevoy adeioay avOpwtrov POoyyov eitrety:
Lreive: hiros yap éon cal euol cat éepois

OKUAAKEDOLD.
ovtw dé Suaxpitov tis dypews ovans ‘AoTudidos 0 Tlocedaudrns, pavtixos dvnp Kal avvnOns TO Kivu, ppdter Oavatov ait@ mpoonpaivery thy oyu, otto Siatpov: xvav avOpwr@, mpos by UAaxTel, Todewsos* Trodeuia 8 ovK adv Tis waddop 450

~,

CIMON

moderate, and easily recalled into conformity with the public weal. Even ambition, that master passion, paid deference to the country’s welfare.

XVIII. Well then, as soon as Cimon returned from exile he stopped the war and reconciled the rival cities. After peace was made,! since he saw that the Athenians were unable to keep quiet, but wished to be on the move and tmrwax great by means of military expeditions ; also because he wished that they should not exasperate the Hellenes generally, nor by hovering around the islands and the Peloponnesus with a large fleet bring down upon the city charges of intestine war, and initial complaints from the allies, he manned two hundred triremes. His design was to make another expedition with them against Egypt and Cyprus. He wished to keep the Athenians in constant training by their struggles with Barbarians, and to give them the legitimate benefits of importing into Hellas the wealth taken from their natural foes.

All things were now ready and the soldiery on the point of embarking, when Cimon had a dream. He thought an angry bitch was baying at him, and that mingled with its baying it uttered a human voice, saying :—

“* Go thy way, for a friend shalt thou be both to me and my puppies."'

The vision being hard of interpretation, Astyphilus ot

Posidonia, an 'inspired man and an intimate of Cimon's, told him that it signified his death. He analysed the vision thus: a dag is a foe of the man at whom it bays; to a foe, one cannot be a friend

1 450-B.c.
461

ye

a

cr

=>)

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

H Tereutncas diros yevo.To- TO O€ pirypa Tis povns Mijsov amodnhoi TOV _eXOpov- 0 yap
Mybov OTPATOS 'EAAgow opod Kat BapBdpors
HE MLK TAL. peta Sé TAavTQY THY ory avrob ™] Avoviow Oucartos o pev pdvris amérepe TO lepeiov, Tod 8 aiuatos To Tyvupevor non HUpENKes Tool AapBavovres Kara, pk pov Epepov
Wpos Tov Kipava Kat TOU 1050S mept TOV péyav
SaxTuXOv TEPLeTAATTOV, émt qoXuv Xpovoy av-Odavovtes. Epa dé TOS 6 te Kipov to yivopeve
Tpoéo € wal Tapiy 6 Ourns émideravipevos avT@
TOV AoBov ovK eXovTa Keparny.
"AAX' ov 'yap HY avadvats THS oTpareias é&é-Wrevoe, Kal tov veov EEnxovta pev atréoTetrev els Aiyutrrop, tals & ddXais wddw ... err.
wear KATAVAVLAX IT AS Dowwcody veaVy Kal Kido-oy, Bactdtxov OTONOY AVEKTATO TE TAS EV KUKAM
monet Kal Tots mepl Alyumrov épndpever, ovdev pucpov, arr' SANs em voey THS Bacthéws nYyeLovias KaTahuow, Kal padiora ort Tov Bena T0-KAEOUS "erruvOdvero bo£ay elvat nai Svvayv év
tois BapBdpors peyadny, brrodedeypévov Bacirei

KwodvTt TOV ‘EdAnvicoy mohepov TTPATIYNHTELW.
@cpiotrokrARs pev ovv oux jeora Aéyerat TAS
‘EAAnuiKds mpagers aTroryvous, as ovK dp virep-Baréopevos thv Kipevos ebruxiay Kal aperny, EKWV TENEUTIIO AL, Kipov bé peyarov eT LPO MeVOS apyas ayaa Kal Tmept Kumpov TUvEX@Y TO vauTiKoy repre es “Appovos avdpas a7roppn-TOV TWa pavTélay Totnoopévous Tapa TH Oe@:
1 wdaw...&rae either wdAw is a corruption (wep! May-guAlay 2), or words have fallen out.
462

any better than by dying; the mixture of speech indicates that the enemy is the Mede, for the army of the Medes is a mixture of Hellenes and Barbarians. After this vision, when Cimon had sacrificed to Dionysus and the seer was cutting up the victim, swarms of ants took the blood as it congealed,
brought it little by little to Cimon, and enveloped his great toe therewith, he being unconscious of their work for some time. Just about at the time when he noticed what they were doing, the ministrant came and showed him the liver of his victim without a head.
But since he could not get out of the expedition, he set sail, and after detailing sixty of his ships to go to Egypt, with the rest he made again for Cyprus. After defeating at sea the royal armament of Phoeni- cian and Cilician ships, he won over the cities round . about, and then lay threatening the royal enterpuise in Egypt, and not in any trifling fashion,—nay, he had in mind the dissolution of the King’s entire supremacy, and all the more because he learned that the reputation and power of Themistocles were great among the Barbarians, who had promised the King that when the Hellenic war was set on foot he would take command of it. At any rate, it is said that it was most of all due to Themistocles’ despair of his Hellenic undertakings, since he could not eclipse the good fortune and valour of Cimon, that he took his own life.}

But Cimon, while he was projecting vast conflicts and holding his naval forces in the vicinity of Cyprus, sent men to the shrine of Ammon to get oracular answer from the god to some secret question.

1 Cf. Themistocles, xxxi. 4.
463
a

7 ywooker yap oveeis uTép wv eméwpOnaar, ovoe xpnapov avtois o beds efnveyxev, aAr’ dua TO mpoaenbeip exéheva ev amévat TOUS Ocompérrous:
avrov yap 76 TOV Kipova Tap EAUT@ TUyyavely
évTa. tabra AKOUVTAYTES ot Jeomporrot Karté-Bawvov éri Oddaccav: (yevopevor bé € ev TP aTpaTo-Tedq TOV ‘EdAgjvov, O TOTE TEpL Alyutov WD, émvdovTo TeOvavat TOV Kipova: Kat Tas npepas
mTpos TO pavreiov avayovres Eyvwo av nveypevny THY TedevTHV Tov avdpos, ws dn Tapa Oeois 6vTOS.
XIX. ’AméOave 5é trodtopxav Kitiov, ws oi

a / / 4 / >
WAEta TOL Aeyoust, voonoas’ €vLot 5é pac éx
TPAVLATOS, o 7 pos TOUS BapBapous dryeovrlopevos gaye. TedevTav dé Tous mepl avrov éxedevoer evOvs amromhety aTroKpupapevous Tov Odvarov avrov' Kal ovvéBn pnte TOV TodELioV pare TOV cUppdyov aicOopevey aoparas avTous dvaxopia iva TT PATHYOUHEVOUS vO Kipwvos, as pot Pavodnpos, teOvynnotos ef Apépas TpLaKovTa.
Mera 6¢ tHv éxeivov TeAEUTHY Tpos pev TOUS
BapBdpous ovdev ért Aap pov Um ovdEevos émpa-xn otpatnyou tav “EXAnvwv, GNA Tpamevres umd Snpayoyar Kal TONE MOTFOLOV er’ adAHAous, ovdevos Tas xeipas ev péow Siacxov7os, cuveppa-yqoay els TOV TONE LOD, avatvon pey Tots Bact-News Wpadyyact yevouevot, pOopov 8 apvOnrov
TAS “EdAquiijs Suvd pens amepyacduevot. oye & ot Tept tov "Aynoidaov eis thy “Actav éfevey-Kipevor Ta OTAA Bpayéos FrYyavto ToNemou pos 464

49]

CIMON

No one knows what they were sent to ask, nor did» the god vouchsafe them any response, but as soon as the enquirers drew nigh, he bade them depart, saying that Cimon himself was already with him. On hearing this, the enquirers went down to the sea- coast, and when they reached the camp of the

Hellenes, which was at that time on the confines of Egypt, they learned that Cimon was dead, and on counting the days back to the utterance of the oracle, they found that it was their commander's death which had been darkly intimated, since he was already with the gods.

XIX. He died while besieging Citium, of sickness, as most say.! But some say it was of a wound which he got while fighting the Barbarians. As he was dying he bade those about him to sail away at once and to conceal his death. And so it came to pass that neither the enemy nor the allies understood what had happened, and the force was brought back in safety "under the command of Cimon,' as Phanodemus says, " who had been dead for thirty days."

'After his death no further brilliant exploit against the Barbarians was performed by any general of the Hellenes, who were swayed by demagogues and partisans of civil war, with none to hold a mediating hand between them, till they actually clashed to- gether in war. This afforded the cause of the King a respite, but brought to pass an indescribable destruction of Hellenic power. It was not until long afterwards? that Agesilaiis carried his arms into Asia and prosecuted a brief war against the King's tous éml Bardocon Baciréws orparnyots: Kat hapmrpov ovdey ovde Heya Spdoavtes, avOus dé Tats 'EdAnuicats oTATETL kal Tapaxais agp' éTépas apis UrrevexBévres, @XOvTO TOUS Tlepoay popodoyous éy péoaus Tais cuupayxos Kat pirass TONG ATONLTOYTES, ov ouoe ypapparopopos xatéBawev ovd barrros pos Garacon TeTpakoc- lwy oradiov é évros ap0n oTpaTnyoovTos Kipevos. "Ore pev oy els THY "ATToRnY arrexopiaOn Ta Netava avrTov, paptupel TaV penpatov Ta péexpe viv Kipovera 7 poo ayopevopeva: TLUOCTL dé kal Kurcets Tdgov Twa Kipwvos, o> Navot- Kparns Oo pytwp pnoty, év horus Kal is apopia | tov Geov mpoaTaeavTos avrots 1) cpereiy Ké- HOVOS, arn' OS xpelrrova o¢BeaGat Kat yepaipery. ToLovTos ev o 'EAANVLKOS tryELoV.

1 Thue. i. 112. 2 396-394 B.c.

generals along the sea-coast. And even he could perform no great and brilliant deeds, but was overwhelmed in his turn by a flood of Hellenic disorders and seditions and swept away from a second empire. So he withdrew, leaving in the midst of allied and friendly cities the tax-gatherers of the Persians, not one of whose scribes, nay, nor so much as a horse, had been seen within four hundred furlongs of the sea, as long as Cimon was general. _

That his remains were brought home to Attica, there is testimony in the funeral monuments to this day called Cimonian. But the people of Citium also pay honours to a certain tomb of Cimon, as Nausicrates the rhetorician says, because in a time of pestilence and famine the god enjoined upon them not to neglect Cimon, but to revere and honour him as a superior being. Such was the Greek leader.
HH 2

LUCULLUS

AOYKOYAAO2

I. T@ dé AovKovAd@ WaTTOS [Lev Ty orariKes, Geios b& mpos pntpos Mere)Aos O Nopasdixds éruxAnOeis. tav Se yovewy O pev TaTnHp edo KroTrHAS, Kextrdia dé 7 eaTnp ndoknoev @S ov BeBroxvia cad poves. avTos 5 o AovKeovaAnros ére perpaKtov @V, Tpiv apxny Twa pereneiv kal TONTELAS axpacOar, 7 pa@Tov Epyov ETOLNTATO TOV Tov TaTpoS KaTHYyopoy Kpivat ZepoutAov airyoupa, raBov adixobvra Snuocig. Kal TO T pary ju. Naprrpov épdvy ‘Popaiors, Kal THD . Suny éxetynvy @omep apa reiay bia oTOMATOS éayov. edoxer be Kal adds avrTots dvev Tpopa-EWS OVK aryevves elvat TO Ths KaTnyopias épyov, GNXa Kal mdvu Tous veous éBovXovtTo Tots adixovaty em upvopevous opav daomep Onpioss evrye-Vets oKvhaxas. ov pnv adda peyarns arepl TID Sianv éxeivny per overklas yevoperns, aore Kat tpwOjvai twas xal receiv, awépvyev o Lepovt-Atos.
‘0 dé AovKoudros HoKxnTo Kal réyeuv icavas éxarépav yarray, dare Kat YwrAXras Tas avurTou mpakes avaypadov éxeiv Tpocepwvncer ¢ @S TUV-Tafouevp Ka Stab joovre THY toToptay dwewvov.

Hv yap ov él Thy ypelay povny éuperds avTod 479°

LUCULLUS

I. In the case of Lucullus, his grandfather was a man of consular rank, and his uncle on his mother’s side was Metellus, surnamed Numidicus. But as for his parents, his father was convicted of peculation, and his mother, Caecilia, had the bad name of a dissolute woman. Lucullus himself, while he was still a mere youth, before he had entered public life or stood for any office, made it his first business to impeach his father’s accuser, Servilius the Augur, whom he found wronging the commonwealth. The Romans thought this a brilliant stroke, and the case was in everybody's mouth, like a great deed of prowess. Indeed, they thought the business of impeachment, on general principles and without special provocation, no ignoble thing, but were very desirous to see their young men fastening themselves on malefactors like high-bred whelps on wild beasts. However, the case stirred up great animosity, so that sundry persons were actually wounded and slain, and Servilius was acquitted.

Lucullus was trained to speak fluently both Latin and Greek, so that Sulla, in writing his own memoirs, dedicated them to him, as a man who would set in order and duly arrange the history of the times better than himself. For the style of Lucullus was not only businesslike and ready; the same

471

af

PLUTARCR’S LIVES

xal mpoxerpos o Novos, KaOaTrEp O TOV AAWY THY fev ayopay @vvvos Boraios rédayos Hs StearpoPen, yevopevos 5€ THS ayopas éxTos avos, apovota TeOvnkos, GAAA Kal Thy éupern tavrny Kat
, 4 9 \ ro) A a Neyouevyny €rXevGéprov el TH KaAN@ WpoceroeiTo
qmatieiay éTe Kal petpdxioy av. yevouevos Sé
4 +4 4 @ 9 nA mpeaBurepos 76n Tavratact @aoTrep éx TONY ayovev abjnxe Thy Sidvotav év pirocodgia oYoNG-few xal avarraverOat, TO Oewpntixov adrijs bd , 4 9 93 A \ v4 N
éyelpas, Katadvaas & év xatp@ Kal KoXovaas TO hirotipov éx THs pos Llopaniov S:apopas. repli bev ovv THS PiroXoyias avTod pos Tots eipnuévots Kal TadtTa NéyeTat véov 6yTa pos ‘Opryatov Tov
Sixodoyov Kal Loevvay tov iotopixov ex madias
Tivos Els OTTOVONY TpoENOOVaNS OworOYHaat, Tpo-

Oepévov troinua xat oyov ‘EXXnviKOY Te Kal
e oe sf >] @ A 4 yA XN Pwpaixor, cis & te dv AdYN TOvTwY, TOY Map-oLKOV évTEevely TOAEMOV. Kal Trws EoLKEV Eis AOryOV ‘EXANUKOY 6 KAHpOS adixécOar: Stacwlerar yap “EAAnMUKH TLs iotopia TOD Mapotxod mrodépov.
Ths 5é rpos tov abderdov adrov Mapxov evvoias

A 4 VA € nw ry

TOANOY TeKuNpioy dyToY pdaddota Pwpaioe Tod TpWTOUV pYnuovevovar. mMperBUTEepos yap wv avtTov AaRely apxnv povos ovK nOédAncEV, adrAG
TOV éxeivou KaLpov avapelvas oUTwS éTNYydryeTO 472
492

LUCULLUS

was true of many another man’s in the Forum.
There,
“ Like smitten tunny, through the billowy sea it dashed,”
although outside of the Forum it was « Withered, inelegant, and dead.”
But Lucullus, from his youth up, was devoted to the genial and so-called “liberal’’ culture then in vogue, wherein the Beautiful was sought. And when he came to be well on in years, he suffered his mind to find complete leisure and repose, as it were after many struggles, in philosophy, encouraging the contemplative side of his nature, and giving timely halt and check, after his difference with Pompey, to the play of his ambition. Now, as to his love of literature, this also is reported, in addition to what has already been said: when he was a young man, proceeding from jest to earnest in a conversation with Hortensius, the orator, and Sisenna, the historian, he agreed, on their suggestion of a poem and a history, both in Greek and Latin, that he would treat the Marsic war in whichever of these forms the lot should prescribe. And it would seem that the lot prescribed a Greek history, for there is extant a Greek history of the Marsic
war.

Of his affection for his brother Marcus there are many proofs,.but the Romans dwell most upon the first. Although, namely, he was older than his brother, he was unwilling to hold office alone, but waited until his brother was of the proper age, and thus gained the favour of the people 473

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Tov Ofjpov, BoTE oY éxEive@ 1) TapOV ayopavopLos aipeOnvat.
II. Néos & dv ev r@ Mapoix@ troréu worra pév Toruns Seiywata wapéoye nal ovvécens, HaNXOv ye wnv avtor bv evoTabeav Kal TpadTnTa LvAAas mpoonyayero, Kal ypwpuevos ar apyis éml ta mwreiatns dEva orrovdns SteréXeoev? OV HV
'Kal Tept TO vopopa TpaypaTteia. Se' éxeivou
yap exon TO mAetoTov év IleXorrovvnoe@ wept Tov MiOpidarixov aodepov, Kai AovxovrrELov aT' éxeivou mpoonyopevOn, cal Sierédecev él mwrei-TTOV, UTO TOV TTPATLWTLKOY YPELM@V EV TO TONE
AapBavov aporBnv raxyeiav. éx TovTOV THS pev
yins émixparov o LwAXas év tais "AOnvais, mwepe-Komrropevos S€ THY ayopav éx THS OaXrdrrns bro
TOY TrOAELioY vavKpaTovyTwY, éFérepbev én' Adyurrrov kat AiBuins tov AovxovrAXov akovra pads éxeifev. qv pev ody axpn yeiuavos, éFémrevoe b€ Tpioly 'EXANrEKOTS pvoTrdpoat kat Sixpoross toasts 'Podvaxais pos péya TeAayos Kal
vais trodeuias, TavTayooe TH KpaTEly TrOAXNAS Siadepopévas, tapaBadrropevos. ov pny adrdrja
kat Kpnrnv xatdpas @xewoato Kal Kupnvaious xcataraBov éx tupavviday ovvexav kal trodépmov TapaTropévous avédaBe, nal KateotncaTo THY modteiav IIhatwunns rivos davis avauyncas Thv TOA, Hv éxeivos aTeOéoTTLGE TpdS avTOUs.
Seopévwv yap, as Eoxev, Strws TE vopous yparrn
kal tov Shpov avtov eis TUTov TWA KaTaTTHAN TonriTElas owh povos, pn YareTrov elvat Kupnvatars 474

LUCULLUS

to such an extent that, although in absence from the city, he was elected aedile along with his brother. II.

Though he was but a young man in the Marsic war,! he gave many proofs of courage and under- standing. It was, however, more owing to his constancy and mildness that Sulla attached him to himself and employed him from first to last on business of the highest importance. Such, for instance, was the management of the mint. Most of the money used in Peloponnesus during the Mithridatic war was coined by him, and was called Lucullean after him. It remained current for 4 long time, since the wants of the soldiery during the war gave it rapid circulation. Afterwards, at Athens, Sulla found himself master on land, but cut off from supplies by sea, owing to the superior naval force of the enemy. He therefore despatched Lucullus to Egypt and Libya,' with orders to fetch ships from there. Winter was then at its worst, but he sailed forth with three Greek brigantines and as many small Rhodian galleys, exposing himself not only to the high sea, but to numerous hostile ships which were cruising about everywhere in full mastery of it. However, he put in at Crete and won it over to his side. He also made Cyrené, and finding it in con- fusion in consequence of successive tyrannies and wars, he restored it to order, and fixed its constitution, reminding the city of a certain oracular utterance which the great Plato had once vouchsafed to them. They asked him, it would seem, to write laws for _ them, and to mould their people into some form of sound government, whereupon he said that it was hard to be a lawgiver for the Cyrenaeans when they

1 90-89 B.c. 2 87-86 B.o.

ovtws evTUyoicL vouobeTeiv. ovdev yap avOpw-mov Svcapxtotepov ev mpaccew Soxovvtos, ovd ad wddw Sextixwtepoyv émictacias cvoTa-Avtos bd THs TUYns. 4 Kal ToTe Kupyvaious vopoberodvrTs. AovxovAX@ mpgdous Tapécyxev.
"ExeiOev 8 avayOels én' Aiydrrou Ta TrEtoTa Tov oKxaddav amréBare Trepatav émipavértor, avros 5 StacwOels Karnyero Napmpas eis AXe-Edvipesav. amrnvrnce yap avT@ ovptras 0 oTOXOS, @omep eiw0e. Bacitel KaTamAéovTL, KEKooLy-pévos éxrrperads' Kal To perpaxiov o Ilrodepaios adAnv te Oavpacrhy émedeixvuto diroppoovvyny mpos avtov, olknaly re cal Slarray év toils Baat-Aelots ESewxev, ovdevos rw Eévou TpoTEpoY 1ryE"OVvOS avToOe xataxOévtos. Samdvnv 6€ Kal ovvtakev ovx Sonv édidov Tots adXOLs, AANA TeTpAaTTAHY exeivp Trapeiyev, ov Tpoctenevm TV avayKaiwy
mréov ovdev ovde Sapov AaBdvre, Kalrrep drydonxovta Tardavrov afta wéupavros avT@. Néyerar Sé nr eis Méudwy dvaBfvar pnt' adXo Tov Oavpatopéver év Aiyiarte@ nab reptBontrwy taro-pica axoralovtos yap elvat ratdra Bearod Kai TpUPaVTOS, OVY, ws aUTos, év UralPpw Tov avTo-Kpatopa oKknvodvTra mapa Tais émadfeot Tov

TONEMLWY ATTONENOLTFOTOS.
III. ’Evret & darédurre thy cuppaytlav o ItoXepatios mpos Tov ToNEmov atrodethtdaas, éxeivp Se vads aypte Kimpou troptrovs Taptaxe, Kat rept Tov éxirAouy avTov ucmalouevos Kai Oeparrevwv éSwpeito ypuaévderov oudpaydov Tay TOAVTEADD, 476

“

493

LUCULLUS

were having such good-fortune. In fact, nothing is more ungovernable than.:a man reputed to be prosperous; and, on the other hand, nothing is-more receptive of authority than a man who is humbled by misfortune. This was what made the Cyrenaeans at that time so submissive to Lucullus as their lawgiver.

From thence he set sail for Egypt, but was attacked by pirates, and lost most of his vessels. He himself, however, escaped in safety, and entered the port of Alexandria in splendid style. The entire Egyptian fleet came to meet him, as it was wont to do when a king put into port, in resplendent array, and the youthful Ptolemy, besides showing him other astonishing marks of kindness, gave him lodging and sustenance in the royal palace, whither no foreign commander had ever been brought before. The allowance which the king made for his expenses was not the same as others had received, but four times as much, and yet he accepted nothing beyond what was actually necessary, and took no gift, although he was offered the worth of eighty talents. It is also said that he neither went up to Memphis, nor sought out any other of the famous wonders of Egypt ; this he held to be the privilege of a leisurely and luxurious sight-seer, not of one who, like himself, had left his commander-in-chief encamped under the open sky alongside the battlements of the enemy.

III. Ptolemy abandoned his alliance with Rome, out of fear for the outcome of the war, but furnished Lucullus with ships to convoy him as far as Cyprus, embraced him graciously at parting, and offered him a costly emerald set in gold. At first Lucullus

4177

——

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TO pev mpatov o AovKovAXos tapnteito, dSetEav-tos b€ THY yAUd HY TOD Bactréws elxova ovoav idtav epoBnOn SiwcacOa, un Tavtdracw éyx-Opos arromhety vopia eis émtBourevdein Kara
Odratrav. éret 5é wAROos ev TapaTr rg VE@V EK TOV mapanteov jToXewv aOpoicas, mI boo Te-paricay peTelyov adixnudtwv, ets THY Kumrpov terrépacey, évraiba muvOavopevos TOUS ‘rONEpLlous vavroxobvTas emt ais axpais Tapapurar-TEL QUTOD, eveahanoe Ta oKagn mdvra., Kal Tais TONEoLY éyparfe meph Kermadteov Kab ayopas, as avroOt Thy opav dvapevan. elta AOU pavértos éEamrivns Kataordcas Tas vads avnxn, Kal ped
pépay pev vperpévors TEV Tots tarioss Kat Tatrewvois, vuxcrwop & emaLpopevors ets ‘Podov éooOn. “Podiwr S€ vats adT@ TpooTaparXovTov Kg@ous érece xal Kuidious trav Baciucav aTran-ayévras én Laplous TvaTpaTEvEly. éx 5é Xtou tovs PBacidKxovs avros efnrace, Korogavious
5 mrevdépwoe avAd\aBov 'Esriyovoy tov tupavvov avuTav.
"Eruyyave be KaT ékelvoy Tov ypovoy Hon
Mcbpidarns 70 Ilépyapov exdeouTr as kal ovve-TTAApEVOS els Heravnv. éxel 5é Dip Bptov Kare.
YovTos avTov ex ys Kal TONOpKOUVTOS, eis THY OdratTav adpopar ouvivye Kal sebeesighlis TOUS mavtTayo0ev oroXouS Tpos avTov, avdpl TOAMNTH Kal vEvEKNKOTL Te Diu pra cupmrexerOar Kat
TONEMELY ATrEYVOKES. o 6€ TadTa TUVvOpaY, vav-
TUR® de Aevrropevos apos AoveovAnrov érreptrev, Hxew T@ TTOAW Sedpevos Kal cuvekeretv &yOtoTov 478

LUCULLUS

declined to accept it, but when the king showed him that the engraving on it was a likeness of him- self, he was afraid to reject it, lest he be thought to have sailed away at utter enmity with the king, and so have some plot laid against him on the voyage. As he sailed along, he collected a multitude of ships from the maritime cities, omitting all those engaged in piracy, and came at last to Cyprus. Learning there that the enemy lay at anchor off the headlands and were watching for his coming, he hauled all his vessels up on land, and wrote letters to the cities requesting winter quarters and provisions, as though he would await the fine season there. Then, when the wind served, he suddenly launched his ships and put out to sea, and by sailing in the day time with his sails reefed and low, but in the night time under full canvas, he came safely to Rhodes. The Rhodians furnished him with more ships, and he induced the people of Cos and Cnidus to forsake the royal cause and join him in an expedition against Samos, With- out any aid he also drove the royal forces out of Chios,! and set the Colophonians free from their tyrant, Epigonus, whom he arrested.

It happened about this time that Mithridates sbandoned' Pergamum and shut himself up in Pitané. Since Fimbria held him in close siege there by land, he looked to make his escape by sea, and collected and summoned his fleets from every quarter for this purpose, renouncing all engagements in the field with a man so bold and victorious as Fimbria. This design Fimbria perceived, and being without any fleet of his own, sent to Lucullus, beseeching him to come with his, and assist in capturing the

1 85 B.c.
479
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kat TOAELO@TATOY Bacidéwy, @S un TO Méya Kal
51 TOAN@Y ayoverv Kai TOvwY Stwxopevov GOXov
exguyou 'Pwpaious, MiOpidarns eis ANaBas Hewv Kal yeyovas évtos apxiav, ov AnPOevtos ovdéva
A , ¥ s A \ 9 \ a A ths S6&ns olcecOas rEov 7 TOV éuTroday TH puyn ordvta nai d:adidpdoxovtos émidaBopevovy vp éavTod pev eFewopevoy THS yas, UT éxeivou dé
A 4 3 Ul > 4 3 4
Ths Oararrns elpryopevov duporépors amrobwa ew
TO Karopbopa, ras 6€ LWAXa ™ pos 'Opxouev® Kal Treph Xatpoveray vuvovpévas dpirreias éy ovdevl NOy@ OncecOat 'Pwpaiovs. Kal ovdév jv > N 4 n f > \ \ a
ajo TpoTrou TWVY EYOMEVoV, ANAA TravTL d7HXov, as, 6 DipBpia tore treiaGels 6 AovKovAdos ov paxpay Ov Tepinyayev éxetoe TAS vads Kal ouvédpake Tov ALpéva TH oTOrM, Tépas av elyev oO ToAELOS Kal pupioy amrnrANayLEVvOL KAKOV ATAVTES
joav. adr' elite Ta pos YAray dixata TpEo-Bevwv apo tayvros idiov te Kal Kxowod cupdév \ l4 \ v , povros, elte rov DiuBpiav prapov évta Kal dhovéa yeyevnuévov Evayyos avdpos dirou kal atparnyov

dua hirapyiay mpoBarrd.opevos, cite Kata Oeiav by tia TUYNY TepipEeradpevos avTos TOU! MLA pr-Sdrov kal durdfas avtayouatyy, ovy tirjKovaev,
Gr\rna MiOpidatn peév éxaredcat tapéoxe Kat
A , 4 > NX \
Katayerdoar THs DipBpiov Suvapews, avros Sé
mparov yey ert Aextod ths Tpwddos BaciduKxas
vads émrupaveicas Katevaupdxnoev, adOis 5é pos
Tevéd@ vavroxoovta peilove twapackevn xatiowv
1 gids rou Reiske, Coraés, Bekker: abrod.
480

most hostile and warlike of kings, that the great prize which they had sought with so many toils and struggles might not escape the Romans, now that Mithridates was in their grip and fast in the meshes of their net. If he should be captured, Fimbria said, no one would get more of the glory than the man who stood in the way of his flight and seized him as he was running off. “ Driven from the land by me, and excluded from the sea by you, he will crown us both with success, and the much heralded exploits of Sulla at Orchomenus and Chaeroneia will cease to interest the Romans.” And there was nothing absurd in the proposition. It is clear to everyone that if Lucullus, who was close at hand, had then listened to Fimbria, brought his ships thither, and closed up the harbour with his fleet, the war would have been at an end, and the world freed from infinite mischief. But, whether he ranked the honourable treatment of Sulla above every consideration of private or public advantage, or whether he regarded Fimbria as a wretch whose ambition for command had recently led him to murder a man who was his friend and superior officer, or whether it was by some mysterious dispensation of fortune that he chose to spare Mithridates, and so reserved him for his own antagonist,—for whatever reason, he would not listen to the proposal, but suffered Mithridates to sail off and mock at Fimbria’s forces, while he himself, to begin with, defeated the king’s ships which showed themselves off Lectum in the Troad. And again, catching sight of Neoptelemus lying in wait for him at Tenedos with a still larger armament, 481

VOL, II. 11
10

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

NeorroAepov érrémiet po TOY ddAXwD, 'Poditaxijs TEVTpOUs emiPeBnnas, nS évavapyet Aapayopas, avinp edvous Te 'Papaiow Kai Oaracciwv a aryovev éumespéraros. érreXavvovtos 5é€ poli tov Neo-mrToNé"ou Kal KeXevaavTos eis éuBoAnVY aryaryeiv Tov KkuBepyytny, Seicas o Aapayopas to Bapos THs Baoiuens Kal thy tTpaxvTnTa TOD yad\Kopatos ovx éroApnoe cuptrecety avtimpmpos, GAN'
o£éws ex Teptaywyns amtoatpéwas éxéXevoev eri
mpopvay doacGau Kal muecOelons évtav0a TS VEWS édé£aro THY TANYHV 4PraBi yevouerny, a are 57 Tots Gararrevovar THS VEDS pépert ™ poo mregovoav. év Trout 6€ Tay dirov mpoo pepopeveor, ery Kehevoapevos o AoveovdXos emruaT pépery Kat ToAXa Spdaas aga AOyou TpémeTas TOUS TrOAELLOUS
Kal Katadtoxet Tov Neowrorepov.
IV. 'ExeiOev d€ LrAXrG mept Xeppovycov : non péAXOVTL SaBaiver oupBarov TOV TE Topov aoparh trapetye kal THY oTpaTiay cuvd.eBiBater.
rel O€ ouvOnKav ryEVO[LEVOV McA pidarns pev amémhevoev els Tov EvEewov rovrov, Sv0rAXas Se THY 'Aciav Sia pupious TAahavToLs eCnuloce, po - Taxev avT@ Td TE XP NEAT a, tabdra mpafat Kal vopia La Korat, TapanvOrov Te doxet THIS. LvrAa Kader ornT 9s yevéc Oar Tals Troheot, ov povoy cabapov rat dixatov, GNA Kat TT pGov els. ovr Bapu Kab oxvOpwm ov DarnpeT nia. wapacX@v éavTov.
MervrAnvaious 6 avTLKpUs aderTaTas éBovXeTo
pev eryvapovijoat Kal Sins TUxXelv petpias éd' ols
mept Mapiov | éEjuaptov, as 8 éwpa xaxodatmo-
1 Mdpiov with Sintenis! and Coraés : Mdvoy.
482
494

LUCULLUS

he sailed out against him in advance of the rest, on board of a Rhodian galley which was commanded by Damagoras, a man well disposed to the Romans, and of the largest experience as a_ sea-fighter. Neoptolemus dashed out to meet him, and ordered his steersman to ram the enemy. Damagoras, however, fearing the weight of the royal ship and her rugged bronze armour, did not venture to engage head on, but put swiftly about and ordered his men to back water, thus receiving his enemy astern, where his vessel was depressed. The blow was harmless, since it fell upon the submerged parts of the ship. At this point, his friends coming up, Lucullus gave orders to turn the ship about, and, after performing many praiseworthy feats, put the enemy to flight and gave close chase to Neoptolemus.

IV. From thence he joined Sulla at the Cher- sonesus, where he was about to cross the strait into Asia;! he rendered his passage safe, and assisted in transporting his troops. After peace had been made, Mithridates sailed away into the Euxine, and Sulla laid a contribution of twenty thousand talents upon Asia. Lucullus was commissioned to collect this money and re-coin it, and the cities of Asia felt it to be no slight assuagement of Sulla's severity when Lucullus showed himself not only honest and just, but even mild in the performance of a task so oppressive and disagreeable. The Mitylenaeans too, who had revolted outright, he wished to be reasonable, and to submit to a moderate penalty for having espoused the cause of Marius. But when he saw that they were possessed by an

1 84 B.C.

voovras, emimdevoas éxpdtnce padyn Kal xaté-KrELo eV Eis TA TELYN, Kal TOMOpKiaY TVaTHOAMEVOS
ébérAevoe pev nuépas Kat havepas eis 'EXaiap, vréotpere 58 ANEANOOTWS Kal Tepl THY ToALY
3 udels evédpay jovyatev. eel 8 araxtws Kal pera Opdcous ws Epnuov aprracopmevot TO oTpaTOmedov ot MurvaAnvaio: mponrOov, éretotmecov avtots @\aBé te wapumodXous Covras nal tov apuvopévwy TevTaxoctous aréxreivev, avdpaTrodav dé yuruddas &&F xal rhv adAnv avaplOunrov mAATATO AéLav.
4 Tov & wept thy "Itadlav xaxdv, & Torte LvrAAas wal Mdpios adOova cal wavtodara trois avOpwrrots tapelyov, ov mavu peréoxe Oeia teri TUXn Tept Tas év 'Agia mpdfes Bpadvvas. ov pay éXNaTTov TL Tapa YAra Tov adrAwv dirov

éoyev, GAA THY TE ypadny, ws elpnral, TOV
UTopynudtwov éxeive dt edvoray avéOnKe, Kat
TeXeUTOV ErritpotTrov Tov TraLbos eyparpev UTrEpBas Tloparniov. xal Soxet tovto mparov avrtois imdptat Siadopas aituov xal Enrotvtias véows ovat Kal Starrvpois apos So€av. .
V. ’Oriy@ 8 dorepov YvArav arrodaveiv
wrdtevoe peta Mapxov Kotta rept thy éxrnv kal éBdopunkoorTny mpos.tais éxaTov oXvpTridba.
ToN\\N@v ovv avis avakivovvtav Tov MiOpidatixov morenov, pn Madpxos avrov ov tmemaidabat, arr’ dvatrerratobat. 510 Kai Aaywv ToY érapyYLoV oO AovioudXros THY évtos "AXtrewy Varariav nyGero, mpaktewv wmrolécers peyddwy ovK éxovcav.
484

‘,

LUCULLUS

evil spirit, he sailed against them, conquered them in battle, and shut them up within their walls. After instituting a siege of their city, he sailed away in open day to Elaea, but returned by stealth, and lay quietly in ambush near the city. When the Mitylenaeans sallied forth in disorder and with the confident expectation of plundering his deserted camp, he fell upon them, took a great number of them alive, and slew five hundred of those who offered resistance. He also carried off six thousand slaves, besides countless other booty.

But in the boundless and manifold evils which Sulla and Marius were bringing upon the people of Italy: at that time, he had no share whatever, for, as some kindly fortune would have it, he was detained at his business in Asia.! However, Sulla accorded no less favour to Lucullus than to his other friends.
His memoirs, as I have said, Sulla dedicated to Lucullus in token of affection, and in his will appointed him guardian of his son, thereby passing Pompey by. And this seems to have been the first ground for estrangement and jealousy between these two men; both were young, and burning for distinction.
V. Shortly after the death of Sulla, Lucullus was .

made consul along with Marcus Cetta, about the © hundred and seventy-sixth Olympiad.2) Many were now trying to stir up anew the Mithridatic war, which

Marcus said had not come to an end, but merely to a pause. Therefore when the province of Cisalpine Gaul was allotted to Lucullus, he was displeased, since it offered no opportunity for great exploits. But what most of all embittered him was

1 84-80 B.c. 2 74 B.C.

485 .

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

2 parttora 8 avrov evdoxipav Topmnios év I Snpla mapweuvev, ws GAdos .ovdels erridofos wy, Et cupBain tmavoacGar tov "TRnpixov modepor, evOus aipeOncecOat otpatnyos éml MiOpidarnv.

S10 Kal ypnyata aitobytos avtod Kal ypadovtos, as, ef un Téurrovev, adeis ITBnpiav cat Yeprwpwov eis “ItaMav dmdfou tas Suvdpers, cuvérpatev o Aovcoudros mpoPuporata reupOivar Ta Xpjwata xa pnd ad otwocoiv mpoddcews éxeivov éravenOeiy vratevovtos avTod’ mdavta yap av
én’ éxelvp yevnoecOar Ta Tis WoAEwWS TrapovTt
PETA TOTAUTHS OTpAaTLAS. Kal yap O KpaTav TOTE
THS TodTelas TO Wpos Yap atavTa Kal réyewv Kal mpatrew KéOnyos éyOpav twa ampos Aov-xovdXrov elye, BoeduTTOpevov adtod tdv Biov aicypav épotav cal bBpews xal mrAnppmedelas peorov dytTa. TovTOY pev ody AvTuKpus érrodémer’ Aevxtoy 5& Koivrov, ddXov Synpayoyov, érava-otdvta Tois YvANa ToNTEvpPacL Kal TapaTTeLY Ta Tpayuata Tetpwpevoy ex Tov KabectarTos, isia te mWoANa TrapapvOovpevos Kal Snpocia
vovlerav atréctnoe THs Tweipas Kal KaTeaTOpere THY diroTipav, ws évav padioTa ToOATUKAS Kal coTnples apYnv voonpatos peyddou peTayerpl-Oa peVvos.
VI. Ev rovre 8 o tiv Kirtxlay éxov
"Oxtaovios nyyéAOn TeOvnKeds. crrapywovtwv Se TONN@Y pos THY éemapyiav Kal KéOnyov ws Suvarwratov bvta SiatpakacOar Oepatrevovtwr, aris wev o AovKovaAnos. Kiduxtas ov trodvv ele Aoryov, olopevos 8, ef AABot TavTypy, éyyvs ovansS
Karrradoxias, ddXov ovdéva treupOnoecOat Trore-486
“hk

the reputation which Pompey was winning in Spain. If the war in Spain should happen to come to an end, Pompey was more likely than anyone else to be at once chosen general against Mithridates. Therefore when Pompey wrote home requesting money, and declaring that if they did not send it, he would abandon Spain and Sertorius and bring his -forces back to Italy, Lucullus moved heaven and earth to have the money sent, and to prevent Pompey from coming back, on any pretext whatsoever, while he was consul. He knew that all Rome would be in Pompey's hands if he were there with so large an army. For the man who at that time controlled the course of political affairs by virtue of doing and saying everything to court the favour of the people, Cethegus, hated Lucullus, who loathed his manner of life, full as it was of disgraceful amours and wanton trespasses. Against this man Lucullus waged open war. But Lucius Quintus, another popular leader, who opposed the institutions of Sulla and sought to confound the established order of things, he turned from his purpose by much private remonstrance and public admonition, and allayed his ambition, thus treating in as wise and wholesome a manner as was possible the beginnings of a great distemper.

VI. At this time there came tidings of the death of Octavius, the governor_of Cilicia, There were many eager applicants for the province, and they paid court to Cethegus as the man best able to further their designs. Of Cilicia itself Lucullus made little account, but in the belief that, if he should get this province, which was near Cappadocia, no one else would be sent to conduet the war against eyoovTa Mibpidéry, wacay eorpepe enxaviy vrép Tov pn mpoéa Bat THY emapxiay Eve py. Kat TeAevTaY Epyov ov ceuvov.ovd' erratvEeToV, ANNWS § dvtiopov mpos To TédOS Ex THS avayKns Umépetve Tapa THY EavTOD hvac.

IIpakia tus hv dvopa Tay éf' Opa Kai Napupia SiaBontrwy ev TH Tore, TA pev Ara KpEiTTOV ovdevy avédnv étatpovons yuvaitos, ex Sé Tov yphobar toils évtuyydvovew avth Kai diareyopévos mpos tas vrép tTav dhirwv aotrovdas xal TomMTE\Aas TpocdkaBovaa TH ROlTH YapiTL TO Soxety gidétarpos tis elvav xat Spactnpios — layuoe péytotov. ws &¢ xal KéOnyov avOodvra
th SoEn tore cal dépovta THY ToAW UINnyayeTo kal auvnv épa@vtt, Tavtdtacw eis éxetynv mepinrOev 4 THs Torews Svvapmis: ovde yap émpatreto tt Snpocia KeOryou pwn omovddlovtos ovdé IIpasxias pn xerevovans trapda Kebyye.
TavTny ovv wmreXOwv Sdpots o AovKovAXos Kal xortixeiats (fv O€ mov Kal TQ AovKovrAXr.@ cuppirotipovperny opacbat péyas yuvaixl oo-Bapa xal Tavnyuplry piabos), evOvs elye Tov KéOnyov emraiverny kal 7 popveswevov aur@
Kiduxiav. éret 8 arak érvye ravtns, ovdev ere Tpauciay ovde KeOnyov edeu Tapaxaneiv, ard
TAVTES OMANAS exeive pépovtes evexelpioay TOV McOpidarixoy Torenov ws vd érépov pndevds apevov ScatroreunOjvar Suvapevov, Toumntouv pev ere Leptrapip TporTroreHovvTos, Meréddov 5 atretpnKotos 4&y dia. ynpas, obs eovous av Tis 488

LUCULLUS :
Mithridates, he strained every nerve to keep the province from being assigned to another. And finally, contrary to his natural bent, he was driven by the necessities of the case to adopt a course which was neither dignified nor praiseworthy, it is true, but conducive to his end.
There was a certain woman then in Rome, Praecia by name, whose fame for beauty and wit filled the city. In other respects she was no whit better than an ordinary courtesan, but she used her associates and companions to further the political ambitions of her friends, and so added to her other charms the reputation of being a true comrade, and one who could bring things to pass. She thus acquired the greatest influence. And when Cethe- gus also, then at the zenith of his fame and in control of the city, joined her train and became her lover, political power passed entirely into her hands. | No public measure passed unless Cethegus favoured it, and Cethegus did nothing except with Praecia’s approval. This woman, then, Lucullus won over by gifts and flatteries, and it was doubtless a great boon for a woman so forward and ostentatious to be seen sharing the ambitions of Lucullus. Straightway he had Cethegus singing his praises and suing for Cilicia in his behalf. But as soon as he had obtained this province, there was no further need of his soliciting the aid of Praecia, or of Cethegus, for that matter, but all were unanimous and prompt in putting into his hands the Mithridatic war, assured that no one else could better bring it to a trium- phant close. Pompey was still engaged in his war with Sertorius, Metellus had now retired from active service by reason of his age, and these were the only évapirrous érrotncato AovxovAdm rept tis oTpatnyias audisBnrobvtas. ov pny adda Kotras 0 cuvdpywv abrov ToANa ALTTAapHaAas THY ovyKANTOV aTrecTadn peTa veov THY IIpoTovTida gurAdéwv cai mpotorennowyv Bibuvias.

VIT. AoveovaAdos S€é tdypa pév aitobev Exov cuytetaypévoyv um avrod duéBawev eis THY
"Actav: éxet 5é tHv AdXnv trapérdaBe Svvapmuy, TavTov peyv waraL ti a tepOoporwv Kat mreovetiaws, Tov d¢ DipSpravav Aeyopévov Kal dia cuvnevay avapyias ducpetayxeipiotwy yeyo-YOT@Y. OUTOL yap joav ot PAdKKoY TE eT @iuBpiov tov brarov nal otparnyov avnpnKotes avtov te tov DipBpiay ZwAra mpodedwxéres, avddbes pev avOpwrot kal wapavopot, paxioe
dé xal tAnpoves per eptrerpias qoAdemov. ov pv adrAa Bpaxel xpdvm Kal tovTwy To Opdaos 6 Aovxovrros éFéxoe nal tovs adXous - é7é-oTpeye, TOTE MpaTOV, Ws EoLKE, TrELpwpévoUS
apyovtos adnOivod Kal jyepovos: GAXws 8 &dn-paywyodvro mpos noovny €O.Copevor orpareverOat.
Ta &€ rev rodepiov odtas elye. Mibpiddarns, @omwep ol TroAXol THY codioTav, KoumTM@dns €v apy7n Kat aoBapos él ‘Pwpaiovs dvactas &a-xévm Suvdpe, Naurpa b€ Kal TravnyupiKR THY Oyu, elt extrecw@v KatayeAdotws Kal vovern-Geis, Gre to Sevrepoy trodepety Epedrev, eis arnOwiv Kal tTpayparixny cuvéoterXre Tas Suvapers TapacKkeunv. adedov yap ta mavtobaTra

mwAnOn Kxal Tas modvyA@ocous areas TOV BapBdpwv, btrrwv Te! Siaypiowyv Kal Siadidov
1 re with S: 5¢.

490

496

LUCULLUS

men who ceuld be regarded as rivals of Lucullus in any dispute about this command. Cotta, however, his colleague in the consulship, after fervent en- treaties to the Senate, was sent with some ships to guard the Propontis, and to protect Bithynia.

VII. With a legion which he had raised himself in Italy, Lucullus crossed into Asia,! and there assumed command of the rest of the Roman forces. All these had long been spoiled by habits of luxury and greed, and the Fimbrians, as they were called, had become unmanageable, through long lack of discipline. These were the men who, in collusion with Fimbrius, had slain Flaccus, their consul and general, and had delivered Fimbrius himself: over to Sulla. They were self-willed and lawless, but good fighters, hardy, and experienced in war. However, in a short time Lucullus pruned off their insolent boldness, and reformed the rest. Then for the first time, as it would seem, they made the acquaintance of a genuine commander and leader, whereas before this they had always been cajoled into doing their duty, like crowds at the hustings.

On the enemy's side, matters stood as follows. 'Mithridates, boastful and pompous at the outset, like most of the Sophists, had first opposed the Romans with forces which were really unsubstantial, though brilliant and ostentatious to look upon. With these he had made a ridiculous fiasco and learned a salutary lesson. When therefore, he thought to go to war the second time, he organized his forces into a genuinely effective armament. He did away with Barbarous hordes from every clime, and all their discordant and threatening cries; he provided no 1748.0. Cf. Cemon, i. 5.

49%

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 € 4 fe) 4 >
KaTacKevas, @s Adhupa TaY KpaTOvYTwWY, OK
adknv twa Tov KextTnévov syta, Eidn pev nravveto 'Pwpaixa xal Oupeods éuBpebets émn-yvuTo Kal yeyuuvacpévovs padAXov 7) KEKoopnpevous HOpocbev tmmous, met@v 5é pupiddas Sobexa KaTeckevac pévon eis Pddayya "Pwpaixny, irreis 5é mpos pupious éEaxiaytrAious dvev TOV SpeTravn-

, , a > ® e / ” \
5 dopwov teOpitrev: tadta 5 Hv éxarov: ere 8é
vads ov ypvcopopors axnviow ovdé RovTpois Tadraxidov Kal yuvatkwvitios Tpupwocats HoKN-
4, b b @ \ a 4
pévas, aX SrA@v cal Berov kal ypnuatov
ye“ovcas Tapaptvadpevos évéBarev cis BiOvviav, TOV TrOAcwY avOis dopévws Urrodexouévwv ov
, a ? \ L \ > / 4 e
povoy TovTwY, dArAa Kal Thy ‘'Aciay 6Anv rro-
a / TpoTn Tov éumpocbev voonudtav elyev, apopynta
macyovoay Tro “Pwyaixay Savectav Kal Tedw-
le) \
6 vav' ods DaTepov péev Wotrep ‘Aptruias THY Tpopny
A e
aprravovtas avTav o AovKeovAdos éEjXace, TOTE
dé peTpiwtépous emeparo vovlerav rrovetv, Kat Tas aTrooTdcels KaTérrave TaV Snuwy, ovdevos, @s Eros eitreiv, novyalovtos.
VIII. “Ov 5€ wept tadta Aoveovrros Hoxo-AelTo ypovoy avTod Katpov ecivar vopilov o Kortas wapecxevalero pdyeo8ar mpos Mibpr-darnv. Kal TorAXN@Y atrayyeXXOvToV dn AovkovAXov év Ppuyia atparotedevey érriovta, povov ovK év Tais xepoiv éyew Tov QpiauBov
27 e \ 4 4 > “A
oLvopevos, WS pn peTANABn AovKovAXNOS avTOD,
2 cupBareiv Extrevoe. mAnyels & aua Kal xata 492

LUCULLUS

more armour inlaid with gold and set with precious stones, for he saw that these made rich booty for the victors, but gave no strength whatever to their wearers ; instead, he had swords forged in the Roman fashion, and heavy shields welded; he collected horses that were well trained rather than richly caparisoned, and a hundred and twenty thousand footmen drilled in the Roman phalanx formation, and sixteen thousand horsemen, not counting the scythe-bearing, four-horse chariots, which were a hundred in number : and further, he put in readiness ships which were not tricked out with gilded canopies, or baths for concubines, and luxurious apartments for women, but which were rather loaded down with armour and missiles and munitions of war. Then he burst into Bithynia, and not only did the cities there receive him again with gladness, but all Asia suffered a relapse into its former distempered condition, afflicted, as it was, past bearing by Roman money-lenders and tax-gatherers. These were after- wards driven off by Lucullus,—harpies that they were, snatching the people’s food; but then he merely tried, by admonishing them, to make them more moderate in their demands, and laboured to stop the uprisings of the towns, hardly one of which was in a quiet state.

VIII. While Lucullus was thus occupied, Cotta, thinking that his own golden opportunity had come, was getting ready to give battle to Mithridates. And when tidings came from many sources that Lucullus was coming up, and was already encamped in Phrygia, thinking that a triumph was all but in his grasp, and desiring that Lucullus have no share in it, he hastened to engage the king. But 493
a
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

yiqv cat cata OddXattav éEnxovta pev ar@decev avtavépa axadn, melovs dé TeTpaxtoxertous, autos &é& Kxatakreobeils eis Xarxndova xa ToXLopKkovpevos eis Tas AoveovAXou Yelpas aré-Brerrev.
3 "Hoay pév ovv ot tov AovcovAXOV apeXnoayTa Kotta mpoow ywpeiv trapoppavres as epnuov aipnoovta tiv MiOpidatrov Bactreiav, nal pa-
META TOV OTPATLWTOV OUTOS Hv Oo NOYOS, ayava-KTOUVTOD, el pn povoy avTov amore Kal Tous ov auT@ Bovrevodpevos KAKOS) Korras, ana Kal odhicw éutrodwy éorat pexdy apaxel duva-4 pévors. Aovxovdnos dé T™pos pev TOUTOUS énynyopav elTrey, oo éva Bovror' ay éx TONE MLD THCAL 'Popaiov 7) WavTa NaBelv Ta TOV TrOAEpLOV*
"Apxeddou dé Tob wept Bovoriay Mibpidary TT PATHYNTAVTOS, eit atroatavtos Kal "Pwpaiors TvaTpATEvOVTOS, 61a BeBacroupévov opOevra Aov-KOVAXOV éV Tlovr TAVTOV opod KPATNHOELV, OUK ébn devAorepos elvat TOY KUN YOY, aoTe Ta Onpia mapeOov él KevOUS avT@v Tous dwrcovs Basdi-5 Cau. Kal Tar elTr@y emt Mc6pidarny 7 potrye melous pev Eywv Tpia puptous, drmeis 5é duryeAtous TevTaKoaiovs. KaTacTas & es &rroyruy tTav Tohe-piov Kal Oavpdoas TO TAOS éBovrero pep améexer Oat payns Kat TpiBew TOV xpavor, Mapiou &, ov Leptéptos é& 'I Bnpias areoTadxer MeO p-Sérn pera duvdpews oTparnyor, ar aVvTnTavTos auTe Kal mpoxaoupevov KaTéoTH _pev eis Taku és duapa oupevos, 70n Sé Goov outa Tuppepo-

6 Goa an ovdemds émripavovs peraBorgrs, dAN’

he was defeated by sea and land, lost sixty vessels,
crews and all, and four thousand foot-soldiers, while he himself was shut up in Chalcedon and besieged there, looking for relief at the hands of Lucullus.

Now there were some who urged Lucullus to ignore Cotta and march on into the kingdom of Mithridates, assured of capturing it in its defenceless condition. This was the reasoning of the soldiers especially, who were indignant that Cotta, by his evil counsels, should not only be the undoing of himself and‘his army, but also block their own way to a victory which they could have won without a battle. But Lucullus, in a harangue which he made them, said that he would rather save one Roman from the enemy than take all that enemy's possessions. And when Aychelaiis, who had held command for Mithridates in: Boeotia, and then had abandoned his cause, and was now in the Roman army, stoutly maintained that if Lucullus were once seen in Pontus, he would master everything at once, Lucullus declared that he was at least as courageous as the hunter; he would not give the wild beasts the slip and stalk their empty lairs. With these words, he led his army against Mithridates, having thirty thousand foot-soldiers, and twenty-five hundred horsemen. But when he had come within sight ot the enemy and seen with amazement their multitude, he desired to refrain from battle and draw out the time. But Marius, whom Sertorius had sent to Mithridates from Spain with an army, came out to meet him, and challenged him to combat, and so he put his forces in array to fight the issue out. But presently, as they were on the point of joining

éEaidyns tod dépos btroppayévtos! ahOn péya
ohpa droyedés eis pécov tav otpatoTédwy Katadepopevov, TO pev oxnpa wim pdduoTa,
THv Sé Ypdav apyip@ SvaTvp@ TpoceoiKos, WaTe Scicavtas apudotépovs To dopa SiaxprOjvas.
TovTo pev ovv dacw év Dpvyia mepl tas Neyo-péevas Otpias cupBhvat To 1aGos.
‘O 8€ ‘AovKovAXos ovdeuias elvat vopilwv

avOpwirivns tmapacKevis ovdé mrovTov Opérat pupiddas él roku ypovov avTicabnpévwv Trode-piwv tocavtas, daas ceive MiOpiddarns, éxéXNevorev ayOfjvar TOV aixpadworev Eva: Kal rpaTov avé-Kplwe, meTa Tocwv Siait@To acvoKyvev, éreta jwoaov év TH oKnvh KaTanéXNolTTE GiTOY. : aTroxpwvapévou b¢ tavOpwrov Tov pev éxéXevce peTa-orhvat, Sevtepov bé€ Kai tpitov opotws avéxpivev.

elra auvOels TO THS- TapecKevacpevns Tpodhs WAHGos mpos TO TaV TpEhomevwv, eyvw TPLOV
h tecodpwv nyepov emiretipovta atrov tovs moNeuious. Kal TOoAU padAXov ElyeTO TOD Ypovou, Kal ovvayev els TOV YadpaKka TrapTANOH airov, ws év apOovois Sudywv avtos éfedpevor tais éxeivav atroptats.
- IX. "Ev rovt@m &8& MiPpidarns érreBovreve Kutitenvois werAnyoow év tH wept Xadrxndova waxy Tpicxyiiiov yap avdpwov Kal déka veov éotépnyvto. PBouddcpevos ovv Aabeiy tov Aov-KovArAop, evOds ato Seirrvov vinta dvadavh rat votepav éxov éxiver: xal POdve THS TOEWS avTixpus ap' ypépa Trept TO THs 'Adpactedas Spos
1 Sroppayévros with S : amoppayévros.
496
497

LUCULLUS

battle, with no apparent change of weather, but all on a sudden, the sky burst asunder, and a huge, flame-like body was seen to fall between the two armies. In shape, it was -most like a wine-jar, and in colour, like molten silver. Both sides were astonished at the sight, and separated. This marvel, as they say, occurred in Phrygia, at a place called Otryae.
But Lucullus, feeling sure that no human provision or wealth could maintain, for any length of time, and in the face of an enemy, so many thousands of men as Mithridates had, ordered one of the captives to be brought to him, and asked him first, how many men shared his mess, and ther, how much food he had left in his tent. When the man had answered these questions, he ordered him to be removed,
and questioned a second and a third in like manner.
Then, comparing the amount of food provided with the number of men to be fed, he concluded that within three or four days the enemy's provisions would fail them. All the more, therefore, did he trust to time, and collected into his camp a great abundance of provisions, that so, himself in the midst of plenty, he might watch for his enemy's distress, |

IX. But in the meantime, Mithridates planned a blow at Cyzicus, which had suffered terribly in the battle near Chalcedon, having lost three thousand men and ten ships. Accordingly, wishing to evade the notice of Lucullus, he set out immediately after the evening meal, taking advantage of a dark and rainy night, and succeeded in planting his forces over against the city, on the slopes of the mountain range

2 idpvaas tHv Suva. 'O && AoveovrAros aicbo-Hevos Kal biabEas myamnae fev ovK éumerov do vv-TAKTOS els TOUS Tronepious, xabiver dé Tov oTparov
mepl Thy Opgxiay eyouevnv K@pny év Tom Kata TOV OMY dpioTa TrepuKOTL Kal TaV Ywpiwr, ad' ov kal &u' Oy avayxaioy hv Tots MiOpidarcKois Ta emitnoera poutav. 516 Kal mepiraBov TH diavoia TO ENDNOV OVK ATrEKPUWATO TOUS OTPATLWTAS, GAN' dpa T@ Oécbar Td otparomedov xa awd TeV epryov yever Oar owvaryayav avrous éueyadnyopnoev, ws OALYOD 7) HMEpOV avalwwTl TO ViKna mapadwowv ayrois.
3 Kulcxnvods dé McOpidarns Séxa per € éx ys oTpa-Tomedous TepthaBar, tais 5 vavolv éx aracons TOV ATO THS HrElpou Sielpyovra THY TOMY etpurov
éuppatas, éxatepwber émroNLoprel, TA pev dda Siaxetpevous T pos TOV kivdvvov evdapaas Kat way
évexa 'Popatov | éyvwKoras exdéexerOar duaxepés, dryvootvras 5é darn AoveovaAnos etn xal TO pndev
4 qept avrod merrva Oat TAapaTTopevous. Kaitou KaTaparis mV 1) oTpatomredeia Kal atromwTos, GNX' bro THY Mibpisarixay efnrrat avro. Secxvurres yap avTots TOUS 'Popaious a dvw TapeuBeBAnkoras
""Opare tovtous;" épacar, "'Appevlov oT paros €oTe Kal Myjdov, Teypavov MiOpidarn KaTOTEp-
'ravtos émuxoupiay.' ob S éFerdjocovto ToTOU-TOU TroNGLOU TEPLKEX ULEVOV pnd', ef Taparyevorro
AovKovrdos, yopay éTt edeipBar BonGeias édari-Covtes.
5 Ov pny adra T pWTOS avrois etorreupOels vn
"Apxerdou Anpudvak édpace tiv tod AouvxovAXou

of Adrasteia, by day-break. Lucullus got wind of his departure and pursued him, but was well satisfied not to fall upon the enemy while his own troops were in disorder from their march, and stationed his army near the village called Thracia, in a spot best suited to command the roads and regions from which, and over which, the army of Mithridates must get its necessary supplies. Seeing clearly, therefore, what the issue must be, he did not conceal it from his soldiers, but as soon as-they had completed the labour of fortifying their camp, called them together, and boastfully told them that within a few days he would give them their victory, and that without any bloodshed.

Mithridates was besieging Cyzicus both by land and sea, having encompassed it with ten camps on the land side, and having blockaded with his ships by sea the narrow strait which parts the city from the mainland. Although the citizens viewed their peril with a high courage, and were resolved to sustain every hardship for the sake of the Romans, still, they knew not where Lucullus was, and were disturbed because they heard nothing of him. And yet his camp was in plain sight, only they were deceived by their enemies. These pointed the Romans out to them, lying encamped on the heights, and said: ‘Do you see those forces? It is an army of Armenians and Medes which Tigranes has sent to assist Mithridates.” They were therefore terrified to see such hosts encompassing them, and had no hopes that any way of succour remained, even if Lucullus should come.

However, in the first place, pace was sent in to them by Archelaiis, and told them that Lucullus mapovaiay. Tovreay 8 amicrovuvrwy Kal vopulov-TOV avToY TOV TapoVvTwD emi mapnyopig meTha-opéva eye, HKE mavdaptov aixpadwrov ex TOV TONE uo amr odedpaxos. Truvdavoueveav &° avrov, woo Aéyou TOV AovxovAXov elvat, Kateyéra trallew

avTous olopevov. as 8 éwpa, orovddtovtas, donunve TH Xerpl TOY Kapaxa TOV ‘Popaiwn, ot & aveDapanaar. Tis dé Aackvvriti60s Aipvns TAE0-pévns axariow érvena@s. evpeyeOeot, TO wéeyto TOV avTav o AovKourros dvedxtoas Kat Stayayav apdkn mpos thy Odratray bcous ex@per oTpaTLwras éeveBlBacev. Erabov 8€ vucros Siarrepdoavres Kat mapeonrOov eis THY TOAD.

X. "Kotxe 5@ xal rd Deion émOappivac TOUS Kutixnvous, aryao ev auTay THY avdpayalian, ardoug TE onpetos évapyéct, Kal THS TOV Pepedar-Ti@V Eoptijs ever THONS OL pev Hy opouy Boos jLe-Aaivns mpos THY Ovciav Kal oracrivny TrdoavTes
TO Bowe mapeoTnaay, 7 7 8 iepd cal rpepopevy TH
OQ vopny bev elev, domep TaN Bord TOV
Kubixnvav, éy Th mepaia, Kar’ éxelyny dé TH
nuepay drroxpweioa TAS “ayadns ovn Stevnfato 7 pos THY TOoNW Kal KATETTNO EV ért Thy Ouciav
avurny. évap 5 7 Oeds ‘Aptorayopa T@ Tob Sj pov YpamparvaTh mapacraca, “Kal pay eryaorye,” elrrev, “Kw TOV AiBuxov avrAntny érl TOV Tlovrixoy TadruyKTHY émdyovca. dpdacov obv Oappetv Tois moNrais.” OaupatovTov dé THY havyy Tav Kubianvav dp’ jpépa odhov elyev 7 Odr\aoca KATLOVTOS aK pitou TvEevpLaTos, at Te penyaval tod Bacthéws Tapectacat Tots TELXEo Ly, Epya Oavpacta Nixwvidouv rot @cccanrod, poite 500 was arrived. They disbelieved him, and thought he had invented his story merely to mitigate their anxieties, but then a boy came to them, who had escaped from his captivity with the enemy. On their asking him where he thought Lucullus was, he laughed at them, supposing them to be jesting. But when he saw that they were in earnest, he pointed out the Roman camp to them, and their courage was revived. Again, Lucullus drew out on shore the largest of the sizable craft which plied the lake Dascylitis, carried it across to the sea on a waggon, and embarked upon it as many soldiers as it would hold, who crossed by night unobserved, and got safely into the city.

X. It would seem also that Heaven, in admiration of their bravery, emboldened the men of Cyzicus by many manifest signs, and especially by the following. The festival of Persephone was at hand, and the people, in lack of a black heifer for the sacrifice, fashioned one of dough, and brought it to the altar. Now the sacred heifer reared for the goddess was pasturing, like the other herds of the Cyzicenes, on the opposite side of the strait, but on that day she left her herd, swam over alone to the city, and presented herself for the sacrifice. And again, the goddess appeared in a dream to Aristagoras, the town-clerk, saying : "' Lo, here am I, and I bring the Libyan fifer against the Pontic trumpeter. Bid the citizens therefore be of good cheer." While the Cyzicenes were lost in wonder at the saying, at day- break the sea began to toss under a boisterous wind, and the siege-engines of the king along the walls, the wonderful works of Niconides the Thessalian, by

3 nal maTady@ Tmpa@Tov aedyjrovy TO péAXOV' elTa voros éxpayels amiatos TO péyeOos Ta 7 ara ouvéeTpipe pnyavnpata wpas Bpayel popi¢, Kal
tov EvAWwov Trupyov éxaTov THxXaV Hfos SvTa Stacelaas xatéBarev. icropetras dé rav ev "Thi modrois Kal' Srvov opOjvar tiv "AOnvav idpare TOAA® peopévyny cat Vropaivovady te tov méTNOVU
Tapeppwyos, Nyouvaay, ws apTiws hKxot BonOncaca Kutixnvots. cal ornrny twa Soypata Kal ypap-pata tept TrovTwy éyovaay edeixvvov 'INseis.
XI. MiOpsdarny 5é, dype wev bd TaV éavTod oTpatnyav pevacilopevos Hyvoes Tov ev TO oTpa-/ / > / 4 \ roTréi@ Aiwov, nviov Kubianvol dsaghevyovres tHv
, \ 3 a \ / 9 wn
modtopkiay. tayv & éEeppun To didoripov avTov kal piroverxov ev aicOnoe yevoudvov TeV arro-pi@v, als of otpati@tat ovvetyovTo, Kal TeV > al @ A \ aA 2 9
avOpwrropaytav, ate dn wn Geatpixas pnd émidecxTix@s AouvxovrAXou TOAELODYTOS, GAAG, TOUTO 87
TO NEeyopevoy, els THY yaoTépa évarropévov Kal
é1rws Upaipnoe THY Tpodny ATavTa TpaypaTeEvo-
2 pévov. 510 Kal hpovprov Tt TroALopKobyTos avTod ™ Kaip@ xpjoacbat aorevdwv o MiOpiddrns bs 4 > 4 A e a) \ éFérreurpev eis BiOuviay rods pev timeis oxedov anavras pera Tay Urotuyiwv, Tov dé wefav Tous bd Va , » ¢ 4

aypnatous. tmuOopuevos 8 o AovKovdnos Ett vuK-TOS Kev eis TO aTpaTOrTeEdov, rpwl 5é Yevpw@vos
évtos dvadaBav areipas béxa nal thy toirov
997 , a C4 ‘
edLwKeE ViPOLevos kal KaxoTrabayv, @aTe TOAKOUS umd Kpvous evdidovTas aroNeiTecOqy TaV oTpAa-502

LUCULLUS

their creaking and cracking showed clearly what was about to happen; then a south wind burst forth with incredible fury, shattered the other engines in a short space of time, and threw down with a great shock the wooden tower a hundred cubits high. It is related, too, that.the goddess Athena appeared to many of the inhabitants of Ilium in their sleep, dripping with sweat, showing part of her peplus torn away, and saying that she was just come from assisting the Cyzicenes. And the people of [lium used to show a stelé which had on it certain decrees and inscriptions relating to this matter.

XI. Mithridates, as long as his generals deceived him into ignorance of the famine in his army, was vexed that the Cyzicenes should successfully with- stand his siege. But his eager ambition quickly ebbed away when he perceived the straits in which his soldiers were involved, and their actual canni- balism. For Lucullus was not carrying on the war in any theatrical way, nor for mere display, but, as the saying is, was “kicking in the belly,’ and de- vising every means for cutting off food. Accordingly, while Lucullus was laying siege to some outpost or other, Mithridates eagerly took advantage of the opportunity, and sent away into Bithynia almost all his horsemen, together with the beasts of burden, and those of his foot-soldiers who were disabled. On learning of this, Lucullus returned to his camp while it was still night, and early in the morning, in spite of a storm, took ten cohorts of infantry and his calvary, and started in pursuit, although snow was falling and his hardships were extreme. Many of his soldiers were overcome with the cold and had to be left behind, but with the rest he overtook the

993

or

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tiwtav, Tots 8 aAXNols Tept Tov ‘Puvdaxoy trorapov
KaTanaBwv Tovs Toreuious TOTavTHY TpoTHY érroinoev, @aTe TAS yuvaixas éx THs AmrodX@vias mpoepyopévas adaprrale ta hoptia Kal oxv-Aeveww TOUS Hovevopévous. TroddAav 8, ws ELKOS, amo0avovrav éddwoav taro pev éEaxioyiror Kal wAnO0s avapiOuntov vroluyiwy, avdpes 5é
pUpioe TrevraKiaxiAoe’ Kal TOvTOUS aywY TdVTAS mapetnes Tapa TO oTpaToTedoy TwY TOAELiOD.
Larovaotiou 5& Pavualtw rote mparov wpar

‘Pwpaiors Kapijrous AéyorTos, ef pte TpoTEpov
TOUS PETA VKNTiwvOS ViKHoaVvTas AVTLOXOY WeETO
pnte tovs evayyos mpos ‘Opxouer@ Kai rept Xarpoveray “Apyedd@ peyaynpévovs éyvwxévae KapLNAov.
"AAAA TO ye MiOpidarn hevyerv pev eyvworo
THv taxltoTny, avOorxKds 5é AovKovArA® kai dia-TpiBas oTricw unyavepevos ExTENXE TOY Vavapyov
"Aptorovixoy érl thy EXAnuicnv Oaracoav Kat
Scov ovmw pédXovTos éxrrdeiv ex TWpodocias o Aovxovarnros éxupievoe peTa ypvcav pupiwv, ods éxopile StapOep@y te Tod “Pwpyaixod otpatedpatos. éx toutov MiOpidarns péev Edvyev érrt Oaraccav, a S€ otpatnyol mefol Tov otpaTov annyayov. émimecwmy dé AovKovrAros avrois mept Tov I\pavixov Twotapov elXé TE TapmoddOUS kal Siopupiovs arréxtewe. Réyovta. 8 é« Tov TavTos akodovOwy Te Kal payipwv dydou pupE-
“4 \ A
-dées ov trodkv 87 TOY TplIdKoVTAa HeiTrovcas SiahOaphvar.
XII. AoveovrAr0s 5€ mpeTov els Kuvbixov mapedOay amédavoev Hdovns Kal pirodpoa uvns 504

499

LUCULLUS

enemy at the river Rhyndacus and inflicted such a defeat upon them that the very women came forth from Apollonia and carried off their baggage and stripped their slain. Many fell in the battle, as it is natural to suppose. Six thousand horses and fifteen thousand men were captured, besides an untold number of beasts of burden. All these followed in the train of Lucullus as he marched back past the camp of the enemy. Sallust says, to my amazement, that camels were then seen by the Romans | for the first time. He must have thought that the soldiers of Scipio who conquered Antiochus before this, and those who had lately fought Archelaiis at Orchomenus and Chaeroneia, were unacquainted with the camel.

Mithridates was now resolved upon the speediest possible flight, but with a view to drawing Lucullus away, and holding him back from pursuit, he dispatched his admiral, Aristonicus, to the Grecian sea. Aristonicus was just on the point of sailing when he was betrayed into the hands of Lucullus, together with ten thousand pieces of gold which he was carrying for the corruption of some portion of the Roman army. Upon this, Mithridates fled to the — sea, and his generals of infantry began to lead the army away. But Lucullus fell upon them at the river Granicus, captured a vast number of them, and slew twenty thousand. It is said that out of the whole horde of camp-followers and fighting men, not much less than three hundred thousand perished in the campaign.

XII. Lucullus, in the first place, entered Cyzicus in triumph, and enjoyed the pleasant welcome which

JU)

~

5

mperovens: érretta vautixoy é—nprvero Tov 'EX-AnoTovTov emuTopevopevos. eis dé Tpwdda xara-VOels donqvace pev ev TH iep@ tis Adpodirns, carakounOels Sé vintwp edoxer tHv Oedv opav édeoracay avt@ xal Aéyoucay'
Ti nvwmoces, peydOupe ANéov; veBpor 5é ToL eyryus.
éFavaoras Sé xal tovs plrovs xarécas Sinyeiro thy oy ére vuxtos obons. kal tapnoav é&
"TAiov ties atrayyédrovtes @P0at wept tov
"Axatav Nupéva tptoxaidexa trevrynpers Tov Bace-Axa érrl Ajuvov trEovcas. EvOUs ody avaybels tovtous ey elXe nal Tov otpatnyoy avTay
"Iaidwpov amréxrevver, emt 5é tovs adAXous efrret mpppéas. ot 5é érvxyoy oppodvres, cal Ta mola wTavTa mpos TY Yyiv auvédKovTes ato TeV katactpwpatrev Sueudyovto Kat manyas édldocav
tois mept tov AovxovAdov, ote mrepiTrAcioaL

Tov xwpiov Sidovtos ovte PBidcacOat vavo
MeETEWpPOLS TAS TOV ToArELiwY MpocEpnpEetcpévas
TH yn Kal BeBnkvias aodaras. ov pny adra ors 4 mpoaRorAnv tia 7 vHyoos elyev atroBi-Bales Trav oTpaTiwTa@V Tos apiaTousS, of KATOTLV Crime ovTes TOiS TroAEpiors Tos pev SrépOetpov auTav, tovs 8& nvdyxalov amoxomrrovtas Ta mpuuyynata Tay veav kal devyovtas ex THs yas GNANAOLS TE TUYKPOVELY TA THOLa Kal Tais éPo-ais tais aepl tov AoveovAdrov wrromlarrep.
TodAol pev ovv duehpOdpnaay, év dé Trois ddodou avnxOn Kal Mdptos 6 Tapa Yeptwploy otparnydos: 500
LUCULLUS

was his due ; then he proceeded to the Hellespont, and began to equip a fleet. On visiting the Troad, he pitched his tent in the sacred precinct of Aphrodite, and in the night, after he had fallen asleep, he thought he saw the goddess standing over him and saying :—

«Why dost thou sleep, great lion? the fawns are near for thy taking."

Rising up from sleep and calling his friends, he narrated to them his vision, while it was yet night. And lo, there came certain men from Ilium, with tidings that thirteen of the king's galleys had been seen off the harbour of the Achaeans, making for Lemnos Accordingly, Lucullus put to sea at once, captured these, slew their commander, Isodorus, and then sailed in pursuit of the other captains, whom these were seeking to join. They chanced to be lying at anchor close to shore, and drawing their vessels all up on land, they fought from their decks, and sorely galled the crews of Lucullus. These had no chance to sail round their enemies, nor to make onset upon them, since their own ships were afloat, while those of their enemies were planted upon the land and securely fixed. However, Lucullus at last succeeded in disembarking the best of his soldiers where the island afforded some sort of access. These fell upon the enemy from the rear, slew some of them, and forced the rest to cut their stern cables and fly from the shore, their vessels thus falling foul of one another, and receiving the impact of the ships of Lucullus. Many of the enemy perished, of course, and among the captives there was brought in Marius, the general sent from

5°7

WX)

cS

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

nv yap érepop0arpos, kal wapnyyerto Tots otpatiotais evOus éemumdéovow bro AoveovddXou pndéva xrelvew érepopOarpor, Stras éFoverdiaOels cat eabuBpicbels aroOavor.
XIII. Tevopuevos § ard tovtwv nrrelyeto mpos Thy avtod MiOpidarou Siwkiv. Arrive yap ere wept BiOuviavy etpnoev avtov vireo Boxwviouv hpovpovpevov, Sv avros evornoomevoy TH Hvyh
peta vey atrectddKet wpos Nixopndecav. adrAa Borwvios pev ev LapoOpaxn pvovpevos Kat mayvnyupitwyv xadvortépnoe: MiOpidarnv oé avayOévra peta TOD aToXoU, omrevdovTa Tply émt-otpépetv AovKovAndor ets Tov Uovrov etomrdedoaz, KaTarkapBave. yeiuov torus, Ud ob Ta pev
agnprayn, Ta & éBuv0icOn trav cKxadadv, Taca
8 4 wapadia tev vavayiov exdepopévwv bird
TOU KAVOwvoS el TOAAAS Huépas HY TepitrAEws.
autos 5é, THs odxdbos, éf' Ho Eres, pte pos THY Yyhv evmapakopictov bia péyeOos ev cdr@ peyar@ Kal KvpaTe TudrA@ tTaptotapévys Tots xuBepynrats, rpos Te THY Odrdacaay Abn Bapeias rat UmepdvTrov ryevomevns, petepBas eis AnOTPpL-Ov pvoTrdpava Kal TO cOpa mretpatats ey yet pi-gas aveArriatrws Kal tapaBorws eis tHY Hovtiany
"Hpdxrevav ekeowOn. AovnotrArA, 8 avepéontos h Wpos THY avyKANnTOV aTéBn gHiroTimia. Wndifouerns yap avtis mpos Tov médreyov aro TpioxiAiwy Ttardvtwv éEapriecOar vavutixor, éx@rvoe Tréewpas ypdupata Kal peyarnyopycas, 508

LUCULLUS

Sertorius. He had but one eye, and the soldiers had received strict orders from Lucullus, as soon as they set sail, to kill no one-eyed man. Lucullus wished Marius to die under the most shameful insults.

XIII. These 'things done, Lucullus hastened in pursuit of Mithridates himself. For he expected to find him still in Bithynia under the watch and ward of Voconius, whom he had dispatched with a fleet to Nicomedeia that he might intercept the king's flight. But Voconius was behindhand, owing to his initiation into, and celebration of, the mysteries in Samothrace, and Mithridates put to sea with his armament, eager to reach Pontus before Lucullus turned and set upon him. He was over- ' taken, however, by a great storm, which destroyed some of his vessels and disabled others. The whole coast for many days was covered with the wrecks dashed upon it by the billows. As for the king himself, the merchantman on which he was sailing was too large to be readily beached when the sea ran so high and the waves were so baffling, nor would it answer to its helm, and it was now too heavy and full of water to gain an offing ; accord- ingly, he abandoned it for a light brigantine belonging to some pirates, and, entrusting his person to their hands, contrary to expectation and after great hazard, got safely to Heracleia in Pontus.. And so it happened that the boastful speech of Lucullus to the Senate brought no divine retribution down upon him, When, namely, that body was ready to vote three thousand talents to provide a fleet for this war, Lucullus blocked the measure by writing a letter, in which he made the haughty boast that

5°9

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

a> dvev Sardvys xal tocavrns mapacKevis
tais Tov cuppayov vavol MiOpidarny exBaret THs Oardrrns. kal TtovTo .bmnpEey avT@ Tod Geod cuvaywvicapévov. réyerat yap 'Aprépsdos xorw IIpiarrivns 6 yerpov éureceiv trois Tovre-Kols auAjcacW avTis TO iepov nal Td Eoavoy avacTrdaaact.
XIV. TloArAay 5é AoveovAr@ rapawovvrwy avaBdrrecbat Tov modrepov, od dpovtiaas évé-Bare dia Bidvvias cal Tandarias eis thy Baat-ALKHnY, ev apy pev evdens TOV avayKaiwy, WoTeE
Tardras recOat tpicpupiovs Exacrov énl trav @pov Kopifovta aitov pédupvov, mpoiway dé Kal KpaTr@av amavrev eis tocavTnv nAOev evrroptay, @ote tov pev Bodv év otpatorrédp Spaypis, TO 5¢ dvdpaodsov tetrdpwv a@viov elvat, thv & GAAnv relay ev ovdevl Aye TOvs pev ATroAEiTELY, tous Sé avaricxev. Sudbecis yap Fv ovdevos mpos ovdéva TavTwv eviropovvTwV.
"ANN Goov POeipar Kal Kaxwoar THY yaopay
immacdpevot Kal Katadpapovtes aypt Geptond-pas kal tov rept Bepuwdovta trediwy, 7ATL@VTO
tov AovKovAXdov, StL Wdoas Tpoodyerat Tas Tones, KaTa Kpdtos bé ovdeuiay Honcev ovde Taper xXnKEr avtots wpernOnvar Siaprdcacuv.
'Aa Kal vow," pacar, "'Amoov, rod evdatpova kat jhovatay, ov peya ov épyov, el, Tes
EVTELVAL THV TTONLOPKLAY, KATATXELY, ATOXNLTTOVTAS
Has ayer mept tv TiBapnyev nat Xadrdaiwv 510

500

without any such costly array, but only with the ships of the allies, he would drive Mithridates from the sea. And this success he gained with the assistance of Heaven. For it is said that it was owing to the wrath of Artemis of Priapus that the tempest fell upon the men of Pontus, who had plundered her shrine. and pulled down her image.

XIV. Though many now advised Lucullus to suspend the war, he paid no heed to them, but threw his army into the king's country by way of Bithynia and Galatia.! At first he lacked the necessary supplies, so that thirty thousand Galatians followed in his train, each carrying a bushel of grain upon his shoulders ; but as he advanced and mastered everything, he found himself in the midst of such plenty that an ox sold in his camp for a drachma, and a man-slave for four, while other booty had no value at all. Some abandoned it, and some destroyed it. There was no sale for anything to anybody when all had such abundance.

But when Lucullus merely wasted and ravaged the country with cavalry incursions, which penetrated to Themiscyra and the plains of the river Thermodon, his soldiers found fault with him because he brought all the cities over to him by peaceable measures ; he had not taken a single one by storm, they said, nor given them a chance to enrich themselves by plunder. " Nay," they said, "at this very moment we are leaving Amisus, a rich and prosperous city, which it would be no great matter to take, if its siege were pressed, and are following our general into the desert of the Tibareni and the Chaldaeans

1 73 B.C.

SIT

épnutav MiOpiddtn rodeunoovtas." adda
Tatdta pev ovx av o AovxovaAdos éArricas eis TogoUTOV aTrovolas Tovs oTpaTLwTas Trapayayelv, cov vaTepov éEépnvav, Urrepewpa Kal ovK éppovretev, exeivors 8 atrenoyeiro paddov, of Bpadurira xatynyopovy avrod SvatpiBovros év-Tav0a rept Kopas Kal modes ov ToAXOD TLVOS
akias wodvv xpovon, éavtos 8 avbfecOat McOpida-TY. "Adto yap," én, "TodTo Kal Bothopat

Kal KaOnpar TExvalon, péyay avis yevéoOat Tov dvdpa wal cuvaryaryety avrov alopaxov Suvapep, iva peivy Kab ra) puyn TpogtovTas nas. 4 ovx, opare TOAMY Lev aur@ Kal aréxpaprov épnuav
oTricw Tapovcap; eyyus 62 0 Kavxacos xal dpy TOANA Ka Badea Kal puptous Bactrels puyopa-oovTas apxobvra katakpiyrat cat Tmepiayeiy-Ody 5 Teepe 000s ets “A ppevian é x Kafelpwv, Kal brrép “Appevias KaOnrar Tiypavns, Bagtrevs Bacthéwr, exov Suvapuy, 7 Hdp0ous TE TEptxomtes THS ‘Aalas Kal Toners ‘EdAnvioas es Mnédiav avaxopiter . nal Yupias xparel Kad Tlanarorivys Kal TOUS aro Ledevcou Bacireis arroxtivyuet, Ovyatéepas auToy ayer Kal yuvaixas
dvac mda Tous. ovTos oixetos éorte Mifpidarov Kal yauRpos. ov mrepiowerat dé avrov tKETNV
uTrobeEdmevos, ANNA TroAEunoEL TPOS Huas* Kal aomevoovtes exBaddXeELv McOpidarnv cuvOuveic omer émomacacbar Teypdvny, mana pev aitias Sedpevov éb nas, evrrperrea Tépav 6é ovK av AaBovra THS brép avdpos oixelou Kal Bactréos avaryKa.- aOévra btrovpyeiy avT@. ti ovv Set Todd’ Has 512

LUCULLUS

to fight with Mithridates.’”’ But these grievances, not dreaming that they would bring the soldiers to such acts of madness as they afterwards performed, Lucullus overlooked and ignored. He was, however, more ready to defend himself against those who denounced ‘his slowness in lingering there a long while, subduing worthless little villages and cities, and allowing Mithridates to recruit himself. “That,” he said, “is the very thing I want, and I am sitting here to get it. I want the man to become powerful again, and to get together a force with which it is worth our while to fight, in order that he may stand his ground, and not fly when we approach. Do you not see that he has a vast and trackless desert behind him? The Caucasus, too, is near, with its many hills and dells, which are sufficient to hide away in safety ten thousand kings who decline to fight. And it is only a few days’ journey from Cabira into Armenia and over Armenia there sits enthroned Tigranes, King of Kings, with forces which enable him to cut the Parthians off from Asia, transplant Greek cities into Media, sway Syria and Palestine, put to death the successors of Seleucus, and carry off their wives and daughters into captivity. This king is a kinsman of Mithridates, his son-in-law. He will not be content ‘to receive him as a suppliant, but will make war against us. If we strive, therefore, to eject Mithri- dates from his kingdom, we shall run the _ risk of drawing Tigranes down upon us. He has long wanted an excuse for coming against us, and could not get a better one than that of being compelled to aid a man who is his kinsman and a king. Why, then, should we bring this to pass,

513

éEepyacacbar nal SidaEar MtOpiddarnv ayvootvra, pe? ov eoti avT@ pds Huds TrorEuNTéoy, Kat
pn Bovropevov, ddr ddokodvta cuvedavvey eis Tas Tuypdvou xelpas, adX ovyi Sovtas avT@ xpovov é€x TOV oiKeilwy TapacKevdcacOat Kat ava0appivat, Koryors xal TeBapnvois cat Karr-madokiv, mv ToANdKis KEexpaTynKapev, paxerOae padrrXov Mydocs cal "Appevioss;”
XV. ’Eml rotovTav RAoyiouav yevopevos o
AovxovaAnros Tepi te THY Apsoov SieTpie, para-
KOS TH TolopKia Ypwpevos, Kal peTa Yetwava Moupyvay atrodkureayv émt THs wodLopKias éBadilev él MiOptdarnv xaOnpevov év KaBeipos kat Stavoovpevov Udiotacbat tovs ‘Pwpaious, 7Opor-opévns avT@ dSuvdpews eis TEeTpaKicpupious Te-Sous, immmeis S€ tetpaxtoyirLous, ols éOdpper pddtota. Kai duaBas tov Avxov trotapmov eis TO mediov mpovxaretto Tovs ‘Pwpaious. yevouévns
8 immopayias Epuyov ot “Pwpato Topmrmyos
8 avnp ovx ado€os éddw tTetTpwpmévos Kal pos
tov Mi@pidarny avnyOn xaxds bTd TpavpaTwr Staxeipevos. wuOopéevov $é€ rot Bactrtéws, e€ owes vr’ avtov yevnoerat didos, “"Av ye ny,” Ey, ‘“““Pwpators Starrayns: et 58 pu}, TOAEmWLOS.”” TovTov pev Oavpdoas 0 MiOpiddrns ove ndiknoe.
Tob dé AoveovaAXovu Ta peéev Tedia TOV TrONEMLOY immoxpatouvtwy ded.0T0s, THY & Operviyy OxvOUVTOS mpoiévat, pakpav Kal tr4wdn Kal dvcBaTov otcay, ddickovtat Ties Kata toyny "EAAnves els Te 514

501

LUCULLUS

and teach Mithridates, when he dees not know it, with what allies he must carry on war against us?
Why help to drive him, against his wish and as a last resource, into the arms of Tigranes, instead of giving him time to equip himself from his own resources and get fresh courage? Then we shall fight with Colchians and Tibareni and Cappadocians, whom we have often overcome, rather than with Medes and . Armenians.”

XV. Influenced by such considerations as these, Lucullus lingered about Amisus, without pushing the siege vigorously. When winter was over, he left Murena in charge of the siege, and marched against Mithridates,! who had taken his stand at Cabira, and intended to await the Roman onset there. A force of forty thousand footmen had been collected by him, and four thousand horsemen ; on the latter he placed his chief reliance. Crossing the river Lycus and advancing into the plain, he offered the Romans battle. A cavalry fight ensued, and the Romans | took to flight. Pomponius, a man of some note, having been wounded, was taken prisoner and led into the presence of Mithridates, suffering greatly from his wounds. When the king asked him if he would become his friend provided he spared his life, Pomponius answered : “ Yes, indeed, if you come to ‘terms with the Romans; otherwise I must remain your enemy.” Mithridates was struck with admir- ation for him, and did him no harm.

Lucullus was now afraid of the plains, since the enemy was superior in cavalry, and yet hesitated to go forward into the hill country, which was remote, woody, and impassable. But it chanced that certain

1 72 B.C.

omnXatov Katauyovtes, HY o mWpexBUTepos ‘Ap-Tepidwpos vméayeto Tov AovKovAXov afew Kal
Katactdoew énl TOT@ aoharet TO oTpatoTréd~@
Kai ppovpioy éyovts Tots KaBelpacs érrixpepdpevov.
mustevoas 5 o AovKovAXos aya TH vuxtl mupa Kavoas éxive: Kal Ta oteva TrapeNOwy daoparas
TO Xwpiov elye, Kal pe? Huépav vrepedpaiveto TOV TOELIoY LOpvwY TOV oOTpaToV é€v ToOTrOLS, of paxyecOat Bovropévp mpocaywyny édidocav
xal To py BiacOjvac trapetxyov navyalovti.
Tyv@pny pev ovv ovdérepos elyev ev ye TO mapovtt Staxwduveverv: éXahov dé Néevyerar TAY BacirtKkay Siwxdvtav brrotepvopévous atravtiaat tous ‘Pwpalous, éx 8& tovTov cuptecovtas ayoviterOar wrELtovwv Exatépots del mpooywopéver.
téros 8 evixwv ot Bacidxot Kal thy huyny éx Tov xdpaxos ot ‘Pwpaio: Kabopavres ijoxyaddov
Kal cuvétpexov mpos Tov AoviovaAdoy, aye ohas Seopevor xal ovvOnpa mpos THY waxnv airodytes.
o &€ BovAdpevos avtovs pabeiy, nAiKov éoti év ayave toréuov Kal Kivdvve tapovoia cal drpis nryewovos Eudpovos, éxelvous pev novylay ayer exéXevoev, avTOS 5 xaréBawvev els TO Tedtov Kal .

Tots WpwTols aTravTnaas TOV devyovTwy latacBat mpooétake kat dvactpépey per’ avtov. tei bévtov 8é trovrwy Kal of Aosrol petaBaropevor Kal
TvaeTavTes OALy@ TrOV~@ TpéTOVTAL TOUS TroNELLOUS
Kal Katadiwxovel els TO oTpaTomedoy. émray-eXOwv dé AovKovrros atipiay Teva Tols hEevyouce vevopiauernv mpocéBare, KerXevoas ev yIToOLY 516

LUCULLUS

Greeks, who had taken refuge in a sort of cave, were captured, and the elder of them, Artemidorus, promised to serve Lucullus as a guide, and set him in a place which was safe for his camp, and which had a fortress overlooking.Cabira. Lucullus put confidence in this promise, and as soon as it was night, lit his camp fires and set out. He passed safely through the narrow defiles and took possession of the desired place, and at daybreak was seen above the enemy, stationing his men in positions which gave him access to the enemy if he wished to fight, and safety from their assaults if he wished to keep quiet.

Now neither commander had any intention of hazarding an engagement. at once. But we are told that while some of the king’s men were chasing a stag, the Romans cut them off and confronted them, whereupon a skirmish followed, with fresh accessions continually to either side. At last, the king’s men were victorious. Then the Romans in their camp, beholding the flight of their comrades, were in distress, and ran in throngs to Lucullus, begging him to lead them, and demanding the signal for battle. But he, wishing them to learn how im- portant, in a dangerous struggle with the enemy, the visible presence of a prudent general is, bade them _ keep quiet. Then he went down into the plain by himself, and confronting the foremost of the fugitives, bade them stop, and turn back with him. They obeyed, and the rest also wheeled about and formed in battle array, and in a short time routed the enemy and drove them to their camp. When he came back, however, Lucullus inflicted the customary disgrace upon the fugitives. He bade them dig a twelve-

517

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

alaatou opv—ar Swdexa trodav rdadpov, éperta-Tov Kat Oewpévov TOV GAXOV TTPATLOTODV.
XVI. ’Hy 5é res ev T@ McOpiddtov otpatroréd@ Aavéapiwv Suvacrns ’ONMakéds (yévos 8 eiolv ot Aavédpuor BapBapov tov mept thy Mawrev

oixovvTwv), avnp doa yYetpos Epya xal ToOAmNS ev ToAéu@ cratrpenns amavra, Kal yvounv ixavos
éy Tois peyiatol, ete & éuperns omsrjoa cal Oepatrevtixos. ovTos éExwv adel Tpos Tiva Tov opopirAwy Suvactav apihrav wbrép mpwtewv
xal EnrotuTiay vréoyeto TO MiOpidatn péya Epyov, atroxtevety AovxovAdov. érratvéoaytos 5é tov Baciréws Kai twas adt@ mpooBaXdovTos émitndes atipmias eis mpootroinow opyns adbermd~
aato mpos AoveovAXov: o 8 daopevos &dé€ato: AOYOS yap WV avTOD TOAVs ev TH oTpatoTrédo:
cal Tax TrELPMMEVOS nomacero THY TE dyxivovay
avuTov Kal TO ALTTAapés, WaTE TpaTrétns Kal oUDvE-Spiou tore troteta Oar Kowwwvov.
"Eel & éSdxer xarpov Eye o Aavddptos, Tov
pev tamov Ew Tov yapaxos éxéXevoe Tpoayaryety Tous Traioas, avTos dé peonuBSpias otons Kal TaY oTpatioTav éevdialovTwY Kal avaTravopevey éBadsbev emi thy oTpatnyteny axnyny, ws ovdevos KwAvVaoVTOS eicedOeiy avdpa auvyOn Kal doyous Twas akiovs omovdns T@ oTparny®@ copitecy doxovta. Kav clanjrOev adeds, et 1 0 TWOAAOVS avnpnKkas otpatnyous brves AovKovAXov Ecwoer.
éruyyave yap nabeviwv: xal Mevédnpos, els Ta KaTevvaoT@y, Tapa tais Ovpais éotas ovK ehy Kata Katpov New tov OnrOaxoy, dpte AoveovAXOU
mpos avatravaw ex paxpas aypunvias Kal Tovar 518
LUCULLUS

foot ditch, working in ungirt blouses, while the rest of the soldiers stood by and watched them.

XVI. In the camp of Mithridates there was a Dandarian prince named Olthacus (the Dandarians are a tribe of barbarians dwelling about Lake Maeotis), a man conspicuous as a soldier for qualities of strength and boldness, of a most excellent judgment, and withal affable in address and of insinuating manners. This man was always in emulous rivalry for the precedence with a fellow prince of his tribe, and so was led to undertake a great exploit for Mithridates, namely, the murder of Lucullus. The king approved of his design, and purposely inflicted upon him sundry marks of disgrace, whereupon, pretending to be enraged, he galloped off to Lucullus, who gladly welcomed him, since there was much talk of him in the camp. After a short probation, Lucullus was so pleased with his shrewdness and zeal, that he made him a table companion, and at last a member of his council.

Now when the Dandarian thought his Spceieanity had come, he ordered his slaves to lead his horse outside the camp, while he himself, at mid-day, when the soldiers were lying around enjoying their rest, went to the general's tent. He thought no one would deny entrance to a man who was an intimate of the general, and said he brought him certain messages of great importance. And he would have entered without let or hindrance, had not sleep, the destroyer of many generals, saved Lucullus. For it chanced that he was asleep, and Menedemus, one of his chamberlains, who stood at the tent-door, told Olthacus that he had come at an inopportune time, since Lucullus had just betaken himself to rest after 5 tocovTwy Sedwxdtos éavtov. érel 8 ove arryet KeXevovTos, GAN é&dn Kal KwAVOVTOS EicerEd-cecOat mepi wpadynatos avayxaiov Kul peyddou diarexO7vat Bovropevos, dn mpos opynv o Mevédnpos elrr@av pndcv avayxaotepov Tob cw-GecOat AovKovArXov amewoato Tov avOpwirov dpporépas tais yepoiv. o bé deicas imeEnOe Tov Yapaxos, Kal AaBwv Tov immov dmnracev eis TO McOpiSdrou otpatomedov ampaxtos. otTwsS dpa xal Tois mpayywacw 0 Kalpos WamTep Tots pappdxots Kal thy awlovoay Kal THY avaipovoay pomny mpootiOnow.

XVII. 'Ex rovrov Swpvatios pev emt cirov xoptdny érréuhOn pera Séxa orreipav' Kal xaTa-SiwyOels bd Mevdvdpou, Trav MiOpiddrov otpa-THYyav évds, avTéoTn Kal cupBarwv ovo éerroinae qoAvwv Kal TpoTny THY TrodEniov. aves dé rrEeph-Gévros '"Adpiavod peta Svvdpews, Bras ex Teptov-alas éywou of otpati@tas citov, od meptetde Me-Optdatns, AAW amréoteire Mevépayov cal Mipova TOANOY pev iTTTéwV, TONA@Y Oé TEeCaV HYOUMEVOUS. OUTOL TavTEs, WS AéyeTal, TANY SvEly KaTEKOTN-gav bro tov 'Popaiwv. Kxal MiOpidatns peév éxpumTtTe THY TUuhopay ws ov Toca'THY ovcar, GAA juKpdyv, TMpOTKEKpOUKOTwWY aTreipia TOV oTparnyay, "Adptavos S€ Napspos TwapnpciBero TO oTpatoTredoy TodAds KuTaywv audtas aitou kal Aadipwv yeuovoas, wate Suvcbupiay pev

avtT@, Tapaxny dé xal poBov dpi}yavov éumecety Tois aTpatiatalis. édé60xTo ey ovy pnKéTt péverv: érrel Sé apockéteutrov of BaotdKol ta opérepa ypnpata Kal’ yovyiav, tovs § dddous 520
50:

his long watching and many hardships. Olthacus did not retire at the bidding of Menedemus, but declared that even in spite of him he would go in, since he wished to confer with the general on urgent business of great importance. Then Menedemus got angry, declared that nothing was more urgent than the preservation of Lucullus, and pushed the man away with both hands. Then Olthacus, in fear, left the camp, took horse, and rode off to the camp of Mithridates, without effecting his purpose. So true is it that in active life, as well as in sickness, it is the critical moment which gives the scales their saving or their fatal inclination.

XVII. After this, Sornatius was sent with ten cohorts to get supplies of grain. Being pursued by Menander, one of the generals of Mithridates, he faced about, joined battle, and routed the enemy with great slaughter. And again, when Adrian was sent out with a force to procure an abundance of grain for the soldiers, Mithridates did not look on idly, but dispatched Menemachus and Myron, at the head of a large body of cavalry and footmen., All these, it is said, except two, were cut to pieces by the Romans. Mithridates tried to conceal the ex- tent of the disaster, pretending that it was a slight matter, and due to the inexperience of his generals. But when Adrian marched pompously past his camp, convoying many waggons laden with grain and booty, a great despair fell upon the king, and confusion and helpless fear upon his soldiers. They decided, there- fore, to remain where they were no longer. But when the king’s servants tried to send away their own baggage first, and to hinder the rest from going, the soldiers at once got angry, pushed and forced

521

éx@Avov, 76n Kal mpos dpyny él tas éEodous oOovpevor kal Bralopevor TA ev YpnpaTa hpTra-Cov, avtovs 8¢ amécdhattov. Sirov Kal Aopiraos Oo aTpatnyos ovdey Erepoy Exar } THY Toppvpav
mept avtov ama@neto bia Tavtnv, ‘Eppaios Sé o Ourns KaterratnOn wept Tas TUAas.
Avros 8 o MiOpiddrns, obte orradod twos
ote immokouov wapapeivavros avt@, auveké-weocevy amd Tov oTparowédou Tois TrOANOIS avapeptyuévos, OVS tmmourtav BaciduKey evTropy-gas, AXN oé rrov xatidwy avdtov év TH pevparte THs Ttpomtns éxeiyns Stadhepopevov LItoXcpatos

o evvotyos tarmov éywy autos anenndnoe Kal mapéoxyev. dn yap avrov ot ‘Pwpyaton xatetyov érixe(pevot’ Kal Taye. pev ovK atreditrovTo ToD ANaBeiv avtov, GX’ ArAOoy Eyytota TovTOU, dtdo-maroutia dé Kal puxporoyia oTpatiwtiKn TO ToAXols ayaot Kal peyarots Kevdvvors SuwKxopevov
éx paxpovd OApapa “Pwpaiovs ddeireto xal AovcovArov amertépnoe vixovTa Tov emdbrXowv.
hv pev yap év éduxt@ tis Si@Fews o varexpépwv Tov avdpa ‘ros, nutovov dé TaVv TO xXpucior xoutlovrwy petatv tod Bactdéws lr arro TavTo-patov Tapeorecovtos, eite TOU Bactréws érri-Tndes éuBadrovros avTov eis Tods SiwKovrtas, dpravovres kal cuddéyovtes TO Ypucioy Kal Siapayopevor pos GAAyAOUS KaOvaTEpNCaY. Kai ov TOUTO povoy avTaV aTréXavaE THS TWAEovEeFLAS AovKcovaAros, adda Kal tov él Tay aToppHTav tod Bacitéws dvta Kaddiotpatov o peéev aye
éxéXevoev, of & adyovtes aicOopevor tevtaxocious 522

he,

LUCULLUS

their way to the exits of the camp, and there plundered the. baggage and slew the men in charge of it.. There it was that Dorylaiis, the general, with nothing else about him but his purple robe, lost his life for that, and Hermaeus, the priest, was trampled to death at the gates.

Mithridates himself, with no attendant or groom to assist him, fled away from the camp in the midst of the throng, not even provided with one of the royal horses ; but at last the eunuch Ptolemaeus, who was mounted, spied him as he was borne along in the torrent of the rout, leaped down from his horse, and gave it to the king. Presently the Romans, who were forcing the pursuit, were hard upon him, and it was for no lack of speed that they did not take him. Indeed, they were very near doing so, but greed, and petty soldier's avarice, snatched from them the quarry which they had so long pursued in many struggles and great dangers, and robbed Lucullus of the victor’s prize. For the horse which carried the king was just within reach of his pursuers, when one of the mules which carried the royal gold came between him and them, either of his own accord, or because the king purposely sent him into the path of pursuit. The soldiers fell to plundering and collecting the gold, fought with one another over it, and so were left behind in the chase. Nor was this the only fruit of their greed which Lucullus reaped. He had given orders that Callistratus, who was in charge of the king’s private papers, should be brought alive to him, but his conductors, finding that he had five hundred pieces of gold in his girdle, slew him.

Ypucobs UTEelwopévoy amréxTewayv. ov pny adda TouTos pev errétpevre TOV YapaKka TropOfjoat.
XVIII. Ta 8¢ KdBetpa rAaBov nal tdv dd\rwv ppoupiwy Ta wreloTa Onoavpous Te peydXous epee Kat Seopmrnpia, ToAdK@y pev "EAXHVOY, TOANOY 5é auyyevav tod Bacrréws xaberpypévov, ols madat téOvavar Soxotow ov awrnplav, adr avaBiwow ai Sevrépav riva yévvnow % Aoveovn-dou yYdpls trapéoyev. édrw Sé xal dderh7 Tod McOpisarou Niooa owtnpioy ddwow: ai § aro-TaTw Tov Kwdvyou Kal Kal” Hovytav arroKetcBat Soxotcat rept Papvdxeav aderApal wal yuvaixes oixtp@s amwXovto, MiOpiddtov wéuwavtos én’ abras é« tis duyis Baxxidny ebvodyov. Foav dé peta TroAA@y aderddai te S00 Tod Ractréws, ‘Pwkdvn xal Yrarepa, wep! recoapdxovta ery mwapOevevopevat, Kal yapetal Svo, yévos Twvides, Bepevien péev éx Xtov, Movipn dé Mernaia.

, e A 4 9 a @ @
TAUTNS O WrEloTOS HY Noyos ev Tois” EAAHawDy, OTe
Tov Baciréws TreipavTos avTHy Kal puptious trev-TAKLOXLALOUS Ypvaods Tpodréuapavros avrécyxe,

4 Aa 4 > 7 * A 4
MEXpt OD yauwv éyévorTo ouv0nxat kal Siddnua
méurpas avth Baciitocay avnyopevoev. adrn xal jwapa Tov adrV Ypovoy aviap@s elye Kal arre-Opnvet thy tod awpatos ede tws ws Seororny
A 9 > 9 \ > A \ \ , 9
pev avt avdpos auth, ppovpav oé BapBapov avrt
yauov Kal olxov mpokevncacav, toppw Sé mov THs EAddS0s5 arrexicpévyn Tols éAmtaOeiow aya-Gots dvap cuvertt, tov 8 adrdnOwov exeivwy aMéa TEPNTAL,
524

“i

503

LUCULLUS

However, Lucullus allowed such soldiers as these to plunder the enemy's camp.
XVIII. In capturing Cabira and most of the other strongholds, he found great treasures, and many prisons, in which many Greeks and many kinsfolk of the king were confined. As they had long been given up for dead, it was not so much a rescue as it was a resurrection and a sort of second birth, for which they were indebted to the favour of Lucullus. Nyssa, a sister of Mithridates, was also © captured ; and her capture was her salvation. But the sisters and wives of the king who were thought to be at farthest remove from danger and quietly hidden away in Pharnacia, perished pitifully, since Mithridates paused long enough in his flight to send Bacchides, a eunuch, to compass their death. Among many other women, there were two sisters of the king, Roxana and Statira, about forty years old and unmarried ; and two of his wives, of Ionian families, Berenicé from Chios, and Monimé, a Milesian. The latter was most talked of among the Greeks, to the effect that though the king tempted her virtue and sent her fifteen thousand pieces of gold, she resisted his advances, until he entered into a marriage contract with her, sent her a diadem, and greeted her with the title of Queen. But her marriage had been an unhappy one, and she bewailed that beauty which had procured her a master instead of a husband, and a guard of Barbarians instead of home and family, dwelling as she did far, far away from Greece, where the blessings for which she had hoped existed only in her dreams, while she was bereft of the real blessings to which she had been wonted.
525 *

o

4

Kat 8) rod Baxyidov mapayevopévov ral
mpoordgavtos avtais amroOvycKev, ws éexdorTn Soxoin paotov elvas xal advToratov, Teptatragaca THs Keharys TO Siddnua TO TpaxnrA® mepipe kal avnptncey éavtTny. taxv § amroppayévtos “"O xarnpapévoy,” edn, “ paxos, ovdé Wpos TOUTO pot ypynotywov ~on;” KadKElvo ev anéppipe mpoomrvcaca, te 6& Baxyidn rhv opayny tmapécyev. 7 5é Bepevirn xvdxa papudxov ANaBovca, THs pnTpos avTH Trapovans Kal Seopévns, petédwxe. xal ouvetémov pev dudo-Tépat, npKkeoe O€ TOU hapudxou Svuvayty ets TO ao Gevérrepov capa, THY 5¢ Bepevixny ovxy scov &dec mriodcay ov« amrnrdakev, adr bua bavarovca
Tov Baxyisov amevoovtTos atremviyn. Déyeras Se Kal tov aydpwy dder\paov éexelvwv thy pev érra-pwuévny modra Kal roidopodcav exmeiy To ddppaxov, tiv d€ Yrarecpav obre Svodnpov tt PbeyEapévnv ov7 ayevvés, ANN errawvovcay Tov
adergov, Ste mepl Tov cw@patos xivduvevov ove NHEANTEV AVTAY, GAXA Tpovvonaev eXevOépas Kal
avuBpiorous amobavety. tadta pev ov dice Xpnorov dvta Kal gdirdvOpwirrov jria tov AovxouNNov.
XIX. ’Eddoas 8 dypt Taravpuv, bev ipépa TEeTapTN ™ pOTEpop épOaxer McOpidarns eis ’Appeviav mpos Trypavny tepevyws, atrorpémetat.
Kataotpewdpevos d¢ Xarédaiouvs xal TiBapnvors xal thy pixpav Appeviay traparaBov Kai ppov-pia xal TodEs TapacTnodpevos, “Arriiov pev Gree pos Tuypavny éEarrav McOpidarny, abros
28 we mpos 'Apsodv re rrodsopxoupévynv. aitios

~

And now Bacchides came and ordered them all to die, in whatever manner each might deem easiest and most painless. Monimé snatched the diadem

from her head, fastened it round her neck, and hanged herself. But her halter quickly broke in two. “O cursed bauble,” she cried, “ couldst thou not serve me even in this office?” Then she spat upon it, hurled it from her, and offered her throat to Bacchides. But Berenicé, taking a cup of poison, shared it with her mother, who stood at her side and begged for some. Together they drank it off, and the force of the poison sufficed for the weaker body, but it did not carry off Berenicé, who had not drunk enough. As she was long in dying, and Bacchides was in a hurry, she was strangled. It is said also that of the unmarried sisters, one drank off her poison with many abusive imprecations on her brother ; but that Statira did so without uttering a single reproachful or ungenerous word. She rather commended her brother because, when his own life was at hazard, he had not neglected them, but had taken measures to have them die in freedom and under no insults. Of course these things gave pain to Lucullus, who was naturally of a gentle and humane disposition.

XIX. Lucullus pushed on in pursuit as far as Talaura, whence, four days before, Mithridates had succeeded in escaping to Tigranes, in Armenia ; then he turned aside. After subduing the Chaldaeans _and the Tibareni, he occupied Lesser Armenia, reducing its fortresses and cities, and then sent Appius to Tigranes with a demand for Mithridates. He himself, however, came to Amisus, which was still holding out against the siege. Its success in

> 4 , e \ ? ,
5S hv Kadndipaxos 0 otpatnyos cpmerpia. pnxyavefo) A 4
KS jTapacKkeuns Kal Sewdtnte tavoupyias, donv
f , a , e ,
moNlopKia SéxeTal, TAELTTA AUTTHGAS Pawpatous:
av vaTtepov éowxe Sixnyv. Tote 8 bre AovKovrAXOV
, e 4? ww 3 4 “~
xataotparnynbeis, up iv Eos elyev wpav THs npepas amrdyew Kal dvaravey Tovs oTpaTiwTas, 3 ? 4 , > 4 4
év éxeivyn poaBarovros aidvidias Kal Katacxov-TOS OU TOAV pépos TOV TElYoUS, avTOS éxNLTTOY

THY TodkWw Udy ev, elite POovdv awpernOjvar
e 4 v e , A e aA o
Pwpatos, ete pactavny huyis eavtT@ pnxava-
/ A U
3 pevos. ouvdels yap éeppovTele TeV éxdeovTwr,
GANA ws h PACE avabpapodaa trond TA Teiyn
MWEplegXEV, OL PeV OTPATLATAL TrapecKevdlorvTo
mpos aprrayny, o 6é AovKovAXos olxtetpwy atrod-Aupevnv THY Tod eEEwOev éBonOer pds TO Tp kal oBevvivat Twapexdre, pndevos avt@ mpocé-
9- > 3 , a / \
YovTOS, GAN éeEartoupévwy TA YpnuaTa Kal peTa
Bons drrra Kpovovtwr, Ews exBracbels érérpewer, @S avuTHy ye THY TOL EEaLpNadpEvos TOU Tupds.
e \ > 4 ¥ 4 \ 9
4 ot S€ Tovvaytiov érpakav. mavta yap é&epeuvavtes UT AapTddwy Kal mavtayod das émt-dépovtes avtol Ta TAEioTA THY OiKnudTeV Kabei-Lov, wate Tov AovKovAXoY eciceNOovTa pel” Huée-\ V4 \ \ f. > a e
pav kat daxpvoavta mpos Tovs dPidous eitretvy, ws 504A TokvdKls On BAAav pakapicas pddota TH
onMEpOV Hepa THY Tavdpos EvTUXiay Davyaceter, 5 6Tt c@aat BovrAnGeis edurvHAOn Tas ‘"AOnvas. “Eye
528
LUCULLUS

this was due to Callimachus, its commander, who, by his acquaintance with mechanical contrivances and his power to employ every resource which the siege of a city demands, had given the Romans the greatest annoyance. For this he afterwards paid the penalty. But at this time, he was simply out- generalled by Lucullus, who made a sudden attack at just that time of day when Callimachus was accustomed to draw his soldiers off from the ramparts and give them a rest. When the Romans had got possession of a small part of the wall, Callimachus abandoned the city, first setting fire to it with his own hands, either because he begrudged the visitors their booty, or because his own escape was thus facilitated. For no one paid any attention to those who were sailing away, but when the flames increased mightily and enveloped the walls, the soldiers made ready to plunder the houses. Lucullus, out of pity for the perishing city, tried to bring aid from out- side against the fire, and gave orders to extinguish the flames, but no one paid any heed to his commands. The soldiers all clamoured for the booty, and shouted, and clashed their shields and spears together, until he was forced to let them have their way, hoping that he could at least save the city itself from the flames. But the soldiers did just the opposite. Ransacking everything by torch-light and carrying lights about everywhere, they destroyed most of the houses themselves. When Lucullus entered the city at daybreak, he burst into tears, and said to his friends that he had often already deemed Sulla happy, and on that day more than ever he admired the man’s good fortune, in that when he wished to save Athens, he had the power to do so. “ But upon

8,” ébn, “tovrov Cnrwrny yevopevoy ets THY Mopptou Sckav 6 Saipwv mrepréatycev.” Od pny add’ ée Tov Tapéyvtwy avarapBave érretpato THY TOMY. Kal TO pév TIP SuBpor KaTéaBecav &« tuwos Oeias TUYNS Tepit THY ArXwou avTny cupmecortes, Ta 5é TELTTA TOV aTTOAW-AOTwY avTos Ere Trapo@v dv@Kxobdopunoe, Kal Tous devyovtas ’Amonvav édé€ato, Kal TaY adNwv ‘EAAnVaY KaTa@Kice Tos Bovropévous, elxoot Kal éxaTov cTadiwy Ywpav tpocopicas. Hv & H ToAs
"AOnvaiwyr *atroixos, év éxeivors apa Tois Katpois, év ols Hxpaley 7 Suvayis adtav Kal Kartetye THY Garaccap, oixicGeioa. val dtd TovTO TrOAXOL TOV Thv “Aptotiwvos tupavvlda Bovropévory hevryery eloTAEVaAVTES AUTOD KaT@KOUY Kal peETElLYoY TIS momTelas, ols cuvé8yn TA olKela Kaxa hevyovowy aTrokavaal THY ANNOTPLWY. AANA TOUS ye TwOEvtas aut@av o AovKovrAdrgos dyhtéoas Karas Kal Staxocias éxdotm Spaxpudas émidovs atréoretne.
Tote kal Tupavviav o ypappatixos éddw: Movpnvas 8 avtav éEntncato cal AaBwv damnrevOé-pwcev, avedevOépws TH Swped ypnodpevos. ov yap n&iov AovxovAXos dvépa S10 Tradetav éatrov-Sacpévov Sodrov yevéoOar mporepor, elt’ aredev-Oepov. adaipesis yap Rv ths bTapyovans } THS Soxovons édevOepias Sdaus. GAXa Movpyvas peév oux évtad0a povov wpOn Torv Ths TOU oTpaTn-you KaXoxayabias atrodéwv,
°

me,” he said, “who have been so eager to imitate his example, Heaven has devolved the reputation of Mummius.”’
However,. as far as circumstances allowed, he en- deavoured to restore the city. The fire, indeed, had been quenched by showers which fell providentially just as the city was captured, and most of what the soldiers had destroyed he rebuilt himself before his departure. He also received into the city those of the Amisenes who had fled, and settled there any other Greeks who so desired, and added to the city’s domain a tract of a hundred and twenty stadia. The city was a colony of Athens, founded in that period when her power was at its height and she controlled the sea. And this was the reason why many who wished to escape the tyranny of Aristion! at Athens sailed to Amisus, settled there, and became citizens. In flying from evils at home, they got the benefit of greater evils abroad. But those of. them who survived were well clothed by Lucullus, and sent back home, with a present of two hundred drachmas apiece. Tyrannio the grammarian was also taken prisoner at this time. Murena asked to have him as his own prize, and on getting him, formally gave him his liberty, therein making an illiberal use of the gift which he had received. For Lucullus did not think it meet that a man so esteemed for his learning should first become a slavé, and then be set at liberty. To give him a nominal liberty was to rob him of the liberty to which he was born. But this was not the only case in which Murena was found to be far inferior to his commander in nobility of conduct.

1 Tyrant of Athens when the city was besieged by Sulla,
87 B.C.
53!

-PLUTARCH'S LIVES .

XX. AoveovrAros Sé rpéretar mpos Tas év
"Acla Tronres, OT WS, TOV TOAELLKOY Epyov ayoAGd-Covtos autTov, Kat dinns TiWOs peTacyn Kat Odeo pav, av eri Toduy Ypovov evden THY érapyiav ovoav appnto Kal amiotot duatuyiat Katetyov, UTO TOV TEAWYOY Kal TOV SavecaTtav TopOoupéevnv
kat avdpatrodiCopévyy, mumpdoKey idia peév viovs eUmpetrets Ouyatépas te mapOévous, Snuosia &
avab pata, ypadas, tepous avdpidvras avayKa-Copéeveny. avtois 6é Téhos pev i mpoabérors yevopévors Sovrevew, ta 6é po TOUTOU Yare-TOTEpA, oVoLwwLs pol kal Kuyerdes cal immo. Kar ordo els DratOpot, KavMaTos pev éy pie, puxous 8 eis mnrov éuBiBalopévov 4 Jmayov, OOTE THY SouXelav cevrdyDevav Soxely elvat Kal elpyyny.
TOLAUTA per KaKa Aovcovdros evpwv év tals TorEeTLv OAlY@ YpoV@ WdvTwV amnrdXrAak~eE TovS adixoupévous.
Iparov pep yap éxatoorny éxédXevoe Kal pr)
TAEOV Els TOUS TOKOUS Doyiker au: devTEpov dé
TOUS aK poTepous Tou dpxatou TOKOUS amréxowe:
To 5é TpiTov Kal peyLaTon, érafe TOV TOU \pEewhetdéTou Toa oScov THD TeTaptny poepioa Kap-Tova Oat TOV davera Thy") be TOKOV Keparaicp guvarpas ea TEPNTO TOD TAVT OS" Bor' ép éeAXATTOVE
Xpove TeTpaeTias SiarvOfvar Ta Xpéa Travta Kat Tas KTNOELS éXevbépas amrobo0hvat Tois Seomorats.
qv dé TodTo KOLvov Savetov éx Tav Svc puplor taravtov, ols tHv "Aciay é&ypiwoev 6 was:

Kal Surrobyv amredoOn Ttois Saveicacw, br éxelvov 532

LUCULLUS :

XX. Lucullus now turned his attention to the cities in Asia,! in order that, while he was at leisure from military enterprises, he might do something for the furtherance of justice and law. Through long lack of these, unspeakable and incredible misfor- tunes were rife in the province. Its people were plun- dered and reduced to slavery by the tax-gatherers and money-lenders. Families were forced to sell their comely sons and virgin daughters, and cities their votive offerings, pictures, and sacred statues. At last men had to surrender to their creditors and ~ serve them as slaves, but what preceded this was far worse,—tortures of rope, barrier, and horse ; standing under the open sky in the blazing sun of summer, and in winter, being thrust into mud or ice. Slavery seemed, by comparison, to be disburdenment and peace. Such were the evils which Lucullus found in the cities, and in a short time he freed the oppressed from all of them.

In the first place, he ordered that the monthly rate of interest should be reckoned at one per cent., and no more; in the second place, he cut off all interest that exceeded the principal; third, and most important of all, he ordained that the lender should receive not more than the fourth part of his debtor’s income, and any lender who added interest to principal was deprived of the whole. Thus, in less than four years’ time, the debts were all paid, and the properties restored to their owners unen- cumbered. This public debt had its origin in the twenty thousand talents which Sulla had laid upon Asia as a contribution, and twice this amount had been paid back to the money-lenders. Yet now, by

1 71-70 B.c.

e

3

- PLUTARCH’S LIVES

avnypévov 5n Tols ToKois eis Sodexa pupiddas TANaVTOD. éxetvot pev ovv ws Sea mem ovd ores év ‘Poyn TOU AovKovdXov cateBown, xkat xpn-paw aviotacay €m avuTov évious TOY Snpayayav, peya Suvapevor kal TONOUS UTroXpEws meTOUNpévor TOV TONLTEVOMEVOD. o 6€ Aovoudros ov povov baé TOV Ev merrovOoT@y nyanato Snpeov, add\Aa Kal Tats addaus erapxiars modeives 7; mY, eddarpovilovcats TOUS NyE“wovos ToOLOvTOUV TU-yovTas.
XXI. "Ammuos d€ KAwé.os, O mepupbels pos Teypavny (nv 5€ 0 KrAadcos adedpos THiS TOTE AovxovAXr. cvvoiKovens) TparTov pev UTo TOV Baciixay odnyav KUKNOV Tia Kal TepiBoArny

éxovo av ovK dvaryKkatay Kab ToT} MEpOV odov bua
THIS avw Ywpas aryOpevos, pnvicavros auT@ THY evOetay oOov amrehevBépou Zupou 70 yévos, éx-TPETETAL THs paxpas exeivns Kat copiatixhs, éppaabar ppacas TONNE Tots BapBapas & ayoryois, Kal bu TLE pay Odvyov TOV Evdparny Tepacas
els “Avtioxetay nKE THY emt Aadyns. ETELTA Teypavny avrov Kedeva Beis TEpLLevely (amrqy yap évias étt Tov év Powixy TONEWY KaTaaTpepo-pevos), Todos pev @OKELWTATO TOV vrovhws dK pow pera TOU "Appeviov Suvactav, wv els Fv Kab ZLapRinvos 0 THis Topdunvijs Bacrrevs, qodnais Se pupa TOV Sedovdwpevev mOdewv Siar epropevass 1 pos aurov wrécyeto thy AovkovAdrov Bonfeav, évy TO TapovTe Kedevoas navy ate.
"Hy yap ovK dvacyetos 7 Tov Appeviov dpyr

534 ™

505

LUCULLUS

e reckoning usurious interest, they had brought the total debt up to a hundred and twenty thousand talents. These men, accordingly, considered themselves outraged, and raised a clamour against Lucullus at Rome. They also bribed some of the tribunes to proceed against him, being men of great influence, who had got many of the active politicians into their debt. Lucullus, however, was not only beloved by the peoples whom he had benefited, nay, other provinces also longed to have him set over them, and felicitated those whose good fortune it was to have such a governor. |
XXI. Appius Clodius, who had been sent to Ti-granes (Clodius was a brother of her who was then the wife of Lucullus), was at first conducted by the royal guides through the upper country by a route needlessly circuitous and long. But when a freedman of his, who was a Syrian, told him of the direct route, he left the long one which was being trickily imposed upon him, bade his Barbarian guides a long farewell, and within a few days crossed the Euphrates and came to Antioch by Daphne.! Then, being ordered to await Tigranes there (the king was still engaged in subduing some cities of Phoenicia), he gained over many of the princes who paid but a hollow obedience to the Armenian. One of these was Zarbienus, king of Gordyene. He also promised many of the enslaved cities, when they sent to confer with him secretly, the assistance of Lucullus, although for the present he bade them keep quiet.

Now the sway of the Armenians was intolerably

1 The great Antioch on the river Orontes. Daphne was the name of a grove near the city consecrated to Apollo.

at

Tous Edanow, GNA xareTry Kal pddara TOD » Bacrrews avTov TO ppovnpa T parytKov Kal Umép-oyKov év Tais peydhaes evTUxiass éryeyovet, TavTov, 6 boa tnrovatv ot Todnol Kal Javpdtovow, ov povov 6vTwY Tepl avToV, AAA wat bv QuTOoV yeyovevar doKoUVTMY. dp&dpevos yap aro pLKpas Kat KaTagppovoupéerns édmbos éOvn TOANA KATEaTpeparo, Kal THY Tdp0ov, QS ddXos ovoeis, Sivapu éTAaTELVWOoED, 'Ever Ys THY MegoqoTtapiay EVETTANCE, ToXXous pev é€x Kuersxlas, qTOANOUS o é€x Kamradoxias avactaatous KaTOL-xitov. éxivnoe 8 && nOay cal "ApaBas TOUS Lenviras peTayayov Kai mAnotov (dpvcas, O71rws XPBTO bv éxeivov tails éurropiats. Bacireis dé Toot yey hoa ol Oeparrevovtes aurov, TéeT TAPES
dé, ods ael mepl avrov elyev Gomrep oT ad0US
v) Sopupopous, immoTn bev éNavvovtt melous mapaGéovras év XeT@via rows, KcaOnpevp dé Kal xenpativovre TEPLETTATAS emndraypevars 80 adAH ov Tats XEpaty, Omrep édoxet waddtoTa TOV TX NPAT OV eFoporoynacs elvat Sovdelas, olov a a7rooneveoy THY édevOepiav Kal TO oO pa T@ Kupi—p TAPEXOVTOY madeiv € ETOLULOTEPOV n Tovar.
Taurny pevTor THY Tparypoiav ovxX UroTpecas

ovo cx aryels o "Amos, ws éTUXE AOYOU 7 pa-TOV, avTiK pus fev épn M.6p Sa amagov opetropevoy Tots AovkovAaAov OpuapBors 7 h KaTay-yeXov Teypavn TONELOD, dare TO Teypaynv, Kaitep év Siaxvaet TOU Tpoo@rrov Kal pecdudpare
TET AAT LEV" TELp@LEVOY aKovery TOV Royor, wn rAaGetv TOUS TapovTas HANOLWLEVOY TH mappnoig TOU veavioxov, Pwvns ayedov érxevbépas a aKovovta 536 ian.
Lar

grievous to the Greeks. Above all else, the spirit of the king himself had become pompous and haughty in the midst of his great prosperity. All the things which most men covet and admire, he not only had in his possession, but actually thought that they existed for his sake. For though he had started on his career with small and insignificant expectations, he had subdued many nations, humbled the Parthian power as no man before him had done, and filled Mesopotamia with Greeks whom he removed in great numbers from Cilicia and from Cappadocia, and ' settled anew. He also removed from their wonted haunts the nomadic Arabians, and brought them to an adjacent settlement, that he might employ them in trade and commerce. Many were the kings who waited upon him, and four, whom he always had about him like attendants or body-guards, would run on foot by their master's side when he rode out, clad in short blouses, and when he sat transacting busi- ness, would stand by with their arms crossed. This attitude was thought to be the plainest confession of servitude, as if they had sold their freedom and offered their persons to their master disposed for suffering rather than for service.

Appius, however, was not frightened or astonished at all this pomp and show, but as soon as he obtained an audience, told the king plainly that he was come to take back Mithridates, as an ornament due to the triumph of Lucullus, or else to declare war against Tigranes. Although Tigranes made every effort to listen to this speech with a cheerful countenance and a forced smile, he could not hide from the bystanders his discomfiture at the bold words of the young man. It must have been five and twenty dua mévte Kal eixocw érav tocaita yap éBaci-7 Nevoe, wadAXoV 5é VBpicev. arrexpivato pev ody

7® 'Anmip py mpojcecOat Mibpidatnv, Kat
'Pp / ") 70 A
Pwpatovs moAguov apyovtas apuvetOat. Aov-KovAAw &° dpyrlouevos, Ott Bacthéa povov avror, ov Baciréwv év TH emioToAnH Mpoanyopevoer, ovd autos dvTvypddwv avtoKpdtopa mpoceitrev.

évreprpe S¢ S@pa TO Ami Aaptrpd, Kal wn AaBor-TOs GNAa TrEiw TpoaeOnKev. €x TOUTwY oO” AmmrLOS
ovK eérwv Soxely ExOpa twi Siwbeicbar piddnv SeEdpevos pilav amémeue ta Aowrd, Kal Sia Tayéwy amndauve TPOS TOV avTOKpAToOpA.
XXII. Teypavns 5¢ MiOpidarny mporepov péev 9 \ 3 aA > gs > \ Cal >] A A ovde idety nEiwoev ode mTpoceLTrety oiKetov avdpa
4 b , 4 > > > JS
Bacireias exten TwMKOTA THALKAUTNS, GAX ATLULWS
Kat UTepnpaves arwtdtw wepieidey avtov Tpo-Tov Tiva ppoupovpevoy ev ywpiors éEXwdeot Kal
a / \ \ a A 4
vooepoiss tote 5é adv Tin Kal diroppocvvy
2 petevéurpato avutTov eis ta Bacideva. Kal 87 ‘NOyov yevouévwv atoppntwv Tas mpos aAANXOUS 506
’ ; e , ? a A inv 3
EOepdmrevov vrrowias él Kkax@ Tov irr, Ets
éxeivous Tas aitias TpéTovTes. Ov HY Kal Mntpodwpos o LKnos, dvnp eimety od andys
N VA b A \ , 4 4
Kat TroAupabns, axun S€ pirias TocavTn ypnad-Mevos, MOTE TATIP TpocayopeverOat Tov Bact-
3 Adws. TovToV, ws Eotxev, o Tiypavns treupbevta
\ e \ “a 4 \ > A mpeaRevtny vd tov Mudpiddtov mpos avtov 538
~
LUCULLUS

years since he had listened to a free speech. That was the length of his reign, or rather, of his wanton tyranny. However, he replied to Appius that he would not surrender Mithridates, and that if the Romans began war, he would defend himself. He was vexed with Lucullus for addressing him in his letter with the title of King only, and not King of Kings, and accordingly, in his reply, would not address Lucullus as Imperator. But he sent splendid gifts to Appius, and when he would not take them, added more besides. Appius finally accepted a single bowl from among them, not wishing his rejection of the king’s offers to seem prompted by any personal enmity, but sent back the rest, and marched off with all speed to join the Imperator.

XXII. Up to this time Tigranes had not deigned to see Mithridates, nor speak to him, though the man was allied to him by marriage, and had been expelled from such a great kingdom. Instead, he had kept him at the farthest remove possible, in disgrace and contumely, and had suffered him to be held a sort of prisoner in marshy and sickly regions. Now, however, he summoned him to his palace with marks of esteem and friendship. There, in secret conference, they strove to allay their mutual suspicions at the expense of their friends, by laying the blame upon them. One of these was Metrodorus of Scepsis, a man of agreeable speech and wide learning, who enjoyed the friendship of Mithridates in such a high degree that he was called the king's father. This man, as it seems, had once been sent as an ambassador from Mithridates to Tigranes, with a request for aid against the Romans. On this

Seouevou BonOeiv émt 'Papaious jpeto: "Xv Ss aibtos, @ Mntpddwpe, ti wor rept tovTwv Trapatveis;" Kxakeivos elte mpos TO Tuypdvov cupépov elte MiOpidatny cwlecBar pr BovdAopevos, ws ev mpea Bevtns épn xerevew, ws 5é cvpBovros atrayopevev. tat éEnveyxev o Tiypdyys tO Me-Opidatn Kal Kxateimev ws ovdév épyacopévm Tov Mntpodwpov avnxectov. o & evOds aynpnto Kat peravota Tov Trypavnv eiyer, od TravTéed@s bvTa
T® Mntpodape ths cuppopas aitcov, ddrAa powny
Tia T@ Tpos avTov ExGe Tod MiOpiddtov tmpoc-
. Oévra, wdras yap brovAas elye pos Tov avdpa, Kal Tour épwpdOn TaV aToppHTwy avTod ypap-pdtov arovrwv, év ols qv nab Mytpodwpov amovécOat Svatetaypévov. Oarrev ovv o Teypavns Aapmpas TO THpa, pndemtas TroAvTEAELAS
eto dpevos eis vexpov bv Cavra mpovdwxev.
"EreXevtnce 8 rapa te Tuypdvyn nal 'Apde-Kpatns o pytap, e Set cal TovTov pynpny Tiva yevéoOar Sua tas' AOnvas. RéyeTat yap puyety bev avtov eis Lerevxccav tHv él Tiypids, deopé-vov © avrobs cogictevew imepidety xataralovevodpevov, WS ovde AExdvn Serpiva ywpoin, peractavra &é mpos KXeoratpay thy MiOpidarov Ouyatépa, Tuypavyn $€ cuvoixotcay év b:aBor7 yevéoOa taxyv, kal THs mpos Tods "EAAnvas éripuEias eipyomwevovy atroxaptepjoat: Ttadyjvas
dé xal rodTov évtipws vo THS KyXeotrdtpas Kat occasion Tigranes asked him: “But what is your own advice to me, Metrodorus, in this matter?” Whereupon Metrodorus, either with an eye to the interests of Tigranes, or because he did not wish Mithridates to be saved, said that as an ambassador he urged consent, but as an adviser he forbade it. Tigranes disclosed this to Mithridates, not supposing, when he told him, that he would punish Metrodorus past all healing. But Metrodorus was at once put out of the way. Then Tigranes repented of what he had done, although he was not entirely to blame for the death of Metrodorus. He merely gave an impulse, as it were, to the hatred which Mithridates already had for the man. For he had long been secretly hostile to him, as was seen from his private papers when they were captured, in which there were directions that Metrodorus, as well as others, be put to death. Accordingly, Tigranes gave the body of Metrodorus a splendid burial, sparing no expense upon the man when dead, although he had betrayed him when alive.

Amphicrates, the rhetorician, also lost his life at - the court of Tigranes, if, for the sake of Athens, we may make some mention of him too. It is said that when he was exiled from his native city, he went to Seleucia on the Tigris, and that when the citizens asked him to give lectures there, he treated their invitation with contempt, arrogantly remarking that a stewpan could not hold a dolphin. Removing thence, he attached himself to Cleopatra, the daughter of Mithridates and wife of Tigranes, but speedily fell into disfavour, and, being excluded from intercourse with Greeks, starved himself to death. . He also received honourable burial at the hands of KetoOar trept Lapuv, éxet Te Ywpiov ovTw Kudovpevov.

XXITI. Aoveovrros 66 rHv ’Aciav rodXis ev evvopias, TOAAHS & eipnyns éumeTANKWS OVdE TAY Mpos noovny Kal Ydpiy NwéANoEV, GAXa TOMTAIS Kal wavyyvpeow éemivnios Kal dyaow aOrXnToOv Kal povonaywv év ’Edéow xabnpevos onuayaryer Tas ToAes, al & apetBopevac AoveovrAdeEta TE HYyov emi Tin Tod avdpos, Kal THs Tihs jdvova Thv arnOwny edvoray adt@ trapeiyov. érret “Ammlos TE KE Kal ToNeunTéov pos Trypavny

épaiveto, waphrGev avis cis Lovrov, nab rovs oTpatTi@tas avaraBav érodsopxe: Yuwernv, par-Nov dé TOUS KaTEXOVTAS avtnv BactdtKovs Kiru-Kas, of ToANOUS pev avEeNOYTES TOV LYuvwTéwv, THY Sé wok éumpnoavtes dua vuntos Epvyov. aiaOo-peevos 8 0 AovxovAXos Kal rapedOev eis THY TOALD OxTaKiayALovs avTaY Tos éyxaTtarepbévTas amréxtewve, Tots 8 adrXols arédwKe TA oiKela Kal THS Worews errewednOn partota Sia THY ToLAvTHY du. doer TLVa KaTa Tos Brvovs eiTely Tapa-otdvra: “ TIpoedOe, Aoveovrre, pixpdy HKer yap Autoduxos évruyeiv aor Bovrcpevos.” éeFavactas dé tHv pev drypev ove elye cupBareiv eis 6 re Pépor, tiv 6€ modu etre KaT éxetyny THY jépav, cal
Tous éxmdéovtas TOV Kirixwv dtoxwv opad Tapa TOV Aiyladov avopiavTa Keipevov, dv éxxopmivovTes ot Kidtxes ove &fOnoav éuBarécbar- 7d 8 Epryov hv LOévidos THY KardOv. paler odv Tis, ws Ad-TOAVKOU TOD KTicaYTOS THY Ywvennv Oo avdpras etn.
542

er

LUCULLUS

Cleopatra, and his body lies at Sapha, as a place in’
those parts is called.
XXIII. Lucullus, after filling Asia full of law and order, and full of peace, did not neglect the things which minister to pleasure and win favour, but during his stay at Ephesus gratified the cities with pro- cessions and triumphal festivals and contests of athletes and gladiators. And the cities, in response, celebrated festivals which they called Lucullea, to do honour to the man, and bestowed upon him what is sweeter than honour, their genuine good-will. But when Appius came, and it was plain that war must be waged against Tigranes, he went back into ‘Pontus, put himself at the head of his soldiers, and laid siege to Sinopé, or rather, to the Cilicians who were occupying that city for the king. These slew many of the Sinopians, fired the city, and set out to fly by night. But Lucullus saw what was going on, made his way into the city, and slew eight thousand of the Cilicians who were still there. Then he restored to the citizens their private property, and ministered to the needs of the city, more especially on account of the following vision. He thought in his sleep that a form stood by his side and said: Go forward a little, Lucullus ; for Autolycus is come, and wishes to meet you.” On rising from sleep, he was unable to conjecture what the vision meant; but he took the city on that day, and as he pursued the Cilicians who were sailing away, he saw a statue lying on the beach, which the Cilicians had not succeeded in getting on board with them. It was the work of Sthenis, and one of his master- pieces. Well then, some one told Lucullus that it was the statue of Autolycus, the founder of Sinopé.

543

a

7

5

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Aéyeras 8 o AdvrorvKos yevécOat Tav ért Tas
"Apatovas é« @ertadrias “Hpaxret ovotparevcavrov, Anipdyou ais: éxeiOev 8 amromAéwv apa Anporéovte nat Proyio thy pev vadv atrodécat jTéepimecovcay THs Xeppovycov Kata To Kadov-pevov IInddrsov, avros 5 cwbeis peta Tov OTrAwY kal TOV éTalpwv pos THY Ywaemnv aderécbat TOUS YUpous THY Tod Lpolyap avTHY KaTELYoV amo Yvpov yeyovotes TOU AmoAAwvos, ws NEyETAL, Kal Lwenns THs Acwrridos.
Tadr’ dxovwv o AovcovAXos aveumipmviocKeto THS LvAXa taparvécews: Twaphver 56 dia TOV Yropvn-patov éxetvos pndév otws aktomiotov Hryeic Oat kat BéBatov, as 6 Te dv atroonuavOn dia Tav evuTTViOD. .
IluvOavopevos 6¢ MiOpiddtny te nal Tiypavnu
ets Auxaoviav cal Kidtxiay doov ovrw biaRiBda-Ce Suvapiv ws mpoTépovs éuBarodvras eis THv ‘Aciay, Oavpate Tov Appévior, ét wopny exo émbéa Pat ‘Popaios, axpwalovte pev ovK expire MiOpiddry pos Tov TOAEHOD, ove’ eppwpevors tois éxewvou 7 Tap avrov ouvir rev, atrorec Bar & édcas Kar curt piBivas viv em puxpais éXrriaty apyeTat Todéyou ToIs avacrivar Pe) duvapévors cuyxataBadnrwv éavTov.
XXIV. ’Enrevdy 5é cal Maydpns o 0 McOpidarou

mais Eywv TOV Boo-ropov rreprrev auto arepavoy aro Xpua dy Virion, dedpevos ‘Paopaiov avayeaphvat piros Kal oUMpAXOS, 78 olopevos Ta Tov TpoTépov trodéuouv mépas exe Lwpvdriov 544

507

Now Autolvcus is said to have been one of those who made an expedition with Heracles from Thessaly against the Amazons, a son of Deimachus. On his voyage of return, in company with Demoleon and Phlogius, he lost his ship, which was wrecked at the place called Pedalium, in the Chersonesus; but he himself escaped, with his arms and his companions, and coming to Sinopé, took the city away from the Syrians. These Syrians who were in possession of the city were descended, as it is said, from Syrus, the son of Apollo, and Sinopé, the daughter of Asopis.

On hearing this, Lucullus called to mind the advice of Sulla, in his Memoirs, which was to think nothing so trustworthy and sure as that which is signified by dreams. —

Being informed now that Mithridates and Tigranes " were on the point of entering Lycaonia and Cilicia, with the purpose of invading Asia before war was actually declared, he was amazed that the Armenian, if he cherished the design of attacking the Romans, had not made use of Mithridates for this war when he was at the zenith of his power, nor joined forces with him when he was strong, but had allowed him to be crushed and ruined, and now began a war which offered only faint hopes of success, prostrating himself to the level of those who were unable to stand erect.

AXIV. But when Machares also, the son of Mithridates, who held the Bosporus, sent Lucullus a crown valued at a thousand pieces of gold, beg- ging to be included in the list of Rome’s friends and allies, Lucullus decided at once that the first war was finished. He therefore left Sornatius there

545
a
VOL. II. N N

pev avurTov puhaxa TOV Tovrixcev améetre pea, 2 oTpatiwt@v éEaxvoxedtov, autos 5é pupious pev ayov Kat Stax tdious ° melous, immets dé Tpia xX idbeov éXaTTOusS, ert TOV Sevrepop é ex opel TONE HOV, opLA rive Sox@v TapaBor® Kal TwTHpLOV ovK exoven

oryto pov euBanreiv auTov els eOvn paxcpa, Kal pupiddas (mT oy TOANAS Kat ayavn X@pay, Babéce pep Torapois, ael dé KaTavipouevors épect
3 TEplexouerny, @OTE TOUS peY BTPATLWTAS Od arAws dvTas eUTAKTOUS dxovtas €mecOar Kar Cuyouayourtas, ev dé "'Papn KataBoay kal ba paptuper Ba Tous Snpaywyouvs, ws TONE MOV ex ToNéuou SiwKet AovKovrros ovoev TIS TONEWS deopévns, GXN' Umép Tov aTpatnya@y pndérote catabéa bas Ta éTha poe mavoacGat xpnparibo-4 pevos ATO TOV Kowv@v Kwduver. OUTOL Mev OvV éLeipydcavto xpovp Hv avTav brdbeciy: Aov-KOUANOS be cuvTOvas odevaas él TOV Evdparny, Kal KaTLOVTA jToXvv Kal Dodepov vm Xetpeovos
eipay, ijoxannev, @S oar puBiis aUT@ Kal mpary-pareias Ecomevns ouvayovte mropO nei Kal ™nyvUpevep oxedias. apEdpevov & ad' éomépas
Uroxwpeiv TO pedpa Kal [ELOULEVOV bia THS VUKTOS
Gp TpEPS xoidov Tapeayev OPOhra TOV ToTa pov.
5 ot & ériy@pioe vncidas ev TO Tope puxpas Siaga-veloas Geacdpevor Ka _ Tevayivovta Top poov ém' avTais, Wpocekupyouv Tov AovxoudXop, & WS oALyaKLS TOUTOU cupBeBnKoTos T poTepor, éxeivw 8 éxov-clos Xe ponOn Ka Tm pgov aurov évdidévr05 ToD Tmorawoo xal TapéxovTos ampdyyova Kal Tayxeiav tHhv didBacw.
546

LUCULLUS

as guardian of Pontus, with six thousand soldiers, while he himself, with twelve thousand footmen and less than three thousand horse, set out for the second war.| He seemed to be making a reckless attack,
and one which admitted of no saving calculation,
upon warlike nations, countless thousands of horse men, and a boundless region surrounded by deep rivers and mountains covered with perpetual snow. His soldiers, therefore, who were none too well disciplined
in any case, followed him reluctantly and rebelliously, while the popular tribunes at Rome raised an outcry against him, and accused him of seeking one war after another, although the city had no need of them, that he might be in perpetual command and never lay down his arms or cease enriching himself from the public dangers. And, in time, these men accomplished their purpose. But: Lucullus advanced by forced marches to the Euphrates. Here he found the stream swollen and turbid from the winter storms, and was vexed to think of the delay and trouble which it would cost him to collect boats and build rafts. But at evening the stream began to subside, went on diminishing through the night, and at day-break the river was running between lofty banks. The natives, observing that sundry small islands in the channel had become visible, and that the current near them was quiet, made obeisance to Lucullus, saying that this had seldom happened before, and that the river had voluntarily made itself tame and gentle for Lucullus, and offered him an easy and speedy passage.

* 69 B.C.

Xpnodpevos ody 7H xaip@ SeBiBale thy oTpatiay’ nal yiverat onpetov avT@ YpnaToy aya 7H SiaBace. Boes tepal véuovtar epaias 'Apré-pisos, iv udrtorra Oe@y of répay Kidputou Bap-Bapot tipaoe ypavra. &€ tais Bovaoi mpos Ouciay povov, addrAws S88 wrAdLovTaL Kata THY Yapav adetor, yapdypata pépovoar THs Oeov Aaprdsa, kal AaBelv €F avrov, dtav denOaory, ov wavu pabioy éotiv ovdé pixpas TpayyaTtecas. TovTwy pia, TOU oTpaTov S:aBavtos tov Evdpa-Tnv, €\Podca mpos twa trétpav tepav tis Oeod voutlopéevny er autTis éoTn, cal KataBandodoa THY Keparny, @orrep ai Seoum xatatevopevat, Odoat t@ AovkovAdryg@ Trapécyev avtnv. EOvce Sé Kai T@ Evdpatn tavpov d:aRatnpar. Kaxeivny pév avToU THY Huepayv NUALCaTO, TH 5 VaTepaia Kal tais éheEns mponye Sia THS Lodnvis, ovdev GSiK@v Tos avOpwtrous MpocXwpodvTas aUTP Kal Seyouévous Tv oTpatiav adopévous, aGAAA Kal TOV oTpATLWT@DY PpoupLoY TL SoKobv Exe XpHwaTa moda Boviopevov AaBetv “’Exetvo,” én, “ uar-Nov TO Ppovpiov nuiv éxxowréov oti,” SetEas Tov

Tadpov drwbev dvra, “tadtra 8 amoxetas Tots
WKooL. cuvTeivas dé THY Topelay Kal Tov Tiypwy SiaBas évéBarev eis thv Appeviar.
XXV. Tuypavn 8, @ 5 0 MpaTos ayyeiras jxovta AovxovAdov ovK éxaipnoev, GAN areté-TUNTO THY Kepadny, ovdels Gros eppater, GAN’ ayvoay Kabinoto tepixasopevos Hon TH Trodepio 548 cd

508

LUCULLUS

Accordingly, he took advantage of his opportunity and put his troops across, and a favourable sign accompanied his crossing. Heifers pasture there which are sacred to Persia Artemis, a goddess whom the Barbarians on the further side of the Euphrates hold in the highest honour. These heifers are used only for sacrifice, and at other times are left to roam about the country at large, with brands upon them in the shape of the torch of the goddess. Nor is it a slight or easy matter to catch any of them when they are wanted. One of these heifers, after the army had crossed the Euphrates, came to a certain rock which.is deemed sacred to the goddess, and stood upon it, and lowering its head without any compulsion from the usual rope, offered itself to Lucullus for sacrifice. He also sacrificed a bull to the Euphrates, in acknowledgment of his safe passage. Then, after encamping there during that day, on the next and the succeeding days he advanced through Sophené. He wrought no harm to the inhabitants, who came to meet him and received his army gladly. Nay, when his soldiers wanted to take a certain fortress which was thought to contain much wealth, ‘“ Yonder lies the fortress which we must rather bring low,” said he, pointing to the Taurus in the distance ; “these nearer things are reserved for the victors.” Then he went on by forced marches, crossed the Tigris, and entered Armenia.

XXV. Since the first messenger who told Tigranes that Lucullus was coming had his head cut off for his pains, no one else would tell him anything, and so he sat in ignorance while the fires of war were already blazing around him, giving ear only to those 549 ~

iV

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tupt, Noyous GkKoUVwWY Trpds Yap, OS péyay ovTAa
AoveovrX ov otpatnyov, et mpos ’Edéow Teyparnv UTroctain Kal py devyov evOrs €& ’Acias olyorto
Tas TooavTas pupiddas idwv. oTwS ovTE THLA-ToS WavtTos éoTt ToAUY AKpaTov éveyKeiy OUTE Siavoias THs TUXOVaNs ev EvTUYNnpaATL peydNoLS py exotivat TOV NOYLo MOV. TpaTos 8 avTO TOV dirov erokunoe MO poBaplavns gpdcat TO arndes. ovd ovtos b& ypnoTov nveyKaro yépas
Ths Trappnoias. éréudhOn yap evOus eri Tov
AovKovAXov avy irretot TPLOXIALOLS, mefois dé
TApTOAOLS, KeXeva Gels Tov pev oT parTnyov dryewv Cavra, Tous & aAXovs KaTamaThoas.
AovkovrAXr@ Sé THS oTpaTLas 7 pev dn KaTeE-Cevryvuev, 7 5é te Tpocnet. Tav dé cKoTO@Y avT@ ppacavtwv éredavvovta Tov BdpBapor, Edetoe ny
yopls dvtas Kai ovK ev takes TpooTEecwv Tapaen.
Kal autos pev Kadiotato ry otpatomedeiay, LeErtiALov dé m peo Bevtny émeprpev immets éxovra,
YuALOUS éLaxociovs, omAitas O€ Kab. idous ou
TOAN@ TAetovas, Kedevoas éryyus Tm pocedOovta, Tois Trohepiors peévewv, ws av wvOnrar Tovs per avToo KAT EDT paTOTEOEVKOTAS. éBovrero pev ovv 0 LeETiALOS TadTa ToLEtD, eBidoOn 5 bird Tob MifpoBaptavov Opacéws ET ENAVVOVTOS els Yelpas
eMOeiv. Kal yevouerns paxns o pev M0 poBap-Cduns é €mreo ev dryovilopevos, ot & ddro hevryovres aT @XOVTO may OALY@V dravtes.
"Ex tTovrou Teypavns per exMT OY Teypavo-KepTa, peyddnv rod ExTLO PEVNV um avrov, 999

LUCULLUS

who flattered him and said that Lucullus would be a great general if he ventured to withstand Tigranes at Ephesus, and did not fly incontinently

from Asia at the mere sight of so many myriads of men. Which only proves that it is not every man who can bear much unmixed wine, nor is it any ordinary understanding that does not lose its reckoning in the midst of great prosperity. The first of his friends who ventured to tell him the truth was Mithrobarzanes, and he, too, got no very excellent reward for his boldness of speech. He. was sent at once against Lucullus with three thousand horsemen and a large force of infantry, under orders to bring the general alive, but to trample his men under foot.

Now, part of the army of. Lucullus was already preparing to go into camp, and the rest was still coming up, when his scouts told him that the Barbarian was advancing to the attack. Fearing lest the enemy attack his men when they were separated and in disorder, 4nd so throw them into confusion, he himself fell to arranging the encamp- ment, and Sextilius, the legate, was sent at the head of sixteen hundred horsemen and about as many light and heavy infantry, with orders to get near the enemy and wait there until he learned that the main body was safely encamped. Well then, this was what Sextilius wished to do, but he was forced into an engagement by Mithrobarzanes, who boldly charged upon him. A battle ensued, in which Mithrobarzanes fell fighting, and the rest of his forces took to flight and were cut to pieces, all except a few.

Upon this, Tigranes abandoned Tigranocerta, that great city which he had built, withdrew to the mpos tov Tavpov aveywpnoe xal tas duvapers mavrayolev évtat0a suviyye, AovKovdXdos b€ TH mapacKevn ypovov ov d:d0vs Movpnvay ev éfémepev evoyAncovta xal mepixoorta Tovs abportopévous mpos tov Trypdvnv, YeEtinsov Se may ApaBov xeipa peyddny aveipEovra Bacthet mpoctovaav. opov dé LeErirs0s pev éemimecov aotpatorreboyv Trotoupévots Trois" Apayre Tous TrEi- atous d1épOerpe, Movpynvas & éropevos Tiypavy Tpaxuv avrova Kal oTevoTrOpoy oTpaT@ paKkp@ StexBdAXrovts Katpod tapacyovtos émitiOerat. cal ghevyer pév avtos Trypavns mpoéuevos TH arooKxeuny aracay, aroOvncxovat 5€ ToNNOl Kal WXeloves aAioxovtat TOV 'Appeviov.

XXVI. Obtw &¢ rovTwy TpoywpovvTwy apas o AovcovrAros érropevero apos Tuypavonepra, Kar TEplaTpATOTEOEVTAS ETTOALOPKEL THY TOALY. Hoav

& év avth tmoddol péev “EXAnVEs TOY quvactdtTev éx Kudsxtas, roAXdol 5€ BapBapot trois “EXAnow Sora tremovOdrtes, "AdtaBnvot xat’Aocipior Kad Topéunvol xat Kamadoxes, Ov KatTaocxaWas Tas matpioas, autovs S€ Kopuicas éxel xarowxely nvayKkacev. hy dé Kal ypnudtwv 7 Tods pect?
kal avaOnpatwv, ravrTos idtwrov xal duvdorou
T@ Bactrel cupdirotimoupévou pos avEnow Kal
KaTacKeuny THS TOAEwWS. 516 Kal ouVYTOVWS érr0-
ALtopKes Oo AovKovAXdos avTny, ov avé-eoOar Tov Tuypdvny otopevos, AXA Kal Tapa yrounv vr’ opyns KaTtaBnoecOar Stapayovpevov, o¢O@s> oio-pevos. Todrda 5€ MiOpidarns aanyopevaer aryyé-Nous méuTo@v Kal ypdppata wn suvaTTEeLY waynr, andra Tols immedot TepixoTTe THY ayopay: 552
™.;
LUCULLUS

Taurus, and there began collecting his forces from every quarter. Lucullus, however, gave him no time for preparation, but sent out Murena to harass and cut off the forces gathering to join Tigranes, and Sextilius again to hold in check a large body of Arabs which was drawing near the king. At one and the same time Sextilius fell upon the Arabs as they were going into camp, and slew most of them; and Murena, following hard upon Tigranes, seized his opportunity and attacked the king as he was passing through a rough and narrow defile with his army in long column. Tigranes himself fled, abandoning all his baggage, many of the Armenians were slain, and more were captured.

XXVI. Thus successful in his campaign, Lucullus struck camp and proceeded to Tigranocerta, which city he invested and began to besiege. There were in the city many Greeks who had been transplanted, like others, from Cilicia, and many Barbarians who had suffered the same fate as the Greeks,— Adiabeni, Assyrians, Gordyeni, and Cappadocians, whose native cities Tigranes had demolished, and brought their inhabitants to dwell there under compulsion. The city was also full of wealth and votive offerings, since every private person and every prince vied with the king in contributing to its increase and adornment. Therefore Lucullus pressed the siege of the city with vigour, in the belief that Tigranes would not endure it, but contrary to his better judgment and in anger would descend into the plains to offer battle ; and vhis belief was justified. Mithridates, indeed, both by messengers and letters, strongly urged the king not to join battle, but to cut off the enemy’s supplies

593

Pa

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ToANa O€ Takirns fxwr map avrod xal:cvotpa- 509

Tevwy édeiro Tov Baothéws guddrtecOar Kal dhevyey as duayov mpaypa Ta ‘Pwpaiwy SirXa.
Kal Td ye Tp@ta Tpaws HKove TovTwV. ézret dé
TavoTpaTiad pev avtT@ avvnrOov ‘Appyévior cal Popdunvoi, TavaTparod bé Myjéous kat *AdiaBn-vovs ayovtes ot Baatrels Taphoav, HKov 5é roAXOt pev ao ths év BaBvAdu Oardoons “ApaBes, TodAol 6€ aro THS Kaomias ’ArBavol Kal TBnpes
"AABavois TpocorKovvres, ovK OAbryot 5é Tov TeEpt
tov ‘Apa&nv VEwopeverv aBacirevto. yapert ral Scdpors Teva Devtes arnvrncav, érridav dé Kal Opdcous Kal BapBapicay ATELNOY perra ev my Ta cuuTocia TOU Bactréws, pecta S€ TH oup-Bouma, TapexwvSvvevoe yey oO Tagirns atro0aveip VTEVAVTLOULEVOS TH YvOLN TAS HaXNS: édoxee Se
kal Midpiddrns POovav' aiorpérew peydhou KcaTophaparos. bev ove ave wervev auTov 6
Tuypavns, py petdaxot tis So&ns, GYD eyoper mayth TO orpaT@ opddpa dvagopav, OS Aéyerau, qT pos TOUS pirous, 6 OTL pos AovkovdXov avT@ [L0-vor, ov 77pos dmavras 0 ayo évouro tous ‘Pw-paiwy oTpaTnyous ev TAVTO yEevopuévous.
at ov TavTdTacw iy TO Opacos avToo parades ovo aNorvyor, eOun TOT AaAUTA kal Barrels é ET OMEVOUS Kai Padrayyas om uta Kal pupiddas (TITEWY ATrO- Brérovtos. tokoras bev yap Kal apevdoviras d:0- peuptous mYEV, immets dé TevTaxta pu ptous Kal mev-

TAKLTXLALOUS, ov ETTAKLTXLALOL Kat upton Kara- :

ppaxror Hoav, WS AovKcoudnos éypanpe T pos THY OVYKANTOY, OTALTOY Oé, TOV pev eis omeipas, TOV
554

LUCULLUS

with his cavalry; Taxiles also, who came from Mithridates and joined the forces of Tigranes, earnestly begged the king to remain on the defensive ‘and avoid the invincible arms of the Romans. And at first Tigranes gave considerate hearing to this advice. But when the Armenians and Gordyeni joined him with all their hosts, and the kings of the Medes and Adiabeni came up with all their hosts, and many Arabs arrived from the sea of Babylonia, and many Albanians from the Caspian sea, together with Iberians who were neighbours to the Albanians ; and when not a few of the peoples about the river Araxes, who are not subject to kings, had been induced by favours and gifts to come and join him; and when the banquets of the king, and his councils as well, were full of hopes and boldness and barbaric threats,—then Taxiles ran the risk of being put to death when he opposed the plan of fighting, and Mithridates was thought to be diverting the king from a great success out of mere envy. Wherefore Tigranes would not even wait for him, lest he share in the glory, but advanced with all his army, bitterly lamenting to his friends, as it is said, that he was going to contend with Lucullus alone, and not with all the Roman generals put together.

And his boldness was not altogether that of a mad man, nor without good reason, when he saw so many nations and kings in his following, with phalanxes of heavy infantry and myriads of horsemen. For he was in command of twenty thousand bowmen and slingers, and fifty-five thousand horsemen, of whom seventeen thousand were clad in mail, as Lucullus said in his letter to the Senate; also of one hundred: and fifty thousand heavy infantry, 555

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

8 eis bddayyas cuvretaypéevwv, trevrexaidexa
pupiddas, odorrotovs 8é nal yedpupwras nal Ka-Oaptas wotapa@v Kal vAoTOmous Kal Tov adXOD.
Yperav Umrnpétas TpLa puplous Kal TwevTakic ytdLOUS, of Tois payopuévos emitetaypévot KatoTy orruv
dua cal pony trapetxov.
XXVII. ‘Os & isrepBarav tov Tatpov aOpous xkatepavn kal xareide pos Tois Teypavoxépross err uxab yj pevov TO oTpdtevpa tTav “Pwpaiwv, o pep ev TH Tone BapBapos 6 phos oNONUYT Kat KpoT@ THY oy édéEato, Kal tois ‘Popators amo TOV TELXODV amevouvTes edeixvucay Tos
"A pevious: Aoveovrr dé cKoTrovyTt Tepl THS paxns ob pev dryew éml Teypavny édoavta THY TmouopKlay auveBovrevor, ot dé pn KaTaderrety oTriaw TONE LLOUS TomoUTous pend? aveivar THY TroNopKiay. o © era ExaTEpOUS peep ovK op0as, audotépous b€ Kadds Trapacveiv dietre THY (oT pa-TLay. Kal Moupyvay pev éEaxraxedtous exovra ‘qreCous é7t THS. modopxias ameéNutrey, avTOoOsS be Téoorapas Kat elxoae omeipas avaraBor, év als ou TAELOVES joav puplwv omrditev, Kal Tous

immeis dmavras Kal aopevdovntas kal tokotas Tepe xerLous, ex wper. :
Kat apa tov TOTAPOV év medi peydrp
KATATTpATOT EdEvE as TavTaTace _ Mee pos éepavn
Teypavy, cat Tots Kohaxevovaw auTov Siar pay Tapeiyev. ot pep yap éoxwrrov, ot 8 wurrép
Trav aphvpwv eév aia bteBddXovTo xdnpov"
TOV 6 oT paThyay Kat Bactréwv & &xacros retro Tpoowy avTovd povov yevégOar To épyov, éxeivoy 556

some of whom were drawn up in cohorts, and some in phalanxes ; also of road-makers, bridge-builders, clearers of rivers, foresters, and ministers to the other needs of an army, to the number of thirty-five thousand. These latter, being drawn up in array behind the fighting men, increased the apparent strength of the army.

XXVII. When Tigranes had crossed the Taurus, deployed with all his forces, and looked down upon the Roman army investing Tigranocerta, the throng of Barbarians in the city greeted his appearance with shouts and din, and standing on the walls, threateningly pointed out the Armenians to the Romans. When Lucullus held a council of war, some of his officers advised him to give up the siege and lead his army against Tigranes; others urged him not to leave so many enemies in his rear, and not to remit the siege. Whereupon, remarking that each counsel by itself was bad, but both together were good, he divided his army. Murena, with six thousand footmen, he left behind in charge of the siege; while he himself, with twenty-four cohorts, comprising no more than ten thousand heavy infantry, and all the horsemen, slingers, and archers, to the number of about, a thousand, set out against the enemy.

When he had encamped along thie river in a great plain, he appeared utterly insignificant to Tigranes, and supplied the king’s flatterers with ground for amusement. Some mocked at the Romans, and others, in pleasantry, cast lots for their spoil, while each of the generals and kings came forward and begged that the task of conquering them might be entrusted to himself alone, and that the 997

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 be xabélecOar Geatnv. Bovropevos 5é Te Kal avros o Tuypavns yaptes elvat Kal oKwrTiKos elre TO Opvrovpevov: "Ei pév ws mperRevtai, jWodXrot mdpeow: e 8 ws oTpaTi@Tat, OALYyoL."
Kal TOTE wey OUTWS Elpwvevopevor Kal traiCovTes SuetéXeoav. dua 8 nuépa AoveovAdos wirdopévny thy Suvauy éFfye. xal mpos &w pev 510
qv tov totayov TO BapBaptxov otpatevpa: Tod dé pevparos amoatpopiy hap Bdvovros émi Tas
duces, 7 padiora Tepdo twov HY, avrimapetdyov
THY Sayin Kal Oo TEvOWY édofev arrox@peiv
5 T@ Teypayn. al Kahéoas TOV Taginny apa yerwre " Tovs audyous, "én, ""Pwpaiov omditas oux opas pevyovras; " cat o Takirns " Bovioipny av, elmren, 'Oo Bacired, yevér Dau Tl T@ o® Saipove TaVY Taparoyar, Grr obit écbFTa Aapmpav ot avdpes AapBdavovow odorropoivtes obre Oupeois éxxexabappévots Xp@vra. Kat Kpdvect yuuvois, @oTep viv ta oKUTIWA TOY Or dwy oxeTTUG pata TeploTacavres, adhe paxXoupevav éorly a] Aap porns airy Kat Badilovrav Hn 6 pos TOUS Toheptous. TavTa vré OvTOS éTl TOU Takinov KaTapavns iv mparos aeros émuatpépovros Tod AoveovAXov Kal Taku at omeipat KaTa hoxous Aap Pdvovaae mpos THY SidBaow*
Kal pods WaTrEp én péOns TLvos avaepav 0 Tuypavns bis h tpis é&éxpayev: " E@' nas ot dvipes;" @ote OopvBe TOAD TO TAROOS els tabu kabiorad Gar, Baothéws pev avrav TO péoov EXOVTOS, tav Sé xepatwv TO peév dpsarepov T
"AdtaBnve, To Se SeEvdv to Myjdq rrapadorras, king would sit by as a spectator. Then Tigranes, not wishing to be left behind entirely in this play of wit and scoffing, uttered that famous saying: "'If they are come as ambassadors, they are too many ; if as soldiers, too few." And so for the while they continued their sarcasms and jests. But at daybreak Lucullus led out his forces under arms. Now, the Barbarian army lay to the east of the river. But as the stream takes a turn to the west at the point where it was easiest to ford, and as Lucullus led his troops to the attack in that direction first, and with speed, he seemed to Tigranes to be retreating. So he called Taxiles and said, with a laugh, “ Don’t you see that the invincible Roman hoplites are taking to flight?’”’ “O King,” said Taxiles, “1 could wish that some marvellous thing might fall to your good fortune; but when. these men are merely on a march, they do not put on shining raiment, nor have they their shields polished and their helmets uncovered, as now that they have stripped the leathern coverings from their armour. Nay, this splendour means that they are going to fight, and are now advancing upon their enemies.’ While Taxiles was yet speaking, the first eagle came in sight, as Lucullus wheeled towards the river, and the cohorts were seen forming in maniples with a view to crossing. Then at last, as though coming out of a drunken stupor, Tigranes cried out two or three times, “ Are the men coming against us?’’ And so, with much tumult and con- fusion, his multitude formed in battle array, the king himself occupying the centre, and assigning the left wing to the king of the Adiabeni, the right to the king of the Medes. In front of this wing also

éf ot Kal Tov KaTtappdxtov év TpoTaypaTt TO WELTTOV HY.
Aovcovhyp dé HEAAOVTE Sia Batvew Tov ToTapov évtoe TOV WYEHOveoY Tapyvouv purarrecOat THY jépav pay ovcay Tov drroppadwn, as pedaivas Karovow’ ev éxeivy yap Th Npépa
pera Kaurriwvos arrwrero oTpatia cuuBarodoa KipBpas.. o 8 dmrexpivato THY pynpovevoperny povay “ "Ery yap, ep, ‘Kab Tavrny eUTUXT) Tojow ‘Pepators THY nuépav. hv bé wpo pas vovav 'OxtwBpiwv.
XXVIII. Taira & eitav Kal Oappetv Kehevoas TOV TE TOTApoOv déBawve Kxat TPATOS ETL TOUS
qoNepious ayeitTo, Owpaxa ev EX@v ovdnpoodv porrdwrov atrooTiN Bora, KpooawrTny dé epearpiba, To b€ Eidos avToOev taropatveoy YULVOP, @S evdus Els xelpas teoOau déov! éxnBorors savipdar Kal cuvarpery * THY Stat obevotpov Xwpav TO TaXeL THS eraryaryis. érret 6€ THY KaTappaxTov immov, aS TAELTTOS my AOyos, kareive KATATETAYpévny wird dodo Til THY avo Xwpay érrimredov Kat maTeiav eXOvTE, mpoa Baow dé TeTTapov oradioy ov mavTaTact Xaremiy ovd aT oKeKoMpernY, Opaxas pev immeis xat Taddras, ods elyer, € exé-Nevoev éX Taryiou Tm poo epopevous Tapaxpove-c0at Tais paxatpacs TOUS KovTOUS. pia yap ad«r TOV KaTap paxt cov xovtos' aAdo & ovdev ovO

éavtois ote Tois TroAcwioLs YpjoOa: SuvavTat dead
1 $éov Coraés, Sintenis and Bekker, after Reiske; 3é:
MSS., including S.
2 guva:pety Coraés and Bekker, after Reiske ; cuvaiphoew
(S) and guvaphoes MSS. : cuvaiphowy, a suggestion of Reiske's.
560

the greater part of the mail-clad horsemen were drawn up.
As Lucullus was about to cross the river, some of his officers advised him to beware of the day, which was one of the unlucky days—the Romans call them "black days." For on that day Caepio and his army perished in a battle with the Cimbri.!
But Lucullus answered with the memorable words :
" Verily, I will make this day, too, a lucky one for the Romans." Now the day was the sixth of October.
XXVIII. Saying this, and bidding his men be of good courage, he crossed the river, and led the way in person against the enemy. He wore a steel breastplate of glittering scales, and a tasselled cloak, and at once let his sword flash forth from its scabbard, indicating that they must forthwith come to close quarters with men who fought with long range missiles, and eliminate, by the rapidity of their onset, the space in which archery would be effective. But when he saw that the mail-clad horsemen, on whom the greatest reliance was placed, were stationed at the foot of a considerable hill which was crowned by a broad and level space, and that the approach to this was a matter of only four stadia, and neither rough nor steep, he ordered his Thracian and Gallic horsemen to attack the enemy in the flank, and to parry their long spears with their own short swords. (Now the sole resource of the mail-clad horsemen is their long spear, and they

1 p.c. 105. Cf. Camillua, xix. 7.
: 561
VOL. 11. 0 0
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

/ \ a A A > » »
Bdpos nat oxrnpornta THS oKEVAS, GAN éyKaTo-
,
Kobounpévots éoixacww. autos dé dvo0 o7reipas
wn \ 4 ,
avaraBov iuthrAaTo mpos Tov Odor, éppwpevas
éTOLEVWY TOV TTPATLWTOV b1a TO KaKeEtvOY EV TOS SwAols opav mpa@tov xaxotrabotvta melov Kal

> | \
mpooBialopevov. yevosevos 8 dvw Kat aotas év
A a A 4 4 4 lA
T@ TrEepipavel TOU Ywpiou peya Bonoas zo Nevirn-
J fal
Kapev, &pn, “ vevixnKkapev, ® oVoTpaTLoOTAL.
Kat ToUTO elT@v emiye Tois Katadpdxtois,
4 N Mw lel A e n 5] 2 9
Kerevoras pndev Ett yphjaba: tols baoaois, aAr’ éx
xetpos Exactov SiarkafRovta Taiew TOY TodEuiov KUn“as TE KaL pnpous, & ova yupva TaV KaTadpdxtov éoriv. ov pnv edénoé TL TavTNS THs tA b) “\ 29Q/ \ € ‘4 > >
paxns: ov yap édéEavto Tovs “Pwpaious, adr anarakavtes nal pevyovtes aicyiota mavTov évéwoav éavtous TE Kal TOUS immous Bapeis dvtas 9 \ a a ccd \ ¥ 4
es Ta Tov melav Sia wpilv adp~acOai Tivos
, ,
EXELVOUS MAYNS, OTTE PLNTE TpAvpATOS YyevopLévou
un? aipatos 6pOévtos nrtacOat tas Tocav’tas
S e \ \ , 4 ,
pupiadas. o bé qorvs govos Abn hevyovtwv
, a éyiveto, uadrov dé BovrAopevwy hevyev' ov yap
? 4 , ‘\ 4 fal 4 e 3
éduvavto muKvoTntt kal Baber trav takewv bp avTav éurodifouevor. Tiypains & éberXdoas év apy per orlywyv edevye Kal tov vidv opav KowwVvovvTa THS aUTHS TUXNS TepteaTTdcaTo TO
P.) 15 fo lol > 4 é 4 2)
Ladnpa THS Kehadns Kakelv@ Oaxpvaas Trapedwxe, cwlev éavtov, Stas Svvatat, xal’-érépas odovs
4 e \ l4 > / \ b
Kedevoas. o b€ veavias avadnoacbat pev ovK
> # A A , a , a
érodunoe, Tav 6€ Taldwv TO TiatoTaTP puAdT-562
511

have-none other whatsoever, either in defending themselves or attacking their enemies, owing to the weight and rigidity of their armour; in this they are, as it were, immured.) Then he himself, with two cohorts, hastened eagerly towards the hill, his soldiers following with all their might, because they saw him ahead of them in armour, enduring all the fatigue of a foot-soldier, and pressing his way along. Arrived at the top, and standing in the most conspicuous spot, he cried with a loud voice, “The day is ours, the day is ours; my fellow soldiers!” With these words, he led his men against the mail-clad horsemen, ordering them not to hur! their javelins yet, but taking each his own man, to smite the enemy’s legs and thighs, which are the only parts of these mail-clad horsemen left: exposed. However, there was no need of this mode of fighting, for the enemy did not await the Romans, but, with loud cries and in most disgraceful flight, they hurled themselves and their horses, with all their weight, upon the ranks of their own infantry, before it had so much as | begun to fight, and so all those tens of thousands were defeated without the infliction of a wound or the sight of blood. But the great slaughter began at once when they fled, or rather tried to fly, for they were prevented from really doing so by the eloseness and depth of their own ranks. Tigranes rode away at the very outset with a few attendants, and took to flight. Seeing his son also in the same plight, he took off the diadem from his head and, in tears, gave it to him, bidding him save himself as best he could by another route. The young man, however, did not venture to assume the diadem, but gave it to his most trusted slave for safe keeping.

563
00 2
PLUTARCH’S LIVES "

Tew eOwxev. obTos arous Kara TUX NY avnxOn
7 pos Aovxoudnor, @OTE peTa TOV AAAWY alypd-AwTov Kal TO Siddnya yevérOar tov Tiypavov.
AéyeTar S€ TaV ev mela umép déxa pupiddas
SiapOapivar, Ttav & imrméov Odbyous TavTaTact
Siapuyeiv. ‘Pwpatoy 8 éxatov érpwOnaayr, émecov 5é qévre.
Tavrns tis payns Avtioyos o prr0ooogos € év TH
Hept Jeav ypad7 puna Geis ov dnow addy epewpaxevar ToWaUT HY TOV HAov. LtpaBov 3’, Erepos pirocogos, év TOUS ta TopiKois vropynwac wy avTovs éyet TOUS ‘Papatous aiaxuver bar Kat KaTaryehav éavT@v éir dvbparroba TowavTa den-Oévras GtAwY. Acovios & etpnxer, as OUOETTOTE ‘Pwpator trovepiors amrobeovTes TOC OUT® mA et mapetatavto: axedov yap ove elKoaTOp, GX’ éXarrov eyevovTo pEpos Ol ViK@VTES TOV noon-pévav. ‘Popaiwv 8 of Servoraror orparnyol Kal
WNELTTA TOKE MLS @LUNNKOTES émnvouv panora
TOU AoveovdAov 70 dvo Bactnets TOUS emipaver-TATOUS Kal peyiatous Svat Tois evavTLOTaToLs, TAX EL Kat _Bpadurire, KATAOTPATHYHG AL, Mi6-pibarnv pev yap axpdtovra Xpovp kat tpLBH KaTAVawae, Teypdvyy dé T@ omedaat cuveTpirper, €v orLryous TOV WWITOTE TYEHoveoy 7) PEAT SL
pev Epyp, TH ToAuy 8 wUméep aogpadelas xpn-

OG pEVOS.
XXIX. Acd nal MiOpidarns ov cuvérevey eri
THY paxyny, TH ouvnGer Tov Aovxouhdov evraBeta Kal Tapayoyn Troheuna ety olopevos, aNAa Ka houxvay eTrOpEevETo 7 pos Tov Teypavny. Kal Tp@Tov pev oArAvyors TaY Appeviwy évtuyov nal” 564

This slave happened to be captured, and was brought to Lucullus, and thus even the diadem of Tigranes became a part of the booty. It is said that more than a hundred thousand of the enemy’s infantry perished, while of the cavalry only a few, all told, made their escape. Of the Romans, on the other hand, only a hundred were wounded, and only five killed.

Antiochus the philosopher makes mentign of this battle in his treatise ‘Concerning Gods,” and says that the sun never looked down on such another. And Strabo, another philosopher, in his “ Historical Commentaries,” says that the Romans themselves were ashamed, and laughed one another to scorn for requiring arms against such slaves. Livy also has remarked that the Romans were never in such in- ferior numbers when they faced an enemy ; for the victors were hardly even a twentieth part of the vanquished, but less than this. The Roman generals who were most capable and most experienced in war, praised Lucullus especially for this, that he out- generalled two kings who were most distinguished and powerful by two most opposite tactics, speed and slowness. For he used up Mithridates, at the height of his power, by long delays; but crushed Tigranes by the speed of his operations, being one of the few generals of all time to use delay for greater achieve- ment, and boldness for greater safety.

XXIX. This was the reason why Mithridates made no haste to be at the battle. He thought Lucullus would carry on the war with his wonted caution and indirectness, and so marched slowly to join Tigranes. At first he met a few Armenians hurrying back over the road in panic fear, and conjectured what had

565

odoy érrromnpévois Kat wepipoBors amovoty elnace
To Wa0os, eit’ HON WrELovaY YyULVaV Kal TeTPwW-évov anavt@vtTwv tuOouevos THY ArTav éCnrer Tov Teypdvny. etpwv bé wavtrav épnuov Kal TATEWOY OUK avOvBpicer, GArxa KataBas xa cudaxpicas Ta Kowa wdOn Oepameiav Te THY érropévnv avT@ Baciueny ESwxe nal xateOdppuve mWpos Tot wéAXov. oVTOL pev odv avOts Erépas

Suvapets ouvijyov.
"Ev 6€ TH mode ois Teypavoxéprots TOV
‘EXAnvev T pos TOUS BapBdpous oTATLAcaVTM@Y
Kal T@ Aovnovdr Thy modLy évdidovTav mpoo Ba-Dov etre: Kal TOUS pev év TH Worer Onoavpovs
mapedauBave, THY O€ TOA Siaprdaat mapédwxe Tots OTPATLOTALS, peta, TOV Gd\XNov ypnaTov oxTaKLaxi da Tahavra Vopic paTos éxovaap. YOpls be TOUT@D éxtakoclas Spaxyas Kart’ dvdpa Sceverpev amo TaYv Nadipwv. muvOavopevos 6é
qoAAous ev TH TONEL Kateripas TOV Tepl TOV Atovucov TexveTa, ods o Tiypdvns ravraydbev nOpoixes perv amoderkyuvar TO KaTEo Kevao pevov vn avTov Jeatpov, expncaro TOUTOLS 7 pos TOUS ayavas cal Tas Oéas THY émivixiov. tous &
"EXAnvas ets Tas avT@v Tatptiédas émeprpe ™poo-Bels épodia, Kal Tov BapBapor opolws TOUS
HraryKac wevous KaToieiv, wate auveBn pats
TONEWS darubeions TONS avorkiver bar wrdduy Komtapevas TOUS aUuTOY olenTopas, td’ Ov ws evepy “rns 0 AovKoudXos Kat KTLO TNS NYATATO.
_Upovxepet dé xal Tada Kar afiav Tavdpl
Tav amo Sixatoovvns nal diravOpwrias éraivev 566
512

happened ; then presently, when he had learned of the defeat from more unarmed and wounded fugitives whom he met, he sought to find Tigranes. And though he found him destitute of all things and humiliated, he did not return his insolent behaviour, but got down from his horse and wept with him over their common sufferings. Then he gave him his own royal equipage, and tried to fill him with courage for the future. And so these kings began again to assemble fresh forces.

But in the city of Tigranocerta, the Greeks had risen up against the Barbarians and were ready to hand the city over to Lucullus ; so he assaulted and took it. The royal treasures in the city he took into his own charge, but the city itself he turned over to his soldiers for plunder, and it contained eight thousand talents in money, together with the usual valuables. Besides this, he gave to each man eight hundred drachmas from the general spoils. On learning that many dramatic artists had been captured in the city, whom Tigranes had collected there from all quarters for the formal dedication of the theatre which he had built, Lucullus employed them for the-contests and spectacles with which he celebrated his victories. The Greeks he sent to their native cities, giving them also the means wherewith to make the journey, and likewise the Barbarians who had been compelled to settle there. Thus it came to pass that the dissolution of one city was the restoration of many others, by reason of their recovering their own inhabitants, and they all loved Lucullus as their benefactor and founder.

And whatever else he did also prospered, in a way worthy of the man, who was ambitious of the 567

oO

a |

PLUTARCH'S LIVES ©

opeyouévm parrov 7 Tov él Tois ToNEuLKOLS xatopOe@paciw. éxeivwv pey yap ovK drjLyov 7) arpatia Kal mrEioroy 7 TUYN peTEye, TAUTA O Fv nuépov uyhs nal qwemadevpévns éridertcs, ols o AovxovAros tote yopls StrAwY EeyeLpodTo tors BapBdpovs. xal yap "ApdBwyv Bacirets HKov pos avtov éyxerpilovres TA ohéerepa, Kal TO Lodnvav EOvos mpoceywpe to Sé Topdunverv odtw dteOnxev, date BovrACcOat Tas TONES EKAL-movras axorovleiy exeivp peta traidov Kar yuvatkay eOerovtas é& airias toracde. ZapBunvos yap o tav Topdunvev Bacirevs, domrep elpnrac, 5.' 'Agmiov xpida AovrovAr@ d:telrexTo srepr ocuppaylas thy Tuypdvov tupavvida Bapuvopevos: pnvvbels & arreadayn, cai traides avdrod Kal yur auvav@dovto mpw 'Pwpalous ets 'Appeviav éuBarety. TovTay ovx nuvnuovnoev o AovKovAXos, ara TapenOoy eis rv Topdunvav radas rpovbero tov ZLapBinvod, xat mupav écOjri nal ypvo@ Baoiin@ Kal toils amd Tiypavouv xooujoas Aadvpors adres wrapav Udi pe, nai Yoas émhveyxe peta hitwv Kal oixeiwy tod ahibe étaipov éavrod kat 'Pwpalov cvppayov dvaxadotpevos. éxéXevoe 5¢ eal pynpeiov aro YpnpdTov cvyvav att yevér Oar maprodra yap evpéOn, Kal ypuads Kal apyupos év tois tov ZapBinvot Bacirgclots, citou & aréxewto pupiddes Tplaxdotat median, @ore nal Tovs oTpatiwotas wperciobat cal Tov Aovxovrrov BavpatecOar, Ste Spayynv uiay éx 568

praise that is consequent upon righteousness and humanity, rather than of that which follows military successes. For the latter, the army also was in no slight degree, and fortune in the highest degree, responsible ; but the former were the manifestations of a gentle and disciplined spirit, and in the exercise of these qualities Lucullus now, without appeal to arms, subdued the Barbarians. The kings of the Arabs came to him, with proffers of their possessions, and the Sopheni joined his cause. The Gordyeni were so affected by his kindness that they were ready to abandon their cities and follow him with their wives and children, in voluntary service. The reason for this was as follows." Zarbienus, the king of the Gordyeni, as has been said,! secretly stipulated with Lucullus, through Appius, for an alliance, being oppressed by the tyranny of Tigranes. He was informed against, however, and put to death, and his wife and children perished with him, before the Romans entered Armenia. Lucullus was not un- mindful of all this, but on entering the country of the Gordyeni, appointed funeral rites in honour of Zarbienus, and after adorning a pyre with royal raiment and gold and with the spoils taken from Tigranes, set fire to it with his own hand, and joined the friends and kindred of the man in pouring ilbations upon it, calling him a comrade of his and an ally of the Romans. He also ordered that a monu- ment be erected to his memory at great cost; for many treasures were found in the palace of Zarbienus, including gold and silver, and three million bushels of grain were stored up there, so that the soldiers were plentifully supplied, and Lucullus was admired

1 xxi. 2,

Tou Snuogiou Tapueiov pn AaBov avtov éF avToU
Sixes TOV TONEHLOD.
XXX. 'Evtaia xa) Tapa Tob HapOar Bact-
NEws he mpea Reta map avrov ets pudtay 7 po-Kahoupéevav Kal ovppayiav. iy 5 dopéve TavTa
TO AovKovrro Kal many ayremeurpe Tap éav-Tou peo Betav pos TOV Idp6on, . ov catepwpacav
auTov émapporepivovra TH youn Kal putaodov airobyra Kpupa Tov TULLAX ICAL TO 'Teypavn mv Mecororapiav. ws obv 7av? o AovKovAXos na0eTo, Teypavny pev éyvo cal MiOpidarny mapenOeiy warrep avrarywvia Tas ametpnKoras, arometpia Oat dé Ths Taphav Suvdpews Kat oTparevelv én' avrous, Kkadov _myoupevos pa
pupn trodéuov tpeis épeEns doTep aOAnTHs
Bactreis KaTaTranaigas Kat oa T play TOV vmo TOV HALOY peyioTwMY Nye"ovlay aNnTTNTOS Kal VUK@D SueFed Beir.
"Exreprpev ovy ets [ovrov Tots mepl LwpvaTiov

HyEnoow emia teihas aryew THv éxet oTpaTiay ™ pos AUTOV, WS ex THs Dopdunvis avaBnaopevos.
ot 5é€ Kal ™ poTepov Narerots xpwpevor Kab
dua rreOéoe Tots TTPATLOTALS TOTe = TavTEehas am exdhuway airy TV dxoactay, ovdevi TpoTr@
mevOous oud avayKns Eevpopevor mpooayayécbat HapTUpopEvous Kal Boavras, @s ovd' avrob
pevovow, aX oiXnoovTar tov Ilovroy Epnuov GTONTOVTES. TavTa pos AovxovAXov amaryyerOévra nal TOUS éxet mpoab«éd Fetpe OTPAaTLO-Tas, mon pe bo wrovTOU Kal Tpupijs Bapeis yeyovoras Tpos Ty oTparetay Kat ayonrts beo-pévous, ws 5@ THY exeivwy érvOovTo Tappycia», 57°

for not taking a single drachma from the public treasury, but making the war pay for itself.
XXX. Here he received an embassy from the king of the Parthians also, inviting him into friendly alliance. This was agreeable to Lucullus, and in his turn he sent ambassadors to the Parthian, but they discovered that he was playing a double game, and secretly asking for Mesopotamia as reward for an alliance with Tigranes. Accordingly, when Lucullus was apprised of this, he determined to ignore Tigranes and Mithridates as exhausted antagonists, and to make trial of the Parthian power by marching against them, thinking it a glorious .thing, in a single -impetuous onset of war, to throw, like an athlete, three kings in succession,
and to make his way, unvanquished and victorious,
through three of the greatest: empires under the sun.
Accordingly he sent orders to Sornatius and his.
fellow commanders in Pontus to bring the army
there to him, as he intended to proceed eastward from Gordyené. These officers had already found their soldiers unmanageable and disobedient, but now they discovered that they were utterly beyond control, being unable to move them by any manner of persuasion or compulsion. Nay, they roundly.
swore that they would not even stay where they were, but would go off and leave Pontus undefended.

When news of this was brought to Lucullus, it demoralised his soldiers there also. Their wealth. and luxurious life had already made them averse to military service and desirous of leisure, and when they heard of the bold words of their comrades in Pontus, they called them brave men, and said dvdpas avrovs atrexddovy Kal pupntéov avTous épacav elvat' ToAAa yap avtois dia owrTnpias Kal avaTravoews KaTeipyiaba.
571

XX XI. Totodtav 5é cal rrovnpotépay ert AOyor aiaOopevos o AovKcovAros tHv éxt Tdp8ous otpatelav adjxev, avOis 8 eri tov Tiypavny éBabsle Oépovs axpalovtos. Kxai tov Tadpov vrepBarov nOvpnoe XXNwpOV ToV Trediwy éxhavévTwY? ToTodTov at @pat Sia THY WuypoTnTa tod dépos voTepitovawy. ov pny adda KataBas Kal Sis } Tpls avaToApnoavtas én' avTov Tous "Appevious Tpeyrapevos adews érrop0er Tas Kwpas, Kal TOV TapecKevacpévoy TO Tiypdvn citov éEaipwv tv autos éhoBetto Tots TroNeuiows Tepiéa Tyo eV atropiav. émel bé ™ poxadovpevos els ayn avTovs reperagpevov TOV xdpaxa Kat TropO av éy ove Thy x@pav OUK éxivet memdyyoras TONAGKLS, avactas éBddilev em' 'Aprdfata ro Tiypavou Bacinevov, Strov Kal qwaides avT@ vio Kal yapeTal yuvaixes Hoav, ovK av oidpevos apayel Tavira mponcecbar Tov Tiypavny.
Aéyerat 8 'AvviBav tov Kapyndomov, Avtioyou Kkatatrov\ennOévtos wTo "Pwpaiwv, petaBavra mpos 'Apra~ay rov 'Appévioy ddXwv Te ToANOY eionyntny Kxal diddoKxaroy ate yevécbar ypnaipov, Kal THS yopas Katapabovta Torey evpueoTatov Kai hdiotov apyovvra Kal Ttapop@pevoy oXRpA Toews ev avVT@ mpovToypdwacbat, Kai
572

513

their example must be followed in Gordyené, for their many achievements entitled them to respite from toil and freedom from danger.

XXXI. Such speeches, and even worse than these, coming to the ears of Lucullus, he gave up his expedition against the Parthians, and marched once more against Tigranes,! it being now the height of summer. And yet, after crossing the Taurus, he was discouraged to find the plains still covered with unripe grain, so much later are the seasons there, owing to the coolness of the atmosphere. However, he descended from the mountains, routed the Armenians who twice or thrice ventured to attack him, and then plundered their villages without fear, and, by taking away the grain which had been stored up for Tigranes, reduced his enemy to the straits which he had been fearing for himself. Then he challenged them to battle by encompassing their camp with a moat, and by ravaging their territory before their eyes ; but this did not move them, so often had they been defeated. He therefore broke camp and marched against Artaxata, the royal residence of Tigranes, where were his wives and young children, thinking that Tigranes would not give these up without fighting.

It is said that Hannibal the Carthaginian, after Antiochus had been conquered by the Romans, left him and went to Artaxas the Armenian, to whom he gave many excellent suggestions and instructions. For instance, observing that a section of the country . which had the greatest natural advantages and — attractions was lying idle and neglected, he drew up a plan for a city there, and then brought Artaxas

1 68 B.C.

tov Apratay érayayovra beifat cat Tapopyjoas
mpos Tov oixicpov. nobévtos 5é Tod Bactréws kal SenOérvtos, Strws adtos émtatatHan TOU Epyou, péya Te Kal qayKaXdov ype Toews avacThvat, Kal yevopérny érr@vupov tov Bactréws pentpoTroAcy amrodexOnvas THs 'Appevias.
"Eml tavrny tod AovcovAXou Babilovros ovK nvéoxeto Tuypavns, adra Thy Sivayy avaraBov muepe TeTapry Tapes Tpatomédevoe tois "Pwpaiots, év péow AaBov Tov 'Apoaviay ToTapoy, dy é& avayKns diaBaréor 7; Tv ToL 'Papators THY em
"Aprafatov TOpEevopevors. Gicas dé Trois Bevis

AovKoudnos, Os év xepow ovens TIS viens, dteBi-Bate TOV oT parov év dadexa orreipars TporeTay-pévass, tats 8 aAXaus emriTeTarywevas Tpos TAS KUKM@TELS TOV TWorepiwv. qTrodAXrOL yap hoay imrmets kal Noyddes ayTiTapaTteTaypevol, 7 po
S avrav immoroforat Mapéoo Kat Loyxog opor “T8npes, ols padicta TeV Eevev 0 Teypavns érioTEevey WS paxipoTarors. ou pny émpaxOn
Te Nap pov am avutTav, poxpa é Tois immevot TOY “Popaiwy SvamdnKTig dwevor TOUS melous émuovTas ovX wUTrémetvav, arr Exatépwoe THIS guyis me éreaTdoavto Tovs imeis
7 pos Sy ia wfw. dua 5€ TO ToVTOUS Siacmapivat T@V Tepl Tov Teypayny efurmacapevav id@v Thy, AapmpoTnrTa Kal 70 TANGos o AovcovaAnos édeice.
Kal TOUS pev imaets amo TIS dia@Eews avexaneiro, TpwTOS & auTos avTéoTn Tots ‘ATporrarnvois Kar QUTOV OvCL PETA TOV ApioTwY, Kal Tp els xyetpas éNeciv hoBynoas étrpépato. tpiav & opod trapa-574 to the place and showed him its possibilities, and urged him to undertake the building. The king was delighted, and begged Hannibal to superintend the work himself, whereupon a very great and beautiful city arose there, which was named after the king, and proclaimed the capital of Armenia. When Lucullus marched against this city, Tigranes could not suffer it quietly, but put himself at the head of his fortes, and on the fourth day encamped over against the Romans, keeping the river Arsania between himself and them, which they must of necessity cross on their way to Artaxata. There- upon Lucullus sacrificed to the gods, in full assurance that the victory was already his, and then crossed the’ river with twelve cohorts in the van, and the rest disposed so as to prevent the enemy from closing in upon his flanks. For large bodies of horsemen and picked soldiers confronted him, and these were covered by Mardian mounted archers and Iberian lancers, on whom Tigranes relied beyond any other mercenaries, deeming them the most war-like. However, they did not shine in action, but after a slight skirmish with the Roman cavalry, gave way before the advancing infantry, scattered to right and left in flight, and drew after them the cavalry in pursuit. On the dispersion of these troops, Tigranes rode out at the head of his cavalry, and when Lucullus saw their splendour and their numbers he was afraid. He therefore recalled his cavalry from their pursuit of the flying enemy, and taking the lead of his troops in person, set upon the Atropateni, who were stationed opposite him with the magnates of the king’s following, and before coming to close quarters, sent them off in panic flight. Of three

575

2

teraypévov Baciréwv aioyiota Soxet huyeiv o Tlovtixos MiOpidarns, ov8é tHv Kpavyny Tav ‘Po-paiwy avacyopevos. yevouévns 88 tas Su@kews paxpas cal de drs vuKTos, ov movoy KTELvOYTES
avtous, GAXa Kal Cwypoivtes Kal Ypnuata Kat Aetay dyovres Kab pépovres aqrelmrov ob ‘Popaior.
dnol dé o Acovios év pev TH _Tporépa Bax mrevovas, ev Sé TAUTN yvwptmwTépovs Treceiy Kal AnPOjvat Tay Torepiov.
XXXII. ’Ex rovrou Aovnovhros pep earnppevos car Treappnkas a avo Wpodyew Stevoeiro Kal KaTa.- otpéher Oar THY BapBapov dpa & lonpeptas hOivoTwpi7s ovK av éXricavTe Xeuperves érré-mecov Bapeis, Ta pev wheiora KatavipovTes, éy 6€ Tails ai Ppiats maxyny _ emupépovres Kal
mayov, ud’ ot Yadetrol peév qoav ot morapol
Tois tarot miver Oar bua, puxporntos brrepBorgy, Xarerral oe avTay at diaBacets exprryvupevou
TOU KpuoTaddou Kal Siaxomrovtos Ta veupa TOV immov TH TeaXUTNTL. THs dé xepas 1 Toy cuvnpedys ovaa ral OTEVOTOPOS Kar éeadns ael xa vy parvev autos, Xeovos dvam (pT auevous €v Tais odovmopiass Kal Kaxos év OTOL vorepois
VUKTEPEVOVTAS. OU TOAAaS OvY HMEepas aKONOV-Onoavres TO AoveovAr@ peta Thy paxny nvav-TLODVTO, Tparov Seduevor nad rods Xikudpyous mpooméumovres, Emeta DopuBwdéarepov cUVLOTapevor al KaTa oKnvas VUKTOS arardfovres,
Orrep elvat Boxel obpBorov AMTOCTATLKDS éxovans
OTPATLAs. KatTou TOAAG TpogeMTaper Aovnovn-Nos akiav avtovs paxpoOvpiav éuBarécOar tais 576

514

kings who together confronted the Romans, Mithridates of Pontus seems to have fled most disgrace-fully, for he could not endure even their shouting.
The pursuit was long and lasted through the whole night, and the Romans were worn out, not only with killing their enemies, but also with taking prisoners and getting all sorts of booty. Livy says that in the former. battle a greater number of the enemy, but in this more men of high station were slain and taken prisoners.

XXXII. Elated and emboldened by this victory, Lucullus purposed to advance further into the interior and subdue the Barbarian realm utterly. But, con- trary to what mighf have been expected at the time of the autumnal equinox, severe winter weather was encountered, which generally covered the ground with snow, and even when the sky was clear pro- duced hoar frost and ice, owing to which the horses could not well drink of the rivers, so excessive was the cold, nor could they easily cross them, since the ice broke, and cut the horses' sinews with its jagged edges. Most of the country was thickly shaded, full of narrow defiles, and marshy, so that it kept the soldiers continually wet; they were covered with snow while they marched, and spent the nights uncomfortably in damp places. Accordingly, they had not followed Lucullus for many days after the battle when they began to object. At first they sent their tribunes to him with entreaties to desist, then they held more tunrultuous assemblies, and shouted in their tents at night, which seems to have been characteristic of a mutinous army. And yet Lu- cullus plied them with entreaties, calling upon them to possess their souls in patience until they had

puyais, axypt ov thy év 'A ppeviots Kapyndova AaBovres avipos éxGiarou, Tov "AvviBay héeyou, épyov dvaTpepacty. as &' ov« rreBev, atriyyev
avTous oTriaw Kat Kat addas wrepBoras SerOov TOV Tadpov els THV Aeyouerny Mvydoneny KaTeé-Bawve, xopav ma ppopov pal areewnv Kal TOALY
ev auth peyarny kat moAvdvO pwrrov Exoucar, hy ot pev BdapBapo NioiAry, ot 8 "EdAgves
"Avtioxevay M vySovcny Tpoonyopevov. TavTny
elev afiopate pev aderdos Teypavou Toupas, curretpig d€ kal dewornte pnXavenh Kandipaxos 0 Kal epi "Aueoov TrcioTa mpaypata Aov-KONA jwapac ywov. Baropevos dé oTparomebov Kal Tacav iSéav ToNLopKias emayayav OMY@ xpove Kata kpatos AapBaver THV TOMY. Kal
r oupa pev éauTov eyxXetpioarte prravO pores
expngaro, Karhipaye & Umiaxvoupevep Annas
" atroppryrous peyahov XPNMaT ov dvaxanrwnpe ov mpocéayev, ANd exéhevoev ev médaus copter bau diuxnv wdhéEovta Tov TUPOS; ao Tv 'Aponvev Siadupnvdpevos Toy adeihero Pioriwlay auTov Kat XEneToTNTos émiderEw pos Tous "EAAnvas.

XXXII. M expe Tovbe hain tis dv AouxovAdr@
THY TUYNY érropevny ovoTpaTnyeiv. évredbev
8 damep TVEULATOS €mthuTroVvT Os m poo Biabopevos WavTa Kal TavTamaow avTiKpovoy GpeTny pev émedetxvuto Kal pax poOupiay NYE HOVOS aryaBob, bofav 6€ Kal Xa pov ovdepiay at mpages é Ex OV, ara Kal THY mpovTapYoucav eyyus 7 re Svo-Tparyav Kal Srapepopevos parny arroBaneiv.
trav 8 aiTay auTos ouxi THV ehaxiorny eis
TOUTO Trapécyev, oUK wv DepatrevTiKds TA1OoUsS
578

taken and destroyed the Armenian Carthage, the work of their most hated foe, meaning Hannibal. ‘But since he could not persuade them, he led them back, and crossing the Taurus by another pass, de- scended into the country called Mygdonia, which is fertile and open to the sun,.and contains a large and populous city, called Nisibis by the Barbarians, Antioch in Mygdonia by the Greeks. The nominal defender of this city, by virtue of his rank, was Gouras, a brother of Tigranes; but its actual de- fender, by virtue of his experience and skill as an engineer, was Callimachus, the man who gave Lucullus most trouble at Amisus also. But Lucullus established his camp before it, laid siege to it in every way, and in a short time took the city by storm. To Gouras, who surrendered himself into his hands, he gave kind treatment; but to Calli- machus, who promised to reveal secret stores of great treasure, he would not hearken. Instead, he ordered him to be brought in chains, that he might be punished for destroying Amisus by fire, and thereby robbing Lucullus of the object of his ambition, which was to show kindness to the Greeks.

XXXIII. Up to this point, one might say that fortune had followed Lucullus and fought on his side; but from now on, as though a favouring breeze had failed him, he had to force every issue, and met with obstacles everywhere. He still displayed the bravery and patience of a good leader, but his undertakings brought him no new fame or favour ; indeed, so ill-starred and devious was his course, that he came near losing that which he had already won. And he himself was not least to blame for this. He was not disposed to court the favour of the common

579

pp 2

oTpaTLoTtKod, Kai may TO T pos ndovny Tou apxouevov ywopevov apxis atipiav Kal Karddhuow nyoupevos’ TO dé éytaoTov, ove Tots SuvaTots Kal LoOTLOLS EVapLOTTOS Elvat TepUKwS, GANA Tdv-Twyv Katappovav Kal pndevos a€iovs mpos abtov Hryoupevos. Tadta yap vrapEar AovKovAXA@ Kaka

AN€youow €v Waot Tois adArots ayabois: Kal yap péyas Kal Kadods Kal Sewvos etrrety cal povepos omaras év ayopa Kal otpatoméd Soxet yevéoOar.
Larovatios pev ovv dno yaretras StateOjvac TOUS GTpaTL@Tas TMpos avToOY EvOUS év apyH Tod moXéuou mpos Kutix@ xal wadv mpos 'Apiog, dv0 yemavas éEnS év Xapaxe Stayaryely dvayKaobévras. nviwv & avrous kal ot Aortroi yet waves.
h yap év tH worepia Stexeipalov 4 mapa ois
cuppay ous draiOpot oxnvoovres, eis Sé modw “EAAnvida xal dirnv ovd arak eianOe pera otpatotrédov AovKovaAros. obttw Sé diaxerpévors avtots Tas peyiotas évédbwxay ato Ths ‘Pomns ot Snpaywyol mpopdces, POovm tod AovKovdAXov KaTnyopouvTes ws Ure dirapxias nab didowAovtias €XKovTos Tov ToNE“OV Kat povovod KaTéyovros év tavt@ Kidsxiav, ‘Aciav, BiOvviar, Iladdayoviav, Taratiav, Lovrov, "Appeviay, ra pexpr Pdardos, vuvi bé cai ta Trypavou Bacirea memopOnxoTos, WaTep exdvaaL TOvs Bactnreis, ov KaTaTroNepjoat weupOévtos. TodTo yap eitety gacw &va trav otpatnyav Aevxiov Koivrov, bd’ ov padmota meicbérvtes Andicavto méptewy
S:addyous TH AovKovrAArA Tis Emrapyxias. epndtcavro b¢ xal Tov it’ avt@® oTpatevopévwn Trodr- 515 Novs adpetoOar oTpateias.
580

LUCULLUS

soldier, and thought that everything that was done to please one’s command only dishonoured and undermined one’s authority. Worst of all, not even with men of power and of equal rank with himself could he readily co-operate ; he despised them all, and thought them of no account as compared with himself. These bad qualities Lucullus is said to have had, but no more than these. He was tall and handsome, a powerful speaker, and equally able in the forum and the field.

Well, then, Sallust says that his soldiers were ill- disposed towards him at the very beginning of the war, before Cyzicus, and again before Amisus, because they were compelled to spend two successive winters in camp. The winters that followed also vexed them. They spent them either in the enemy’s country, or among the allies, encamped under the open sky. Not once did Lucullus take his army into a city that was Greek and friendly. In their disaffection, they received the greatest support from the popular tribunes at Rome. These envied Lucullus and denounced him for protracting the war through love of power and love of wealth. They said he all but had in his own sole power Cilicia, Asia, Bithynia, Paphlagonia, Galatia, Pontus, Armenia, and the regions extending to the Phasis, and that now he had actually plundered the palaces of Tigranes, as if he had been sent, not to subdue the kings, but to strip them. These were the words, they say, of Lucius Quintus, one of the praetors, to whom most of all the people listened when they passed a vote to send men who should succeed Lucullus in the command of his province. They voted also that many of the soldiers under him should be released from military service.

XXXIV. Tovtois' dé tHAtKovTots ovat Tpocyt-
\ 4 4 / \
vetat TO partota AovKovrAd® dte_pyacpévoy Tas
mpdkes, TlomAvos Kiwdios, avnp uBpiotns Kat PecTOS OALYwpias dmrdans Kal OpacityTos. Hv Sé ths AovxovAdrou yuvatxos 'ddeXgos, hy cal dca-Pbeipery exyev aitiavy dKoracTtoTdTny ovcap.
, A 4 4 > cd
tote 5€ tH AovKovAA@ ovoTpaTevwy ovxy Bons avtov nk€iov tisns éruyxaver' nkiov 5é mpa@tos \ an 9 a \ \ ,
elvat, Kal TOAN@Y aTroNELTTOMEVoS Sia TOV TpoTrOV UTrotkovper THY DipSpravnv orpatiay kal wape@- Evve xata tov AouKovAXou, AGyous YpNnaToUs eis ovux axovtas ovd anbers tod SypaywyeicOat diadidovs. oToL yap toav, ods Kal mpdoTepov 4 avéerecce Pip Ppias atoxteivavtas tov trarov PruxKov avtov ér€c8at otpatynyov. v0 Kal Tov
Krwbiov déms edéyovto Kal dtdooTpatiwTny
/ A Mpoonyopevov, ayavaxtety mpootrotovpevoy UTrép
auTa@v, eb mépas ovdev EoTaL TOAELwWY TOTOUTwY Kal TOVvwY, GAAG TravTl pev EOvE. payopmevor,
n " , , \ ,
macay 5é yhv TAaVw@pEVvot KaTAaTpifyovat Tov Biov
/
ovdev akiov ex THrALKaUTNS HEepopevot oTpateias, adra tas AoveovAXov tapatréutovtes ayakas Kal Kapnrous éxTopatov xpvcav Kal diadiOwv
yenovoas, of Sé Tlopurniov otpatia@tar dHpyos GVTES ON Trou peTa yUValKan Kal Téxvav KaOrvTAL
n b 4 \ , 4 b) Q 5 /

yi evdaipova Kat modes Eyovtes, ov MtOpidarnv kal Tuypdyny eis tas douxntous éuPBadovtes épn-
, ? ~ ? / ‘ 4 ,
pias, ovde THs "Agias Ta Bacitea KatappipavrTes,
’ \ , b , b > , \ a adra huydow avOpwras év “TBnpiqa Kat dparre.- 532 |
o

LUCULLUS

XXXIV. To these factors in the case, so un- favourable in themselves, there was added another, which most of all vitiated the undertakings of Lucullus. This was Publius Clodius,a man of wanton violence, and full of all arrogance and boldness. He was a brother of the wife of Lucullus, a woman of the most dissolute ways, whom he was actually accused of debauching. At this time he was in service with Lucullus, and did not get all the honour which he thought his due. He thought a foremost place his due, and when many were preferred before him because of his evil character, he worked secretly upon the soldiers who had been commanded by Fimbria, and tried to incite them against Lucullus, disseminating among them speeches well adapted to men who were neither unwilling nor unaccustomed to have their favour courted. These were the men whom Fimbria had once persuaded to kill the consul Flaccus, and choose himself for their general. They therefore gladly listened to Clodius also, and called him .the soldier’s friend. For he pretended to be incensed in their behalf, if there was to be no end of their countless wars and toils, but they were rather to wear out their lives in fighting with every nation and wandering over every land, receiving no suitable reward for such service, but convoying the waggons and camels of Lucullus laden with golden beakers set with precious stones, while the soldiers of Pompey, citizens now, were snugly ensconced with wives and children in the possession of fertile lands and prosperous cities,—not for having driven Mithri- dates and Tigranes into uninhabitable deserts, nor for having demolished the royal palaces of Asia, but for having fought with wretched exiles in Spain and 583

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Tats év Irardig moteunoavtes. “ Ti ouy, et bet undérore Travcacbat oTparevonevors, ov! ToLou-TP TTPATHY® Kal c@pata Ta NouTra Kal puxas puddo coper, 3 KaANLCTOS elvat Soxel xdapos o
TOV oTpaTevopeveny TOVTOS ; ;
Totavras airiaus To AovxovAXou oTpaTeupa SiapOapev ovr emi Tiypayyy nrcorovOnaev our ert McOpidarny avdis ef ‘Appevias els Tovrov éuBarovta kal Thy apn avarapuSavorra, ™pogacw oé€ Tov XEepova ToLoupevor mept THY Lopdunviv SueTpusor, dcov ovtw Iloprniov 7 Tw’ adrov TaV Hye“ovwv AovKovdAr® diddoxov

adpitecbat Tpoc Soxavres.
XXXV. ’Esrel 6€ MiOpidatns Ayyerto PaBrov VEVLENK@S ert Lepvartov Kar Tped.prov Badtleuv, aiaxuvdevres elrovTo TO Aovkovhr@. Tprdpuos
8 ws &roupov apndaat TO viKnpa, imply émehOeiv AovxovAdov eyes évTa, prdoripovpevos HTTAT AL waxy peydny. AéyovTas yap viép ETTAKLTXUALOUS ‘Pwpatov dmobaveiv, év ols éxaTovTapxot pep éxaT ov TEVTHKOVTA, XeAtapxou 8 elxooe xat Téccapes’ TO Se oTpaToT edov elhe Mibpidarns.
éreNOav 5é Aovxounrros OAL YaLS DoTepor népas Tpedprov pev UO TOY oTPATLWTOY CnToupevov Tpos opyny ebecrewe, MO pidarou dé pn GéXovtos paxec Bat, anrra _ Tuypaeny TEPLLEVOVTOS non cataBaivovra peTa TOANTS Suvdpews, & éyve mpi apporépous ouvenGei Tad aTavTnoat Kal d1ayovicacBas pos TOV Teypavny. TopEevopEevep 8 auT@ Kal odov ot Dip Sprarot oTACLACAVTES _aréderov tas Tdfes, ws aperpévor Soypate Ths 584

runaway slaves in Italy. “Why, then,” he would cry, “if our campaigns are never to come to an end, do we not reserve what is left of our bodies, and our lives, for a general in whose eyes the wealth of his soldiers is his fairest honour ?”’

For such red ns as these the army of Lucullus was demoralised, and refused to follow him -either against Tigranes, or against Mithridates, who had come back into Pontus from Armenia, and was trying to restore his power there. They made the winter their excuse for lingering in Gordyené, expecting every moment that Pompey, or some other commander, would be sent out to succeed Lucullus.

XXXV. But when tidings came that Mithridates had defeated Fabius,! and was on the march against Sornatius and Triarius, they were struck with shame and followed Lucullus. But Triarius, who was ambitious to snatch the victory, which he thought assured, before Lucullus, who was near, should come up, was defeated in a great battle. It is said that over seven thousand Romans fell, among whom were a hundred and fifty centurions, and twenty-four tribunes ; and their camp was captured by Mithridates. But Lucullus, coming up a few days afterward, hid Triarius from the search of his infuriated soldiers. Then, since Mithridates was unwilling to give fight, but lay waiting for Tigranes, who was coming down with a large force, he determined to anticipate the junction of their armies, and march back to meet Tigranes in battle. But while he was on the way thither, the Fimbrian soldiers mutinied and left their. ranks, declaring that they were discharged from

| 67 B.c.
585
PLUTARCH'S LIVES

otpatetas nal pnxéte TO AovxovAX@ tpoajKov
dpyew, érépois arrodederypévwv Tav érapxiav.
ION 9 3 4 aA > 3 gs e , ovdev ovv éotiv 6 TL TOY Trap akiay o AovKovAXOS 9 e , bd a > \ \ ovX vmépevev, avtiBorov Kal" eva Kal Kata oxnvas teptiav taewos Kal SeBxpupuévos, &ore
5 -- \ A 1 , e 5 > ,
@v Kat yevpos' amropuevos. ot 6 amretptBovTo
\ 4 \ \ a lA
Tas SeEtwoets Kal Keva Tpoceppittovy Badavtta, Kal povov paxecBat Tots trorepiows éexédevor,
b > S ? , a > ' 3 \
ap wv movos nTiaTaTo THouTEW. Ov nV adda
A ¥ a 4 ? /
TOV GAXwY oTpaTiwTayv Seopévov éxBracbévtes
e \ <Q a \ Oé
of DipBpravot cuvéPevto trapapeivar Td Oépos:
A /
dav 8é pndels ev TH Ypovwe TovT@ KaTin pos
? A 3 4 ? / a 3 v
avtovs aywviovupevos, amnrAdAdyOar. Tadt' eer e., fe » Fs \ Y , otépyew €& avayxns tov AoveovAndor, } mpoéa Gar a Uf \ , 3 4 "
tots BapBdpo.s THY ywpay atrorepOevta. auvei-
/ /
yev ov avTovs ovKeTL tpocBialopevos ovdé
4 Tpoaywv qmpos paxnv, GArN Ee Tapapévorev
ayarav, Kal mepiopav tropOovpévny bro Tod Trypavou tnv Karaaboxiav cal wad vBpivovta
a A McOpidatnv, bv abtos éreotdAKes TH TVYKANT@
4 a \ e 4
ypahwv KatareTroNepnobar: Kat ot mperBeus Tapnoav avte mpos THv Sideowv tov év IlovT@
, e & / 9 4 \

mpayunatwv, as 8) BeBuiws éyouévwv. nal 87
3 a
mapovTes Ewpwv OVS avTod KUpLov, AAA Trapot-
/ A youmevoyv Kal TpoTnaxtCopevov UO TOY OTPATLW-TOV, Ols YE TOTOUTO TrEpLnY THs Els TOV OTPATHYOV
t] / Lf “a 4 4 > 4
agenyelas, WaoTE TOU Oépous AryovTos évduvTES
1 nal xeipds S; xerpas,
586
516

service by decree of the people, and that Lucullus no longer had the right to command them, since the provinces had been assigned to others. Accordingly, there was no expedient, however much beneath his dignity, to which Lucullus did not force himself to resort,-—entreating the soldiers man by man, going about from tent to tent in humility and tears, and actually taking some of the men by the hand in supplication. But they rejected his advances, and threw their empty purses down before him, bidding him fight the enemy alone, since he alone knew how to get rich from them. However, at the request of the other soldiers, the Fimbrians were constrained to agree to remain during the summer; but if, in the meantime, no enemy should come down to fight them, they were to be dismissed. Lucullus was obliged to content himself with these terms, or else to be deserted and give up the country to the Barbarians. He therefore simply held his soldiers together, without forcing them any more, or leading them out to battle. Their remaining with him was all he could expect, and he looked on helplessly while Tigranes ravaged Cappadocia and Mithridates resumed his insolent ways,—a monarch whom he had reported by letter to the Senate as completely sub- dued. Besides, the commissioners were now with him, who had been sent out to regulate the affairs of Pontus, on the supposition that it was a secure Roman possession. And lo, when they came, they saw that Lueullus was not even his own master, but was mocked and insulted by his soldiers. These went so far in their outrageous treatment of their general, that, at the close of the summer, they donned their

587

Ta OTAa Kal oTAagamEVOL TAS payYaipas mpoeKa-AodvTO TOUS pndapod TapovTas, GAN amNpKOTAsS
4 4 b / \ ,
Hon Trodeuious. araddkavtes 5€ Kal cxiapayy-cavrTes aTeywpnaay €K TOU Xapakos, éTipapTU-pdpevot TeTANpw@d Oat Tov Ypovory, by @porAcynocav T@® AovxovAX@ trapapéverv.
Tovs & dAdXous éxdre: da ypappatov Uopimrney A \ > J (o) \ s, ios: 0n yap amrodébetxto Tod mpos MiOpiddrnv

kat Teypdynv wodéuov .otpatnyos yapite Tov

Snpwou Kat Kodaxeia TOV Snpaywyar, érel TH YE

BovrAn Kai tois dpictas adixa racyey édoxet

AovKovAXos ov trovdéuou Siadcyous, adAa Opidp-

4 2 QA A / ? s

Bov AapBavor, obbé THs ctpatnyias avayxalo-

? a ? A a , 2—-/

pevos, GAAA TeV éTdOr\wv THs ctpatryias é£totac0a: Kai Tapaywpetv érépors.
XXXVI. “Ere b€ pardArAov ébavy TO yLvopevov
Tots €xel Trapovot veweonTov. ovTE yap Tihs O AovxovrXdos ovTE Timwpias TOV ev TOAEWM KUPLOS
; e “A 999 ¥ fs ‘4 ‘A umTnpxev, ovd ela twa Llopumanios Badifery mpos avrov ovdé mpocéyew ols éxeivos eypade ral diévepe peta tov Séxa mpéo Bewr, GAN’ éxodvev ext LOeis Siaypappata Kal poBepos TA,pov amo pecCovos duvdpews. Gums dé eof Tots pidous ouvaryaryelv avrous® Kai auvidOov év Kon Tevi THS Taratias Kal T™pooeimov aXA2) NOUS prod povos Kat auvno Oncay emi Tois KaTopOwpevors éxaTépy, mpeo BUTEpos ev Ov oO Aodtkovrros, atiwpa © Av to Tlopmrniov peifov aro mreovey atpatnyiav Kat dveiv OpiapBov. pdBdou 8

588

LUCULLUS

armour, drew their swords, and challenged to battle an enémy who was nowhere near, but had already withdrawn. Then they shouted their war cries, brandished their weapons in the air, and departed from the camp, calling men to witness that the time had expired during which they had agreed to remain with Lucullus. ;

The rest of the soldiers Pompey summoned by letter, for he had already been appointed to conduct the war against Mithridates and Tigranes,! because he won the favour of the people and flattered their leaders. But the Senate and the nobility considered Lucullus a wronged man. He had been superseded, they said, not in a war, but in a triumph, and had been forced to relinquish and turn over to others, not his campaign, but the prizes of victory in his campaign.

XXXVI. But to those who were on the spot, what happened there seemed still greater matter for wrath and indignation. For Lucullus was not allowed to bestow rewards or punishments for what had been done in the war, nor would Pompey even suffer any one to visit him, or to pay any heed to the edicts and regulations which he made in concert with the ten commissioners, but prevented it by issuing counter-edicts, and by the terror which his presence with a larger force inspired. Nevertheless, their friends decided to bring the two men together, and so they met in a certain village of Galatia. They greeted one another amicably, and each congratulated the other on his victories. Lucullus was the elder man, but Pompey's prestige was the greater, because he had conducted more campaigns, and celebrated

1 66 B.C.

appotépwv rponyotvto Sadyvndopor bia Tas vixas. kal tov ye Ilowmniov paxpav odov bia Torwy avudpwv Kal avypunpav odevacavtos tas Sddvas Enpas mepixepévas tais pdBdous idovtes ot tod AovxovrAryov paBdodopos dirtodppovovpevor Tois éxeivov petédOwxay é€x TaV idiwv, Tpoc- gdtouvs Kal Oarepas Eyovtes. Kal TO ytvopevov eis olwvov éridevto ypnatov ot Ilopmrniou dpiror: TO yap évTe THY éxeivov otpaTnyiay ai TovToU 4 mpdkes éxoopyoav. éx &é TOY Noyov 7 pos ovdéy | CTTLELKES cuveBnoar, arn' ett padXov aNOT PLO Oévres Tos adANAOUS amnrOov: Kat Tas UTrO Tob AovxovAXov yevopevas Svar d£eus RKvpa@d er 0 Topsrnios, oT pAaTLWTas d€ TOUS aAXOUS amayayov povous auT@ YiALOUS éEaxoatous améXre ouv- OprapBevoovras, ovdé TOUTOUS para 7 poOvpeos ET OMEVOUS. oT Tes ay aguns q dvaruxns O Aovxovdros T pos TO TavTav év Wyepovig 7 pero Kal péyio Tov" @S, €b TOUTO peTa TOV awv vrinpeev avt@o, THALKOUTMY 6YTwWY Kal TOTOUTM)D, per avopeias, emiperetas, TUVETEWS, Otkacoovuns, ovK ay elyev " 'Pepaior Tyenovia TOV Eudparny

THS "Agias Gpov, adra Ta érxata Kat Thv ‘TpKavia Oararray, TOV pev arAdAwY eOvaOv Teypavy TPONTTNMEVOY, THS 6€ NapOav Suvdpews ovx bon Kata Kpaacov eLepavn TooavTns Kal Kata Aov-xKovNXOvV ovans ovo omotws TUVETTHONS, GX’ vr éuguriwy cal Tpocoikav TONELw@Y OVS A ppevious vBpivovtas éppwwévns apvvec Oat.
Nov 6€ pou doxet Aovnovdros dy apehnoe de avtov Thy Tatpida Brdvpas peilova b.’ érépwv.
590°

517

LUCULLUS

two triumphs. Fasces wreathed with laurel were carried before both commanders in token of their victories, and since Pompey had made a long march through waterless and arid regions, the laure] which wreathed his fasces was withered. When the lictors of Lucullus noticed this, they considerately gave Pompey’s lictors some of their own Jaurel, which was fresh and green.” This circumstance was interpreted as a good omen by the friends of Pompey; for, in fact, the exploits of Lucullus did adorn the command of Pompey. However, their conference resulted in no equitable agreement, but they left it still more estranged from one another. Pompey also annulled the ordinances of Lucullus, and took away all but sixteen hundred of his soldiers. These he left to share his triumph, but even these did not follow him very cheerfully. To such a marvellous degree was Lucullus either unqualified or unfortunate as regards the first and highest of all requisites in a leader. Had this power of gaining the affection of his soldiers been added to his other gifts, which were so many and so great,— courage, diligence, wisdom, and justice, —the Roman empire would not have been bounded by the Euphrates, but by the outer confines of Asia, and the Hyrcanian sea ; for all the other nations had already been subdued by Tigranes, and in the time of Lucullus the Parthian power was not so great as it proved to be in the time of Crassus, nor was it so well united, nay rather, owing to intestine and neighbouring wars, it had not even strength enough to repel the wanton attacks of the Armenians.

Now my own opinion is that the harm Lucullus did his country through his influence upon others, was . greater than the good he did her himself. For his

591

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

\ ? b , s / ,
7 Ta yap év Appevig TpoTrata, Hapbwv hao tov
ést@ta kat Teypavoxepta cai NiotBts cal mAov-TOS €x TOUT@Y TOAUS eis ‘PwOunv Kopiabels Kal TO Tuypavou duddnua troprevbéy aiyxpadwrov éripe Kpdooov éri thv ’Aciav, a Addupa Kai delay

tovs BapBdpovs, addo 8 ovdey bvtas. tayv
, n / , 2" SS oneres
pevtot tots TidpOwv rokevpacw évrvyov aéderée
\ 7 > BJ 4 \ , fal
Tov AovkovdXrov ove adpoovvn kal padakia Tav ToNepiwv, avVTOU dé TOAMN Kal SeLvOTNTL TrEpLryEvo-pevov. adda TAaUTA pev DoTeEpov.
XXXVII. ‘O éd€ AoveovrAXos avaBas eis
‘Pounv mparov pev KxatéraBe Tov adeddov Madpxop bro Taiov Meppiou xarnyopotpevov éd’
_ ” , / ,
ois émpake tapievwv Ara sampoctd~arTos.
éxeivou & dmopuyovtos éml rovTov avtTov o Méppitos petaBaropevos tapw uve tov Shor, cal
e / / \ 4
@S TOAAG vevoo dic pévy Kal pnxvvavte TOV ToAe-9 ” 2A \ 5 a r) , 8 06
pov erretceyv avT@ pn Sodvat OpiapBov. édAOovtos
> > A na , / e a & eis aydva tod AovKovAdouv péyay of Tpatot
; _?f e a Kat Suvat@tato. Katapi€aytes éauTovs Tails
a A / \ a f ”
gurais ToAAD Senoet Kal otrovdn pods Erreroay
tov Shuov émitpéyrar OprauBedoas, ovy, woTreEp Evol, ponker Te Troumns Kal wAnOee TeV Kope-Couévwy éexTAnKTiKov Kal oyAwdn OpiayBov,
? \ a \ ee a / =
ANNA TOLS MEV OTTAOLS TWY TrOAELLWY OVOL Trap-ToAAOs Kat Tols BacidwKois pnYavnpace Tov Prapiverov imrodpopuov Suexoopnoe Kal Oéa tis 9A z ¢ \ 9 > i 2 \
3 hv avtn Kad éavtny ovK Eevxatadpovntos: év &é 927

LUCULLUS

trophies in Armenia, standing on the borders of Parthia, and Tigranocerta, and Nisibis, and the vast wealth brought to Rome from these cities, and the display in his triumph of the captured diadem of Tigranes, incited Crassus to his attack upon Asia ;
he thought that the Barbarians were spoil and booty, and nothing else. It was not long, however, before he encountered the Parthian arrows, and proved that Lucullus had won his victories, not through the folly and cowardice of his enemies, but through his own daring and ability. This, however, is later history.

XXXVII. Now when Lucullus had. returned to Rome, he found, in the first place, that his brother Marcus was under prosecution by Gaius Memmius for his acts as quaestor under the administration of Sulla. Marcus, indeed, was acquitted, but Memmius then turned his attack upon Lucullus, and strove to excite the people against him. He charged him with diverting much property to his own uses, and with needlessly protracting the war, and _ finally persuaded the people not to grant him a triumph. Lucullus strove mightily against this decision, and the foremost and most influential men mingled with the tribes, and by much entreaty and exertion at last persuaded the people to allow him to celebrate a triumph ;! not, however, like some, a triumph which was startling and tumultuous from the length of the procession and the multitude of objects displayed. Instead, he decorated the circus of Flaminius with the arms of the enemy, which were very numerous, and with the royal engines of war; and this was a great spectacle in itself, and far from contemptible.

1 66 B.C.

$93
VOL. IT QQ
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

A A _A / e / %, /
Th Tounh TaV Te KaTappaxtwy immewy OLyOL cal rav Sperravndopwy apudtov déxa trapHrOor, e / I N a A
éEnxovta 5é pirot Kai otpatnyol Tay BacidiKo, \ 4 A e \ \ / ef
paxpal dé yarxéuBoros vies éxatov cai déxa dua TapexouicOnaav, avtod te MiOpiddtou yxpuceos
e 4 / \ , 4 ‘
éEdtrovs KoNoceds, Kal Oupeds Tis dtaddLtOos, Kai hopnuata eixoct ev apyupav oKxevav, Kpua@y 6’ éxtrmputov Kal OTAwY Kal vopiapatos dv0 Kal TpidKovTa. TavTa pev ovv avdpes TrapexopCov
e / > 9 \ , A ¥ A \ ‘
nptovot & oxTw KrLvas xypuvaas Edepov, €E dé Kat TWEVTHKOVTA KEeYwvEevpévoy apryvptov, adroL O° éxaTov émTa& vopicpaTos apyupov, mKP@ TLVE Seovoas éRdounKovta cal Staxocias pupiudas.
? \ / 9 fe) °# 4
év d¢ SéX Tots dvaypagal trav Ady Sedopéevwv ypnpatov va avtod Tlopmrnig mpos Toy tmeipatixor moAemov Kat Tots etl Tod Snuoctov Tapetov, Kat xopis Ott otpatiwtns Exactos évaxocias Kal

/ bY 4 b>] ‘\ 4 a mevryxovTa Spaxpas édaBev. ml TovTOLS THY TE TOW é€laTiace AauTpPas Kal TAS TepLoKidas Kwpas, as ovlxovs KaXovot.
XXXVIII. Tis dé Krwédias amnraypEevos, ovans ageXyous Kai movnpas, Lepoviriav é eynpev, aterpay Kdrevos, ovde TOUTOV evT UXT yapov.
ev yap ov mpoanv avT@ tov Krwoias Kxaxov povor, 7 Tov adergary 6a Born" TaAXa b€ Bderv-pav opoiws ovaayv Kal aKoAacToY jvaryKatero pepe aidovpevos Katawva, Téhos dé amretmev.
‘Ed toas be Oavpacras Th Bourn TAPATXov, as éyovan Tov avOpa TODTOY ayritaypa 7 pos THY tod Lloumaniov tupavvida nai Ths aptatoKpatias 594

But in the procession, a few of the mail-clad horse- men and ten of the scythe-bearing chariots moved along, together with sixty of the king’s friends and generals. A hundred and ten bronze-beaked ships of war were also carried along, a golden statue of Mithridates himself, six feet in height, a wonderful shield adorned with precious stones, twenty litters of silver vessels, and thirty-two litters of gold beakers, armour, and money. All this was carried by men. Then there were eight mules which bore golden couches, fifty-six bearing ingots “of silver, and a hundred and seven more bearing something less than two million seven hundred thousand pieces of silver coin. There were also tablets with records of the sums of money already” paid by Lucullus to Pompey for the war against the pirates, and to the keepers of the public treasury, as well as of the fact that each of his soldiers had received nine hundred and fifty drachmas. To crown all, Lucullus gave a magnificent feast to the city, and to the surrounding villages called Vicz.

XXXVIII. After his divorce from Clodia, who was a licentious and base woman, he married Servilia, a sister of Cato, but this, too, was an unfortunate marriage. For it lacked none of the evils which Clodia had brought in her train except one, namely, the scandal about her brothers. In all other respects Servilia was equally vile and abandoned, and yet Lucullus forced himself to tolerate her, out of regard for Cato. At last, however, he put her away.
The Senate had conceived wondrous hopes that in him it would find an opposer of the tyranny of Pompey and a champion of the aristocracy, with all 595

ce
©
to
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

id > N / , e , mpopaxyov amo Sofns nal duvapews oppw@pevoy
peyaArns, éyxaTérLtTre Kal TpojKato TV TOALTELAY, elite Suaxdbextov Hon Kal vocodaav opav el0’, ads act évtor, weatos ov So—ns Kal mpos TO padorov avatint@y tov Biov Kal padaxwratov éx TOAA@DY
adyoveav «al Tovey oun evtvyéotatoyv TéXoS AaBovTwy. ot pev yap émawvovow avTod TtHVv TocavTny petaBorjv, to Mapiov mdafos pn maovros, ds mt tais KipSpixais vicars wal rots
Karo Kal peydrors EKELVOLS katoplapacw OvK 0 EAnoev QUTOV avetvaL Teh ToTauTy CnAwTov, aX’ dmhnaotig d0fns Kat apxijs véous avipdot
yépav aVTUTohLTEvopEvos eis Epya Seva xal | wan
Sevorepa TaY épyov efwrerre Bértiov 8 av nai Kixépova ee peta Karidivav trrootet\d-evov Ka Zentiva Kapyndov T poo Gevra.
Newsies celta Tavoduevor™ elvat yap Tuva kal
TONTUKAS meptodou Kataddvotv TOV yap aOrn-TLeeY GYOVOV TOUS TOALTLKOUS OUdEeY HTTOV dxpijs
Kal @pas emidurovans eneyxXeoOau. oi O€ mept TOV Kpacooy Kat Tloparniov ex rcvafov TOV AovKoun-ov eis HOovny adetxota Kal tmoAuTéAeLay aurov, @aoTEP OV TOU TpYdaY parhov TOUS THALKOUTOLS Tap aKtay ovTOS % TOU TortTeverOar Kal oTpaTnyely. .
XXXIX. "Eore & ovv tov AoveovAXou Biov, xadarrep apyaias Koupolas, dvayvavat 7a, pe
mpOTa TortTELas Kal otpatnyias, Ta © borepa ToTOUs Kal Seimva ral povovovyt K@[LOUS Kal Aaprdbas Kat maidvav adtracav. eis tratdiav yap éyoye Tifeyat Kat oixodopas ToAduTEActs Kal 596

the advantage of great glory and influence; but he quitted and abandoned public affairs, either because he saw that they were already beyond proper control and diseased, or, as some say, because he had his fill of glory, and felt that the unfortunate issue of his many struggles and toils entitled him to fall back upon a life of ease and luxury. Some commend him for making such a change, and thereby escaping the unhappy lot of Marius, who, after his Cimbrian victories and the large and fair successes which were so famous, was unwilling to relax his efforts and enjoy the honours won, but with an insatiate desire for glory and power, old man that he was, fought with young men in the conduct of the state, and so drove headlong into terrible deeds, and sufferings more terrible still. Cicero, say these, would have had a better old age if he had taken in sail after the affair of Catiline, and Scipio, too, if he had given himself pause after adding Numantia to Carthage ; for a political cycle, too, has a sort of natural termination, and political no less than athletic contests are absurd, after the full vigor of life has departed. Crassus and Pompey, on the other hand, ridiculed Lucullus for giving himself up to pleasure and extravagance, as if a luxurious life were not even more unsuitable to men of his years than political and military activities.

XXXIX. And it is true that in the life of Lucullus, as in an ancient comedy, one reads in the first part of political measures and military commands, and in the latter part of drinking bouts, and banquets, and what might pass for revel-routs, and torch-races, and all manner of frivolity. For I must count as frivolity his costly edifices, his ambulatories

KaTacKevas qmepitmdtwv Kal ovTpa@v Kal Ere HGdXov ypadas Kal avdpidvtas Kal THY Trepti TavTas Tas Téxvas omrovdyny, as exeivos cuvAye peyaros avarwpaciv, es Ta’Ta TO TOUT
pvdnv Kataypwpevos, dv HOpoixet Todw Kal
AaLTpPOV ato TOV GTpaTELwv, Strov Kal vov, éri-Soci TotavTny THs Tpudhs éyovons, oc Aovxova-Mavol Kho TaV BactdtKav év TOLS TOAUTEAECTTA-Tos aptOmovvtar. ta d év Tois Taparios Kal wept Néav mor épya, AOpous avaxpepavvuvTos avTov meyaXols opvypace Kat TpoxXous Jardaons Kab dad popas ixOvorpogpous Tos oixnTnpiors WepteAlaaovTos Kal dtaitas évadious KTilovTos, 0 aTwixds TovBépwy Ocacdpevos ZépEnv avrov ex
Tn Bévvou Tpoonyopevaen. jnoav © avT@ Tmept
Todcdov eyxXapto Starrat Kal KaTacKkoTral TEPLOTT OV xa KaTacKeval AVATEETT OL LEVOV
avdpwver Kal Tmepumarov, €&v als o Hoparnios YEVO[MEVOS éuéueto Tov Aovcovhrov, ore 7 pos
Bépos apiota d:abeis THY emavuhev doixntov ev ELL OVE TEeTPOLN/KE. yerdoas ovv exeivos *e Kira,” ép7y, “ gol oxo éAd7 Tova, TOV yepave vouv eye

Kal TOV Tehapyar, aote Tals @pars pn cuppera-Barrpev tas Siairas ; oTpaTayou 6é Tote
pido poupevov Tept Beas Kal Kopp Twe KOO LOV
ait oupévou moppupas Xdapvbas amexpivaro TKEYpapEvos, av exn, Swoev, ELTA pe? nLepav npernaev avtov, oroawy SéoiTo. Tov dé éxaT ov dpxecew pncavTos éxédevoe AaBeiv dis TocauTas:
eis 6 Kab PrAaKKOS O TOLNTIS CHUTE POURED: QS 598

and baths, and still more his paintings and statues (not to speak of his devotion to these arts), which he collected at enormous outlays, pouring out into such channels the vast and splendid wealth which he accumulated from his campaigns. Even now, when luxury has increased so much, the gardens of Lucullus are counted among the most costly of the imperial gardens. As for his works on the sea- shore and in the vicinity of Neapolis, where he sus- pended hills over vast tunnels, girdled his residences with zones of sea and with streams for the breeding of fish, and built dwellings in the sea,—when Tubero the Stoic saw them, he called him Xerxes in a toga. He had also country establishments near Tusculum, with observatories, and extensive open banqueting halls and cloisters. Pompey once visited these, and chided Lucullus because he had arranged his country seat in the best possible way for summer, but had made it uninhabitable in winter. Whereupon Lu- cullus burst out laughing and said : “ Do you suppose, then, that I have less sense than cranes and storks, and do not change residences according to the seasons?’’ A praetor was once making ambitious plans for a public spectacle, and asked of him some purple cloaks for the adornment of a chorus. Lucullus replied that he would investigate, and if he had any, would give them to him. The next day he asked the praetor how many he wanted, and on his replying that a hundred would suffice, bade him take twice that number. The poet Flaccus! alluded to this when 1 EHpiat. i. 6, 45 f.

599

ov vouiles TAOUTOV, OV mn TA TApop@peva Kal
4 4 aA , > /
ANavodvovta treiova TOV Paivopévwny EoTi.
XL. NeorAovta §& Fv tod AoveovrAXoV Ta Seirva Ta Kal’ nuépav, ov povov otpwpvais adroupyéoe kat SiariOors extrapace kal yopots Kai 3 4 2 4 ? b v
axpodpacw éme:aodtos, AAN OYrwy TE TaVvTo-
a A 4
Satrav cal tmeppdtwv tmepitTa@s SiatreTovnpéevov jmapacKevais bnrwTov averevOépoirs trovodvTos ¢€ A os A éavtov. o yoov Tlopanios evdoxiunoe vooav:

A A 9 ~ , b] \ aA s
Tov yap LaTpov KityAnV auTov NaBelv KeXeveavTos, “ : 3 a > e “a 3 Ld ,
Tov © olKeT@Y OUK av eipely adraKOOL papévov
4 ,

Gépous @pa KixdAnv % tapa AoveovAX cuTEvO-peévnv, ovK eiace AaBeiv exciOev, GAN’ eitTaV Tpos
. 9 mer > a ? \ / ? ,
Tov tatpov ‘‘ Ouxovy, e« ny AovKovadAdros étpuda,
Tue ? A "4 2 /
Tlopmnios oun av efnoev;” addAo Tt TapacKevacat
“A , I “A
TOV evTropictwv éxédXevoe. Kadtov 8 qv atte
, \ ? a ef \ \ ld ? A \ 4 ' hiros Kal oixetos, oftw 5€ Tov Biov avTov Kal Thy
, n~ dtartav édvaoxépaivev, Bate, véov Tivos ev TH
a , fo
Bovnr7 Noyov éerrayOh Kal paxpov akaipws vtrép
,

evTedXelas Kat cwdpoouvns SseAOovros, éravactas
e wn
o Katowv “Ov raven,” ébn, “ov TAOUTaY péev S Kpdaocos, Cav & ws AovKovaAdos, réywv b€ as
? “a ~ Kdtav;” évioe 8€ robto pnOjvar péev obtaws, UT6 Kdtewvos dé od Néyouaw.
e / /

XLI. “O pévrot AovxovrAdro0s oby 7dd0pmev0s

4 > Xa 4 A / 4
povov, add} Kal ceyvuvopevos TO Bi— TovTe dnros HY eK TOY aTrO“VNnpovevopévwv. RéyeTat a “BR 3 @ / 2 , >» ¢ , yap “EXXnvas avOpwirovs avaBavtas eis ‘Poynv éotidy éml roAAds nuépas, Tors 8 éyvtas ‘EX-
, 4 a
AnviKOY TL TABOVTAS, aicyivedOat Kai SiwOeta Bas 600
519

LUCULLUS

he said that he did not regard a house as wealthy in which the treasures that were overlooked and unobserved were not more than those which met the eye. XL. The daily repasts of Lucullus were such as the newly rich affect. Not only with his dyed coverlets, and beakers set with precious stones, and choruses and dramatic recitations, but also with his arrays of all sorts of meats and daintily prepared dishes, did he make himself the envy of the vulgar. A saying of Pompey's, when he was ill, was certainly very popular. His physicians had prescribed a thrush for him to eat, and his servants said that a thrush could not be found anywhere in the summer season except where Lucullus kept them fattening. Pompey, however, would not suffer them to get one from there, but bade them prepare something else that was easily to be had, remarking as he did so to his physician, "What ! must a Pompey have died if a Lucullus were not luxurious?'' And Cato, who was a friend of his, and a relation by marriage, was nevertheless much offended by his life and habits. Once when a youthful senator had delivered a tedious and lengthy discourse, all out of season, on frugality and tem- perance, Cato rose and said; "Stop there! you get wealth like Crassus, you live like Lucullus, but you talk like Cato.'' Some, however, while they say that these words were actually uttered, do not say that they were spoken by Cato.

XLI. Moreover, that Lucullus took not only pleasure but pride in this way of living, is clear from the anecdotes recorded of him. It is said, for instance, that he entertained for many successive days some Greeks who had come up to Rome, and that they, with genuinely Greek scruples, were at last ashamed to accept his invitation, on the ground

A e > > \ > e@ / ; 4
Thv KAHoW, ws be adtovs Kad' Huépavy TocovTwY
? / \ 3 4 > a avantoKopevwy? Tov ovv AoveovAXov evirety pet-
,
Sidoavta mpos adtovs: "Tiverar pév te tobTwY kal ov tpas, wo advdpes "EAAnves: Ta pévToe mwreloTa yivetas Sta AovKovaAdov." érrel dé povou dertrvovvTos avTov pia Tpdmeba Kal péeTpLov TrapeoxevaoOn Setrvov, nyavadnte. Kadéoas Tov emt TOUT® TeTaypEVOY OiKéTHV. TOD 5é€ dycavToOS, WS OUK @ETO pNndEevOsS KEKANMEVOU TOAUTENODS TLVOS aes a Bag oT ys " 4 Bee h
avTov SenoecOar "Ti réyets; " elmrev, " ovK "deus, OTe anjpepov trapa AovKxovAd@ Servet Aovxovr-> N \ 4 e > , ? A 4
dos; OvTos O€ Trepl TOUTOV, WS ELKOS, EV TH TOAEL
" ol A > Aoyou wodXOdD, MpoonrAOoy avT@ Kat ayopav oe e Y

ayxorny adyovtt Kixépwv cal Tlopmnios, o pev eév
”- Ul 7 A } 0 II oh 3
Tois pddota piros ov kal auv7AOns, Topmrnio
A / \
qv pev ex THs oTpatnyias Stahopa mpos avon,
a ,
elwbercay Sé ypnobat nal draréyerOas Trodraxts
n~ 3 ¢
ETLELK@S GAAHAOLS. aoTraTdpEvos OvY Oo Kixépwv \ ro)
aQuTov npornaey, dmrws Exes mpos evtevEw: tod dé pycavros, @S dpvara, Kal TapaKadodvros évtuyxavew : ‘Hyeis,” ep, - Bovropeda, deiTvo ar Tapa col Thuepov ovTws, Srrws éaTi cor Ta.pecKevac pera. Opumropévou dé Tod AovxovAdou Kal petaraBeiv mpepav akvovvtos ovK épacay emutpeyrety, OvO ElwY Siaréyer Oar TOUS olkérass, iva pay Tt qWAé€ov Kehevon yevér Oat TOV QUT@
,
yovomervan, wy TocobTO povov aiToupeve ouve-Xwopnoay el Tr ety 7 pos éva TOV olKeT@V évavTiov éxeivey, ore 77} ME pov ey t@ AmoAXwvt Serrvicor: TOUTO yap TLS Elye TOV TOAUTEAGY olKwY dvopa, 602

that he was incurring so much expense every day on their account; whereupon Lucullus said to them with a smile, “Some of this expense, my Grecian friends, is indeed on your account; most of it, how- ever, is on account of Lucullus.” And once, when he was dining alone, and a modest repast of one course had been prepared for him, he was angry, and summoned the servant who had the matter in charge. The servant said that he did not suppose, since there were no guests, that he wanted anything very costly. ‘* What sayest thou?’’ said the master, “dost thou not know that to-day Lucullus dines with Lucullus ?” While this matter was much talked of in the city, as was natural, Cicero and Pompey came up to him as he was idling in the forum. Cicero was one of his most intimate friends, and although the matter of the command of the army had led to some coolness between him and Pompey, still they were accustomed to frequent and friendly intercourse and conversation with one another. Accordingly, Cicero saluted him, and asked how he was disposed towards receiving a petition. ‘Most excellently well,’ said Lucullus, and invited them to make their petition. ‘We desire,’ said Cicero, “ to dine with you to-day just as you would have dined by yourself.’’ Lucullus de- murred to this, and begged the privilege of selecting a later day, but they refused to allow it, nor would they suffer him to confer with his servants, that he might not order any thing more provided than what was provided for himself. Thus much, how- ever, and no more, they did allow him at his request, namely, to tell one of his servants in their presence that he would dine that day in the Apollo. Now this was the name of one of his costly apartments,

Kat tovTo cecodiauévos édernOer tors avdpas.
éxdot@ yap, ws oie, Secrrvntnpig teTaypévov
, 3
hw Tina Seitrvov, cal yopnyiay idiay Kai Tapa-oKxeunv Exaotoy elyev, BaTE TOUS SovNOUS aKOU-gavtTas, 61rov Bovherau Sevmveiy, evdévat, Toamov Samdvnpa Kal roiov te Knoopwo Kai Siabéoe yevéoOar Set ro Setrrvovy eiwOer 5é Sevrrvety év TO
"AmoAAwve mévte pupiddwy: Kal tore TocovToU
terxcabévtos éFérAnke tous tepi tov Llopmniov év
TO peyeOe THs Samrdvns TO TAOS THS TapacKevis.
eis TADTA pev Odv UBpLoTLKas EXPTTO T@ WAOUVT@
xadamrep dvTws aiyparwre cai BapBdpo.
XLII. Scrovdjs 8 ad&ia Kat Aoyou Ta Tepl THY tov BiBAtwv KatacKkevnv. Kal yap Toda Kal yeypaypeva Kad@s ourvayer, TE yYphows Hy
PiroTipotépa THS KTHTEWS, avELpévwOY TAGE TOV
BiBdoOnxwv, cal tov epi avtTas mepiTrdtwr
, bd , e , \
Kal cXYoAacTHpiwy axwrAUTWS UTrodexopuévwY TOUS
ed 4 > M a , EAAnvas womep ets Movoov te Kxataya@rytov
b] "a A \ 4 ? 4
éxetoe hort@vtas Kai cuvdinpepevovtas adXrANXOLS, aTo TOV dANwWY XpEL@Y aopévws aTrOTPEYOVTAS.
modAaKis 5é€ Kal cuvveryoratey avtos euBadrwv
eig TOUS TWepiTrarous Tools PtAoAOYoLS Kat TOTS ToNTiKols cuvémpattev Stov SéowTo: Kal drws éotia cal mpvtavetov 'EXAnuiKoy oO olxos Rv avTov
a J Trois adixvoupevors eis 'Papnv. dirocodiav dé jwacay pev notateto Kal wpos Tacav evpevyns hy
? a " \ A , , 9 3 A
kal oixetos, idcov 5€ tHs 'Axadnueias && apyis and he thus outwitted the men without their knowing it. For each of his dining-rooms, as it seems, had a fixed allowance for the dinner served there, as well as its own special apparatus and equipment, so that his slaves, on hearing where he wished to dine, knew just how much the dinner was to cost, and what were to be its decorations and arrangements. Now the usual cost of a dinner in the Apollo was fifty thousand drachmas, and that was the sum laid out on the present occasion. Pompey was amazed at the speed with which the banquet was prepared, notwithstanding it had cost somuch. In these ways, then, Lucullus used his wealth wantonly, as though it were in very truth a Barbarian prisoner-of-war. XLII. But what he did in the establishment of a library deserves warm praise. He got together many books, and they were well written, and his - use of them was more honourable to him than his acquisition of them. His libraries were thrown open to all, and the cloisters surrounding them, and the study-rooms, were accessible without restriction to the Greeks, who constantly repaired thither as to an hostelry of the Muses, and spent the day with one another, in glad escape from their other occupations. Lucullus himself also often spent his leisure hours there with them, walking about in the cloisters with their scholars, and he would assist their statesmen in whatever they desired. And in general his house was a home and prytaneium for the Greeks who came to Rome. He was fond of all philosophy, and well-disposed and friendly towards every school, but trom the first he cherished a particular and zealous love for the Academy, not

a a , ,
3 épwra Kai Cirov Eoyxev, ov THs véas Aeyoperns, xaimep avOovons tote tois Kapveddouv Adyors
A a \ ”
dia Dirwvos, GdrAa THs Tadalads, miBavov dvdpa 520
A 4 ‘
Kai Setvov elirety ToTEe MpootaTny éxovans TOV
? / ? U a 4 on Ackxarwvitny Avtioxyov, bv Tadn oTrOVOH TolN-
, \
aapevos dirov o AovxovAdos Kat aupBiwTnv
4 a a“ La
avrératte Tois Widwvos axpoatais, ov Kal
4 Kixépwv hy. nal ovyypapypa ye rayKxaXov éroin-gev ELS THY alperw, ev O TOV Varép THS KaTANH-
, A
rews Aoyov AovKovAAw TrepiTéetKev, avT@ Sé
\ b , 4 :] b] / N
Tov évavtiov. AovKxovrAdgos 8 avayéypamTar To BiBriéov.
, ,
"Hoav 8, waotrep eipntar, pido. apodpa rat Kowwvol THS €v TrodtTELa Tpoatpécews’ ovde yap
aA /
av wdptav amndrAdyYet THS TodtTELas EavTOV oO
5 AovKovrnros, ddAa THY UTrép TOU péytoTOS ElvaL
Kai mrelaotov SivacOat htrotipiav nal dusdrrayv, ¢e ww > 7 vw > 9 4 2 bd) \

@s ovTE axivduvov ov7 avdBptaTov ovaar, EvOUS
Pd a 4 \ 4 4 4 e 3
apie Kpdoo@ cat Karo: tovrous yap ot THV
Hopmniov duvapiv thopwpevo. mpoe8drXovrTo
THs BovAns, aroXeyopévou tov AovKovAXoUv Ta
mpwteia’ xatéBawve & eis tHv ayopav bia
\ 4 j tous dirous, eis b€ THY ciyKAnToD, et Tloumniou
\ 4 \ A / 2 , \
6 teva déoe orrovdny fh dtrotipiay émnpedoar. Kal tas Te dtatakess, as exetvos érrornaato Tov Bact-
4 a h€wv Kpatnoas, éEéxpovce, Kal véunoty TLva Tis oTpaTLM@Tals avTOD ypddovTos éx@Avae SoOHvaL oupmpattovtos Katwvos, @ate Lloparniov eis thy 606

the New Academy, so-called, although that school at the time had a vigorous representative of the doctrines of Carneades in Philo, but the Old Academy, which at that time was headed by a persuasive man and powerful speaker in the person of Antiochus of Asealon. This man Lucullus, hastened to make his friend and companion, and arrayed him against the disciples of Philo, of whom Cicero also was one. Indeed, Cicero wrote a noble treatise on the doctrines of this sect, in which he has put the argument in sup- port of “apprehension” into the mouth of Lucullus, and carried the opposing argument himself. The book is entitled “ Lucullus.”!

Lucullus and Cicero were, as I have said, ardent friends, and members of the same political party, for Lucullus had not withdrawn himself entirely from political life, although he lost no time in leaving to Crassus and Cato the ambitious struggle for the chief place and the greatest power, since he saw that it involved both peril and ignominy. For those who looked with suspicion upon the power of Pompey, made Crassus and Cato the champions of the senatorial party when Lucullus declined the leadership. But Lucullus would still go to the forum in support of his friends, and also to the Senate, whenever there was need of combating some ambitious scheme of Pompey’s. Thus, the dispositions which Pompey made after his conquest of the kings, Lucullus made null and void, and his proposal for a generous distribution of lands to his soldiers, Lucullus, with the co-operation of Cato, prevented from being granted. Pompey therefore

1 Academicorum Priorum, Liber Secundus, qui inscribitur Lucullus.
607

Kpdooov nal Kaicapos didiav, padrov b€ auvepoctav, xataduyely cal TANpocavTa THVY_TWONY OThwv Kal otpatiwtav Bia xupdca Ta Soypata, TOUS rept tov Kdtwva cal AovcovdXopr éxBadovta THS ayopas.

"AyavaxrovvToy 88 tov Berxtiotwy éri tos
yevopévots mrporyov of Lloprniavol Bérriov tiva, cuveitnpévar Aéyovres emtBovrevovta Toprnio.
Kaxelvos dvaxptvopevos ép pev TH TVYKARTO
KaTnyopnoey" ev ép@v TLV@Y, év 56 T@ Sijpem Aov-KkouNXov avopacey, @s ur éKxéivou TG PEG RECUR:
apévos atroxteiva Ilopurrniov. ovdels 5é TO AGy@ mpocéayev, GAA Kal wapautixa SHrAos Fv oO dvOpwrros én cucopartia Kab Sia Bor} mpony-pévos vn' avTav, Kal wadXov epeopdbn TO Tm parypa per orbyas nwepas prpdévros €x THS ElpKTAS vexpov, AEyouévou péey avToudtas TeOvdvat, onpeta 8 dyxovns cal mrnyav éxovros: edoxet
yap vm' avTay avnpjcbat TOY TapEecKevaKoTwv.
xX LIT. Tadra 8 nal parXov aijyye Tis Ton
Telas TOV AovKovdnor. errel 5é Kirépov eférece
THS TONES kat Kdtov ets Kumpov Grea tann, TavTaTac lw €£eAUOn. kal mp0 ye THs TehevTijs heyeras vooRrar Tv didvotav avT@ Kata pix pov drropaparvopevny. Neémas Sé Kopvi)d vos oux uTro YHPOS pnaiv oudé vorou ma arhagat tov Aov-KovAXov, ANA happdKots VITO TLVOS TOY aTredev-Oépwv Karruo8cvovs SvadOapévra: 7a 6€ bappaxa Sof ijvau pev, @S ayaT @To HaAXov oO Karrrabévns um avTov, ToLaUTHY Exeuv duxobvra THV Suvawy, éxatnoat 6€ Kai xatakAvaat TOV OYLO MOV, WoT 608

LUCULLUS

took refuge in an alliance, or rather a conspiracy, with Crassus and Caesar, and by filling the city with his armed soldiery and expelling from the forum
the partisans of Cato and Lucullus, got his measures ratified.
As these proceedings were resented by the nobles,
the partisans of Pompey produced a certain Vettius, whom, as they declared, they had caught plotting against the life of Pompey. So the man was examined in the Senate, where he accused sundry other persons, but before the people he named

Lucullus as the man who had engaged him to kill Pompey. However, no one believed his story, nay, it was at once clear that the fellow had been put forward by the: partisans of Pompey to make false and malicious charges, and the fraud was made all the plainer when, a few days afterwards, his dead body was cast out of the prison. It was said, indeed, that he had died a natural death, but he bore the marks of throttling and violence, and the opinion was that he had been taken off by the very men who had engaged his services.

XLIII. Of course this induced Lucullus to with- draw even more from public life. And when Cicero was banished from the city, and Cato was sent out to Cyprus, he retired altogether. Even before his death, it is said that his understanding was affected and gradually faded away. But Cornelius Nepos says that Lucullus lost his mind not from old age, nor yet from disease, but that he was disabled by drugs administered to him by one of his freedmen, Callisthenes; that the drugs were given him by Callisthenes in order to win more of his love, in the belief that they had such a power, but they drove him from his senses and overwhelmed his reason ére SavTos avrob THv ovalay Stocxely Tov aderpév.

ov “IY GAX as amréOave, xaddmep dv éy an wh THS oTpaTnyias KAL THS TomTElLas auTov TENET} cavtos, 0 Shpos nxXOéECOn Kai cuvédpape, Kat TO copa Koptaev ets aryopay vIr0 TOV evyever TAT wy veavic Kov éBidlero Oarrew é€v To Tediwm Tov “Apews, Strou cat LdArav Harper. oddevis dé

ToUTO WpocdokncavTos, ovde padtas ovons THs
TapacKevijs, 0 aberdos avtot Seopevos Kal mapat-TOUPEVOS eet ev emiTpeyrar THY MapecKevac Levyny
éy t@ Trepi Tovtoxdov ay pe | Tod vexpob xndetay
yever Pat. moduv © ovd avTos mpooeBiw xpovor, GAN Os mrcKia, kat Oo&n ptxpov amenreipOn, Ka
T@ Ypovm TIS renee gprraderdhoratos yevopevos.

KIMQNOS KAI AOYKOYAAOY 2YTKPIZIS

I. Mdnota 8 adv tis evdatpovicee Tov TéXOUS
Aovcouhnor, 6tt ™po THS petaBonis, nv 70m

KATA THS TodTEelas érextaiveto Tols eupurtors
TOAEWOLS TO Tem pwpevov, EOn mpoaTroGavay Kat
KaTadvaas €v vocovoy pen, ere 5° éhevOepa Th
Ta. pio tov Biov. Kal TOTO rye mavToy auT@ 7 pos Kipova KOLvoT aT OV éott.. Kal yap éxeivos our TUvTETApary WEvOY Ttav “EXAnuK@yv, addr’ aK pny exovTov éreAevTNCEY, eT orpatomédou MéVTOL Kal aoTparhnyay, OUK ATrELPNKAS OV" advo, ovdé TOY OTAwWY Kal TaY aTpaTHYLOY Kal TaV
1 &4y supplied by Reiske.

610

521

so that even while he was still alive, his brother managed his property. However, when he died,! the people grieved just as much as if his death had come at the culmination of his military and political services, and flocked together, and tried to compel the young nobles who had carried the body into the forum to bury it in the Campus Martius, where Sulla also had been buried. But no one had expected this, and preparations for it were not easy, and so his brother, by prayers and supplications, succeeded in persuading them to suffer the burial to take place on the estate at Tusculum, where preparations for it had been made. Nor did he himself long ‘survive Lucullus, but, as in age and reputation he came a little behind him, so did he also in the time of his death, having been a most affectionate brother.

COMPARISON OF LUCULLUS AND CIMON

I. One might deem Lucullus especially happy in his end, from the fact that he died before that constitutional change had come, which fate was already contriving by means of the civil wars. His country was in a distempered state when he laid down his life, but still she was free. And in this respect, more than any other, he is like Cimon. For Cimon also died before Greece was confounded, and while she was at the acme of her power. He died, however, in the field, and at the head of an army, not exhausted or of a wandering mind, nor yet

1 About 57 B.c,

a.
wi
6

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

tpoTraiwv éraOXov motovpevos evwyias Kai TOTOUS, ~ 4 > , \ N 3 lA
worrep IIXatwv ericxwrre: Tous rept tov Opdéa, tois ev BeBiwxoot ddoxovtas atoxeicOar yépas
2 a , ea \ ® \
éy adov péeOnv aimvov. ayorn péev odv kal e 4 N , € fe ‘
novxia cal dratpiBy wept Noyous 7SovnY Twa Kal
Gewpiav éyovtas evmperréctatov avipt mpecBury
Kal qTeTavpévp odeuwv Kal qodlTelas Tapa-
4 \ > 9,9 © , e 4 ,
pvOtov: To 8 ef ndovny, ws Tédos, KaTaTTpEeavTa
Tas Karas mpdkes 76n Aorov ’"Adpodicia Trav ToNeuwv Kal otpatnyiav ayovTa maivew xal a 9 ¥ A A ? , ION
tpupayv ovx afta ths Kxarys ‘Axabdnpeias, ovdé \ 4 na b] 3 > 4 tov Elevoxpatn (nXodvtos, aGAX éyKexALKOTOS
mpos tov ‘Emixouvpov. § Kxal Oavyacrov éaortw: UrevavTiMs yap 4 veoTns Tod pey érrinpoyos Kal axoractos yeyovévat Soxei, Tou Sé memadevpevy
, / a A e \ \ , €
Kal cwhpwv. Bedrtiwy ody @ mpos To BérTLOV 7 peraBorn xpnorotépa yap 7» uous, ev H ynpa ev TO yelpov, eTraxpater Sé TO Apesvor. .
Kal pv opoiws ye wrovTncavtes ovX opoiws
d:€Bevto Tov TAODTOY. ov yap dftov opotacat TO voTiw TelyeL THS dxporohens, 6 ois imo Kipovos copia Oeiow éreréoOn XPnpace, tous ev Né ea TONE Jardpous Kal Tas TepikrAvaTous améwes, as Aovcoundras amo TOV BapBapicav eF@xodoper
Upwv: oudé ye TH Kipevos Tpatécy THY Aov-KoUNXNOoU mrapaBaneiv, TH Snpwoxpatixy Kat peday-Spam THY TOTEM, Kal TaTpariKhy. 7 bev yap amo pupas Samdyns TOAAOUS Kal? 7)jLépav duétpedev, 7 5’ eis OAL yous TpUp@vTas amo TrOAAOY
2»

612

making feastings and revellings the crowning prize for arms and campaigns and trophies. Plato! ban- ters the followers of Orpheus for declaring that for those who have lived rightly, there is laid up in Hades a treasure of everlasting intoxication. Leisure, no doubt, and quiet, and the pursuit of pleasantly speculative learning, furnish a most fitting solace for a man of years who has retired from wars and politics. But to divert fair achievements to pleasure as their final end, and then to sport and wanton at the head of Aphrodite’s train, as a sequel to wars and fightings, was not worthy of the noble Academy, nor yet of one who would follow Xenocrates, but rather of one who leaned towards Epicurus. And this is the more astonishing, because, contrariwise, Cimon seems to have been of ill repute and un- restrained in his youth, while Lucullus was dis- ciplined and sober. Better, surely, is the man in whom the change is for the better; for it argues a more wholesome nature when its evil withers and its good ripens.

_ And further, though both alike were wealthy, they did not make a like use of their wealth. There is no comparing the south wall of the Acropolis, which was completed with the moneys brought home by Cimon, with the palaces and sea-washed Bel- videres at N eapolis, which Lucullus built out of the spoils of the Barbarians. Nor can the table of Cimon be likened to that of Lucullus; the one was democratic and charitable, the other sumptuous and oriental. The one, at slight outlay, gave daily sus- tenance to many; the other, at large cost, was prepared for a few luxurious livers. It may be said,

1 Republic, ii. p. 363.

maperKevalero XPnwareov. él MN vn Aia tov Tpayparov emotes Svapopav 0 Xpovos: adnNov yap, el Kal Kipev amTO TOV mpafewy Kal oTparnyea eis Gm ONE WOV Kal amo TEvTOY yapas, adgeis autov étt pardov av expnoaro coBapée Kai T pos noovny averpevy Siairay: Kal yap piromorns Kal TavnyupiKos Kal Ta ™ pos yuvaixas, os 7 poelpntas, diaB_eBrnpévos. ai 6é mepi tas mpdkeus Kal TOUS ayavas KaTopbacess noovas érépas EXovoae TOV Xetpoveay émrOupiav doxoday Tolovat Kal Mi Onv TALS TONTIKALS cat Prrori pots puceory. el yoov Kat AovKovdros eTehevTnoev aywvilopevos Kal oTpATH YAY, ovd av o wWoyepo-TATOS Kal Prropeuporatos evpely pot Soxet d2a-Bornv én avtov. kal tadta pev rept Tis diairas.
IH. "Ev dé Tobs ToheuLKots OTL pev apporepos Kab Kara yiv Kal Kata Odrdaccav aryablol yeryo-vaow ayovirral Ofjrov" domep dé TOY abrnTav TOUS HMEepa pod Tarn Kat TayKparicp oTepavovpévous ex Tut mapadofovixas KaXovour, oT Kipeov ev pe pg pa meCopaxias Kal vou Pay Las dpa TpoTrai@ orepavdcas THY “EAAdba dixacos

eoru exeuv Twa mpoedpiay éy toils otparnyois.
Kal pny Aovkovdrw pev) TaTpis, Kipov 6é TH marpior THY Wyyepoviay mepteOnne. Kat 0 pev
adpxovan TOV TULpLAX ov TPOTEKTHTATO Ta TOY TONEMLOY, 08 addows eTrOMEV NY TaparaBev dma
kal Tov Tuma ape Kal TOV Tohepteoy
Kpateiv émoinae, Ilépcas pév dvayxdoas HTTH- 529
Oévras éxBivar tis Oaracons, AaxeSatpovious 3é
614

indeed, that the difference in state was due to the difference in time. For it is at least possible that Cimon also, if he had retired after his active cam- paigns to an old age which knew neither war nor politics, might have led an even more ostentatious and pleasure-loving life. He was fond of wine and given to display, and his relations with women, as I have said before,! were scandalous. But success in strenuous achievement, affording as it does a higher pleasure, gives public-spirited and ambitious natures no time to indulge the baser appetites, which are forgotten. At any rate, if Lucullus also had ended his days in active military command, not even the most carping and censorious spirit, I think, could have brought accusation against him. Thus much concerning their manner of life.

II. In war, it is plain that both were good fighters, both on land and sea. But just as those athletes who win crowns in wrestling and the pancratium on a single day are called, by custom, “ Victors-extraordinary,’ so Cimon, who in a single day crowned Greece with the trophies of a land and sea victory, may justly have a certain pre-eminence among generals. And further, it was his country which conferred imperial power upon Lucullus, whereas Cimon conferred it upon his. The one added his foreign conquests to a country which already ruled her allies ; the other found his country obeying others, and gave her command over her allies and victory over her foreign foes, by defeating the Persians and driving them from the sea, and by persuading the Lacedaemonians voluntarily to 1 See Cimon, iv. 8.

3 meicas éxovtas éxoThvar. €% Tolvuy péytoTrov
Epyov Hryemovos evireiOerav épydaacbaz 8v’ evvoias,} AoveovAXos pév vd TOY oTpaTilwTav KaTe-dpovnOn, Kipov Oy br6 Tay ouppaxeov éBavpda On" wap ov pev "yap améaTnoay, mpos ov dé peTéaTycay. Kal o pev ov apxwv é&AOev, b7rd tovTwy arorepOels érravndOev, o Sé pel Ov érépois troujowy TO wTpoctaTTopevov éFeréudOn, TOUTOLS auros d:50us TO TapayyeApa KaTéT EVE, Tpla, Ta TaVTOV dvaKodksrata Seatrem parywévos
ood TH TONE, TpOs pev TOUS Tone pious elonyny, Tapa o€ TaV TUL LAX OY nryenoviav, impos &é
Aaxebdatpovious ouovoray.
4 Meyaaas Toivuy émruyerpngaytes dup érepor KaTanvewv Tryepovias Kal Kataatpéeper bas THY
’Agiay Twacav areneis eyévovTo TOY mpafewv,) peev xadanat bia THD TOXxNY" eTeNEUTHTE yap oTpaTnyav Kat eunpep@v: tov 8 ov TAVTENAS av TUS eféXovro THs Tap avrov airias, el’ myvoncey
elt ovK eGepamrevae Tas év T@ TTpaTLOTiK®
Siapopas Kat péprpers, abd av eis THKavTas
5 amexDeias 7 pofrOev. uP Tob) ve ral 7 pos Kipova KoLvov éote’ Kal yap éxelvov vmrnyaryov Te eis dixas oi TONLT aL Kal TENEUT@VTES _eEwotpa-Kicay, iv avrod béxa eTav, as gnow) [drwy Ths pavijs pn aKOVTWCLV. at yap dpirtoKxparixal pucers Oriya Tots TorNots svvadovat Kal 7 pos
noovnyv éxoval, Ta 5é TroAAa mpooBiatouevar 7@
KarevO Bev Stactpepopmévous amaow, domep oi Tov iatpav Seopol, Kaitrep eis TA KaTa how 1 evvoias With S: efvoiapy.

616 :

COMPARISON OF LUCULLUS AND CIMON
®
relinquish the command. Granted that it is the most important task of a leader to secure prompt obedience through good will, Lucullus was despised by his own soldiers, while Cimon was admired by the allies. His soldiers deserted the one; the allies came over to the other. The one came back home abandoned by those whom he commanded when he set out ; the other was sent out with allies to do the commands of others, but before he sailed home he himself gave commands to those allies, having successfully secured for his city three of the most difficult objects at once, namely, peace with the enemy, leadership of the allies, and concord with' the Lacedaemonians.

Again, both attempted to subvert great empires and to subdue all Asia, and both left their work unfinished: Cimon through ill fortune pure and simple, for he died at the head of his army and at the height of his success; but Lucullus one cannot altogether acquit of blame, whether he was ignorant of, or would not attend to the grievances and complaints among his soldiery, in consequence of which he became so bitterly hated. Or perhaps this has its counterpart in the life of Cimon, for he was brought to trial by his fellow citizens and finally ostracised, in order that for ten years, as Plato says,! they might not hear his voice. For aristocratic natures are little in accord with the multitude, and seldom please it, but by so often using force to rectify its aberrations, they vex and annoy it, just as physicians' bandages vex and annoy, although they bring the dislocated members into their natural

1 Gorgias, p. 516.

ayovres Tas TrapapOprhcets. TavTns pév ody laws ATANNAKTEOV THS aitias ExaTEpoV.
III. IloAvd & o AoveovAros mwponAGe TO Tronée-po Tov TE Tadpov drrepBaraov orparoméde
'Pwpaiwv TpaTOos, kal tov Tipu daBas Kal Ta Bacirtera tis "Acias év Ove. trav Baciréwr, Tiypavoxepta xat KdBepa cat Swern kal Nici Biv, dav nat catadré£as, cal ta wev Bopera péxpt Pactdos, tra 8 é@a péxpt Mrditas, ra dé Mpos votov Kat THy épvOpav Odraccay oixetwod-pevos O14 Tov "ApaRixdv Bacidéwv, curTpivpas dé Tas Suvdyuers TOV Bacthewr, amonerpOeis be povou TOU Ta oopara raBeir, Gamep Onpiwy eis épnuias kal dras aaotiBets ral aBatous arrobe-SpacKovreav. TeKunpLov Oé peya* Tlépaas pév yap as ovdev péya merrovOores v6 Kipavos evOus
aVvTETATTOVTO Tots "EAAnot, Kal THY ye WoNAny Svvaulv avTay év Alytrre KpaTncavres bie Oerpav, Teypavou bé Kal M0 piddrou pera Aovxova-Ov oudev aXXo epyov eyeveTo, GaN' 0 pev aa bevins 70n Kal TUYKEKOUPEVOS vTO TOV T POT OV ayovev ove anat eTohpnoe beiEar Hoparni THD Suva
é&w Tov Xapaxos, GAAa huyov eis Booropov KcatéeBn Kaxel KatéaT pee, Teypavns 8' avtos éav-TOV yupvov Kal avotrXov pépov Dméppiype Top

Tnio, Kal To Suddnpa THs Keparhs dehouevos
2Onxe mpd TOV Today, ou Tots éavTOU KOAaKEVWY
Tlourniov, adXa toils Ure AoveovAXov teOptap-Bevpévots. nyatnoe yobv atroXapBavwv Ta ovp-Bora tis Bacihetas ws adypnuévos mporepor.
618

COMPARISON OF LUCULLUS AND CIMON

position. Perhaps, then, both come off about alike on this count.
II. But Lucullus was much the greater in war. He was the first Roman to cross the Taurus with an army ; he passed the Tigris and captured and burned the royal cities of Asia, —Tigranocerta, Cabira, Sinopé, and Nisibis, before the eyes of their kings ; he made his own the regions to the north as far as the Phasis, to the east as far as Media, and to the south as far as the Red Sea, through the assistance of the Arabian kings; he annihilated the forces of the hostile kings, and failed only in the capture of their persons, since like wild beasts they fled away into deserts and trackless and impenetrable forests. Strong proof of his superiority is seen in this, that the Persians, since they had suffered no great harm at the hands of Cimon, straightway arrayed them- selves against: the Greeks, and overwhelmed and destroyed that large force of theirs in Egypt;! whereas, after Lucullus, Tigranes and Mithridates availed nothing: the latter, already weak and disabled by his first struggles, did not once dare to show Pompey his forces outside their camp, but fled | away to the Bosporus, and there put an end to his | life; as for Tigranes, he hastened to throw himself, while unrobed and unarmed, at the feet of Pompey, and taking the diadem from off his head, laid it there upon the ground, flattering Pompey thus not with his own exploits, but with those for which Lucullus had celebrated a triumph. At any rate, he was as much delighted to get back the insignia of his royalty as though he had been robbed of them before. Greater therefore is the general, as is the

1 454 B.c. See Thucydides, i. 109 f.
619
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

,) fo > , 8 wn)
pellwv ovv otpatnyos, ®aTep AOANTHS, 0 TO peO
éavToy aoVevéctepov Trapacovs Tov avTiTanov.
“Ett toivuy Kipov per cuvtetpippéevnv tv Bactréws Stugpw nai 76 Wepoav ppovnpa cuve-oTadpévoy ATTais peydAais Kal atravaTos
duyais id @ewictoxrA€ovs nat Ilavoaviov Kat Aewtuyidou xataraBov érevéBn xal brorerrto-KOT@Y Kal TponTTnéevar Tais Wuyais TA TOpata
padios évienae, AovcovrArAw 5é Teypavns anrrntos 523 €x TONA@Y dyavev Kal péya Ppovav cuvéTece.
mANGe. & ovd adkov twapaBareiy ois emt Aov-KovAXov cuveNOodar Tovs bro Kipwvos xparnbév-Tas. Mote TdvTn peTarauBdvovte Svadiattntov

elvat THY Kpiow, eel Kal TO Satpoviov auporépots oxen evpeves yever Oat, T@ pev & ypn KaTtopOoo», T® 0 & huddttecOar ypn Tpounviov, date Kal THhv Tapa TaV Dewy w>Wihov avtois UTapyew ws ayabois xal Oeious THY hvow apudorépors.
620

COMPARISON OF LUCULLUS AND CIMON

athlete, who hands over his antagonist to his successor in a weaker plight.

Moreover, and still further, Cimon made his onsets when the power of the king had been broken, and the pride of the Persians humbled by great defeats and incessant routs at the hands of Themistocles, Pausanias, and Leotychides, and easily conquered the bodies of men whose spirits had been defeated beforehand and lay prone. But when Tigranes encountered Lucullus, he had known no defeat in many battles, and was in exultant mood. In point of numbers also, those who were overpowered by Cimon are not worthy of comparison with those who united against Lucullus. Therefore, one who takes everything into consideration finds it hard to reach a decision. Heaven seems to have been kindly disposed to both, directing the one as to what he must perform, and the other as to what he must avoid. Both, therefore, may be said to have received the vote of the gods as noble and god-like natures.

Digitized by Google

~

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

Acestodorus, possibly the Acestodorus of Megalopolis, of unknown date, wuthor of a work  On Cities.''

Achaia, a province in the north of Peloponnesus, seat of the Achaean League (280-146 B.c.). In 167 B.c., the Komans deported 1000 Achaeans to ltaly, where they were held for seventeen years. Among them was the historian Polybius. The name Achaia was afterwards given to the whole of southern Greece as a Roman province.

Acharnae, the largest deme, or township, of Attica, some eight miles to the north of Athens.

Adiabené, the western province of Assyria, lying along the Tigris river.
Aeolian Isles, a group of islands lying between Sicily and Italy (Lucania).
Aeschines the Socratic, a disciple of Socrates, and author of Socratic dialogues.
Agesilaiis, king of Sparta 398-361 B.0
Albania, a country lying between Armenia, the Caspian Sea, and the Caucasus mountains, to the east, of Iberia.
Allia, an _ insignificant stream, joining the Tiber about eleven miles above Rome, from the east.
Amisus, a city of Pontus (or Paphlagonia), on the southern shore of af

*

the Euxine Sea, some one hundred miles east of Sinopé.
Ammon, a Libyan divinity, identifled with Zeus and Jupiter. His most famous oracle was in an oasis of the Libyan desert.
Amphiaraiis, a mythical seer and prophet, king of Argos, who perished in the expedition of the Seven against ‘Thebes.
Anaxagoras, of Clazomenae, in Ionian Asia Minor, influential at Athens as an advanced thinker from about 460 to 432 B.c., when the enemies of Pericles secured his banishment.
Andocides, an Athenian orator, prominent 415-290 B.c. He betrayed the oligarchical party, incurring its hatred, and vainly tried to win the favour of the democratic party.

Andros, the most northerly island of the Cyclades group, S.E. of Euboea.
Anio, a large river of Latium, rising in the Apennines, and joining the Tiber about three miles above Kome, from the east.
Antiochus the Great, king of Syria 223-187 B.c.
Antiochus the philosopher, of Ascalon, pupil of Philo in the school of the Academy, a friend of Lucullus, and a teacher of Cicero. He died in 68 B.c.
Antipater, regent of Macedonia after the death of Alexander ee B.C.), victor over the con- ederate Greeks at Crannon, in Thessaly, 322. He died in 319.
623

DICTIONARY OF

Araxes, a large -river rising in Armenia, and flowing east into the Caspian Sea.
Arbela, an Assyrian town near which (at the village of Gauga- mela) Darius suffered final de- feat at the hands of Alexander, in 331 B.c.
Archelaiis, of Miletus, the natural philcsopher, said to have been a pupil of Anaxagoras, and a teacher of Socrates.
Archidamus, king of Sparta from 361 to 338 B.c., when he went to the aid gf the Tarentines in Italy, and was killed in battle.
Archon Eponymous, the first of the board of nine archons at Athens, so called, after the Roman conquest, because the year was registered in his name.

Aristogeiton, slayer, with Harmodius, of Hipparchus, the brother of the Athenian tyrant Hippias, in 514 B.c. The two ‘* tyrannicides ” were afterwards honoured as patriots and martyrs.
Ariston of Ceos, head of the Peripatetic school of philosophy at ci about 225 B.c. (pp. 9, 7).

Ariston the philosopher (p. 355), of Chios, a Stoic, pupil of Zeno. in his later life he taught doctrines of the Cynic school. He flourished about 260 B.c., and is often confounded with Ariston of Ccos.
Aristoxenus the musician, a pupil of Aristotle, and a philosopher of the Peripatetic s:hool.
Armenia, a country lying north of Mesopotamia and _ Assyria, between the upper Euphrates and Media. ;
Artaxata, the ancient capital of Armenia, on the river Araxes. See T'igranocerta, Artemisia, queen of Halicarnassus, vassal of Xerxes, who distinguished herself in the battle of Salamis.
Asopis, a mythical personage, mother of Mentor by Heracics.
624

PROPER NAMES

Atilius, M. Atilius Regulus, consul for the second time in 256 B.c., when he was defeated and taken prisoner by the Carthaginians.

Atropatené, a province of Media, to the east of Armenia.
Attalus, the name of three kings of Pergamum, in Asia Minor.
B

Bithynia, a country of N.W. Asia Minor, lying east of the Propontis, and along the coast of the Euxine Sea.
Boédromion, the third month in the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our September.
Brundisium, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural point of departure from Italy tothe East, aud was the chief nayal station o the Romans in the Adriatic a.

Cc

Cabeira (or Cabira),a city of Pontus, in the northern part of Asia Minor.
Caepio, Q. Servilius, consul in 106 B.c., receiving the province of Gallia Narbonensis, where, in the following year, on the 6th of October, his army was utterly annihilated by the Cimbri.
Callisthenes, of Olynthus, a relative and pupil of Aristotle, author of a Hellenica, or History of Greece, from 387 to 357 B.c. He accompanied Alexander the Great as historian of the expedition, the end of which he cid not live to see.
Cappadocia, a district in eastern Asia Minor, south of Pontus, and north of Cilicia.
Carneades, of Cyrené, head of the Academy at Athens in 156 B.c,

(when he was one of an embassy of philosophers to Rome) and unti] his death in 129 B.c. He was famous for the persuasive force of his eloquence.
DICTIONARY OF

Chaeroneia, a town commanding the entrance from Phocis into Boeotia, celebrated for the battles fought in its neighbourhood. Here Philip of Macedon defeated the allied Greeks in 838 B.O.
Chalcedon, a city of Bithynia, at the entrance of the Euxine Sea, opposite Byzantium.
Chaldaeans, a general name for the inhabitants of Babylonia. - Charon of Lampsacus, a " logographer," a predecessor of Herodotus, who wrote a history of Persia in annalistic form.
Chelidonian Isles, a group of islands off. the coast of Pamphylia, in southern Asia Minor.
Chersonese (i.e. peninsula), here (p. 447) of the Thracian Chersonese, extending in a S.W. direction into the Aegean Sea west of the Hellespont.
Cilicia, a country in southern Asia Minor, extending along' the Mediterranean between Pamphylia and Syria.
Cimbri, a northern tribe which, joining with the Teutones, invaded southern Europe. They were at last annihilated by Marius in 101 B.c.
Citium, a town on the southern coast of Cyprus.
Cleidemus, the oldest annalist of Athens, who flourished during the closing years of the fifth and

the. first half of the fourth century B.C.
Cleisthenes, the Athenian aristocrat who introduced the democratic reforms which followed the expulsion of the tyrants in 510 B.c.
Cieitarchus (Clitarchus), a historian who accompanied Alexander on his expedition to the Fast, and wrote a rhetorical history of it. He was the son of Deinon.
Cleonae, a city nearly midway between Argos and Corinth in Peloponnesus. ‘The Nemean games were celebrated in its territory.
Vou. II.

PROPER NAMES

Cnidus, a Dorian city in the S.W. of Caria, in south-western Asia Minor.
Colchis, a district at the eastern extremity of the Euxine Sea, north of Armenia.
Colophon, one of the cities of Ionian Asia Minor.
Corcyra, an island in the Ionian Sea, opposite Epeirus, the modern Cortt.
Cos, an island off the S.W. coast of Caria, opposite Cnidus.
Crannon, a town in cen Thessaly, the seat of the wealt” family of the Scopadae.
Craterus the Macedonian, a_ half-brother of Antigonus Gonatas, the king of Macedonia (0b. 239 B.0.), who compiled historical documents, such as decrees and other published inscriptions, bearing on the history of Athens.
Critias, one of the ‘‘ thirty tyrants ”’

(404-403 B.O.), like Alcibiades a follower of Socrates, author of tragedies, and elegiac poems on political subjects.
Cronus, the father of Zeus, identi-tied with the Roman Saturnus.
Curius, Manius Curius Dentatus, consul in 290 B.c., in which year he brought the long war with the Samnites to a close and reduced the revolted Sabines.
In 275 B.c., he defeated Pyrrhus at Beneventum. He celebrated two triumphs in 290, and one“a afd. / Cyanean Isles, two islands at niouth of the Bosporus, ?
entrance into the Euxine
the clashing isles of mythe Cymé, an Aeo ian city on tb
of Asia Minor, S.E. of Les Cyrené, a Greek city ¢
northern | ace of . ith.
commercia! relations with= 9 .f
age, Greece, and Egypt. ° itra, Cyzicus, a city on the sou ry fter shore of the Propontis, in My "Vere strongly situated on the neck ¢2-a peninsula,
$9 625

——

~—

~

~~

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

D

Damastes, of Sigeium in the Troad, a historian contemporary with

Herodotus, and author, besides nen other works, of a genealogy oS e Greeks who fought at ‘roy Deceleia, a mountain citadel of Attica, about fourteen miles from Athens towards Boeotia.

Deinon (Dinon), of Colophon, author of a History of Persia, father of Cleitarchus the _historian of Alexander’s expedition.

+ Demetrius of Phalerum, regent at Athens for Cassander 317-307 B.O., & voluminous writer on history, politics, poetry, and philosophy.

Diodorus the Topographer (Periegetes), of Athens (probably), a contemporary of Alexander the Great, wrote on the demes and monuments of Attica.

Dion, of Syracuse, an ardent disciple of Plato, master of Syracuse after the expulsion of Dionysius II, assassinated in 353 B.C.

Dodona, a town in Epeirus, seat of the most ancient oracle of Zeus.

E

Elaex, an Aeolic city of Asia Minor, the port for Pergamum.

Epaminondas, Theban general and ‘gtatesman, friend of Pelopidas, fell in the battle of Mantineia, 362 B.C

iphesus one of the twelve Ionian cities, in Lydia, Asia Minor, at the mouth of the river Cayster.

Ephors, five chief magistrates at. Sparta elected annually. The first Ephor gave his name to the ear, like the Athenian Archon mA ponymous.

vahorus, of Cymé, pupil of Isoeee author of a highly rhetori-history of Greece from the down to

in which year he died.
founder of the philo-
a Dorian Invasion ”’ Ase 340 B.C., Epicurus, 626

sophical school named from him, born in Samos, 342 B.c., died at Athens, 270 B.c.
Eratosthenes, of Cyrené, librarian at Alexandria, most distinguished as geographer and chronologist, a writer also on philosophy and ethics, 275-194 aanenies: king of Pergamum in Asia Minor from 197 to 159 B.c., and like his father (Attalus I), a persistent friend of Rome.
Eurymedon, a river flowing through Pamphylia, in southern Asia
Minor, into the Mediterranean.
F

Fabricius, C. Fabricius Luscinus, like Curius and Atilius a representative of the sterling ‘virtues of the more ancient times, ambassador to Pyrrhus at Tarentum
after the disastrous battle of Heracleia, 280 B.C., consul in 278 B.C., censor in 275, with the
- severity of a Cato.
G

Gabinian way, Via Gabina (earlier called Via Tiburtina), leading eastwards from Rome to Tibur (Tivoli).

Galatia, a district in central Asia
finor.
Gordyené, a district of southern

Armenia, lying east of the river Tigris.
Gorgias, of Leontini in Sicily, famous for his eloquence, came on an embassy to Athens iv 427 B.C., when sixty years of age, and spent the rest of his life in that and neighbouring cities, amassing great wealth as a paid teacher of rhetoric.
Granicus, a river of Troas, flowing

- north into the Propontis.

H

Hamilcar, surnamed Barcas, implacable enemy of the Romans, father of Hannibal, and founder of the Carthaginian empire in Spain, died in 229 B.c.

Hecatombaeon, the first month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our July.
Helots, a name given to the original inhabitants of Laconia who had lost both land and freedom. They were state slaves. See Perioeci.

Heracleia (p. 423), called Pontica, to distinguish it from the many other cities of the same name, a city of Bithynia (or Phrygia Minor) on the southern shore of the Euxine Sea.
Heracleides, called Ponticus from his birth in Heracleia Pontica, a pupil of Plato and ‘ristotle, and a learned and voluminous writer on almost all possible subjects. Cicero thought him superstitious and uncritical.

Hieronymus the Rhodian, a disciple of Aristotle. flourishing about 800 B.c. Little is known about him, though he is often quoted by Cicero.

Hippocrates, the second of that name, and the most famous physician of ancient times, 460—357 B.C.

Hyrcanian Sea, another name for the Caspian Sea, from the Province of Hyrcania to the 8.E. of it.

I

Iberia, a country east of Colchis, Devween the Euxine and Caspian as.

Ides, the fifteenth day of the Roman month in March, May, July, and October; the thirteenth in the other months.

Idomeneus, of Lampsacus, a pupil and friend of Epicurus (342-270 B.C.), author of biographical works on "' The Socratics," and "The Demagogues."

Ino, daughter of Cadmus, and wife of Athamas, the king of Orchomenus in Boeotia. After her death she was worshipped as Leuocthea, a sea goddess. According to one of the many myths connected with her name, she became mad with jealousy of a female slave, and slew her own son. See Plutarch, Roman Questions, 16.

Ton, of Chios, a popular poet at Athens between 452 and 421 B.Cc., also author of a prose work entitled '* Sojourns," in which he recounted his experiences with famous men of his time.

Isocrates, the celebrated Attic orator and rhetorician, 436-338 B.O.

J

Jason, the great hero of the Argonautic expedition, husband of Medeia.

L

Lamptrae, name of two demes, or townships, in S.E. Attica.

Lemnos, a large island in the oe part of the Aegean ea.

Leucothea. See Ino.

Lycaonia, a district in central Asia Minor, between Galatia and Cilicia.

Lycurgus, the semi-historical law-iver of Sparta, where he was onoured as a god.

Lysias, the Attic orator, 458-378 B.O.

M

Maeotis, Lake, the modern Sea of Azov, N.E. of the Euxine Sea.

Maimacterion, the fifth month of the Attic year, corresponding nearly to our November.

Mardians, a tribe on the southern shore of the Caspian Sea.

Marsi, an ancient people of centra. Italy, akin to the Sabines. After their defeat in 89 B.c., they were admitted to the Roman citizen-ship, with the other Italians.

627

.

DICTIONARY OF

Melanthius, an author of tragedies and elegiac poems, contemporary with Cimon at Athens.
Melissus, Samos, a famous natural philosopher, a disciple of Parmenides, who led the mians successfully against ricles.
Mesopotamia, the region between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers above Babylonia.
Metageitnion, the second month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our August.
Metellus Pius, Q. Caecilius, ob. tained the surname of Pius for persuading the people to recall his father, Metellus Numidicus, from banishment. He was a successful general under Sulla, and consul with him in 80 B.o. He died about 63 B.c.

Mithridates, the sixth king of Pontus bearing this name, commonly known as Mithridates the Great, 120-63 B.c., the most formidable enemy of the Romans in the East.
Mitylené the largest city of Lesbos, off the N.W. coast of Asia Minor.
Mygdonia, a district in the N.E. of Mesopotamia.
N

Nausicrates (or Naucrates), the

- rhetorician, a pupil of Isocrates. He composed models of funeral orations for men of note.
Neanthes, of Cyzicus, a voluminous writer of history, who flourished about 240 B.c. He belonged to the school of Isocrates.

Nepos, Cornelius, Roman _biographer and historian, a cortemporary and friend of Cicero.
Nicomedeia, capital of Bithynia, at the N.E. corner of the Propontis.

ee the chief city of Mygdonia g.v.).
Nones, the ninth day hefore the Tdes of the Roman month, falling therefore on the seventh day of the month in March, May, July, and October, and on the ffth day of the other months.

Numantia, a city in the northern part of Spain, taken after a memorable siege by Scipio Africanus, in 134 B.c.
O

Oropus, a town and district on the northern and eastern borders respectively) of Attica and otia, much in dispute between Athenians and Thebans.
Orpheus, the mythical singer of Thrace, and one of the Argonauts.
P

Tagasae, a city in S.E. Thessaly, at the head of a gulf of the same naine, famed in story as the port from which Jason set sail with the Argonauts.
Palatium, the Palatine hill of P raphy ia the amphylia, a co on south coast of Mea Manse between Lycia and Cilicia.

Panaetius, of Rhodes, the Stoic phibosopiier, chief founder of the Stoic school at Rome, flourishing between 150 and 110 B.o.
Parthia, in the time of Lucullus, a vast realm to the east of Armenia,
A ia, and Mesopotamia.
Peisistratus, tyrant of Athens in 560 B.c , and during seventeen of the thirty-three years thereafter.
Pelopidas, Theban general and statesman, bosom friend of Pperniioncs: killed in battle

364 B.C

Pergamum (or Pergamus), an ancient city of Mysia, in Asia Minor, on the river Calcus.
After 283 B.c., it was the seat of the Attalid dynasty.
Perioeci, the name of those inhabitants of Sparta who kept their lands and personal Llibert unlike the Helots, but who did ane exercise the rights of citizenship.
DICTIONARY OF

lerseus (pp. 347, 363), the last king of Macedonia, son of Philip V.
He graced the triumph of Aemi-lius Paulus in 167 B.c., and died at Rome several years later.
Perseus (p. 411), the famous Argive hero, son of Zeus and Danag, slayer of the Gorgon Medusa.
Phalerum, the ancient harbour of Athens, before Themistocles fortified the Peiraeus.
Phanias, the Lesbian, of Eresos,

the most distinguished pupil of Aristotle after Theophrastus, a prolific writer on philosophy and history,—a historical romancer.
Phanodemus, a writer of Attic annals, after the manner of Cleidemus (q.2.). harnacia, a city of Pontus, on the southern shore of the Euxine, N.E. of Cabeira.
Phasis, a river of Colchis, flowing ne the Euxine at its eastern Philip (p. 139), of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great, secured the leadership of Greece in the battle at Chaeroneia, 338 B.c.
Philip (p.335), Philip V of Macedon, father of Perseus, from 216 B.0. till his death in 179 a formidable enemy of Rome.
Philo (p. 607), the Academic, of Larissa, removed from Athens to Rome about 88 B.c., where he was teacher of Cicero, and where he died about 80 B.c.
Phlya, a deme, or township, somewhere in the N.K. of Attica.
Phrygia, a large province in western and north-western Asia Minor.
Phylarchus, of Naucratis and thens, a Greek historian who dourisiod about 220 B.C., to whom Plutarch is much indebted in his Agis and Cleomenes.

Pitané, au ancient Aeolian city on the N.W. coast of Asia Minar.
Polybius, the Greek historian of the Punic Wars, of Megalopolis, in Arcadia, born about 204 B.c., one of the Achaeen exiles (see Achaia) in 167. In Rome, he reekled in the house of Aemilius Paulus, and became the intimate friend of the younger Scipio, with whom he was present at the destruction of Carthage in 146 B.c.
PROPER NAMES

Pontus, a large district in N.E. Asia "Minor, stretching along the southern shore of the Euxine.

Potamus, name of a deme, or township, in eastern Attica.

Propontis, the intermediate sea between the Aegean and the Kiuxine, connected with the former by the Hellespont, with the latter by the Thracian Bosporus Pydna, a town on the Thermatc gulf, S.E. of Macedonia.

Pyrrhus, king of Epeirus from 295 till his death in 272 B.o. From 280 till 274 he was camipaigning in Itely and Sicily.

S

Sabines, a people occupying the western slopes of the central Apennines, in Italy. They were finally subdued by Curius Dentatus in 290 B.c., and in 268 became Roman citizens.

Sallust, C. Sallustius 5 Crispus, 86—34 B.c. He was a partisan of Caesar, who made him governor of Numidia, where he amassed great wealth. He afterwards wrote histories of the conspiracy of Catiline and of the Jugurthine war.

Samnites, inhabitants of Samnium, the mountainous district of central Italy lying between Latium and Apulia. In 200 B.o. Curius Dentatus won the honour of putting an end to the Samnite wars after they had lasted fifty years.

Sarpothrade: an island in the moetner part of the Aegean
Scepsis, an ancient town east of t road, which in later times became subject to Pergamum, and a seat of learning.
629

Scopas, the Thessalian. See Crannon.
Seleucus, surnamed Nicator, founder of the Syrian monarchy, 353-280 B.C.
Seriphus, one of the Cyclades islands, S.E. of Attica, proverbial for poverty and insignificance.
Sertorius, one of the greatest soldiers bred by the Roman civil wars, who successfully opposed the best generals of the aristocratic party in Spain from 82 Ae till his assassination in Sicyon, an important city in N.E. eloponnesus, about two miles south of the Corinthian gulf.
Simonides of Ceos, one of the greatest lyric poets of Greece, 556—467 B.O.
Sinopé, an important Greek city on the southern shore of the Euxine Sea, in N.E. Paphlagonia.
Sophené, a district of S.W. Armenia.
Sophists, a general name for paid teachers of rhetoric and philosopy, like Gorgias.
Stesimbrotus, of Thasos, a sophist and rhapsodist of note in Athens during the times of Cimon and Pericles.
Sthenis, of Olynthus, a famous statuary at Athens, who flourished about 350 B.o. ; Strabo, the geographer . (philosopher, p. 565), lived during the times of Augustus.

T

Talaura, a stronghold in Pontus.

Tanagra, a town and district in S.E. Boeotia.
Tarentum, a Greek city in 8.E.

‘ Italy. It surrendered to the Romans in 272 B.C., was betrayed into the hands of Hannibal in 212, and recovered by Fabius in 209.
Taurus, a general name for the lofty range of mountains extending from Lycia in Asia
630

Minor through Cilicia and south of Armenia into Media.
Tegea, an ancient city in 8.E. Arcadia, of Peloponnesus.
Tempé, a famous valley in N.E. Thessaly.
Tenedos, an island about five miles west of the Troad, in the N.E. Aegean.
Tenos, one of the Cyclades islands, S.E. of Attica.
Thargelion, the eleventh month of the Attic calendar, corresponding nearly to our May.
Themiscyra, a plain and city in Pontus, near the mouth of the river Thermodon.
Theophrastus, the most famous pupil of Aristotle, and his successor as head of the Peripatetic school at Athens. He was born at Eresos in Lesbos, and died at Athens in 287 B.c., at the age of eighty-five.

Theopompus, of Chios, a fellow-pupil of Isocrates with Ephoruss historian of Greece from 411 to 394 B.c., and of Philip of Macedon
(360~—336 B.O.).
Tibareni, a tribe on the northern coast of Pontus.
Tigranocerta, the city of Tigranes.
later capital of Armenia, in My.
donia, west of Nisibis, just south of the Taurus.
Tigris, the great river rising in Armenia and flowing between Mesopotamia and Assyria.
Timocreon, of Rhodes, a lyric poet,
now known chiefly for his hatred of Themistocles and Simonides of 08.

Timoleon, of Corinth, rescued Syracuse from its tyrant (Dionysius IJ) and the Carthaginians in
- 343 B.c., and became virtual master of Sicily, though without Office. He died in Syracuse,
337 B.O.
Troezen, a city in S.E. Argolis, o: Peloponnesus.
Trophonius, received worship and had an oracle in a cave near Lebadeia in Boeotia.
8

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Tubero the Stoic p- 599), Aelius, a pupil o pavestiun flourished in the century before Lucullus, and could not have seen him playing Xerxes. The jest may have come from Lucius Tubero, the relative and intimate friend of Cicero, who cultivated literature and philosophy.
Tusculum, an ancient city of Latium, fifteen miles S.E. of Rome, in the Alban mountains.

It became a favourite resort of wealthy Romans.
Tyrannio the Grammarian, of Amisus in Pontus. He was taken to Rome ~ RY Lucullus, where he became a teacher, was patronised and praised by Cicéro, and amassed wealth.
Vv

Vesta, an ancient Roman divinity, identical with the Greek Hest as goddess of the hearth and fire- ~ side. The Vestals were her virgin priestesses.
xX

XNenocrates, of Chalcedon, 396-314 B.c., a pupil and disciple of Plato, became head of the Academy in 339 B.o.
—

=-_~

~

PIST. Ploranch. Vito z aera ee re axes
LIVES WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATIGN BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN
IN TEN VOLUMES
iil
PERICLES AND FABIUS MAXIMUS
NICIAS AND CRASSUS
LONDON: WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
NEW YORK: G. P. PUTNAM’S SONS
First printed 1916
Reprinted 1932
Printed
in Great Britain at The Windmill Press, Kingswood, Surrey

PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agree- ment between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) texts of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of the one to the other, where they differ, and any departure from both, have been indi- cated in the critical notes. The more important ameliorations of the text which have been secured by collations of Codex Parisinus 1676 (F") and Codex Seitenstettensis (S), have been introduced. The relative importance of these MSS. is explained in the Introduction to the first volume. The text- tradition of the chapters of the Crassus (xv.- xxxiii.) which appear in the Parthian War attri- buted to Appian (Fseudo-Appian), is seldom, if ever, superior to that of the same chapters in Plutarch. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. The reading which follows the colon in the critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also,

unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.
PREFATORY NOTE

Among editions of special Lives included in this volume should be noted that of Fuhr, ZV'hemistokles und Perikles, Berlin, 1880, in the Hanpt-Sauppe series of annotated texts; and that of Blass, Themi- stokles und Perikles, Leipzig, 1883, in the Teubner series of annotated texts. These editions bring F* and S into rightful prominence as a basis for the text. Holden’s edition of the Nictas, in the Pitt Press series, Cambridge, 1887, has also been found useful. A brief bibliography for the study of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume.

The translations of the Pericles and of the Nicias have already appeared in my Plutarch’s Cimon and Pericles (New York, 1910), and Plutarch’s Nictas and Alcibiades (New York, 1912), and are re- produeed here (with only slight changes) by the generous consent of the publishers, the Messrs. Charles Seribner’s Sons. The translations of the Fabius Maximus and of the Crassus appear here for the first time. All the standard translations of the Lives have been earefully eompared and_ utilized, including that of the Crassus by Professor Long.

B. PERRIN,
New Haven, Coxwecticot, U.S.A.
June, 1915.
Vv)

CONTENTS

‘FRErACORY NOTE « « © « © « e
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDISFION

TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES .
PERICLES . Cr a
FABIUS MAXIMUS ....4.+ ce ee eevee.
COMPARISON OF PERICLES AND FABIUS MAXIMUS
NICTAS a 48: 8 ee ee el we Oe
CRASSUS . «© © ee eo we we ww www
COMPARISON OF NICIAS AND CRASSUS .,....
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES . ..4 .

PAGE
Vv

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VoutumeE I.

(1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
(2) Lyeurgus and Nuina.
Comparison.
(3) Solon and Publicola.

Comparison,

Voutume II,

(4) Themistocles and Camiiilus.
(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
(13) Cimon aud Lucnuilus.
Comparison.

VotomeE III.

(5) Pericles and Fabius Max-

imus.
Comparison.
(14) Nicias and Crassus,
Comparison.

Vorume IV.

(6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
To
Comparison.

(12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.
Votume V.
-(16) Agesilaus and Pompey.
Comparison.
(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.
Vili

Vo.tume VI.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
(7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Coimparisoa.
VouumeE VII.
(17) Alexander and Julius K
Cuesar.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
VouumeE VITI.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
| (23) Demetrius and Antony.

Comparison.

Vouume IX.
(11) Pyrrhus and Cains Marius.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.

VoriumrE X.
(10) Philopoemen and Flam-
ininus.
Comparison.
TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES.
(1) Theseus and Romulus.

(2) Lycurgus and Numa.

(3) Solon and Publicola.

(4) Themistocles and Camillus,

(5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus,

(6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.

(7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.

(8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.

(9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
(10) Philopoemen and Flamininus,
(11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius,
(12) Lysander and Sulla.
(13) Cimon and Lucullus.

(14) Nicias and Crassus.

(15) Sertorius and Eumenes.

(16) Agesilaus and Pompcy.

(17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
(18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
(19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius Gracchus.
(20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
(21) Demetrius and Antony.
(22) Dion and Brutus.
(23) Artaxerxes,
(24) Aratus,
(25) Galba.
(26) Otho.

PERICLES

VOL. WI.

ITEPJIKAHS

I. Zévous tivas év ‘Pwpn wrovalovs xuvav

Téxva Kai TLOnKwY év TOUS KOATCOLS mepipepovTas Kal dyaTr aver as id@v o Kaicap, QS corer, 7) npe-Tnoev eb Taidta Tap avTots ov TiKTOVoW at yUvaiKes, nyE“ovix@s ahodpa vovleTHaas TOUS
To phicer Piryntixoy év nuiv cal dedoatopyor eis Onpia Katavaricxovtas avOpwrots oecdopevoy.
dp ovv, émet piropabés te KéxtNTaL Kal tdo-Béapov nuav 7 Wweyn dioet, Adyov Eyer réeyeev
TOUS KATAYpwpevous TOVT@ TpOS TA pNdEmlas
adkia otrovéis axovopata Kai Oeduata, Tay oé KaAX@V Kai wheripwv TapapedrodvTas; TH pev yap aicOnce Kata Ta0os THS TANS avtthapBavoevn TOY TpocTvyyavorvTwy icws avayKn Trav
TO Paivopevov, dv TE Ypijoluov av T aypynaTov FH, Dewpetv, TH v@e 8 Exaotos a BovrotTe xphoOat, Kat TpéTety éavTov adel kal petaBaddrew pacta mpos TO Soxody TédpuKev, WaTEe YXpH SiwKery TO Bérxrictov, va py Oewph povov, adda Kal tpédytatt@ Oewpeiv. ws yap opParp@ ypoa tpocopos 7s TO avOnpov Gua Kal teptvov avalwrupet Paris
Edition,
a. 1624,
p-152

PERICLES

I. On sceing certain wealthy foreigners in Rome carrying puppies and young monkeys about in their bosoms and fondling them, Caesar! asked, we are told, if the women in their country did not bear children, thus in right princely fashion rebuking those who squander on animals that proneness to love and loving affection which is ours by nature, and which is due only to our fellow-men. Since, then, our souls are by nature possessed of great fondness for learning and fondness for seeing, it is surely reasonable to chide those who abuse this fondness on objects all unworthy either of their eyes or ears, to the neglect of those which are good and serviceable. Our outward sense, since it apprehends the objects which encounter it by virtue of their mere impact upon it, must needs, perhaps, regard everything that presents itself, be it useful or uscless ; but in the exercise of his mind every man, if he pleases, has the natural power to turn himself away in every case, and to change, without the least difficulty, to that object upon which he liimself determines. It is meet, therefore, that he pursue what is best, to the end that he may not merely regard it, but also be edified by regarding it. A colour is suited to the eye if its freshness, and its pleasantness as well, stimulates and

1 Caesar Augustus.

wt

Kal tpéper Thy Oey, oUtw TH Sidvotay ed pew Set Oedpaciw & TO yYaipeww pds TO oiKetov avTipy ayadov éxxanel.
Taira d¢ éotw ev tots am’ aperijs Epyots, & Kal Chrov tiva Kal mpoOupiavy aywyov eis pinot emotes Tots iatopijcacw érel Tav yf adAwV ovK evOus axohovdel 7 Oavypdacat TO wpaxOev oppay ™ pos TO m pata: ToAAaKis b6€ Kal Tov-vavtiov Xaipovres TO && "Ye TOU Snpoupyou KaTAppovoiper, @s éml TOV pUpeov Kal TOV doupyov TovTols pev nOoopeOa, Tous be Badets Kal jupeous avehevdépous Hyovpeda kai Bavavaovus.
610 KAXS pev ‘Avriaevns a axovaas vt oTTOVbAIOS cow QUANTNS ‘Topnvias, TAX: avO pwros,” Eby, « woxOnpos: ov yap av otTe omavbuios 7] Vv avrn-THs" 0 b6€ Pidirmos ™ pos Tov viov eT LTEPT GS £v Tie TOT@ Yrravra Kal TEXVEKOS eltrev: “ Our aiaxuvy KAAS OvTH Warrov ; ” apKet yap, ay Bactrevs axpodabat Warnovtov oxoraSn, qu
TON ve jel Tats Moveats éTépwv aywvilopevar Ta ToLtavTa GeaT7s yeryVOpevas.
II. ‘H & abtoupyia TOV TaTEvar THs els Ta
Kane, padupias paptupa TOV év Tots aXpHaToLs
TOvOV | TapexeTat Ka’ abtis: Kat ovdels evduns
véos 7 Tov év Ilian Gear apevos Aia yevéo Bar
Peidias erreO ipnycev nH TI “Hpav THD ev “Apyet TlorAveXertos, ove: ‘Avaxpewv 3}) Diryras 7 1 "A pxi-Aoxos jadeis avr ev Tots TOL LAT LY. ov yap get aoe el TépTEL TO Epyov ws yapev, aktov
! isropjcacw Bekker, Fuhr, and Blass, with Reiske, after Amyot: iorophuacw (researches).
4

nourishes the vision; and so our intellectual vision must be applied to such objects as, by their very charm, invite it onward to its own proper good.

Such objects are to be found in virtuous deeds ; these implant in those who search them out a great and zealous eagerness which leads to imitation. In other cases, admiration of the deed is not immedi- ately accompanied by an impulse to do it. Nay, many times, on the contrary, while we delight in the work, we despise the workman, as, for instance, in the case of perfumes and dyes; we take a delight in them, but dyers and perfumers we regard as illiberal and vulgar folk. Therefore it was a fine saying of Antisthenes, when he heard that Ismenias was an excellent piper: “ But he’s a worthless man,” said he, “otherwise he wouldn’t be so good a piper.” And so Philip! once said to his son, who, as the wine went round, plucked the strings charmingly and skilfully, “ Art not ashamed to pluck the strings so well?” It is enough, surcly, if a king have leisure to hear others pluck the strings, and he pays great deference to the Muses if he be but a spcctator of such contests.

II. Labour with one’s own hands on lowly tasks’ gives witness, in the toil thus expended on useless things, to one’s own indifference te higher things. No generous youth, from seeing the Zeus at Pisa,? or the Hera at Argos, longs to be Pheidias or Polyclei- tus; nor to be Anacreon or Philetas or Archilochus out of pleasure in their poems. For it does not of necessity follow that, if the work delights you with its grace, the one who wrought it is worthy of your

1 Philip of Macedon, to Alexander.
2 That is, Olympia.
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

oTouoNs Elvat Tov eipyagpévov. Oey ovd’ wherei Ta ToLtavTAa TOUS DOewmevous, TpOS A miuNTLKOS Ov
yivetar Cros ovde avddoats Kiwovca mpoOvpiav
\ 2& \ 1 tN ‘\ 3 s ,] .w 9 \ Kat oppnv) emt tiv eEopotwov. add 7 ye GpeET)
tais mpakeaow evOus ottw dtatiOnow wote apa Oavpalecbar ta Epya Kal CnrovaGat Tous eipyaapevous. TOV pev yap ex THs TUXNS ayabav
TAS KTHOES Kal aToAavcEs, TOV O an’ apeETis Tas mpdakes ayaTo@pev, Kal Ta pev Huly Tap étépwv, Ta € warXov Erépots Tap’ hyewv VITdpyeww BovAopeOa. To yap Kadov ef avTo TpaKTiKas
Kwel Kal mpaxtikny evOus opunv évtiOnow, 700-Tovwouv ov TH ptprjoee tov Beaty, adArAa TH iaTopia Tov épyou THY TMpoaiperiv TapEeyopevor.
wv é . @ Y e ww 9 } nw nm 2 ‘ Kookev ovv cat nuiv evdratpiiyat TH Tept TOUS
, 3 “a \ a“ XN / A
Biovs araypadn, Kal todto to BiBrtov béxaTov Ul \ , , \ N
cuvtetaxapev Tov Lepixréous Biov nal tov Pa/ s a , \ > U
Biov Makipou TOU ScaToAEUNC aVTOS ™ pos | Avvi-
Bav TEplexov, avd pov Kara, TE Tas arras apeTas Opotwv, partota O€ mpaoTnTa Kat Sixatoouvny,

Kal T@ duvacbat peperv Opa Kal cuvapxovTwy

s dyvepod ivas MOPEALLWTUATWY TALS TAT plot yEevo-
bev. el 8 opFas otoxalopeba, tov d€ovtos, éFeate xpivew ék Tov ypapopeven.
III. Hepexars yap nv TeV: pev pud2v ‘Aka-pavtidns, Tav O€ Orjuwyv Norapyeus, oixov b€ Kat ryevous Tob ™pwTtov Kat dudotépous. Favbinmos yap 0 veKyoas éy Muxandn tous Bacrrews oTpatnyous éynuev ‘Ayapiotnvy KrecaGevous éyyovov, os 1 $puhy Fuhr and Blass, after Reiske: a&goputy.

esteem. Wherefore the spectator is not advantaged by those things at sight of which no ardour for imitation arises in the breast, nor any uplift of the soul arousing zealous impulses to do the like. But virtuous action straightway so disposes a man that he no sooner admires the works of virtue than he strives to emulate those who wrought them. The good things of Fortune we love to possess and enjoy ; those of Virtue we love to perform. The former we are willing should be ours at the hands of others ; the latter we wish that others rather should have at our hands. The Good creates a stir of activity towards itself, and implants at once in the spectator an active impulse ; it does not form his character by ideai representation alone, but through the investiga-tion of its work it furnishes him with a dominant purpose.

For such reasons | have decided to persevere in my writing of Lives, and so have composed this tenth book, containing the life of Perictes, and that of Fabius Maximus, who waged such lengthy war with Hannibal. The men were alike in their virtues, and more especially in their gentleness and rectitude, and by their ability to endure the follies of their peoples and of their colleagues in office, they proved of the greatest service to their countries. But whether I aim correctly at the proper mark must be decided from what I have written.

III. Pericles was of the tribe Acamantis, of the deme Cholargus, and of the foremost family and lineage on both sides. His father, Xanthippus, who conquered the generals of the King at Mycale,! married Agariste, granddaughter ? of that Cleisthenes

1 479 B.c. 2 His niece, ratker.

éEnrace Ilevotatpatidbas nal KatédXvoe THY TUpavvida yevvaiws Kat vopous Eero xal woXdtTEiav
dplota Kexpapevny mpos omovotay Kal owrnpiav KaTéotTyaev. avltn cava Tous Umvous Edboke TExeElv AéovTa, Kal pel’ wuepas drAlyas Erexe Iepixréa,
‘ \ 4 v \ 98 Ff n s w
Ta pev aAdAa THY iOéavy TOD CMpATOS ApeuTTTOY, Tpounkn O€ TH Keparyn! Kal adovppetpov. dev ai pev eixoves avTov axedov atacat Kpaveot TEpteXovTal, 47) BOvAOLEVwWY, WS EOLKE, TOV TEXVE-tov é€ovediveav. ot & ’Artixol troinrat oywoxéparov avrov éxddouv: THY yap aKidday Eat été Kal oxivov dvopavovar. Tov b€ KwptKav O pev Kpartivos év Xeipwou “ Xtdows b€” (dno) “Kal mpecBuyevns Kpovos adAnAotoe puyévte peytotoy TixteTov TUpavvoy, dv bn Keparnyepérav Geol xadéovot” Kal maddy év Nepécer ‘“ Mon’, © Zed Eevie xai xapaé.” Tyrexreldns 5€ wore peév bTd TOV TpayLaTwv nropnpevoy KaAOjaOai pyow avrov év TH mode “KapnBapovvta, wore 6é povoyv éx Keparis évdexaxdivov OdpuvBov moddw éfavatéaAnew” o 8 Kvzodis ev tois Anpors muvOavomevos Tept Exdotov Tov avaBeBnKorwr
é& adov Snpaywyov, ws o Tepixrijs wvopacbn TeAEUTALOS’
“O vt wep Keparatov Tav KaTwOev nyayes.

IV. Acéddoxadov 8 avtov rm@v povolxov ot mrecoto. Aduwva yeveoPar Aéyovaw, ob} pact 1 79 xepadg Fuhr and Blass with F8S ; rhv xepadrgy, who, in such noble fashion, expelled the Peisistratidac and destroyed their tyranny, instituted laws, and established a constitution best attempered for the promotion of harmony and safety. She, in her dreams, once fancied that she had given birth to a lion, and a few days thereafter bore Pericles! His personal appearance was unimpeachable, except that his head was rather long and out of due proportion. For this reason the images of him, almost all of them, wear helmets, because the artists, as it would seem, were not willing to reproach him with de- formity. The comic poets of Attica used to call him “‘Schinocephalus,” or Squill-head (the squill is some- times called “schinus’’). So the comic poet Cra- tinus, in his “ Cheirons,” says: “ Faction and Saturn, that ancient of days, were united in wedlock ; their offspring was of all tyrants the greatest, and lo! he is called by the gods the head-compeller.’? And again in his “ Nemesis”: “Come, Zeus! of guests and heads the Lord!” 2 And Telecleides speaks of him as sitting on the acropolis in the greatest perplex- ity, “now heavy of head, and now alone, from the eleven-couched chamber of his head, causing vast uproar to arise.” 2 And Eupolis, in his “ Demes,” having inquiries made about each one of the demagogues as they come up from Hades, says, when Pericles is called out last :-—

“The very head of those below hast thou now brought.” 2 IY. His teacher in music, most writers state, was Damon (whose name, they say, should be pronounced

1 Cf. Herodotus, vi. 13].
* Kock, Com. Att. Frag. i. p. 86; p. 49; p. 220; p. 280.
9

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

deity Tovvopa Bpayvvovtas Tv Tpotépay ovAda-Biv éexdéperv: "Aptaotorérns O€ rapa Iv0oxrcidy povotxny StarrovnOnvat tov avdpa dnaiv. o &é Adpwv éoixev axpos wv codtotns KxatadvecBat
bev els TO THS MOVOLKIS GVO"A TPOS TOUS TOAXOUS
emixpuTTopevos THY SevoTnTa, TH Sé Tleptxret cuviy cabarep abAnTH TOY TOALTIK@Y arEiTTNS
cai diddoKanros. ov pv Edabev o Aduwv TH AUpa TAPAKANVMMATL KpWpEVvos, UX WS pEeyadoT paypov kal dirotvpavvos éEwotpaxiaOn Kat Tapécyxe Tos Kwptxois dtatpiByv. o ryoov Ildkatwv Kat muvOavopevoy avTOv TWA TETTOiNKEY OUTW* IIp@rov pev ovv por A€Eov, avTtBorw av yap, ws hac, o Netpwov eEeOpewras Tepexréa.
Sinxouce dé Hepixarts xai Zijvwvos tod ’EXedtou
/
Tpaypwatevopévov mept dvaiv, ws Tlappevidys,
\ f \ > » ‘4 4
eXeyerexny S€ Teva cai du’ avrtNoyias KaTAKAELOUcav els atropiav é€ackioavtos Ew, WoTEp Kal
rye e 4 v Py \ 4
Tipewr o PrALaotos eipynxe 01a TOUTwWY
"ApdotepoyAwacou Te peya oOévos ovK ada-Taovov
, id > ¢
Z1vOvos, TAVTWV ETLANTTOPOS.
‘O 8 wretaota Tlepixre? aovyyevopuevos xal pddiata wepiOeis Gykov avT@ Kal Ppcynpa dnpayoryias éuBpiOécTtepov, Odws TE peTEWpiaas Kal 4 ‘Q > f “ bd b J t owveEdpas TO akiwpa Tov 7)0ous, ’Avakayopas hv 6 Kralopenos, dv of tot’ advOpwrot Novv tpoo-10

with the first syllable short); but Aristotle! says he had a thorough musical training at the hands of Pythocleides. Now Damon seems to have been a consummate sophist, but to have taken refuge behind the name of music in order to conceal from the mul- titude his real power, and he associated with Pericles, that political athlete, as it were, in the capacity of rubber and trainer. However, Damon was not left unmolested in this use of his lyre as a screen, but was ostracized for being a great schemer and a friend of tyranny, and became a butt of the comic poets. At all events, Plato? represented some one as inquiring of him thus :—

“In the first place tell me then, I beseech thee, thou who art

The Cheiron, as they say, who to Pericles gave his craft.”

Pericles was also a pupil of Zeno the Eleatic, who discoursed on the natural world, like Parmenides, and perfected a species of refutative catch which was sure to bring an opponent to grief; as Timon of Phlius expressed it :—

“ His was a tongue that could argue both ways with a fury resistless, Zeno’s; assailer of all things.”

But the man who most vconsorted with Pericles, and did most to clothe him with a majestic demeanour that had more weight than any demagogue’s appeals, yes, and who lifted on high and exalted the dignity of his character, was Anaxagoras the Clazomenian, whom men of that day used to call

1 Plato, rather, Alcihiades I. 118 c.

2 Plato the comic poet. Kock Com. Att. Frag, i. p. 655.

/ \ a“ nyopevov, ELTE THY GUVvEedW avTOU peyadny Els gpuotoroyiay Kat wepittny Stadaveicav Oavpa-w/)> “ fad “A 9 F bad)

gavtes, E10’ OTL TOls GAOLS TPATOS ov TUYNY ovd

$ 4 PS 4 > / 3 \ “~ b a avayKny OLrakoopnoews apynv, adrAa vou eTeEoTnae KaGapov kai dxpartov év pemtypéevots Tact Tots adXoOLS, ATTOKpivovTA TAS OpoLopeEpeias.
V. Tottov vaeppuas tov dvdpa Oavydoas o
Ilepixrs Kat THs eyomevns peTewporoyias Kai
/
peTapoloNeaxXias UToTuTAGMEVOS, OV MOVOY, WS
,
Eouxe, TO Ppovnua coBapov Kat Tov Aoyor bynrov
9 ‘ 3 a
elye Kal xalapov oyAtKhs Kal tavovpyouv Bwo-Aoxias, GANA Kal Tpodwmov avaTacts AOpuTToOS
,
eis yeAwTa Kal mpaoTns Topeias Kal KaTaoToA
a ‘ ION b 4 a b a meptBorns pos ovdev ExtapaTtTomevn TaOos ev TE Neyety Kal TAdcpa dwvis aOopvBov, cai boa wn 4 na 9 4
Totavta wavtas Oavpaotas éEerAyTTe. Rotdopovpevos Yoo TOTE Kal KAKWS aKOVWY UTE TLVOS = wn \ > f lad ¢ , ¢e , tav Bdedupov cal axo\daoTwv drAnV HnuEepav UTE-HELE TLWITH KAT Gyopay, apa Te TOV erreryovTwy KaTampaTtTopevos’ éotrépas & amnes Koopiws
olxabde Tapaxorovbodrvtos Tov avOpwrou Kai Tdon Ld / N ted e > Mw

xpwpevou BrAachynpia mpos avtov. ws 8 euedrev
elaltevat aKOTOUS OYTOS Sn, TpocéTAaké TL TAV oixeTav d@s NaBovTt TapaTémat Kal KatacTH-gat Tpos THY oixiay Tov avOpwrov.
‘O 8€ rrownThns “Iwy poOwvixyy dnote Thy optrdtav Kal vrotupov eivat tod IeptxXéous, Kat tais
I2

“Nous,” either because they admired that comprehension of his, which proved of such surpassing _ greatness in the investigation of nature ; or because he was the first to enthrone in the universe, not Chance, nor yet Necessity, as the source of its orderly arrangement;~but Mind (Nous) pure and simple, which csinushes and sets apart, in the midst of an otherwise-chaotic mass, the substances which have like elements.

V. This man Pericles extravagantly admired, and being gradually filled full of the so-called higher philosophy and elevated speculation, he not only had, as it seems, a spirit that was solemn and a discourse that was lofty and free from plebeian and reckless effrontery, but also a composure of countenance that never relaxed into laughter, a gentleness of carriage and cast of attire that suffered no emotion to disturb it while he was speaking, a modulation of voice that was far from boisterous, and many similar characteristics which struck all his hearers with wondering amazcment. It is, at any rate, a fact that, once on a time when he had been abused and insulted all day long by a certain lewd fellow of the baser sort, he endured it all quietly, though it was in the market-place, where he kad urgent business to transact, and towards evening went away homewards unruffled, the fellow following along and heaping all manner of contumely upon him. When he was about to go in doors, it being now dark, he ordered a servant to take a torch and escort the fellow in safety back to his own home.

The poet Ion, however, says that Pericles had a presumptuous and somewhat arrogant manner of 13

—

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

peyaravylas avtu’ TOA UTEpoiay dvape-pixyOae cai wepippovnolv TOV drAdwv> éErratvel bé
. / b \ \ ¢ \ ‘ 4
To Kipwvos €uperes Kat Uypov Kal pe“ovowpevon -
> A “ 9 +” 4 ef
ev Tais jepipopais. adr Iwva pév, WoTTEp Tpayt-\ 4 oJ nw N +] XN #
yy didacKariay, akiodvta tiv apeTny exew Te
4 a“ a
TWdVvTwWS Kal GATUPLKOY pépos E@pEev' TOUS b€ TOD
II , N s 5 , \
epixdéous THY ceuvoTnta Sokoxoriav te Kal

fa] n e 4 /
TOpov atoxaXovrtas 0 ZAnvwv tapexade kal
avtous Te ToLodTO CokoKoTEly, WS THS TpogTroLn-GEews AUTHS TOV KaXwV UVToTOLOvaNns Twa AEAN-Jotws CfhrXov cat auvnGerav.
f a a 9 ,
VI. Od povov b€ taita THs “AvaEayopou auvovatas amédavae Ilepixdrjs, dAAa Kal Eeot-Catpovias doxet yevéoOar xabumeéptepos, banv To} mpos Ta peTewpa OapBos evepyaleTat Tois avTav
'T€ TOUTWY TAS alTias ayvoodar Kal Tepi Ta Oeia Saimovadt Kat TapaTTopevols du aTretpiav avTav, iv 0 huatKkos NoOyos aTaAXaTTwWY avTl THS PhoBe-wn N 4 O 5 4 \ 3
pas Kal hPreypaivovons deadatpovias THv adoga-
nw ’ , > wn +] , > ,
AH pet €rAmidwy ayabav evaéBerav epyaletat.
nw /
Aéyetat 5€ Tote Kplov povoxepw Keharry éF
aypov TO Iepixret xopto@ vat, cat Adurwva pev ‘ 4
TOV pavTLV, ws ELOE TO KEpas LaXUpOY Kal oTEpEoY
~ f , wn w~
€x pégou TOU pEeTwTOV TEhuKOS, Elmreiv Ott SveEtv fa) “ t a A
ova@y ev TH TrodEL SuVacTE@V, THS CouKvdidou Kat Lepixréous, ets Eva Teptatnoetat TO KpaToS
l Sonv 7d older edd., Coraés, Fuhr and Blass; Bekker 8en with the MSS.: don».
14
ct

address, and that into his haughtiness there entered a good deal of disdain and contempt for others; he praises, on the other hand, the tact, complaisance, and elegant address which Cimon showed in his social intercourse.! But we must ignore Ion, with his demand that virtue, like a dramatic tetralogy, have some sort of a farcical appendage. Zeno, when men called the austerity of Pericles a mere thirst for reputation, and swollen conceit, urged them to have some such thirst for reputation themselves, with the idea that the very assumption of nobility might in time produce, all unconsciously, something like an eager and habitual practice of it.

VI. These were not the only advantages Pericles had of his association with Anaxagoras. It appears that he was also lifted by him. above superstition, that feeling which is produced by amazement at what happens in regions above us. It affects those who are ignorant of the causes of such things, and are crazed about divine intervention, and confounded through their inexperience in this domain; whereas the doctrines of natural philosophy remove such ignorance and inexperience, and substitute for ti- morous and inflamed superstition that unshaken reverence which is attended by a good hope.

A story is told that once on a time the head of a one-horned ram was brought to Pericles from his country-place, and that Lampon the seer, when he saw how the horn grew strong and solid from the middle of the forehead, declared that, whereas there were two powerful parties in the city, that of Thucydides and that of Pericles, the mastery would finally devolve upon one man,—the man to 1 Cf. Comon, ix.

Is

-

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

> © , \ a \ :9 '
Tap ® yévorto TO onpelov: tov & 'Avakayopar
nw 4 ~
Tuv xpaviou Staxorévtos 'aidetEat tov éyxépadov
3 f N 4 bf > 3 \ @ ov meTANPwWKOTA THY Baow, adr ofvy wWaTEP
\ ~
@ov €k TOU TaVTOS ayyelou cuvwrALGONnKOTA KATA
Tov Tomov éxelvoy dOev 4 pita Tod Képatos etxeE
/ fo
THY apxnv. Kal tote pev OavpacOfvar Tov
'Avakayopay Ud TOV TapovTaV, OrALyo 8 DaTeEpor 0p PovT@V, OALYG po \ / nm . LAN th
tov Adptwva, tov péev Qovxvdidou xcatadvGertos, Tav S€ TOU Syov TpayudTwY OMarAwS aTravT@V
uTO TO Llepixre' yevopévwv.
' N N
"Exwrve 8 ovdév, olpat, cai tov puatxov
nn /
émeTuyxXavery Kal TOY wavTLY, TOU pev THY atTiay,
" ' , n~ b] , e ,
tov b€ TO TEAOS KAAMS ExAapBadvorTOS: UTTEKELTO
yap TO pév, ex Tivwy yéyove Kal Tas mépuKe, aA A s f /,

Gewphoat, TO S€é, Tpos TL yeyove Kat Ti Onpaivel,
“a “ ~ / mMpoeurreiy. ot S€ TIS atlas TV EUpEeotY avaipeoty elvat AeyovTes TOU onpEiov OUK ETTLVOOVOLY apa n s \ N \ “ /
trois Geiois Kal Ta TexvnTa TOV oupBorwy
n f n nw
abetodrzes, ropous te Sickwv Kal POTa Tupray
> /
Kab YVWOLovwy aTrogKiacpoUs: @Y ExagTOV alTia
ral ~ /
Tivl Kal KATAG KEV) ONpMELOV Elvai TLVOS TETOLNTAL.
nw e ,
TabvTa pev ov laws ETépas €oTi TpayuaTEias.
aA ,
VII. ‘O && Tlepexrijs véos pév adv oodpa tov Sipov evaafeiro. nal yap édoxe Iletor-
, a , \ ? b ‘ >
oTpdt@ Te Tupdvywm To Eidos euhepys etvat, thy Te dwviy ndetay ovcay avTod Kal Tip yAaTttTav eUTpoxor ev TH SiareyerGar Kai Taxetav
e \ \ oi ahodpa yépovtes eferAnTTovTo mpos THY 16
PERICLES

whom this sign had been given. Anaxagoras, however, had the skull cut in two, and showed that the brain had not filled out its position, but had drawn together to a point, like an egg, at that particular spot in the entire cavity where the root of the horn began. At that time, the story says, it was Anaxagoras who won the plaudits of the bystanders; but a little while after it was Lampon, for Thucydides was overthrown, and Pericles was entrusted with the entire control of all the interests of the people.

Now there was nothing, in my opinion, to prevent both of them, the naturalist and the seer, from being in the right of the matter; the one correctly divined the cause, the other the object or purpose. It was the proper province of the one to observe why anything happens, and how it comes to be what it is; of the other to declare for what purpose anything happens, and what it means. And _ those who declare that the discovery of the cause, in any phenomenon, does away with the meaning, do not perceive that they are doing away not only with divine portents, but also with artificial tokens, such as the ringing of gongs, the language of fire- signals, and the shadows of the pointers on sun- dials. Each of these has been made, through some causal adaptation, to have some meaning. However, perhaps this is matter for a different treatise.

VII. As a young man, Pericles was exceedingly reluctant to face the people, since it was thought that in feature he was like the tyrant Peisistratus ; and when men well on in years remarked also that his voice was sweet, and his tongue glib and speedy in discourse, they were struck with amazement at

17
VOL. III. Cc
PLUTARCH''S LIVES

e , 7 \ \ f y
OmoloTnTa. mAovTov bé€ Kal yévous TpocoVTOS
avT® Aaptrpod Kai Pirwy of TrEioTOV HdvVaYTO, foBovpevos eEootpaxicOivat, TOV mev TOAMTIKOY ovdey émpartey, ev b€ Tails oTpatetats avnp ayalos Hv Kal diroxivdvvos. émet & 'Apirteidys
\ 3 , \ A > ,
pev amroteOyijxee Kat OepiotokrAns éEerenmtTwxel, Kipuwva §' ai orpatetat Ta Toda Tis 'EAAdSbos é&w xateixyov, odtw 87 hépwr o IlepexrHs To
, "~ , *
Snuw mpocéverpev EavTOV, avTL TOY TROUCiwY Kai
"a a" ,
OMywv Ta TOY TOAA@Y Kal TeVnTwWY EOpMEVOS
\ \ ¢€ ~ td ccd \ 2
Tapa THhv avtou dvatv ijxiata Snuotixny ovcav.
arr', ws Eotxe, Sediws pev UTrowia TEpuTrecetv
, eon bd ? ' A id
Tupavvidos, opav & apiotoxpatixoy tov Kipwva cal diahepovTws vTo TOY KaX@V Kayabav avdpav ayaTrwpevov, UTHAVE TOUS TOANOUS, doddrelav pev
nw > | f ,
éauT@, dvvapwy O€ KaT éxetvov TapacKevalopevos.
EvOds b€ cal tots wept thy Siartay étépav tTaEw
? , ener \ ? 4 Zz e A"

éréOnxev. odvv Te yap €v aoTet play éwpaTo Thy én ayopav Kal To BovNevTnpLov Topevopevos, KAnoes te Seitvwy Kal TY ToLavTNnY aTacav diroppoavvny kat cuvnerav éféderrev, ws év ols €TOALTEVTATO Ypovorts pakpols yEvopevots ITpos pndéva tav dirtwv emt Setrvov €dOeiv, mr Evpurtonéuov Tod aveyiod yapobytos axpt TOV

18

the resemblance. Besides, since he was rich, of brilliant lineage, and had friends of the greatest influence, he feared that he might be ostracized, and so at first had naught to do with politics, but devoted himself rather to a military career, where he was brave and enterprising. However, when Aristides was dead,! and Themistocles in banishment,2 and Cimon was kept by his campaigns for the most part abroad, then at last Pericles decided to devote himself to the people, espousing the cause of the poor and the many instead cf the tew and the rich, contrary to his own nature, which was anything but popular. But he feared, as it would seem, to encounter a suspicion of aiming at tyranny, and when he saw that Cimon was very aristocratic in his sympathies, and was held in extraordinary affection by the party of the "Good and Truc,' he began to court the favour of the multitude, thereby securing safety for himself, and power to wield against his rival.

Straightway, too, he made a different ordering in his way of life. On one street only in the city was he to be seen walking,—the one which took him to the market-place and the _ council-chamber. Invitations to dinner, and all such friendly and familiar intercourse, he declined, so that during the long period that elapsed while he was at the head of the state, there was not a single friend to whose house he went to dine, exeept that when his kinsman Euryptolemus gave a wedding feast, he attended until the libations were made,? and then

? Soon after 468 B.c. 2 After 472) Bc:
3 That is, until the wine for the symposium was krought in, and drinking began.

"~ / ' 4 > U

aTroveay tmapuyevouevos evOds eEavéotn. Serval

BS e ? N v U
yap al diroppoctvat wavtos Gyxou TepuyevecOat, cat Svopvraxtov év auvyOeia to mpos dogav
, > a b) “~ eee fel 4

ceuvov éote: THS GAnOvIAs 8 apeTtis KaAMOTA
paivetat Ta pdrttoTa patvopeva, xai Tov ayabavr
b “A XSAN e , “~ b] N ° e ’ avdpav obdév oTw Oavpdotov Tois ExTOS ws 0 KAO npépav Bios Tois cuvovoy.
‘O 8€ nai 76 Sipw! rd avvexés hevywv Kat \ / > , DJ 4 >
Tov Kopov olov éx dradeupatwy émrAnoialer, OvK
> ae,’ % ? , >QOds + A ‘ > N éml wavtl mpdypc.tt N€ywv, ov adel TAPLWY ELS TO mrHO0S, GAN éauTov woTEep THY Ladapiviav
f , ‘ \ Ud

tpinpn, pnot Kpitodraos, mpos tas peyadas ypetas éemdidovs, Tadra 6é didrous Kal pHyTopas
e ¢ \ ” ? ef \ U
étépous xabiels Erpattev. av &va haci yeverGar \ 3 ? “a f \ , A b] tov “E@iddtnv, os KaTéAvoe TO Kpatos THs €&
’"Apelov mayou BovAjs, woAAv, kata tov IIda-

4 wv a a ‘4
Twva, Kal dakpatov Tois moXiTais édevOepiav
>] “ e >] ee es] , Ms
oivoxoar, Up’ Is, @aTep immov, eEvRpicavta Tov Siuov of Kwpwdorotol eéyouos ‘ Teapyeiv ovKEeTL TOAMAaY, ad\rAa daxvery THY EVBo.ay Kai Tais vnools enimnoav.
VIII. TH pévroe wept tov Biov cxtaoKevy Kal
T@ peyeOer ToD Ppovijpatos appolovta Royor, eomep opyavov, éEaptudpevos Tapevetetve TOd-
“a ‘ a / ‘\ ~ @ “~ Aayod tov 'Avakayopar, olov Badyny TH pytoptkh
e \ e
Thy puatoroytay viroxYeopevos. TO yap “uYn-
1 og S4uy Fubr and Blass, atter Sauppe : 100 dhpov.
20
PERICLES

straightway rose up and departed. Conviviality is prone to break down and overpower the haughtiest reserve, and in familiar intercourse the dignity which is assumed for appearance's sake is very hard to maintain. Whereas, in the case of true and genuine virtue, "fairest appears what most appears," and nothing in the conduct of good men is so admirable in the eyes of strangers, as their daily walk and conversation is in the eyes of those who share it.

And so it was that Pericles, seeking to avoid the satiety which springs from continual intercourse, made his approaches to the people by intervals, as it were, not speaking on every question, nor addressing the people on every occasion, but offering himself like the Salaminian trireme, as Critolaiis says, for great emergencies. The rest of his policy he carried out by commissioning his friends and other public speakers. One of these, as they say, was Ephialtes, who broke down the power of the Council of the Areiopagus, and so poured out for the citizens, to use the words of Plato,! too much "undiluted freedom," by which the people was rendered unruly, just like a horse, and, as_ the comic poets say, "no longer had the patience to obey the rein, but nabbed Fuboea and trampled on the islands."'

VIII. Moreover, by way of providing himself with a style of discourse which was adapted, like a musical instrument, to his mode of life and the grandeur of his sentiments, he often made an auxiliary string of Anaxagoras, subtly mingling, as it were, with his rhetoric the dye of natural science.

1 Republic, viii. p. 562 c.

y

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

AOvouy TOVTO Kal TUVYTN TEAETLOUPYOV, WS 0 DeEtos
, \ a WAdrov gdnot, "mpos 7H evhuns elvac xrynoa-93 5 '4 \ \ , ¢
peevos =€K valoAoyias, Kal TO TMpoodopov éd-KUGasS ETL THY TOV OY TEXVYNY, TOAY TaVvTwY
Sunveyxe. S10 Kab tTHv EemixrAna avT@ yevecOar NEyoucL KAaiTOL TLves ATO TOV ols exoouNoE THY TOAW, ot & amo THS év TH Tortela Kal tats

b oTpatnylats duvapews ‘OdvpTiov avdtov olovTat mpocayopevOnvar' Kat cvvdpapeiy ovdév amréotxev > + “a / cal ’ \ N f a7T0 TO\A@Y TpocOVTwY Tw avdpi THY Sokav. wn s v. a“
ai pevtor Kwopodiae TOY TOTE bibagKdAwY aTrOVOT
\ \ \ , ’ / \
Te WOAAaS Kal peTa yeXwTOS adeixoTwY hwvas els avTov, emt TO NOYH waAIOTA THY TpoTwVLpiaV
, ra “cc al > A > \ \ yeverOat dSnrodo., ‘Bpovtav” pev avtov Kat ‘“dotpamTew, ote Onunyopoin, “ Servov b€ KEpav-\ 9 , f + bl) ,
vov €v yAwoon pepelvy REyovTw?.
Atapynpovevetar 6€ Tes Kai Oovxvdidsv Tod
\ fa)
MeAnciov Avyos ets thy Sevornta tov Tlepr-
\ ~ /
KNEOUS peTa Taldias Eipruévos. Rv pev yap o
Qovevdidns TaV Kadov Kal ayabdv dvdpav, Kai
~ 3 ? “~ ~ e
Tr€ioTOV avteToALTevoato T@ Ilepixret ypovor:
"Apxi6apov b€ tod Aaxedaipoviwy Baciréws auvOavopévou Totepov avros 1) TlepixdAHs manatet Bérxriov, “Otay,” eimev, “éyw xataBadrw ma-Aalwy, éxeivos avTihéywv ws ov TéTTwOKE, IKE ¢ ~~ 93
Ka petaretOer ToUs opavTas.
¢ nw
Ov piv adda Kai adtos o Wepixrns trepi tov
Adyov evdafys Hv, Wor ael mpos to Brpa 22

PERICLES

It was from natural science, as the divine Plato says,! that he “ acquired his loftiness of thought and perfectness of execution, in addition to his natural gifts,’ and by applying what he learned to the art of speaking, he far excelled all other speakers. It was thus, they say, that he got his surname ; though some suppose it was from the structures with which he adorned the city, and others from his ability asy a statesman and a general, that he was called Olympian. It is not at all unlikely that his re- putation was the result of the blending in him of | many high qualities. But the comic poets of that ~— day, who let fly, both in earnest and in jest, many shafts of speech against him, make it plain that he got this surname chiefly because of his diction ; they spoke of him as “thundering” and “lightening ’’ when he harangued his audience,? and as “wielding a dread thunderbolt in his tongue.”

There is on record also a certain saying of Thucydides, the son of Melesias, touching the clever persuasiveness of Pericles, a saying uttered in jest. Thucydides belonged to the party of the “ Good and / True,’ and was for a very long time a political antagonist of Pericles. When Archidamus, the king of the Lacedaemonians, asked him whether he or Pericles was the better wrestler, he replied : “‘ Whenever I throw him in wrestling, he disputes the fall, and carries his point, and persuades the very men who saw him fall.”

The truth is, however, that even Pericles, with all his gifts, was cautious in his discourse, so that when-

1 Phaedrus, p. 270 a.

* Cf. Aristophanes, Acharnians, 528-531,

zy

ba |

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Badifwy evyeto Tois Oeois pyndé phua pndev
EKTETELY AKOVTOS AUTOU TpOs THY TpoKEtpevny
Xpetay avdppooTov. éyypadov pev ovv ovdev
, f \ “ , 3
atroXeXorTe TANV TwVv wWhdicpaTwY arTo-pvnpovevetar © Odtya Tavtadracw* oloy To THY Alyiwav @> Anpnv tod Llepaids adereiv Ke“a ‘ N ‘ , wv ¢ “a Nedoal, Kal TO TOV TOrAELOV 7dn Pavar Kabopav amo Uerorovyvycov mpoogepopevov. Kai tote a“ yy 4 of a be A ToD LodoxAéous, OTE TvaTpatnyav Ek&erdevce
pet avtov, taiéa Kadrov ératvécavtos, “Ov povoy,” edn, “tas Yelpas, @ Lopoxres, Sei v \ is / ’ \ \ ‘ caBapas Exetvy Tov otpatnyov, aAdka Kal Tas
v > e be y Ld , lad A > owes. o d€ XrnotuBporos dyno OTL Touvs év

v f ig > 4 > A 4, Lauo TeOvynxotas éeyxomalwy er tod Brnyatos aBavatous Ereye yeyovévat xabatTep tovs Oeous:
ov yap éxeivous avTOUS Opa@pev, GAAG Tais Tipais
as €xovot, Kai tois ayabois & mapéyovouw,
a > aBavatous elvar texpatpoueba: TadT ovv UTapyeww
Kal Tois UmTép THS TaTpioos aTroPavovaty.
IX. ’Ezel 5€ Qouxudidns peéev apiotoxpatenny
\ a , e / ,
tiva THY ToD Ilepixréous Uroypader trodtTELay, ‘“Xoywo pev ovaav Snuoxpatiav, Epyw 8 vro tov
, > \ ’ , ” ” be ”~
TpwTov avdpos apynv, GAXot dé ToNAOL TPwTOV
vm éxeivov hact tiv Siov él KAnpovytas cal Oewpixa kal ptcOav Siavoyas mrpoayxPivar, KaK@s
b /, , a > 4
eGusGévta Kal yevopevoy todvTEAn Kal axo-NaCTOVY UTO THY TOTE TOALTEVLUTWY AVTL Tw-24

PERICLES

ever he came forward to speak he prayed the gods that there might not escape him unawares a single word which was unsuited to the matter under discussion. In writing he left nothing behind him except the decrees which he proposed, and only a few in all of his memorable sayings are preserved, as, for instance, his urging the removal of gina as the “ eye-sore of the Pirewus,” and his declaring that he “already beheld war swooping down upon them from Peloponnesus.” Once also when Sophocles, who was general with him on a ccrtain naval expedition,! praised a lovely boy, he said: “It is not his hands only, Sophocles, that a general must keep clean, but his eyes as well.” Again, Stesimbrotus says that, in his funeral oration over those who had fallen in the Samian War, he declared that they had become immortal, like the gods; “the gods themselves,” he said, “we cannot see, but from the honours which they receive, and the blessings which they bestow, we conclude that they are immortal.” So it was, he said, with those who had given their lives for their country.

IX. Thucydides describes? the administration of Pericles as rather aristocratic,—“in name a democ- racy, but in fact a government by the greatest citizen.” But many others say that the people was first led on by him into allotments of public lands, festival-grants, and distributions of fees for public services, thereby falling into bad habits, and becom- ing luxurious and wanton under the influence of his public measures, instead of frugal and self-sufficing.

1 Against Samos, 440-439 B.c.
2 In the encomium on Pericles, ii. 65, 9.
25

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

ppovos nai av’toupyod, OewpetcOw dia ToV Tpay-HaTw@V avTe@Y % aitia Tis weTaBoATs. - -— "Ey adpxn pev yap, @oTep elpntat, mpos THY Kiuwvos dofav avretattopevos tremoeito Tov Sipov: éXattovpevos b€ TAOVTM Kal ypiHpacty, J > b] a 3 f \ 4 “ f
agp av éxetvos dvenduBave tovs tévyntas, deimvov
te Kal’ nue D O€OMEVW TAPE "AOnvat nuepav To Seopev@ Tapéxwv 'AOnvaiwr, Kal tous mpecBvtépous apdievyvwy, Tov TE Yo-piwy tovs Ppaypnovs adatpav 6rws oTwpifwaty ot Bovaropevar, TovTots Oo TepixrAns catadnpaywyov-HEVOS TPETTETAL TPOS THY THY OSnpociwy Savouny, auuBovrevtcavtos avt@ Aapwvidouv tov “Oabev, ws “AptototéAns totopnKe. Kal tayv Oewptxois ‘ Cal i w ww
Kat Sexactixots Ajppaciv adrAas Te picbodpopais
Kat xYopnyiats auvdexdcas to TAHOos, expiro
A fel 3 > , 4 “ La 3 \ ?
kata Ths é€£ Apelou mayou BovArns, is avtos ov petetxe Sia TO pert adpxwv prjte Oecpobérns pyre Bacireds pte Trodguapyos Aayeiy. avtar yap ai apxal KAnpwtai te thoay éx mwadatod, cat bi ) A id f 3 , > ”
avt@v of Soxtpacbevtes avéBavov eis “Apecor
mayov. 610 Kal pardroyv icyvoas o TlepexrArs ev TO Spm Katectaciace tiv Bovdgrjv, @oTE THY pev adaipebfvar tas mAciotas Kpices Ov “Edidrtov, Kipwva 0 ws diroAdKwva Kal uioodnpov éFoatpaxiaOivat, wAOUTM pev Kal yéves pndevos aToNELTrOmEevov, vikxas b€ KaANoTAaS vEertKnKOTA 26

Let us therefore examine in detail the reason for this change in him.
In the beginning, as has been said, pitted as he was against the reputation of Cimon, he tried to ingratiate himself with the people. And since he was the inferior in wealth and property, by means of which Cimon would win over the poor,—furnish- ing a dinner every day to any Athenian who wanted . it, bestowing raiment on the elderly men, and remov- ing the fences from his estates that whosoever wished ‘might pluck the fruit—Pericles, outdone in popular arts of this sort, had recourse to the distribution of the people’ s own wealth. This was on the advice of Damonides, of the deme Oa, as Aristotle has stated. And soon, what with festival-grants and jurors’ wages and other fees and largesses, he bribed the multi- tude by the wholesale, and used them in opposition to_the Council of the Areiopagus. Of this body he himself was not a member, since the lot had not made him either First Archon, or Archon Thes- mothete, or King Archon, or Archon Polemarch. These offices were in ancient times filled by lot, and through them those who properly acquitted themselves were promoted into the Areiopagus. For this reason all the more did Pericles, strong in the affections of the people, lead a successful party against the Council of the Areiopagus. Not only was the Council robbed of most of its jurisdic- tion by Ephialtes, but Cimon also, on the charge of being a lover of Sparta and a hater of the people, was ostracized,3—a man who yielded to none in wealth

1 The discussion of this change in Pericles from the methods of a demagogue to the leadership described by Thucydides, continues through chapter xv. ? Const. of Athens, xxvii. 4.

* 461 Bo. Cf. Cimon, xvii. 2.
27s

tous PBapBSdpovs Kat xpnuatwv ToAdk@V Kal
Aadipwv euTeTANKOTA THY TOALY, WS eV TOFS Tepl éxeivou yéypartat. Tooottoyv jv To Kpatos év T@ num tov Tlepixr€ovs.
X. ‘O pév otv é£ootpaxiapos wpiopévny eixe vopw Sexaetiav Tois pevyouvow: ev d€ TO ta pecov Aaxedaipoviwy otpaT@ peydr@ éuBanrov-TOV ets THY Tavarypueny Kal TOV "AOnvaiwv evdus
OpynoavTay em’ aUvTOUs, oO pev Kipov éXNawv ex
THs puyijs éJeTo PETA TOV pureTar eis AOYov Ta oma Kal & Epywv atoAverOat Tov Aaxwvic pov éBownero, ouyKivouvevaas Tois TONLTALS, ot b€ piror TOU Tlepexdeous TUCTAYTES UT AATAV AUTOV

ws puydéa. 510 Kal Soxet Tlepixrajs éppwpevéotata } THY paxny éxelyyy aywvicacGa Kai yevéo Bar mavTov emipaverTatos apedijoas TOU TWUATOS. ET ETOV 6e Kat tov Kipwvos of piror waves oparas, ods epixrAns cuverrntiato Tov ANaxavic pov: Kat peTavota Sewn TOUS A Onvatous
Kal moos € axe TOU Kipewvos, yrtnpévous ev érri TOV (Spey THS ATTUKIS, Tpoo Soxavras de Bapuv
els éTous apav TOAE MOV. aia Bopevos ouv Oo Ilepe-Kris OUK WKUNTE xapicacbat TOUS TodAols, anra
70 ideo pa yparras QUT OS exdnet TOV av6pa, KAKELVOS Katenarv® elpyyny eTOLNTE TALS TONEY.
oiKetos yap €bxoV ot Aaxedaipovioe ™ pos auto aotep amnyGovTo 7@ Ilepixret Kal tois adrots énpaywryots.
1 dopwpeveorara Cobet, Sintenis®, Fuhr, Blass; éppwpere-ordrnv Bekker, with the MSS.
2 xareAOayv Sintenis', Fuhr, Blass; aweA@av Bekker, with the MSS.
3&8

PERICLES

and lineage, who had won most glorious victories over the Barbarians, and had filled the city full of money and spoils, as is written in his Life. Such was the power of Pericles among the people.

X. Now ostracism involved legally a period of ten years' banishment. But in the meanwhile? the Lacedzmonians invaded the district of Tanagra with a great army, and the Athenians straightway sallied out against them. So Cimon came back from his banishment and stationed himself with his tribesmen in line of battle, and determined by his deeds to rid himself of the charge of too great love for Sparta, in that he shared the perils of his fellow-citizens. But the friends of Pericles banded together and drove him from the ranks, on the ground that he was under sen- tence of banishment. For which reason, it is thought, Pericles fought most sturdily in that battle, and was the most conspicuous of all in exposing himself to danger. And there fell in this battle all the friends of Cimon to a man, whom Pericles had accused with him of too great love for Sparta. Wherefore sore repentance fell upon the Athenians, and a longing desire for Cimon, defeated as they were on the confines of Attica, and expecting as they did a grievous war with the coming of spring. So then Pericles, perceiving this, hesitated not to gratify the désires of the multitude, but wrote with his own hand the decree which recalled the man. Whereupon Cimon came back from banishment and made peace * between the cities. For the Lacedw#monians were as kindly disposed towards him as they were full of hatred towards Pericles and the other popular leaders.

1 457 B.c. 2 450 B.c.
29 ¢
4

~]

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

"Evioe 5€ dhaciv ov mpoTepoy ypadnvar Te Kivou tiv xa0odov Ure tod TleatxrX€ous 9 ouv-Onxas avtots amoppntous yeréoOar Ov EXrivixns, THs Kipwvos aberdis, @ate Kiwwva pév éxrredcat AaPovta vads dtaxocias Kai tav éEw otpa-THYyEV, KaTactpepouevoy THY Bacthéws yopay, Ilepexret Sé tHv ev aoter Svvamw imdpyev.
eédoxer 5€ Kai mpoTepov 7» EXdmivicn to Kip tov Ilepexréa mpadtepov tapacyeiv, OTe THY Pavarixiy Sixny epevryer. my pev yap els tev KATH YyOpOV 0 Tlepuxris v Um0 TOD On fou mpoBeBrnpévos, €AXOovans Sé 7 pos autor Tis ‘Edmevixns Kal Seonévys pecdtacas eivev? “QO. EXreivixn, ypais el, ypaus el, ws TWpayp“aTa THALKAUTA Wpdocey.”
ov pny adrAa Kal 7 pos TOV Aoryov mag avégTn, THY mpoBorny aoatouperos, Kat TOV kaTnyopov eddxiata TOV Kipaova AuTyTas aTEXwpNcE.
Ilas dv ovv tis ‘Téopevel TLaTEVT ELE KaTIYyOpodvre tod Ilepexr€ous « os TOV Onparywryov ‘Eguda-THY pirov yevouevov Kal KOtvwvoy bvTAa THS ev TH
moduTeia T poatper ews Sorodpovycavtos bia ondotuTriav Kal Favor THS SoEns; Tatra yap ovx 01d ober cuvayaryov @OTEP XoANY Tavept ™ poa-BéBr Ke, TavTn pev LtWS OUK AVET AIT TD, ppovnpa & evryeves EvovTe Kal yoy gr (AOTL OV, ols ovdev eupuerat Tdbos @pOv ovUTw Kal Onpuddes.
‘Ediadryy pev ovy poBepor 6 ovrTa Tots oduyap tKots Kal Tept TAs ev0 uvas Kat dtwers TeV TOV $5 nov aStKOUVTWY aTrapaitntoy eémiBovAEevcavTes at
? ‘ 73 , arn a ,
éyOpot bi’ "Apiotodixou rod Tavaypixou xpugaiws 39

PERICLES

Some, however, say that the decree for the restora- tion of Cimon was not drafted by Pericles until a secret compact had been made between them, through the agency of Elpinicé, Cimon’s sister, to the effect that Cimon should sail out with a fleet of two hundred ships and have command in foreign parts, attempting to subdue the territory of the King, while Pericles should have supreme power in the city. And it was thought that before this, too, Elpinice had rendered Pericles more lenient towards Cimon, when he stood his trial on the capital charge of treason.! Pericles was at that time one of the committee of prosecution appointed by the people, and on Elpinice's coming to him and supplicating him, said to her with a smile: " Elpinice, thou art an old woman, thou art an old woman, to attempt such tasks." However, he made only one speech, by way of formally executing his commission, and in the end did the least harm to Cimon of all his accusers.

How, then, can one put trust in Idomeneus, who accuses Pericles of assassinating the popular leader Ephialtes, though he was his friend and a partner in his political program, out of mere jealousy and envy of his reputation? These charges he has raked up from some source or other and hurled them, as if so much venom, against one who was perhaps not in all points irreproachable, but who had a noble disposition and an ambitious spirit, wherein no such sav- age and bestial feelings can have their abode. As for Ephialtes, who was a terror to the oligarchs and inexorable in exacting accounts from those who wronged the people, and in prosecuting them, his enemies laid plots against him, and had him slain 1463 B.c. Cf. Cimon, xiv. 2-4.

avetdov, ws Aptototérns elpnxev. érerevtnoe Sé Kipwv ev Kup otpatnyov.
XI. Ot & apioroxpatixol péyiotov pev dn tov Ilepixréa xal mpocGev opavtes yeyovoTa TaV

fal " > #7 ? 4 N Q
ToAtt@v, BovrAopevot 6 Suws Elvai TLvVa TOV TpOS avTov avTiTacaopevoy ev TH ToAEL Kal THY duvapiv auPdovorta, woTe wy Kod povapyiay eivat, Oouxvéidny tov "Adwrexjdev, avdpa cwdpova kai
Kndeatnv Kipwvos, avréotycay évavTiwodpevor, Os WTTOV ev Ov TrorAEuLKOS TOV Kipwvos, ayopaios dé Kal qoXLTLKOS paAXOD, Olxovpav év acTE Kal wept To Biya TO Ilepexrel ouprrexopevos, TAX THY TOALTELAD Els aYTiTaXoY KAaTETTNGEV.
Ov yap elace tovs Kadovs Kayabovs Kadov-pévous avdpas évodtecrrapOar nal cuppeptyGar mpos Tov Sihpov, ws TpoTEpov, UTO WANGovS jyav-pwpévous TO aEiwua, xwpis b€ Swaxpivas Kat cuvayayov eis TaVTO THY TWavTwY Svvaptv EuBpLOn yevopevny @aTrep emt Cvyod pony emoinoev. av \ X 3 ' al } , of v 3 pev yap €& apyns otTAON TLS UTovAOS, WaTrEp EV
cidnpw, Siapopay vrocnpaivovaa Snpotixhs Kal apiaToKpaTtxijs mpoatperews, 1) & €xelvwy apidra \ , nw 3 5 wn @ , \
kal dirotiysia TeV avdpav Babvtatny Topnv

“a nA nA 4
TEpovaa THS TOAEWS TO ev SHuov, TOO OdLYOUS
; , a f) § 4 \ , , A § ’
eTroinge KarElalat. O10 Kat TOTE PANTTA TH ONPO \ e , >] ‘ e fol 9 , ‘ ,
Tas nvias avels o [leptxdijs €vroALTEvETO TpOs Xapty, > 4
del pev twa Oday Tavnyupixny 7} EaTiacwW 1 Trop-32

secretly by Aristodicus of Tanagra, as Aristotle says.1 As for Cimon, he died on his campaign in Cyprus.?

-XI. Then-the aristocrats, aware even some tiie before this that Pericles was already become the greatest citizen, but wishing nevertheless to have some oné in the city who should stand up against him and blunt the edge of his power, that it might not be an out and out monarchy, put forward Thucydides of Alopecé, a discreet man and a relative of Cimon, to oppose him. He, being less of a war- rior than Cimon, and more of a forensic speaker aud statesman, by keeping watch and ward in the city, and by wrestling bouts with Pericles on the bema, soon bought the administration into even poise.

He would not suffer the party of the “Good and True,” as they called themselves, to be scattered up and down and blended with the populace, as heretofore, the weight of their character being thus obscured by numbers, but by culling them out and assembling them into one body, he made their collective influence, thus become weighty, as it were a counterpoise in the balance. Now there had been from the beginning a sort of seam hidden beneath the surface of affairs, as in a piece of iron, which faintly indicated a divergence between the popular and the aristocratic progranumme; but the emulous ambition of these two men cut a deep gash in the state, and caused one section of it to be called the ‘¢ Demos,” or the People, and the other the “ Oligoi,”’ or the Few. At this time, therefore, particularly, Pericles gave the reins to the people, and made his policy one of pleasing them, ever devising some

1 Const. of Athens, xxv. 4.
3449 p.c. Cf. Cimon, xviii., xix.

Ti evar pynyavwopevos ev acte. Kat ‘ draTratéa-YWYOU OUK Apovaots HOovais” THY Tod, EEnKovTA Sé tpinpets xa” Exactov éviautov exTépTov, ev als TOAKOL TOV TOALT@V ETAEOY OKTM pnvas EuptaOot, pereravtes Gua xal pavOdvovtes THY vauTLKHD éumetpiav. mpos d€ TovToIs yiAtous pev EoTether eis Neppovncov KrAnpovyxous, eis 6€ Nakov szevraxoatous, eis 5€ “Avdpov tous npioes! TovTwY, Ets

5é Opaxcnv yxirAtovs Bioddrrats ovvotxynaovtas, drrous 8 ets “Iradlav oixtlopévns SuBapews, iv @ovpiovs mpoonyopevoav. Kai TavT’ émpartev dmoxoupitov pev apyou kat 1a GXOANVY ToAv-T parypovos bxAou Thy TOALY, eTravopOoupevos Se
TAS amoptas Tod Snpov, PoBov sé Kat ppoupav Tou pn vewTepiley Te TapaKatotKif@y Tots cup-paxots.
XII. “O 6éé retary ev noovay tais "A@nvats Kal KOG OV TVEYKE, peylorny dé Tois aNXOLS exmy)- Ew dvOpwrro.s, peovov O€ TH EAAdSt paptuper Th)
pevdeaPar THY heyowevnv Suvapey avuTins éxetyny Kal TOV TadaLov OABov, 7) TaV avaOnpdTwV KaTa-OKEV?), TOUTO PadLGTA TOV TodtTevLaTwY TOU Ierxréous éSacKarvov ot €yOpoi Kai ovéBaddov
ev Tais exehaotars, Bodvres @S 0 pev ojos ado-Fei xat KaKas GKOVEL TA KOWA TOV Ed yver XPyaTa 7 pos avutov éx Andou peTayayor,) é
EVETTLY AUTO T POS TOUS éycadobytas EUT PETETTATN
TOV mrpopdacwr, Setcavta tous BapBdpous éxetBer
1 sobs fuloess Fuhr and Blass, after Cobet: nuloes.

PERICLES °

sort of a pageant in the town for the masses, or a feast, or a procession, “amusing them like children ¥ with not uncouth delights,’ ! and sending out sixty / triremes annually, on which large numbers of the citizens sailed about for eight months under pay, practising at the same time and acquiring the art of seamanship. In addition to this, he despatched a thousand settlers to the Chersonesus,? and five hundred to Naxos, and to Andros half that number,
and a thousand to Thrace to settle with the Bisaltae, and others to Italy, when the site of Sybaris was settled? which they named Thurii. All this he did by way of lightening the city of its mob of lazy and idle busybodies, rectifying the embarrass ments of the poorer people, and giving the allie:
for neighbours an imposing garrison which should prevent rebellion.
XII. But that which brought most delightful adornment to Athens, and the greatest amazement to the rest of mankind; that which alone now testifies for Hellas that her ancient power and splendour, of which so much is told, was no idle fiction,—I mean his construction of sacred edifices, —this, more than all the public measures of Pericles, — his enemies maligned and slandered. They cried out in the assemblies:

“The people has lost its fair fame and is in ill repute because it has removed the public moneys of the Hellenes from Delos into its own keeping, and that seemliest of all excuses which it had to urge against its aceusers, to wit, that out of fear of the Barbarians it took the public funds

1 An iambic trimeter from an unknown source.
2447 B.c. Cf. chapter xix. 1-2.
® 444 B.o. Sybaris had been destroyed in 510 u.c, 35

p 2

ao

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

? 4 f ? 3 A \ ld ,
avenéaGar nal duratrew ev OYUP@ Ta KoLVa, TAV-3 , el \ “ \ e ¢
thy avnpyke IlepexrArs: Kat doxet Seevnv Bpw 7 ¢€ \ ~ cos
EAAds v8pivecOar xal tupavveicbar tepipavas,
“ A A rd
opaaa Tos eiahepouevars UT avTHs avayKaiws
TPOS TOV TOAELOV Has THY TOW KATAYpUCOUD-
\ f (a4 > / “A
Tas Kal KadXAwTiCovTas WaTEp Gdafeva yuvaixa, s f aA > ,
mepiaTrTomevny AiLJous TroAvTEAELS Kul ayadpaTta Kat vaous YtALoTAaNAdVTOUS.
"Edidacxey ody o Tepuxrns tov dipov ote ypn-
f “A Hatwv pmev ovK ohetrAovar Tols ouppdyors AOyov jTpoToreuouvTes auT@v Kal tovs BapBapous
“A ¢ rd
aveipyovtes, ovx immo, ov vadv, oy oTdiTHY,
? \ / / , A aA ,
dGAAG YpHpaTa povoy TeXoUvTwY, 2 TeV SidovTwY
? * > \ “ f A f
ovK €oTw, adr TOV AaLBavorTwr, av TapexwoLy +] “A cal ,
av? ov AapBavovar bel bé tis Toews KaTE-
f e A A .
OKEVATMEVNS iKAV@S TOiS avayKatolts Tpos TOV
ToOAELOY, Els TAUTA THY EvTOpiaY TpéTTELY AUTIS
73> @ , \ , 7s 3 / \

ap’ av dofa pév yevouévwy adidios, evaropia &é
s ’ “A ‘4
yivopevoy ETOlun Tapes Tat, TavTodaTAs Epyacias
/ A ' A
gdaveions Kal Twokikwyv ype@v, al twacayv pev Téxvny éyeipovoal, macav b€ xXeipa Kiwovoat, \ cad “A ” \ / 9
axedov Odny totoval EupiocOov thy mor, €F aAUTHS Gua Koopoupevny Kal Tpepopévny.
a \ ’
Tots pev yap nAriKiay Eyovoe Kai pwpunv ai
A re \ “ a“ “A
OTPATEIAaL TAS ATO THY KOLV@V EVTTOpLas TapEtxov, X ? b] , \ , ad wv %
tov & aauvtaxtoy xal Bavavaoov dyXov QuT
” ef A 4 w” f
apotpov eivat Anupatwv BovrAopeEvos ovTE AapBavey apyov Kai cyondlovta, peydras KaTacKev-36
159

from that sacred isle and was now guarding them in a stronghold, of this Pericles has robbed it. And surely Hellas is insulted with a dire insult and manifestly subjected to tyranny when she sees that, with her own enforced contributions for the war, we are gilding and bedizening our city, which, for all the world like a wanton woman, adds to her wardrobe precious stones and costly statues and temples worth their millions.”

For his part, Pericles would instruct the people that it owed no account of their moneys to the allies provided it carried on the war for them and kept off the Barbarians; “not a horse do they furnish,” said he, “not a ship, not a hoplite, but money simply ; and this belongs, not to those who give it, but to those who take it, if only they furnish that for which they take it in pay. And it is but meet that the city, when once she is sufficiently equipped with all that is necessary for prosecuting the war, should apply her abundance to such works as, by their completion, will bring her everlasting glory, and while in process of completion will bring that abundance into actual service, in that all sorts of activity and diversified demands arise, which rouse every art and stir every hand, and bring, as it were, the whole city under pay, so that she not only adorns, but supports herself as well from her own resources."

And it was true that his military expeditions supplied those who were in the full vigour of man- hood with abundant resources from the common funds, and in his desire that the unwarlike throng of common labourers should ncither have no share at all in the public receipts, nor yet get fees for

, > \ 4 ¢ ,
Ad LAaTwWV eruBoras Kal TONUTEVVOUS urrobéaets
w \ b] , b 7 , > N
Epywv dsatpiBnv éxovtwv évéSare hépwv eis Tov Siuov, iva pndev hrtov Tav wAEOVTwWY Kai Ppov-povvTwy Kal oTpatTevopévwy TO oiKovpowy exn
, b \ a" , b a \ mpopacw ato tav Snuociwy wheretoOar xai peTarapBaverv. Orrov yap BAN pev Hv Bos,
, ~ / Ul 5nd , e
yarxKos, eAéhas, ypuaos, EBevos, kuTaptacos, ai
" ,
5é TavTHy exTrovovcas Kai Ki T:ipyalouevar TExVat,
, 4 , é
TEKTOVES, WAdOTAL, YadKoTUTAL, ALGoupyot, Ba-deis, yputod paraxtijpes kai érehavtos, Cwypa-
ot, TorKtATAai, TOpevTat, TouTOL S€ TovTwY Kai Koma Tippes, EuTropor Kal vabtat Kal KxuBepyara
Kata Garattayv, oi 6€ Kata yhv apakornyol Kai Cevyotpopor Kal jvioxot Kat Kadwotpoda rat AWwoupyol Kal cKUTOTOLOL Kai OdoTrOLOl Kal peTAaA-
A '
Neis, Exdotn b€ Téyvy, Kabarep atpatnyos idiov
b ;
oTpatevpa, Tov Ontixoy dyYAov Kat LOrwrTny ouD-TeTAypEeVOY Eiyev, Opyavoy Kat Gupa THS vITNpeE-
a e v > a ,
cias yivopevor, els TaTAY, WS ETrOS El TELY, NALKLAV kal dvaw ai xpeiar Scévepov Kai Steorretpov TH
evTropiay.

XIII. 'AvaBatvovtwy 5€ THY Epywv UTEpn-

a % b /
davev pev peyéBe, poppy O° apipytev Kat
s “a wn e 4 ¢ tA
KapiTt, TOY Snptoupyov upirAwpevov vUTEpBad-‘ , “ , ta
Nec Gat tiv Snpovpytav TH KadAALTEXVIG, pardora ‘ XN Cd
Pavpdo.ov hv To TUYOS. WY yap ExaaTOV woVTO n nn ‘ ¢€ 4 ld b N , morarais dicdoyais Kat nAiKials moALS ETL TEOS adifec@at, TavTa wWavTa pias ukpi) TWodLTELAS 38

laziness and idleness, he boldly suggested to the people projects for great constructions, and designs for works which wouid call many arts into play and involve long periods of time, in order that the stay-at-homes, no whit less than the sailors and sentinels and soldiers, might have a pretext for getting a beneficial share the public wealth.
The materials to be used were stone, bronze, ivory,” gold, ebony, and cypress-wood; the arts which should elaborate and work up these materials were those of carpenter, moulder, bronze-smith, stone-cutter, dyer, worker in gold and ivory, painter, embroiderer, embosser, to say nothing of the forwarders and furnishers of the material, such as factors, sailors and pilots by sea, and, by |: and, wagon-makers, trainers of yoked beasts, and drivers. There were also rope-makers, weavers, leathcr-workers, road-builders, and miners. And since each par-ticular art, like a general with the army under his separate command, kept its own throng of unskilled and untrained labourers in compact array, to be as instrument unto player and as body unto soul in subordinate service, it came to pass that for every age, almost, and every capacity the city’s great abundance was distributed and scattered abroad by such demands.
XIII. So then the works arose, no less towering in their grandeur than inimitable in the grace of their outlines, since the workmen eagerly strove to surpass themselves in the beauty of their handicraft. And yet the most wonderful thing about them was the speed with whicli they rose. Each one of them, men thought, would require many successive generations to complete it, but all of them were

2 €dkapBave tTHv ouvTédctav. KatTot ToTé h4ucww oy , a , s a Ayadapyou tod Cwypadou péya hpovodvtos emt
n~ ‘4 \ nA wn

T® TAY Kai padiws Ta CHa Toleiy axovoavTa

tov Levéiy etrrety: “yw 8 év worrd@ ypove.”

) yap €v TO Totely evyéperca Kal TayvTYHS ovK

b f f 4 s +O\ f ¥ 4

evttOnat Bapos Epywo povipoy ovdé KadXoOvS axpt-

Betav o & eis THY yéveriy TO TOVW Tpobaveta Gels

NPOVvOS EV TH TwTHpPLa TOU yevouevou THY LaxoY
3 atrodiéwotv. GOev nal parrov Oavpatetar ta
, 4 N A , > 3 if
IlepixXeovs Epya mpos ToAvy xXpovoy Ev orLYD
‘ 4 \ \ 4 > ‘ yevomeva. KddArEL per yap ExaaTov EvOds Hy a an A / TOTE apyaioy, axpn Oé pexpe viv TpoadhaTov éoTt nw U / Kal veoupyov' ovTws emravOet Katvotns aet tts}

aOietov Vro Tov xXpovov S:atnpodaa THY BY», @omep aelOares Trvedya Kai Wuyny aynpw Kata-

[Lemley EevnY TOV Epywr EYOvTMY.

4 \ ” \ f bd / @
4 Ildvta 6€ duetrre nal Tdavtwy éticKxotos Hv
A 4
avt@ Pedtas, Kaito. peyddrous apyitéxtovas id al éyovTwy Kal Teyvitas TOY Epywy. Tov pev yap éxatoutredov Tlapbevava Kaddxparns eipyaveto ‘ b] nw ‘ b] ’ be im! al , kat ‘Ixtivos, to & év “EXevotve rterXeotHpLov

” \ aed > 5 a \ \ ao?
npEato peéev KopotBos oixodopetvy, Kat Tovs ém 99 / / yw v \ a 3 4 éSadhous xiovas EOnxev odTos Kal Tols éTLaTUALOLS
b / b , \ f 4
éméCevEev: amoOavovtos &8€ tovtov Metayévns
0 Eumétios to dtalwpa Kal Tovs avw Kiovas
A , —
5 éréatnoe TOO Omatov emi TOU araxTopov Zevocrs 0 Nodrapyevs exopvpwoe to Sé paxpov 160
xawdTys del ris Fuhr and Blass with F8S: xawdérns ras.

qc

fully completed in the heyday of a single adininis- tration. And yet they say that once on a time when Agatharchus the painter was boasting loudly of the speed and ease with which he made his figures, Zeuxis heard him, and said, “ Mine take, and last, a long time.” And it is true that deftness and speed in working do not impart to the work an abiding weight of influence nor an exactness of beauty ; whereas the time which is put out to loan in laboriously creating, pays a large and generous interest in the preservation of the creation. For this reason are the works of Pericles all the more to be wondered at; they were created in a short time for all time. Each one of them, in its beauty, was even then and at once antique; but in the freshness of its vigour it is, even to the present day, recent and newly wrought. Such is the bloom of perpetual newness, as it were, upon these works of his, which makes them ever to look untouched by time, as though the unfaltering breath of an ageiess spirit had been infused into them.

His general manager and general overseer was | Pheidias, although the several works had great architects and artists besides. Of the Parthenon, for instance, with its cella of a hundred fect in length, Callicrates and Ictinus were the architects ; it was Coroebus who began to build the sanctuary of the mysteries at Eleusis, and he planted the columns on the floor and yoked their capitals together with architraves; but en his death Metagenes, of the deme Xypete, carried up the frieze and the upper tier of columns; while Xenocles, of the deme ‘| Cholargus, set on high the lantern over the shrine.

41

~]

“~ \ g t b “ f Sy & Telyos, TEpt ov LwKpaTys axovaal dnaw adtos

elonyoupnevou yvwpny Tepexréous, npyoraRyce
, a \ ‘ v a Kaddx paras. Keouepoet dé 7o Epyov Kparivos ws Bpadéws mepatvopevov' HdaXae yap auto, dyot,
NOyorae mpoayee Llepexréns, epyorot 8 ovde KLVEt.
To & ’Ordetov, rH pev evtos Siadécee rrorvedpoy
xal wodvatuAov, TH O epee mepixrAives Kal KaTarTCS €k plas Kopud ys Temroinpévov, eixava Néyovat yevéoOat Kai pipnua TH Bactréws oKynvis, emtatatobvtos Kat tovutm Teptxréous.
510 Kai wad Kpativos év Opattais taifee mpos avTov"
‘O aytvoneparos ZLevs 6b¢ mpocépyevar' tadetov eri TOU Kpaviou exw, ered TovaTpAaKOY TapolyeETat.
pirotewovpevos O o Llepixdtjs tote mp@tov éyrndicato povaixhs aywva tots Tava0nvaios ayecOat, kal détakev adtos abroerns aipedels xa0ote Xph Tous aywvilopevous avdrciy H adery xBapiev. eBeavro dé Kai TOTE Kai TOV GAXoOv xnav? év ’Odeiw tovs _HovarKous ayavas.
a o€ Mportiaa THIS dK poTrohews efepyaa On pis év wevtaetia Mvnaotxd€ous APXLTERTCVOUPTOS” TUX bé davpaariy cupBaca mepl THY o.KOCOae éunvuce thy Ocov ovK atroctatTovcay, adra
1 63¢ | rpoaépxetac Fuhr and Blass, after Cobst: apooép-xeT a | TlepinAens.
“2

PERICLES

For the long wall, concerning which Socrates says!
he himself heard Pericles introduce a measure, Callicrates was the contractor. Cratinus pokes fun at this work for its slow progress, and in these words :—
« Since ever so long now
In word has Pericles pushed the thing; in fact he does not budge it.” ”
The Odeum, which was arranged internally with many tiers of seats and many pillars, and which had a roof made with a circular slope from a single peak, they say was an exact reproduction of the Great King’s pavilion, and this too was built under the superintendence of Pericles. Wherefore Cratinus, in his “Thracian Women,” rails at him again :—

“The squill-head Zeus! lo! here he comes,
The Odeum like a cap upon his cranium,
Now that for good and all the ostracism is o’er.” ® Then first did Pericles, so fond of honour was he, get a decree passed that a musical coptest be held as part of the Panathenaic festival. He himself was elected manager, and prescribed how the contestants must blow the flute, or sing, or pluck the zither.
These musical contests were witnessed, both then and thereafter, in the Odeum.
The Propylaea of the acropolis were brought to completion in the space of five years, Mnesicles being their architect. A wonderful thing happened in the course of their building, which indicated that the goddess was not holding herself aloof, but was a 1 Plato, Gorgias, p.455 e.

2 From a play of unknown name. Kock, Com. Alt. Frag.
i. p. 100. 3 Kock, op. cit.1. p. 30.
43

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

aguvehamtopmevny Tov Epyouv Kal ouvemtTEdovVaaD.
0 yap évepyotatos Kal mpoOvpotatos Tay TeX-“A b] \ b ad id ,
vitav atocdhanels €& typous Erece Kal SréKxerto LoxXOnpas, UTd TOV iaTpav ameyvwcpevos. abu-a y “ , e ~ w “ povuvtos 5 tov Llepixr€ous 7 Geos dvap paveioa
e fod
cuvétake Ocpareiav, } xpwpevos o Hepixrs tay kal padiws idcato Tov avOpwrov. él tovT®
“ a ¢ , ? a
S¢ kal TO YaAKxovv ayadpa THs Tytetas “A@nvas
\
dvéotnoev év axpoTrodXet Tapa Tov Bwfiov ds Kal TPOTEPOV HV, WS NEYOUG LV.
‘O 3€ Derdias eipyafeto pev tis Geod Td ypvcow &d05, Kal tovTov Synuioupyos év TH oTHAN
3 ‘ “A
avayéypartat,’ rdvta & hv oxedov én avr,
Kal TGoLv, ws elpiKapev, emEgTATEL TOIS TEyVI-XN / s \ “ A S tats oun didiav Ilepixdeovs. Kal ToUTO TO pev

hOovay, Td S€ Brachnpiav iveyxev, ws edevOepas
A “ a ‘
7@ [lepuxdet yuvaixas ets Ta Epya pottwoas vTo-
10 Seyouévov Tod Padiov. SeEdpevor S€ tov Noyov

1]

@ ‘ A J] , b] “ ,
OL K@pLKOL TOAANN AGEAYELAVY AYTOU KATECKE-Ww \ , “a f
Sacav, eis te THY Mevintouv yvvaixa diaBad-AovTes, avdpos hiouv Kal UToaTpaTnyoUVTOS, EIS
9 4 A te Tas [luptdaptrous opriOotpodgias, ds ETatpos av
Tlepexr€ous aitiav elye ta@vas vdtévat tas
A ,
guvarkiv als o Lepixrrs éewAnaia€e.
4 A a“
Kat tt av tis avOpwrous catuptKous tots Biots
\ s b! a id / Cd
Kat TaS KATA TOV KpeLTTOVWY BrachnwWas WaTrEP Saipovr Kak@ TO POdVO TOV TOAXOY aTroOvoYTas ad \ 2 4 e
éxdotote Gaupdcetev, OTOU Kal XUTynotwBpotos o
1 dsayeypartas Cobet: elvat yéyparras.
44

PERICLES

helper both in the inception and in the completion of the work. One of its artificers, the most active and zealous of them all, lost his footing and fell from a great height, and lay in a sorry plight, despaired of by the physicians. Pericles was much cast down at this, but the goddess appeared to him in a dream and prescribed a course of treatment for him to use, so that he speedily and easily healed the man. It was in commemoration of this that he set up the bronze statue of Athena Hygieia on the acropolis near the altar of that goddess, which was there before, as they say.
But it was Pheidias who produced the great golden image of the goddess, and he is duly inscribed on the tablet as the workman who made it. Everything, almost, was under his charge, and all the artists and artisans, as I have said, were under his superintendence, owing to his friendship with Pericles. This brought envy upon the one, and contumely on the other, to the effect that Pheidias made assignations for Pericles with free-born women who would come ostensibly to see the works of art. The comic poets took up this story and bespattered Pericles with charges of abounding wantonness, connecting their slanders with the wife of Menippus, a man who was his friend, and a colleague in the generalship, and with the bird-culture of Pyrilampes, who, since he was the comrade of Pericles, was accused of using his peacocks to bribe the women with whom Pericles consorted.

And why should any one be astonished that men of wanton life lose no occasion for offering up sacrifices, as it were, of contumelious abuse of their superiors, to the evil deity of popular envy, when no

‘wt

@dacros Sewov acéenua cat pvOawces eEeveynxeiv eTOALNOEV Els TIY yuvatxa Tov Vvi0v KaTa TOU lepuxréous; o0Tws Eotxe TavTyN YaXeTrov Elva Kai dua 8 npatov iatopia TarnOés, Gtav ot pev VoTEpov yeyovotes TOV ypovoyv EXwav értmpoobovvTa TH yuwoe TOY TpayyudTwv, 7) 6€ Tov mpakewy Kat Tov Biwy HAtKi@Tis iatopia ta pev POovors Kai dSuopevelais, Ta b€ yaptlopévn Kal KoXaKEevovaa AvpaivyTat Kai d:acTpéhy THY adjOeav.

XIV. Tov b€ epi tov Oovxvdidny pntoper xataBowvtwy Tov ilepixréous ws atradavtos Ta Xphuata Kal Tas Tpododovs aToAALYTOS, Npo-Thoev év éxkrAnaia Tov Sipov e woddAa oxet ScSavravicbar dnadvtwv b€ maptodda: “Mn Toivuy, eiTev, “uUpiv, GAN enol bedatravijcbw, Kal tov avadynpatwy idiay éuavtov trotncopat THY éemiypadiy. eiTovTos otv Tavta tov Ilepr-KEOUS, ELTE THY peyarohpocvvyny avTod Baupd-gavres cite mpos THY b0€av avTibiAroTipoupevot TeV épywv, avéxpayov KedevovTes ex THV SnpLoulwr dvadicxey Kal yopnyeiv pnodevos ecdopevov.

TéXos S€ Tpas Tov Mouxvéidny eis ayava TeEpi TOD datpaxov Kxataotas Kai Siaxiwduvevoas éxeivov pev e€éBadre, xatédvoe b€ THY avTiTEeTaypEevnY ETALpelav.
XV. ‘Os obv ravtatact AvGeians THs Stadopas Kal THS ToAEwS Olov Ouadrijs Kai puas yevopevns Kopidy, Tepijveyxev ets Eautov Tas "AOnras 46

16]

PERICLES

even Stesimbrctus of Thasos has ventured to make public charge against Pericles of a dreadful and fabulous impiety with his son's wife? To such degree, it seems, is truth hedged about with difficulty and hard to capture by research, since those who come after the events in question find that lapse of time is an obstacle to their proper perception of them; while the research of their contemporaries into men’s deeds and lives, partly through envious hatred and partly through fawning flattery, defiles and distorts the truth.
XIV. Thucydides _and his party kept denouncing

Pericles for playing “fast and loose with the. public moitye-and annihilating th ues. Pericles therefore asked the people in assembly whether they thought he had expended too much, and on their declaring that it was altogether too much, “ Well then,” said he, “let it not have been spent on your account, but mine, and I will make the inscrip- tions of dedication in my own name.” When Pericles had said this, whether it was that they admired his magnanimity or vied with his ambition to get the glory of his works, they cried out with a loud voice and bade him take freely from the public aes for his outlays, and to spare naught whatsoever. “And finally he ventured to undergo with Thucydides the contest of the ostracism, wherein he secured his rival’s banish- ment,! and the dissolution of the faction which had been arrayed against hin/

XV. Thus, then, seeing that political differences were entirely remitted and the citv had become a smooth surface, as it were, and altogether united, he brought under his own control Athens and all ‘the

1 442 B.o.
47}
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Kal ta tov "AOnvaiwov éEnptnpéva mpaypata, dopous Kal otpatevpata Kai Tpinpers Kal vycous kat Odraccav, Kal toddAnv pev de “EAAnvor, ToAAny 5¢ Kal da BapBapwv Koveay ioxvy, Kal
Hyemoviav UTNKoos Overt Kat Pircais Baothewv Kal cvppayias teppaypevny Svvactav, ovKed o adtos tv ovd opoiws yecponOns Te Sym Kai padios vireiKely KaL Guvevdidoval Tats emi upiaes aoTep mvoais TOV TOAABY, GAR ex THS avetpevns exeivns Kal brod pur topevns eva Snpayoryias, domep avOnpas Kal paraxijs appmovias, dpiaToKpa~
To Kal Baciduxny EVTELILEVOS TOALTELAY, Kal Xpopevos auth mpos to BéXTLOTOV pon Kal dveyKrito, Ta pev TOAAG Rovicpevov ») mye neiOwy Kal didaoKwv TOV OFjmov, my 5’ é7e Kal pada dua xepaivovta KATATELVOY Kal m poo: Bato é éxetpotto TO cup épovTe, pupoupevos dTeXvaas lar pov TOLKIAW Voo}paTe Kal paxp@ KATA KaLpov pev yOovas aBXaBeis, kata Katpov bé Syypous Kat ddppaxa mpoodpépovTa cwtijpia. tTavtodaTav yap, @sS eK 0s, mabav év oy Too aurTny TO peéye-Dos apxnv éxovTe Pvopevwv, povos é€upedrors ExaoTa Siaxetpicacbar Tmepuxws, paruucta & érxmiot Kai poBos Hotep olaks mpocatéAdwv! TO Opacuvopevov avtov Kat To dvcOvpov aneis Kal rrapapv0ovpevos, cdecke THY pyTopiKny Kata IIha-Tava Wuyaywyiav otcav Kai péytotov épyov
1 wpooorédAwy Fuhr and Blass with 8 (xpooréAAwy BCF*) ; mpoavagTéAAwy.
48

PERICLES

issues dependent on the Athenians,—. tributes, armies, triremes, the islands, the sea, the vast_power derived.

from_Hellenes, vast_also from Barbarians, and_a supremacy that was securely hedged about with ances. But then he was no longer the same man as before, nor alike submissive to the people and ready to yield and give in to the desires of the multitude as a steersman to the breezes. Nay rather, forsaking his former lax and sometimes rather effeminate management of the people, as it were a flowery and soft melody, he struck the high and clear note of an aristocratic and ki anship, and employing it for the best interests of all in a direct and undeviating fashion, heled the people, for the most r [=

part willingly, by his_persuasions and instructions. And yet there were times when they were sorely vexed with him, and then he tightened the reins and forced them into the way of their advantage with a master's hand, for all_the world like a wise phy- sician, who treats a complicated discase of long Standing occasionally with harmless indulgences to please his patient, and occasionally, too, with caustics and bitter drugs which work salvation. For whereas all sorts of distempers, as was to be expected, were rife in a rabble which possessed such vast empire, he alone _was so endowed by nature that he could manage each one of these cases suitably, and more than anything else he used the people's hopes and fears, like rudders, so to speak, giving timely check to their arrogance, and allaying and comforting their despair. Thus he proved that rhetoric, or the art of speaking, is, to use Plato's words,! "an enchantment 1 Phaedrus, p 271 ¢.

49)

VOL. ITI. gc

on

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

aur hs THY TEpL Ta On Kat 7waOn pedodoy, OOTEP TLVAS Tovous Kal hboyyous yuxis pan' eu perois
apis Kab Kpovaens Seopevous. aitia 8 ovy % Tod Aaovyou pros duvapus, arn', ws Oovkvdi6ns dnoiv, » mept tov Biov deka xa TiaTes Tob avd pos, adwpotdatou Tepipavas yevomerou Kal XPnear ay KpeLTTOVOS" Os Kal THY modu € éx peyadns peyioTny Kal mAovatwtaray TOUjTas, Kal *YEVOHEVOS duvapee! TOO Bactréwv Kal TUpaYvoY UTTEPTEPOS, @v évioe Kal eTLTpPOTOD | Tots vier breDevto exeivov," pa pax ut petCova TI) ovaiay OvK éroingeDV 1S 6 TATHP AUTO KaTeheme.
XVI. Kadror Thy Suvauiy avTou capes pev O Bovevdidys dinyetrat, eaxonOws d€ Tmapeupaivou-oly ot Ko pKol, Meworotpatibas pep vEoUS TOUS Tept auTov éraipous Karodvtes, auTov 8 " dTropogae py TUPaVYNnoEY KeAEVOVTES, @S aouUppeT pou ™ pos Snpoxpatiav kal Baputrépas wept avtov ovens UmrEpox js. o bé Tnrexredns rapadedwoxévar Onoiv
avT@ Tous "APnvaious IloAewv te hopous avtds Te odes, Tas pev
deity, Tas & avandvepv, Adiva Teiyn, TA pév oixodopety, TA 8 Errerta® Twarw KataBarxreUp, oroveds, Suvapw, Kpatos, eipyvnv, mAOUTOY T evdarpoviap TE.

Kat tadTa Kalpos otx hv ovd axpuyn Kal xapts
1 $yyduer also Fuhr and Blass with S; Bekker has xa} Suvipet.

2 éwlrporov.... exeivoy Madvig' s restoration, adopted b Fuhr and Blass: émi rots viéor 5:éBevro, éxewvos (willed thetr property to their sons). 3748' éwerra Fuhr: ra dé adrd.

5°

PERICLES

of the soul," and that hez chiefest business is a careful study of the affections and passions, which are, so to speak, strings and steps of the soul, requiring a very judicious fingering and striking. The reason fer his success was not his power as a speaker merely, but, as Thucydides says, the reputation of his life and the" confidence reposed in him as one who was manifestly proven tp be utterly disinterested and superior to bribes. "He made the eity, great as it was when he took it, the greatest and riehest of all cities, and grew to be superior in power to kings and tyrants.) Some of these actually appointed him guardian of their sons, but he did not make his estate a single drachma greater than it was when his father left it to him.

XVI. Of his power there can be no doubt, since Thucydides gives so clear an exposition of it, and the comic poets unwittingly reveal it even in their mali- cious gibes, calling him and his associates "new Peisis- tratidae," and urging him to take solemn oath not to make himself a tyrant, on the plea, forsooth, that his preéminence was incommensurate with a demoeracy and too oppressive. Telecleides says? that the Athenians had handed over to him

"With the cities' assessments the cities themselves.
to bind or release as he pleases,
Their ramparts of stone to build up if he likes, and then to pull down again straightway,
Their treatics, their forces, their might, peace, and riches, and all the fair gifts of good fortune." /

(RoceErs.)
And this was not the fruit of a golden moment, nor 1 11. 65, 8.
2 Ina play of unknown name. Kock, op. cit. i. p. 220.

avOovans ep dpa TortTElas, dAXa TecoapdKovTa \ ¥ , > ' , \ if pev érn TpwTevwy ev Ediddrtats cai Aewxpatats cal Mupwvidas cal Kipwor xai Torpidars ai Oouvxvdidars, peta 5€ thy Oovevdidov xatddAvoww
Kal Tov GoTpaKta Lov OvK EAdTTW TOY TEVTEKALOEKA

éray Sinvext) kal piav ovoav év tais évavaiors
?
otTpatnylas apynv Kat duvactelay KTnodpeEvos,
] ¢ et A 3 4 e N # /
epvrakey éavTov avadwtov vT0 XpnpaTwv, Kat-Tep OU TayvTaTaciw apyas EYwv wpos YKpnuatiopov, GAAa Tov TaTp@ov Kai Sixatoy TAODTOD, ws | ee ee) 4 > , , 4
unr aperovpevos expuyot pnTe TOARR TpaypaTa kal duatpiBas daxodoupevep Tapeyot, cvvétakey els olxovopiapv ty mevo paotny Kal axptBeotaTny civat. TOUS yap éeTelous KaptroUs amavtTas GO poous érimpac ker, ita THY dvayKaiwy ExacToV
A ;
é& dyopas wvovpevos Stier tov Biov Kai ta Trepl Thy dtattay. Obev ovY HOUS Fv évyrALKots Tratolv 3 Q\ X, \ , b > > , ovde yuvarkl dawirns yopnyos, aAX eueudhovto
Thy édypepoy tavTny Kal ouvynyuévny ets FO
?
axpiBéotatov Samdvny, ovdevos, olov év otxia
,
peyarn Kal mpdaypactv adOovors, meptppéovTos,
, N
GAAG TavTos péey avadwpatos, TavTos dé€ Arp-
> 9» “A \ , 4 e \
patos 80 aptOpod Kal pétpov BadiGovtos. o Se
a a / Tacay avTovd THY ToLavTHY cuvéywr axpiBetav Eels Av otxétys, Evayyeros, ws Etepos ovdeis ed Eepu-
a N
Kas 1) KaTecKevacpévos U0 TOD IleptxdAéous mpos oikovopiay.
"Amadovta) péev ody tadta tis ’Avatayopou
? A
codpias, eye kal THY oixiay éxeivos éEédrTe Kal
1 'AngSovra Valckenaer’s restoration of the MS. axayza ;
Bekker changes to amdde 52

the culminating popularity of an administration that bloomed but for a season ; nay rather he stood first for fortyyearslL among such men as_ Ephialtes, Leocrates, Myronides, Cimon, Tolmides, and Thucydides, and after the deposition of Thucydides and his ostracism, for no less than fifteen of these years did he secure an imperial sway that was continuous and unbroken, by. means_of his annual tenure of the office of general. During all these years he kept himself ufitainted by corruption, although he was not altogether indifferent to money-making ; indeed, the wealth which was legally his by inheritance from his father, that it might not from sheer neglect take to itself wings and fly away, nor yet cause him much trouble and loss of time when he was busy with higher things, he set into such orderly dispensation as he thought was easiest and most exact. This was to sell his annual products all together in the lump, and then to buy in the market each article as it was needed, and so provide the ways and means of daily life. For this reason he was not liked by his sons when they grew up, nor did their wives find in him a liberal purveyor, but they murmured at his expendi- ture for the day merely and under the most exact restrictions, there being no surplus of supplies at all, as in a great house and under generous circum- stances, but every outlay and every intake proceeding by count and measure. His agent in securing all this great exactitude was a single servant, Evangelus, who was either gifted by nature or trained by Pericles so as to surpass everybody else in domestic economy.

It is true that this conduct was not in accord with the wisdom of Anaxagoras, since that philosopher

1 Reckoning roundly from 469 to 429 B.c.

+ , ’ “ 9 \ \ / e.h63
THY XYwOpay adjxev apynv Kai pndroBotov ur
“~ , \
évOovotacpov Kat peyarodpoovrns, od TavToy
5 €otiv, oipat, Oewpntixod dirocodov Kal Trod-“ , 9 6] e ‘ ’ , \ > fo
tixovd Bios, GAN oO peyv avopyavov Kal ampoaben THs exTOS DANS Ertl Tots KaXOIS KiVEL THY SlavoLay, fal ,
7@ © els dvOpwreias yxpeias dvapeyvurrTe thy n r apetiy €ativ ov yévolt av ov TOY dvayKaiwv
povov, dAda Kal TOV KaA@Y O TAODTOS, BaoTrEP hy Kal Tepixret Bonfovvtt toddots TOV TEVAT@V.
‘ ? ,
Kal pevto. ye Tov “Avakayopay avrov deyouow
9 / , 3 f ~
acyoroupevou Tlepixreous apedovpevov Ketobar guyKexaruppevoy HO ynpaloy anoxapTepodyta:

mpoatecovtos S€ 7H Tlepixret tod mpdypatos éxmrayevta Oeiv evOvs ert tov avdpa nal deicbat se, , 9 / > 9 a 9 3
macav Sénow, oAodupopevoy ovK éxelvov, aAX
éavtov, €f TOLODTOY amroXEl 7HS ToALTELaS oUp-Bovrov. éxxadrurdapevov ody tov 'Avatayopav
a , ? “a elmrety mpos autov: "QD Tlepixres, nab ot rod
, , M” wv ? / 33
AvYyvoU YXpElav EvovTeEs EdaLtov éETLYXEovOLD.
XVII. ’Apyopévwy 6€ Aaxedatpoviwy dyPec0at
Pa > , ~ > | , 9 , e ~
Th avéjoe tov A@nvaiwv, éraipwv o Tepexris tov Shpov ett parrov péya dpoveiv nal peyarov
e XN b “a , if a, v avutov aklovy Tpaypatwv, ypadet Wndiopa, tavtas “EAAnvas Tovs omjroTe KaTotKobyTas Evpoans 4) THs “Acias jTapaxaneiv, Kal pixpayv mordw 3 , al peyddnv, els avAXoyor wéeutrev ‘ABrvate
A f \ “ Lae i “a e “
tous BovAevoopevous Trept Tov EAAnViK@Y Leper, 54

PERICLES

actually abandoned his house and left his land to lie fallow for sheep-grazing, owing to the lofty thoughts with which he was inspired. But the life of a specu- lative philosopher is not the same thing, I think, as that of a statesman. The one exercises his intellect without the aid of instruments and independent of external matters for noble ends; whereas the other, inasmuch as he brings his superior excellence into close contact with the common needs of mankind, must sometimes find wealth not merely one of the necessities of life, but also one of its noble things, as was actually the case with Pericles, who gave aid to many poor men. And, besides, they say that Anaxa- goras himself, at a time when Pericles was absorbed in business, lay on his couch all neglected, in his old age, starving himself to death, his head already muffled for departure, and that when the matter came to the ears of Pericles, he was struck with dismay, and ran at once to the poor man, and be- sought him most fervently to live, bewailing not so much that great teacher's lot as his own, were he now to be bereft of such a counsellor in the conduct of the state. Then Anaxagoras—so the story goes —unmuffed his head and said to him, “ Pericles, even those who need a lamp pour oil therein.”

~ XVII. When the Lacedaemonians began to be annoyed by the increasing power of the Athenians, Pericles, by way of inciting the people to cherish yet loftier thoughts and to deem itself worthy of great achievements, introduced a bill to the effect that all_Hellenes wheresoever resident in Europe or in Asia, small and la ities ali invited

w

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

& xatémpycav ot BdpBapot, Kal t¢v Ovarav as oheidovaw wep HS “EXXddos eEvEdpevoe Tots Geois Ste mpos tovs BapBdpovs éudyovto, Kal
ths OaratTtys, OTws WAéwot TavTes adews Kal
Thy eipnyny aywow. emi tadta & avdpes eixoce
TOV UTED TEVTNKOVTA ETN yEeyovoTaV éméUPOnaar, av mévte pev “Iwvas nal Awpteis tovs év ’Acia Kal vnotwtas aypt AéaBouv xat ‘Pddov mapexadouy, wévte S€ Tous év‘EXAnorovtT@ xal Opaxn péxpt Bufavtiov tomovs émnecav, xal wévte emi toutots eis Botwtiav cal Dwxida nai Tedorov-vngov, éx 6€ TAUTNS dta Aoxpav én THY T poaot-KOV i) €Lpov Ews ‘Axapvavias Kal “ApBpaxias
amestuAnaav: of &€ Aotol &’ EvBotas én’ Oitaiovs xat tov Martéa xorXrov Kal POiwras
"Axarors cal Oeaaarovs émopevorTo, ouprrel-Govtes t teva Kal peTexew tov Bovrevpatov én’ eipivn Kal KowoTpayia TIS “EXAdéos. émpaxOn d€ ovdév, ovde owviOov ai TONELS, Aaxedatpoviov
UTEVAVTLWOEVTWV, WS AeyeTat, Kal TO TpP@TOY ev
Ilehkorowyay THS Telpas éreyxJeians. TOUTO fev ovv TrapeDépny evOeLKYULEVOS avtov To dpoynya Kal THY peyaroppoovyny.
XVIII. "Ev 6€ ais oTparnyiats evdoxipel pardoTa. Sta THY aopaneay, OUTE Haxns éexovans TOAANY aonroTnT a Kal Kivduvoyv Exovciws aTTO-HEvos, ove Tous éKx TOU Tapa BarheoGar Xpnca-péevous TVY'N apn pa Kal Oavpasbevtas WS peya-Aous CnA@V Kal PL LOUPLEVOS OTpATHYOUS, det TE Acywv Tpos Tous TONLTAS OS bcov é% auvT@ Hsvovow adavatot TavTa TOV Ypovoy.
56

163

PERICLES

the Barbarians had burned down, concerning the sacrifices which were due to the gods in the name of Hellas in fulfilment of vows made when they were fighting with the Barbarians, and concerning the sea, that all might sail it fearlessly and keep the peace. To extend this invitation, twenty men, of such as were above fifty years of age, were sent out, five of whom invited the Ionians and Dorians in Asia and on the islands between Lesbos and Rhodes ; five visited the regions on the Hellespont and in Thrace as far as Byzantium; five others were sent into Boeotia and Phocis and Peloponnesus, and from here by way of the Ozolian Locrians into the neighbouring continent as far as Acarnania and Ambracia; while the rest proceeded through Euboea to the Oetaeans and the Maliac Gulf and the Phthiotic Achaeans and the Thessalians, urging them all to come and take part in the deliberations for the peace and common welfare of Hellas. /But nothing was accom- plished, nor did the cities come together by deputy, owing to the opposition of the Lacedaemonians, as it is said, since the effort met with its first check in Peloponnesus. I have cited this incident, however, to show forth the man's disposition and the greatness of his thoughts. /

XVIII. In his capacity as general, he was famous above all things for his saving caution; he neither undertook of his own accord a battle involving much uncertainty and peril, nor did he envy and imitate those who took great risks, enjoyed brilliant good-fortune, and so were admired as great generals; and he was for ever saying to his fellow-citizens that, so far as lay in his power, they would remain alive forever and be immortals.
5U/

e fa r \ \
Opov b€ Torpidny tov Torpaiov dia tas TpoTepov evtvyias Kal dra TO TipadOar Stadepovtas éx TOV TOAEuIKOY auY ovdevi KaLp® TapacKxevalopevoy eis Botwtiay éuBaretv, Kat
~ N TETELKOTA TOV ev HALKIA TOUS UplioTOUS Kal
, y \ f /
dirotipotatous €GerovtTi atpatevecOal, yLdLous yevopeévous aveu THS aAAnS Suvdpews, KAaTEVELV emetpato Kal Tapaxanrely ev TO SrHpw, TO py7-HOVEVOMEVOY ElTTwY, ws eb 1p TELGOLTO TleptKrel, TOV ye gopwratov ovy apapTicetat cipPBovrov avapeivas Xpovov. TOTE Ev OdY peETpPiws EvOoKInoe TOUT EiTTw@Y OrIyats 8 BaTEpoy nuépats, WS
' , ' ' DN f '
avnyyerbn teOveas pv attos Torpidns mepl
Kopwveray nt Gels paxn, TeOvewtes Sé TroAXol Kkayabot TAY ToALT@Y, peydAny TodTo T@ Tleprray ' > , 60 ww ig > \ f

KAet pet evvotas doEay iveyxev, ws avdpl dpovip@
Kal pidowoXrTn.
XIX . Tav 6€ otpatnyav nyannOn pév 1) rept bd ”~ f ,
Xeppovncoy avtod partata, swTnptos yevopévn Tots avToOt Katotkovat Tav ‘“EXAnvov: ob yap povov éerroixous “AOnvaiwy yiriovs Kopicas Eppw-
’ , \ , y \ \ ‘] 4
cev evavopia Tas TONES, GNAG Kal Tov adbyéva dialwoas épvpact cal mpoBAnpacw éx Caratrns
els OddatTav ameteiyice TAS KaTadpoyas TOV Opaxav Twepixexvpéevwv TH Neppovnc@, Kal Tore-
’ mt \ \ Ips e ,

pov évderex} xat Bapuv éexreroev, © ovvelyeto Tavta TOV yYpovoy 7) ywopa BapBapixais avape-piypevn yerTVidoeot Kal YCporga AHoTNpLOV 58

PERICLES

So when he saw that Tolmides, son of Tolmaeus, all-on account of his previous good-fortune and of the exceeding great honour bestowed upon him for his wars, was getting ready, quite inopportunely, to make an incursion into Boeotia, and that he had persuaded the bravest and most ambitious men of military age to volunteer for the campaign,—as many as a thousand of them, aside from the rest of his forces,—he tried to restrain and dissuade him in the popular assembly, uttering then that well remem- bered saying, to wit, that if he would not listen to Pericles, he would yet do full well to wait for that wisest of all counsellors, Time. This saying brought him only moderate repute at the time; but a few days afterwards, when word was brought that Tol- inides himself was dead after defeat in battle near Coroneia,! and thet many brave citizens were dead likewise, then it brought Pericles great repute as well as goodwill, for that he was a man of discretion and patriotism. ee

XIX. Of all his expeditions, that to the Cherso-__ nesus? was held in most loving remembrance, since it proved the salvation of the Hellenes who dwelt there. Not only did he bring thither a thousand Athenian colonists and stock the cities anew with vigorous manhood, but he also belted the neck of the isthmus with defensive bulwarks from sea to sea, and so intercepted the incursions of the Dhracians who swarmed about the Chersonesus, and shut dut the perpetual and grievous war in which the country was all the time involved, in close touch as it was with neighbouring communities of Barbarians, and full to overflowing of robber bands whose haunts were on or

1 447 B.c. 2 447 B.C.
Y
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

id

opopwv Kal auvoixwy: éGavpaabn 5é Kal &e-4
Bonn mpos tovs éxtdos avOpwrous mepiTAEVoas

Iledorovvnoov, éx Inyav tis Meyapixfs ava-

Geis ExaTov Tpinpecty. ov yap povoy émopOnae

aA , , ¢ a) , id
THS Taparias modAnv, ws Torpidns mporepor,
> X ‘ , ; \ “ ? x
adda Kai TOoppw OaratTns mpoehOav Tots atro
T@V VE@Y OTAITALS TOUS eV aAXOUS Eis TA TEL
4 , > ce) \ ww > \
guvéotetre Seicavtas avtod thy Epodov, év &é Nepéa Lixvwviovs broatavtas Kal avvayavtas payny KATA KpaToS TpEYrdpeEvos EaTHTE TpOTaLoD.
3 3 3 fh 4 od ’ > A éx 6 “Ayaias dirns ovons otpatiotas avadaBov as Tas Tpiypes emi THY ayTiTépas HrEtpov 3 , “ , \ 7 XN ?
exopicOn Ta oTOAM, Kal TapaTrEevoas Tov Aye-
A@oy “Axapvaviav Katédpaye, Kal Karéxrecev Oivmadas eis TO Tetyos, Kal Tep@v THY yhv Kal
a“ \
Kakwoas atrhpev em’ olxov, poBepos perv davets
A , b \ \ \ , “a
Tots TroAEmlows, aahardns Se Kai Spactyptos tots TodiTais. ovdey yap ovd’ ano tUYNS WpoaKpovapa cuvéBn Tept TOUS oTPATEVOpMEVOUS.
XX. Eis 6€ rov Ilovrov eomrevcas otdrA@
peydrw Kal Kexoopnpévm AauTpas Tails pev ‘EAAnviot troAcow wv éd€ovto dtempatato xai Fd “~ “~~
mpoonvexyOn dirtavOpwrws, tots dé Teptotxovart
BapBdpos éOveot nai Bactrhedow aizav kal
Suvactais éredeiEato péev THs Suvapews TO pe-\ N 10 l \ Q , ? ,
yeOos Kai THY adetav Kal TO Odpaos 4 BovdoWwTO
A e 3 A ‘
TrEOVTWY Kal Tacay Up auUTois TETOLnMEVwY THY Odraccapv, Xwortretdat 6€ Tpicxaidexa vads arré-\ f N , > N ¢
AuTe peta Aapa,ov Kal otpatiwtas eri Tipnai-

within its borders. But he was admired and cele- brated even amongst foreigners for his circumnavigation of the Peloponnesus,! when he put to sea from Pegae in the Megarid with a hundred triremes. He not only ravaged a great strip of seashore, as Tolmides had done before him, but also advanced far into the interior with the hoplites from his ships, and drove all his enemies inside their walls in terror at his approach, excepting only the Sicyonians, who made a stand against him in Nemea, and_ joined battle with him; these he routed by main force and set up a trophy for his victory. ‘Then from Achaia, which was friendly to him, he took soldiers on board his triremes, and proceeded with his armament to the opposite mainland, where he sailed up the Acheloiis, overran Acarnania, shut up the people of Oeniadae behind their walls, and after ravaging and devastating their territory, went off homewards, having shown himself formidable to his enemies, but a safe and efficient leader for his fellow-citizens. For nothing untoward befell, even as result of chance, those who took part in the expedition.

XX. He also sailed into the Euxine Sea? with a large and splendidly equipped armament. There he effected what the Greek cities desired, and dealt with them humanely, while to the neighbouring nations of Barbarians with their kings and dynasts he displayed the magnitude of his forces and the fearless courage with which they sailed whithersoever they pleased and brought the whole sea under their own control. He also left with the banished Sinop- ians thirteen ships of war and soldiers under command of Lamachus to aid them against Timesi-

} 453 BO. 2 Probably about 436 B.c.
y
61
2

Aewy TUParvoy. é€xTrecovTos b& TOUVTOU Kal TOV
, “a / 4
éraipay éeyndicato waAciv eis Luvwrny *AOnvaiwr
.Y “ “
eOcXovras éEaxociovs Kal ovyKatotxeiy XwwTevat,
s velm“apevous oiKias Kal ywpav ijy TpoTEpov ot TUpavvoL KATELYOV.
@ > a e “ n
Tarra & ov auveywpet tais oppais ta@v Tondt-
TOV, OvdE GuvEeEeTITMTED UTE PwUNS Kal TYYNS
TocauTnsS €Tatponéevwy AiyuTTou Te TaALW avTe-AapBaverOat cal xiveiv THs Bacirtéws dpyns Ta
e mwpos Bardaon. Wodrrovs Ce Kat XiKedias oO

Svcepws exetros 76) Kat SvatoTmos Epws Eyer, a ef 9 s e % ‘ >] , Ov voTtepov e€éxavoay of wept Tov "AAKiBtadnv
e 7 % be \ T / \ ba pytopes. av b€ kat Tuppnvia cai Kapyndav 9 # Ld +] b > 3 , \ \ , “ évtois avetpos ovK amr é€Amidos bta TO péeyeBos THs
\ A UITOKELMEVNS rYyENOVias KaL THY EvUpolav TaY
T PAYLATOV.
ead > 3 e “A wn
XXI. 'AXN o Tleptarrs xatetye thy éexdpopny
TAUTNVY KAL TEPLEKOTTE THY TOhUTIPAYLOaVYND, \ \ “ ~ é ” > A
Kal Ta TAELoTA TS buvdpews ETpEeTrEV ELs HUAAKIY
, A
kat BeBatotnta Tov vTapyovTwy, péya Epyov wyovpercs avelpyzsy Aaxedatpovovs Kai drs
e A b , e ww an
UTPEVAVTLOUHEVOS EKELVOLS, WS AAXAOLS TE TOAXOLS
wv \ / “ 4 \ e \ nA
ederEe Kal pariaTa Tos TEept TOY Lepov mpayGeict
4 v4
qwoAe“ov. etme yap ot Aaxedaipoviot otparev-3 \ s 9 , A e \
cavtes eis Aedghovs Dwxéwy éeyovtwv TO tepov
a , f Acrdois arédwxay, evOus exetvay aTaddayevT@v 62

leos. When the tyrant and his adherents had been driven from the city, Pericles got a bill passed providing that six hundred volunteers of the Athenians should sail to Sinope and settle down there with the Sinopians, dividing up among themselves the houses and lands which the tyrant and his followers had formerly occupied.

But in other matters he did not accede to the vain impulses of the citizens, nor was he swept along with the tide wien they were eager, from a sense of their great power ant goaRortime, to lay hands again upon Egypt and molest the realms of the King which lay along the sea. Many also were possessed already with that inordinate and inauspicious passion for Sicily which was afterwards kindled into flame by such orators as Alcibiades. And some there were who actually dreamed of Tuscany and Carthage, and that not without a measure of hope, in view of the magnitude of their present supremacy and the full-flowing tide of success in their undertakings.

XXI. But Pericles was ever trying to restrain this extravagance of theirs, to lop off their expansive meddlesomeness, and to divert the greatest part of their forces to the guarding and securing of what they had already won. He considered it a great achievement to hold the Lacedaemonians in check, and set himself in opposition to these in every way, as he showed, above all other things, by what he did in the Sacred War.) The Lacedaemonians made an expedition to Delphi while the Phocians had possession of the sanctuary there, and restored it to the Delphians ; but no so ner had the Lacedaemo-

2 About 448 B.c.

a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

e A ? / '4 3 , A
o IlepexrAns emistpatevoas madd etonyaye TOUS Pwxéas. Kkal tov Aaxedatnoviov hy &dwxav avtois Aeddol ampopavreiay eis TO pétwrrop éykoNauvtTwy Tod yadKod AvVKOV, AaBwv Kal autos Tpopavteiav tois "AOnvaiots eis TOV aUvTov NUKo Kata THY dSeEtav revpav eveyapakev.
XXII. "Ore & 6p0as ev tH "ENXAGSe Thy S¥vapev
tov "AOnvaimy avveixyev, éuaptupnoev avT@ Ta yevopeva. Tpatov pev yap EvBoeis améatnaar, > 93 a , \ A > 3 bd ' >
ed' ods bé8y peta Suvdpews. elt' evOds arny-A a b] , 4 a
yeArovto Meyapets exmreTroNepwpevotr Kal OTpAaTL Tmodepiowv él tois Spots THs "AtTiKHs ovoa, TIXevotw@vaxtos youpévov, Bactréws Aaxedatpoviov. mary ow o Ilepixrns Kata tayos ékx
A +] 4, >] , \ \ 9 a 9 ~
THs EvBotas avexopifero wpos Tov ev TH ATTLKT TONEMOV: Kal cuVdrpar pev eis Yetpas ovK eOap-
"~ 4 9 "~ ¢ s
onae Tonos Kal ayabois omditats mpoKanov-
, e " Q \ / , Ww
pévots, opov & rav Ideotwvaxta véov avta

Kooy, Xpwpevoy b€ parrota Krcavdpidyn tav cupBovrwv, dv of Efpopo duvrAaxa Kal mapedpov avT@ Sa tHv HjrAKiav cuvéTweprav, éTEtpato toutov xpuda: xal tayv SiapOeipas ypnuacw avroy émecev ex THS "ATTLKIS aTayayew Tous TeXorrovvnctous.
‘Ns & aweywopnoen 4 otpatia Kal SvedvOn kata
e \ mores, Bapéws dépovtes ot Aaxedatpovioe Tov
pev Baciréa xpijpacw enpiwoay, oy To WAGs 64

PERICLES

nians departed than Pericles made a counter expedition and reinstated the Phocians. And whereas the Lacedaemonians had had the “ promanteia,” or right of consulting the oracle in behalf of others also, which the Delphians had bestowed upon them, carved upon the forehead of the bronze wolf in the sanctuary, he secured from the Phocians this high privilege for the Athenians, and had it chiselled along the right side of the same wolf.

XXII. That he was right in seeking to confine the power of the Athenians within lesser Greece, was amply proved by what came to passy To begin with, the Euboeans revolted,! and he crossed over to the island with a hostile force. Then straightway word was brought to him that the Megarians had gone over to the eneiny, and that an army of the enemy was on the confines of Attica under the leadership of Pleistoanax, the king of the Lacedaemonians. Accordingly, Pericles brought his forces back with speed from Euboea for the war in Attica. He did not venture to join battle with hoplites who were so many, so brave, and so eager for battle, but seeing that Pleistoanax was a very young man, and that out of all his advisers he set most store by Cleandridas, whom the ephors had sent along with him, by reason of his youth, to be a guardian and an assistant to him, he secretly made trial of this man’s integrity, speedily corrupted him with bribes, and persuaded him to lead the Peloponnesians back out of Attica. :

When the army had withdrawn and had been disbanded to their several cities, the Lacedaemonians, in indignation, laid a heavy fine upon their king,

1 446 B.C.
65
VOL. III. F

PLULTARCH'S LIVES

ovK yop éxticar petéatycev cavtov ex Naxedat-povos, TOU dé Krcavdpidou pevyovTos Gavatoy Ka-Téyvwaav. avTtos & hv waztnp Vudinmov Tov mept Sixeriav "AOnvaiovs cataTorepijaavtos. éoixe O aomEep suyyevixov avtT@ Tpootpivacbat voonpa \ 4 e cd e > @ \ > NX 3 "a THv pirapyupiav 7 hvals, uP 1)$ KAL AVTOS ALAXPOS éml xarois Epyous adous éFérene HS Lrap7ys.
TavTa pev ovv év trois wept Avadvépou dednrw-KG [eDv.
XXII. Tot & Teptxréous ev tO tHS oTpaTnylas amodoyiopo céxa TadradvTwy davddwpa ypawyavros avy\wpévwv ets To Séov, oO Sipos bd lA A A ' 4 ' amebéEato 7) ToAUTIPaypLovnaas pnd éd€yEas TO dmoppntov. évot 8 iortopyxacw, wy €ote Kai Ocodpactos o dirocogos, ott Kal' Exaorovr ,

' ' 3 ' N e bd / dé 4
éviautoy eis THY Xrraptyy éepoiza béxa TadXavTa
mapa tov Ilepixdéous, ols tous év Tédet TravTas GepaTedwv TAPNTELTO TOY TOAELOY, OV THY ELpHYNV @VvoUpEevos, ANAG TOY Ypovoy, év @ TapacKkevacayo ¢ 4 v 4 f
pevos Kal' aJovxiav Eperrde Toreunoerw BEXTLOD.
avOis) obv él tors adecta@tas Tpamopevos Kab diaBas eis EvBotay wevtiKxovta vavot Kal wevta-
, e f , '
KigXtAioLS OTALTAIS KaTETTpEWaTO TAS TONECS.
Q r 4 \ LY e ul s kal Nadxtdéwy pev tous immoBotas eyouevous
e ral
trout xal Son d:adépovtas é€éBarev, Eotueis 6€ Tavtas avactiaas éx THS Ywpas 'AOnvaious
f c KATOWKIOE, MOVOLS TOUVTOLS aTapalTHTwWS Ypnoa-
ef a ' \ ? 4 4

pevos Otte vady ’AtTiKny aixudrwtov ANaBorTes amTéXTELVAY TOUS avopas.
1 giéis Fuhr and Llass, after Sauppe: ev6us (at once).

the full amount of which he was unable to pay, and so’ betook himself out of Lacedaemon, while Cleandridas, who had gone into voluntary exile, was condemned to death. He was the father of that Gylippus who overcame the Athenians in Sicily. And nature seems to have imparted covetousness to the son, as it were a congenital disease, owing to which he too, after noble achievements, was caught in base practices and banished from Sparta in disgrace. This story, however, I have told at length in my life of Lysander.!

XXIII. When Pericles, in rendering his accounts for this campaign, recorded an expenditure of ten talents as “for sundry needs,” the people approved it without officious meddling and without even in- vestigating the mystery. But some writers, among whom is Theophrastus the philosopher, have stated that every year ten talents found their way to Sparta from Pericles, and that with these he conciliated all the officials there, and so staved off the war, not purchasing peace, but time, in which he could make preparations at his Icisure and then carry on war all the better. However that may be, he again turned his attention to the rebels, and after crossing to Euboea with fifty ships of war and five thousand hoplites, he subdued the cities there. Those of the Chalcidians who were styled Hippobotae, or Knights, and who were preéminent for wealth and reputation, he banished their city, and all the Hestiaeans he removed from the country and settled Athenians in their places, treating them, and them only, thus inexorably, because they had taken an Attic ship |

captive and slain its crew.

1 Chapters xvi. f.

XXIV. ?Ex tovtovu yevopévwr atrovdav "AOnvat-
,
os Kal Aaxedatpoviots eis ETN Tpidxovta Whdite-Tat Tov €i¢ Lapov TAODY, aAiTiav ToLnodpevos
? 9 “a e ‘ \ ; f ,
KaT avT@v OTL Tov TpOs Mudnotovs KedXevopeEvot Stadvcacbat 1odEpoy OvY UT1)KoVOY.

’Eaet & “Acacia yapiCopevos Soxet mpakat Ta
= , a Xap Cop P
> “ A w A
mTpos Xapious, évtavba av ein xatpos Starropicat padtota Tept THs dvOpwrov, Tiva Téeyynv 1
? a a \
SuvapLLy TOCAUTHY EXOVTA THY TE TOALTLK@Y TOUS
mMpwrevovTas évetpwaato Kai Tois pirocopors ov “A bi wed 3 / e \ e a A ¢ havdAov ovd oOXrtLyoY UTEP aUTHS TapésyXe Noyov.
, b OTe pev yap hv Midnaia yévos, A€toyou Buyarnp, ft “A \ ? 3 ‘ 4 \ wn oporoyettar’ dact & avtnv Oapynday tia TeV maratov ladwyv (yrwoacav ér:Oéc0at tots Suva-
- > / \ \ € 4 , b
TwTaTOLN avopaot. Kat yap 7 Oapyndla To T eloos evirpeTTs yevouern Kal ydpty Eyovca peta
t , \ em r f
SevvoTntos mAetoTo pev EXAnvwy cuvwKnoev
, “ / a
avdpact, wavtas 5é€ mpocetoince Bactret ToUs TArAnoticavTas avTHn, Kal Tais TéAEos pndiopod
bv éxeivwy brréotretpev apyas SuvaTtwTatwv ovtTwy Kai peyiotwov. tiv 8 “Aoractay oi pev as copiy
Tiva Kal ToXcTEKHY UO TOU IlepixX€ous oTrovoa-
A é \ \ + f v ad
cOjnvat Néyovor’ Kat yap Lwxpatns Eotiv Gre
peTa TOY yvwpipwr éepoita, Kal Tas yuvaiKxas axpoatopevas oi cuviPers iyov ws) avTHY, Kat-
“a , Tep OU Koopuiov mpoeaT@oayv Eepyacias ovdé
ra \
cepvns, dra watdioxas ETalpovaas Tpépoveav
2 ©s Fuhr and Blass, with FaS: eis.
68

PERICLES

XXIV. Afterthis—when peace had been made for thirty years between the Athenians and the Lacedaemonians, he got a decree passed for™ his expedition to Samos,! alleging against its people that, though they were ordered to break off their war against the Milesians, they were not complying.

Now, since it is thought that he proceeded thus against the Samians to gratify Aspasia, this may be a fitting place to raise the query what great art or power this woman had, that she managed as she pleased the foremost men of the state, and afforded the philosophers occasion to discuss her in exalted terms and at great length. That she was a Milesian by birth, daughter of one Axiochus, is generally agreed; and they say that it was in emulation of Thargelia, an Ionian woman of ancient times, that she made her onslaughts upon the most influential men. This Thargelia came to be a great beauty and was endowed with grace of manners as well as clever wits. Inasmuch as she lived on terms of intimacy with numberless Greeks, and attached all her consorts to the king of Persia, she stealthily sowed the seeds of Persian sympathy in the cities of Greece by means of these lovers of hers, who were men of the greatest power and influence. And so Aspasia, as some say, was held in high favour by Pericles because of her rare political wisdom. Socrates sometimes caine to see her with his disciples, and his intimate friends brought their wives to her to hear her discourse, although she presided over a business that was any- thing but honest or even reputable, since she kept a house of young courtesans. And Aeschines* says

1 440 B.c.
2 Aeschines the Socratic, in a dialogue entitled ‘‘Aspasia,” not extant.
by,
PLUTARCH’S LIVES

4 Ataoytvns b€ onee Kat Avotkréa Tov mpoBatoxa-mov €& wyevvovs Kat TaTevov THY dvaoww ‘AGn-vatov yevéo Oat rpatov, Aoracia cuvovta peta
THY Tlepixr€ovs TENEUT IV. | év bé TO MeveEéve
To IlAXatwvos, é Kal pera madias: Ta ™poTa
YEYPATTAL, Toa obTOv y ioTopias ever TL, TL
do€av eixe To yuvatov éml pytopix TOANOLS
5 ‘AOnvatov opereiy, paiverat peVTOL padrov €pwrens) TLS 17) TOD [lepexdeous dyaT nats yevouern ™pos ‘Agmaciay. VY MeV Yap AUTO yuvy 7 poo - jKouaa. pev Kara ryevos, TUVOKIKVIG. S ‘Inmovirw ™ pOTEpov, ef ou Kaaniav érexe TOY TAOVCLOY™
Erexe dé Kal mapa TO lepixret RavOinmov Kat Idparov, eita THs oupBiocens ovkK avons aUTOLS apPETT HS, exetynyy pev ETEPO Bovdopevny ovve§- édwxev, aVTOS O€ THY ‘Aoraciav AaBov eotepte 6 SeapepovTws. Kat yap efron, Os pact, Kal Eloy an ayopas natateto Kal’ Huépay avtTny peta TOD KATAPLNELY.
"Ev 6€ Tais Kopepoiats ‘Opgary te véa cat Ani-dveupa Kal wart * ‘Hoa T poo ayopeveTat, Kpativos 8 aUTEEp YS TAAAAKY AUTIY ElpNnKEV ev TOUTOLS*
"Hpav té of "Aorwaciapy tixtes Kataruyoourn TadAaKiyy KUvwTrLoa.
~ \ \ \ , ? , aA \

doxet 6€ kal Tov voloy €x TavTns TEKVOCAL, TrEpL
5 id aid b] 4 > ‘ N fod ov wetroinkev Evrodis év Arows avTov pev ovTWS EPWTOVTA'
¢ , / “a O vobos dé pot Sn;
\ \ ‘ ‘ ’ ,
Tov d€ Mupwridny atroxpivopevov’
Kat wadar y av Hv avnp, el jt) TO THS TOprns UTwppwder KAaKOV.
70

PERICLES

that Lysicles the sheep-dealer, a man of low birth and nature, cate to be the first man at Athens by living with Aspasia after the death of Pericles. And in the “ Menexenus ” of Plato, even though the first part of it be written in a sportive vein, there is, at any rate, thus imueh of fact, that the woman had the reputation of associating with many Athenians as a teaeher of rhetoric. However, the affection which Pericles had for Aspasia seems to have been rather of an amatory sort. For his own wife was near of kin to hin, and had been wedded first to Hipponicus, to whom she bore Callias, surnamed the Rick; she bore also, as the wife of Pericles, Xanthippus and Paralus. Afterwards, since their married life was not agreeable, he legally bestowed her upon another man, with her own consent, and himself took Aspasia, and loved her exceedingly. Twice a day, as they say, on going out and on coming in from the market-place, he would salute her with a loving kiss.

But in the comedies she is styled now the New Omphale, new Deianeira, and now Hera. Cratinus !
flatly called her a prostitute in these lines :-—
““As his Hera, Aspasia was born, the child of Unnatural Lust,

A prostitute past shaming.”
And it appears also that he begat from her that bastard son about whoin Eupolis, in-dns-Demes,: represented him as inquiring with these words :-— «And my bastard, doth he live?”
to which Myroniides replies :— “Yea, and long had been a man,
Had he not feared the misehief of his harlot-birth.”’ *
1 In his ‘‘ Cheirons ’ (sce chapter iii. 3).
2 Kock, op. cat. i. p. 282. 71
7

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

x \
Oita & tv ‘Acraciav ovopactny Kat KNEwWnY / / ov A a .
yeveaOat Néyouow wate Kat Kupov Tov Todepn-cavta Baotrel epi THs TeV Ilepcay Hyepovias Thy ayaTw@perny UT’ avToU padioTa TOY TAad-Aaxidwv ‘Acrractay dvopdaat, KaXoupéevny MirAT@
, 2 be cp ‘ ‘\ / La a) ?
mpotepov. av o€ Pwxats To yevos, Hppotipou Ouyatnp: év O€ TH maxyn Kupov TETOVTOS aTaxOcica tpos Baoiréa meiarov t ioxuce. TAUTA wey émedBavra TH pvnen KaTa THY ypapny anTedca-cOat Kai TraperOely icws avavOpwrov jv.
XXV. Tov 6é pos Napuious wodepov aitiovtTat padiora Tov Ilepixréa Wndicacba da Mtan-gious “Aotacias Senbeians. ai yap monets errovéuouv tov mept Ipijvns modewov, Kat Kpa-roovres of Xdtptor, wavcacbar tav ’AOnvaiwv
, \ s a Q A ¥

xerevovTwy Kal dixas AaBeivy Kat Sovvat map

> nw 3 q , ia e ¢e lol

avTots, ovx eweiOovto. mrevaoas ovv o Llepexrijs “4
Tip pev ovcav ortyapyiay €v Ladpw Katédvoer,

“~ , e tev S& mpwtwy AaRwY opajpous TevT)}KovTa Kal matoas iaous ets Ajjuvov GATETTELNE. KQLTOL daciv éxacTov pev avT@ TOV opipwv didovat
TaNAVTOV uTep avtod, ToAAG 8 GAXa Tods pn Oéxovtas év tH wore yevécOat Snpoxpatiar.
” \ 7 e / ” x \
ere 5€ Hltccovdvns o Tlépons éxwv tiva mpos Sapious ebvoray améatethev avT@ puplous xpvgous, Tapattoupevos THY TOA. oU pHYv Eafe
, 3 \ e “~ 3 \ td
TovTrwy ovdev o Ilepixdrys, adda yxpnoapevos
@oTEp EyVWKEL TOIS Lapiors Kal KATAOTICAS Snuoxpatiay arémrevoev eis Tas AOrvas. of & 72

So renowned and celebrated did Aspasia become, they say, that even Cyrus, the one who went to war with the Great King for the sovereignty of the Per- sians, gave the name of Aspasia to that one of his concubines whom he loved best, who before was called Milto. She was a Phocaean by birth, daugh- ter of one Hermotimus, and, after Cyrus had fallen in battle, was carried captive to the King,! and ac- quired the greatest influence with him. These things coming to my recollection as | write, it were perhaps unnatural to reject and pass them by.

XXV. But to return to the war against the Sa:

mians, they accuse Pericles of getting the decree for this passed at “thé re request_of Aspasia and in_the special behalf of the Milestans. were waging their war for thé possession of Prieng, and the Samians were getting the better of it, and when the Athenians ordered them to stop the contest and submit the case to arbitration at Athens, they would not obey. So Pericles set sail and broke up the oligarchical government which Samos had, and then took fifty of the foremost men of the state, with as many of their children, as hostages, and sent them off to Lemnos. And yet they say that every one of these hostages offered him a talent on his own account, and that the opponents of de- mocracy in the city offered him many talents besides. And still further, Pissouthnes, the Persian satrap, who had much good-will towards the Samians, sent him ten thousand gold staters and interceded for the city. However, Pericles took none of these bribes, but treated the Samians just as he had determined, | set up a demecracy and sailed back to Athens. Then/

1 Cf. Xenophon, Anabasis, i. 10, 2.

to

evdus améatnaay, exKkrXEWavtos avTOIS TOUS d41)- pous IItacovOvov Kai tadAXa TapacKevacaytos mWpos Tov Tordepov. avOrs odv o llepirAts eEerrevaev € autovs ovy nouvxdbovtas ovdé Katemrn-xotas, dAAa Kal mdvu mpobvpws éeyvwxoras avtthapSavecbar tis Gardttys. yevouevns Se KapTepas vavpayias mepl vijcov jy Tparyias
KaXdoval, AauTpes o LlepexrAts evixa, Teaoapat
Kat Teccapakovta vavow éBdopnKxovta Katavav-HAXTas, OY ElKoct oTpatiwribes noay.
XXAVI, “Apa 5é TH vikn Kal TH Suber TOU ALEVOS KPATHOAS ETOALOPKEL TOS Lapious, apas yé Tos ETL TOAMOVTAS éreELevat Kal drapayeaOat

m™po Tov Tetyous. érel b€ petfwy Erepos oTddOS mrOev ex tav’AOnvav xai tavtedos KaTEKXel-cOnaav ot Xapuot, AaBwv o Wepexrijs éEEnxovta Tpiypers EmAEVTEY Ets TOV EEW TWOVTOY, WS MeV OL
mreicTor A€youct, Powwicaa@y veov émixovpwv Tots Lapiots mpordepopevwy atravtioat Kai d1a-- yovicacbat Toppwratw Bovropevos, ws S€ YrncipBpotos, emt Kumpov oredAopevos: omep ov Soxet miOavov eivat. omrotépm 8 ovdv éxpncato TOV NOYLT LOY, apapteiy Edoke. TAEVTAaVTOS yap auTov Médoaos o Aga yevous: avnp Piroa opos TTpATH YOY TOTE TIS Sapov, Kkatappovicas Tis OALYOTHTOS TOV VvEMY 7) THS aTeipias Tay oTpaTynyav, Ewece TOvS TOAITAaS émiMéabat Tots
3 , \ ? f ,
AOnvaios. Kat yevomerns payns vixnoayTes
e ‘ “ bad ,
ot Sapiol, KAL TOAACUS EV AUTOY avépas éXoOVTES, 74

the Samians at once revolted, after Pissouthnes had stolen away their hostages from Lemnos for them, and in other ways equipped them for the war. Once more, therefore, Pericles set sail against them. They were not victims of sloth, nor yet of abject terror,

but full of exceeding zeal in their determination to contest the supremacy of the sea. In a fierce sea- |
fight which came off near an island called Tragia, | 3
Pericles won a brilliant victory, with four and forty NZ ships outfighting seventy, twenty of which were infantry transports.

XXVI. Close on the heels of his victorious pur- suit came his seizure of the harbour, and then he laid formal siege to the Samians, who, somehow or other, still had the daring to sally forth and fight with him before their walls. But soon a second and a larger armament came from Athens, and the Samians were completely beleaguered and shut in. Then Pericles took sixty triremes and sailed out into the main sea, as most authorities say, because he wished to meet a fleet of Phoenician ships which was coming to the aid of the Samians, and fight it at as great a distance from Samos as possible ; but accord- ing to Stesimbrotus, because he had designs on Cyprus, which seems incredible. But in any case, whichever design he cherished, he seems to have made a mistake. For no sooner had he sailed off than Melissus, the son of Ithagenes, a philosopher who was then acting as general at Samos, despising either the small number of ships that were left, or the inexperience of the generals in charge of them, persuaded his fellow-citizens to make an attack upon the Athenians. In the battle that ensued the Samians were victorious, taking many of their enemy

Ly

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Twoddas 6€ vais diapGeipartes, éyp@vTo TH
@adacaon Kat tapetifevto Tav dvayKaiwy mpos TOV TOAELOV boa p47) TPOTEpOV Elyov. Ud dé TOD
Medtocou nai Ilepexrda dynoiv avtov 'Aptoto-TEANS NTTNO AVAL vaupLAayodVTa TPOTEpOV.
Ot 5€ Xcpioe tods aiyparwtous Tav'AOnvaiwv avOuBpivovres Extifov eis TO péTwrov yAavKas:
kat yap exetvous ot 'A@nvaion capawvav. 7 8é
odpawa vads é€oTiy voTpwpos péev TO ciuwpa, xotAotépa b€ Kal yaoTpoeidys, OTE Kal TOVTOTTOpetv! Kai TaxuvauTeiv. ovtw & wvopadbn da 76
mpa@tov ev Sduw pavivat, LloXucpdtovs Tupavvov KaTagKevdoavtTos. Tpos Tav'Ta Ta atiypata Neyovot Kal To Apictodpdveioy nriyOar:
y , e Sh , b) ° A LAULWY O ONLOS EGTLY WS TWOAVY; UL MATOS.
XXVII. Wu@dpevos & obv o Wepexras tiv eri atpatoTésov cupdopav é€Bonfer Kata Taxos.
kat tov Medtcoov mpos adtov avtitat~apévou Kpatynaas Kal Tpevrduevos TOUS ToXEpLous EvOUS
mepieTeryile, datrdvn Kai Ypovm padrov 7 Tpavpace Kal xuvdvvois TOV TOoALT@Y TeEpiyevéecBat Kal auverety Ty mort PBovdopevos. érel 5é ducyepaivovtas TH TtptBH Tovs 'AOnvaious kai padyecOat mpoOupoupévous Epyov iv Katacyeiv, OKTm@ peppy dtekwv TO TaV TAOS aTrexANpou, Kal
T® NaBovtt Tov AEUKOY KYapov EiwxetcOat Kal
1 xovromopeiv MSS. and Blass: gopropopeiy (a conjecture of Coraés, to carry freight).
76

PERICLES

captive, and destroying many of their ships, so that they commanded the sea and laid in large store of such necessaries for the war as they did not have before. And Aristotle says that Pericles was himself also defeated by Melissus in the sea-fight which preceded this.

The Samians retaliated upon the Athenians by branding their prisoners in the forehead with owls ; for the Athenians had once branded some of them with the samaena. Now the samaena is a ship of war with a boar’s head design for prow and ram, but more capacious than usual and paunchlike, so that it is a good deep-sea traveller and a swift sailer too. It got this name because it made its first appearance in Samos, where Polycrates the tyrant had some built. To these brand-marks, they say, the verse of Aristophanes ! made riddling reference :-—

‘ For oh! how lettered is the folk of the Samians!”’

XXVII. Be that true or not, when Pericles learned of the disaster which had befallen his fleet, he came speedily to its aid. And though Melissus arrayed his forces against him, he conquered and routed the enemy and at once walled their city in, preferring to get the upper hand and capture it at the price of money and time, rather than of the wounds and deadly perils of his fellow-citizens. And since it was a hard task for him to restrain the Athenians in their im- patience of delay and eagerness to fight, he separated his whole force into eight divisions, had them draw lots, and allowed the division which got the white bean to feast and take their ease, while the others

1 From his Babylonians, not extant. Kock, op. cit. i. p. 408.

oxXokuley TapetXe TOV AAAwY paXopeveny. 610
Kal gace Tous ev evrradetats Tiai yevopevous
Neva HDY HEpav éxelvynv aT%0 TOU AEUKOU KUapOU
T poo ayopeverv.
3 “Edopos bé Kal Enxavais xpncacbar TOV ITeptxrea, THY KAWOTNTA _Savpacarta, "Apteé-woVvOs TOU pnxXavicou TapovTos, ov KOrOv OvTa Kal popeip mpos Ta KaTemelyovTa TOV Eprycov ™ poo kop Copevov o ovopacd ijvat TEptpopytov. TOUT) pev oup ‘Hpaxretons O Hovtexos eheyxet Tols ‘AvaxpEeovTos Toupaciw, ev ols oO aepipopnTos ‘Aprépov ovopatercu TONAALS eum poo bev mructats
TOU Tept Ldpov Torkéuou Kal Tov TpaypwaTov
4 éxelvov: Top é ‘Aprépovd dyat Tpuepov TWA
T® Biw xal ™ pos TOUS poSous paraxov ovTa Kat KaTaT\ya Ta TONKA peev olor xabelec Oar,
Karki donida Tis Keparijs avtoo dvety oixeTov UmEpEXOVTE@V, @oTe pndev epTrec ely TOV avoer, EL bé BracBein 7 poehOeiv, ev KALWLOL@ KpepaoT@ mapa THY yh avTHY TE pLpEpopevov “‘Kopitec Oa, Kat dta TOUTO KANOHVaL TeptpopyTov.
XXVIII. ’Evate b€ pnvi trav Lapiwy wapa-

OTAVTWY O Tlepexdijs ra TeLyn KaGeire Kal Tas
vans mapedraBe Kal Xpypact Todos eSnpicocer, OV Ta pev evd us ela ijveyKay * ot Zapuot, Ta & ev Xpove pute TAEUpEVOL KaToLoel Ounpovs EdwKay.
Aoupts 8 0 Dapios TOUTOLS emit parywoet TOANHY
OMOTNTA TOV "AOnvatov Kal Tou Tlepixdéous KaTNYyopav, iy ouTE Oouxvdidns ioTropyKer our
2 “Eopos our’ ‘A plo TOTEANS: aAr’ ovd arnbevew EOLKEV, WS Apa TOUS TpLNpapyYoUSs Kal ToUS emI-) elojveyxay Fuhrand Blass, with 4S: freyxav.

78

PERICLES

did the fighting. And this is the reason, as they say, why those who have had a gay and festive lime eall it a “ white day,’—from the white bean.
Ephorus says that Pericles actually erployed siege-engincs, in his adniiration of their novelty, and that Artemon the engineer was with him there, who, since he was lame, and so had to be brought on a stretcher to the works which demanded his instant attention, was dubbed Periphoretus. Heracleides Ponticus, however, refutes this story out of the poems of Anacreon, in which Artemon Periphoretus is mentioncd many gencrations before the Samian War and its events. And he says that Artemon was very luxurious in his life, as well as weak and _ panic-stricken in the presence of his fears, and therefore for the most part sat still at home, while two servants held a bronze shield over his head to keep anything from falling down upon it. Whenever he was forced to go abroad, he had himself earried in a little hammock which was berne along just above thie surface of the ground. On this account he was called Periphoretus.

XXVIII. After eight months the Samians surren- \ dered, and Pericles tore down their walls, took away their ships of war, and laid a heavy fine upon them, part of which they paid at once, and part they agreed to pay at a fixed time, giving hostages therefor. To these details Duris the Samian adds stuff for tragedy, accusing the Athenians and Pericles of great brutality, which is recorded neither by Thucydides, nor Ephorus, nor Aristotle. But he appears not to speak the truth when he says, forsooth, that Pericles had the Samian trierarchs and marines brought into

79

, “ Ny , >? \ , bp] \
Batas tTav Lapiwy eis THY Midynoiwy dyopar
Katayaywv! nat aaviot mpocdncas éf’ uépas déxa Karas On Staxetmévovs tpocétakev aveneiv,
f \ \ f 2
EvAos tas Keparas avyKxovavtas, eita mpoBa-a b , 4 s ~ \ S bt >]
Nety axyndevta Ta cwpata. Aovpis pev ovv ovd
Cd \ J oA 4 wv , ’ \
OTrov undev avtT@® Tpocedtiy idtov Taos ciwhws
a \ , b] a“ 3 4 al
Kpateiy Thy Oinynuty él THs ad nOelas, wadXov Goxey evtavdéa Senveocar tas THS TaTpidos oup-ghopas emt dia Born tav ‘AOnvaiwv.
e “A

O 6€ Tlepixrrs natactpeapevos thy Napov
e 9 “A ’ \ bf , , a ws emavnrdOev eis tas AOnvas, tapds te Tov atolavovtwy Kata Tov TOdEMOY evdokous éroina€ Kal Tov AoOyov EiTa@V, BaTTEP EBoS éaTiv, emt TAY
onuatwv CavpactwOn. xataB8aivovta § avtov
? ‘ a f e \ wv a“ 9 lal
amo Tov Brpatos at pev aAdXrat yuvaixes edeErovvro Kal oTepavols avédovy Kai Tawviats Bamep aOdn-Ty vixndopov, 7 & °EAmwixn mpocedOovaa mwrAyjciov: “Tait,” &bn, “ Oavpucta, MWepixrers, \ , A eon N , 3 ‘
Kat afta atehuvey, 05 piv moAXovs Kal uyabous
? , , ? ap) f t “ OE
aTwrEecas TWoAtTas ov PoiviEt Trodkeu~@y avee M7ydos, womep ovpos adeddos Kivwv, adra
nw ’
TUppayov Kal ouyyevi) TOA KaTaaTpEPopEVos.”
“A a 3 , + e “a
tavta HS “EAmivixns Aeyonons o Tlepexrrs pecdidaas aTpéua ReyeTat TO Tod "ApytrAoxou Tpos auiny eiwetv
Ov« av pvpoict ypavs €ova’ nrEideo.
Oavpaotov d€ tt Kal péya dpovicat Katato-
, N vv 4 . ‘ b] . ev @
AenNoavTa TovVs Lapiovs dyow avtovo lwy, ws

1 xatayayey Fuhr and Blass, with F8S : ayaydy,
So

the market-place of Miletus and crucified there, and that then, when they had already suffered grievously for ten days, he gave orders to break their heads in with clubs and make an end of them, and then cast ‘their bodies forth without burial rites. Atall events, since it is not the wont of Duris, even in cases where he has no private and personal interest, to hold his narrative down to the fundamental truth, it is all the more likely that here, in this instance, he has given a dreadful portrayal of the calamities of his country, that he might calumniate the Athenians.

When Pericles, after his subjection of Samos, had returned to Athens, he gave honourable burial to those who had fallen in the war, and for the oration which he made, according to the custom, over_their_ tombs he son the greatest admiration. But as he came down from the bema, while the rest of the women clasped his hand and fastened wreaths and fillets on his head, as though he were some victorious athlete, Elpinice drew nigh and _ said: “ This is admirable in thee, Pericles, and deserving of wreaths, in that thou hast lost us many brave citizens, not in a war with Phoenicians or Medes, like my brother Cimon, but in the subversion of an allied and kindred city.’ On Elpinice’s saying this, Pericles, with a quiet smile, it is said, quoted to her the verse of Archilochus :-— “Thou hadst not else, in spite of years, perfumed thyself.” + fon says that he had the most astonishingly great thoughts of himself for having subjected the 1 That is, ‘‘thou art too old to meddle in affairs.” Cf. chapter x. 5.
SI
VOL. III. G
wo

A \ b , ¥ / ,
tov pev “Ayapéuvovos étect Séxa BdpBapoy
, a A ,

ToAw, avtov S€ pnolv évvéa Tovs TpwToUs Kal

Suvatwtutous lwvwy €XOvTOS. Kal ot1K HY AdLKOS
4) a&lwots, GAN bvtws TOAAHY adnroTHTA Kal péeyav éoxe xivduvov 0 TrodELOS, El7rEp, WS Bovervsidns dyoi, wap’ éXaxraTov AGE Lapiov 7
a A
mods adberécba. tis OaratTys TO KpaTos
"A @nvatous.
XXIX. Mera tadta xvpaivovtos dn Tov TleXorovynotaxot ToXéuov, Kepxupators trode uoupévors wTd Kopiw6iwv érece Tov Sijov atrootetAa. BonGeiav xat mpocraBeiv éppwpévynv vauTicn Suvaper vijcov, ws dgov ovdérw IleXo/ b] id ‘ b) oA TOVVNTLOV EKTTETONELWLEVWY TPOS AUTOUS. Whgt-
, \ la , A / > ,
capévov S€ Tod dnpov tiv Bonfeay atécrenre
Séxa vais povas éyovta Aaxedaipoucy, Tov Kipwvos viov, oicy épv8pifwrv todd yap hy w ‘ , a we w A eivota Kai diria Te Kipwvos oixw mpos Aaxe-Saiovious. os av ovv, ae pndev Epyov 4 b bs! el “a peya pnd exmpenes €v TH aotpatnyia Tov Aaxedatpoviov yévorro, mpocd:aBAnOetn pardov
els TOV AakwriaLGY, OALyas ALT@ vads Edwxe Kal pn =Bovropevoy é€étreprpe. Kal drAws dceTére KOAOVeY WS pNOE TOS GVOpace yYnolovs, adr’ oOveious Kal E€vous, 6Tt TOY Kipwvos viev TO pev vy Aaxedatpovios dvopa, T® b€ Oeccards, TO bE
-H a awed oe / ’ Q 9
Aelos. edoxouy b€ raves €x yuvatKos 'Aprabe-KS yeryovevat.
82

Samians; whereas Agamemnon was al] of ten years in taking a barbarian city, he had im nine months time reduced the foremost and most powerful people of Ionia. And indeed his estimate of himself was not unjust, nay, the war actually brought with it much uncertainty and great peril, if indeed, as Thucydides says,! the city of Samos came within a very little of stripping from Athens her power on the sea.

~ XXIX. After this, when the billows of the Pelo- ponnesian War were already rising and swelling, he persuaded the people to send aid and succour to the Corcyraeans 2 in their war with the Corinthians, and so to attach to themselves an island with a vigorous naval power at a time when the Peloponnesians were as good as actually at war with them. But when the \ people had voted to send the aid and succour, he — despatched Lacedaemonius, the son of Cimon, with , only ten ships, as it were in mockery of him. Now/ there was much good-will and friendship on the part of the house of Cimon towards the Lacedaemonians. In order, therefore, that in case no great or con- spicuous achievement should be performed under the generalship of Lacedaemonius, he might so be all the more caluminated for his laconism, or sympathy with Sparta, Pericles gave him only a few ships, and sent him forth against his will. And in general he was prone to thwart and check the sons of Cimon, on the plea that not even in their names were they genuinely native, but rather aliens and strangers, since one of them bore the name of Lacedaemonius, another that of Thessalus, and a third that of Eleius. And they were all held to be the sons of a woman of Arcadia.*

1 viii. 76, 4. 2 433 B.c. 3 Cf. Cimon, xvi. 1.

Kaxas obv o Tlepixdrs dxovwy 62a tas béxa

TAaVTAS Tplnpets, wS pixpav pev BorMeay Tots

“A 4 \ s ” ? “
denOetot, peyadrnv S€ rpohacw Tots éyxaXodat Tapesynkws, ETEepas avOis Eateie aWrEtovas Eis tHv Képxupav, at peta thy paxyny adixovto.
Xarevatvovar Cé tots KopirOicis xat xatn-

aA a % yopovot Tav ‘“AOnvaiwy ev Aaxedaipov mpoce-
nw , “
yévovto Meyapets, aitiwpevor Taans pev ayopas, mavtTwy de Awevwv, wv ‘AOnvaiot Kpatovowr, ¥ X b / \ \
elpyecOat Kat atmeAauvecbat Tapa Ta Kowa
¢ A nw
Sixaca Kal Tovs yeyernpevous GpKovs Tois
"EdXAnow: Alyevytat 6€ kaxova0at Soxodbvtes Kal
Biata Tacyew érotui@vtTo Kpuda mpos Tovs Aaxedatpovious, havep@s éykareivy tois ’AOn-f b) le) b] \ a \ , vaiots ov Oappovrtes. év S€ tovtw Kat Tlotidaa, mors vanxoos AOnvaiwy, atoatxos 6€ KopivOiwr, atTooTaca «al ToNlopKovpLévyn LaddOv eTrETAYUVE

TOV TOAELOD.
Ov piv addd\a mpecBemv te TeuTOmevwy
"AOnvale, nat tod Bactrtéws tov Aaxedatpoviwr
"Apyiddpou Ta ToAAa TOY eyKAnLaTMY Es
4 of,
dtarvaes ayorrTos Kal TOvS cTuppayous Tpavvor-TOS, OUK GV COKEL GUUTEGELY UTO YE TOV adAWY
> nw € / an ts % X 4

aitt@v o ToAEpos Tots ‘AOnvaitots, et TO Yrijdiopa
wn ,
xaGerety tO Meyaptxov éreccOncay Kai diad-

Aayivat mpos avtouvs. O10 Kal padiota pos al w : , , tovto llepixAts evavtiwbets, xal wapoEuvas Tov 84

PERICLES

Accordingly, being harshly criticised because of \ these paltry ten ships, on the ground that he had furnished scanty aid and succour to the needy friends of Athens, but a great pretext for war to her accusing enemies, he afterwards sent out other ships, and more of them, to Corcyra,—the ones |
which got there after the battle.t
The Caxinthjans were incensed at this procedure, and denounced the Athenians at Sparta, and were joined by the Megarians, who brought their complaint that from every market-pJace and from all the harbours over which the Athenians had control, they were excluded and driven away, contrary to the common law and the formal oaths of the Greeks ;
the Aeginetans also, deeming themselves wronged and outraged, kept up a secret wailing in the ears of the Lacedaemonians, since they had not the courage to accuse the Athenians openly. At this juncture Potidaea, too, a city that was subject to Athens, although a colony of Corinth, revolted, and the siege laid to her hastened on the war all the more.
/Notwithstanding all, since embassies were repeat- edly sent to Athens, and since Archidamus, the king of the Lacedaemonians, tried to bring to a peaceful settlemeat most of the accusations of his allies and to soften their anger, it does not seem probable that the war would have come upon the Athenians for any remaining reasons, if only they \ could have been persuaded to rescind their decree | against the Megarians and be reconciled with them. | And therefore, since it was Pericles who was most of all opposed to this, and who incited the people t

1 Cf. Thucydides, i. 50, 5.

Ojjmov enpelvar TH Tos tous} Meyapeis tdo-VELKLA, MOVOS EXXE TOU TONE LOU THY ALTLADY.
XXX. Aéyouas dé mpecBeias 'AOwwate mept tovrwy é€x Aaxedaipovos adiypévns, Kai Tov Ilepixdéous vopov Tuva mpoBarropévov KwdvovTa Kaberely TO TIVaKLoY ev @ TO Wipiopa yey pa p-pevov eT UY XAVEY, cireiy Wodvdd xn TOV m peo Bewv tivas Xv 6é p43) Kaberns, anna oTpeyrov elow 70 TiVAKLOV* OU yap Este vopos 0 TOUTO KwAvaD." xoprrou dé Tov Noryou pavevTos ovdey TE paddov) Tlepuxdijs EVEOMKED. UT iy HEV OUY TLS, WS EOLKED, avT® Kal idia mpos ToUs Meyapeis amex Gera Keown 5é kal darepav Trova d pEvOs aitiay Kat
avtay atotéuvecOat THY tepay opyaba, ypadber Widiopa xijpuvea renpOjvar mpos avtovs Kat
mpos Makedaipoviovs Tov auTov KaTyyopouvTa TOV Meyapewv. TovTO psy ov To Wihdicpa
[lepixrX€ous €otiv €EUryYV@o MOVs Kal diravOpwrov Sixaoroyias eX opevor" erret O 0 TreppOeis KApvE
"AvOepoxpitos aitia TeV Meyapéwv atroBaveiy edo€ke, ypager Vrigeo pa KAT QUTOY Xapivos, domrovoov pev elvat Kal axnpuxtov &xOpay, ds & dv émiBh tis "Artinns Meyapéwy Gavat@ SnpuovaBar, tous 6é€ oTpATHYOUS, OTav ouviwot TOV ™aTpLOV opKoy, érroppuery Ott Kat dis ava wav Eros els THY Meyapexny éuBarovor tapfva §
'"AvOewoxpitov mapa tas Optacias «rvAas, at voy Aivurov ovopafovtat.
1 wpds vous Fuhr and Blass, with FaS: mpds.

abide by their eontention with the Megarians, he alone was held responsible for the war./
XXX. They say that when an embassy had come from Laeedaemon to Athens to treat of these matters, and Pericles was shielding himself behind the plea that a eertain law prevented his taking down the tablet on whieh the deeree was inscribed, Polyalces, one of the ambassadors, cried : "‘ Well then, don’t take it down, but turn the tablet to the wall ; surely there’s no law preventing that." Clever as the proposal was, however, not one whit the more did Pericles give in. He must have secretly cherished, then, as it seems, some private grudge against the Megarians ; but by way of public and open charge he aecused them of appropriating to their own profane uses_the sacred territory of Eleusis, and proposed a decree that a herald be sent to them, the same to go also to the Lacedaemonians with a denunciation of the Megarians. This decree, at any rate, is the work of Pericles, and aims at a reasonable and humane justification of his course. But after the herald who was sent, Anthemocritus, had been put to death through the agency of the Megarians, as it was believed, Charinus proposed a deerec against them, to the effect that there be irrecon- eilable and implacable enmity on the part of Athens towards them, and that whosoever of the Megarians should set foot on the soil of Attiea be punished with death; and that the generals, whenever they should take their ancestral oath of office, add to their oath this clause, that they would invade the Megarid twice during each succeeding vear; and that Anthemocritus be buried honourably at the Thriasian gates, which are now called the Dipylum.

87

4

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

Meyapeis 5¢ tov AvOepoxpitov hovoy atapvov-

\ > 7 bd > Ld \ ,

pevor tas aitias eis “Aoctaciayv Kal [leprxdea

Tpémoval, xpwpevor Tots meptBontos Kal 6nuodseat TovTas éx Tov Ayapvéwy ortyidiots: Tlopyny dé Xtpaibay iovtes Meyapade veaviat KrNemTouace peOvaoKoTTaBou’
*#y e a b f , Kad’ oi Meyapeis odvvais mepvoryywpevoe avreEéxrerav “Aatracias tropvas dvo.
XXXI. Ti pév ody apynyv ows Eecyev ov 169

e “A ~ Col 3
passov yv@vat, Tod b€ py AVOHvaL TO Whdicpa TAVTES WTAUTWS THY altiay émipepovat T@ Ilepe-

a ‘ ¢ \ ] f , \
KNel. ANY ol pev Ex PpovnuaTos peyaXdou peTa yreuns Kata To PBéATIGTOY aTiacxvpicacbai dacw avtor, Teipay évOocews TO TpoTTAypa Kal Tv cuyx@pnow éEoporoynow acbeveias ryov-pevov oi bé parrov avOadeia Tivi Kal Piroverxia X Ww > , A
mpos évdektv iaxvos tmepippovncar Aaxedatpovioy.
¢ be , ‘\ > Ff a 4 \
H 6€ yepiotn pév aitia tracwy, Exyovca 6é
4 iA ef / /
TrELaTOUS papTUpAs, OUTW TwS A€yeTal. Decdias
e i“ 9 4 ‘ @ a bf ?
o wAdaoTns epyoAdBos pev hv Tod ayddpaTos, oe v \ a“ a f
@omep elpntat, piros é TO Ilepixret yevouevos
Kal péeytotov map atvt@ duvyfeis rovs pev bv
¢ \ 4 3 \ 4 e \ ~
auvtov éayev exOpors POovovpevos, ot Sé Tov SHuov Trowovpevot qetpav e€v exeiv@, Totos TIS w a al , S / “~
éecotto T@ Ilepixret' xpitns, Mevwva twa tav
1 rg MepikAet Fuhr and Blass, with FaS : Mepiwaei.
8&
PERICLES

But the Megarians denied the murder of Anthe- mocritus, and threw the blame for Athenian hate on Aspasia and Pericles, appealing to those far-famed and hackneycd versicles of the “ Acharnians "’ :—

« Simaetha, harlot, one of Megara’s womankind, Was stolen by gilded youths more drunk than otherwise ;
And so the Megarians, pangs of wrath all reeking hot,
Paid back the theft and raped of Aspasia’s harlots two.” !

XXXI. AV ell, then, whatever the original ground for enacting the decree,—and it is no easy matter to determine this,—the fact that it was not rescinded all men alike lay to the charge of Pericles. Only, some say that he persisted in his refusal in a lofty spirit and with a clear perception of the best interests of the city, regarding the injunction laid upon it as a test of its submissiveness, and _ its compliance as a confession of weakness; while others hold that it was rather with a sort of arrogance and love of strife, as well as for the display of his power, that he scornfully defied the Lacedaemonians.

But the worst charge of all, and yet the oné’which has the most vouchers, runs something like this.

Pheidias the sculptor was contractor for the great statue, as I have said, and being admitted to the friendship of Pericles, and acquiring the greatest influence with him, made some enemies through the jealousy which he excited; others also made use of him to test the people and see what sort of a judge it would be in a case where Pericles was involved.

1 Verses 524 fff.

Pediov cuvepyav weioavtes ikétny év ayopa xkabilovoty, aitovmevov aderav emi pnvioer kal xatnyopia Tov Pediov. mpoadeEapévou bé tod Siyov tov avOpwrov Kai yevoperns év éxxrnola SimEews, KAOTTaL pev ovK r)dEYYOVTO: TO yap ypuciov ovtws evOus &€& apyfis TO ayadpate Tpoceipydcato Kat TrepteOnxev 0 Pedias yroun tov Ilepuxréovs wote wav duvatov eivar Tepi- edovow atrobetEar Tov ctaOuov, 6 Kal TOTE TOUS KaTnyopous éxéXevoe Troveiy o epixrgs.
'H é€ b0€a trav Epywv ériefe POdve tov Pediav, Kat partic ote tHv pos 'Apalovas payny év TH adomlide Tow avTod Tiva poppny évetuTMoe TpecBuTov padraxpov Tétpov émrnp- pevov be apdotépwv Tav yerpav, Kal tod Iepr- KA€ous eixora TayKadny évéOnKke paxopuévou pos "Apafova. to 6€ cya THs yELpos, avaTewovons Sopu mpo Tis Oyrews Tod Ilepixréovs, memoin- pévov evpnyadves olov émixpiTTey BovreTar THY OuoleTnta Tapadatvopevnv Exatépwbev.
'O pev otv Dedias eis tO Seopwrnpiovy ama- Geis ETEXEUTNTE vooraas, ws 5€ dhacw enor, dappaxos, émt dsaBorn tov IlepixrXéous tev éyOpav wapacxevacavtoy. To Oé unvuTH Méverr ypawavtos LTAvKwvos atéXciar o Sipos edwxe, Kat tpocetake Tois otTpatiyois émiperctabar Tis aoparelas Tov avOpwrrov.

These latter persuaded one Menon, an assistant ot Pheidias, to take a suppliant's scat in the market- place and demand immunity from punishment in case he should bring information and accusation against Pheidias. The people accepted the man's proposal, and formal prosecution of Pheidias was made in the asseinbly. Embezzlement, indecd, was not proven, for the gold of the statue, from the very start, had been so wrought upon and cast about it by Pheidias, at the wise suggestion of Pericles, that 1t could all be taken off and weighed,! and this is what Pericles actually ordered the accusers of Pheidias to do at this time.

But the reputation of his works nevertheless brought a burden of jealous hatred upon Pheidias, and especially the fact that when he wrought the battle of the Amazons on the shield of the goddess, he carved out a figure that suggested himself as a bald old man lifting on high a stone with both hands, and also inserted a very fine likeness of Pericles fighting with an Amazon. And the attitude of the hand, which holds out a spear in front of the face of Pericles, is cunningly contrived as it were with a desire to conceal the resemblance, which is, however, plain to be seen from either side.

Pheidias, accordingly, was led away to prison, and died there of sickness; but some say of poison which the enemies of Pericles provided, that they might bring calumny upon him. And to Menon the informer, on motion of Glycon, the people gave immunity from taxation, and enjoined upon the generals to make provision for the man’s safety.

1 Cf, Thucydides, ii. 13, 5.

to

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXII. Ilept 6€ todtov tov ypovov "Acrracia ot wv b , em , n
ixny épevyev aceBetas, ‘Eppimimou tov cwpwoo-Totov SOtwKxovTosS Kal WpooxaTynyopovvTos ws Tlepuxret yuvaixas édevbépas eis TO avto hottwgas UmTobéyotto. Kal Wydicpa AroretOns &ypa-> Ul \ \ “ \ /
ev eiaayyédrNeoGat Tous Ta Oeia pn vouifortas
f “ } XOyous wept Tov petapciwy diddcxortas,
? f >] 4 > ? é \
atreperOopevos eis Ilepixréa d¢ “Avakayopov rny uTovotay. Seyopuevou 5€ Tod dynpov Kal mpoate-/ X s ee v , a pévov tas b:aBoXds, ottws On Whdiocpa Kupov-zat, Apaxovtidov ypawyavtos, 67ws of AOYOL TAY

ypnpatwy wo Ilepixdréous eis tovs Iputavers
5] ~ e \ \ ‘ n 3 \ n
amroTeetev, of 5€ Stxactal tTHy Whdov amo Tov
a ra , 4
Bwpod dépovtes ev TH odet Kpivoteyv. “Ayvor bé
“A na ,
ToUTO pev adeire Tov Whdicpatos, KpiverOar bé
THy Sixny éypavev év Stxactais yrios Kal TevTaKogiots, eite KAOTTHS Kal Swpwy elt’ ddexiov
w: , 3 , \ ,
BovrorT0 Tes Ovopad lew Thy Siwkev.
A
"Aonaciay pev otv é&ntycatTo, TOoANa Travu \ \ , e 3 / , b \ ig \
mapa tHv dixny, os Atayivns pyatv, adels virép aitns Saxpuva xa Senbeis tov dixactov ‘Avata-
(a f yopay 6€ PaSnbeis eFémeuev €x Tis Toews.
e \ ‘ , A a ,
as 6€ &:a Decdlov mpocéntaice TO Orjpw, PoBy-Geis to StxactyHpiov péXAoVTA Tov TOdELOV Kal e , Igo / , 4
vroTupopevoy éekéexaucer, edTrifwv Stacxedacerv Ta éyKA}paTa Kal TaTewocev tov POovov ev
ro ,
mpdyuact peyddo Kal Kivdvvois TiS TOAEWS
3 , U \ X 3 , \ ‘ , exelLv@ poVve@ oud TO ebvopa Kab THY Svvapuy
avabeions éavTyny. ai pev odv aitias dt as ovK 92

17(

PERICLES

XXXII. About this time also Aspasia was put on trial for impiety, Hermippus the comic pcet being her prosecutor, who alleged further against her that she received free-born women into a place of assign- ation for Pericles. And Diopeithes brought in a bill providing for the public impeachment of such as did not believe in gods, or who taught doctrines regard- ing the heavens, directing suspicion against Pericles by means of Anaxagoras. The people accepted with delight these slanders, and so, while they were in this mood, a bill was passed, on motion of Dracontides, that Pericles should deposit his accounts of public moneys with the prytanes, and that the jurors should decide upon his case with ballots which had lain upon the altar of the goddess on the acropolis. But Hagnon amended this clause of the bill with the motion that the case be tried before fifteen hundred jurors in the ordinary way, whether one wanted to call it a prosecution for embezzlement and bribery, or malversation.

(Well, then, Aspasia he begged off, by shedding copious tears at the trial, as Aeschines says, and by entreating the jurors; and he feared for Anax- agoras so much that he sent him away from the city. And since in the case of Pheidias he had come into collision with the people, he feared a jury in his own case, and so kindled into flame the threatening and smouldering war, hoping thereby to dissipate the charges made against him and allay the people's jealousy, inasmuch as when great under- takings were on foot, and great perils threatened, the city entrusted herself to him and to him alone, by reason of his worth and power, Such, then, are the reasons which are alleged for his not suffering

"J

clacev évdovvat Aaxedatpoviows tov dSipov, avrat NEévyorTat, TOS adrnOes adnrov.
XXXIII. Oi dé ANaxedarporior 'yev@da KovTEs @s éxetvou Katadvbcvtos eis qavTa paraKwrépots Xpicovrat tois 'AGnvaioss, éx€ evov avuTovs TO aryos éXavvey TO Kudovecor,! @ TO pntpobev yévos TOU Tleptxdéous évoxor WV, @S Oovevdisys iatopnxev." " be meipa TEPLETTH Tols Trépyacw
els TOUVAYTLOV" avTt yap Urrowias kat draBorijs
0 Tlepuxrijs ETL pet Cova TloTW EXE Kal TEV
Tapa Tois TohiTars, OS padiora ploouvToy Kal poBoupever éxeivov TOV TONE LLOOD. 610 Kal mplv euBareiv eis THY ATTLKHY TOV 'Apxidapor € exovTa TOUS lledorrorvyaiovs T PUElTre Tous 'AOnvators, ay dpa Tanda dn@r Oo "Apxibapos dméxnrar TOV éxeivou Sia tTHv Eeviay tHv ovoav avtois, h da-Boris Tots éxOpots evordous. adoppds, bre Ti moder kal Thy ydpav Kal ras émavres emedt-dwour,
"EpBdadrdrovew obv ets thy 'AtTTiKNnY oTpaT@ peyare Aaxedatpoviot pera, TOV TULMEX OY,
"Apxeddpov TOU Baairéws 7, Hyyoupéevov. Kal dnobv-Tes THY Ywpav Tm pon rOov els 'AXapvas Kat KateotpatoTésevoayv, ws Ttav 'AOnraiwy ovK aveEopévwv, GAN vr' opyiis Kal Ppovrjparos Stapaxoupever T pos avTous. TO 5é Llepexret Seevov épaivero MPOS TOUS é£axic pupious Ileho-movvnaiwy Kat Botwrav omditas (TocovToL yap 1 2vaatvew 7d KuAdverovy Fuhr and Blass, with BCFas:

dAatvey @.
2 fordpyxev Fuhr and Blass, with BCES: efpynxer.

the people to yield to the Lacedaemonians ; but the truth about it is not clear.
XXXIII. The Lacedaemonians, perceiving that if he were deposed they would find the Athenians more pliant in their hands, ordered them to drive out the Cylonian pollution,! in which the family of Pericles on his mother's side was involved, as Thucydides states.2 But the attempt brought a result the opposite of what its makers designed, for in place of suspicion and slander, Pericles won even greater confidence and honour among the citizens than before, because they saw that their enemies hated and feared him above all other men. There- fore also, before Archidamus invaded Attica with the Peloponnesians, Pericles made public proclama- tion to the Athenians, that in case Archidamus, while ravaging everything else, should spare his estates, either out of regard for the friendly tie that existed between them, or with an eye to affording his enemies grounds for sjander, he would make over to the city his lands and the homesteads thereon.

Accordiugly, the Lacedaemonians and their allies invaded Attica with a great host under the leader- ship of Archidamus the king. And they advanced, ravaging the country as they went, as far as Acharnae, where they encamped, supposing that the Athenians would not tolerate it, but would fight with them out of angry pride. (Pericles, however, looked upon it as a terrible thing to join battle with sixty thousand Peloponnesian and Boeotian hoplites

1 That is, members of the Alemaeonid family, which was involved in the stain of bloodguiltiness when the archon Megacles, about 636 B.c., sacrilegiously slew the followers of Cylon. See Plutarch, Solon, xii. 1-3; Thucydides, i. 126.

£1,127, 4.

Hoav ol TO TP@ToV éuSanrovres) UTrEp auTns THS Todkews payyy cuvdyat Tous bé Bovdopévous
paxeo bar Kal va rafowvtas ™ pos Ta yevopeva KaTempaure, Néyov as dévdpa pev tunBévta Kai
KoTrévta puerar TAXEDS, avdpav 6¢ Sap Bapévrav
5 avbis TUXELY ov padcov €ott. Tov d€ S7pov els exe natav ou ouvijye dedtas Brac hvat Tapa youn, ann' GoTep VEWS xuBepyyrns avésLov KATLOVTOS év TEAGYEL Dépevos ev TavTa Kal Kara telvas Ta Oma ypira TH TEXYD, Saxpuva Kai Sexjoers emtBatav VAUTLOVTOY Kal poBovpévay édoas, oUTWS exelvos, TO TE AoTU cuyKreaas Kal

KatarkaBwv mavta pudaxais mpos aopanrevay, expire tots auvTou Aoyio pois, Spaxeéa ppovtilov 6 TOV cataBowytav Kal dua xepawovTwr. Kaitou
ToAAol pev aitov Tav dirwy Seopevot mmpoce-KELWTO, TOAAOL Oe TOY eyOpwY aTretdouVTES Kal KaTnyopoovTes, xopol' & 7d0v acpata Kat TK pL pata 7 pos ais xurny, éfuBpitovres avtob THY oTpatyyiay as avav6pov kal Tmpolenevny Ta Tpayuata Tots monepiors. emep vero dé Kat
Kr\éov 78n, bua TIS T pos éxetvov opyiis TOV
7 wo\uTe@y TOpeVopLEvos emt THY Snpayoyiar, Qs TavaTaiata TadTa Snot ToincavTos 'Eppuittou:
Bacirev caTUpor, TL WOT OUK ederets
Copy Baorale, GXXA NOYouS pev Wept TOU TONEMOU deLvous Tmapexets," wuyx7 5é Tédntos vrectw; *
pkore Fuhr and Blass, with FS; wool.
2 wapexeis Fuhr, with S: wapexn.
3 duxh . . . Sreorw Fuhr and Blass, after Emperius :
Wuxhv... sa tomni

(those who made the first invasion were as numerous as that), and stake the city itself upon the issue. So he tried to calm down those who were eager to fight, and who were in distress at what the enemy was doing, by saying that trees, though cut and lopped, grew quickly, but if men were destroyed it was not easy to get them again. And he would not call the people together into an assembly, fearing that he would be constrained against his better judgement, but, like the helmsman of a ship, who, when a stormy wind swoops down upon it in the open sea, makes all fast, takes in sail, and exercises his skill, disregarding the tears and entreaties of the sea-sick and timorous passengers, so he shut the city up tight, put all parts of it under safe garrison, and exercised his own judgement, little heeding the brawlers and malcontents. And yet many of his friends beset him with entreatics, and many of his enemies with threats and denunciations, and choruses sang songs of scurrilous mockery, railing at his generalship for its cowardice, and its abandonment of everything to the enemy. Cleon, too, was already harassing him, taking advantage of the wrath with which the citizens regarded him to make his own way toward the leadership of the people, as these anapaestic verses of Hermippus! show :—

“Thou king of the Satyrs, why pray wilt thou not Take the spear for thy weapon, and stop the dire talk
With the which, until now, thou conductest the war,
While the soul of a Teles is in thee?

1 From his ‘‘ Moirai,” or Fates. Kock, Com, Att. Frag., i. pp. 236 f.

eayyerptdiou o dxovntakdypa Trapabnyopuéevns Bpvyets xomidos,* bnyGeis alOwv Kr€Ewre.

XXXIV. IDAnv tr’ otdevos éxtvyOn tev ToLov-tov 6 IlepexdjHs, GAXa Tpadws Kal oLtwHrH THY adokiay kal THy aTéx Peay UptoTtapevos, Kal vedv éxatov emt tay LeXorovvnaov otodXov exTréuTrOv avTos ou ouvetérAevcev, AX Epetvey olKoupav cal dua xElpos Exwv THY TWOALY, EWS aTNAXAYNTAY of IleXorrovvyctot. Oeparrevwv S€ Tovs mrodXOUS Opus doxddXovtas eri TH TOAEUM, Stavopais TE Xpnudtwv averduBave Kat KAnpovyxias eypadev: Aiyeviras yap é&eXdcas amavtas Scévetye THY vicov “AOnvaiwy ois RAayovow. Hv O€ TIS Tmapyyopia Kal ad wv éracyov ci modemtot. Kal yap ol mepurreovtes THY IleXoTOvInaov ywpav TE TOAAIY K@pas Te Kal TONES puKpas SveTropOn-gav, Kat Kata yi aitos éuBadrov els THY Meyapixny pape wacav. % Kal dhrov Hv Ore rogiie ucv Spavtes cata yi xaxa® tous 'A@- vaioUs, TodAa S€ MaaxovTes Um’ exetvwv éx OaddtTns, OK av Els pKIS TONE“OU TOTOUTOY mpousnaav, adda TaYews aTetTop, wamep €& apxis oO Tepixdtjs mponyopevoer, €t pay Te datpoviov UTnvavTtwOn Tots avOpwririvols oyiapoLs.
Nov 88 rporov pév 1) Aotpwodns evérece POopa
kal KateveuyjOn Tip axpafoveay ArIKiay Kal Sivayu: id Hs Kat Ta GOpaTa KaKovpevot Kal

1 xeyxeiptilov . . . xowlSos Coraés’ restoration of these corrupt verses, adopted by Fuhr.

2 xara yyy xaxd Fuhr and Blass, with F*5: «and,
98

=I

PERICLES

If the tiniest knife is but laid on the stone
To give it an edge, thou gnashest thy teeth,
As if bitten by fiery Cleon."
XXXIV. However, Pericles was moved by no such things, but gently and silently underwent the ignominy and the hatred, and, sending out an armament of a hundred ships against the Peloponnesus, did not himself sail with it, but remained behind, keeping the eity under watch and ward and well in hand, until the Peloponnesians withdrew. Then, by way of soothing the multitude, who, in spite of their enemies' departure, were distressed over the war, he won their favour by distributions of moneys and proposed allotments of conquered lands; the Aeginetans, for instance, he drove out entirely, and parcelled out their island among the Athenians by lot. And some consolation was to be had from what their enemies suffered. For the expedition around the Peloponnesus ravaged much territory and sacked villages and small cities, while Pericles himself, by land, invaded the Megarid and razed it all. Wherein also it was evident that though their enemies did the Athenians much harm by land, they suffered mueh too at their hands by sea, and therefore would not have protracted the war to such a length, but would have speedily given up, just as Pericles prophesied in the beginning, had not a_ terrible visitation from heaven thwarted human ealeulations.
As it was, in the first place, a_ pestilentia! destruction fell upon them! and devoured clean the prime of their youth and power. It weakened 1 4308.0. Cf. Thucydides, ii. 47--54.

4 4 n 2 a,

\ \ , +] , ‘\ ‘\
Tas Yuxas wavtaracw nyptwOncay mpos Tov Mepixréa, nal Kabarep tatpov 1) Tatépa TH voow mapadpovincavtes adtKely érrexeipnoav, avaTretaBivtes vd TOV exOpav ws THY pév VOTO 7) TOU “ ‘ 4 yupitixod mwAjOous els TO aaty cupdopnots
3 f 1 Ge ef A @ “ 7
amepyaterat,' Gepovs wpa modX@Y opou xveny
éy olkypace pixpois Kal oxnv@pact Tveynpots nvayKacpevwv SrartacOat Siattav oixovpoy Kal apyny avtt xa0apas Kal davarertapévns Tis mpotepov, tovTov & aitios 6 Tw WodEUM TOV
,
GTO THS YMOpas GxYAOY Els Ta TELYN KaTAXEd-pevos Kat mpos ovdey avOparTrots ToToUTOLS Xpwpevos, GAN éov watrep Bookypata Kadetpypevous dvatipmracba. dOcpas am’ addAnrAwr, Kal pN-
/ ‘ 9 b A 9 /
Sepiav petaBornv pnd avauyny éxtropilov.
XXXV. Tadra Bovrcpevos idcbat Kat Tt Tapa-AUTrELY TOUS ToAELOUS, EXaTOV Kal TreVTNKOVTA
“a b , \ \ ‘ bd) \ e / vais émdrjpou, Kal moAXous Kat ayabous omAtTas
4 i 4 4 > ‘ 5d ’ Ud
Kal imméas avaBuBacdpevos épedrev avayer Oat, peyaanv érmida Tots ToniTass Kal PoBov ovK édar-TW TOLS TOAELLOLS ATO TOTAUTNS LaXVOS Tapacyov.
dn Sé wemTAnpwpevar Tav vewv Kai Tov Ilept-
/ 9 / 9 ‘ ¢ a , \
Kr€ovs avaBeBnKoros éml tHv éEavtcd Tpinpyn TOY \ ef b nw“ 4 A tA ‘ pev prLov éexArttrety auvéBy Kai yevéaBat oKoTOs, exr7Aaynvar S€ TavTAaS WS pos méya onpetor.
¢ nA @ ¢ A a \ tf
épav obvo Ilepixrts mepipoBov tov cuBepyynrny
? a
nai Scnmropnpévov, avéoxe THY YAapvda TPd TOV
l awepyacerat Fuhr and Blass, with FS : épyd(era:.
100
¥
|!
PERICLES

them in body and in spirit, and made them altogether wild against Pericles, so that, for all the world as the mad will attack a physician or a father, so they, in the delirium of the plague, attempted to do him harm, persuaded thereto by his enemies. These urged that the plague was caused by the crowding of the rustic multitudes together into the city, where, in the summer season, many were huddled together in small dwellings and stifling barracks, and compelled to lead a stay-at-home and inactive life, instead of being in the pure and open air of heaven as they were wont. They said that Pericles was responsible for this, who, because of the war, had poured the rabble from the country into the walled city, and then gave that mass of men no employment whatever, but suffered them, thus penned up like cattle, to fill one another full of corruption, and provided them no change or respite.

m XXXYV. Desiring to heal these evils, and at the same time to inflict some annoyance upon the enemy, he manned_a hundred and fifty ships of war, and, after embarking many brave hoplites and horsemen, was on the point of putting out to sea, affording great hope to the citizens, and no less fear to the enemy in consequence of so great a force. But when the ships were already manned, and Pericles had gone aboard his own trireme, it chanced that the sun was eclipsed and darkness came on, and all were thoroughly frightened, looking upon it as a great portent. Accordingly, seeing that his stecrsman was timorous and utterly perplexed, Pericles held up his cloak before the Io] dew! auTov, Kal TapaKxaduYas 7pwTNGE yn TE decvov 7) Secvod tives oletat onpetiovy ws 8 ovK épn, ‘Ti obv,” elmev, “éxeivo tovtov dsadpéper, TAY OTL peiCoy TL THS XAaLVOOS oT TO TrETTOLN-KOS THY €mliaKoTnoW;” TavTa pev ovv év Tais axonais AéyeTar Tav dirocdgdwv.

"ExmrAevaas & ovvo Tlepixdijs ov7’ Addo Te Soxet

THS TapacKevns akiov Spadcat, TwodtopKiaas TE THY lepav ‘EmriSavpov éanioa Tapacxovoay os doo open ameéTuxe dea THY voor. emuyevopevn yap ovK auTovs povoy, AAA Kal TOUS OTWCODY TH
oTpaTia ouppitavtas mpocdiepOerpev. ex TovTou yareTras Siaxetpévous tous A@nvatovs mpos avrov émelpato Tapnyopely Kal avafappuvery. ov unr mapéAuce THY Opyny ovde peTETELTE TPOTEPOY 4) Tas wWwndous AaBovtas én’ adtov eis TAS Yelpas Kal ryevojievous Kupious adedéo Oat THY oTpaTiylay Kat tnptdcat Xpypaciv, oy apiOpov ot Tov éAaytoTOV mevrexaioexa TdAdavta, TevtnKovta 8 of Tov qaAetaTtov ypapovatv. émeypady bé TH dixn KaTn-yopos, ws pev ‘TSopuevets Aéyet, Kréwv, ws 8 @codpactos, Lippias: o Sé Uovtexos ‘Hpakretdns Aaxpatiséap elpnte.
XXXVI. Ta pév obv Snpocia taykws Ewerre mavoecOat,? KaOamep Kévtpov es TovTov apa TAnyH Tov Oupov adexotwy Tav Toray Ta & oixeta moxOnpas eiyev avT@ KaTd TE TOV NoLMLOY
1 ray GYewy Fuhr and Blass, with F8S: rijs dWews.

2 ratceoOa: Fuhr and Blass, with FS, and after Reiske: wave Gal.

man’s eyes, and, thus covering them, asked him if he thought it anything dreadful, or portentous of anything dreadful. “No,” said the steersman. “How then,” said Pericles, “is yonder event different from this, except that it is something rather larger than my cloak which has caused the obscurity?” At any rate, this tale is told in the schools of philosophy.

Well, then, on sailing forth, Pericles seems to have accomplished nothing worthy of his preparations, but atter laying siege to sacred Epidaurus, which awakened a hope that it might be captured he had no such good fortune, because of the plague. Its fierce onset destroyed not only the Athenians themselves, but also those who, in any manner soever, had dealings with their ‘forces. The Athenians being exasperated against him on this account, he tried to appease and encourage them. He did not, however, succeed in allaying their wrath, nor yet in changing their purposes, before they got their hostile ballots into their hands, became masters of his fate, stripped him of his command, and punished him with a fine.) The amount of this was fifteen talents, according to those who give the lowest, and fifty, according to those who give the highest figures. The public prosecutor mentioned in the records of the case was Cleon, as Idomeneus says, but according to Theophrastus it was Simmias, and Heracleides Ponticus mentions Lacratides.

XXXVI. So much, then, for his public troubles ; they were likely soon to cease, now that the multi- tude had stung him, as it were, and left their passion with their sting ; but his domestic affairs were in a

ovK OALyous amoBaXovtTt TtaV emutndeiwy Kal oTAEL Statetapaypeva | moppwber. 0 yap Tpec- Butatos auTov TeV ynoiov via ElavOvrtos puaer TE Sarravypos & @v Kai yuvatkl véa Kal Trodv- TENEL TUVOLKODY, Teo dv8pou Guyarpi Tov "Emtdvxou, XareT as epepe THY Tob TAT POs axpiBeav yX- oxXpa Kal Kata px pov avT@ Xopnyovytos. meuyas oUV TPOS TiVa TOY hirwv éraBev a dpyvptov Qs TOU Tepixd€ous KeNEVT ALTOS. éxeivou oo UoTepov aT at- TOUVTOS, 6 peep Tlepixdijs Kat dixny auT@ 7 pog- é\axe, TO O€ petpaKiov oO EavOinmos emi TOUT@ Narer as Siatedeis ehowdoper Tov Tatépa, 1 p@TOV pev expepov émrl YeMOTe Tas otou Siar pias avTov Kal TOUS AoOyouUS obs émroceito * pera TOV copiaTay. mevtaO dou yap Tlvos aicov Tip Tata Eavtos *Eaittpov TOV Papaariov aKOUALWS Kal KATAKTEWAYTOS, 1Lépav oAny avarwaar pera Upwrayopou Siatropotvra, TOTEPOV TO aKovTtov a TOV Badovta padrov 7 u) TOUS aryovob eras KaTQ TOV opboratov Aoryou aitious Vpn TOU Tabous wyeta Bar, 7 pos dé ToUTOLS Kal THY Tepl THs yuvackos dva- Bomay UO Tob Ravbinirov dnoiv o LrnaipSpo- TOS els TOUS TOAXOUS dvaorrapivat, Kal Odws AVIKETTOV AXPL THS TEAEUTHS TO veavioxw Tpos TOY TaTépa Tapapeivat tiv Stapopav: améOave

yap 0 BavOirmos ev 7@ AotLD vornaas.
‘AmeBanre b€ xal THY abeAPHY 6 O Tepexrijs TOTE
Kal Tay KndecTa Kal didwy Tos TAELTTOUS Kal
1 d:aterapayyeva Fuhr and Blass, after Sauppe : d:arerapay-pevye.
2 éroeito Fuhr and Blass, with FaS, and after Sauppe:
ewolei.

104

1

ad

2

PERICLES

sorry plight, since he had lost not a few of his intimate friends during the pestilence, and had for some time been rent and torn by a family feud. The eldest of his legitimate sons, Xanthippus, who was naturally prodigal, and had married a young and extravagant wife, the daughter of Tisander, the son of Epilycus, was much displeased at his father’s exactitude in making him but a meagre allowance, and that a little at a time. Accordingly, he sent to one of his father’s friends and got money, pre- tending that Pericles bade him do it. When the friend afterwards demanded repayment of the loan, Pericles not only refused it, but brought suit against him to boot. So the young fellow, Xanthippus, incensed at this, fell to abusing his father, publishing abroad, to make men laugh, his conduct of affairs at home, and the discourses which he held with the sophists. For instance, a certain athlete had hit Epitimus the Pharsalian with a javelin, accidentally, and killed him, and Pericles, Xanthippus said, squandered an entire day discussing with Protagoras whether it was the javelin, or rather the one who hurled it, or the judges of the contests, that “in the strictest sense” ought to be held responsible for the disaster. Besides all this, the slanderous charge concerning his own wife Stesimbrotus says was sown abroad in public by Xanthippus himself, and also that the quarre) which the young man had with his father remained utterly incurable up to the time of his death,—for Xanthippus fell sick and died during the plague. Pericles Jost his sister also at that time, and of his relatives and friends the largest part, and those

105

3

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XPHCtLwWTATOVS TPOS THV TWoArtTeElav. ov myD
’ “A +QN wv \ f \ \ a
AMELTEY OVOE TPOVOWKE TO Ppovnpa Kal TO péyEOos
THS Wuxs vro TOV cvugopOv, AAW ovde Kraiwy

ovde Knoevwy ode Tpos Tadd TLVds PON TeV
” pos rade n

t , ‘ , a
dvaykatov, Tpty ye 57 Kal Tov TepiroeTroy avToOU
Tav yunotoy viov! amoBaxreiv Ilapadov. émt rov-To O€ KapudUels evreipaTto pev éeyxapTepely TO y0ee Kat duapvAddtreay TO peyadouyor, ért-el “ f f fal

hépwov 5€ TO vexp@ atéhavoy ntTHOn Tov waOous Tpos THY OYriv, WaTE KAaVO pov Te PHEaL Kal TrI-
Bos éxxéat dSaxpvwv, odéTuTE ToLodToOV ovdéY év
TO OLTO Pio TEeTOINKAS.
XXXVITI. Tis 6€ vorews Tepwpévns TeV ad-AWY TTPATHYOV ELS TOY TOAEMOV Kal PNTOPwY, WS
b > \ 4 w % , o> 3 , \
5 ovdeis Bapos Exywv tooppotroyv ovd akiwpa mpos TOTAUTNY EXEyyVOY HyeLoviay épaiveto, TOOovaNS nw aA N
éxetvoy Kal KaXovans evi To Biya Kai TO oTpa-
a / THytov, GOupov Kai Keipevos olkot dia TO TéVOOs
a , im "ArKiBiddouv Kat Tav adrwv éreiaOn phirov
a > / N “A ? \ mpoedOeiv. amoroynoapéevov b€ Tod Sryov THY ayvepocuvny awpos avtov, UirobeEdpevos avOus Ta Tpuypata Kal atpatnyos aipebels 7THTATO AVOivat Tov Tept TOY voPwY vopmory, bY avTos
e ?
ELTEVNVOXEL TPOTEPOY, WS LN TavTaTacw épnpia
dradoyijs Tov oikoy €xdiTrot ToVVOUA Kal TO YévOS.
siye & OUT Ta Tept Tov vopov. akudlwy o
1 synalav viey Fuhr and Blass, with F8S: yvnolwy.
106

PERICLES

who were most serviceable to hin. in his administration of the city. He did not, however, give up, nor yet abandon his loftiness and grandeur of spirit)
because of his calamities, nay, he was not even seen to weep, either at the funeral rites, or at the grave of any of his connections, until indeed he lost the very last remaining one of his own legitimate sons, Paralus. Even though he was bowed down at this stroke, he nevertheless tried to persevere in his _ habit and maintain his spiritual greatness, but as he laid a wreath upon the dead, he was vanquished by his anguish at the sight, so that he broke out into wailing, and shed a multitude of tears, although he had never done any such thmg in all his life before.

XXXVII. The city made trial of its other generals and counsellors for the conduct of the war, but since no one appeared to have weight that was adequate or authority that was competent for such leadership, ifeucarmed for Pericles,—and summoned a rar-otbce.!

He was lying dejectedly at home because cf his sorrow, but was persuaded by Alcibiades and _ his other friends to resume his public life. When the people had apologized for their thankless treatment of him, and he had undertaken again the conduct of the state, and been elected general, he asked for a suspension of the law concerning children born out of wedlock,—a law which he himself had formerly introduced,—in order that the name and lineage of his house might not altogether expire through lack of succession.

The circumstances of this law were as follows.

1 429 B.c.

107

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ilepixrns €v rH TodtTela mpo mdvu odd Xpovwv, Kat Taidas Exwv, WoTEP ElpyTtat, yvn-
, b] gious, vouoy éypawe povous AOnvaious elvar Tous
bd " 9 / , > \ "a
éx Svetv AOnvaiwy yeyovoras. émet b¢ Tov Bact-Aéws TaV AlyuTTiov dwpeav TO SHnuw TéurravTos
/ "A TETPAKLo pLupLous TUpaY wedipvous Eder Sravéper Oat
4 f \ \ ? Ed s A
TOUS ToAiTas, ToANal pev avedvovto Sdixas Tots Ld 9 " , 9 / , ?
voOous éx TOD ypaupatos Exeivouv Téws SraravOdvovat Kal wapopwpévois,' troddol b€ Kal cuKo-davtnpact tepiémimrov. émpabncav §& ovv?

e , 9, / 4 Ld e \
addovtTes GALYM TWevTaKicxXirLwy €AaTTOUS, OL SE
9 a , , 3 “a
peivavtes ev TH TrodtTEla Kal KptOévtes ‘AOnvaior
f puptoe Kal TeTpaxicyinot Kal TEecoapdKovTa TO a 5] ‘di # gq ~ ‘ Q
TAHOS eEntucOnaav. dvtos ody Sewvov Tov Kata
TosoUTwy loytoavTa vo“ov UT auTOD madLD “a a fe) ,
AvOjvat TOU ypaavTos, 7) Tapotoa SvaTvyia
“a “a \ ? s t@ Tlepuxret mepi tov oixov, ws dixnv tiva
“a / “a ?
Sebwxott Tis Umepoiias Kal THs peyaravyias
9 a 3 / \ 9 / l 50
éxeivns, éméxrace Tovs “AOnvaious, cal dd€avtes
a ? “ avTov veyeontd Te TaGeiv avOpwriverv® te dei-
,
cAat cuveyxwpnaay atoypavacbat tov vobor es
s ‘ ~ Tous patopas, dvoya Oépevov to avTov. Kat tovtov pev batepoy ev “Apyivoveats Katavavpa-
, e a“
ynoavta IleXomovyncious améxtervey 0 Siuos
META TOV TVTTPATHYOV.

1 SadarOdvovc., rapopwuevurs Fuhr and Blass, after Sauppe : SitardavOavovoa, mapopwueva: (referring to the prosecutions).

2 8 ofy Fuhrand Blass, with F8S: ody.

3 gv6pwrivewy Fubr and Blass, with F8&S + avépwrlves.

PERICLES

Many years before this,1 when Pericles was at the height of his political career and had sons born in wedlock, as I have said, he proposed a law that only those should be reckoned Athenians whose parents on both sides were Athenians. And so when the king of Egypt sent a present to the people of forty thousand measures of grain, and this had to be divided up among the citizens, there was a great crop of prosecutions against citizens of illegal birth by the law of Pericles, who had up to that time escaped notice and been overlooked, and many of them also suffered at the hands of informers. As a result, a little less than five thousand were convicted and sold into slavery, and those who retained their citizenship and were adjudged to be Athenians were found, as a result of this scrutiny, to be fourteen thousand and fortyin number. It was, accordingly, 7 prave matter, that the law which had been rigorously enforced against so many should now be suspended by the very man who _ had introduced it, and yet the calamities which Pericles was-then suffering in his family life, regarded as a kind of penalty which he had paid for his arrogance and haughtiness of old, broke down the objections of the Athenians. They thought that what he suffered was by way of retribution, and that what he asked became a man to ask and men to grant, and so they suffered him to enroll his illegitimate son in the phratry-lists and to give him his own name. This was the son who afterwards conquered the Peloponnesians in a naval battle at the Arginusae islands,? and was put to death by the people along with his fellow-generals.

1451-450 B.o. 2 406 B.o.
109
0 2 ee ee

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXVIII. Tote 5€ tod Tlepexréous Eorxev 0 178

Nouwos AaBEoOat AaBnv ove okeiav, WoTrEp GAXrXWY, Oe , rrAXa Br “A td \ a ovde gUVYTOVOY, AAAG BANXpa TLVt VOW Kal pHKOS > 4 5 , na fa
év moixitats éyovon petaBorais dtaypwpevnv
al , e tA ‘ é
TO GOUA TXOAGiwWS Kal UTEpEeiTTOVcaY TO Ppovnpa
al “A e “A , > “~ > al
Tis uxs. 0 your Oecoppactos év trois H@txois
\ \ , 4 \ SiaTwropiaas eb Tpos Tas TYUYas TpéTTETAL Ta ON Kal Kivovpeva Tois TOY GwyLaTwv TdBeaw €ekt“ “ n e
oTaTaAL THs dpeThs, tatopnKey OTL voowy o Ileal b / \ “a f c
puehijs EMLTKOTOULEVD TEL THY dirtwv deEee
Tepiam TOV UTO TOV yuvaiKoy TW TpAXne ree
MPTNBEVOY, as opodpa KAKOS EXWVY OTTOTE Kal TavTy vTOLEVOL THY aBEXTEpiaV.
Mv \ N a a ¥ ? a Hén S€ wpos TO TerXEUTAY OVTOS avTOU, TEpI-
a “ e , \ a KaOipevo. Tov TodT@ of BéATLITTOL KaL TOV e , , nm “ A
pitwy ol TeplovTes AUYOY ETALODVTO THs UapETHS

A A \ 4
Kal THs Suvapews, Gan yévoito, Kal Tas mpatets
a a a ,
GVEMETPOUYTO Kal TOV TpOTAaLwY TO TAOS evvea
al \ A \
yap Hv &@ oTpaTnyov Kal vik@v EaTnoEVv UTEP
A a e , 4 A
THS TONWS. TAUTA, WS OUKETL TUMLEVTOS, GAA xaOnpnpevov thy alaOyaw avtov, diedéyovto
4 e nm '\ ~
Tpos adrXrjANous' oO S€ Taal eTUYYaVE TOV VvoOvD
' , ' , ¥
mpoceacynkws, Kai PbeyEauevos eis péecov edn Oavpalew OTe TavTA pev eTTaLvovoW auTOD Kal
N , \ \
pVNmovevovoly, A Kal Tpos TUXNY €oTl KoLVa Kal
A ~ \ A
yéryovev 7)0n TOANOIS GTpaTHYOIS, TO 6€ KAXALT TOV
\ , 5] , ra; O i) ' , " yy
Kal MeyicTOV Ov AEYOVaLD. voeis yap, &py,
' % } \ "~ wv b] , t ¢ , du ewe Tay CvT@y AUnvatwy pédXav (pattoy TepleBareTo.
IIo

PERICLES

XXXVIII. At this time, it would seein, the plague laid hold of Pericles, not with a violent attack, as in the case of others, nor acute, but one which, with a kind of sluggish distemper that prolonged itself through varying ehanges, used up his body slowly and undermined the loftiness of his spirit. Certain it is that Theophrastus, in his " Ethies," querying whether one's character follows the bent of one's fortunes and is forced by bodily sufferings to abandon its high excellenee, records this fact, that Pericles, as he lay sick, showed one of his friends who was come to see him an amulet that the women had hung round his neck, as much as to say that he was very badly off to put up with such folly as that.

Being now near his end,! the best of the citizens and those of his friends who survived were sitting around him holding discourse of his excellence and power, how great they had been, and estimating all his achievements and the number of his trophies,— there were nine of these which he had set up as the city's vietorious general. This discourse they were holding with one another, supposing that he no longer understood them but had lost consciouness.

He had been attending to it all, however, and |

speaking out among them said he was amazed at their praising and commemorating that in him which was due as much to fortune as to himself, and which had fallen to the lot of many generals besides, instead of mentioning his fairest and greatest title to their admiration ; “for,” said he, “no living Athenian ever put on mourning

because of mie.’

1 He died in the autumn of 429 b.c,

————n

ea

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

XXXIX, Oavpacros ouv 0 avip OU povoY THIS emerkelas Kal MpaoTNTOs, AV Ev mpdypact ToANois Kal peyaras dmexGeias Suet pyoer, ara Kal
TOU ppovnpatos, | el TOY avTov Kad@v mryeto
BéXtLoTOv Eirat TO pire hbovw pte Pup xapi-cacOat pydév aro THALKAUTNS duvdpews, pnoe 2 xpycacbai Tit Tar exOpav os dvnKéaTy. Kat pot Ooxel THY peipaxcwdy kat coBapav éxeivny mposwvupiav éy tovTo Tote averipOovov Kal TpeTovaay, ovTws EUMEVES 70 05 cat Btov év é€ov-cia kaBapov Kai dpiavrov ‘Odvprtov TT pocayopeveoOar, xabarep 70 Tov Oey yevos a&tovper aitcov pev ayab@v, avattiov oe KAK@V TEPUKOS apxew Kal Bactrevew TOV dvTw, OVX WaTrEp ot TounTat TUVTAPETTOVTES nas apabertatats
3 doFaus ddaKovTat ois aUuTOV pvdevpace,» TOV fLev TOTOV, €v @ TOUS Geovs KarTotxety Aéyouaw, daa panrés é5os Kal aaddevTov KaXovvTEs, ov Tvevpactyv, ov vepert Ypaj.evor, arn aibpa®
parakn Kai dwt Kabapwraty TOV amavra Xpovov opars mepthapTopevoy, OS TOLAUTNS
tivos* TO paxapicp Kal aavate diayoyns ped

duora TpeTTovgnNs, auTous dé Tovs Oeous Tapaxijs Kal dua pevetas Kal opyiis aX\rAwv TE ETTOUS
rabov dam opatvovT es ovo dvO pwr ots vouv €xovat
T POT NKOVTOD. andra TavrTa pev tows tee Mpaypareas Elvat.
4 Tod &€ Ilepixréous tayeiav aicOnalv Kal cadi)

1 uv@eduaos Fuhr and Blass with S (u@edpaor FF): Kona.
2 atépa Fuhr and Blass with FS: ai6pfa. > cabapwrdry Fuhr and Blass with F8S: xa@ap¢.
+ roradens tTuvds Fuhr and Blass with F8S: roiavrns.
112

PERICLES

XXXIX. So, then, the man is to be admired not only for his reasonableness and the gentleness which he maintained in the midst of many responsibilities and great enmities, but also for his loftiness of spirit, seeing that he regarded it as the noblest—of all his titles to honour-that he—had_never_gratified _his-envy or his passion in the exercise of his vast power, nox treated _any one of his foes as a foe incurable. And it seems to me that his otherwise puerile and pompous surname is rendered unobjectionable and becoming by this one circumstance, that it was so gracious a nature and a life so pure and undefiled in the exercise of sovereign power which were called Olympian, inasmuch as we do firmly hold that the divine rulers and kings of the universe are capable only of good, and incapable of evil. In this we are not like the poets, who confuse us with their ignorant fancies, and are convicted of inconsistency by their own stories, since they declare that the place where they say the gods dwell is a secure abode and tran- quil, without experience of winds and clouds, but gleaming through all the unbroken time with the soft radiance of purest light,!—implying that some such a manner of existence is most becoming to the blessed immortal; and yet they represent the gods themselves as full of malice and hatred and wrath and other passions which ill become even men of any sense. But this, perhaps, will be thought matter for discussion elsewhere.

The progress of events wrought in the Athenians

1 Cf. Odyssey, vi. 42 ff.

wo0ov AOnvaios éveipyateTto Ta TpayyaTa. Kal yap of Cavtos PBapuvopevor thy Evvapiv ws dpavupotcay avtovs, evOus é€x modmy yevopevov
TELPWLEVOL PNTOPHY Kal Onpaywyav ETEepwV avwpO-NoyouvTo peTpLwTEpon ev GyKw@ Kal cEpvoTEpoY é1

TpaoTnte pi povat Tporroy 4 8 émipOovos ioxus éxeivn, povapyia Neyouevn Kal Tupavyis TpoTEpor, éhavn TOTE cwTNHplovy Epupa TiS TodtTELAS YyEvo-bevy? TocavTn POopa Kal wANOos éwéxerto KaKias Tos Wpaypacty, ty éxeivos acbevh} Kai TaTewny TOLMY aTEXPUTTE KAL KATEKWAVEY avyKETTOV eV éfovota' yevéeoOa.
1 éy efovola Fuhr and Blass with F4SC: éfouglg.

1I4

PERICLES

a swift appreciation of Pericles and a keen sense of his loss. For those who, while he lived, were oppressed by a sense of his power and felt that it kept them in obscurity, straightway on his removal made trial of other orators and popular leaders, only to be led to the confession that a character more moderate than his in its solemn dignity, and more august in its gentleness, had not becn created.
That objectionable power of his, which they had used to call monarchy and tyranny, seemed to them now to have been a saving bulwark of the constitution, so greatly was the state afflicted by the corruption and manifold baseness which he had kept weak and grovelling, thereby covering it out of sight and preventing it from becoming incurably powerful.
FABIUS MAXIMUS

®ABIOZ MAEIMOZ

I. Towovtou 6é Tob Tlepexdéous ev Tots afious MV HLLNS yeyoveTos, WS Taperrnpaper, €mi Tov ba Brov THY (oTopiav peTaryaryoper. VULPOY pds Aéyouaty, ot 6€ YUVALKOS emixwpias, "Hpaxret puyelons wept Tov OvpBpw TmoTapop yeverOar PaBrov, avdpa TORU Kal Soxtpov év ‘Popn TO aBiov yévos ad avTou Tapag yovTa. TLVES dé TOUS amo TOU yevous TOUTOU Tpwrovs TH Ov’ opu-YMATOV NPNTAapEvous aypa Podious Laropoboww ovopaleaGat TO TWadatov’ ovT@ yap aypt viv at duwmpuxes pocoat Kal podepe TO oKdWat KadetTat:
ypovw dé Tav duveiy POoyywv peTatred ovTo@V

Dafoe mpoonyopevOnaay. ToNAOUS be Kal perya-Aous THS oixtas eFeveyxaperns avopas, avo ‘Povndou Tov peylatov Kai da TOUTO Ma£ipou mapa ‘Pwpatots émovopac Hevros tétaptos jv DaBros Ma&tpos, wept ob TUE ypapoper.
"Hy 8 avro CW MATLKOY ev TapwvupLoy oO
Bepovxwaos: eixe yap axpoxopsova pixpav €TaVW TOV eihous ememep uKviay" o 6¢€ ‘Oour-Kovdas onpwaiver a To mpoSariov, éTeOn d¢ 7 pos THY TpqoTnTa Ka l Bapitnra! Tou 7Gous € éTt Tmatdos évTos. TO yap HovYLOY avTOU Kal aiwmnroy Kat 1 Bapirnra MSS., Sint.!, Coraés, and Bekker: Bpadvrira slowness.
118

174

FABIUS MAXIMUS

I, Sucu were the memorable things in the career of Pericles, as we have received them, and now let us change the course of our narrative and tell of Fabius. It was a nymph, they say, or a woman native to the country, according to others, who consorted with Hercules by the river Tiber, and became by him the mother of Fabius, the founder of the family of the Fabii, which was a large one, and of high repute in Rome. But some writers state that the first members of the family were called Fodii in ancient times, from their practice of taking wild beasts in pitfalls. For down to the present time “ fossae’”’ is the Latin for ditches, and “ fodere”’ for to dig. In course of time, by a change of two letters, they were called Fabii. This family produced many great men, and froin Rullus, the greatest of them, and on this account ealled Maximus by the Romans, the Fabius Maximus of whom we now write was fourth in descent. .

He had the surname of Verrucosus from a physical peculiarity, namely, a small wart growing above his lip; and that of Ovicula, which signifies Lambkin, was given him because of the gentleness and gravity of his nature when he was yet a child. Indeed, the calmness and silence of his demeanour,

119

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

META TrOANHS EVAABELaS TOV TaALdLKOV arToOpEVOV nOovav, Bpaséws Sé kal S:atrovws Seyopevov Tas padiaes, evxorov b€ mpos tots cuvyibes Kai KatnKooy aBerTEpias Tivos Kal vwOporntos b7d-voiay eiye Tapa Tos exTOs: OArLyot & Faav oi TO duvoxivytov vireo Babous Kai To peyadouyor Kal heovT@des ev TH Pvce Kabopwrtes adtod. Tayv dé tov ypovov Tpoiovtos bd TaY TpaypdTwv éyerpoevos Stecnpatve Kal Tols ToANNois arra-Geav péev otcav tHv doxovcayv ampayiay, ev-Bovdiav 6€ tHv edrAaBerav, Td 5é mpds pydev d€v und evxivntoy év race povimov Kal BéRatov.
opav b€ Kal THs moAtTElas TO péyeOos Kal TaY
TONELWY TO TAHOOS, HOKEL TO MEV TULA TPOS TOUS TOXNELOUS, WoTEP OTAOY GUpdhuUTOY, Tov dé Aovov
dpyavov meOods mpos Tov Stpov, ed para Tpe-TovTws TH Bi@ KaTaKEKoopNMEvoY. Ov yap érhy dpaicpos ovdé Kev Kal ayopatos yapts, adda vous idvov Kat TEplT TOV év Vo Loroyiats oxXnpa Kal Babes Exo, as padtota Tais Oovevdidov MpoceoKevat éeyouot. stacwletar yap avtod hoyos, ov elzrev Ev T@ Srjpuw, TOV Tatdds avTod pel' UTaTelav uToOavovrTos eyKwuLoV.
IT. llevte 8 vrataay as vrdtevoer, 4} rpwrn tov amo Awyiwv OpiauBov écyev. ntrnOévres yap Um avtov payyn Kal ToAAOUS arroBadovtes
ets Tas "AXTELS avEecTadANCay, Kal THY TpocoLKoV éravaavto THs 'ITadias Anifopwevor Kal KaKd>
motouvres. emrel 6 'AvuiBas éuBadrov eis 'lraXiav 120

the great caution with which he indulged in childish pleasures, the slowness and difficulty with which he learned his lessons, and his contented submissiveness in dealing with his comrades, led those who knew him superficially to suspect him of something like foolishness and stupidity. Only a few discerned the inexorable firmness in the depth of his soul, and the magnanimous and leonine qualities of his nature. But soon, as time went on and he was roused by the demands of active life, he made it clear even to the multitude that his seeming lack of energy was only lack of passion, that his caution was prudence, and that his never being quick nor even easy to move made him always steadfast and sure. He saw that the conduct of the state was a great task, and that wars must be many; he therefore trained his body for the wars (nature's own armour, as it were), and his speech as an instrument of persuasion with the people, giving it a form right well befitting his manner of life. For it had no affectation, nor any empty, forensic grace, but an import of peculiar dignity, rendered weighty by an abundance of maxims. These, they say, most resembled those which Thueydides employs. And a speech of his is actually preserved, which was pronounced by him before the people in eulogy of his son,! who died consul.

II. The first? of the five consulships in which he served brought him the honour of a triumph over the Ligurians. These were defeated by him in battle, with heavy loss, and retired into the Alps, where they ceased plundering and harrying the parts of Italy next to them. But Hannibal now

1 Cf. Cicero, Cato Maior, 4. 2 233 B.C.

Gre |

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Kat payn mpatov wept tov TpeSiay motapev émixpatyaous avtos pev mArAavve dia Tuppnrias rop0av thy xwpay, ExTAntiv Sé Servnv Kat poBov ets THV 'Pwomny évéBare, onpeia 6€ Ta pev cuvijOn 'Pwpatots amo Kepauvav, 7a 8 dAws eEnrAXNaypeva Kal TodXiy aToTiay €xyovta Tpoaémin Te (Gupeous Te yap ad avutav aipate yevésOar dtaBpoyxous éréyOn, kal Opn otayvwv mepi "Avtiov évatpa xelipecOat, Kal AiGous pev Ex TOU aépos dtaTrupous Kat dreyopévous hépesCat, tov & v7Eep Parepious ovpavod payivat b0€avtos éxnimtev xalt d:a-ometpecOat TOAAA YypappaTeia, Kal TOUTWY EV EVI yeypaupevov davivar xata rE ""Apns Ta éavtov Oma oareve'), Tov pev Uratov Taiov Prapiviov ovdev iuSrvve Tovtwr, avdpa pos TO pioet Oupoetdet Kal hirotipm peyadas érrapo-pevov evtuxias, as mpooGev evtuxnae Tapano-yos, THS Te Bovrns atabsovans) Kai ToD cuv-

, ? , , \ a ,

apxovTos eviatapévov Bia cvpBarov Tois Vada-Tals Kat Kpatiaas, PdBiov b€ ta pév onpeta, xaimep artopeva ToA@Y, HrToV UTéOpatte Sia
Thy addoyiav: tiv S odvyoTnTa TOY TOdEWOY Kal
THY axXpypatiay muvOavoyevos KapTEpey Trape-Kader Tors “Pwpuatovs Kal pH payecOat mpos avOpwrov er avtad TovT@ bia TOMAOV ayovwr HoKNMEVN TTPATLA YXpwpevov, GAA TOS oUp-payors emireutovtas BonBelas Kai Tas TTOXets Sud yetpos Exovtas avtyny eav Tepl avTH papaive-obat THY dxpnv tov "AvviBov, Kabdrep prova Ndpracay a7 piKpas Kal Kovdns Suvapeas.
2 aradovons with CS: dwoxadovons.
123
~T

FABIUS MAXIMUS

burst into Italy,! and was at first victorious in battle at the river Trebia. Then he marched through Tuscany, ravaging the country, and smote Rome with dire consternation and fear. Signs and portents occurred, some familiar to the Romans, like peals of thunder, others wholly strange and quite extraordinary. For instance, it was said that shields sweated blood, that ears of corn were cut at Antium with blood upon them, that blazing, fiery stones fell from on high, and that the people of Falerii saw the heavens open and many tablets fall down and scatter themselves abroad, and that on one of these was written in letters plain to sec, “Mars now brandisheth his weapons.”? The consul, Gaius Flaminius, was daunted by none of these things, for he was a man of a fiery and ambitious nature, and besides, he was elated by great successes which he had won before this, in a manner contrary to all expectation. He had, namely, although the senate dissented from his plan, and his colleague violently opposed it, joined battle with the Gauls and defeated them. Fabius also was less disturbed by the signs and portents, because he thought it would be absurd, although they had great effect upon many. But when he learned how few in number the enemy were, and how great was their lack of resources, he exhortcd the Romans to bide their time, and not to give battle to a man who wielded an army trained by many contests for this very issue, but to send aid to their allies, to keep their subject cities well in hand, and to suffer the culminating vigour of Hannibal to sink and expire of itself, like a flame that flares up from scant and slight material.

1 2183.0, 7? Manors telum suum concutit (Livy, xxii. 1).
123
4

PLUTARCH’S LIVES

TIT. Ov pny érecce tov Prapivioy, adrAa dijoas ovx avéEecOat mpoctovta TH ‘Popmn Tov ToOdEMOY
oud, W@OTTEP O TANALOS Kaporros, ev TH TONE StayayetoOat mepl avtTns, Tov pev oT patov

efayew exéAEUTE TOUS XeALapxous, av7os
& él tov immov aNAGLEVOS e& ovdevos aitiouv
7 podnXou Taparoyws € TPO/LOV rob (mT TTo0v yevopeévou al MTUPEVTOS eemece Kat Karevexels € émrt Keparny 6 0ms ovder etpewe THS youn, AX’ ws.
Opynoev e& apxijs amavtijcat 7 ‘AvviBa, Tept THY Karoupevnvy Opacuperny } ALuyny 7s Tup-pyvias twapetakato.
Tov 6€ oT pariorév cuuBarovtTwy eis xetpas dpa TO Kalp@ THS payys auvérrece TELopOS, vp ov Kal trodes dveT pam aay Kal pevpara TOTO MOV e& edpas peETETTN Kal Kpnuve@v UTM@pEerat Teprepparynoar.. ard, KaiTrep obTw yevopevov watov Tov 7 aBous,° ovdels TO TapaTrav naOero TOV paxopeveoy. avTOS pev ouv o Prapinos
TONG Kal TOUTS Epya Kal popns ET LOELKVULEVOS
emECe, Kal Tept aurov ol K patio TOU tav & adrAov TpaTrevT@v TOAUS my ovos, Kal TEVTAKLOXLALOL
POs _Buplows KATEKOTNOAY, Kal Eddwoav ere poe
TodOUTOL. TO dé Prapuviov Tapa pioTipoupevos Bayar Kal Koo pias bc apeTny 0 ‘AvviBas oux evpev éy Tois vexpots, aAr rHyvoETO TO TapaTraV OT WS npaviaOn.
Thv pev ovv ért tov TpeBtiou yevopévny Htrav

1 Opacunevny an early anonymous correction, adopted by Coraés and Bekker: Opacuvfay.
2 wepieppaynoay Bekker’s wapeppdynoav is now found in §, 3 rou wadovs Coraés and Bekker after Reiske: wd@ous.

Wea

FABIUS MAXIMUS

III. Flaminius, however, was not persuaded, but declared that he would not suffer the war to be brought near Rome, and that he would not, like Camillus of old, fight in the city for the city’s defence. Accordingly, he ordered the tribunes to lead the army forth. But as Flaminius himself sprang upon his horse, for no apparent reason, and unaccountably, the animal was seized with quivering fright, and he was thrown and fell head foremost to the ground. Nevertheless, he in no wise desisted from his purpose, but since he had set out at the beginning to face Hannibal, drew up his forces near the lake called Thrasymené,! in ‘Tuscany. When the soldiers of both armies had engaged. at the very crisis of the battle, an earthquake occurred, by which cities were overthrown, rivers diverted from their channels, and fragments of cliffs torn away. And yet, although the disaster was so violent, no one of the combatants noticed it at all. Flaminius himself, then, while displaying many deeds of daring and prowess, fell, and round about him the flower of his army. The rest were routed with much slaughter. Fifteen thousand were cut to pieces, and as many more taken prisoners. The body of Flaminius, to which Hannibal was eager to give honourable burial because of his valour, could not be found among the dead, but disappeared, no one ever knowing how.

Now of the defeat sustained at the Trebia,? neither

1 Tarsimene, Polybius, iii. 82; Trasimenus, Livy, xxii. 4.
3 Cf. chapter ii. 2.

«
—
fone)

ov? o ypapas ctpatnyos ov8 o Trepp beis ayyedos 3 ’ + , # b] 3 3 id 4 ,
an evOcias Eppacev, arr evevoato tHv vixen
> 2 ’ a . 9 f , \ “
€midixov autos Kat apdidoEov yevérOat epi dé TAVTNS OS TP@TOV HKoVaeEV Oo aTpaTHyos TloutTreyios, auvayaywv eis éxxAnoiav tov Sihpov ov
as! bp] \ \ > , ” nd TepiTAOKas Ovde TAapaywyas GA’ avtixpus Edn mpocehOwv: ‘“ NevixnpeOa, wo avdpes “Pwpaior,
- / \ f \ , ‘Y
peyarn payn, Kal OvePOaptat To otpatoredov, kal Prapivos bratos aToAwAev. adda Bovreverbe
f a ,
Tepl owTnpias avT@V Kal dogadretas.” ovdTOS pév
ovv waoTEp Treva TOV oyov éuBarwv eis

TéXayos ToaovTou Snuou auvetapake tTHhv Tory, ovd éoTtdvat Tpos tocauTHy ExTANELW OL AO-yLopO!
kat Sapeveey edvvavto. mavtes 8 eis plan
yvounv auvnyOnoav avuTevOivov SeicOar ta
? , 4 “
TpaypuTa povapyxias, iv ouctatopiay KaXdovot, kat Tov peTayeploupevoy TavTnv abpurtas Kal 9 “ b] / ? “~ id ?
ademas avdpos: eivat 5€ Tottroy é&va PaBrov MdE:popv, toopporov Exovta TH peyeOe THS apys
, N , a ,
To Ppovnua xai To akiwpa Tov HOovs, ArALKias TE
KATA TOUTO yeyevnuevoy ev @ TUVETTHKEY ETL TPOS Ta THS Wuyins BovrAetpata TO copa TH Ppwpyn Kai guyKxéxpatat T@ Ppoviw To Oappanéov.
IV. ‘Os odv tradr’ &okev, aroderyGeis Suxtarap
, \ b] / >A “r ,
Pais, cat amrodeiEas autos irmapyov Mapxor
Muvovciov, wpw@tov pev ATiCAaTO Tiv TUyKANTOY
imm@ xpic8ar rapa tas otpatetas. ov yap Sha b >] > ‘ \ , f
éERv, ad amnyopevto xata $1 Tiva vopov
WAN4LOV, ELITE THS AXKNS TO TWrEioTOY EV TH
1260

FABIUS MAXIMUS

the general who wrote nor the messenger who was sent with the tidings gave a straightforward account, ‘tthe victory being falsely declared uncertain and doubtful ; but as soon as Pomponius the praetor heard of this second defeat, he called an assembly of the people, faced it, and without roundabout or deceptive phrases, but in downright fashion, said : «Men of Rome, we have been beaten in a great battle ; our army has been cut to pieces; our consul, Flaminius, is dead. Take ye therefore counsel for your own salvation and safety.” This speech of his fell like a tempest upon the great sea of pcople before him, and threw the city into commotion, nor could deliberate reasoning hold its own and stay the general consternation. But all were brought at last to be of one mind, namely, that the situation demanded a sole and absolute authority, which they call a dictatorship, and a man who would wield this authority with energy and without fear; that Fabius Maximus, and he alone, was such a man, having a spirit.and a dignity of character that fully matched the greatness of the office, and being moreover at the time of life when bodily vigour still suffices to carry out the counsels of the mind, and courage is tempered with prudence.

IV. Accordingly, this course was adopted, and Fabius was appointed dictator. He himsclt ap- pointed Marcus Minucius to be his Master of Horse, and then at once asked permission of the senate to use a horse himself when in the field. For this was not his right, but was forbidden by an ancient law, either because the Romans placed their greatest

1 In the absence of a consul, who alone could appoint a dictator, the people made Fabius pro-dictator (Livy, xxi. 8).

127

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

mel@ TiUWenévwv Kai 1a TOUTO TOV 7 pa7Nyov
olopeveay dety Ta papeve Th parayyt Kat pn mponeitrer, el0', ort TUPAVULKOV ets aravra Tara Kal péeya TO TIS apxyns Kparos €oTiv, &Y Ye TOUT@
Bovropévor TOV ouxtatopa Tob Onpou aivec Oat Seouevov. ov pry adda xal avTOS 0 Pa Bros
e005 evdeifac Gar béXwv TiS apxijs TO béyeBos Kab TOV OyKov, @S paAXAOV UIHKOOES XPPTO Kal
mevOnviors Tots ToAiTats, 7 pone TUVEVEYKGMEVOS els TAUTO padouxias etkootTeaoapas" Kal Tob
évépou Tav UTaTwV AT AVT@YTOS avuT@ Tov Umnpe-TV meurpas éxéhevae TOUS paBSovxous aTan-NaEat nal Ta Tapdonya Ths apyis amo0épevov iStwTnyv atTavTav.
Mera 6€ Taira Karnior ry dpXOpEvos éx Jedy
apxny, Kat didacKxwv Tov Ojjpov os oduyapia cat Tepippovicet TOU otpatnyob pos TO Satpovior, ov pox Onpia TOV dyovic awevov oparerra, 7 ou-TPETTE [LN Sediévar Tods éxOpous, aXXA TOUS /eous eFevpevilec Gar Kal TLuav, ov SeroSaipoviay € EvEp-yasopevos,) andra Oappiver evoeBeig THY apeTny Kal Tais Tapa tav Ocov eXTrion Tov amo Tov Torepiov doBov apatpar Kal Trapapvbovperos.
exevO naar d€ TOTE jodAal Kal TeV aTOppHTwV
kal xpynoimwv avtois BiBrwv, is XeBvdrreiovs Kadovat Kal eyerat cuvdpapetv evia TOV amo-KEL eva" év avurais Lovie 'Tpos Tas TUXaS Kal TAS mpakes €xeitvas. Kal TO pev yvoa bev ovK ay érépw trvbécOat: mpoedOwv 6€ o diktatwp ets TOV
1 dvepyaCduevos Coraés and Bekker after Bryan, now with S: epya(duevos.
128

176

FABIUS MAXIMUS

